(n27)Footnote 84. Worthier title unless a contrary intention shown. Morsman v. Internal Revenue Comm'r, 90 F.2d 18 (8th Cir. 1937); May v. Marx, 20 N.E.2d 821 (Ill. App. 1939); Nuckols v. Davis, 221 S.W. 507 (Ky. 1920); Loring v. Eliot, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 568 (1860); Shaw v. Arnett, 33 N.W.2d 609 (Minn. 1948) (rule of construction); Stephens v. Moore, 249 S.W. 601 (Mo. 1923); Norman v. Horton, 126 S.W.2d 187 (Mo. 1939) (rule of construction); Conrad v. Funnell, 232 P. 950 (Okla. 1925); Seguin State Bank & Trust Co. v. Locke, 102 S.W.2d 1050 (Tex. 1937); Bottimore v. First & Merchants Nat'l Bank, 196 S.E. 593 (Va. 1938).

Use of words "descend" or "revert" indicate worthier title. Wilcoxen v. Owen, 185 So. 897 (Ala. 1938); Botzum v. Havana Nat'l Bank, 12 N.E.2d 203 (Ill. 1937).

Worthier title is a rule of law. Wilson v. Pharris, 158 S.W.2d 274 (Ark. 1942); Harris v. McLaran, 30 Miss. 533 (1855); In re Brolasky's Estate, 153 A. 739 (Pa. 1931); Cochran v. Frierson, 258 S.W.2d 748 (Tenn. 1953).

Worthier title appears to be a rule of intent in California. Bixby v. California Trust Co., 202 P.2d 1018 (Cal. 1949).

Worthier title is a rule of construction. Dooley v. Goodwin, 93 S.W. 47 (Ky. 1906); Frank Fehr Brewing Co. v.

Johnston, 97 S.W. 1107 (Ky. 1906); Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Williams, 105 S.W.2d 814 (Ky. 1937); Powell v. Childers, 234 S.W.2d 158 (Ky. 1950); Thurman v. Hudson, 280 S.W.2d 507 (Ky. 1955); Wells v. Kuhn, 221 S.W. 19 (Mo. 1920); Doctor v. Hughes, 122 N.E. 221 (N.Y. 1919); Whittemore v. Equitable Trust Co., 165 N.E. 454 (N.Y. 1929); Julier v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 74 N.Y.S.2d 262 (1947); Petition of Stevens, 125 N.Y.S.2d 386 (1953); Braswell v. Braswell, 81 S.E.2d 560 (Va. 1954).

In New York the question of whether worthier title applies depends on the individual facts. Held a reversion in Berlenbach v. Chemical Bank & Trust Co., 184 N.E. 83 (N.Y. 1932), aff'd, 256 N.Y.S. 563; Scholtz v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 68 N.E.2d 503 (N.Y. 1946), on the grounds there was "no clear expression" of a purpose to grant a remainder. But in Richardson v. Richardson, 81 N.E.2d 54 (N.Y. 1948), the language was held to create a remainder because: (1) the settlor made a full formal disposition of the corpus, (2) the settlor made no reservation of a power of assignment in his lifetime, (3) the settlor reserved only a testamentary power of appointment.

Worthier title is question of grantor's intent. Richardson v. Richardson, 81 N.E.2d 54 (N.Y. 1948) (remainder found where grantor made full disposition of the principal of the trust, reserved no power to assign an interest during lifetime of grantor, surrendered all power except that of testamentary disposition and emphasized surrender of control).

A trust instrument was executed to beneficiaries for life and then to settlor or his heirs. The settlor's interest was sold to satisfy tort judgment. Purchaser brought quiet title suit after death of beneficiaries. The question raised was did this create a worthier title, or a contingent remainder in settlor's heirs. The court held worthier title to apply. Because it was clearly a reversion to settlor present here, question was raised as to whether it was subject to a condition subsequent. The court said no, upholding worthier title, but as a rule of construction, rather than of law. In re Burchell's Estate, 87 N.E.2d 293 (N.Y. 1949).

See Note, Worthier Title, 46 Harv. L. Rev. 993 (1933); Note, Worthier Title Doctrine in Iowa, 49 Mich. L. Rev. 1066 (1951); Joseph W. Morris, The Inter Vivos Branch of the Worthier Title Doctrine, 2 Okla. L. Rev. 133 (1949). Matter of Estate of Grulke, 546 N.W.2d 626 (Iowa App. 1996).

(n28)Footnote 85. 3 & 4 William iv, c. 106, § 3.

(n29)Footnote 86. Cal. Acts ch. 122, Cal. Civ. Code § 1073, Cal. Prob. Code § 6145.

The California statute abolishing Shelley's Case also abolished worthier title. Bixby v. California Trust Co., 202 P.2d 1018 (Cal. 1949); Richardson v. Richardson, 81 N.E.2d 54 (N.Y. 1948); Comment, Limitations to Settlors Heirs, 37 Cal. L. Rev. 283 (1949).

The same result has probably also occurred in Pennsylvania, Pa. Cons. Stat. tit. 20, §§ 2514, 2517.

Abolished as to trusts only. Ind. Code § 30-4-2-7; Minn. Stat. Ann. § 500.14 (4); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-115 (by adoption of Uniform Property Act); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-114. Worthier title abolished. Conveyances take by purchase.

Worthier title abolished. Ark. Acts § 28-9-220.

Worthier title abolished. Cal. Prob. Code § 6145.

Where the doctrine of worthier title has been abolished, the distribution of the trust res on the grantor's death lies in equity, not in probate. Gray v. Union Trust Co., 154 P. 306 (Cal. 1915).

Where the doctrine of worthier title has been abolished the heirs and not the grantor are entitled to oil and gas rights. Mills v. Mills, 121 S.W.2d 962 (Ky. 1938).

See Comment, Statutory Abolition of the Doctrine of Worthier Title, 47 Cal. L. Rev. 740 (1959) as to the possible unconstitutionality of the retroactive provision of Cal. Civ. Code § 1073, Cal. Prob. Code § 6145.

Massachusetts has abolished the doctrine of worthier title in wills and inter vivos trusts. Mass. Ann. Laws ch. 184, §§ 33A, 33B.

Worthier title has been abolished in Texas. Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.042; see also Comment, The Doctrine of Worthier Title: The Effect of Article 1291a, 16 Baylor L. Rev. 429 (1964).

Also was abolished in Indiana, but only in trusts. Ind. Code § 30-4-2-7.

West Virginia has abolished the doctrine of worthier title. W. Va. Code § 36-1-14a. Harris Trust and Sav. Bank v. Beach, 513 N.E.2d 833 (Ill. 1987) (noting the statutory abolition of the doctrine).

(n30)Footnote 87. Mills v. Mills, 121 S.W.2d 962 (Ky. 1939); Norman v. Horton, 126 S.W.2d 187 (Mo. 1939); Kennedy v. Rutter, 6 A.2d 17 (Vt. 1939).

Held a remainder not a reversion. National Shawmut Bank, 53 N.E.2d 113 (Mass. 1944).

Valid remainder, not worthier title, in gift to trustees for settlors for life and then to such as settlors should appoint with limitation over to settlor's heirs on failure of appointment. In re Burchell's Estate, 87 N.E.2d 293 (N.Y. 1949).

A limitation to the testator's next of kin as in intestacy created a remainder and not a reversion. McKenna v. Seattle-First Nat'l Bank, 214 P.2d 664 (Wash. 1950).

Worthier title held never applicable as a rule of law or construction in the District of Columbia. Hatch v. Riggs Nat'l Bank, 361 F.2d 559 (D.C. Cir. 1966).

Worthier title was not followed in In re Valiquette's Estate, 173 A.2d 832, 839 (Vt. 1961).

Indiana has abolished the doctrine of worthier title in trusts only. Ind. Code 30-4-2-7.

Massachusetts has abolished the doctrine of worthier title in wills and inter vivos trusts. Mass. Ann. Laws ch. 184, §§ 33A, 33B.

West Virginia has abolished the doctrine of worthier title. W. Va. Code § 36-1-14a. Dennis v. Bird, 941 S.W.2d 486 (Ky. App. 1997) (restricting application of the doctrine of worthier title to remainders, not reversions).

(n31)Footnote 88. Wilcoxen v. Owen, 185 So. 897 (Ala. 1938); Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Williams, 105 S.W.2d 814 (Ky. 1937); Robinson v. Blankenship, 92 S.W. 854 (Tenn. 1906).

(n32)Footnote 89. Bixby v. California Trust Co., 202 P.2d 1018 (Cal. 1949). But see Gray v. Union Trust Co., 154 P. 306 (Cal. 1915); Bixby v. Hotchkis, 136 P.2d 597 (Cal. App. 1943). Levy v. Crocker-Citizens Nat. Bank, 94 Cal. Rptr. 1 (Cal. App. 1971) (distinguishing Bixby as applying only to a special, rather than a general, class).

(n33)Footnote 90. 18 Edw. I, c. 1.

(n34)Footnote 91. Charles Butler & Francis Hargrave, Notes to Coke Littleton, § 12b (1832). So a devise to the testator's daughter. Smith v. Triggs, 1 Strange 487, 93 Eng. Rep. 651 (1795), or to the eldest son where there was primogeniture. Hinde v. Lyon, 2 Dyer 124a, 73 Eng. Rep. 271 (1794), granddaughter. Manbridge v. Plummer, 2 Myl. &

K. 93, 39 Eng. Rep. 879 (1833).

Remainder to such persons as would take under intestate laws gave no interest which would pass by descent or devise. Carnegie v. First Nat'l Bank, 129 S.E.2d 780 (Ga. 1963).

(n35)Footnote 92. Godolphin v. Abingdon, 2 Atk. 57, 26 Eng. Rep. 432. See Co. Litt., § 22b. 18. J. Wesley Oler, Remainders to Conveyors or Next of Kin, 44 Dick. L. Rev. 247 (1940).

If the estate is not of the same quantity and quality as would have been taken by descent then worthier title does not apply. McQuiddy Printing Co. v. Hirsig, 134 S.W.2d 197 (Tenn. App. 1939).

Devise to A and her heirs but if she died without issue then to testator's heirs did not pass to A's heirs on death without issue. Scott v. Jackson, 127 S.E.2d 234 (N.C. 1962).

(n36)Footnote 93. Hainsworth v. Pretty, Cro. Eliz. 919, 78 Eng. Rep. 1140 (1790).

Treating wills branch of worthier title as an inapplicable anachronism. City Nat'l Bank of Birmingham v. Andrews, 355 So. 2d 341 (Ala. 1978). Devise created a remainder which could be renounced, not a reversion.

(n37)Footnote 94. Gray v. Union Trust Co., 154 P. 306 (Cal. 1915).

Kansas has revised the rule as to wills only. Kan. Gen. Stat. § 58-506.

Minnesota has probably abolished worthier title by statute. Minn. Stat. Ann. § 500.14.

Nebraska has abolished worthier title by statute. Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-115.

North Carolina implies that heirs of a living person mean children. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-6. But the rule was used in Therrell v. Clanton, 186 S.E. 483 (N.C. 1936).

(n38)Footnote 95. Belding v. Parsons, 101 N.E. 570 (Ill. 1913). The limitation in this case was substantially as follows: A to B for life, remainder to C for life, remainder to the children of C who survive C in fee, but, if there are no such children of C, then to children of A who survive C and to their descendants, per stirpes, and, if there are no such descendants of A, to the D charity. A having died survived by two heirs, these heirs were held to have taken the reversion by descent and to be able to convey it so that it would merge with the life estate; the contingent remainders were destroyed.

Gilpin v. Williams, 25 Ohio St. 283 (1874) (vested reversion exists after a contingent remainder).

(n39)Footnote 96. Pryor v. Castleman, 7 S.W. 892 (Ky. L. 1888); Baltes v. Union Trust Co., 72 N.E. 1005 (N.Y. 1904).

A reversion after a fee tail is contingent. Gilpin v. Williams, 25 Ohio St. 283 (1874). And hence may be destroyed by statute. Pollock v. Speidel, 27 Ohio St. 86 (1875). Fletcher v. Hurdle, S.W.2d 109 (Ark. 1976).

(n40)Footnote 97. Beal v. Higgins, 135 N.E. 759 (Ill. 1922).

Remainder to A and B but if either die without bodily issue then to the other created cross executory interests in each. Towns v. Walters, 168 S.E.2d 144 (Ga. 1969). Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 22.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on ch. 30, George R. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made an important contribution to preserving the American common law on reversions. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 22.06 Rights of Reversioners

[Go To Supp]

§ 22.06(a) Rights Regarding Waste

As is the case with remainders, there is a great deal of difference of opinion among the courts as to the extent of a reversioner's legal rights as against both the life tenant and third parties. The reversioner was from very early times given remedies for waste by the life tenant. n98 A person not having an absolute and unqualified title to land can commit waste and be held liable for material alterations or destruction of the estate granted. The reversioner has his action at law for any injury done to the inheritance.

The reversioner is not without remedy, when the injury is of a permanent nature affecting the inheritance, for an action will lie against the tenant, either on the case for waste or an action on the case will lie against a stranger. n99 It has been decided that case in the nature of waste will lie, although the tenant has specially covenanted not to do waste, n100 and that this action may be maintained for permissive as well as for voluntary waste. n101 Generally, only such acts as are detrimental to the inheritance constitutes actionable waste. n102 The action of quare clausum fregit cannot be maintained by a reversioner not entitled to possession, but this form of action may be maintained against a tenant at will for an injury to the freehold. n103 When waste is threatened, an injunction to prevent it is the proper remedy. n104 An action of trespass by the reversioner will not lie against a tenant pending the term, because "the wrong which is the gist of the action is an offense against the actual possession and right of possession, and these are in the tenant." n105

A court of equity will not only protect the reversioner's estate against waste by a life tenant in possession, but will also declare the title of the reversioner as against the owners of the life estate in possession who claim a title in fee simple. n106

Even though a secured lender does not hold a reversion of the fee simple title, the lender may still bring an action for waste against a mortgagor who damages the property. In such cases, damages are granted only to the extent that the waste renders the debt insecured. n107

§ 22.06(b) Rights Regarding Possession

Where another is legally entitled to possession of land and the reversioner forcibly enters on him, such entry is an interference with such other's right to possession for which an action of trespass will lie. n108 A reversioner before breach of condition has no right to possession and can confer no such right on a licensee. n109 His right to enforce forfeiture is merely an inchoate right until decreed by a court of competent jurisdiction. n110 Upon the termination of a life estate, the reversioner becomes at once entitled to the possession of the real estate. It seems that the life tenant's tenant in possession will not be entitled to a notice to quit the premises or demand for the possession thereof from the owner of the reversion in order to enable the latter to maintain an action for possession. n111 The common-law right of partition extended only to those having concurrent undivided possessor interests in land. n112 Hence, it followed that the reversioner could not institute an action for partition against the holders of the immediate estate since he had neither possession nor the right of possession. n113 And, the practical problem of measuring the value of the reversion prevented the life tenant from partitioning against the reversioner. But, in some states today, statutes give the reversioner as well as the holder of the particular estate the right to have partition. n114 The mortality tables may sometimes be used to fix valuations.

The rule that a reversion will not be partitioned does not hinder an estate in possession from being partitioned among the cotenants, and the fact that there is a reversion is not a bar to partition among persons having an interest in possession; n115 but, in the absence of a statute to the contrary, it is the general rule that a life tenant is not entitled to maintain partition against reversioners or others having a future conditional interest. n116

§ 22.06(c) Rights Regarding Transfer

§ 22.06(d) Rights Affected by Statutes of Limitation and Laches

The possibility of the running of statutes of limitation against the reversioner depends to a considerable extent upon the nature of the reversion. If the reversion follows an estate of less than freehold, clearly the reversioner is barred since the tenant holds of him under privity of title. And, if the reversion follows a fee tail, barring of the fee by adverse possession would also seem to bar the reversion. But, where a life tenant is in possession, there is a great deal of disagreement as to whether adverse possession by a stranger will bar the reversioner as well as the life tenant.

Probably the weight of authority is that the statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action to recover possession by a reversioner until the termination of the preceding estate. n117 But there is a strong line of authority, relying upon the theory that adverse possession benefits the possessor, rather than punishes the owner, which permits adverse possession or prescription to run against the reversioner.

The title of reversioners may be lost by laches in failing to assert their claims against lienors whose liens were enforced during the lifetime of the owner of the particular estate. n118 "If a husband seised as tenant by the curtesy makes a conveyance in fee, and the grantee enters and continues in possession, claiming to own the whole absolutely, such possession will be regarded as adverse to the wife and those claiming under her only from the period of the husband's death." n119 Where an option to purchase is given a tenant during his term, and he commits actionable waste, it is held that the statute of limitations will not commence to run in his favor against an action for the waste until the termination of his tenancy or until it is determined that he will not exercise his option to purchase. n120 In a joint action for waste by several heirs against an assignee of the tenant by the curtesy in possession, it was held that there could be no recovery of any part of the alleged cause of action which was barred by the statute of limitations against any of the plaintiffs. n121

The life tenant may not hold adversely to the reversioner until the latter clearly receives notice of the life tenant's intent to disavow the fiduciary relationship existing with the reversioner and that the courts disagree as to whether the purported conveyance of a fee by the life tenant is of itself such a disavowal as to make the grantee hold adversely to the reversioner.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 98. See Bryan Harris, Tenancies and Reversions, 117 New L.J. 157 (1967). Of course this is not without limitations. See, e.g., Whittington v. Whittington, 608 So. 2d 1274 Miss. 1992) (refusing a remedy for life tenant's waste of an open well).

(n2)Footnote 99. Randall v. Cleaveland, 6 Conn. 328 (1827); Stetson v. Day, 51 Me. 434 (1868); Lawry v. Lawry, 34 A. 273 (Me. 1896); Shattuck v. Gragg, 40 Mass. (23 Pick.) 88 (1839); Clark v. Holden, 73 Mass. (7 Gray) 8 (1856); Frawley v. Forrest, 38 N.E.2d 631 (Mass. 1941); Godard v. Babson-Dow Mfg. Co., 47 N.E.2d 303 (Mass. 1943); Stevens v. Rose, 37 N.W. 205 (Mich. 1888); Blake v. Hoover Motor Co., 212 P. 738 (N.M. 1923); Cannon v. Hatcher, 1 S.C. 260 (Hill 1833) 96 Eng. Rep. 657 (1776). Matter of Great Northern Iron Ore Properties, 419 N.W.2d 498 (Minn. App. 1988) (citing statutory authority for such an action).

(n3)Footnote 100. Kinlyside v. Thornton, 2 W. Bl. 1111.

(n4)Footnote 101. White v. Wagner, 4 H. & J. 373 (Md. 1818).

(n5)Footnote 102. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 181 A. 684 (Del. Ch. 1935).

(n6)Footnote 103. Kimball v. Sumner, 62 Me. 305 (1873); Starr v. Jackson, 11 Mass. 519 (1814). See Bresnahan v. Hicks, 244 N.W. 218 (Mich. 1932).

(n7)Footnote 104. Loudon v. Warfield, 5 J.J. Marsh. (28 Ky. 1830) 196; Thayer v. Shorey, 191 N.E. 435 (Mass. 1934); Hemphill v. Mississippi State Hwy. Comm., 145 So. 2d 455 (Miss. 1962); Abbott v. Wagner, 188 N.W. 113 (Neb. 1922); Dooly v. Stringham, 7 P. 405 (Utah 1885); Brock v. Dole, 28 N.W. 334 (Wis. 1886).

(n8)Footnote 105. Brooks v. Rogers, 13 So. 386 (Ala. 1893).

(n9)Footnote 106. Laurance v. Mitchell, 15 So. 2d 583 (Ala. 1943).

(n10)Footnote 107. See Beiger Heritage Corp. v. Kilbey, 676 N.E.2d 784, 787-788 (Ind. Ct. App. 1997).

(n11)Footnote 108. Green v. Hammock, 16 S.W. 357 (Ky. 1891); Maryland Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Ruth, 68 A. 358 (Md. 1907).

(n12)Footnote 109. Maryland Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Ruth, 68 A. 358 (Md. 1907).

(n13)Footnote 110. In re Gaffers' Estate, 5 N.Y.S.2d 671 (1938).

(n14)Footnote 111. Guthmann v. Vallery, 71 N.W. 734 (Neb. 1897).

(n15)Footnote 112. Lawson v. Bonner, 40 So. 488 (Miss. 1906); Savage v. Savage, 23 P. 890 (Or. 1890).

Accord: Restatement, Property, § 171.

See South Carolina Sav. Bank v. Stansell, 158 S.E. 131 (S.C. 1931).

(n16)Footnote 113. Wilkinson v. Stuart, 74 Ala. 198 (1883); McQueen v. Turner, 8 So. 863 (Ala. 1891); Johnson v. Johnson, 89 Mass. (7 Allen) 196 (1863); Metcalfe v. Miller, 56 N.W. 16 (Mich. 1893); Brown v. Brown, 8 N.H. 93 (1835); Stevens v. Enders, 13 N.J.L. 271 (1833); Wood v. Sugg, 91 N.C. 93 (1884); Ziegler v. Grim, 6 Watts (Pa. 1837) 106; Baldwin v. Aldrich, 84 Vt. 526 (1861); Merritt v. Hughes, 15 S.E. 56 (W. Va. 1892).

(n17)Footnote 114. Deadman v. Yantis, 82 N.E. 592 (Ill. 1907); Smalley v. Isaacson, 42 N.W. 352 (Minn. 1889); Preston v. Brant, 10 S.W. 78 (Mo. 1888); Sikemeier v. Galvin, 27 S.W. 551 (Mo. 1894); Jenkins v. Fahey, 73 N.Y. 355 (1878); Bierce v. James, 11 S.W. 788 (Tenn. 1889); Bice v. Nixon, 11 S.E. 1004 (W. Va. 1890).

(n18)Footnote 115. See Jameson v. Hayward, 39 P. 1078 (Cal. 1895); Ray v. Poole, 123 S.E. 5 (N.C. 1924); Plano Mfg. Co. v. Kindschi, 111 N.W. 680 (Wis. 1907).

(n19)Footnote 116. See generally: Teasley v. Hulme, 104 S.E. 151 (Ga. 1920); Metcalfe v. Miller, 56 N.W. 16 (Mich. 1893); In re Frutchey, 183 N.Y.S. 786 (1920); Ray v. Poole, 123 S.E. 5 (N.C. 1924); Embleton v. McMechen, 143 N.E. 177 (Ohio St. 1924); Newell v. Willmarth, 76 A. 433 (R.I. 1910), 19 Ann. Cas. 807; Chickamauga Trust Co. v. Lonas, 201 S.W. 777 (Tenn. 1918); Plano Mfg. Co. v. Kindschi, 111 N.W. 680 (Wis. 1907).

(n20)Footnote 117. Orthwein v. Thomas, 21 N.E. 430 (Ill. 1889); Wallingford v. Hearl, 15 Mass. 471 (1819); Tilson v. Thompson, 27 Mass. (10 Pick.) 359 (1830); Reed v. Lowe, 63 S.W. 687 (Mo. 1901); Helming v. Forrester, 127 N.W. 373 (Neb. 1910); McFarland v. Flack, 127 N.W. 375 (Neb. 1910); McCorry v. King's Heirs, 22 Tenn. (3 Hum.) 267 (1842).

That limitations run from determination of life estate, see Huey v. Brock, 92 So. 904 (Ala. 1921); Koen v. Koen, 103 S.E. 322 (W. Va. 1920).

"The right of entry in the person in remainder can, in no case, be affected by the statute of limitations during the existence of the particular estate; and the laches of a tenant for life will not, as a general rule, affect the party entitled." Angell, Limitations (6th ed.), § 371.

In Illinois a possibility of reverter or right of re-entry is lost seven years after the termination of the preceding estate or breach of condition if the holder of the immediate estate has paid taxes. See Storke v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 61 N.E.2d 552 (Ill. 1945). Keesecker v. Bird, 490 S.E.2d 754, 771 (W. Va. 1997) (since waste may occur as late as the last day of possession, the cause of action does not accrue until possession is relinquished; discovery doctrine does not toll statute further).

(n21)Footnote 118. Huey v. Brock, 92 So. 904 (Ala. 1921) (delay of 40 years).

(n22)Footnote 119. Angell, Limitations (6th ed.), § 371. Heath v. White, 5 Conn. 228 (1824); Wallingford v. Hearl, 15 Mass. 471 (1819); Wilson v. Frost, 85 S.W. 375 (Mo. 1905); Jackson ex dem Swartwout v. Johnson, 5 N.Y. 74 (Cow. 1825).

(n23)Footnote 120. Powell v. Dayton, S. & G. R.R., 16 P. 863 (Or. 1888).

(n24)Footnote 121. Learned v. Ogden, 32 So. 278 (Miss. 1902).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 22.07

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on ch. 30, George R. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made an important contribution to preserving the American common law on reversions. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 22.07 Miscellaneous Rules Regarding Reversions

The general rule that rent follows the reversion is applicable where a person grants a lease of lands and on his death conveys the land by will. In such case, rents coming due after the death of the testator, follow the reversion to the devisee. n122 The reversioner may sue to remove a cloud from the reversion but is under no duty to do so. n123

A reversion, whether defeasible or otherwise, is subject to levy of execution. n124

Under modern law, a reversion descends and can pass by will. n125

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 122. Rogers v. McKenzie, 65 N.C. 218 (1871).

(n2)Footnote 123. Huey v. Brock, 92 So. 904 (Ala. 1921).

(n3)Footnote 124. McKenna v. Seattle-First Nat'l Bank, 214 P.2d 664 (Wash. 1950); Young v. Lewis, 76 S.E.2d 276 (W. Va. 1953).

(n4)Footnote 125. Heirs of holder of a reversion take per stirpes and per capita. House v. White, 240 S.E.2d 489 (N.C. App. 1978); N.C. Gen. Stat. 29-1. Robertson v. North Inter-River Drainage Dist., 842 S.W.2d 544 (Mo. App. 1992).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 22.08

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on ch. 30, George R. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made an important contribution to preserving the American common law on reversions. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 22.08 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Articles

Bell, Sharon J. "Osages, Iron Horses and Reversionary Interests: The Impact of United States v. Atterberry on Railroad Abandonments." Tulsa L.J. Vol. 20 (Winter 2984) 255.

Kempe, Joseph C. "Reconciling Diverse Authorities on Sales of Remainder Interests." Est. Plan.1 Vol. 20 (Mar./Apr. 1997) 119.

Wright, Danaya C. "Private Rights and Public Ways: Property Disputes and Rails to Trails In Indiana." Ind. L. Rev. Vol. 30 (1997) 723.

Annotations

Annotation, Circumstances Excusing Lessee's Failure to Give Timely Notice or Exercise of Option to Renew or Extend Lease, 27 A.L.R. 4th 266.

Annotation, Divorce Property Distribution: Real Estate or Trust Property in Which Interest Vested Before Marriage and was Realized During Marriage, 60 A.L.R. 4th 217.

Annotation, Duty as Between Life Tenant and Remainderman with Respect to Cost of Improvements or Repairs Made Under Compulsion of Governmental Authority, 43 A.L.R. 4th 1012.

Annotation, Duty to Pay Real-Property Taxes as Affected by Time of Commencement or Termination of Life Estate, 8 A.L.R. 4th 643.

Annotation, Eminent Domain: Measure and Elements of Lessee's Compensation for Condemnor's Taking or Damaging of Leasehold, 17 A.L.R. 4th 337.

Annotation, Grant to One for Life, and Afterwards, Either Absolutely or Contingently, to Grantor's Heirs or Next of Kin, as Leaving Reversion or Creating Remainder, 16 A.L.R. 2D 691.

Annotation, Implied Duty of Oil and Gas Lessee to Protect Against Drainage, 18 A.L.R. 4th 14.

Annotation, Life Tenant's Death as Affecting Rights Under Lease Given by Him, 14 A.L.R. 4th 1054.

Annotation, Measure of Damages or Compensation in Eminent Domain as Affected by Premises Being Restricted to Particular Educational, Religious, Charitable, or Noncommercial Use, 29 A.L.R. 5th 36 (discussing the value of the reversionary interest when condemnor owns determinable fee).

Annotation, Real Property Quiet-Title Actions Against United States Under Quiet Title Act (28 U.S.C.S. § 2409a), 60 A.L.R. Fed. 645.

Annotation, Remedy for Breach of Implied Duty of Oil and Gas Lessee to Protect Against Drainage, 18 A.L.R. 4th 147.

Annotation, Slander of Title: Sufficiency of Plaintiff's Interest in Real Property to Maintain Action, 86 A.L.R. 4th 738.

Annotation, Sufficiency of Provision of Lease to Effect Second or Perpetual Right of Renewal, 29 A.L.R. 4th 172.

Annotation, Validity and Construction of Statutes Providing for Reversion of Mineral Estates for Abandonment or Nonuse, 16 A.L.R. 4th 1029.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Statute or Lease Provision Expressly Governing Rights and Compensation of Lessee Upon Condemnation of Leased Property, 22 A.L.R. 5th 347.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 22.02

Supp. to § 22.02 Definitions of Reversion.

[Go To Main]

§ 22.02(a) Several Definitions of Reversions. [Go To Main]

Add:

See also T. P. Gallanis, The Future of Future Interests, 60 Wash & Lee L. Rev. 513 (2003) (proposing reforms to future interest law that would remove many of the differences between reversions and other future interests).

Add:

Goldstein v. Lindner, 648 N.W.2d 892 (Wis. App. 2002) (Unlike royalties and contractual interests, a reversion is not an interest that arises from a contract; rather, a reversion arises by construction and operation of law whenever a grantor has conveyed less than his whole interest or estate, the undisposed portion being his when the grant is terminated.).

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) , rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (holding that an estate in reversion is the residue of the estate left in the grantor, to commence in possession after determination of some particular estate granted by the grantor).

Add:

E-470 Public Highway Authority v. Argus Real Estate Partners, Inc., 70 P.3d 481 (Colo. App. 2002) (A "reversion" is the undisposed portion remaining in a grantor when that grantor conveys less than his or her whole estate and, therefore, retains a portion of the title.).

Add:

Mayor and City Council of Ocean City v. Taber, 367 A.2d 1233 (Md. 1977) (A "reversion" is any reversionary interest which is not subject to condition precedent; it arises when the owner of real estate devises or conveys an interest in it less than his own.).

Long v. Long, 74 Ohio Op. 2d 287, 343 N.E.2d 100 (Ohio 1976) ("Reversion" is said to be vested because there is no condition precedent to taking effect in possession other than termination of preceding estate; distinguishing feature of reversion is that it is not subject to conditions precedent to its taking effect in possession and all other conditions defeating a reversion are regarded as conditions subsequent.).

Ringgold v. Carvel, 76 A.2d 327 (Md. 1950) (A "reversion" is any reversionary interest which is not subject to a condition precedent, and is the residue of an estate left in the testator to commence in possession after the termination of some particular estate devised by him.).

Ditmore v. Michalik, 244 Mich. App. 569 (Mich. App. 2001) (holding that a reversion is a future interest that remains in the grantor).

§ 22.02(b) Defined as a Present, Vested Right. [Go To Main]

Add:

Gale v. Bath Central School District, 829 N.Y.S.2d 359 (2007) (purchasers of school land previously donated for educational purposes were not permitted to extinguish the reversion by means of a statute permitting an action to extinguish restrictions on land held for charitable purposes).

Miller v. Woodbury Trust Co., 64 A.2d 634 (N.J. Super. Ch. 1949) (An "estate in reversion" is residue of estate left in grantor, to commence in possession after natural termination of particular estate granted out by him, arising by operation of law, and is an estate in praesenti vested in sense of a present fixed right of enjoyment in futuro.).

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) , rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (reversion is an actual estate in praesenti and is vested in the sense of a present fixed right to enjoy the property in the future).

Add:

Northwest Acceptance Corp. v. Lansdowne, 93 B.R. 243 (Bkrtcy. D. Or. 1988) (Reversionary interests are descendible, devisable, alienable, and assignable.).

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (reversion is both alienable and devisable).

§ 22.02(c) Types of Reversionary Interests. [Go To Main]

Add:

Shields v. Moffitt, 683 P.2d 530 (Okla. 1984) ("Estate in reversion" is residue of estate left by operation of law in grantor or his heirs commencing in possession on the determination of the particular estate granted or devised; it is not subject to a condition precedent.).

Folden v. Folden, 26 Ohio Op. 2d 240, 188 N.E.2d 193 (Ohio App. 1962) (A "reversion" is the residue of an estate left in the grantor, who commences in possession after the termination of a particular estate granted out by him.).

Rox Petroleum, L.L.C. v. New Dominion, L.L.C., 2008 OK 13 (Okla. 2008) (reversionary mineral interest); Ellmae Phillips Co. v. U.S., 77 Fed. Cl. 387 (2007) (property owner held reversionary interest upon railroad's abandonment of a right-of-way easement).

§ 22.02(d) Types of Reversions. [Go To Main]

Delete last sentence of footnote 9 and insert the following.

It is sometimes said that there are reversionary rights in easements or rights of way, especially when discussing railroad easements. Hash v. United States, 403 F.3d 1308 (Fed. Cir. 2005) ; Caldwell v. United States, 391 F.3d 1226 (Fed. Cir. 2004) ; Renewal Body Works, Inc. v. United States, 64 Fed. Cl. 609 (Fed. Cl. 2005) . However, use of "reversion" in this way is not consistent with traditional common law terminology. Preseault v. United States 100 F.3d 1525, 1533 (Fed. Cir. 1996) .

As the Nebraska Supreme court explained: "While the vocabulary of the common law of real property is often imported into the discussion of railroad rights-of-way, where those rights-of-way have been created by federal law, they are entirely creatures of federal statute, and their scope and duration are determined, not by common law principles, but by the relevant statutory provisions." Whipps Land & Cattle Co. v. Level 3 Communications, LLC, 265 Neb. 472, 658 N.W.2d 258, 264 (Neb. 2003) .

Further "as a matter of traditional property law terminology, a termination of the easements would not cause anything to 'revert' to the landowner. Rather, the burden of the easement would simply be extinguished, and the landowner's property would be held free and clear of any such burden." Toews v. United States, 376 F.3d 1371, 1376 (Fed. Cir. 2004) .

See also Richard A. Allen, Does the Rails-to-Trails Act Effect a Taking of Property?, 31 Transp. L. J. 35, n. 37 (Fall 2003) (agreeing that when an easement is terminated, it is more accurate to say "that the owner becomes entitled to full and exclusive possession of the property," rather than that a reversion takes place).

See Chapter 60, § 60.08 for discussion of termination of easements.

Add:

City of St. Paul v. State of Minnesota Dept. of Revenue, 754 N.W.2d 386 (Minn. App. 2008) (reversion to the state of restricted-use parcels held by the city denied).

§ 22.02(e) Reversions and Remainders Distinguished. [Go To Main]

Add:

Bradford v. Rain, 562 S.W.2d 514 (Tex. Civ. App. 1978) (Principal distinctions between a reversionary interest and a remainder interest are that a reversionary interest arises by operation of law apart from the intent of grantor whereas the remainder is created only by express limitation by the same instrument which creates the particular estate and that a reversion interest arises only in favor of the grantor whereas a remainder interest can be created only in favor of a stranger.).

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) , rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (reversion created by operation of law).

Add:

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) , rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 22.03

Supp. to § 22.03 Incidents of Reversions.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Ditmore v. Michalik, 244 Mich. App. 569 (Mich. App. 2001) (reversion is a future interest).

Add:

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (holding that an estate in reversion is the residue of the estate left in the grantor, to commence in possession after determination of some particular estate granted by the grantor).

Add:

Jensen v. City of New Albany, Ind., 868 N.E.2d 525 (Ind. App. 2007) (reversionary interest extinguished when the state acquired the property for road construction purposes).

Matter of Bergman, 585 F.2d 1171 (2d Cir. 1978) (Under New York law, a reversion is fully alienable, descendible and devisable and is a form of ownership that applies with equal force to both real and personal property.).

Add:

Robertson v. North Inter-River Drainage Dist., 842 S.W.2d 544 (Mo. App. 1992) (Reversions are created by operation of law, vested but sometimes defeasible, and subject to transfer by deed, will, or intestate descent.).

Center for Molecular Medicine and Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax 2001) , rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (A "reversion" is an actual estate in praesenti and is vested in the sense of a present fixed right to enjoy the property in the future.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 22.04

Supp. to § 22.04 How Reversions Arise.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Nicoletti v. Allegheny County Airport Authority, 841 A.2d 156 (Pa. Cmwlth, 2004) (county, in leasing land to the local airport authority, "expressly and specifically retained a reversionary interest" in the lease agreement. Reversion was to take place "based on either the authority's material default of the terms of the agreement, the mutual agreement of the parties, or the expiration of the demised term of the agreement").

Winters v. County of Clatsop, 150 P.3d 1104 (Or. App. 2007) (an attempted sale of the property triggered an automatic reversion of the title to the county).

Add

Waterfowl Limited Liability Company v. United States, 453 F.3d 291 (5th Cir. 2006) (federal law governed the acquisition by U.S. of reversion in mineral rights upon the extinction of servitudes imposed on those rights).

§ 22.04(a) Grant. [Go To Main]

Add:

Goldstein v. Lindner, 648 N.W.2d 892 (Wis. App. 2002) (Reversions arise by operation of law, and not by any act of a party.).

Add:

Donaldson v. Ritenour, 524 A.2d 1044 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1987) ("Reversion" is remnant of estate retained by grantor or heirs after grant of part of interest, but "remainder" represents remnant of whole estate otherwise disposed of.).

Hornets Nest Girl Scout Council, Inc. v. Cannon Foundation, Inc., 339 S.E.2d 26 (N.C. App. 1986) (A "reversionary interest," whether a possibility of reverter or a right of reentry, is a future interest retained by grantor or his heirs and is considered vested for purposes of rule against perpetuities.).

§ 22.04(c) Reservation. [Go To Main]

Add:

Mount Olivet Cemetery Ass'n v. Salt Lake City, 164 F.3d 480 (1998) ("Possibility of reverter" is the interest retained by a grantor after conveyance of a determinable fee; it is a future contingent interest in real property, and, at best, a future estate in land.).

Following the language: " ... (d) giving the creator a right of re-entry following a fee upon a condition subsequent ..." insert following "subsequent" new footnote 44.1:

§ 22.04(d) Implication. [Go To Main]

Add:

Sides v. Beene, 938 S.W.2d 840 (Ark. 1997) (grantor's future interest following fee tail is "divestible reversion").

Add:

Robertson v. North Inter-River Drainage Dist., 842 S.W.2d 544 (Mo. App. 1992) (Reversions are created by operation of law, vested but sometimes defeasible, and subject to transfer by deed, will, or intestate descent.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 22.05

Supp. to § 22.05 Reversions Under the Doctrine of Worthier Title.

[Go To Main]

Change Fletcher citation to:

536 S.W.2d 109 (Ark. 1976) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 22.06

Supp. to § 22.06 Rights of Reversioners.

[Go To Main]

§ 22.06(a) Rights Regarding Waste. [Go To Main]

Add:

Reniere v. Gerlach, 752 A.2d 480 (R.I. 2000) (holding that life tenant did not commit actionable waste by abandoning property, failing to pay real estate taxes, and failing to make necessary and reasonable repairs).

§ 22.06(b) Rights Regarding Possession. [Go To Main]

Add:

Leichtfuss v. Dabney, 122 P.3d 1220 (Mont. 2005) (dominant tenement of easement held by life tenant reverted to fee owners when life tenancy ended).

§ 22.06(c) Rights Regarding Transfer. [Go To Main]

Insert the following as text for § 22.06(c):

Although it is possible that, at an early date, a reversion, not being a possessory interest, passed only by descent like a possibility of reverter, everywhere today a reversion passes by descent, may be devised and may be alienated inter vivos, voluntarily by deed or involuntarily by judicial or execution sale. The reversion expectant upon the failure of a valid devise for lack of beneficiaries may be granted by deed or will, and, if by will, the devise may be contained in the same instrument creating the remainder or in a later will.[116.1] A reversion arising from a conditional limitation in a deed conveying land may be alienated and is not a bare possibility as mentioned in the statute.[116.2]

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 22 REVERSIONS

3-22 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 22.08

Supp. to § 22.08 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Add to Articles:

Briggs, Robert R., "Aycock Pontiac, Inc. v. Aycock: Express Trust Terms Beware--Implied Reversions Are Here." 53 Ark. L. Rev. 885 (2000).

Jensen, Ronald H. "Estate and Gift Tax Effects of Selling a Remainder: Have D'Ambrosio, Wheeler and Magnin Changed the Rules?" Florida Tax Rev. Vol. 4 (1999) 537.

Manns, F. Philip, Jr. "New Reasons to Remember the Estate Taxation of Reversions," 44 Real Prop. Tr & Est. L. J. 323 (Summer, 2009) .

Spence, Carl Jackson. "Linkous v. Candler: The Future of Acceleration of Remainders in Georgia." Ga. State L. Rev. Vol. 16 (2000) 879.

Add to Annotations

Annotation, Adverse possession: right of remainderman or reversioner to tack his possession to that of life tenant, 150 A.L.R. 557 .

Annotation, Commencement of running of statute of limitations respecting actions by owners of right of re-entry, or actions against third persons by reversioners, 19 A.L.R.2d 729.

Annotation, Dower in reversion or remainder interest of husband, 21 A.L.R. 1073 .

Annotation, Murder of life tenant by remainderman or reversioner as affecting latter's rights to remainder or reversion, 24 A.L.R.2d 1120.

Annotation, Reversion of title upon abandonment or vacation of public street or highway, 70 A.L.R. 564 .

Annotation, Reversion upon failure of contingency upon which future estate is limited as within residuary clause of will, 108 A.L.R. 464 .

Annotation, Right of reversioner or remainderman to maintain action or suit in respect of easement, 138 A.L.R. 1006 .

Annotation, Termination of trust where life interest and remainder or reversion are acquired by same person, 50 A.L.R.2d 1161 .

Annotation, Transfer or devolution of reversion as carrying lessee's covenants to repair, or to yield up in repair, 34 A.L.R. 782 .

Annotation, What acts, claims, circumstances, instruments, color of title, judgment, or thing of record will ground adverse possession in a life tenant as against remaindermen or reversioners, 58 A.L.R.2d 299 .

125 of 171 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 23.syn

§ 23.syn Synopsis to Chapter 23: REMAINDERS

§ 23.01 Introduction

126 of 171 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 23.01

§ 23.01 Introduction

[Go To Supp]

PLACEMENT HOLDER FOR NEW CHAPTER 23

127 of 171 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.01

Supp. to § 23.01 Introduction.

[Go To Main]

First sentence, change "chapters" to "chapter"

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.03

Supp. to § 23.03 History of Remainders.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *17 (Feb. 28, 2002) , affirmed in part and reversed in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) ("A remainder is a future interest created in a transferee which can become a present possessory estate only on the expiration of the preceding estate.").

Add:

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) , rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (holding that an estate in reversion arises by operation of law and is distinguishable from a remainder which must be created by deed or devise).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.05

Supp. to § 23.05 How Remainders Arise.

[Go To Main]

add:

Voght v. Voght, 882 N.Y.S.2d 551 (2009) (creation of remainder by exercise of power of appointment).

Add:

See, e.g., Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *35 (Feb. 28, 2002) , affirmed in part and reversed in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.06

Supp. to § 23.06 Transferability of Remainders.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (holding a vested remainder may be sold or conveyed).

Add:

Braunstein v. Hajjar, 385 B. R. 482 (D. Mass. 2008) (a trustee could not sell a debtor's remainder interest in the property free and clear of the life estate).

Ctr. for Molecular Med. & Immunology v. Township of Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax. 2001) rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (a remainder must be created by deed or devise).

Add:

United States v. Lugo, 122 Fed. Appx. 613, 618 (4th Cir. 2005) ("In Maryland, a contingent interest assigned by the grantor to a designated remainderman and contingent only to an event is descendible, divisible, and may be assigned by the remainderman"); Mostoller v. Wachter, 314 B.R. 365, 374 (Bankr. D. Tenn. 2004) (under Tennessee law, both vested and contingent remainder interests may be transferred).

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (holding a vested remainder may be sold or conveyed).

Add:

In re Estate of Ellis v. Green, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 235 at *21 (April 15, 2002) .

Add after the first sentence in the second paragraph:

In re Estate of Ellis v. Green, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 235 at *14-15 (April 15, 2002) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.07

Supp. to § 23.07 Acceleration of Remainders.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Gottesman v. Estate of Gottesman, 2002 Ohio 6058 (Ohio Ct. App. 2002) .

Add:

Richey v. Hurst, 798 So. 2d 841, 843 (Fla. App. 2001) (interest disclaimed is disposed of in same manner as if disclaimant had predeceased the death or other event).

See, Radford, Mary F. "Wills, Trusts and Administration of Estates." Mercer L. Rev. Vol. 54 (Fall 2002) 583, at 608.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.08

Supp. to § 23.08 Rights and Duties of Those Who Hold Remainders.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Exception. Hilterbrand v. Carter, 27 P.3d 1086 (Or. App. 2001) (holding when cotenants hold concurrent life estates with contingent remainders, the contingent remainder which each cotenant has cannot be defeated by any act of the cotenant).

Add:

Ruggles v. Sabe, 670 N.W.2d 356 (N.D. 2003) (owner of one-third interest in vested remainder had action for waste against the life tenant who also held the other two-thirds interest in the remainder); Singleton v. Donalson, 117 S.W.3d 516 (Tex. App. 2003) (in an action for waste, court held the life tenant had the power to consume oil and gas produced from the property).

Add:

Maitland v. Allen, 594 S.E.2d 918 (Va. 2004) (a former wife, holder of a life estate, could not seek partition against the remainder interests of her children).

Add:

Clemons v. Thornton, 2008 Fla. App. LEXIS 3308 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1st Dist. Mar. 10, 2008) (grantor held life estate concurrently with his wife, and held the remainder as sole property).

Add:

Jenkins v. Brown, 532 S.E.2d 302 (S.C. App. 2000) (statute of limitations does not begin to run against a remainderman until the death of the life tenant).

Add:

But see Friends of the Trails v. Blasius, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 (Cal. App. 3d Dist. 2000) (a remainderman has no legal capacity to resist or bar the adverse user, but the owner of the servient estate does have such legal capacity).

Add:

Collier v. Kincheloe, 180 P.3d 1157 (Mont. 2008) (when the life tenant failed to redeem the property from delinquent taxes, the tax deed to the county extinguished both the life estate and the remainder, conveying a fee simple absolute to the county).

Thomas v. Thomas, 2003 S.D. 7, 656 N.W.2d 740 (S.D. 2003) (absence from the premises does not relieve life tenant from duty not to commit waste and to pay property taxes).

Miller v. Miller, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 1271 (No. 81287, Mar. 20, 2003) (remainderman entitled to reimbursement of property taxes he had paid).

Add

RM 14 FK Corp. v. Bank One Trust Company, N.A., 831 N.Y.S.2d 120 (2007) (Holders of remainder interest had no right to prevent current estate holders from refinancing, so long as contractual conditions were met).

Add:

Collier v. Kincheloe, 180 P.3d 1157 (Mont. 2008) (when the life tenant, as taxpayer, failed to pay taxes, the estate acquired by the county in the tax deed also extinguished the remainder interest).

Add:

Friends of the Trails v. Blasius, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 (Cal. App. 3d Dist. 2000) (a remainderman has no legal capacity to resist or bar the adverse user, but the owner of the servient estate does have such legal capacity).

Brown v. Seal, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 231 (No. E2004-01499-COA-R3-CV, Tenn. Ct. App., Apr. 21, 2005) (for adverse possession purposes, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the death of the life tenant because the possession is not considered "adverse" to the remaindermen until then).

Add:

Chapman v. Thornhill, 802 So. 2d 149 (Miss. App. 2001) (life tenant's rights are limited according to rules for waste).

Bailey v. Delta Trust & Bank, 2004 Ark. LEXIS 723 (No. 04-411, Ark., Nov. 17, 2004) (life tenant must not squander or waste the property); Hutchinson v. Estate of Nunn, 2004 Tenn. App. LEXIS 899 (No. W2004-00578-COA-R3-CV, Tenn. Ct. App., Dec. 30, 2004) (remaindermen allowed to sue estate when decedent's clear-cutting of timber caused waste to the property in which the remaindermen held interest).

Add:

Weber v. McGowan-Young, 2008 Ohio 4147 (Ohio Ct. App., Clark County Aug. 15, 2008) (partition of remainder interest).

Maitland v. Allen, 594 S.E.2d 918 (Va. 2004) (a former wife, holder of a life estate, could not seek partition against the remainder interests of her children).

Add:

Opha L. Estate ex rel. Buckland v. Keith, 647 S.E.2d 731 (W. Va. App. 2007) (absent a contrary agreement, proceeds from insurance provided by the life tenant are payable solely to the life tenant).

Add

Yorty v. Realty Investment & Mortgage Corp., 938 So.2d 1 (Fla. App. 2006) (property tax liens are not to be apportioned between the mortgagee and the remaindermand).

Add:

Hilterbrand v. Carter, 27 P.3d 1086 (Or. App. 2001) (when cotenants hold concurrent life estates with contingent remainders, the contingent remainder which each cotenant has cannot be defeated by any act of the cotenant).

Add:

Collier v. Kincheloe, 180 P.3d 1157 (Mont. 2008) (when the life tenant failed to redeem the property from delinquent taxes, the tax deed to the county extinguished both the life estate and the remainder, conveying a fee simple absolute to the county).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.09

Supp. to § 23.09 Remainders in Class Gifts.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *25 (Feb. 28, 2002) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) .

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *25 (Feb. 28, 2002) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) ("A class gift is [to] a group of persons who are not named, whose number may vary, and who have one or more characteristics in common.").

Add:

In re Est. of Garrett, 756 N.E.2d 920 (Ill. App. 3d Dist. 2001) (a gift in equal shares to the named individuals strengthens the conclusion that a class gift was not intended).

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 121 S.W.3d 591 (Tenn. 2003) (in the case of a class gift, the spouse of a deceased class member is not entitled to an interest in the property under the state's class gift statute).

Add:

In re Irrevocable Trust of Charles Stewart Mott, 2001 Mich. App. LEXIS 2210 at *10 (June 26, 2001) .

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *9, 24 (Feb. 28, 2002) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) (question of who remaindermen are and resulting proportionate share of each would be left until termination of the life estate).

Add:

Stalcup v. Detrich, 10 P.3d 3 (Kan. App. 2000) (remainder interests to children have been considered vested even as to afterborn children when the class is opened to let in the afterborn children).

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *26 (Feb. 28, 2002) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) ("A class of children cannot close until the death of the parent.")

Change second sentence in second paragraph to read:

A class of children cannot close until the death of the parent or parents. Add to footnote 280 the following citation: Rutherford County v. Wilson, No. M2000-01382-COA-R3- Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *26 (Feb. 28, 2002) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) ("A class of children cannot close until the death of the parent.")

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.10

Supp. to § 23.10 Remainders with Powers of Disposition or Appointment.

[Go To Main]

Change the placement of footnote 302 to the end of the sentence.

Add:

But see Williams v. Burgett, 831 So.2d 597, 598 (Ala. 2002) (in Alabama, an absolute power of disposition added to an estate for life or years is changes the estate into a fee absolute).

Hargis v. Fuller, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 81 (No. M2003-02691-COA-R3-CV, Tenn. Ct. App., Feb. 7, 2005) (the owner of a life estate with a power of disposition, qualified or unqualified, can convey the fee simple estate and defeat the interest of remaindermen, but if the power of disposition is not exercised, the property passes to the remaindermen upon the death of the life tenant).

Add:

Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. App. Houston 2000) (finding that a life tenant may expressly be given unlimited power to dispose of the property during the life tenant's lifetime, and if such power is exercised, it defeats the remainderman's interest in the disposed-of property).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.11

Supp. to § 23.11 Vested and Contingent Remainders Compared.

[Go To Main]

§ 23.11(a) The Distinction Between Vested and Contingent Remainders. [Go To Main]

Add:

Rutherford County v. Wilson, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 145 at *17 (Feb. 28, 2002) , affirmed in part and reversed in part by, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 368 (Tenn., May 6, 2003) (in classifying remainders, it is the nature of the interest conveyed which is determinative).

Stalcup v. Detrich, 10 P.3d 3 (Kan. App. 2000) (whether an interest is vested or contingent depends on the proper interpretation of the instrument which created it).

Osherow v. Porras, 312 B.R. 81 (Bankr. D. Tex. 2004) (according to Texas's rules of construction, a condition that precedes or is incorporated into the gift of the remainder is a condition precedent, while when a condition is added after a vested gift is made, the remainder is vested subject to divestment).

Add:

In re Rathe, 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 93 (No. M2003-02691-COA-R3-CV, Bankr. D. Neb., Feb. 3, 2004) (the fact that enjoyment of the fee in remainder is postponed, and may never take place at all, does not make the remainder contingent).

§ 23.11(b) Indicia of Vesting and Contingency in Remainders. [Go To Main]

Add:

Stalcup v. Detrich, 10 P.3d 3 (Kan. App. 2000) (courts must attempt to ascertain from the document itself the instrument maker's intention as to whether the remainder is vested or contingent).

Uchtorff v. Hanson, 693 N.W. 2d 790, 794 (Iowa 2005) ("whether a testamentary remainder is vested or contingent must be determined by the intent of the testator as expressed by the language of the will, if it is plain and unambiguous, and nothing else, considering the will as a whole, and giving effect to every provision thereof if it is reasonably possible").

§ 23.11(c) The Public Policy in Favor of Vesting of Remainders. [Go To Main]

Add:

Osherow v. Porras, 312 B.R. 81 (Bankr. D. Tex. 2004) ("Texas Courts will not construe a remainder as contingent when it can reasonably be taken as vested"); In re Rathe, 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 93 (No. BK03-81956, Bankr. D. Neb., Feb. 3, 2004) (whenever possible, the interest is construed as vested rather than contingent).

Add:

Schmidt v. Wachovia Bank, 624 S.E.2d 34 (Va. 2006) (early vesting of estates is favored).

Add:

Schmidt v. Wachovia Bank, 624 S.E.2d 34 (Va. 2006) (early vesting of estates is favored).

Add:

Osherow v. Porras, 312 B.R. 81 (Bankr. D. Tex. 2004) ("Texas Courts will not construe a remainder as contingent when it can reasonably be taken as vested"); In re Rathe, 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 93 (No. BK03-81956, Bankr. D. Neb., Feb. 3, 2004) (whenever possible, the interest is construed as vested rather than contingent).

Add:

In re Estate of Cruikshank, 746 N.Y.S.2d 769, 773 (2002) (a condition of survivorship will not be imputed unless unequivocally expressed).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.12

Supp. to § 23.12 Vested Remainders.

[Go To Main]

§ 23.12(a) Remainders Vested Absolutely. [Go To Main]

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (holding that a vested remainder became a present possessory interest when holder of life estate died and until then, remainderman did not have present possession of her remainder interest).

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (a remainder is a fee simple interest lacking only present possession).

Add:

In re Estate of Ellis v. Green, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 235 at *16, 20 (April 15, 2002) (remainder devised to a "deserving person" at a designated college is a vested remainder).

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (a remainder is a fee simple interest lacking only present possession).

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (holding that a vested remainder became a present possessory interest when holder of life estate died and until then, remainderman did not have present possession of her remainder interest).

§ 23.12(b) Remainders Vested Subject to Divesting. [Go To Main]

Add:

Osherow v. Porras, 312 B.R. 81 (Bankr. D. Tex. 2004) (according to Texas' rules of construction, a condition added after a vested gift is made is vested subject to divestment).

Add:

Gibson v. Gibson, 2004 Conn. Super. LEXIS 2208 (No. FA010458344S, Conn. Super. Ct., Aug. 6, 2004) (when the only contingency that would prevent receipt of the remainder interest is the death of the remainderman before the life beneficiary, the remainder is vested).

Add:

Bonta v. Burke, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, at 76 (App. 3d Dist. 2002) (remainder interest vested at time property was transferred; however, the interest was not realized until the power to revoke terminated, that is, when the grantor died and the remaindermen survived her death).

Vested. Temple Beth Israel v. Feiss, 2 P.3d 388 (Or. App. 2000) (a vested remainder subject to complete defeasance may be subject to a requirement of survivorship).

§ 23.12(c) Properties of Vested Remainders. [Go To Main]

Add:

Danielewicz v. Arnold, 769 A.2d 274 (Md. Spec. App. 2001) (a vested remainder is a present interest in property).

Add:

Taylor v. Taylor, 547 S.E.2d 161 (N.C. App. 2001) (a remainder is vested if, so long as it lasts, the only obstacle to the right of immediate possession by the remainderman is the existence of the preceding estate, or if it is subject to no condition precedent except the determination of the preceding estate).

Add:

Hutchinson v. Estate of Nunn, 2004 Tenn. App. LEXIS 899 (No. W2004-00578-COA-R3-CV, Tenn. Ct. App., Dec. 30, 2004) (remaindermen allowed to sue estate when decedent's clear-cutting of timber caused waste to the property in which they held interest).

Add:

See Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. App. - Houston 1st Dist. 2000) (a life tenant may be given the express power to dispose of property and if exercised defeats a remainderman's interest).

Add:

Jenkins v. Brown, 532 S.E.2d 302 (S.C. App. 2000) (the statute of limitations does not begin to run against a remainderman until the death of the life tenant).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.13

Supp. to § 23.13 Contingent Remainders.

[Go To Main]

§ 23.13(a) Contingent Remainders Generally. [Go To Main]

Add:

Uchtorff v. Hanson, 693 N.W. 2d 790, 793 (Iowa 2005) ("[c]ontingent remainders are where the estate in remainder is limited to take effect either to a dubious or uncertain person or upon a dubious or uncertain event"); Baldwin v. Branch, 888 So. 2d 482, 487 (Ala. 2004) (a remainder is said to be contingent when it is "limited either to a dubious and uncertain person, or upon the happening of a dubious or uncertain event, uncertainty of the right of enjoyment, as distinguished from the uncertainty of possession").

Add:

Hammons v. Hammons, 2009 Ky. App. LEXIS 23 (Ky. Ct. App. Feb. 13, 2009) (daughters had contingent interest in property under deed granting the remainder if assets remained upon death of the life tenant and at least one daughter either survived the life tenant or left issuing surviving the life tenant).

Taylor v. Taylor, 547 S.E.2d 161 (N.C. App. 2001) .

§ 23.13(c) The Effect of Limitations Over on Failure of Issue. [Go To Main]

Add:

But see, Temple Beth Israel v. Feiss, 2 P.3d 388 (Or. App. 2000) (the fact that a remainder is contingent on one event does not necessarily mean that it is also subject to a requirement of survivorship if not express).

§ 23.13(d) Remainders to Survivors. [Go To Main]

Add:

D.L. v. G.L., 811 N.E. 2d 1013, 1025 (Mass. App. Ct. 2004) (husband's remainder interest was contingent when it was dependent on whether his father died before a certain date)

Add:

Temple Beth Israel v. Feiss, 2 P.3d 388 (Or. App. 2000) (the fact that a remainder is contingent on one event does not necessarily mean that it is also subject to a requirement of survivorship if not express).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 23 REMAINDERS

3-23 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 23.14

Supp. to § 23.14 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Add to Articles

Burke, Richard W and Michael P. Morley, "The Effect of a Step-Parent Adoption on a Grandchild's Remainder Interest in a Trust," 18 Ohio Prob. L.J. 221 (July/August 2008).

Horn, Jerold I. "Availability of a Qualified Severance (I) If the Severance Changes Beneficial Interests or Otherwise Coincides with Changes in Beneficial Interests and (II) If Remainder Dispositions are Outright," 33 ACTEC J. 94 (Fall, 2007).

Knaplund, Kristine S., "Postmortem Conception and a Father's Last Will," 46 Ariz. L. Rev. 91, 108-14 (2004) (dealing with the rule of convenience).

Spence, Carl Jackson, "Linkous v. Candler: The Future of Acceleration of Remainders in Georgia." 16 Ga. St. U. L. Rev. 879 (2000).

Add to Annotations

Annotation, Adverse possession as against remainderman during life estate as affected by fact that conveyance by life tenant purported to cover fee, 112 A.L.R. 1042 .

Annotation, Character of remainder limited generally to the life tenant's children, 57 A.L.R.2d 1031 .

Annotation, Compensation for diminution in value of the remainder of property resulting from taking or use of adjoining land of others for the same undertaking, 59 A.L.R.3d 488 .

Annotation, Death of life tenant before death of testator as causing lapse or "acceleration" of remainder, 133 A.L.R. 1367 .

Annotation, Delivery or distribution to life tenant, or assent by executor to his possession or to the life interest, as inuring to benefit of the remaindermen and operating to take the remainder out of the estate, absent a trust or will provision retaining it, 68 A.L.R.2d 1107 .

Annotation, Distribution as between life tenant and remainderman of proceeds of condemned property, 91 A.L.R.2d 963.

Annotation, Duty as between life tenant and remainderman as respects payment of improvement assessments, 10 A.L.R.3d 1309.

Annotation, Duty as between life tenant and remainderman with respect to cost of improvements or repairs made under compulsion of government, 43 A.L.R.4th 1012.

Annotation, Effect of premature termination of precedent estate to accelerate a contingent remainder, 164 A.L.R. 1433 .

Annotation, Effect of premature termination of precedent estate to accelerate remainder of which there is an alternative substitutional gift, 164 A.L.R. 1297 .

Annotation, Heirs or next of kin who take upon intestacy resulting from failure of contingent remainder after life estate as determinable as of date of death of the testator or of life tenant, 132 A.L.R. 1069 .

Annotation, Murder of life tenant by remainderman or reversion as affecting latter's right to remainder or reversion, 24 A.L.R.2d 1120 .

Annotation, Nature of remainders created by will giving life estate to spouse of testator, with remainder to be divided equally between testator's heirs and spouse's heirs, 19 A.L.R.2d 371 .

Annotation, Prior estate as affected by remainder void for remoteness, 168 A.L.R. 321 .

Annotation, Relinquishment of interest by life beneficiary in possession as accelerating remainder of which there is substitutional gift in case primary remainderman does not survive beneficiary, 7 A.L.R.4th 1084 .

Annotation, Remaindermen as necessary or proper parties to action or proceeding between life tenant and trustee, 136 A.L.R. 696 .

Annotation, Right as between life tenant and remainderman in respect of property, estates, or securities of a wasting, consumable, or perishable nature, 77 A.L.R. 753 .

Annotation, Right of contingent remainderman to maintain an action for damages for waste, 56 A.L.R.3d 677 .

Annotation, Right of reversioner or remainderman to maintain an action or suit in respect of easement, 138 A.L.R. 1006 .

Annotation, Right to, and effect of, partition of undivided interests held respectively in fee and in life estate with remainder, 134 A.L.R. 661 .

Annotation, Right to contribution from remainderman, of life tenant who pays off encumbrance on property, 87 A.L.R. 220 .

Annotation, Rights and duties of life tenant and remainderman of income and corpus with respect to repairs and improvements, 175 A.L.R. 1434 .

Annotation, Rights as between the life tenant and remaindermen in respect of property, estates, or securities of a wasting, consumable, or perishable nature, 170 A.L.R. 133 .

Annotation, Rights as between estate of life tenant and remaindermen in respect of proceeds of sale or disposition made in exercise of power given life tenant, 47 A.L.R.3d 1078 .

Annotation, Rights, duties, and liabilities of life tenant (legal or equitable) and remaindermen in respect of property insurance or proceeds thereof, 126 A.L.R. 336 .

Annotation, Rights in respect of crops as between the estate of life tenant and remainderman, 47 A.L.R.3d 784 .

Annotation, Rights of life tenant and remaindermen inter se respecting increase, gains, and enhanced values of the estate, 76 A.L.R.2d 162 .

Annotation, Sale or exchange of property which is subject to life estate and remainder, where it is unproductive, or income is insufficient to pay taxes and upkeep, 76 A.L.R. 540 .

Annotation, Vested or contingent character of remainder which is subject to be defeated by death of remainderman without issue before termination of a particular estate, 109 A.L.R. 136 .

Annotation, Words of survivorship in will disposing of estate in remainder as referable to death of testator or to termination of intervening estate, 20 A.L.R.2d 830 .

139 of 171 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 24.syn

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.syn Synopsis to Chapter 24: POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

§ 24.01 Introduction

§ 24.02 Definition of Possibility of Reverter

§ 24.03 Examples of Possibilities of Reverter

§ 24.04 Common-Law History of Possibility of Reverter

§ 24.05 Possibility of Reverter Distinguished from Reversion

§ 24.06 Possibility of Reverter Distinguished from Right of Re-Entry

§ 24.07 Incidents of Possibilities of Reverter

§ 24.07(a) Subject to Statute of Frauds

§ 24.07(b) Alienability and Devisability

§ 24.08 Bibliography

Professor David A. Thomas n*
J. Reuben Clark Law School
Brigham Young University

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *.
This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property

(John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.01

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.01 Introduction

[Go To Supp]

This chapter reviews the law governing possibilities of reverter in American jurisdictions. While possibilities of reverter are not the most commonly created future interests in American property law, they impact on several other future interests. The chapter includes sections that define possibilities of reverter, distinguish them from other interests, describe their common-law history, and explain their more important incidents.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.02

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.02 Definition of Possibility of Reverter

[Go To Supp]

The interest that remains in a grantor, testator or settlor of a trust after creating a fee simple determinable is called a possibility of reverter. n1 The same name has been given to interests existing after creation of a conditional fee where de donis does not apply. The "possibility of reverter" is created by the conveyance of a limited fee. n2 A "possibility of reverter" is defined by the Restatement of the Law of Property as "any reversionary interest which is subject to a condition precedent." n3

Where determinable fees are created, a possibility of reverter automatically arises. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Donehue v. Nilges, 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954) 45 A.L.R.2d 1150; Oldfield v. Stoeco Homes, Inc., 139 A.2d 291 (N.J. 1958), Luecke v. Wallace, 951 S.W.2d 267 (Tex. Ct. App. 1997) (Both a "fee simple determinable" and a "possibility of reverter" vest immediately upon their creation), but see, Knights and Ladies of Samaria v. Board of Educ., 688 A.2d 933 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1997) (Under a Maryland statute, a possibility of reverter created before a certain date is invalid, unless the grantor files notice of intention to preserve the possibility of reverter).

John Chipman Gray, Rule Against Perpetuities 31 (2d ed. 1906), felt that the statute Quia Emptores Terrarum destroyed the possibility of creating possibilities of reverters. Sanders, Uses and Trusts 200 (4th ed.). Modern writers have disagreed. Richard R.B. Powell, Determinable Fees, 23 Colum. L. Rev. 207 (1923); W.R. Vance, Rights of Reverter and the Statute Quia Emptores, 36 Yale L.J. 593 (1927).

See Milton I. Goldstein, Rights of Entry and Possibilities of Reverter as Devices to Restrict the Use of Land, 54 Harv. L. Rev. 248 (1940).

Guida v. Thompson, 160 N.E.2d 153 (Ohio 1957) (which could, however, be conveyed).

Where city held a possibility of reverter the Fourteenth Amendment prohibited racial discrimination on the land. Hampton v. Jacksonville, 304 F.2d 320 (5th Cir. 1962).

A municipality is subject to the possibility of reverter in a conveyance to it in fee simple determinable. Metropolitan Dade County v. Leslie Enters., 257 So. 2d 29 (Fla. 1972).

Kentucky has abolished the fee simple determinable and possibility of reverter and has converted this into a "fee simple subject to a right of entry for condition broken." Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.218.

The right of entry dies after 30 years from the date of the instrument. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.219.

Limitations over after defeasible fees are valid for 30 years after breach regardless of the rule against perpetuities. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.219.

Kentucky voids possibilities of reverter and right of entry created after 30 years from date of the instrument creating them, prior to July 1, 1960, unless re-recorded before July 1, 1965. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.221.

Any possibility of reverter or right of entry contained in deeds, grants or gifts from the Commonwealth, grants for public, charitable or religious purposes, leases, easements, rights-of-way, mortgages or trusts, or any public highways is exempted from §§ 381.219 and 381.221 referred to above. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.222.

See Comment, Possibilities of Reverter and Powers of Termination in Michigan, 37 U. Det. L. J. 284 (1959); Note, Right of Entry and Possibility of Reverter: Traditional Uses -- Subdivisions -- Mineral Leases, 2 Willamette L.J. 479 (1963); James A. Webster Jr., The Quest for Clear Land Titles -- Whither Possibilities of Reverter and Rights of Entry, 42 N. C. L. Rev. 807 (1964). Whillhite v. Master, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (possibility of reverter ceases if the right terminates according to terms of a contractual agreement). But see Guillory v. Administrators of Tulane University, 212 F. Supp. 674 (D.C.La. 1962) (limiting Hampton's application).

(n2)Footnote 2. Sorrels v. McNally, 105 So. 106 (Fla. 1925), North Finn v. D. L. Cook, 825 F. Supp. 278 (D. Wyo. 1993) (in this case the court held that: 1) the prior transferor of a working interest in a foreclosed oil and gas lease has a possibility of reverter under a farm-out agreement in which the transferee of the working interest was required to convey 30% "back-in" working interest to assignee following payout; 2) liens did not attach to the transferor's reversionary interest; and 3) even if transferor's reversionary interest was alienable, the interest was not foreclosed. The court also held that a possibility of reverter is alienable together with or apart from the surface, and is exempt from the rule against perpetuities. It distinguished possibility of reverter from a power of termination, by the automatic reversion of the former, and discussed creation of reverter).

(n3)Footnote 3. Restatement of Property, § 154, (3). See Northwestern Imp. Co. v. Lowry, 66 P.2d 792 (Mont. 1937); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930), and Minn. Laws 1949, ch. 201, affecting abolishing unintended reverters in express trusts.

An executory interest in or limitation to the heirs of the grantor was a possibility of reverter. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. Martin, 340 P.2d 899 (Kan. 1959).

As to the questions of possibility of reverter and rights of reentry in New York, see In re Will of McCarthy, 347 N.Y.S.2d 490 (1973), holding that rights of reentry are neither devisable nor alienable in New York. County Comm'n of Boone County v. Hill, 460 S.E.2d 727 (W. Va. 1995) (stoppage in use of facility as nursing home because of a labor strike did not amount to the use of land for a different purpose to vest title in the holder of the possibility of reverter); Potts Run Coal Co. v. Benjamin Coal Co., 426 A.2d 1175 (Pa. Sup. Ct. 1981).

(n4)Footnote 11. Coffelt v. Decatur Sch. Dist. No. 17, 208 S.W.2d 1 (Ark. 1948), North Finn v. D. L. Cook, 825 F. Supp. 278 (D. Wyo. 1993) (In this case the court held that: 1) the prior transferor of a working interest in a foreclosed oil and gas lease has a possibility of reverter under a farm-out agreement in which the transferee of the working interest was required to convey a 30% "back-in" working interest to assignee following payout; 2) liens did not attach to the transferor's reversionary interest; and 3) even if transferor's reversionary interest was alienable, the interest was not foreclosed. It also held that a possibility of reverter is alienable together with or apart from the surface, and is exempt from the rule against perpetuities. It distinguished possibility of reverter from a power of termination, by the automatic reversion of the former, and discussed creation of reverter). Vollmann v. Rosenburg, 972 S.W.2d 490 (Mo. App. 1998) (trust property of a testamentary trust that fails cannot be said to revert to the grantor under the theory of possibility of reverter unless it can be shown, and is alleged, that the will granted a fee simple determinable remainder).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.03

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.03 Examples of Possibilities of Reverter

[Go To Supp]

Land dedicated to a particular public purpose will revert to the dedicator when there has been a full and lawful abandonment of the use for which the dedication has been made or when the dedication has spent its force by the use becoming impossible. n4 When a public way has been vacated, the interest of the public therein ceases, the burden upon the land which has been used as a public way is removed and possession reverts to the owner of the fee, together with the right to use the property in such manner as the owner may see proper, without regard to the former servitude to which it was subject. n5 Likewise, where land has been dedicated to public use for burial purposes, the fee simple title remaining in the dedicator, the dedicator has a right of reverter when the public has ceased to use the land for the purpose of a graveyard. n6 Under the early common law, land granted to a charitable corporation reverted to the grantor when the corporation died. n7

A possibility of a reverter of an interest in leased coal to the lessor is not an estate present or future, but a possibility of having a future estate in the coal remaining unmined. n12 Under the old rule a mere possibility of reverter is incapable of alienation or devise, n13 such an interest not being sufficient to constitute an estate. n14

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 4. McAlpine v. Chicago Great W. R.R., 75 P. 73 (Kan. 1904); Porter v. International Bridge Co., 93 N.E. 716 (N.Y. 1910). See Ford v. Detroit, 263 N.W. 425 (Mich. 1935).

Devise to S for life, then to trustees to be used for a course in vocational agriculture, but if this is not done, to revert to the testator's heirs was held to create a possibility of reverter in the heirs and not a perpetuity. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. Martin, 340 P.2d 899 (Kan. 1959).

Confusing possibility of reverter and right of re-entry. City of Wheeling v. Zane, 173 S.E.2d 158 (W. Va. 1970).

Statement of consideration in a deed was not a right of reverter. Stillwater Indus. Found., Inc. v. State ex rel. Bd. of Regents, 541 P.2d 173 (Okla. 1975), State Dep't of Transp. v. Scramuzza, 673 So. 2d 1249 (La. App. 1996); Wolfson v. City of St. Paul, 535 N.W. 2d 384 (Minn. App. 1995).

(n2)Footnote 5. Marietta Chair Co. v. Henderson, 49 S.E. 312 (Ga. 1904); Neil v. Independent Realty Co., 298 S.W. 363 (Mo. 1927), City of Louisville v. Louisville Scrap Material Co., 932 S.W. 2d 352 (Ky. 1996); Sun Oil Co. v. Gerstein, 206 So.2d 439 (Fla. App. 1968).

(n3)Footnote 6. Campbell v. Kansas City, 13 S.W. 897 (Mo. 1890); Tracy v. Bittle, 112 S.W. 45 (Mo. 1908); Newark v. Watson, 29 A. 487 (N.J. 1894). And see Steele v. Rosehill Cemetery, 19 N.E.2d 189 (Ill. 1938); A.F. Hutchinson Land Co. v. Whitehead Bros., 217 N.Y.S. 413 (1926).

(n4)Footnote 7. A municipality is subject to the possibility of reverter in a conveyance to it in fee simple determinable. Metropolitan Dade County v. Leslie Enters., 257 So. 2d 29 (Fla. 1972).

(n5)Footnote 12. Westbrook Coal Co. v. Hudson Coal Co., 42 A.2d 825 (Pa. 1945), Concord Oil Co. v. Pennzoil Exploration & Prod. Co., 878 S.W.2d 191 (Tex. App. 1994) (a lessor of an oil and gas lease was held to retain a possibility of reverter consisting of a right to a fee simple estate in minerals when the lease terminated. The court also held that the possibility of reverter included the fraction of actual oil production in royalties that was reserved by lessor). Liberty Mutual Insur. Co. v. Reid Timber, Inc., No. 3:97cv103-D-A (N.D. Miss. 1998) (LEXIS 11473) (timber conveyed in a deed could be the proper subject of a possibility of reverter, and was conditioned upon title to the timber being severed from the real property within a certain time period); Tarrant County Water Control & Improvement Dist. No. One v. Fullwood, 963 S.W.2d 60 (Tex. 1998).

(n6)Footnote 13. North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1908) (holding that an interest based on the possibility that the land should cease to be used for church purposes did not pass by quitclaim deed).

(n7)Footnote 14. Vaughn v. Lanford, 62 S.E. 316 (S.C. 1908).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.04

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.04 Common-Law History of Possibility of Reverter

[Go To Supp]

The possibility of a reverter of land at common law was held an indeterminable fee and was not an estate in land. n20 It was neither a present nor a future right, but a mere possibility that a right might arise upon the happening of a contingency, which is not the subject of a grant, devise, or inheritance. This was because the grant or devise of a determinable fee passed the whole estate to the tenant in fee, leaving nothing in the grantor or devisor which could be the subject of grant, devise, or inheritance. Hence, it was settled that upon the termination of such an estate, it went to those who could bring themselves into the class of heirs of the person creating the estate at the time when the estate terminates, and not to those who were heirs at the time of the death of such person. n21 So a possibility of reverter retained by the grantor in an irrevocable trust made the trust taxable, since the beneficiaries might predecease the grantor, and there was no limitation over. n22

It seems probable that prior to quia emptores the feoffor creating a base fee retained an interest of such a tender nature that it was inalienable. It was not even of sufficient quality to descend to the heir. Instead it remained in the clouds (in nimbus) after creation until the fee determined. Then it rained down upon the person who then was the heir of the grantor. That is, it passed by descent cast. n23

Again at common law, in the grant of a qualified or determinable fee, the grantor was not vested with any title or interest in the land or in the reversion until the happening of the contingency upon which the land is to revert, for such contingency might never happen. The grantor had nothing to convey, and the grantor's deed in expectancy of a reverter vested no interest in the grantee, but was wholly without legal force or effect; n28 and the rule was the same where an attempted conveyance was by quitclaim deed. n29 Where the grantor had such an estate or interest as would descend to the heirs, n30 and if the grantor died before the happening of the contingency which is to effect a reversion, the possibility of reverter was cast by descent upon the heirs at the time of the grantor's death. n31 Also, a mere possibility that real estate may revert to the grantor was not devisable at common law, n32 and so it has been held that if it be a mere possibility of reverter attached to a determinable or conditional fee it was not an estate and was not alienable, assignable, nor devisable, in the absence of a statute authorizing it. n33

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 20. Cookman v. Silliman, 2 A.2d 166 (Del. 1938); Sorrels v. McNally, 105 So. 106 (Fla. 1925); Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921). Elmore v. Austin, 59 S.E.2d 205 (N.C. 1950); Miller v. Dierken, 33 A.2d 804 (Pa. Super. 1943); Vaughn v. Lanford, 62 S.E. 316 (S.C. 1908); Purvis v. McElveen, 106 S.E.2d 913 (S.C. 1959); University of Vt. & State Agri. College v. Ward, 158 A. 773 (Vt. 1932). County Sch. Bd. v. Dowell, 58 S.E.2d 38 (Va. 1950).

(n2)Footnote 21. Blount v. Walker, 9 S.E. 804 (S.C. 1889); Burnett v. Snoddy, 19 S.E.2d 904 (S.C. 1942). See Brill v. Lynn, 270 S.W. 20 (Ky. 1925); Halpin v. Rural Agri. Sch. Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923).

(n3)Footnote 22. Spiegel's Estate v. Internal Revenue Comm'r, 335 U.S. 701 (1949).

(n4)Footnote 23. See W.R. Vance, Rights of Reverter and the Statute Quia Emptores, 36 Yale L.J. 593 (1927).

Possibility of reverter is descendible. City of Klamath Falls v. Bell, 490 P.2d 515 (Or. App. 1971).

Descent cast has been abolished in North Dakota. Cranston v. Winters, 238 N.W.2d 647 (N.D. 1976).

(n5)Footnote 28. Denver & S.F. Ry. Co. v. School Dist. No. 22, 23 P. 978 (Colo. 1890); Union Colony Co. v. Gallie, 88 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1939). Presbyterian Church v. Venable, 42 N.E. 836 (Ill. 1896); Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921); Pure Oil Co. v. Miller-McFarland Drilling Co., 34 N.E.2d 854 (Ill. 1941); Blackert v. Dugosh, 145 N.E.2d 606 (Ill. 1957). Austin v. Calvert, 262 S.W.2d 825 (Ky. 1953); Puffer v. Clark, 168 N.W. 471 (Mich. 1918); Juif v. Dillman, 282 N.W. 892 (Mich. 1938); Vail v. Long Island R. Co., 12 N.E. 607 (N.Y. 1887); Dunkel v. Homindustries, 9 N.E.2d 949 (N.Y. 1937); Lipetz v. Papish, 131 N.Y.S.2d 104 (1954); Powers v. Bullwinkle, 11 S.E. 971 (S.C. 1890); Purvis v. McElveen, 106 S.E.2d 913 (S.C. 1959). Possibility of reverter was not an estate but only a possibility of having the estate in the future. Long v. Long, 343 N.E.2d 100 (Ohio 1976), Kent. Rev. Stat. § 381.040.

(n6)Footnote 29. North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1908), Walker v. Foss, 930 S.W. 2d 701 (Tex. App. 1996).

(n7)Footnote 30. Presbyterian Church v. Venable, 42 N.E. 836 (Ill. 1896); North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1908); Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church v. Parker, 27 N.E.2d 522 (Ill. 1940).

Where there has been a conveyance of a lot to a school with the retention of a reverter when ceased to be used for school purposes and the grantors later conveyed the property to others but excepted the reversionary interest, the title vested in the heirs of the original grantors when the school ceased. Shipton v. Sheridan, 531 S.W.2d 291 (Mo. App. 1975).

(n8)Footnote 31. North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1989); Elmore v. Austin, 59 S.E.2d 205 (N.C. 1950).

Missouri is undecided as to whether a possibility of reverter is a purely personal right or whether it descends to the heirs. Nowlin v. Columbia Sch. Dist., 401 S.W.2d 394 (Mo. 1966).

Kentucky voids possibilities of reverter and right of entry after 30 years from date of the instrument creating them, prior to July 1, 1960, unless re-recorded before July 1, 1965. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.221.

Any possibility of reverter or right of entry contained in deeds, grants or gifts from the Commonwealth, grants for public, charitable or religious purposes, leases, easements, rights-of-way, mortgages or trusts, or any public highways, is exempted from §§ 381.219 and 381.221. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.222. Fletcher v. Ferrill, 227 S.W.2d 448 (Ark. 1950).

(n9)Footnote 32. Presbyterian Church v. Venable, 42 N.E. 836 (Ill. 1896); Upington v. Corrigan, 45 N.E. 359

(N.Y. 1896); Vaughn v. Lanford, 62 S.E. 316 (S.C. 1908); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930). Contra, and permitting devise. Fletcher v. Ferrill, 227 S.W.2d 448 (Ark. 1950). See Orville Ben Core, Transmissibility of Certain Contingent Future Interests, 5 Ark. L. Rev. 111, 123 (1951). Residuary clause. Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950) (and is not void for remoteness). A possibility of reverter is not devisable. Sheppard's Touchstone, supra note 17, at 120. Collins v. Church of God of Prophecy, 800 S.W.2d 418 (Ark. 1990).

(n10)Footnote 33. Cookman v. Silliman, 2 A.2d 166 (Del. 1938); Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921); Pond v. Douglass, 75 A. 320 (Me. 1909). See Magness v. Kerr, 254 P. 1012 (Or. 1927).

Presbyterian Church v. Venable, 42 N.E. 836 (Ill. 1896); Pure Oil Co. v. Miller-McFarland Drilling Co., 34 N.E.2d 854 (Ill. 1941) (still unassignable in Illinois).

Purvis v. McElveen, 106 S.E.2d 913 (S.C. 1959) (not alienable by estoppel under warranty deed).

A reverter in a conveyance of a defeasible fee is void if it adversely affects the marketability of land. Falls City v. Missouri P. R.R., 453 F.2d 771 (8th Cir. 1971).

Dictum to the effect that a possibility of reverter following the transfer of a qualified fee is not capable of alienation, inter vivos or devisable at common law but are capable of descent.

In Ohio Rev. Code § 2131.04 remainders, executory interests, and other expectant estates are capable of alienation. Long v. Long, 343 N.E.2d 100 (Ohio 1976), Fletcher v. Ferrill, 227 S.W.2d 448 (Ark. 1950).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.05

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.05 Possibility of Reverter Distinguished from Reversion

[Go To Supp]

A distinction is made between a reversion, which is an estate in praesenti, although to be enjoyed in the future, and a mere possibility of reverter, such as exists in all cases where the fee is limited on a contingency. The basis of the distinction lies in the fact that reversions are always vested estates corresponding to vested remainders, while the mere possibility of reverter is always contingent and corresponds to contingent remainders. n8 A "possibility of reverter" as distinguished from a "reversion" arises on a grant so limited that it may last forever or may terminate on the happening of a contingency. It is the possibility of having the fee again which exists in the grantor after the grant of a determinable or qualified fee. n9 More properly spoken in case of a base or qualified fee expiring by its own contingent limitation a possibility of reverter is a right to have a fee simple in possession contingent on the termination of a fee defeasible, and, in case of a fee limited on condition subsequent, it is a contingent right of re-entry on condition broken. n10

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 8. Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930).

Possibility of reverter. Bedyk v. Bank of Del., 176 A.2d 196 (Del. 1961).

Statement of consideration in a deed was not a right of reverter. Stillwater Indus. Found., Inc. v. State ex rel. Board of Regents, 541 P.2d 173 (Okla. 1975), City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (A bank counterclaimed to quiet title and was held to have a possibility of reverter in city-owned property. The court also held that the possibility of reverter was an interest in land which is alienable and devisable, compared possibilities of reverter with contingent remainders, and distinguished the former with rights of entry); Sides v. Beene, 938 S.W.2d 840 n.1 (Ark. 1997).

(n2)Footnote 9. United States v. 2,184.81 Acres of Land, 45 F. Supp. 681 (D. Ark. 1942). In such a case the whole title is in the grantee until the contingency happens, and the holder of a bare possibility of reverter does not possess a present vested interest or estate in the land.

A possibility of reverter exists where there is a ninety-nine year lease renewable forever with the right to receive rents and enforce the covenants in the lease. Welfare Fed'n v. Glander, 64 N.E.2d 813 (Ohio 1945), Mount Olivet Cemetery Ass'n v. Salt Lake City, No. 97-4078 (10th Cir. 1998) (LEXIS 31324) (a non-profit organization that acquired a cemetery from the United States, subject to the United States's possibility of reverter, was deemed the owner of the entire present interest in the cemetery, not the United States, and was, therefore, subject to the city zoning ordinances).

(n3)Footnote 10. Westbrook Coal Co. v. Hudson Coal Co., 42 A.2d 825 (Pa. 1945).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.06 Possibility of Reverter Distinguished from Right of Re-Entry

[Go To Supp]

Some of the courts have confused possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry and have said, contrary to the general terminology, that possibilities of reverter exist after fees upon condition subsequent. n15 Some of the courts and occasionally a judge will treat possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry as being closely related. n16 So it is said that the possibility of reverter after the termination of a qualified or determinable fee is similar to, though not quite identical with, the "right of re-entry" which remains in the grantor of land upon a condition subsequent. This right represents whatever is not conveyed by the deed, and it is the possibility that the land may revert to the grantor or grantor's heirs when the granted estate determines. n17 Likewise, it has been said that a possibility of reverter is any reversionary interest which is subject to a condition precedent. n18 One practical distinction between a right of entry for breach of a condition subsequent and a possibility of reverter upon a determinable fee is that in the former the estate in fee does not terminate until entry by the person having the right, while in the latter the estate reverts at once upon the occurrence of the event by which it is limited. n19

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 15. Taylor v. Continental S. Corp., 280 P.2d 514 (Cal. App. 1955); In re Hart's Estate, 311 P.2d 605 (Cal. App. 1957) ("possibility of reverter" on breach of condition subsequent is a mere power to terminate, not an estate); Farmer's High Sch. Consol. Dist. No. 3 v. Parker, 203 S.W.2d 516 (Mo. App. 1947); Purvis v. McElveen, 106 S.E.2d 913 (S.C. 1959) ("possibility of reverter" exists after fee simple determinable or conditional).

Conveyance of a fee on condition subsequent creates a possibility of reversion in the grantor or his heirs. Sorrels v. McNally, 105 So. 106 (Fla. 1925); Fayette County Bd. of Educ. v. Bryan, 91 S.W.2d 990 (Ky. 1936).

University City v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 149 S.W.2d 321 (Mo. 1941).

Deed to railroad to be used for repair shop but if not so used, to revert to the grantor or assigns created an alienable possibility of reverter after a determinable fee, not an inalienable right of re-entry after a fee upon condition subsequent, "revert" being held to indicate determinable, not condition. Georgia, Ashburn, Sylvester & Camilla Ry. v. Johnson, 174 S.E.2d 895 (Ga. 1970).

The possibility of reverter after a determinable fee descends to the grantor's heirs. Nowlin v. Columbia Sch. Dist., 401 S.W.2d 394 (Mo. 1966). Jeffs v. Stubbs, No. 960454 (Utah 1998) (LEXIS 65) (court stated that "because the UEP represented to claimants that they could occupy the land for their lives, so long as they did not sell, mortgage, or abandon the property, the claimants' interest is actually a life estate subject to a condition subsequent. In other words, the UEP had both a reversionary interest, which vests upon the death of a claimant, and the possibility of reverter, which would only vest if a claimant sold, mortgaged, or abandoned the property"); United States v. 50.822 Acres, 950 F.2d 1165 (5th Cir. 1992).

(n2)Footnote 16. Sanford v. Sims, 66 S.E.2d 495 (Va. 1951), School Dist. No. 6 v. Russell, 396 P.2d 929 (Colo. 1964) (noting the confusion).

(n3)Footnote 17. North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1908); First Universalist Soc'y v. Boland, 29 N.E. 524 (Mass. 1892), per Allen, J., citing Henry William Challis, The Law of Real Property (3d ed. 1911) §§ 31, 63-65, 153, 174, 198, 200, 212 (3rd ed. 1911); Richard Preston, An Elementary Treatise on Estates 431, 471 (1820); William Sheppard, The Touchstone of Common Assurances 120 (1785); Gray, supra note 1, §§ 33, 34, 39, and cases cited; Proprietors of Church v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray) (1855); Attorney-General v. Merrimack Mfg. Co., 80 Mass. 586 (14 Gray) (1860); Smith v. Harrington, 86 Mass. 566 (4 Allen) (1862); Owen v. Field, 102 Mass. 90 (1869); Gillespie v. Broas, 23 Barb. 370 (N.Y. 1856).

Strict construction of a possibility of reverter as a "forfeiture." Cole v. Colorado Springs Co., 381 P.2d 13 (Colo. 1963). City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (A bank counterclaimed to quiet title and was held to have a possibility of reverter in city-owned property. The court also held that the possibility of reverter was an interest in land which is alienable and devisable, compared possibilities of reverter with contingent remainders, and distinguished the former with rights of entry).

(n4)Footnote 18. Perkins v. Iglehart, 39 A.2d 672 (Md. 1944); Calhoun v. Hays, 39 A.2d 307 (Pa. Super. 1944). City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (A bank counterclaimed to quiet title and was held to have a possibility of reverter in city-owned property. The court also held that the possibility of reverter was an interest in land which is alienable and devisable, compared possibilities of reverter with contingent remainders, and distinguished the former with rights of entry); Eastex Aviation, Inc. v. Sperry & Hutchinson Co., 522 F.2d 1299 (5th Cir. 1975).

(n5)Footnote 19. Lyford v. Laconia, 72 A. 1085 (N.H. 1909); Smith v. Glen Alden Coal Co., 32 A.2d 227 (Pa. 1943).

McDougall v. Palo Alto Unified Sch. Dist., 28 Cal. Rptr. 37 (1963) (calling a possibility of reverter a right of re-entry); Gregory v. Alexander, 367 S.W.2d 292 (Tenn. App. 1962), Knights and Ladies of Samaria v. Board of Educ. of Charles County, 688 A.2d 933, 937 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1997) (court discusses importance, in this case, of distinction between possibility of reverter, where failure results automatically in the reversion of an estate to the original grantor in fee simple absolute without the need for entry, and the failure of a condition subsequent, which merely gives rise to a right of entry; the grantor does not obtain a fee simple absolute until he or she enters and retakes the land); City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (a bank counterclaimed to quiet title and was held to have a possibility of reverter in city-owned property. The court also held that the possibility of reverter was an interest in land which is alienable and devisable, compared possibilities of reverter with contingent remainders, and distinguished the former with rights of entry); North Finn v. D. L. Cook, 825 F. Supp. 278 (D. Wyo. 1993) (In this case the court held that: 1) the prior transferor of a working interest in a foreclosed oil and gas lease has a possibility of reverter under a farm-out agreement in which the transferee of the working interest was required to convey a 30%

"back-in" working interest to assignee following payout; 2) liens did not attach to the transferor's reversionary interest; and 3) even if transferor's reversionary interest was alienable, the interest was not foreclosed. It also held that a possibility of reverter is alienable together with or apart from the surface, and is exempt from the rule against perpetuities. It distinguished possibility of reverter from a power of termination, by the automatic reversion of the former, and discussed creation of reverter). Quill v. R. A. Inv. Corp., No. 16639 (Ohio Ct. App. 1997) (LEXIS 5959) (when the grantor's reversion is conditioned upon the grantor's own action, there exists a right of reentry, not a possibility of reverter).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.07

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.07 Incidents of Possibilities of Reverter

[Go To Supp]

§ 24.07(a) Subject to Statute of Frauds

It has been held that a possibility of reverter is such an interest in land that it is subject to the Statute of Frauds, and its existence cannot be shown by a mere understanding of the parties. n24 Today a possibility of reverter is a valuable right. n25 But the courts are not in accord as to whether it has sufficient stature that it is entitled to constitutional protection against a statute that purports to change, modify or abolish an existing possibility of reverter. n26 And there is disagreement as to whether a possibility of reverter has sufficient dignity as to entitle its holder to receive compensation on a taking of the realty. n27

§ 24.07(b) Alienability and Devisability

An attempted alienation today does not destroy the possibility of reverter. n34 A possibility of reverter may be released even though inalienable. n35 However, North Carolina holds that a joinder of the possibility of reverter and the determinable fee in the same person does not terminate the possibility of reverter which passes by representation and not inheritance. Hence, apparently it cannot be released. n36

Although so inalienable and incapable of devise at common law, n37 the more modern rule permits alienation of a possibility of reverter. n38 But under statutes of some states providing that any person may devise all rights of entry for condition broken, a possibility of reverter for condition broken may be devised. n39 And today many courts hold that a possibility of reverter can be inherited, conveyed or released. n40 It then passes from the grantor to the grantor's successive heirs by descent, not by descent cast and is an interest owned by each heir in succession. It has been held that the owner of any reversionary interest in real estate has power, by an otherwise effective conveyance inter vivos, to transfer the interest or any part thereof. n41

Under the modern rule, on the death of the owner the possibility of reverter descends rather than passing by descent cast. n42 It is also devisable. It thus creates the problem of requiring the probate lawyer to ascertain its value for probate and for succession tax purposes. If it merely passed by descent cast, it would have no value until the preceding estate in freehold determined, since it would go to the heir who answered the description at the time of determination, not the beneficiary of the original creator of the estate. There is also the problem of the surviving spouse's interest and of its valuation in eminent domain and insurance cases. The modern tendency is to make the possibility of reverter alienable. n43

Where a determinable fee has been carved out of a larger tract it has been held that the possibility of reverter passes with a conveyance of the initial tract where the deed did not except the determinable fee n44 or where the deed of the entire tract was subject to the determinable fee. n45 The transfer of the larger tract carries with it the possibility of reverter. n46 The holder of a possibility of a reverter may recover for any damage done to the property after the fee is determined. n47

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: possibil! w/2 reverter w/20 (aliena! or release! or descend! or devis!)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 24. Itawamba County v. Sheffield, 13 So. 2d 649 (Miss. 1943).

(n2)Footnote 25. Addy v. Short, 89 A.2d 136 (Del. 1952).

No value in possibility of reverter for eminent domain. State v. Cheyenne County, 60 N.W.2d 593 (Neb. 1953); Buford v. First Sunset Dev. Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8271 (D. Kan.).

(n3)Footnote 26. Legislature may change, modify or abolish. Union Colony Co. v. Gallie, 88 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1939); Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921); Trustees of Schools of Twp. No. 1 v. Batdorf, 130 N.E.2d 111 (Ill. 1955).

Cannot be affected by statute. Fitch v. State, 95 A.2d 255 (Conn. 1953); Biltmore Village, Inc. v. Royal, 71 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1954); Frensley v. White, 254 P.2d 982 (Okla. 1953); James v. Dalhart Consol. Indep. Sch. Dist., 254 S.W.2d 826 (Tex. Civ. App. 1952), Mount Olivet Cemetary Ass'n v. Salt Lake City, 961 F. Supp. 1547 (D. Utah 1997) (statute waives the United States's possibility of reverter). Knights and Ladies of Samaria v. Board of Educ. of Charles County, 688 A.2d 933 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1997) (statute did not affect possibility of reverter); Poppleton v. Village Realty Co., Inc., 535 N.W.2d 400 (Neb. 1995) (statutory 30-year limitation on possibilities of reverter).

(n4)Footnote 27. The entire proceeds of a fire insurance policy are payable to the holder of the determinable fee, none to the possibility of reverter. Board of Educ. of Raleigh County v. Winding Gulf Collieries, 157 F.2d 382 (8th Civ. 1946).

Apportionment of condemnation award between holder of the fee and holder of the possibility of reverter, where proceedings were pending to terminate the estate by consolidation of school districts before happening of the condemnation. United States v. 2,184.81 Acres of Land, 45 F. Supp. 681 (W.D. Ark. 1942).

Proceeds of condemnation go to holder of determinable fee, not to holder of possibility of reverter. Scovill v. McMahon, 26 A. 479 (Conn. 1892); First Reformed Dutch Church v. Croswell, 206 N.Y.S. 132 (1924).

No value can be fixed on possibility of reverter. Lyford v. Laconia, 72 A. 1085 (N.H. 1909) (condemnation); In re Terry's Estate, 112 N.E. 931 (N.Y. 1916); First Reformed Dutch Church v. Croswell, 206 N.Y.S. 132 (1924).

(n5)Footnote 34. Consolidated Sch. Dist. No. 102 v. Walter, 66 N.W.2d 881 (Minn. 1954).

State by Mondale v. Indep. Sch. Dist. No. 31, 123 N.W.2d 121 (Minn. 1963).

An attempted conveyance of a possibility of reverter destroyed it. The court, however, confused rights of re-entry and possibilities of reverter. Schoolcraft Community Sch. Dist. No. 50 v. Burson, 99 N.W.2d 353 (Mich. 1959).

(n6)Footnote 35. Proprietors of Church v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray) (1855); Smith v. School Dist. No. 6, 250 S.W.2d 795 (Mo. 1952); Trustees of Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 162 N.E. 601 (N.Y. 1928).

Application of Mareck, 100 N.W.2d 758 (Minn. 1960).

(n7)Footnote 36. Elmore v. Austin, 59 S.E.2d 205 (N.C. 1950).

(n8)Footnote 37. Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U.S. 693 (1878); Cookman v. Silliman, 2 A.2d 166 (Del. 1938); O'Donnell v. Robson, 88 N.E. 175 (Ill. 1909); Strothers v. Woodcox, 121 N.W. 51 (Iowa 1909); Austin v. Calvert, 262 S.W.2d 825 (Ky. 1953); Ringgold v. Carvel, 76 A.2d 327 (Md. 1950); Halpin v. Rural Agricultural Sch. Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923); Consolidated Sch. Dist. No. 102 v. Walter, 66 N.W.2d 881 (Minn. 1954); Nicoll v. New York & E. R.R., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Van Rensselaer v. Ball, 19 N.Y. 100 (1859); James v. Dalhart Consol. Indep. Sch. Dist., 254 S.W.2d 826 (Tex. Civ. App. 1952). Possibility of reverter is alienable. Nichols v. Haehn, 187 N.Y.S.2d 773 (1959).

Possibility of reverter cannot be alienated, but is not destroyed by attempted conveyance. City of Klamath Falls v. Bell, 490 P.2d 515 (Or. App. 1971).

In Illinois possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry die 40 years after their creation. 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 330/1 to 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 330/7.

A possibility of reverter can exist only in the creator of the interest or his heirs. Klawitter v. United States, 423 F. Supp. 1349 (D. Mont. 1976).

Possibility of reverter at common law vests only in the creator or his heirs. Klawitter v. United States, 423 F. Supp. 1349 (D. Mont. 1976).

(n9)Footnote 38. Possibility of reverter descends. School Dist. No. 6 v. Russell, 396 P.2d 929 (Colo. 1964); Battistone v. Banulski, 147 A. 820 (Conn. 1929); Richardson v. Holman, 33 So. 2d 641 (Fla. 1948); Reichard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R.R., 1 N.W.2d 721 (Iowa 1942); Austin v. Calvert, 262 S.W.2d 825 (Ky. 1953); Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Co. v. Harloff, 30 A.2d 57 (N.J. 1943); Prince v. Charles Ilfeld Co., 383 P.2d 827 (N.M. 1963); Lipetz v. Papish, 125 N.E.2d 432 (N.Y. 1955); Nichols v. Haehn, 187 N.Y.S.2d 773 (1959); Scheetz v. Fitzwater, 5 Pa. 126 (1847); Slegal v. Herbine, 23 A. 996 (Pa. 1892); Lacy v. Montgomery, 124 A.2d 492 (Pa. Super. 1956); Calhoun v. Hays, 39 A.2d 307 (Pa. Super. 1944); Caruthers v. Leonard, 254 S.W. 779 (Tex. Civ. App. 1923); Collette v. Town of Charlotte, 45 A.2d 203 (Vt. 1946). Possibility of reverter may be devised. Fletcher v. Ferrill, 227 S.W.2d 448 (Ark. 1950); Johnston v. Los Angeles, 168 P. 1047 (Cal. 1917); Evans v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 58 A.2d 649 (Md. 1948); Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950); Ricks v. Merchants Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 2 So. 2d 344 (Miss. 1941); County Sch. Bd. v. Dowell, 58 S.E.2d 38 (Va. 1950).

Contra, Union Colony Co. v. Gallie, 88 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1939); Cookman v. Silliman, 2 A.2d 166 (Del. 1938); Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church v. Parker, 27 N.E.2d 522 (Ill. 1940).

Where a possibility of reverter instead of a power of termination is involved, there is a tendency to hold the interest conveyable, or at least not to result in a forfeiture. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 188 S.E. 722 (Ga. 1936); Dyer v. Siano, 11 N.E.2d 451 (Mass. 1937); Magness v. Kerr, 254 P. 1012 (Or. 1927).

A possibility of reverter may be released. Brill v. Lynn, 270 S.W. 20 (Ky. 1925); Trustees of Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 162 N.E. 601 (N.Y. 1928); Atkin v. Gillespie, 299 S.W. 776 (Tenn. 1927).

Possibilities of reverter pass by representation, not by descent. Upington v. Corrigan, 45 N.E. 359 (N.Y. 1896); Trustees of Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 162 N.E. 601 (N.Y. 1928); Sanford v. Sims, 66 S.E.2d 495 (Va. 1951) (right of re-entry may be conveyed); Saletri v. Clark, 108 N.W.2d 548 (Wis. 1961) (where a dissolved corporation holds the possibility of reverter its stockholders take the fee when the terminable fee ends).

Contra, Pure Oil Co. v. Miller-McFarland Drilling Co., 34 N.E.2d 854 (Ill. 1941). See 135 A.L.R. 576 (1941).

Future interests are descendible, devisable and alienable. In re Sparrow's Estate, 338 N.Y.S.2d 975 (1972). Possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry are descendible, devisable and alienable. P.C.K. Props., Inc. v. Cuyahoga Falls, 176 N.E.2d 441 (Ohio App. 1960) (dictum).

Possibility of reverter is descendible. City of Klamath Falls v. Bell, 490 P.2d 515 (Or. App. 1971).

A possibility of reverter not available to creditors though alienable. Gushwa v. Gushwa, 177 N.E. 366 (Ind. App. 1931). Contra, Jensen v. Wilkinson, 133 S.W.2d 982 (Tex. Civ. App. 1939). Michigan Pub. Acts 13, 1968 bars possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry after 30 years from the creation of the interest unless extended 30 additional years recording written notice not less than 25 years nor more than 30 years after the creation of the interest.

See Orville Ben Core, Transmissibility of Certain Future Interests, 5 Ark. L. Rev. 111 (1951).

Possibility of reverter at common law vests only in creator or his heirs. Klawitter v. United States, 423 F. Supp. 1349 (D. Mont. 1976).

A possibility of reverter held alienable. Cline v. Johnson County Bd. of Educ., 548 S.W.2d 507 (Ky. 1977).

Possibility of reverter can be alienated and devised. Collette v. Town of Charlotte, 45 A.2d 203 (Vt. 1946). Limiting: University of Vt. and State Agri. College v. Ward, 158 A. 773 (Vt. 1932), City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (a bank counterclaimed to quiet title and was held to have a possibility of reverter in city-owned property. The court also held that the possibility of reverter was an interest in land which is alienable and devisable, compared possibilities of reverter with contingent remainders, and distinguished the former with rights of entry); Sauls v. Cox, 67 N.E.2d 187 (Ill. 1946).

(n10)Footnote 39. Taylor v. Continental S. Corp., 280 P.2d 514 (Cal. App. 1955); Williams v. Thomas County, 65 S.E.2d 412 (Ga. 1951); Studdard v. Wells, 25 S.W. 201 (Mo. 1894). See Fletcher v. Ferrill, 227 S.W.2d 448 (Ark. 1950), overruling LeSieur v. Spikes, 175 S.W. 413 (Ark. 1915); Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950), Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) (A "possibility of reverter" is alienable and devisable).

Possibility of reverter alienable under Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.040. Austin v. Calvert, 262 S.W.2d 825 (Ky. 1953).

To the effect that a possibility of reverter passed under a general legacy. Central Christian Church of Bradenton v. School Bd. of Manatee County, 314 So. 2d 598 (Fla. App. 1975).

A possibility of reverter is distinguished from a reversion and is not assignable or devisable but descends and may be released. City of Wheeling v. Zane, 173 S.E.2d 158 (W. Va. 1970), City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (a bank counterclaimed to quiet title and was held to have a possibility of reverter in city-owned property. The court also held that the possibility of reverter was an interest in land which is alienable and devisable, compared possibilities of reverter with contingent remainders, and distinguished the former with rights of entry).

(n11)Footnote 40. Cole v. Colorado Springs Co., 381 P.2d 13 (Colo. 1963); Fitch v. State, 95 A.2d 255 (Conn. 1953); Richardson v. Holman, 33 So. 2d 641 (Fla. 1948). Williams v. Thomas County, 65 S.E.2d 412 (Ga. 1951); Reichard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 1 N.W.2d 721 (Iowa 1942); Frensley v. White, 254 P.2d 982 (Okla. 1953); London v. Kingsley, 81 A.2d 870 (Pa. 1951); Lacy v. Montgomery, 124 A.2d 492 (Pa. Super. 1956); James v. Dalhart Consol. Indep. Sch. Dist., 254 S.W.2d 826 (Tex. Civ. App. 1952); Sanford v. Sims, 66 S.E.2d 495 (Va. 1951).

See Note, Judicial Sale of Expectant Estates, 33 Ia. L. Rev. 692 (1948); Russel R. Reno, Alienability and Transmissibility of Future Interests in Maryland, 2 Md. L. Rev. 89 (1938); Russel R. Reno, Further Developments as to the Alienability and Transmissibility of Future Interests in Maryland, 15 Md. L. Rev. 193 (1955). Possibilities of a reverter still cannot be devised in Illinois. In re Bentley's Estate, 303 N.E.2d 166 (Ill. App. 1973).

In Illinois possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry die 40 years after their creation. 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 330/1 to 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 330/7.

Possibility of reverter passed under general devise in a will. Central Christian Church of Bradenton v. School Bd. of Manatee County, 314 So. 2d 598 (Fla. App. 1975).

A possibility of reverter is an alienable interest in property. Cline v. Johnson County Bd. of Educ., 548 S.W.2d 507 (Ky. 1977).

Kentucky has abolished the fee simple determinable and possibility of reverter and has converted this into a "fee simple with right of re-entry for condition broken." Ky. Rev. Stat., § 381.218.

The right of re-entry dies after 30 years from the date of the instrument. Ky. Rev. Stat., § 381.219. Hamman v. Bright, 924 S.W.2d 168 (Tex. App. 1996); Concord Oil Co. v. Pennzoil Exploration & Prod. Co., 966 S.W.2d 451 (Tex. 1998) (possibility of reverter in minerals was conveyable as an interest in land).

Limitations over after defeasible fees are valid for 30 years after breach regardless of the rule against perpetuities. Ky. Rev. Stat., § 381.219.

(n12)Footnote 41. Calhoun v. Hays, 39 A.2d 307 (Pa. Super. 1944).

Illinois has now limited the duration of possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry to 40 years. 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 330/4.

Possibility of reverter in a school deed remained in heirs of a grantor who had conveyed the balance of the land with a deed excepting the school lot. Shipton v. Sheridan, 531 S.W.2d 291 (Mo. App. 1975).

Under Kentucky law the possibility of reverter and the right to re-entry created prior to January 1, 1960 ceased to be a valid or enforceable act after thirty years, unless before July 1, 1967, the declaration of intent to preserve is filed. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.221; Cline v. Johnson County Bd. of Educ., 548 S.W.2d 507 (Ky. 1977).

(n13)Footnote 42. Possibility of reverter passes by descent. City of Charlotte v. Charlotte Park Rec. Comm., 178 S.E.2d 601 (N.C. 1971).

(n14)Footnote 43. Both possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry are alienable in Oklahoma under statute. Bonebrake v. McNeill, 491 P.2d 269 (Okla. 1971). Pennsylvania Dep't of Transp. v. Montgomery Township, 655 A.2d 1086 (Pa. Commw. 1995) (possibility of reverter owned by partnership not subject to condemnation); Conner v. Waring, 52 Md. 724 (1880).

(n15)Footnote 44. Fall Creek Sch. Tp. v. Shuman, 103 N.E. 677 (Ind. App. 1913).

Possibility of reverter passed to grantee of land out of which the determinable fee was carved. Thompson v. Godfrey, 379 P.2d 269 (Kan. 1963).

Deeds to land adjacent to that deed as a determinable fee did not carry the possibility of reverter in absence of express provision to that effect. In re Reichard's Petition, 146 A.2d 71 (Pa. Super. 1958).

(n16)Footnote 45. Richardson v. Holman, 33 So. 2d 641 (Fla. 1948).

Grantors in 1893 conveyed a determinable fee for a portion of the premises owned by them to school district and later, by a series of conveyances, the balance of the tract came into the hands of the plaintiff. It was held that the appurtenance clause in the deeds in the chain, which included both of the words "reversion and reversions," did not pass to the grantees the possibility of reverter. In re Reichard's Petition, 146 A.2d 71 (Pa. Super. 1958).

(n17)Footnote 46. Dvorak v. School Dist. Twp. of Dodge, 22 N.W.2d 238 (Iowa 1946).

A deed describing a tract of land and excepting from the tract "the right and title" of a railroad company to whom an area had previously been conveyed out of the tract upon a fee upon condition subsequent carried with it the right of re-entry so that upon abandonment of the railroad the title to the railroad right-of-way passed to the assignee of the grantor, not the heirs of the grantor. In re Wyatt's Claim, 141 N.E.2d 308 (Ohio App. 1955).

Possibility of reverter passes to grantee of larger tract out of which the fee simple determinable was carved. Thompson v. Godfrey, 379 P.2d 269 (Kan. 1963).

In Gotheridge v. Unified Sch. Dist. No. 365, 512 P.2d 478 (Kan. 1973), where one had conveyed a one-acre tract out of a 39-acre tract for school purposes and later conveyed the balance of the 39 acres but did not specifically reserve the reversionary interest in the one-acre tract, the reversionary interest passed with the conveyance of the abutting tract.

The possibility of reverter was not included in mortgage of all land owned by the grantor. Richardson v. Cambridge, 84 Mass. 118 (2 Allen 1861).

Possibility of reverter held to be of so little value as to be incapable of estimate. Trustees of First Congregational Church v. American Home Missionary Soc'y, 300 N.Y.S.2d 76 (1969).

Where a portion of the tract had been conveyed for school purposes and the heirs of the grantor sold the tract, such sale did not carry the reversion to the portion which had previously been sold for school purposes and ceased to be used for school purposes. In re Reichard's Petition, 146 A.2d 71 (Pa. Super. 1958).

(n18)Footnote 47. See Carr v. Georgia R.R., 74 Ga. 73 (1884); Board of Educ. v. Littrell, 190 S.W. 465 (Ky. 1917).

Not sufficient interest in holder of possibility of reverter to prevent determinable fee from receiving entire award. People ex rel. Dep't. of Public Works v. Fresno, 26 Cal. Rptr. 853 (1962).

Where the event upon which the determinable fee is limited will probably occur "within a reasonable time," the possibility of reverter is a compensable property right in eminent domain. Chew v. Commonwealth, 161 A.2d 621 (Pa. 1960). North Finn v. D. L. Cook, 825 F. Supp. 278 (D. Wyo. 1993) (in this case the court held that: 1) the prior transferor of a working interest in a foreclosed oil and gas lease has a possibility of reverter under a farm-out agreement in which the transferee of the working interest was required to convey a 30% "back-in" working interest to assignee following payout; 2) liens did not attach to the transferor's reversionary interest; and 3) even if transferor's reversionary interest was alienable, the interest was not foreclosed. It also held that a possibility of reverter is alienable together with or apart from the surface, and is exempt from the rule against perpetuities. It distinguished the possibility of reverter from a power of termination, by the automatic reversion of the former, and discussed creation of reverter).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 24.08

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American common law on possibilities of reverter. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 24.08 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Articles

Andersen, Roger W. "Present and Future Interests: a Graphic Explanation." Seattle U. L. Rev. Vol. 19 (1995) 101.

Becker, David M. "Debunking the Sanctity of Precedent." Wash. U.L.Q. Vol. 76 (1998) 853. (See especially pp. 947-974).

Bell, Sharon J. "Osages, Iron Horses and Reversionary Interests: the Impact of United States v. Atterberry on Railroad Abandonments." Tulsa L.J. Vol. 20 (Winter 1984) 255.

"Death Does Not Create a Reversionary Interest," Tax'n for Lawyers Vol. 17 (Jan.-Feb. 1989) 252.

Devonshire, Peter. "Possibilities of Reverter and Rights of Re-entry for Condition Broken: The Modern Context for Determinable and Conditional Interests in Land." Dalhousie L.J. Vol. 13 (1990) 650. (This article focuses on the manner in which conditional and determinable fees are created, with particular emphasis upon the technical construction of documents, and asks whether both estates in their current form can be justified in terms of the function they fulfill and the effectiveness with which that function is accomplished).

Dukeminier, Jesse. "Perpetuities: The Measuring Lives." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 85 (1985) 1648. (This article discusses the wait-and-see doctrine and the question of who are the measuring lives for the rule against perpetuities, including possibilities of reverter that may be subject to the rule).

Hague, David Nelson, "Why Buy What You Already Own? Florida's Reversionary Interest in Railroad Rights-of-Way." Fla. Bar J. Vol. 64 (June 1990) 72.

Johnson, David C. "Discounting and Compounding C Calculation of the Present Value of an Annuity, Life Estate, Remainder, or Reversionary Interest Dependent Upon Two Life Contingencies." S. Ill. Univ. L.J. Vol. 11 (Summer 1987) 1179.

Jones, Jack D. "Future Interests C Tennessee Style." Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 54 (1987) 413. (This article examines the state supreme court's reversal in Commerce Union Bank v. Warren County, and Tennessee law on contingent remainders, words of limitation, fee simple determinables, and the Rule Against Perpetuities, including how it applies to possibilities of reverter).

Miller, Stephen P. "Eminent Domain: 'Rails to Trails' Act C Section 8(d) Railbanking: An Authorized 'Taking' of a Reversionary Interest?" Mem. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (Fall 1990) 187.

Pennfield, Edward B. & Charles J. Seidler, Jr. "Adverse Estate Consequences of Ownership of Reversionary Interests Can be Avoided." Est. Plan. Vol. 10 (May 1983) 144.

"Transfer of Oil and Gas Property Subject to a Contingent Reversionary Interest." Oil and Gas Tax Q. Vol. 36 (June 1988) 709.

Volkmer, Ronald R. "The Law of Future Interests in Nebraska." Creighton L. Rev. Vol. 18 (1985) 259. (This article discusses the Nebraska law of future interests).

White, Nicholas L. "Bringing Tennessee into the Twentieth Century re Possibilities of Reverter, Powers of Termination and Executory Interests When Used As Land Control Devices." Mem. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 15 (1985) 555. (This article analyzes the current status of the fee simple determinable, fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, and fee simple subject to an executory limitation, along with their corresponding future interests, and urges reform in Tennessee and other states that have taken no steps to ameliorate the adverse and often unexpected impact of these three privately created restrictions on land).

Annotations

Annotation, Applicability of Rule Against Perpetuities to Reverter on Breach of Condition Subsequent, 70 A.L.R. 1196, Supp. 133 A.L.R. 1476.

Annotation, Canceling, Destroying, Nullifying, or Limiting Enforcement of Possibilities of Reverter or Rights of Re-Entry for Condition Broken, Validity of Statutes, 87 A.L.R. 3d 1011.

Annotation, Commencement of Running of Statute of Limitations Respecting Actions by Owners of Right of Re-entry, or Actions Against Third Parties by Reversioners, 19 A.L.R. 2d 729.

Annotation, Deed to Railroad Company as Conveying Fee or Easement, 6 A.L.R. 3d 973.

Annotation, Devisability of Possibility of Reverter, or of Right of Re-entry for Breach of Condition Subsequent, 16 A.L.R. 2d 1246.

Annotation, Eminent Domain, Rights in Condemnation Award Where Land Taken Was Subject to Possible Rights of Reverter or Re-entry, 81 A.L.R. 2d 568.

Annotation, Inheritable Quality of Possibility of Reverter, 77 A.L.R. 344.

Annotation, Pre-emptive Rights to Realty as Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on Alienation, 40 A.L.R. 3d 920, §§ 3(b), 8(b,d).

Annotation, Questions Arising in Connection with Possibilities of Reverter, 51 A.L.R. 1473.

Annotation, Release of Possibility of Reverter, 38 A.L.R. 1111.

Annotation, Rights in Condemnation Award Where Land Taken was Subject to Possible Rights of Reverter or Re-Entry, 81 A.L.R. 2d 568.

Annotation, School Lands, Title to Buildings When School Lands Revert for Nonuse for School Purposes, 28 A.L.R. 2d 564.

Annotation, Title to Buildings When School Lands Revert for Nonuse for School Purposes, 28 A.L.R. 2d 564.

Annotation, Transfer, Validity and Effect of Transfer of Possibility of Reverter or Right of Re-entry, Following Conveyance of Determinable Fee or Fee Subject to Condition Subsequent, 53 A.L.R. 2d 224.

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Conveyance of Interest Remaining in Grantor Upon Conveyance of a Fee Subject to a Conditional Limitation, or Terminable Upon Breach of a Condition Subsequent, 135 A.L.R. 576, super. 53 A.L.R. 2d 224.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Provisions in Deed from One Spouse to Other by Which the Title Was to Revert in Event of Conditions Affecting Marital Relations, 116 A.L.R. 1400.

Annotation, Validity of Statute Canceling, Destroying, Nullifying, or Limiting Enforcement of Possibilities of Reverter or Rights of Re-entry for Condition Broken, 87 A.L.R. 3d 1011.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.01

Supp. to § 24.01 Introduction.

[Go To Main]

This chapter reviews the law governing possibilities of reverter in American jurisdictions. While possibilities of reverter are not the most commonly created future interests in American property law, they impact on several other future interests. The chapter includes sections that define possibilities of reverter, distinguish them from other interests, describe their common-law history, and explain their more important incidents.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.02

Supp. to § 24.02 Definition of Possibility of Reverter.

[Go To Main]

The interest that remains in a grantor, testator or settlor of a trust after creating a fee simple determinable is called a possibility of reverter.[1] The same name has been given to interests existing after creation of a conditional fee where de donis does not apply. The "possibility of reverter" is created by the conveyance of a limited fee. [2] Washington State Grange v. Brandt, 148 P.3d 1069 (Wash. App. 2006) (a deed containing a "reverts back" clause created a fee simple determinable with a possibility of reverter). A "possibility of reverter" is defined by the Restatement of the Law of Property as "any reversionary interest which is subject to a condition precedent."[3]

Where determinable fees are created, a possibility of reverter automatically arises. King Associates, LLP v. Bechtler Development Corporation, 632 S.E.2d 243 (N.C. App. 2006) (a deed granting a railroad right of way using the phrase "so long as" created a possibility of reverter rather than an easement).[4]

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.03

Supp. to § 24.03 Examples of Possibilities of Reverter.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Ellmae Phillips Co. v. U.S., 77 Fed. Cl. 387 (2007) (property owner held reversionary interest upon railroad's abandonment of a right-of-way easement); Winters v. County of Clatsop, 150 P.3d 1104 (Or. App. 2007) (an attempted sale of the property triggered an automatic reversion of the title to the county); Hash v. U.S., 454 F. Supp. 2d 1066 (D. Idaho 2006) (grants to railroad construed as granting fee simple determinable); King Associates, LLP v. Bechtler Development Corp., 632 S.E.2d 243 (N.C. App. 2006) (grants to railroad construed as grating fee simple determinable); Allen v. Hall, 148 P.3d 939 (Utah 2006) (former husband conveyed marital home to former wife on condition that it would revert to him if she moved more than 50 miles away, creating a valid fee simple determinable); Rox Petroleum, L.L.C. v. New Dominion, L.L.C., 2008 OK 13 (Okla. 2008) (possibility of reverter in minerals).

Land dedicated to a particular public purpose will revert to the dedicator when there has been a full and lawful abandonment of the use for which the dedication has been made or when the dedication has spent its force by the use becoming impossible.[5] When a public way has been vacated, the interest of the public therein ceases, the burden upon the land which has been used as a public way is removed and possession reverts to the owner of the fee, together with the right to use the property in such manner as the owner may see proper, without regard to the former servitude to which it was subject.[6] Likewise, where land has been dedicated to public use for burial purposes, the fee simple title remaining in the dedicator, the dedicator has a right of reverter when the public has ceased to use the land for the purpose of a graveyard.[7] Ator v. Unknown Heirs, Personal Representatives, Devisees, Trustees, Successors and Assigns of Ator, 146 P.3d 821 (Okla. App. 2006) (property conveyed to a school district for use in the school football program; when used for a private youth football program, the condition was violated). Under the early common law, land granted to a charitable corporation reverted to the grantor when the corporation died.[8]

A possibility of a reverter of an interest in leased coal to the lessor is not an estate present or future, but a possibility of having a future estate in the coal remaining unmined.[9] Under the old rule a mere possibility of reverter is incapable of alienation or devise,[10] such an interest not being sufficient to constitute an estate.[11]

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.04

Supp. to § 24.04 Common-Law History of Possibility of Reverter.

[Go To Main]

The possibility of a reverter of land at common law was held an indeterminable fee and was not an estate in land.[12] It was neither a present nor a future right, but a mere possibility that a right might arise upon the happening of a contingency, which is not the subject of a grant, devise, or inheritance. This was because the grant or devise of a determinable fee passed the whole estate to the tenant in fee, leaving nothing in the grantor or devisor which could be the subject of grant, devise, or inheritance. Hence, it was settled that upon the termination of such an estate, it went to those who could bring themselves into the class of heirs of the person creating the estate at the time when the estate terminates, and not to those who were heirs at the time of the death of such person.[13] So a possibility of reverter retained by the grantor in an irrevocable trust made the trust taxable, since the beneficiaries might predecease the grantor, and there was no limitation over.[14]

It seems probable that prior to quia emptores the feoffor creating a base fee retained an interest of such a tender nature that it was inalienable. It was not even of sufficient quality to descend to the heir. Instead it remained in the clouds (in nimbus) after creation until the fee determined. Then it rained down upon the person who then was the heir of the grantor. That is, it passed by descent cast.[15]

Again at common law, in the grant of a qualified or determinable fee, the grantor was not vested with any title or interest in the land or in the reversion until the happening of the contingency upon which the land is to revert, for such contingency might never happen. The grantor had nothing to convey, and the grantor's deed in expectancy of a reverter vested no interest in the grantee, but was wholly without legal force or effect;[16] and the rule was the same where an attempted conveyance was by quitclaim deed.[17] Where the grantor had such an estate or interest as would descend to the heirs,[18] and if the grantor died before the happening of the contingency which is to effect a reversion, the possibility of reverter was cast by descent upon the heirs at the time of the grantor's death.[19] Also, a mere possibility that real estate may revert to the grantor was not devisable at common law,[20] and so it has been held that if it be a mere possibility of reverter attached to a determinable or conditional fee it was not an estate and was not alienable, assignable, nor devisable, in the absence of a statute authorizing it.[21]

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.05

Supp. to § 24.05 Possibility of Reverter Distinguished from Reversion.

[Go To Main]

A distinction is made between a reversion, which is an estate in praesenti, although to be enjoyed in the future, and a mere possibility of reverter, such as exists in all cases where the fee is limited on a contingency. The basis of the distinction lies in the fact that reversions are always vested estates corresponding to vested remainders, while the mere possibility of reverter is always contingent and corresponds to contingent remainders.[22] A "possibility of reverter" as distinguished from a "reversion" arises on a grant so limited that it may last forever or may terminate on the happening of a contingency. It is the possibility of having the fee again which exists in the grantor after the grant of a determinable or qualified fee.[23] More properly spoken in case of a base or qualified fee expiring by its own contingent limitation a possibility of reverter is a right to have a fee simple in possession contingent on the termination of a fee defeasible, and, in case of a fee limited on condition subsequent, it is a contingent right of re-entry on condition broken.[24]

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.06

Supp. to § 24.06 Possibility of Reverter Distinguished from Right of Re-Entry.

[Go To Main]

Some of the courts have confused possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry and have said, contrary to the general terminology, that possibilities of reverter exist after fees upon condition subsequent.[25] Some of the courts and occasionally a judge will treat possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry as being closely related.[26] So it is said that the possibility of reverter after the termination of a qualified or determinable fee is similar to, though not quite identical with, the "right of re-entry" which remains in the grantor of land upon a condition subsequent.[27] This right represents whatever is not conveyed by the deed, and it is the possibility that the land may revert to the grantor or grantor's heirs when the granted estate determines.[28] Likewise, it has been said that a possibility of reverter is any reversionary interest which is subject to a condition precedent.[29] One practical distinction between a right of entry for breach of a condition subsequent and a possibility of reverter upon a determinable fee is that in the former the estate in fee does not terminate until entry by the person having the right, while in the latter the estate reverts at once upon the occurrence of the event by which it is limited.[30]

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 24 POSSIBILITIES OF REVERTER

3-24 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 24.07

Supp. to § 24.07 Incidents of Possibilities of Reverter.

[Go To Main]

§ 24.07(a) Subject to Statute of Frauds. [Go To Main]

It has been held that a possibility of reverter is such an interest in land that it is subject to the Statute of Frauds, and its existence cannot be shown by a mere understanding of the parties.[31] Today a possibility of reverter is a valuable right.[32] But the courts are not in accord as to whether it has sufficient stature that it is entitled to constitutional protection against a statute that purports to change, modify or abolish an existing possibility of reverter.[33] And there is disagreement as to whether a possibility of reverter has sufficient dignity as to entitle its holder to receive compensation on a taking of the realty.[34]

§ 24.07(b) Alienability and Devisability. [Go To Main]

Add:

Bowers v. Taylor, 2007 Tex. App. LEXIS 3439 (Tex. App. Houston 1st Dist. May 3, 2007) (one-third interest in a possibility of reverter conveyed).

An attempted alienation today does not destroy the possibility of reverter.[35] A possibility of reverter may be released even though inalienable.[36] However, North Carolina holds that a joinder of the possibility of reverter and the determinable fee in the same person does not terminate the possibility of reverter which passes by representation and not inheritance.[37] Hence, apparently it cannot be released.[38]

Although so inalienable and incapable of devise at common law,[39] the more modern rule permits alienation of a possibility of reverter.[40] But under statutes of some states providing that any person may devise all rights of entry for condition broken, a possibility of reverter for condition broken may be devised.[41] And today many courts hold that a possibility of reverter can be inherited, conveyed or released.[42] It then passes from the grantor to the grantor's successive heirs by descent, not by descent cast and is an interest owned by each heir in succession. It has been held that the owner of any reversionary interest in real estate has power, by an otherwise effective conveyance inter vivos, to transfer the interest or any part thereof.[43] A possibility of reverter cannot be extinguished in a tax foreclosure sale.[44]

Illinois has now limited the duration of possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry to 40 years.[44.1]

Possibility of reverter in a school deed remained in heirs of a grantor who had conveyed the balance of the land with a deed excepting the school lot.[45]

Under Kentucky law the possibility of reverter and the right to re-entry created prior to January 1, 1960 ceased to be a valid or enforceable act after thirty years, unless before July 1, 1967, the declaration of intent to preserve is filed.

Under the modern rule, on the death of the owner the possibility of reverter descends rather than passing by descent cast.[46] It is also devisable. It thus creates the problem of requiring the probate lawyer to ascertain its value for probate and for succession tax purposes. If it merely passed by descent cast, it would have no value until the preceding estate in freehold determined, since it would go to the heir who answered the description at the time of determination, not the beneficiary of the original creator of the estate. There is also the problem of the surviving spouse's interest and of its valuation in eminent domain and insurance cases. The modern tendency is to make the possibility of reverter alienable.[47]

Where a determinable fee has been carved out of a larger tract it has been held that the possibility of reverter passes with a conveyance of the initial tract where the deed did not except the determinable fee[48] or where the deed of the entire tract was subject to the determinable fee.[49] The transfer of the larger tract carries with it the possibility of reverter.[50] The holder of a possibility of a reverter may recover for any damage done to the property after the fee is determined.[51]

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: possibil! w/2 reverter w/20 (aliena! or release! or descend! or devis!)

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. to § 24.08 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Articles

Andersen, Roger W. "Present and Future Interests: a Graphic Explanation." Seattle U. L. Rev. Vol. 19 (1995) 101.

Becker, David M. "Debunking the Sanctity of Precedent." Wash. U.L.Q. Vol. 76 (1998) 853. (See especially pp. 947-974).

Bell, Sharon J. "Osages, Iron Horses and Reversionary Interests: the Impact of United States v. Atterberry on Railroad Abandonments." Tulsa L.J. Vol. 20 (Winter 1984) 255.

Robert R. Briggs. "Aycock Pontiac, Inc. v. Aycock: Express Trust Terms Beward-Implied Reversions are Here." 53 Ark. L. Rev. 885 (2000).

"Death Does Not Create a Reversionary Interest," Tax'n for Lawyers Vol. 17 (Jan.-Feb. 1989) 252.

Devonshire, Peter. "Possibilities of Reverter and Rights of Re-entry for Condition Broken: The Modern Context for Determinable and Conditional Interests in Land." Dalhousie L.J. Vol. 13 (1990) 650. (This article focuses on the manner in which conditional and determinable fees are created, with particular emphasis upon the technical construction of documents, and asks whether both estates in their current form can be justified in terms of the function they fulfill and the effectiveness with which that function is accomplished).

Dukeminier, Jesse. "Perpetuities: The Measuring Lives." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 85 (1985) 1648. (This article discusses the wait-and-see doctrine and the question of who are the measuring lives for the rule against perpetuities, including possibilities of reverter that may be subject to the rule).

Hague, David Nelson, "Why Buy What You Already Own? Florida's Reversionary Interest in Railroad Rights-of-Way." Fla. Bar J. Vol. 64 (June 1990) 72.

Heller, Michael A. "The Boundaries of Private Property." 108 Yale L.J. 1163, 1181 (1999) (discussion of possibilities of reverter as they apply to the rule against perpetuities).

Johnson, David C. "Discounting and Compounding C Calculation of the Present Value of an Annuity, Life Estate, Remainder, or Reversionary Interest Dependent Upon Two Life Contingencies." S. Ill. Univ. L.J. Vol. 11 (Summer 1987) 1179.

Jones, Jack D. "Future Interests C Tennessee Style." Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 54 (1987) 413. (This article examines the state supreme court's reversal in Commerce Union Bank v. Warren County, and Tennessee law on contingent remainders, words of limitation, fee simple determinables, and the Rule Against Perpetuities, including how it applies to possibilities of reverter).

Miller, Stephen P. "Eminent Domain: 'Rails to Trails' Act C Section 8(d) Railbanking: An Authorized 'Taking' of a Reversionary Interest?" Mem. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (Fall 1990) 187.

Pennfield, Edward B. & Charles J. Seidler, Jr. "Adverse Estate Consequences of Ownership of Reversionary Interests Can be Avoided." Est. Plan. Vol. 10 (May 1983) 144.

"Transfer of Oil and Gas Property Subject to a Contingent Reversionary Interest." Oil and Gas Tax Q. Vol. 36 (June 1988) 709.

Volkmer, Ronald R. "The Law of Future Interests in Nebraska." Creighton L. Rev. Vol. 18 (1985) 259. (This article discusses the Nebraska law of future interests).

White, Nicholas L. "Bringing Tennessee into the Twentieth Century re Possibilities of Reverter, Powers of Termination and Executory Interests When Used As Land Control Devices." Mem. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 15 (1985) 555. (This article analyzes the current status of the fee simple determinable, fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, and fee simple subject to an executory limitation, along with their corresponding future interests, and urges reform in Tennessee and other states that have taken no steps to ameliorate the adverse and often unexpected impact of these three privately created restrictions on land).

Wilson, Lynette S. "The Temporary Cessation of Production Doctrine: Litigating Cessation of Production and Termination of Oil and Gas Leases...What the heck does "or the like" mean anyway? Tex. Tech Law Review Vol. 35 (2004) 311.

Wolpert, Robin M. "Recent Developments in Minnesota Law: Preserving and Promoting Minnesota's Recreational Trials: State V. Hess. William Mitchell Law Review Vol. 31 (2005) 1133.

Annotations

Annotation, Applicability of Rule Against Perpetuities to Reverter on Breach of Condition Subsequent, 70 A.L.R. 1196 , Supp. 133 A.L.R. 1476 .

Annotation, Canceling, Destroying, Nullifying, or Limiting Enforcement of Possibilities of Reverter or Rights of Re-Entry for Condition Broken, Validity of Statutes, 87 A.L.R. 3 d 1011.

Annotation, Commencement of Running of Statute of Limitations Respecting Actions by Owners of Right of Re-entry, or Actions Against Third Parties by Reversioners, 19 A.L.R. 2 d 729.

Annotation, Deed to Railroad Company as Conveying Fee or Easement, 6 A.L.R. 3d 973.

Annotation, Devisability of Possibility of Reverter, or of Right of Re-entry for Breach of Condition Subsequent, 16 A.L.R. 2 d 1246.

Annotation, Eminent Domain, Rights in Condemnation Award Where Land Taken Was Subject to Possible Rights of Reverter or Re-entry, 81 A.L.R. 2 d 568.

Annotation, Inheritable Quality of Possibility of Reverter, 77 A.L.R. 344 .

Annotation, Pre-emptive Rights to Realty as Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on Alienation, 40 A.L.R. 3 d 920, §§ 3(b), 8(b), (d).

Annotation, Questions Arising in Connection with Possibilities of Reverter, 51 A.L.R. 1473 .

Annotation, Release of Possibility of Reverter, 38 A.L.R. 1111 .

Annotation, Rights in Condemnation Award Where Land Taken was Subject to Possible Rights of Reverter or Re-Entry, 81 A.L.R. 2 d 568.

Annotation, School Lands, Title to Buildings When School Lands Revert for Nonuse for School Purposes, 28 A.L.R. 2 d 564.

Annotation, Title to Buildings When School Lands Revert for Nonuse for School Purposes, 28 A.L.R. 2 d 564.

Annotation, Transfer, Validity and Effect of Transfer of Possibility of Reverter or Right of Re-entry, Following Conveyance of Determinable Fee or Fee Subject to Condition Subsequent, 53 A.L.R. 2 d 224.

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Conveyance of Interest Remaining in Grantor Upon Conveyance of a Fee Subject to a Conditional Limitation, or Terminable Upon Breach of a Condition Subsequent, 135 A.L.R. 576 , super. 53 A.L.R. 2 d 224.

Annotation, Validity and effect of transfer of possibility of reverter or right of re-entry, following conveyance of determinable fee or fee subject to condition subsequent, 53 A.L.R.2d 224.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Provisions in Deed from One Spouse to Other by Which the Title Was to Revert in Event of Conditions Affecting Marital Relations, 116 A.L.R. 1400 .

Annotation, Validity of Statute Canceling, Destroying, Nullifying, or Limiting Enforcement of Possibilities of Reverter or Rights of Re-entry for Condition Broken, 87 A.L.R. 3 d 1011.

Annotation, Validity and effect of transfer of possibility of reverter or right of re-entry, following conveyance of determinable fee or fee subject to condition subsequent, 53 A.L.R.2d 224.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 25.syn

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.syn Synopsis to Chapter 25: RIGHTS OF ENTRY

§ 25.01 Introduction

§ 25.02 History of Rights of Entry

§ 25.03 Rights of Entry as Enforceable Forfeitures

§ 25.04 Divestiture of Title Only Upon Re-Entry

§ 25.05 Rights of Entry as Interests Subject to Legislation

§ 25.06 Who May Exercise Right of Entry

§ 25.06(a) Grantor and Heirs

§ 25.06(b) Assignability of Rights of Entry

§ 25.06(b)(1) Some Rights of Entry Not Assignable

§ 25.06(b)(2) Some Rights of Entry Made Assignable by Statute

§ 25.06(b)(3) Extinguishment or Loss of Right of Entry by Assignment

§ 25.06(c) Descendibility of Rights of Entry

§ 25.06(c)(1) Some Rights of Entry Are Descendible

§ 25.06(c)(2) Some Rights of Entry Are Not Descendible

§ 25.06(d) Other Parties Entitled to Enforce Rights of Entry

§ 25.06(d)(1) Enforcement by Corporate Successor

§ 25.06(d)(2) Enforcement by Trustees or Beneficiaries

§ 25.06(d)(3) Enforcement by Governmental Grantor

§ 25.06(d)(4) No Right of Enforcement in Stranger to Title

§ 25.06(d)(5) Release of Right to Enforcement

§ 25.07 How Rights of Enforcement Are Exercised

§ 25.07(a) By Entry or Claim

§ 25.07(a)(1) What Constitutes Entry

§ 25.07(a)(2) When Notice and Demand Are Required

§ 25.07(b) Legal Actions as Equivalent to Entry

§ 25.07(c) When Entry Is Defined in the Grant

§ 25.07(d) Entry Before Breach

§ 25.07(e) Miscellaneous Rules Governing Entry

§ 25.08 Bibliography

Professor David A. Thomas n*
J. Reuben Clark Law School
Brigham Young University

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *.
This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.01

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.01 Introduction

This chapter reviews the law in American states regarding rights of entry, the future interest associated with a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent. Because an interest in land subject to a right of entry is usually viewed as less marketable than a fee simple absolute, courts and legislatures in some states have imposed restrictions or limitations on enforcement and transfer of this interest. In any event, it is a right or an interest that is usually dormant or inchoate until the breach of condition occurs. The chapter reviews the history, incidents and enforcement of rights of entry.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.02

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.02 History of Rights of Entry

[Go To Supp]

The common law apparently gave birth to rights of entry under three types of circumstances; (a) where a disseisin occurred, n1 (b) under a common-law mortgage and (c) by special reservation of a condition and right of re-entry in a conveyance. It would appear from Littleton that although Quia Emptores n2 prevented subinfeudation and thus made it impossible for one to enfeoff another and make the feoffee responsible for rendition of the feudal dues reserving a possibility in the feoffor, the statute did not, in Littleton's time at least, prevent a grantor from imposing a perpetual rent charge in a grant of a fee and providing for forfeiture on failure of payment. n3 The thought, however, that there could be imposed a permanent charge upon a fee after Quia Emptores was not followed by later authorities. n4 And Littleton treated as conditions what would now be considered as determinable interests, such as an estate during coverture. n5 The modern law recognizes the creation of estates upon condition subsequent with rights of re-entry remaining in the grantor. n6 A right of re-entry or power of termination cannot be created at inception in one other than the grantor or the grantor's heirs. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Shirley Cherin, Validity of Conveyance by One Out of Possession of Real Property Held by Adverse Claimant, 16 St. John's L. Rev. 150 (1941).

(n2)Footnote 2. 18 Edw., ch 1. As far back as Littleton it was indicated that though the deed did not contain a condition, if the feoffment had been intended to give a right of re-entry upon happening of a condition, the re-entry was valid since it was the feoffment which passed title and the deed was merely evidence thereof. Littleton, Tenures, L.3, C.5, § 359. Coke on Littleton, § 222(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Littleton, supra note 2, at §§ 325-84.

(n4)Footnote 4. Case of fee simple under condition subsequent for right of re-entry must be exercised in the event of breach while a case of fee simple determinable with possibility of reverter ripens ipso facto into a fee upon breach.

Storke v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 61 N.E.2d 552 (Ill. 1945); Carpender v. New Brunswick, 39 A.2d 40 (N.J. 1944); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930). City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (declaratory judgment determining whether the city owned a fee simple on condition subsequent or a fee simple determinable).

(n5)Footnote 5. Littleton, supra note 2, at § 380.

(n6)Footnote 6. Richardson v. Holman, 33 So. 2d 641 (Fla. 1948) (possibility of reverter followed fee upon express condition of use).

A right of re-entry for the breach of a particular condition is occasionally termed a "reversionary interest" or a "contingent reversionary interest" and is so regarded for some purposes. Parry v. Berkley Hall School Found., 74 P.2d 738 (Cal. 1937).

Rountree v. Richardson, 108 So. 2d 152 (Ala. 1959) (option to repurchase).

Illinois has now adopted a statute to the effect that rights of re-entry and possibilities of reverter are inalienable and not devisable, terminating all such as were 50 years old. See Comment, Discussion on Possibilities of Reverter and Rights of Re-entry in Illinois, 43 N.W. U. L. Rev. 90 (1948). State of Nebraska, Dept of Roads v. Union Pacific R.R. Co., 490 N.W.2d 461 (Neb. 1992) (original deed granted railroad's predecessors a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent); Prieskorn v. Maloof, 991 P.2d 511 (N.M. App. 1999) (restriction upon use created possibility of reverter or right of re-entry).

(n7)Footnote 7. United Methodist Church in W. Sand Lake v. Dobbins, 369 N.Y.S.2d 817 (1975).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.03

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.03 Rights of Entry as Enforceable Forfeitures

[Go To Supp]

While courts of equity have evinced strong dislike for the enforcement of a forfeiture, the power of the grantor, settlor or testator to create a condition and reserve a right of re-entry for breach is recognized and will be enforced. n8 Where the parties have enforced a forfeiture by providing for a re-entry for breach, and re-entry has been made, a court of equity is powerless to relieve against such forfeiture. n9 Moreover when the re-entry of the grantor is made under the express provisions of the contract and is lawful, the loss, if any, occasioned thereby to the grantee is damnum absque injuria. n10 The estate upon condition subsequent does not, however, die of itself as does a determinable fee. The right of re-entry contemplates a positive act by the holder thereof, not an automatic flowering as is true in the case of the possibility of reverter. Without some act on the part of the grantor or the grantor's heirs, by which to take advantage of the condition and its forfeiture, the estate remains in the grantee, even though the words of the condition are that "the estate shall thereupon be void and of no effect." n11

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 8. In Wisconsin, Glocke v. Glocke, 89 N.W. 118 (Wis. 1902); Danielson v. Danielson, 161 N.W. 787 (Wis. 1917); Knutson v. Anderson, 255 N.W. 907 (Wis. 1934), the courts imply a right of re-entry in a deed given on condition of support of the grantor.

Some other courts have also adopted this tack. Richter v. Richter, 12 N.E. 698 (Ind. 1887); Tomlinson v. Tomlinson, 70 N.E. 881 (Ind. 1904); Ford v. Ford, 118 N.E.2d 235 (Ohio 1954).

Contra, Hawkins v. Third, 14 So. 2d 513 (Ala. 1943); Jones v. Reid, 193 S.E. 235 (Ga. 1937); Minor v. Minor, 62 S.E.2d 60 (N.C. 1950).

See Milton I. Goldstein, Rights of Entry and Possibilities of Reverter as Devices to Restrict the Use of Land, 54 Harv. L. Rev. 248 (1940). D-F Fund VII v. Resolution Trust Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93 (N.D. Tex. 1998) (because it is not favored by courts, a forfeiture clause fails as a remedy unless clearly expressed as a condition subsequent); Romero v. Nott, 847 P.2d 319 (N.M. App. 1993) (an attempt to have grantors' stipulations ruled contrary to public policy was denied). Cf. City of Lincoln v. Townhouser, Inc., 534 N.W.2d 756 (Neb. 1995) (condition subsequent satisfied with grantor not entitled to re-enter the property); Cleveland Indus. Square v. City of Cleveland, No. 67068, 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 830 (Ohio App. 1995) (right of re-entry upheld when grantee failed to comply with zoning ordinances and violated the condition subsequent); Simi Inv. Co. v. Harris, 13 F. Supp. 2d 603 (S.D. Tex. 1998) (in considering a claim for right of reentry, the court must determine if the language of the conveyance indicates an absolute or conditional grant). Red Hill Outing Club v. Hammond, No. 97-312, 1998 N.H. LEXIS 103 (N.H. 1998) (held that a condition subsequent shall be strictly construed when considering right of re-entry). Bluffs Park Protection Ass'n v. Radich, No. 21693-1-II, 1998 Wash. App. LEXIS 830 (Wash. App. 1998) (held that provision for right of entry is conveyed with specific language). Application of Board of Ed. of Utica City School Dist., 184 N.Y.S.2d 735 (N.Y. Sup. 1959) (holding that conditions subsequent w/right of re-entry are not favored as they tend to make an estate insecure). Nielsen v. Woods, 687 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1984) (stating that conditions subsequent which give right of re-entry are disfavored by the law since they tend to destroy and estate and the exercise of the right is a forfeiture). Springmeyer v. City of South Lake Tahoe, 132 Cal. App.3d 375 (Cal. App. 1982) (stating that a reversion is a drastic remedy for imposing a grantor's condition).

(n2)Footnote 9. Watzman v. Unatin, 131 S.E. 874 (W. Va. 1926). Holding that a possible reversionary interest was so remote as to come under the de minimis rule. Hermann v. Brownell, 274 F.2d 842 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 364 U.S. 821 (1960).

(n3)Footnote 10. Watzman v. Unatin, supra note 9.

(n4)Footnote 11. Adams v. Ore Knob Copper Co., 7 F. 634 (C.C.D.N.C. 1880); Chalker v. Chalker, 1 Conn. 79 (1814); Osgood v. Abbott, 58 Me. 73 (1870); Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Lakeview Trac. Co., 56 So. 393 (Miss. 1911); Phelps v. Chesson, 34 N.C. (12 Ired.) 194 (1951); White v. Britton, 56 S.E. 232 (S.C. 1906). Reverter in will in death of devisee after marriage if devisee ever married and died without children. Devisee died unmarried and without children. Held no reverter since she never married. Hardison v. Bridges, 111 S.E.2d 238 (Ga. 1959).

A right of re-entry in fee upon condition subsequent requires some action by the grantor's successor to terminate the estate whereas a possibility of reverter vests automatically. Stolarick v. Stolarick, 363 A.2d 793 (Pa. Super. 1976). City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994) (declaratory judgment determining whether the city owned a fee simple on condition subsequent or a fee simple determinable).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.04

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.04 Divestiture of Title Only Upon Re-Entry

[Go To Supp]

The title to land conveyed upon a condition subsequent vests in the grantee, and the grantee's failure to perform the condition does not divest the title. The title is divested only upon the entry of the grantor or the grantor's heirs for the condition broken or by a suit for the recovery of possession, or other act equivalent to an entry. The possibility of reverter is not an estate in land, and until the contingency of the condition happens, the whole title is in the grantee, and the grantor has nothing to convey. n12

A breach of a condition subsequent in a deed does not ipso facto operate to revest the grantor with title, but the grantor must take appropriate action to become reinvested with title. n13 The grantor has no actual estate remaining, although the right of entry for condition broken is sometimes called, and for some purposes is regarded as, a "reversionary interest," or a "contingent reversionary interest." n14 The reversioner's right to enforce forfeiture is merely an inchoate right until decreed by the court. n15 The title is divested upon condition broken only by the entry of the grantor or the grantor's heirs or by a suit for the recovery of possession or some act equivalent to an entry. n16 This is true even though the conveyance expressly provides that on breach of condition the property is to revert to the grantor or the grantor's heirs. n17 An entry by the grantor, or any act equivalent thereto, showing a purpose to take advantage of the breach and to reclaim the estate forfeited thereby is all that is required. n18 It does not follow, however, that in every instance, where the contingency has happened which was to terminate an estate held by the grantee on condition subsequent, there must be a re-entry or demand by the grantor or heirs before there can be a recovery in a suit brought by the grantor or heirs for the possession or for partition of such real estate. Demand is never required when it fully appears that it would have been unavailing. n19 Where there is no grant of the fee there can be no forfeiture. n20 If the condition is one that the law will not enforce, the estate vests absolutely in the grantee upon the conveyance. n21

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 12. Davis v. Gray, 83 U.S. (16 Wall) 203 (1873); Schulenberg v. Harriman, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 44 (1875); Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U.S. (7 Otto) 693 (1878); Rannels v. Rowe, 145 F. 296 (8th Cir. 1906); American Dirigold

Corp. v. Dirigold Metals Corp., 125 F.2d 446 (6th Cir. 1942); United States v. 2,086 Acres of Land, 46 F. Supp. 411 (D.S.C. 1942); Worthen v. Ratcliffe, 42 Ark. 330 (1883); Skipwith v. Martin, 6 S.W. 514 (Ark. 1888); Shultz v. Beers, 245 P.2d 334 (Cal. App. 1952) (technically a right of re-entry or more correctly a power of termination and not a possibility of reverter remains in the grantor after a deed of a fee upon condition subsequent. Such an interest is not an estate in land); Denver & S.F.R.R. v. School Dist. No. 22, 23 P. 978 (Colo. 1890); Union Colony Co. v. Gallie, 88 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1939); Wolf v. Hallenbeck, 123 P.2d 412 (Colo. 1942); Lewis v. Lewis, 51 A. 854 (Conn. 1902); Addy v. Short, 89 A.2d 136 (Del. 1952) (a possibility of a reverter is an interest in land); Sorrells v. McNally, 105 So. 106 (Fla. 1925); Taylor v. Sutton, 15 Ga. 103 (1854); Norris v. Milner, 20 Ga. 563 (1856); Moss v. Chappell, 54 S.E. 968 (Ga. 1906); Evans v. Brown, 27 S.E.2d 300 (Ga. 1943); Golconda Northern Ry. v. Gulf Lines Connecting R.R., 106 N.E. 818 (Ill. 1914); Hart v. Lake, 112 N.E. 286; Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921); Storke v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 61 N.E.2d 552 (Ill. 1945); Cross v. Carson, 8 Blackf. 138 (Ind. 1846); Thorp v. Johnson, 3 Ind. 343 (1852); Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Ind. 323 (1857); Lindsey v. Lindsey, 45 Ind. 552 (1874); Cory v. Cory, 86 Ind. 567 (Ind. 1882); Elkhart Car-Works Co. v. Ellis, 15 N.E. 249 (Ind. 1888); Preston v. Bosworth, 55 N.E. 224 (Ind. 1899); Strothers v. Woodcox, 121 N.W. 51 (Iowa 1909); Hess v. Kernen, 149 N.W. 847 (Iowa 1914); Myers v. Daviess, 49 Ky. (10 B. Mon.) 394 (1850); Kenner v. American Contract Co., 72 Ky. (9 Bush) 202 (1872); Ricketts v. Louisville, St. L. & T. R. Co., 15 S.W. 182 (Ky. 1891); Kentland Coal & Coke Co. v. Keen, 183 S.W. 247 (Ky. 1890); Tallman v. Snow, 35 Me. 342 (1853); Osgood v. Abbott, 58 Me. 73 (1870); Chapman v. Pingree, 67 Me. 198 (1877); Abbott v. Fellows, 100 A. 657 (Me. 1917); Guild v. Richards, 82 Mass. 309 (16 Gray 1860); Hubbard v. Hubbard, 97 Mass. 188 (1867); Shattuck v. Hastings, 99 Mass. 23 (1868); Dyer v. Siano, 11 N.E.2d 451 (Mass. 1937); Hayward v. Kinney, 48 N.W. 170 (Mich. 1891); Chute v. Washburn, 46 N.W. 555 (Minn. 1890); Little Falls Water-Power Co. v. Belin, 72 N.W. 69 (Minn. 1897); Memphis & C.R. Co. v. Neighbors, 51 Miss. 412 (1875); Yazoo & M.V.R. Co. v. Lakeview Trac. Co., 56 So. 393 (Miss. 1911); O'Brien v. Wagner, 7 S.W. 19 (Mo. 1888); Bredell v. Kerr, 147 S.W. 105 (Mo. 1912); Adams v. Lindell, 5 Mo. App. 197 (1878); Hamilton v. Kneeland, 1 Nev. 40 (1865); Coon v. Brickett, 2 N.H. 163 (1819); Barker v. Cobb, 36 N.H. 344 (1858); New Jersey Zinc & Iron Co. v. Morris Canal & Banking Co., 15 A. 227 (N.J. Eq. 1888); Morris Canal & Banking Co. v. Brown, 27 N.J.L. 13 (1858); Nicoll v. New York & E.R. Co., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Duryee v. New York, 96 N.Y. 477 (1884); Vail v. Long Island R.R., 12 N.E. 607 (N.Y. 1887); Allen v. Great Neck Free Church, 269 N.Y.S. 341 (1934). Phelps v. Chesson, 34 N.C. (12 Ired.) 194 (1851); Oklahoma City v. Local Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 134 P.2d 565 (Okla. 1943); Buckles v. Smith, 156 P.2d 1019 (Okla. 1945); Clark v. Jones, 144 P.2d 498 (Or. 1943); Smith v. Glen Alden Coal Co., 32 A.2d 227 (Pa. 1943); Berryman v. Schumacher, 3 S.W. 46 (Tex. 1887); Gulf, C. & S.F.R. Co. v. Dunman, 11 S.W. 1094 (Tex. 1889); Hanover Fire Ins. Co. v. Nash, 67 S.W.2d 452 (Tex. Civ. App. 1934); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930); Halvorsen v. Pacific County, 156 P.2d 907 (Wash. 1945); Cales v. Ford, 28 S.E.2d 429 (W. Va. 1943); Nash v. Bloom, 114 N.W. 457 (Wis. 1908); Menge v. Radtke, 269 N.W. 313 (Wis. 1936); Nadler v. Nadler, 8 N.W.2d 306 (Wis. 1943).

(n2)Footnote 13. Reichard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 1 N.W.2d 721 (Iowa 1942); Ohm v. Clear Creek Drainage Dist., 45 N.W.2d 117 (Neb. 1950); Neal v. State-Planters Bank & Trust Co., 184 S.E. 203 (Va. 1936). Willhite v. Masters, 1998 Mo. App. LEXIS 501 (Mo. App. 1998) (exercising a right of re-entry requires an affirmative act). Fremont Lumber Co. v. Starrell Petroleum Co., 364 P.2d 773 (Or. 1961) (holding that an estate on condition subsequent does not revert on breach of condition, but requires an action by the grantor to manifest an intent to terminate the estate). PCK Properties, Inc. v. City of Cuyahoga Falls, 176 N.E.2d 441 (Ohio App. 1960) (holding that a right of re-entry is not automatic but occurs upon the election of the grantor).

(n3)Footnote 14. Parry v. Berkeley Hall Sch. Found., 74 P.2d 738 (Cal. 1937) (Dictum) Farmer's High Sch. Consol. Dist. No. 3 v. Parker, 203 S.W.2d 516 (Mo. App. 1947) (right of re-entry inalienable and cannot be devised but does descend); Nicoll v. New York & Erie R.R., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854) (right of re-entry is a mere possibility and passes by representation not by descent); Upington v. Corrigan, 45 N.E. 359 (N.Y. 1896).

(n4)Footnote 15. In re Gaffers' Estate, 5 N.Y.S.2d 671 (1938).

(n5)Footnote 16. Plemmons v. Sharp, 119 S.E. 532 (Ga. 1923); Barnesville v. Stafford, 131 S.E. 487 (Ga. 1926); Tucker v. Immanuel Baptist Church, 237 P. 654 (Kan. 1925); Turner v. Lewis, 226 S.W. 367 (Ky. 1920); Smith v.

Kuttawa, 226 S.W.2d 979 (Ky. 1928); Jackson v. Revere Sugar Refinery, 142 N.E. 909 (Mass. 1924); First Reformed Dutch Church v. Croswell, 206 N.Y.S. 132 (Mass. 1924); Blue v. Wilmington, 119 S.E. 741 (N.C. 1923). Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 269 S.W. 36 (Tenn. 1925). Community of Priests v. Byrne, 255 S.W. 601 (Tex. Com. App. 1923). Forfeiture may be had against a grantee of the estate on condition broken. Sherill v. Sherill, 99 So. 838 (Ala. 1924).

(n6)Footnote 17. Adams v. Ore Knob Copper Co., 7 F. 634 (C.C.D.N.C. 1880); Barnesville v. Stafford, 131 S.E. 487 (Ga. 1926); Osgood v. Abbott, 58 Me. 73 (1870); Yazoo & M.V.R. Co. v. Lakeview Trac. Co., 56 So. 393 (Miss. 1911); O'Brien v. Wagner, 7 S.W. 19 (Mo. 1888); Adams v. Lindell, 5 Mo. App. 197 (1878); Alexander Bldg. Corp. v. Carteret, 155 A.2d 263 (N.J. 1959) (creates a right of re-entry); Towle v. Smith, 2 Rob. 489 (N.Y. 1864); Stuyvesant v. Davis, 9 Paige 427 (N.Y. 1842); Phelps v. Chesson, 34 N.C. (12 Ired.) 194 (1851); White v. Britton, 56 S.E. 232 (S.C. 1906). See Sherill v. Sherill, 99 So. 838 (Ala. 1924); Thrall v. Spear, 22 A. 414 (Vt. 1891). Giddens v. Barrentine, 448 S.E.2d 441 (Ga. 1994) (held that property automatically reverted to adjacent landowners following breach of conditions).

(n7)Footnote 18. Schlesinger v. Kansas City & S.R.R., 152 U.S. 444 (1894).

(n8)Footnote 19. See Restatement of the Law of Property, § 24, cmt. b, special note. Stauffer v. Kessler, 130 N.E. 651 (Ind. App. 1921).

(n9)Footnote 20. Lake Erie & W.R.R. v. Ziebarth, 33 N.E. 256 (Ind. App. 1893).

(n10)Footnote 21. Parker v. Parker, 123 Mass. 584 (1878); Barksdale v. Elam, 30 Miss. 694 (1856); Reifsnyder v. Hunter, 19 Pa. 41 (1852); Walker v. Vincent, 19 Pa. 369 (1863); Philadelphia v. Girard, 45 Pa. 9 (1863).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.05

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.05 Rights of Entry as Interests Subject to Legislation

[Go To Supp]

If a right of re-entry is expressly reserved, a fee upon condition subsequent, not a covenant, is created. n22 The authorities have also differed widely, as in the case of possibilities of reverter, as to whether rights of re-entry are of sufficient dignity to be prohibited against legislation modifying or abolishing existing rights and as to whether the holder thereof is entitled to compensation on the taking of land, by eminent domain. n23

A noticeable tendency has developed to place a statutory restriction upon the duration of possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry. n24

Some cases hold that rights of re-entry and possibilities of reverter are legal rights in land which cannot be taken away by statute. n25 Clearly, upon a re-entry by the grantor the estate revests the grantor as a matter of legal right, with the same estate had before the grant, and with all the improvements the grantee may have made upon the land. n26 After the grantor has entered upon the land for a breach of the condition, the land is not subject to attachment for the debts of the grantee contracted while the grantee was in possession, n27 and any lien or encumbrance obtained upon the land by a third person after the creation of the condition is destroyed. n28 A right of re-entry is barred by the statute of limitations after breach. n29

A possibility of reverter automatically happens upon the development of the event and termination of the preceding estate, and is alienable, but a right of re-entry is necessary in the case of a breach to effect forfeiture, and is not assignable, but passes only by descent. n30

Mere delay in the exercise of right of reentry does not constitute a waiver unless valuable improvements have been made on the property so that the declaration of forfeiture against the holder of the defeasible fee would be inequitable. n31

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (rever! or right! w/5 re-entry) w/30 fee w/2 condition subsequent

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 22. Hoyt v. Ketcham, 5 A. 606 (Conn. 1886); Gray v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 59 N.E. 950 (Ill. 1901); Northwestern University v. Wesley Mem. Hosp., 125 N.E. 13 (Ill. 1919); Trustees of Union College v. New York City, 73 N.Y.S. 51 (1901); Hamel v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S.S.M. Ry., 107 N.W. 139 (Minn. 1906).

When the grantor has disposed of all the land in the area the grantor has lost the grantor's right of re-entry for breach of restrictions which have been set up as conditions subsequent.

Townsend v. Allen, 250 P.2d 292 (Cal. App. 1952).

Wakefield v. VanTassell, 66 N.E. 830 (Ill. 1903) (right of re-entry is not a perpetuity). Dennis v. Bird, 941 S.W.2d 486 (Ky. App. 1997) (words show that a right of re-entry was reserved, and not merely an option to repurchase).

(n2)Footnote 23. A statute which purported to terminate all reverter provisions which had been in effect more than twenty-one years was held unconstitutional even though the holder of the reverter was given one year from the date of act to enforce right since the right might not be enforceable at that time. Biltmore Village, Inc. v. Royal, 71 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1954).

The holder of a right of re-entry may require the recipient of a condemnation award to use the proceeds only for the intended purpose. In re Cook's Will, 277 N.Y.S. 26 (1935).

(n3)Footnote 24. Fla. Stat. Ann., § 689.18 (21 years); 765 Ill Comp. Stat. 330-1 to 3301-7 (40 years); Mass. Laws Ann., ch. 184, § 23 (30 years); Minn. Stat. § 500.20 (6 years); R.I. Gen. Laws § 34-4-19 (20 years).

Kentucky voids possibilities of reverter and rights of entry after 30 years from the date of the instrument creating them, prior to July 1, 1960, unless re-recorded before July 1, 1965. Ky. Rev. Stat., § 381.221.

In Kentucky, any possibility of reverter or right of entry contained in deeds, grants or gifts from the Commonwealth, grants for public, charitable or religious purposes, leases, easements, rights-of-way, mortgages or trusts, or any public highways, is exempted from §§ 381.219 and 381.221. Ky. Rev. Stat., § 381.222.

See Fouts v. Largent, 94 N.E.2d 448 (Ind. 1950) (effect limited to possessory actions); Ringgold v. Carvel, 76 A.2d 327 (Md. 1950) (difference between a reversion and a possibility of reverter). Knights & Ladies of Samaria v. Board of Educ. of Charles County, 688 A.2d 933 (Md. App. 1997) (possibility of reverter extinguished by failure to record notice according to statutory schedule); Hiller v. County of Anoka, 529 N.W.2d 426 (Minn. App. 1995) (statute voids possibility of reverter retained by grantor of fee simple determinable interest 30 years from the date of the deed creating the possibility of reverter).

(n4)Footnote 25. Santa Monica v. Jones, 232 P.2d 55 (Cal. 1951); Biltmore Village, Inc. v. Royal, 71 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1954).

New York has abolished the possibility of reverter and right of re-entry and has substituted a cause of action in equity to compel reconveyance. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 345.

Nominal damages only in condemnation of right of re-entry or possibility of reverter. Midwest Devs., Inc. v. Tulsa, 374 F.2d 683 (10th Cir. 1967).

Rights of re-entry may be taken by eminent domain without consideration. Board of County Comm'rs v. Thormyer, 159 N.E.2d 612 (Ohio 1959).

Illinois has now limited the duration of possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry to 40 years. 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 330/4. Port of Grays Harbor v. Bankruptcy Estate of Roderick Timber Co., 869 P.2d 417 (Wash. App. 1994) (all parties with an interest in the property to share in eminent domain award); Department of Transp. & Dev. v. Sanders, 628 So. 2d 1207 (La. App. 1993) (all parties holding interests in the land should receive some part of the eminent domain award).

(n5)Footnote 26. Scott v. Stipe, 12 Ind. 74 (1859); Hershman v. Hershman, 63 Ind. 451 (1878); Thomas v. Record, 47 Me. 500 (1859); Bartlett v. Jones, 60 Me. 246 (1872); Rowell v. Jewett, 71 Me. 408 (1880); Dolan v. Baltimore, 4 Gill 394 (Md. 1846); Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 (1855); Barker v. Cobb, 36 N.H. 344 (1858).

See, however, De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852).

(n6)Footnote 27. Schlesinger v. Kansas City & S. R. Co., 152 U.S. 444 (1894).

(n7)Footnote 28. Thomas v. Record, 47 Me. 500 (1859); Moore v. Pitts, 53 N.Y. 85 (1873); Bay City Land Co. v. Craig, 143 P. 911 (Or. 1914); Citizens Water Co. v. McGinley, 175 S.W. 457 (Tex. Civ. App. 1915).

(n8)Footnote 29. Jeffries v. State for Use of Woodruff County, 226 S.W.2d 810 (Ark. 1950).

Rights of re-entry lost through laches. Metropolitan Park Dist. v. Unknown Heirs of Rigney, 399 P.2d 516 (Wash. 1965).

In Illinois possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry die 40 years after their creation. 765 Ill Comp. Stat. 330-1 to 330-7.

(n9)Footnote 30. Stillwell v. Morley, 272 N.Y.S.2d 187 (1965).

(n10)Footnote 31. Stolarick v. Stolarick, 363 A.2d 793 (Pa. Super. 1976).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.06 Who May Exercise Right of Entry

[Go To Supp]

§ 25.06(a) Grantor and Heirs

Littleton n32 stated that the grantor of a fee tail, fee simple, life estate or term could reserve a right of re-entry. Likewise, one holding an estate of less than fee simple absolute could transfer the estate upon a condition subsequent so that the right of re-entry itself need not be upon a fee simple absolute. And one may convey a lesser estate than one has and still retain a right of re-entry for breach of condition imposed on the estate conveyed in addition to the reversion. Only the grantor or the grantor's heirs can enforce a condition. Only one of them can enter for a breach of the condition. A condition and a right of re-entry for a forfeiture cannot be reserved to a stranger. n33 The grantor's right to take advantage of a breach of condition subsequent is neither an estate nor an interest in real property nor an assignable chose in action. n34

A right of re-entry at common law was not inheritable. The heirs of the grantor took as representatives by descent cast not as heirs by descent n35 and are determined as of the date of the happening of the contingency, not of the grantor's death. n36 And even today it is sometimes still held that the grantor's right to take advantage of a breach of a condition subsequent is not descendible. n37 Nor was the right of re-entry capable of being devised. n38

A right of re-entry could not be limited to a stranger but only to the feoffor. n39 Only the grantor or the grantor's heirs can take advantage of a breach of a condition. n40 The courts have disagreed as to whether a successor corporation by way of merger or consolidation can enforce a right of re-entry held by the previous corporation. n41

§ 25.06(b) Assignability of Rights of Entry

§ 25.06(b)(1) Some Rights of Entry Not Assignable

It is a settled common-law principle that a condition can be reserved only to the grantor and the grantor's heirs and not to a stranger. The reason for the rule is that the estate is not defeated, though the condition be broken, until entry by the grantor or the grantor's heirs, and until such entry there is nothing to assign save a mere right of entry, which at common law is not assignable. n42 This rule does not apply to a subsequent purchaser in fee of land burdened with an easement granted upon condition. Such purchaser may enforce the performance of the condition upon which the grantor had conveyed to another an easement in the land. n43 Where a deed conveys an easement only, the right to enforce forfeiture for breach of condition subsequent is not confined to the grantor or the grantor's heirs but extends to those claiming under them. n44 Today generally the grantor's heirs, though not mentioned in the deed, may take advantage of a breach of condition by entry after the grantor's death. It does not matter that no estate descended to the heirs from the grantor. n45

An estate on condition is not defeated, though the condition be broken, until entry by the grantor or the grantor's heirs, and until such entry there is nothing to assign save a mere right of entry, which at common law is not assignable. n46 Until the contingency of the condition happens the whole title is in the grantee, and the grantor has nothing to convey. n47 So the right of entry for condition broken is not assignable at common law. n48 To allow such an assignment would be to encourage maintenance. n49 An attempted alienation destroyed the right of re-entry. n50

The right to enforce a condition does not pass by a deed of the reversion or by a conveyance of the land which is subject to the condition. After such a conveyance there is no person capable of making an entry or claim. The grantor has parted with the interest and also cannot make an entry or claim. The grantee cannot, because the grantee is a stranger to the condition. In some jurisdictions, however, it is held that after the condition is broken the grantor or the grantor's heirs have such vested right as may be assigned. n51

§ 25.06(b)(2) Some Rights of Entry Made Assignable by Statute

The right of re-entry or repossession for the breach of a condition subsequent is assignable by statute in some states. n52 Where a deed conveying a lot in a tract subject to a general improvement plan contained a condition restricting building within thirty feet of the property line, and provided that the grantor should have a right of re-entry for breach, the grantor may convey such reversionary right and cannot thereafter enforce the condition. n53 And in those jurisdictions where, in equity, choses in action or expectancies can be transferred there would appear to be no reason for continued blind adherence to the old rule that a right of re-entry is inalienable. n54

§ 25.06(b)(3) Extinguishment or Loss of Right of Entry by Assignment

By a general assignment made by the grantor to a third person of all the grantor's property, the condition is gone, and the grantee's estate becomes absolute, discharged from the condition. n55 So, if the grantor's estate is assigned under bankrupt or insolvent laws, the grantor cannot afterwards maintain ejectment or a writ of entry to recover possession for a breach of a condition subsequent. n56 The grantor's right of entry for a breach of condition cannot be taken in execution by a creditor, n57 but it is held that the grantee in fee of land burdened with an easement granted upon condition may maintain an action to take advantage of a breach or to enforce the performance of a condition upon which the grantor had conveyed the easement to a third person. n58

§ 25.06(c) Descendibility of Rights of Entry

§ 25.06(c)(1) Some Rights of Entry Are Descendible

Like a possibility of reverter, a right of re-entry on the death of the creator passed by descent cast, that is, it remained "in nimbus" under the condition, was broken and then was cast upon the shoulders of the grantor or, if deceased, upon the person who was then the grantor's heir. Until then it was not an estate, possibly not an interest in land. It did not pass by descent, devise or alienation. Today in many states it descends n59 and may be devised. Whether it is alienable inter vivos is still debatable and, like the possibility of reverter, its valuation remains a problem.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (grantor! or heir! or stranger! or feoffor! or third person) w/30 (enforce! or exercise!) w/15 right! w/5 re-entry or assign! w/15 right! w/5 re-entry

§ 25.06(c)(2) Some Rights of Entry Are Not Descendible

But where the condition is expressly made for the personal benefit of the grantor, the heirs cannot maintain an action for cancellation of the deed. n60 There are cases which hold that unless the heir of the grantor is named in the deed, the heir cannot re-enter for breach of condition. n61 Others hold that where the deed does not provide for a reversion in case of a breach of the condition, no remedy for breach descends to the heirs. n62 Where the performance of the condition is merely personal to the grantor, as for support, the grantor alone has the right to take advantage of a breach. n63 Thus, where the grantor claimed no breach of the grantee's covenant for support, retained no right of re-entry and did not seek rescission or cancellation of the deed, the grantor's heirs were held not entitled to a cancellation for such breach. n64 Where a deed from parents to a son reserved a lien securing the son's obligation to pay annuity to the parents or the survivor of them, the lien, being personal to the parents, was held not enforceable by the survivor's administrator. n65

§ 25.06(d) Other Parties Entitled to Enforce Rights of Entry

§ 25.06(d)(1) Enforcement by Corporate Successor

When the deed is by a corporation, its successor may take advantage of a forfeiture. n66 The sole stockholder of a corporate grantor who acquired title to the corporate property by deed before dissolution of the corporation has been held to be the "successor" of the corporation and entitled to the corporation's reversionary rights under another deed. n67 The reason given for holding that the right to enforce a condition does not pass by a deed of the reversion is that nothing that lies in action, entry or re-entry, can be granted over, and that to allow such an assignment would be to encourage maintenance. n68 The rule is the same whether the breach was before or after the assignment.

§ 25.06(d)(2) Enforcement by Trustees or Beneficiaries

The parties who can maintain a suit to enforce a trust must be either a cestui que trust or a trustee, must sue in the right of one of these or must have some legal interest in the subject matter of the trust, either granted or reserved, or by reverter. n69 If the condition be for the payment of money to a third person, while at common law this does not create a privity between the grantee and such third person, yet there is a tendency in modern adjudications to treat such a condition as raising a trust in favor of the beneficiary, which the beneficiary may enforce, n70 but the heir of a deceased beneficiary may not make entry upon breach of condition. n71

§ 25.06(d)(3) Enforcement by Governmental Grantor

Where the commonwealth is the grantor, it can take advantage of the breach of a condition subsequent only by a judicial proceeding or by a legislative declaration of forfeiture. n72 The state must enforce a condition by proceedings equivalent to an inquest of office. At common law, in a grant by the crown, as the sovereign could not make an entry for a breach of condition in person, it was necessary to assert the right by an inquest of office, or office-bound, n73 but now the state or government may provide by legislation the mode of asserting this right. n74 So, also, any public assertion by legislative act of the ownership of the estate after default of the grantee, such as an act resuming control and appropriating the property to particular uses, or granting it to others to carry out the original object, will revest the property in the state. n75

§ 25.06(d)(4) No Right of Enforcement in Stranger to Title

So those who are not heirs of the grantor cannot take advantage of the grantee's breach of a condition subsequent for the support of the grantor. n76 The possibility of a reverter because of the breach of a condition subsequent cannot be alienated, and a purchaser of the real estate from the heirs of the grantor cannot enforce a forfeiture for a breach of condition. n77 A condition expressly made in favor of a stranger to the deed is void, n78 but it is no objection to a condition that the benefit of it is in favor of a stranger, the condition itself being in favor of the grantor. n79 A condition in express terms that the grantee shall not build upon a certain part of the land conveyed cannot be enforced by the owner of the adjacent property who derived his title from the same grantor. The grantor or his heirs must enforce the condition. n80 Where a husband and wife joined in a conveyance of land of which the husband was seised in fee, on condition that the grantee should support each of them for life, and the grantors were afterwards divorced, it was held that the husband only could enforce the condition. The wife's inchoate and contingent interest in the land did not entitle her to claim a forfeiture. n81 This common-law result is now much altered by statute. A condition in a deed conveying land to one for life, with remainder to one's heirs, prohibiting a conveyance of the land during the lifetime of the tenant for life, can be enforced only by the grantor and the grantor's heirs. Strangers in possession of the land cannot resist the foreclosure of a mortgage executed by the life tenant on the ground that it violated the condition in the deed. n82 One not an heir of the grantor cannot take advantage of the grantee's breach of condition subsequent for the support of the grantor. n83

The rule has relation only to a latter conveyance of the very property transferred by the deed carrying the condition, whereby the grantor loses that interest which bears some analogy to a reversion. n84 This rule would seem to apply where the attempt to pass the right of re-entry to a third person was made either before or after breach of condition. n85 As above noted, at common law, an attempted assignment of a right of re-entry for condition broken extinguished the condition and gave the holder of a base fee, a fee simple. n86 Though such conveyance be to a son of the grantor, who upon his father's death becomes his heir, and in the absence of the conveyance would have a right of entry, the condition subsequent, n87 taking back a mortgage for the purchase price, his assignment of the mortgage to a stranger in the usual form passed to the assignee only the mortgage title, subject to being defeated by a breach of the condition in the original deed. n88

Under a condition that so much of the premises conveyed as was unused for a purpose specified should revert to the grantor, a subsequent conveyance by the grantor of the part not used for such purpose, bounding the land by a line running along certain improvements made by the grantee, is an admission by the grantor that the land beyond such line was used or needed for use by the grantee for the purpose specified. n89 The fact that the original grantor imposes a condition with a right of reversion does not prevent a subsequent owner and grantor from imposing a like condition for such subsequent grantor's own benefit, and the right of the latter to re-enter and take possession of the property in the event of a breach of the condition is subject only to the prior right of the first grantor so to do, and the release by the latter of that right leaves intact the right of the former. n90 In the absence of proof that a restriction in a deed was imposed for the benefit of other land, it is construed as a personal covenant with the grantor. n91

§ 25.06(d)(5) Release of Right to Enforcement

The grantor may release the conditions of reverter, n92 by a deed to the grantee, or a conveyance to any other person which is inconsistent with the original grant. n93 The heirs at law may also release, by deed, a condition subsequent prior to the breach thereof. n94 A condition is released by a conveyance by the grantor of all interest in the property to the person holding the title. n95 Under the common-law theory the attempted transfer of a right of re-entry actually destroyed it since the grantor could not transfer the right to a stranger and lost it by the attempted transfer. n96 The right of reversion of title may be waived expressly or by acts, conduct and circumstances indicating that the grantor does not rely upon a covenant. n97

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 32. Littleton, supra note 2, at §§ 325, 326.

The benefit of a condition subsequent could only be limited to the grantor or the heirs. Littleton, supra note 2, at § 594.

(n2)Footnote 33. Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U.S. 693 (1878). United States v. 2,086 Acres of Land, 46 F. Supp. 411 (D.S.C. 1942). Skipwith v. Martin, 6 S.W. 514 (Ark. 1888); Buckelew v. Estell, 5 Cal. 108 (1855); Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107 (1859); Childs v. Newfield, 28 P.2d 924 (Cal. App. 1934); Munro v. Eshe, 156 P.2d 700 (Colo. 1944); Holmes v. Brooks, 80 A. 773 (Conn. 1911); Norris v. Milner, 20 Ga. 563 (1856); Board of Educ. v. First Baptist Church, 63 Ill. 204 (1872); Neimeyer v. Knight, 98 Ill. 222 (1881); Boone v. Clark, 21 N.E. 850 (Ill. 1889); O'Donnell v. Robson, 88 N.E. 175 (Ill. 1909); Peoria Heights v. Keithley, 132 N.E. 532 (Ill. 1921); Dunne v. Minsor, 143 N.E. 842 (Ill. 1924). Cross v. Carson, 8 Blackf. 138 (Ind. 1846); Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Ind. 323 (1857); Copeland v. Copeland, 89 Ind. 29 (1883); Higbee v. Rodeman, 28 N.E. 442 (Ind. 1891); Piper v. Union Pac. R.R., 14 Kan. 568 (1875); McElroy v. Morley, 19 P. 341 (Kan. 1888); Owsley v. Owsley, 78 Ky. 257 (1880); Kentland Coal & Coke Co. v. Keen, 183 S.W. 247 (Ky. 1916); Price v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 188 S.W. 658 (Ky. 1916); Brill v. Lynn, 270 S.W. 20 (Ky. 1925); Bangor v. Warren, 34 Me. 324 (1851); Hooper v. Cummings, 45 Me. 359 (1858); Whitmore v. Church of Holy Cross, 117 A. 469 (Me. 1922); Dolan v. Baltimore, 4 Gill 394 (Md. 1846); Dawson v. Western Md. R.R., 68 A. 301 (Md. 1907); King's Chapel v. Pelham, 9 Mass. 501 (1813); Parker v. Nichols, 24 Mass. (7 Pick.) 111 (1829); Guild v. Richards, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 309 (1860); Hayward v. Kinney, 48 N.W. 170 (Mich. 1891); Halpin v. Rural Agrl. Sch. Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923); Winn v. Cole, 1 Miss. (1 Walk) 119 (1822); Jones v. St. Louis, K.C. & N.R.R., 79 Mo. 92 (1883); Towne v. Bowers, 81 Mo. 491 (1884); Jetter v. Lyon, 97 N.W. 596 (Neb. 1900); Watson v. Dalton, 18 N.W.2d 658 (Neb. 1945); Dewey v. Williams, 40 N.H. 222 (1860); Southard v. New Jersey Cent. R.R., 26 N.J.L. 13 (1856); Post v. Weil, 8 Hun. 418 (N.Y. 1876); Nicoll v. New York & E. R.R., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Van Rensselaer v. Ball, 19 N.Y. 100 (1859); Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 224 N.Y.S. 651 (1927); Salamanca Trust Co. v. Crouse, 222 N.Y.S. 83 (1927); Brittain v. Taylor, 84 S.E. 280 (N.C. 1915); Blue v. Wilmington, 119 S.E. 741 (N.C. 1923); Shields v. Harris, 130 S.E. 189 (N.C. 1925); Oklahoma City v. Local Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 134 P.2d 565 (Okla. 1943); Buckles v. Smith, 156 P.2d 1022 (Okla. 1945); Magness v. Kerr, 254 P. 1012 (Or. 1927); Drace v. Klinedinst, 118 A. 907 (Pa. 1922); Sapper v. Mathers, 133 A. 565 (Pa. 1926); Forth Worth Imp. Dist. No. 1 v. Weatherred, 149 S.W. 550 (Tex. Civ. App. 1912); Tickner v. Luse, 220 S.W. 578 (Tex. Civ. App. 1920).

"No entry nor re-entry (which is all one) may be reserved or given to any person, but only to the feoffer, or to the donor, or to the lessor, or to their heirs, and such re-entry cannot be given to any other person." Littleton, supra n.2, at § 347; Coke, supra n.2, at § 214a; William Sheppard, The Touchstone of Common Assurances 127 (6th ed. 1785).

> And therefore, if an estate be made upon condition that upon such a contingent a stranger shall enter, or the estate shall cease, and another shall have it; however this may be so drawn as it may be a good condition to give him, his heirs, etc., that doth make the estate, an entry, yet it cannot be good to give the estate, or the entry, to a stranger.

Mr. Justice Field, in Schulenberg v. Harriman, 88 U.S. (21 Wall) 44 (1875), said:

> It is settled law that no one can take advantage of the nonperformance of a condition subsequent, annexed to an estate in fee, but the grantor or his heirs, or the successors of the grantor if the grant proceed from an artificial person; and if they do not see fit to assert their right to enforce a forfeiture on that ground, the title remains unimpaired in the grantee. The authorities on this point, with hardly an exception, are all one way, from the Year Books down. And the same doctrine obtains where the grant upon condition proceeds from the government; no individual can assail the title it has conveyed on the ground that the grantee has failed to perform the conditions annexed.

Where the grantor waives a forfeiture his heirs cannot revive the right and declare a forfeiture upon a ground which the grantor has waived and an attempt on their part to do so is ineffectual. Plummer v. Worthington, 152 N.E. 133 (Ill. 1926).

> A waiver of the time of payment is not a permanent waiver of the right to declare a forfeiture but is only a temporary suspension of the right. It does not waive the payment of the money, but only promptness of payment. The right of forfeiture cannot, however, be exercised after such waiver without previously giving definite and specific notice of the intention to declare a forfeiture, and where the grantor dies without giving such notice, the right of his heirs to declare a forfeiture is subject to the same requirements that it can be exercised only after giving definite and specific notice. Plummer v. Worthington, 152 N.E. 133 (Ill. 1926).

The fact that after the execution of a contract to convey land in consideration of support during lifetime the grantor allowed a will he had previously executed which devised to the grantee the land in question to remain, until his death, unrevoked and unchanged, shows an acceptance on his part of the performance of the agreement for support. Smith v. McHenry, 207 P. 1108 (Kan. 1922).

Under a conveyance to a railroad company of a right-of-way with a provision that the deed should become void and the title to the land revert to the grantor if the railroad should be abandoned, where the grantor subsequently conveyed to a third party all the land except that which had been conveyed theretofore to the railroad and the railroad was thereafter abandoned, the title to the right of way reverted to the grantor and not to the grantee of the remainder of the tract. Collins v. Baird, 263 P. 1048 (Kan. 1928).

It appears to have been a rule of the common law that a condition annexed to real estate could be reserved only to the grantor or devisor and his heirs; that after the breach of the condition the estate did not ipso facto terminate, but continued until the grantor or his heirs made an entry on the land, who alone could take advantage of the breach. Another rule was that if the condition was followed by a limitation over to a third person instead of to himself and heirs and the condition was breached, it was called a conditional limitation, and the estate vested at once in the third party. It is also said that where the reservation was made to the grantor and his heirs this right remained in him and his heirs when the fee passed out of the grantor, but where the reservation was made to a third party nothing remained with the grantor because the whole estate passed out of him, and in case of a breach of his condition the third party was immediately vested with the right to enter and take possession. Halpin v. Rural Agricultural School Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923).

(n3)Footnote 34. Simms v. Folts Mission Institute, 276 N.Y.S. 145 (1934); Gainesville v. Brenau College, 103 S.E. 164 (Ga. 1920).

An executory limitation over on sale to a colored person is unenforceable in the state courts. Capitol Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Smith, 316 P.2d 252 (Colo. 1957).

In New York still a right of re-entry cannot be conveyed and any attempted conveyance destroys it. But a possibility of reverter retained upon a conveyance of a fee upon limitation is alienable. Nichols v. Haehn, 171 N.Y.S.2d 734 (1957).

Right of re-entry is not alienable at common law. In re McCarthy's Will, 347 N.Y.S.2d 490 (1973).

At common law, an attempt to assign a right of re-entry destroyed the right of re-entry. United Methodist Church in West Sand Lake v. Dobbins, 369 N.Y.S.2d 817 (1975). Burnett v. Snoddy, 19 S.E. 2d 904 (S.C. 1942) (holding that a possibility of reverter is not a right and is not an estate which can be inherited). Moore v. Sharpe, 121 S.W. 341 (Ark.1909) (holding that right of entry not assignable).

(n4)Footnote 35. Upington v. Corrigan, 45 N.E. 359 (N.Y. 1896); Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 221 N.Y.S. 692, aff'd, 224 N.Y.S. 651 (1927); Edward John Noble Hosp. v. Board of Foreign Missions, 176 N.Y.S.2d 157 (1958); Gorton v. Wager, 149 N.Y.S.2d 887 (1956); Elmore v. Austin, 59 S.E.2d 205 (N.C. 1950).

(n5)Footnote 36. Edward John Noble Hosp. v. Board of Foreign Missions, 176 N.Y.S.2d 157 (1958).

(n6)Footnote 37. Simms v. Folts Mission Inst., 276 N.Y.S. 145 (1934). Contra, Davis v. Austin, 156 S.W.2d 903 (Mo. 1941).

At common law the attempt to convey right of re-entry destroyed it. Grant v. Koenig, 325 N.Y.S.2d 428 (1971).

Right of re-entry descends to heirs of grantor at time of grantor's death not to heirs at time right of re-entry is exercisable. City of Wheeling v. Zane, 173 S.E.2d 158 (W. Va. 1970).

(n7)Footnote 38. Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 221 N.Y.S. 692, aff'd 224 N.Y.S. 651 (1927); Shields v. Harris, 130 S.E. 189 (N.C. 1925). Contra, Johnston v. Los Angeles, 168 P. 1047 (Cal. 1917); North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1908); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930). In Illinois rights of re-entry for breach of conditions subsequent are devisable. Boone v. Clark, 21 N.E. 850 (Ill. 1889); Golconda Northern Ry. v. Gulf Lines Connecting R.R. of Ill., 106 N.E. 818 (Ill. 1914). Right of re-entry descends but is not devisable nor alienable. Polette v. Williams, 456 S.W.2d 328 (Mo. 1970).

(n8)Footnote 39. Littleton, supra note 2, at § 347.

(n9)Footnote 40. Edward John Noble Hosp. v. Board of Foreign Missions, 176 N.Y.S.2d 157 (1958). Woman's Club of St. Albans v. James, 213 S.E.2d 469 (W. Va 1965) (holding that fee simple subject to condition "subsequent subject to defeasance by the grantor or his heirs").

(n10)Footnote 41. New York v. Coney Island Fire Dep't, 10 N.Y.S.2d 164 (1939). Contra, Union Colony Co. v. Gallie, 88 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1939).

(n11)Footnote 42. Nicoll v. New York & E.R.R., 12 Barb. 460 (N.Y.), aff'd, 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Riverton Country Club v. Thomas, 58 A.2d 89 (N.J.), aff'd, 64 A.2d 347 (N.J. 1948) (right of re-entry alienable by statute).

(n12)Footnote 43. Pinkum v. Eau Claire, 51 N.W. 550 (Wis. 1892).

(n13)Footnote 44. Stevens v. Galveston, H. & S.A.R.R., 169 S.W. 644 (Tex. Civ. App. 1914), rev'd on other grounds, 212 S.W. 639 (Tex. Com. App. 1919).

Unless it appears that a right or privilege is reserved for the benefit of the remaining lots of a grantor, in the deed itself or from a plan or from the situation of the property with reference to other land of the grantor, the grantees of other lots cannot enforce them. In order to give other lot owners this right, the grantor must create an equitable easement appurtenant to his remaining lots. Hill v. Levine, 147 N.E. 837 (Mass. 1925).

(n14)Footnote 45. Warner v. Bennett, 31 Conn. 468 (1863); Thomas v. Record, 47 Me. 500 (1859); Osgood v. Abbott, 58 Me. 73 (1870); Jackson ex dem. Reeves v. Topping, 1 Wend. 388 (N.Y. 1828); Southwick v. New York Christian Missionary Soc'y, 135 N.Y.S. 392 (1912); Methodist Protestant Church v. Young, 40 S.E. 691 (N.C. 1902); Eisenhardt v. Siegel, 119 S.W.2d 810 (Mo. 1938) (a killer took under right of re-entry upon death of holder of fee upon condition subsequent).

(n15)Footnote 46. Battistone v. Banulski, 147 A. 820 (Conn. 1929). Brill v. Lynn, 270 S.W. 20 (Ky. 1925) Halpin v. Rural Agrl. Sch. Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923); Nicoll v. New York & E. R.R.,12 N.Y. 121 (1854); O'Connor v. Saratoga Springs, 262 N.Y.S. 809 (1933); Magness v. Kerr, 254 P. 1012 (Or. 1927); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930).

(n16)Footnote 47. Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U.S. 693 (1878).

(n17)Footnote 48. Warner v. Bennett, 31 Conn. 468 (1863); Hoyt v. Ketcham, 5 A. 606 (Conn. 1886); Cookman v. Silliman, 2 A.2d 166 (Del. Ch. 1938); Williams v. Thomas County, 65 S.E.2d 412 (Ga. 1951) (contra, and in accord with the modern trend); Franks v. Sparks, 121 S.E.2d 27 (Ga. 1961); Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921); Peoria Heights v. Keithley, 132 N.E. 532 (Ill. 1921); Paul v. Connersville & N. J. R. Co., 51 Ind. 527 (1875); Higbee v. Rodeman, 28 N.E. 442 (Ind. 1891); Federal Land Bank v. Luckenbill, 13 N.E.2d 531 (Ind. 1938); Ralston v. Hatfield, 143 N.E. 887 (Ind. App. 1924); Bangor v. Warren, 34 Me. 324 (1851); Hooper v. Cummings, 45 Me. 359 (1858); Dawson v. Western Md. R.R., 68 A. 301 (Md. 1907); Guild v. Richards, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 309 (1860); Rice v. Boston & W. R. Corp., 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 141 (1866); Halpin v. Rural Agr'l Sch. Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923) (attempted conveyance of possibility of reverter by grantor extinguishes right of grantor and heirs); Oakland County v. Mack, 220 N.W. 801 (Mich. 1928); Dolby v. Dillman, 278 N.W. 694 (Mich. 1938); Farmer's High Sch. Consol. Dist. No. 3 v. Parker, 203 S.W.2d 516 (Mo. App. 1947); Ashuelot Nat'l Bank v. Keene, 65 A. 826 (N.H. 1907); Southard v. New Jersey Cent. R.R., 26 N.J.L. 13 (1856); Cornelius v. Den, 26 N.J.L. 376 (1856); Jackson v. Topping, 1 Wend. 388 (N.Y. 1828); Parsons v. Miller, 15 Wend. 561 (N.Y. 1836); Underhill v. Saratoga & W.R. Co., 20 Barb. 455 (N.Y. 1855); Tinkham v. Erie R. Co., 53 Barb. 393 (N.Y. 1866); Nicoll v. New York & R. R. Co., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Berenbroick v. St. Luke's Hosp., 49 N.E. 1093 (N.Y. 1898); Fowler v. Coates, 94 N.E. 997 (N.Y. 1911); O'Connor v. Saratoga Springs, 262 N.Y.S. 809 (1933); Helms v. Helms, 49 S.E. 110 (N.C. 1904); Blue v. Wilmington, 119 S.E. 741 (N.C. 1923); Sharpe v. North Carolina R.R., 129 S.E. 826 (N.C. 1925); Frensley v. White, 254 P.2d 982 (Okla. 1953); School Dist. No. 21 v. Wallowa, 142 P. 320 (Or. 1914); Wagner v. Wallowa County, 148 P. 1140 (Or. 1915); Dallas v. Etheridge, 253 S.W.2d 640 (Tex. 1952) (some jurisdictions now permit the assignment of rights of re-entry or "powers of termination"); McBride v. Farmers & Merchants Gin Co., 152 S.W. 1135 (Tex. Civ. App. 1913); Perry v. Smith, 231 S.W. 340 (Tex. Comm. App. 1921); Stevens v. Pillsbury, 57 Vt. 205 (1884); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930); Martin v. Ohio River R. Co., 16 S.E. 589 (W. Va. 1892).

In California, Connecticut, Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Virginia and West Virginia, a right of re-entry is made alienable by statute.

(n18)Footnote 49. Coke, supra note 2, at § 214n. Bangor v. Warren, 34 Me. 324 (1851); Nicoll v. New York & E.R.R., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854).

(n19)Footnote 50. Dyer v. Siano, 11 N.E.2d 451 (Mass. 1937); Dolby v. Dillman, 278 N.W. 694 (Mich. 1938); Berenbroick v. St. Luke's Hosp., 48 N.Y.S. 363 (1898) (before breach); Southwick v. New York Christian Missionary Soc'y, 135 N.Y.S. 392 (1912) (after breach but before re-entry); Magness v. Kerr, 254 P. 1012 (Or. 1927); Schoolcraft Community Sch. Dist. No. 50 v. Burson, 99 N.W.2d 353 (Mich. 1959).

(n20)Footnote 51. Moore v. Sharpe, 121 S.W. 341 (Ark. 1909); Faus v. Pacific Elec. R.R., 303 P.2d 814 (Cal. App. 1956); Waddell v. School Dist. No. 3, 257 P. 278 (Mont. 1927).

(n21)Footnote 52. Such statutes obtain in California, Connecticut, and other states.

Los Angeles & Ariz. Land Co. v. Marr, 200 P. 1051 (Cal. 1921) (an actual transfer of the reversion or right of re-entry by succession, will or assignment is essential).

See in this connection, Dolby v. Dillman, 278 N.W. 694 (Mich. 1938).

(n22)Footnote 53. Childs v. Newfield, 28 P.2d 924 (Cal. App. 1934).

(n23)Footnote 54. Faus v. Pacific Elec. R.R., 303 P.2d 814 (Cal. App. 1956); Joel v. Joel, 40 S.E.2d 541 (Ga. 1946). See Restatement of The Law of Property, § 160, cmt. d.

In a few cases even the power of termination has been held transferable, often by a liberal interpretation of the statutes defining the types of interests in land which may be transferred by deed. Shell Petr. Corp. v. Hollow, 70 F.2d 811 (10th Cir. 1934); Wright v. Hardy, 24 So. 697 (Miss. 1899); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930) (dictum).

(n24)Footnote 55. Guild v. Richards, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 309 (1860); Underhill v. Saratoga & W.R. Co., 20 Barb. 455 (N.Y. 1855); Wagner v. Wallowa County, 148 P. 1140 (Or. 1915).

(n25)Footnote 56. Stearns v. Harris, 90 Mass. (8 Allen) 597 (1864).

(n26)Footnote 57. Prall v. Burckhartt, 132 N.E. 280 (Ill. 1921); Leach v. Leach, 10 Ind. 271 (1858); Bangor v. Warren, 34 Me. 324 (1851).

(n27)Footnote 58. Pinkum v. Eau Claire, 51 N.W. 550 (Wis. 1892). Winslow, J., said:

> It would be a singular rule of law which would forever prevent the owner in fee of lands from questioning the right of another to maintain an easement upon his land when there existed a violation of the express condition upon which the easement was granted.

(n28)Footnote 59. Right of re-entry descends. Polette v. Williams, 456 S.W.2d 328 (Mo. 1970).

(n29)Footnote 60. Hawkins v. Third, 14 So. 2d 513 (Ala. 1943).

(n30)Footnote 61. Daggett v. Ft. Worth, 177 S.W. 22 (Tex. Civ. App. 1915).

(n31)Footnote 62. Adkins v. Adkins, 188 S.W. 843 (Ky. 1916).

(n32)Footnote 63. Hawkins v. Third, 14 So. 2d 513 (Ala. 1943); Penas v. Cherveny, 161 N.W. 150 (Minn. 1917); Malicki v. Malicki, 248 N.W. 723 (Minn. 1933); Helms v. Helms, 47 S.E. 415 (N.C. 1904).

(n33)Footnote 64. Little v. Little, 169 S.E. 799 (N.C. 1933).

(n34)Footnote 65. Gamble v. Mosloski, 246 N.W. 368 (Minn. 1933).

(n35)Footnote 66. Schulenberg v. Harriman, 88 U.S. (21 Wall) 44 (1847); Cross v. Carson, 8 Blackf. 138 (Ind. 1846); Southard v. New Jersey Cent. R.R., 26 N.J.L. 13 (1856).

(n36)Footnote 67. Edwards v. West Woodridge Theater Co., 55 F.2d 524 (App. D.C. 1931).

(n37)Footnote 68. Coke, supra note 2, at § 214a. Bangor v. Warren, 34 Me. 324 (1851); Hooper v. Cummings, 45 Me. 359 (1858); Guild v. Richards, 16 Gray 309 (82 Mass) (1860); Rice v. Boston & W. R. Corp., 12 Allen 141 (94 Mass. 1866); Underhill v. Saratoga & W.R. Co., 20 Barb. 455 (N.Y. 1855); Tinkham v. Erie R. Co., 53 Barb. 393 (N.Y. 1866); Williams v. Jackson ex dem. Tibbitts, 5 Johns. 489 (N.Y. 1854); Nicoll v. New York & E. R.R., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854). See Brill v. Lynn, 270 S.W. 20 (Ky. 1925); Halphin v. Rural Agrl. Sch. Dist. No. 9, 194 N.W. 1005 (Mich. 1923); Franks v. Sparks, 121 S.E.2d 27 (Ga. 1961).

(n38)Footnote 69. Shields v. Harris, 130 S.E. 189 (N.C. 1925).

(n39)Footnote 70. Weinreich v. Weinreich, 18 Mo. App. 364 (1885), per Thompson, J., citing Owsley v. Owsley, 78 Ky. 257 (1873); Rogers v. Gosnell, 51 Mo. 466 (1873); Smith v. Jewett, 40 N.H. 530 (1860); Sherman v. Dodge, 28 Vt. 26 (1855); Ralphsnyder v. Ralphsnyder, 17 W. Va. 28 (1880).

Contra, Kellam v. Kellam, 2 Patt. & H. 357 (Va. 1796).

(n40)Footnote 71. Welch v. Silliman, 2 Hill 491 (N.Y. 1842).

(n41)Footnote 72. Jackson v. Revere Sugar Refinery, 142 N.E. 909 (Mass. 1924) (grant of a right to fill flats was not forfeited by the requirement of a license, and persons holding the grant were not liable for assessment for tidewater displacement).

(n42)Footnote 73. People v. Brown, 1 Caines 416 (N.Y. 1803).

(n43)Footnote 74. If the grant be a public one it must be asserted by judicial proceedings authorized by law, the equivalent of an inquest of office at common law, finding the fact of forfeiture and adjudging the restoration of the estate on that ground, or there must be some legislative assertion of ownership of the property for breach of the condition, such as an act directing the possession and appropriation of the property, or that it be offered for sale or settlement. At common law the sovereign could not make an entry in person, and therefore an office-found was necessary to determine the estate. United States v. Repentigny, 72 U.S. (5 Wall) 211 (1866).

The mode of asserting or of resuming the forfeited grant is subject to the legislative authority of the government. It may be after judicial investigation, or by taking possession directly under the authority of the government without these preliminary proceedings. Schulenberg v. Harriman, 88 U.S. (21 Wall) 44 (1874).

(n44)Footnote 75. Farnsworth v. Minnesota & P.R.R., 92 U.S. 49 (1875); New Orleans P.R.R. v. United States, 124 U.S. 124 (1888); Schlesinger v. Kansas City & S.R.R., 152 U.S. 444 (1894); Attorney-General v. Gardiner, 117 Mass. 492 (1875).

(n45)Footnote 76. Rhodes v. Black, 170 S.E. 158 (S.C. 1933).

(n46)Footnote 77. Ralston v. Hatfield, 143 N.E. 887 (Ind. App. 1924). See Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 221 N.Y.S. 692, aff'd, 224 N.Y.S. 651 (1927); Simms v. Folts Mission Institute, 276 N.Y.S. 145 (1934); Magness v. Kerr, 254 P. 1012 (Or. 1927).

Cf., Waddell v. School Dist. No. 3, 257 P. 278 (Mont. 1927).

The common-law rule that the possibility of reverter is not an alienable or assignable estate is held abrogated in Kansas. Shell Petr. Corp. v. Hollow, 70 F.2d 811 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 293 U.S. 573 (1934).

A provision that "the grantee may re-divide said land into lots but no lot shall have a frontage of less than fifty feet" is in terms a personal agreement between the grantors and the grantee and the fact that it is not in the group of restrictions to be included in other deeds tends to show that it was not intended for the benefit of other lot owners. Hill v. Levine, 147 N.E. 837 (Mass. 1925).

A right personal to the grantor ceases with the grantor's death and cannot be enforced by others. Shields v. Harris, 130 S.E. 189 (N.C. 1925).

(n47)Footnote 78. Gray v. Blanchard, 25 Mass. (8 Pick.) 284 (1829); Craig v. Wells, 11 N.Y. 315 (1854); Nicoll v. New York & E. R.R., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Richter v. Distelhurst, 101 N.Y.S. 634 (1906); Littlefield v. Mott, 14 R.I. 288 (1883); Kellam's Ex'r v. Kellam, 2 Patt. & H. 357 (Va. 1851). Contra, see Hamilton v. Kneeland, 1 Nev. 40 (1865); McKissick v. Pickle, 16 Pa. 140 (1851).

(n48)Footnote 79. Gilbert v. Peteler, 38 N.Y. 165 (1868).

(n49)Footnote 80. McElroy v. Morley, 19 P. 341 (Kan. 1888); Hamlen v. Keith, 50 N.E. 462 (Mass. 1898); Goodman v. Bingle, 48 S.W.2d 432 (Tex. Civ. App. 1932). But see Ball v. Milliken, 76 A. 789 (R.I. 1910).

(n50)Footnote 81. Copeland v. Copeland, 89 Ind. 29 (1883).

(n51)Footnote 82. Hayward v. Kinney, 48 N.W. 170 (Mich. 1891).

(n52)Footnote 83. Rhodes v. Black, 170 S.E. 158 (S.C. 1933).

Where a joint tenant died after judgment but before levy, the survivor took free of the judgment. Jackson v. Lacey, 97 N.E.2d 839 (Ill. 1951).

(n53)Footnote 84. Ingersoll Engineering & Constructing Co. v. Crocker, 228 F. 844 (6th Cir. 1915).

(n54)Footnote 85. Dyer v. Siano, 11 N.E.2d 451 (Mass. 1937).

(n55)Footnote 86. O'Connor v. Saratoga Springs, 262 N.Y.S. 809 (1933).

(n56)Footnote 87. Rice v. Boston & W. R. Corp., 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 141 (1866).

(n57)Footnote 88. Merritt v. Harris, 102 Mass. 326 (1869).

(n58)Footnote 89. McKelway v. Seymour, 29 N.J.L. 321 (1862).

(n59)Footnote 90. Weinberg v. Sanders, 198 N.Y.S. 121 (1923).

(n60)Footnote 91. Davis v. Skipper, 83 S.W.2d 318 (Tex. 1935).

(n61)Footnote 92. Childs v. Newfield, 28 P.2d 924 (Cal. 1934); Barnesville v. Stafford, 131 S.E. 487 (Ga. 1926), 43 A.L.R. 1045; Brill v. Lynn, 270 S.W. 20 (Ky. 1925); Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 221 N.Y.S. 692, aff'd 224 N.Y.S. 651 (1927). Ours v. City of Rolla, 1998 Mo. App. LEXIS 345 (1998) (when a municipality is the grantor, a release may be blocked by those who have standing because of special injury, peculiar right or interest in maintaining the restriction, or as taxpayers suing for abuse of funds).

(n62)Footnote 93. Id.

(n63)Footnote 94. Id.

(n64)Footnote 95. Childs v. Newfield, 28 P.2d 924 (Cal. 1934); Hoyt v. Ketcham, 5 A. 606 (Conn. 1886). See Doe ex dem. Commyns v. Latimer, 2 Fla. 71 (1848); Cleveland, C.C. & I.R.R. v. Coburn, 91 Ind. 557 (1883).

(n65)Footnote 96. Hooper v. Cummings, 45 Me. 359 (1858). Rice v. Boston & W. R. Corp., 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 141 (1866); Avery v. Consumers Power Co., 253 N.W. 189 (Mich. 1934); Dolby v. Dillman, 278 N.W. 694 (Mich. 1938); Juif v. Dillman, 282 N.W. 892 (Mich. 1938); Consolidated Sch. Dist. No. 102 v. Walter, 66 N.W.2d 881 (Minn. 1954); Kilpatrick v. Twin States Realty Co., 10 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1942); Tinkham v. Erie R. Co., 53 Barb. 393 (N.Y. 1866); Wagner v. Wallowa County, 148 P. 1140 (Or. 1915).

See Hebrew Orphan Asylum v. New York, 270 N.Y.S. 310 (1934).

(n66)Footnote 97. Mitchell v. Cheney Slough Irrig. Co., 134 P.2d 34 (Cal. App. 1943).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.07

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.07 How Rights of Enforcement Are Exercised

[Go To Supp]

§ 25.07(a) By Entry or Claim

It is axiomatic that the bud of the right of re-entry does not ripen into an estate in interest and possession unless and until the holder of the right of re-entry takes the requisite steps to exercise such right. n98 The common-law remedy for enforcing the forfeiture of a condition is an entry. Actual entry, or, if that was impossible, a claim, was the original mode of enforcing forfeiture. "Regularly, when any man will take advantage of a condition, if he may enter he must enter, and when he cannot enter he must make a claim; and the reason is, for that a freehold and inheritance shall not cease without entry or claim." n99 The claim applied to things that did not lie in livery, and of which there could be no possession, such as a reversion or remainder. The bringing of an action of disseisin was not a claim within the meaning of the law, nor a substitute for an actual entry.

Claim was what was in the books called "continued claim." n100 As by the old common law a freehold could be created only by the ceremony of livery of seisin, the corresponding ceremony of re-entry was necessary in order to determine it, or, as Coke has it, "an estate of freehold cannot begin nor end without ceremony." n101 Re-entry for condition broken is still a proper method of effecting a forfeiture, not because it is necessary as a resumption of seisin and essential to a transfer of title, but because it is an open and unequivocal manifestation of the purpose of the grantor to take advantage of the breach of the condition subsequent. Any other method possessing those characteristics would suffice, n102 but no actual entry was required upon the breach of a condition subsequent in an estate for years or an incorporeal hereditament, for such an estate was not created by a livery of seisin. n103 The grantor parted with seisin when making the conveyance upon condition, and could regain this only by re-entry. No action for the recovery of the land could be brought by the grantor until the grantor had made entry upon the land after condition broken or made claim if entry was impossible. This was the early rule in some of the states, n104 and in North Carolina and South Carolina it remains the rule to the present time. n105 If several detached parcels of land are conveyed by the same deed, and are subject to the same condition, an entry upon one lot in the name of all the lots situated in the same county is sufficient. n106 It would seem that the ceremony of re-entry for the breach of a condition ought to be dispensed with, inasmuch as under the statute of uses the ceremony of livery of seisin is dispensed with in the creation of freehold estates. Accordingly, at the present day, this ceremony is not generally necessary before the prosecution of an action for the recovery of possession.

§ 25.07(a)(1) What Constitutes Entry

There must be a re-entry or an act equivalent thereto. n107 An entry to enforce a forfeiture must be made for the purpose of taking advantage of the breach of condition. If it is made for some other purpose, it is not effective to divest the grantee of the estate by reason of the breach of the condition and does not lay the foundation for a recovery in ejectment by the grantor. n108 There are cases, however, which hold that, in effect, ejectment may be maintained without previous entry, demand, or notice. n109 The entry, moreover, in the language of sheppard-touchstone, n110 should be "an open and notorious act, equivalent to investiture of land by livery of seisin, that notoriety might be given to the change of title." It is not necessary, however, that the party entering should declare at the time for what purpose entry is made. The act speaks for itself. n111 The re-entry must be made after a breach of the condition. If made before a breach it may excuse the breach, because it may render performance impossible. n112 In the absence of an express provision that the entry must be made within a specified time after breach, it may be made at any time after breach and before the period of limitation fixed by statute. n113 It must be made upon the land of which forfeiture is claimed. n114

An actual entry followed by the use and cultivation of the land in dispute together with a claim of ownership and the subsequent conveyance of the property to another shows an effective and positive manifestation of an election to terminate the estate on condition broken and removes all doubt as to grantor's intention so to do. n115 It would seem that upon the breach of a condition subsequent the grantor should be allowed to treat the estate as having reverted, and to sue for a recovery thereof without going through the formality of a prior entry or demand for possession, and this is the view taken by some courts. n116 A re-entry or demand for possession is not necessary where the deed provides that the title shall revert to the grantor upon an adjudication that the condition has been broken n117 or where there is a covenant to reconvey on breach of condition. n118

§ 25.07(a)(2) When Notice and Demand Are Required

There is ordinarily no necessity for a demand upon the grantee prior to the entry, or for a notice subsequent to entry. n119 If it clearly appears that a demand would have been an idle ceremony, a demand need not be shown. n120 However, where there has not been a permanent waiver of a condition, but only a temporary suspension of the right to insist upon compliance, the right of forfeiture cannot be exercised after such waiver without previously giving definite and specific notice of the intention to declare a forfeiture. n121 The condition may be such that a demand or notice for its performance will be necessary. Thus, where the condition was that if the grantee should neglect or refuse to support a fence around the granted land the deed should be void, it was held that there was no forfeiture until the grantee had "neglected" or "refused" to support a fence, after notice or request, and had failed to do so after a reasonable time allowed for that purpose. n122

Where the condition was to pay certain legacies, and one of the legatees was absent from the state, before there could be a forfeiture by reason of the nonpayment of the legacy, a demand of payment was necessary. n123 There are cases which take the position that a demand for performance of a condition subsequent is a prerequisite to forfeiture of the estate. n124 In some cases it is held that a demand for performance is equivalent to an entry, n125 and a forfeiture cannot be claimed without such demand. If the grantee under a deed subject to a condition abandons the land without sufficient excuse and without any offer to perform a continuous service imposed by the condition, no demand for performance is necessary to entitle the grantor to re-enter. The grantee's abandoning the land is equivalent to a renunciation of rights under the deed and is authority to the grantor to enter. n126 However, if the condition is one that depends upon the nonuse of the property for a specified purpose for a time mentioned, there can be no demand for performance, for when the time has elapsed the breach of the condition is complete, and there is no breach until such time has elapsed. n127 The grantor is not required to demand performance of a condition subsequent before commencing an action of ejectment to recover the land. n128 Notice and demand are unnecessary where it is impossible for the grantee to comply with the conditions and a demand would be a useless thing. n129

§ 25.07(b) Legal Actions as Equivalent to Entry

It is a general rule that a writ of ejectment, a writ of entry, or a suit for the possession of the land, is equivalent to a re-entry. n130 So, any act equivalent to an entry by the grantor showing a purpose to take advantage of the breach of condition subsequent, and to reclaim the estate forfeited by such, is all that is required. n131

An action in ejectment may be maintained against a grantee for breach of condition in a deed, n132 and a previous formal entry need not be shown where the facts disclose a breach of the condition. n133 The action of ejectment to enforce a forfeiture of a condition may be maintained against subsequent purchasers from the original grantee upon condition. n134

§ 25.07(c) When Entry Is Defined in the Grant

It is usual in a grant on a condition subsequent to reserve in express terms to the grantor and the grantor's heirs a right of entry for breach of condition, n135 but the right is not dependent upon a specific recital thereof in the deed. n136 The parties themselves may, by a stipulation in the deed, provide what shall constitute a re-entry for a forfeiture or what shall be the evidence of such re-entry. Thus, they may stipulate that the grantor shall post a notice of re-entry upon the land, that within a specified time thereafter the land shall be considered as revested in the grantor, that such act will constitute a re-entry, and that after the expiration of such time it will defeat the purchaser's title. n137 Where the parties stipulate in the deed that the title shall revert upon the adjudication by a judicial tribunal that the condition has been violated, such adjudication amounts to a re-entry. n138

§ 25.07(d) Entry Before Breach

If the grantor is in possession when the condition is broken, the estate revests in the grantor at once, and the grantor's possession is presumed to be for the purpose n139 of holding under the forfeiture. If the grantor is already in possession, it is, however, in some cases declared that the grantor must manifest an intention of holding by reason of the breach of condition. n140 Facts showing that the grantee in possession, after breach of the condition, exercised acts of ownership or that the grantor residing with the grantee acknowledged the title of the latter and disclaimed any title in the grantor, are admissible in evidence to show that the grantor was not in possession for a forfeiture. n141 The grantor may thereafter maintain an action to quiet the title, but to do this the grantor must allege a breach of the condition, and a re-entry because of such breach. Such an action could not be sustained upon an allegation of a re-entry before breach. n142 To entitle the plaintiff to an action to quiet title, the plaintiff must recover on the strength of the plaintiff's own title. n143

§ 25.07(e) Miscellaneous Rules Governing Entry

If the grantor reserves to himself some special remedy for a breach of the condition, other than a forfeiture of the estate, the grantor may be limited to that remedy. n144 Where a covenant is coupled with a condition subsequent, the grantor has an election to proceed on the covenant or on the condition. n145

The right of re-entry accrues at the time of the breach thereof and the statute of limitations then commences running. n146 A change in circumstances justifies refusal to enforce the right of re-entry. n147 And any circumstance that prevents a forfeiture of an estate upon condition subsequent will of course prevent exercise of a right of re-entry. n148

Where a corporation holding land upon a condition subsequent is dissolved for acts or omissions which are also breaches of the condition, the title reverts to the original grantor without any entry by him or other act equivalent thereto. The dissolution of the corporation by judicial decree supersedes the necessity of a re-entry. n149

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (entry or enter! or claim) w/15 enforce w/5 forfeit! w/5 condition w/5 breach! or broke!
or re-entry w/30 (writ or action w/1 ejectment) or (writ w/1 entry) or (suit w/1 possession)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 98. Carruthers v. Spaulding, 275 N.Y.S. 37 (1934). Deeds with the proviso that if the grantee died without any legal heirs, child or children, then upon death of the widow the land should descend to the grantors, were held to terminate the grantee's estate only upon his dying without heirs, excluding his wife, and created an estate in the heirs by way of executory limitations through words of purchase. Noe v. Moseley, 36 N.E.2d 240 (Ill. 1941).

Right of re-entry is destroyed by the creation of a limitation over. Brattle Square Church v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 (1855); Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950).

In the case of a determinable fee, however, the possibility of reverter remains even though there has been a limitation over. First Universalist Soc'y v. Boland, 29 N.E. 524 (Mass. 1892).

(n2)Footnote 99. Coke, supra note 2, at § 218a; Sheppard-Touchstone, supra note 33, at 153.

(n3)Footnote 100. It is explained by Littleton, supra note 3, at § 414.

(n4)Footnote 101. Coke, supra note 2, at § 214b.

A lease for years might begin without ceremony, and so might end without ceremony. A condition annexed to a lease for years did not, therefore, require an actual entry to enforce it, unless an entry is stipulated. Ejectment may be maintained without an actual entry. See Moore v. Sharpe, 121 S.W. 341 (Ark. 1909).

(n5)Footnote 102. Rannels v. Rowe, 145 F. 296 (8th Cir. 1906); Bryan v. Bliss-Cook Oak Co., 178 F. 217 (8th Cir. 1910); Lewis v. Lewis, 51 A. 854 (Conn. 1902); Moss v. Chappell, 54 S.E. 968 (Ga. 1906); Hart v. Lake, 112 N.E. 286 (Ill. 1916); Preston v. Bosworth, 55 N.E. 224 (Ind. 1899); Strothers v. Woodcox, 121 N.W. 51 (Iowa 1909); Kentland Coal & Coke Co. v. Keen, 183 S.W. 247 (Ky. 1916); Abbott v. Fellows, 100 A. 657 (Me. 1917); Little Falls Water-Power Co. v. Belin, 72 N.W. 69 (Minn. 1897); Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Lakeview Trac. Co., 56 So. 393 (Miss. 1911); Bredell v. Kerr, 147 S.W. 105 (Mo. 1912); Carruthers v. Spaulding, 275 N.Y.S. 37 (1934).

(n6)Footnote 103. 4 James Kent Commentaries on American Law 128 (Rev. ed. 1895).

(n7)Footnote 104. Chalker v. Chalker, 1 Conn. 79 (1814); Bowen v. Bowen, 18 Conn. 535 (1847); Warner v. Bennett, 31 Conn. 468 (1863); Voris v. Renshaw, 49 Ill. 425 (1867); Board of Educ. v. First Baptist Church, 63 Ill. 204 (1872); Throp v. Johnson, 3 Ind. 343 (1852); Boone v. Tipton, 15 Ind. 270 (1860); Kenner v. American Contract Co., 72 KY. (9 Bush) 202 (1872); Frost v. Butler, 7 Me. 225 (1831); Marwick v. Andrews, 25 Me. 525 (1846); Bangor v. Warren, 34 Me. 324 (1851); Tallman v. Snow, 35 ME. 342 (1853); Osgood v. Abbott, 58 Me. 73 (1870); Memphis & C.R.R. V. Neighbour, 51 Miss. 412 (1875); Willard v. Henry, 2 N.H. 120 (1819); Spear v. Fuller, 8 N.H. 174 (1835); Rollins v. Riley, 44 N.H. 9 (1860); Phelps v. Chesson, 34 N.C. (12 Ired.) 194 (1851); Hammond v. Port Royal & A.R.R., 15 S.C. 10 (1880).

In Massachusetts an entry was necessary before the Revised Statutes of 1836, which provided that the demandant in a real action shall not to be required to prove an actual entry, and that proof of the right to enter shall be deemed sufficient proof of seisin. This applies to an action founded on a breach of condition. Austin v. Cambridgeport, 38 Mass. 215 (21 Pick. 1838) 215. See Stearns v. Harris, 90 Mass. 597 (8 Allen 1864).

It has been suggested, however, that Sanborn v. Woodman, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 36 (1849); Stone v. Ellis, 63 Mass. (9 Cush.) 95 (1851); Attorney-General v. Merrimack Mfg. Co., 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 586 (1860), are inconsistent. F. C. Loring, Estates Upon Condition, 1 Am. L. Rev. 265, 269 (1866). Hubbard v. Hubbard, 97 Mass. 188 (1867), decides that an action is equivalent to an entry.

(n8)Footnote 105. Adams v. Ore Knob Copper Co., 7 F. 634 (C.C.N.C. 1880); Hammond v. Port Royal & A.R.R., 15 S.C. 10 (1880).

(n9)Footnote 106. Littleton, supra note 2, at § 417; Coke, supra note 2, at § 252*B. Green v. Pettingill, 47 N.H. 375 (1867).*

(n10)Footnote 107. Hooper v. Haas, 164 N.E. 23 (Ill. 1928). D'Addario v. D'Addario, 603 A.2d 1199 (Conn. App. 1992) (holding that a forfeiture of fee simple estate subject to condition subsequent requires entry "to effectuate defeasance"). Lake View Memorial Hospital v. Vermilion County, 318 N.E.2d 752 (Ill.App. 1974) (holding that a fee upon condition subsequent can be terminated only by an entry of grantor upon a breach). Contra, Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Chapman, 171 A.2d 653 (N.J. 1961) (holding that an actual re-entry no longer required to defeat estate on condition; a right to re-entry is enough).

(n11)Footnote 108. Bowen v. Bowen, 18 Conn. 535 (1847); Stone v. Ellis, 63 Mass. (9 Cush.) 95 (1851).

(n12)Footnote 109. Union Pac. Ry. v. Cook, 98 F. 281 (8th Cir. 1899); Hart v. Lake, 112 N.E. 286 (Ill. 1916). Ritchie v. Kansas, N. & D.R.R., 39 P. 718 (Kan. 1895); Sioux City & St. P.R.R. V. Davis, 51 N.W. 907 (Minn. 1892). Union College v. New York, 65 N.E. 853 (N.Y. 1903); Brittain v. Taylor, 84 S.E. 280 (N.C. 1915); Sanderson v. Dee, 168 P. 1001 (Okla. 1917); Upon the happening of a breach of a condition subsequent, where the condition is an essential part of the deed, ejectment lies for possession of the premises. Denney v. Traders Nat'l Bank, 408 S.W.2d 71 (Mo. 1966).

(n13)Footnote 110. William Sheppard, The Touchstone of Common Assurance 153 (6th ed-1785).

(n14)Footnote 111. Bowen v. Bowen, 18 Conn. 535 (1847); Dugan v. Thomas, 9 A. 354 (Me. 1887).

(n15)Footnote 112. Elkhart Car-Works Co. v. Ellis, 15 N.E. 249 (Ind. 1888); Jump River Lumber Co. v. Moore, 35 N.W. 360 (Wis. 1887).

(n16)Footnote 113. Yazoo & M.V.R.R. v. Lakeview Trac. Co., 56 So. 393 (Miss. 1911); Sanford v. Sims, 66 S.E.2d 495 (Va. 1951).

(n17)Footnote 114. Missouri Historical Soc'y v. Academy of Science, 8 S.W. 346 (Mo. 1888).

"Whatever necessity there may have anciently been for such a proceeding, the reason for it ceased with the disappearance of the fictions and devices resorted to, upon which to found the action of ejectment." Sioux City & St. P.R.R. v. Singer, 51 N.W. 905 (Minn. 1892), per Dickinson, J.

See Clark v. Holton, 57 Ind. 564 (1877); Ritchie v. Kansas, N. & D.R.R., 39 P. 718 (Kan. 1865); Hamilton v. Kneeland, 1 Nev. 40 (1865). And see Seeck v. Jakel, 141 P. 211 (Or. 1914).

(n18)Footnote 115. Turner v. Lewis, 226 S.W. 367 (Ky. 1920).

(n19)Footnote 116. Lyman v. Suburban R. Co., 60 N.E. 515 (Ill. 1901); St. Joseph Lead Co. v. Fuhrmeister, 182 S.W.2d 273 (Mo. 1944) (demand for possession with notice of forfeiture is an entry).

(n20)Footnote 117. Fusha v. Dacono Town Site Co., 153 P. 226 (Colo. 1915).

(n21)Footnote 118. Union Pac. Ry. v. Cook, 98 F. 281 (8th Cir. 1899); Hart v. Lake, 112 N.E. 286 (Ill. 1916).

(n22)Footnote 119. Liebrand v. Otto, 56 Cal. 242 (1880); Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Macon, 13 S.E. 21 (Ga. 1891); Evans v. Brown, 27 S.E.2d 300 (Ga. 1943); Richter v. Richter, 12 N.E. 698 (Ind. 1887); Royal v. Aultman & Taylor Co., 19 N.E. 202 (Ind. 1888); Tallman v. Snow, 35 Me. 342 (1853); Rowell v. Jewett, 69 Me. 293 (1879); Sanhorn v. Woodman, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 36 (1849); Langley v. Chapin, 134 Mass. 82 (1883); Whitton v. Whitton, 38 N.H. 127 (1859); Norton v. Valentine, 135 N.Y.S. 1084 (1912); New Edgewood Lake Corp. v. Kingston Trust Co., 285 N.Y.S. 130 (1936).

(n23)Footnote 120. Stauffer v. Kessler, 130 N.E. 651 (Ind. App. 1921).

(n24)Footnote 121. Plummer v. Worthington, 152 N.E. 133 (Ill. 1926) (grantor having died without giving notice of intention to declare a forfeiture the heirs could revive the right to declare a forfeiture by giving notice).

Grantor cannot complain of insufficiency of repairs made some nine years previously, where he failed to give the grantee the required written notice that additional repairs were desired. Simpson v. Simpson, 141 So. 50 (La. 1932).

(n25)Footnote 122. Merrifield v. Cobleigh, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 178 (1849).

(n26)Footnote 123. Bradstreet v. Clark, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 389 (1838).

(n27)Footnote 124. See Risley v. McNiece, 71 Ind. 434 (1880); Preston v. Bosworth, 55 N.E. 224 (Ind. 1899); Huntley v. McBrayer, 85 S.E. 213 (N.C. 1915).

(n28)Footnote 125. Clark v. Holton, 57 Ind. 564 (1877); Indianapolis, P. & C.R.R. v. Hood, 66 Ind. 580 (1879); Risley v. McNiece, 71 Ind. 434 (1880); Cory v. Cory, 86 Ind. 567 (1882); Ellis v. Elkhart Car-Works Co., 97 Ind. 247 (1884); Huffman v. Rickets, 111 N.E. 322 (Ind. App. 1916); Adkins v. Adkins, 188 S.W. 843 (Ky. 1916).

(n29)Footnote 126. Lindsey v. Lindsey, 45 Ind. 552 (1874); Risley v. McNiece, 71 Ind. 434 (1880); Schuff v. Ransom, 79 Ind. 458 (1881); Corey v. Corey, 86 Ind. 567 (1882); Ellis v. Elkhart Ellis v. Elkhart Car-Works Co., 97 Ind. 247 (1884); Richter v. Richter, 12 N.E. 698 (Ind. 1887).

(n30)Footnote 127. Ellis v. Elkhart Car-Works Co., 97 Ind. 247 (1884).

(n31)Footnote 128. New Edgewood Lake Corp. v. Kingston Trust Co., 285 N.Y.S. 130 (1936).

(n32)Footnote 129. Klamath County v. Klamath Dev. Co., 218 P. 932 (Or. 1923).

(n33)Footnote 130. Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U.S. 693 (1878); Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co., 100 U.S. 55 (1879); Boone v. Clark, 21 N.E. 850 (Ill. 1889); Scott v. Stipe, 12 Ind. 74 (1859); Clark v. Holton, 57 Ind. 564 (1877); Indianapolis, P. & C.R.R. v. Hood, 66 Ind. 580 (1879); Wilson v. Wilson, 86 Ind. 472 (1882); Cleveland, C.C. & I.R.R. v. Coburn, 91 Ind. 557 (1883); Richter v. Richter, 12 N.E. 698 (Ind. 1887); O'Brien v. Wetherell, 14 Kan 616 (1875); Ritchie v. Kansas, N. & D.R.R., 39 P. 718 (Kan. 1895); Louisville & N.R.R. v. Covington, 65 Ky. (2 Bush) 526 (1866); Owensboro & N.R.R. v. Griffith, 17 S.W. 277 (Ky. 1891); Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 237, §§ 4, 5; Austin v. Cambridgeport, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 215 (1838); Hubbard v. Hubbard, 97 Mass. 188 (1867); Sioux City & St. P.R.R. v. Singer, 51 N.W. 905 (Minn. 1892); Towne v. Bowers, 81 Mo. 491 (1884); Clarke v. Brookfield, 81 Mo. 503 (1884); Ellis v. Kyger, 3 S.W. 23 (Mo. 1887); O'Brien v. Wagner, 7 S.W. 19 (Mo. 1888); Missouri Historical Soc. v. Academy of Science, 8 S.W. 346 (Mo. 1888); Weinreich v. Weinreich, 18 Mo. App. 364 (1885). Cornelius v. Ivins, 26 N.J.L. 376 (1857); Jackson ex dem. Bronck v. Crysler, 1 Johns. Cas. 125 (N.Y. 1799); Upington v. Corrigan, 23 N.Y.S. 451 (1893); Palmer v. Fort Plain & C. Plank Rd. Co., 11 N.Y. 376 (1854); Hosford v. Ballard, 39 N.Y. 147 (1868); Cruger v. McLaury, 41 N.Y. 219 (1869); Plumb v. Tubbs, 41 N.Y. 442 (1869); New Edgewood Lake Corp. v. Kingston Trust Co., 285 N.Y.S. 130 (1836); Raley v. Umatilla, 13 P. 890 (Or. 1887); Coffin v. Portland, 17 P. 580 (Or. 1888); Bear v. Whisler, 7 Watts 144 (Pa. 1838); Cook v. Trimble, 9 Watts 15 (Pa. 1839); Sheaffer v. Sheaffer, 37 Pa. 525 (1861); Sharon Iron Co. v. Erie, 41 Pa. 341 (1861); Brown v. Bennett, 75 Pa. 420 (1874); Rugge v. Ellis, 1 Bay 107 (S.C.); Jeffery v. Graham, 61 Tex. 481

(1884); Gulf, C. & S.F.R.R. v. Dunman, 11 S.W. 1094 (Tex. 1889). Martin v. Ohio R. R.R., 16 S.E. 589 (W. Va. 1892).

An action of unlawful entry and detainer is not sufficient Bowyer v. Seymour, 13 W. Va. 12 (1878); Horner v. Chicago, M. & St. P.R.R., 38 Wis. 165 (1875); Pepin v. Prindle, 21 N.W. 254 (Wis. 1884).

(n34)Footnote 131. The trustees of a railroad company had conveyed the road to a construction company upon condition that the road should be completed within a certain time, and, upon failure of the construction company to fulfill the condition, the trustees entered into a contract with a railway company already in possession of the property, reciting the condition and declaring a forfeiture under it. It was held that, the trustees having elected to treat the property as reverted to them and their action being equivalent, without judicial proceedings, to a re-entry, the interest of the construction company in the property was divested at the expiration of the time limited for performance of the conditions, and the property could not be subjected, by a suit brought after that time, to a judgment against the construction company recovered by complainants on the contract for the rails. Schlesinger v. Kansas City & S.R.R., 152 U.S. 444 (1894).

(n35)Footnote 132. Chicago San. Dist. v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 116 N.E. 161 (Ill. 1917); Epworth Assembly v. Ludington & N. R., 211 N.W. 99 (Mich. 1926); Moore v. Wingate, 53 Mo. 398 (1873); Jetter v. Lyon, 97 N.W. 596 (Neb. 1903); Reformed Church v. Schoolcraft, 65 N.Y. 134 (1875); Carruthers v. Spaulding, 275 N.Y.S. 37 (1934); Ringrose v. Ringrose, 33 A. 129 (Pa. 1895); Steward v. Workman, 102 S.E. 474 (W. Va. 1920); Mash v. Bloom, 110 N.W. 203 (Wis. 1907).

(n36)Footnote 133. Ritchie v. Kansas, N. & D.R.R., 39 P. 718 (Kan. 1895).

(n37)Footnote 134. "It cannot be urged that it is even a hard case against such defendant, for he purchased with full knowledge of the condition; or, if not, it behooved him to inquire and examine the title before he purchased." Jackson ex dem. Reeves v. Topping, 1 Wend. 388 (N.Y. 1828); Guffey v. Hukill, 11 S.E. 754 (W. Va. 1890); Martin v. Ohio R.R., 16 S.E. 589 (W. Va. 1892).

Accelerating right of re-entry where limitation in the trust failed. In re Shaul's Estate, 297 N.Y.S.2d 209 (1969).

(n38)Footnote 135. Thomas v. Record, 47 Me. 500 (1859); Mickleson v. Gypsy Oil Co., 238 P. 194 (Okla. 1925).

(n39)Footnote 136. Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922); Thomas v. Record, 47 Me. 500 (1859); Mickleson v. Gypsy Oil Co., 238 P. 194 (Okla. 1925).

(n40)Footnote 137. Swoll v. Oliver, 61 Ga. 248 (1878).

Comment, Legislative Limitation of Reverter and Forfeiture Provisions in Conveyances and Devises of Land -- A Proposed Statute for Kansas, 15 U. Kan. L. Rev. 346 (1967).

(n41)Footnote 138. Fusha v. Dacono Town Site Co., 153 P. 226 (Colo. 1915).

(n42)Footnote 139. Adams v. Ore Knob Copper Co., 7 F. 634, (C.C.D.N.C. 1880); Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Ind. 323 (1857); Clark v. Holton, 57 Ind. 564 (1877); Richter v. Richter, 12 N.E. 698 (Ind. 1887); Taylor v. Cedar Rapids & St. P.R.R., 25 Iowa 371 (1868); Frost v. Butler, 7 Me. 225 (1831); Andrews v. Senter, 32 Me. 394 (1851); Lincoln & Kennebeck Bank v. Drummond, 5 Mass. 321 (1809); Akasu v. Power, 91 N.E.2d 224 (Mass. 1950); Kilpatrick v. Twin States Realty Co., 10 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1942); O'Brien v. Wagner, 7 S.W. 19 (Mo. 1888); Willard v. Henry, 2 N.H. 120 (1819); Rollins v. Riley, 44 N.H. 9 (1860); Brittain v. Taylor, 84 S.E. 280 (N.C. 1915); Hamilton v. Elliott, 5 Serg. & Rawle 375 (Pa. 1819). Restatement of The Law of Property, § 160, and see § 161, showing exceptions to the rule stated in the text. Wagner v. Wallowa County, 148 P. 1140 (Or. 1915).

Regularly when a grantor will take advantage of a condition, if he may enter he must enter, and when he cannot enter he must make claim, for the reason that a freehold and inheritance shall not cease without entry or claim. But if the grantor is himself in possession of the premises when the breach happens, the estate revests in him at once without any formal act on his part, and he will be presumed, after breach, to hold for the purpose of enforcing the forfeiture unless he waive the breach, which he may do. Ordway v. Farrow, 64 A. 1116 (Vt. 1906).

(n43)Footnote 140. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 97 Mass. 188 (1867); Willard v. Henry, 2 N.H. 120 (1819). See Lincoln & Kennebeck Bank v. Drummond, 5 Mass. 321 (1809).

(n44)Footnote 141. Drew v. Baldwin, 4 N.W. 576 (Wis. 1880).

(n45)Footnote 142. Richter v. Richter, 12 N.E. 698 (Ind. 1887); Elkhart Car-Works Co. v. Ellis, 15 N.E. 249 (Ind. 1888).

(n46)Footnote 143. Kozanjieff v. Petroff, 19 N.E.2d 563 (Ind. 1939), 122 A.L.R. 479.

(n47)Footnote 144. Hoyt v. Kimball, 49 N.H. 322 (1870).

(n48)Footnote 145. Neal v. State-Planters Bank & Trust Co., 184 S.E. 203 (Va. 1936).

(n49)Footnote 146. Sanford v. Sims, 66 S.E.2d 495 (Va. 1951); 38 Va. L. Rev. 266.

(n50)Footnote 147. Letteau v. Ellis, 10 P.2d 496 (Cal. App. 1932); Young v. Cramer, 100 P.2d 523 (Cal. App. 1940); Tower v. Compton Hill Imp. Co., 91 S.W. 104 (Mo. 1905); Siegel v. Herbine, 23 A. 996 (Pa. 1892); Daggett v. Fort Worth, 177 S.W. 222 (Tex. Civ. App. 1915); Hirsch v. Hancock, 343 P.2d 959 (Cal. App. 1959).

Changed conditions defeat right of re-entry. McArdle v. School Dist., 136 N.W.2d 422 (Neb. 1965).

(n51)Footnote 148. Letteau v. Ellis, 10 P.2d 496 (Cal. App. 1932); Koehler v. Rowland, 205 S.W. 217 (Mo. 1918) (dictum).

(n52)Footnote 149. Mott v. Danville Seminary, 21 N.E. 927 (Ill. 1889). See Frederick E. Farrer, Reverter to the Donor of the Legal Fee Vested in a Dissolved Corporation, 49 L.Q. Rev. 240 (1933); M.W. Hughes, Reverter to the Donor of the Legal Fee Vested in a Dissolved Corporation, 51 L.Q. Rev. 347 (1935), and the reply thereto by Frederick E. Farrer, Reverter to the Donor, etc.: Reply to Mr. Hughes, 51 L.Q. Rev. 361 (1935).

But contrawise, if the corporation is the grantor retaining the right of re-entry dissolution does not destroy the right of re-entry. Addy v. Short, 89 A.2d 136 (Del. 1952).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 25.08

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based on Ch. 31, George S. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on rights of entry. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 25.08 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Articles

Becker, David M. "Debunking the Sanctity of Precedent," Wash. U.L.Q. Vol. 76 (1998) 853.

Bell, Sharon J. "Osages, Iron Horses and Reversionary Interests: the Impact of United States v. Atterberry on Railroad Abandonments." Tulsa L.J. Vol. 20 (Winter 1984) 255.

Bowman, Kevin A. "The Short Term Versus the Dead Hand: Litigating Our Dedicated Public Parks." U. Cin. L. Rev. Vol 65 (Winter 1997) 595.

"Death Does Not Create a Reversionary Interest." Tax'n for Lawyers Vol. 17 (January-February 1989) 252.

Devonshire, Peter. "Possibilities of Reverter and Rights of Re-entry for Condition Broken: The Modern Context for Determinable and Conditional Interests in Land." Dalhousie L.J. Vol. 13 (1990) 650.

Hague, David Nelson. "Why Buy What You Already Own? Florida's Reversionary Interest in Railroad Rights-of-Way." Fla. Bar J. Vol. 64 (June 1990) 72.

Johnson, David C. "Discounting and Compounding -- Calculation of the Present Value of an Annuity, Life Estate, Remainder, or Reversionary Interest Dependent Upon Two Life Contingencies." S. Ill. Univ. L.J. Vol. 11 (Summer 1987) 1179.

Miller, Stephen P. "Eminent Domain: 'Rails to Trails' Act-Section 8(d) Railbanking: An Authorized 'Taking' of a Reversionary Interest?" Mem. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (Fall 1990) 187.

Pennfield, Edward B. & Charles J. Seidler, Jr. "Adverse Estate Consequences of Ownership of Reversionary Interests Can be Avoided." Est. Plan. Vol. 10 (May 1983) 144.

Phoebus, John K. "The Rule Against Perpetuities -- The Implication of a Reasonable Time for the Performance of a Contingency to the Vesting of Future Interest in Commercial Transactions -- Maryland's Hybrid Approach to the Rule Against Perpetuities in Commercial Contexts." Dick. L. Rev. Vol. 101 (Spring, 1997) 619. (Rights of entry are exempt from the rule against perpetuities).

Rosenberg, Erica. "Rights of Re-entry -- Duration of Condition -- Assignability -- Alienability of Enforcement." Ann. Surv. Mass. L., Vol. 30 (1983) 181.

"Transfer of Oil and Gas Property Subject to a Contingent Reversionary Interest." Oil and Gas Tax Q. Vol. 36 (June 1988) 709.

Annotations

Annotation, Commencement of Running of Statute of Limitations Respecting Actions of Owners of Right of Re-entry, or Actions Against Third Persons by Reversioners, 19 A.L.R. 2d 729.

Annotation, Construction and Effect of "Marketable Record Title" Statutes, 31 A.L.R. 4th 11

Annotation, Devisability of Possibility of Reverter, or of Right of Re-entry for Breach of Conditions Subsequent, 16 A.L.R. 2d 1246.

Annotation, Rights in Condemnation Award Where Land Taken Was Subject to Possible Rights of Reverter or Re-entry, 81 A.L.R. 2d 568.

Annotation, Title to Buildings When School Lands Revert for Nonuse for School Purposes, 28 A.L.R. 2d 564.

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Transfer of Possibility of Reverter or Right of Re-entry, Following Conveyance of Determinable Fee or Fee Subject to Condition Subsequent, 53 A.L.R. 2d 224.

Annotation, Validity of Statute Cancelling, Destroying, Nullifying, or Limiting Enforcement of Possibilities of Reverter or Rights of Re-entry for Condition Broken, 87 A.L.R. 3d 1011.

Annotation, Waiver of, or Estoppel to Assert, Condition Subsequent or its Breach, 39 A.L.R. 2d 1116.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.02

Supp. to § 25.02 History of Rights of Entry.

[Go To Main]

Add:

County of Moore v. Humane Soc'y of Moore County, Inc., 578 S.E.2d 682 (N.C. App. 2003) (holding that upon the termination of the contract which contained the right of entry provision, the right of entry is no longer enforceable); Ditmore v. Michalik, 625 N.W.2d 462 (Mich. App. 2001) (holding a right of entry an interest remaining when the grantor creates an estate on condition subsequent).

Hash v. U.S., 454 F. Supp. 2d 1066 (D. Idaho 2006) (grants to railroad construed as granting fee simple determinable; fee simple determinable and fee simple subject to condition subsequent (with right of re-entry) compared).

Add:

Webb v. City of Dallas, Texas, 314 F.3d 787 (5th Cir. 2002) (describing heirs' right of reentry in order to redress their injuries).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.03

Supp. to § 25.03 Rights of Entry as Enforceable Forfeitures.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Swaby v. Northern Hills Regional R.R. Authority, 769 N.W.2d 798 (S.D. 2009) (deed with certain habendum clauses created fee simple estates subject to condition subsequent, and the conditions were breached by abandonment). Creech v. Ranmar Properties, 551 S.E.2d 224 (N.C. App. 2001) (N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 42-3 provides that in all leases with a fixed time for the payment of rent, there shall be implied a forfeiture of the term upon failure to pay the rent within 10 days after a demand is made by the lessor or his agent on said lessee for all past-due rent, and the lessor may forthwith enter and dispossess the tenant without having declared such forfeiture or reserved the right of reentry in the lease.).

Zenon v. R.E. Yeagher Management Corp., 748 A.2d 900 (Conn. App. 2000) (The provision for reentry is ... the distinctive characteristic of an estate upon condition; and when it is found that by any form of expression the grantor has reserved the right, upon the happening of any event, to reenter, and thereby revest in himself his former estate, it may be construed as such.).

Howell v. Sykes, 526 S.E.2d 183 (N.C. App. 2000) (Conditions subsequent are not favored and are strictly construed; there must be clear and unambiguous indication of intent of forfeiture of the estate granted upon a breach of the condition.).

Glass v. Najafi, 92 Cal. Rptr.2d 606 (Cal. App. 1st Dist. 2000) (discussing policy preferring judicial process rather than self help in enforcement of right of re-entry).

Folendorf v. City of Angels, 2007 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 10537 (Cal. App. 3d Dist. 2007) (conveyance of land from landowner to city, land to be used only for a firehouse, created a fee simple subject to condition subsequent, with right of entry for condition broken; the condition had not yet been violated).

Add:

Jasa v. LaMac Cleaners, Inc., No. C4- 02-1239, 2003 Minn. App. LEXIS 90, *3 (Minn. App. 2003) ("A landlord may bring an eviction action for nonpayment of rent irrespective of whether the lease contains a right of reentry clause. * * * In such an action, unless the landlord has also sought to evict the tenant by alleging a material violation of the lease * * *, the tenant may, at any time before possession has been delivered, redeem the tenancy and be restored to possession by paying to the landlord or bringing to court the amount of the rent that is in arrears * * *.").

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.04

Supp. to § 25.04 Divestiture of Title Only Upon Re-Entry.

[Go To Main]

Add:

In re Incorporated Village of Garden City, 734 N.Y.S.2d 225 (N.Y.A.D. 2001) (Deeds conveying property to church, which contained a restriction that the property was to be used for religious and educational purposes "without power, right, or authority to grant, convey, lease or mortgage the same in any way or manner whatsoever," but which did not contain any language providing for the automatic termination of church's interest in property in event property was no longer used for religious and educational purposes, did not contain a reversionary interest, but at most created a right of reentry.).

Yoder v. West Holmes School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 5219 (No. 01-CA-012, Nov. 20, 2001) (A reversionary interest, such as a possibility of reverter, is not an interest that attaches to the land. Rather, it is the residue of the estate that is left in the grantor. When the qualified fee terminates, the land conveyed reverts to a person, not to other land. For an owner of property to have a right of reentry, he must show that he has at some time acquired the reversionary interest. One does not require a reversionary interest solely by virtue of being an owner of property which abuts the property on which the reversionary interest is claimed.).

Add:

Preferred Real Est. Equities, Inc. v. Hous. Sys., Inc., 548 S.E.2d 646 (Ga. App. 2001) (grantor's attempt to reenter under forfeiture clause is subject to a very strict construction).

Add:

Goldcrest Transport, Ltd. v. Across America Leasing Corp., 748 N.Y.S.2d 411 (N.Y.A.D. 2002) (Because a sublease is dependent upon and limited by the terms and conditions of the paramount lease from which it is carved, a subtenancy may be terminated by the expiration of the term of the prime tenant, or a re-entry by the landlord for a condition broken.).

Ditmore v. Michalik, 625 N.W.2d 462 (Mich. App. 2001) (A "right of entry" is an interest remaining when the grantor creates an estate on condition subsequent.).

Add:

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Defeasible fee simple estate, gives rise to "right of entry" for a condition broken, and necessarily requires affirmative act of forfeiture because such condition operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated.).

Knights and Ladies of Samaria v. Board of Educ. of Charles County, 688 A.2d 933 (Md. App. 1997) (Failure of special limitation on grant of real property, such as possibility of reverter, results automatically in reversion of estate to original grantor in fee simple absolute without need for entry, while failure of condition subsequent merely gives rise to right of entry, and grantor does not obtain fee simple absolute until he or she enters and retakes land.).

Add:

Ditmore v. Michalik, 625 N.W.2d 462 (Mich. App. 2001) ("Terminable interest" is a possessory or ownership interest in real property which is subject to termination by a provision in a conveyance or other instrument which either creates a right of reversion to a grantor or his heirs, successors or assigns or creates a right of entry on the occurrence of a specified contingency.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.05

Supp. to § 25.05 Rights of Entry as Interests Subject to Legislation.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Camenisch v. City of Stanford, 2003 Ky. App. LEXIS 211 (No. 2002-CA-000962-MR, Aug. 29, 2003) (holding that without express condition of forfeiture, the interest is a covenant, not a condition subsequent); Ditmore v. Michalik, 625 N.W.2d 462 (Mich. App. 2001) ("A covenant is an assurance that something will be done, while a condition provides that the legal relationship of the grantor and the grantee will be affected when an event that may or may not happen takes place.")

Add:

Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. §§ 554.62, 554.65 (If the specified contingency does not occur within 30 years after the terminable interest is created, the right of termination by reason of the specified contingency shall be unenforceable.) (A right of termination may be preserved by the recording, within a period of not less than 25 nor more than 30 years after creation of the terminable interest or within 1 year after the effective date of this act, whichever is later, of a written notice that the owner of such right of termination desires to preserve the same, such notice to be recorded in the register of deeds office of the county where the real property subject to such right of termination is located. Such notice shall be verified by oath, shall describe the land involved and the nature of such right of termination, including the specified contingency, and shall state the name and address of the owner of such right of termination. The recording of such notice shall operate to preserve such right of termination from the operation of this act for a period of 30 years from the date of recording of such notice.)

See Black Mountain Energy Corporation v. Bell County Board of Education, 467 F. Supp. 2d 715 (E.D. Ky. 2006) (state statute limiting the duration of rights of entry upheld as constitutional). Resources Northwest, Inc. v. Rau, 22

P.3d 1238 (Or. App. 2001) (construing ORS 90.322(1) (c) as to whether the statute imposes a time limitation on a landlord's right of entry).

Severns v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100 (Cal. App. 2002) (A successor in interest to the original grantor has the right to exercise the power of termination to reclaim the land of a fee simple subject to condition subsequent. However, the Marketable Record Title Act (Civ. Code, § 880.020 et seq.) requires the successor in interest or the predecessor in interest to record in a timely way an intent to preserve the future interest, which was not done, resulting in an expiration of the power of termination.).

Add:

In re Incorporated Village of Garden City, 734 N.Y.S.2d 225 (N.Y.A.D. 2001) (At common law, a right of reentry was not assignable or devisable.).

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Defeasible fee simple estate, gives rise to "right of entry" for a condition broken, and necessarily requires affirmative act of forfeiture because such condition operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated; it is neither assignable, devisable or alienable, although it is descendible to heirs of grantor.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.06

Supp. to § 25.06 Who May Exercise Right of Entry.

[Go To Main]

§ 25.06(a) Grantor and Heirs. [Go To Main]

Add:

See also Preferred Real Est. Equities, Inc. v. Hous. Sys., Inc., 548 S.E.2d 646 (Ga. App. 2001) (since grantor-corporation's successor was unascertainable, the right of entry could not be enforced).

§ 25.06(b)(1) Some Rights of Entry Not Assignable.

Add:

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Defeasible fee simple estate, gives rise to "right of entry" for a condition broken, and necessarily requires affirmative act of forfeiture because such condition operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated; it is neither assignable, devisable or alienable, although it is descendible to heirs of grantor.).

Add:

Est. of Vera Perrott Vietor, 2003 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 8708 (No. A099902, Sept. 12, 2003) (testatrix devised all of the residue of her estate for the benefit of a foundation on the condition that the property not be despoiled by picnic tables, barbecue pits, swimming pools, or like improvements).

Bridger v. Lake, 896 P.2d 406 (Mont. 1995) (A subsequent purchaser of a servient tenement is bound to take notice of rights that may be evident upon an inspection of the premises as well as those that may be learned by an inspection of the records.).

Add:

Rector v. Halliburton, 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 149 (No. M1999-02802-COA-R3-CV, Feb. 26, 2003) (Tenn. Ct. App. 2003) (Generally, easements determinable upon condition are of two types: (1) those that end upon the happening of a condition and (2) those that can be ended if the grantee fails to comply with conditions subsequent. The two types of easements do not work exactly the same. Easements that end upon the happening of some future condition are said to terminate ipso facto upon the happening of the specified event or contingency. In other words, the easement comes to an end without the necessity of any reclaiming action by the owner of the subservient estate.).

Add:

Skonieczny v. City of Eastlake, 2002 Ohio 5152 (Ohio App., Sept. 27, 2002) (right of entry was assignable).

Add:

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Defeasible fee simple estate, gives rise to "right of entry" for a condition broken, and necessarily requires affirmative act of forfeiture because such condition operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated; it is neither assignable, devisable or alienable, although it is descendible to heirs of grantor.).

Add:

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Defeasible fee simple estate, gives rise to "right of entry" for a condition broken, and necessarily requires affirmative act of forfeiture because such condition operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated; it is neither assignable, devisable or alienable, although it is descendible to heirs of grantor.).

Add:

Leelanau Trails Ass'n v. Flohe, 2000 Mich. App. LEXIS 2692 (No. 210544, Feb. 8, 2000) (A grantors' attempted conveyance of a possibility of reverter or right of entry nullifies the possibility of reversion or entry. The right to the reversion or entry cannot be conveyed before the grantee has breached the condition and any attempt to transfer the interest inter vivos nullifies the condition, even for the grantor. At common law only the grantor's transfer to his heirs at death could pass on a right of reversion.).

§ 25.06(c) Descendibility of Rights of Entry. [Go To Main]

§ 25.06(c)(1) Some Rights of Entry Are Descendible.

Add:

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Defeasible fee simple estate, gives rise to "right of entry" for a condition broken, and necessarily requires affirmative act of forfeiture because such condition operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated; it is neither assignable, devisable or alienable, although it is descendible to heirs of grantor.).

§ 25.06(c)(2) Some Rights of Entry Are Not Descendible.

Add:

Top of the Town, LLC v. Somers Sportsmen's Assoc., 797 A.2d 18 (Conn. 2002) (General Statutes §§ 52-575(a) provides in relevant part: "No person shall make entry into any lands or tenements but within fifteen years next after his right or title to the same first descends or accrues or within fifteen years next after such person or persons have been ousted from possession of such land or tenements; and every person, not entering as aforesaid, and his heirs, shall be utterly disabled to make such entry afterwards; and no such entry shall be sufficient, unless within such fifteen-year period, any person or persons claiming ownership of such lands and tenements and the right of entry and possession thereof against any person or persons who are in actual possession of such lands or tenements, gives notice in writing to the person or persons in possession of the land or tenements of the intention of the person giving the notice to dispute the right of possession of the person or persons to whom such notice is given and to prevent the other party or parties from acquiring such right, and the notice being served and recorded as provided in sections 47-39 and 47-40 shall be deemed an interruption of the use and possession and shall prevent the acquiring of a right thereto by the continuance of the use and possession for any length of time thereafter, provided an action is commenced thereupon within one year next after the recording of such notice. The limitation herein prescribed shall not begin to run against the right of entry of any owner of a remainder or reversionary interest in real estate, which is in the adverse possession of another, until the expiration of the particular estate preceding such remainder or reversionary estate.").

§ 25.06(d)(2) Enforcement by Trustees or Beneficiaries.

Add:

Reinarts v. County of Brown, 2003 Minn. App. LEXIS 281 (No. CO-02-1156, Mar. 11, 2003) (A trust instrument may convey the right of entry to trustees.).

§ 25.06(d)(4) No Right of Enforcement in Stranger to Title.

Add:

New Covenant Worship Center v. Wright, 601 S.E.2d 245 (N.C. App. 2004) (Because neither the grantor nor his heirs had at any time either re-entered the property or brought an action to terminate the continuing estate, the defendants, a third party, could not perform this task on the heirs' behalf.).

Add:

Pratt Inv. Co. v. Kennedy, 636 N.W.2d 844 (Minn. App. 2001) (Boundary line may be established by practical location in one of three ways: (1) the location relied upon must have been acquiesced in for a sufficient length of time to bar a right of entry under the statute of limitations, (2) the line must have been expressly agreed upon between the parties claiming the land on both sides thereof and afterward acquiesced in, or (3) the parties whose rights are to be barred must have silently looked on, with knowledge of the true line, while the other party encroached upon it or subjected himself to expense in regard to the land which he would not have had the line been in dispute.).

Add:

Lone Star Steakhouse & Saloon of Ohio, Inc. v. Quaranta, 2003 Ohio 3287, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2957 (2002) (Proof existed that parties intended covenant restricting land usage to run with the land, where deeds indicated that restrictions were for benefit of purchasers, his heirs, and his assigns, original contract contained language that restrictions were intended to run with the land, and vendor and purchasers sought to release covenant, which would not have been necessary if covenant was personal in nature.).

§ 25.06(d)(5) Release of Right to Enforcement.

Add:

Arvada Urban Renewal Auth. v. Columbine Prof'l Plaza Ass'n, Inc., 85 P.3d 1066 (Colo. 2004) . (The right of re-entry for condition broken is terminated as to the property because the condition recited in the deeds has been fulfilled as to the property, or the grantor renounces right of re-entry and assigns all right to their successors in interest.).

Add:

Leelanau Trails Ass'n v. Flohe, 2000 Mich. App. LEXIS 2692 (No. 210544, Feb. 8, 2000) (A grantors' attempted conveyance of a possibility of reverter or right of entry nullifies the possibility of reversion or entry. The right to the reversion or entry cannot be conveyed before the grantee has breached the condition and any attempt to transfer the interest inter vivos nullifies the condition, even for the grantor. At common law only the grantor's transfer to his heirs at death could pass on a right of reversion.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.07

Supp. to § 25.07 How Rights of Enforcement Are Exercised.

[Go To Main]

§ 25.07(a) By Entry or Claim. [Go To Main]

§ 25.07(a)(1) What Constitutes Entry.

Add:

New Covenant Worship Center v. Wright, 601 S.E.2d 245 (N.C. App. 2004) (A conveyance of the later 1985 deed did not constitute a "re-entry" for purposes of terminating a fee simple subject to condition subsequent created by the 1967 deed.).

Add:

J & M Land Co. v. First Union Nat. Bank, 766 A.2d 1110 (N.J. 2001) (Under that right of entry, "the lawful owner might, at all times, restore himself by entering upon the wrongdoer, in a peaceable manner, and turning him out, [but if he did not succeed, he] must have recourse to his [ejectment] action at law.").

§ 25.07(a)(2) When Notice and Demand Are Required.

Add:

See also Pratt Inv. Co. v. Kennedy, 636 N.W.2d 844 (Minn. App. 2001) (to acquire land by practical location of boundaries by acquiescence, a person must show by evidence that is clear, positive, and unequivocal that the alleged property line was "acquiesced in for a sufficient length of time to bar a right of entry under the statute of limitations.")

§ 25.07(d) Entry Before Breach. [Go To Main]

Add:

Brown v. Christian, 576 S.E.2d 894 (Ga. 2003) (A plaintiff seeking ejectment must recover on the strength of his own title; he may not rely on the weakness of the defendant's title. A plaintiff in an ejectment action, in order to recover, must establish that at the time of filing his action, he possesses legal title or its equivalent, as well as the right of entry.).

§ 25.07(e) Miscellaneous Rules Governing Entry. [Go To Main]

Add:

Utah Gospel Mission v. Salt Lake City Corp., 316 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (D. Utah 2004) (A right of entry reserved by the city applies only to the city's utility easements, view corridor and fencing limitations, and does not give the public the right to pass across the property.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 25 RIGHTS OF ENTRY

3-25 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 25.08

Supp. to § 25.08 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Books

Bergin, Thomas F. and Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 59-62 (2d ed. 1984).

Articles.

Add:

French, Susan F. "Highlights of the New Restatement (Third) of Property: Servitudes." Real Prop. Prob. & Tr. J. Vol. 35 (Summer 2000) 225.

Whelan, Thomas M. "Enforcement of Commercial Leases: Evictions and Dealing With a Tenant's Personal Property." Tex. Wesleyan L. Rev. Vol. 3 (1997) 283.

Add to Annotations:

Annotation, Pre-emptive Rights to Realty as Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on Alienation, 40 A.L.R.2d 920.

1 of 191 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 26.syn

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.syn Synopsis to Chapter 26: EXECUTORY INTERESTS

§ 26.01 Introduction to the Chapter

§ 26.02 General Definitions of Executory Interests

§ 26.03 History of Executory Interests

§ 26.04 Executory Interests in Derogation of the Common Law

§ 26.05 Executory Interests Freed of Some Common-Law Limitations

§ 26.06 Executory Interests and Executory Devises Compared

§ 26.07 Executory Interests and Remainders Compared

§ 26.08 Executory Interests Permit Freeholds to Commence in the Future

§ 26.09 A Fee Limited on a Fee By Way of Executory Devise

§ 26.10 Indestructibility of Executory Interests

§ 26.11 Alienability, Descendibility, and Transmissibility of Executory Interests

§ 26.12 Executory Interests After Sale

§ 26.13 Executory Interests and Waste

§ 26.14 Executory Interests and the Rule Against Perpetuities

§ 26.14(a) Failure of Issue

§ 26.14(b) Severance of Void Limitations

§ 26.15 Bibliography

Professor David A. Thomas n*
J. Reuben Clark Law School
Brigham Young University

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *.
This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.01

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.01 Introduction to the Chapter

This chapter reviews the American law of executory interests, which are often thought to be a part of the ancient common law, but are in reality interests that departed from some common-law principles. Executory interests are distinguished from other related property interests, and certain incidents of executory interests are discussed. The chapter covers in considerable detail the issues regarding the rule against perpetuities that impact on executory interests.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.02

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.02 General Definitions of Executory Interests

[Go To Supp]

The term "executory interest," or "conditional limitation," is applied to any future interest not retained by the creator of the instrument and other than a remainder. An executory interest is any future interest created by an executory limitation and includes "all future interests, other than remainders." n1 Thus, where preceding an estate in fee, a limitation over on a prescribed condition which defeats the prior estate is an executory interest and not a remainder. n2

It has been said that a limitation over after a determinable fee is not a future interest, but an actually existent estate deprived of the right of immediate possession. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Restatement of The Law of Property, § 158.

> An executory devise is a limitation by will of a future estate or interest in land which cannot, consistently with the rules of law, take effect as a remainder, for it is well settled (and, indeed, has been remarked as a rule without an exception) that where a devise is capable according to the state of the objects at the death of the testator, of taking effect as a remainder, it shall not be construed to be an executory devise... . A remainder may be described to be an estate which is so limited as to be immediately expectant on the natural determination of a particular estate of freehold created by the same will, ... or [if an estate] being so preceded, is limited to take effect before or after, and not at, the expiration of such prior estate of freehold, it is an executory devise.

2 Thomas Jarman, A Treatise on Wills, 483 (8th ed. 1951).

(n2)Footnote 2. St. John v. Dann, 34 A. 110 (Conn. 1895); Dean v. Crews, 81 So. 479 (Fla. 1919); Pitzer v. Morrison, 111 N.E. 1017 (Ill. 1916); Barrett v. Percival, 246 S.W. 143 (Ky. 1922); In re Gohn's Estate, 188 A. 144 (Pa.

1936).

If a gift be to A and his heirs until C returns from Rome, then to B in fee, the limitation over is not good as a remainder, because the precedent estate, being an estate in fee, is abridged and brought to an abrupt termination by the gift over on a precedent contingency. Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 ((1855); Hatfield v. Sneden, 54 N.Y. 280 (1873). Estate in fee subject to a gift over in favor of a third party is an executory interest. Chaney v. Gray, 898 S.W.2d 577 (Mo. App. 1995).

(n3)Footnote 3. Mountain City Missionary Baptist Church, 249 S.W.2d 875 (Tenn. 1952).

Holding valid a limitation over after a fee. Slowey v. Jenkins, 408 S.W.2d 452 (Ky. 1966).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.03

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.03 History of Executory Interests

[Go To Supp]

Somewhere around the middle of the thirteenth century there began to develop in English law the peculiar property concept known as the use. It is possible that it originated from the fertile minds of the ecclesiastical lawyers to avoid the consequences of the Statute De Religiosis n4 and other "mortmain" statutes n5 which prevented gifts of land to church organizations without royal consent. The scheme of the "use" placed n6 the legal title in one but the beneficial interest in the property in another. The law courts could not recognize anything but the legal title but the growing power of the royal authority embodied in the chancellor of the Exchequer and the developing courts of equity could act in pursuance against the holder of the legal title to force him to do justice to the holder of the beneficial interest for whom the property rights had been established.

Uses could arise in one of four ways. (1) A and A's heirs would enfeoff B and B's heirs for the use of C and C's heirs. This was a feoffment to uses. B, the feoffee held the legal title, C, the cestui que use, the equitable title. (2) A would agree to sell the property to B, B would pay the present consideration therefore, but A would not enfeoff B. A having thus bargained and sold to B but still retaining the legal title, B being entitled in justice to be enfeoffed of the legal title became a cestui que use. A had thus "bargained and sold" to the use of B. The equity courts would treat B as the equitable owner and the whole transaction would be a "bargain and sale" to uses. (3) A would enfeoff B and B's heirs without any consideration being paid or being payable by B. Equity treated consideration as the basis of the transmission of the equitable title. Therefore, since no consideration had passed from B to A the use "leaped back" into A and A had a "resulting use." (4) A out of the "love and affection" he felt for B, a close relation, would "covenant to stand seized" for the use of B. The blood relationship and love and affection was sufficient to raise a use in B.

The "use" became of vital importance in the English property law in the two hundred years following its invention, principally because it avoided much of the complications that arose out of the complexities of concepts of seisin. "Livery" or transfer of seisin required the presence of both feoffor and feoffee at the site or near thereto. A "use" could be transferred without any formalities of any kind not even writing being required.

The "cestui que use" avoided many of the onerous feudal dues and reliefs such as wardship. Attainder for treason could also be avoided by a secret use. Married women could hold property by way of use without their husbands being entitled to the rents, issues and profits. The doctrine of destructibility of contingent remainders could be avoided if the contingent remainderman held by way of use. And it became possible to create future interests by way of use that could not exist at common law.

The common-law requirements of seisin that prohibited a limitation over to a stranger after a limitation in fee and which prohibited a fee to arise in futuro n7 did not prevent the creation of a use to a third party after a use in fee or a use to arise some time in the future. A use could be created to shift over to a third person after the termination of a use, or a use which might itself arise to abridge a preceding fee, no livery of seisin being necessary to place a use in possession in equity.

Thus arose the shifting use and the springing use. So efficient was the use as a tool of the property lawyer that by the early part of the 16th century virtually all of the land of England was held to uses. And thus, so successfully had the tenants become in avoiding their feudal duties that Parliament passed in 1536 the "Statute of Uses" n8 in an attempt to restore the lord's rights.

The Statute of Uses, though a comparatively late development in the property law has been generally recognized as being part of the common law today. n9 The Statute of Uses had the effect of putting the legal title in the cestui que use so that, in a feoffment to uses where A enfeoffed B and B's heirs for the use of C and C's heirs after the statute the legal title passed through B to C, who thus had both the legal title and the use. n10 But the purpose and the effect of the statute was not to destroy the scheme of the use but merely to make the cestui que use liable to the lord and to the king for the feudal services and for treason. Many of the side effects of the use remained after the Statute of Uses.

Among the residuals of the use even after the statute were springing and shifting uses. By creating a use which the statute converted into a legal estate, it was possible to have as legal interests in land the springing and shifting use in situations where the common-law contingent remainder could not arise. So an interest in land could be limited over after a fee or to defeat a fee by way of a springing or shifting use. n11 As thus created by the statute, a "shifting use" is an interest limited to take effect in derogation of some other estate, and is limited by the deed creating it or is authorized to be created by a designated person. Thus in a deed to A and A's heirs, to the use of C and C's heirs until B shall marry F, B's estate is not good by way of remainder, for it mounts a fee on a fee, but it is an executory use, and because the interest shifts, on B's marriage, from C to B. Such uses were generally in England found in marriage settlements, where the first use was always to the owner in fee until the marriage and then to other uses. n12 Where the fee in the first taker created by a deed is made determinable, as upon the happening of a valid condition subsequent, followed by a limitation over of the fee or use to another upon the happening of the prescribed event, the fee or use shifts from the first to the second taker, whereby the deed is a conveyance under the Statute of Uses and is a clear case of shifting use. n13 Thus, where a fee is conveyed to the grantee with a subsequent provision in the deed, that, on the happening of a contingent event, the estate may be divested from such grantee and vested in a third person, whether or not such person be ascertained or in existence at the time of the execution of the deed, such a limitation is regarded as taking effect as a shifting use. n14

In the modern bargain and sale deed operating under the statute of uses, a conditional limitation may be created after a fee. n15 Under deeds operating by virtue of the statute of uses executory limitations can arise without the necessity of making a formal conveyance to uses. In some states, however, the common-law method of raising a use still has legal aftermath. n16

An executory gift cuts short a prior interest before its normal termination and usually shifts such interest to a third person. n17

A use is termed "springing" when it limits a freehold estate to commence in futuro. The estate thus limited springs up and takes effect on a future day, such as where a conveyance is made to A and A's heirs to the use of B and B's heirs after the marriage of B with F. Now the limitation to B is not good as a remainder, but is an executory use, springing up upon the marriage of B with F. There is no estate going before it, but it arises solely from the seisin of the grantor. In this respect it is distinguished from a shifting use, which is always in derogation of a preceding estate. n18 Shifting and springing uses are not executed until the ascertainment of the beneficiaries. n19 The grantor has a use in fee until the springing use takes effect. So that, in reality the springing use operates on the use in the grantor in the same manner that a shifting use does upon the preceding estate. n20 Originally a use was a purely equitable interest and might be raised after a limitation in fee, or it might be created in futuro without any preceding limitation in fee; or the order of priority might be changed by shifting uses or by powers; or a power of revocation might be reserved to the grantor or a stranger to recall and change the uses. n21 After the Statute of Wills, n22 limitations could arise by way of devise which corresponded to springing and shifting uses and which are generally termed executory devises. And springing and shifting uses and executory devises all are called conditional limitations.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: executory w/2 interest! or gift! w/15 spring! or shift!
or estate! w/5 in futuro

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 4. 13 Edw., ch. 33.

(n2)Footnote 5. Magna Carta, cap. 43, ed. 1217.

(n3)Footnote 6. For the story of the "use" as an aid to charitable trusts today, see Fesch, Cy Pres Doctrine In the United States (1950), 4 and 3 Austin W. Scott, The Law of Trusts, 348.2 (2d ed. 1966).

(n4)Footnote 7. Limitations over after conditional fees, considered by Bracton to be capable of becoming life estates, were recognized by 2 Bracton, ch. 16, f. 17.

(n5)Footnote 8. Statute of Uses, 27 Hen. 8, ch. 10.

> (1) Whereby the common laws of this realm, lands, tenements and hereditaments be not devisable by testament, (2) nor ought to be transferred from one to another, but by solemn livery and seisin, matter of record, writing sufficient made bona fide, without covin or fraud; (3) yet nevertheless divers and sundry imaginations, subtle inventions and practices have been used, whereby the hereditaments of this realm have been conveyed from one to another by fraudulent feoffments, fines, recoveries and other assurances craftily made to secret uses, intents and trusts; (4) and also by wills and testaments, sometime made by nude parolx and words, sometime by signs and tokens, and sometime by writing, and for the most part made by such persons as be visited with sickness, in their extreme agonies and pains, or at such time as they have scantly had any good memory or remembrance; (5) at which times they being provoked by greedy and covetous persons lying in wait about them, do many times dispose indiscreetly and unadvisedly their lands and inheritances; (6) by reason whereof, and by occasion of which fraudulent feoffments, fines, recoveries and other like assurances to uses, confidences and trusts, divers and many heirs have been unjustly at sundry times disherited, the lords have lost their wards, marriages, reliefs, harriots, escheats, aids pur fair fits chivalier, & pur file marier, (7) and scantly any person can be certainly assured of any lands by them purchased, nor know surely against whom they shall use their actions or executions for their rights, titles, and duties; (8) also men married have lost their tenancies by the curtesy, (9) women their dowers, (10) manifest perjuries by trial of such secret wills and uses have been committed; (11) the King's highness hath lost the profits and advantages of the lands of persons attainted, (12) and of the lands craftily put in feoffments to the uses of aliens born, (13) and also the profits of waste for a year and a day of lands of felons attainted, (14) and the lords their escheats thereof; (15) and many other inconveniencies have happened, and daily do increase among the King's subjects, to their great trouble and inquietness, and to the utter subversion of the ancient common laws of this realm; (16) for the extirping and extinguishment of all such subtle practised feoffments, fines, recoveries, abuses and errors heretofore used and accustomed in this realm, to the subversion of the good and ancient laws of the same, and to the intent that the King's highness, or any other his subjects of this realm, shall not in any wise hereafter by any means or inventions be deceived, damaged or hurt, by reason of such trusts, uses or confidences: (17) it may please the King's most royal majesty, that it may be enacted by his Highness, by the assent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, in manner and form following; that is to say, that where any person or persons stand or be seised, or at any time hereafter shall happen to be seised, of and in any honours, castles, manor, lands, tenements, rents, services, reversions, remainders or other hereditaments, to the use, confidence or trust of any other person or persons, or of any body politick, by reason of any bargain, sale, feoffment, fine, recovery, covenant, contract, agreement, will or otherwise, by any manner means whatsoever it be; that in every such case, all and every such person and persons, and bodies politick, that have or hereafter shall have any such use, confidence or trust, in fee-simple, fee-tail, for term of life or for years, or otherwise, or any use, confidence or trust, in remainder or reverter, shall from henceforth stand and be seised, deemed and adjudged in lawful seisin, estate and possession of and in the same honours, castles, manors, lands, tenements, rents, services, reversions, remainders and hereditaments, with their appurtenances, to all intents, constructions and purposes in the law, of and in such like estates as they had or shall have in use, trust or confidence of or in the same; (19) and that the estate, title, right and possession that was in such person or persons that were, or hereafter shall be seised of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to the use, confidence or trust of any such person or persons, or of any body politick, be from henceforth clearly deemed and adjudged to be in him or them that have, or hereafter shall have, such use, confidence or trust, after such quality, manner, form and condition as they had before, in or to the use, confidence or trust that was in them.

See Percy Bordwell, The Conversion of the Use Into a Legal Interest, 21 La. L. Rev. 1 (1935).

(n6)Footnote 9. Marshall v. Fisk, 6 Mass. 24 (1809); French v. French, 3 N.H. 234 (1825).

Contra, Strout v. Burgess, 68 A.2d 241 (Me. 1949) (not applicable to personalty); Farmers & Merchants Ins. Co. v. Jensen, 78 N.W. 1054 (Neb. 1899); Hastings v. Columbus, 42 Ohio St. 585 (1885).

(n7)Footnote 10. Wyman v. Brown, 50 Me. 139 (1863).

(n8)Footnote 11. Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885).

(n9)Footnote 12. Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855); Battey v. Hopkins, 6 R.I. 443 (1860); Fogarty v. Stack, 8 S.W. 846 (Tenn. 1888). See Restatement, Property, § 25, cmt. e.

(n10)Footnote 13. Abbott v. Abbott, 59 N.E. 958 (Ill. 1901); Stoller v. Doyle, 100 N.E. 959 (Ill. 1913); Simonds v. Simonds, 85 N.E. 860 (Mass. 1908).

An executory devise is given effect as a shifting or springing use. McWilliams v. Havely, 283 S.W. 103 (Ky. 1926).

(n11)Footnote 14. Stoller v. Doyle, 100 N.E. 959 (Ill. 1913); Lockridge v. McCommon, 38 S.W. 33 (Tex. 1896); Ocheltree v. McClung, 7 W. Va. 232 (1874).

Limitation to A for life then to B and C but if either died without bodily issue, then to the survivor, created life estate, remainders vested subject to divesting and executory devises which were capable of release but not alienation. Towns v. Walters, 168 S.E.2d 144 (Ga. 1969).

(n12)Footnote 15. Stoller v. Doyle, 100 N.E. 959 (Ill. 1913). Where the fee in the first taker created by a deed is made determinable, as upon the happening of a valid condition subsequent, followed by a limitation over of the fee or use to another upon the happening of the prescribed event, the fee or use shifts from the first to the second taker, whereby the deed is a conveyance under the statute of uses, as all American deeds are, and is a clear case of shifting use. Abbott v. Abbott, 59 N.E. 958 (Ill. 1901).

(n13)Footnote 16. Woodard v. Clark, 72 S.E.2d 433 (N.C. 1952) (legal future interests in personalty can be created by will but not by deed).

So in South Carolina a limitation may be grafted upon a conditional fee by way of executory devise if not too remote but not upon a fee conditional estate passing by deed. Selman v. Robertson, 24 S.E. 187 (S.C. 1896); Williams v. Gause, 65 S.E. 241 (S.C. 1909); Antley v. Antley, 128 S.E. 31 (S.C. 1925).

(n14)Footnote 17. Beverlin v. First Nat'l Bank, 98 P.2d 200 (Kan. 1940). Reversion to heirs of grantors on breach of condition created an executory limitation to heirs. Standard Knitting Mills, Inc. v. Allen, 424 S.W.2d 796 (Tenn. 1967). See also Commerce Union Bank v. Warren County, 707 S.W.2d 854 (Tenn. 1986).

(n15)Footnote 18. Smith v. Brisson, 90 N.C. 284 (1883).

A gift to city in a will as a site for a hospital provided the city accepted the devise within a year of the testatrix's death, was a springing executory interest which became vested in possession and in fee simple when the city accepted in time. Southern Ill. Conf. of Methodist Church v. City of Edwardsville, 342 N.E.2d 315 (Ill. App. 1975).

(n16)Footnote 19. See Bibb v. Bibb, 86 So. 376 (Ala. 1920).

(n17)Footnote 20. Shapleigh v. Pilsbury, 1 Me. 271 (1821).

(n18)Footnote 21. Ricker v. Brown, 67 N.E. 353 (Mass. 1903). See Percy Bordwell, The Conversion of the Use Into a Legal Interest, 21 Ia. L. Rev. 1 (1935).

(n19)Footnote 22. 32 Hen. 8, ch. 1, amended 34 & 35 Hen. 8, ch. 4.

A contingent remainder cannot defeat a preceding estate. Littleton, Tenures, §§ 721-723, 347.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.04

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.04 Executory Interests in Derogation of the Common Law

[Go To Supp]

As executory interests allow modes of limitation contrary to the common law, they are in derogation of it, and for this reason no limitation in a deed or will shall ever be considered an executory use or an executory devise, if it can possibly be good at common law by way of remainder. n23 These executory estates, being in derogation of the common law, are construed strictly. The law favors the old feudal remainder and treats every limitation by way of use or by way of devise as a remainder, whenever as a remainder it would be well limited at common law. n24 Among the rules governing remainders is one which forbids an estate to be limited over to another after a fee already granted. In such case there can be no such thing as defeating the fee already granted and transferring it to another by way of remainder because a remainder implies something left, which cannot be the case after the whole has been disposed of. While this cannot be done by way of remainder, it may be done by an executory devise which, according to the definition above, allows a departure from the rules of law governing remainders. n25 If the limitation by will does not depart from those rules prescribed for contingent remainders, it is, in that case, a contingent remainder and not an executory devise. n26

The rule that no limitation can be construed as an executory devise if it might be construed as a remainder does not apply where the gift is a trust. n27 A fee may be defeated by an executory limitation. n28 A conditional limitation may be engrafted on and supported by a fee making the latter dependent upon a contingency, which upon its occurrence, divests the previous estate and by termination vests a fee in the second taker. n29 But the courts have been reluctant to permit a fee once given to be cut off by an executory devise unless the intent is clear. n30 Under one line of authority, if a fee is once given a limitation over is void as repugnant. n31 But under other authorities the executory limitation may cut down the preceding fee. n32 A devise to one but upon the happening of a certain contingency to go immediately to another creates a base or determinable fee subject to an executory devise. n33

Nor can a remainder be created to follow a determinable fee, but such determinable fee is occasionally followed by an executory limitation shifting the estate to a person other than the immediate devisee or grantee upon the happening of the event terminating the defeasible estate. n34

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (executory w/2 interest! or estate! or limit!) w/15 remainder w/2 vested or contingent or executory w/2 use or devise

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 23. Abbott v. Essex, 59 U.S. 202 (18 How. 1855); Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 73 U.S. 458 (6 Wall 1867); Wright v. Tuscaloosa, 182 So. 72 (Ala. 1938); Bruce v. Bissell, 22 N.E. 4 (Ind. 1889); Lewis v. Payne, 77 A. 321 (Md. 1910); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); Simonds v. Simonds, 85 N.E. 860 (Mass. 1908); Old Colony Trust Co. v. Brown, 191 N.E. 358 (Mass. 1934); Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N.H. 267 (1872); Watson v. Smith, 14 S.E. 640 (N.C. 1892); Love v. Lindstedt, 147 P. 935 (Or. 1915); Manderson v. Lukens, 23 Pa. 31 (1854); McCreary v. Coggeshall, 53 S.E. 978 (S.C. 1906); Pearson v. Easterling, 92 S.E. 619 (S.C. 1917).

See Note, Failure of Executory Interests and the Interstate Devaluation of Possibilities of Reverter and Rights of Entry, 37 Va. L. Rev. 117 (1951).

(n2)Footnote 24. Purefoy v. Rogers, 2 Wms. Saund. 380, 85 Eng. Rep. 1181 (1845).

(n3)Footnote 25. Mangum v. Piester, 16 S.C. 316 (1881).

(n4)Footnote 26. 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law 265 (14th ed. 1896).

> Much of the confusion upon the question whether the language of a will creates an executory devise or contingent remainder has arisen from the failure to keep clearly in mind the marked and well-defined difference in the characteristics of the two estates. If the words of the will out of which the contingency arises are relied upon for purposes of defeating an estate which has already become vested, then this can only be done by construing them as an executory devise. But if the question is which of two estates shall become vested, then such estates will be construed as remainders, alternative or substitutional in their nature; and such remainders are always contingent.

Rutledge v. Fishburne, 44 S.E. 564 (S.C. 1903), quoted in Pearson v. Easterling, 92 S.E. 619 (S.C. 1917).

(n5)Footnote 27. In re Koellhoffer's Estate, 25 A.2d 638 (N.J. 1942).

(n6)Footnote 28. Lantz v. Pence, 142 N.E.2d 456 (Ind. App. 1957).

(n7)Footnote 29. Bryan v. Spires, 3 Brewst 580 (Pa. 1869).

(n8)Footnote 30. Wallace v. R. E. Stone Co., 76 F.2d 269 (3d Cir. 1935); National Bank v. Ireland, 162 A. 54 (Del. 1933) (clearly and unequivocally manifest); Carroll v. Carroll, 58 S.W.2d 670 (Ky. 1933); Abbott v. Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 154 N.E. 861 (Mass. 1927); In re Baker's Estate, 263 N.Y.S. 322 (1933); In re Heck's Estate, 32 A. 413 (Pa. 1895) (must be unequivocally expressed); Cross v. Miller, 138 A. 822 (Pa. 1927).

(n9)Footnote 31. Todd v. Stewart, 202 N.W. 844 (Iowa 1925); Stahl v. Weston, 106 N.W. 206 (Iowa 1906); Moran v. Moran, 106 N.W. 206 (Mich. 1906); Gannon v. Albright, 81 S.W. 1162 (Mo. 1904); Jackson ex dem. Townsend v. Bull, 10 Johns. 148 (N.Y. 1813).

(n10)Footnote 32. Mitchell v. Morse, 1 A. 141 (Me. 1885); Whiting v. Whiting, 44 N.W. 1030 (Minn. 1890); Chesnut v. Chesnut, 151 A. 339 (Pa. 1830); In re Byrne's Estate, 181 A. 500 (Pa. 1935); Booker v. Booker, 24 Tenn. (5 Humph.) 505 (1844).

(n11)Footnote 33. Carr v. Hermann, 158 N.E.2d 770 (Ill. 1959) (this executory devise may be subject to a double contingency).

(n12)Footnote 34. Guess v. Morgan, 26 S.E.2d 424 (Ga. 1943).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.05

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.05 Executory Interests Freed of Some Common-Law Limitations

Since neither a use nor an executory devise arose by livery of seisin and thus did not depend on seisin for their existence, many of the infirmities of legal remainders did not attach to such executory limitations. No technical, indefinite or uncertain clause in one paragraph should be construed to defeat or lessen the plain devise made in an earlier clause of the will. n35 In cases where the remainderman dies before the termination of the life estate, the executory devisee takes the estate free from charges created by the remainderman. n36 At common law no remainder can be limited after a fee simple. n37 Another form of the rule is that there can be "no fee on a fee," or, "a fee cannot be mounted on a fee." n38 An executory devise, unlike a remainder, needs no particular estate to support it. n39

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 35. The very reason of the institution of an executory devise being for the purpose of carrying out the wish of a testator, it should not be transformed into an instrument serving the purpose to defeat such will. Imbrie v. Hartrampf, 198 P. 521 (Or. 1921). See Restatement of The Law of Property, § 46, cmt. j.

Ohio permits "disentailment sales" to clear future interests. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5303.21. R.T. Boehm, Taxing Disentailment Sales, 21 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 72 (1969).

(n2)Footnote 36. Weberpals v. Jenny, 133 N.E. 62 (Ill. 1921).

(n3)Footnote 37. Ramseur v. Belding, 175 S.W.2d 977 (Ark. 1943); Slater v. Akron Exch. State Bank, 49 N.E.2d 344 (Ind. 1943); Culver v. Hess, 14 N.W.2d 692 (Iowa 1944); Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855); Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885); Industrial Trust Co. v. Pendleton, 40 A.2d 849 (R.I. 1945).

(n4)Footnote 38. The rule was founded upon the postulate that a conveyance of a fee was a conveyance of the whole estate, and that nothing was left upon which the limitation over could operate. Upon the assumption that a fee given in the first instance carried the entire and absolute interest in the land to the grantee, the common-law rule that there could be no further limitation was logical and consistent, because where the whole is given there can be nothing beyond that left to give. But under the statute of uses, and indeed before they were legalized by that statute, a species of limitations known as shifting or springing uses had been recognized, which permitted ulterior estates to be created to arise upon the defeasance of prior estates in the same property, contrary to the strict rules of the common law. The courts after the passage of the Statute of Wills (32 Hen. 8), following the analogies furnished in conveyances to uses, and in support of the intention of the testator, gradually came to recognize the validity of limitations not permitted in conveyances at common law. Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885).

(n5)Footnote 39. Deets v. Riggins, 6 A.2d 239 (Md. 1939).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.06 Executory Interests and Executory Devises Compared

[Go To Supp]

Executory estates are of two classes: first, executory uses; and second, executory devises. An executory use is a limitation valid as a use but void at common law as a remainder. n40 It may be a springing use, such as is limited to take effect at a future time independently of and without being supported by any prior estate or a shifting use, as an interest limited so as to arise in derogation of a preceding estate. An executory devise is a limitation valid in a will, but void at common law as a remainder. Such estates or interests are not dependent upon any prior estate, but come into existence, when their time arrives, of their own inherent strength. n41 Such estates or interests may follow a fee and be contingent on an event which is to determine the fee. n42 Thus where a fee simple is devised which is to determine upon some future event and the entire estate is thereupon to go over to another, the gift has been given effect as an executory devise. n43 No estate vests at the death of the testator, but only on some future contingency. n44

An executory interest could not be created directly by deed at common law, but could be created only by executory devises in wills or by conveyances to uses by creating shifting and springing uses in deeds. n45 The original purpose of executory devises was to carry out the will of the testator and give effect to provisions which at common law could not operate as contingent remainders. n46 It was intended to remedy difficulties surrounding conveyances at common law which forbade a limitation over after a fee already granted, the creation of a future freehold or the granting of a fee on a fee, all of which can be done by an executory devise. n47

An executory devise does not vest at the death of the testator, but only on the happening of some future contingency. n48 It is such a disposition of realty by will that no estate vests at the death of the testator but only on the happening of a future contingency, or such a devise made to a person, whether in being or not, to take effect at a designated period after the death of the testator or at the death of a stranger. n49 If the testator's dominant intent was to give the whole estate in the first instance an executory devise over is void, n50 but if the intent was to reduce the fee once given the limitation over is good. n51

The distinction between an "executory devise" and a "vested remainder" is elementary. An "executory devise" is such a disposition of lands by will, that thereby no estate vests at the devisor's death, but only on some future contingency. n52 It needs no particular estate to support it. n53

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 40. A grant to the first child of I. S. (if he have none at the time) is void as a remainder but valid as an executory devise. William Sheppard, The Touchstone of Common Assurances, 235 (1785).

(n2)Footnote 41. Outland v. Bowen, 17 N.E. 281 (Ind. 1888); Miller v. Miller, 136 P. 953 (Kan. 1913). Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray) (1855). Robinson v. Harris, 53 S.E. 755 (S.C. 1906); Comford v. Cantrell, 151 S.W.2d 1076 (Tenn. 1941). See McWilliams v. Havely, 283 S.W. 103 (Ky. 1926); Smith v. Hance, 11 N.J. Eq. 244 (1854).

(n3)Footnote 42. Humphreys v. Welling, 111 S.W.2d 123 (Mo. 1937).

Where there is a gift in remainder with a limitation over on death, if the remainderman left no direct heirs, the remainderman had a fee with an executory devise over in the nature of a shifting use. In re Estate of Carter, 404 S.W.2d 693 (Mo. 1966).

(n4)Footnote 43. First Presbyterian Church v. Lynott, 78 S.W.2d 396 (Mo. 1934).

A devise to a son with limitation over on death before the wife created a fee with an executory interest is not a remainder. Hemphill v. Mississippi State Highway Comm., 145 So. 2d 455 (Miss. 1962).

(n5)Footnote 44. Williams v. Floyd, 112 A. 377 (Del. Ch. 1920); Calvert v. Calvert, 130 N.E. 347 (Ill. 1921); Davis v. McKown, 160 A.458 (Me. 1932); Hull v. Calvert, 226 S.W. 553 (Mo. 1920); Imbrie v. Hartrampf, 198 P. 521 (Or. 1921); Spann v. Carson, 116 S.E. 427 (S.C. 1923); Hudson v. Leathers, 139 S.E. 196 (S.C. 1927). Words "effective only upon" expiration of a deed create a springing executory interest. Hamman v. Bright & Co., 924 S.W.2d 168 (Tex. App. 1996), vacated, 938 S.W.2d 718 (Tex. 1997); Testator's will created a future interest in third parties triggered by devisee's remarriage. This created a determinable fee simple estate with an executory interest. Devisee's estate was terminated upon her remarriage and a gift over was given to third parties. Chaney v. Gray, 898 S.W.2d 577 (Mo. App. 1995).

(n6)Footnote 45. Outland v. Bowen, 17 N.E. 281 (Ind. 1888); McWilliams v. Havely, 283 S.W. 103 (Ky. 1926); Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885). See Glenn v. Holt, 229 S.W. 684 (Tex. Civ. App. 1921). Illinois Law recognizes that a certificate of purchase obtained from the state after a sale of X's land for non-payment of taxes represents an executory interest in real estate, not a lien over the land, and is therefore good as against the Trustee in Bankruptcy of X. Jackson v. Midwest Partnership, 176 B.R. 156 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

(n7)Footnote 46. First Nat'l Bank v. De Wolfe, 188 A. 283 (Me. 1932).

(n8)Footnote 47. Wyman v. Brown, 50 Me. 139 (1863) (fee mounted upon a fee by a shifting use); Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316, 771 (N.Y. 1885) (limitation after fee simple void at common law); Dukes v. Shuler, 194 S.E. 817 (S.C. 1937).

(n9)Footnote 48. Davis v. McKown, 160 A. 458 (Me. 1932).

For approaches to the traditional law of future interests, see Allison Dunham, Possibility of Reverter and Powers of Termination -- Fraternal or Identical T, 20 U. Chi. L. Rev. 215 (1853).

(n10)Footnote 49. Hunt v. Carroll, 157 S.W.2d 429 (Tex. Civ. App. 1941).

(n11)Footnote 50. Todd v. Stewart, 202 N.W. 844 (Iowa 1925); Stahl v. Weston, 106 N.W. 206 (Iowa 1906), 106 N.W. 206 (Mich. 1906); Gannon v. Albright, 81 S.W. 1162 (Mo. 1904); Jackson ex dem. Townsend v. Bull, 10 Johns 148 (N.Y. 1813).

(n12)Footnote 51. Mitchell v. Morse, 1 A. 141 (Me. 1885); Alworth v. Seymour, 44 N.W. 1030 (Minn. 1890); Chesnut v. Chesnut, 151 A. 339 (Pa. 1830); Booker v. Booker, 24 Tenn. (5 Humph.) 505 (1844).

(n13)Footnote 52. Miller v. Miller, 136 P. 953 (Kan. 1913); Robinson v. Harris, 53 S.E. 755 (S.C. 1906).

In New York executory limitations are no longer distinguished from remainders, but are grouped with them as future estates. Doctor v. Hughes, 122 N.E. 221 (N.Y. 1919).

Devise in trust with limitation over after death of testator's son and son's widow if any survived him to children of son, share and share alike. Though the gift to the children was an executory devise not being supported by a preceding estate in freehold it was held vested in the children and so not too remote. Lanier v. Lanier, 126 S.E.2d 776 (Ga. 1962).

(n14)Footnote 53. Inglis v. Sailors Snug Harbor, 28 U.S. 99 (3 Pet. 1830); Miller v. Miller, 136 P. 953 (Kan. 1913); First Nat'l Bank v. De Wolfe, 188 A. 283 (Me. 1936); Sabledowsky v. Arbuckle, 52 N.W. 920 (Minn. 1892) (freehold estate to commence in future may be created in Minnesota); Robinson v. Harris, 53 S.E. 755 (S.C. 1906); Smith v. Smith, 62 S.E.2d 347 (W. Va. 1950).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.07

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.07 Executory Interests and Remainders Compared

[Go To Supp]

A remainder may vest in interest before it vests in possession, but such capacity is denied to executory interests. n54 And under the great weight of authority a contingent remainder cannot be created to exist after a defeasible fee. n55 Nor can a contingent remainder follow a remainder vested subject to divesting. n56

A limitation over after a remainder vested subject to divesting is an executory limitation. n57 No estate vests at the death of the testator, but only on the happening of some future contingency. n58

An "estate in remainder," is one limited to take effect and be enjoyed after another is determined. No remainder can be limited after the grant of a fee simple, because the tenant in fee has the whole estate. n59 A "contingent remainder" is one limited to depend on an uncertain event or condition, n60 and the intention of the testator as shown in the will will control where there is controversy over the matter. n61

If the language of the will out of which the contingency arises is relied upon for the purpose of defeating an estate which has already become vested, then this can only be accomplished by construing it as an executory devise. If the question is which of the two estates shall become vested, then such estates will be construed as remainders, alternative or substitutional in their nature. n62

Another distinction is that while a contingent remainder may be barred or destroyed by several means, an executory limitation is bound to take effect upon the happening of the contingency, either by fine or recovery or by any alteration of the estate after which it is limited. n63 A remainder over cannot take effect as an executory devise where there is an unqualified power of disposal in the first taker. n64 There is an example of an executory devise in the case of a testamentary provision that should a named child of the testator die childless, the property was to go to another named daughter and her children. n65 There is an alternative contingent remainder and not an executory devise where the will devises land to one for life with remainder to the heirs of the devisee's body in fee and if the devisee leaves none then to an institution to be incorporated. n66 So, there is a remainder and not an executory devise in a devise of land to one for life and at the devisee's death to the issue of the devisee's body, if any, and if not, then the land to go to the testators' heirs at law. n67

The doctrine of Purefoy v. Rogers, n68 that if an interest can take effect either as a contingent remainder or as an executory devise it must be a contingent remainder, still remains the law generally. So a devise to A and then to the children of B would go only to the children of B living at A's death, not in those born thereafter if it were an executory devise. Where X grants to Y a parcel of land reserving a determinable fee in a portion thereof, Y takes a springing use in the part reserved. n69

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 54. Beverlin v. First Nat'l Bank, 98 P.2d 200 (Kan. 1940).

(n2)Footnote 55. Chace v. Gregg, 32 S.W. 520 (Tex. 1895).

(n3)Footnote 56. Liebhardt v. Avison, 229 P.2d 933 (Colo. 1951).

(n4)Footnote 57. Limitation over on death without bodily issue created a vested remainder subject to divesting on death without bodily issue. Towns v. Walters, 168 S.E.2d 144 (Ga. 1969).

(n5)Footnote 58. Williams v. Floyd, 112 A. 377 (Del. Ch. 1920); Calvert v. Calvert, 130 N.E. 347 (Ill. 1921); Hull v. Calvert, 226 S.W. 553 (Mo. 1920); Imbrie v. Hartrampf, 198 P. 521 (Or. 1921); Hudson v. Leathers, 139 S.E. 196 (S.C. 1927); Coleman v. Coleman, 500 S.E.2d 507 (Va. 1998) (when a will gave beneficiary a life estate followed by fee simple at the termination of life estate, the court held that interest was vested at the death of testator, not contingent on the life estate). In Canoy v. Canoy, 520 S.E.2d 128 (NC 1999), where a devise left property to a life tenant and then to the children, the court held that such a devise indicated an intent by the testatrix that a child would take no estate unless the child lived past the death of the life tenant. Thus, each child's remainder interest was contingent.

(n6)Footnote 59. Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855); Elsea v. Smith, 202 S.W. 1071 (Mo. 1918); Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885); Hudson v. Leathers, 139 S.E. 196 (S.C. 1927).

(n7)Footnote 60. Hignett v. Sherman, 224 P. 411 (Colo. 1924).

(n8)Footnote 61. Plummer v. Brown, 287 S.W. 316 (Mo. 1926); In re Thayer's Estate, 130 A. 683 (Vt. 1925). For restatement distinction, see Restatement of the Law of Property, §§ 25, cmt. g, 46, cmt. r (2), 156, cmt. a.

(n9)Footnote 62. Pearson v. Easterling, 92 S.E. 619 (S.C. 1917).

(n10)Footnote 63. Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N.H. 9 (1848).

(n11)Footnote 64. Methodist Church v. Fairbanks, 126 A. 823 (Me. 1924). See Hull v. Calvert, 226 S.W. 553 (Mo. 1920).

(n12)Footnote 65. Prince v. Barham, 127 S.E. 626 (Va. 1920).

(n13)Footnote 66. Fuller v. Black, 131 N.E. 641 (Ill. 1921). See Lindenberger v. Cornell, 229 S.W. 54 (Ky. 1921).

Estate after a life estate was held to be an alternative contingent remainder. Stevens v. Van Brocklin, 129 N.E. 68 (Ill. 1920). Where testator devised homestead to O for life and at her death "to my son R and unto the heirs of his body in fee simple forever; provided that if R should not be living and have no heirs of his body surviving him" at the death of O, or if after the death of O, R should die leaving no heirs of his body surviving him, then in either event the remainder to a trust to be established, the court found that on the death of O, R received the homestead in fee simple, but if R failed to survive O, his bodily heirs (if any) would take in fee simple; but if R failed to survive O and left no bodily heirs then the homestead would devise to the stipulated trust. As Testator had devised a life estate to O he could not devise another life estate to R using fee tail language. Pickens v. Black, 885 S.W.2d 872, 875 (Ark. 1994).

(n14)Footnote 67. Wilkins v. Rowan, 185 N.W. 437 (Neb. 1921).

A gift to the widow for life, remainder to the heirs of the son, but if the son died without issue then over to a brother, created a life estate in the wife with a contingent remainder to the son's heirs, which failed when the wife predeceased the son, with a reversion to the son followed by an executory devise to the brother. Ryan v. Monaghan, 42 S.W. 144 (Tenn. 1897).

(n15)Footnote 68. 2 Wms. Saund. 380, 85 Eng. Rep. 1181 (1845).

(n16)Footnote 69. See Moulton v. Trafton, 64 Me. 218 (1874); Farnsworth v. Perry, 22 A.373 (Me. 1891); Weed v. Woods, 53 A. 1024 (N.H. 1902); Walker v. Marcellus & O.L.R. Co., 123 N.E. 736 (N.Y. 1919).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.08

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.08 Executory Interests Permit Freeholds to Commence in the Future

[Go To Supp]

By an executory devise a freehold may be made to commence in futuro, and needs no particular estate to support it. The future estate is to arise upon some specified contingency, and the fee is left to descend to the heir-at-law until such contingency happens. This contingency must happen within a reasonable time. Every executory devise is upon some condition or contingency and takes effect only upon the happening of such contingency or the performance of such condition. n70 Executory devises to unborn persons to take effect when they shall come into being are held valid. n71 A devise to a corporation to be created in futuro by the legislature is good as an executory devise. n72 Estates in land to commence in futuro may also be created by a deed of bargain and sale or by a covenant to stand seised to the use of the grantee. n73 In some jurisdictions, however, the doctrine that a bargain and sale, as well as a common-law conveyance, is valid to create a future interest in lands of the grantor, has been denied. n74

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 70. Inglis v. Sailors Snug Harbor, 28 U.S. 99 (3 Pet. 1830); Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917); Trafton v. Hawes, 102 Mass. 533 (1869); Bell v. Scammon, 15 N.H. 381 (1844); Robinson v. Harris, 53 S.E. 755 (S.C. 1906). See Restatement of the Law of Property, § 165.

(n2)Footnote 71. Inglis v. Sailors Snug Harbor, 28 U.S. 99 (3 Pet. 1830); Rogers v. Ross, 4 Johns. Ch. 388 (N.Y. 1820); Burrill v. Boardman, 43 N.Y. 254 (1871); Robinson v. Harris, 53 S.E. 755 (S.C. 1906).

(n3)Footnote 72. Inglis v. Sailors Snug Harbor, 28 U.S. 99 (3 Pet. 1830); Ould v. Washington Hosp. for Foundlings, 95 U.S. 303 (1877); Burrill v. Boardman, 43 N.Y. 254 (1871).

(n4)Footnote 73. Varner v. Rice, 44 Ark. 236 (1884); West v. West, 29 N.E. 582 (Mass. 1892); McDaniel v. Johns, 45 Miss. 632 (1871); Bell v. Scammon, 15 N.H. 381 (1844); Jackson ex dem. Watson v. McKenny, 3 Wend. 233 (N.Y. 1829).

(n5)Footnote 74. Marden v. Chase, 32 Me. 329 (1850); Wallis v. Wallis, 4 Mass. 135 (1808); Trafton v. Hawes, 102 Mass. 533 (1869).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.09

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.09 A Fee Limited on a Fee By Way of Executory Devise

[Go To Supp]

A fee may be limited after a fee by way of executory devise, but, if one devises in fee simple, one cannot make a limitation over by way of executory devise without cutting down the first fee to make room for the second. n75 A fee simple may, by an executory devise, be limited after a fee simple vested or contingent. n76 So, it is now generally recognized that a fee may be limited after a fee by a conveyance operating under the statute of uses or by way of executory devise, n77 but any executory interest which, by possibility, may not take effect until after lives in being and twenty-one years and ten months, is ipso facto and ab initio void. n78

A conditional limitation may be created although the deed carries a statutory warranty. n79 In the case of executory devises, the question whether the primary gift is in fee, so as to exhaust the entire estate, is in each case to be decided on an examination of the will as a whole, aided by extrinsic evidence to ascertain the actual intention of the testator, which is controlling. n80

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 75. Hambright v. Carroll, 168 S.E. 817 (N.C. 1933).

(n2)Footnote 76. Brammer v. Wallace, 198 F.2d 742 (6th Cir. 1952); In re Gohn's Estate, 188 A. 144 (Pa. 1952).

(n3)Footnote 77. Howard v. Carusi, 109 U.S. 725 (1884); Holmes v. Williams, 1 Root 335 (Conn. 1791); Glover v. Condell, 45 N.E. 173 (Ill. 1896); Williams v. Green, 92 N.E. 960 (Ill. 1910); Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917); Sayward v. Sayward, 7 Greenl. 210 (Me. 1831); Combs v. Combs, 8 A. 757 (Md. 1887); Richardson v. Noyes, 2 Mass. 56 (1806); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 (1855); Sullivan v. Garesche, 129 S.W. 949 (Mo. 1910); Donehue v. Nilges, 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954) (limitation over after determinable fee void for remoteness); Anderson v. United Realty Co., 86 N.E. 644 (Ohio 1908); Rutledge v. Fishburne, 44 S.E. 564 (S.C. 1903).

Estates may commence in future. Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.041.

See Restatement of the Law of Property, § 46.

(n4)Footnote 78. Symphony Space, Inc. v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 669 N.E.2d 799 (N.Y. 1996) (If the parties to a transaction are corporations and no measuring lives are stated in the instruments to a transaction, the period is simply 21 years and any executory interest failing after 21 years is void).

(n5)Footnote 79. Beatty v. Miley, 233 P.2d 269 (Okla. 1951).

(n6)Footnote 80. In re Hayward's Estate, 110 P.2d 956 (Ariz. 1941).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.10

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.10 Indestructibility of Executory Interests

[Go To Supp]

The mere lapsing of intervening estates will never be allowed to defeat the limitation over, unless these estates be coupled with conditions upon which the subsequent limitations are in some way made to depend. n81 An executory limitation of a fee on a fee is not affected by the failure of the first estate to take effect by lapse or otherwise, but that which was to be an executory limitation is accelerated and becomes a limitation in praesenti and takes effect at the death of the testator, such as in a devise "To A and A's heirs, but if A dies under twenty-one and unmarried, then to B and B's heirs," with a residuary devise to C. If A dies under twenty-one and unmarried before the testator dies, the executory devise to B takes effect immediately on the death of the testator, and does not lapse in favor of the residuary devisee, C. n82

One major difference between the executory limitation and the contingent remainder is that the former is not destructible by merger or by termination of the preceding estate in freehold prior to vesting as a contingent remainder was at common law. n83 On the other hand a contingent remainder being destructible was not subject to the rule against remoteness of vesting as was an executory limitation. Today in some states a contingent remainder is indestructible also and therefore probably also subject to the rule against remoteness. An executory interest is not destroyed by merger of the particular and ultimate estate as is a contingent remainder. n84 A fee simple subject to an executory limitation is distinguishable from a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent in two primary areas. First, in a fee simple subject to an executory limitation, the grantor has given the right of reentry to a third person, while with a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, the grantor has retained the right of reentry. Second, in a fee simple subject to an executory limitation, upon the occurrence of the condition or limitation, the termination of the fee estate is automatic. However, with a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, the occurrence of the condition does not automatically terminate the fee interest, the grantor still must exercise that right. n85

Indestructibility being an essential element of an executory limitation, n86 upon the happening of the specified event it springs into being, terminating the preceding determinable fee. n87 The first taker has no power to defeat it by any act.

n88 When a valid executory limitation has been created the first taker has no power to destroy it by common recovery, n89 unless the limitation over is after an estate tail. n90 An executory limitation differs from a contingent remainder in that the latter may be barred or destroyed by several means, n91 whereas an executory limitation is bound to take effect when the contingency happens, and no fine, recovery, or alteration or sale of the estate after which it is limited will have the effect to prevent its taking effect. n92

A conditional limitation until it becomes entitled to possession is not considered as vested in interest. n93 It is, however, not a mere expectancy but is a future interest in land. n94 Generally a conditional limitation is subject to the same restrictions on transmissibility as the contingent remainder. n95

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 81. Pennington v. Pennington, 17 A. 329 (Md. 1889).

(n2)Footnote 82. Mathis v. Hammond, 6 Rich. Eq. 121 (S.C.); Avelyn v. Ward, 1 Ves. Sr. 420, 27 Eng. Rep. 1117 (1749); See Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917); Allen v. Parham, 5 Munf. 457 (Va. 1817).

To wife for life then to named children, but if either die then to deceased's children created executory devises in unborn children. Federal Land Bank v. Wood, 334 F. Supp. 1124 (D.S.C. 1970).

(n3)Footnote 83. Pells v. Brown, Cro. Jac. 590, 79 Eng. Rep. 504 (1791); Manning's Case, 8 Co. Rep. 946, 77 Eng. Rep. 618 (n.a); Lampet's Case, 77 Eng. Rep. 994 (Coke) (n.d.).

An executory devise can only be destroyed by a failure of the contingency upon which it is to take effect, and it could not, at the common law, be prevented from taking effect when the contingency happened, either by fine and recovery or in any of the modes by which contingent remainders could be destroyed. The executory devise being indestructible, the determinable quality of the fee of the first taker follows any transfer by him. Becker v. Becker, 206 Ill. 53 (1903); Williams v. Elliott, 246 Ill. 548 (1903). Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917).

(n4)Footnote 84. See Lantz v. Pence, 142 N.E.2d 456 (Ind. App. 1957).

(n5)Footnote 85. Gutierrez v. Rodriguez, 30 S.W.3d 558 (Tex. Ct. App. 2000).

(n6)Footnote 86. Park v. Powledge, 73 So. 483 (Ala. 1916); Bradford v. Mackenzie, 101 A. 774 (Md. 1917).

(n7)Footnote 87. Smith v. Shepard, 19 N.E.2d 368 (Ill. 1939).

(n8)Footnote 88. Smith v. Reynolds, 121 S.W.2d 572 (Tenn. 1938).

(n9)Footnote 89. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 23 Ark. 356 (1861); Williams v. Green, 92 N.E. 960 (Ill. 1910); Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N.H. 9 (1848); Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N.H. 267 (1872); Smith v. Bell, Mart & Yerg, 8 Tenn. 302 (1827).

(n10)Footnote 90. Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. 481 (1870).

(n11)Footnote 91. Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N.H. 9 (1848).

(n12)Footnote 92. Holmes v. Williams, 1 Root 335 (Conn. 1791); L'Etourneau v. Henquenet, 50 N.W. 1077 (Mich. 1891); Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N.H. 9 (1848); Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N.H. 267 (1872); Garland v. Watt, 26 N.C. 287 (1844); Smith v. Bell, Mart & Yerg, 8 Tenn. 302 (1827); Bradley v. Carnes, 27 S.W. 1007 (Tenn. 1894).

An executory devise can only be destroyed by a failure of the contingency upon which it is to take effect; and it could not, at the common law, be prevented from taking effect when the contingency happened, either by fine and recovery or in any of the modes by which contingent remainders could be destroyed. The executory devise being indestructible, the determinable quality of the fee of the first taker follows any transfer by him. Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917), citing Becker v. Becker, 69 N.E. 49 (Ill. 1903); Williams v. Green, 92 N.E. 960 (Ill. 1910).

Accord: Restatement of The Law of Property, § 162, cmt. c. Williams v. Kimes, 949 S.W.2d 899 (Mo. 1997) (Property foreclosed on during life tenancy was held to revert to remaindermen upon death of life tenant due to lack of notice to remaindermen. Contingent remainder was an ownership interest entitled to actual notice).

(n13)Footnote 93. Executory interests in one group of cases have been held to vest in interest. These cases have to do with gifts that are vested in interest with possession postponed, such as a bequest of $10,000 to A to be paid at 21. The gift is said to be vested with possession postponed. "... [I]t is our conclusion that in Texas equitable executory devises can vest prior to termination of the trust so an estate can vest in interest before it vests in possession ... ." Hunt v. Carroll 157 S.W.2d 429, 437 (Tex. App. 1941).

(n14)Footnote 94. Farley v. Gilmer, 12 Ala. 141 (1847); Kean v. Hoffecker, 2 Harr. 103 (Del. 1836); Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917); Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930).

Executory devises are estates, not mere possibilities. Jernigan v. Lee, 182 S.E.2d 351 (N.C. 1971).

A devise of a house with the provision that the sons of the testatrix should share in the proceeds in the event of the sale of the house conveyed to the sons an interest which was alienable before the sale was made. Parker v. Blackmon, 553 S.W.2d 623 (Tex. 1977).

(n15)Footnote 95. In Illinois an executory devise transmissible when the identity of the executory devisee who will take the estate upon the happening of the contingency is certain, but not if the persons to take the estate cannot be ascertained until the contingency happens. Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917), relying on 4 Kent, supra note 39, at 261.

Trust in favor of testator's son and, at son's death, trustee should convey corpus to son's children, if he had lawful issue, and if he had no lawful issue, to named beneficiaries, created a contingent executory devise, after a fee conditional, for named beneficiaries, and where son died without children, but after named beneficiaries, the successors in interest of the named beneficiaries became absolutely vested with property. Seawell v. Cheshire, 86 S.E.2d 256 (N.C. 1955).

Holder of limitation over on fee defeasible on remarriage could release to fee holder. Metz v. Betzner, 67 N.E.2d 651 (Ohio App. 1946).

The executory devise may be released though not alienated. Towns v. Walters, 168 S.E.2d 144 (Ga. 1969).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.11

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.11 Alienability, Descendibility, and Transmissibility of Executory Interests

[Go To Supp]

If the persons to whom the estate is to pass are not ascertainable until the contingency happens, the executory interest is not transmissible, because it cannot be known until the happening of the contingency in whom the interest will vest. If, however, the identity of the executory devise is certain and the object of the devise is fixed, so that upon the happening of the contingency the executory devisee will take the estate, the future interest is assignable, devisable and transmissible. n96 Under the provisions of some statutes an executory devise is held subject to grant or devise. n97 One exception to the rule of law that executory interests are transmissible and descend to heirs is where the interest is contingent on account of the person in whom it will vest on the happening of the contingency. In such case the executory interest is not transmissible, because if there is no person answering the given description, no interest has attached to anyone. n98 The taker of a conditional fee is generally without the power to convey so as to bar the taker of the fee on the happening of the contingency. n99

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 96. Barnitz v. Casey, 11 U.S. (7 Cranch) 456 (1813); Howell v. Deady, 48 F. Supp. 104 (D. Or. 1939); Kean v. Hoffecker, 2 Harr. 103 (Del. 1836); Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917); Fitzgerald v. Daly, 119 N.E. 911 (Ill. 1918); Wallhauser v. Rummel, 96 A.2d 289 (N.J. Super. 1953); Seawell v. Cheshire, 86 S.E.2d 256 (N.C. 1955); De Haas v. Bunn, 2 Pa. 335 (1846).

But see Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Schneider, 70 S.E.2d 578 (N.C. 1952) (holding that contingent estates are not transmissible).

(n2)Footnote 97. Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 S.E. 802 (Va. 1930).

See special note, Restatement of the Law of Property § 162, for list of states that have enacted statutes declaring executory interests transmissible.

Executory devise after a fee conditional is devisable and descendible. Seawell v. Cheshire, 86 S.E.2d 256 (N.C. 1955).

(n3)Footnote 98. Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917).

(n4)Footnote 99. Roane v. Robinson, 127 S.E. 626 (N.C. 1955); Mercer v. Downs, 131 S.E. 575 (N.C. 1926); Massengill v. Abell, 134 S.E. 641 (N.C. 1926). See Barrett v. Percival, 246 S.W. 143 (Ky. 1922).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.12

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.12 Executory Interests After Sale

[Go To Supp]

Under the weight of authority a court of equity has the power to order a sale of land where a future interest is involved, creating a trust for the benefit of all persons who hold an interest in the property. n100 The cases are in disagreement as to whether a reversionary interest exists after an executory limitation, or whether if the limitation fails the fee becomes absolute. n101

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 100. Elmore v. Galligher, 87 So. 349 (Ala. 1921); Walker v. Blaney, 286 S.W.2d 479 (Ark. 1956); Clarke v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 66 N.E.2d 378 (Ill. 1946); Coquillard v. Coquillard, 113 N.E. 474 (Ind. App. 1916). Testator's wife who had life estate for farm on executory limitation was entitled to sale of farm, despite objection of children/remaindermen, whose proper remedy was to seek equitable distribution of funds or establishment of trust with income payable to life tenant. McKinney v. McKinney, 888 S.W.2d 332 (Ky. App. 1994).

(n2)Footnote 101. Fee simple becomes absolute. Jackson v. Noble, 2 Keen 590, 48 Eng. Rep. 755 (1838); See Coke on Littleton, § 206a. Dusenberry v. Johnson, 45 A. 103 (N.J. 1899). Cottrill v. Ranson, 490 S.E.2d 778 (W. Va. 1997) (lands to be used for school purposes).

The nature of the devolution of an estate by the exercise of a power of appointment has been settled by adjudications. The property to be appointed does not belong to the donee of the power, but to the estate of the donor of the power. By the creation of the power, the donor enables the donee to act for the donor in the disposition of the property. The appointee designated by the donee of the power in the exercise of the authority conferred does not take as legatee or beneficiary of the person exercising the power but as recipient of a benefaction of the person creating the power. It is from the donor and not from the donee of the power that the property goes to the one who takes it. The right to exercise the power is not the property, and cannot be reached by the creditors, of the donee of the power. Hogarth-Swann v. Weed, 174 N.E. 314 (Mass. 1931). But there is no relation back arising so as to make the interest vest as of the date of the power, but rather it vests as of the time of exercise. Marlborough v. Godolphin, 2 Vest. Sr. 61.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.13

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.13 Executory Interests and Waste

[Go To Supp]

The holder of a defeasible fee is not liable to the holder of a right of re-entry, a possibility of reverter or of a conditional limitation for waste. n102 This rule is subject, however, to a prohibition against equitable waste, i.e., a squandering, wanton and unconscionable, by the fee holder, in some states. n103 Even where land is conveyed as long as it shall be used for a specific purpose the taking of a profit such as oil and gas is not waste n104 unless it is specifically made defeasible upon another use. n105 An exception has been found, however, where the land was conveyed for a special public trust. n106

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 102. Taylor v. Continental S. Corp., 280 P.2d 514 (Cal. App. 1955); Curles v. Wade & Brimberry, 106 S.E. 1 (Ga. 1921); Gannon v. Peterson, 62 N.E. 210 (Ill. 1901); Fifer v. Allen, 81 N.E. 1105 (Ill. 1907); Hillis v. Dils, 100 N.E. 1047, reh'g denied, 102 N.E. 140 (Ind. App. 1913); Williams v. McKenzie, 262 S.W. 598 (Ky. 1924); Frensley v. White, 254 P.2d 982 (Okla. 1953); Davis v. Skipper, 83 S.W.2d 318 (Tex. 1935).

A future contingent interest cannot recover damages from the fee owner as long as it is contingent. Sargent Lake Ass'n v. Dan, 351 A.2d 54 (N.H. 1976).

(n2)Footnote 103. Fifer v. Allen, 81 N.E. 1105 (Ill. 1907).

(n3)Footnote 104. Carlsen v. Carter, 36 N.E.2d 740 (Ill. 1941); Priddy v. School Dist. No. 78, 219 P. 141 (Okla. 1923); Davis v. Skipper, 83 S.W.2d 318 (Tex. 1935). In relation to oil and gas transactions, the Wyoming Court interpreted a deed of lands to W excepting and reserving "an undivided one-half interest in all the oil, gas and mineral rights ... for a period of 20 years from the 10th April 1940, and as long thereafter as oil, gas, or other minerals continue to be produced therefrom ... ." Subsequently, W conveyed the same interest to X, reserving all of the minerals. By 1960 there had been no production from the conveyed lands. The question was whether W had reserved the one-half mineral estate in which he had an executory interest, which later vested when no production occurred. Under usual analysis W's executory interest in the one-half minerals would be void and not subject to the reservation. The court ... "chose to mangle the 'historical' features of common law estates which clearly prohibit a remainder interest from following a defeasible fee simple estate." The majority concluded that, unlike the typical executory interest which may last forever, W's interest is certain to become possessory when the production of minerals terminates and the contingent remainder is therefore a remainder subject to a mere postponement of the enjoyment of possessing the estate to a point which, while unknown, is certain to occur. Williams v. Watt, 668 P.2d 620 (Wyo. 1983).

(n4)Footnote 105. Central Land Co. v. Grand Rapids, 4 N.W.2d 485 (Mich. 1942).

(n5)Footnote 106. Marshall v. Standard Oil Co., 61 P.2d 520 (Cal. App. 1936); Charles E. Knox Oil Co. v. McKee, 223 P. 880 (Okla. 1924).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.14

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.14 Executory Interests and the Rule Against Perpetuities

[Go To Supp]

In order that a limitation over after a fee may operate to defeat the estate of the first taker the contingency must be such as will happen within the period prescribed for the vesting of future estates. n107 Limitations over upon the death of the first taker without issue are quite common and are construed as executory devises on definite failure of issue after an estate in fee simple. n108 Where the preceding executory or contingent limitations have failed to arise or take effect, the remainder over will nevertheless take effect as the first estate is considered only as a preceding limitation and not as a preceding condition to give effect to the subsequent limitation. n109 "If the precedent limitation, by what means soever, is out of the case, the subsequent limitation takes place." n110

§ 26.14(a) Failure of Issue

Where an estate is created in fee or for life, and on such estate another is conditioned to arise by way of executory devise on the occurrence of a given event, and that event does not occur so that the estate over cannot vest, then the first estate continues, and if a life estate, it is enlarged into a fee. n111 Thus where, by the will, an absolute gift of the property is made, in the first instance, followed by a limitation over, on the death of the devisee or legatee, the absolute gift is not taken away by the gift over, unless the gift over may itself take effect. n112

Under a gift to a devisee in fee with an executory devise over in case the devisee dies without issue, the executory devise is destroyed upon the birth of issue, and the devise to such issue becomes a devise in fee absolute. n113

Where the first taker has a fee by implication, and the devise over was upon the contingency that the first taker "should die without issue at his decease," it was held that these words did not import an indefinite failure of issue, but a failure of issue and death of the first taker, coupled with such limitation was good as an executory devise. n114 On the other hand, the words "without issue" have been construed to mean an indefinite failure of issue, and the remainder over has been held void as an executory devise, because too remote, as tending to a perpetuity. n115 In such a case the estate vests in the first taker. n116 A gift over on the failure of the descendants of the testator's parents has been held void because dependent upon a contingency which may not happen within the limit prescribed by the rule against perpetuities. n117 The holder of a defeasible fee can, together with the holders of the limitations over, convey good title in North Carolina. n118

In cases of limitations over on death without issue, where "issue" means limited failure of issue, the courts follow either the successive or the substitutional rule. To A, but if A dies without issue to B, gives A a defeasible fee simple on the effective date of the gift with B a limitation over to B on A's death without children. The substitutional rule gives A a fee simple absolute if A is alive on the effective date. If the gift to A is in remainder and the gift is substitutional the courts differ as to whether A must survive the immediate estate. n119

§ 26.14(b) Severance of Void Limitations

If the estate in the first taker is in itself valid, it is not avoided by the fact that the limitation over is void by reason of its being impossible, repugnant or in violation of the rule against perpetuities. n120 Thus, the invalidity of a gift over in default of issue surviving a life tenant does not affect the primary gift to that issue. n121 Where the estate of the first taker is for life and the remainder over fails for any reason, the estate for life takes effect as a life estate. n122 Likewise, if the grant or devise to the first taker is in fee and the limitation over fails for any cause, the first taker's estate takes effect as a fee simple absolute. n123

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 107. Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885).

(n2)Footnote 108. Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 25 U.S. 153 (12 Wheat. 1827); Waring v. Jackson ex dem. Eden, 26 U.S. 570 (1 Pet. 1828); Britton v. Thornton, 112 U.S. 526 (1884); Roach v. Martin, 1 Harr. 548 (Del. 1835); Kean v. Hoffecker, 2 Harr. 103 (Del. 1836); Matthews v. Hudson, 7 S.E. 286 (Ga. 1888); Hertz v. Abrahams, 36 S.E. 409 (Ga. 1900); Glover v. Condell, 45 N.E. 173 (Ill. 1896); Williams v. Green, 92 N.E. 960 (Ill. 1910); Blackstone v. Althouse, 116 N.E. 154 (Ill. 1917); Outland v. Bowen, 17 N.E. 281 (Ind. 1888); Bennett v. Bennett, 174 S.W.2d 525 (Ky. 1943); Sayward v. Sayward, 7 Greenl. 210 (Me. 1831); Combs v. Combs, 8 A. 757 (Md. 1887); Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. Bouse, 29 A.2d 906 (Md. 1943); Richardson v. Noyes, 2 Mass. 56 (1806); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); Sims v. Conger, 39 Miss. 231 (1860); Hays v. Cole, 73 So. 2d 258 (Miss. 1954) but see, Rainey v. Holland, No. CA98-1112, 1999 Ark. App. LEXIS 551 (Ark. Ct. App. 1999). (contingent remainder vesting at testator's death a substitutional gift); Gannon v. Albright, 81 S.W. 1162 (Mo. 1954); In re Barrett's Estate, 123 N.W. 299 (Neb. 1909); Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N.H. 9 (1848); King v. First Nat'l Bank of Morristown, 38 A.2d 445 (N.J. 1944); Den ex dem. Trumbull v. Gibbons, 22 N.J.L. 117 (1849); Fosdick v. Cornell, 1 Johns. 440 (N.Y. 1806); Jackson ex dem. Burhans v. Blanshan, 3 Johns. 292 (N.Y. 1808); Jackson ex dem. Staats v. Staats, 11 Johns. 337 (N.Y. 1814); Anderson v. Jackson ex dem. Eden, 16 Johns. 382 (N.Y. 1819); Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885); Garland v. Watt, 26 N.C. 287 (1844); De Haas v. Bunn, 2 Pa. 335 (1846); Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. 481 (1870); Lewis v. Claiborne, 13 Tenn. (5 Yer.) 369 (1821); Templeton v. Stong, 188 S.W.2d 560 (Tenn. 1945).

In limitation over in a trust, if first taker died without issue, adoption by first taker did not defeat limitation over. In re Notman's Estate, 290 N.Y.S.2d 231 (1968).

(n3)Footnote 109. Pennington v. Pennington, 17 A. 329 (Md. 1869); Burbank v. Whitney, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 146 (1839); Newell v. Nichols, 75 N.Y. 78 (1878).

(n4)Footnote 110. Avelyn v. Ward, 1 Ves. Sr. 420, 27 Eng. Rep. 1117 (1749).

(n5)Footnote 111. Comford v. Cantrell, 151 S.W.2d 1076 (Tenn. 1941).

(n6)Footnote 112. Id.

(n7)Footnote 113. Noth v. Noth, 127 N.E. 113 (Ill. 1920).

Death without issue means, as concerns remainderman, death in lifetime of life tenant not merely the life of testator. Trumbo v. Trumbo, 155 N.E.2d 62 (Ohio App. 1957).

Limitation over on first taker's death prior to payment refers to death before legacy is de jure payable rather than death before actual receipt of legacy. Sivia v. Snyder, 517 P.2d 812 (Okla. 1973).

Death without issue as meaning death in the testator's lifetime is only a rule of construction. In re Bonham's Estate, 143 A.2d 50 (Pa. 1958).

(n8)Footnote 114. Heard v. Horton, 1 Denio 165 (N.Y. 1845).

(n9)Footnote 115. Bell v. Scammon, 15 N.H. 381 (1844); Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co. v. Finlayson, 286 F.2d 251 (4th Cir. 1961).

Devise in trust for son for life and then to issue, but if no issue then to testatrix' brothers and sisters. Issue meant definite failure so limitation was not too remote. Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 128 S.E.2d 867 (N.C. 1963).

Trust to pay income to three daughters for life and then to their children, but if any died without issue to the survivors or issue of any dead. It was held when two died without issue the entire income vested in the survivor absolutely. In re Bonham's Estate, 143 A.2d 50 (Pa. 1958).

(n10)Footnote 116. Herron v. Stanton, 147 N.E. 305 (Ind. App. 1920).

(n11)Footnote 117. Talbot v. Riggs, 191 N.E. 360 (Mass. 1934). Oil and gas top leases executed by grantors, which were to become effective if and when existing oil and gas leases expired or were terminated, did not convey vested possibilities of reverter to grantee, but rather conveyed springing executory interests that were subject to, and void under, the rule against perpetuities in the Texas state constitution; under express language of top leases, grantors did not make present conveyances of their possibilities of reverter, but instead conveyed interest that would vest in grantee only upon termination of existing leases, which could continue for indeterminate amount of time. Hamman v. Bright & Co., 924 S.W.2d 168 (Tex. App. 1996). Grantor's reservation of "all the oil and gas" as to subject property in deed reserved defeasible term interest to grantor and created springing executory interest. Grantee retained reversionary interest which vested at time deed was executed. Therefore, interest is valid under the rule against perpetuities. Walker v. Foss, 930 S.W.2d 701 (Tex. App. 1996).

(n12)Footnote 118. Hales v. Renfrow, 49 S.E.2d 406 (N.C. 1948). Ky. Rev. Stat. § 389A.030 "allows a devisee to join all parties to the fee simple absolute and partition the property" without the consent of the other parties, but "[t]his right to partition may be stopped if a party objects and the court finds this procedure would defeat the purpose of the testator in creating such estates." McKinney v. McKinney 888 S.W.2d 332 (Ky. App. 1994).

(n13)Footnote 119. Substitutional. Washbon v. Cope, 39 N.E. 388 (N.Y. 1895). Intent of testator. Lawrence v. Calam, 140 N.E. 232 (N.Y. 1895).

To A for life and then to B and C and their descendants per stirpes but if B or C die without descendants then over. The New York court construed "and" as "or" and followed the substitutional instead of the successive rule when B and C survived the testator but died with issue before A. In re Larkin's Will, 172 N.E.2d 555 (N.Y. 1961).

(n14)Footnote 120. Herron v. Stanton, 147 N.E. 305 (Ind. App. 1920); Graham v. Whitridge, 57 A. 609, 58 A. 36 (Md. 1904); Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855); Scott v. Price, 2 Serg. & Rawle 59 (Pa.

1815).

(n15)Footnote 121. Denison v. Denison, 78 N.E. 162 (N.Y. 1906).

(n16)Footnote 122. Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855); Finch v. Wilkes, 41 N.Y.S. 227 (1896); Schlereth v. Schlereth, 66 N.E. 130 (N.Y. 1903).

(n17)Footnote 123. Doe ex dem. Cheesman v. Watson, 49 U.S. 263 (8 How. 1850); Outland v. Bowen, 17 N.E. 281 (Ind. 1888); Sullivan v. Garesche, 129 S.W. 949 (Mo. 1910); Cleveland v. Havens, 13 N.J. Eq. 101 (1860); Den ex dem. Trumbull v. Gibbons, 22 N.J.L. 117 (1849); Van Horne v. Campbell, 3 N.E. 316 (N.Y. 1885); Anderson v. United Realty Co., 86 N.E. 644 (Ohio 1908).

Remainder to A and B but if either die without bodily issue then to the other created cross executory interests in each. Towns v. Walters, 168 S.E.2d 144 (Ga. 1969).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 26.15

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution to preserving the American Common Law on executory interests. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 26.15 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Books

Halsbury, Earl of. The Laws of England. Vol. 24, §§ 220-237 (1912); Vol. 39, §§ 503-509 (4th ed. 1982).

Holdsworth, Sir William. A History of English Law. Vol. 7 (1936, 116-149).

Jarman, Thomas. A Treatise on Wills. Vol. 2 (8th ed. 1951).

Kent, James. Commentaries on American Law. Vol. 4 (14th ed. 1896).

Littleton, Thomas, Sir. Lyttleton, His Treatise on Tenures. (Tomlins ed. 1841, Garland Pub. 1978).

Scott, Austin W. The Law of Trusts. (2d ed. 1966).

Sheppard, William. The Touchstone of Common Assurances. (1785).

Articles

Boehm, R.T. "Taxing Disentailment Sales." Case W. Res. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1969) 72.

Bordwell, Percy. "The Conversion of the Use into a Legal Interest." Iowa. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1935) 1.

Bowen, Susan Rebecca. "Rawls v. Early: A Refusal to Imply Conditions of Survivorship Upon Ascertained Contingent Remaindermen." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 68 (1990) 1343.

Cunningham, Laura E. "The Hazards of Tinkering with the Common Law of Future Interests: The California Experience," 48 Hastings L.J. 667 (1997).

Dukeminier, Jesse. "The Uniform Probate Code Upends The Law Of Remainders," 94 Mich. L. Rev. 148 (1995)

Dunham, Allison. "Possibility of Reverter and Powers of Termination -- Fraternal or Identical Twins." U. Chi. L. Rev. Vol. 20 (1953) 215.

Hess, Amy Morris. "Freeing Property Owners from the Rap Trap: Tennessee Adopts the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities." Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 62 (1995) 267.

Hines, N. William. "Implied Conditions of Personal Survivorship in Iowa Future Interests Law." Iowa L. Rev. Vol. 75 (1990) 941.

Jones, Jack D. "Future Interests -- Tennessee Style," 54 Tenn. L. Rev. 413 (1987)

Jordan, Martha W. "The Present State of Sales of Future Interests," 88 J. Tax'n 336 (1998)

Kramer, Bruce M. "Property and Oil and Gas Don't Mix: The Mangling of Common Law Property Concepts." Washburn L.J. Vol. 33 (1994) 540.

Link, Ronald C., and Kimberly A. Licata. "Perpetuities Reform in North Carolina: The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, Nondonative Transfers, and Honorary Trusts." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 74 (1996) 1783.

Makdisi, John. "The Vesting of Executory Interests." Tul. L. Rev. Vol. 59 (1984) 366.

Phoebus, John K. "The Rule Against Perpetuities -- The Implication of a Reasonable Time for the Performance of a Contingency to the Vesting of Future Interests in Commercial Transactions -- Maryland's Hybrid Approach to the Rule Against Perpetuities in Commercial Contexts." 101 Dick. L. Rev. 619 (1997).

Reppy, William A., Jr. "Judicial Overkill in Applying the Rule in Shelley's Case." 73 Notre Dame L. Rev. 83 (1997).

Irene A. Vlissides, Note, "Estate of Clack v. Commissioner: An End to the Conflict over Contingent QTIP Elections?" 6 Geo. Mason L. Rev. 163 (1997)

White, Nicholas L. "Bringing Tennessee Into the Twentieth Century re Possibilities of Reverter, Powers of Termination and Executory Interests When Used as Land Control Devices." Memphis St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 15 (Summer 1985) 555.

Annotations

Annotation, Character of Remainder Limited Generally to the Life Tenant's Children, 57 A.L.R. 2d 103.

Annotation, Character of Remainder Limited to Surviving Children of Life Tenant, 57 A.L.R. 2d 197.

Annotation, Distribution as Between Life Tenant and Remainderman of Proceeds of Condemned Property, 91 A.L.R. 2d 963.

Annotation, Gift or Grant to one Upon Marriage, if Married, Payable at Marriage, or the Like, as Vested or Contingent, 30 A.L.R. 2d 127.

Annotation, Grant to One for Life, and Afterwards, Either Absolutely or Contingently, to the Grantor's Heirs or Next of Kin, as Leaving Reversion or Creating Remainder, 16 A.L.R. 2d 691.

Annotation, Nature of Remainders Created by Will Giving Life Estate to Spouse of Testator, with Remainder to be Divided Equally Between Testator's Heirs and Spouse's Heirs, 19 A.L.R. 2d 371.

Annotation, Provision of Will That Children, etc., of Remainderman Who Dies Before Expiration of Precedent Estate or Time Fixed for Distribution to Remaindermen, Shall Take the Share to Which he Would Have Been Entitled, as Affecting the Remainder as Vested or Contingent, 47 A.L.R. 2d 900.

Annotation, Relinquishment of Interest by Life Beneficiary in Possession as Accelerating Remainder of Which There is Substitutional Gift in Case Primary Remainderman Does Not Survive Life Beneficiary, 7 A.L.R. 4th 1084.

Annotation, Right of Devisee of Precedent Estate to Take Under Limitation Over to Heirs or Next of Kin of Testator, 30 A.L.R. 2d 393.

Annotation, Testamentary Devise or Bequest Conditioned Upon Beneficiary's Supporting or Rendering Services to Named Person as Providing for Condition Subsequent or Precedent, 25 A.L.R. 2d 762.

Annotation, Time to Which Condition of Remainderman's Death Refers, Under Gift or Grant to One for Life or Term of Years and Then to Remainderman, but if Remainderman Dies Without Issue, then Over to Another, 26 A.L.R. 3d 407.

Annotation, Where Will Names Two or More Remaindermen to Take Under Different Contingencies, Must the One Whose Contingency Occurs Survive the Other to Make his Interest Transmissible?, 90 A.L.R. 2d 312.

Annotation, Wills: Bequest or Devise Referring to Services to be Rendered by Donee to Testator During Latter's Lifetime as Absolute or Conditional Gift, 22 A.L.R. 3d 771.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.02

Supp. to § 26.02 General Definitions of Executory Interests.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W. 2d 443, 448 (Tex. App. 1999) (person to whom property automatically passes on the occurrence of an executory limitation possesses an executory interest).

See Michael C. Blumm. Issues in Environmental Law: Retracing the Discovery Doctrine: Aboriginal Title, Tribal Sovereignty, and Their Significance to Treaty-Making and Modern Natural Resources Policy in Indian Country, 28 Vt. L. Rev. 713, 738 (Spring, 2004) (arguing that grantees of Indian lands received an executory interest which would not become possessory until the federal government exercised its right of preemption on those lands).

Add:

Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) (an executory limitation is an event which, if it occurs, automatically divests one of devised property).

In re Smith, 2004 Mich. App. LEXIS 609 (Mich. Ct. App., 2004) (fee simple subject to executory interest would be granted to children of the holder of a life estate upon the termination of the life estate).

Add:

Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) (a determinable fee simple estate is a fee simple interest in every respect, except that it passes to another, who has an executory interest, if the contingency happens).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.03

Supp. to § 26.03 History of Executory Interests.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Scott v. Brunson, 569 S.E.2d 385, 387 (S.C. App. 2002) ; Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W. 2d 443, 448 (Tex. App. 1999) .

Add:

Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W. 2d 443, 451 (Tex. App. 1999) (where ownership of real property passes from siblings to daughters in the event of partition, the daughters clearly have a shifting executory interest).

See generally Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) ; Garza v. Rodriguez, 18 S.W.3d 694 (Tex. App. San Antonio 2000) .

Add:

See generally Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) ; Garza v. Rodriguez, 18 S.W.3d 694 (Tex. App. San Antonio 2000) .

Add:

See also Ditmore v. Michalik, 625 N.W.2d 462 (Mich. App. 2001) (condition that the erection of structures would cause the title to the property to revert to the grantor created an executory limitation).

19 of 191 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.04

Supp. to § 26.04 Executory Interests in Derogation of the Common Law.

[Go To Main]

Add:

See Dunkel v. Hilyard, 766 N.E.2d 603 (Ohio App. 2001) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.06

Supp. to § 26.06 Executory Interests and Executory Devises Compared.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) (the occurrence of the executory limitation automatically divests one of devised property); Nelson v. Provo City, 6 P.3d 567 (Utah App. 2000) (fee simple determinable expires automatically on the occurrence of a stated event).

Add:

Est. of Vera Perrott Vietor, 2003 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 8708 (No. A099902, Sept. 12, 2003) (testatrix devised all of the residue of her estate for the benefit of a foundation on the condition that the property not be despoiled by picnic tables, barbecue pits, swimming pools, or like improvements).

Garza v. Rodriguez, 18 S.W.3d 694 (Tex. App. San Antonio 2000) (example of a shifting executory interest in will).

Add:

But see Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) (holding that plaintiff held an executory interest in the decedent's estate, which contingency was the death of the plaintiff's grandfather with some of the decedent's property).

Add:

In re Commings, 297 B.R. 701, 704 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2003) (criticizes Jackson for concluding that a certificate of purchase is more than a lien).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.07

Supp. to § 26.07 Executory Interests and Remainders Compared.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Meduna v. Holder, 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 10568 (No. 03-02-00781-CV, Dec. 18, 2003) (estate may vest in interest before vesting in possession).

Add:

Jones v. Hill, 2004 Va. LEXIS 56 (No. 031514, Apr. 23, 2004) (when a devise is made and the property is not to be enjoyed in possession until some future period or event, it will, where no special intent to the contrary is manifested in the will, be held to be vested in interest immediately on the death of the testator).

Add:

Haley v. Regions Bank, 586 S.E.2d 633 (Ga. 2003) (children received an equal share of the estate subject to be divested by the death of a child without leaving lineal descendents).

Add:

Summers v. Garland, 98 S.W.3d 23 (Ark. 2003) (alternative contingent remainder vested after one of the beneficiaries was convicted of a felony).

Add:

Georgetown College v. Alexander, 2003 Ky. App. LEXIS 210 (No. 2002-CA-000651-MR, Aug. 29, 2003) (in interpreting wills dealing with alternative contingent remainders, courts are guided by the principle that the testatrix's intention must be determined by the language of the will).

Add:

Summers v. Garland, 98 S.W.3d 23 (Ark. 2003) (alternative contingent remainder vested after one of the beneficiaries was convicted of a felony).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.08

Supp. to § 26.08 Executory Interests Permit Freeholds to Commence in the Future.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Nelson v. Provo City, 6 P.3d 567 (Utah App. 2000) (fee simple determinable expires automatically on the occurrence of a stated event).

23 of 191 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.09

Supp. to § 26.09 A Fee Limited on a Fee By Way of Executory Devise.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Richards v. Maiden, 34 Va. Cir. 494 (Va. Cir. Ct. 2000) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.10

Supp. to § 26.10 Indestructibility of Executory Interests.

[Go To Main]

Delete from last line of text on page 483:

have the effect to

Add:

Camenisch v. City of Stanford, 2003 Ky. App. LEXIS 211 (No. 2002-CA-000962-MR, Aug. 29, 2003) (a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent grants the right to re-entry or reversion); Scott v. Brunson, 569 S.E.2d 385, 387 (S.C. App. 2002) ; Zenon v. R. E. Yeagher Mgmt. Corp., 57 Conn. App. 316, 748 A.2d 900, 905 (Conn. App. 2000) ; Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W. 2d 443, 448 (Tex. App. 1999) .

Add:

Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. Civ. App. 2000) (an executory limitation springs into being automatically upon its occurrence); Ctr. for Molecular Medicine v. Belleville, 19 N.J. Tax 342 (N.J. Tax 2001) rev'd on other grounds, 813 A.2d 1243 (N.J. Super. 2003) (occurrence of an executory limitation automatically defeats a fee simple).

Add:

Garza v. Rodriguez, 18 S.W.3d 694 (Tex. App. San Antonio 2000) (example of a shifting executory interest in will).

Add:

Greene v. Rosin (In re Rosin), 1998 Bankr. M.D. Fla. LEXIS 1924 at *17 (June 4, 1998) (executory interest to be distinguished from a "mere possibility").

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.11

Supp. to § 26.11 Alienability, Descendibility, and Transmissibility of Executory Interests.

[Go To Main]

Add:

In re Greer, 242 B.R. 389, 399 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1999) (executory interests and other expectant estates are "descendible, devisable, and alienable in the same manner as estates in possession").

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.12

Supp. to § 26.12 Executory Interests After Sale.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Where real property was condemned by the State, proceeds of the condemnation award were invested, and holder of determinable life estate was entitled to receive investment income during the period of the tenancy, while the executory interest was to take the undiminished corpus thereafter. Beech v. Hibbett, 2000 Tenn. App. LEXIS 464 at *5, 11 (July 19, 2000) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.13

Supp. to § 26.13 Executory Interests and Waste.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Peoples' St. Bank v. Stenzel (In re Stenzel), 301 F.3d 945, 951 (8th Cir. 2002) (remainderman has no right to interfere unless waste was being committed); Doramus v. Rogers Group, Inc. 2001 Tenn. App. LEXIS 127 at *39-40 (Feb. 28, 2001) (plaintiff with an executory interest may bring an action for waste, but available remedies depend on remoteness of possibility that interest will become a fee simple absolute).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.14

Supp. to § 26.14 Executory Interests and the Rule Against Perpetuities.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Washington State Grange v. Brandt, 148 P.3d 1069 (Wash. App. 2006) (executory interest language requiring the land to revert to the then owner of the original plot, without reference to a measuring life, violated the rule against perpetuities).

In re Smith, 2004 Mich. App. LEXIS 609 (No. 234640, Feb. 24, 2004) (executory interest was found not to violate the rule against perpetuities because the common law in Michigan provides that future interests should be treated as vested where there is any present interest in the income of the property).

A grant "effective only upon" termination of a determinable fee cannot vest until the prior interest has terminated. Because a determinable fee could continue forever, the deed may not vest within the period of the Rule and is void. Peveto v. Starkey, 645 S.W.2d 770, 772 (Tex. 1982) .

Johnson v. Ferris, 2001 Va. Cir. LEXIS 366 at *8 (May 31, 2001) .

§ 26.14(a) Failure of Issue. [Go To Main]

To the second line of the text on page 489, add:

and Kentucky

§ 26.14(b) Severance of Void Limitations. [Go To Main]

Add:

However, in some cases the court may declare the void interest to be a fee simple determinable, See, e.g., Washington State Grange v. Brandt, 148 P.3d 1069 (Wash. App. 2006) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 26 EXECUTORY INTERESTS

3-26 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 26.15

Supp. to § 26.15 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Add to Books:

Thomas F. Bergin and Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 102-117 (2d ed. 1984).

Burby, William E. Handbook of the Law of Real Property (3d ed. 1965).

Cribbet, John and Corwin W. Johnson. Principles of the Law of Property (3d ed. 1989).

Moynihan, Cornelius J. and Sheldon F. Kurtz. Introduction to the Law of Real Property (4th ed. 2005).

Add to Articles:

Beyer, Gerry W., "Annual Survey of Texas Law: Wills and Trusts," 56 SMU L. Rev. 2071, 2081 (2003).

Gallanis, T.P., "The Future of Future Interests," 60 Wash. & Lee L. Rev. 513 (2003).

Gibbons, Max, "Of Windfalls and Property Rights: Palazzolo and the Regulatory Takings Notice Debate," 50 UCLA L. Rev. 1259, 1277 (2003).

Add to Annotations:

Annotation, Executory limitation creating life estate or other interest less than a fee, as operating to defeat the entire fee of the precedent defeasible estate or as merely carving the particular estate therefrom, 140 A.L.R. 941 .

Annotation, Delivery or Distribution to Life Tenant, or Assent by Executor to his Possession or to the Life Interest, as Inuring to Benefit of the Remaindermen and Operating to Take the Remainder out of the Estate, Absent a Trust or Will Provision Retaining It, 68 A.L.R.2d 1107 .

Annotation, Executory limitation creating life estate or other interest less than a fee, as operating to defeat the entire fee of the precedent defeasible estate or as merely carving the particular estate therefrom, 140 A.L.R. 941 .

Annotation, Gift or Grant in Terms Sufficient to Carry the Whole Property Absolutely as so Operating Where Followed by a Purported Limitation Over of Property Not Disposed of by First Taker, 17 A.L.R.2d 7 .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 27.syn

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.syn Synopsis to Chapter 27: THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

§ 27.01 Introduction

§ 27.02 History of Trusts

§ 27.03 Definitions of Trust Terms

§ 27.03(a) Trust

§ 27.03(b) The Creator of a Trust

§ 27.03(c) The Property of the Trust

§ 27.03(d) Holders of Beneficial Interests

§ 27.04 Creation and Validity of Trusts

§ 27.04(a) Express Trusts

§ 27.04(b) The Subject Matter of the Trust

§ 27.04(c) Who May Be the Trustee

§ 27.04(d) The Beneficiary

§ 27.04(e) Special Rules Relating to Private Trusts

§ 27.04(e)(1) Restrictions on and Varieties of Purposes

§ 27.04(e)(2) Application of the Rule Against Perpetuities

§ 27.04(f) Special Rules Relating to Charitable Trusts

§ 27.04(g) Non-Express Trusts

§ 27.04(g)(1) Constructive Trusts

§ 27.04(g)(1)(i) In General

§ 27.04(g)(1)(ii) Circumstances Giving Rise to Constructive Trusts

§ 27.04(g)(2) Resulting Trusts

§ 27.05 Powers, Duties and Liabilities of Trustees

§ 27.05(a) Powers of Trustees

§ 27.05(b) Duties of Trustees

§ 27.05(c) Liabilities of Trustees

§ 27.06 Modifying and Terminating Trusts

§ 27.07 Bibliography

Professor David A. Thomas
J. Reuben Clark Law School
Brigham Young University

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.01

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.01 Introduction

This chapter provides an overview of the American law of trusts, with emphasis on trust law as it relates to the law of real property. Trusts have been a wonderfully adaptable feature of common-law jurisdictions for centuries, and have figured importantly in the creation and administration of real property interests, but are equally facile in dealing with other kinds of property interests. Thus the more general subject of trusts has been the focus of several single- and multi-volume legal treatises. This chapter, as stated, gives a more summary treatment of the subject of trusts in general, while pointing out and discussing in more detail the particular applications to real property interests. Where available, cited judicial and legislative sources will be drawn from cases and statutes related to real property. Likewise, the bibliography will include, in addition to standard works on the general subject of trusts, more specific works on the real property aspects of trusts.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.02

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.02 History of Trusts

A trust has been rather tersely defined as "a property right held by one party for the use of another," n1 or as "a fiduciary obligation in which one person is the holder of the title to property subject to an equitable obligation to keep or use the property for the benefit of another." n2

Under medieval English law, a person who held title to property for the use of another was often referred to as a feoffee to uses, that is, one who had been enfeoffed -- or endowed with property -- to be held while being used by another.

The term "use" in English law derives from the Latin "opus," signifying a benefit or "on behalf of." One person could give land or chattels to another, for the use or benefit of a third person. Uses were employed by knights embarking on crusades, by one wishing to confer the benefit of land on a religious order not authorized to hold land, and by villeins who could convey their land only by yielding it to the lord "for the use of" the intended grantee. When a wardship was taken from an unfaithful guardian and given to another, the new guardian held "to the use of" the ward. n3

Uses had apparently become quite common during the fourteenth century, because several statutes of the latter part of that century deal with uses. One statute made lands held to the use of defrauding debtors subject to execution for their debts. n4 Another statute made uses for the benefit of religious houses and other corporations subject to the Statute of Mortmain, n5 meaning that no uses could be created for the benefit of such institutions, upon pain of forfeiture (except that mortmain practice permitted such conveyances after first obtaining a royal license). n6 By statute, uses became forfeitable for treason, as were other real property interests. n7

The beneficiary of the use, the "cestui que use," was frequently the party benefiting from a collusive or fraudulent arrangement, and perhaps was just as frequently the party victimized by an unfaithful feoffee who would not honor the terms of the use. Certainly much mischief could be accomplished by wrongful employment of the use:

> The purpose of such conveyances frequently was to enable the landowners to deal with their lands in a manner not countenanced by the common law or to evade the liabilities incident to legal ownership. Thus A, seised of Blackacre in fee simple and wishing to dispose of it by will, would enfeoff B in fee simple to hold to A's use during A's lifetime and after his death to transfer the land according to his will.

> (The student will recall that land generally was not devisable prior to 1540.) A landowner could by a feoffment to uses place his lands beyond the reach of his creditors seeking to levy an execution thereon. Again, a dying land owner could by a conveyance to several feoffees to uses (who would take as joint tenants) deprive the lord of the fee of the important incidents of wardship, marriage or relief. n8

It was also the rule that dower and curtesy would not attach to uses, which significantly aided the fee alienability of uses.

Succumbing to the attractive features of the use, however, the landowner became very vulnerable to a false feoffee:

> It is obvious that the success of a feoffor's attempt to put the legal ownership of his land in someone else and retain the beneficial ownership in himself depended on the feoffee keeping his promise to deal with the land according to the agreement made at the time of the feoffment. Unless some way could be found to enforce the feoffee's promise the feoffor's position was indeed precarious. In law the feoffee was the true owner; the cestui que use in possession was only a tenant at will. Seisin had vested in the feoffee by virtue of the feoffment and the law was not at all concerned with the feoffee's promise to deal with the land for the benefit of the feoffor or his nominees. n9

According to Ames, the English feoffee to uses was the direct counterpart of the German Treuhand or fiduciary, and the beneficiary of that use -- the cestui que use -- was therefore able to obtain only nominal protection for that interest in only the ecclesiastical courts. n10 While feoffments to use in land are in evidence from the beginning of the twelfth century, and were common by the fourteenth century, it does not appear that a disappointed beneficiary had a right of action in common-law courts; n11 such beneficiaries naturally turned to equity.

The situation was a natural setting for intervention by the Chancellor, acting on equitable principles to provide relief unavailable under the common law. So, early in the fifteenth century, the Court of Chancery began accepting cases in which feoffees were accused of not honoring their instructions in behalf of a cestui que use. The Chancery Court did not interfere with the feoffees' legal title, but did impose fines and imprisonment for misconduct of feoffees; from early in the fifteenth century bills in equity to enforce uses became frequent.

The first known equity decree in favor of a cestui que use dates from 1446, n12 although there may have been others before it. This first equity decree vindicating a cestui que use marks the real beginning of the use. So long as the obligation of a feoffee to uses to honor the use was only voluntary, the use was indistinguishable from its continental counterparts, such as the German Treuhand or fiduciary, but when the English chancellor turned the feoffee's moral duty into an enforceable obligation, then the uniquely English use came into being and the development of trust law began.

The motivation for this development, as with other areas of equity, was moral:

> The spectacle of feoffees retaining for themselves land which they received upon the faith of their dealing with it for the benefit of others was too repugnant to the sense of justice of the community to be endured. The common law could give no remedy, for by its principles the feoffee was the absolute owner of the land. A statute might have vested, as the Statute of Uses a century later did vest, the legal title in the cestui que use. But in the absence of a statute the only remedy for the injustice of disloyal feoffees to uses was to compel them to convey the title to the cestui que use or hold it for his benefit. Accordingly, the right of the cestui que use was worked out by enforcing the doctrine of personal obedience [to the order of the chancellor to convey the land]. n13

The next major event in the development of trust doctrine was a series of statutory reforms culminating in passage of the Statute of Uses itself in 1535. Before passage, legitimizing uses under equity jurisdiction had not quelled the abuses, and movements for statutory reform continued to gain momentum. One statute permitting a remedy against a person receiving the profits of land, n14 and another statute enabling a cestui que use to convey a legal estate n15 reflected a policy position that the cestui que use should be treated as a legal owner of the property, not merely as an equitable owner. Based on this same position, other statutes declared void certain trusts and uses of chattels to the use of a settlor (similar to a modern grantor trust), n16 declared that wardship and reliefs would be due from the cestui que use of land held under military tenure, n17 and decreed that execution could be had against land held under a use, with the cestui que use permitted to employ whatever defenses were available to the legal owner. n18 When Richard III became king, after he had been enfeoffed to use by several of his associates, a statute required that such lands of which he was seised for the use of others were to be vested in the cestui que use, n19 another example of treating the owner of the use as the legal owner. This long-emerging legislative policy of treating the equitable interest of the cestui que use as a legal interest led inexorably to the great Statute of Uses which became effective in 1536. n20

Before that legislation, however, an extensive conveyancing practice involving uses had developed. During the period when enfeoffments to uses were common conveyancing devices, the uses could be included in a written document, stated orally, or declared to be the uses included in the grantor's will. If uses were not made known at the time of the enfeoffment, the grant was presumed to be for the use of the feoffor.

> A use could also be created in connection with any other common-law type of conveyance such as a fine, common recovery, lease, release or grant. Broadly speaking, a use could be created with or without a transfer of possession. A use was raised with a transfer of the possession where it was created upon an actual transfer of seisin as in the case of a feoffment to uses. No technical words were necessary to create a use, and the declaration of the use could be oral or written. The word "use" was frequently employed but it was not essential. Any words expressing the feoffor's intention that the legal estate should be held for the benefit of another person were sufficient. A declaration that the feoffee should hold the land upon trust or confidence for -- and his heirs, or that he should permit -- and his heirs to take the profits, was sufficient to raise a use. n21

Eventually, uses become so common that when a fee simple enfeoffment occurred and no use was declared, but the transaction was without consideration, a use was presumed in the feoffor. This implied use in the feoffor was termed a "resulting use."

Uses were often conveyed to several persons as joint tenants; this arrangement offered some security against simultaneous dishonesty by all the feoffees and, through operation of survivorship, avoided questions of dower or feudal incidents when any of the joint tenants died.

A use was also frequently raised by a bargain and sale agreement. By a bargain and sale agreement, oral or written, an owner accepted money consideration in return for a promise to sell the land to the buyer. The promise alone effected no conveyance of the legal title, but the bargainee would be treated in equity as the beneficial owner and, by a suit in equity, the bargainee could compel the bargainor to convey legal title. This arrangement was also a natural vehicle for raising a use. By bargain and sale the owner could agree to hold the land for use or benefit of the buyer and the buyer's heirs. Again, the buyer could compel the seller to permit the buyer's use of the land, including its rents and profits. As early as the fifteenth century, a bargain and sale that had not proceeded to conveyance of the legal title was deemed to have raised a use in the bargainee. For those who actually wanted no more than the use, the bargain and sale arrangement would thus be left in this suspended, uncompleted state, with the purchasers holding only equitable title in the form of a use. From the point of view of feudal tenurial doctrine, this circumstance was significant, because it meant, as mentioned above, that a use could be raised without a transfer of seisin. Parties also found appealing the confidentiality of the transaction, because without conveyance of the legal title, there was no occasion to make a public record of the transaction.

Conveying land to uses became extremely widespread n22 and resulted in much abuse, complication, and fraud. Most of this was peremptorily wiped away with the enactment of perhaps the most famous and significant English property law statute, the Statute of Uses, n23 which became effective in 1536. The circumstances that finally prompted the monarchy to act against uses and force restrictive legislation through Parliament have been well summarized by Moynihan:

> This statute is probably the most important piece of legislation dealing with English land law, and its far-reaching consequences are still felt in our own times. The causes which led to its enactment are to be found in an English King's need of money. The Statute was primarily designed to restore to the Crown the feudal revenues which were being lost by means of the conveyance of lands to uses. In the sixteenth century the incidents of tenure, such as wardship, marriage, relief, primer seisin and escheat, were burdensome exactions on the tenant and, correspondingly, a profitable source of revenue for the lord of the fee. Since the king "alone was always lord and never tenant" he lost heavily when landowners by conveyances to joint feoffees to uses rid themselves of the incidents of tenure by retaining only the beneficial ownership. Henry VIII by means of the Statute of Uses sought to put an end to this drainage of the royal revenues ... The abolition of uses was not looked upon with favor by the land owning class who feared the loss of power to devise their lands, but Henry was able to enlist the support of the common-law lawyers in Parliament in putting through the Statute because of their deep-rooted jealousy of the Court of Chancery. As Maitland well puts it, the Statute "was forced upon an extremely unwilling Parliament by an extremely strong-willed king." n24

The method of the Statute of Uses was simple: it simply declared that whoever held the use would now also be deemed the holder of the legal title. Its essential but arcane language was paraphrased by Maitland:

> Where any person or persons shall be seised of any lands or other hereditaments to the use, confidence, trust of any other person or persons, in every such case such person and persons that shall have any such use, confidence or trust in fee simple, fee tail, for term of life or for years or otherwise shall stand and be seised deemed and adjudged in lawful seisin, estate and possession of and in the same lands and hereditaments in such like estates as they had or shall have in use. n25

The Statute of Uses did not alter the traditional common-law methods of conveying interests. Livery of seisin was effective to convey a freehold estate, a grant conveyed a vested remainder or a reversion, and an agreement and entry sufficed to convey a term of years. The common-law rule that a freehold to commence at some time in the future could not be created by conveyance remained in effect. The important impact of the Statute of Uses was to add several new possibilities for conveyancing.

Several kinds of uses were not converted into legal estates by the Statute of Uses. According to the wording of the statute, only uses derived from one who was seised of the land were to be executed into legal interests. Because seisin applied only to freehold estates, if one held a non-freehold estate to the use of another, that use was not executed. Uses raised on an estate held for a term of years, or on personal property such as chattels or a chose in action, were unexecuted.

If a person was seised to the use of another, who held to the use of yet another -- a so-called use limited on a use -- the second use had been held void even before the Statute of Uses. After the Statute of Uses, the second use continued to be held void -- notably in the famous Tyrrel's Case of 1557. n26

Thus the second use was at law deemed unexecuted, and in equity was still treated as void, so no interest at all passed under the second use. Sometime in the late seventeenth century, n27 after enactment of the statute abolishing tenures in 1660, n28 a use upon a use came to be upheld in equity. n29 This development once again enabled landholders to split their interests between legal and equitable titles, and the second uses came to be commonly referred to as a trust. The holders of the first use, executed into legal interests, became the trustees, not only holders of the legal title but also bound to act in the interests of the trust owners or beneficiaries.

A few years after enactment of the Statute of Uses, still another category of uses was held exempt from execution into legal interests. These were the so-called active uses, created by a conveyance to uses with the grantee to perform affirmative duties in behalf of the cestui que use. Typically, such affirmative duties might consist of collecting and paying to the cestui que use the rents and profits from the property, or conveying the property at the direction of the cestui que use. This exemption for active uses is not in the wording of the Statute of Uses, but was invoked by judicial decision. The equitable estates arising out of unexecuted active uses tended to merge with the unexecuted uses upon use and together they emerged as early forms of the modern trust in the eighteenth century.

When equity courts came once again to recognize the passive trusts created by uses upon a use in the late seventeenth century, orderly development of the law of trusts began. Trusts came to be viewed, not with the abhorrence in which sixteenth century uses had been held, but with more eagerness to usefully employ the trust device for the convenience and benefit of individual citizens. n30

The association of trust doctrine with equity jurisprudence hindered acceptance of trusts in early American courts. Equity was viewed with suspicion in the United States because it was thought to confer too much discretion on judges; however, with gradual acceptance of equity powers in the courts, trusts also were accepted and utilized. One distinct contribution of American business to trust law was early recognition that a corporation could be a trustee.

In more modern times, trust law in America has been mostly developed by case law, although numerous state statutes address individual issues concerning various aspects of trustees' powers or the propriety of various trust activities. A few American states have adopted more or less comprehensive trust codes, either to embody or replace the common law, and various parts of traditional trust law have been taken into or reformed by several uniform acts. Similarly, the first Restatement of Trusts in 1935 and the second Restatement of Trusts in 1957, were promulgated by the American Law Institute to set forth American trust law as it is or ought to be, according to the drafters' perceptions and points of view.

In the early history of trusts, they were used almost exclusively for real property. Gradually, trusts came to be used for personal property as well, and now it may be said that "trusts of personal property have become far more important than trusts of land. The typical trust today is a trust of which the subject matter is income-producing securities." n31 For most purposes, the discussion of trust law in this chapter will apply without regard to whether the trust is of real or personal property.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Keplinger v. Keplinger, 113 N.E. 292, 293 (Ind. 1916).

(n2)Footnote 2. George T. Bogert, Trusts 1 (6th ed. 1987).

(n3)Footnote 3. Statute of Westminster I, 3 Edw. 1, c. 48 (1275).

(n4)Footnote 4. 50 Edw. 3, c. 6 (1376).

(n5)Footnote 5. 7 Edw. 1, Stat. 2 (1279).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 Rich. 2, c. 5(4) (1391).

(n7)Footnote 7. 21 Rich. 2, c. 3 (1397):

> And he for him and his heirs shall forfeit all the lands, tenements, and possessions, liberties and all other hereditaments, which he hath or any other hath to his use, or had the day of the treason done as > well in fee tail as in fee simple to the King and his heirs, as well such lands holden of other as of himself forever; and also such possession as other have to his use. (Emphasis added.)

(n8)Footnote 8. Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 172 (2d ed. 1988).

(n9)Footnote 9. Id.

(n10)Footnote 10. James Barr Ames, The Origin of Uses and Trusts, in 2 Association of American Law Schools, Select Essays In Anglo-American Legal History 737, 739-741 (1908).

(n11)Footnote 11. Id. at 741.

(n12)Footnote 12. Myrfyne v. Fallan, 2 Cal. Ch. XXI (1446) (requiring the defendant to convey the property).

(n13)Footnote 13. James Barr Ames, The Origin of Uses and Trusts, in 2 Association of American Law Schools, Select Essays In Anglo-American Legal History 737, 742-743 (1908).

(n14)Footnote 14. 1 Hen. 7, c. 1 (1485).

(n15)Footnote 15. 1 Rich. 3, c. 1 (1484).

(n16)Footnote 16. 3 Hen. 7, c. 4 (1487).

(n17)Footnote 17. 4 Hen. 7, c. 17 (1489).

(n18)Footnote 18. 19 Hen. 7, c. 15 (1504).

(n19)Footnote 19. 1 Rich. III, c. 5 (1483).

(n20)Footnote 20. 27 Hen. 8, c. 10 (1535).

(n21)Footnote 21. Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 176 (2d ed. 1988).

(n22)Footnote 22. Indeed, according to Coke in the commentaries on Littleton, by the mid-fifteenth century, "the greater part of the lands in England ... were in use." Co. Lit. 272a.

(n23)Footnote 23. 27 Hen. 8, c. 10 (1535).

(n24)Footnote 24. Cornelius J. Moynihan, An Introduction to the Law of Real Property 178-179 (2d ed. 1988). A detailed discussion of the political causes leading to the Statute of Uses is in 4 William Holdsworth, A history of English Law 450-461 (3d ed. 1945). The Quoted Passage of Maitland is from Frederic William Maitland, Equity, Also the Forms of Action at Common Law 35 (1909), who added:

> It [the Statute of Uses] was very unpopular and was one of the excuses, if not one of the causes, of the great Catholic Rebellion known as the Pilgrimage of Grace. It was at once seen that it would deprive men of that testamentary power, that power of purchasing the repose of their souls, which they had long enjoyed. The king was the one person who had all to gain and nothing to lose by the abolition of uses.

(n25)Footnote 25. Frederic William Maitland, Equity, Also the Forms of Action At Common Law 35 (1909).

(n26)Footnote 26. Benl., 1669, 61 (1557).

(n27)Footnote 27. The earliest case acknowledging the validity of the second use is the 1676 case of Grubb v. Gwillim, Selden Society, 1 Lord Nottingham's Chancery Cases 347, No. 487 (Vol. 73, 1957).

(n28)Footnote 28. Tenures Abolition Act, 12 Car. 2, c. 24 (1660).

(n29)Footnote 29. A. W. B. Simpson, A History of the Land Law 198-207 (2d ed. 1986).

(n30)Footnote 30. 1 Austin Wakeman Scott and William Franklin Fratcher, The Law of Trusts 24-25 (4th ed. 1987).

(n31)Footnote 31. Id. at 26.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.03

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.03 Definitions of Trust Terms

[Go To Supp]

§ 27.03(a) Trust

Probably the most widely accepted general definition of a trust is that set forth in the two Restatements of Trust:

> A trust, as the term is used in the Restatement of this subject, when not qualified by the word "charitable," "resulting" or "constructive," is a fiduciary relationship with respect to property, subjecting the person by whom the [title to] property is held to equitable duties to deal with the property for the benefit of another person, which arises as a result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. n32

This definition helps distinguish trusts from other relationships that appear similar to trusts in that they feature fiduciary relationships, but are actually distinguishable. For example, a bailment would not be considered a trust, because the bailee is entrusted only with possession, but not title and ownership. n33 The executorship is even more similar to a trust, inasmuch as the executor or guardian often does hold title to the entrusted property; however, between the two concepts significant differences exist in powers held and possible liabilities to third parties. The executor usually has very narrow and specific duties and powers and is usually not charged with making investments or otherwise enlarging the estate. n34 The guardianship, although similar to the trust in many ways, also does not usually require the guardian to take legal title to the guardianship property. n35 Legal actions by the guardian are brought in the name of the ward, whereas trustees usually sue in their own names. Guardianship powers are usually fixed by law and, relative to trust powers, are narrow and inflexible. n36

A trust is also distinguishable from an agency relationship. Whereas the agent acts under the direction of the principal, the trustee usually acts according to the trust terms rather than at the direction of the beneficiaries. n37 The agency relationship is often terminable at the discretion of either principal or agent, whereas the trust is usually terminable only according to the terms of the trust agreement. n38

A mortgage is different from a trust in that the mortgagee holds a mere security interest and holds it strictly for the mortgagee's benefit; the trustee holds the trust property for the benefit of the beneficiaries. Normally, no fiduciary relationship exists between mortgagee and mortgagor as it does between trustee and beneficiary. n39 Also a pledgee is much more like a mortgagee than a trustee. n40

If property is devised or bequeathed subject to a requirement on the recipient to make certain payments to third persons, such a charge does not create a trust relationship. Payment of the charge permits the devisee to keep the property; n41 nonpayment can result in an action against the property, but not necessarily against the devisee, since the interest of the charge beneficiary in the property is only a security interest. n42

Closely related to a transfer of property subject to a charge is a conveyance upon a condition, which may sometimes be considered as a conveyance in trust:

> If the conveyance is upon a condition subsequent, the transferee, although he cannot be compelled to perform the condition, can be compelled to surrender the property upon his failure to perform ... . Inasmuch as only the transferor or his heirs can take advantage of a condition, unless there is a valid gift over on breach of the condition, and inasmuch as the only remedy is a forfeiture for breach of the condition, a condition is not a very effective method of accomplishing the transferor's purpose to benefit the third person. Hence the courts have always been inclined to construe a conveyance as one upon trust rather than upon condition. n43

§ 27.03(b) The Creator of a Trust

Various terms are used to describe one who creates a trust by conveying property into trust. These terms include trustor, settlor, grantor, and -- in the case of a testamentary trust -- testator or testatrix. Outside the testamentary context, the terms are generally interchangeable, and in this chapter the term trustor will generally be used. n44

§ 27.03(c) The Property of the Trust

The property, whether real or personal, that is the subject matter of the trust is often referred to as the trust property, but other terms in frequent use include the trust estate, the trust res, the trust corpus, and the subject matter of the trust. This last phrase may be used to describe the property in which the trust holds an interest, although that interest may be something less than full legal title. n45

§ 27.03(d) Holders of Beneficial Interests

Those who hold beneficial interests in the trust may most simply be referred to as beneficiaries. However, the ancient and awkward term cestui que trust is also still in use, mostly in judicial opinions. Like its archaic counterpart, cestui que use, it signifies nothing more than one who holds a beneficial or equitable interest in the trust or use, respectively. In this chapter, the more intelligible term beneficiary will usually be used to describe a holder of an equitable or beneficial interest in the trust.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 32. Restatement of Trusts § 2. The words in brackets were added to this definition by Restatement (Second) Of Trusts § 2.

(n2)Footnote 33. Doyle v. Burns, 99 N.W. 195 (Iowa 1904).

(n3)Footnote 34. Matter of Scheuer, 405 N.Y.S.2d 189 (1978); In re Estate of Bayles, 261 A.2d 684 (N.J. Super. 1970); Campbell v. Johnson, 79 N.E.2d 147 (Ohio App. 1948).

(n4)Footnote 35. State v. Whitaker, 638 S.W.2d 189 (Tex. App. 1982); Owen v. Hines, 41 S.E.2d 739 (N.C. 1947); In re Guardianship of Paulsen, 282 N.W. 36 (Wis. 1938); Lamar v. Micou, 112 U.S. 452, 5 S. Ct. 221, 28 L. Ed. 751 (1884). But see Ziady v. Curley, 396 F.2d 873 (4th Cir. 1968).

(n5)Footnote 36. Wilson v. McKleroy, 89 So. 584 (Ala. 1921) (guardian needed authority of the court before selling ward's land). But see Cross v. Rudder, 380 So. 2d 766 (Ala. 1979).

(n6)Footnote 37. Taylor v. Davis' Adm'x, 110 U.S. 330 (1884).

(n7)Footnote 38. Mairs v. Central Trust Co., 34 S.E.2d 742 (W. Va. 1945); Fidorski v. Maryeski, 11 Conn. Supp. 414 (1943); Huntoon v. Southern Trust & Commerce Bank, 290 P. 86 (Cal. App. 1930).

(n8)Footnote 39. De Phillips v. Mortgage Assoc., 291 N.E.2d 329 (Ill. App. 1972); Koury v. Sood, 62 A.2d 649 (R.I. 1948); Crockett v. Root, 146 P.2d 555 (Okla. 1943).

(n9)Footnote 40. Willett v. Herrick, 155 N.E. 589 (Mass.), cert. denied, 275 U.S. 545 (1927).

(n10)Footnote 41. Gadekar v. Phillips, 375 A.2d 248 (1977); Torres v. Abeyta, 84 P.2d 592 (N.M. 1938); Lang v. Everling, 23 N.Y.S. 329 (1893).

(n11)Footnote 42. Nusz v. Nusz, 127 P.2d 441 (Kan. 1942); Hayes v. Sykes, 21 N.E. 1080 (Ind. 1889); Den v. Small, 20 N.J.L. 151 (1843).

(n12)Footnote 43. 1 Austin Wakeman Scott And William Franklin Fratcher, The Law of Trusts 116 (4th ed. 1987).

(n13)Footnote 44. Markham v. Fay, 884 F. Supp. 594 (D. Mass. 1995) (the declaration of trust gave the settlor such power over the principal and income of the trust that both principal and income were in effect the settlor's property), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, Markham v. Fay, 74 F.3d 1347 (1st Cir. 1996).

(n14)Footnote 45. In re Lefkas Gen. Partners, 112 F.3d 896 (7th Cir. 1997) (holding that transferor does not retain any real or equitable interest in redevelopment after transferring property to a debtor's land trust).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.04

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.04 Creation and Validity of Trusts

[Go To Supp]

This section describes the various methods by which trusts are created. In the case of express trusts, the creation of the trust is a conscious, intentional act on the part of the trustor. Other trusts that are not express are not necessarily "created," but may arise by operation of law.

§ 27.04(a) Express Trusts

An express trust, created intentionally by the trustor, may be created by written, spoken or other manifestation of that intent, coupled with an actual transfer of property to the trust. An intent to create an express trust may be manifested by a declaration, by transfer of property, or by entering into a contract to deliver property to another in trust. n46

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: intent! w/10 creat! w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

One who owns property may simply declare that the property is henceforth held in trust for specified beneficiaries. The declarant is not only the trustor, but is also the trustee. n47 A written declaration of trust for real property is required by the English Statute of Frauds, in force in most American states:

> all declarations or creations of trust or confidences of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall be manifested and proved by some writing signed by the party who is by law enabled to declare such trust, or by his last will in writing, or else they shall be utterly void and of none effect. n48

The requirement of a writing for trusts of realty is strong enough that even if the land in an unenforceable oral trust is sold, the trust which continues over the monetary proceeds of sale is also unenforceable, and even the proceeds are personalty. n49

Despite the "utterly void and of none effect" wording of the Statute of Frauds requirement of a writing for trusts of realty, it is generally held that parties to a trust may agree that their oral trust of land is only voidable, that is, valid and enforceable so long as none of them raise an objection to the lack of a writing. n50 Also, the usual ways to compensate for lack of a formal writing, such as part performance n51 or producing a form of written memorandum of the agreement, n52 are available in the context of trusts. n53

If such a written memorandum is relied upon to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, it may be made by the trustor (in the case of declarations) either before or after the time the trust is created n54 -- but not after the transfer in trust n55 -- or by the trustee (in the case of transfers in trust) either before or at the time the trust is created. n56

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: statute of frauds w/50 trust w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

Settlors may also transfer property in trust by means of a will, but the will must be executed with all required formalities, usually a signed writing subscribed by two or more witnesses. And if a document lacks the formality required for a testamentary transfer in trust it may suffice as a written memorandum for a trust created before the settlor's death. n57 Frequently trustors transfer property in trust, but retain very significant powers over the trust property, such as the rights to receive trust income, to invade the trust estate for certain purposes, to revoke or alter the trust, and to give the trustee instructions as to management of the trust. Such a living trust is obviously a type of will substitute, but usually executed without the required will formalities. These arrangements will usually be upheld as valid living trusts as to the remainder interests, even though the trustor can effectively fully control and even terminate the trust before death. n58

A testamentary gift to a living trust (often effected by a so-called "pour over" will) can be nullified by revocation of the will, or by revocation of the living trust before the donor's death. State statutes may provide that the "pour over" testamentary gift may be added to the trust according to its terms at the time of the donor's death, rather than the terms in effect at the time the donor's will was executed. n59

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: pour over w/10 will w/50 trust

A trustor may also create an express trust by obtaining the promise by another to hold property in trust for a specified beneficiary; the declarant in such case is only the trustee. n60

An express trust may also be created when an owner of property (or the holder of a power to appoint property) transfers the property to another, to be held in trust for specified beneficiaries. The creation of the trust occurs by a combination of manifested intent, delivery of the property, and acceptance of the property by the designated trustee. n61 Frequently, property is devised by will to a trustee for the benefit of a third person. Assuming the will is valid, such a trust arises upon the testator's death n62 and is called a "testamentary trust"; other trusts are known as "inter vivos" trusts, or living trusts, or trusts between living persons.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/5 (living or inter vivos) w/50 intent!
trust w/5 testament! w/50 intent!

A trustor may create a trust by procuring a promise from another to hold property in trust for a third person, or by making a promise to give property to another trust to hold for a party. This arrangement commonly occurs in the insurance context, when the trustor obtains and pays for a life insurance policy, with the policy proceeds payable to a named trustee for the benefit of a named beneficiary. n63 Such an insurance trust arises at the time the policy is issued.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/50 record! w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

Because most trusts involving realty are created by written trust instruments, issues of delivery of those written instruments often arise. Delivery may be effected by manually transferring possession or control of the document, or by telling another that the document is in effect, or by conduct of the trustor toward the beneficiary indicating that the beneficiary's rights are in effect. n64 If the trustor simply executes a self-declaration of trusteeship, courts usually hold it unnecessary for the document to be delivered to the beneficiary. n65 Failure to deliver the document physically will not obstruct creation of the trust if the trustor or declarant has otherwise manifested an intent to place the property in trust. n66

Usually a trust instrument need not be recorded in order to be valid or complete, n67 but recording, as always, affords protection against claims by subsequent bona fide purchasers of trust property.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/50 record!

Just as recording is not required for trust instrument validity, consideration is also not essential for the creation or enforceability of a trust. n68 However, if an owner of property has merely agreed to place it in trust, or other essential steps toward creation of trust are incomplete or defective, a beneficiary who has not given consideration (or, in other words, is a "volunteer") cannot enforce the trust. n69 As in promissory contracts generally, if the intended beneficiary of the promise has sufficiently changed position in justified reliance on the promise to create a trust, the trustor may be forced to complete creation of the trust or to deny that the trust was created. n70

What may constitute consideration for a promise to create a trust is the same as consideration for agreements generally. Usually love and affection, or a duty to support, will not be considered valid consideration for a promise to give property in trust. n71 If consideration has been given, but performance is not forthcoming, a court of equity will either declare the trust or require specific performance. n72

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/20 creat! w/50 consideration w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

§ 27.04(b) The Subject Matter of the Trust

The trust estate must consist of some identifiable property, that is, a property interest held by the trustor at the time the trust was created. That interest may be any right, interest, or thing which may be the subject of property ... . Every kind of vested right which the law recognizes as valuable may be transferred in trust. n73

Common types of trust property that arise from real property are estates in land, mortgages, growing crops, n74 promissory notes, n75 equitable interests, n76 and a present right to future rents and profits. n77

If the trustor attempts to create a present trust with a property interest the trustor does not yet own, all that arises is an agreement to create a trust at some time in the future when the property interest is acquired, n78 and the validity of such an agreement depends on whether the element of consideration is present. n79

Property rights that are inalienable may not be transferred into a trust relationship, either by declaration or conveyance. n80 Real property examples of such rights are the reversionary interests of possibility of reverter and right of entry/power of termination, that either by state common law or state statute are inalienable. However, a trustee may convey trust land subject to such reversionary interests, and continue to hold those interests as part of the trust estate. Trusts may also hold contingent interests and equitable interests, such as an equity of redemption. n81

If some form of real property interest is given in trust, the affected land must be described with enough specificity that it can be definitely identified. Thus, an undivided interest in certain real property is sufficiently specific for a valid trust, if the land itself can be identified. n82 Under some circumstances, a power of appointment can also be a proper trust estate and it, too, often affects real property interests. One who is the grantee of a life estate coupled with a power of appointment requiring appointment of the remainder to specific beneficiaries is often considered to hold the power of appointment in trust. If the holder of the power dies without having exercised the power as required, a court may impose a constructive trust on the unappointed property for the benefit of the erstwhile beneficiaries. n83

A trust will be void for uncertainty if the purported trust estate is first subject to depletion for various discretionary bequests, without any assurance that any estate will be left for the trust. n84

It is well-established that an insurance policy may be placed in a trust estate, even though the beneficiary may be changed later by the insured (presumably also the trustor). The beneficiary's rights in the policy and proceeds are considered vested at the time of transfer into trust, but may be divested later upon the naming of a different beneficiary. n85

The huge variety of relationships and property interests that may form a trust estate has stimulated much litigation attempting to distinguish between trust and debt. The obligation of a trustee to beneficiaries is often likened to the obligation of a debtor to a creditor. Proper characterization of the relationship can make a difference in remedies available for misconduct, and whether a party qualifies for those remedies.

Several characteristics of trusts are unique and consistently distinguish trust relationships from debt relationships. n86 Trustees are fiduciaries to their beneficiaries; debtors have no fiduciary obligations to their creditors, at least not as far as their debtor-creditor relationship is concerned; trusts arise out of conveyance rather than contract, and are usually not based on consideration; a trustee's duties relate to specific property, while a debtor's obligation often are not required to be satisfied out of specific property; n87 remedies against a trustee are equitable, while those against a debtor are primarily legal and only secondarily equitable.

The buyer and seller under a specifically enforceable real estate contract may appear to be in a trust relationship, each as trustee required to render particular performance for the benefit of the other. However, neither owes fiduciary obligations to the other (indeed, a direct conflict of interest would exist on both sides of the transaction, if each party owed a fiduciary standard of conduct to the other) and the vendor has no duty to manage the property for the vendee until closing. n88

In a few situations involving a real property interest and the insolvency of one who holds the interest, the debt/trust distinction can be particularly troublesome. A tenant required to give a cash security deposit to the landlord is usually treated as a creditor rather than a beneficiary of the landlord; as a creditor, the tenant may reclaim the appropriate amount at the proper time, but not exactly the same money, and the landlord has more or less unfettered use privileges while possessing the fund. If the landlord were a trustee of security deposit funds, interest during the time of deposit would be owed, and, possibly, each individual deposit would need to be segregated from the others and from the landlord's own accounts. n89 These traditional relationships are now often modified by statutes imposing additional duties on landlords such that they may be considered trustees of security deposit funds for certain purposes.

In another troublesome realty-related area raising the question of debt or trust, a landowner may transfer property to another in return for the grantee's promise to support the grantor during life. If the support is to be provided out of the specific property granted, a trust relationship for the life of the grantor may be found; n90 otherwise, courts may find instead that the grantor has simply created a rescindable contract n91 or retained a right of entry upon breach of the condition that support be provided. n92

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/20 (res or estate or corpus or property) w/50 necess! trust w/20 (res or estate or corpus or property) w/50 certain!

§ 27.04(c) Who May Be the Trustee

The trustee may be any natural person or public or private corporation capable of taking title to the trust property. Only a few restrictions on the capability of property ownership apply to natural persons. At common law, and still in some states, the rights of aliens to own property interests are not complete. n93 Minors, even infants, may be trustees, but any contracts and conveyances they undertake are subject to being voided when the trustee reaches the age of majority, n94 and a beneficiary may require that a fully empowered substitute trustee be appointed. n95

Among the corporate entities entitled to trusteeships are governmental entities at all levels, n96 although they are usually immune to legal actions seeking to enforce claims arising out of their trust activities. Governmental entities often hold real property in trust, the land to be used for specific purposes n97 or held for the benefit of the public, such as ocean shoreland. n98 Municipalities may hold land in trust for specific purposes, purposes which the municipality is required or entitled to pursue. n99

If a municipality were acting as trustee for a purpose outside its proper scope of activity, the trust would not be terminated, but a new trustee could be appointed. n100 This is consistent with the traditional principle that equity will not allow a trust to fail for lack of a trustee.

A similar restraint is imposed on private corporations as trustees: the corporation may function as trustee when the trust activities are consistent with the corporation's own authorized purposes and activities. n101 If the trust is outside the scope of corporate power, the trust will continue, but a different trustee will be appointed. n102 States impose varying restrictions on foreign corporations functioning as trustees, such as requiring the foreign corporation to first become qualified to do business in the state, or may even completely prohibit the foreign corporation from acting as trustee. n103

Unincorporated associations are usually denied recognition as trustees, because they do not have the legal capacity to take title to real property. n104 If, however, such associations are given status as legal entities and are enabled to hold property, they could also be qualified to act as trustees. n105 Again, if a trust declaration names an unqualified association as trustee, a different trustee may be substituted.

A sole trustor may not be named as the sole beneficiary, since that would effect a merger of the legal and equitable estates in the trust property and cancel any purported trust arrangements. n106

One may validly appoint multiple trustees as the sole beneficiaries, because their relationship as cotenants, both legally and equitably, prevents merger. n107 Accordingly, a sole trustee appointed as one of several beneficiaries, or one of several trustees appointed as sole beneficiary, is also usually held to be a valid arrangement. n108 If two trustees are appointed for a trust under which one of the trustees and another person are beneficiaries, this arrangement, too, is usually upheld. n109

An apparent paradox in the position of the trustee is that notification and acceptance of the trusteeship are not necessary for the validity of the trust (unless the trust was intended to be personal), n110 yet the trustee has the choice to accept or reject the appointment. Indeed, the appointment is ineffective without acceptance by the trustee. n111 Acceptance of the trusteeship must be exactly according to the terms on which it is tendered; otherwise, it is a rejection. n112 If and when the trustee does accept the appointment, the trustee's title relates back to the time the trust or the particular trusteeship was created. n113 Rejection by one or some, but not all, of the appointed trusts causes the title to be vested in only the accepting trustees. n114 A trustee's disclaimer or rejection of legal title may be oral, even with respect to real property. n115 When the trustee rejects the appointment, the legal title is in the trustor or, in the case of a testamentary trust, passes under the testator's estate. n116

The full freedom an appointed trustee has to decline the trust stands in contrast to the restrictions placed on a trustee's right to resign. Because the welfare of the beneficiaries is a prime consideration in an established trust, a trustee's request to resign must usually be based on some cause n117 and must be approved by an appropriate court. In the court proceeding, the beneficiaries are necessary parties, n118 and the court may impose conditions upon the trustee's release, n119 including payment of costs of the proceeding, if the resignation is simply for the trustee's convenience. n120 In place of these procedures, it is common for the trust declaration to authorize a simpler internal procedure for trustee resignation, n121 such as merely obtaining the beneficiaries' consent. n122

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trustee w/20 natural person trustee w/20 corpor!

§ 27.04(d) The Beneficiary

The rules relating to beneficiaries apply principally in the context of private trusts. While occasionally a charitable trust or a public trust will not have a named beneficiary, such as the trust for the public over ocean foreshore, every private trust is required to have a beneficiary. n123 The beneficiary must be described with enough specificity to be definitely identified. n124 While a trust naming as alternative beneficiaries particular persons, or any of them, is too vague to be enforceable, n125 naming a class of beneficiaries is sufficient, n126 even if the class members are yet to be selected by the trustee exercising full discretion. n127

A beneficiary must be a legal entity capable of taking title to property and becoming the obligee of any equitable obligation that the trustee is required to assume. n128 A beneficiary is qualified even if hindered by disabilities relating to property management or to making contracts. Thus minors, incompetents, and other similarly restricted persons under legal disability, qualify as trust beneficiaries. n129

An unborn person may be a beneficiary of a trust that will be effective upon the beneficiary's birth, n130 but may not be the sole beneficiary of a present trust.

Private trusts for particular animals are usually not enforceable, because the animal is not a legal entity capable of holding or judicially enforcing property rights. n131 If a trust names animals generally as beneficiaries or is created for the welfare of animals, it will be recognized as a charitable trust. Similarly, trusts for the benefit of inanimate objects also fail for lack of a proper beneficiary, unless it can be shown that the owner of the object is the real beneficiary. n132 Courts have had special difficulty in applying this rule consistently to private trusts for the purpose of erecting and caring for monuments. In decisions refusing to recognize such trusts, it is noted that no living person is benefited; n133 contrary decisions may recognize that such a trust gives satisfaction to the decedent's survivors or may simply reflect a state rule upholding cemetery upkeep trusts. n134 If such trusts fail as private trusts, they may yet be upheld as charitable trusts.

Neither notice to n135 nor acceptance by the beneficiary is required for the creation of the trust. n136 However, the equitable interest pertaining to that beneficiary will not arise unless the beneficiary accepts it. Indeed, acceptance of an interest advantageous to the beneficiary is sometimes presumed. n137 The beneficiary's acceptance is necessary, in any event, because no beneficiary is required to accept property that may be worthless or even burdensome, n138 and because of one's common-law privilege to reject even an augmentation of one's property assets. n139 State statutes may make specific provision for disclaimers by beneficiaries.

An acceptance or a rejection by the beneficiary should be unconditional n140 and final, n141 and either action relates back to the time the interest was created. n142 If rejection accelerates a remainder interest, the acceleration may not be approved if it somehow contradicts the intent of the trustor. n143

A monumental and continuing scholarly debate over whether the beneficiary's interest is in rem or in personam or both has left the question so far without a consensual answer. One writer has summarized it as follows:

> The situation would seem to be summarized by the statement that while the right of the beneficiary was originally purely in personam against the trustee, it has become increasingly a right in rem and is now substantially equivalent to equitable ownership of the trust res. The beneficiary, of course, also has rights in personam against the trustee. Speaking of a transfer by the beneficiary of his interest under the trust, the Supreme Court of the United States has stated: "The assignment of the beneficial interest is not the assignment of a chose in action but of the 'right, title, and estate in and to the property.' " n144

In some states, statutory provisions may declare the beneficiary's interest to be in personam, or the trust instrument itself may declare the beneficiary's interest to be personal property, often for reasons connected with taxation or testamentary transfer. Such declarations of the trustor will be upheld. n145 The beneficiary's interest may indirectly come to be classed as personal property, if the trust is directed to sell real estate, n146 or as real property, if the trust is directed to invest in real estate. n147

The beneficiary's interest in the trust property may take any form appropriate for the holding of property interests, generally. n148

Although most beneficial interests are non-possessory, the trust may direct that a beneficiary also enjoy a present right of possession of trust property. n149 Co-beneficiaries are usually considered to be tenants in common, n150 but a trust instrument may create survivorship rights, n151 community property rights, n152 separate property rights, n153 joint tenancy interests, n154 or tenancy by the entireties interests n155 among the co-beneficiaries. Although it is not widely held that holders of concurrent interests in real property are in a fiduciary relationship with one another, courts agree that co-beneficiaries are indeed fiduciaries to one another and may not seek to gain undue advantage over each other. n156

The beneficiary is normally permitted to alienate the beneficiary's interest in the trust; n157 the trust instrument, however, may restrict that right or require trustee's approval or impose other conditions. n158 The beneficiary who takes under a testamentary trust, but who was indebted to the testator, takes the beneficial interest subject to the debt, which may be collected by the trustee. n159 If a beneficiary makes more than one conveyance of the same interest, the priority among grantees is determined in some states by the order of their conveyances, n160 and in other states by the time when the trustee was notified of the respective transfers. n161 In a few states, the second transferee must inquire as to prior transfers before obtaining the benefit of earlier notice to the trustee. n162

If a beneficiary's interest is to continue beyond the beneficiary's life, upon the beneficiary's death the interest passes to appropriate devisees, legatees, heirs or personal representative, depending on whether the beneficiary died testate or intestate, and upon whether the interest was classed as personal or real property. n163 The interest of an intestate beneficiary without heirs will pass to the state. n164

In those states where dower and curtesy rights in some form are still recognized, those rights may attach to the interest of a decedent beneficiary that continues beyond the beneficiary's death. n165 Likewise, a homestead right may attach to a beneficiary's equitable interest in real property. n166

The beneficiary's interest in the trust property is accessible to creditors for satisfaction of the beneficiary's debts. n167 Indeed, if the trust is passive, under the Statute of Uses or a state's equivalent statute, the beneficiary holds the legal title to the trust, which is subject to the legal remedy of execution. n168 Even under active trusts, the beneficiaries' interests are increasingly becoming subject to execution and other legal remedies as well as the equitable remedies. n169 Consistent with these rules is the rule that a beneficiary's interest in the trust property passes to the beneficiary's receiver n170 or trustee in bankruptcy. n171

Creditors may be barred from reaching the beneficiary's interest when, either by state statute or by trust provision, the beneficiary is prohibited from subjecting future payments of trust property or trust income to the claims of creditors. n172 Prohibiting the so-called "anticipation by assignment" does not affect the beneficiary's right to assign trust income or property for the benefit of creditors, or the creditors' rights to reach those assets, after those assets have been actually paid or transferred to the beneficiary. Provisions prohibiting such anticipation by assignment have usually been termed "spendthrift" clauses or trusts, and have been upheld in a majority of American state, either by statute or decision. n173

The English courts have not approved "spendthrift" trusts, and a few American decisions have followed the English rule. n174 In some states, "spendthrift" provisions are limited to protect only accumulations of trust income needed to provide for a beneficiary's customary needs; the surplus accumulations will be subject to claims of creditors. n175 These limitations are usually applied to income from trust realty, n176 but have occasionally also been applied to personal property in trust. n177 If a trustor attempts to create a spendthrift trust with the trustor as beneficiary, the trust itself will be valid, but the spendthrift provision will not be enforced. n178 And the assets of spendthrift trusts can be reached for a few types of claims against the beneficiary, claims deemed important as matters of public policy, such as tax charges, n179 tort claims, n180 and claims for necessities provided to the beneficiary. n181

It is in accord with this principle that the trustee under a "discretionary trust" cannot be forced by a beneficiary's creditor to make otherwise discretionary payments to the beneficiary. If the beneficiary has not yet received the payments, they cannot be reached by the beneficiary's creditor; n182 and the creditor cannot require payment to be made by a trustee who, under the trust instrument, has full discretion over whether to make any payments at all to the beneficiary. n183 However, if nonpayment by the trustee is deemed an abuse of discretion, payment may be directed by the court, n184 whereupon a creditor could reach the funds or assets in the hands of the beneficiary.

Even in a trust which is not discretionary, but directs the trustee to pay over to the beneficiary only those amounts necessary for certain limited purposes, such as maintenance and education, the beneficiary may not alienate the future payments and creditors may not require the payments to be made to them, notwithstanding the debts relate to the education and maintenance of the beneficiary. n185

If the beneficiaries of a trust are a group or a class, whose members' interests are so blended that no one person has an interest separate or distinct from the others' beneficial interests, then no transferee or creditor of any one beneficiary can obtain income from the trust. n186

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/50 beneficiar! w/20 legal entity

§ 27.04(e) Special Rules Relating to Private Trusts

§ 27.04(e)(1) Restrictions on and Varieties of Purposes

Private trusts of real or personal property may be established for any purpose that is not contrary to common law, to statutory law, or to public policy. n187 The trust purpose must appear with sufficient clarity that the trust can be enforced. n188 Numerous trusts are created to distribute trustors' estates; other purposes, as described by one authority, show the versatility of the trust device as well as illustrate the variety of ways trusts can affect real property interests:

> Other common purposes of private trusts include: (1) the management of the settlor's property for him, with the consequent escape from business problems and responsibilities; (2) the protection of the beneficiaries against misfortune or wastefulness, with the use of a spendthrift clause which could not be attached in the case of a gift of the legal interest; (3) securing the custody and preservation of insurance during the life of the insured and the collection and investment of the proceeds on maturity of the policies; (4) furnishing security to lenders, as in the case of the "corporate trusts" where the trustee holds a mortgage for the benefit of bondholders; (5) paying creditors of the settlor, as in the case of an assignment for their benefit made to a trustee, or in the case of an insolvent corporation, where the corporate property is vested in a liquidating trustee for the purpose of enabling him to conserve, sell, and distribute to creditors who hold certificates of beneficial interest; (6) trusts as an adjunct to the marketing of investments, as where there is an investment trust of securities or of real estate and shares in this trust are sold to the investing public, or where there is a "land trust" and the purchase and development of the realty is obtained by the sale of certificates of interest in the realty; (7) the "subdivision trust," where a tract is purchased and held for sale for the benefit of those who furnish capital and are reimbursed as lots are sold; (8) the voting trust, where corporate shares are placed in a trust by several stockholders so that they can be voted for desired corporate management and development purposes; (9) the so-called "Massachusetts" or "business" trust, where the assets of a business enterprise are transferred to a trustee for the purpose of having him manage and develop it, in which case the trust takes the place of a corporation and the trustees are similar to directors and officers and the beneficiaries to corporate shareholders; (10) a trust to carry on the business of a decedent, either indefinitely for profit or to wind up the enterprise and pay off creditors and legatees; (11) pension or profit sharing trusts for employees of a corporation, the fund being raised by contributions of the employer and sometimes its employees, where the objectives are retirement income and disability or death benefits, and occasionally stock purchase rights; (12) trusts created by court decree in order to work out a result which litigation shows to be desirable; (13) trusts created by a legislature in order to achieve a purpose which is deemed to be in the public interest; (14) trusts which are created for a wife or children incident to a separation of husband or wife or pursuant to a divorce decree. n189

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (Private trust or trust) w/50 purpose w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)
(private trust or trust) w/50 [word or phrase denoting trust purpose]

§ 27.04(e)(2) Application of the Rule Against Perpetuities

The common-law rule against perpetuities applies to private trusts, and prevents legal and equitable interests in both real and personal property from remaining contingent for too long. Gray's succinct statement of the rule is still the standard formulation: "No interest is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than twenty-one years after some life in being at the creation of the interest." n190

This grand old rule, the bane of many lawyers and estate planners who have misunderstood or mismanaged its intricacies, is currently undergoing a quiet revolution. The validity of an interest subject to the rule has been traditionally judged as of the time the interest was created; if any possibility existed that the interest would not vest within the time allowed by the rule, the interest would be deemed invalid from the beginning, even if it were possible for vesting to occur within the allowed time. A few jurisdictions refused to declare immediate invalidity in such circumstances, preferring to wait throughout the allowed time, hoping to save the interest if it did in fact vest within that time. Such an approach was termed "wait and see" for the common-law perpetuities period. Ten states have adopted this approach. n191 Five other states have statutory "wait and see" periods that differ from the common-law period. n192

A third variant of "wait and see" appears in the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, now adopted by twenty states. n193 According to this two-part approach, parties may seek to validate their contingent interests either under the common-law perpetuities approach (life in being plus twenty-one years) or may apply a 90-year wait-and-see period. If vesting still has not occurred at the end of the 90-year period, courts are authorized to reform rather than nullify the interest, so as to approximate the intent of the grantor.

Other state statutes exempt entirely employee benefit trusts and charitable trusts from the operation of the rule against perpetuities.

A less well-known form of the rule against perpetuities guards against holding a power of alienation too long in suspension. In a few states, statutes prohibit suspending the power to alienate real property for longer than the lives of two persons who were alive at the time the interest was created.

The very duration of private trusts has also been an issue. In some states the rule arose that private trusts could not endure at all beyond the period of the common-law rule against perpetuities. Earlier cases in those states applied that rule to void private trusts. n194

Most later cases rejected the rule and the result, and now place no durational limits on a private trust in which all the interests are vested. n195 This has been especially true with respect to trusts deemed to be destructible -- that is, subject to termination at any time by the trustee or the beneficiaries. n196

If the trustee is directed to accumulate income (usually for reinvestment), under the common law no durational limits were imposed upon the period of accumulation, as long as the income interests were vested. n197 The common law, however, is often modified by state statutes restricting the accumulations period to the common-law perpetuities limits on remoteness. Invalid accumulations are usually directed to be paid to the beneficiary who would have received the income in the absence of an accumulation provision. n198

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (private trust or trust) w/50 (perpetuities or rule against perpetuities)

§ 27.04(f) Special Rules Relating to Charitable Trusts

While a private trust is usually intended to benefit a private person or enterprise, the purpose or effect of a charitable trust is to bring social benefits to the public or some portion of the public. n199 If the trustor's purpose in creating the trust is more consistent with a private trust, but the actual effect of the trust is charitable, the effect is controlling over the state purpose. n200

Such a situation may arise when a donor makes a major contribution in trust to a hospital or university building which is to be named after the donor, and the donor's immediate purpose may be obtaining personal recognition; such a trust is still deemed a charitable trust. n201

In determining whether the purpose of a trust is charitable, a rather expansive concept of charity is appropriate, including not only assistance to the poor but a wide range of philanthropic purposes. n202

Some confusion appears in the cases over whether the beneficiaries of a charitable trust must be indefinite. Typically the charitable trust beneficiaries are a group or a class, rather than specified individual persons, n203 but the public benefit to be conferred by a charitable trust must ultimately be conferred on the public by means of individual beneficiaries who are the recipients of the trust property or income. A trust with a large group of definite or specific beneficiaries might be considered charitable if the overall social advantage is significant. n204 If it is unclear whether the stated purposes of the trust should be considered as charitable or more appropriate for a private trust, the attempted trust may be treated as too vague and as unenforceable. n205

In some jurisdictions, the required minimum level of certainty is even higher for charitable trusts. n206 However, in most states it is acceptable to leave many details of trust administration and fulfillment of charitable purposes within the discretion of the trustee. n207

Support of religious institutions and activities is considered charitable. n208 No clear-cut rule has emerged distinguishing a valid religious purpose from a purpose of private devotion or enthusiasm. Earlier cases rejected trusts for the saying of masses as private trusts without living beneficiaries, n209 but more recent decisions have upheld them as charitable trusts, n210 or as gifts to the priest or church, n211 or as a trust created to pay funeral expenses. n212

Trusts to maintain public cemeteries could be enforced as valid charitable trusts, but trusts for upkeep of private cemeteries and monuments were not valid under the common law. n213 Trusts to maintain private cemeteries and monuments usually could not be charitable trusts because the benefits were for individuals rather than for the public n214 and were perpetual in duration; n215 such trusts could not be private trusts because no living person would benefit. n216 Now, in many states, statutes authorize perpetual trusts for cemetery and monument upkeep. n217 In a few states, trusts for perpetual care of a cemetery lot or monument are upheld as charitable trusts, sometimes on the ground that a public benefit is achieved in fostering respect for the dead. n218

Trusts for education of a substantial portion of the public have traditionally been upheld as charitable. n219 Even if the class of persons to be educated is quite limited, the trust will be upheld as a valid charitable trust if it can be shown that the trust confers a substantial social benefit. n220

A special class of valid charitable trusts has been termed "eleemosynary," n221 and these fall into two categories. One category consists of trusts intended to provide relief for the poor, either to those selected at the discretion of the trustee, n222 or to particular groups of poor, the groups being sufficiently large that their relief confers substantial social benefit. n223

The other category of eleemosynary trusts consists of trusts that promote health and aid for the sick and disabled. Trusts to promote health are generally those that aid some aspect of public health, such as funding of research, support of health care institutions, or educational support. n224 If an institution receives support from a trust fund, the institution may not be conducted for profit, although it may impose charges to cover operating costs. n225

Other valid charitable trusts consist of those intended to give aid or support to some legitimate governmental purpose. More specifically, these trusts are accepted because they confer public benefits by making life more happy, comfortable, or safe. The variety of such purposes is virtually unlimited. Trusts have been upheld as charitable trusts when created to pay public debts, expenses, or taxes; n226 to benefit residents of particular governmental subdivisions or entities; n227 to repair public facilities; n228 to provide or assist in operating public facilities, n229 such as parks, n230 playgrounds, n231 buildings, fire stations, n232 streets, n233 gardens, n234 utilities, and airports; n235 to promote patriotism or support military establishments or activities; n236 to promote peace, good will and harmony, either between nations, or within a nation; n237 and to promote change in law or policy, as long as the trust serves to improve rather than subvert the law. n238 However, trusts for the support of a particular political party are generally not accorded charitable status. n239

As appears from the foregoing paragraphs, the area between charitable and non-charitable trusts can be very gray. It is, therefore, helpful to list a few trust purposes that have been held to be not qualified as charitable. These include support of a private club, lodge or fraternal order; n240 distribution of cash or goods without regard to the need of the donees; n241 preservation and maintenance of inanimate objects, n242 except those that serve a public purpose; n243 and support individual animals or small groups of animals. n244

Several complications arise when a trust is created for both charitable and private purposes; such a trust may be known as a "mixed trust." The least difficult situation is presented by a mixed trust whose resources are separately identified and assigned for each purpose, which enables the trust to be treated as two separate trusts, one a charitable trust and the other as a private trust. n245 If the separation is not completely clear, a court may seek some evidence or indication of the trustor's intent to make a separation, principally in order to preserve the charitable portion of the mixed trust. n246 Without such evidence of indication, a court will preserve whatever part of the trust is valid under either charitable trust or private trust rules. n247

A trust whose purpose qualifies as charitable may usually be created according to the same rules that apply to private trusts. The trustor must be competent, the means of trust creation -- whether deed or will or other instrument -- must satisfy the applicable formalities requirements, n248 and the intent to create a trust must be clear. n249

In a few states, statutes may restrict certain trustors' efforts to create charitable trusts, and may limit the capacity of certain parties to function as trustees for charitable trusts. A testamentary gift in trust for a charitable purpose may be required to have been made before a certain period of time before the trustor's death, to ensure it was not made under improper influence. Assets transferred into a trust too close to the trustor's death would then pass to residuary legatees or next of kin. n250

Another type of statutory restriction is a limit on the proportion of the trustor's estate that may pass to the charitable trust. Gifts in trust that exceed such limits may be wholly or partially invalidated, and given instead to the trustor's close relatives, if they have made timely objection. n251

Gifts in trust for charitable purposes are also subject to the rule against perpetuities. n252

Only if the charitable gift in trust is to go over to another charitable trust at some indefinite time in the future is the rule against remoteness held not to apply. n253 This exception has been rationalized on the basis that once the property is indefinitely restricted under one charitable trust, prolonging the restrictions under a subsequent charitable trust does no further harm. n254 Vested gifts in charitable trust may be made in perpetuity or of indefinite duration. n255 Similarly, the usual rule forbidding unreasonable restraints on alienation are not enforced against the trustee of a charitable trust. n256 Not only are state statutes that impose these restrictions not applied to charitable trusts, but the limitations are also not imposed under common law. n257

If a charitable trust is directed to accumulate income, the time allowed to vest such accumulations must fall within the time prescribed by the rule against perpetuities. n258 Even if the vesting issue is settled, controversy often surrounds the actual distribution of accumulated trust funds. In some states, accumulation periods for trusts are governed by statute, often without distinction between private and charitable trusts. Normally, then, such statutory accumulation rules apply to charitable as well as private trusts, n259 but exceptions for charities have been recognized. n260 In states without governing statutes for charitable trust accumulations, application of such accumulated funds must be made within a reasonable time as defined, if necessary, by a court of equity. n261

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: Charitable trust w/50 social benefit w/20 public

§ 27.04(g) Non-Express Trusts

The non-express trusts, or implied trusts, are classed as either constructive trusts or resulting trusts.

§ 27.04(g)(1) Constructive Trusts

§ 27.04(g)(1)(i) In General

A constructive trust is a creation of the courts, applied to one holding property wrongfully, and intended to ensure that the wrongful holder of the property gives the property or its proceeds or benefits to those rightfully entitled. Constructive trusts are a form of remedy for a wrong relating to the "trust" property:

> A constructive trust is the formula through which the conscience of equity finds expression. When property has been acquired in such circumstances that the holder of the legal title may not in good conscience retain the beneficial interest, equity converts him into a trustee n262

Even though the circumstances justifying a constructive trust are present, such a trust will not arise until explicitly created by a court. n263 The court's action creating a constructive trust will relate back to the time when the property began to be wrongfully held. n264 A constructive trust must be based on the plaintiff's entitlement to some actual property; n265 mere possessory or contract rights are not sufficient for the creation of a constructive trust. n266

Upon the death of one entitled to a constructive trust over real property, the right to the constructive trust property passes to heirs or devisees; if the constructive trust right is to personal property, the right passes to the decedent's next of kin or legatees. n267

Because the constructive trust is an equitable remedy, the party entitled to the remedy is also required to have acted equitably. n268 With respect to real property, for example, the plaintiff obtaining a constructive trust over property improved or preserved by the defendant may be required to reimburse the defendant for the cost of the improvements n269 or for preservation or maintenance expenses, n270 especially if the defendant acted under mistake or ignorance. Similarly, if the defendant obtained real property wrongfully, consideration paid by the defendant should be returned upon creation of the constructive trust over that property. n271 An additional important part of the remedy creating the constructive trust is a further decree requiring the constructive trustee to convey the property's title, deliver possession, pay profits or rental value, or otherwise account to the plaintiff. n272

No statute of frauds requirement applies to constructive trusts, both because such trusts are creatures of the courts, and because the traditional statute of frauds of English origin makes specific exception for constructive trusts. n273 However, the absence of a requirement for a writing may result in courts requiring a stronger justification to declare a constructive trust; indeed, "clear and convincing evidence" is the usual standard for the plaintiff's burden of proof, n274 and some courts ask for even stronger proof. n275

§ 27.04(g)(1)(ii) Circumstances Giving Rise to Constructive Trusts

A variety of circumstances can give rise to constructive trusts. A brief review of the most important of these follows: n276

Breach of Express Trust. When the trustee of an existing express trust obtains property or some other benefit through some breach of trust resulting from the trustee's disloyalty -- or resulting in the trustee's unjust enrichment -- the property so obtained may have a constructive trust imposed on it. n277 This same rule applies to almost any party in a fiduciary relationship, or even in a so-called confidential relationship, who obtains a personal benefit through breach of the duty of loyalty. n278

As an alternative to the constructive trust remedy, a court may simply order restitution or some other return to the status quo; as additional remedies, the court may order forfeiture of compensation or removal of the trustee. n279

These remedies will apply even if the trustee or other fiduciary did not intend to engage in wrongful conduct n280 and even if no harm to the beneficiary can be shown. n281

Typical examples of this type of misconduct are the trustee's employment of self to provide professional services, n282 the trustee's sale of the trustee's own property to the trust as an investment, n283 or the trustee's purchase of trust property. n284

Breach of Oral Trust of Real Property. Where one obtains property absolutely, but under an oral agreement to hold it in trust, that agreement will usually not be enforced by imposition of a constructive trust on the property so obtained; n285 however, a minority of courts do impose a constructive trust in such a situation if the property holder will be unjustly enriched, so that the Statute of Frauds will not itself be a means of perpetrating a wrong. n286

Breach of Duty to Beneficiary. In any direct transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary, the trustee is bound to deal fairly with and make full disclosure to the beneficiary. If this duty is breached in a transaction by which the trustee obtains property, a constructive trust may be imposed on such property. n287 Common examples of this situation are a trustee's purchase of a beneficiary's interest in the trust for an inadequate price, n288 and a beneficiary's gift of the interest to the trustee. n289

Breach of Unenforceable Contract to Convey Real Property. If a contract to convey real property is unenforceable because it is not in writing, and is breached, a constructive trust maybe imposed on the property to prevent unjust enrichment; however, other remedies, such as specific performance, n290 quasi-contractual recovery, n291 or, for executory contracts, simple return of consideration, n292 are usually available and preferable. Typical cases, such as being named in a will in return for personal services of care given near the end of the testator's life, have sometimes resulted in a constructive trust being imposed on the property promised to be bequeathed or devised, especially if valuation of the services is vague or difficult. n293 Another example appearing frequently in the case reports occurs when one purchases property, for less than market value, at a judicial sale under an oral promise to reconvey the property to the judgment debtor, and then reneges on the promise. If the judgment debtor refrains from bidding at the sale in reliance on the unenforceable oral promise to purchase and reconvey, a constructive trust may be imposed. n294

Breach of Oral Trust of Property Obtained by Will or Intestacy. One who obtains poperty by will or intestacy on the strength of a promise to give the property to or use the property on behalf of another, may become a constructive trustee, if the promise is not kept. A constructive trust will be imposed if the grantee of the property did not intend to carry out the promise, n295 or if the grantee was in a fiduciary or confidential relationship with the decedent, as discussed above. If the grantee intended to carry out the promise at the time it was made, but decided otherwise after the decedent died, almost all courts will still impose a constructive trust. n296

If the decedent has been induced to not make a will or otherwise dispose of the property in reliance on a promise of one to hold the property for another, a constructive trust will also be imposed if that promise is not honored. n297

Property Obtained by Homicide. If one, by the murder of another, obtains property through inheritance, survivorship under a joint tenancy or some similar means, courts have approved several ways to prevent the killer from profiting from the wrong, including imposition of a constructive trust. The constructive trust device is ideal for reconciling the impulse to not reward wrongdoing with the impulse to not rearrange fundamental doctrines of property law. n298

For instance, if one of two joint tenants wrongfully kills another and thus succeeds to sole ownership of the property by right of survivorship, the constructive trust device permits the incidents of the joint tenancy to place ownership of the property in the survivor/killer, but the property is then held for the benefit of the victim's heirs. n299 Some courts even go so far as to determine what income benefits have been lost by the premature death of a joint owner:

> If H and W are tenants by the entirety, and H has an expectancy of ten years and W of fifteen years, the probable benefit which H will obtain from the property is the income of it for ten years. In all probability he will not become the survivor and receive the absolute title in severalty. If H murders W in such a situation, it would seem that a fair result would be to charge H with a constructive trust as to one-half of the income which should have gone to W during the ten year period, to permit H to retain the other half of the income during that period, and to make him a constructive trustee of the fee or absolute interest. n300

Some courts, however, permit the murderer to keep a one-half interest in the property and confine the constructive trust to the other half interest, regardless of the relative expectancies of the parties. n301

Property Obtained with Proceeds of Stolen or Converted Property. Usually no constructive trust is needed to remedy the wrong of stolen or embezzled property, since title does not pass to the wrongdoer. However, if the wrongdoer uses the stolen property to obtain other property in an otherwise proper transaction, a constructive trust may be imposed on the other property, requiring the wrongdoer to transfer title and possession to the victim. n302

When property is wrongfully appropriated by noncriminal conduct, such as by conversion, and then is used to obtain other property, that other property may be subject to a constructive trust; n303 similarly, a third party who has obtained the converted property, and who is not a bona fide purchaser, may also find a constructive trust imposed upon the converted property. n304 And property of a decedent or incompetent that has been improperly taken into the possession of and managed by another will be subject to a constructive trust. n305

Property Obtained by Fraud. Property obtained by fraudulent conduct may be subject to a constructive trust. n306 This rule also applies to property of a decedent obtained by fraudulent conduct before a probate court, n307 unless blocked by statutes establishing the finality of probate decrees. n308

Property Obtained by Mistake, Duress or Undue Influence. A conveyance of the wrong property or of property to the wrong grantee, under mistake of fact, is entitled to the remedy of constructive trust. n309 If such a conveyance takes place under the circumstances that the grantee or another has so dominated the grantor that the grantor's power of independent action is lost -- referred to as "undue influence" -- again a constructive trust is the appropriate remedy. n310 Likewise, a conveyance or the terms, the making of or the revoking of a will, under duress -- including restraint, violence or threats of violence or restraint -- is also subject to a constructive trust. n311

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: Constructive trust w/50 breach
Constructive trust w/50 homicide
Constructive trust w/50 (theft or stolen or conver!)
Constructive trust w/50 fraud
Constructive trust w/50 (mistake or duress or undue influence)

§ 27.04(g)(2) Resulting Trusts

Whereas express trusts result from the intentional action of the trustor, and constructive trusts are judicial devices to correct wrongdoing with respect to property, a resulting trust is a judicially declared trust that is supposed to reflect the intent of a property owner. The intent that forms the basis of a resulting trust may be inferred from the conduct of the owner, or presumed because of a legal rule or fiction necessarily pertaining to the owner's conduct. n312 Resulting trusts are specifically exempted from most states' statutes of frauds and so may be based on non-written evidence. n313

If a purchaser of property directs the grantor to convey to another as grantee, the grantee -- if not related to the purchaser -- is generally considered to hold the property in trust for the benefit of the purchaser, a form of resulting trust. n314 If the purpose of this arrangement is unlawful or otherwise improper, a resulting trust will not be inferred. n315

Such an arrangement as described above is sometimes accompanied by an express oral agreement of trust between purchaser and grantee. This express oral trust, if it pertains to real property, may be disregarded because it is not in writing, n316 or it may be accepted as confirming the intentions and resulting trust already inferred from the other conduct of the parties. n317

A resulting trust with respect to real property may alter record title and other manifestations of ownership, so most courts require evidence that meets the "clear and convincing" standard, before declaring a resulting trust. n318

Some state statutes abolish resulting trusts with respect to real property, except in certain circumstances to avoid unjust enrichment. n319

In two other situations it is common for a court to find a resulting trust. First, if a gratuitous express trust fails for some reason other than illegality, a resulting trust in favor of the erstwhile trustor will be found. n320 Second, a gratuitous express trust that is funded with more property than is necessary to carry out the purposes of the trust, with no provision for disposition of the surplus, may be subject to a resulting trust of the surplus in favor of the trustor. n321 In jurisdictions where the cy pres doctrine is observed, excess principal in a charitable trust will be distributed according to cy pres principles, which seek to meet the expectations of the trustor as fully as possible. n322

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: Resulting trust w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 46. Raso v. Lago, 958 F. Supp. 686 (D. Mass. 1997) ("Massachusetts law requires three elements to create an express trust: an intent to create a trust; clearly identifiable trust res; and identifiable beneficiaries"); Ludwig v. Amsouth Bank, 686 So. 2d 1373 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997) ("Where a trust instrument is unambiguous, the settlor's intention expressed in the trust controls ... . Extrinsic evidence should be considered only if the language used in the document is ambiguous.")

(n2)Footnote 47. Deleuil's Executors v. Deleuil, 74 S.W.2d 474 (Ky. 1934). Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Harris Trust and Sav. Bank, 71 F.3d 1306 (7th Cir. 1995) (default on mortgage of property held by a land trust authorized under state law).

(n3)Footnote 48. 29 Car. 2, c. 3, § 7.

(n4)Footnote 49. Alexander v. Spaulding, 66 N.E. 694 (Ind. 1903).

(n5)Footnote 50. Myers v. Myers, 47 N.E. 309 (Ill. 1897).

(n6)Footnote 51. Bushner v. Bushner, 307 P.2d 204 (Colo. 1957); Pearson v. Pearson, 25 N.E. 342 (Ind. 1890); Feeney v. Howard, 21 P. 984 (Cal. 1889).

(n7)Footnote 52. Cartwright & Bro. v. United States Bank & Trust Co., 167 P. 436 (N.M. 1917); Marie M. E. Church v. Trinity M. E. Church, 97 N.E. 262 (Ill. 1911).

(n8)Footnote 53. A trust of real estate will comply with the statute of frauds if it sets forth with reasonable definiteness the trust's property, its beneficiaries, and its purpose. Hall v. World S&L Ass'n, 943 P.2d 855 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1997).

(n9)Footnote 54. Ellison v. Ganiard, 79 N.E. 450 (Ind. 1906); Johnson v. Candage, 31 Me. 28 (1849).

(n10)Footnote 55. Bryan v. Bigelow, 60 A. 266 (Conn. 1905).

(n11)Footnote 56. Williams v. Williams, 76 N.W. 1039 (Mich. 1898); Myers v. Myers, 47 N.E. 309 (Ill. 1897); Baldwin v. Humphrey, 44 N.Y. 609 (1874).

When a trust instrument fails to embody the settlor's intent because of scrivener's error, it may be reformed on clear and decisive proof of mistake. To ascertain the settlor's intent, the court looks to the trust instrument as a whole and the circumstances known to the settlor on execution. Pond v. Pond, 678 N.E.2d 1321 (Mass. 1997).

(n12)Footnote 57. Hiss v. Hiss, 81 N.E. 1056 (Ill. 1907); Leslie v. Leslie, 31 A. 170 (N.J. Super. Ch. 1895).

(n13)Footnote 58. Westerfeld v. Huckaby, 474 S.W.2d 189 (Tex. 1971); In re Steck's Estate, 81 N.W.2d 729 (Wis. 1957), but see McMahon v. Standard Bank and Trust Co., 202 Wis. 2d 564 (Wis. App. 1996); Ridge v. Bright, 93 S.E.2d 607 (N.C. 1956); Farkas v. Williams, 125 N.E.2d 600 (Ill. 1955); Leahy v. Old Colony Trust Co., 93 N.E.2d 238 (Mass. 1950); In re Shapley's Deed of Trust, 46 A.2d 227 (Pa. 1946); Cleveland Trust Co. v. White, 15 N.E. 2d. 627 (Ohio 1938); Goodrich v. City Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 258 N.W. 253 (Mich. 1935); Davis v. Rossi, 34 S.W.2d 8 (Mo. 1930); Bear v. Milliken Trust Co., 168 N.E. 349 (Ill. 1929).

(n14)Footnote 59. Typical of several states' statutes on this subject is the Uniform Testamentary Additions to Trusts Act.

(n15)Footnote 60. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. New York Trust Co., 74 N.E.2d 232 (N.Y. 1947).

(n16)Footnote 61. Hinton's Executor v. Hinton's Committee, 76 S.W.2d 8 (Ky. 1934). In re Signal Hill-Liberia Ave. Ltd. P'ship, 189 B.R. 648 (E.D. Va. 1995) (deed of trust created express trust in favor of limited partnership).

(n17)Footnote 62. Moss v. Axford, 224 N.W. 425 (Mich. 1929).

(n18)Footnote 63. Shaw v. Johnson, 59 P.2d 876 (Cal. App. 1936).

(n19)Footnote 64. Halleck v. Halleck, 337 P.2d 330 (Or. 1959); McMahon v. Dorsey, 91 N.W.2d 893 (Mich. 1958); In re Shank, 240 B.R. 216 (Bankr. D. Md. 1999) (mere delivery of property without intent to pass title creates a bailment, not a trust).

(n20)Footnote 65. In re Eshbach's Estate, 46 A. 905 (Pa. 1900); Falk v. James, 26 A. 138 (N.J. 1893); In re Smith's Estate, 22 A. 916 (Pa. 1891).

(n21)Footnote 66. Collins v. Steuart, 44 A. 467 (N.J. Ch. 1899); McArthur v. Gordon, 26 N.E. 459, 801 (N.Y. 1891).

(n22)Footnote 67. Sprague v. Woods, 4 Watts & S. 192 (Pa. 1842).

(n23)Footnote 68. Harris Banking Co. v. Miller, 89 S.W. 629 (Mo. 1905); Van Cott v. Prentice, 10 N.E. 257 (NY. 1887); Padfield v. Padfield, 72 Ill. 322 (1874); Dennison v. Goehring, 7 Pa. 175 (1847).

(n24)Footnote 69. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Zerin, 53 Cal. App. 4th 445 (1997) ("A promise to hold property in trust for another, standing alone, will not create an equitable interest in that property"). See also Austin v. Young, 106 A. 395

(N.J. Ch. 1919); Harding v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 207 S.W. 68 (Mo. 1918); Rousseau v. Call, 85 S.E. 414 (N.C. 1915); Central Trust Co. of New York v. Gaffney, 142 N.Y.S. 902 (1913); Hamilton v. Hall's Estate, 69 N.W. 484 (Mich. 1895); Estate of Webb, 49 Cal. 541 (1875).

(n25)Footnote 70. Irwin v. Dyke, 1 N.E. 913 (Ill. 1885).

(n26)Footnote 71. In re James, 40 N.E. 876 (N.Y. 1895); Keffer v. Grayson, 76 Va. 517 (1882); Phillips v. Frye, 14 Allen 36 (Mass. 1867).

(n27)Footnote 72. Falk v. Janes, 26 A. 138 (N.J. Err. & App. 1893).

(n28)Footnote 73. Burke v. Burke, 102 N.E. 293, 295 (Ill. 1913).

(n29)Footnote 74. Mauldin v. Armistead, 14 Ala. 702 (1848).

(n30)Footnote 75. Broughton v. West, 8 Ga. 248 (1850).

(n31)Footnote 76. Clark v. Frazier, 177 P. 589 (Okla. 1918); Tarbox v. Grant, 39 A. 378 (N.J. Super Ch. 1898).

(n32)Footnote 77. A beneficial interest in an Illinois land trust is personal property rather than real property. Municipal Trust & Sav. Bank v. United States, 114 F.3d 99 (7th Cir. 1997); Estate of Bowgren v. Commissioner of IRS, 105 F.3d 1156 (7th Cir. 1997) (listing distinctive features of land trusts); Gisborn v. Charter Oak Life Ins. Co., 142 U.S. 326 (1892).

(n33)Footnote 78. Bacon v. Bonham, 33 N.J. Eq. 614 (1881); Mastin v. Marlow, 65 N.C. 695 (1871).

(n34)Footnote 79. Id.

(n35)Footnote 80. In re M.J. Hoey & Co., 19 F.2d 764 (2d Cir. 1927); Thayer v. Pressey, 56 N.E. 5 (Mass. 1900).

(n36)Footnote 81. Ollis v. Ricker, 166 S.E. 801 (N.C. 1932).

(n37)Footnote 82. Rollestone v. National Bank of Commerce, 252 S.W. 394 (Mo. 1923).

(n38)Footnote 83. In re Uihlein's Will, 59 N.W.2d 641 (Wis. 1953).

(n39)Footnote 84. Wilce v. Van Anden, 94 N.E. 42 (Ill. 1911).

(n40)Footnote 85. Cannon v. Nicholas, 80 F.2d 934 (10th Cir. 1935); Goldman v. Moses, 191 N.E. 873 (Mass. 1934).

(n41)Footnote 86. In re Goldstein, 234 B.R. 214 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1999) (Whether an agreement creates a debt or a trust can depend on a manifestation of intent to form a trust).

(n42)Footnote 87. Schoemaker v. Hinze, 10 N.W. 86 (Wis. 1881).

(n43)Footnote 88. Mitchell v. White, 14 So. 2d 687 (Ala. 1943).

(n44)Footnote 89. State by Van Riper v. Atlantic City Elec. Co, 128 A.2d 861 (N.J. 1957); Povey v. Colonial Beacon Oil Co., 200 N.E. 891 (Mass. 1936); De Vol v. Citizens' Bank, 179 P. 282 (Or. 1919).

(n45)Footnote 90. Dew v. Requa, 239 S.W.2d 603 (Ark. 1951); Norton v. Norton, 195 P. 441 (Cal. App. 1920).

(n46)Footnote 91. Payne v. Winters, 77 A.2d 407 (Pa. 1951); Oglesby v. Thomas, 16 So. 2d 320 (Ala. 1944).

(n47)Footnote 92. Hoadley v. Hoadley, 39 A.2d 769 (Vt. 1944).

(n48)Footnote 93. Caparell v. Goodbody, 29 A.2d 563 (N.J. 1942); Beidler v. Dehner, 161 N.W. 32 (Iowa 1917).

(n49)Footnote 94. Des Moines Ins. Co. v. McIntire, 68 N.W. 565 (Iowa 1896); Levin v. Ritz, 41 N.Y.S. 405 (1895); McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500 (1876).

(n50)Footnote 95. Clary v. Spain, 89 S.E. 130 (Va. 1916); Walsh v. Walsh, 116 Mass. 377 (1874).

(n51)Footnote 96. United States v. Getzelman, 89 F.2d 531 (10th Cir. 1937), cert. denied, 302 U.S. 708 (1937); United States v. Jackson, 280 U.S. 183 (1930).

(n52)Footnote 97. Branson Sch. Dist. Re-82 v. Romer, 958 F. Supp. 1501 (D. Colo. 1997) ("Colorado has an obligation enforceable under the Supremacy Clause to act as trustee for school lands granted under the Colorado Enabling Act for the benefit of the public schools"), aff'd 161 F.3d 619 (10th Cir. 1998). See also Pinson v. Ivey, 1 Yer. 296 (Tenn 1930); Bedford v. Bedford's Adm'r, 35 S.W. 926 (Ky. 1896); In re President and Fellows of Yale College, 34 A. 1036 (Conn. 1896).

(n53)Footnote 98. Allen v. Allen, 32 A. 166 (R.I. 1895).

(n54)Footnote 99. Higginson v. Turner, 51 N.E. 172 (Mass. 1898); Phillips v. Harrow, 61 N.W. 434 (Iowa 1894); Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. 437 (1858).

(n55)Footnote 100. State ex rel. Higby v. Higby Co., 106 N.W. 382 (Iowa 1906).

(n56)Footnote 101. Latshaw v. Western Townsite Co., 158 P. 248 (Wash. 1916); Hossack v. Ottawa Dev. Ass'n, 91 N.E. 439 (Ill. 1910); State ex rel. Higby v. Higby Co., 106 N.W. 382 (Iowa 1906); White v. Rice, 70 N.W. 1024 (Mich. 1897); De Camp v. Dobbins, 29 N.J. Eq. 36 (1878); Bell County v. Alexander, 22 Tex 351 (1858).

(n57)Footnote 102. Cleveland Mortgage & Inv. Co. v. Gage, 198 So. 677 (Fla. 1940); Yandell v. Wilson, 183 So. 382 (Miss. 1938); Daniel v. Wade, 83 So. 99 (Ala. 1919); Hayden v. Hayden, 89 N.E. 347 (Ill. 1909).

(n58)Footnote 103. In re National Gypsum Co., 243 B.R. 676 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1999) (A trustee can perform trustee duties for different trusts that do business with each other as long as the transactions are shown to treat each trust fairly).

(n59)Footnote 104. Lael v. Crook, 97 S.W.2d 436 (Ark. 1936); Wittmeier v. Heiligenstein, 139 N.E. 871 (Ill. 1923); Rixford v. Zeigler, 88 P. 1092 (Cal. 1907); Douthitt v. Stinson, 63 Mo. 268 (1876).

(n60)Footnote 105. Schneider v. Kloepple, 193 S.W. 834 (Mo. 1917); Parker v. Cowell, 16 N.H. 149 (1849).

(n61)Footnote 106. Danforth v. Oshkosh, 97 N.W. 258 (Wis. 1903); Nellis v. Rickard, 66 P. 32 (Cal. 1901); Greene v. Greene, 26 N.E. 739 (N.Y. 1891); Butler v. Godley, 12 N.C. 94 (1826).

(n62)Footnote 107. Morgan v. Murton, 26 A.2d 45 (N.J. Sup. 1942); Johnson v. Muller, 86 P.2d 569 (Kan. 1939); Johnson v. Muller, 86 P.2d 569 (Kan. 1939); Sturgis v. Citizens' Nat'l Bank of Pocomoke City, 137 A. 378 (Md. 1927).

(n63)Footnote 108. Reed v. Browne, 66 N.E.2d 47 (N.Y. 1946); Allen v. Hendrick, 206 P. 733 (Or. 1922); In re Fox's Estate, 107 A. 863 (Pa. 1919); Tyler v. Mayre, 27 P. 160 (Cal. 1891), aff'd, 30 P. 196 (Cal. 1892).

(n64)Footnote 109. Dennis v. Omaha National Bank, 46 N.W.2d 606 (Neb. 1951); Denniston v. Pierce, 103 A. 557 (Pa. 1917); Weeks v. Frankel, 90 N.E. 969 (N.Y. 1910); Story v. Palmer, 18 A. 363 (N.J. Super. 1889); In re Pace, 699 N.Y.S.2d 257 (1999) (Parents of a person who had suffered brain damage were allowed to be trustees despite the fact that they were contingent remaindermen. As trustees they owe a fiduciary duty to the current beneficiary).

(n65)Footnote 110. Richardson v. Mullery, 86 N.E. 319 (Mass. 1908); Thatcher v. Wardens, etc. of St. Andrew's Church of Ann Arbor, 37 Mich. 264 (1877).

(n66)Footnote 111. McFall v. Kirkpatrick, 86 N.E. 139 (Ill. 1908); F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U.S. 648 (1897); Brandon v. Carter, 24 S.W. 1035 (Mo. 1894); Maccubbin v. Cromwell's ex'rs, 7 Gill. & J. 157 (Md. 1835).

(n67)Footnote 112. In re Roth's Will, 50 N.E.2d 281 (N.Y. 1943); Chase National Bank of City of New York v. Citizens Gas Co. of Indianapolis, 113 F.2d 217 (7th Cir. 1940), rev'd on jurisdictional grounds, 314 U.S. 63 (1941).

(n68)Footnote 113. Daley v. Daley, 14 N.E.2d 113 (Mass. 1938); Stocks v. Inzer, 168 So. 877 (Ala. 1936).

(n69)Footnote 114. In re Kellogg, 108 N.E. 844 (N.Y. 1915).

(n70)Footnote 115. In re Robinson, 37 N.Y. 261 (1867); Read v. Robinson, 6 Watts & S. 329 (Pa. 1843).

(n71)Footnote 116. Goss v. Singleton, 2 Head 67 (Tenn. 1858); Owens v. Cowan's Heirs, 7 B. Mon. 152 (Ky. 1846); Cushney v. Henry, 4 Paige 345 (N.Y. 1834).

(n72)Footnote 117. In re Loree's Trust Estate, 95 A.2d 435 (N.J. Super. Ch. 1953); Empire Trust Co. v. Sample, 50 N.Y.S.2d 5 (1944); Craig v. Craig, 3 Barb. Ch. 76 (N.Y. 1848).

(n73)Footnote 118. Riggs v. Moise, 128 S.W.2d 632 (Mo. 1939); Clay's Adm'r v. Edwards' Trustee, 2 S.W. 147 (Ky. 1886).

(n74)Footnote 119. In re Curtiss, 37 N.Y.S. 586 (1896).

(n75)Footnote 120. In re Jones, 4 Sandf. Ch. 615 (N.Y. 1847).

(n76)Footnote 121. Douglas Properties v. Stix, 159 So. 1 (Fla. 1935).

(n77)Footnote 122. Williams v. Hund, 258 S.W. 703 (Mo. 1924); Hart v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 158 N.Y.S. 1063 (1916).

(n78)Footnote 123. In re Estate of West, 560 N.W.2d 810 (Neb. 1997) ("a beneficiary [must] be definitely ascertained at the time of the trust's creation or definitely ascertainable within the period of the rule against perpetuities.") See also Kaufman v. Federal Nat'l Bank, 191 N.E. 422 (Mass. 1934); Boskowitz v. Continental Ins. Co., 161 N.Y.S. 680 (1916); Matter of Catlin, 160 N.Y.S. 1034 (1916); Filkins v. Severin, 104 N.W. 346 (Iowa 1905); Eldridge v. See Yup Co., 17 Cal. 44 (1860).

(n79)Footnote 124. Isaacs v. Emory, 1 A. 713 (Md. 1885) Dyer's Appeal, 107 Pa. 446 (1884); First Presby. Soc. of Town of Chili v. Bowen, 21 Hun. 389 (N.Y. 1880); Barkley v. Lane's Ex'r., 6 Bush. 587 (Ky. 1869); German Land Ass'n v. Scholler, 10 Minn. 331 (1865).

(n80)Footnote 125. Wright v. Pond, 10 Conn. 255 (1834).

(n81)Footnote 126. Cowan v. Henika, 48 N.E. 809 (Ind. App. 1897); Loring v. Palmer, 118 U.S. 321 (1886); Heermans v. Schmaltz, 7 Fed. 566 (C.C. Wis. 1881).

(n82)Footnote 127. Applegate v. Brown, 95 N.W.2d 341 (Neb. 1959); In re Simard's Estate, 102 A.2d 508 (N.H. 1954); Gunn v. Wagner, 48 N.W.2d 292 (Iowa 1951); Lundie v. Walker, 9 A.2d 783 (N.J. Ch. 1939); In re Davis' Estate,

56 P.2d 584 (Cal. App. 1936); Hughes v. Jackson, 81 S.W.2d 656 (Tex. 1935); Atwater v. Russell, 51 N.W. 629, application denied, 52 N.W. 26 (Minn. 1892).

(n83)Footnote 128. Trotter v. Blocker, 6 Port. 269 (Ala. 1838).

(n84)Footnote 129. McCartney v. Jacobs, 123 N.E. 557 (Ill. 1919); Turner v. Barber, 62 S.E. 587 (Ga. 1908).

(n85)Footnote 130. Morsman v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 90 F.2d 18 (8th Cir. 1937), cert. denied, 302 U.S. 701 (1937); Folk v. Hughes, 84 S.E. 713 (S.C. 1915); Easton v. Demuth, 162 S.W. 294 (Mo. App. 1913); Carson v. Carson, 60 N.C. 575 (1864); Ashhurst v. Given, 5 Watts & S. 323 (Pa. 1843).

(n86)Footnote 131. In re Renner's Estate, 57 A.2d 836 (Pa. 1948).

(n87)Footnote 132. In re Zoller's Estate, 96 A.2d 321 (Pa. 1953); Kelly v. Nichols, 21 A. 906 (R.I. 1891).

(n88)Footnote 133. Gilmer's Legatees v. Gilmer's Ex'rs, 42 Ala. 9 (1868).

(n89)Footnote 134. In re Devereux' Estate, 48 Pa. D. & C. 491 (1943).

(n90)Footnote 135. In re Hovland's Estate, 101 P.2d 500 (Cal. App. 1940); De Leuil's Ex'rs v. De Leuil, 74 S.W.2d 474 (Ky. 1934); Clark v. Callahan, 66 A. 618 (Md. 1907). In some cases, failure to give notice to the beneficiary may be evidence that the trustor had no genuine intent to create a trust. See, e.g., Gobeille v. Allison, 76 A. 354 (R.I. 1910); Casteel v. Flint, 83 N.W. 796 (Iowa 1900).

(n91)Footnote 136. In re Pilot Radio & Tube Corp., 72 F.2d 316 (1st Cir. 1934); Plaut v. Storey, 30 N.E. 886 (Ind. 1892); Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609 (1867).

(n92)Footnote 137. In re Duwe's Estate, 281 N.W. 669 (Wis. 1938).

(n93)Footnote 138. Roop v. Greenfield, 42 A.2d 614 (Pa. 1945).

(n94)Footnote 139. Bailey v. Worster, 68 A. 698 (Me. 1907); Cunniff v. McDonnell, 81 N.E. 879 (Mass. 1907).

(n95)Footnote 140. Bacon v. Barber, 6 A.2d 9 (Vt. 1939); Arnold v. Jones, 77 Tenn. (9 Lea) 545 (1882).

(n96)Footnote 141. Perkins v. Isley, 32 S.E.2d 588 (N.C. 1945); Blackwell v. Virginia Trust Co., 14 S.E.2d 301 (Va. 1941); Jourdan v. Andrews, 102 A. 33 (Pa. 1917).

(n97)Footnote 142. Stevens v. Stevens, 169 N.E. 570 (Ohio 1929); Stoehr v. Miller, 296 F. 414 (2d Cir. 1923).

(n98)Footnote 143. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Kern, 142 S.W.2d 493 (Mo. 1940); Trustees of Kenyon College v. Cleveland Trust Co., 196 N.E. 784 (Ohio 1935).

(n99)Footnote 144. George T. Bogert, Trusts 135 (6th ed. 1987), citing Blair v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 300 U.S. 5 (1937).

(n100)Footnote 145. Conway v. Adams County, 107 N.W.2d 418 (Neb. 1961), rehearing denied, opinion clarified, 108 N.W.2d 637 (Neb. 1961); Ephraim v. Metropolitan Trust Co. of California, 172 P.2d 501 (Cal. 1946); Duncanson v. Lill, 153 N.E. 618 (Ill. 1926).

(n101)Footnote 146. Wollard v. Sulier, 232 P.2d 991 (N.M. 1951).

(n102)Footnote 147. Ridgely v. Pfingstag, 50 A.2d 578 (Md. 1946).

(n103)Footnote 148. Tapley v. Dill, 217 S.W.2d 369 (Mo. 1949), but see, Theodore Short Trust v. Fuller, 7 S.W.3d 482 (Mo. App. 1999).

(n104)Footnote 149. Lincoln Bank & Trust Co. v. Lane, 303 S.W.2d 273 (Ky. 1957); Frye v. Burk, 12 N.E.2d 152 (Ohio App. 1936).

(n105)Footnote 150. In re Cavanaugh's Will, 95 N.Y.S.2d 383 (1950).

(n106)Footnote 151. Wallace v. Wallace, 190 S.E. 293 (Va. 1937).

(n107)Footnote 152. McFaddin v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 148 F.2d 570 (5th Cir. 1945).

(n108)Footnote 153. Id.

(n109)Footnote 154. Edmonds v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 90 F.2d 14 (9th Cir. 1937), cert. denied, 302 U.S. 713 (1937).

(n110)Footnote 155. Akin v. First Nat'l Bank of Winston-Salem, 42 S.E.2d 518 (N.C. 1947).

(n111)Footnote 156. Bodman v. Martha's Vineyard Nat'l Bank, 111 N.E.2d 670 (Mass. 1953); In re Du Plaine's Estate, 39 A. 947 (Pa. 1898); Spencer v. Harris, 252 P.2d 115 (Wyo. 1953).

(n112)Footnote 157. Blair v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 300 U.S. 5 (1937); Brown v. Fletcher, 253 Fed. 15 (2d Cir. 1918); Brown v. Ford, 91 S.E. 145 (Va. 1917); Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Luke, 108 N.E. 64 (Mass. 1915); Managan v. Shea, 149 N.W. 378 (Wis. 1914); Freeman v. Maxwell 170 S.W. 1150 (Mo. 1914); Mortimer v. Jackson, 155 S.W. 341 (Tex. App. 1913); Jenkinson v. New York Finance Co., 82 A. 36 (N.J. Ch. 1911); Parkhill v. Doggett, 130 N.W. 411 (Iowa 1911); Jones v. Jones, 77 A. 270 (Md. 1910); Hiss v. Hiss, 81 N.E. 1056 (Ill. 1907); Cherry v. Cape Fear Power Co., 55 S.E. 287 (N.C. 1906); Riordan v. Schlicher, 41 So. 842 (Ala. 1906); Stump v. Warfield, 65 A. 346 (Md. 1906); Newton v. Jay, 95 N.Y.S. 413 (1905); Perrine v. Newell, 23 A. 492 (N.J. 1892); Henson v. Wright, 12 S.W. 1035 (Tenn. 1890); Martin v. Davis, 82 Ind. 38 (1882); Henderson v. Sherman, 11 N.W. 153 (Mich. 1882); Burnett v. Hawpe's Ex'r, 25 Gratt. 481 (Va. 1874); Tillson v. Moulton, 23 Ill. 600 (1860); Elliott v. Armstrong, 2 Blackf. 198 (Ind. 1829); Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189 (1810).

(n113)Footnote 158. Foster v. Friede, 37 Mo. 37 (1865).

(n114)Footnote 159. In re Freudmann's Estate, 192 N.Y.S.2d 993 (1959); Brown v. Sperry, 181 So. 734 (Miss. 1938).

(n115)Footnote 160. Lexington Brewing Co. v. Hamon, 160 S.W. 264 (Ky. 1913); Central Trust Co. v. Weeks, 44 N.Y.S. 828 (1897); Meier v. Hess, 32 P. 755 (Or. 1893); Putnam v. Story, 132 Mass. 205 (1882).

(n116)Footnote 161. Canton Exchange Bank v. Yazoo County, 109 So. 1 (Miss. 1926); Adamson v. Paonessa, 179 P. 880 (Cal. 1919); Lambert v. Morgan, 72 A. 407 (Md. 1909).

(n117)Footnote 162. Moorestown Trust Co. v. Buzby, 157 A. 663 (N.J. Ch. 1932); Salem Trust Co. v. Manufacturers Finance Co., 264 U.S. 182 (1924).

(n118)Footnote 163. Sutherland v. Pierner, 24 N.W.2d 883 (Wis. 1946); Courts v. Aldridge, 120 P.2d 362 (Okla. 1941); Cordon v. Gregg, 97 P.2d 732 (Or. 1940), petition adhered to on rehearing, 101 P.2d 414 (Or. 1940); Lamb v. First Huntington Nat'l Bank, 7 S.E.2d 441 (W. Va. 1940); Doran v. Kennedy, 141 N.W. 851 (Minn. 1913), aff'd, 237 U.S. 362 (1915); Shackleford v. Elliott, 70 N.E. 745 (Ill. 1904); Boone v. Davis, 8 So. 202 (Miss. 1886); Bredell v. Collier, 40 Mo. 287 (1867).

(n119)Footnote 164. In re Williams' Estate, 99 P.2d 349 (Cal. App. 1940); In re Linton's Estate, 48 A. 298 (Pa. 1901); Johnston v. Spicer, 13 N.E. 753 (N.Y. 1887); Matthews v. Ward, 10 Gill. & J. 443 (Md. 1839).

(n120)Footnote 165. Fletcher v. Felker, 97 F. Supp. 755 (W.D. Ark. 1951); Jones v. Glenn, 28 So. 2d 198 (Ala. 1946); Jamison v. Zausch, 126 S.W. 1023 (Mo. 1910); McCulloch v. Valentine, 38 N.W. 854 (Neb 1888).

(n121)Footnote 166. Smith v. Chenault, 48 Tex. 455 (1878); Jelinek v. Stepan, 43 N.W. 90 (Minn. 1889); Hewitt v. Rankin, 41 Iowa 35 (1875); Tarrant v. Swain, 15 Kan. 146 (1875); Allen v. Hawley, 66 Ill. 164 (1872).

(n122)Footnote 167. Morrison v. Doyle, 570 N.W.2d 692 (Minn. App. 1997) (explaining that a court may temporarily restrain the transfer of real property to or from trust as security for satisfaction of judgment against a beneficiary of a trust or estate), rev'd, 582 N.W.2d 237 (Minn. 1998). See also Taylor v. Harwell, 65 Ala. 1 (1880); Heath v. Bishop, 4 Rich. Eq. 46 (S.C. 1851).

(n123)Footnote 168. Loughney v. Page, 182 A. 700 (1936); Brevard County v. Ramsey, 658 So. 2d 1190 (Fla. App. 1995) (passive trust not executed by the statute of uses).

(n124)Footnote 169. Realty Exchange Corp. v. Phoenix Title & Trust Co., 487 P.2d 420 (Ariz. App. 1971); Humphrey v. Gerard, 77 A. 65 (Conn. 1910).

(n125)Footnote 170. Showalter v. G. H. Nunnelley Co., 257 S.W. 1027 (Ky. 1924).

(n126)Footnote 171. Horton v. Moore, 110 F.2d 189 (6th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 311 U.S. 692 (1940), reh'g denied, 311 U.S. 728 (1940); In re Cunningham's Estate, 16 A.2d 712 (Pa. 1940); In re Reynolds, 243 Fed. 268 (D.C.N.Y. 1917); Jenks v. Title Guarantee & Trust Co., 156 N.Y.S. 478 (1915).

(n127)Footnote 172. Singer v. Singer, 237 S.W.2d 600 (Tex. 1951); Erickson v. Erickson, 266 N.W. 161 (Minn. 1936); Mellon v. Driscoll, 117 F.2d 477 (3d Cir. 1941), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 579 (1941); Medwedeff v. Fisher, 17 A.2d 141 (Md. 1941); Kelly v. Kelly, 79 P.2d 1059 (Cal. 1938); Snyder v. O'Connor, 81 P.2d 773 (Colo. 1938); Wagner v. Wagner, 91 N.E. 66 (Ill. 1910).

(n128)Footnote 173. Burns v. Miller, Hiersche, Martens, & Hayward, P.C., 948 S.W.2d 317 (Tex. App. 1997) ("The effect of the spendthrift trust statute is that spendthrift trusts are exempt from attachment, execution, garnishment, or other seizure.") Dictum in a United States Supreme Court decision cleared the way for states' approval of spendthrift trusts. Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U.S. (1 Otto) 716 (1875). See Broadway Nat'l Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170 (1882).

(n129)Footnote 174. See, e.g., Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R.I. 205 (1858).

(n130)Footnote 175. Smith v. Smith, 124 P.2d 117 (Cal. App. 1942); Canfield v. Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles, 87 P.2d 830 (Cal. 1939); Magner v. Crooks, 73 P. 585 (Cal. 1903); Wetmore v. Wetmore, 44 N.E. 169 (N.Y. 1896); Williams v. Thorn, 70 N.Y. 270 (1877).

(n131)Footnote 176. Lundgren v. Hoglund, 711 P.2d 809 (Mont. 1985); Erickson v. Erickson, 266 N.W. 161 (Minn. 1936); Williams v. Smith, 93 N.W. 464 (Wis. 1903).

(n132)Footnote 177. Canfield v. Security-First Nat'l Bank of Los Angeles, 87 P.2d 830 (Cal. 1939); In re Williams, 79 N.E. 1019 (N.Y. 1907); Williams v. Thorn, 70 N.Y. 270 (1877). Security Pacific Bank Washington v. Chang, 80 F.3d 1412 (9th Cir. 1996) ("[I]t is well-settled that when a court declares a spendthrift clause to be invalid, the court simply voids the spendthrift clause while leaving the rest of the trust intact though subject to the reach of creditors."). Id. at 1419.

(n133)Footnote 178. Nelson v. California Trust Co., 202 P.2d 1021 (Cal. 1949); Jamison v. Mississippi Valley Trust Co., 207 S.W. 788 (Mo. 1918); De Rousse v. Williams, 164 N.W. 896 (Iowa 1917); Cunningham v. Bright, 117

N.E. 909 (Mass. 1917); Wenzel v. Powder, 59 A. 194 (Md. 1904); Schenck v. Barnes, 50 N.E. 967 (N.Y. 1898); Hexter v. Clifford, 5 Colo. 168 (1879).

(n134)Footnote 179. Fetting v. Flanagan, 45 A.2d 355 (Md. 1946); In re Rosenberg's Will, 199 N.E. 206 (N.Y. 1935).

(n135)Footnote 180. Davies v. Harrison, 3 Pa. Dist. & Co. R. 481 (1923).

(n136)Footnote 181. In re Lackmann's Estate, 320 P.2d 186 (Cal. App. 1958), see also In re Hinckley's Estate, 320 P.2d 186 (Cal. Dist. Ct. App. 1961); Sherman v. Skuse, 59 N.E. 990 (N.Y. 1901).

(n137)Footnote 182. Calloway v. Smith, 186 S.W.2d 642 (Ky. 1945); Todd's Ex'rs v. Todd, 86 S.W.2d 168 (Ky. 1935); Funk v. Grulke, 213 N.W. 608 (Iowa 1927); Foster v. Foster, 133 Mass. 179 (1882).

(n138)Footnote 183. In re Tone's Estate, 39 N.W.2d 401 (Iowa 1949).

(n139)Footnote 184. Constanza v. Verona, 137 A.2d 614 (N.J. Super. Ch. 1958); State v. Rubion, 308 S.W.2d 4 (Tex. 1957).

(n140)Footnote 185. Seattle First Nat'l Bank v. Crosby, 254 P.2d 732 (Wash. 1953); Jones v. Coon, 295 N.W. 162 (Iowa 1940); In re Keeler's Estate, 3 A.2d 413 (Pa. 1939); Keyser v. Mitchell, 67 Pa. 473 (1871).

(n141)Footnote 186. Russell v. Meyers, 260 S.W. 377 (Ky. 1924); Talley v. Ferguson, 62 S.E. 456 (W. Va. 1908); Linn v. Downing, 74 N.E. 729 (Ill. 1905); Bell v. Watkins, 1 So. 92 (Ala. 1887).

(n142)Footnote 187. Bettinger v. Bridenbecker, 63 Barb. 395 (N.Y. 1865).

(n143)Footnote 188. Gueutal v. Gueutal, 98 N.Y.S. 1002 (1906); Angus v. Noble, 46 A. 278 (Conn. 1900); Sheedy v. Roach, 124 Mass. 472 (1878).

(n144)Footnote 189. George T. Bogert, Trusts 173-174 (6th ed. 1987).

(n145)Footnote 190. John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 201 (4th ed. 1942).

(n146)Footnote 191. Alaska, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, and Virginia.

(n147)Footnote 192. Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, and Washington.

(n148)Footnote 193. California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, and West Virginia. Pond v. Pond, 678 N.E.2d 1321 (Mass. 1997).

(n149)Footnote 194. Mercer v. Mercer, 52 S.E.2d 229 (N.C. 1949); Alexander v. House, 54 A.2d 510 (Conn. 1947); Tillman v. Blackburn, 124 S.W.2d 755 (Ky. 1939); Amory v. Trustees of Amherst College, 118 N.E. 933 (Mass. 1918); Armstrong v. Barber, 88 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1909); In re Shallcross' Estate, 49 A. 936 (Pa. 1901); Bigelow v. Cady, 48 N.E. 974 (Ill. 1897); Williams v. Herrick, 32 A. 913 (R.I. 1895); Barnum v. Barnum, 26 Md. 119 (1866).

(n150)Footnote 195. Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960); Finch v. Honeycutt, 97 S.E.2d 478 (N.C. 1957); Schmidt v. Schmidt, 261 S.W.2d 892 (Tex. Civ. App. 1953); Bardfeld v. Bardfeld, 92 A.2d 854 (N.J. Super. Ch. 1952); Guarantee Trust Co. v. Latz, 181 A. 645 (N.J. Ch. 1935); Deacon v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 197 S.W. 261 (Mo. 1917); Loomer v. Loomer, 57 A. 167 (Conn. 1904); In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898).

(n151)Footnote 196. Cook v. Horn, 104 S.E.2d 461 (Ga. 1958); Schellentrager v. Tradesmen's Nat'l Bank and Trust Co., 88 A.2d 773 (Pa. 1952); Wechter v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 52 N.E.2d 157 (Ill. 1943); Howe v. Morse, 55 N.E. 213 (Mass. 1899).

(n152)Footnote 197. Thellusson v. Woodford, 11 Ves. 112 (1799).

(n153)Footnote 198. Carlberg v. State Savings Bank & Trust Co., 143 N.E. 441 (Ill. 1924).

(n154)Footnote 199. Blue Cross & Blue Shield Mut. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield Ass' n, 110 F.3d 318 (6th Cir. 1997) (" 'charitable trust'... defined as 'any fiduciary relationship with respect to property arising under the law of this state or of another jurisdiction as a result of a manifestation of intention to create it, and subjecting the person by whom the property is held to fiduciary duties to deal with the property within this state for any charitable, religious, or educational purpose' "); In re Freshour's Estate, 345 P.2d 689 (Kan. 1959); In re Petroleum Research Fund, 184 N.Y.S.2d 413 (1958); In re Pruner's Estate, 136 A.2d 107 (Pa. 1957); In re McKee's Estate, 108 A.2d 214 (Pa. 1954).

(n155)Footnote 200. In re Robbins' Estate, 21 Cal. Rptr. 797 (1962); Haggin v. International Trust Co., 169 P. 138 (Colo. 1917); In re Coleman's Estate, 138 P. 992 (Cal. 1914); French v. Calkins, 96 N.E. 877 (Ill. 1911); Richardson v. Essex Inst., 94 N.E. 262 (Mass. 1911).

The director of an organization impressed as a charitable trust is the trustee of the trust. Blue Cross & Blue Shield Mut. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield Ass'n, 110 F.3d 318 (6th Cir. 1997).

In re of Estate of Homburg, 697 So. 2d 1154 (Miss. 1997) (Courts should favor charitable trusts and enforce them whenever possible).

(n156)Footnote 201. Woodstown Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Snelbaker, 40 A.2d 222 (N.J. Ch. 1944), aff'd, 44 A.2d 210 (N.J. Err. & App. 1945).

(n157)Footnote 202. Pace v. Dukes, 55 S.E.2d 367 (Ga. 1949); In re Scholler's Estate, 169 A.2d 554 (Pa. 1961); Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Upjohn's Estate, 124 F.2d 73 (6th Cir. 1941).

(n158)Footnote 203. Averill v. Lewis, 138 A. 815 (Conn. 1927); Russell v. Allen, 107 U.S. 163 (1883).

(n159)Footnote 204. Harrison v. Barker Annuity Fund, 90 F.2d 286 (7th Cir. 1937); Kerner v. Thompson, 6 N.E.2d 131 (Ill. 1936); Boenhardt v. Loch, 107 N.Y.S. 786 (1907), aff'd, 113 N.Y.S. 747 (1908), aff'd, 92 N.E. 1078 (N.Y. 1910).

(n160)Footnote 205. In re Small's Estate, 58 N.W.2d 477 (Iowa 1953); In re Carpenter's Estate, 297 N.Y.S. 649 (1937); In re Shattuck's Will, 86 N.E. 455 (N.Y. 1908).

(n161)Footnote 206. Stoeer v. Meyer, 147 S.W.2d 1041 (Ky. 1941); Woodcock v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 199 S.E. 20 (N.C. 1938), superseded by statute as recognized in Banner v. North Carolina Nat. Bank, 146 S.E.2d 89 (N.C. 1966); Wentura v. Kinnerk, 5 S.W.2d 66 (Mo. 1928).

(n162)Footnote 207. In re Finkelstein's Estate, 70 N.Y.S.2d 596 (1947); In re Jordan's Estate, 197 A. 150 (Pa. 1938); Kirwin v. Attorney General, 175 N.E. 164 (Mass. 1931); In re Anderson's Estate, 112 A. 766 (Pa. 1921); Grant v. Saunders, 95 N.W. 411 (Iowa 1903).

(n163)Footnote 208. Goetz v. Old Nat'l Bank of Martinsburg, 84 S.E.2d 759 (W. Va. 1954); In re Small's Estate, 58 N.W.2d 477 (Iowa 1953); Buchanan v. Willis, 255 S.W.2d 8 (Tenn. 1953).

(n164)Footnote 209. Festorazzi v. St. Joseph's Catholic Church of Mobile, 18 So. 394 (Ala. 1895).

(n165)Footnote 210. Morris v. Edwards, 124 N.E. 724 (N.Y. 1919); In re Hamilton's Estate, 186 P. 587 (Cal. 1919); Burke v. Burke, 102 N.E. 293 (Ill. 1913); In re Kavanaugh's Estate, 126 N.W. 672 (Wis. 1910); Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 70 S.W. 1068 (Ky. 1902); Kerrigan v. Tabb, 39 A. 701 (N.J. Super. Ch. 1898); In re Schouler, 134 Mass. 426 (1883).

(n166)Footnote 211. Harrison v. Brophy, 51 P. 883 (Kan. 1898); Sherman v. Baker, 40 A. 11 (R.I. 1898).

(n167)Footnote 212. Chelsea Nat'l Bank v. Our Lady Star of the Sea, Atlantic City, 147 A. 470 (N.J. Ch. 1929).

(n168)Footnote 213. Wood v. Oldfield, 106 N.E. 1014 (Mass. 1914); Bliss v. Linden Cemetery Ass'n, 87 A. 224 (N.J. Ch. 1913); Stewart v. Coshow, 142 S.W. 283 (Mo. 1911).

(n169)Footnote 214. In re Byrne's Estate, 100 A.2d 157 (N.H. 1953); In re Essig's Estate, 74 A.2d 787 (Pa. Super. 1950); Rhode Island Hosp. Trust Co. v. Proprietors of Swan Point Cemetery, 3 A.2d 236 (R.I. 1938); Travis v. Randolph, 112 S.W.2d 835 (Tenn. 1938); Bockel v. Fidelity Dev. Co., 101 S.W.2d 628 (Tex. Civ. App. 1937).

(n170)Footnote 215. Pope v. Alexander, 250 S.W.2d 51 (Tenn. 1952); Drennan v. Agurs, 82 S.E. 622 (S.C. 1914); Burke v. Burke, 102 N.E. 293 (Ill. 1913); Lounsbury v. Trustees of Square Lake Burial Ass'n, 129 N.W. 36 (Mich. 1910), aff'd, 137 N.W. 513 (Mich. 1912); Hilliard v. Parker, 74 A. 447 (N.J. Ch. 1909); McIlvain v. Hockaday, 81 S.W. 54 (Tex. Civ. App. 1904); In re Gay's Estate, 71 P. 707 (Cal. 1903); Sherman v. Baker, 40 A. 11 (R.I. 1898); Johnson v. Holifield, 79 Ala. 423 (1885); Piper v. Moulton, 72 Me. 155 (1881).

(n171)Footnote 216. Kingsley v. Montrose Cemetery Co., 26 N.E.2d 613 (Ill. App. 1940); Whiting v. Bertram, 199 N.E. 367 (Ohio App. 1935); In re Johnson's Will, 5 N.Y.S. 922 (1889).

(n172)Footnote 217. Mason v. Bloomington Library Ass'n, 86 N.E. 1044 (Ill. 1908).

(n173)Footnote 218. Opinion of the Justices, 133 A.2d 792 (N.H. 1957); Delaware Trust Co. v. Delaware Trust Co., 95 A.2d 569 (Del. Ch. 1953); FitzGerald v. East Lawn Cemetery, 10 A.2d 683 (Conn. 1940); Trustees of M. E. Church of Milford v. Williams, 96 A. 795 (Del. Super. 1914); Webster v. Sughrow, 45 A. 139 (N.H. 1898); Ford v. Ford Ex'r, 16 S.W. 451 (Ky. 1891).

(n174)Footnote 219. Vidal v. Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of Philadelphia, 43 U.S. (2 How.) 127 (1844).

(n175)Footnote 220. Howard Savings Inst. v. Peep, 170 A.2d 39 (N.J. 1961); Champlin v. Powers, 90 A.2d 787 (R.I. 1952), but see Hanley v. Alarie, 746 A.2d 125 (R.I. 2000); Humphrey v. Board of Trustees, 165 S.E. 547 (N.C. 1932).

(n176)Footnote 221. Pronounced "ell eh MOSS seh nery."

(n177)Footnote 222. In re Brown's Estate, 295 P.2d 566 (Cal. App. 1956); Altman v. McCutchen, 210 S.W.2d 63 (Mo. 1948).

(n178)Footnote 223. In re Barbieri's Estate, 167 N.Y.S.2d 962 (1957); In re Pattberg's Will, 123 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1953), aff'd, 118 N.E.2d 903 (N.Y. 1954); Bader Realty & Inv. Co. v. St. Louis Housing Authority, 217 S.W.2d 489 (Mo. 1949); Clevenger v. Rio Farms, 204 S.W.2d 40 (Tex. Civ. App. 1947); Craven v. Wilmington Teachers Ass'n, 47 A.2d 580 (Del. 1946); Harrison v. Barker Annuity Fund, 90 F.2d 286 (7th Cir. 1937); Eccles v. Rhode Island Hosp. Trust Co., 98 A. 129 (Conn. 1916); Klumpert v. Vrieland, 121 N.W. 34 (Iowa 1909); Rader v. Stubblefield, 86 P. 560 (Wash. 1906); In re Strong's Appeal, 37 A. 395 (Conn. 1897); Trim v. Brightman, 31 A. 1071 (Pa. 1895); Webster v. Wiggin, 31 A. 824 (R.I. 1895); Holmes v. Coates, 34 N.E. 190 (Mass. 1893); Beardsley's Ex'r v. Selectmen of Bridgeport, 3 A. 557 (Conn. 1886); DeBruler v. Ferguson, 54 Ind. 549 (1876); Swasey v. American Bible Soc., 57 Me. 523 (1869).

(n179)Footnote 224. In re Carlson's Estate, 358 P.2d 669 (Kan. 1961); In re Masson's Estate, 298 P.2d 619 (Cal. App. 1956); Raser v. Johnson, 132 N.E.2d 819 (Ill. 1956); Pacific Home v. County of Los Angeles, 256 P.2d 36, sub. opinion, 264 P.2d 544 (Cal. 1953); Mirinda v. King, 78 A.2d 98 (N.J. Super. 1951); Hinson v. Smyer, 21 So. 2d 825 (Ala. 1945); Floyd v. Smith, 5 N.W.2d 695 (Mich. 1942); In re Schikowsky's Estate, 130 P.2d 598 (Kan. 1942); Noble v. First Nat'l Bank of Anniston, 1 So. 2d 289 (Ala. 1941); Sheen v. Sheen, 8 A.2d 136 (N.J. Ch. 1939); In re Somerville's Estate, 55 P.2d 597 (Cal. 1936); Case v. Hasse, 93 A. 728 (N.J. Eq.); White v. Newark, 103 A. 1042 (N.J. 1914); Hayden v. Connecticut Hosp. for the Insane, 30 A. 50 (Conn. 1894).

(n180)Footnote 225. McClure v. Carter, 116 S.E.2d 260 (Va. 1960).

(n181)Footnote 226. Wood v. Oldfield, 106 N.E. 1014 (Mass. 1914); Girard Trust Co. v. Russell, 179 F. 446 (3d Cir. 1910).

(n182)Footnote 227. In re Garrison's Estate, 137 A.2d 321 (Pa. 1958); In re Langeloth's Trust, 102 N.Y.S. 2d 978 (1951), aff'd, 105 N.Y.S.2d 396 (1951); Trustees of New Castle Common v. Megginson, 77 A. 565 (Del. 1910).

(n183)Footnote 228. Blackford v. Anderson, 286 N.W. 735 (Iowa 1939); Town of Hamden v. Rice, 24 Conn. 350 (1856).

(n184)Footnote 229. Jensen v. Nelson, 19 N.W.2d 596 (Iowa 1945); Stuart v. Easton, 74 Fed. 854 (3d Cir. 1896), aff'd, 170 U.S. 383 (1898); Coggeshall v. Pelton, 7 Johns. Ch. 292 (N.Y. 1823).

(n185)Footnote 230. Haggin v. International Trust Co., 169 P. 138 (Colo. 1917); Lightfoot v. Poindexter, 199 S.W. 1152 (Tex. Civ. App. 1917); Hosmer v. Detroit, 141 N.W. 657 (Mich. 1913); Burr v. Boston, 95 N.E. 208 (Mass 1911); In re Bartlett, 40 N.E. 899 (Mass. 1895).

(n186)Footnote 231. Board of Assessors v. Cunningham Found., 26 N.E.2d 335 (Mass. 1940); In re Smith's Estate, 37 A. 114 (Pa. 1897).

(n187)Footnote 232. Richardson v. Mullery, 86 N.E. 319 (Mass. 1908); Bethlehem Borough v. Perseverance Fire Co., 81 Pa. 445 (1876); Magill v. Brown, Fed. Cas. No. 8952 (1833).

(n188)Footnote 233. Beck v. Philadelphia, 17 Pa. 104 (1851).

(n189)Footnote 234. Penny v. Croul, 43 N.W. 649 (Mich. 1889); Rotch v. Emerson, 105 Mass. 431 (1870); Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. 437 (1858).

(n190)Footnote 235. Harrison v. Barton, 358 P.2d 211 (Okla. 1960); Board of Cty. Comm'rs v. Warram, 285 P.2d 1034 (Okla. 1955).

(n191)Footnote 236. Sargent v. Town of Cornish, 54 N.H. 18 (1873).

(n192)Footnote 237. In re Peck's Estate, 335 P.2d 185 (Cal. App. 1959), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 826 (1959), reh'g denied, 361 U.S. 903 (1959); Mills v. Montclair Trust Co., 49 A.2d 889 (N.J. 1946); Parkhurst v. Burrill, 117 N.E. 39 (Mass. 1917).

(n193)Footnote 238. In re Robbins' Estate, 21 Cal. Rptr. 797 (1962); Gaston County United Dry Forces v. Wilkins, 191 S.E. 8 (N.C. 1937), superseded by statute as recognized in Banner v. North Carolina Nat. Bank, 146 S.E.2d 89 (N.C. 1966); Collier v. Lindley, 266 P. 526 (Cal. 1928); Taylor v. Hoag, 116 A. 826 (Pa. 1922); Peth v. Spear, 115 P. 164 (Wash. 1911); Garrison v. Little, 75 Ill. App. 402 (1897); George v. Braddock, 18 A. 881 (N.J. 1889); Haines v. Allen, 78 Ind. 100 (1881).

(n194)Footnote 239. Boorse Trust, 64 Pa. D. & C. 447 (1948); In re Grossman's Estate, 75 N.Y.S.2d 335 (1947).

(n195)Footnote 240. Veterans of Foreign Wars v. Kunz, 269 P.2d 882 (Cal. App. 1954); Claim of Phillips, 124 N.Y.S.2d 763 (1953), but see Masi v. Nagle, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 (Cal. App. 1992); Mason v. Perry, 48 A. 671 (R.I. 1901).

(n196)Footnote 241. Shenandoah Valley Nat'l Bank v. Taylor, 63 S.E.2d 786 (Va. 1951); In re Swayze's Estate, 191 P.2d 322 (Mont. 1948).

(n197)Footnote 242. Smith v. Powers, 117 A.2d 844 (R.I. 1955); Smith v. Heyward, 105 S.E. 275 (S.C. 1920), but see Evangelical Lutheran Charities Soc. v. South Carolina Nat'l Bank, 495 S.E.2d 199 (S.C. 1997); Kelly v. Nichols, 21 A. 906 (R.I. 1891).

(n198)Footnote 243. Linney v. Cleveland Trust Co., 165 N.E. 101 (Ohio App. 1928); Gibson v. Frye Institute, 193 S.W. 1059 (Tenn. 1917).

(n199)Footnote 244. In re Forrester's Estate, 279 P. 721 (Colo. 1929); Willett v. Willett, 247 S.W. 739 (Ky. 1923).

(n200)Footnote 245. Pope v. Alexander, 250 S.W.2d 51 (Tenn. 1952); Frost Nat'l Bank v. Boyd, 188 S.W.2d 199 (Tex. Civ. App. 1945), aff'd, 196 S.W.2d 497 (Tex. 1946); Amory v. Trustees of Amherst College, 118 N.E. 933 (Mass. 1918).

(n201)Footnote 246. In re Palethorp's Estate, 94 A. 1060 (Pa. 1915); Smart v. Durham, 86 A. 821 (N.H. 1913); St. Paul's Church v. Attorney General, 41 N.E. 231 (Mass. 1895).

(n202)Footnote 247. Rhode Island Hosp. Trust Co. v. Proprietors of Swan Point Cemetery, 3 A.2d 236 (R.I. 1938), aff'd, 7 A.2d 205 (R.I. 1939); Allred v. Beggs, 84 S.W.2d 223 (Tex. 1935); Reagh v. Dickey, 48 P.2d 941 (Wash. 1935).

(n203)Footnote 248. Poole v. Starke, 324 S.W.2d 234 (Tex. Civ. App. 1959).

(n204)Footnote 249. First Portland Nat'l Bank v. Kaler-Vaill Mem. Home, 151 A.2d 708 (Me. 1959); In re Momand's Will, 182 N.Y.S.2d 565 (1959); In re Battle's Estate, 108 A.2d 688 (Pa. 1954).

(n205)Footnote 250. In re Coleman's Estate, 163 P.2d 847 (Idaho 1945); In re Graham's Estate, 218 P. 84 (Cal. App. 1923).

(n206)Footnote 251. Monahan v. O'Byrne, 95 S.E. 210 (Ga. 1918); Trustees of Amherst College v. Ritch, 45 N.E. 876 (N.Y. 1897).

(n207)Footnote 252. Claiborne v. Wilson, 192 S.E. 585 (Va. 1937); Malmquist v. Detar, 255 P. 42 (Kan. 1927); In re Penrose's Estate, 101 A. 319 (Pa. 1917); Starr v. Minister and Trustees of Starr Meth. Prot. Church, 76 A. 595 (Md. 1910); Merrill v. American Bapt. Missionary Union, 62 A. 647 (N.H. 1905); Rolfe & Rumford Asylum v. Lefebre, 45 A. 1087 (N.H. 1898); Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897); Merritt v. Bucknam, 77 Me. 253 (1885); Jocelyn v. Nott, 44 Conn. 55 (1876); Village of Brattleboro v. Mead, 43 Vt. 556 (1870); Proprietors of Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 (1855).

(n208)Footnote 253. McClure v. Carter, 116 S.E.2d 260 (Va. 1960); Tumlin v. Troy Bank & Trust Co., 61 So. 2d 817 (Ala. 1950); MacKenzie v. Trustees of Presbytery of Jersey City, 61 A. 1027 (N.J. Err. & App. 1905); Trustees of Storrs Agr. Sch. v. Whitney, 8 A. 141 (Conn. 1887).

(n209)Footnote 254. Trustees of Storrs Agr. School v. Whitney, 8 A. 141 (Conn. 1887); Jones v. Habersham, 107 U.S. (17 Otto) 174 (1883).

(n210)Footnote 255. In re Coleman's Estate, 138 P. 992 (Cal. 1914); Wilson v. First Nat'l Bank of Independence, 145 N.W. 948 (Iowa 1914); Dykeman v. Jenkines, 101 N.E. 1013 (Ind. 1913); Harrington v. Pier, 82 N.W. 345 (Wis.

1900); Penny v. Croul, 43 N.W. 649 (Mich. 1889); Allen v. Stevens, 55 N.E. 568 (N.Y. 1899).

(n211)Footnote 256. Catholic Bishop of Chicago v. Murr, 120 N.E.2d 4 (Ill. 1954); Seif v. Krebs, 86 A. 872 (Pa. 1913).

(n212)Footnote 257. In re Woods' Trust Estate, 311 P.2d 359 (Kan. 1957); In re Lemon's Estate, 286 P.2d 691 (Wash. 1955); Goetz v. Old Nat'l Bank of Martinsburg, 84 S.E.2d 759 (W. Va. 1954); In re Pierce's Estate, 60 N.W.2d 894 (Iowa 1953), but see In re Estate of Weidman, 476 N.W.2d 357 (Iowa 1991); In re Geppert's Estate, 59 N.W.2d 727 (S.D. 1953); Davenport v. Davenport Found., 222 P.2d 11 (Cal. 1950); Smart v. Durham, 86 A. 821 (N.H. 1913); Hilliard v. Parker, 74 A. 447 (N.J1909); Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Jamesport v. Robinson, 70 S.W. 372 (Mo. 1902); In re Smith's Estate, 37 A. 114 (Pa. 1897); Dexter v. Gardner, 7 Allen 243 (Mass. 1863); Franklin v. Armfield, 2 Sneed 305 (Tenn. 1854); Stanley v. McGowen, 37 N.C. 9 (1841).

(n213)Footnote 258. Porter v. Baynard, 28 So. 2d 890 (Fla. 1946); Perkins v. Citizens & Southern Nat'l Bank, 8 S.E.2d 28 (Ga. 1940).

(n214)Footnote 259. Thurlow v. Berry, 25 So. 2d 726 (Ala. 1946).

(n215)Footnote 260. Stubblefield v. Peoples Bank of Bloomington, 94 N.E.2d 127 (Ill. 1950).

(n216)Footnote 261. Wardens of St. Paul's Church v. Attorney General, 41 N.E. 231 (Mass. 1895); Codman v. Brigham, 72 N.E. 1008 (Mass. 1905); Ripley v. Brown, 105 N.E. 637 (Mass. 1914); Wood v. Oldfield, 106 N.E. 1014 (Mass. 1914); Frazier v. Merchants Nat'l Bank of Salem, 5 N.E.2d 550 (Mass. 1936); Brigham v. Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, 134 F. 513 (1st Cir. 1904); City of Boston v. Doyle, 68 N.E. 851 (Mass. 1903); In re Franklin's Estate, 24 A. 626 (Pa. 1892); Waterbury Trust Co. v. Porter, 38 A.2d 598 (Conn. 1944); Perkins v. Citizens & Southern Nat'l Bank, 8 S.E.2d 28 (Ga. 1940); Girard Trust Co. v. Rector, 52 A.2d 591 (Del. Ch. 1947); Conway v. Third Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of Camden, 182 A. 916 (N.J. 1936); Penick v. Bank of Wadesboro, 12 S.E.2d 253 (N.C. 1940); Schreiner v. Cincinnati Altenheim, 22 N.E.2d 587 (Ohio App. 1939). See also Wendell Corp. Trustee v. Thurston, 680 A.2d 1314 (Conn. 1996) ("The underlying debt, which Wendell seeks to satisfy, was incurred on behalf of the trust of which Thurston was a beneficiary. Therefore, we can presume that the trustee borrowed the money, he applied it on behalf of the trust and that, therefore, Thurston benefitted from it. Having enjoyed the benefit of the funds that the trustee borrowed, and having received a distribution without consideration from the trustee that left the trust effectively without funds, it is only fair that Thurston's ownership of an asset so distributed not be shielded from satisfaction of the debt that produced those funds in the first place." Thus, the court imposed a constructive trust on the distributed property.). Id. at 1319.

(n217)Footnote 262. Beatty v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., 122 N.E. 378 (N.Y. 1919).

(n218)Footnote 263. Principles of constructive trust can never be applied when there is nothing more than a broken verbal promise. Edwards v. Edwards, 482 S.E.2d 701 (Ga. 1997). Healy v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 345 U.S. 278 (1953), reh'g denied, 345 U.S. 961 (1953).

(n219)Footnote 264. In re Marriage of Loftis, 2001 Tex. App. LEXIS 734 (held that wife was not entitled to constructive trust for paying off husband's property mortgage before their marriage); McCabe v. Cambiano, 212 S.W.2d 237 (Tex. Civ. App. 1948); Jones v. Carpenter, 106 So. 127 (Fla. 1925); Loomis v. Roberts, 23 N.W. 816 (Mich. 1885).

(n220)Footnote 265. See Georgia Dist. Council of the Assemblies of God, Inc. v. Atlanta Faith Mem'l Church, Inc., 472 S.E.2d 66 (Ga. 1996) ("A constructive trust cannot arise in the case because neither the relevant church documents nor anything else provided the District Council with a legal or equitable interest in Memorial's real property. Therefore, Memorial was free to transfer and sell its property as it desired during its membership, and as a result, issues of fraud and related discovery are not relevant in determining the ownership of the disputed church property."). Id. at 69, 70.

(n221)Footnote 266. Witmer v. Brosius' Estate, 336 P.2d 455 (Kan. 1959); Ordahl v. Johnson, 93 N.E.2d 377 (Ill. App. 1950); Wier v. Kansas City, 204 S.W.2d 268 (Mo. 1947); Buettner Bros. v. Good Hope Miss. Bapt. Church, 18 So. 2d 75 (Ala. 1944); Bradford v. Chase Nat'l Bank of City of New York, 24 F. Supp. 28 (S.D.N.Y. 1938), aff'd, 105 F. 2d 1001 (2d Cir. 1939), aff'd, 309 U.S. 632 (1940).

(n222)Footnote 267. Tartaglis v. Hodges, 10 P.3d 176 (N.M. Ct. App. 2000) (held the reconveyance of property to decedent's estate supported the imposition of a constructive trust for the benefit of the heirs); Housewright v. Steinke, 158 N.E. 138 (Ill. 1927); Goodwin v. McMinn, 44 A. 1094 (Pa. 1899).

(n223)Footnote 268. Wilkins v. Wilkins, 198 So. 335 (Fla. 1940); In re McCrory Stores Corp., 12 F. Supp. 267 (S.D.N.Y. 1935).

(n224)Footnote 269. Weiss v. Storm, 126 So. 2d 295 (Fla. App. 1961); Ryan v. Plath, 140 P.2d 968 (Wash. 1943).

(n225)Footnote 270. Rathbun v. Hill, 354 P.2d 338 (Kan. 1960); Weber v. Jefferson County, 166 P.2d 476 (Or. 1946).

(n226)Footnote 271. Sykes v. Reeves, 24 S.E.2d 688 (Ga. 1943).

(n227)Footnote 272. United States v. Herbawi, 972 F. Supp. 171, 174 (W.D.N.Y. 1997) ("In the forfeiture context, courts have held that a constructive trust, if proven, may establish an interest in the property superior to that of the defendant."); Waterbury v. Nicol, 298 P.2d 211 (Or. 1956); Dietz v. Dietz, 70 N.W.2d 281 (Minn. 1955); Dominick v. Rhodes, 24 S.E.2d 168 (S.C. 1943). Maynor v. Pellegrino, 641 N.Y.S.2d 155, (N.Y. App. Div. 1996) ("[T]he Statute of Frauds is not a defense to an action seeking the imposition of a constructive trust. In order to set forth a valid cause of action for a constructive trust, four elements must be alleged: (1) a confidential relationship, (2) an implied or express promise, (3) a transfer in reliance on the promise, and (4) unjust enrichment.") Id. at 157.

(n228)Footnote 273. Freundschuh v. Freundschuh, 559 N.W.2d 706 (Minn. Ct. App. 1997); Schrager v. Cool, 70 A. 889 (Pa. 1908); Larmon v. Knight, 29 N.E. 1116 (Ill. 1892); Wood v. Rabe, 96 N.Y. 414 (1884); Mallagh v. Mallagh, 19 P. 256 (Cal. 1888); Pratt v. Clark, 57 Mo. 189 (1874); Brannin v. Brannin, 18 N.J. Eq. 212 (1867); Fairchild v. Rasdall, 9 Wis. 379 (1859).

(n229)Footnote 274. Hanigan v. Trumble, 562 N.W.2d 526 (Neb. 1997) ("An action to impose a constructive trust is an equity action, and the party seeking the remedy of a constructive trust has the burden to establish a constructive trust by clear and convincing evidence"); Arbolino v. Arbolino 152 A.2d 541 (R.I. 1959); Hill v. Irons, 113 N.E.2d 243 (Ohio 1953); Hughes v. Helzer, 185 P.2d 537 (Or. 1947); Leake v. Garrett, 268 S.W. 608 (Ark. 1925).

(n230)Footnote 275. Henrichs v. Sundmaker, 89 N.E.2d 732 (Ill. 1950); Knight v. Rowland, 209 S.W.2d 728 (Ky. 1948); Beach v. Beach, 207 S.W.2d 481 (Mo. 1947). McNeely v. Hiatt, 909 P.2d 191 (Or. Ct. App. 1996) ("[T]he evidence shows that Hiatt breached her fiduciary duty in selling the property without a valid reason, that is, without any expected benefit to the trust or its beneficiaries. In fact, Hiatt conceded that she sold the Ranch in order to effectuate her new estate plan for Dollie Crockett, which included ensuring that plaintiffs did not inherit any interest in the Ranch. She compounded that breach of fiduciary duty by completing the sale in secrecy, without advising any of the beneficiaries."). Id. at 196.

(n231)Footnote 276. In re Superior-Pacific Fund, Inc., 693 A.2d 248 (Pa. 1997) ("a constructive trust arises when a person holding title to property is subject to an equitable duty to convey it to another on the ground he would be unjustly enriched if he were permitted to retain it. The necessity for such a trust may arise from circumstances evidencing fraud, duress, undue influence or mistake. The controlling factor in determining whether a constructive trust should be imposed is whether it is necessary to prevent unjust enrichment. One who seeks the imposition of a constructive trust must do so by clear, direct, precise and convincing evidence."); Hanson v. FDIC, 113 F.3d 866 (8th Cir. 1997) ("under Minnesota law, a constructive trust arises 'where a person holding title to property is subject to an equitable duty to convey it to another on the ground that he would be unjustly enriched if he were permitted to retain it ....' "); Logan v. Logan, 937 P.2d 967 (Kan. Ct. App. 1997) ("A constructive trust arises 'wherever the circumstances under which property was acquired make it inequitable that it should be retained by the person who holds the legal title.' "); Libutti v. United States, 107 F.3d 110 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997) ("Generally all that is required to impose a constructive trust is a finding that there was some wrongful act, usually, though not limited to, fraud, mistake, undue influence, or breach of a confidential relationship, which has resulted in a transfer of property."), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 178 F.3d 114 (2d Cir. 1999); Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Zerin, 53 Cal. App. 4th 445 (1997) ("a constructive trust may be imposed in practically any case where there is a wrongful acquisition or detention of property to which another is entitled").

(n232)Footnote 277. Industrial Indem. Co. v. Golden State Co., 316 P.2d 966 (Cal. 1957), cert. denied, 356 U.S. 927 (1958); Healy v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 345 U.S. 278 (1953), reh'g denied, 345 U.S. 961 (1953); Morris v. Morris, 258 S.W.2d 732 (Tenn. 1953); Akers v. Gillentine, 231 S.W.2d 369 (Tenn. 1948).

(n233)Footnote 278. Lesikar v. Rappeport, 33 S.W. 3d 282 (Tex. Ct. App. 2000) (court imposed constructive trust where husband and wife acquired interest by fraud and had fiduciary duty as co-executrix of estate); Procom Energy, L.L.A. v. Roach, 16 S.W.3d 377 (Tex. Ct. App. 2000) (court held constructive trust arose from a breach of an oral promise by a party in a confidential or fiduciary relationship with another); Rothman v. Wilson, 121 F.2d 1000 (9th Cir. 1941); Bainbridge v. Stoner, 106 P.2d 423 (Cal. 1940); Schneider v. Schneider, 146 S.W.2d 584 (Mo. 1940).

(n234)Footnote 279. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago v. Kelley, 76 N.E.2d 820 (Ill. App. 1948); George Washington Mem. Park Cemetery Ass'n v. Memorial Dev. Co., 55 A.2d 675 (N.J. Ch. 1947); In re Lewis' Estate, 37 A.2d 559 (Pa. 1944).

(n235)Footnote 280. Bank of Mill Creek v. Elk Horn Coal Corp., 57 S.E.2d 736 (W. Va. 1950); Winger v. Chicago City Bank & Trust Co., 67 N.E.2d 265 (Ill. 1946).

(n236)Footnote 281. In re Bond & Mortgage Guar. Co., 103 N.E.2d 721 (N.Y. 1952); Slay v. Burnett Trust, 187 S.W.2d 377 (Tex. 1945).

(n237)Footnote 282. In re Lundberg's Will, 197 N.Y.S.2d 871 (1960); Gamble v. Gibson, 59 Mo. 585 (1875).

(n238)Footnote 283. First State Bank of Pineville v. Catron, 105 S.W.2d 162 (Ky. 1937); St. Paul Trust Co. v. Strong, 88 N.W. 256 (Minn. 1901).

(n239)Footnote 284. Vrooman v. Hawbaker, 56 N.E.2d 623 (Ill. 1944); Faust v. Murray, 15 N.W.2d 793 (Wis. 1944).

(n240)Footnote 285. Mills v. Mills, 112 So. 2d 298 (Fla. App. 1959); Robertson v. Robertson, 317 S.W.2d 272 (Ark. 1958); Fowley v. Braden, 122 N.E.2d 559 (Ill. 1954); Schiller v. Elick, 240 S.W.2d 997 (Tex. 1951); Horsley v. Hrenchir, 73 P.2d 1010 (Kan. 1937); Wright v. Young, 176 P. 583 (Ariz. 1918); Brindley v. Brindley, 72 So. 497 (Ala. 1916); Westphal v. Heckman, 113 N.E. 299 (Ind. 1916); Ussery v. Ussery, 166 S.W. 946 (Ark. 1914), but see In re Estate of Banko, 622 N.E.2d 476 (Ind. 1993); Ferguson v. Robinson, 167 S.W. 447 (Mo. 1914); In re Ryan's Estate, 100 N.W. 380 (Minn. 1904); Verzier v. Convard, 52 A. 255 (Conn. 1902); Andrew v. Andrew, 87 N.W. 494 (Iowa 1901); Krouskop v. Krouskop, 70 N.W. 475 (Wis. 1897); Lovett v. Taylor, 34 A. 896 (N.J. Sup. 1896); Dunn v. Zwilling, 62 N.W. 746 (Iowa 1895); Dailey v. Kinsler, 47 N.W. 1045 (Neb. 1891); Von Trotha v. Bamberger, 24 P. 883 (Colo. 1890); Wheeler v. Reynolds, 66 N.Y. 227 (1876).

(n241)Footnote 286. Schutz v. Schutz, 354 P.2d 694 (Wash. 1960); Kent v. Klein, 91 N.W.2d 11 (Mich. 1958); Orella v. Johnson, 242 P.2d 5 (Cal. 1952); Johnson v. Johnson, 205 P.2d 314 (Okla. 1949); Chandler v. Georgia Chem. Works, 185 S.E. 787 (Ga. 1936); Huffine v. Lincoln, 160 P. 820 (Mont. 1916); Becker v. Neurath, 149 S.W. 857 (Ky. 1912).

(n242)Footnote 287. McCartney v. McCartney, 134 N.E.2d 789 (Ill. 1956); In re Bond & Mortgage Guar. Co., 103 N.E.2d 721 (N.Y. 1952); Maddox v. Maddox, 38 N.W.2d 547 (Neb. 1949).

(n243)Footnote 288. Hardy v. Hardy, 230 S.W.2d 11 (Ark. 1950); Phillips v. Willis, 63 A.2d 171 (Del. 1949); Maddox v. Maddox, 38 N.W.2d 547 (Neb. 1949); Cluzel v. Brown, 29 A.2d 864 (N.J. Err & App. 1943).

(n244)Footnote 289. Howland v. Smith, 193 N.Y.S.2d 140 (1959), app. dismissed, 199 N.Y.S.2d 495 (1960) motion denied, 218 N.Y.S.2d 55 (1961), aff'd, 219 N.Y.S.2d 607 (1961); In re Lobb's Will, 160 P.2d 295 (Or. 1945); Newkirk v. Stevenson, 67 S.E. 1013 (N.C. 1910).

(n245)Footnote 290. Hatcher v. Sawyer, 52 N.W.2d 490 (Iowa 1952); Bowles v. White, 57 S.E.2d 547 (Ga. 1950); Shives v. Borgman, 69 A.2d 802 (Md. 1949); Wright v. Dudley, 53 S.E.2d 29 (Va. 1949).

(n246)Footnote 291. Head v. Schwartz's Ex'r, 202 S.W.2d 623 (Ky. 1947); In re Rosenthal's Estate, 20 N.W.2d 643 (Wis. 1945); In re Anderson's Estate, 35 A.2d 301 (Pa. 1944), overruling recognized, In re Beeruk's Estate, 241 A.2d 755 (Pa. 1968).

(n247)Footnote 292. Murray v. Behrendt, 76 N.E.2d 431 (Ill. 1948); Morrison v. Farmer, 213 S.W.2d 813 (Tex. 1948).

(n248)Footnote 293. Monarco v. Lo Greco, 220 P.2d 737 (Cal. 1950); Rubalcava v. Garst, 206 P.2d 1154 (N.M. 1949); Wager v. Marshburn, 1 So. 2d 303 (Ala. 1941); Vandiver v. Stone, 41 P.2d 247 (Or. 1935).

(n249)Footnote 294. Booth v. Mason, 176 So. 201 (Ala. 1937); Chandler v. Riley, 210 S.W. 716 (Tex. Civ. App. 1919); Rush v. McPherson, 97 S.E. 613 (N.C. 1918); Eadie v. Hamilton, 146 P. 323 (Kan. 1915); Day v. Devitt, 81 A. 368 (N.J. 1911); Harras v. Harras, 110 P. 1085 (Wash. 1910); Griffin v. Schlenk, 102 S.W. 837 (Ky. 1907); Dickson v. Stewart, 98 N.W. 1085 (Neb. 1904); Rives v. Lawrence, 41 Ga. 283 (1870); Jenckes v. Cook, 9 R.I. 520 (1870); Price v. Reeves, 38 Cal. 457 (1869); Beegle v. Wentz, 55 Pa. 369 (1867); Arnold v. Cord, 16 Ind. 177 (1861); Northcraft v. Martin, 28 Mo. 469 (1859).

(n250)Footnote 295. In re Estate of Horrigan v. Ladner, 757 So. 2d 165 (Miss. 1999); Vance v. Grow, 190 N.E. 747 (Ind. 1934); In re Stirk's Estate, 81 A. 187 (Pa. 1911).

(n251)Footnote 296. Dalk v. Allen, 774 So. 2d 787 (Fla. Ct. App. 2000) (imposition of constructive trust was not authorized, because the will was not signed and thus was invalid); Barrett v. Thielen, 167 N.W. 1030 (Minn. 1918); Crinkley v. Rogers, 160 N.W. 974 (Neb. 1916); Rice Stix Dry Goods Co. v. W. S. Albrecht & Co., 113 N.E. 66 (Ill. 1916); Casey v. Casey, 146 N.Y.S. 348 (1914), aff'd, 153 N.Y.S. 1109 (1915); Winder v. Scholey, 93 N.E. 1098 (Ohio 1910); Trustees of Amherst College v. Ritch, 45 N.E. 876 (N.Y. 1897); Orth v. Orth, 42 N.E. 277 (Ind. 1895); Williams v. Vreeland, 29 N.J. Eq. 417 (1878); Hooker v. Axford, 33 Mich. 453 (1876); De Laurencel v. De Boom, 48 Cal. 581 (1874); Baylies v. Payson, 87 Mass. 473 (1862); McLellan v. McLean, 39 Tenn. 684 (1859); Church v. Ruland, 64 Pa. 432 (Pa. 1870).

(n252)Footnote 297. Barrett v. Thielen, 167 N.W. 1030 (Minn. 1918); Tyler v. Stitt, 112 N.W. 1091 (Wis. 1907).

(n253)Footnote 298. In re Foster's Estate, 320 P.2d 855 (Kan. 1958); Anderson v. Grasberg, 78 N.W.2d 450 (Minn. 1956); Wilson v. Randolph, 261 P. 654 (Nev. 1927); Murchison v. Murchison, 203 S.W. 423 (Tex. Civ. App. 1918); Eversole v. Eversole, 185 S.W. 487 (Ky. 1916); Wall v. Pfanschmidt, 106 N.E. 785 (Ill. 1914), superseded by statute as recognized in Estate of Vallerius, 629 N.E.2d 1185 (Ill. App. 1994); In re Gollnik's Estate, 128 N.W. 292 (Minn. 1910); McAllister v. Fair, 84 P. 112 (Kan. 1906); In re Kuhn's Estate, 101 N.W. 151 (Iowa 1904); Deem v. Milliken, 44 N.E. 1134 (Ohio 1895); Carpenter's Estate, 32 A. 637 (Pa. 1895); Owens v. Owens, 6 S.E. 794 (N.C. 1888).

(n254)Footnote 299. Parks v. Dumas, 321 S.W.2d 653 (Tex. Civ. App. 1959); Duthill v. Dana, 113 A.2d 499 (Me. 1952); Bates v. Wilson, 232 S.W.2d 837 (Ky. 1950); Sherman v. Weber, 167 A. 517 (N.J. Eq. 1933); Ellerson v. Westcott, 42 N.E. 540 (N.Y. 1896).

(n255)Footnote 300. George T. Bogert, Trusts 298 (6th ed. 1987), citing Colton v. Wade, 80 A.2d 923 (Del. Ch. 1951); In re Perry's Estate, 123 S.E.2d 99 (N.C. 1961); Neiman v. Hurff, 93 A.2d 345 (N.J. 1952).

(n256)Footnote 301. George T. Bogert, Trusts 298 (6th ed. 1987), citing Bradley v. Fox, 129 N.E.2d 699 (Ill. 1955); National City Bank of Evansville v. Bledsoe, 144 N.E.2d 710 (Ind. 1957), but see Turner v. Estate of Turner, 454 N.E.2d 1247 (Ind. App. 1983).

(n257)Footnote 302. National Mahaiwe Bank v. Barry, 125 Mass. 20 (1878); Lightfoot v. Davis, 91 N.E. 582 (N.Y. 1910); Newton v. Porter, 69 N.Y. 133 (1877).

(n258)Footnote 303. Burton v. Burton, 51 N.W.2d 297 (Mich. 1952); Ogilvie v. Smith, 54 S.E.2d 860 (S.C. 1949); Detroit Trust Co. v. Struggles, 278 N.W. 385 (Mich. 1938); People's Pittsburgh Trust Co. v. Saupp, 182 A. 376 (Pa. 1936); Bank of Brookings v. Aurora Grain Co., 186 N.W. 563 (S.D. 1922).

(n259)Footnote 304. Hyde v. Atlanta Woolen Mills Corp., 50 S.E.2d 52 (Ga. 1948); Brown v. New York Life Ins. Co., 152 F.2d 246 (9th Cir. 1945); Jansen v. Tyler, 49 P.2d 372 (Or. 1935).

(n260)Footnote 305. Johnston v. Johnston, 55 So. 2d 838 (Ala. 1951); Miske v. Habay, 63 A.2d 883 (N.J. 1949).

(n261)Footnote 306. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Nashville Trust Co., 292 S.W.2d 749 (Tenn. 1956); Bell v. Bell, 79 S.E.2d 524 (Ga. 1954); Lloyd v. Phillips, 71 N.Y.S.2d 103 (1947); Reiter v. Carroll, 198 S.W.2d 163 (Ark. 1946); Bankers' Trust Co. v. Patton, 33 P.2d 1019 (Cal. 1934); Nesbitt v. Onaway-Alpena Tel. Co., 168 N.W. 519 (Mich. 1918); Batty v. Greene, 92 N.E. 715 (Mass. 1910); Tetlow v. Rust, 76 A. 22 (Pa. 1910); Hays v. Gloster, 26 P. 367 (Cal. 1891); Valentine v. Richardt, 27 N.E. 255 (N.Y. 1891); Blakeslee v. Starring, 34 Wis. 538 (1874).

(n262)Footnote 307. Phillips v. Ball, 358 P.2d 193 (Okla. 1960); Honk v. Karlsson, 292 P.2d 455 (Ariz. 1956); Purinton v. Dyson, 65 P.2d 777 (Cal. 1937).

(n263)Footnote 308. Stevens v. Torregano, 13 Cal. Rptr. 604 (1961); Pico v. Cohn, 25 P. 970 (Cal. 1891), aff'd, 27 P. 537 (Cal. 1891).

(n264)Footnote 309. Reed v. Reed, 287 P.2d 889 (Okla. 1955); Loring v. Baker, 106 N.E.2d 434 (Mass. 1952); In re Bangor Trust Co., 178 A. 290 (Pa. 1935); Lamb v. Schiefner, 114 N.Y.S. 34 (1908); Cole v. Fickett, 49 A. 1066 (Me. 1901); Andrews v. Andrews, 12 Ind. 348 (1859).

(n265)Footnote 310. Kuehn v. Kuehn, 104 N.W.2d 138 (Wis. 1960); In re Metz' Estate, 100 N.W.2d 393 (S.D. 1960); Akin v. Evans, 156 A.2d 219 (Md. 1959); In re Walther's Will, 188 N.Y.S.2d 168 (1959).

(n266)Footnote 311. Latham v. Father Devine, 85 N.E.2d 168 (N.Y. 1949), rearg. denied, 86 N.E.2d 114 (N.Y. 1949); Pope v. Garrett, 211 S.W.2d 559 (Tex. 1948); Monach v. Koslowski, 78 N.E.2d 4 (Mass. 1948); Smith v. Stratton, 18 N.E.2d 328 (Mass. 1938); Olson v. Washington, 63 P.2d 304 (Cal. App. 1936); Mullin v. Mullin, 104 N.Y.S. 323 (1907).

(n267)Footnote 312. In re Superior-Pacific Fund, Inc., 693 A.2d 248 (Pa. 1997) ("[A] resulting trust... may arise only where a disposition of property is made which raises an inference that it was not intended that the person or entity holding the property was to have the beneficial interest in it.").

(n268)Footnote 313. Ward v. Hudgens, 22 S.W.2d 260 (Mo. Ct. App. 2000) (plaintiff's delay in asserting his claim to a resulting trust was not unreasonable; the bar of laches was not triggered); Edwards v. Edwards, 482 S.E.2d 701

(Ga. 1997) ("An implied resulting trust can arise under three circumstances: (1) an express trust is created but fails for any reason; (2) a trust is fully performed without exhausting all of the trust property; and (3) a purchase money resulting trust is established.").

(n269)Footnote 314. Brown v. Alexander, 79 So. 842 (Miss. 1918); Asam v. Asam, 86 A. 871 (Pa. 1913); Larisey v. Larisey, 77 S.E. 129 (S.C. 1913); Lander v. Persky, 83 A. 209 (Conn. 1912); Spradling v. Spradling, 142 S.W. 848 (Ark. 1911); Cowles v. Cowles, 131 N.W. 738 (Neb. 1911); LeRoy v. Norton, 113 P. 529 (Colo. 1911); Euler v. Schroeder, 76 A. 164 (Md. 1910); Masters v. Mayes, 92 N.E. 945 (Ill. 1910); Ratliff v. Elwell, 119 N.W. 740 (Iowa 1909); Howe v. Howe, 85 N.E. 945 (Mass. 1908); Pittock v. Pittock, 98 P. 719 (Idaho 1908); De Roboam v. Schmidtlin, 92 P. 1082 (Or. 1907); Flanary v. Kane, 46 S.E. 312 (Va. 1904); Plumb v. Cooper, 26 S.W. 678 (Mo. 1894); Summers v. Moore, 18 S.E. 712 (N.C. 1893); Fisk v. Patton, 27 P. 1 (Utah 1891); Burns v. Ross, 9 S.W. 468 (Tex. 1888); Mershon v. Duer, 40 N.J. Eq. 333 (1885). Cf. Fenderson v. Fenderson, 685 A.2d 600 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1996) ("We find that it is not against public policy to enforce the instant resulting trust when the filed lawsuit was dismissed without any evidence that the claim which Bryan sought to avoid had any substantial foundation. As a result, the resulting trust in favor of Bryan Fenderson is valid and must be enforced."). Id. at 606.

Mont. Code Ann. § 72-33-218 (1997) (where a transfer of property is made to one person and the purchase price is paid by another, a resulting trust arises in favor of the person who paid the purchase price).

(n270)Footnote 315. Towner v. Berg, 172 N.Y.S.2d 258 (1958); Yeiser v. Rogers, 116 A.2d 3 (N.J. 1955); In re Case's Estate, 118 N.E.2d 836 (Ohio 1954), but see In re Amos, 201 B.R. 184, (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1996); Houlton v. Prosser, 194 P.2d 911 (Colo. 1948); Oyama v. California, 332 U.S. 633 (1948); Culley v. Carr, 45 A.2d 850 (N.J. Ch. 1946); Harrell v. Fiveash, 185 S.E. 327 (Ga. 1936); Murphy v. Johnson, 54 S.W.2d 158 (Tex. Civ. App. 1932); Koyoko Nishi v. Downing, 67 P.2d 1057 (Cal. App. 1937); Miller v. Davis, 50 Mo. 572 (1872).

(n271)Footnote 316. Partridge v. Berliner, 156 N.E. 352 (Ill. 1927); Keown v. Keown, 119 N.E. 785 (Mass. 1918); Mortgomery v. Craig, 27 N.E. 427 (Ind. 1891).

(n272)Footnote 317. North American Islamic Trust, Inc. v. Muslim Center of Miami, Inc., 771 So. 2d 1227 (Fla. Ct. App. 2000) (held that the imposition of a resulting trust was warranted when the lender resued to transfer the property upon the purchaser's repayment of the loan); Godzieba v. Godzieba, 143 A.2d 344 (Pa. 1958); Wimberly v. Kneeland, 293 S.W.2d 526 (Tex. App. 1956); Padgett v. Osborne, 221 S.W.2d 210 (Mo. 1949), overruled in part, Davis v. Roberts, 295 S.W.2d 152 (Mo. 1956); McCollum v. McCollum, 43 S.E.2d 663 (Ga. 1947); Long v. Huseman, 47 A.2d 75 (Md. 1946); Viner v. Untrecht, 158 P.2d 3 (Cal. 1945); Edwards v. Tenny, 154 P.2d 143 (Idaho 1944); Wilson v. Warner, 93 A. 533 (Conn. 1915). Fenderson v. Fenderson, 685 A.2d 600 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1996) ("Upon review of the chancellor's findings of fact, there is clear, direct evidence that Bryan contributed to the purchase price and there is no evidence that he did not intend to receive a resulting trust. As a result, we find that a resulting trust was created at the time of settlement in Bryan Fenderson's favor in proportion to the amount he contributed."). Id. at 606.

(n273)Footnote 318. Williams v. Ellis, 323 S.W.2d 238 (Mo. 1959); Palmisano v. Gagliano, 85 N.W.2d 398 (Wis. 1957); Powell v. Race, 10 So. 2d 142 (Fla. 1942); Bisceglia v. Bisceglia, 17 A.2d 182 (Pa. 1941); Wiley v. Dunn, 192 N.E. 661 (Ill. 1934).

(n274)Footnote 319. Ky. Rev. Stat. §381;170; Mich. Comp. L. Ann. §§ 555.7-555.10; Minn. Stat. Ann. § 501B.07; N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law §7-1.3; Wis. Stat. Ann. §701.04.

(n275)Footnote 320. Dodson v. Winn, 169 N.E.2d 898 (Mass. 1960); First Nat'l Bank of Brunswick v. Stewart, 109 S.E.2d 606 (Ga. 1959); Commerce Nat'l Bank of Toledo v. Browning, 107 N.E.2d 120 (Ohio St. 1952); Bunker v. Jones, 181 F.2d 619 (D.C. App. 1950); Hansen v. Bear Film Co., 168 P.2d 946 (Cal. 1946); Huxley v. Security Trust Co., 33 A.2d 679 (Del. Ch. 1943); Pedrick v. Guarantee Trust Co., 197 A. 909 (N.J. Eq. 1938); In re Talston's Estate, 37 P.2d 76 (Cal. 1934); Trunkey v. Van Sant, 68 N.E. 946 (N.Y. 1903); Broadrup v. Woodman, 27 Ohio St. 553 (1875), but see

Summers v. Summers, 699 N.E.2d 958 (Ohio App. 1997); Mcelroy v. Mcelroy, 113 Mass. 509 (1873); Blake v. Dexter, 66 Mass. 559 (1853).

(n276)Footnote 321. In re Welsh's Will, 145 N.Y.S.2d 727 (1955); In re Jackson's Trust, 40 A.2d 393 (Pa. 1945); In re Devereux' Estate, 48 Pa. D. & C. 491 (1943); Lillard v. Lillard, 26 N.E.2d 933 (Ohio App. 1939); First Nat'l Bank of Bryan v. White, 91 S.W.2d 1120 (Tex. Civ. App. 1936); In re Mooney's Estate, 267 N.W. 196 (Neb. 1936); Jordan v. Jordan, 259 N.W. 386 (Minn. 1935).

(n277)Footnote 322. Security Trust Co. v. Willett, 97 A.2d 112 (Del. Ch. 1953).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.05

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.05 Powers, Duties and Liabilities of Trustees

[Go To Supp]

§ 27.05(a) Powers of Trustees n323

In general, when the trustee is granted certain powers by the unambiguous language of the trust instrument, neither the trustee nor the courts can add to or take away from such powers. n324 If a trustee is directed to perform some specific task, the power (and the duty) to accomplish that is referred to as a mandatory or an imperative power. n325 Tasks whose performance is left within the judgment of the trustee are usually called discretionary powers. n326 Upon judicial review, the judgment of the trustee in exercise of discretionary powers will usually not be overturned, as long as the trustee acted in good faith consideration of the purposes of the trust and the interests of the beneficiaries. n327 The trustee abuses the discretion if the trustee acts arbitrarily, in bad faith, capriciously, maliciously, or out of some other illegal or improper motive. n328 A trustee with "uncontrolled" or "absolute" discretion has only slightly more freedom of action, and trustee actions are still subject to judicial review. n329 If co-trustees cannot agree on the use of discretionary power, a court may remove one of them. n330

A trustee's power is personal if the trustor has made it clear that only the named trustee or trustees may exercise that power. n331 Occasionally courts must determine if a trustor's intent to create a personal trusteeship may be implied from the circumstances of the trust's creation. n332 Such an inference may be natural if the trust, for instance, is of short duration and concerns family matters; n333 a long-term trust administered by an elderly trustee may lead to the opposite inference. n334 Under a personal trusteeship, a trust ceases when the trustee dies or resigns or otherwise no longer acts as trustee. n335

Co-trustees are usually required to exercise their powers in concert, unless a contrary intent has been expressed by the trustor. n336 Consistent with this rule is the notion that co-trustees hold title to trust property as joint tenants. n337 However, public policy interest in the carrying out of charitable trusts has led courts to accept acts of only a majority of co-trustees over such trusts. n338 A trustee may delegate the exercise of a trust function or power to another responsible agent, but only in those circumstances where a reasonable and prudent property owner would not feel bound to use such power personally: n339

> [I]n the case of a power to sell realty the trustee should retain for his personal use the power to fix

> the sale price and the terms of the contract and deed, but ... he might employ a realtor to seek a purchaser and to negotiate with possible buyers. With regard to improved realty held for lease the trustee should fix rentals and general standards to be used in selecting tenants, but might use a real estate management firm to conduct interviews with proposed tenants, secure signatures to leases, and collect rents. n340

A power of sale in the trustee is usually found in the instrument creating the trust or inferred from the circumstances or given by statute. n341 The characteristics of this power may differ among trusts. Often the power to sell includes the power to exchange, n342 or the power to lease with an option to buy. n343 If no explicit power of sale is given for a trust, equity may imply a power of sale if it is necessary or useful in accomplishing the purposes of the trust. n344 A sale by a trustee without the power of sale may be approved beforehand by the beneficiaries' consent or afterward by the beneficiaries' ratification. n345

Courts of equity also have power to direct sales or intervene in sales of trust property, if such activity is necessary to carry out the purposes of the trust. n346

A trustee's exercise of the power of sale must be in accordance with the directions connected with the power of sale n347 or with a reasonably prudent person standard. n348 A trustee may also have an express or implied power to mortgage trust property as security for borrowing. n349 An express power to sell or invest usually does not include an implied power to mortgage. n350 And, as with the power of sale, courts of equity may order or intervene in a mortgage of trust property, n351 for the purpose of preserving the property or promoting its better management. n352 A mortgage given by a trustee without power to do so -- for funds borrowed and used to improve the mortgaged property -- is void, n353 but may result in an equitable lien in behalf of the lender. n354

A trustee with power to hold productive realty usually also has the power to lease that property; if such power is not expressly given, it is often implied as required to produce income from the property for the beneficiaries. n355 Courts of equity have inherent power to intervene in leasing, n356 and statutes often govern powers of trustees and courts to become involved in leases of trust property. n357 Leases of trust property ordinarily should not extend beyond the term of the trust, n358 but exceptions are known. n359 A trustee acting as landlord of trust property has a duty to obtain the tenant's compliance with the terms of the lease. n360 A trustee as landlord has the same duty to repair the premises as would be imposed upon any other landlord in those circumstances. n361 However, the trustee as landlord has no duty to improve the property, unless such improvement is necessary to make the property tenantable or otherwise productive. n362

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trustee w/20 power w/20 mandatory or imperative w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trustee w/20 power w/20 discretion! w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trustee w/20 power w/20 personal w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

§ 27.05(b) Duties of Trustees

The trustee's first active duty is to take possession of the trust property or of the documents representing its ownership. n363 Having taken possession of the property, the trustee is obligated to take any steps necessary to preserve and protect the property n364 -- such as recording a deed or mortgage n365 -- and to defend it. n366 The trustee also may not attack the trust under a claim that the trust is void, n367 or assert a hostile title. n368

Trustees have a traditional duty to separate and identify trust property as trust property, referred to as earmarking. In the context of real property held in trust, earmarking meant that evidences of ownership of the property were required to indicate the trust ownership. Today, such earmarking is still required, but liability for not earmarking is now limited to damages proved to result from the failure to earmark. n369

If a trust imposes on the trustee the duty to distribute income, usually implicit therein is a duty to make the trust property productive. n370 As mentioned above, in the case of real property intended for rental, this duty may require the trustee to make expenditures in preparing the property for the rental market. In making payments to beneficiaries, the trustee is bound to follow trust instructions precisely. n371

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trustee w/50 dut! w/20 possession w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trustee w/50 dut! w/20 identif! w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trustee w/50 dut! W/20 distribut! w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

§ 27.05(c) Liabilities of Trustees

A trustee's liabilities may be grounded in tort or in contract, and may arise from the trustee's role as property owner. As an owner of real property, a trustee may be personally liable, for example, for payment of taxes, n372 and for performance of obligations as either a landlord or a tenant. n373 When personal liability of the trustee is grounded solely on the trustee's position as holder of the legal title, the trustee is entitled to indemnification by the trust. The trustee is normally not liable for specific performance of contracts to convey. n374

Trustees of private trusts are personally liable for torts they commit in their capacity as trustees, n375 and also for the torts of their agents while acting on behalf of the trust. n376 In some jurisdictions, an action against a trustee tortfeasor may be brought against the trustee in the representative capacity, and any recovery assessed against the trust property. n377 According to a traditional view, trustees of charitable trusts were liable for their own torts but not for the torts of their agents. n378 This so-called charitable immunity has now been forsaken in several jurisdictions. n379

Trustees are also personally liable for breaches of contracts they have made in their representative capacity. n380 A co-trustee who did not join in making the contract is not liable on it. n381 Of course, this personal liability of the trustee merely defines the structure of the legal action seeking to establish or enforce that liability. Eventually, for almost all such personal liabilities the trustee is entitled to indemnification from the trust property. n382 Some American courts also accept the English rule that a trustee may also be indemnified by the beneficiaries if the trust assets are inadequate. n383 Under some circumstances, a contract creditor may recover in equity directly against the trust property, especially if recovery from the trustee personally is difficult, n384 or performance of the contract has enhanced the trust property's value. n385

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trustee w/50 liabilit! w/20 tort w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trustee w/50 liabilit! w/20 tort trustee w/50 liabilit! w/20 personal trustee w/50 liabilit! w/20 indemnif! w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 323. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Zerin, 53 Cal. App. 4th 445 (1997) ("A trust is a personal relationship between the trustee and the beneficiary... It does not create an interest in the trust res per se.").

(n2)Footnote 324. Sorrel v. Sorrel, 1 S.W.3d 867 (Tex. Ct. App. 1999).

(n3)Footnote 325. George T. Bogert, Trust 319 (6th ed. 1987).

(n4)Footnote 326. Dennett v. Kuenzli, 936 P.2d 219 (Idaho App. 1997) ("a trust is not a legal 'person' which can own property or enter into contracts... a trustee may bring legal actions in his own name regarding property or contract interests of the trust estate."); Rapp v. Rapp, 562 N.W.2d 359 (Neb. 1997) ("attorney fees and expenses will ordinarily be allowed a trustee where they were incurred for the benefit of the estate"); Buchanan v. Patterson, 159 N.E.2d 661 (N.Y. 1959); In re Fiedler's Estate, 151 A.2d 201 (N.J. Super. 1959); Whitaker v. McDowell, 72 A. 938 (Conn. 1909); Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. Sutro, 23 A. 732 (Md. 1892).

(n5)Footnote 327. In re Eberhart, 656 N.Y.S.2d 159 (1997) ("under New York law ... a trustee may not exercise a discretionary power in his own favor"); Matter of Murphy, 146 N.Y.S.2d 848 (1955); Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Read, 4 A.2d 10 (N.J. Eq. 1939); Marburg v. Safe Dep. & Trust Co. of Baltimore City, 9 A.2d 222 (Me. 1939); In re Vohland's Estate, 280 N.W. 241 (Neb. 1938); In re Sam's Estate, 258 N.W. 682 (Iowa 1935); Wight v. Mason, 180 A. 917 (1935); In re Ordean's Will, 261 N.W. 706 (Minn. 1935); Watling v. Watling, 27 F.2d 193 (6th Cir. 1928); Williams v. Hund, 258 S.W. 703 (Mo. 1924).

(n6)Footnote 328. Stallard v. Johnson, 116 P.2d 965 (Okla. 1941); In re Ahrens' Estate, 71 N.Y.S.2d 462 (1947), app. dismissed, 75 N.E.2d 271 (N.Y. 1947); Conlin v. Murdock, 43 A.2d 218 (N.J. Eq. 1945); In re Briggs' Estate, 27 A.2d 430 (Pa. 1942); Gardner v. O'Loughlin, 84 A. 935 (N.H. 1912).

(n7)Footnote 329. Norwest Bank Minnesota, N.A. v. Ode, 615 N.W.2d 91 (Minn. Ct. App. 2000) (held that a mortgage sinced by the trustee as an individual, and not in the role of a trustee, was not binding); Taylor v. McClave, 15 A.2d 213 (N.J. Eq. 1940); Heyer v. Bulluck, 186 S.E. 356 (N.C. 1936); Carrier v. Carrier, 123 N.E. 135 (N.Y. 1919); Keating v. Keating, 165 N.W. 74 (Iowa 1917).

(n8)Footnote 330. Woodard v. Mordecai, 67 S.E.2d 639 (N.C. 1951); McCarthy v. Tierney, 165 A. 807 (Conn. 1933).

(n9)Footnote 331. Sherry v. Little, 167 N.E.2d 872 (Mass. 1960); In re Towers' Trust, 164 N.Y.S.2d 449 (1957); Duncan v. Elkins, 45 A.2d 297 (N.H. 1946); In re Doe's Will, 285 N.W. 764 (Wis. 1939); Tilley v. Letcher, 82 So. 527 (Ala. 1919); Jacobs v. Wilmington Trust Co., 80 A. 346 (Del. Ch. 1911); United States Trust Co. v. Poutch, 113 S.W. 107 (Ky. 1908); Dillingham v. Hartin, 49 A. 143 (N.J. Eq. 1901).

(n10)Footnote 332. In re Warner's Will, 61 N.W.2d 840 (Minn. 1953); In re Canfield's Estate, 181 P.2d 732 (Cal. App. 1947); In re Boutwell's Estate, 22 A.2d 157 (Vt. 1941); Booth v. Krug, 14 N.E.2d 645 (Ill. 1938).

(n11)Footnote 333. Gilmore v. Gilmore, 41 S.E.2d 229 (Ga. 1947); Welch v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 38 S.E.2d 197 (N.C. 1946); Security Co. v. Snow, 39 A. 153 (Conn. 1898).

(n12)Footnote 334. Munsey v. Laconia Home for the Aged, 164 A.2d 557 (N.H. 1960); In re Walker, 53 N.E.2d 378 (N.Y. 1944); Penn v. Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances, 171 S.W.2d 437 (Ky. 1943); Maryland Casualty Co. v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, 80 A. 903 (Md. 1911).

(n13)Footnote 335. Dillard v. Dillard, 34 S.E. 60 (Va. 1899). Walter E. Wilhite Revocable Living Trust v. Northwest Yearly Meeting Pension Fund, 916 P.2d 1264 (Idaho 1996) ("[T]he next question we confront is whether a co-trustee can sell or exchange trust property individually. The district court found that Walter Wilhite had no power, as co-trustee, to sell or transfer property from the Trust without the consent of the co-trustee. We agree. The trust document contains several provisions which imply that the co-trustees must join in an act act such as this."). Id. at 1271

(n14)Footnote 336. City of Boston v. Robbins, 126 Mass. 384 (1878); Dingman v. Boyle, 120 N.E. 487 (Ill. 1918); Morley v. Carson, 87 A. 713 (Pa. 1913); Fritz v. City Trust Co. of New York, 76 N.Y.S. 625 (1902), aff'd, 66 N.E. 1109 (N.Y. 1903); Carr v. Hertz, 33 A. 194 (N.J. Eq. 1895).

(n15)Footnote 337. Webster v. Vandeventer, 72 Mass. 428 (1856); Jackson ex dem. Erwin v. Moore, 6 Cow. 706 (N.Y. 1827).

(n16)Footnote 338. City of Boston v. Doyle, 68 N.E. 851 (Mass. 1903).

(n17)Footnote 339. Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. Zinser, 105 N.E. 718 (Ill. 1914); Fowler v. Coates, 94 N.E. 997 (N.Y. 1911); North Am. Trust Co. v. Chappell, 69 S.W. 546 (Ark. 1902); In re Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. 304 (1874); Morville, Jr. v. Fowle, 10 N.E. 766 (Mass. 1887).

(n18)Footnote 340. George T. Bogert, Trusts 329 (6th ed. 1987), citing Saunders v. Webber, 39 Cal. 287 (1870); United States Nat'l Bank of Omaha v. Alexander, 1 N.W.2d 920 (Neb. 1942); Schofield v. John R. Thompson Co., 109 F.2d 432 (6th Cir. 1940); Ross v. Freeman, 180 A. 527 (Del. Ch. 1935); Hibernian Banking Ass'n v. Roseboom, 214 Ill. App. 324 (1919); Gates v. Dudgeon, 66 N.E. 116 (N.Y. 1903).

(n19)Footnote 341. Livermore v. Livermore, 121 N.E. 27 (Mass. 1918); Shaw v. Bridgers, 76 S.E. 827 (N.C. 1912); Blair v. Hazzard, 112 P. 298 (Cal. 1910); Salisbury v. Bigelow, 37 Mass. 174 (1838).

(n20)Footnote 342. Gray v. Corcoran, 269 P.2d 1091 (Mont. 1954); Ash v. Ash, 10 A.2d 150 (N.J. Eq. 1940).

(n21)Footnote 343. Connely v. Haggarty, 56 A. 371 (N.J. Eq. 1903), aff'd, 64 A. 1133 (N.J. Err. & App. 1905).

(n22)Footnote 344. Revoc Co. v. Thomas, 16 A.2d 847 (Md. 1940); Crown Co. v Cohn, 172 P. 804 (Or. 1918); Preston v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 81 A. 523 (Md. 1911); Wisdom v. Wilson, 127 S.W. 1128 (Tex. App. 1909); Clark v. Fleischmann, 116 N.W. 290 (Neb. 1908); Garesche v. Levering Inv. Co., 48 S.W. 653 (Mo. 1898).

(n23)Footnote 345. Matthews v. Thompson, 71 N.E. 93 (Mass. 1904); Rogers v. Tyley, 32 N.E. 393 (Ill. 1892); Long v. Long, 62 Md. 33 (1884); Swartz v. Duncan, 57 N.W. 543 (Neb. 1894); In re Post, 13 R.I. 495 (1876).

(n24)Footnote 346. Roberts v. Roberts, 102 N.E. 239 (Ill.); Faulk v. Rosecrans, 264 P.2d 300 (Okla. 1953); Dallas Art League v. Weaver, 199 So. 831 (Ala. 1941); Hewitt v. Beattie, 138 A. 795 (Conn. 1927); Bibb v. Bibb, 86 So. 376 (Ala. 1920).

(n25)Footnote 347. Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 151 N.E. 610 (Ind. 1926); Patterson v. Lanning, 87 N.W. 338 (Neb. 1901).

(n26)Footnote 348. Webb & Knapp, Inc. v. Hanover Bank, 133 A.2d 450 (Md. 1957); Reeder v. Lanahan, 74 A. 575 (Md. 1909); Johnston v. Eason, 38 N.C. 330 (1844).

(n27)Footnote 349. Bank of Visalia v. Dillonwood Lumber Co., 82 P. 374 (Cal. 1905); Fergusson v. Fergusson, 229 S.W. 738 (Ark. 1921); King v. Stowell, 98 N.E. 91 (Mass. 1912); Boskowitz v. Held, 44 N.Y.S. 136 (1897), aff'd, 48 N.E. 1104 (N.Y. 1897); Guilmartin & Co. v. Stevens, 55 Ga. 203 (1875).

(n28)Footnote 350. Stengel v. Royal Realty Corp., 17 A.2d 127 (Md. 1941); Davis v. Pennsylvania Co., 12 A.2d 66 (Pa. 1940); Beakey v. Knutson, 174 P. 1149 (Or. 1918); Hamilton v. Hamilton, 128 N.W. 380 (Iowa 1910); Townsend v. Wilson, 59 A. 417 (Conn. 1904); Griswold v. Caldwell, 73 N.Y.S. 2 (1901); Loring v. Brodie, 134 Mass. 453 (1883); Stokes v. Payne Kennedy & Co., 58 Miss. 614 (1881).

(n29)Footnote 351. Schramm v. United States Nat'l Bank of Portland, 52 P.2d 181 (Or. 1935); Long v. Simmons Female College, 105 N.E. 553 (Mass. 1914); Butler v. Badger, 150 N.W. 233 (Minn. 1914); In re Windsor Trust Co., 127 N.Y.S. 586 (1911); Shirkey v. Kirby, 66 S.E. 40 (Va. 1909); Townsend v. Wilson, 59 A. 417 (Conn. 1904).

(n30)Footnote 352. Butler v. Badger, 150 N.W. 233 (Minn. 1914); Lyddane v. Lyddane, 137 S.W. 838 (Ky. 1911); Burroughs v. Gaither, 7 A. 243 (Md. 1886).

(n31)Footnote 353. Byron Reed Co. v. Klabunde, 108 N.W. 133 (Neb. 1906); Tuttle v. First Nat'l Bank of Greenfield, 73 N.E. 560 (Mass. 1905); First Nat'l Bank of Paterson, N.J. v. National Broadway Bank, 51 N.E. 398 (N.Y.

1898); Taylor & Co. v. Clark, 56 Ga. 309 (1876).

(n32)Footnote 354. Jones v. Swift, 15 N.E.2d 274 (Mass. 1938); Griley v. Marion Mortg. Co., 182 So. 297 (Fla. 1937).

(n33)Footnote 355. First Nat'l Bank in Wichita v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., 62 P.2d 891 (Kan. 1936); Smith v. Jones, 162 So. 496 (Fla. 1935); Hutcheson v. Bennefield, 42 S.E. 422 (Ga. 1902); Geer v. Traders' Bank of Canada, 93 N.W. 437 (Mich. 1903).

(n34)Footnote 356. Adams v. Cook, 101 P.2d 484 (Cal. 1940); Pedroja v. Pedroja, 102 P.2d 1012 (Kan. 1940); Colonial Trust Co. v. Brown, 135 A. 555 (Conn. 1926); Schroeder v. Woodward, 82 S.E. 192 (Va. 1914); Packard v. Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, 104 N.E. 275 (Ill. 1914).

(n35)Footnote 357. 39 Cortlandt St. Corp. v. Lambert, 205 N.Y.S. 161 (1924).

(n36)Footnote 358. Campbell v. Kawananakoa, 31 Haw. 500 (1930); In re Caswell's Will, 222 N.W. 235 (Wis. 1928); Standard Metallic Paint Co. v. Prince Mfg. Co., 19 A. 411 (Pa. 1890); Bergengren v. Aldrich, 29 N.E. 667 (Mass. 1885).

(n37)Footnote 359. Smith v. Widman Hotel Co., 49 N.W.2d 301 (S.D. 1951); Crown Co. v. Cohn, 172 P. 804 (Or. 1918); Upham v. Plankinton, 140 N.W. 5 (Wis. 1913).

(n38)Footnote 360. City Bank Farmers' Trust Co. v. Smith, 189 N.E. 222 (N.Y. 1934), aff'd 191 N.E. 217 (N.Y. 1934).

(n39)Footnote 361. Booth v. Bradford, 87 N.W. 685 (Iowa 1901); Disbrow v. Disbrow, 61 N.Y.S. 614, aff'd, 60 N.E. 1110 (N.Y. 1901); Kearney v. Kearney, 17 N.J. Eq. 59 (1899); Veazie v. Forsaith, 76 Me. 172 (1884); Sohier v. Eldredge, 103 Mass. 345 (1869).

(n40)Footnote 362. Booth v. Bradford, 87 N.W. 685 (Iowa 1901); Stevens v. Stevens, 30 N.Y.S. 625 (1894), aff'd, Stevens v. Melcher, 46 N.E. 965 (N.Y. 1897); Patterson v. Johnson, 113 Ill. 559 (1885).

(n41)Footnote 363. McLellan's Estate v. McLellan, 63 P.2d 1120 (Cal. 1936); April v. April, 6 N.E.2d 43 (N.Y. 1936); Speakman v. Tatem, 21 A. 466 (N.J. Eq. 1891).

(n42)Footnote 364. Morse v. Borough of Essex, Borough 173 A. 921 (N.J. Eq. 1934).

(n43)Footnote 365. Sprowles v. Eversole, 210 S.W.2d 346 (Ky. 1948); Scherger v. Union Nat'l Bank, 25 P.2d 588 (Kan. 1933); Partridge v. American Trust Co., 97 N.E. 925 (Mass. 1912).

(n44)Footnote 366. In re Estate of Campbell, 692 A.2d 1098 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997) (stating that trustee's primary duty is to preserve the trust assets and to ensure the safety of the trust principal); American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago v. Vinson, 653 N.E.2d 13 (Ill. App. 1995) (action by trust companies to eject occupant of land held in trust); Rossi v. Davis, 133 S.W.2d 363 (Mo. 1939); In re Lowe's Estate, 192 A. 405 (Pa. 1937).

(n45)Footnote 367. In re Strange's Estate, 97 N.W.2d 199 (Wis. 1959); Federal Trust Co. v. Damron, 247 N.W. 589 (Neb. 1933).

(n46)Footnote 368. Fellows v. Bass, 56 So. 2d 831 (Miss. 1952); In re Eustace Estate, 87 P.2d 305 (Wash. 1939).

(n47)Footnote 369. In re Lefevre's Guardianship, 113 P.2d 1014 (Wash. 1941); Buckle v. Marshall, 10 S.E.2d 506 (Va. 1940).

(n48)Footnote 370. Rutanen v. Ballard, 678 N.E.2d 133 (Mass. 1997) ("a trustee is not liable for damages for unforeseen drop in value if, before drop in value, his decision not to sell was reasonable, and ... [in] good faith"); Weiss v. State, 939 P.2d 380 (Alaska 1997) ("trustees have a duty to preserve trust property for the uses of the trust, but they do not necessarily have a duty to maintain the corpus of the trust forever"); a trustee who holds title to the assets that make up the trust estate and enters into contracts necessary to the management of the estate is subject to a fiduciary obligation to manage and use the assets for the benefit of the beneficiary. Dennett v. Kuenzli, 936 P.2d 219 (Idaho Ct. App. 1997). Linder v. Officer, 135 S.W.2d 445 (Tenn. 1940); Moore v. Sanders, 106 S.W.2d 337 (Tex. Civ. App. 1937).

(n49)Footnote 371. Baar v. Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co., 193 S.W.2d 1011 (Ky. 1946); Countiss v. Whiting, 29 N.E.2d 277 (Ill. App. 1940); Selkirk-Priest Basin Ass'n v. Andrus, 899 P.2d 949 (Ida. 1995) (where direct beneficiaries of trust assets were schools, environmental groups lacked standing to challenge administration of those trust assets).

(n50)Footnote 372. Dunham v. City of Lowell, 86 N.E. 951 (Mass. 1909); Thiebaud v. Tait, 36 N.E. 525 (Ind. 1894).

(n51)Footnote 373. Moeller v. Superior Ct. of Los Angeles, 947 P.2d 279 (Cal. 1997) ("trustee, rather than trust, is real party in interest in litigation involving trust property"), but see Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court, 990 P.2d 591, (Cal. 2000); Board of Educ. v. Crilly, 37 N.E.2d 873 (Ill. App. 1941); Rainault v. Evarts, 7 N.E.2d 145 (Mass. 1937); McLaughlin v. Minnesota Loan & Trust Co., 255 N.W. 839 (Minn. 1934); Irvine v. MacGregor, 265 P. 218 (Cal. 1928).

(n52)Footnote 374. Hopkinson v. First Nat'l Bank, 200 N.E. 381 (Mass. 1936).

(n53)Footnote 375. In re Hodgson's Estate, 20 A.2d 294 (Pa. 1941); Smith v. Rizzuto, 276 N.W. 406 (Neb. 1937); Trani v. Gerard, 168 N.Y.S. 808 (1918); Boston Beef Packing Co. v. Stevens, 12 F. 279 (C.C.N.Y. 1882); Cheyenne-Arapaho Tribes of Okla. v. United States, 33 Fed. Cl. 464 (1995) (action against United States for breach of trust responsibilities regarding mineral leases on tribal lands).

(n54)Footnote 376. Curtis v. Title Guar. & Trust Co., 40 P.2d 562 (Cal. App. 1935); Baker v. Tibbetts, 39 N.E. 350 (Mass. 1895).

(n55)Footnote 377. Smith v. Coleman, 132 So. 198 (Fla. 1931); Ewing v. Wm. L. Foley, Inc., 280 S.W. 499 (Tex. 1926); Wright v. Caney River Ry. Co., 66 S.E. 588 (N.C. 1909); Miller v. Smythe, 18 S.E. 46 (Ga. 1893)

(n56)Footnote 378. Howard v. South Baltimore Gen. Hosp., 62 A.2d 574 (Md. 1948); Evans v. Lawrence & Mem. Asso. Hosps., 50 A.2d 443 (Conn. 1946); Herndon v. Massey, 8 S.E.2d 914 (N.C. 1940); Webb v. Vought, 275 P. 170 (Kan. 1929), overruled, Noel v. Menninger Foundation, 267 P.2d 934 (Kan. 1934); Farrigan v. Pevear, 78 N.E. 855 (Mass. 1906).

(n57)Footnote 379. Albritton v. Neighborhood Ctrs. Ass'n for Child Dev., 466 N.E.2d 867 (Ohio St. 1984); Fitzer v. Greater Greenville South Carolina Y.M.C.A., 282 S.E.2d 230 (S.C. 1981), but see Hanvey v. Oconee Memorial Hosp., 416 S.E.2d 623 (S.C. 1992); Howle v. Camp Amon Carter, 470 S.W.2d 629 (Tex. 1971); Kojis v. Doctors Hosp., 107 N.W.2d 131 (Wis. 1961); Parker v. Port Huron Hosp., 105 N.W.2d 1 (Mich. 1960); Molitor v. Kaneland Community Unit Dist. No. 302, 163 N.E.2d 89 (Ill. 1959), but see Dewitt v. McHenry County, 691 N.E.2d 388 (Ill. App. 1998) (In response to Molitor, the Illinois legislature quickly reinstated many forms of sovereign immunity); Dalton v. St. Luke's Catholic Church, 141 A.2d 273 (N.J. 1958), but see Weiss v. Goldfarb, 713 A.2d 427 (N.J. 1998) (stating that Dalton has been superseded by statute); Bing v. Thunig, 163 N.Y.S.2d 3, 143 N.E.2d 3 (1957); Noel v. Menninger Found., 267 P.2d 934 (Kan. 1954); Pierce v. Yakima Vall. Mem. Hosp. Ass'n, 260 P.2d 765 (Wash. 1953); Ray v. Tucson Med. Ctr., 230 P.2d 220 (Ariz. 1951); Malloy v. Fong, 232 P.2d 241 (Cal. 1951); Foster v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Vermont, 70 A.2d 230 (Vt. 1950).

(n58)Footnote 380. Bishop v. Bucklen, 60 N.E.2d 872 (Ill. 1945); Peyser v. American BEC & Trust Co., 107 F.2d 625 (App. D.C. 1939); In re Gibbons' Estate, 272 N.W. 553 (Neb. 1937); Slatt v. Thomas, 36 P.2d 459 (Colo. 1934).

(n59)Footnote 381. Cornett v. West, 173 P. 44 (Wash. 1918); Markel v. Peck, 151 S.W. 772 (Mo. App. 1912).

(n60)Footnote 382. Hamlen v. Welch, 116 F.2d 413 (1st Cir. 1940); In re Mathues' Estate, 185 A. 768 (Pa. 1936); United States v. Swope, 16 F.2d 215 (8th Cir. 1926).

(n61)Footnote 383. Darling v. Buddy, 1 S.W. 2d 163 (Mo. 1927); Equitable Trust Co. of New York v. Kingsley, 197 N.Y.S. 267 (1922), aff'd, 201 N.Y.S 900 (1923). Typifying the mixed decisions are Coffman v. Gates, 85 S.W. 657 (Mo. App. 1904); Wells-Stone Mercantile Co. v. Aultman, Miller & Co., 84 N.W. 375 (N.D. 1900); Roger Williams Nat'l Bank v. Groton Mfg. Co., 17 A. 170 (R.I. 1889).

(n62)Footnote 384. Caflisch Lumber Co. v. Lake Lynn Lumber Co. & Supply Co., 195 S.E. 854 (W. Va. 1938); Gates v. McClenahan, 100 N.W. 479 (Iowa 1904); Norton v. Phelps, 54 Miss. 467 (1877); Field v. Wilbur, 49 Vt. 157 (1876).

(n63)Footnote 385. Kann v. Kann, 344 Md. 689 (1997) ("The equitable remedies of a trust beneficiary are: (a) to compel the trustee to perform his duties as a trustee; (b) to enjoin the trustee from committing a breach of trust; (c) to compel a trustee to redress a breach of trust; (d) to appoint a receiver to take possession of the trust property and administer the trust; (e) to remove the trustee.").

Brownfield v. McFadden, 68 P.2d 993 (Cal. App. 1937); In re Manning's Estate, 111 N.W. 409 (Iowa 1907); Henrietta Nat'l Bank v. Barrett, 25 S.W. 456 (Tex. Civ. App. 1894).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.06 Modifying and Terminating Trusts

[Go To Supp]

The rules regarding alteration of trusts are conspicuously straightforward. Unless rules for altering are set forth in the trust instrument, there is no other means, express or implied, for changing the trust. n386 Under some circumstances, a form of estoppel is applied to bar beneficiaries who have consented to a change, albeit without authority to do so, from objecting to the carrying out of the change. n387 A court of equity has the power to alter the administrative provisions of a private trust, in order to better achieve the trust's purpose, n388 but it may not change the beneficiaries' interests, n389 unless all the beneficiaries request such a change. n390 As for charitable trusts, a court may not only change administrative provisions, n391 but -- under the cy pres power -- may also apply the trust funds to a different charitable purpose if the benefit to the trustor's originally intended purpose is no longer possible or practicable. n392 If, with respect to such a trust, the cy pres power is not applied, a resulting trust for the trustor and successors arises. n393

Similar principles govern the power to revoke a trust. Unless decreed otherwise by statute, the power to revoke a trust exists only as it is expressly stated in the instrument creating the trust, n394 and then only in the party to whom specifically given, whether the trustor, trustee, or another. n395

Statutes in some states permit beneficiaries, by unanimous written consent, to revoke a voluntary trust. n396 A court of equity may revoke or terminate a trust whose purpose has been accomplished n397 or has become impossible n398 or ille-gal. n399 Where the interests of the beneficiaries pass to the trustee, the legal and equitable estates in the trust property are merged, and the trust ceases to exist. n400

Finally, even if the trust purposes have not been accomplished, a court of equity has the power to terminate a trust upon the request of the trustor and all the beneficiaries. n401 If the trustor does not join in such a request, the majority American rule is that the court will refuse to terminate the trust. n402

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: trust w/50 (revok! or revoc! or terminat!) w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trust w/50 (change or alter or modif!) w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land) trust w/50 cy pres w/50 (property or real property or real estate or land)

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 386. Werbelovsky v. Manufacturers Trust Co., 209 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1961); Briggs v. Briggs, 346 S.W.2d 106 (Tex. 1961); Bayless v. Wheeler Kelly Hagny Trust Co., 109 P.2d 108 (Kan. 1941); Childs v. Gross, 107 P.2d 424 (Cal. App. 1940); Krause v. Jeannette Inv. Co., 62 S.W.2d 890 (Mo. 1933); Farwell v. Illinois Merchants Trust Co., 264 Ill. App. 49 (1931).

(n2)Footnote 387. Bryne v. Laura, 52 Cal. App. 4th 1054 (1997) ("equitable estoppel may be employed to enforce an oral trust in land where the beneficiary has 'irrevocably changed his position in reliance upon the trust' "); In re Newhouse's Estate, 212 N.Y.S.2d 2 (1960); Fry v. Stetson, 106 A.2d 662 (Pa. Super. 1954).

(n3)Footnote 388. Bolles v. Boatmen's Nat'l Bank of St. Louis, 255 S.W.2d 725 (Mo. 1953); United States Nat'l Bank of Portland v. First Nat'l Bank of Portland, 142 P.2d 785 (Or. 1943).

(n4)Footnote 389. In re Suhling's Will, 45 N.W.2d 608 (Wis. 1951); Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Friele, 23 N.E.2d 138 (Mass. 1939); In re Stanley's Will, 269 N.W. 550 (Wis. 1936); Stewart v. Hamilton, 270 S.W. 79 (Tenn. 1925).

(n5)Footnote 390. Gifford v. First Nat'l Bank of Menominee, 280 N.W. 108 (Mich. 1938); In re O'Keeffe's Estate, 3 N.Y.S.2d 739 (1938); Reynolds v. Reynolds, 182 S.E. 341 (1935).

(n6)Footnote 391. Howard Savings Inst. v. Peep, 170 A.2d 39 (N.J. 1961).

(n7)Footnote 392. Catron v. Scarritt Collegiate Inst., 175 S.W. 571 (Mo. 1915); Utica Trust & Deposit Co. v. Thompson, 149 N.Y.S. 392 (1914); Norris v. Loomis, 102 N.E. 419 (Mass. 1913); Lewis v. Gaillard, 56 So. 281 (Fla. 1911); In re Kramph's Estate, 77 A. 814 (Pa. 1910); Nichols v. Newark Hospital, 63 A. 621 (N.J. Eq. 1906); Inglish v. Johnson, 95 S.W. 558 (Tex. Civ. App. 1906); Troutman v. De Boissiere Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home & Indus. Sch. Ass'n, 64 P. 33 (Kan. 1901), rev'd, 71 P. 286 (Kan. 1903); In re Royer's Estate, 56 P. 461 (Cal. 1899); Heuser v. Harris, 42 Ill. 425 (1867).

(n8)Footnote 393. Shannep v. Strong, 160 P.2d 683 (Kan. 1945); Waterbury Trust Co. v. Porter, 38 A.2d 598 (Conn. 1944).

(n9)Footnote 394. Stipe v. First Nat'l Bank of Portland, 301 P.2d 175 (Or. 1956); Lamb v. First Huntington Nat'l Bank, 7 S.E.2d 441 (W. Va. 1940); Gray v. Union Trust Co. of San Francisco, 154 P. 306 (Cal. 1915); New Jersey Title Guar. & Trust Co. v. Parker, 93 A. 196 (N.J. Eq. 1915), aff'd, 96 A. 574 (N.J. Err. & App. 1916); Hammerstein v. Equitable Trust Co., 141 N.Y.S. 1065 (1913); Fishblate v. Fishblate, 86 A. 469 (Pa. 1913); Lovett v. Farnham, 47 N.E. 246 (Mass. 1897).

(n10)Footnote 395. Richardson v. Stephenson, 213 N.W. 673 (Wis. 1927); Farlow v. Farlow, 34 A. 837 (Md. 1896); Falk v. Turner, 101 Mass. 494 (1869).

(n11)Footnote 396. See, e.g., N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law §7-1.9; Okla. Stat. Ann.§tit. 60 175.41; Wis. Stat. Ann. §701.12.

(n12)Footnote 397. Millsaps v. Johnson, 196 S.W. 202 (Tex. Civ. App. 1917); In re Packer's Estate, 92 A. 65 (Pa. 1914); In re Hagerstown Trust Co., 86 A. 982 (Md. 1913); Kahn v. Tierney, 120 N.Y.S. 663 (1909), aff'd, 94 N.E. 1095 (N.Y. 1911); Taylor v. Richards, 117 N.W. 208 (Mich. 1908); Temple v. Ferguson, 72 S.W. 455 (Tenn. 1903); Cherry v. Richardson, 24 So. 570 (Ala. 1898).

(n13)Footnote 398. Gordon v. Gordon, 124 N.E.2d 226 (Mass. 1955); Jedor v. Chicago City Bank & Trust Co., 33 N.E.2d 220 (Ill. 1941).

(n14)Footnote 399. In re Solbrig's Will, 96 N.W.2d 97 (Wis. 1959); In re Morse, 160 N.E. 374 (N.Y. 1928); Schlessinger v. Mallard, 11 P. 728 (Cal. 1886).

(n15)Footnote 400. Tifft v. Ireland, 172 N.E. 865 (Mass. 1930); Cunningham v. Bright, 117 N.E. 909 (Mass. 1917); Wenzel v. Powder, 59 A. 194 (Md. 1904).

(n16)Footnote 401. Fowler v. Lanpher, 75 P.2d 132 (Wash. 1938); Botzum v. Havana Nat'l Bank, 12 N.E.2d 203 (Ill. 1937); O'Brien v. Holden, 160 A. 192 (Vt. 1932); Stephens v. Moore, 249 S.W. 601 (Mo. 1923); Angle v. Marshall, 47 S.E. 882 (W. Va. 1904).

(n17)Footnote 402. In re Simonin's Estate, 103 A. 927 (Pa. 1918). Decisions following the minority rule are represented by Blackburn v. Blackburn, 180 S.W. 48 (Ky. 1915); Claflin v. Claflin, 20 N.E. 454 (Mass. 1889), but see, Hamerstrom v. Commerce Bank of Kansas City, 808 S.W.2d 434 (Mo. Ct. App. 1991). Rabidas v. Murasko, 677 A.2d 331 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1996) ("Generally, a trust executed without reservation of power by a settlor to revoke or reform the trust is irrevocable. An irrevocable trust may be rescinded by the settlor, however, if it is demonstrated that the trust was created through fraud, duress, undue influence, or mistake." (citation omitted)). Id. at 333

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 27.07

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 27.07 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Several of the following bibliographic references focus on various real property aspects of trust law.

Books

American Law Institute. Restatement of the Law of Trusts. St. Paul, Minn.: American Law Institute Publishers, 1935.

American Law Institute. Restatement (Second) of the Law, Second: Trusts. St. Paul, Minn.: American Law Institute Publishers, 1959.

American Law Institute. Restatement of the Law, Trusts: Prudent Investor Rule. St. Paul, Minn.: American Law Institute Publishers, 1992.

Bogert, George Taylor. Trusts. St. Paul, Minn.: West Pub. Co., 6th ed., 1987.

Scott, Austin Wakeman. The Law of Trusts. Boston, Mass.: Little, Brown, 4th ed., 1987.

Turner, George M. Irrevocable Trusts. Colorado Springs, Colo.: Shepard's/McGraw-Hill, 1985.

Turner, George M. Revocable Trusts. Deerfield, Il.: Clark, Boardman, Callaghan, 3d ed., 1996. (a comprehensive source explaining the use of the revocable trust in estate planning).

Articles

Baldwin, Melissa Waller. "Conservation Easements: A Viable Tool for Land Preservation." Land & Water L. Rev. Vol. 32 (1997) 89.

Cuevas, Carlos J. "Bankruptcy Code Section 544(a) and Constructive Trusts: the Trustee's Strong Arm Powers Should Prevail." Seton Hall L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1991) 678.

Dore, Michele Chandler. "Land Trustee as Secured Creditor: Fiduciary Duties Revisited." S. Ill. U. L.J. Vol. 1982 (1982) 249.

Dorsey, John C. & Walter H. Nunnallee. "A 'Shell' Corp. May be a Good Devisee of Contaminated Realty." Est. Plan. Vol. 20 (Sept.-Oct. 1993) 283.

Estes, Carl II. "Foreign Investment in U.S. Real Estate Through REITs." Tax Mgmt. Int'l J. Vol. 20 (1991) 143.

Freyfogle, Eric T. "Land Trusts and the Decline of Mortgage Law." U. Ill. L. Rev. Vol. 1988 (1988) 67.

Goldberg, Charlotte K. "Estate of Castiglioni: Spousal Murder and the Clash of Joint Tenancy and Equity in California Community Property Law." Idaho L. Rev. Vol. 33 (1997) 513.

Holmes, William J. "The Evolution of the Trust: A Creative Solution to Trustee Liability Under CERCLA." Vill. Envtl. L. Rev. Vol. 6 (1995) 1. (This Article argues that the trust is a legal instrument which is a viable tool to bring once-contaminated land back into productive use.).

Kelley, William A., Jr. "How to Qualify a Real Estate Investment Trust." The Prac. Tax Law. Vol. 6 (1992) no. 1, p. 30 (Part 1), no. 2, p. 29 (Part 2).

Kourtis, James Papademetriou. "The Constructive Trust: Equity's Answer to the Need for a Strong Deterrent to the Destruction of Historic Landmarks." B C. Envtl. Aff. L. Rev. Vol. 16 (1989) 793.

Kuether, John F. "Significant Probate and Trust Decisions." Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. Vol. 30 (Winter 1996) 645. (This Article reviews significant probate and trust law cases and analyzes their impact on the development of the law in a variety of subject areas.).

Langbein, John H. "The Contractarian Basis of the Law of Trusts." Yale L.J. Vol. 105 (1995) 625.(The conventional three-party trust is primarily grounded in contract law rather than property law.).

Langbeinn, John H. "The Secret Life of the Trust: The Trust as an Instrument of Commerce." Yale L.J. Vol. 107 (1997) 165.

Malaguti, Peter M. "Hazardous Use of Nominee Realty Trusts." MSL L. Rev. Vol. 1 (Winter 1993) 63.

"Managing the Real-Estate Investment Trust: An Alternative to the Independent Contractor Requirement." Harv. L. Rev. Vol. 107 (1994) 1117.

McSwain, Angus S., Jr. "Limitation Statutes and the Constructive Trust in Texas." Baylor L. Rev. Vol. 41 (1989) 429.

Nuffer, David. "An Introduction to Land Trust and Conservation Easements." Utah B.J. Vol. 7 (1994) 12.

Pastel, Stacey Janeda. "Community Land Trusts: A Promising Alternative for Affordable Housing." J. Land Use & Envtl. L. Vol. 6 (1990) 293.

Poindexter, Mark D., "Of Dinosaurs and Indefinite Land Trusts: A Review of Individual American Indian Property Rights Amidst the Legacy of Allotment." B.C. Third World L.J. Vol. 14 (Winter 1994) 53.

Pryde, James P. "Is the Land Trust Truly a Trust? -- Gift Tax and Broader Implications." U. Ill. L. Rev. Vol. 1982 (1982) 503.

Rice-Osterhoudt, Rebecca. "Farmland Preservation in Vermont and the Creative Use of Land Trusts." Vt. L. Rev. Vol. 11 (1986) 603.

Ryan, Stephen T. "Real Estate Investment Trusts Face Surprising State Taxation." J. State Tax'n Vol. 12 (1994) 14.

Schlesinger, Stanford J. & Barbara J. Scheiner. "Use of Trusts in Planning for Disability." J. Accountancy Vol. 174 (1992) 84.

Sherwin, Emily L. "Constructive Trusts in Bankruptcy." U. Ill. L. Rev. (1989) 297.

Solomon, Howard B. "Revocable Trusts -- A Contrarian's Viewpoint." N.Y. St. B.J. Vol. 68 (Feb. 1996) 34.(For all its popularity, the revocable trust is not necessarily the best option.)

Stenger, Robert L. "Cohabitants and Constructive Trusts -- Comparative Approaches." J. Fam. L. Vol. 27 (1989) 373.

Witner, Larry. "REITs: The Revolution in Real Estate Financing." Real Est. L J. Vol. 22 (1994) 248.

Young, David B. "The Pro Tanto Invalidity of Protective Trusts: Partial Self-Settlement and Beneficiary Control." Marq. L. Rev. Vol. 78 (1995) 807. ("Spendthrift" [and other protective] provisions may be theoretically suspect. They are, nonetheless, not only valid but also thriving.).

Annotations

Annotation, Adopted Child as Within Class Named in Deed or Inter Vivos Trust Instrument, 37 A.L.R. 5th 237.

Annotation, After-acquired Title: Rule of Estoppel by Conveyance or Transfer to Set up Title Subsequently Acquired by Grantor or Transferrer as Applicable to Conveyance or Transfer by Executor, Administrator, or Testamentary Trustee, 93 A.L.R. 231.

Annotation, Applicability of Testamentary Trust Income to Payment or Amortization of Mortgage Upon Realty Included in Trust Assets Where Beneficiary is Given "Net Income," 68 A.L.R. 3d 811.

Annotation, Broker's Fees on Sale or Lease of Trust Property as Chargeable against Principal or Income, 94 A.L.R. 2d 1306.

Annotation, Character as Condition, Limitation, Covenant, or Trust of Provision in Deed as to Purpose for Which Property Is to Be Used, as Affected by Introduction with Word "Provided" or Its Derivatives, 135 A.L.R. 1135.

Annotation, Creation of Express Trust in Property to be Acquired in the Future, 3 A.L.R. 3d 1416.

Annotation, Effect of Deed in Which the Word "Trustee" Follows the Name of the Grantee, But Does Not Set Out Terms of Trust or Name the Beneficiary, 137 A.L.R. 460.

Annotation, Enforceability, as Regards Proceeds of Sale of Property, of Real-Estate Trust That Does Not Satisfy Statute of Frauds, 154 A.L.R. 385.

Annotation, Gift for Maintenance or Care of Private Cemetery or Burial Lot, or of Tomb or of Monument, Including the Erection Thereof, as Valid Trust, 47 A.L.R. 2d 596.

Annotation, Implied Power of Executor or Testamentary Trustee to Sell Real Estate, 134 A.L.R. 378; 23 A.L.R. 2d 1000.

Annotation, Interest of Spouse in Estate by Entireties as Subject to Satisfaction of His or Her Individual Debt, 75 A.L.R. 2d 1172.

Annotation, Modern Status of the Massachusetts or Business Trust, 88 A.L.R. 3d 704.

Annotation, Mortgage Investment: Surchargeability of Trustee, Executor, Administrator, or Guardian, in Respect of Mortgage Investment, as Affected by Matters Relating to Value of Property, 117 A.L.R. 871.

Annotation, Nature of Estate Conveyed by Deed for Park or Playground Purposes, 15 A.L.R. 2d 975.

Annotation, Occupying Property: Respective Rights and Obligations of Testamentary Trustee and One Whom will Permits to Occupy Property, 172 A.L.R. 1283.

Annotation, Power and Capacity of Members of Unincorporated Association, Lodge, Society, or Club to Convey, Transfer, or Encumber Association Property, 15 A.L.R. 2d 1451.

Annotation, Power of Executor or Trustee with Power to Sell or to Lease Real Property, or to Do Both, to Give an Option to Purchase, 83 A.L.R. 2d 1310.

Annotation, Power of Sale: Power of Those Who Accept Executorship or Trusteeship to Exercise Right to Sell Real Property Conferred by Will on Several Named as Executors and Trustees, Some of Whom Fail or Refuse to Accept, 36 A.L.R. 826.

Annotation, Power of Trustee and Court as Regards Modification of Lease of Trust Property, 93 A.L.R. 603.

Annotation, Power of Trustee and Court as Regards Term of Lease of Trust Property, 61 A.L.R. 1368; 67 A.L.R. 2d 978.

Annotation, Power of Trustee in Bankruptcy to Defeat Rights of Beneficiary of Constructive Trust Under §544(a) of Bankruptcy Code, 96 A.L.R. Fed. 100.

Annotation, Power of Trustee to Mortgage Trust Property for the Purpose of Making Improvements or Repairs, 63 A.L.R. 795.

Annotation, Propriety of Sale of Trust Assets Without Consent Despite Trust Provision Requiring Consent, 39 A.L.R. 4th 158.

Annotation, Provision for Application of Rent or Income to Improvement, Restoration, or Maintenance of Trust Property as Violation of Statute Against Accumulation of Income, 71 A.L.R. 417.

Annotation, Provision of Will for Life Beneficiary as Giving Him a Legal Life Estate or as Creating a Trust, 147 A.L.R. 605.

Annotation, Remedies in Event of Executor's or Testamentary Trustee's Delay in Exercise of Power to Sell Real Estate

Conferred by Will, 132 A.L.R. 1473.

Annotation, Right and Power of Trustee in Bankruptcy or Debtor in Possession to Abandon, Under 11 U.S.C. §554(a), Property Which is "Burdensome" Because of Existence of Environmental Conditions Requiring Cleanup -- Midlantic and Its Progeny, 103 A.L.R. Fed. 72.

Annotation, Right of Cestui Que Trust (or One Claiming Through or Under Him) to Maintain Suit for Partition, 126 A.L.R. 1009.

Annotation, Right of Trustee Holding Legal Title to Maintain Partition Suit, 103 A.L.R. 455.

Annotation, Right of Trustee of Land Having Interest Therein to Purchase on His Own Behalf in Association with Foreclosure by Third-Party Lienor, in Absence of Express Trust Provision, 30 A.L.R. 4th 732.

Annotation, Rights and Remedies of One Purchasing at Judicial or Execution Sale Where There Was Misrepresentation or Mistake as to Acreage or Location of Boundaries of Tract Sold, 69 A.L.R. 2d 254.

Annotation, Rights of a Tenant for Life or for Years and Remaindermen Inter Se in Royalties or Rents under Oil, Gas, Coal, or Other Mineral Lease, 18 A.L.R. 2d 98.

Annotation, Situs for Property Taxation as Between Different States or Countries, of Personal Property, or Interests Therein, Held by Trustees, Executors, or Administrators, 67 A.L.R. 393; 127 A.L.R. 379; 172 A.L.R. 341.

Annotation, Trustee's Power to Employ Broker or Agent to Sell or Lease Estate Property, 47 A.L.R. 2d 1379.

Annotation, Trustee's Power to Exchange Trust Property for Share of Corporation Organized to Hold the Property, 20 A.L.R. 3d 841.

Annotation, Trusts: Merger of Legal and Equitable Estates Where Sole Trustees Are Sole Beneficiaries, 7 A.L.R. 4th 621.

Annotation, Validity and Construction of Trust Instrument Which Fails to Designate Respective Interests of Beneficiaries, 87 A.L.R. 3d 925.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Provisions of Charitable Trust Providing for Accumulation of Income, 6 A.L.R. 4th 903.

Annotation, Validity of Bequest or devise in trust terms of which are subject to Testator's Future Directions, 24 A.L.R. 177.

Annotation, Validity under Rule Against Perpetuities, of Gift in Remainder to Creator's Great-grandchildren, Following Successive Life Estates to Children and Grandchildren, 18 A.L.R. 2d 671.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 27.03

Supp. to § 27.03 Definitions of Trust Terms.

[Go To Main]

§ 27.03(a) Trust. [Go To Main]

Add:

Galdjie v. Darwish, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d. 178 (Dec. 4, 2003) (noting that the trustee who is subject to personal liability as the result of performance of his or her duties as trustee could seek reimbursement from trust assets).

§ 27.03(c) The Property of the Trust. [Go To Main]

Add:

Sabo v. Keidel, 745 N.W.2d 661 (N.D. 2008) (a quit claim deed conveying property to the trust is not admissible to contradict the terms of the trust).

In re Marriage of Brown, 183 P.3d 207 (Or. App. 2008) (a husband's interests in trust are property interests and cannot be awarded as a form of spousal support).

LexisNexis®

39 of 191 DOCUMENTS

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 27.04

Supp. to § 27.04 Creation and Validity of Trusts.

[Go To Main]

§ 27.04(a) Express Trusts. [Go To Main]

Add:

Chavin v. PNC Bank, 816 A.2d 781 (Del. 2003) ("The cardinal rule of law in a trust case is that the intent of the settlor controls the interpretation of the instrument." The language of the trust instrument and the circumstances surrounding its construction must be used to determine intent). See also Hughes v. 3M Retiree Med. Plan, 281 F.3d 786 (8th Cir. 2002) . Compare with Eychaner v. Gross, 779 N.E.2d 1115 (Ill. 2002) (intent is determined by considering the entire document and the "plain and ordinary meaning of the words used").

In re Ingeneri, 321 B.R. 601 (Bankr..D.Me. 2005) (noting that attributes of an express trust include an explicit declaration of intention to create a trust, a trustee, a beneficiary, and trust property).

Add:

United States v. 7700 Stein Way, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 5051 (No. 02-56627, 9th Cir., Mar. 28, 2005) (noting that when trust property is real estate, the statute of frauds requires that the declaration of trust be in writing and that an adequate description of the trust property be provided).

Add:

See e.g., In re Estate of Romanowski, 771 N.E.2d 966 (Ill. App. 1st Dist. 2002) (Daughter exceeded grant of power of attorney when she transferred her mother's property into a trust and received sale proceeds upon mother's death. Evidence of an oral agreement was inadmissible because the construction of the power of attorney demonstrated the mother's intent to not grant the daughter the authority to appoint contingent beneficiaries).

Mezey v. Fioramonti, 65 P.3d 980 (Ariz. App. 2003) (wife charged with knowledge of separation of husband's financial interests that would have been revealed by reasonable investigation regardless of whether any investigation was undertaken).

Add:

Tutorow v. Gerber, 2002 Cal. App. LEXIS 1139 (May 14, 2002) .

Add:

Dassori v. Patterson, 802 N.E.2d 553 (Mass. 2004) (a trust instrument may be reformed to conform with the settlor's intent, and to determine that intent the court looks to the instrument as a whole as well as circumstances known to the settler at execution. Introduction of extrinsic information may also be permissible); Diwadkar v. Dalal, 790 N.E.2d 221 (Mass. 2003) ; In re Substitute Indenture of Trust, 789 N.E.2d 1051 (Mass. 2003) .

Add:

Glaeske v. Shaw, 2003 661 N.W.2d 420 (Wis. App. 2003) (trust valid although it lacked two signatures, because it had its most significant relationship with Wisconsin, which did not require two signatures); Kirschbaum v. Wennett, 806 N.E.2d 440 (Mass. App. 2004) (when a trust provides for method of modification, that method must be strictly followed).

Add:

Jackson v. Callan Publ'g, Inc., 2005 Ill. App. LEXIS 170 (No. 1-03-2942, Feb. 28, 2005) ("The requirements for the creation of a charitable trust are: the intention to create a trust; a definite subject matter or trust property; a charitable purpose; and delivery of the trust property to another person as a trustee"); In re AppOnline.com, Inc., 315 B.R. 259, (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2004) (Under New York law, an express trust requires the actual delivery or legal assignment of the fund or other property to the trustee with the intention of passing legal title to him or her as trustee).

Add:

March v. March, 816 N.E.2d 1256 (Mass. App. Ct. 2004) (having failed to reserve a power to revoke the trust thus established, the trust must be deemed irrevocable, even if created without consideration).

§ 27.04(c) Who May Be the Trustee. [Go To Main]

Add:

Bilby v. Bilby, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 747 (No. FA030196803S, Conn. Super. Ct. Mar. 18, 2005) (Each parent shall have the right to name a trustee to hold the proceeds of the life insurance for the support, education, health and welfare of the minor children). See also Kudlach v. Kudlach, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 616 (No. FA030127305S, Feb. 24, 2005) (Each parent shall have the right to name a trustee to hold the proceeds of the life insurance for the support, education, health and welfare of the minor child.)

Add:

Kelly v. Hard Money Funding, Inc., 494 Utah Adv. Rep. 31 (2004) (deed of conveyance is void unless the grantee is capable of holding the named property).

Edwards v. Burke, 102 P.3d 1271 (Mont. 2004) (stating that unincorporated associations cannot own real property and therefore must have an "identifiable trustee" which possesses the land in lieu of the association and takes responsibility for the duties of ownership).

Add:

Estate of Engelman v. Comm'r, 121 T.C. 54 (2003) (when an equitable and legal estate are united in a single person, the two interests generally merge and the trust terminates).

Kirschbaum v. Elizabeth Ortman Trust of 1977, 787 N.Y.S.2d 678 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004) ("If one person has both legal and equitable title, i.e., is the sole beneficiary and sole trustee, the titles merge, and the merger destroys the trust unless another beneficiary has an interest").

§ 27.04(d) The Beneficiary. [Go To Main]

Add:

In re Milton Hershey Sch., 867 A.2d 674 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2005) (stating that the beneficiaries of a private trust are specific, often few in number, and readily ascertainable).

In re Smeller, 855 N.E.2d 543 (Ohio App. 2006) (estate administrator could not sell estate property held in trust for decedent's child).

Add:

In re Testamentary Trust of Charnock, 597 S.E.2d 706 (N.C. 2004) (A "guardian ad litem" may be appointed to represent the interests of any unknown or unborn potential beneficiaries of the trust).

Add:

In re Scott Arthur Young, Debtor, 297 B.R. 492 (E.D. Tex. 2003) (revenue may be assigned by the beneficiary or by the court subjected to his debts).

Mahan v. Rudnick, 2004 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 6592 (No. F042773, July 13, 2004) (Future interests may be sold, transferred, or devised in the s ame manner as present interests).

Add:

Rose v. Amsouth Bank of Florida, 296 F. Supp. 2d 383 (E.D. N.Y. 2003) (for assignees in the same action, the one prior in time is not always entitled to priority).

Add:

Moore v. Moore, 111 S.W.3d 530 (Mo. App. 2003) (in the absence of provisions prohibiting alienation, a vested equitable estate can be passed through inheritance).

Add:

Jackson v. Fid. & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 608 S.E.2d 901 (Va. 2005) (a beneficiary's debts are enforceable by creditors against the beneficiary's trust interest in the hands of the trustee regardless of any spendthrift provisions the trust contains).

Add:

Ventura County Dept. of Child Support Services v. Brown, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 489 (2004) (a settlor may not create a spendthrift trust naming himself as sole beneficiary).

Add:

O'Brien v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, T.C. Memo 2003-290, 86 T.C.M. (CCH) 461, 2003 Tax Ct. Memo LEXIS 291 (2003) (trusts are reachable for collection of federal tax liabilities).

Add:

Emmet County Bd. of Supervisors v. Ridout, 692 N.W.2d 821 (Iowa 2005) (Under certain circumstances, even the assets of a trust protected by a spendthrift clause may be reached to satisfy and enforce a claim against the beneficiary; i.e. for services rendered and materials furnished which preserve or benefit the interest of the beneficiary).

§ 27.04(e)(1) Restrictions on and Varieties of Purposes.

Add:

U.S. v. Neal, 255 F.R.D. 638 (W.D. Ark. 2008) (sham trusts used to shelter and hide assets from creditors).

In re Estate of Young, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 520 (2008) ("tax avoidance" land trusts were void because of fraud or undue influence).

§ 27.04(f) Special Rules Relating to Charitable Trusts. [Go To Main]

Add:

Fletcher v. City of San Diego, 2002 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 10282 (Nov. 7, 2002) .

NC Illinois Trust Co. v. Madigan, 351 Ill. App. 3d 311 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) (noting that a charitable trust is designed to advance a certain social good or even to benefit society at large).

Add after the sentence: "Some confusion appears in the cases ... must be indefinite).

Blumenthal v. Sharon Hosp., 2003 Conn. Super. LEXIS 13 (Jan. 7, 2003) ("A charitable trust or gift is seen as being devoted to charitable purposes forever").

Add:

Indian Law Resource Center v. First Am. Bank (In re Estate of Smeltzer), 2002 Iowa App. LEXIS 1111 (Oct. 30, 2002) .

Add:

Hays v. Harmon, 809 N.E.2d 460 (Ind. Ct. App. 2004) ("Charitable trust means a trust in which all the beneficiaries are the general public or organizations ... and that is organized and operated wholly for religious, charitable, scientific, public safety testing, literary, or educational purposes").

Add:

In re Estate of Somers, 89 P.3d 898 (Kan. 2004) (noting that a charitable trust may be created for the relief of poverty, the advancement of education or religion).

Add:

Quinn v. BJC Health Sys., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7910 (No. 404CV00768 ERW, E.D. Mo. Mar. 1, 2005) ("Charitable trusts require language which demonstrates a specific intent to create the trust").

Add:

Niemann v. Vaughn Community Church, 77 P.3d 1208 (Wash. App. 2003) (court properly removed the discriminatory restraint on alienation from VCC's deed).

§ 27.04(g) Non-Express Trusts. [Go To Main]

§ 27.04(g)(1) Constructive Trusts.

§ 27.04(g)(1)(i) In General.

Add:

Berryman v. Adams, 2003 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 708 (No. 2010991, Sep. 26, 2003) (when a judge imposes a constructive trust, it will not be disturbed unless clearly erroneous); Lipton v. Donnenfeld, 5 A.D.3d 356, 773 N.Y.S.2d 82 (2004) (a constructive trust will be imposed to satisfy justice).

Davis v. Estridge, 85 S.W.3d 308 (Tex. App. 2001) (imposition of constructive trust deemed inequitable); Davis v. Barnfield, 833 So. 2d 58 (Ala. Civ. App. 2002) (constructive trust imposed).

Northrup v. Brigham, No. 04-P-87, 2005 Mass. App. LEXIS 400 (Apr 29, 2005) (A constructive trust is imposed to avoid the unjust enrichment of one party at the expense of the other where the legal title to the property was obtained by fraud or in violation of a fiduciary relationship). See also Gaentner v. Benkovich, 18 A.D.3d 424, 795 N.Y.S.2d 246 ; N.Y. App. Div. May 2, 2005) (stating that the elements of a cause of action for a constructive trust are: (1) a confidential or fiduciary relationship, (2) a promise, (3) a transfer in reliance thereon, and (4) unjust enrichment).

Add:

Great-West Life & Annuity Ins. Co. v. Knudson, 534 U.S. 204 (2002) .

See Ferris, Baker, Watts, Inc. v. Stephenson (In re MJK Clearing), 286 B.R. 109 (Bankr. D. Minn. 2002) (specific property must be identified as belonging to the plaintiff in order for the court to impose a constructive trust).

Add:

Anderson v. Bellino, 658 N.W.2d 645 (Neb. 2003) (trustee may be reimbursed for expenses incurred in execution of the trust).

Add:

Amendola v. Kendzia, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4604 (Apr 29, 2005) ("The statute of frauds does not furnish a defense to a cause of action seeking to impress a constructive trust on real property"). See also Schwartz v. Houss, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 427, (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Jan. 3, 2005) (noting that the Statute of Frauds is not a defense to a cause of action for a constructive trust).

Add:

Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Forman Enters. v. Forman (In re Forman Enters.), 281 B.R. 600 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2002) (the party seeking the imposition of a constructive trust has the burden of providing "clear, direct, precise and convincing" evidence).

Glaspy v. Glaspy, 545 S.E.2d 782 (N.C. App. 2001) (constructive trust could not be imposed absent clear and convincing evidence).

§ 27.04(g)(1)(ii) Circumstances Giving Rise to Constructive Trusts.

Add:

Salt Creek Rural Park Dist. v. Dep't of Revenue, 334 Ill. App. 3d 67, 777 N.E.2d 515 (Ill. App. 2002) (a constructive trust may be imposed when there is a finding of some form of wrongdoing).

Add:

Iwanow v. Iwanow, 834 N.Y.S.2d 251 (2007) (wife obtained constructive trust over land purchased by husband with title in a third party); Keller v. Estate of Keller, 2007 Fla. App. LEXIS 727 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007) (after the wife' death, a constructive trust was imposed on land purchased during marriage with joint funds); Ruiz v. Meloney, 26 A.D.3d 485, 810 N.Y.S.2d 216 (2006) (constructive trust could be imposed on property held by unmarried former cohabitants).

In re Kent Peterson, 2004 Tex. App. LEXIS 567 (No. 07-03-0512-CV, Jan. 20, 2004) (executor has fiduciary duty to disclose all material facts known that might affect the beneficiaries' rights).

In re Del-Met Corp., 2005 Bankr. M.D. Tenn. LEXIS 671 (No. 01-13208-KML-3-7, Mar. 4, 2005) (stating that Tennessee courts have imposed constructive trusts when a person makes use of some relation of influence or confidence to obtain the legal title upon more advantageous terms than could otherwise have been obtained).

Add:

Snyder v. Cowell, 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 3139 (No. 08-01-00444-CV, Apr. 10, 2003) (self dealing by trustee may be attacked by the beneficiary even if he has suffered no damages and trustee has acted in good faith).

Add

Reale v. Reale, 485 F. Supp. 2d 247 (D.N.Y. 2007) (constructive trust not warranted without sufficient evidence of promise by landholders to share the property with siblings).

Add:

Armelin v. Armelin, 2003 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 8885 (No. 8161395, Sep. 18, 2003) (statute of frauds is not a shield for fraud).

Jackson v. Callan Pub'lg, Inc., 356 Ill. App. 3d 326, 826 N.E.2d 413 (No. 1-03-2942, Feb. 28, 2005) ("When a person's property has been wrongfully appropriated and converted into a different form, equity impresses a constructive trust upon the new form or species of property") (quoting Sadacca v. Monhart, 470 N.E.2d 589, 593-94 (Ill. 1984) .

Add:

United States v. Nava, 404 F.3d 1119 (9th Cir. 2005) (fraud is generally one of the bases upon which a constructive trust is found). See also Stewart v. Sewell, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 222 (No. M2003-01031-COA-R3-CV, Tenn. Ct. App., Apr. 14, 2005).

Add:

Kalwitz v. Estate of Kalwitz, 822 N.E.2d 274 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) ("The duty to convey the property may rise because it was acquired through fraud, duress, undue influence or mistake"). See, e.g., In re Adell, 321 B.R. 562 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2005) (a constructive trust may be imposed to prevent unjust enrichment of one person at the expense of another as a result of mistake in the transaction that causes the problem.)

Add:

Dickinson v. Dickinson, 87 S.W.3d 438 (Mo. App. 2002) (a constructive trust may be imposed when a party had "undue influence" over the financial decisions of the grantor).

In re Estate of George E. Brower, 772 N.Y.S.2d 112 (N.Y. App. Div. 2004) (a will is invalid when influence is such that testator acts against his free will or is too weak to resist).

Add:

But see Kaufman v. Cohen et. al., 307 A.D. 2d 113 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003) (in New York a constructive trust is governed by a statute of limitations that commences upon the wrongful act that gives rise to the trust).

Valencia v. Mississippi Baptist Med. Ctr., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5422 (No. 04-CV-628BN, S.D. Miss. Mar. 29, 2005) (a constructive trust arises by operation of law against one who by duress or abuse of confidence holds the legal right to property).

§ 27.04(g)(2) Resulting Trusts.

Add:

Quill v. Malizia, 2005 Del. Ch. LEXIS 37 (No. 2239-S, Mar. 04, 2005) ("A resulting trust gives effect to the intention of the parties, as evidenced by the circumstances surrounding the transaction, where it appears that the beneficial interest was not intended to follow the legal title").

Add:

City of Boston v. Roxbury Action Program, Inc., 68 Mass. App. Ct. 468 (Mass. App. Ct. 2007) (No. 300940, Mass. Land Ct. Apr. 26, 2005) ("A resulting trust may result if one party pays the purchase price of property but title is taken in the name of another").

Add:

But see In re Kimberly D. Ward, Debtor, 300 B.R. 692 (S.D. Ohio 2003) (constructive trust may be imposed when circumstances show that holder of the legal title is not holder of the beneficial interest as well).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 27.05

Supp. to § 27.05 Powers, Duties and Liabilities of Trustees.

[Go To Main]

§ 27.05(a) Powers of Trustees. [Go To Main]

Add:

In re JP Morgan Chase Bank, 852 N.Y.S.2d 718 (2008) (a testator's will could not be reformed to permit the trustee to sell certain property).

Add:

Dudoit v. Clifton, 158 P.3d 293 (Haw. App. 2006) (trustee action on claims of trespass against adjoining landowners: Brear v. Fagan, 849 N.E.2d 211 (Mass. 2006) .

Curran v. Kemper Nat'l Servs., Inc., 133 Fed. Appx. 740 (11th Cir. 2005) (stating that courts typically cannot control a trustee's exercise of power, except to prevent an abuse by the trustee of his discretion). See also State v. Russell, 185 N.J. 290 (N.J. 2005) (No. BER-P-500-04, N.J. Super. Ct. Ch. Div. Mar. 4, 2005) (noting that a court will not control a trustee's exercise of discretion as long the trustee acts in good faith and acts within the bounds of reasonable judgment). See also Prince v. Lynch, 2005 R.I. Super. Ct. LEXIS 24 (No. 03-1975, Feb 08, 2005) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 187 comment e: "The mere fact that if the discretion had been conferred upon the court, the court would have exercised the power differently, is not a sufficient reason for interfering with the exercise of the power by the trustee").

Add:

In re Testamentary Trust of Ethylener Charnock, 579 S.E.2d 887 (N.C. App. 2003) (courts will not control a trustee's discretionary powers unless trustee is acting dishonestly or fails to use reasonable judgment).

In re Scheidmantel, 868 A.2d 464 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2005) , (stating that even when there is no evidence of bad faith or improper motive, the exercise of discretion by trustees is subject to the limitation that they must not act outside the bounds of reasonable judgment). See also Dwight v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5351 (No. 3:03-cv-117, Mar. 31, 2005) (noting that liability of a trustee vested with discretionary powers attaches only if the discretion is abused.) See also In re Goodman, 790 N.Y.S.2d 837 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 2005) ("[t]he court has the responsibility to ensure that the trustees do not abuse their discretion. Accordingly, the court has the authority to correct abuses in the exercise of absolute discretion that are arbitrary or the result of bad faith").

Add:

Owen v. Zorn Farms, Inc., 62 P.3d 854 (Ore. App. 2003) (trustee shall have power to manage, sell, and convey in order to maintain the trust estate).

add text following n. 362

Trustees, of course, also have powers to sue and be sued.[362.1] n362.1

§ 27.05(b) Duties of Trustees. [Go To Main]

Add:

Brigham v. Brigham, 11 So. 3d 374 (Fla. App. 2009) (a trustee's conveyance of trust land to himself was a conflict of interest requiring court approval).

Add:

Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation v. U.S., 89 Fed. Cl. 589 (Fed. Cl. 2009) (plaintiff claimed breach of trustee's trust and fiduciary duties by failing to collect rent from trust land trustees).

Klinger v. Schwartz (In re Klinger), 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10367 (D. Conn. May 9, 2002) ("the trustee had a fiduciary duty to maximize the estate").

Petrie v. Petrie, 19 P.3d 443 (Wash. App. 2001) (lack of good judgment as custodian of investment account held to be a breach of trustee's fiduciary duty); Butera v. Attorneys' Title Guaranty Fund, Inc., 747 N.E.2d 949 (Ill. App. 2001) (trust's transfer of property to corporation owned by beneficiaries did not qualify as a distribution by operation of law).

Marshall v. First Nat'l Bank Alaska, 97 P.3d 830 (Alaska 2004) ("A trustee has a duty to use reasonable care and skill to make the trust property productive").

Add:

Omnioffices, Inc. v. Kaidanow, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS (Apr. 25, 2002) (improper delegation of statutory duties).

Add:

Mamoodjanloo v. Wolf, 190 P.3d 1170 (Okla. App. 2008) (even though trustees signed a disclosure form in connection with sale of the trust's real property, they were exempt from liability under the state residential condition disclosure act).

§ 27.05(c) Liabilities of Trustees. [Go To Main]

Add:

Kennedy v. The Droughton Trust, 277 Ga. App. 837 ; 627 S.E.2d 887 (Ga. App., 2006) (action for specific performance of land sale contract, brought against the trust and the trustee).

Add:

Clayborn v. Bankers Stand. Ins. Co., 75 S.W.3d 174 (Ark. 2002), overruled in part by, Low v. Ins. Co. of N. Am., 364 Ark. 427, 220 S.W.3d 670, 2005 Ark. LEXIS 772 (charitable-immunity doctrine "has become a rule of property").

Add:

Palm v. Stonehedge Farm Condominium Trust, No. 277787, Mass. Land Ct. Apr, 13, 2005) ("A provision in the trust instrument does not relieve the trustee of liability for breach of trust committed in bad faith, intentionally, or with reckless indifference to the interest of the beneficiary").

Add:

But see Societe Generale v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 325 F.Supp.2d 435 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) ("[W]hile a trustee may, under certain circumstances, be indemnified for contracts made in his capacity as trustee, liability will ordinary lie against him in his individual capacity).

Add:

From the Heart Church Ministries, Inc. v. Philadelphia-Baltimore Annual Conference, 964 A.2d 215 (Md. App. 2009) (the local church did not have the power to revoke the denomination's trust over church real property).

Add:

In re Bankers Trust Co., 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 192 (No. 1623-1960, Feb. 24, 2004) (beneficiary may not complain when it consents to an act).

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 362.1. Liberty Property Trust v. Republic Properties Corporation, 570 F. Supp. 2d 95 (D.D.C. 2008) (trust had power but lacked standing to pursue securities fraud claims).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 27.06

Supp. to § 27.06 Modifying and Terminating Trusts.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Hawes v. Colo. Div. of Ins., 2003 Colo. LEXIS 150 (March 3, 2003) (cy pres doctrine).

Blumenthal v. Sharon Hosp., 2003 Conn. Super. LEXIS 13 (Jan. 7, 2003) (applying the doctrine of cy pres, the court may resign the trust to a purpose that is closely related to its original intent).

Nat'l City Bank of Michigan/Illinois v. N. Ill. Univ., 353 Ill. App. 3d 282 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) ("Under the doctrine of cy pres, a court has the authority to redirect the application of the trust property to some other charitable purpose in an instance where it becomes impossible, impracticable, or illegal to carry out the particular charitable purpose designated by the settler"). See also In re Ruth Easton Fund, 680 N.W.2d 541 , Minn. App., 2004. Jun 01, 2004 (noting that the cy pres doctrine is appropriately applied only when reasonable efforts to comply with the literal language of the trust have failed).

Add:

But see In re Kathleen M. Huchins, Debtor, 306 B.R. 82 (D. Vt. 2004) (court may bar extinguishment of an equitable interest through merger when it would otherwise create an injustice).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 27 THE LAW OF TRUSTS RELATED TO REAL PROPERTY

3-27 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 27.07

Supp. to § 27.07 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Add to Articles:

Circo, Carl. "How Does the Arkansas Trust Code Affect Real Estate Transactions?" 2007 Ark. L. Notes 45 (2007).

Colliton, James W. "Race and Sex Discrimination in Charitable Trusts." Cornell J. of Law and Public Policy Vol. 12 (Spring, 2003) 275.

DiLeo, Diane A. "Loopholes in Federal Income Taxation: Solutions for Charitable Trust Abuse and Potential Application to Corporate Tax Shelter Abuse." Suffolk U. L. Rev. Vol. 36 (2002) 207.

English, David. "The Uniform Trust Code (2000) and its Application to Ohio." Cap. U.L. Rev. Vol. 30 (2002) 1.

English, David. "The Uniform Trust Code (2000): Significant Provisions and Policy Issues." Mo. L. Rev. Vol. 67 (Spring 2002) 143.

Frost, Christopher. "Financing Public Health Through Nonprofit Conversion Foundations." Ky. L.J. Vol. 90 (2001/2002) 935.

Gardner, Justin. "Ecclesiastical Divorce in Hierarchical Denominations and the Resulting Custody Battle Over Church Property: How the Supreme Court has Needlessly Rendered Church Property Trusts Ineffectual," 6 Ave Maria L. Rev. 235 (Fall 2007).

Gillet, Mark R., Guzman, Katheleen R., "Managing Assets: The Oklahoma Uniform Principle and Income Act" Ok. L. Review Vol. 56 (Spring 2003) 1.

Gisler, Erin B. "Land Trusts in the Twenty-First Century: How Tax Abuse and Corporate Governance Threaten the Integrity of Charitable Land Preservation," 49 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1123 (2009).

Katz, Robert, A. "A Pig in a Python: How the Charitable Response to September 11 Overwhelmed the Law of Disaster Relief." Ind. L. Rev. Vol 36 (2003) 251.

Kelly, James J., Jr. "Land Trusts that Conserve Communities," 59 DePaul L. Rev. 69 (Fall 2009).

Laurence, Robert. "Attacking the Acquisition and Forcing the Sale of an Indivisible Arkansas Homestead." Ark. L. Rev. 55 (2002) 473.

Linday, William J., Jr. "The Nebraska Uniform Trust Code from the Trenches: A Practitioner's Guide to Understanding Nebraska's New Uniform Trust Code." Creighton L. Rev. Vol. 37 (Dec. 2003) 93.

Milne, Julia Bartolf. "Will Alternative Forms of Common-Interest Communities Succeed with Municipal Involvement?: A Study of Community Land Trusts and Limited Equity Cooperatives," 38 Rel Est. L.J. 273 (Winter, 2009).

Morrow, Chad P., "Trusts, Estate, Probate and Immovable Property Law," 52 La. B.J. 478 (April/May, 2005).

Radford, Mary F. "Advantages and Disadvantages of Mediation in Probate, Trust, and Guardianship Matters," 1 Pepp. Disp. Resol. L.J. 241 (2001).

Sherman, Jeffrey G. "I Say It's Spinach: Charitable Trusts to Remedy Market Failures in the Performing Arts." UMKC L.Rev. Vol. 71 (Summer 2003) 809.

Siegel, Mark R. "Unduly Influenced Trust Revocations." 7 Duq. L. Rev. Vol. 40 (Winter 2002) 241.

Towey, Matthew. "The Land Trust Without Land: The Unusual Structure of the Chicago Community Land Trust," 18 J. Affordable Housing & Community Dev. L. 335 (Spring, 2009).

Williams, Serena M. "Sustaining Urban Green Spaces: Can Public Parks be Protected under the Public Trust Doctrine?" S.C. Envtl. LJ. Vol. 10 (Summer 2002) 23.

Zschau, Julius J. et al. "Using Land Trusts to Prevent Small Farmer Land Loss," 44 Real Prop. Tr. & Est. L.J. 521 (Fall, 2009) .

Add to Annotations:

Annotation, Award of Attorney's Fees Out of Trust Estate in Action by Trustee Against Co-trustee, 24 A.L.R.4th 624.

Annotation, Bankruptcy: priority as between vendor's lien on real estate and rights of trustee in bankruptcy of purchaser, 22 A.L.R. 1338 .

Annotation, Felonious Killing of one Cotenant or Tenant by the Entireties by the Other as Affecting the Latter's Right in the Property, 42 A.L.R.3d 1116.

Annotation, Homicide as Precluding Taking Under Will or by Intestacy, 25 A.L.R.4th 787.

Annotation, Implied power of executor or testamentary trustee to sell real property, 134 A.L.R. 378 .

Annotation, Imposition or Declaration of Constructive or Resulting Trust in Unites States Savings Bonds, 51 A.L.R.2d 163 .

Annotation, Liability for Personal Injury or Death Allegedly caused by Defect in Church Premises, 8 A.L.R.5th 1 .

Annotation, Lien on, or trust in respect of, land, as security for repayment of without express agreement for security thereon money loaned to the purchaser and used in paying for the property, 60 A.L.R. 1240 .

Annotation, Modern Status and Application of Rule that Only Voluntary Transfer or Assignment of Claim Against United States is Within Assignment of Claims Act. 44 A.L.R. Fed. 775 .

Annotation, Power of Court to Extend Term of Trust, 46 A.L.R.2d 907 .

Annotation, Resignation or Removal of Executor, Administrator, Guardian, or Trustee, before Final Administration or Before Termination of Trust, as Affecting his Compensation 96 A.L.R. 3d 1102 .

Annotation, Right to Intrench Upon Corpus, when Income is Insufficient, to Pay Stated Sum which Trust Instrument Directs to be Paid Periodically to Beneficiary Out of Income, 67 A.L.R. 2d 1393 .

Annotation, Tort Immunity of Nongovernmental Charities-Modern Status, 25 A.L.R.4th 517 .

Annotation, Trust Income or Assets as Subject to Claim Against Beneficiary for Alimony, Maintenance, or Child Support, 91 A.L.R. 2d 262 .

Annotation, Trusts: Merger of Legal and Equitable Estates Where Sole Trustees are Sole Beneficiaries, 7 A.L.R. 621 .

Annotation, Trust Provisions for Payment, in the Trustee's Discretion or for a Designated Purpose, of Part or All of the Principal to a Beneficiary, 2 A.L.R.2d 1383 .

Annotation, Validity and Construction of Trust Instrument which Fails to Designate Respective Interests of Benefiiciaries, 87 A.L.R. 3d 925 .

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Provision or Condition Against Alienation in Gift for Charitable Trust or to Charitable Corporation, 100 A.L.R.2d 1208 .

Annotation, Validity, as for a Charitable Purpose of Trust for Publication or Distribution of Particular Books or Writings, 34 A.L.R. 4th 419 .

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Application of Statutes or Ordinances Regulating Perpetual-Care Trust Funds of Cemeteries and Mausoleums, 54 A.L.R.5th 681 .

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Provisions of Charitable Trust Providing for Accumulation of Income, 6 A.L.R.4th 903 .

Annotation, Implied power of executor or testamentary trustee to sell real property, 134 A.L.R. 378 .

Annotation, When Statute of Limitations Starts to Run Against Enforcement of Constructive Trust, 55 A.L.R.2d 220 .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 28.syn

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.syn Synopsis to Chapter 28: RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

§ 28.01 Introduction to the Chapter

§ 28.02 Definition and History of the Rule Against Perpetuities

§ 28.02(a) Rules Against Perpetuities Generally

§ 28.02(b) Relation of Rules Against Remoteness of Vesting to the Common Law

§ 28.02(c) Mortmain

§ 28.03 Interests That Are Subject to the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting

§ 28.03(a) Contingent Interests

§ 28.03(b) Powers of Appointment

§ 28.03(c) Class Gifts

§ 28.03(d) Miscellaneous Interests

§ 28.04 The Operation of the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting

§ 28.05 The Rule Against Remoteness as Applied to Gifts in Charity

§ 28.06 The Rule Against Overlong Duration of Trusts

§ 28.07 Statutory Modification of the Rule Against Remoteness

§ 28.08 A Short Course in the Modern Rule Against Perpetuities

§ 28.08(a) History of the Rule

§ 28.08(b) The Separate Path of Chattels Personal

§ 28.08(c) The Concept of Vesting

§ 28.08(d) Four Aspects of the Rule

§ 28.08(e) Difficulty of the Rule

§ 28.08(f) A Quick Method for Determining Validity

§ 28.08(g) Effect of Invalidity of an Interest

§ 28.08(h) Class Gifts

§ 28.08(i) Powers of Appointment

§ 28.08(j) Exceptions to the Rule

§ 28.08(k) Wait-and-See Doctrine

§ 28.08(l) Discretionary Trusts

§ 28.08(m) Cy Pres Doctrine or Equitable Approximation

§ 28.09 Bibliography

Professor David A. Thomas n*
J. Reuben Clark Law School
Brigham Young University

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *.
This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.01

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.01 Introduction to the Chapter

No rule in Anglo-American property law has generated as much lawyerly debate and consternation as the rule against remoteness in vesting, commonly called the rule against perpetuities. Developed to improve transmissibility and therefore marketability of property interests, it has unfortunately assumed complexity and confusion all out of proportion to its significance in modern property rights and transactions. This chapter recounts the history and development of rules against remoteness in vesting, and reviews their most significant applications. The concluding section of the chapter is entitled "A Short Course in the Modern Rule Against Perpetuities" and is intended to provide an efficient, straightforward primer in the most important modern aspects of the rule. The widespread adoption of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities has unfortunately not eliminated the necessity for lawyers to be familiar with the traditional rule, because the uniform statutory rule provides for application of the traditional rule as an option.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.02

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.02 Definition and History of the Rule Against Perpetuities

[Go To Supp]

The rule against perpetuities received its classic formulation in John Chipman Gray's treatise on the rule: "No interest is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than twenty-one years after some life in being at the creation of the interest." n1 The rule is designed to prevent remoteness of vesting and thereby leave control of the wealth of the world more in the hands of the living than in the hands of the dead. n2 The rule limits "dead hand" control over property and keeps property available for productive development. n3

§ 28.02(a) Rules Against Perpetuities Generally

"Perpetuities" law has gone through three stages of development. The first involved the twin efforts of the nobility to avoid the impact of attainder for treason and of the church to avoid mortmain. The second concerned the attempts of the landed gentry to escape the impact of the industrial revolution and the growth of the commercial class. The third now relates to the desire of those holding accumulated wealth to escape the burden of taxation.

Evolving out of the first stage are the fee simple determinable, the fee tail, Shelley's case, destructibility of contingent remainders, Wild's case, worthier title, mortmain and similar future interest rules. The second stage saw restraints on alienation, remoteness of vesting, and the Thellusson statutes. The third stage is just in the process of development. It features spendthrift trusts, illusory trusts, too long duration of trusts and the "wait and see" doctrine, impossibility of birth of issue, definite versus indefinite "failure of issue" and similar modern attacks on the "rule against remoteness" brought about by the growth of the trust instrument as a mode of family settlement. The extent of its growth will depend upon the balancing by the courts and the legislatures of the public policy against tying up land as evidenced by Lord Norfolk's settlement with the use of the trust instrument to avoid the stress of administration of decedent's estates.

A key to the non-violent evolution of English law had been the "abhorrence of a perpetuity." n4 Its operation has been earlier seen in the birth of the "conditional fee" and, after "De Donis" n5 restored the fee tail, Taltarum's Case n6 which broke the grip of the fee tail as well as the judicial scheme of the warranty which cut off the family chains on the fee simple. Sometimes, but not too often, it was assisted by parliamentary acts but principally the principle against perpetuities was the word of the courts and the lawyers. Parliamentary assistance came only at such times as the interests of the crown in controlling the power of the church, and of the barons, coincided with the interests of the commercial classes, and the crown was sufficiently strong to enforce its will. The basic principle behind the "perpetuities" struggle is the need for a strong central government to control society. If the legal system permits the locking up of property perpetually in religious and private lands, then powerful disruptive forces are created which will negate any hopes of the stable government necessary for the flowering of civilization. n7

In England "De Donis" and the consequent fee tail in part negated the efforts of the judges against perpetuities, and necessitated the succession or death taxes of Lloyd George in 1912 to break up the great landed estates. But the efforts of the judges to prevent perpetuities were sufficiently successful to permit the commercial interests to develop a great middle class that made its mark in the landed gentry and provided a sufficient cushion between the aristocracy and the proletariat to prevent social revolution.

In the English colonies the abundance of free land made for a shortage of farm labor, making large estates unprofitable except where slavery flourished, and the lack of an established church prevented the problem of perpetuities from ever becoming as acute as it was in England. The courts in the new world have, however, recognized the dangers that lurk in the new perpetuity. The "abhorrence" of perpetuity and the common law designs to avoid perpetuity have been respected in the United States almost as highly as they were in England. n8 Recently, the mighty weapons of taxation have proven even more efficacious in preventing the piling up of wealth. A limitation over after a fee, if the terre tenant died without issue living at death was early held void, and attempts to create unbarrable entails were repeatedly beaten down. n9

In this country the powerful opposing force of the landed barons with their pride of family has had but an infinitesimal influence. Two other new factors have, however, appeared to challenge the "perpetuities abhorrence." The first, arising out of the "laissez faire" doctrine of the 19th century of individual enterprise, finds expression in honoring "the intent of the testator." The second most recent movement comes from the natural desire to avoid taxation through the scheme of the trust. In both instances those promoting their own personal interests have made repeated and sometimes successful attacks upon the common-law safeguards as medieval anachronisms. n10 The extent to which the courts and the legislatures will continue to evade the common law dikes remains for the future. The entire perpetuities structure is thus under attack. The extent to which it will survive depends upon how far the courts will agree that modern taxation has supplanted the need for its existence. A number of states have constitutional prohibitions against "perpetuities." n11 A preemptive right without limit as a property right was held an unreasonable restraint on alienation and violated the rule against perpetuities. n12.

California has three rules: the rule against restraints on alienation, the rule against suspension of the absolute power of alienation (limiting duration of trusts) and the rule against remoteness of vesting. n13 The problem of perpetuities consists of two units. First, a group of property rules that bring about absolute vesting and, hence, free alienation of property: Shelley's case, Wild's case, n14 the doctrine of worthier title, the concept of words of limitation as against words of purchase, the rule of "death in the lifetime of the testator," or the "survivorship" rule, n15 and the "repugnancy" rule. Second, the "perpetuities rules," consisting of Mortmain, n16 the rule against restraints on alienation, n17 the rule against double possibilities, the rule against remoteness of vesting, n18 the rule against accumulations, n19 and the rule against too long duration of trusts.

Statutes prohibiting limitations for "accumulation only" have been held to be subject to strict construction. n20 So if the accumulation is only incidental and if the limitation vests within the period allowed by the rule against restraints on alienation, the trust is good and the provision for accumulation is also valid. n21 If the accumulation exists by reason of the action of the trustees and not by the mandate of the will, the statute does not apply. n22

The courts generally have followed the Thellusson case n23 in refusing to find a common law rule against accumulations separate from the rule against remoteness. n24

The effect of the Thellusson statutes is merely to prevent the income from being accumulated for too long a period unless the method of creating the accumulation makes the gift of the principal too remote. n25

While the political pressure stemming from proponents of trust has led to statutory modification in some areas of the rule against remoteness, a counter stream of influence stemming from those who desire free alienation of land has led to statutory attacks on future interests which because they are vested are not subject to the rule against remoteness. The statutes of some states purport to destroy reversions, remainders and other limitations which do not appear in the record chain of title within fifty years, unless they are rerecorded within a specified time after the passage of the statute. n26 A Pennsylvania statute to this effect was held unconstitutional as conflicting and inconsistent, as attempting deprivation of property without due process of law and by impairing the obligation of contracts. n27 Florida, n28 Rhode Island n29 and Massachusetts n30 have also enacted legislation limiting the duration of possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry.

Kentucky has also enacted legislation dealing with possibilities of reverter and rights of entry. n31

Where a gift contains provisions that violate public policy as limiting the beneficiaries on the ground of race or religion, the courts divide as to whether the deed is good and the provision is void or whether the whole gift is bad. n32

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: rule! against accumulation!

§ 28.02(b) Relation of Rules Against Remoteness of Vesting to the Common Law

Although the rule against remoteness of vesting is oft spoken of as being common law n33 and is sometimes treated as such by the courts, n34 it is of too recent origin to be properly classed as common law. Instead it is actually a judge made doctrine. But as such it has received almost universal acceptance in America as well as in Great Britain and the British colonies. It prevails in all the states excepting as it may have been modified by statute. n35 This rule against perpetuities is a rule of law and not a rule of construction and, if it is violated, the devise or gift must fail. n36 The rule is a mode adopted by the common law for forwarding the circulation of property which it is its policy to promote. n37 The rule is one of high public policy. n38

In determining whether a devise offends the rule against perpetuities, the testator's intention must be first ascertained and then the rule applies, as it is a rule of law and not one of construction. n39 The rule being one of law not of construction or intent of the maker of the instrument, n40 a limitation which will not vest within the prescribed period is illegal and void and the maker may not preserve it. n41 Under the harsh concept of the rule as applied by many courts the existence of the rule cannot be even taken into consideration in construing the instrument. Thus the court in construing an instrument is limited to determining what interests the maker intended to create. Having made such determination, the court must then and only then ascertain if any of the limitations so recognized will violate the rule. If so the interest must fail. If the limitation over is vested it is valid though it will not vest in possession until after the running of the period. n42 In order not to violate the statute against perpetuities,the estate created must be such as that it can be determined at the time of its creation and that under no contingency will the time of its vesting be postponed beyond the limit fixed by the statute. n43 The rule against perpetuities does not depend upon what actually happens, but what may possibly happen, estimated from the time of the taking of effect of the instrument. n44 The application of the rule is determined by the possibilities of the case, not by its probabilities, nor by the actual event. No interest is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than twenty-one years after some life in being at the creation of the interest. n45

The mere fact that the invalid executory limitation may be released by its holder does not validate it. n46 The rule was devised to prevent the perpetual entailment of estates and to give them over to free conveyance. n47 The policy of the rule is to prevent property from being so tied up as to render it incapable of answering the ends of commerce. n48 The rule concerns itself only with the vesting, the commencing, of estates, and not at all with their termination. It makes no difference when such a vested estate or interest limited terminates. n49 It prohibits the creation of future interests or estates which by possibility may not become vested during the permitted period. n50

The rule is concerned only with the time of the commencement, the vesting of an estate, and not with the duration thereof. n51 The rule is concerned with the vesting, not the duration, of interests. n52 The rule is directed against the vesting of interests at a future date and is not applicable to interests which are already vested. n53 "That rule is that an estate which is granted must necessarily vest within a time limited by the lives of persons then in being, and twenty-one years and ten months thereafter, and if it does not necessarily vest within that time it is void for remoteness." n54 The common-law rule permits the tying up of property for lives in being at the death of the testator, and twenty-one years in addition.

The rule against perpetuities applies only to the vesting of future estates, not to vested estates, n55 and every future limitation of an estate is void as too remote unless it is apparent that it must take effect and vest or definitely not vest within the period allowed by the rule. n56 If the rule against perpetuities is not violated at the death of the testator, subsequent events cannot cause it to be. n57 The rule against perpetuities is satisfied by the vesting of the right to the estate within the limitations of the rule, though the beneficiaries may not then be known. n58

Perpetuities are not favored in the law, and a will will not be construed as creating a perpetuity unless the intention to do so is clear and plainly manifest. n59 So, if there are two possible constructions of a will, one of which would permit effect to be given to the whole will and the other would result in defeating the will, preference will be accorded to the construction which will uphold the will, even though the rule against perpetuities is not a rule of construction but a rule of property. n60 "On the one hand, it is clearly settled, that if there be two alternative limitations, one branch of which is too remote, and the other of which is capable of taking effect, the court will disregard the invalid limitation and give effect to that which is legal. Longhead v. Phelps, (1770) 2 W. Bl. 704, is an instance of this distinction, which rests on sound and settled rules of construction. On the other hand, if the limitations are ulterior to or expectant upon limitations which are too remote, they are void also, although made to a person in existence at the date of the will." n61

The courts are, however, showing an increasing tendency to use the rule as a guide to construction. n62 This does not mean that the rule itself is a rule of construction. It merely implies that if the instrument contains ambiguous language so that alternate implications would arise one of which would keep a limitation contingent beyond the allotted time, while the other will vest the limitations within the time permitted, the courts will presume that the maker was aware of the existence of the rule and intended to create a limitation that was valid. n63

There is a modern tendency for the courts to avoid the former doctrine and to consider the rule against remoteness in so construing instruments as to avoid a too remote vesting. n64

The law will not construe a limitation in a will into an executory devise when the limitation can, without doing violence to the intention of the testator, be given effect as a remainder, nor a remainder to be contingent when it can be taken to be vested. n65 Care should be exercised that the testator has not, in creating an executory devise, postponed the vesting beyond the period fixed by the rule against perpetuities. n66 An executory interest, in order to be valid, must take effect within the life or lives of those in being, and within twenty-one years thereafter, with the usual period of gestation added. n67

To be valid it is not necessary that the interest vest within the time, but merely that it vest if at all within the time. n68 The limitation must be based on human lives and on a period of years. n69 When parties to an agreement to convey land are corporations, and no measuring life or lives are stated in agreement, the permissible period of the rule against perpetuities is simply 21 years. n70 Where there are alternative gifts, the second alternative is valid even if the first is too remote if the second must vest, if at all, within the allotted period. n71 For the purpose of determining the period of vesting, the common law always presumed the possibility of birth of children. n72

The common law rule is clear that if there is any possibility viewed from the effective date of the instrument that the limitation might not vest within the period it is void. n73 So the classic case of Jee v. Audley, n74 holding that if the vesting depends upon a question of birth of issue which might cause the vesting to be too remote, the impossibility of issue by virtue of age will never be admitted. n75 So it has been held that where vesting depended upon working out of gravel pits, n76 or upon the closing of administration of an estate, n77 the limitation was void. And so it was held that for the purpose of applying the rule against perpetuities both men and women are considered capable of having issue as long as they live. n78

It has been said, however, that medical evidence may sometimes be used to show impossibility of issue. n79 Even where further issue may be legally possible the court may find that the testator considered it impossible. n80 The doctrine that there is a conclusive presumption that living persons may have children is based on dangers of fraud and of illegal operations. n81

The law writers have recently fulminated against the absolute certainty of vesting within the time required by the common-law rule. n82 Some support to this theory is found in recent cases n83 and in legislation. n84 Under this "wait and see" doctrine the doubtful limitation will not fail as of the effective date of the instrument but will be kept alive for the allotted period of the rule in the hopes that it will vest within the permitted time. If it does so it is valid. But if it does not vest by the end of the period it then becomes void. n85 But the courts may not write a new will for the testator in order to circumvent the constitutional provision prohibiting perpetuities. n86 The rule deals with the vesting of estates and not with the enjoyment thereof. n87 The rule is satisfied if the power of alienation vests within the prescribed period of time, even though the possession and enjoyment of the property might be postponed beyond such period. n88

The common law rule against remoteness exists in California. n89 A will in trust for A for life, then to A's children for life, then their share to heirs of A's children violated the rule against perpetuities, not vesting as to the heirs of the children of A living at the life tenant's death. n90 A deed to A and A's children and their children gave to A and children alive at the time of the execution of the deed. A limitation to unborn grandchildren was void under the rule against perpetuities. The court did not construe this (as Kentucky and Tennessee would) as creating a life tenancy in the life tenant, nor did it give a reversion as to the void part. n91

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: rule w/5 remoteness w/2 vesting

Once the rule against remoteness was discovered, the acceptance of its principle was almost universal. The only legal problem presented to the courts was the duration of the allowable period and the extent of its coverage.

In point of time of development, the third rule of the perpetuities is the rule against remoteness of vesting which Gray dubbed "the rule against perpetuities." n92 The common law "rules against remoteness" may be stated thus: "viewed as of the effective date of the instrument if there is any possibility that the interest will not vest within any ascertainable lives in being n93 plus twenty-one years in gross, n94 plus two or possibly three periods of gestation n95 then such interest is void ab initio." n96 The rule is one of law. n97 It is an expression of public policy to prevent property being so tied up by title restrictions as to take it out of the stream of commerce. It operates expressly to defeat the intention of the maker of the instrument.

The classic reason given for the development of the rule is that as long as there was no limitation over to a third party possible, except a contingent remainder, there was no threat to traffic in land. Although a contingent remainder could be long delayed in vesting by being limited after a fee tail still it could be destroyed either by merger or by termination of the estate in freehold before the remainder had vested.

The Statute of Uses n98 gave rise to springing and shifting uses as legal interests and the Statute of Wills n99 bore the executory devise, both of which could be limited after an immediate interest in fee or need not be limited upon a prior estate of freehold. Then in the landmark case of Pells v. Brown n100 the principle was established that these newly found interests were not destructible as was a contingent remainder. Though this was somewhat restricted by the later case of Purefoy v. Rogers, n101 holding that if an interest was both a contingent remainder and a use or executory devise, it must be destructible as a contingent remainder. The decision of Pells v. Brown made it legally possible to tie up land for untold generations in the future so as to make it impossible to be sold or conveyed by limiting conditional future interests by way of use or devise after present estates of freehold or leasehold. The legal draftsmen were somewhat slow in realizing the possibilities and the courts the dangers in Pells v. Brown. In the case of Child v. Baylie, n102 eleven years before Pells v. Brown it had been held that a devise over after a devise of a term of years contingent upon the first devisee dying without issue living at his death was void for fear of a perpetuity of a term.

Then in the landmark decision of the Duke of Norfolk's Case n103 the court had to consider the draftsmen of Lord Norfolk's family settlement. The Duke had three sons, the eldest of whom was an idiot. Much of his land was entailed and would therefore go to the eldest son, the incompetent. To make provision for the second son and at the same time protect the third son in case as was expected, the eldest would soon die without issue, the Duke created a term of 200 years in trust for the second son in tail and if the eldest dies without issue in the lifetime of the second son then to the third son in tail. When the eldest son did so die, the second son with true fraternal spirit claimed that the limitation over to the third son was a perpetuity and therefore void so that the second son could take both the entailed land and the settlement lands. The court, however, held the limitation over good but declined to say what would be a bad limitation. Through a series of cases over the next 140 years n104 culminating in Cadell v. Palmer n105 the English courts lengthened the allowable period of time to any number of lives in being plus twenty-one years in gross (not limited to any minority) and to two, probably three periods of gestation.

The rule grew inexorably. Although its growth has been criticized n106 and its development deplored n107 its majesty has never been questioned by any court. The rule against remoteness of vesting is therefore the most amazing legal phenomenon of modern law. Despite the fact that it was not recognized in its infancy until the latter part of the 17th century, and not fully developed until well into the 19th century, it has been accepted as common law n108 even in those states which were carved out of the Northwest Territory where the Act of 1795 made the English common law as of 4 James I (1607) the common law of the territory.

The number of lives is not limited except that it has been held that they must be capable of ascertainment. n109 They must be human lives, not animals or insects. n110 The period of time is in gross, that is, it may run for twenty-one years not measured on lives or minorities but must not possibly exceed that time. The courts have had trouble with the extent to which this requirement must be strictly applied. n111

§ 28.02(c) Mortmain

The earliest of the perpetuities rules, "mortmain" was born out of statute, not judicial decisions. This fact and the cessation of the principal cause for the rule -- the established church -- have prevented this rule from being clearly recognized in American common law. The story of the struggle of the crown and the church for political supremacy in England begins with the reign of William I when the ecclesiastical courts were driven out of the common law. n112 The importance of masses, and later of indulgences, in the life of the period led to the transfer of substantial amounts of land to the church at a time when the structure of the hierarchy had not been sufficiently clearly established to enable church dignitaries to properly enfeoff one another. So the property once passing into religious hands was forever locked therein.

It has been suggested that the situation was aggravated by the coming into England in 1203 of the Franciscans with their vows of poverty. The consequent flow of wealth into Franciscan hands, perhaps reflected in Dominican jealousy in Magna Charta, were enforced by the Provisions of Westminster. n113 Then in 1279 the statute De Viris Religosis n114 prevented gifts to religious houses without special royal license (a secret clause). In the time of Richard II n115 "the prohibition was extended to all corporate bodies." n116 Numerous other statutes struck at attempted evasions. n117 The rule did not apply to municipal corporations, which fact has led some writers to erroneously conclude that it did not apply to private corporations. But as late as the time of Holdsworth n118 conveyances to corporations generally were prohibited since the land thus became virtually unalienable.

Since the post obit gift had died with the coming of feudalism, n119 De Viris Religosis virtually terminated income to the church in England; it cut off gifts of land, the principal source of wealth. It is not altogether surprising to find that the birth of the "use" has been ascribed to the ingenuity of the ecclesiastical lawyers in order to avoid De Viris Religosis. In later times the use with post mortem power of disposition, or the equitable will, was developed to have the same result.

In the United States there was no pressing need for mortmain because of the lack of an established church. The absence of a similar doctrine in Spanish law, however, led in Mexico to the coming of Juarez and the incorporation of a similar doctrine into the constitution of 1852. This in turn led to ecclesiastically inspired revolt against Juarez and the coming of Maximilian. Mortmain therefore in the United States exists principally as a survival of the English doctrine rather than through its own vigor. The mortmain statutes have never become an integral part of our common law. The ghost of mortmain, however, survives in three fields: (a) limitation upon the power of corporations to hold land, n120 (b) statutory limitations upon gifts to charities, n121 (c) outright prohibitions of or restraints upon gifts to religious institutions. n122

There is some question as to whether mortmain was absorbed into the common law to the extent that a private corporation could not in the absence of statute hold title to realty. n123 Today all corporate statutes find it necessary to specifically confer such authority on corporations. In many of the states, however, the power to acquire and hold land is denied or limited in the case of certain types of corporations such as farming corporations, banking institutions and insurance companies. n124

The statutes controlling gifts by will to charities take three forms: (a) making voidable bequests to charities if the testator dies within a stated time after the execution of the will, n125 (b) limiting the amount of the testator's estate which can be left to charity, n126 and (c) limiting the extent to which the testator may disinherit his issue by charitable gifts. n127 There are no general mortmain statutes in the United States today, n128 and the existing statutes appear to be based upon the realistic approach that a testator in fear of the hereafter may be unduly influenced by representatives of charities to the prejudice of the natural objects of the testator's bounty, which was just as realistic in the days of De Viris Religosis, rather than the policy disfavoring entailing land. But the results lie in the same field as perpetuities. n129 California, Georgia, Idaho, Mississippi, and Ohio make voidable testamentary gifts to charity made within stated periods of time (varying from thirty days to one year).

It has been held, however, that these are not true mortmain statutes because they do not delimit the amount of property the charitable institution may hold but merely the testator's power of disposition. n130 Such decisions overlook De Viris Religosis, n131 the first mortmain statute, which was a limitation upon feoffments to religious institutions, not the amount of land such institutions could hold. But such statutes today are not intended to protect the public against accumulations of wealth by charitable institutions. n132 These decisions again overlook the fact that mortmain statutes were in part intended to protect the heir against the rapacity of religious orders.

The New York Mortmain Statute is designed to protect certain relatives nearest to the decedent. Their place of residence is irrelevant. n133

Statutes limiting amounts of charitable donations by will are not mortmain or declaratory of public policy in opposition to charitable disposition by will. For example, the California legislature's intent was to protect the heirs at law against a hasty and improvident gift of the entire estate to charity. n134

So mortmain where it exists today is treated more as a restraint upon the improper exercise of the testamentary power by disinheriting the testator's issue rather than as an exercise of public policy. n135

The states which have statutes limiting charitable gifts have three theories: n136 (a) mortmain; n137 (b) lapse; n138 and (c) protection of natural beneficiaries. n139

The District of Columbia Mortmain Statute invalidating gifts to charities made under thirty days is itself invalid. n140

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: mortmain w/30 rule against perpetuities

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 201, at 191 (4th ed. 1942). See also W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in a Nutshell, 51 Harv. L. Rev. 638, 639 (1938); W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: The Nutshell Revisited, 78 Harv. L. Rev. 973 (1965). Murphy Exploration & Prod. Co. v. Sun Operating L.P. 747, So. 2d 260 (Miss. 1999).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lewis M. Simes, Public Policy and the Dead Hand 59-60 (1955).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts, and Estates 761 (4th ed. 1990).

(n4)Footnote 4. A perpetuity "fights against God." Lord Egerton in Trinity Term, 41 Eliz. (1599), quoted in Carey, Cases in Chancery (1616) (1820 ed.).

(n5)Footnote 5. 13 Edw. I, Ch. 1 (1285).

(n6)Footnote 6. Y.B. 12 Edw. IV, 19.

(n7)Footnote 7. Theodore Mommen, History of Rome, has shown how "Latafundia" led to the barbarization of the Roman legions through the interruption of the life of the small Latin farmer, the corruption of mensa and circenses and the pollution of malaria. Edward Gibbon, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, and Charles Diehl, Byzantium (1957), have pictured the effect of feudalism on the Byzantine Empire.

See Michael Reidy, Perpetuities and Mineral Development, 22 Rocky Mt. Min. L. Inst. 15. Jeffrey Lake Dev. v. Central Neb. Pub. Power & Irrigation Dist., 568 N.W.2d 585 (Neb. Ct. App. 1997) ("a perpetual lease does not violate the rule against perpetuities...").

(n8)Footnote 8. Homeowners association regulation to continue for 26 years and then for 10-year renewals unless two-thirds of the members voted to terminate, was not a perpetuity since it could be terminated. Kell v. Bella Vista Prop. Owners Ass'n, 528 S.W.2d 651 (Ark. 1975). Long Signature Homes, Inc. v. Fairfield Woods, Inc., 445 S.E.2d 489 (Va. 1994) (real estate development contract was governed by the rule against perpetuities, and contract contingencies to convey land could not extend beyond 21 years from date of contract); Shaver v. Clanton, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 595 (Cal. App. 1994) (under uniform statutory rule against perpetuities, amendments to commercial lease that provided for perpetual options to renew were not void).

Because it was a perpetuity, the court refused to enforce a covenant requiring the owner to receive and pay for a seasonal water supply. Affirmative covenants are disfavored. Eagle Enters. v. Gross, 349 N.E.2d 816 (N.Y. 1976).

(n9)Footnote 9. Child v. Baylie, Cro. Jac. 459; Germin v. Ascot, Moore 364, 72 Eng. Rep. 631; Cholmeley v. Humble, Moore 592, 72 Eng. Rep. 778; Corbet's Case, 1 Coke 83b, 76 Eng. Rep. 1599; Mildmay's Case, 6 Coke 40, 77 Eng. Rep. n.311.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lewis M. Simes, "Is the Rule Against Perpetuities Doomed" The Wait and See Doctrine, 52 Mich. L. Rev. 179 (1953); Thomas L. Waterbury, Some Further Thoughts on Perpetuities Reform, 42 Minn. L. Rev. 41 (1952); W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: Staying the Slaughter of the Innocents, 68 L.Q. Rev. 35 (1952); Guy Newhall, Doctrine of the "Second Look," 92 Trusts & Est. 13 (1953); Charles Looker, Leach, Simes et al., Reform of the Rule Against Perpetuities, 92 Trusts & Est. 768 (1953).

See Leach, Perpetuities: The Nutshell Revisited, 78 Harv. L. Rev. 973 (1965); Ralph E. Boyer & Robert A. Spiegel, Land Use Control: Pre-Emptions, Perpetuities and Similar Restraints, 20 U. Miami L. Rev. 148 (1965); Thompson G. Marsh, Model Rule Against Perpetuities Act -- "if at all," 11 Prac. Law 73.

See also Leo Glasser, Trusts, Perpetuities, Accumulations and Powers Under the Estates, Powers and Trusts Law, 33 Brooklyn L. Rev. 551 (1967); Lenoir, A Reexamination of Perpetuities in Arizona, 10 Ariz. L. Rev. 347.

Texas Constitution art. 1, § 26. Act 184, Session Law of Hawaii 1975, points up continued ownership of Hawaii in a few families and expresses the fact that this is against public policy.

This Act permits the housing authority to condemn, take over, subdivide, and sell properties held by individual owners so designed to break up the large held estates.

(n11)Footnote 11. Constitutional prohibition against perpetuities: Ark. Const. art. 2, Declaration of Rights 19; Nev. Const. art. 15, § 4; N.C. Const. art. 1, § 31; Okla. Const. art. 2, § 32. Tenn. Const. art. 1, § 22. Tex. Const. art. 1, § 26; Wyo. Const. art. 1, § 30.

Similar statute, N.M. Const. 1929, § 47-1-2.

All other states have statutes governing the period except Louisiana.

See Olin L. Browder Jr., Future Interest Reform, 35 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 1255 (1960); Ralph A. Phipps, Perpetuities in South Dakota, 1 S.D.L. Rev. 1 (1956); Oval A. Newman, Perpetuities, Restraints on Alienability and Duration of Trusts, 16 Vand. L. Rev. 57 (1962).

Constitutions prohibiting "perpetuities": Ariz. Const. art. 2, § 29; Mont. Const. art. 13, § 6; Okla. Const. art. 2, § 32.

Perpetuities prohibited. Tex. Const. art. 1, Sec. 26.

Similar statutes prohibit "perpetuities": Conn. Gen. Stat. § 45-95; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 33-103; Md. Code Ann., Est. & Trusts § 11-103; Mass. Ann. Laws ch. 184A, § 1.

Whole gift void where bequest is of a residuary estate to a city for a play field. La Fond v. City of Detroit, 98 N.W.2d 530 (Mich. 1959).

Provisions in wills restraining alienation by partition are void as against public policy. Neidler v. Donaldson, 224 N.E.2d 404 (Ohio 1967).

See Robert S. Pasley, The 1960 Amendments to the New York Statutes on Perpetuities and Powers of Appointment, 45 Cornell L.Q. 679 (1960).

See also Garrett Logan, Oklahoma Perpetuities and Such, 7 Tulsa L.J. 5 (1971).

(n12)Footnote 12. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1969). Fallschase Dev. Corp. v. Blakey, 696 So. 2d 833 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997) (a right of first refusal, or a preemptive right, is a property interest and not just a contractual right toward which the rule against perpetuities may apply); Carroll v. Eno, 654 N.Y.S.2d 368 (N.Y. App. Div. 1997) (agreement that allows defendant a pre-emptive right to purchase an apartment does not violate the rule against perpetuities because the parties themselves are the measuring lives); Webb v. Reames, 485 S.E.2d 384 (S.C. Ct. App. 1997) (where the right of first refusal is a contingent non-vested interest, it is void if it is not certain to vest or fail within the time allotted by the rules against perpetuities).

(n13)Footnote 13. A restraint on alienation valid under the civil law is void under the common law if absolute. Hart v. Gould, 259 P.2d 49 (Cal. App. 1953) (restraint dated to days of Mexican occupation).

See Fraser & Sammis, The California Rules Against Restraints on Alienation, etc., 4 Hastings L.J. 101, reviewing the changes made by Cal. Stat. ch. 1463.

Attorney drafting a will violating perpetuities was held not liable for negligence, but it was held that a beneficiary might recover in contract as a third party beneficiary. Lucas v. Hamm, 364 P.2d 685 (Cal. 1961).

"Failure of issue" means definite failure. S.C. Code § 27-5-30.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Real Property -- Wills -- Judicial Construction of "to A and His Children," 75 W. Va. L. Rev. 296.

(n15)Footnote 15. Limitation over on death of beneficiary without issue refers to death in testator's lifetime. Martin v. Taylor, 521 S.W.2d 581 (Tenn. 1975).

Limitation over on death of first taker before testator took effect when first taker divorced testator. In re Frederick's Estate, 311 So. 2d 376 (Fla. 1975); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 731.101.

In a gift in remainder a limitation over on death without issue refers to death during the life of the life tenant. Martin v. Taylor, 521 S.W.2d 581 (Tenn. 1975).

Miss. Code, limitations on failure of issue mean death without children, § 89-1-13.

(n16)Footnote 16. Permitting an equity event to invade an accumulation provision in a charitable trust even though not violative of the statute. In re James' Estate, 199 A.2d 275 (Pa. 1964).

(n17)Footnote 17. In Weber v. Texas Co., 83 F.2d 807 (5th Cir. 1936) the rule against perpetuities was equated to restraints on alienation so that an unlimited time option was held not to violate the rule.

Rule restraints on alienation and against remoteness are of similar nature but do not rest on identical principles. Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1962). Peterson v. Tremain, 621 N.E.2d 385 (Mass. App. 1993) (option to purchase land creates equitable interest subject to rule against perpetuities).

(n18)Footnote 18. Easement for pipelines giving grantee the option to lay additional lines when additional money was paid did not create an interest too remote but merely a postponement of the payment. Traywick v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 170 So. 2d 802 (Ala. 1965).

(n19)Footnote 19. Accumulations are permitted in Wisconsin. Wis. Stat. § 701.21; Ga. Stat. Ann. § 44-15-4.

Where the accumulation provision would extend beyond the statutory time the court held the excess accumulation passed by intestacy. Murphy v. Northern Trust Co., 162 N.E.2d 428 (Ill. 1959).

Accumulation provision for widow's lifetime was void. In re Remsen's Estate, 239 N.Y.S.2d 237 (1962).

Pennsylvania permits accumulations for the minority of beneficiaries and the life of the settlor. In re Wheelock's Estate, 164 A.2d 1 (Pa. 1960).

Where the rule against accumulation is violated the accumulation if it relates to an interest vested in possession goes at once to the beneficiary, otherwise it goes to the residuary legatee unless the residuary estate was the subject of the accumulation, in which case it passes by intestacy. In re Castner's Estate, 194 A.2d 330 (Pa. 1963).

Under the English Accumulations Act 1800, replaced by § 164 of the 1925 Law of Property Act, the accumulation beyond the 21 years allowable period passes by intestacy.

See William R. Cohen, The Rule Against Accumulations and "Wait and See," 33 Temp. L.Q. 34; Trust Depreciation Accounting and the Minnesota Statute o.n Accumulations, 46 Minn. L. Rev. 749 (1962).

Accumulation statutes do not affect charitable trusts but the courts may terminate improper charitable accumulations under their general equity powers. Franklin Found. v. Attorney General, 163 N.E.2d 662 (Mass. 1960).

Provision to accumulate for 400 years held void ab initio. Asche v. Asche, 199 A.2d 314 (Del. Ch. 1964), remanded, Asche v. Asche, 210 A.2d 306 (Del. Super Ct. 1965).

In Ohio an accumulation is valid unless it violates the rule against perpetuities. Vinson v. First Trust & Sav. Bank, 339 N.E.2d 670 (C.P. Ohio 1974). Approving: Restatement of the Law of Trusts, 2d § 62(l).

The following states have "accumulation" statutes: Ala. Code § 3-4-252; Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 33-239, 33-261; Cal. Civ. Code §§ 723-726; Ill. Rev. Stat. ch. 30, § 153; Ind. Code 32-1-4-2, 32-1-4-5; Mich. Stat. Ann. §§ 26.36, 26.61, 26.63, 555.11, 555.13; Minn. Stat. § 500.17; Mont. Rev. Codes §§ 67-411-67-414; Nev. Rev. Stat. § 166.150; N.Y. Const. Laws, Pers. Prop. Law §§ 16, 16a, 17; Pa. Stat. tit. 20, § 6106; S.D. Code § 43-6-1 et seq.; Wis. Stat. § 701.21.

(n20)Footnote 20. Henderson v. Troy Bank & Trust Co., 34 So. 2d 835 (Ala. 1948).

(n21)Footnote 21. Ramage v. First Farmers & Merchants Nat'l Bank, 30 So. 2d 706 (Ala. 1947).

(n22)Footnote 22. In re MacDonell's Estate, 39 N.W.2d 32 (Mich. 1949).

(n23)Footnote 23. Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. 227, 31 Eng. Rep. 117 (1799).

(n24)Footnote 24. Gertman v. Burdick, 123 F.2d 924 (D.C. Cir. 1941); Ramage v. First Farmers & Merchants Nat'l Bank, 30 So. 2d 706 (Ala. 1947).

(n25)Footnote 25. A devise to accumulate until it reached a fixed figure and then to be paid to a charitable foundation with the trust property to be used for the benefit of great grandchildren of the testator was too remote even though it was to be held for the period of time voted under the law of Delaware. Asche v. Asche, 199 A.2d 314 (Del. 1964).

A void direction for accumulation does not affect the validity of the gift. Third Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Eaton, 294 N.E.2d 247 (Ohio App. 1972).

It was held in In re Estate of Castner v. Deir, 194 A.2d 330 (Pa. 1963), that a devise providing for accumulation in a trust during the lives of grandchildren created a too lengthy accumulation. The excess accumulation went to the beneficiaries if their interest was vested, otherwise to the residuary beneficiaries. But if the residuary estate was the subject of the accumulations it passed by intestacy, not to the residuary legatees. If the trustee has the right to accumulate income this is not an invalid accumulation in New York. N.Y. Const. Laws, Est. Powers & Trusts § 9-2-3. Estate of Outerbridge, 398 N.Y.S.2d 517 (1977).

(n26)Footnote 26. Ill. Rev. Stat. ch. 30, § 37f-h (covering rights of re-entry and possibility of reverter and entry thereon after fifty years).

See Richard R. Powell, Perpetuities in Arizona, 1 Ariz. L. Rev. 225 (1959); see also Comment, The Rule Against Perpetuities in Alabama, 18 Ala. L. Rev. 129 (1966).

(n27)Footnote 27. Girard Trust Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 73 A.2d 371 (Pa. 1950).

(n28)Footnote 28. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 68918. Statute held unconstitutional, however, to the extent it applied to existing restrictions. Biltmore Village, Inc. v. Royal, 71 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1954).

(n29)Footnote 29. R.I. Pub. Laws ch. 3213.

(n30)Footnote 30. Mass. Ann. Laws ch. 260, § 23; see also, Mass. Acts 1954, ch. 640, § 3; Lewis M. Simes, Elimination of Stale Restrictions on the Use of Land. A.B.A. Section of Real Property, Probate and Trust Law, 1954 Proceedings.

(n31)Footnote 31. Kentucky has abolished the fee simple determinable and possibility of reverter and has converted this into a "fee simple subject to a right of entry for condition broken." Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.218.

The right of entry dies after 30 years from the date of the instrument. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.219.

Limitations over after defeasible fees are valid for 30 years after breach regardless of the rule against perpetuities. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.219.

(n32)Footnote 32. Permitting cy pres to strike "Protestant Gentile" provisions in charitable gift under primary charitable intent rule. Howard Sav. Inst. v. Peep, 170 A.2d 39 (N.J. 1960).

See Mortmain Statutes-Questions of Constitutionality, 52 Notre Dame L. Rev. 638 (1977).

(n33)Footnote 33. Barry v. Newton, 273 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1954).

See Max A. Pock, Rule Against Perpetuities -- A Comparison of Some Common-Law and Civil Law Jurisdictions, 35 St. John's L. Rev. 62 (1960); H.R. Hahlo, Problem of Perpetuities in South African Law -- An Essay in Applied Comparative Law, 37 Tul. L. Rev. 453 (1963); David M. Schuyler, Should the Rule Against Perpetuities Discard Its Vest?, 56 Mich. L. Rev. 887 (1958); George L. Haskins, Extending the Grasp of the Dead Hand: Reflections on the Origins of the Rule Against Perpetuities, 126 Pa. L. Rev. 19 (1977).

(n34)Footnote 34. Story v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 156 So. 101 (Fla. 1934).

(n35)Footnote 35. Fitchie v. Brown, 211 U.S. 321 (1908), aff'g 18 Haw. 52; Chilcott v. Hart, 45 P. 391 (Colo. 1896), 35 L.R.A. 41 (though the common law as of 1607 is the law in Colorado it is subject to changing conditions); Alfred v. Marks, 49 Conn. 473 (1882); Taylor v. Crosson, 98 A. 375 (Del. 1916); Van Roy v. Hoover, 117 So. 887 (Fla. 1937); Hale v. Hale, 17 N.E. 470 (Ill. 1888); Keeler v. Lauer, 85 P. 541 (Kan. 1906); Towle v. Doe, 54 A. 1072 (Me.

1903); Billingsley v. Bradley, 171 A. 351 (Md. 1934), 104 a.l.r. 274; Loud v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 240 S.W. 629 (Mo. 1923); Bunting v. Hromas, 177 N.W. 190 (Neb. 1920); Edgerly v. Barker, 31 A. 900 (N.H. 1891), 28 l.r.a. 328; Siedler v. Syms, 38 A. 424 (N.J. 1897); Mercer v. Mercer, 52 S.E.2d 229 (N.C. 1949); Gratton v. Gratton's Estate, 283 P. 747 (Or. 1929); In re Appleton's Appeal, 20 A. 521 (Pa. 1890), 11 l.r.a. 85; In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898); Rhode Island Hosp. Trust Co. v. Granger, 155 A. 358 (R.I. 1931); Woodruff Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Yarborough's Estate, 142 S.E. 50 (S.C. 1928); Staines v. Burton, 53 P. 1015 (Utah 1898); In re Peck's Estate, 118 A. 527 (Vt. 1922); Otterback v. Bohrer, 12 S.E. 1013 (Va. 1891); Denny v. Hyland, 297 P. 1083 (Wash. 1931); Whelan v. Reilly, 3 W. Va. 597 (1869).

See Lawrence M. Jones, The Rule Against Perpetuities in Maryland, 18 Md. L. Rev. 93 (1958). Commerce Bank of Kansas City, N.A. v. Peabody Coal Co., 861 S.W. 2d 569 (Mo. App. 1993) (under Kentucky law, interests created by pre-1960 instruments continue to be governed by the common-law rule against perpetuities).

(n36)Footnote 36. Thomas v. Pullman Trust & Sav. Bank, 21 N.E.2d 897 (Ill. 1939). El Paso Prod. Co. v. PWG P'ship, 866 P.2d 311 (N.M. 1993) (at common law, the rule against perpetuities was designed to prevent vesting of future interest in property at an indefinite date that could exceed the length of time established as a life in being at time of creation of interest plus 21 years); Matter of Will of Shehan, 597 N.Y.Supp. 2d 1017 (N.Y. Sur. 1993) (the rule against perpetuities is not a canon of construction but a legal prohibition; its purpose is not to determine intent but to prevent illegality, and, when the rule is applied, it defeats intent); Symphony Space, Inc. v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 669 N.E.2d 799 (N.Y. 1996) (the effect of the rule against perpetuities -- which is a statutory prohibition, not a rule of construction -- is always to defeat the intent of parties who create a remotely vesting interest).

> "The rule which has always been applied to cases of remoteness is this: You do not import the law of remoteness into the construction of the instrument, by which you investigate the expressed intention of the testator. You take his words, and endeavour to arrive at their meaning, exactly in the same manner as if there had been no such law, and as if the whole intention expressed by the words could lawfully take effect. I do not mean, that, in dealing with words which are obscure and ambiguous, weight, even in a question of remoteness, may not sometimes be given to the consideration that it is better to effectuate than to destroy the intention; but I do say, that, if the construction of the words is one about which a court would have no doubt, though there was no law of remoteness, that construction cannot be altered, or wrested to something different, for the purpose of escaping from the consequences of that law."

Rule against remoteness is a rule of law. Lowe v. Rice, 291 S.W.2d 287 (Tenn. App. 1956).

(n37)Footnote 37. In re Lewis's Estate, 37 A.2d 482 (Pa. 1944).

(n38)Footnote 38. Ford v. Yost, 186 S.W.2d 896 (Ky. 1944), 162 a.l.r. 149; In re Jones's Estate, 190 A.2d 120 (Pa. 1963); Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963). Pathmark Stores, Inc. v. 3821 Assoc., L.P., 663 A.2d 1189 (Del. 1995) (rule against perpetuities is based on public policy against restricting alienability of land); In re Bradlees Stores, Inc., 194 B.R. 555 (N.Y. 1996) (although rule against perpetuities has been questioned because of its harshness, state statutes make it clear that public policy of New York mandates application of this rule).

(n39)Footnote 39. Smith v. Renne, 46 N.E.2d 587 (Ill. 1943).

(n40)Footnote 40. Emerson v. Campbell, 84 A.2d 148 (Del. 1951) (object of rule against perpetuities is to defeat intent of testator).

(n41)Footnote 41. At this point we must recall two elementary principles in determining the validity of wills: First. Such validity must be determined not in the light of what has actually transpired, but from exactly the same point of view from which it would be regarded had a suit been brought to determine the validity of the will at the time of the death of the testator, instead of at a subsequent period. That is to say, the validity of a will depends not on what has happened since the death of the testator, but on what might have happened. Second. "In determining the validity of limitations of estates, under the above statutes (the provisions of the Revised Statutes in reference to absolute ownership and restraint of alienation), it is not sufficient that the estates attempted to be created may, by the happening of subsequent events, be terminated within the prescribed period, if such events might so happen that such estates might extend beyond such period. In other words, to render such future estates valid, they must be so limited that in every possible contingency they will absolutely terminate at such period, or such estates will be held void." In re Wilcox, 87 N.E. 497 (N.Y. 1909).

See Willard L. Eckhardt, Rule Against Perpetuities in Missouri, 30 Mo. L. Rev. 27 (1965).

(n42)Footnote 42. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 6 N.E. 73 (Mass. 1886) (vested limitation over after gift to unborn child for life).

A limitation to the nominal settlor of a trust was held to be a contingent limitation and, therefore, subject to the rule where another had actually furnished the consideration and, therefore, was actually the settlor. Guaranty Trust Co. v. New York Trust Co., 74 N.E.2d 232 (N.Y. 1947).

Trust reserving life estate, then to son and wife for life, then to children of son was not too remote. Marks v. Southern Trust Co., 310 S.W.2d 435 (Tenn. 1958).

(n43)Footnote 43. McCreery v. Johnston, 110 S.E. 464 (W. Va. 1922) (devise to daughters providing that in case of the death of any of the daughters without children surviving them, or of any of their children without leaving children surviving them, the part of his estate devised to them should revert to other children or their descendants held violative of the statute). Cf., Carlberg v. State Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 143 N.E. 441 (Ill. 1924) (life estate to wife, followed by life estate to sons and at their death to their lawful issue share and share alike, with a provision that if either or both of the testator's sons should die without leaving issue or descendants of any child or children the sons' share should revert to the testator's residuary estate does not violate the statute).

The bare possibility that the interest may not vest within the period makes the gift void. In re Johnston's Estate, 303 P.2d 1 (Cal. App. 1956). In re Tamen, 22 F.3d 199 (9th Cir. 1994) (agreement which conveyed to husband and wife and the survivor of them lifetime use of property, and which, upon the death of the survivor, further granted a 99-year lease to their descendants did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

The barest possibility that the interest may not vest within the period invokes rule. Estate of Grove, 138 Cal. Rptr. 684 (1977).

(n44)Footnote 44. Reasoner v. Herman, 134 N.E. 276 (Ind. 1922). Fritschen v. Wanek, 924 P.2d 1288 (Kan. 1996) (in ruling upon whether a future interest violates the rule against perpetuities, speculation concerning the probabilities of various subsequent developments is not indulged in by the courts; it is a sufficient violation of the rule if an interest might possibly vest beyond the period permitted).

The period of the perpetuities rule is counted from the time the testamentary power of appointment is created, but the facts which determine whether there has been a violation are viewed as of the date of exercise. In re Bird's Estate, 37 Cal. Rptr. 288 (1964).

(n45)Footnote 45. Security Trust Co. v. Cooling, 42 A.2d 784 (Del. 1945).

Even though subsequent events show that the interest actually vested within the time, it is void if it might not have done so. Industrial Nat'l Bank v. Morey, 133 A.2d 724 (R.I. 1957); Burruss v. Baldwin, 103 S.E.2d 249 (Va. 1958).

But see Owen Tudor, Absolute Certainty of Vesting Under The Rule Against Perpetuities -- A Self Discredited Relic, 34 Boston U. L. Rev. 129 (1954).

(n46)Footnote 46. In re Hargreaves, 43 Ch. D. 401.

Contra, Joseph Schonthal Co. v. Sylvania, 21 N.E.2d 1008 (Ohio App. 1938).

(n47)Footnote 47. Troutman v. De Boissiere Odd Fellows Orphans Home & Indus. Sch. Ass'n, 71 P. 286 (Kan. 1903).

(n48)Footnote 48. Shoemaker v. Newman, 65 F.2d 208 (D.C. Cir. 1933); Johnson v. Holifield, 58 Am. Rep. 596 (Ala. 1885); United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Douglas, 120 S.W. 328 (Ky. 1909); Edgerly v. Barker, 31 A. 900 (N.H. 1891), 28 l.r.a. 328; Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914), Ann. Cas. 1916D, 570.

See Shenandoah Valley Nat'l Bank of Winchester v. Taylor, 63 S.E.2d 786 (Va. 1951), 25 a.l.r.2d 1104.

The purpose of the rule against perpetuities is to prevent the taking of property out of commerce or trade for a prohibited period. Rekdahl v. Long, 407 S.W.2d 339 (Tex. Civ. App. 1966). Gore v. Beren, 867 P.2d 330 (Kan. 1994) (the rule against perpetuities springs from considerations of public policy; the underlying reason for and purpose of rule is to avoid fettering real property with interests dependent upon contingencies unduly removed and which isolate the property and exclude it from commerce and development for long periods of time); Coble v. Patterson, 442 S.E.2d 119 (N.C. App. 1994) (a remainder is vested if the only impediment to the right of immediate possession is the existence of a preceding estate). Buck v. Banks, 668 N.E.2d 1259 (Ind. 1996) (rule against perpetuities is a vital rule of property law intended to enhance marketability of property interests by limiting remoteness of vesting); Snyder Bros., Inc., v. Peoples Natural Gas Co., 676 A.2d 1226 (Pa. 1996) (rule against perpetuities prohibits restraints on alienation, or fettering of marketability of property over long periods of time by indirect restraints on alienation).

(n49)Footnote 49. Owsley v. Harrison, 60 N.E. 89 (Ill. 1901); Phillips v. Harrow, 61 N.W. 434 (Iowa 1894); Pulitzer v. Livingston, 36 A. 635 (Me. 1896); In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898). See Dallapi v. Campbell, 114 P.2d 646 (Cal. App. 1941); Lunt v. Van Gorden, 294 N.W. 351 (Iowa 1940); In re Trimble's Estate, 14 N.W.2d 673 (Iowa 1944).

(n50)Footnote 50. Bank of California v. Ager, 109 P.2d 548 (Wash. 1941).

(n51)Footnote 51. Carlberg v. State Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 143 N.E. 441 (Ill. 1924); Bear v. Millikin Trust Co., 168 N.E. 349 (Ill. 1929), 73 a.l.r. 173; Hunt v. Carroll, 157 S.W.2d 429 (Tex. Civ. App. 1941).

For the purpose of the rule against perpetuities, the test of vesting is not when the beneficial interests determine that arise within the period of lives in being plus 21 years but whether within such period it becomes certain that the interests are unconditional and will reach fruition in the future. Third Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Eaton, 294 N.E.2d 247 (Ohio App. 1972).

(n52)Footnote 52. Conley v. Gaylock, 108 S.E.2d 675 (W. Va. 1959).

(n53)Footnote 53. In re Trimble's Estate, 14 N.W.2d 673 (Iowa 1944); Curtis v. Maryland Baptist Union Ass'n, 5 A.2d 836 (Md. 1939), 121 A.L.R. 1516; Clark v. Union County Trust Co., 12 A.2d 365 (N.J. 1940); In re Lippincott's Estate, 3 A.2d 363 (Pa. 1939); In re McKee's Estate, 108 A.2d 214 (Pa. 1954); Bank of Cal. v. Ager, 109 P.2d 548 (Wash. 1941). Snyder Bros., Inc. v. Peoples Natural Gas Co., 676 A.2d 1226 (Pa. 1996) (rule against perpetuities did not apply to fee simple determinable interest granted to lessee, because that interest was already vested); Hubscher & Son v. Storey, 578 N.W.2d 701 (Mich. App. 1998) (profit a prendre, a vested interest, is not subject to the rule against perpetuities).

(n54)Footnote 54. McKibben v. Pioneer Trust & Sav. Bank, 6 N.E.2d 619 (Ill. 1937); Leonard v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 18 N.E.2d 706 (Ill. App. 1939); Koehler v. Rowland, 205 S.W. 217 (Mo. 1918), 9 a.l.r. 107. See Lloyd v. McDiarmid, 19 N.E.2d 292 (Ohio App. 1937).

Colorado persists in defining the rule as invalidating interests "limited to vest upon events not certain to occur within 21 years of some life in being at the creation of the interest." Thus omitting the customary language limited to vest "if at all." Rocky Mtn. Fuel Co. v. Heflin, 366 P.2d 577 (Colo. 1961). Cloud v. Association of Owners, Satellite Apt. Bldg., Inc., 857 P. 2d 435 (Colo. App. 1992) (rule against perpetuities does not invalidate every perpetual interest).

In Connecticut the period of the rule in 1972 was reduced to 18 years, but this was raised to 21 in 1973. Conn. Gen. Stat. 1958, § 45-96.

(n55)Footnote 55. Spicer v. Moss, 100 N.E.2d 761 (Ill. 1951) (a limitation in a deed to the grantor's daughter for life and then to the heirs of her body and in default thereof to the heirs of the body of the grantor's son did not create limitations void for remoteness since the limitations vested on the deaths of the son and daughter, fee tails having been converted into life estates in the first taker with contingent remainders to his heirs); In re Wood's Trust Estate, 311 P.2d 359 (Kan. 1957) (to wife and daughter for life and then to citizens of Willingham. Remainder was vested and therefore not too remote).

Executory devise valid if vests within the rule. Erickson v. Palmer, 315 P.2d 164 (Or. 1957). Hubscher & Son v. Storey, 578 N.W.2d 701 (Mich. App. 1998) (profit a prendre, a vested interest, is not subject to the rule against perpetuities).

(n56)Footnote 56. Bank of Cal. v. Ager, 109 P.2d 548 (Wash. 1941).

Rule against perpetuities applies to equitable interests. Thomas v. Harrison, 191 N.E.2d 862 (Ohio 1962).

(n57)Footnote 57. Joseph Schonthal Co. v. Sylvania, 21 N.E.2d 1008 (Ohio App. 1938).

(n58)Footnote 58. Emerson v. Campbell, 84 A.2d 148 (Del. 1951) (rule is applicable to vesting in interest not in enjoyment); Swain v. Bowers, 158 N.E. 598 (Ind. App. 1927).

(n59)Footnote 59. Gray v. Stadler, 280 N.W. 675, 281 N.W. 280 (Wis. 1938). Urquhart v. Teller, 958 P.2d 714 (Mont. 1998) (The rule against perpetuities should not be invoked to invalidate an option to purchase property where some construction of the instrument granting the option exists that can lead to the instrument's validity. In this case, the option would terminate six months following notice of seller's death, and the court found that although the option would go on in perpetuity if seller's heirs neglected to give notice, there is an implied duty on the part of seller's heirs to give notice; thus, notice is presumed to be given, and the interest is not a perpetuity).

(n60)Footnote 60. Campbell v. Campbell, 230 S.W.2d 918 (Ky. 1950); New England Trust Co. v. Wood, 93 N.E.2d 547 (Mass. 1950); St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Bassett, 85 S.W.2d 569 (Mo. 1935), 101 a.l.r. 1266; In re de Varona's Trust, 84 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1948); In re Wogatzky's Will, 86 N.Y.S.2d 884 (1949); In re Rostick's Estate, 86 N.Y.S.2d 164 (1949); Harris v. France, 232 S.W.2d 64 (Tenn. App. 1950); Collins v. Lyon, 24 S.E.2d 572 (Va. 1943). Abrams v. Templeton, 465 S.E.2d 117 (S.C. App. 1995) (will which violated rule against perpetuities by making gift over of interest in real property to testator's great-grandchildren was upheld after court inserted savings clause to use testator's grandchildren who were alive at the time of death as the measuring lives).

To A for life, then to B for life and after B's death to Y charity. Held the validity of the gift to bounty did not depend upon B surviving A. Williamson v. Brownlow, 410 S.W.2d 878 (Tenn. 1967).

(n61)Footnote 61. In re Hewitt's Settlement, 1 ch. 810.

Samuel M. Fedders, The Perpetuities Created in Those in En Ventre SaMere in Relation to the Termination of Common Law and Wait and See Measuring Lives: A Minor Heresy Stated and Defended, 62 Iowa L. Rev. 309 (1976).

(n62)Footnote 62. Roemhild v. Jones, 239 F.2d 492 (8th Cir. 1957) (rule used is a means of construction. This seems to be the modern trend although there are earlier opinions to the effect that an instrument should be construed as though the rule never existed and then the rule applied to the limitation found to exist; Shepard v. Union & New Haven Trust Co., 138 A. 809 (Conn. 1927) ("If a construction is fairly open which will avoid turning a bequest into an illegal perpetuity and render the bequest valid and operative, the law favors it and courts must prefer it"); Ireland v. Hudson, 41 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1935); Cartinhour v. Houser, 66 So. 2d 686 (Fla. 1953) (an instrument may be construed to avoid the rule against remoteness); Chapman v. Cheney, 61 N.E. 363 (Ill. 1901); Emler v. Emler, 106 S.W.2d 79 (Ky. 1937); Campbell v. Campbell, 230 S.W.2d 918 (Ky. 1950); Snyder v. Denit, 72 A.2d 757 (Md. 1950); Second Bank-State Trust Co. v. Second Bank-State Trust Co., 140 N.E.2d 201 (Mass. 1957); Davis v. Rossi, 34 S.W.2d 8 (Mo. 1930); Post v. Hover, 33 N.Y. 593 (1865); In re Friend's Estate, 6 N.Y.S.2d 205 (1938); Security Nat'l Bank v. Hannah, 114 S.E.2d 273 (N.C. 1960) (trust to terminate when the youngest living grandchild became 21 was interpreted to mean the youngest grandchild living at the testator's death); Braun v. Central Trust Co., 104 N.E.2d 480 (Ohio 1951), aff'd, 109 N.E.2d 476 (Ohio App. 1952); In re Mereto's Estate, 166 A. 893 (Pa. 1933); McCarley v. McCarley, 360 S.W.2d 27 (Tenn. 1962) (gift in trust for education of grandchildren to be distributed when last grandchild finished college held valid by closing class to grandchildren living at testatrix" death).

Courts will adopt the construction that avoids an illegal perpetuity. In re Stewart's Estate, 242 So. 2d 781 (Fla. App. 1970).

A clause in a will, establishing trusts and providing that any trust which should otherwise violate the rule would terminate one day prior to the expiration of the allowable period, was held valid. In re Lee's Estate, 299 P.2d 1066 (Wash. 1956).

(n63)Footnote 63. Stanton v. Stanton, 101 A.2d 789 (Conn. 1953) ("descendants" meant those living at testator's death); Cartinhour v. Houser, 66 So. 2d 686 (Fla. 1953); In re Neill's Estate, 89 N.Y.S.2d 394 (1949) (example of a construction to avoid perpetuities); In re Harrah's Estate, 72 A.2d 587 (Pa. 1950) (Pennsylvania will separate remainders vertically to preserve those which vest at death of testator). But see, In re Bradlees Stores, Inc., 194 B.R. 555 (N.Y. 1996) (estate in property is void from the beginning if it could vest too remotely; court may not rewrite transfer to fit within the rule against perpetuities); Urquhart v. Teller, 958 P.2d 714 (Mont. 1998) (The rule against perpetuities should not be invoked to invalidate an option to purchase property where some construction of the instrument granting the option exists that can lead to the instrument's validity. In this case, the option would terminate six months following notice of seller's death, and the court found that although the option would go on in perpetuity if seller's heirs neglected to give notice, there is an implied duty on the part of seller's heirs to give notice; thus, notice is presumed to be given, and the interest is not a perpetuity).

(n64)Footnote 64. In re Foster's Estate, 376 P.2d 784 (Kan. 1962) (a provision for distribution in a testamentary trust, when the youngest grandchild reached 23 years was held too remote but the court exercised a power of excision by striking the provision for delay of distribution from the will); First Portland Nat'l Bank v. Rodrique, 172 A.2d 107 (Me. 1961) (where there were two alternative provisions in a will and one violated the rule against remoteness the other took effect when the event upon which it was limited happened); Bowen v. Campbell, 181 N.E.2d 342 (Mass. 1962) (it is public policy in Massachusetts that if two constructions are possible one of which will render the testamentary scheme valid and the other will violate the rule against perpetuities, the former must be adopted); See also Old Colony Trust Co. v. Stephens, 190 N.E.2d 110 (Mass. 1963); In re Bassett's Estate, 190 A.2d 415 (N.H. 1963) (court permitted an agreed termination of a testamentary trust where a question of the violation of the rule against remoteness of vesting was involved); Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 128 S.E.2d 867 (N.C. 1963) (perpetuities as guide for construction); In re Mikaloff's Estate, 160 A.2d 703 (Pa. 1960) (treating the rule as affecting remoteness of divesting rather than remoteness of vesting); Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963) (if two interpretations are possible the one which avoids the rule against remoteness is preferred); Fritschen v. Wanek, 924 P.2d 1288 (Kan. 1996) (rule against perpetuities bears little relation to modern business practices, and courts should strive to interpret document in manner that avoids rule's application).

(n65)Footnote 65. Wright v. Tuscaloosa, 182 So. 72 (Ala. 1938).

(n66)Footnote 66. Chilcott v. Hart, 45 P. 391 (Colo. 1896).

If the accumulation makes the gift too remote the distribution is by intestacy. In re Castner's Estate, 194 A.2d 330 (Pa. 1963). Hamman v. Bright & Co., 924 S.W.2d 168 (Tex. 1996) (oil and gas top leases--which were to become effective if and when existing oil and gas leases expired or were terminated--conveyed springing executory interest that was void under the rule against perpetuities, because existing oil and gas leases could continue for an indeterminate amount of time).

(n67)Footnote 67. Imbrie v. Hartrampf, 198 P. 521 (Or. 1921); Betts v. Snyder, 19 A.2d 82 (Pa. 1941).

Devise to two children for life, remainders to the children of each life tenant with remainder over to the other child if one died without issue, the remainder over was valid only if the remainderman died with issue so that if both died without issue the share of each passed to his own heirs. Anderson v. Anderson, 115 So. 2d 531, 121 So. 2d 393 (Miss. 1959).

(n68)Footnote 68. Bates v. Spooner, 54 A. 305 (Conn. 1903); Madison v. Larmon, 48 N.E. 556 (Ill. 1897); Sellers v. Archer, 134 N.E.2d 264 (Ill. 1956); Schee v. Boone, 243 S.W. 882 (Mo. 1922); In re Palmer's Estate, 315 P.2d 164 (Or. 1957); Clarke v. Clarke, 116 S.E.2d 449 (N.C. 1960) (a devise to heirs of testatrix's son to vest at testatrix's death does not violate the rule). Pathmark Stores, Inc. v. 3821 Assoc., 663 A.2d 1189 (Del. 1995) (30-year option between commercial entities held not to violate the rule against perpetuities); Symphony Space, Inc. v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 631 N.Y.S.2d 136 (1995) (option agreement void as violating the rule against remote vesting); Rebh v. Lake George Ventures, Inc., 629 N.Y.S.2d 878 (1995) (lease agreement held not in violation of rule against perpetuities); Estate of Royer v. Wineland Equip., Inc., 663 A.2d 780 (Pa. Super. 1995) (right of first refusal held not to violate the rule against perpetuities); Conquistador Petroleum, Inc. v. Chatham, 899 S.W.2d 439 (Tex. App. 1995) (option agreement providing that optionee had option to lease property if incumbent lessees did not exercise their option to obtain new lease within ten days after existing lease expired was held not in violation of rule against perpetuities); Symphony Space, Inc., v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 669 N.E.2d 799 (N.Y. App. 1996) (option to purchase contained in a lease violated the rule against perpetuities, since the option could be exercised after the lease term had expired); Donzella v. New York Telephone Co., 641 N.Y.S.2d 423 (1996) (purchase option written into lease did not violate the rule against perpetuities); Buck v. Banks, 668 N.E.2d 1259 (Ind. 1996) (preemptive option in contract, giving purchasers right to purchase additional 14 acres of land, violated the rule against perpetuities); In re Bradlees Stores, Inc., 194 B.R. 555 (N.Y. 1996) (creditor's option to purchase real estate from Chapter 11 debtor was void under the rule against perpetuities).

(n69)Footnote 69. A direction that administration be continued until all assets have liquidated themselves was an improper suspension of the power of alienation. In re Johntson's Estate, 303 P.2d 1 (Cal. 1956). But a limitation over after settlement of decedent's estate was valid under theory of reasonable time. Belfield v. Booth, 27 A. 585 (Conn. 1893). See Kales, 6 Ill. L. Rev. 373.

Devise to testator's grandchildren was not too remote. Lowe v. Rice, 291 S.W.2d 287 (Tenn. App. 1956).

Deed to too many persons held a perpetuity. State v. McGee, 204 N.W. 408 (Iowa 1925).

(n70)Footnote 70. In re Bradlees Stores, Inc., 194 B.R. 55 (N.Y. 1996).

(n71)Footnote 71. Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Ireland, 167 N.E. 261 (Mass. 1929), 64 a.l.r. 1071; Schettler v. Smith, 41 N.Y. 328 (1869); Miles v. Harford, 12 Ch. Div. 691; Doe d. Evers v. Challis, 18 Q.B. 231, 118 Eng. Rep. 87 (1850).

Good alternatives can be sustained despite the invalidity of alternative dispositions separately stated. Story v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 156 So. 101 (Fla. 1934).

(n72)Footnote 72. Landrum v. National City Bank, 80 S.E.2d 300 (Ga. 1954); Bozza v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 72 N.E.2d 51 (Ill. 1947); Trenton Banking Co. v. Hawley, 70 A.2d 896 (N.J. Super. 1950); McPherson v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 81 S.E.2d 386 (N.C. 1954).

As to testator's belief of impossibility of issue see Snyder's Estate v. Denit, 72 A.2d 757 (Md. 1950).

In Worcester County Trust Co. v. Marble, 55 N.E.2d 446 (Mass. 1944), the court avoided the possibility of issue rule by determining that the testator was aware of the advanced age of the "life in being."

(n73)Footnote 73. Haggerty v. Oakland, 326 P.2d 957 (Cal. App. 1958), 66 a.l.r.2d 718.

Always a possibility of issue. Turner v. Turner, 196 S.E.2d 498 (S.C. 1973).

A trust to continue until the direct blood line of the settlor became extinct and limitation over was void ab initio. Kettler v. Atkinson, 383 S.W.2d 557 (Tex. 1964).

(n74)Footnote 74. 1 Cox 324, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186 (1787).

Parker v. Parker, 113 S.E.2d 899 (N.C. 1960) ("The law indulges the presumption that so long as a man lives he is capable of procreation"); Crockett v. Scott, 284 S.W.2d 289 (Tenn. 1955), 56 a.l.r.2d 442; Rodgers v. Unborn Child or Children of Rodgers, 315 S.W.2d 521 (Tenn. 1958).

(n75)Footnote 75. Stanley v. Foster, 92 S.E.2d 925 (N.C. 1956); McPherson v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 81 S.E.2d 386 (N.C. 1954); Karsh v. Atkins, 313 S.W.2d 253 (Tenn. 1958).

Idaho has abolished the presumption of fertility in its suspension of alienation rule. Idaho Code 1947, § 55-111.

See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: New Hampshire Defertilizes the Octogenarians, 77 Harv. L. Rev. 279 (1963).

(n76)Footnote 76. In re Wood, 3 ch. 381.

(n77)Footnote 77. Belfield v. Booth, 27 A. 585 (Conn. 1893).

(n78)Footnote 78. Rozell v. Rozell, 186 N.W. 489 (Mich. 1922). See Reasoner v. Herman, 134 N.E. 276 (Ind. 1922).

The iconoclasts have commenced to gnaw at the sanctity of this precept. See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in Perspective: Ending the Rule's Reign of Terror, 65 Harv. L. Rev. 721 (1952); W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: Staying the Slaughter of the Innocents, 68 L.Q. Rev. 35 (1952).

And see Bankers Trust Co. v. Pearson, 99 A.2d 224 (Conn. 1953), permitting the testator to presume impossibility of issue.

But such presumption even by all parties cannot be indulged in under some authorities. Owings v. Owings, 247 S.W.2d 221 (Ky. 1952).

(n79)Footnote 79. Snyder v. Denit, 72 A.2d 757 (Md. 1950), 18 a.l.r.2d 663; Trenton Banking Co. v. Hawley, 70 A.2d 896 (N.J. Super. 1950).

Medical evidence was sufficient to hold that a husband 63 and a wife 45 could not have children. In re Bassett's Estate, 190 A.2d 415 (N.H. 1963).

Tennessee now permits evidence to rebut. Jee v. Audley, 1 Cox 324, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186 (1787).

See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: New Hampshire Defertilizes the Octogenarians, 77 Harv. L. Rev. 279 (1963).

(n80)Footnote 80. Bankers Trust Co. v. Pearson, 99 A.2d 224 (Conn. 1953); In re Wright's Estate, 131 A. 188 (Pa. 1925); In re Bonham's Estate, 143 A.2d 50 (Pa. 1958) (82-year-old woman presumed incapable of issue).

(n81)Footnote 81. Byers v. Bedlow, 142 So. 894 (Fla. 1932).

(n82)Footnote 82. See Charles Looker, et. al., Reform of Rule Against Perpetuities, 92 Trusts & Estates 768-774 (1953); Lewis M. Simes, Is the Rule Against Perpetuities Doomed, 52 Mich. L. Rev. 179 (1953); Owen Tudor, Absolute Certainty of Vesting Under the Rule Against Perpetuities, 34 Boston U. L. Rev. 129 (1954).

(n83)Footnote 83. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Curtis, 97 A.2d 207 (N.H. 1953).

(n84)Footnote 84. W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities Legislation, Massachusetts Style, 67 Harv. L. Rev. 1349 (1954); Daniel M. Schuyler, Should the Rule Against Perpetuities Discard Its Vest? 56 Mich. L. Rev. 683-726 (1958); Thomas L. Waterbury, Some Further Thoughts on Perpetuities Reform, 42 Minn. L. Rev. 41-105 (1956).

See Robert J. Lynn & John W. Van Doren, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Remainders and Executory Interests: Orthodox Doctrine and Modern Cases, 27 U. Chi. L. Rev. 436 (1960).

(n85)Footnote 85. Leach, Perpetuities in Perspective, 65 Harv. L. Rev. 721 (1952); Legislation, Massachusetts Style, 67 Harv. L. Rev. 1349 (1954); W. Barton Leach & James K. Logan, Perpetuities: A Standard Saving Clause to Avoid Violations of the Rule, 74 Harv. L. Rev. 1141 (1961).

(n86)Footnote 86. Henderson v. Moore, 189 S.W.2d 59 (Tex. Civ. App. 1945).

(n87)Footnote 87. Howell v. Deady, 48 F. Supp. 104 (1939). Luecke v. Wallace, 951 S.W.2d 267 (Tex. App. 1997) (rule against perpetuities "relates only to the vesting of estates and interests and has no bearing on the duration of the estate or the actual possession of it... . The rule is not applicable to present or immediate interests, nor is it applicable to those future interests in land which vest at their creation.").

(n88)Footnote 88. Goodloe v. Goodloe, 166 S.W.2d 836 (Ky. 1942).

A direction to the executor to maintain the cemetery lot was not a perpetuity since the executor had a reasonable time in which to perform which did not exceed the rule. Ellis v. Andrews, 324 S.W.2d 917 (Tex. Civ. App. 1959). Coulter & Smith, LTD, v. Russell, 925 P.2d 1258 (Utah 1996) (to satisfy rule against perpetuities, it is not necessary that the interest vest as actual possession of the property); Snyder Bros., Inc. v. Peoples Natural Gas Co., 676 A.2d 1226 (Pa. 1996) (rule against perpetuities applies only vesting of interest, not to enjoyment of that interest).

(n89)Footnote 89. In re Sahlender's Estate, 201 P.2d 69 (Cal. App. 1948).

See Some Perpetuities Problems under the Pennsylvania Estates Act of 1947 (Pa. Stat. Ann., tit. 20, §§ 301.4, 301.5), 97 U. Pa. L. Rev. 263 (1948); Oval A. Phipps, The Pennsylvania Experiment in Perpetuities, 23 Temp. L.Q. 20 (1949); Philip A. Briggs, A Defense of Pennsylvania's Statute on Perpetuities, 23 Temp. L.Q. 313 (1950).

Tiehen v. Hebenstreit, 42 N.W.2d 802 (Neb. 1950) (rule is the law in Nebraska).

Montana has now adopted the "Common Law Rule Against Perpetuities." Mont. Acts 1959, ch. 213.

(n90)Footnote 90. In re Harrah's Estate, 72 A.2d 587 (Pa. 1950); Catlin v. Brown, 11 Hare 372, 68 Eng. Rep. 1319 (1853).

Gift to "children of my grandchildren" which would permit after born great grandchildren to be included in the will provision violated the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting. National Bank of Ga. v. First Nat'l Bank of Atlanta, 218 S.E.2d 23 (Ga. 1975).

(n91)Footnote 91. Rose v. Rose, 60 S.E.2d 45 (Va. 1950).

(n92)Footnote 92. Gray, supra, n.1.

Tennessee has the common-law rule against remoteness. Eager v. McCoy, 228 S.W. 709 (Tenn. 1921).

See Samuel M. Fedders, The Perpetuities Created in Gross and the Child En Ventre Sa Mere in Relation to the Termination of Common Law and Wait and See Measuring Lives -- A Minor Heresy Stated and Defended, 62 Iowa L. Rev. 309 (1976).

(n93)Footnote 93. Bear v. Millikin Trust Co., 168 N.E. 349 (Ill. 1929), 73 a.l.r. 173 (limitation based on lives of all persons then in being was void as being unreasonable); In re Warren's Estate, 182 A. 396 (Pa. 1936), 104 a.l.r. 1345 (lives are candles all burning at the same time); Marks v. Southern Trust Co., 310 S.W.2d 435 (Tenn. 1958) (trust reserving life estate then to son and wife for life then to children of son was not too remote); Abbott v. Everett Trust & Sav. Bank, 312 P.2d 203 (Wash. 1957) (where the will only provided for a life estate there was no violation of the rule against remoteness since the decedent died intestate as to the remainder which vested in her heirs).

(n94)Footnote 94. Lloyd v. Carew, Show. Parl. Cas. 137, 1 Eng. Rep. 93 (1697) (permitting 21 years in gross).

Tennessee has the common law rule against remoteness. Eager v. McCoy, 228 S.W. 709 (Tenn. 1921).

(n95)Footnote 95. Long v. Blackall, 7 T.R. 100, 101 Eng. Rep. 875 (1797).

(n96)Footnote 96. Fitchie v. Brown, 211 U.S. 321 (1908) ("as long as the law permits" is valid); Minot v. Paine, 120 N.E. 167 (Mass. 1918); Gale v. Gale, 159 A. 122 (N.H. 1932).

See Samuel M. Fedders, The Perpetuities Created in Gross and the Child in En Ventre Sa Mere in Relation to the Termination of Common Law and Wait and See Measuring Lives -- A Minor Heresy Stated and Defended, 62 Iowa L. Rev. 309 (1976).

(n97)Footnote 97. See Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Tiffany, 260 S.W. 357 (Ky. 1924).

(n98)Footnote 98. 27 Hen. VIII, ch. 10.

The Texas constitutional provision against perpetuities has adopted the common-law rule against remoteness. Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963).

(n99)Footnote 99. 32 Hen. VIII, ch. 134 & 35 hen. VIII, ch. v. 5.

(n100)Footnote 100. Cro. Jac. 590.

(n101)Footnote 101. 2 Wms. Saund. 380.

(n102)Footnote 102. Cro. Jac. 459.

(n103)Footnote 103. 3 Ch. Cas. 1 (1682).

(n104)Footnote 104. Scatterwood v. Edge, 1 Salk. 229 and Law v. Bunm, 3 P. Wms. 262, holding that the limitation could be for any number of lives since they were "all candles lighted up at once"; Stephens v. Stephens, Cas. Temp. Talb. 228 (1736), adding the minority of a beneficiary after lives; Thellusson v. Woodford, 11 Ves. 112 (1799), permitting the lives to be others than beneficiaries; Cadell v. Palmer, 1 Cl. & F. 372 (1833), permitting the years to be in gross.

(n105)Footnote 105. 1 Cl. & F. 372 (1833).

(n106)Footnote 106. Cole v. Sewell, 2 H.L. Cas. 186 (1848).

See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in Perspective: Ending the Rule's Reign of Terror, 65 Harv. L. Rev. 721; Daniel M. Schuyler, Should the Rule Against Perpetuities Discard Its Vest? 56 Mich. L. Rev. 683-726 (1958).

(n107)Footnote 107. See Thomas L. Waterbury, Some Further Thoughts on Perpetuities Reform, 42 Minn. L. Rev. 41 (1958).

(n108)Footnote 108. Barry v. Newton, 273 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1954).

(n109)Footnote 109. If a gift can take effect as a contingent remainder and so not be too remote it must be so construed. Evers v. Challis, 7 H.L. Cas. 531 (1859).

Bear v. Millikin Trust Co., 168 N.E. 349 (Ill. 1929), 73 a.l.r. 173; Love v. Wyndham, 1 Mod. 50, 86 Eng. Rep. 724 (1838) (if all candles be lit at once it is good).

Interesse termini not within the rule though to run for more than 21 years being vested. Mann, Crossman & Paulin, Ltd. v. Registrar, 1 Ch. D. 202 (1918).

(n110)Footnote 110. Life of a butterfly is too remote (dictum). In re Kelly (1932) I.R. 255.

Trust for life of dogs and cats held void. In re McNeill's Estate, 41 Cal. Rptr. 139 (1964).

(n111)Footnote 111. Time based closing of administration of estate held not too remote. Union Trust Co. of Springfield v. Nelen, 186 N.E. 66 (Mass. 1933); Trautz v. Lemp, 46 S.W.2d 135 (Mo. 1932).

Time based on when will would be probated held too remote. Miller v. Weston, 189 P. 610 (Colo. 1920).

(n112)Footnote 112. For a comprehensive discussion of the issues and consequences, see Alison Reppy & Leslie Jay Thompkins, Historical and Statutory Background of the Wills (1928).

See G. Stanley Joslin, Mortmain in Canada and the United States: A Comparative Study, 29 Can. B. Rev. 621.

(n113)Footnote 113. (1259), ch. 14.

(n114)Footnote 114. 7 Edw. I.

(n115)Footnote 115. 15 Richard II, ch. 5.

(n116)Footnote 116. 3 Holdsworth, supra, n.50, 87.

(n117)Footnote 117. 13 Edw. I, st. 1; 34 Edw. I, st. 3; 15 Rich. ii, ch. 5; 51 & 52 Vict., ch. 42.

The charter of 1217, ch. 43, contains a limitation on mortmain. This is supplemented by the Petition of Barns, ch. 10 (1258), and the provisions of Westminster, cap. 14 (1259), and culminated in De Viris Religosis of 7 Edw. I. See 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederick William Maitland, History of English Law, ch. 1, § 9 (2d ed. 1898).

(n118)Footnote 118. History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I.

Joshua Williams, Law of Real Property (17th ed.) 93, states categorically that no conveyance can be made to a corporation unless it has a license to take lands granted by the crown.

(n119)Footnote 119. 3 Holdsworth, supra n.50, 87.

In New York, as the matter stands at this writing, the mortmain statute does not permit one to contest a charitable bequest unless he would receive a pecuniary benefit from a successful contest, either as a beneficiary under the will or as a distributee. In re Cairo's Estate, 312 N.Y.S.2d 925 (1970), aff'd, In re Estate of Cairo, 272 N.E.2d 574 (N.Y. 1971).

(n120)Footnote 120. Williams, supra, n.118 (17th ed.) 82, indicated that there was no forfeiture by mortmain of lands conveyed to a corporation if by royal license or by statute it was authorized to hold land.

Mortmain statute is intended to prevent undue influence on approaching death. In re Lowe's Trust, 186 N.E.2d 648 (Ohio 1962).

(n121)Footnote 121. Where a gift will fail under this statute the doctrine of dependent relative revocation has been invoked. Linkins v. Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Found., 187 F.2d 357 (D.C. Cir. 1950); In re Kaufman's Estate, 155 P.2d 831 (Cal. 1945). See In re Sloan's Appeal, 32 A. 42 (Pa. 1895).

Contra, In re Hoffner's Estate, 29 A. 33 (Pa. 1894).

Mississippi Sch. for the Blind v. Armstrong, 62 So. 2d 369 (Miss. 1953) (devises of realty to charity are void in Mississippi). State Dep't of Assessments & Taxation v. North Baltimore Ctr., 743 A.2d 759, 765 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2000) (stating that "the Mortmain Act of 1736 ... voided devises of land to charities").

(n122)Footnote 122. See Pennsylvania's mortmain statute is unconstitutional as denying charities equal protection of law. In re Estate of Cavill, 329 A.2d 503 (Pa. 1974).

Georgia's mortmain statute prohibits gifts made within 90 days of estate of not more than one third of the estate if wife and children survive. Ga. Code Ann. § 113-107. Baker v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 242 S.E.2d 39 (Ga. 1978).

(n123)Footnote 123. The statement found in I Blackstone Commentaries 475, to the effect that a corporation had power "to purchase lands and hold them for the benefit of themselves and their successors" is to be contrasted with the statement in Coke upon Littleton, to the effect that all corporations must have a license to purchase and hold funds in Mortmain. 7 and 8 William III, c. 37.

See Lathrop v. Commercial Bank, 3 Dana 114 (Ky. 1839), 33 Am. Dec. 481, denying that Mortmain ever became any part of the common law of Virginia; Nuholl v. New York & Erie R. Co., 12 N.Y. 121 (1854); Berry v. Humble Oil & Ref. Co., 205 S.W.2d 376 (Tex. Civ. App. 1947).

See Sutton's Hosp. Case, 10 Coke 23a, 30b, 77 Eng. Rep. 937.

The answer may turn on the question as to whether the private corporation is the child of the municipal corporation or of the religious corporation which was subject to mortmain. See the Merger and Commonwealth of Colchester v. Lawten, 1 Ves. & Bea. 226.

Uses to corporations fell within Mortmain by 15 Rich. ii, ch. 5.

See John W. Curran Charitable Trusts for Masses, 5 Depaul L. Rev. 246 (1956); Charities in Illinois, 7 Depaul L. Rev. 84 (1958).

(n124)Footnote 124. Okla. Const. Art. 22, § 2.

(n125)Footnote 125. Ireland v. Cleveland Trust Co., 157 N.E.2d 396 (Ohio 1958) (valid when made within the prohibited statutory period if the heirs consent).

A charitable gift in will must be executed within statutory time prior to testator's death. In re Davison's Estate, 215 P.2d 504 (Cal. App. 1950); Deeds v. Deeds, 94 N.E.2d 232 (Ohio 1950).

Mortmain statute applied. In re Scott's Estate, 31 Cal. Rptr. 438 (1963); Thomas v. Harrison, 191 N.E.2d 862 (Ohio 1962).

Ohio has maintained its mortmain statute designed to protect only those who would take by intestacy and if the complainants were not heirs they could not evoke the statute against a charitable legatee. Central Nat'l Bank v. Morris, 227 N.E.2d 418 (Ohio App. 1967).

Mortmain statutes like those of Ohio date back to 9 Geo. II, ch. 36, which voided deeds to charity made within 12 months of death.

Mortmain statute inapplicable if new will merely repeats earlier will. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 731.19 (1964). Linkins v. Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Found., 187 F.2d 357 (D.C. Cir. 1950); In re Baum's Estate, 211 A.2d 521 (Pa. 1965).

Where a second will revoked a bequest to a hospital in a former will and a third will executed within 30 days of the testator's death made a new bequest, the gift in the third will was void under section 7c of the mortmain statute. In re Gearhart's Estate, 255 A.2d 557 (Pa. 1969).

The mortmain statute invoked. Methodist Hosp. v. Slack, 330 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1976). Miss. Code. Ann. 1972, § 91-5-31.

In New York, as the matter stands at this writing, the New York mortmain statute does not permit one to contest a charitable bequest unless he would receive a pecuniary benefit from a successful contest, either as a beneficiary under the will or as a distributee. Matter of Estate of Cairo, 312 N.Y.S.2d 925 (1970). Holding that provision of the District of Columbia invalidating a devise or bequest to clergyman and religious organization made within thirty days of the testator's death was invalid. Estate of French, 365 A.2d 621 (D.C. 1976).

(n126)Footnote 126. In re Jephcott's Estate, 251 P.2d 1001 (Cal. App. 1953) (prohibiting giving more than a designated portion of the testator's estate to charity); Booth v. Cureton, 81 So. 2d 662 (Fla. 1955) (gift within time prohibited by statute before death invalid); Decker v. American Univ., 20 N.W.2d 466 (Iowa 1945) (such statutes are constitutional).

Not more than one-third of estate can be given to charity by will made less than 30 days before death. Excess is void. Mont. Code Acts 1945, ch. 93. See Fla. Stat. Ann., § 731.19. Taylor v. Payne, 17 So. 2d 615 (Fla. 1944), 154 a.l.r. 677.

Objection by legatees to charitable gifts because of mortmain statute was defeated by in terrorem clause in will. In re Goyette's Estate, 66 Cal. Rptr. 103 (1968).

The California statute can be avoided by making the charity the residuary legatee and making the substitutionary residuary legatee a third party. Thus the excluded heirs cannot complain since they have no reversionary interest nor intestate rights. In re Davis' Estate, 168 P.2d 789 (Cal. App. 1946). See G. Stanley Joslin, Restrictions on the Testamentary Gift to Charities in California, 25 S. Cal. L. Rev. 419 (1952).

Relatives excluded from a will by a residuary gift to charity with a substitutionary gift over cannot complain of the invalidity of the charitable gift. In re Haines' Estate, 173 P.2d 693 (Cal. App. 1946).

For the mechanics of calculation of allowable amounts see In re Mayers' Will, 87 N.E.2d 422 (N.Y. 1949), 11 a.l.r.2d 1136, overruling In re Buck's Estate, 285 N.Y.S. 515 (1936); In re Miranda's Will, 271 N.Y.S. 913 (1934).

New York's mortmain statute protects nonresidents as well as residents. In re Halpern's Will, 368 N.Y.S.2d 845 (1975).

In Ohio, the gift is valid up to 25% at the execution of the will, and the former one-year period is reduced to six months, see § 2107.06 of the Ohio Revised Code (1965). See also Central Nat'l Bank v. Morris, 222 N.E.2d 674 (Ohio 1967).

Ohio has maintained its mortmain statute designed to protect only those who would take by intestacy and if the complainants were not heirs they could not evoke the statute against a charitable legatee. Central Nat'l Bank v. Morris, 227 N.E.2d 418 (Ohio App. 1967).

Idaho now permits a bequest to charity unlimited even within 30 days prior to death if $100,000 goes to testator's lineal descendants. Idaho Sess. Laws 1965, ch. 109.

See Richard W. Schwartz, The Ohio Mortmain Statute, as Amended, 17 Western Res. L. Rev. 83 (1965).

(n127)Footnote 127. Only surviving issue and parents of testator can raise mortmain issue. N.Y. Decedent Estate Law, § 17; N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law, § 5-3.3. Gifts to charity in excess of one half of estate can be challenged. In re Cairo's Estate, 312 N.Y.S.2d 925 (1970). Challenge must be made within six months except as to minors. In re Rockefeller's Estate, 314 N.Y.S.2d 101 (1970).

Charitable devises exceeding half of the testator's net estate are voidable. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law, § 5-3.3(a).

Where the mortmain statutes operate to protect a restricted group of relations only those within the stated confines of consanguinity can complain of the improper gift to charity. In re Randall's Estate, 194 P.2d 709 (Cal. App. 1948); In re Holyland's Will, 116 N.Y.S.2d 628 (1952) (cousins are not descendants who can object); State v. Naze, 53 N.W.2d 172 (Wis. 1952).

Only heirs can raise this objection. The statute, therefore, is rather one affecting pretermitted heirs than one of mortmain. In re Davison's Estate, 215 P.2d 504 (Cal. App. 1950).

Right to object to mortmain dies with person entitled. In re Coburn's Estate, 97 Cal. Rptr. 597 (1971).

Daughter not residuary legatee cannot raise mortmain. In re Shamela's Estate, 257 So. 2d 77 (Fla. App. 1972).

In New York, gifts to charity may not exceed one-half of gross estates less debts. In re Knowles' Estate, 239 N.Y.S.2d 285 (1963).

Heirs may waive statutory limitations on charitable devises since they are for the heirs' protection and are not the result of public policy. Deeds v. Deeds, 94 N.E.2d 232 (Ohio 1950).

Charitable trust invalid if two wills were executed within the statutory 30 days. In re Gearhart's Estate, 255 A.2d 557 (Pa. 1969); Pa. Stat. Ann., tit. 20, § 180.7.

See G. Stanley Joslin, Restrictions on Testamentary Gifts to Charities in California, 25 S. Cal. L. Rev. 419 (1952).

The right of issue to elect against an excessive charitable distribution is a limitation on the testator's personal right to devise. Estate of Willey, 380 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1976).

In New York an adopted child can invoke the mortmain statute. In re Lawrence's Will, 381 N.Y.S.2d 713 (1974).

To the effect that a child could not contest a charitable gift where the will clearly showed an intent to limit his bequest. Estate of Alexander, 395 N.Y.S.2d 598 (1977).

Pennsylvania's Mortmain Statute is unconstitutional as violating equal protection clause. In re Estate of Cavill, 329 A.2d 503 (Pa. 1974); In re Estate of Riley, 329 A.2d 511 (Pa. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 971 (1975).

Charitable bequests in wills must be executed at least 90 days before death and cannot carry more than one-third of the estate. Crosby v. Alton Ochsner Med. Found., 276 So. 2d 661 (Miss. 1973), 75 a.l.r.3d 853.

Held to the contrary unless decedent left a spouse or dependents. Hard v. First Nat'l Bank of Columbus, 133 S.E.2d 19 (Ga. 1963).

Gift held invalid under mortmain statute. Crosby v. Alton Ochsner Med. Found., 276 So. 2d 661 (Miss. 1973), 75 a.l.r.3d 853. Estate of French, 365 A.2d 621 (D.C. 1976).

Held in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments a statute invalidating gifts to religious bodies made within thirty days before death.

Under Missouri's mortmain statute, if land is devised to a charitable corporation and is not sold within ten years it reverts to the testator's heirs. Methodist Hosp. v. Slack, 330 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1976).

(n128)Footnote 128. Mississippi formerly had a mortmain statute which was repealed. Bell v. Mississippi Orphans Home, 5 So. 2d 214 (Miss. 1941). See Gardner v. McNeal, 82 A. 988 (Md. 1911), 40 l.r.a. (N.S.) 553.

Statutes restricting charitable bequests are subject to strict construction. In re Reardon's Estate, 52 Cal. Rptr. 68 (1966).

Avoiding the mortmain statute in the case of gift to the City of New York on the grounds that special welfare programs are a legitimate function and therefore New York is not a charitable corporation. In re Klitenik's Estate, 280 N.Y.S.2d 488 (1967).

Mortmain statute enforced. In re Norcross's Estate, 325 N.Y.S.2d 477 (1971).

Enforcing the Pennsylvania Mortmain Act. In re Gearhart's Estate, 255 A.2d 557 (Pa. 1969); In re Smith's Estate, 256 A.2d 130 (Pa. 1969).

Pennsylvania's mortmain statute has been declared unconstitutional. In re Riley's Estate, 329 A.2d 511 (Pa. 1974).

Under Mississippi mortmain statute land reverts to the grantor or heirs if not disposed of by the charity within ten years. Methodist Hosp. v. Slack, 330 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1976).

Pennsylvania's Mortmain Statute is unconstitutional as violating equal protection clause. Conel's Estate, 329 A.2d 503 (Pa. 1974). Riley's Estate, 329 A.2d 8111 (Pa. 1975), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 971 (1975).

Charitable bequests in wills must be executed at least 90 days before death and cannot carry more than one-third of the estate. Crosby v. Alton Ochsner Med. Found., 276 So. 2d 661 (Miss. 1973).

Held to the rule unless decedent left a spouse or dependents. Hard v. First Nat'l Bank of Columbus, 133 S.E.2d 19 (Ga. 1963).

(n129)Footnote 129. The California mortmain statute did not affect an Illinois testator, although testator left descendants in California. Dreyfus v. First Nat'l Bank of Chicago, 424 F.2d 1171 (7th. Cir. 1970).

Only the children can claim under a mortmain statute. In re Holtermann's Estate, 23 Cal. Rptr. 685 (1962).

Any one of the class of persons permitted by statute may raise the question of mortmain. In re Goyette's Estate, 92 Cal. Rptr. 62 (1971).

Mortmain statute held not applicable if will executed more than 90 days before testator's death. Hood v. First Nat'l Bank of Columbus, 133 S.E.2d 19 (Ga. 1963), and Wesley Mem. Hosp. v. Thomson, 139 S.E. 15 (Ga. 1927).

Mortmain statute as to gifts to charity if will made more than 90 days prior to death. Hood v. First Nat'l Bank, 133 S.E.2d 19 (Ga. 1963). Mortmain statutes may be looked to only by those adversely affected. In re Faber's Will, 141 N.W.2d 554 (Iowa 1966), so if only one of several heirs object only his share is augmented and then only proportionally.

Holding the mortmain statute which was applicable to "charities" did not apply to bequests to the sovereign (New York City) even though the sovereign is engaged in charitable activities. In re Klitenik's Estate, 280 N.Y.S.2d 488 (1967).

Strict construction of Mortmain Act. In re Lowe's Estate, 191 N.E.2d 196 (Ohio App. 1963).

Will provision, void for mortmain, passed by intestacy lacking a residuary legatee though heir was expressly disinherited under will. Balyeat v. Morris, 276 N.E.2d 258 (Ohio App. 1971).

Pennsylvania has declared its mortmain statute unconstitutional. In re Cavill's Estate, 329 A.2d 503 (Pa. 1974).

Cal. Prob. Code § 41, Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 273.090, and Michigan (see Hayden v. Hayden's Estate, 286 N.W. 150 (Mich. 1939)) have repealed their mortmain statutes.

Holding the Pennsylvania mortmain statute unconstitutional as violating the First Amendment "Due Process" clause. In re Estate of Riley, 329 A.2d 511 (Pa. 1974).

Georgia's mortmain statute prohibits gifts made within 90 days of estate of not more than one-third of the estate if wife and children survive. Ga. Code Ann. § 113-107; Baker v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 242 S.E.2d 39 (Ga. 1978).

Gift held invalid under mortmain statute. Crosby v. Alton Ochsner Med. Found., 276 So. 2d 661 (Miss. 1973), 75 a.l.r.3d 853.

In Mississippi the mortmain statute prohibits the charity from holding real property for more than ten years. Methodist Hosp. v. Slack, 330 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1976).

Gifts to charity may be contested by issue and parents who benefit when the gift is in excess of one half of the estate. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 5-3.3.

(n130)Footnote 130. In re Tone's Will, 174 N.Y.S. 391 (1919).

(n131)Footnote 131. 7 Edw. I.

(n132)Footnote 132. In re Davison's Estate, 215 P.2d 504 (Cal. App. 1950); Application of Franklin Nat'l Bank, 147 N.Y.S.2d 572 (1955); Ruple v. Hiram College, 171 N.E. 417 (Ohio App. 1928).

Pennsylvania's Mortmain Statute is unconstitutional as violating equal protection clause. In re Cavill's Estate, 9 A.2d 503 (Pa. 1974); In re Estate of Riley, 329 A.2d 511 (Pa. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 971 (1975).

(n133)Footnote 133. In re Will of Halpern, 368 N.Y.S.2d 845 (1975).

New York's mortmain statute is not applicable unless there are children who would be entitled to take were not for the bequest. In re Eckart's Estate, 382 N.Y.S.2d 429 (1976).

In re Eckart's Estate, 368 N.Y.S.2d 28 (1975); Contin Master of Cairo, 312 N.Y.S.2d 925 (1970), aff'd, 272 N.E.2d 574 (N.Y. 1971).

(n134)Footnote 134. In re Thomason's Estate, 54 Cal. Rptr. 229 (1966).

New York's mortmain statute is not applicable unless there are children who would be entitled to take if it were not for the bequest. In re Eckart's Estate, 382 N.Y.S.2d 429 (1976).

(n135)Footnote 135. Strother v. Kennedy, 127 S.E.2d 19 (Ga. 1962).

Some states have statutes limiting the amount of realty a church may own. See Goode's Admr. v. Goode, 38 S.W.2d 691 (Ky. 1931); Buchanan v. Willis, 255 S.W.2d 8 (Tenn. 1953).

(n136)Footnote 136. Such charitable requests are voidable rather than void. In re Lane's Estate, 186 So. 2d 257 (Fla. 1966).

(n137)Footnote 137. See Richard Schwartz, The Ohio Mortmain Statute as Amended, 17 Western Res. L. Rev. 83 (1965).

A charitable request is invalidated in mortmain only if the heirs will benefit thereby. Central Nat'l Bank v. Morris, 227 N.E.2d 418 (Ohio App. 1967).

(n138)Footnote 138. Gifts to charity where testator dies within six months after will is made "lapse." In re Lane's Estate, 186 So. 2d 257 (Fla. 1966).

(n139)Footnote 139. But it has been said that statutes restricting charitable bequests are not those of mortmain but are designed to protect those who have a better claim to the testator's bounty. In re Reardon's Estate, 52 Cal. Rptr. 68 (1966).

(n140)Footnote 140. Estate of French, 365 A.2d 621 (D.C. 1976), as violating the U.S. Constitution, Amendments 1 and 5.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.03

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.03 Interests That Are Subject to the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting

[Go To Supp]

§ 28.03(a) Contingent Interests

The rule against remoteness of vesting applies basically to contingent interests. n141 Vested interests are not subject to the rule. n142 There are, however, exceptions on both scores. Technically rights of re-entry and possibilities of reverter n143 are contingent not vested yet neither are subject to the rule against remoteness, n144 probably for historical reasons. Reversions are not subject to the rule. n145

Thus, where a grant of land provided that the title should revert to the grantor if the land should be used for any purpose other than those stipulated, it was held not void as a restraint on alienation in violation of the statute against perpetuities, since the land was alienable so long as it was used for the purpose designated. n146

Where a title free of the condition can be treated at any time by all the persons interested joining in a deed, there is no violation of the rule against perpetuities. n147 The right or possibility of reverter upon the determination of a qualified fee is governed by the same rule in regard to remoteness as the right of reverter upon a condition subsequent and is not void on that account. n148 Restraints of forfeitures in preemptive rights are generally subject to the rule against restraints. n149 Whether estates upon condition are subject to the rule against perpetuities, so that if the condition is perpetual and the conditional estate may not arise or vest until after the period limited by that rule, it is void, or whether it would then vest in the grantor the grantor's heir or the grantor's devisee, is a question which must be considered as unsettled. n150

Remoteness has no application to vested estates or interests or such as begin within the period limited by the rule, no matter how long they may continue, but there are cases holding that the particular as well as the contingent devise is void where the contingency is or may be postponed beyond the limitation of the rule n151 and some authorities hold that a vested limitation is void if it follows a void contingent limitation. So under the old two lives in being rule in New York in a gift to A for life then to B for life then to C for life then to the children of D for their lives then to E, the gift to E would be void though a vested remainder. n152

At common law, contingent remainders being destructible were not subject to the rule.

Executory devises are subject to the rule, n153 as now are contingent remainders in some states. n154

Those cases which recognize limitations vested subject to divesting, i.e., where the condition is subsequent as distinguished from contingent interests where the condition is precedent n155 do not apply the rule to such interests merely because the interest may be divested at a period later than that allowed if it vested prior thereto. A clause providing that at the death of the first life tenant the income shall be given to the living children of the first taker and the widow of any child is violative of the statute, since there might be no widow of a child until more than twenty-one years after the death of the first taker. n156

A devise to the testator's children of an undivided interest in a life estate, with remainder in fee limited on each of the interests to the respective surviving issue of each life tenant, and, in default of such issue, over in fee to the testator's surviving children, constituted contingent remainders, and hence constituted a valid suspension of alienation. n157 Generally, the rule is applicable alike to all future interests in real property which are not vested. n158 Under some statutes the rule is made applicable to real estate only, n159 while in others it is applicable to both real and personal property. n160 Future estates to be valid must generally be so limited that in every possible contingency they will terminate within the period prescribed by statute. n161 All future equitable interests in realty are subject to the rule. n162

Under one rule if a class gift is too remote as to some members it is too remote as to all. n163

It was held that where the contingent reversion was to the "farm" rather than to the grantors, their heirs or assigns, the vesting of the reversion was indefinitely suspended, because it was not known who would or might own the farm when the contingency happened. n164

It is not necessary that an interest be certain to vest within the period of the rule, only that it vest, if at all, within that time. n165

§ 28.03(b) Powers of Appointment

The courts have had considerable difficulty in applying the rule to powers of appointment. Definitely the rule also applies to powers. n166 "In powers, questions of remoteness are governed by three rules. 1. If a power can be exercised at a time beyond the limits of the rule against perpetuities, it is bad. 2. A power which cannot be exercised beyond the limits of the rule against perpetuities is not rendered bad by the fact that within its terms an appointment could be made which would be too remote. 3. The remoteness of an appointment depends on its distance from the creation and not from the exercise of the power. The first two rules relate to the creation of powers, the third to their execution." n167

The authorities disagree as to whether a general power to appoint under a will dates from the time of the creation of the power or the time of its exercise. n168 If the donee of the power may not be ascertained within the period of the rule he might not exercise it within the time and the gift of the power is void. n169 If, looked at as of the date of its creation, a power of appointment may not be exercised within the time of the rule it is void, n170 unless it is a general power of appointment where the rule is that the time is counted from the execution of the power not from the date of the instrument creating it. n171 The validity of a special power of appointment dates from the time of its creation, n172 so that if the appointment is ultimately made in such a manner that it would go to someone not in being at the time of creation or twenty-one years thereafter it is void. n173 But if it is so ultimately exercised that it will go within the time set by the rule it is valid. n174 Under the majority rule the period of the rule is calculated from the creation of a general testamentary power of appointment not from the time of its exercise. n175

Under the minority view a general testamentary power of appointment operates as a general power to appoint by will or deed so that the period of the rule begins to run from the date the power is exercised, not the effective date of the trust. n176

The time for testing the validity of limitations made under a general power of appointment is the date of the exercise of the power as though the donee had a fee, not the date of the creation of the power. n177 "If there will always be a tenant with power to alien the fee the future interests are not void no matter how remotely they might vest; if there might come to be a tenant without power to alien the fee because of the future interests, they are void if too remote." n178

§ 28.03(c) Class Gifts

Under the English rule where there is a gift to a class and there is any possibility that any member of the class might not take within the allowable time, the gift is void in toto. n179 But some cases will divide the gift if possible into subclasses and save those which do not violate the rule. n180 Where the gift over is limited on two contingencies one of which is good and the other bad the leading rule has been held to void the gift over. n181 A gift to a class that will not be ascertained until a time too remote is bad even though there are members of the class in existence at the time of the gift who might reach the required age within the time, for they might die before that time. n182 Where a devise is given to a class of persons answering a given description, and any member of that class may possibly have to be ascertained at a period exceeding the limits allowed by law, and is therefore incapable of taking, the whole devise is void. n183

In order for a class gift not to violate the rule against remoteness the entire class as a unit must both close within the period of the rule and also the interest of the members of the class must vest within that time. n184 Even if the class will be ascertained within the period of the rule the gift is void if it will not vest in the class within the allotted time as a gift to A as long as the oak tree stands and then to the children of B. n185 Where a trust is subject to revocation or diminution by the settlor the cases are not in harmony as to whether the time begins to run on the effective date of the trust n186 or on the settlor's death. n187

Even if a gift to one class in a group of classes is void this does not void the gifts to the other classes. n188

The courts have exercised extraordinary control over trusts to avoid the rule. n189 The question of the violation of the rule against remoteness may justify terminating a trust. n190

§ 28.03(d) Miscellaneous Interests

An interest may be in violation of the rule if it affects a property right and still be valid as a contract. n191

There is some authority to the effect that the rule does not only apply to wills and deeds but applies also to contracts. n192

A covenant not to sue, not being an interest in land, was not subject to the rule against perpetuities. n193

The leading rule is that the transfer of an obligation under contract which does not create property rights is subject to the rule even though the contract which creates the obligation is not. n194 Where a class gift remains open to let in afterborn persons so that the rule may be violated the entire class gift fails n195 unless the interests of those born within the appointed time will vest.

Other courts do not, however, apply the rule except as to devises and grants, n196 but the decisions are in conflict as to whether the rule against remoteness applies to contingent executory interests which arise out of contract. n197

A right given under a pipeline contract to permit additional pipelines to be laid at a future date did not violate the rule against remoteness of vesting. The rule is concerned with the time in which title vests not mere postponement of enjoyment of possession. n198

An option violates the rule against remoteness of vesting where the parties had intended to exercise the option, if at all, only on the current contingency and that there was a possibility that the contingency might not occur within lives in being plus twenty-one years. n199

So while there are authorities holding that options to purchase contained in leases are void if they may be exercised later than the allotted period n200 to the rule. n201 Land purchase contracts have been held outside the rule on the theory that to be enforceable they must be acted upon within a reasonable time. n202 The validity of the option is measured by the twenty-one years in gross. n203 And the leaseholds are subject to the rule. n204

The later English cases n205 hold that a right of re-entry after condition broken is subject to the rule but that a possibility of reverter is not. n206 An executory limitation after a fee tail was valid since it could be destroyed by a common recovery whereas an executory limitation on a fee simple could not be. n207 A power to appoint by will is to be tested for remoteness as of the time of the creation of the power not the exercise thereof by the donee. n208

A trust in a will to benefit the education of an indefinite number of children was held not to be a charitable trust, and so violated the rule against perpetuities. n209 There is disagreement among the courts as to the extent options to buy are affected by the rule against remoteness. n210

Leaseholds are subject to the rule. n211 The rule against remoteness has no application to a lease for an indefinite term immediately effective. n212

While rights of re-entry have been generally free from the rule there has been some contrary authority where the rights are attached to preemptive rights with a condition subsequent. n213

It is held that in the absence of a statute, a right to perpetual renewal of leases is not prohibited by law as creating a perpetuity or a restraint on alienation. n214

There is disagreement among the courts as to whether preemptive rights to purchase may violate the rule against remoteness. n215

Options to purchase not contained in leases have been held to be within the rule. n216 One line of cases holds that an option to renew a lease is not within the rule against remoteness. n217 But there is substantial authority to the contrary. n218 While bare options are subject to the rule against remoteness, an option to purchase as part of a long-term lease of land for exercise of mining rights is a presently vested part of the mineral estate conveyed under the lease and is not subject to the rule. n219 The rule against remoteness is not applicable to covenants creating equitable servitudes as to use. n220 Nor is a covenant against use for a particular purpose. n221

Mortgages are not subject to the rule. n222 The rule has no application to contracts that do not create future interests in personalty. n223 Options without time limit to purchase mineral interests are valid. n224 The rule has been held to apply to cases where trusts have been created. n225 A power of trust of mortgage property was not a restraint on alienation. n226

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: rule w/5 remoteness w/2 vesting w/30 interest! w/2 leasehold or contingent

The rule against remoteness applies to equitable interests and estates as well as legal interests and estates. n227

Conveyance of mineral interests contingent upon the discovery of minerals are subject to the rule, n228 but covenants in deeds are not so subject. n229

The rule has been held applicable to easements. n230

An equitable interest that can be enforced by specific performance is, unlike a mere contract right, subject to the rule against remoteness. n231

The rule against remoteness does not apply to a mere usufruct. n232

A grant of an easement is subject to the rule if it is in futuro, not immediately vested and may not vest within the period of the rule. n233

The rule against remoteness has been held inapplicable to "no term" oil and gas leases. n234 A preemptive right without limit as a property right was held an unreasonable restraint on alienation and violated the rule against perpetuities. n235 The rule against perpetuities applies only to estates which are limited to vest on the happening of a contingency. n236 The rule applies to an executory interest or estate, being an interest to take effect on the happening of a future contingency. Where the limitation tends to create a perpetuity it is void. n237 To constitute a valid executory limitation, the estate must be limited to vest in possession within the period prescribed by the rule. n238 The executory interest is void for remoteness if at its creation there exists a possibility that it may not take effect during any fixed number of now existing lives, nor within twenty-one years and ten months after the expiration of such lives, even though it is highly probable, or, indeed, almost certain that it will take effect within the time prescribed. n239 In the application of the rule, twenty-one years are allowed independently of any person's actual minority, but the ten months are allowed only when there is a child en ventre sa mere. n240

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 141. Sands v. Fly, 292 S.W.2d 706 (Tenn. 1956), 57 a.l.r.2d 188; In re Ashforth, L.R., 1 Ch. 535 (1905) (rule applies to contingent remainders legal as well as equitable if they are too remote, but not to contingent remainders after fee tails since the fee tail could be destroyed by a fine or common recovery by the tenant).

Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960) (violating rule).

See Robert J. Lynn & John W. VanDoren, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Remainders and Executory Interests: Orthodox Doctrine and Modern Cases, 27 U. Chi. L. Rev. 436 (1960).

See Marc Moller, The Condominium Confronts the Rule Against Perpetuities, 10 N.Y. L.F. 377 (1964).

A savings clause which attempted to rewrite the rule so that it would be actuated only upon the happening of an event which made remoteness an inevitability did not save the remainder interest. Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977).

It was indicated in Estate of Unitt, 250 N.W.2d 644 (Neb. 1977), that a contingent remainder is subject to the rule.

(n2)Footnote 142. Haggerty v. Oakland, 326 P.2d 957 (Cal. App. 1963), 66 a.l.r.2d 718 (dictum); Johnson v. Pittsburgh Consol. Coal Co., 311 S.W.2d 537 (Ky. 1958).

A presently vested easement subject to expansion on certain contingencies did not violate the rule against perpetuities. Traywick v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 170 So. 2d 802 (Ala. 1965).

Remainder vested subject to divesting is not subject to rule. Second Nat'l Bank of New Haven v. Harris Trust & Sav.

Bank, 283 A.2d 226 (Conn. 1971).

Vested interests not subject to rule. Second Nat'l Bank of New Haven v. Harris Trust & Sav. Bank, 283 A.2d 226 (Conn. Super. 1971).

Fidelity Union Trust Co. v. Egenolf Day Nursery Ass'n, 166 A.2d 402 (N.J. Super. 1960) (rule is directed solely against too-long postponement of vesting, not enjoyment).

Postponement of possession is not affected. McEwen v. Enoch, 204 P.2d 736 (1949); Forbringer v. Romano, 76 A.2d 825 (N.J. Super. 1950); McQueen v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 68 S.E.2d 831 (N.C. 1952).

A limitation to W, X and Y for life and on their death to be divided among the children of X and Y when they reached 25, vested in each child at the testator's death subject to opening up to admit afterborn persons until the death of X and Y and so did not violate the rule. "When" held not to be a word of contingency. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Taylor, 120 S.E.2d 588 (N.C. 1961).

In a testamentary trust for 30 years, the principal at the end of that time was to be distributed equally to the testator's five children and in the event of the death of any of the children, then to their children, and if they left no children, then to other residuaries, was held not to violate the rule against remoteness because the interest was vested subject to divesting and the limitations over were to the other children. Finkbeiner v. Finkbeiner, 165 N.E.2d 825 (Ohio App. 1959).

Trust for children's lives is valid as not too remote. Pipkin v. Pipkin, 370 P.2d 826 (Okla. 1962).

Where a testator gives a present gift of income from specific property with the principal to be given over at a future time to the same taker, even where there is a possibility of divestment of either the income or principal prior to the time the principal is to be turned over, the taker takes immediate vested income which is in the principal not subject to the rule against remoteness. In re Mikaloff's Estate, 160 A.2d 703 (Pa. 1960).

If all interests vest within the allotted period the trust may continue beyond lives in being and 21 years. Black v. Gettys, 119 S.E.2d 660 (S.C. 1961).

Not necessary that interest vest in possession within period. Anderson v. Anderson, 386 P.2d 406 (Utah 1963); Snyder Bros., Inc. v. Peoples Natural Gas Co., 676 A.2d 1226 (Pa. 1996) (rule against perpetuities did not apply to fee simple determinable interest granted to lessee, because that interest was already vested); Hubscher & Son v. Storey, 578 N.W.2d 701 (Mich. App. 1998) (profit a prendre, a vested interest, is not subject to the rule against perpetuities).

Condominiums are exempt from the rule against remoteness, 34 Wyo. Stat. 389.10.

(n3)Footnote 143. Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co., 100 U.S. 55 (1879); Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897); Dozier v. Troy Drive-In Theatres, 89 So. 2d 537 (Ala. 1956); Strong v. Shatto, 187 P. 159 (Cal. App. 1919); Wakefield v. Van Tassell, 66 N.E. 830 (Ill. 1903), 65 l.r.a. 511; Congregational Church Bldg. Soc'y v. Everett, 36 A. 654 (Md. 1897), 35 l.r.a. 693; Tobey v. Moore, 130 Mass. 448 (1881).

See Possibility of Reverter and the Rule Against Perpetuities in Kentucky, 46 Ky. L.J. 124 (1957); Knowles v. South County Hosp., 140 A.2d 499, 141 A.2d 263 (R.I. 1958) (will gave limitation over to life tenant's eldest male heir, dependent upon specific conditions with reversion on breach and then devised the reversion); Hunt v. Carroll, 157 S.W.2d 429 (Tex. Civ. App. 1941) (an executory interest can vest in interest prior to vesting in possession).

The rule is directed solely against the unlawful postponement of vesting and is not applicable to possession or enjoyment. Forbringer v. Romano, 71 A.2d 660 (N.J. Super. 1950); Finch v. Honeycutt, 97 S.E.2d 478 (N.C. 1957).

Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897); French v. Old South Soc'y, 106 Mass. 479 (1871); Tobey v. Moore, 130 Mass. 448 (1881); First Universalist Soc'y v. Boland, 29 N.E. 524 (Mass. 1892), 15 l.r.a. 231. See Hinton v. Gilbert, 128 So. 604 (Ala. 1930), 70 a.l.r. 1192.

Accord: Restatement, Property, § 14, Comment b.

In Fletcher v. Ferrill, 227 S.W.2d 448 (Ark. 1950), 16 a.l.r.2d 1240, there was reversion to grantor's heirs after life estate and remainder to orphan's home. The court held that this was a possibility of reverter to grantor, and so words of limitation thus passed under residuary clause, and so not under rule against perpetuities as intestate; even if "heirs" were words of purchase, and void under rule of perpetuities, it would go under residuary clause.

Limitation over after determinable fee invalid but possibilities of reverter are valid. City of Klamath Falls v. Bell, 490 P.2d 515 (Or. App. 1971). Snyder Bros., Inc. v. Peoples Natural Gas Co., 676 A.2d 1226 (Pa. 1996) (rule against perpetuities did not apply to fee simple determinable interest granted to lessee, because that interest was already vested); Hubscher & Son v. Storey, 578 N.W.2d 701 (Mich. App. 1998) (profit a prendre, a vested interest, is not subject to the rule against perpetuities).

(n4)Footnote 144. Tobey v. Moore, 130 Mass. 448 (1881).

Rights of re-entry: Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co., 100 U.S. 55 (1879); Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922); Strong v. Shatto, 187 P. 159 (Cal. App. 1919); City Nat'l Bank v. Bridgeport, 147 A. 181 (Conn. 1929); Gray v. Chicago, M. & St. P.R. Co., 59 N.E. 950 (Ill. 1901); Wakefield v. Van Tassell, 66 N.E. 830 (Ill. 1903), 65 l.r.a. 511; French v. Old South Soc'y, 106 Mass. 479 (1871); Koehler v. Rowland, 205 S.W. 217 (Mo. 1918), 9 a.l.r. 107.

Possibilities of reverter: North v. Graham, 85 N.E. 267 (Ill. 1908), 18 l.r.a. (N.S.) 624; First Universalist Soc'y v. Boland, 29 N.E. 524 (Mass. 1892), 15 l.r.a. 231; Institution for Sav. v. Roxbury Home for Aged Women, 139 N.E. 301 (Mass. 1923); Lougheed v. Dykeman Baptist Church & Soc'y, 40 N.Y.S. 586 (1896); Pennsylvania Horticultural Soc'y v. Craig, 87 A. 678 (Pa. 1913); Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 269 S.W. 36 (Tenn. 1925); Huggett v. Dep't of Natural Resources, No. 195548 (Mich. App. 1998) (LEXIS 280) (court notes that rights of reentry are not subject to the rule against perpetuities).

Right of re-entry held to violate rule. Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 269 S.W. 36 (Tenn. 1925).

(n5)Footnote 145. Erskine v. Klein, 126 S.E.2d 755 (Ga. 1962).

But see In re Dees' Estate, 308 P.2d 90 (Kan. 1957) (reversion over to testator's heirs if devisee or heirs should ever sell or mortgage held void for remoteness).

(n6)Footnote 146. Fayette County Bd. of Educ. v. Bryan, 91 S.W.2d 990 (Ky. 1936).

The possibility of reverter, being a vested interest in real property, is capable at all times of being released to the person holding the estate on condition, or his grantee, and, if so released, vests an absolute and indefeasible title thereto. The grant or devise of a fee on condition does not, therefore, fetter and tie up estates so as to prevent their alienation, and thus contravene the policy of the law, which aims to secure the free and unembarrassed disposition of real property. It is otherwise with gifts of estates in fee, with limitations over upon a condition or event of an uncertain or indeterminate nature. The limitation over, being executory and depending upon a condition, or an event which may never happen, passes no vested interest or estate. It is impossible to ascertain in whom the ultimate right to the estate may vest, or whether it will ever vest at all, and therefore no conveyance or mode of alienation can pass an absolute title, because it is wholly uncertain in whom the estate will vest on the happening of the event or breach of the condition upon which the ulterior gift is to take effect. Church in Brattle Square v. Grant, 69 Mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855), 63 am. dec. 725, per Bigelow, J.

(n7)Footnote 147. Ingersoll Eng'g & Constr. Co. v. Crocker, 228 F. 844 (6th Cir., 1915).

Customary and Expandable Easements: Applicability of the Rule Against Perpetuity, and Jardins, Mortmain Statutes: Questions of Constitutionality, 52 Notre Dame Lawyer 638 (1977).

(n8)Footnote 148. First Universalist Soc'y v. Boland, 29 N.E. 524 (Mass. 1892), 15 l.r.a. 231, Allen, J., said: "The very many cases cited in Gray, Prop., §§ 305-312, show conclusively that the general understanding of courts and of the profession in America has been that the rule as to remoteness does not apply, though the learned author thinks this view erroneous in principle"; Jones v. Burns, 74 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1954) (reservation to grantor or his heirs is not within the rule).

(n9)Footnote 149. Applicable if restraint is reasonable. Missouri State Hwy. Comm'n v. Stone, 311 S.W.2d 588 (Mo. App. 1958).

Applicable, Cook v. Cook, 171 S.E.2d 508 (Ga. 1969); Hardy v. Galloway, 15 S.E. 890 (N.C. 1892).

(n10)Footnote 150. F.C. Loring, Conditions, Estates upon, 1 Am. L. Rev. 265. church in brattle square v. Grant, 69 mass. 142 (3 Gray 1855), 63 Am. Dec. 725 (conditional limitation).

See Joseph B. Sherrard, Perpetuities In Michigan Today, Mich. Bar. J., March 1950, p. 5.

(n11)Footnote 151. Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897) (a resulting trust is not within rule); Shoemaker v. Newman, 65 F.2d 208 (D.C. Cir. 1933); McKibben v. Pioneer Trust & Sav. Bank, 6 N.E.2d 619 (Ill. 1937); Barnum v. Barnum, 90 Am. Dec. 88 (Md. 1866); Deford v. Deford, 36 Md. 168 (1872); Hollander v. Central Metal & Supply Co., 71 A. 442 (Md. 1908), 23 l.r.a. (N.S.) 1135; Thorndike v. Loring, 81 Mass. 391 (15 Gray 1860); Fosdick v. Fosdick, 88 Mass. 41 (6 Allen 1863); In re Friday's Estate, 170 A. 123 (Pa. 1933), 91 a.l.r. 766.

See Harold C. Woerner, The Rule Against Perpetuities, 21 Tenn. L. Rev. 641 (1951).

Direction of payment at the age of 35 was held as not postponing vesting so as to violate the rule against perpetuities. Zimmerman v. First Nat'l Bank of Birmingham, 348 So. 2d 1359 (Ala. 1977).

(n12)Footnote 152. Supra, n.1. See also In re Mortimer 2 ch. 502 (1905).

(n13)Footnote 153. Hancock v. Watson, L.R. 27, App. Cas. 14.

Executory devise valid if vests within the rule. Erickson v. Palmer, 315 P.2d 164 (Or. 1957).

A fund to be divided among those then living when the youngest grandchild became 25 was void. The contingent remainder was regarded as too remote. Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust, 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977).

(n14)Footnote 154. Barry v. Newton, 273 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1954).

See Robert J. Lynn & John W. Van Doren, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Remainders and Executory Interests: Orthodox Doctrine and Modern Cases, 27 U. Chi. L. Rev. 436 (1960). Hamman v. Bright & Co., 924 S.W.2d 168 (Tex. 1996) (executory interest which cannot vest until condition precedent occurs is subject to rule against perpetuities).

(n15)Footnote 155. For a discussion of vested subject to divesting, see § 1988.

Dean v. First Nat'l Bank, 341 P.2d 512 (Or. 1959).

If there is a present gift of income to one to whom the principal is to be distributed later, though either may be divested, the gift is vested subject to being divested and, therefore, not too remote. In re Mikaloff's Estate, 160 A.2d 703 (Pa. 1960).

(n16)Footnote 156. Tichenor v. Mechanics & Metals Nat'l Bank, 125 A. 323 (N.J. Eq. 1924).

Limitation over the children or the survivors of them was made when the youngest of seven children living at the testatrix' death attained 21 was also void under the old New York rule. In re Brennan's Will, 273 N.Y.S.2d 378 (1966).

(n17)Footnote 157. Waldon v. Baker, 88 P.2d 352 (Okla. 1939).

Devise in trust for sons and son's issue born 20 years after son's death was held to be too remote where contingent. Thomas v. Harrison, 191 N.E.2d 862 (Ohio 1962).

(n18)Footnote 158. Warner & Swasey Co. v. Rusterholz, 41 F. Supp. 498 (D. Minn. 1941); Reimer v. Smith, 142 So. 603 (Fla. 1932); Ashmore v. Newman, 183 N.E. 1 (Ill. 1932); Andrews v. Lincoln, 50 A. 898 (Me. 1901), 56 l.r.a. 103; Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Ireland, 167 N.E. 261 (Mass. 1929), 64 a.l.r. 1071; In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898); Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914); Kennedy v. McMullen, 39 S.W.2d 168 (Tex. Civ. App. 1931).

A limitation over after a determinable fee is void for remoteness and when the fee terminates the property returns to the heirs of the grantor. The Rule is one of law, not of construction. Shipton v. Sheridan, 531 S.W.2d 291 (Mo. App. 1975).

(n19)Footnote 159. Becker v. Chester, 91 N.W. 87, 650 (Wis. 1902).

It was indicated in Estate of Unitt, 250 N.W.2d 644 (Neb. 1977), that a contingent remainder is subject to the rule.

A trust to be distributed at the end of 25 years to heirs of three named persons was held to be too remote. Palmer v. Ketner, 223 S.E.2d 913 (S.C. App. 1976).

The rule affects contingent remainders. Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977). Forbidding alienation until youngest grandchild reached 25 was too remote.

The rule against perpetuities applies to real property and has no application to personal contracts which do not create or transfer any future equitable right in property. W. D. Nelson & Co. v. Taylor Heights Dev. Corp., 150 S.E.2d 142 (Va. 1966).

(n20)Footnote 160. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Bassett, 85 S.W.2d 569 (Mo. 1935), 101 a.l.r. 1266.

Forbringer v. Romano, 71 A.2d 660 (N.J. Super. 1950) (a gift of remainder to grandchildren of the testator vested subject to opening up and did not violate the rule).

In a gift to a class remainder with provision that if anyone should die without children surviving, his or her share should go to the survivors, the devise of the remainder in the alternative vested subject to opening and not subject to rule against remoteness. Sands v. Fly, 292 S.W.2d 706 (Tenn. 1956), 57 a.l.r.2d 188.

The rule has nothing to do with duration of vested interests. Anderson v. Anderson, 386 P.2d 406 (Utah 1963).

(n21)Footnote 161. In re Von Deilen's Will, 278 N.Y.S. 689 (1935).

(n22)Footnote 162. Bigelow v. Cady, 48 N.E. 974 (Ill. 1897); Beverlin v. First Nat'l Bank, 98 P.2d 200 (Kan. 1940), 155 a.l.r. 688; Shepperd v. Fisher, 103 S.W. 989 (Mo. 1907); Hartson v. Elden, 26 A. 561 (N.J. Eq. 1893); In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960) (limitation over after a determinable fee void for remoteness).

But under the common law rule, successive life estates if all are in being do not violate the rule. Pixlee v. Petty, 274 S.W.2d 257 (Mo. 1955).

(n23)Footnote 163. See American Secur. & Trust Co. v. Cramer, 175 F. Supp. 367 (D.D.C. 1959); Parker v. Parker, 113 S.E.2d 899 (N.C. 1960).

All or nothing rule of class gifts as respects remoteness does not prevail in Mississippi. Carter v. Berry, 140 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1962).

(n24)Footnote 164. McGaughey v. Spencer County Board of Educ., 149 S.W.2d 519 (Ky. 1941).

(n25)Footnote 165. Where agreement of lease provided that the lessor leased and demised to the tenant, the tenant had a present right to possession at a future time and so not subject to the rule. Isen v. Giant Food, Inc., 295 F.2d 136 (D.C. Cir. 1961).

(n26)Footnote 166. In re Trotter's Estate, 23 N.Y.S.2d 1007 (N.Y. 1940); In re Bearns' Estate, 23 N.Y.S.2d 1006 (N.Y. 1939); Harston v. Elden, 26 A. 561 (N.J. Eq.) (a power which may not be exercised within the rule is void); Burlington County Trust Co. v. DiCastelcicala, 66 A.2d 164 (N.J. 1949); Moskowitz v. Federman, 51 N.E.2d 48 (Ohio App. 1943); In re Mifflin's Appeal, 15 A. 525 (Pa.), 1; In re Warren's Estate, 182 A. 396 (Pa. 1936), 104 a.l.r. 1345.

See John Chipman Gray, General Powers and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 26 Harv. L. Rev. 720; Albert Martin Kales, General Powers and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 26 Harv. L. Rev. 64 (1912); J.L. Thorndike, General Powers and Perpetuities, 27 Harv. L. Rev. 705 (1914).

In the case where general testamentary powers of appointment held that as respects the rule against remoteness of vesting the period begins from the date of donee's death. Industrial Nat'l Bank v. Barrett, 220 A.2d 517 (R.I. 1966) (minority rule).

See Lawrence Berger, General Power of Appointment as an Interest in Property, 40 Neb. L. Rev. 104 (1960); Lawrence M. Jones, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Powers of Appointment: An Old Controversy Revived, 54 Iowa L. Rev. 456 (1968).

(n27)Footnote 167. Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (96 Mass.) 539 (1867). See Bishop v. Bishop, 177 N.E. 302 (N.Y. 1931); In re Carvalho's Will, 57 N.Y.S.2d 311 (N.Y. 1944).

In Easton v. Hall, 154 N.E. 216 (Ill. 1926), a trustee of the rest and residue of an estate was created to pay annuities to two sons of testatrix and their "widows" if any survive the sons. The corpus was given over to persons ascertainable only on the death of all the annuitants. One son predeceased testatrix. The other son, Charles, was 59 when testatrix died, and was then married to his second wife, who was some 15 years younger than himself. Because of the possibility that Charles might marry again, and die survived by this woman as his widow, and that such "widow" might not have been yet born when testatrix died, the gift over as to the corpus was wholly invalid. Accord: Overby v. Scarborough, 90 S.E. 67 (Ga. 1916).

In Murphey v. Brown, 62 N.E. 275 (Ind. 1901), testator's will gave legacies on conditions which would have violated the rule against perpetuities if he had forthwith died. All these legatees predeceased testator. The gift of the residue of the estate was good.

In Bailey v. Bailey, 97 N.Y. 460 (=hr2), a testator created a trust to apply rents and profits for three lives. The widow, one of the three lives, renounced her rights under the will and claimed dower. The trust for the duration of the other two lives was sustained. Cf., People's Trust Co. v. Flynn, 80 N.E. 1098 (N.Y. 1907).

> In powers, questions of remoteness are governed by three rules. 1. If a power can be exercised at a time beyond the limits of the rule against perpetuities, it is bad. 2. A power which cannot be exercised beyond the limits of the rule against perpetuities is not rendered bad by the fact that within its terms an appointment could be made which would be too remote. 3. The remoteness of an appointment depends on its distance from the creation and not from the exercise of the power. The first two rules relate to the creation of powers, the third rule to their execution.

Gray, supra, n.1 p. 397.

> A power given to the unborn child of a living person is void; that is, if it is a power to be exercised by will only, or a special power to be exercised by deed.

Gray, supra, n.1 § 477, p. 400. Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Scott, 189 A. 653 (N.J. Eq. 1937), 110 a.l.r. 1442.

See W. Barton Leach, Powers of Sale in Trustees and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 47 Harv. L. Rev. 948 (1934).

Limitation to charity over after gift to individuals held too remote. Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960).

A gift for a private mausoleum is within the rule against remoteness. Eaton v. Miller, 250 A.2d 220 (Me. 1969).

> The period of time during which an interest is destructible, pursuant to the uncontrolled volition, and for the exclusive personal benefit of the person having such a power of destruction is not included in determining whether the limitation is invalid under the rule against perpetuities.

Restatement, Property, § 373, quoted in Ryan v. Ward, 64 A.2d 258 (Md. 1949), 7 a.l.r.2d 1079.

If the donor of the power has the power to revoke the trust the rule against remoteness does not begin to operate until the estates become indestructible. Fitzpatrick v. Mercantile-Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 155 A.2d 702 (Md. 1959).

Held that the period of remoteness begins to run from the date of execution of a testamentary power of appointment given to a life tenant, where the donee had the power to appoint a new trustee or to revoke the trust upon happening of a contingency. Fitzpatrick v. Mercantile-Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 155 A.2d 702 (Md. 1959), 20 Md. L. Rev. 142.

Gift of remainder to such issue of life tenant as I may hereafter appoint was valid though no appointment thereafter made, all taking equally in default of appointment. In re Fabbri's Will, 140 N.E.2d 269 (N.Y. 1957).

A special power of appointment is too remote if it may be exercised at any time too late measured from the time of creation of the power. Thomas v. Harrison, 191 N.E.2d 862 (Ohio 1962).

Appointee's right vested upon the date of execution of the testamentary power of appointment. Dean v. First Nat'l Bank, 341 P.2d 512 (Or. 1959).

Finding that one to life remainder to another was valid. It was unsuccessfully argued that this was a dangerous "perpetuity." Child v. Baylie, Cro. Jac. 459, 79 Eng. Rep. 393.

(n28)Footnote 168. From time of creation. Equitable Trust Co. v. Snader, 151 A. 712 (Del. 1930); Reed v. McIlvain, 77 A. 329 (Md. 1910); Gambrill v. Gambrill, 89 A. 1094 (Md. 1914); Minot v. Paine, 120 N.E. 167 (Mass. 1918), 1 a.l.r. 365; Cox v. Dickson, 100 A. 947 (Pa. 1917); Crolius v. Kramer, 123 A. 808 (Pa. 1924).

Contra, Miller v. Douglass, 213 N.W. 320 (Wis. 1927).

Power of appointment to make distribution of a testamentary trust on death of life tenant did not violate the rule. In re Stewart's Estate, 242 So. 2d 781 (Fla. App. 1971).

General power of appointment is judged as of the time of exercise. In re McMurtry's Estate, 326 N.Y.S.2d 965 (1971).

For the purpose of the rule, interests stemming from a power do not vest until the power is exercised. Dollar Sav. & Trust Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Boston, 285 N.E.2d 768 (Ohio 1972). Will left power of appointment to life tenant who appointed to her own trust. The trust appointed the grandchildren of donee of power. But all of donee's children were alive at death of testator.

The rule begins to run from the time of exercise of a general testamentary power of appointment. Industrial Nat'l Bank v. Barrett, 220 A.2d 517 (R.I. 1966); similar results under the Wisconsin statute. Miller v. Douglass, 213 N.W. 320 (Wis. 1927).

See Lawrence M. Jones, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Powers of Appointment: An Old Controversy Revived, 54 Iowa L. Rev. 456 (1968).

(n29)Footnote 169. Hopkinson v. Swaim, 119 N.E. 985 (Ill. 1918); In re Appleton's Appeal, 20 A. 521 (Pa. 1890).

(n30)Footnote 170. Northern Trust Co. v. Porter, 13 N.E.2d 487 (Ill. 1938) (time runs from date of creation of general testamentary power to appoint); Webb v. Sadler, 14 L.R.-Eq. 533.

(n31)Footnote 171. In re Mifflin's Appeal, 15 A. 525 (Pa. 1888), 1 l.r.a. 453.

Contradistinguished from the case of the creation of a future interest in the original will or deed is when such interest is created by the donee of a power. While the remoteness of the appointed estate is still measured from the time of the creation of the power (Lawrence's Est., infra), it is the fact and not the possibility which rules. If the appointment as actually made does not violate the rule, such appointment is not rendered void merely because the appointee might have appointed in a manner too remote. It is well settled that the exercise of a power of appointment is not rendered void because of the fact that within its terms an estate might be created which possibly would be too remote. The determination of the validity of the appointment in such cases depends upon the facts as they actually exist at the time the appointment is made and not possibilities; In re Lawrence's Estate, 20 A. 521 (Pa. 1890); Northern Trust Co. v. Porter, 13 N.E.2d 487 (Ill. 1938).

In testing any even case under the rule there is a distinction made between the effect of testamentary or inter vivos provisions made by the testator or settlor himself, and those made by a donee of a power of appointment under the terms of the trust. The distinction while narrow, is, nevertheless, extremely important. In cases of trusts created by a testator or settlor the validity of the disposition is governed by possible events, not necessarily by actual events as they may have happened to materialize. For instance, if an interest could arise beyond the limit fixed by the rule, the disposition is void irrespective of the fact that such a person was in fact born within the limitation of the rule. The test is whether, under the provisions of the trust, it is possible for a person to take an interest held to be too remote under the rule. If so, the limitation is void; Thomas Jarman. A Treatise on Wills (6th ed. 1910); In re Lilley's Estate, 116 A. 392 (Pa. 1922), 28 a.l.r. 366; Ledwith v. Hurst, 130 A. 315 (Pa. 1925); In re Scott's Estate, 152 A. 560 (Pa. 1930); In re Friday's Estate, 170 A. 123 (Pa. 1933), 91 a.l.r. 766.

(n32)Footnote 172. Bartlett v. Sears, 70 A. 33 (Conn. 1908); Brown v. Columbia Fin. & Trust Co., 97 S.W. 421 (Ky. 1906); Thomas v. Gregg, 24 A. 418 (Md. 1892); Dexter v. Attorney General, 112 N.E. 946 (Mass. 1916); Cleveland Trust Co. v. McQuade, 142 N.E.2d 249 (Ohio 1957); In re Lawrence's Estate, 20 A. 521 (Pa. 1890).

(n33)Footnote 173. Hopkinson v. Swaim, 119 N.E. 985 (Ill. 1918); Albert v. Albert, 12 A. 11 (Md. 1888); Levenson v. Manly, 87 A. 261 (Md. 1913); Stone v. Forbes, 75 N.E. 141 (Mass. 1905).

(n34)Footnote 174. Hillen v. Iselin, 39 N.E. 368 (N.Y. 1895).

(n35)Footnote 175. Under the weight of authority the rule is to be applied to a general power to appoint by will as though it were a special power so that the period is computed from the time of creation of the power. Mondell v. Thom, 143 F.2d 157 (1944); Northern Trust Co. v. Porter, 13 N.E.2d 487 (Ill. 1938); Gambrill v. Gambrill, 89 A. 1094 (Md. 1914); Lamkin v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 64 A.2d 704 (Md. 1949); Minot v. Paine, 120 N.E. 167 (Mass. 1918), 1 a.l.r. 365; In re Huntington's Estate, 170 N.Y.S.2d 452 (1957); American Trust Co. v. Williamson, 46 S.E.2d 104 (N.C. 1948); Cleveland Trust Co. v. McQuade, 142 N.E.2d 249 (Ohio App. 1957); In re Boyd's Estate, 49 A. 297 (Pa. 1901); In re Lovering's Estate, 96 A.2d 104 (Pa. 1953).

Trust to wife for life and then to son for life with testamentary power of appointment. Son by will appointed to his wife if she survived him 20 days. Held too remote the son's wife was the third life and the 20-day condition made the appointment too remote. In re Phelps' Trust, 159 N.Y.S.2d 55 (1957).

Contra, Miller v. Douglass, 213 N.W. 320 (Wis. 1927).

The rule against remoteness runs from the date of exercise, not the date of creation of a general testamentary power of appointment. Industrial Nat'l Bank v. Barrett, 220 A.2d 517 (R.I. 1966).

(n36)Footnote 176. Cleveland Trust Co. v. McQuade, 133 N.E.2d 664 (Ohio 1955); Miller v. Douglass, 213 N.W. 320 (Wis. 1927).

(n37)Footnote 177. In re Mifflin's Appeal, 15 A. 525 (Pa. 1888), 1 l.r.a. 453.

A savings clause which attempted to rewrite the rule so that it would be actuated only upon the happening of an event which made remoteness an inevitability did not save the remainder interest. Hageman v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977).

(n38)Footnote 178. See Everett Fraser, The Rationale of the Rule Against Perpetuities, 6 Minn. L. Rev. 560, 575 (1922).

(n39)Footnote 179. Smith v. Internal Rev. Comm'r, 140 F.2d 759 (3d Cir. 1944); In re Kountz's Estate, 62 A. 1103 (Pa. 1906).

> When a remainder is given to a class, and such remainder is vested in certain members of the class subject to open and let in other members, born afterwards or afterwards fulfilling a condition, the shares in such remainder or interest may be obnoxious to the Rule against Perpetuities, because their number and therefore their size may not be determinable until too remote a period. For instance, suppose land is devised to A, a bachelor, for life, remainder to his eldest son for life, remainder to those children of B > who reach twenty-five. At the testator's death B is living and one of his children, C, has reached twenty-five. The interest of C is said to be vested, and yet the devise to B's children is invalid as too remote; for, although the minimum size of each child's share will be fixed at the death of B, the maximum may not be determined until twenty-five years after.

Gray, supra, n.1 (4th ed., 1942), § 205.2. See In re Whitten, 62 L.T. 391 (1890).

If the class gift lets in afterborn children who may be born too late the whole gift is void. Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, 16 R.R. 168, 35 Eng. Rep. 979.

American Sec. & Trust Co. v. Cramer, 175 F. Supp. 367 (D.D.C. 1959) (dictum); Crockett v. Scott, 284 S.W.2d 289 (Tenn. 1955), 56 a.l.r.2d 442. See Parker v. Parker, 113 S.E.2d 899 (N.C. 1960).

The fact that interest taken by members of a class will diminish by birth of later members does not make the interest of the members of the class contingent. Loadholt v. Harter, 194 S.E.2d 880 (S.C. 1973).

(n40)Footnote 180. Smith v. Internal Rev. Comm'r, 140 F.2d 759 (1944); Shepard v. Union & New Haven Trust Co., 138 A. 809 (Conn. 1927); Turner v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 129 A. 294 (Md. 1925); Dorr v. Lovering, 18 N.E. 412 (Mass. 1888); Kostarides v. Central Trust Co., 122 N.W.2d 729 (Mich. 1963); In re Herrmann's Estate, 22 A.2d 262 (N.J. Eq. 1941), aff'd in part, 28 A.2d 517 (N.J. Eq. 1942); In re Jones' Estate, 29 D. & C. 2d 437, aff'd, 190 A.2d 120 (Pa. 1963); Industrial Trust Co. v. Flynn, 60 A.2d 851 (R.I. 1948); Cattlin v. Brown, 11 Hare 372, 68 Eng. Rep. 1319 (1853).

A trust to be distributed at the end of 25 years to heirs of three named persons was too remote. Palmer v. Ketner, 223 S.E.2d 913 (S.C. App. 1976).

(n41)Footnote 181. Refusing to split the alternatives. Easton v. Hall, 154 N.E. 216 (Ill. 1926); Thorne v. Continental Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 27 N.E.2d 302 (Ill. App. 1940); Hancock v. Watson, H.L. L.R. 27 App. Cas. (1901).

Splitting the contingency. Longhead v. Phelps, 2 W.B.L. 703, 96 Eng. Rep. 414.

(n42)Footnote 182. Taylor v. Crosson, 98 A. 375 (Del. Ch. 1916).

(n43)Footnote 183. Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, 16 R.R. 168, 35 Eng. Rep. 979 (1817). But see Hills v. Simonds, 125 Mass. 536 (1879), separating a gift into several classes to preserve the gift to valid classes.

A class gift is not invalid merely because the interest of one member might vest too remotely. Carter v. Berry, 140 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1962).

A devise to testator's son in trust to be used to pay the living expenses, to defray the children's college expenses, and to convey the property to the children when the youngest reached 28 violated the rule against remoteness. Parker v. Parker, 113 S.E.2d 899 (N.C. 1960).

(n44)Footnote 184. Stuart v. Stuart, 106 A.2d 771 (Del. 1953); Layton v. Black, 99 A.2d 244 (Del. 1953); Keefer v. McCloy, 176 N.E. 743 (Ill. 1931); Beverlin v. First Nat'l Bank, 98 P.2d 200 (Kan. 1940), 155 a.l.r. 688; Hall v. Hall, 123 Mass. 120 (1877); McGill v. Trust Co. of N.J., 121 A. 760 (N.J. 1923); McLaughlin v. Yingling, 213 P. 552 (Okla. 1923); Closset v. Burtchaell, 230 P. 554 (Or. 1924); In re Wanamaker's Estate, 6 A.2d 852 (Pa. 1939); Hassell v. Sims, 141 S.W.2d 472 (Tenn. 1940); Crockett v. Scott, 284 S.W.2d 289 (Tenn. 1955), 56 a.l.r.2d 442.

Testamentary trust held nondevisable and void because class included those born too late. McPherson v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 81 S.E.2d 386 (N.C. 1954).

Both minimum and maximum limits of a class must be established within the time of the rule. Turner v. Turner, 196 S.E.2d 498 (S.C. 1973).

See Ky. L.J., March 1947.

(n45)Footnote 185. Sears v. Putnam, 102 Mass. 5 (1869); In re Lee's Estate, 299 P.2d 1066 (Wash. 1956).

(n46)Footnote 186. Ryan v. Ward, 64 A.2d 258 (Md. 1949), 7 a.l.r.2d 1078 (effective date of trust where settlor could withdraw the entire corpus in limited amounts).

(n47)Footnote 187. The period did not begin to run in a life insurance trust where the settlor had reserved the right to revoke until the settlor died. Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Von Hamm-Young Co., 34 Haw. 288 (1937), 86 U. Pa. L. Rev. 221. But see Earl F. Morris The Rule Against Perpetuities as Applied to Living Trusts and Living Life Insurance Trusts, 11 U. Cinn. L. Rev. 327 (1937).

(n48)Footnote 188. Bowerman v. Taylor, 94 A. 652 (Md. 1915); Carter v. Berry, 140 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1962).

The court saved an otherwise remote gift to great-grandchildren by concluding that due to the advanced age of the testator's children the "lives in being" should be based on grandchildren then living. Snyder's Estate v. Denit, 72 A.2d 757 (Md. 1950).

(n49)Footnote 189. Carter v. Berry, 140 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1962).

(n50)Footnote 190. In re Bassett's Estate, 190 A.2d 415 (N.H. 1963). See also Old Colony Trust Co. v. Stephens, 190 N.E.2d 110 (Mass. 1963).

(n51)Footnote 191. See Worthing Corp. v. Heather, 2 Ch. 532 (1906) 7 Colum. L. Rev. 406, holding a 30-year option void under the rule so far as it applied to realty but valid as a contract so action for breach would lie.

(n52)Footnote 192. Holmes v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 41 N.E.2d 909 (N.Y. 1942).

The rule against perpetuities does not apply to interests of vendee in sales contracts since such contracts must be performed within a reasonable time. Hill v. State Box Co., 249 P.2d 903 (Cal. App. 1952).

A limitation to "issue" is void where it ripens to indefinite failure of issue. Pond v. Porter, 104 A.2d 228 (Conn. 1954).

Interest in oil and gas lease held too remote. Lathrop v. Eyestone, 227 P.2d 136 (Kan. 1951) ("perpetual nonparticipating royalty" being personalty did not vest until reduced to possession).

See Options in Leases -- Rule Against Perpetuities, 60 W. Va. L. Rev. 212 (1958).

Reservation of minerals which contained an option to repurchase the surface to extent necessary for mining operations if ever commenced was too remote. Rocky Mtn. Fuel Co. v. Heflin, 366 P.2d 577 (Colo. 1961), 39 (dicta) 123.

The rule does not affect contract rights.

First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Purcell, 244 S.W.2d 458 (Ky. 1951).

See Marc Moller, The Condominium Confronts the Rule Against Perpetuities, 10 N.Y.L.F. 377 (1964).

(n53)Footnote 193. Capian v. Pittsburgh, 100 A.2d 380 (Pa. 1953).

(n54)Footnote 194. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Purcell, 244 S.W.2d 458 (Ky. 1951).

(n55)Footnote 195. Vickery v. Maryland Trust Co., 52 A.2d 100 (Md. 1947).

(n56)Footnote 196. Coffield v. Sorrells, 183 S.W.2d 223 (Tex. Civ. App. 1944).

Reservation of mineral interest was vested and not subject to the rule. Keville v. Hollister Co., 105 Cal. Rptr. 238 (Cal. 1972).

The rule against remoteness of vesting does not operate against restrictive covenants. McKinnon v. Neugent, 167 S.E.2d 593 (Ga. 1969).

Unlimited right to extend leases in perpetuity does not violate the rule. Seaboard Coast Line R. Co. v. Adcock, 168 S.E.2d 606 (Ga. App. 1969).

Options in leases are not affected, W. Va. Code § 36-1-24, nor are employees' trusts, § 36-1-23.

(n57)Footnote 197. Roemhild v. Jones, 239 F.2d 492 (8th Cir. 1957).

Violates rule against perpetuities. Dozier v. Troy Drive-In Theatres, 89 So. 2d 537 (Ala. 1956); Gearhart v. West Lumber Co., 90 S.E.2d 10 (Ga. 1955).

A lease not to commence until completion of building held to violate the rule since there was at least a bare possibility that the building might not be completed within the time so the interest might not vest within the rule. Haggerty v. Oakland, 326 P.2d 957 (Cal. App. 1958), 66 a.l.r.2d 718.

Presumptive contracts held invalid restraints on alienation. Kershner v. Hurlburt, 277 S.W.2d 619 (Mo. 1955); Missouri State Highway Comm'n v. Stone, 311 S.W.2d 588 (Mo. App. 1958).

Right of way agreement authorizing laying of additional pipe lines was not within the rule. Vandiver v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 222 F. Supp. 731 (M.D. Ga. 1963).

See Robert J. Lynn & John F. Ramser, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Functional Equivalents: Copps Chapel and the Woburn Church Revisited, 43 Iowa L. Rev. 36 (1957).

When unlimited as to time, a first call violated the Rule against Perpetuities. Atchison v. Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970).

(n58)Footnote 198. Kleinheider v. Phillips Pipeline Co., 528 F.2d 837 (8th Cir. 1975).

(n59)Footnote 199. United Va. Bank-Citizens & Marine v. Union Oil Co. of Cal., 197 S.E.2d 174 (Va. 1973).

An independent option in Hidden Meadows Dev. Co. v. Mills, 511 P.2d 737 (Utah 1973), was held not to violate the rule because the lease was renewed from year to year and that there was nothing in the contract to indicate the parties intended the option to continue for an indefinite period, subject to be defeated at any one year by express agreement of the parties.

(n60)Footnote 200. Morgan v. Griffith Realty Co., 192 F.2d 597 (10th Cir. 1951); Gearhart v. West Lumber Co., 90 S.E.2d 10 (Ga. 1955); Winstanley v. Chapman, 89 N.E.2d 506 (Mass. 1949); Gange v. Hayes, 237 P.2d 196 (Or. 1951); Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914); Starcher Bros. v. Duty, 56 S.E. 524 (W. Va. 1907), 9 l.r.a. (N.S.) 913.

Options to purchase in leases are within the rule. First Huntington Nat'l Bank v. Gideon-Broh Realty Co., 79 S.E.2d 675 (W. Va. 1953), changed by statute W. Va. Code Ann. § 3541(3).

See Future Interests -- Rule Against Perpetuities -- Legislation Exempting Options to Purchase in Leases, 56 Mich. L. Rev. 146 (1957).

Options to repurchase may also violate the rule against remoteness. Hall v. Crocker, 241 S.W.2d 548 (Tenn. 1951).

Contra, Hill v. State Box Co., 249 P.2d 903 (Cal. App. 1952) (rule does not apply to contracts).

An option is within the rule and is void if no time is stated within which the option must be exercised. Middleton v. Western Coal & Min. Co., 241 F. Supp. 407 (W.D. Ark. 1965); Hendriksen v. Cubage, 288 S.W.2d 608 (Ark. 1956); but see Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963), implying a reasonable time for exercise.

In Ohio, an accumulation is valid unless it violates the rule against perpetuities. Vinson v. First Trust & Sav. Bank, 339 N.E.2d 670 (C.P. Ohio 1974).

(n61)Footnote 201. Dozier v. Troy Drive-In Theatres, Inc., 89 So. 2d 537 (Ala. 1956); Poland Coal Co. v. Hillman Coal & Coke Co., 55 A.2d 414 (Pa. 1947); Wing, Inc. v. Arnold, 107 So. 2d 765 (Fla. App. 1958).

Dictum that the rule against remoteness does not apply to options contained in the lease. Martin v. Prairie Rod & Gun Club, 348 N.E.2d 306 (Ill. App. 1976).

(n62)Footnote 202. Hill v. State Box Co., 249 P.2d 903 (Cal. App. 1952). Smith v. Stuckey, 503 S.E.2d 284 (Ga. App. 1998) (court held that although there was no exact time requirement for performance under a stock option agreement, the option did not violate the rule against perpetuities because agreement was construed as requiring performance within a reasonable period of time. Court held that 21 years would be unreasonable, hence, no violation); Collins v. Morris, 716 A.2d 384 (Md. App. 1998) (reasonable time periods implied by law; thus the court found rule against perpetuities inapplicable); Coulter & Smith, Ltd. v. Russell, 966 P.2d 852 (Utah 1998) (ordinary rules of contract construction should be used before applying the rule against perpetuities. Under ordinary rules of contract law, court inferred a "reasonable time" limitation in exercising option. Court determined that the trier of fact needed to decide whether a "reasonable time" is more or less than 21 years).

(n63)Footnote 203. United Va. Bank-Citizens & Marine v. Union Oil Co. of Cal., 197 S.E.2d 174 (Va. 1973), 66 a.l.r.3d 1286.

(n64)Footnote 204. Haggerty v. Oakland, 326 P.2d 957 (Cal. App. 1958), 66 a.l.r.2d 718.

Gift to issue of 55-year-old childless widow held too remote. In re Sahlender's Estate, 201 P.2d 69 (Cal. App. 1948).

Oil and gas lease which gave an option to lease below a stated debt option to run as long as oil or gas was produced was void as a perpetuity. Melcher v. Camp, 435 P.2d 107 (Okla. 1967), 21 Okla. L. Rev. 241. Oklahoma has the common-law rule against remoteness.

A lease for an indefinite period of time, being terminated only by the lessee's inability to pay the monthly rent or to move, did not violate the rule against remoteness of vesting, since the interest vested immediately. Conley v. Gaylock, 108 S.E.2d 675 (W. Va. 1959).

(n65)Footnote 205. See John Humphrey Carlile Morris & W. Barton Leach, The Rule Against Perpetuities (2d ed. 1962); See also Gray, supra, n.1, 297-304.

(n66)Footnote 206. In re Chardon, Ch. 464 (1928); In re Chambers, ch. 267 (1950).

(n67)Footnote 207. Charles Fearne, An Essay on the Learning of Contingent Remainders and Executory Devises (Charles Butlered) (9th ed., 1831) 522.

(n68)Footnote 208. Both on principle and on authority our conclusion is that the remoteness of an appointment, made in the exercise of a power to appoint by will alone, so far as affected by the rule against perpetuities must be measured from the time of the creation and not the exercise of the power. Minot v. Paine, 120 N.E. 167 (Mass. 1918), 1 a.l.r. 365.

Accord: Warren's Estate, 182 A. 396 (Pa. 1936), 104 a.l.r. 1345, holding that an appointment by the donee of a testamentary power to her "children for life and then" over to persons not ascertainable until the end of these prior interests, is good, on the ground that all of donee's children alive at donee's death were also alive at the creation of the power.

(n69)Footnote 209. Shenandoah Valley Nat'l Bank of Winchester v. Taylor, 63 S.E.2d 786 (Va. 1951).

Gift for establishment of a memorial for deceased father held private trust and violating the rule against remoteness of vesting. Carr v. Jones, 403 S.W.2d 181 (Tex. Civ. App. 1966).

Trust to maintain a monument is a private trust subject to the rule against remoteness. Carr v. Jones, 403 S.W.2d 181 (Tex. Civ. App. 1966).

(n70)Footnote 210. Option in a deed to repurchase held too remote as creating a contingent interest in land. Roundtree v. Richardson, 108 So. 2d 152 (Ala. 1959) (reserved option to repurchase for an unlimited time held valid as a right of re-entry); H. J. Lewis Oyster Co. v. West, 107 A. 138 (Conn. 1919); Neustadt v. Pearce, 143 A.2d 437 (Conn. 1958) (a reservation in a deed of a right to repurchase violated the rule against remoteness); Winsor v. Mills, 32 N.E. 352 (Mass. 1892); Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914); Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963) (option given one lessee to purchase other's share of realty held not too remote where will construed to require option to be exercised during administration of estate. Court will try to avoid perpetuities).

See Options and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 13 U. Fla. L. Rev. 214.

Leases and options expiring after the rule are not affected thereby and trusts violating the rule terminate at end of time. No possibility of issue after 65 or before 13. Ill. Rev. Stat. ch. 30, para. 194.

Holding a perpetual first call void under the rule against remoteness. Atchison v. Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970), 47 Denver L. Rev. 78.

Testamentary option without time limit is void under the rule. Maddox v. Keeler, 177 S.W.2d 568 (Ky. 1944), 162 a.l.r. 578; Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914); contra, Todd v. Citizens' Gas Co., 46 F.2d 855, cert. denied, 283 U.S. 852 (7th Cir. 1931); Keogh v. Peck, 147 N.E. 266 (Ill. 1925), 38 a.l.r. 1151.

Determining that the rule against remoteness of vesting is applicable to purchase options only if "the danger of fettering free use of property is outweighed by the consideration of public concern and welfare." Southeastern Pa. Transp. Auth. v. Philadelphia Transp. Co., 233 A.2d 15 (Pa. 1967), 72 Dick. L. Rev. 651.

Rule does not apply to an option to purchase held by a municipality. Southeastern Pa. Transp. Auth. v. Philadelphia

Transp. Co., 233 A.2d 15 (Pa. 1967), 72 Dick. L. Rev. 651; Starcher Bros. v. Duty, 56 S.E. 524 (W. Va. 1907), 9 l.r.a. (N.S.) 913.

London & S.W. Ry. v. Gomm, L.R. 20 Ch. Div. 562.

Options to purchase contained in grants of fee simple estates are subject to the rule. H. J. Lewis Oyster Co. v. West, 107 A. 138 (Conn. 1919), 34 Harv. L. Rev. 642, 29 Yale L.J. 87; Skeen v. Clinchfield Coal Corp., 119 S.E. 89 (Va. 1923), 22 Mich. L. Rev. 279, 10 Va. L. Rev. 333; Woodall v. Bruen, 85 S.E. 170 (W. Va. 1915), 14 Mich. L. Rev. 231.

Options to purchase in gross held subject to the rule. Turner v. Peacock, 113 S.E. 585 (Ga. 1922); Henderson v. Bell, 173 P. 1124 (Kan. 1918); In re Lilley's Estate, 116 A. 392 (Pa. 1922), 28 a.l.r. 366; Starcher Bros. v. Duty, 56 S.E. 524 (W. Va. 1907), 9 l.r.a. (N.S.) 913.

Option to purchase contained in a lease is not subject to the rule since no interest is created in land. Keogh v. Peck, 147 N.E. 266 (Ill. 1925), 38 a.l.r. 1151.

A contract to convey is subject to the rule. Eastman Marble Co. v. Vermont Marble Co., 128 N.E. 177 (Mass. 1920).

Contra, to the extent that an action for damages lies for breach of such a covenant. Worthing Corp. v. Heather (1906), 2 Ch. 532.

See Berg, Long Term Options and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 37 Cal. L. Rev. 1.

The court held that a right of first refusal did not violate the rule against remoteness of vesting where it could only be exercised against the vendor and not against his heirs or devisees. Watergate Corporation v. Reagan, 321 So. 2d 133 (Fla. App. 1975).

Dictum that the rule against remoteness does not apply to options contained in the lease. Martin v. Prairie Rod & Gun Club, 348 N.E.2d 306 (Ill. App. 1976).

(n71)Footnote 211. See Edwin H. Abbott Jr., Leases and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 27 Yale L.J. 878 (1918).

Business lease for a term to commence upon completion of a building does not violate the rule against perpetuities. Isen v. Giant Food, Inc., 295 F.2d 136 (D.C. Cir. 1961), 37 Notre Dame Law 561.

Lease to commence on construction of a building was held contract to lease which is subject to rule if it can be specifically enforced. Wong v. DiGrazia, 386 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1963).

Contract was held not within rule where all rights therein vested within 21 years and any breach of the agreement was remedied during such period. Wong v. DiGrazia, 386 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1963).

Lease must commence within time of the rule. Where the lessee's interest was not to take effect until the completion of a building the lease was not void as violating the common law rule against remoteness not being based on lives or 21 years in gross. Haggerty v. Oakland, 326 P.2d 957 (Cal. App. 1958), 66 a.l.r.2d 718.

Contract to plat and subdivide was held not within rule. Fisher v. Bailey, 385 P.2d 985 (Utah 1963).

(n72)Footnote 212. Fischer v. Parsons, 29 Cal. Rptr. 210 (Cal. App. 1963).

A perpetual right of purchase violated the rule. Davies v. McDowell, 549 S.W.2d 619 (Mo. App. 1977).

(n73)Footnote 213. Rule applies. Maynard v. Polhemus, 15 P. 451 (Cal. 1887).

Called restraint on alienation. Hardy v. Galloway, 15 S.E. 890 (N.C. 1892).

Rule does not apply. Dozier v. Troy Drive-In Theatres, Inc., 89 So. 2d 537 (Ala. 1956); French v. Old South Soc'y, 106 Mass. 479 (1961).

(n74)Footnote 214. Lonergan v. Connecticut Food Store, Inc., 357 A.2d 910 (Conn. 1975). However, perpetual leases are not favored by the courts.

(n75)Footnote 215. Does not violate rule. Wiendiate v. Leland, 225 N.W. 620 (Mich. 1929); Personal to grantor. Campbell v. Campbell, 230 S.W.2d 918 (Ky. 1950).

Violates rule. Melcher v. Camp, 435 P.2d 107 (Okla. 1967); Atchison v. Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970), 40 a.l.r.3d 904; Neustadt v. Pearce, 143 A.2d 437 (Conn. 1958); Concanon v. Haile, 81 D. & C. 480 (Pa. 1952).

Rule held valid as to rights of re-entry where forfeiture clause existed. Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922).

(n76)Footnote 216. Gearhart v. West Lumber Co., 90 S.E.2d 10 (Ga. 1955); Eastman Marble Co. v. Vermont Marble Co., 128 N.E. 177 (Mass. 1920), 34 Harv. L. Rev. 440 (long term option held void); Woodall v. Bruen, 85 S.E. 170 (W. Va. 1915) (perpetual option held void as a perpetuity); First Huntington Nat'l Bank v. Gideon-Broh Realty Co., 79 S.E.2d 675 (W. Va. 1953).

Clause in oil and gas lease authorizing lessee to pool and pay royalties on oil allocated to the particular tract did not violate rule against remoteness. Phillips Petr. Co. v. Peterson, 218 F.2d 926 (10th Cir. 1954), 27 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 361; Kenoyer v. Magnolia Petr. Co., 245 P.2d 176 (Kan. 1952).

Option is only a contractual right and not affected by the rule. Courseview, Inc. v. Phillips Petr. Co., 258 S.W.2d 391 (Ky. 1953).

Pre-emptive rights may be personal or descendible. If the latter, they are subject to restraints on alienation and the rule against remoteness. Old Mission Peninsula Sch. Dist. v. French, 107 N.W.2d 758 (Mich. 1961).

Options in leases are not affected. W. Va. Code 1977 § 36-1-24. Employees trusts are also not affected, § 36-1-23.

(n77)Footnote 217. Weber v. Texas Co., 83 F.2d 807 (5th Cir. 1936); Becker v. Submarine Oil Co., 204 P. 245 (Cal. App. 1921); In re Dees' Estate, 308 P.2d 90 (Kan. 1957) (limitation over to heirs of testator if devisee should ever sell or mortgage was void for remoteness); Lloyd's Estate v. Mullen Tractor & Equipment Co., 4 So. 2d 282 (Miss. 1941); Duryea v. Hendrickson, 161 N.Y.S. 999 (1916); Wallace v. Williams, 313 P.2d 784 (Okla. 1957); Gange v. Hayes, 237 P.2d 196 (Or. 1951) (option held too remote); Byars v. Cherokee County, 118 S.E.2d 324 (S.C. 1961) (contingent option to repurchase is a right of re-entry also not too remote); Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963), 1 Houston L. Rev. 182, 39 Notre Dame Law 211 (option to be exercised within a reasonable time does not violate the rule against perpetuities); Thaw v. Gaffney, 83 S.E. 983 (W. Va. 1914), 3 a.l.r. 495; Todd v. Manufacturers' Light & Heat Co., 110 S.E. 446 (W. Va. 1922); Rider v. Ford, 1 Ch. Div. (1923).

See William Berg Jr., Long Term Options and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 37 Cal. L. Rev. 1 (1949); Langeluttig, Options to Purchase and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 17 Va. L. Rev. 461 (1931).

Perpetual options to renew held void. Becker v. Submarine Oil Co., 204 P. 245 (Cal. App. 1921).

Holding that an option, though independent, did not violate the rule where the lease option specifically provided for automatic renewal from year to year and distinguished from the situation where the owner was to be obligated to convey at a time beyond the period of the rule. Hidden Meadows Dev. Co. v. Mills, 511 P.2d 737 (Utah 1973).

(n78)Footnote 218. Option in perpetually renewable lease was void. H. J. Lewis Oyster Co. v. West, 107 A. 138 (Conn. 1919); Wing, Inc. v. Arnold, Fla., 107 So. 2d 765 (Fla. 1958), 77 a.l.r.2d 728 (the rule is a rule against restraint on improvements in options); Keogh v. Peck, 147 N.E. 266 (Ill. 1925), 38 a.l.r. 1151; Pure Oil Co. of the Carolinas v. Baars, 31 S.E.2d 854 (N.C. 1944); Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914); Skeen v. Clinchfield Coal Corp., 119 S.E. 89 (Va. 1923); Starcher Bros. v. Duty, 56 S.E. 524 (W. Va. 1907), 9 l.r.a. (N.S.) 913; Woodall v. Bruen, 85 S.E. 170 (W. Va. 1915); First Huntington Nat'l Bank v. Gideon-Broh Realty Co., 79 S.E.2d 675 (W. Va. 1953); London & S. W. Ry. v. Gomm, L.R., 20 Ch. Div. 562.

William Berg Jr., Long-Term Options and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 37 Cal. L. Rev. 1, 235, 419 (1949); Edwin H. Abbott, Leases and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 27 Yale L.J. 878 (1918); Charles Sweet, Some Recent Decisions on the Rule Against Perpetuities, 27 L.Q. Rev. 150; Williams, Contracts and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 54 Sol. J. 471, 501 (1911); Joseph Warren, Progress of the Law; Estates and Future Interests, 34 Harv. L. Rev. 639 (1920); Albert Langeluttig, Options to Purchase and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 17 Va. L. Rev. 461.

(n79)Footnote 219. Quarto Min. Co. v. Litman, 326 N.E.2d 676 (Ohio 1975) (relying on Restatement of Property § 395, at 2326 (1959), but confusing restraints on alienation and remoteness of vesting).

(n80)Footnote 220. The rule against remoteness does not affect restrictive covenants. McKinnon v. Neugent, 167 S.E.2d 593 (Ga. 1969).

Covenants running with the land do not violate the rule against perpetuities. Lowry v. Norris Lake Shores Dev. Corp., 203 S.E.2d 171 (Ga. 1974).

The rule against remoteness does not affect restrictive covenants. Cornett v. Houston, 404 S.W.2d 602 (Tex. Civ. App. 1966).

Contra, Dunn v. Blackdown Properties, Ltd., [1961] ch. 433 (incorporation and a conveyance of a provision granting to the purchaser free use of such drains and sewers as then pass or thereafter to pass under roads violated the rule against remoteness).

See Robert J. Lynn & John F. Ramser, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Functional Equivalents: Copps Chapel and the Woburn Church Revisited, 43 Iowa L. Rev. 36 (1957).

(n81)Footnote 221. Carneal v. Kendig, 85 S.E.2d 235 (Va. 1955).

(n82)Footnote 222. Atlantic Trust Co. v. Woodbridge Canal & Irrig. Co., 86 F. 975 (C.C.D. Cal. 1897); Sacramento Bank v. Alcorn, 53 P. 813 (Cal. 1898); Board of Church v. First Presbyterian Church, 53 P. 671 (Wash. 1898); Knightsbridge Estates Trust, Ltd., 2 All E.R. 401 (1940).

(n83)Footnote 223. Walsh v. Secretary of State for India, 10 H.L. Cas. 367, 11 Eng. Rep. 1068 (1863).

(n84)Footnote 224. Chicago, Wilmington & Franklin Coal Co. v. Herr, 127 F.2d 1010 (7th Cir. 1942); Threlkeld v. Inglett, 124 N.E. 368 (Ill. 1919); Post v. Bailey, 159 S.E. 524 (W. Va. 1931).

When unlimited as to time, a first call violated the rule against perpetuities. Alchesm v. City of Eaglewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970), 400 Colo. L. Rev. 904.

Conveyance of mineral interests giving grantee an unlimited option to purchase surface option held too remote because an equitable contingent interest was created. Middleton v. Western Coal & Min. Co., 241 F. Supp. 407 (W.D. Ark. 1965).

A deed reserving to the grantor all minerals for 25 years gave the grantee an executory interest that was void for remoteness with a valid "reversion" in the grantor but the language of the deed passed the grantor's reversion to the grantee. Brown v. Terra Bella Irrig. Dist., 330 P.2d 775 (Cal. 1958).

See Bruce M. Jones, The Rule Against Perpetuities as It Affects California Oil and Gas Interests, 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 261 (1960); C.J. Meyers, The Effect of the Rule Against Perpetuities on Perpetual Non-Participating Royalty and Kindred Interests, 32 Tex. L. Rev. 369 (1954).

(n85)Footnote 225. Johnston v. Cosby, 29 N.E.2d 608 (Ill. 1940).

In a testamentary trust, with income to go to four named persons 25 years after death of testator, the principal to be divided among the surviving income beneficiaries and a contingent remainder over to charity, the court held the gifts of income good, but the goods of principal void under the rule against remoteness. Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960).

Holding that creation of a trust to terminate when the youngest living child, testator's son, reached twenty-five, was not invalid; but a gift class must be certain to close within the period of time allowed by the rule. Green v. Green, 221 N.E.2d 388 (Ohio 1966).

Holding of the trust to maintain a monument is a private trust and not a charity, and, therefore, subject to rule against remoteness. Carr v. Jones, 403 S.W.2d 181 (Tex. Civ. App. 1966).

Until 1925 (Wis. Stat. § 230.14) in Wisconsin, neither the rule against remoteness nor against restraints on alienation was applicable to personalty. Dodge v. Williams, 50 N.W. 1103 (Wis. 1879); Becker v. Chester, 91 N.W. 87 (Wis. 1902).

(n86)Footnote 226. Brooks Bank & Trust Co. v. Beers, 181 A. 391 (Conn. 1935); Moroney v. Haas, 115 N.E. 648 (Ill. 1917); Armstrong v. Armstrong, 53 Ky. (14 B. Mon.) 333 (1853); Jackson v. Phillips, 96 Mass. (14 Allen) 539 (1867); In re Trevor, 145 N.E. 66 (N.Y. 1924); Bullock v. Bullock, 1 Ch. 493; Minter v. Wraith, 13 Sim. 52, 60 Eng. Rep. 21.

Contra, held inseparable and therefore void. Donohue v. McNichol, 61 Pa. 73 (1869); Brooker v. Brooker, 106 S.W.2d 247 (Tex. 1937); McCreery v. Johnston, 110 S.E. 464 (W. Va. 1922).

Where two possible constructions, the one avoiding the rule is to be adopted. In re Schuette's Estate, 311 N.Y.S.2d 415 (1970).

Holding that in interpreting an instrument it must be presumed that the testator was cognizant of the rules against perpetuities and intended a construction which would avoid it if possible. Vinson v. First Trust & Savings Bank, 339 N.E.2d 670 (C.P. Ohio 1974).

Provision to terminate devises which might violate the rule against remoteness upheld. In re Burrough's Estate, 521 F.2d 277 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

In re Frankel's Estate, 92 N.Y.S.2d 30 (1949).

(n87)Footnote 227. Beverlin v. First Nat'l Bank, 98 P.2d 200 (Kan. 1940), 155 a.l.r. 688.

Clause in oil and gas lease authorizing lessee to pool and pay royalties on oil allocated to the particular tract did not violate rule against remoteness. Phillips Petr. Co. v. Peterson, 218 F.2d 926 (10th Cir. 1954); Kenoyer v. Magnolia Petr. Co., 245 P.2d 176 (Kan. 1952).

The rule against remoteness is counted from the death of the settlor not the creation of the trust if the trust is revocable. Cook v. Horn, 104 S.E.2d 461 (Ga. 1958).

Interest in oil and gas lease held too remote. Lathrop v. Eyestone, 227 P.2d 136 (Kan. 1951) ("perpetual nonparticipating royalty" being personalty did not vest until reduced to possession).

Requirement that oil and gas rentals which might be derived from property devised to one person be divided among others did not violate the rule since the right to the royalties was vested. In re Swingle's Estate, 289 P.2d 778 (Kan. 1955).

Rule does not apply to vested equitable interests. Finch v. Honeycutt, 97 S.E.2d 478 (N.C. 1957).

See C.J. Meyers, The Effect of the Rule Against Perpetuities on Perpetual Non-Participating Royalty and Kindred Interests, 32 Tex. L. Rev. 369 (1954).

(n88)Footnote 228. Victory Oil Co. v. Hancock Oil Co., 270 P.2d 604 (Cal. App. 1954).

Oil and gas lease providing that drilling should commence when present zoning prohibitions should be lifted created a vested interest and was not too remote. Francis v. Superior Oil Co., 102 F.2d 732 (10th Cir. 1939).

Reservation of minerals for 25 years and thereafter as long as production continued, the mineral interest thus given to the grantee was held too remote. Victory Oil Co. v. Hancock Oil Co., 270 P.2d 604 (Cal. App. 1954).

A perpetual nonparticipating royalty interest is void as too remote. Lathrop v. Eyestone, 227 P.2d 136 (Kan. 1951).

Contra, as being a present vested interest. Hanson v. Ware, 274 S.W.2d 359 (Ark. 1955), 46 a.l.r.2d 1262.

Royalty reserved out of a possible future lease of oil and gas is too remote. Howell v. Cooperative Refinery Ass'n, 271 P.2d 271 (Kan. 1954).

See Bruce M. Jones, The Rule Against Perpetuities as it Affects California Oil and Gas Interests, 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 261 (1960); Kuntz, Rule Against Perpetuities and Mineral Interests, 7 Okla. L. Rev. 183; C.J. Meyers, Effect of the Rule Against Perpetuities on Perpetual Non-Participating Royalty and Kindred Interests, 32 Tex. L. Rev. 369 (1954).

(n89)Footnote 229. Young Men's Christian Ass'n v. Horn, 139 N.W. 805 (Minn. 1913) (option to purchase which may not be exercised within the period is valid); Capian v. Pittsburgh, 100 A.2d 380 (Pa. 1953).

Devise to B subject to a special provision as to oil and gas that B and trustee for A should divide all oil and gas income did not violate the rule against remoteness by creating a perpetual royalty since it vested at the testator's death. In re Swingle's Estate, 289 P.2d 778 (Kan. 1955), see also Goetz v. Goetz, 254 P.2d 822 (Kan. 1953).

(n90)Footnote 230. Caruthers v. Peoples Nat. Gas Co., 38 A.2d 713 (Pa. Super. 1944).

(n91)Footnote 231. H.J. Lewis Oyster Co. v. West, 107 A. 138 (Conn. 1919); First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Purcell, 244 S.W.2d 458 (Ky. 1951).

(n92)Footnote 232. Southern Airways Co. v. Dekalb County, 116 S.E.2d 602 (Ga. 1960).

(n93)Footnote 233. Dunn v. Blackdown Props., Ltd., ch. 433 (1961) (grant of a right to connect with a sewer if and when constructed).

Agreement to lay a second pipeline upon payment held vested and not too remote. Sorrell v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 314 S.W.2d 193 (Ky. 1958), Caruthers v. Peoples Nat. Gas Co., 38 A.2d 713 (Pa. Super. 1944).

(n94)Footnote 234. Johnson v. Armstrong, 94 S.E. 753 (W. Va. 1918).

Unitization clause is not too remote unless it affects cross transfers of property interests. Phillips Petr. Co. v. Peterson, 218 F.2d 926 (10th Cir. 1954).

Assignment of oil and gas lease overriding royalty preserving rights of assignor or against assignee's heirs and assigns violated Oklahoma's common-law rule against perpetuities. Cities Service Oil Co. v. Sohio Petr. Co., 345 F. Supp. 28 (1972).

Where the grantor in a deed reserved the oil and gas rights for 25 years, the limitation over violated the rule but the grantor retained a reversion which he could convey. Brown v. Terra Bella Irr. Dist., 330 P.2d 775 (Cal. 1958), 58 Mich. L. Rev. 285.

Perpetual option to renew oil and gas lease held valid. Becker v. Submarine Oil Co., 204 P. 245 (Cal. App. 1921).

A deed not reserving the minerals but reserving the exclusive right to execute oil and gas leases was held to create a special power of appointment which was void for remoteness. Dallapi v. Campbell, 114 P.2d 646 (Cal. App. 1941).

A deed excepting the oil and gas, so long as it should be produced in paying quantities, created a contingent interest in the oil and gas in the grantee which was void as being too remote. Victory Oil Co. v. Hancock Oil Co., 270 P.2d 604 (Cal. App. 1954).

Perpetual right of extension of lease does not violate the rule. Seaboard Coast Line R. Co. v. Adcock, 168 S.E.2d 606 (Ga. App. 1969).

Pooling clause held not too remote since all interests were vested. Kenoyer v. Magnolia Petr. Co., 245 P.2d 176 (Kan. 1952).

A clause in an oil and gas lease assignment that the assignee must reassign to the assignor under certain conditions is not too remote. Mahan v. Brader, 242 S.W.2d 941 (Tex. Civ. App. 1951).

See C.J. Meyers, The Effect of the Rule Against Perpetuities on Perpetual Non-Participating Royalty and Kindred Interests, 32 Tex. L. Rev. 369 (1954).

(n95)Footnote 235. Atchison v. Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970), 40 a.l.r.3d 404.

The rule against perpetuities operates against the oil and gas operating agreements in Oklahoma. Producer's Oil Co. v. Gore, 437 F. Supp. 737 (ED. Okla. 1977), 60 Okla. Stat. Ann. §§ 75-78.

(n96)Footnote 236. See In re Appleton's Appeal, 20 A. 521 (Pa. 1890), 11 l.r.a. 85; In re Lilley's Estate, 116 A. 392 (Pa. 1922), 28 a.l.r. 366.

(n97)Footnote 237. Holmes v. Williams, 1 Root 335 (Conn. 1795); Pennington v. Pennington, 17 A. 329 (Md. 1889), 3 l.r.a. 816; Bradford v. Mackenzie, 101 A. 774 (Md. 1917); Proprietors of Church v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 (1855); Donehue v. Nilges, 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954), 45 a.l.r.2d 1150; Bell v. Scammon, 15 N.H. 381, 41 am.

dec. 706; Merrill v. American Baptist Missionary Union, 62 A. 647 (N.H. 1905), 3 l.r.a. (N.S.) 1143; McLaughlin v. Yingling, 213 P. 552 (Okla. 1923); Imbrie v. Hartrampf, 198 P. 521 (Or. 1921).

Common law against perpetuities prevails in Oregon and Tennessee as to executory devises. Closset v. Burtchaell, 230 P. 554 (Or. 1924); Eager v. McCoy, 228 S.W. 709 (Tenn. 1921). See In re Allen's Will, 181 N.Y.S. 398 (N.Y. 1920).

(n98)Footnote 238. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U.S. 340 (1885); Pennington v. Pennington, 17 A. 329 (Md. 1889), 3 l.r.a. 816; Proprietors of Church v. Grant, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 142 (1855); Robinson v. Harris, 53 S.E. 755 (S.C. 1906), 6 l.r.a. (N.S.) 330.

If interest vests within the time, the fact that it may not take possession until later is not material. Lanier v. Lanier, 126 S.E.2d 776 (Ga. 1962).

Limitation to private individual after gift to charity was held too remote. In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960).

(n99)Footnote 239. See Barnitz v. Casey, 11 U.S. (7 Cranch) 456 (1813); Combs v. Combs, 8 A. 757 (Md. 1887); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); In re Warren's Estate, 182 A. 396 (Pa. 1896), 104 a.l.r. 1345.

Limitation over after life estate to corporation if created within 20 years after testator's death was valid. Loats Female Orphan Asylum v. Essom, 150 A.2d 742 (Md. 1959).

(n100)Footnote 240. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U.S. 340 (1885); Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897); Otterback v. Bohrer, 12 S.E. 1013 (Va. 1891); Whelan v. Reilly, 3 W. Va. 597 (1869).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.04

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.04 The Operation of the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting

[Go To Supp]

The time of the effective date of the instrument, not the time of making, determines its validity as respects the rule against remoteness. Under the New York law, a will for more than two lives was good if all but two predecease testator. n241 The effect of the rule against remoteness must be viewed as of the death of the testator, not the date of the will. n242

Evidencing attempts to avoid the rule, some of the authorities have been turning to the "second look" or "wait and see" doctrine. Under this theory the limitation over must be judged in light of the facts as they existed at the time the instrument became effective, not when it was executed. n243

Sometimes this is done by case law, n244 but usually by statute. n245 The retroactive effect of such statutes is the dispute. n246

Under this rule these general principles are asserted: 1. All reversionary interests, reversions, possibilities of reverter and rights of re-entry are vested. 2. Under the weight of authority, but not unanimous opinion, a remainder vested upon a condition subsequent, that is vested subject to divesting, is "vested" for the purpose of the rule. 3. An executory limitation, one which cuts off a previous estate, is not vested until it becomes entitled to possession. 4. A class gift is not vested under the majority rule until it is not only closed but also is vested in the individual members of the class, although there is strong authority to the effect that it is vested in the class when the class is closed, though some of the prospective members may drop out prior to the time of taking of possession. The law of the testator's domicile governs as to the application of the rule if personalty is involved. n247 The lex situ governs as to realty. n248 The test of the validity of limitations is always whether an estate attempting to be created must in every possible contingency terminate within the proper time. n249

The confusion as to the purpose of the perpetuities rules which led to the confounding of the rule against remoteness of vesting and the "rule against absolute restraints on alienation" in the New York statutes and other similar laws has led the judges to improperly commingle the two rules. It is well established that the policy of the law of this country is that all property should, so far as possible, be free to be aliened or disposed of by its actual owners. There are, of course, limitations upon this rule, but they are carried no further than the necessity of the occasion warranting them requires. n250

It is said that the rule against perpetuities is aimed against undue restraints on alienation, by prohibiting the clogging of the title with future interests dependent on contingencies which may not occur at all, or until a remote period. n251

To avoid the rule it is not necessary to show that the interest will actually vest but that it will vest, if at all, within the period. n252

It is said that the test of alienability of real or personal property is that there are persons in being who can give a perfect title. There is no suspension of the absolute power of alienation, if all persons having interest, present and future, can convey a fee simple. So it has been erroneously said that this statute is not applicable to any interest that is alienable, though it is a contingent interest and may remain contingent for a period longer than that permitted by the statute for the suspension of the absolute power of alienation. n253 More properly stated an objectionable contingent interest or a "perpetuity" is a grant or devise of property wherein the vesting of an estate or interest is unlawfully postponed. The law allows the vesting of an estate or interest and also the power of alienation to be postponed for a period of a life or lives in being and twenty-one years and nine months thereafter. All restraints upon the vesting that may suspend it beyond that period are treated as perpetual restraints and void, and the estates or interests which are dependent on them are void. n254

Under the rule the limit for the creation of an executory interest to commence is within the period of a life or lives in being and 21 years, allowing for the period of gestation. n255 To be valid under the rule against perpetuities, the future interest must vest within a life or lives in being, and twenty-one years thereafter. If the person to take such interest is an infant, either born or en ventre sa mere during a life in being, the time may be extended until the termination of such infant's minority, thus extending the possible time of vesting to twenty-one years and the period of gestation after a life or lives in being. n256 The persons in being by whose lives the period allowed for vesting is in part measured may be indefinite in number, provided it is possible to ascertain the termination of the life of the last survivor in order to be able to ascertain when the period of twenty-one is to commence. Such persons need not be connected in any way with the property devised, that is, they need not be persons taking prior estates therein, nor need they even be relatives of the devisees. n257 Lives in being at testator's death, not date of will, control. n258 In case the time named for the vesting of the future interest is not measured by lives, but by a definite number of years, it is essential that the number of years be less than twenty-one, in order that the limitation be valid. n259 Thus, where no life in being forms any part of the period of postponement in vesting of title, the limit of time under the rule is 21 years. n260

A final gift of the balance of a trust estate to the legal representatives of the survivor was void because it was possible that no personal representative might be appointed until after twenty-one years subsequent to the end of the second life estate. n261

A will to an unnamed widow for life and over at her death was bad, since the widow was possibly not in existence. n262

So in the gift of a life estate to a daughter and at her death a gift of a life estate to a son and upon his death a life estate to his children with remainder to their heirs was an attempt to "suspend the power of alienation for a longer period than during the continuance of two lives in being at the creation of the estate and violates the statute against perpetuities. n263 A devise and bequest to the widow of the testator for life with remainder to his son and at his death "the same to go to his heirs forever" violated the statute of perpetuities in the absence of any discoverable intent to limit the meaning of the word "heirs" to the children of the son. n264 A limitation over after a fee upon condition subsequent is void for remoteness where the condition may not happen within the period. n265 When a limitation over after a fee upon condition subsequent is too remote, the fee becomes absolute. n266

A limitation over after the ultimate termination of a fee tail estate is void. n267

The common-law rule permits any number of lives in being at least if ascertainable. It does not limit the lives to those of persons in being at the date of the will. n268 "Lives in being," as stated in the rule, means any lives whatsoever in being when the interest is created, and the persons whose lives are taken need have no interest in the estate. n269 The validity of the limitation is to be determined as of the time of the testator's death, and not at the time of the execution of the will. n270 Anciently, under the common law, it was possible by executory devise to lock up estates in families so as to prevent alienation for any period of time the owner might desire. Such an estate was termed a perpetuity, a thing which the law is said to abhor, as estates are made by it incapable of answering those purposes of social commerce, and providing for the sudden contingencies of private life for which property was first established.

The number of lives to be taken, in applying the rule against perpetuities, must be an ascertainable number, that is, the number of lives chosen must not be more than will admit of making out, by reasonable evidence, at what time the survivor ceases to exist. Provided the termination of the lives can be determined by reasonable evidence, their number is immaterial. n271 The requirement that the contingency on which the estate is to vest shall occur within the time named by the rule is absolute, and the mere improbability that it will occur after that time is immaterial. n272 A limitation not in compliance with the rule rendered valid by the happening of the contingency is not within the legal period. n273 Where an estate otherwise has vested or must vest within the period prescribed by the rule, its vesting is not rendered too remote by a direction that the enjoyment or possession thereof shall not occur until the owner of such estate attains a stated age. n274

The rule against remoteness of vesting deals only with vesting of interests, not the postponement of possession. n275

Thus, the vesting may be postponed beyond the lives of persons in being, in contravention of the rule, by a provision in the will construed as postponing the vesting until such time as the youngest of persons named should attain, or if living would have attained a certain age. n276 The rule is not violated by a direction in a will which may involve some delay in the actual conversion of the property, arising from any cause. Nor does the fact that the trustee is vested with a discretion to delay the sale of the real estate, not exceeding a certain period mentioned, involve an unlawful suspension of the power of alienation. n277 A provision in a will prohibiting alienation of devised real estate for a period of fifty years violates the statute against perpetuities. n278 A limitation otherwise valid under the rule is not impaired by an ensuing limitation which is void. n279

A clause creating a limitation over after a fee tail if the terre tenant attempted to bar the entail, was void as creating a "perpetuity." n280 Where there are several interests created by the instrument one or more of which are valid and one or more void, the courts are inclined to apply surgery and separate the good from the bad n281 unless they are so entwined that they cannot be separated n282 and the entire scheme of the estate will be destroyed, or unless the primary scheme was to benefit the void interest. n283

Where the estates created by the will are severable and part violate the rule, the valid trusts or gifts will be preserved unless the testator's entire scheme is thereby disrupted or injustice results. n284 Under the Pennsylvania rule, if the prior estates are valid in themselves, the court will not pass on the question of invalidity of the remainders until the prior estates are terminated. n285

If the void provision cannot be eliminated without distorting the entire gift, the whole is void. n286

Where the contingency is too remote there can be no valid remainder. Thus, where an estate is limited to a corporation not in existence, it is void, and a subsequent formation of the corporation during the existence of the particular estate does not give validity to the transaction. n287

The rule against perpetuities is applicable to trusts for private purposes. n288

There is no violation of the rule against perpetuities by the mere fact alone of a failure to limit the time for the execution of the trust. n289

Notwithstanding the existence of these judicial views the writers of these declarations, on the grounds of prudence, usually insert clauses which limit the duration of the trust to the time permitted by the rule against perpetuities. A common practice in this regard is to limit the trust to twenty-one years after the death of named children of the trustees.

A Massachusetts trust agreement by the terms of which the trustee is to hold the title to the fee and to lease in trust for certain specified purposes but the land trust certificate holder acquires an interest which is vendible and the owners of the property may avail themselves of the sums derived from a transfer of that interest for present purposes without personal liability, the payment being secured solely upon the trust estate without the personal liability of any one and, in the event of a default as defined in the trust instrument, a sale of the premises can be had, does not violate the rule against perpetuities notwithstanding no definite trust period is prescribed and that the parties to the transaction are numerous. n290 When the holders of the land trust certificates and the ultimate title certificates and the trustee can unite in a conveyance which conveys an absolute title to the trust estate, which conveyance can be made at any time without violating the trust agreement, the same does not violate the rule against perpetuities. n291

The validity of a trust depends upon there being a beneficiary who is definitely ascertained at the time of the creation of the trust or definitely ascertainable within the period of the "rule against perpetuities." There must be an outward manifestation, not secret, of the settlor's intention to create a trust. n292

When a limitation over after a determinable fee fails for remoteness, the possibility of reverter becomes entitled to possession when the fee determines. n293 A life estate is not enlarged into a fee simple absolute by the fact that the remainder over is void for remoteness, n294 nor is a determinable fee. n295 If the time for vesting of the interest is too remote then the interest is void ab initio. The courts are not wholly in accord as to the effect of this upon the other interests created by the instrument. Certainly any contingent interests limited over after the void interest are also void if they cannot take effect within the allotted period. n296 But there is disagreement as to whether a vested interest or a contingent interest which must vest, if at all within the period, is void if it follows a void interest. n297

It has been held that the creation of an executory limitation over after a fee upon condition subsequent destroys the right of re-entry so that if the executory limitation is void for remoteness as it would be unless expressly limited to happen within the period n298 -- there being no one to enter and terminate the immediate estate, the fee upon condition subsequent ripens into a fee simple absolute.

A covenant that the grantor would convey additional land to the grantee if a highway would be relocated, so that the granted tract would always be on the highway, created an equitable estate in the other land which was vested and was not subject to the rule. n299

The same theory has been applied, perhaps erroneously, to a fee simple determinable ripening it into a fee simple absolute where the limitation over fails. n300 This is not, of course, in harmony with the basic tenet of the fee simple determinable which theoretically dies of its own weakness, but the courts have had difficulty distinguishing between determinable fees and fees upon condition. n301 So it is held that upon the failure of an executory limitation the prior estate becomes indefeasibly vested. n302 It has been held that where an executory limitation over after a fee fails upon condition subsequent for impossibility, the fee becomes absolute. n303 There is, however, modern authority for the proposition that if the limitation over is void for remoteness, ab initio, the possibility of reverter still exists. n304

The rule against remoteness does not run while the interest is subject to a general power to appoint to another. n305 The rule that a contingent devise to a class vests on the birth of a member of such a class cannot be applied so as to validate a void estate within the rule against perpetuities, as it would then conflict with the rule that the question whether the estate is void as perpetuity must be determined by what might happen rather than by what has happened. n306 If there are two alternative remainders, one of which is too remote, the other will take, n307 but if there are two alternatives which the testator has not separated, they both are void, n308 and the court will not imply a valid alternative where the testator has not expressed one even though he clearly intended one. n309

"The general rule is, that, if a limitation over is void for remoteness, it places all prior gifts in the same situation as if the devise over had been wholly omitted. If the prior gift was in fee, the estate is vested in the first taker discharged of the limitation over; if for life, it takes effect as a life estate." n310 The cases have taken widely divergent paths, however, as to the extent to which surgery should be performed on an instrument to cut out the diseased language and preserve the good gifts or to let the entire scheme fall. n311

It is a recognized principle in the law of property that where the donee of a general power attempts to make an appointment that fails, but where, nevertheless, the donee has manifested an intent wholly to withdraw the appointive property from the operation of the instrument creating the power for all purposes and not merely for the purposes of the invalid appointment, the attempted appointment will commonly be effective to the extent of causing the appointive property to be taken out of the original instrument and to become in effect part of the estate of the donee of the power. And where, as in this instance, the invalid appointment is in trust there will be a resulting trust to the estate of the donee of the power. n312

The validity of a power of appointment dates from its execution, not its exercise. n313 As applied to powers of appointment, the general rule is that if the power is testamentary it cannot be exercised so as to suspend vesting beyond the time originally allowed the donor. n314

The common law position that the court cannot take the rule into consideration nor give weight to its effect in construing an instrument is being largely ignored today. Instead, if an instrument is capable of two instructions -- one of which will make the future interest valid, the other will make it void, the courts presume the maker intended to create a valid estate. n315

A direction to a trustee to distribute the estate as soon as possible did not violate the rule against remoteness of vesting. n316

In an inter vivos trust the period allowable for remoteness of vesting begins to run from the effective date of the trust, even though for taxation and creditors' claims purposes the trust may be illusory. n317 But in such a case the settlor was not one of the two allowable lives in being under the former New York rule. n318 Where the settlor of an inter vivos trust retains a power of revocation, the time for vesting does not begin to run until the settlor dies. n319

In a growing number of states where the delay is a mere detail of judicial administration, the rule is not violated. n320 New York has indicated the possibility of avoiding the rule by creating a reversionary interest by one trust and disposing of such interest by another, n321 even where the two instruments if embodied in one would violate the rule. n322

It has been held that if it is possible for all of the holders of outstanding interests to join and convey a fee, there is no violation of the rule against remoteness. n323

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 241. In re Neill's Estate, 89 N.Y.S.2d 394 (1949).

Gift to "grandchildren" when reaching 35 included afterborn grandchildren and violated the rule against perpetuities.

In re Ghiglia's Estate, 116 Cal. Rptr. 827 (1974).

Deed to wife for life, then to sons for life, and finally to sons' heirs violated the rule against perpetuities. Mounts v. Roberts, 388 S.W.2d 117 (Ky. 1965).

Gift in trust for the settlor and his wife providing that upon death of survivor the trustee should pay out the balance of the estate to the legal representative's survivor was void under the old New York rule as too remote. Alexander v. Dolen, 274 N.Y.S.2d 661 (1966).

The law of the donor's domicile, not that of the donee's, determines whether a power of appointment violates the rule. Dollar Savings & Trust Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Boston, 285 N.E.2d 768 (Ohio 1972).

See Leach & Logan, A Standard Saving Clause to Avoid Violations of the Rule, 74 Harv. L. Rev. 1141.

See also Powell, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Spendthrift Trusts in New York: Comments and Suggestions, 71 Colum. L. Rev. 688.

(n2)Footnote 242. "Southern v. Wollaston, 16 Beav. 166, 51 Eng. Reprint 740 (1852).

(n3)Footnote 243. Hill v. Birmingham, 38 A.2d 604 (Conn. 1944) (court saved a gift to grandchildren to be paid "when" they reached 25 by closing the class of grandchildren at the death of the last child); Applegate v. Brown, 95 N.W.2d 341 (Neb. 1959), 44 Minn. L. Rev. 1031 (in a gift to nephews and nieces the class closed at testator's death under rule of convenience and was not void for remoteness).

The rule against remoteness of vesting is so technical that disappointed legatees were denied recovery against the draftsman of a will where the bequest violated the rule against perpetuities. Lucas v. Hamm, 364 P.2d 685 (Cal. 1961).

Rule begins to run from date of creation of general powers of appointment (dictum). Murphy v. Mercantile-Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 203 A.2d 889 (Md. 1964).

The rule against perpetuities is viewed as of the testator's death. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Norris, 203 S.E.2d 657 (N.C. App. 1974).

See Robert J. Lynn & John W. VanDoren, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Remainders and Executory Interests: Orthodox Doctrine and Modern Cases, 27 U. Chi. L. Rev. 436, 462 (1960); W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: New Absurdity Judicial and Statutory Corrections, 73 Harv. L. Rev. 1318.

See also Lenoir, A Reexamination of Perpetuities in Arizona, 10 Ariz. L. Rev. 347 (1968); Ronald Maudsley, Perpetuities: Reforming The Common Law Rule -- to Wait and See, 60 Cornell L.Q. 355 (1975); Samuel M. Fedders, Perpetuities: The Wait and See Disaster -- A Brief Reply to Professor Maudsley, with a View Aside To Professors Leach, Simes, Wade, Dr. Morris, et al, 60 Cornell L.Q. 380 (1975).

(n4)Footnote 244. Sears v. Coolidge, 108 N.E.2d 563 (Mass. 1952); Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Curtis, 97 A.2d 207 (N.H. 1953) (court viewed facts as they existed at time life estates terminated).

Kentucky has adopted a "wait and see" and a cy pres statute.

Holding that a gift too remote is valid if it actually becomes vested within the period. Phelps v. Shropshire, 183 So. 2d 158 (Miss. 1966), 20 a.l.r.3d 1086.

Wait and see. Burgess v. Howe, 359 A.2d 652 (Vt. 1976).

(n5)Footnote 245. Ohio has adopted the wait and see doctrine. See Robert Lynn, The Ohio Perpetuities Reform Statute, 29 Ohio St. L.J. 1 (1968).

Pennsylvania in 1947 adopted a new statutory rule, Pa. Stat., tit. 20, § 301.4b, involving the "wait and see" doctrine and also Massachusetts, Mass. Gen. Laws 1932, ch. 184a. Worcester County Trust Co. v. Marble, 55 N.E.2d 446 (Mass. 1944).

(n6)Footnote 246. Wait and see rule applied to instruments created before the statute. Warner v. Whitman, 233 N.E.2d 14 (Mass. 1968).

"Wait and see" statute did not apply to interests created before the statute. In re Jones's Estate, 190 A.2d 120 (Pa. 1963).

Washington has now adopted the "wait and see" doctrine and also cy pres to beneficial interests in trust instruments. Wash. Rev. Code, §§ 11.98.010-11.98.030.

(n7)Footnote 247. Whitney v. Dodge, 38 P. 636 (Cal. 1894); Cross v. United States Trust Co., 30 N.E. 125 (N.Y. 1892).

Trust violating rule against remoteness in testator's domicile void though it would have been good at state of trustee's domicile. In re Samuels' Will, 128 N.Y.S.2d 349 (N.Y. 1954).

Rule does not apply to vested equitable interests. Finch v. Honeycutt, 97 S.E.2d 478 (N.C. 1957).

Saving an executory interest by calling it a right of re-entry. Knowles v. South County Hosp., 140 A.2d 499, 141 A.2d 263 (R.I. 1958) (the property was to revert to the testator's estate on the happening of a contingency. The residuary devisee then would take).

(n8)Footnote 248. Freke v. Carbery, L.R., 16 Eq. 461, 21 W.R. 835 (1873).

Wilmington Trust Co. v. Sloane, 54 A.2d 544 (Del. 1947); Ford v. Ford, 44 N.W. 1057 (Mich. 1890); Hobson v. Hale, 95 N.Y. 588 (1884).

(n9)Footnote 249. In re Friend's Will, 28 N.E.2d 377 (N.Y. 1940).

(n10)Footnote 250. McCreery v. Johnston, 110 S.E. 464 (W. Va. 1922).

See Constructional Devices and the New York Rule Against Perpetuities, 33 Fordham L. Rev. 259 (1964).

See also Richard R. Powell, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Spendthrift Trusts in New York: Comments and Suggestions, 71 Colum. L. Rev. 688 (1971).

(n11)Footnote 251. Madison v. Larmon, 48 N.E. 556 (Ill. 1897); Northern Trust Co. v. Porter, 13 N.E.2d 487 (Ill. 1938); Barnum v. Barnum, 90 am. dec. 88 (Md. 1866); Gates v. Seibert, 57 S.W. 1065 (Mo. 1900); Hunt v. Wright 47 N.H. 396 (1866); In re Mifflin's Appeal, 15 A. 525 (Pa.), 1 l.r.a. 453; Barton v. Thaw, 92 A. 312 (Pa. 1914); In re Reed's Estate, 23 Erie 20 (Pa.).

See In re Rolston's Estate, 10 N.Y.S.2d 660 (1939).

Testamentary provisions for suspension of trust until after probate of a will does not violate the rule against perpetuities. Asche v. Asche, 216 A.2d 272 (Del. Ch. 1964).

A will provided that there should be no "distribution" until all directions had been complied with, constituted only a postponement of enjoyment and no violation of the rule against perpetuities (i.e., this was not construed as a condition precedent to vesting). West v. Storm, 217 N.E.2d 825 (Ill. App. 1966).

A gift in trust to pay the corpus to four named children at various ages with limitation over on death, leaving issue, was held contingent until time for payment arrived and the vesting in the grandchildren was too remote. Curtis v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 318 S.W.2d 33 (Ky. 1958).

A provision in a will that property devised to a daughter for life and then to her children but not to be sold until the grandchildren became 42 was void beyond the granddaughter's lifetime. In re Kelly's Estate, 193 So. 2d 575 (Miss. 1967).

Other authorities however treat the rule against remoteness as entirely distinct from the principles applicable to restraints on alienation.

See The Quest of the Best Vest, 37 So. Cal. L. Rev. 283 (1964); That "Simple and Clear Rule" -- The Common Law Rule Against Perpetuities in Mississippi, 34 Miss. L.J. 63 (1962).

A trust to the grantor for life then to pay to his issue for their support and to distribute on the death or becoming 25 of the issue of two named persons of the grantor's issue then living, per stirpes, did not violate the Rule since the court held that the trust would be terminated by the court if at the time of the death of the two named persons there was a grandchild not yet 25 who had not been alive at the time of creation of the trust. In the Application of Wolfsohn, 339 N.Y.S.2d 755 (App. 1973), appeal denied by Matter of Wolfsohn, 297 N.E.2d 524 (N.Y. 1973).

(n12)Footnote 252. Mahoney v. Mahoney, 120 A. 342 (Conn. 1923); Grant v. Grant, 2 S.E.2d 421 (Ga. 1939).

(n13)Footnote 253. Swain v. Bowers, 158 N.E. 598 (Ind. App. 1927) (the vesting of title under a devise in trust to children of specified persons, including posthumous children was not affected by a provision postponing enjoyment).

Fuller v. Hedgpeth, 80 S.E.2d 18 (N.C. 1954) (the rule applies to vesting in interest, not in enjoyment).

(n14)Footnote 254. Ould v. Washington Hosp. for Foundlings, 95 U.S. 303 (1877); Duggan v. Slocum, 92 F. 806 (1899); Hill v. Birmingham, 38 A.2d 604 (Conn. 1944); Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893); Johnston v. Cosby, 29 N.E.2d 608 (Ill. 1940); Smith v. Renne, 46 N.E.2d 587 (Ill. 1943); Sellers v. Archer, 134 N.E.2d 264 (Ill. 1956) (to A for life then to B for life then to heirs of body of B did not violate the rule merely because of possibility B might not have heirs of the body); In re Dees' Estate, 308 P.2d 90 (Kan. 1957) (limitation over to heirs of testator if devisee should ever sell or mortgage was void for remoteness); Taylor v. Dooley, 297 S.W.2d 905 (Ky. 1956) (limitation over to children of bodily heirs of life tenant held too remote); Pulitzer v. Livingston, 36 A. 635 (Me. 1896); Perkins v. Iglehart, 39 A.2d 672 (Md. 1944); Rutherfurd v. Farrar, 118 S.W.2d 79 (Mo. App. 1938); In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898); In re Warren's Estate, 182 A. 396 (Pa. 1936), 104 a.l.r. 1345; Betts v. Snyder, 19 A.2d 82 (Pa. 1941) (a gift of a life estate with remainder over upon conditions subsequent as to use with a final limitation over on breach of conditions, the limitation over was void for remoteness and the existence of the gift over destroyed a right of re-entry in the grantor's heir); Crockett v. Scott, 284 S.W.2d 289 (Tenn. 1955), 56 a.l.r.2d 442 (to A for life then to B and the children of A and the heirs of those who were dead for life then to their children held too remote); Bank of Cal. v. Ager, 109 P.2d 548 (Wash. 1941).

See W. Burton Leach, Perpetuities in a Nutshell, 51 Harv. L. Rev. 638.

Trust to terminate on death of last surviving heir was too remote. Frost Nat'l Bank of San Antonio v. Newton, 554 S.W.2d 149 (Tex. 1977).

(n15)Footnote 255. Haggerty v. Oakland, 326 P.2d 957 (Cal. App. 1958), 66 a.l.r.2d 718 (rule applies if at the time of the creation of the instrument there appears any possibility the interest may not vest within the time); Erickson v. Palmer, 315 P.2d 164 (Or. 1957) (executory devise valid if vests within the rule); In re Lewis' Estate, 37 A.2d 482 (Pa. 1944).

Wright v. Renehan, 76 A.2d 705 (N.J. Super. 1950) (gift to great-grandchildren of a settlor held void).

Limitation over after unborn granddaughter's death in inter vivos trust held too remote. United Cal. Bank v. Bottler, 94 Cal. Rptr. 227 (Cal. App. 1971).

In a limitation in the will to the wife for life and then to testator's named children absolutely, a later provision, creating a limitation over in the event any named child predeceased the survivor of the testator and his wife, was invalid. Schmidt v. Claus, 93 N.W.2d 592 (Iowa 1958).

In the case of In re Lattouf's Will, 208 A.2d 411 (N.J. Super. 1965), the court allowed evidence of a hysterectomy in connection with the rule of remoteness of vesting. Finding no possibility of issue. In re Ransom's Estate, 214 A.2d 521 (N.J. Super. 1965).

In a gift to "vest in" three named remaindermen if living when a grandson became 30, it was held that it must vest during lives of remaindermen and, therefore, valid though these lives were not the measuring lives of the trust. Finkbeiner v. Finkbeiner, 165 N.E.2d 825 (Ohio App. 1959).

In Abram v. Wilson, 220 N.E.2d 739 (Ohio 1966), the court refused to find it was impossible for a man 75 to have children so as to take the rule against remoteness of vesting.

Will to son and daughter for life then to all grandchildren for life then to testator's heirs. All life estates held valid but remainder to heirs held too remote. Sellers v. Powers, 426 S.W.2d 533 (Tex. 1968).

Gift to unborn children of living grandchild did not violate the Rule. Lowry v. Murren, 236 N.W.2d 627 (Neb. 1975).

Class gift in remainder valid where interest would vest during life tenant's lifetime. Zimmerman v. First Nat'l Bank of Birmingham, 348 So. 2d 1359 (Ala. 1977).

Fund to be divided among those then living when youngest grandchild became 25 was void. Contingent remainder as too remote. Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977).

(n16)Footnote 256. In re Holthausen's Will, 26 N.Y.S.2d 140 (1941); Stephens v. Stephens, Cas. Temp. Talb. 228 (1736).

Every estate created by will or deed shall vest within the life or lives of those in being and 21 years and ten months thereafter. McCreery v. Johnston, 110 S.E. 464 (W. Va. 1922).

Under the common law the rule could not be considered in construing an instrument as to when a class closed or whether interests were vested or contingent. More recent cases, however, have used the rule in connection with construction so as to avoid a result which would violate the rule. Bankers Trust Co. v. Pearson, 99 A.2d 224 (Conn. 1953).

(n17)Footnote 257. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U.S. 340 (1885); Chilcott v. Hart, 45 P. 391 (Colo. 1896), 35 l.r.a. 41; Madison v. Larmon, 48 N.E. 556 (Ill. 1897); Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. 227, aff'd, 11 Ves. 112, 8 R.R. 104, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 498 (1799).

In a devise to children for life and then to grandchildren for life, remainder in fee to the great-grandchildren, life estate was valid but the limitation to great-grandchildren was void. Thomas v. Utterback, 269 S.W.2d 251 (Ky. 1954).

A devise to children of named nieces and nephews in trust continued until youngest child reached 30, whether born before or after the testator, vested at the death of the last survivor of the named nieces and nephews and the rule was not violated. Harris v. France, 232 S.W.2d 64 (Tenn. App. 1950).

See Robert J. Lynn, Reforming The Rule Against Perpetuities: Choosing the Measuring Lives, 1965 Duke L.J. 720.

It was held in Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977), that a bequest in a will which violated the rule against remoteness was not saved by a provision that the trust ran beyond a longer period than permitted by law, then upon the happening of such contingency that portion of the estate should be paid to person or persons to whom the portion would ultimately go under the other provisions. The savings clause was held void because it adopted the very provisions that made it void.

(n18)Footnote 258. Matter of Unett's Estate, 250 N.W.2d 644 (Neb. 1977).

(n19)Footnote 259. Rolfe & Rumford Asylum v. Lefebre, 45 A. 1087 (N.H. 1898); Stein v. United States Nat'l Bank, 108 P.2d 1016 (Or. 1941).

Trust to continue for 25 years and then to go to "heirs" of settlor's sisters violated the Rule. Palmer v. Ketner, 223 S.E.2d 913 (N.C. App. 1976).

(n20)Footnote 260. Henderson v. Moore, 189 S.W.2d 59 (Tex. Civ. App. 1945), aff'd, Henderson v. Moore, 190 S.W.2d 500 (Tex. 1945).

Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960) (trust for 25 years in gross held valid where the principal would vest, if at all, within lives of beneficiaries living at testator's death); Perkins v. Iglehart, 39 A.2d 672 (Md. 1944) (to grandchildren of testatrix surviving her son and his "in-law" was too remote); Parker v. Parker, 113 S.E.2d 899 (N.C. 1960), 40 n.c.l. Rev. 151 (gift in remainder to grandchildren when the youngest reached 28 violated the rule).

(n21)Footnote 261. Alexander v. Dolen, 274 N.Y.S.2d 661 (1966).

(n22)Footnote 262. In re Manson's Estate, 88 N.Y.S.2d 95 (N.Y. 1949).

Bequest to "widow of X" held not to violate rule as intended to refer to a person who is or will be alive in being on effective date of the instrument. In re Williams' Will, 245 N.Y.S.2d 672 (1964).

(n23)Footnote 263. Unless the vertical separability rule is applied, as in In re Harrah's Estate, 72 A.2d 587 (Pa. 1950).

See, however, Tiehen v. Hebenstreit, 42 N.W.2d 802 (Neb. 1950) (held valid); Rose v. Rose, 60 S.E.2d 45 (Va. 1950).

Under a conveyance in trust for the life of one of the grantees with full power on the part of the cestui que trust to devise and bequeath the property or any part thereof or any estate or interest therein to or for the use and benefit of such of her children and descendants in such proportions as she may see fit, a will left by the cestui que trust giving equitable life estates in the trust property which were to vest in four of her children immediately upon her death does not violate the statute against perpetuities notwithstanding the four children were born after the execution of the trust deed creating the trust and power. Hawkins v. Ghent, 140 A. 212 (Md. 1928).

Deed to A for life, then to children of A for life, then to their heirs, violated the rule against perpetuities as to the gift to the heirs. Mounts v. Roberts, 388 S.W.2d 117 (Ky. 1965).

(n24)Footnote 264. Bridgeport Trust Co. v. Parker, 116 A. 182 (Conn. 1922).

(n25)Footnote 265. Edward John Noble Hosp. v. Board of Foreign Missions, 176 N.Y.S.2d 157 (N.Y. 1958); St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Kelley, 199 S.W.2d 344 (Mo. 1947).

See Robert J. Lynn & John W. VanDoren, Applying the Rule Against Perpetuities to Remainders and Executory Interests: Orthodox Doctrine and Modern Cases, 27 U. Chi. L. Rev. 436 (1960).

(n26)Footnote 266. Edward John Noble Hosp. v. Board of Foreign Missions, 176 N.Y.S.2d 157 (1958).

(n27)Footnote 267. Limitation over after all "direct blood issue" held void as too remote. Kettler v. Atkinson, 383 S.W.2d 557 (Tex. 1967).

(n28)Footnote 268. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U.S. 340, 28 L. Ed. 1015 (1885); Hosea v. Jacobs, 98 Mass. 65 (1867); Lowe v. Rice, 291 S.W.2d 287 (Tenn. App. 1956) (devise to testator's grandchildren not too remote).

Where decedent in an irrevocable living trust retained a testamentary power of appointment, decedent's life was one of the measuring lives for the rule against remoteness. In re Bauer's Trust, 200 N.E.2d 207 (N.Y.S. 1964).

(n29)Footnote 269. In re Friday's Estate, 170 A. 123 (Pa. 1933), 91 a.l.r. 766.

Remainder to grandchildren of life tenant is void, if in a deed, since the parents of the remainderman may be born after date of the deed. Bach v. Pace, 305 S.W.2d 528 (Ky. 1957).

Where a will provided that the period of vesting could run only for the time valid under law, the court limited the lives on which the limitation was valid to named lives. Asche v. Asche, 216 A.2d 272 (Del. Ch. 1964).

Family settlement agreement had been designed by which real estate was divided among five children. The agreement provided that all oil and gas rights, leases or royalties of the entire property would be shared. Legal fees in the tracts were held in individual names, but there was an outstanding equitable fee simple interest in oil and gas rights in each of the other tracts held by each of the other children or their representatives. These fees were vested and were, therefore, subject to rule against remoteness. Springer v. Litsey, 345 P.2d 669 (Kan. 1959).

A conveyance to A and his bodily heirs created a life estate. The granting clause indicated where bodily heirs meant his children. Bauer v. Bauer, 360 P.2d 852 (Kan. 1961).

Devise of remainder interest to great-grandchildren was too remote and doctrine of separability was denied. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Norris, 203 S.E.2d 657 (N.C. App. 1974).

See W. Barton Leach and James K. Logan, Perpetuities: A Standard Saving Clause to Avoid Violations of the Rule, 74 Harv. L. Rev. 1141 (1961).

(n30)Footnote 270. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U.S. 340 (1885); Hall v. Hall, 123 Mass. 120 (1877); Brown v. Brown, 6 S.W. 869, 7 S.W. 640 (Tenn. 1888).

(n31)Footnote 271. Fitchie v. Brown, 211 U.S. 321 (1908); Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. 227, aff'd 11 Ves. 112, 8 R.R. 104, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 498.

(n32)Footnote 272. Lawrence v. Smith, 45 N.E. 259 (Ill. 1896); Jee v. Audley, 1 Cox 324, 1 R.R. 46.

Pennsylvania also determines the question of violation of the rule against remoteness by the actual situation existing at the time of end of the allowed period. Pa. Stat., tit. 20, § 301.4b.

Gift to any of my relatives who name a child after me, held too remote. In re Finn's Will, 262 N.Y.S.2d 972 (1965).

(n33)Footnote 273. In re Coggins' Appeal, 16 A. 579 (Pa. 1889).

An inter vivos trust reserved life estate with general testamentary power of appointment. In default of appointment of failure thereof, one-half was to go to A for life if he survived settlor. The other one-half to children or issue thereof of the settlor, principal to be paid at 21 to youngest taker living at settlor's death. Settlor by will appointed to daughters for life remainder over to children or their issue on death of last of settlor's grandchildren living at settlor's death provided that, if gift was too remote, principal was to go to those entitled to the income. Both principal and alternative gift held void for remoteness. McCreary's Trust Estate v. Pitts, 47 A.2d 235 (Pa. 1946).

Possibility that testamentary trust in remainder would not vest until more than twenty-one years plus lives in being, plus period of gestation, caused the property to be passed by intestacy. Palmer v. Ketner, 223 S.E.2d 913 (N.C. App. 1976).

(n34)Footnote 274. Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Scott, 189 A. 653 (N.J. Eq. 1937).

(n35)Footnote 275. Kleinheider v. Phillips Pipe Line Co., 391 F. Supp. 159 (pipeline easements); St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Kelley, 199 S.W.2d 344 (Mo. 1947) (will construction).

(n36)Footnote 276. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Bassett, 85 S.W.2d 569 (Mo. 1935).

A bequest to A and B and their surviving descendants per stirpes meant descendants living at testator's death and did not violate the Rule. Antibus v. Hart, 135 N.E.2d 835 (Ind. App. 1956).

Tennessee has abolished the rule of Jee v. Audley, 1 Cox 324, 39 Eq. Rep. 1186; Tenn. Code Ann. § 24-516.

(n37)Footnote 277. Hagen v. Sacrison, 123 N.W. 518 (N.D. 1909).

A will directing that funds should be used for the maintenance of a cemetery lot for the testator was valid against the rule where the executor had discretionary power as to reasonable time to perform the work. Ellis v. Andrews, 324 S.W.2d 917 (Tex. Civ. App. 1959).

(n38)Footnote 278. Quilliam v. Union Trust Co., 142 N.E. 214 (Ind. 1924).

Reservation of perpetual right to drill for oil and gas was a void perpetuity. Dallapi v. Campbell, 114 P.2d 646 (Cal. 1941).

Accumulation provision in testamentary trust for a period within Rule Against Remoteness is valid but a constructional preference is against accumulation. Rogerson v. Wheeling Dollar Savings & Trust Co., 222 S.E.2d 816 (W. Va. 1976).

(n39)Footnote 279. Hawkins v. Ghent, 140 A. 212 (Md. 1928).

(n40)Footnote 280. Corbet's Case, 1 Coke 83b.

(n41)Footnote 281. Emerson v. Campbell, 84 A.2d 148 (Del. 1951); Davenport v. Davenport Found., 222 P.2d 11 (Cal. 1950) (the court construed a gift in remainder to a class as including afterborn children and as, therefore, invalid in toto); In re Foster's Estate, 376 P.2d 784 (Kan. 1962), 12 Kan. L. Rev. 460 (bequest in trust for grandchildren to be distributed when youngest reached 23 violated the rule but the trust was severable); Carter v. Berry, 140 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1962) (class gift is not invalid merely because the interest of one member might vest too remotely); Lockridge v. Mace, 18 S.W. 1145 (Mo. 1892), may no longer be the Missouri doctrine as to perpetuities. See McGowan v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 369 S.W.2d 144 (Mo. 1892); In re Fischer's Will, 120 N.E.2d 688 (N.Y. 1954); In re Harrah's Estate, 72 A.2d 587 (N.Y. 1950); Harris v. France, 232 S.W.2d 64 (Tenn. 1950) (a gift to a class was upheld as not too remote, being construed as vesting in the members of the class at birth with enjoyment postponed).

Exercising portions of a trust which violate the rule against remoteness of vesting so as to preserve valid provisions. In re Freeman's Estate, 404 P.2d 222 (Kan. 1965).

When an inter vivos trust contained a saving clause that if any provisions which violated the rule defending the parts should be ineffective, the trusts were preserved by the saving clause even though it contained language violative of the rule. Nelson v. Mercantile Trust Co., 335 S.W.2d 167 (Mo. 1960).

See In re Pendleton's Estate, 246 N.Y.S.2d 351 (N.Y. 1964); N.Y. Prop. Law, § 11a (where the age at which the person would take is too remote, New York reduces the age to 21 years, but this is only as to those or to whom it is necessary to reduce to save the interest. The others must wait until the stated time).

Provision of a will for termination of a testamentary trust upon "the day the youngest living child of my son, in being, on the date of my death, attains twenty-five years of age" operated to close class and resulted in vesting of remainders during life in being at death of the testator. Green v. Green, 221 N.E.2d 388 (Ohio 1966).

Instruments must be so construed so as to avoid rule against remoteness if possible. Childs v. Sherman, 221 N.E.2d 748 (Mass. 1966).

Missouri has now joined those states which permit the severability of an instrument to preserve the portion which does not violate the rule against remoteness. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Hammerstein, 380 S.W.2d 287 (Mo. 1964); also see Eckhardt, Rule Against Perpetuities in Missouri, 30 Mo. L. Rev. 27.

See W. Barton Leach & James K. Logan, Perpetuities: A Standard Saving Clause to Avoid Violations of the Rule, 74 Harv. L. Rev. 1141 (1961).

In ambiguous language the court adopts the construction which would uphold a contract against the rule against perpetuities, absent extrinsic evidence to show that the rule was violated. Watergate Corp. v. Reagan, 321 So. 2d 133 (Fla. App. 1975).

Saving portion of bequest which did not violate the rule. Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977).

(n42)Footnote 282. Rozell v. Rozell, 186 N.W. 489 (Mich. 1922) (under the circumstances of the particular case the life estates were sustained notwithstanding the invalidity of the remainders).

A devise to testator's daughter and, on her death without issue, to testator's nephews and nieces, if construed to refer generally to a death without issue, that is, either before or after the testator's death, would mean a limitation over after and indefinite failure of issue and, therefore, be void under the statute against perpetuities and the daughter would take a fee tail at common law which is converted by the Indiana statute into a fee simple. Quilliam v. Union Trust Co., 142 N.E. 214 (Ind. 1924). Compare with the following case holding a bequest to a daughter of the rent and profits of certain property for life and at her death making provision for the distribution of the property among her lawful children and in the event of her death no issue her surviving, the property to be divided equally among her brothers and sisters and their issue does not violate the statute against perpetuities when it is apparent that the word "issue" was used as the equivalent of children. Daskam v. Lockwood, 130 A. 92 (Conn. 1925).

Devise to daughter for life and then to bodily heirs for life and then to their children was too remote. Daughter's life estate was valid but remainders over were too closely entwined with invalid provisions and were void. Taylor v. Dooley, 297 S.W.2d 905 (Ky. 1956).

Devise in trust to children upon reaching ages of 25 with part of income meanwhile and if any die then to their issue upon the issue reaching the same age was too contingent and too remote as to possible grandchildren. Entire trust was invalid as general scheme of the testator would be frustrated by upholding gift to children alone. Curtis v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 318 S.W.2d 33 (Ky. 1958).

A devise to one to have and to hold in fee simple, forever, with the proviso, however, that he shall not grant, bargain, sell and convey or in any manner dispose of the land devised, or the timber thereon, or any part, parcel or quantity thereof until the year 1975, but should the devisee die before such date the limitation relative to the sale of the land is declared null and void and the property devised made to vest absolutely in the wife and heirs of the devisee gives a life estate in devisees subject to be converted into fee on the arrival of the year 1975 if he be then living, and does not violate the statutes against perpetuities. Bratton v. Graham, 111 So. 353 (Miss. 1927).

Where two remote limitations cannot be disentangled from the other provisions of the trust the valid provisions are also destroyed under the theory of infectious invalidity. New England Trust Co. v. Sanger, 149 N.E.2d 598 (Mass. 1958).

"All or nothing at all" rule of remoteness does not prevail. Carter v. Berry, 140 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1962).

Permitting excise of invalid provisions of a charitable trust. In re Scholler's Estate, 169 A.2d 554 (Pa. 1961).

If the general testamentary scheme is too remote incidental prior limitations also fall though they would take effect within the time limited. In re Edwards' Will, 180 A.2d 590 (Pa. 1962).

Entire class gift fails if there is any possibility that the gift to the class will not vest in every possible member of the class within the rule. Abram v. Wilson, 220 N.E.2d 739 (Ohio 1966).

Refusing to apply the doctrine of partial "approximation" to save gift by merely invalidating portion of an option that violated the Rule. Pace v. Culpepper, 347 So. 2d 1313 (Miss. 1977).

Saving clause effective only if will provisions as to perpetuity is ambiguous. Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977).

(n43)Footnote 283. Where several trusts are created by will which are independent of each other and each is complete within itself, some of which are lawful and others are unlawful, and which may be separated from each other, the illegal trusts may be cut out of the will and the legal ones permitted to stand. There is, however, a well-recognized limitation in all the reported cases and by the text-writers upon this rule which is equally well established with the rule, which is that when some of the trusts in the will are legal and some are illegal, if they are so connected together as to constitute an entire scheme for the disposition of the estate, so that the presumed wishes of the testator would be defeated if one portion were retained and other portions rejected, or if manifest injustice would result from such construction to the beneficiaries or to some of them, then all the trusts must be construed together, and all must stand or all must fall. Barrett v. Barrett, 99 N.E. 625 (Ill. 1912).

Where too remote limitations cannot be disentangled from the other provisions of the trust the valid provisions are also destroyed under the theory of infectious invalidity. New England Trust Co. v. Sanger, 149 N.E.2d 598 (Mass. 1958).

Taylor v. Dooley, 297 S.W.2d 905 (Ky. 1956) ("infectious invalidity doctrine" applied).

Devise to wife for life, then to daughters or survivors for life, then to their children for life with limitation over to great-grandchildren and, if none, then to an institution violated the rule and doctrine of separability did not operate. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Norris, 203 S.E.2d 657 (N.C. App. 1974).

(n44)Footnote 284. McCreary v. Pitts, 47 A.2d 235 (Pa. 1946); In re Lauck's Estate, 57 A.2d 855 (Pa. 1948); Loddington v. Kime, 1 Salk 224, 91 Eng. Rep. 198.

Contra, In re Packer's Estate, 92 A. 70 (Pa. 1914).

Clause in testamentary trust directing trustee to eliminate any provision violating perpetuities justified the court in eliminating lines postponing vesting beyond the time limit. Cennamo v. American Sec. & Trust Co., 360 F. Supp. 1354 (D.D.C. 1973).

See William J. Murphy Separability and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 77 Dick. L. Rev. 277 (1973).

It was held in Hagemann v. National Bank & Trust Co., 237 S.E.2d 388 (Va. 1977), that a bequest in a will which violated the rule against remoteness was not saved by a provision that the trust ran beyond a longer period than permitted by law, then upon the happening of such contingency that portion of the estate should be paid to person or persons to whom the portion would ultimately go under the other provisions. Savings clause was held void because it adopted the very provisions that made it void.

(n45)Footnote 285. In re Micheletti's Estate, 151 P.2d 833 (Cal. 1944).

(n46)Footnote 286. Curtis v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 318 S.W.2d 33 (Ky. 1958) (voiding the entire will where the gift was too remote).

Devise to wife for life, then to daughters or survivors for life, then to their children for life with limitation over to great-grandchildren and, if none, then to an institution violated the rule and doctrine of separability did not operate. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Norris, 203 S.E.2d 657 (N.C. App. 1974).

(n47)Footnote 287. Zeisweiss v. James, 3 Am. Rep. 558 (Pa. 1870).

(n48)Footnote 288. Thorp v. Lund, 116 N.E. 946 (Mass. 1917); West Texas Bank & Trust Co. v. Matlock, 212 S.W. 937 (Tex. 1919).

(n49)Footnote 289. Such a trust for the convenience of an unincorporated association in renting and selling land, under which the land is held for no other purpose, and where the income is not accumulated, but is distributed as it accrues, and where the land is to be sold free of trusts at the will of the association and where the whole equitable interest in the trust is at every moment vested absolutely in those who at that moment are shareholders and never can be vested in any other persons save by act of the absolute owners or by operation of law upon their property and not by force of any limitation contained in the deed of trust; the equitable interests so vested being also constantly vendible by their several owners without let or hindrance, as well as subject to their debts, and passing like other property upon death, by virtue not of the deed of trust but of the general laws governing the disposition of the property of decedents, withdraws no property from commerce, and is not within the reason or the terms of what is called the "rule against perpetuities." The trust involves no future limitations, no restraint upon alienation, and no accumulations either of income or of principal. The provisions by which the trust fund may be at some time held for the benefit of persons not shareholders at its inception and who may become such at a period more remote than that allowed by the rule, are not future limitations made by the trust-deed in the sense in which the word "limitation" is used in speaking of the operation of the rule. If there shall ever be a shareholder other than those in which the whole equitable estate was absolutely vested at the inception of the trust; that shareholder will not take his interest by virtue of a limitation in the trust-deed, but because of his succession by virtue of the general principles of law, to the property of the original shareholder. The new shareholder, with reference to the rule, is in the same situation as a person who, after the expiration of all lives which were in being when a fee or an estate tail was created, and of a further period of twenty-one years, takes the fee by the operation of the law which makes property vendible by, or descendible from, the owner and not by virtue of a limitation in the instrument which created the fee. The entire ownership is never for a moment uncertain nor unvested, and at every moment each owner can freely dispose of his property, and at each moment it can be transferred to his creditor by the ordinary processes of the law, and at each moment the trust can be terminated at the will of the owners of the equitable interest.

Howe v. Morse, 55 N.E. 213 (Mass. 1899).

> The mere creation of a trust does not ipso facto suspend the power of alienation. It is only suspended by such trust, where a trust term is created, either expressly or by implication, during the existence of which a sale by the trustee would be in contravention of the trust. Where the trustee is empowered to sell the land without restriction as to time, the power of alienation is not suspended, although the alienation is in fact postponed the nonaction of the trustee, or in consequence of discretion reposed in him by the creator of the trust.

Robert v. Corning, 89 N.Y. 225 (1882). See Ward v. McMath, 241 S.W. 3 (Ark. 1922); Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893); Minot v. Burroughs, 112 N.E. 620 (Mass. 1916); In re Pittock, 199 P. 633, 202 P. 216 (Or. 1921).

(n50)Footnote 290. Baker v. Stern, 216 N.W. 147 (Wis. 1927), 58 a.l.r. 462.

(n51)Footnote 291. Id.

(n52)Footnote 292. Trustees of Graceland Cemetery Imp. Fund v. United States, 515 F.2d 763 (1975), approving Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 112 (1959).

(n53)Footnote 293. Institution for Sav. in Roxbury v. Roxbury Home for Aged Women, 139 N.E. 301 (Mass. 1923); Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 269 S.W. 36 (Tenn. 1925).

(n54)Footnote 294. Nellis v. Rickard, 66 P. 32 (Cal. 1901); Comstock v. Bridgeport Trust Co., 138 A. 440 (Conn. 1927); Security Trust Co. v. Cooling, 42 A.2d 784 (Del. 1945); Foley v. Nalley, 184 N.E. 316 (Ill. 1932); Bankers Trust Co. v. Garver, 268 N.W. 568 (Iowa 1936); Graham v. Whitridge, 57 A. 609, 58 A. 36 (Md. 1904); Lovering v. Worthington, 106 Mass. 86 (1870); Wright v. Renehan, 76 A.2d 705 (N.J. Super. 1950).

Contra, Maher v. Maher, 139 F. Supp. 294 (1956).

(n55)Footnote 295. Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950); Jones v. Burns, 74 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1954); Donehue v. Nilges, 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954); Leonard v. Burr, 18 N.Y. 96 (1858); Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960) (interest made contingent upon event prevailing for a specific term in excess of 21 years failed).

(n56)Footnote 296. If the provisions of a will are such that under them a violation of the rule against perpetuities may possibly happen, then the devise or interests dependent upon such provisions are void. Thorne v. Continental Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 27 N.E.2d 302 (Ill. App. 1940).

See Herbert Barry, Mr. Thellusson's Will, 22 Va. L. Rev. 416 (1936); Herbert Barry, The Duke of Norfolk's Case, 23 Va. L. Rev. 538 (1937); Bordwell, Alienability and Perpetuities, 22 Iowa L. Rev. 437 (1937), 23 Iowa L.Rev. 1 (1937); Percy Bordwell, Perpetuities From the Point of View of the Draftsman, 11 Rutgers L. Rev. 429 (1957); Bertel M. Sparks Perpetuities Problems of the General Practitioner, 8 U. Fla. L. Rev. 465 (1955).

Mass. Laws § 1969. As respects perpetuities class is determined as if the person died after the happening of the event.

(n57)Footnote 297. Succeeding interest is void. Sandford v. Sandford, 20 S.W.2d 83 (Ky. 1929); Ledwith v. Hurst, 130 A. 315 (Pa. 1925); Beard v. Westcott, 5 Taunt. 393, 5 B. & Ald. 801, 24 R.R. 553.

Valid. Goldsborough v. Martin, 41 Md. 488 (1875).

If it is to be presumed that the testator would have preferred to die intestate if he had known that the principal gift violated the rule, the entire will fails. In re Whitney's Estate, 167 P. 399 (Cal. 1917); Dotten v. Glennie, 106 A. 824 (Conn. 1919); Taylor v. Dooley, 297 S.W.2d 905 (Ky. 1956); Tompkins v. Pryor, 60 A.2d 801 (N.J. Eq. 1948); In re Lilley's Estate, 116 A. 392 (Pa. 1922).

(n58)Footnote 298. Edward John Noble Hosp. v. Board of Foreign Missions, 176 N.Y.S.2d 157 (1958).

(n59)Footnote 299. Greco v. Meadow River Coal & Land Co., 113 S.E.2d 79 (W. Va. 1960).

(n60)Footnote 300. Limitation over after determinable fee is too remote. Donehue v. Nilges, 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954), 45 a.l.r.2d 1150.

(n61)Footnote 301. McMahon v. Consistory of St. Paul's Reformed Church, 75 A.2d 122 (Md. 1950).

(n62)Footnote 302. Howe v. Hodge, 38 N.E. 1083 (Ill. 1894); Chapman v. Cheney, 61 N.E. 363 (Ill. 1901).

See Maher v. Maher, 139 F. Supp. 294 (1956), holding that if a limitation over is too remote the immediate estate becomes a fee simple absolute regardless of its quality. (Although this is not in accord with the feeling of most legal writers or other cases except in the instance of a limitation over after fee upon condition subsequent. Yet it must be remembered that the Rule Against Remoteness is of such comparatively recent origin that it cannot be said to have finally crystallized.)

See also Eugene F. Scales, Disposition of Property in the Event of Failure of Subsequent Future Interests, 47 Ill. B.J. 692 (1959).

(n63)Footnote 303. McGlothlin v. McElvain, 95 N.E.2d 68 (Ill. 1950).

Measure of rule is events which actually transpired, not possibility as of time of death of original donor under Dollar Savings & Trust Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Boston, 285 N.E.2d 768 (Ohio 1972). But otherwise the common-law rule that the period is measured from the time of creation of the power, not its exercise, governs.

(n64)Footnote 304. Donehue v. Nilges, 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954).

(n65)Footnote 305. Pulitzer v. Livingston, 36 A. 635 (Me. 1896); In re Mifflin's Appeal, 15 A. 525 (Pa. 1888); Schellentrager v. Tradesmens Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 88 A.2d 773 (Pa. 1952).

Testator left to his son for life and then to his son's issue for their lives with power in the issue to appoint after 21 and in default of appointment to the daughter. The limitation to the daughter was void. Ortman v. Dugan, 100 A. 82 (Md. 1917).

The period of the rule against remoteness begins to run from the date of creation of a general testamentary power of appointment, not from date of its exercise. Restatement, Property, § 392.

In unconditional power of revocation, time began when such power ceased, usually at death of grantor unless released earlier. Second Nat'l Bank of New Haven v. Harris Trust & Sav. Bank, 283 A.2d 226 (Conn. Super. 1971).

(n66)Footnote 306. Perkins v. Iglehart, 39 A.2d 672 (1944).

Will directing to pay income to children per stirpes for 36 years was not too remote because gift was to named individuals and not to a class and so was vested. Black v. Gettys, 119 S.E.2d 660 (S.C. 1961).

(n67)Footnote 307. In re Sahlender's Estate, 201 P.2d 69 (Cal. 1948); Brooks Bank & Trust Co. v. Beers, 181 A. 391 (Conn. 1935); Moroney v. Haas, 115 N.E. 648 (Ill. 1917); Armstrong v. Armstrong, 53 Ky. (14 B. Mon.) 333 (1853); Jackson v. Phillips, 96 Mass. 539 (14 Allen 1867); In re Trevor, 145 N.E. 66 (N.Y. 1924); Minter v. Wraith, 13 Sim. 52, 60 Eng. Rep. 21 (1842).

Contra, held inseparable and therefore void. Donohue v. McNichol, 61 Pa. 73 (1869); Brooker v. Brooker, 106 S.W.2d 247 (Tex. 1937); McCreery v. Johnston, 110 S.E. 464 (W. Va. 1922).

Where two possible constructions, the one avoiding the rule is to be adopted. In re Schuette's Estate, 311 N.Y.S.2d 415 (1970).

Holding that in interpreting an instrument it must be presumed that the testator was cognizant of the rules against perpetuities and intended a construction which would avoid it if possible. Vinson v. First Trust & Savings Bank, 339 N.E.2d 670 (C.P. Ohio 1974).

Provision to terminate devises which might violate the rule against remoteness upheld. In re Burrough's Estate, 521 F.2d 277 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

(n68)Footnote 308. Devise to the first son of A. who might take Holy orders and then over if no such son. The devise was void because such a son might be born and take Holy orders more than 21 years after A's death, and the devise over was also void even though there was the implied alternative that A might die without having had a son. Proctor Bishop of Bath and Wells, 2 H.Bl. 358, 126 Eng. Rep. 594 (1794).

(n69)Footnote 309. In re Wilcox, 87 N.E. 497 (N.Y. 1909).

Contra, Lyons v. Bradley, 53 So. 244 (Ala. 1909); Hussey v. Sargent, 75 S.W. 211 (Ky. 1903) (a valid limitation implied as an alternative to an invalid limitation); Edgerly v. Barker, 31 A. 900 (N.H. 1891).

(n70)Footnote 310. Lovering v. Worthington, 106 Mass. 86 (1870).

The courts are not in accord as to whether a valid remainder following an invalid limitation is preserved and accelerated or whether it also falls. But some courts will not accelerate a contingent remainder, though valid, so it also fails for want of a preceding estate of feehold. In re Fischer's Will, 120 N.E.2d 688 (N.Y. 1954).

(n71)Footnote 311. New England Trust Co. v. Sanger, 149 N.E.2d 598 (Mass. 1958) (letting the entire scheme fail where to do so would better carry out the testator's intent than by separating the good from the void).

Whole will invalidated. Barrett v. Barrett, 99 N.E. 625 (Ill. 1912); In re Feeney's Estate, 142 A. 284 (Pa. 1928). See 77 U. Pa. L. Rev. 523.

California has evinced a desire to ameliorate the harshness of the rule. Wong v. DiGrazia, 386 P.2d 817 (Cal. Rptr. 1963).

The doctrine of "infectious invalidity" was applied in Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960) where the principal would be divided among the surviving income beneficiaries for 25 years after testatrix's death, with the continued remainder to certain charities. In the event of the death of one income beneficiary the remaining beneficiaries were to take the deceased's share. Court held that the income gift did not violate the rule against remoteness but the remainder interest did, and if the named individuals died before the termination of the trust, the interest undisposed of went to the heirs or next of kin of the testatrix.

Trust to terminate 25 years after testator's death violated remoteness. Fuller v. Fuller, 122 S.E.2d 234 (Ga. 1961).

A provision was upheld that if any gifts in the will violated the rule against perpetuities, the defending part should be ineffective. Nelson v. Mercantile Trust Co., 335 S.W.2d 167 (Mo. 1960).

In Gwinner v. Schoeny, 171 N.E.2d 728 (Ohio App. 1960), the doctrine applies to a testamentary trust which provided that income should be paid for beneficiary's lifetime, and after his death to his issue. These provisions were not class gifts and violated the rule only as respect to payments to issue not in being at the children's future death.

See Daniel M. Schuyler, New Biology and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 15 ucla L. Rev. 420 (1968); William Schwartz, Mr. Justice Kenison and Creative Continuity in Perpetuities Law, 48 B.U. L. Rev. 207 (1968).

(n72)Footnote 312. In a testamentary trust with income to named persons and 25 years later principal to go to surviving beneficiaries, income gifts were held valid but gift of principal was too remote. Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960).

Where an unconditional power of revocation is reversed by the settlor of an inter vivos trust, the period of rule against remoteness of vesting runs from the settlor's death or earlier revocation of power. Second Nat'l Bank of New Haven v. Harris Trust & Sav. Bank, 283 A.2d 226 (Conn. Super. 1971).

A provision that upon life tenant's death the corpus was to be distributed among those appointed by a named person violated the rule against perpetuities. Stewart's Estate v. Caldwell, 271 So. 2d 754 (Fla. 1972).

A revocable inter vivos trust, the income after the settlor's death to go to his wife for life and the corpus to be divided among his children at 21, was held valid because, being revocable, the rule against remoteness did not commence to run until after the settlor's death. Cook v. Horn, 104 S.E.2d 461 (Ga. 1958).

In a testamentary residuary trust to pay income to named children for life and then to pay to their issue per stirpes, it was held not a class gift but too remote as to issue of children not born at children's deaths. Gwinner v. Schoeny, 171 N.E.2d 728 (Ohio App. 1960).

A general power to appoint by will is a special power for perpetuities purposes. Dollar Savings & Trust Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Boston, 285 N.E.2d 768 (Ohio 1972). Ohio has the "wait and see" and the cy pres rules by statute.

Where a trust to the state was void for remoteness a resulting trust arose for the residuary legatee. MacDonald v. Manning, 239 A.2d 640 (R.I. 1968).

Exercise of a power of appointment by will which provided that a trust could continue for life of any of the children or grandchildren or any other decedents who were alive at the time of another's death plus 21 years was invalid. In re Spencer's Estate, 232 N.W.2d 491 (Iowa 1975).

(n73)Footnote 313. Period began from time special power was created. United California Bank v. Bottler, 94 Cal. Rptr. 227 (Cal. App. 1971).

In Ohio an interest derived from a power of appointment is created by the instrument exercising the power, not the instrument creating the power for the purpose of applying the rule, but the rule is measured from the time of creation of the power, not from its exercise. Dollar Savings & Trust Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Boston, 285 N.E.2d 768 (Ohio 1972). See 34 Ohio S. L.J. 433.

(n74)Footnote 314. Minot v. Paine, 120 N.E. 167 (Mass. 1918); McCreary v. Pitts, 47 A.2d 235 (Pa. 1946).

(n75)Footnote 315. Curlee v. Wadsworth, 136 So. 2d 886 (Ala. 1962) (rule invoked to construe will); Cal. Civ. Code, §§ 715.5-715.7, provides that no interest violates the rule if it can be reformed or construed to give effect to creator's general intent and vest within the time, validates interests that vest within 60 years after creation and makes spouse if person in being at creation also a life in being; Lanier v. Lanier, 126 S.E.2d 776 (Ga. 1962) (remainder to children or if any be dead then to issue and if any die sans issue then to other children or their descendants per stirpes, the afterborn children were held to have absolutely vested interests since a limitation over would be too remote); Old Colony Trust Co. v. Stephens, 190 N.E.2d 110 (Mass. 1963) (interpreting a trust to end on death of life beneficiaries to avoid remoteness); Mattern v. Herzog, 367 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. 1963) (construction taken that would not make gift too remote).

Rewriting a will by striking out provision that grandchildren must be 23 in order to save the gift from the rule. In re Foster's Estate, 376 P.2d 784 (Tex. 1962), 98 a.l.r. 2d 795.

Where will is possible of two constructions, the one which will not violate the rule against perpetuities will be adopted. In re Greenwood's Will, 268 A.2d 867 (Del. 1970).

Will must be construed to avoid rendering it void. In re Miguet's Estate, 185 N.W.2d 508 (Iowa 1971).

In the Application of Wolfsohn, 339 N.Y.S.2d 755 (1973), a trust for the grantor for life then to pay to his issue for their support and to distribute on the death or becoming 25 of the issue of two named persons of the grantors issue then living per stirpes did not violate the Rule against remoteness. The court held that the trust would be terminated by the court if at the time of the death of the two named persons there was a grandchild not yet 25 who had not been alive at the time of creation of the trust.

Holding that in interpreting an instrument it must be presumed that the testator was cognizant of the rule against perpetuities and intended a construction which would avoid it if possible and approving restatement of the law of trusts, 2D, § 62*F. Vinson v. First Trust & Sav. Bank, 339 N.E.2d 670 (C.P. Ohio 1974).*

Direction of payment at 35 held not to postpone vesting so as to violate the rule against perpetuities. Zimmerman v. First Nat'l Bank of Birmingham, 348 So. 2d 1359 (Ala. 1977).

A provision that a trust continue for the maximum time was permitted by the rule of perpetuities. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Coyne, 373 A.2d 867 (Del. 1977).

(n76)Footnote 316. Myers v. Hardin, 186 S.W.2d 925 (Ark. 1945).

Will which provided for trust to terminate "when the youngest of my grandchildren shall have completed his or her education" violated the rule. Sheats v. Johnson, 189 S.E.2d 856 (Ga. 1972).

(n77)Footnote 317. McCreary v. Pitts, 47 A.2d 235 (Pa. 1946).

(n78)Footnote 318. Von Hesse v. MacKaye, 32 N.E. 615 (N.Y. 1892).

(n79)Footnote 319. Morgan v. Keyes, 99 N.E.2d 230 (N.Y. 1951).

(n80)Footnote 320. 735 ilcs § 5-13-223. In re Beardsley's Appeal, 60 A. 664 (Conn. 1905); Hoenig v. Lubetkin, 79 A.2d 278 (Conn. 1951); Elliott v. Travelers Ins. Co., 99 N.E.2d 274 (Ind. App. 1951).

(n81)Footnote 321. New York Trust Co. v. Weaver, 80 N.E.2d 56 (N.Y. 1948).

(n82)Footnote 322. In re Green's Estate, 262 N.Y.S. 456 (1932) (if in one instrument a combination of limitations violating the rule is void).

Under the New York Statute where an age contingency would violate perpetuities, the age is reduced so as to make the gift valid. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.2. In re Pendleton's Estate, 246 N.Y.S.2d 351 (1964).

(n83)Footnote 323. Traywick v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 170 So. 2d 802 (Ala. 1965).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.05

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.05 The Rule Against Remoteness as Applied to Gifts in Charity

[Go To Supp]

The rule against remoteness has peculiar applications where gifts to charity are involved. Gifts to charitable trusts which vest immediately are not affected by the rule against remoteness or the rule against restraints on alienation. n324

A charitable gift may be made to a corporation yet to be formed. n325

Trusts for the care and maintenance of cemeteries and graves are charitable in Ohio. n326

A limitation over to a charity after a gift to a charity is not within the rule against remoteness. n327 A devise to charity with a limitation over to another charity on the happening of a certain contingency which may or may not happen does not violate the rule. n328 Especially is this true where such gifts are made with no intervening gift to or for the benefit of a private person or corporation, or to a contingent limitation over from one charity to another, n329 but it does apply to a gift to a private person, although limited over after an immediate gift to a charity. n330 But a gift to blood relatives of the testator is too limited to be a charitable gift. n331

The rule against perpetuities applies even to gifts for charity where there is no vesting of the corpus of the estate within the time allowed by law, but such rule can have no application after the corpus of an estate has vested for charity, as the very nature of a charity is a perpetuity. n332 Where a devise to charity is so given as not to vest within the period fixed by the rule, it is deemed within the rule and consequently void. n333 The authorities generally hold that the rule against perpetuities is not violated by the power given to a trustee to use discretion as to the time within which to make a sale of the real estate. n334 A devise over to charity after a life estate is not contrary to the rule against perpetuities; n335 but a gift over to an individual after a charitable trust is held subject to the rule against perpetuities, n336 and, likewise, where the gift is to an individual and then over to a corporation or person on a charitable trust. n337

The rule applies only to a contingent and not to a vested remainder interest, and it does not affect a vested remainder to a charity where only postponement is as to possession and direct enjoyment. n338 The fact that a gift over is for a charitable purpose does not take it from the effect of the rule against perpetuities where the intervening estate violates such rule. n339 If instead of being a gift over after another bequest, the gift is made to charity upon the happening of a contingent event as a condition precedent, it is held that if the condition is too remote or for any other reason illegal, the gift to charity is void. n340 A gift to charity with a limitation over to another charity on the happening of a certain contingency which may or may not happen does not violate the rule. n341

An initial gift to a charity must vest within the period of the rule. n342 A gift to a charity to become effective when the charity comes into existence is treated as a present gift and valid n343 under the theory of immediateness of the purpose. Where, however, the gift to the charity to be formed is a limitation over after a previous gift the cases are divided. n344 A limitation over to a charity after a determinable fee to a non-charity is too remote. n345

A cemetery is not a religious use, permitting religious use in area otherwise inclined to residential and agricultural uses. n346

The cases are split as to whether bequests for perpetual care of cemeteries are charitable bequests. n347 A charitable trust for the benefit of a limited group is valid even though it is not demonstrated that financial need be employed. So a charitable trust for employees of a single corporation or related group corporations is valid even though their purpose was other than the relief of poverty or the eradication of disease. n348

A charitable trust must be for a public use or benefit and for an indefinite number of persons. n349

As respects charitable trusts, the Rule has been held to exempt a trust although the beneficiary may not be created during the allowable period. n350

A gift to a charity to be created does not violate the rule. Even though the charity might not be created within the time, the cy pres doctrine applies. n351

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: rule w/5 remoteness w/15 gift! w/5 charit!

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 324. Kingdom v. Record, 133 N.E.2d 921 (Ohio 1954), upholding an immediate gift to a charity yet to be formed upon theory that title goes at once to the executor to hold in trust until the beneficiary is organized.

The statute of 43 Eliz. ch. 4 excluded gifts to charitable uses from the illegality rule of perpetuities.

Holding that the mere fact that a charitable gift may continue in perpetuity does not apply to subordinate details of the gift, particularly those which attempt to unduly restrict the use of the gift for changing conditions. Trustees of Dartmouth College v. City of Quincy, 258 N.E.2d 745 (Mass. 1970).

Limitation over, if purposes for which a charitable trust was created could not be carried out, violated the rule against remoteness of vesting. Davenport v. Attorney Gen., 280 N.E.2d 193 (Mass. 1972).

A gift to a charitable corporation which may not be organized within the rule against perpetuities is not void, the gift being immediate and held in trust under cy pres until the charity is organized. Rice v. Stanley, 327 N.E.2d 774 (Ohio 1974).

A devise of realty to be used as a home for parentless children, provided that if there was any reason why the trustees could not carry out provisions of the trust such should revert to the estate, was held to be a charitable fee terminating when the beneficiaries of the trust no longer could be found. In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960).

A request in testamentary trust for charity that the trustee prefer first certain named relatives of the decedent did not prevent the trust from being charitable. McClure v. Carter, 116 S.E.2d 260 (Va. 1960).

See Louis B. Lusk, Uncertain Future of Charitable Trusts, 15 Ala. L. Rev. 390 (1963); Remoteness of Vesting and the Charitable Trust, 31 Fordham L. Rev. 782 (1963).

The question of whether a cemetery is public depends upon the public use rather than the ownership. State ex rel. Willow Monument Works, Inc. v. Mountain Grove Cemetery Ass'n, 362 A.2d 1341 (Conn. 1975). United States on Behalf of U.S. Coast Guard v. Cerio, 831 F. Supp. 530 (E.D. Va. 1993) (a charitable trust is public in nature and not subject to the rule against perpetuities, while a private trust is void if it offends the rule against perpetuities).

(n2)Footnote 325. Hoenig v. Lubetkin, 79 A.2d 278 (Conn. 1951); Litcher v. Trust Co., 86 A.2d 601 (N.J. Super. 1952); Kingdom v. Record, 133 N.E.2d 921 (Ohio 1954).

(n3)Footnote 326. Bailey v. McElroy, 195 N.E.2d 559 (Ohio App. 1963).

Statute excepted a trust for maintenance of graves from the rule against perpetuities. Perry v. Twentieth St. Bank, 206 S.E.2d 421 (W. Va. 1974).

(n4)Footnote 327. McDonogh v. Murdoch, 56 U.S. 367 (How. 1853); Jones v. Habersham, 107 U.S. 174 (1883); Storrs Agrl. Sch. v. Whitney, 8 A. 141 (Conn. 1887); Dickenson v. Anna, 141 N.E. 754 (Ill. 1923); Herron v. Stanton, 147 N.E. 305 (Ind. App. 1920); MacKenzie v. Trustees of Presbytery of Jersey City, 61 A. 1027 (N.J. Eq. 1905); In re Lennig's Estate, 25 A. 1049 (Pa. 1893).

A limitation over to a noncharity to go over after happening of a gift to a charity is too remote. In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960).

(n5)Footnote 328. Smith v. Renne, 46 N.E.2d 587 (Ill. 1943).

(n6)Footnote 329. Russell v. Allen, 107 U.S. 163 (1883); Woodruff v. Marsh, 26 A. 846 (1893); Almy v. Jones, 21 A. 616 (R.I. 1891).

Remainder to trustees for a charitable foundation was not too remote where it vested within the time though the identity of the ultimate beneficiaries was unknown. In re Wood's Trust Estate, 311 P.2d 359 (Kan. 1957).

(n7)Footnote 330. Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897); Christ Church v. Donations & Bequests for Church Purposes, 35 A. 552 (Conn. 1896).

In a devise of a determinable fee to church with limitation over to residuary legatees, limitation over was too remote but possibility of reverter remained which passed under the residuary devise. Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950).

(n8)Footnote 331. Hardage v. Hardage, 84 S.E.2d 54 (Ga. 1954).

A provision that a remainder interest should go to municipality in trust, the trustee to select a young man and to furnish him with a medical education on the promise that he would return to the town following completion of his education and practice medicine in that area was intended to promote the health and physical welfare of the entire population and, therefore, was a valid charitable trust. In re Carlson's Estate, 358 P.2d 669 (Kan. 1961).

Perpetual maintenance of private cemetery plot held too remote. Eaton v. Miller, 250 A.2d 220 (Me. 1969).

Gift for treatment of incurable disease of persons not beyond tenth degree of testatrix and husband was a charitable trust to which the rule did not apply. Ministers & Missionaries' Benefit Board of American Baptist Convention v. McKay, 315 N.Y.S.2d 549 (1970).

The testatrix's will established a gift in trust for a home for the aged with a provision that the trustee was requested to prefer testator's nieces and their heirs. This was a charitable trust, since the provision of the nieces and their heirs was not mandatory. A limitation over to such other charitable organization as the trustee might determine, after failure of the first charitable organization, did not violate the rule against remoteness. McClure v. Carter, 116 S.E.2d 260 (Va. 1960).

(n9)Footnote 332. Hardage v. Hardage, 84 S.E.2d 54 (Ga. 1954); Reasoner v. Herman, 134 N.E. 276 (Ind. 1922). See Barr v. Geary, 142 N.E. 622 (Ind. App. 1924).

Provision for 400 year accumulation was struck down and income was ordered to be paid to the charitable beneficiary currently. In re James' Estate, 199 A.2d 275 (Pa. 1964).

(n10)Footnote 333. Jocelyn v. Nott, 44 Conn. 55 (1876); Parker v. Churchill, 30 S.E. 642 (Ga. 1898); Crerar v. Williams, 34 N.E. 467 (Ill. 1893); Clearspring v. Blough, 88 N.E. 511, 89 N.E. 369 (Ind. 1909); Brooks v. Belfast, 38 A. 222 (Me. 1897); State v. Holmes, 73 N.W. 548 (Mich. 1898).

See Edward W. Roth, Rule Against Perpetuities -- Vesting of Residuary Estate in Trust for Charity, Subject to a Condition Precedent, 49 Mich. L. Rev. 281 (1951); Goetz v. Old Nat'l Bank, 84 S.E.2d 759 (W. Va. 1954) (attempt to create charitable trust fails where trustee given unbridled powers of distribution and unlimited length of time to so distribute property).

"Educational and benevolent uses" are considered charitable purposes exempt from rules against perpetuity. Smith v. United States Nat'l Bank, 207 P.2d 1194 (Colo. 1949).

Limitation over after termination of charitable trust was held too remote and property passed to settlor's heirs though charitable gift was a fee upon condition subsequent. In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960). See also Townsend v. Charles Schalkenbach Home for Boys, 205 P.2d 345 (Wash. 1949).

(n11)Footnote 334. Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893); Hagen v. Sacrison, 123 N.W. 518 (N.D. 1909); Bank of Cal. v. Ager, 109 P.2d 548 (Wash. 1941).

Provision in the will holding fund in trust for twenty years, that as soon as possible thereafter to be paid to a charity, provided the charity accepted the gift within a year, did not violate the rule against remoteness, since it was the time of acceptance of the gift, not the delivery, that was so important. Farnan v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 139 S.E.2d 14 (N.C. 1964).

(n12)Footnote 335. In re Mack's Appeal, 41 A. 242 (Conn. 1898).

(n13)Footnote 336. Society for Promoting Theological Educ. v. Attorney-General, 135 Mass. 285 (1883).

Gift over to city after property ceased to be used as an armory was void. Whitaker v. House, 372 S.W.2d 194 (Tenn. 1963).

If a gift is in trust to pay the income perpetually to a charity and to a noncharity and there is no segregation of the income, the entire gift fails. Carr v. Jones, 403 S.W.2d 181 (Tex. Civ. App. 1966).

(n14)Footnote 337. Leonard v. Burr, 18 N.Y. 96 (1858); Smith v. Townsend, 32 Pa. 434 (1859).

(n15)Footnote 338. In re Duprea, 6 N.Y.S.2d 555 (1938).

Pennsylvania's "mortmain statute" is unconstitutional as denying equal protection to charities. In re Cavill's Estate, 329 A.2d 503 (Pa. 1974).

(n16)Footnote 339. In re Stephan's Estate, 195 A. 653 (Pa. Super. 1937).

A gift to a charity preceded by a gift to noncharity may be void for remoteness. Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 353 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1960), 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 252, 39 Dicta 124.

(n17)Footnote 340. Jocelyn v. Nott, 44 Conn. 55 (1876).

(n18)Footnote 341. Storrs Agrl. Sch. v. Whitney, 8 A. 141 (Conn. 1887); Dickenson v. Anna, 141 N.E. 754 (Ill. 1923), 30 a.l.r. 587; Smith v. Renne, 46 N.E.2d 587 (Ill. 1943); Herron v. Stanton, 147 N.E. 305 (Ind. App. 1920); Christ's Hosp. v. Grainger, 1 Mac. & G. 460, 41 Eng. Rep. 1343 (1849).

Applying cy pres to a private trust to prevent application of rule against remoteness. In re Estate of Chun Quan Yee Hop, 469 P.2d 183 (Haw. 1970).

(n19)Footnote 342. In re Lord Stratheden & Campbell, L.R. (1894), 3 Ch. 265.

Contra result, Kasey v. Fidelity Trust Co., 115 S.W. 737 (Ky. 1909) (limitation to charity over after definite failure of issue of testator's living niece).

(n20)Footnote 343. Ould v. Washington Hosp., 95 U.S. 303 (1877); Jones v. Habersham, 107 U.S. 174 (1883); Brigham v. Peter Bent Brigham Hosp., 126 F. 796 (1903); Gregory v. Colorado Nat'l Bank, 13 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1932); Woodruff v. Marsh, 26 A. 846 (Conn. 1893); Sanderson v. White, 35 Mass. 328 (18 Pick. 1836); Odell v. Odell, 10 Allen 1 (Mass. 1865); Codman v. Brigham, 72 N.E. 1008 (Mass. 1905); In re Potts' Will, 199 N.Y.S. 880 (1923), aff'd, 142 N.E. 323 (N.Y.); In re Tower's Estate, 266 N.Y.S. 43 (1933), aff'd, 266 N.Y.S. 995.

"But where there is an unconditional gift to charity, the gift will be regarded as immediate and good, although the particular mode of carrying out the charity which the donor has indicated is too remote. Consequently in such a case if a direction for accumulation is invalid the only result is that the income is immediately distributable in charity; the heirs or next of kin are not let in." Gray, supra, n.1 § 678.

(n21)Footnote 344. Charitable gift valid. In re LeFevre's Estate, 135 N.E. 203 (N.Y. 1922).

Fatal hiatus. First Camden Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Collins, 168 A. 275 (N.J. Eq. 1933).

(n22)Footnote 345. Institution for Savings in Roxbury v. Roxbury Home for Aged Women, 139 N.E. 301 (Mass. 1923); In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960).

(n23)Footnote 346. Appeal of Russian Orthodox Church of the Holy Ghost, 152 A.2d 489 (Pa. 1959); Ellis v. Andrews, 324 S.W.2d 917 (Tex. Civ. App. 1959) (will providing for maintenance of a cemetery lot did not violate the rule against remoteness since it was discretionary upon the executor).

(n24)Footnote 347. Smart v. Durham, 86 A. 821 (N.H. 1913) (charitable); Shippee v. Industrial Trust Co., 110 A. 410 (R.I. 1920) (noncharitable).

(n25)Footnote 348. Boxer v. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., 159 A.2d 336 (Mass. 1959); In re Reese's Will, 195

N.Y.S.2d 144 (1960). See, however, Pennsylvania Bar Ass'n Endowment v. Robbins, 10 D. & C. 2d (Pa.) 637 (1956).

(n26)Footnote 349. In re Freshour's Estate, 345 P.2d 689 (Kan. 1959); In re Harrigan's Estate, 29 D. & C. 2d 119 (Pa. 1963), 13 Fiduciary 115 (trust for saying masses held charity).

(n27)Footnote 350. If in a will the testator evinces an intent that a charitable trust arise immediately it is valid even though the charity to be formed may not arise within the period cy pres applied. Rice v. Stanley, 327 N.E.2d 774 (Ohio 1975).

(n28)Footnote 351. Rice v. Stanley, 327 N.E.2d 774 (Ohio 1975).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.06 The Rule Against Overlong Duration of Trusts

The rule against remoteness of vesting is not applicable to trustees since title to the real estate is vested in them. n352 Thus trusts are valid if the beneficial interests vest within the allotted period. n353 Nor does the rule against restraints on alienation apply to trusts where the trustees have the power to sell the realty. The validity of attempted restraints on alienation of interests of the beneficiaries depends on whether spendthrift trusts are recognized in the jurisdiction. n354 A private cemetery trust is not violative of perpetuities if all interests legal and equitable are vested. n355

The weight of authority holds that a charitable trust may endure forever. n356 As such trust is established for objects of public, general, and lasting benefit, it is allowed by the law to be as permanent as any human institution can be. The courts will readily infer an intention in the donor that it should be perpetual. n357 A devise to a bishop with power to sell and dispose of the land and to use the proceeds thereof, for the purpose of establishing a church, does not create a perpetuity. n358

It may be stated as a general rule that the rule against perpetuities is not applicable to charitable trusts, n359 but it must not be understood that the word "perpetuity" is here used in its primary sense, and the statement taken as merely meaning that the trust is not invalid, though it is indestructible, and though, since there is no definite cestui que trust to alien it, it is inalienable. n360 So, if the gift is such that it is recognized by the law as charitable, it may restrain the alienation of property beyond the period fixed by the rule and hold the property for such use. n361 Especially is this true where such gifts are made with no intervening gift to or for the benefit of a private person or corporation or to a contingent limitation over from one charity to another. n362 It does apply to a gift to a private person, although limited over after an immediate gift to a charity. n363 The rule against remoteness of vesting applies even to gifts for charity where there is no vesting of the corpus of the estate within the time allowed by law, but such rule can have no application after the corpus of an estate has vested for charity, as the very nature of a charity is a perpetuity. n364 Where a devise to charity is so given as not to vest within the period fixed by the rule, it is deemed within the rule, and consequently void. n365

The authorities generally hold that the rule against perpetuities is not violated by the power given to a trustee to use discretion as to the time within which to make a sale of the real estate. n366 A devise over to charity after a life estate is not contrary to the rule against perpetuities, n367 but a gift over to an individual after a charitable trust is held subject to the rule against perpetuities, n368 and, likewise, where the gift is to an individual and then over to a corporation or person on a charitable trust. n369 The rule applies only to contingent and not to a vested remainder interest, and it does not affect a vested remainder to a charity where only postponement is as to possession and direct enjoyment. n370

The fact that a gift over is for a charitable purpose does not take it from the effect of the rule against perpetuities where the intervening estate violates such rule. n371 If instead of being a gift over after another bequest, the gift is made to charity upon the happening of a contingent event as a condition precedent, it is held that if the condition is too remote or is for any other reason illegal, the gift to charity is void. n372 A valid trust may be established for a charitable corporation to be formed in the future. n373

The rule against perpetuities is applicable to trusts for private purposes. n374

There is no violation of the rule against perpetuities by the mere fact alone of a failure to limit the time for the execution of the trust. n375

Notwithstanding the existence of these judicial views the writers of these declarations, on grounds of prudence, usually insert clauses which limit the duration of the trust, to the time permitted by the rule against perpetuities. A common practice in this regard is to limit the trust to twenty-one years after the death of named children of the trustees.

A Massachusetts trust agreement by the terms of which the trustee is to hold the title to the fee and to lease in trust for certain specified purposes but the land trust certificate holder acquires an interest which is vendible and the owners of the property may avail themselves of the sums derived from a transfer of that interest for present purposes without personal liability, the payment being secured solely upon the trust estate without the personal liability of anyone and, in the event of a default as defined in the trust instrument, a sale of the premises can be had, does not violate the rule against perpetuities notwithstanding no definite trust period is prescribed and that the parties to the transaction are numerous. n376 When the holders of the land trust certificates and the ultimate title certificates and the trustee can unite in a conveyance which conveys an absolute title to the trust estate, which conveyance can be made at any time without violating the trust agreement, the same does not violate the rule against perpetuities. n377

Some authorities have, however, developed a further "perpetuities" rule independent of the remoteness of vesting and restraints on alienation prohibitions. This rule is to the effect that if a trust is created purporting to be indestructible for a period of time longer than that allowable under the remoteness of vesting rule the trust is terminable from its inception. n378

This follows the theory that donations of property in perpetuity, except for charitable uses, are void, as being against public policy. n379 So Massachusetts "business trusts" may endure in perpetuity. n380 It seems likely that this phase of the law, at present only in a nascent stage will develop into a new perpetuities rule limiting all trusts to some reasonable limitation. n381 The presence of such a doctrine is recognized inferentially by legislation in many states legalizing employee's benefit, retirement, pension and profit sharing trusts. n382

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: rule against perpetuities w/30 charit! w/2 trust! or purpose! or use!

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 352. Otto v. Union Nat'l Bank, 238 P.2d 961 (Cal. 1951); Wilson v. D'Atro, 145 A. 161 (Conn. 1929); Greenwich Trust Co. v. Shively, 147 A. 367 (Conn. 1929); Story v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 156 So. 101 (Fla. 1934); O'Hare v. Johnston, 113 N.E. 127 (Ill. 1916).

City Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. White, 169 N.E. 197 (Ill. 1929) (terminating private trusts of indefinite duration); Wechter v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 52 N.E.2d 157 (Ill. 1943) (private trusts, though indestructible, need not be limited to the period of the rule); Pulitzer v. Livingston, 36 A. 635 (Me. 1896), overruling Slade v. Patten, 68 Me. 380 (1878), Singhi v. Dean, 110 A. 865 (Me. 1920); Turner v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 129 A. 294 (Md. 1925) (changing the earlier Maryland law); Lovering v. Worthington, 106 Mass. 86 (1870); Lembeck v. Lembeck, 68 A. 337 (N.J. Eq. 1907); In re Lawrence's Estate, 20 A. 521 (Pa. 1890), 11 l.r.a. 855; In re Rhodes' Estate, 23 A. 553 (Pa. 1892); Tramell v. Tramell, 32 S.W.2d 1025 (Tenn. 1930), 35 S.W.2d 574 (Tenn. 1931); Kelly v. Womack, 268 S.W.2d 903 (Tex. 1954), rev'g, 261 S.W.2d 599 (Tex. Civ. App. 1953).

Arkansas permits perpetual trusts for upkeep of cemetery plots not in excess of $2,500. Ark. Acts 445, 1966.

In California trusts may not have a duration beyond the period of the rule. Cal. Prob. Code, §§ 15413-14, changing In re Walkerly's Estate, 41 P. 772 (Cal. 1895), which held void a trust that prohibited the trustees from selling a part of the trust corpus for 25 years.

Ralph A. Newman, Perpetuities, Restraints on Alienability and the Duration of Trusts, 16 Vand. L. Rev. 57 (1962).

(n2)Footnote 353. Williams v. Herrick, 32 A. 913 (R.I. 1895). See Loomer v. Loomer, 57 A. 167 (Conn. 1904); Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893).

Remainder to trustees for a charitable foundation was not too remote where it vested within the time, though the identity of the ultimate beneficiaries was unknown. In re Woods' Trust Estate, 311 P.2d 359 (Kan. 1957).

Trust wholly void where limitations to beneficiaries were too remote. Siedler v. Syms, 38 A. 424 (N.J. Eq. 1897); In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898).

In McPherson v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 81 S.E.2d 386 (N.C. 1954), where there was a trust which would be remote if it had included after-born grandchildren the court declined to reform the trust as against unborn grandchildren in the absence of an applicable virtual representation statute.

Private trust void. In re Kelley, I.R. 255.

Florida now has held that if a trust is private, its period of enjoyment is limited to no longer than lives in being plus twenty-one years (plus a period of gestation). Brown v. Saake, 190 So. 2d 56 (Fla. 1966).

In Mercantile Trust Co. v. Hammerstein, 380 S.W.2d 287 (Mo. 1964), the court sustained a trust for 25 years in gross on the grounds the principal was vested. See also Moran v. Sutter, 228 S.W.2d 682 (Mo. 1950).

A private trust may endure for a period beyond that established by the rule against remoteness. Tramell v. Tramell, 32 S.W.2d 1025 (Tenn. 1930).

See George Downing, Duration and Indestructibility of Private Trusts, 16 W. Res. L. Rev. 350 (1969).

(n3)Footnote 354. See Erwin N. Griswold, Reaching the Interest of a Beneficiary Spendthrift Trust, 43 Harv. L. Rev. 63 (1970).

(n4)Footnote 355. In re Chardon (1928) Ch. 464; Ellis v. Andrews, 324 S.W.2d 917 (Tex. Civ. App. 1959).

(n5)Footnote 356. Beach v. Gilbert, 133 F.2d 50 (D.C. Cir. 1943); Johnson v. Holifield, 58 Am. Rep. 596 (Ala. 1885); Haggin v. International Trust Co., 169 P. 138 (Colo. 1917); Sussex Trust Co. v. Beebe Hosp., 15 A.2d 246 (Del.

1940); Hart v. Taylor, 133 N.E. 857 (Ill. 1921); Smith v. Renne, 46 N.E.2d 587 (Ill. 1943); Quinn v. Peoples Trust & Sav. Co., 60 N.E.2d 281 (Ind. 1945); Barr v. Geary, 142 N.E. 622 (Ind. App. 1924); Scobey v. Beckman, 41 N.E.2d 847 (Ind. App. 1942); Wilson v. First Nat'l Bank, 145 N.W. 948 (Iowa 1914); Frazier v. Merchants Nat'l Bank, 5 N.E.2d 550 (Mass. 1936); Buchanan v. Kennard, 136 S.W. 415 (Mo. 1911); Noice v. Schnell, 137 A. 582 (N.J. Eq. 1927); Holland v. Alcock, 16 N.E. 305 (N.Y. 1888); In re Borden's Estate, 42 N.Y.S.2d 560 (N.Y. 1943); Griffin v. Graham, 9 Am. Dec. 619 (N.C. 1820); Penick v. Bank of Wadesboro, 12 S.E.2d 253 (N.C. 1940); In re Hunter's Estate, 123 A. 865 (Pa. 1924); In re Tollinger's Estate, 37 A.2d 500 (Pa. 1944); Frost Nat'l Bank v. Boyd, 188 S.W.2d 199 (Tex. Civ. App. 1945).

A gift to a labor union unemployment fund is a "charitable gift." In re Pattberg's Will, 123 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1953), 23 Fordham L. Rev. 220.

See Clinton J. Najarian, Charitable Giving and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 70 Dick. L. Rev. 455 (1966).

(n6)Footnote 357. Odell v. Odell, 92 Mass. 1 (10 Allen 1865); Webster v. Wiggin, 31 A. 824 (R.I. 1895), 28 l.r.a. 510.

See Jesse Dukeminier, Perpetuities Revision in California: Perpetual Trusts Permitted, 55 Cal. L. Rev. 678 (1967).

(n7)Footnote 358. Giblin v. Giblin, 182 N.W. 357 (Wis. 1921).

See Kenneth R. O'Brien & Daniel E. O'Brien, Seventy Years of Bequests for Masses in New York Courts, 23 Fordham L. Rev. 147 (1954).

(n8)Footnote 359. Regents of Univ. Sys. v. Trust Co. of Ga., 198 S.E. 345 (Ga. 1938); Alden v. St. Peter's Parish, 42 N.E. 392 (Ill. 1895); Ingraham v. Ingraham, 48 N.E. 561, 49 N.E. 320 (Ill. 1897); Morgan v. National Trust Bank, 162 N.E. 888 (Ill. 1928); Newton v. Newton Burial Park, 34 S.W.2d 118 (Mo. 1930); Mills v. Davison, 35 A. 1072 (N.J. Eq. 1896); Sherman v. Baker, 40 A. 11 (R.I. 1898).

Similarly an absolute restraint on alienation on a charitable gift is valid. Catholic Bishop of Chicago v. Murr, 120 N.E.2d 4 (Ill. 1954).

(n9)Footnote 360. Brooks v. Belfast, 38 A. 222 (Me. 1897).

(n10)Footnote 361. Russell v. Allen, 107 U.S. 163 (1883); Spence v. Widney, 46 P. 463 (Cal. 1896); Woodruff v. Marsh, 26 A. 846 (Conn. 1893); Parker v. Churchill, 30 S.E. 642 (Ga. 1898); Ingraham v. Ingraham, 48 N.E. 561, 49 N.E. 320 (Ill. 1897); Rush v. Dinwiddie, 37 N.E. 795 (Ind. 1894); Brooks v. Belfast, 38 A. 222 (Me. 1897); Teele v. Bishop of Derry, 47 N.E. 422 (Mass. 1897), 38 l.r.a. 629; Penny v. Croul, 43 N.W. 649 (Mich. 1889), 5 l.r.a. 858; Lane v. Eaton, 71 N.W. 1031 (Minn. 1897), 38 l.r.a. 669; Mills v. Davison, 35 A. 1072 (N.J. Eq. 1896), 35 l.r.a. 113; In re John C. Mercer Home, 29 A. 731 (Pa. 1894); Webster v. Wiggin, 31 A. 824 (R.I. 1895); Staines v. Burton, 53 P. 1015 (Utah 1898).

Private cemetery is not a charitable use. Pope v. Alexander, 250 S.W.2d 51 (Tenn. 1952).

(n11)Footnote 362. Russell v. Allen, 107 U.S. 163 (1883); Woodruff v. Marsh, 26 A. 846 (Conn. 1893); Almy v. Jones, 21 A. 616 (R.I. 1891), 12 l.r.a. 414.

(n12)Footnote 363. Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U.S. 342 (1897); Christ Church v. Donations & Bequests for Church Purposes, 35 A. 552 (Conn. 1896).

(n13)Footnote 364. Reasoner v. Herman, 134 N.E. 276 (Ind. 1922). See Barr v. Geary, 142 N.E. 622 (Ind. App.

1924).

(n14)Footnote 365. Jocelyn v. Nott, 44 Conn. 55 (1876); Parker v. Churchill, 30 S.E. 642 (Ga. 1898); Crerar v. Williams, 34 N.E. 467 (Ill. 1893), 21 l.r.a. 454; Clearspring v. Blough, 88 N.E. 511, 89 N.E. 369 (Ind. 1909); Brooks v. Belfast, 38 A. 222 (Me. 1897); State v. Holmes, 73 N.W. 548 (Mich. 1898).

(n15)Footnote 366. Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893); Hagen v. Sacrison, 123 N.W. 518 (N.D. 1909), 26 l.r.a. (N.S.) 724.

(n16)Footnote 367. In re Mack's Appeal, 41 A. 242 (Conn. 1898).

(n17)Footnote 368. Society for Promoting Theological Educ. v. Attorney-General, 135 Mass. 285 (1883).

(n18)Footnote 369. Leonard v. Burr, 18 N.Y. 96 (1858); Smith v. Townsend, 32 Pa. 434 (1859).

(n19)Footnote 370. In re Duprea, 6 N.Y.S.2d 555 (1938).

(n20)Footnote 371. In re Stephan's Estate, 195 A. 653 (Pa. Super. 1937).

(n21)Footnote 372. Jocelyn v. Nott, 44 Conn. 55 (1876).

(n22)Footnote 373. Assessors v. Trustees of Boston College, 6 N.E.2d 363 (Mass. 1937).

(n23)Footnote 374. Thorp v. Lund, 116 N.E. 946 (Mass. 1917); West Tex. Bank & Trust Co. v. Matlock, 212 S.W. 937 (Tex. 1919). State ex rel. Champion v. Holden, 953 S.W.2d 151 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) (for a private trust to be valid under the rule against perpetuities, a beneficiary must be "definitely ascertained at the time of the creation of the trust" or within the standard time allowed by the rule against perpetuities).

(n24)Footnote 375. Such a trust for the convenience of an unincorporated association in renting and selling land, under which the land is held for no other purpose, and where the income is not accumulated, but is distributed as it accrues, and where the land is to be sold free of trusts at the will of the association and where the whole equitable interest in the trust is at every moment vested absolutely in those who at that moment are shareholders, and never can be vested in any other persons save by act of the absolute owners or by operation of law upon their property and not by force of any limitation contained in the deed of trust; the equitable interests so vested being also constantly vendible by their several owners without let or hindrance, as well as subject to their debts, and passing like other property upon death, by virtue not of the deed of trust but of the general laws governing the disposition of the property of decedents, withdraws no property from commerce, and is not within the reason or the terms of what is called the "rule against perpetuities." The trust involves no future limitations, no restraints upon alienation, and no accumulations either of income or of principal. The provisions by which the trust fund may be at some time held for the benefit of persons not shareholders at its inception and who may become such at a period more remote than that allowed by the rule, are not future limitations made by the trust-deed, in the sense in which the word "limitation" is used in speaking of the operation of the rule. If there shall ever be a shareholder other than those in which the whole equitable estate was absolutely vested at the inception of the trust; that shareholder will not take his interest by virtue of a limitation in the trust-deed, but because of his succession, by virtue of the general principles of law, to the property of the original shareholder. The new shareholder, with reference to the rule, is in the same situation as a person who, after the expiration of all lives which were in being when a fee or an estate tail was created, and of a further period of twenty-one years, takes the fee by the operation of the law which makes property vendible by, or descendible from, the owner and not by virtue of a limitation in the instrument which created the fee. The entire ownership is never for a moment uncertain nor unvested, and at every moment each owner can freely dispose of his property, and at each moment it can be transferred to his creditor by the ordinary processes of the law, and at each moment the trust can be terminated at the will of the owners of the equitable interest.

Howe v. Morse, 55 N.E. 213 (Mass. 1899).

"The mere creation of a trust does not ipso facto suspend the power of alienation. It is only suspended by such trust, where a trust term is created, either expressly or by implication, during the existence of which a sale by the trustee would be in contravention of the trust. Where the trustee is empowered to sell the land without restriction as to time, the power of alienation is not suspended, although the alienation is in fact postponed by the nonaction of the trustee, or in consequence of discretion reposed in him by the creator of the trust." Robert v. Corning, 89 N.Y. 225 (1822). See Ward v. McMath, 241 S.W. 3 (Ark. 1922); Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893); Minot v. Burroughs, 112 N.E. 620 (Mass. 1916); In re Pittock, 199 P. 633, 202 P. 216 (Or. 1921), 17 a.l.r. 218.

(n25)Footnote 376. Baker v. Stern, 216 N.W. 147 (Wis. 1927), 58 a.l.r. 462.

(n26)Footnote 377. Id.

(n27)Footnote 378. Colonial Trust Co. v. Brown, 135 A. 555 (Conn. 1926); Gaess v. Gaess, 42 A.2d 796 (Conn. 1945), 160 a.l.r. 432; Story v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 156 So. 101 (Fla. 1934); Hopkinson v. Swaim, 119 N.E. 985 (Ill. 1918); Van Epps v. Arbuckle, 164 N.E. 1 (Ill. 1928); Southard v. Southard, 96 N.E. 941 (Mass. 1911); Moran v. Sutter, 228 S.W.2d 682 (Mo. 1950); In re City Bank Farmers Trust Co., 70 N.Y.S.2d 465 (1947) (New York does not recognize such a rule); Finch v. Honeycutt, 97 S.E.2d 478 (N.C. 1957); In re Throm's Estate, 106 A.2d 815 (Pa. 1954); In re Howard's Estate, 54 D.&C. (Pa.) 312 (1943); Wingert v. T. W. Phillips Gas & Oil Co., 157 A.2d 92 (Pa. 1959), 21 U. Pitt. L. Rev. 754 (trustee's oil and gas lease which is improper because of its extended duration is valid for the actual duration of the trust); Williams v. Herrick, 32 A. 913 (R.I. 1895) (perpetual trust held void); In re Lee's Estate, 299 P.2d 1066 (Wash. 1956) (upholding the validity of a private gift in trust for so long as the rule would permit and then a limitation over).

"It is conceded by all ... that the utmost extent of a trust at common law is limited by lives in being at its creation and for 21 years thereafter." Fitchie v. Brown, 211 U.S. 321 (1908).

Beneficiaries of a private trust must be ascertained within the rule against remoteness. Feinberg v. Feinberg, 131 A.2d 658 (Del. 1957).

Trust to endure for too long a period of time held wholly void though interests are vested. Barnum v. Barnum, 26 Md. 119 (1866); American Colonization Soc'y v. Soulsby, 99 A. 944 (Md. 1917), l.r.a. 1917C, 937; Thorndike v. Loring, 81 Mass. 391 (5 Gray 1860).

Contra, (dictum) In re Johnston's Estate, 39 A. 879 (Pa. 1898) citing Gray, supra, n.1.

Inter vivos trust for benefit of settlor and wife for life then to children and issued per stirpes of deceased children for life to be distributed among issue 21 years after death of last surviving child. Construed to create a separate trust for each child vesting at date of trust, no children having been born after the trust, and so valid as vesting within lives in being and 21 years. Court said trust would have been invalid if it had been to a class of children. Second Bank-State Trust Co. v. Second Bank-State Trust Co., 140 N.E.2d 201 (Mass. 1957) (would have been invalid also except for wait and see doctrine).

Private trust for maintenance of cemetery plot is void. Detwiller v. Hartman, 37 N.J. Eq. 347 (1911) (1912); 5 Ill. l. Rev. 379; George L. Clark, Unenforceable Trusts and the Rule against Perpetuities, 10 Mich. L. Rev. 31; Edward Q. Keasbey, Gifts for Public Monuments, 29 Yale L.J. 729 (1920); Joseph Warren, The Progress of the Law, 1919-20, 34 Harv. L. Rev. 639 (1921); Honorary Trusts, 30 Colum. L. Rev. 60 (1930); "The position of the critics is that since, as appears, the rule against perpetuities in its orthodox and accepted sense can have no application to such dispositions, the rule which the courts apply must be a new and distinct rule which they have created outright for the purpose, even though the policy behind it is the same as that behind the rule against perpetuities proper and the time limit allowed is also the same... .

"The honorary trust contravenes the policy of the rule against perpetuities to prevent indirect restraints upon alienation and the control of property by the dead. The equitable title of the resulting cestui que trust could hardly be made less marketable by any overhanging future estates than by the powers vested in the honorary trustee. As already indicated, an outstanding power may be as objectionable to the rule as a springing use or an executory devise... ."

In New York private trusts running beyond the rule against perpetuities are void as suspending the power of alienation unless the trustee or another has the power to terminate. Schenectady Trust Co. v. Emmons, 25 N.Y.S.2d 230 (1941), aff'd, 36 N.E.2d 461 (N.Y.).

Rule avoided by a finding of creation of separate trusts. In re Goldstein's Will, 157 N.Y.S.2d 778 (1956).

Trust of oil and gas interests for 10 years or as long thereafter as oil and gas is produced suspended absolute power of alienation too long. Carlson v. Tioga Holding Co., 72 N.W.2d 236 (N.D. 1955).

Educational trust void because beneficiaries indicated with sufficient clearness. Brennan v. Winkler, 16 S.E. 190 (S.C. 1892).

See Edward W. Cleary, Indestructible Testamentary Trusts, 43 Yale L.J. 393 (1934); Edmond Hatfield, Perpetuities in Land Trusts, 40 Ill. L. Rev. 84 (1945); Joseph P. Marray, The Rule Against Prolonged Indestructibility of Private Trusts, 44 Ill. L. Rev. 467 (1949); John A. Metz Jr., Comment on the Application of the Rule Against Perpetuities to the Duration of Private Trusts in Pennsylvania, 4 U. Pitt. L. Rev. 157 (1938); Eldred Dede Perpetuities In Private Trusts In Wisconsin, 42 Marq. L. Rev. 514 (1959).

Kendall v. Kendall, 261 P.2d 422 (Wash. 1953).

(n28)Footnote 379. Smith v. Heyward, 105 S.E. 275 (S.C. 1920) (fact that incidentally there is made provision for the care of the burying ground of the family and the keeping of the family tomb does not convert the donation into a charity).

A limitation over to private persons after a charitable gift of indefinite duration, violated the rule against remoteness. Under the circumstances, the interest left in the testator passed to his heirs regardless of whether it was a determinable fee or a fee subject to a conditional limitation. In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960).

(n29)Footnote 380. Hart v. Seymour, 35 N.E. 246 (Ill. 1893); Wechter v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 52 N.E.2d 157 (Ill. 1943); Howe v. Morse, 55 N.E. 213 (Mass. 1889).

(n30)Footnote 381. See Eldred Dede, Perpetuities in Private Trusts in Wisconsin, 42 Marq. L. Rev. 514 (1959).

A trust is not invalid merely because its duration exceeds the time allowed for the rule against remoteness. In re Walkerly's Estate, 41 P. 772 (Cal. 1895); see also Recent Legislation, Future Interests: Recent Changes in the Law on Future Interests in California. Cal. Civ. Code: repeal of sections 715.1, 770, 771, 774, 775, 777; new sec. 771; amendment of sections 715.3, 716, 724, 48 Cal. L. Rev. 134 (1960).

(n31)Footnote 382. See employees benefit trusts exempted from rules against accumulations and perpetuities. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 59-3404; Ky. Rev. Stat. § 381.217.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.07

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.07 Statutory Modification of the Rule Against Remoteness

[Go To Supp]

The legislators in a number of states have attempted to state a statutory "rule against perpetuities." More recently the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities has been adopted by almost one-half of the states. To the extent that these acts vary from the "common-law" rule against remoteness of vesting the changes are largely caused by early obfuscation of what the rule was and its intended purpose.

It has been elsewhere seen in connection with restraints on alienation n383 that the New York code early failed to see the existence of two rules and spoke of the illegality of interests restraining alienation.

The rule against remoteness had become fairly well shaped in English law after Thellusson's case n384 as being lives in being plus 21 years. Yet for some unknown reason now lost in the mists of the past the New York drafters departed from the English thinking in two particulars. First, they prohibited absolute restraints on alienation rather than remoteness, second, they went back to Child v. Baylie, n385 and limited the allowable period to two lives in being on the effective date of the instrument. The New York statute was followed generally originally by the legislatures of Arizona, California, Idaho, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Wisconsin and the District of Columbia. Some variants were made in these states by extending the period to any number of lives in being, n386 lives not involved in the grant n387 and in some cases to named minorities thereafter, n388 or even to twenty-one years in gross after two lives or to lives in being or in the alternative a period in gross n389 or for the period of the common-law rule against remoteness n390 or longer. n391

In several of these states the common-law rule against remoteness had earlier existed and was changed by statutes. n392 In Arizona the statute applies to realty leaving the common law as to personalty. n393 In some states the statutes merely redeclare the common law. n394 Under the former New York rule the suspension of alienation, if at all, must be limited by not more than two lives in being at the creation of the estate. It could not be fixed or limited by a period of days, months, or years. n395

Under the old New York concept the test of the validity of a limitation was always whether an estate attempted to be created must in every possible contingency terminate within two lives in being. n396 In other states the statutes forbid the suspension of the absolute power of alienation for a longer period than the lives of persons in being at the death of the testator. n397 In Indiana the restraint against alienation was not limited to a particular number of lives in being in all cases except devises to charities. n398 In Ohio an estate in land could not be limited except to a person or persons in being or their immediate issue or descendants under the former rule. n399 In Wisconsin the rule became lives in being plus 30 years. n400 In Mississippi, it was provided that a devise may be made to a succession of donees then living, not exceeding two and to the heirs of the body of the remainderman, and, in default thereof, to the right heirs of the donor in fee simple. n401 The limitation, in order to be valid, must be so made that the estate, or whatever is devised, not only may, but must necessarily vest within the period prescribed by the statute. If by any possibility the vesting may be postponed beyond this period, the limitation over will be void. n402 Whether or not an instrument violates the law on perpetuities as to real estate must be determined by the law of the state in which the real estate is situated. n403 In some states perpetuities are prohibited by constitutional provision. n404 The common-law rule against perpetuities has been in force in Pennsylvania and is modified only by acts which are concerned with accumulations and property held in mortmain respectively. n405

Massachusetts made the first major statutory modification in the rule against remoteness in a hundred years by providing: (a) The "wait and see" doctrine shall be applied as of the time of termination of lives in being. n406 (b) Where the contingency is reaching an age beyond twenty-one the age is arbitrarily reduced to twenty-one (following the rule against accumulations practice). n407 (c) Terminating rights of re-entry and possibilities of reverter after thirty years if they are not subject to the rule against remoteness. The statute affected only inter vivos instruments and wills becoming effective after January 1, 1955. n408

Massachusetts adopted the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities in 1989. n409 Ohio, n410 and Wyoming n411 have returned to the common-law rule against remoteness of vesting. In Ohio it is held that the statute readopting the common-law rule against perpetuities was not retroactive in its effect and operation and did not affect substantial future interests previously set up, where the statute did not in terms so provide. n412 New York Laws 1958, ch. 152, changed the rule against perpetuities from two lives in being to "lives in being" and to provide that a contingent gift in remainder could be limited on a prior gift in remainder to take effect if the first remaindermen die or the remainder otherwise determine during minority. Lives in being include unborn children. n413

In those states where the statutes follow the old New York phraseology and purport to prohibit restraints upon the absolute right of alienation for longer than stated periods, it is not clear whether such a statute changes the length of time permitted for remoteness of vesting, whether the common-law rule still remains or whether there still exists a rule against remoteness distinct from an absolute restraint on alienation. n414 New York found that its statute covered both restraints on alienation and remoteness of vesting where all parties could alienate. n415

Illinois has virtually returned to the common-law rule by permitting lives in being and, instead of in the alternative as formerly, a term of years. n416

The pressure of estate planners and corporate trustees to avoid succession taxes has led to the use of schemes, both judicial and legislative, to avoid much of the impact of the rule. n417 These plans have taken several roads: lengthening the period of the rules; n418 avoiding "infectious disability"; n419 using the rule as a guide to construction; n420 "wait and see"; n421 "discrete invalidity"; n422 reasonableness of period; n423 among others. All try to escape from taxes by the generation-skipping device.

Oklahoma added twenty-one years in 1941 by a statute operating prospectively. n424

The Pennsylvania statute prevented void limitations from returning to the grantor or testator's estate. A power of revocation will save an otherwise invalid trust. n425

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 383. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. 1928, §§ 2761, 2762, said in Lowell v. Lowell, 240 P. 280 (Ariz. 1925), to have been taken from Wisconsin.

(n2)Footnote 384. Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. 227, aff'd, 11 Ves. 112, 8 R.R. 104, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 498 (1799). See Bicknell, Perpetuity Rule and Lives in Being, 116 New L.J. 1313.

(n3)Footnote 385. Cro. Jac. 459.

(n4)Footnote 386. Lives in being plus a contingent remainder in fee conditioned upon death before 21. Idaho Code 1932, §§ 54-111, 54-202.

See Walter H. Anderson, The Rule Against Perpetuities, 1 Idaho L.J. 73 (1931).

In re Walker's Will, 45 N.W.2d 94 (Wis. 1950), 23 a.l.r. 2d 991 (now changed in Wisconsin to lives in being and 30 years. Wisconsin has no rule against remoteness of vesting). Wis. Stat. § 700.16.

Michigan Compiled Laws now has the common-law rule, Mich. Comp. Laws 554.51. See 62 Mich. L. Rev. 1.

(n5)Footnote 387. Huxford v. Milligan, 50 Ind. 542 (1875); Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Tiffany, 260 S.W. 357 (Ky. 1924).

(n6)Footnote 388. Two lives and contingent remainder thereafter on death before 21. Mich. Comp. Laws 1929, §§ 12937-12939, 12941; Minn. Stat. 1927, §§ 8047-8049, 8051.

Lives in being and named minorities. Mont. Code Ann. 1921, §§ 6705, 6706, 6732-6735; Okla. Stat. 1931, §§ 11756, 11757, 11759, 11760; S.D. Codified Laws Ann. 1929, §§ 294, 295, 320-323, 326.

(n7)Footnote 389. In Montana lives in being or 25 years. Mont. Code Ann. 1921, § 5287, as amended by Laws 1933, ch. 203. Prior to 1933 the code was lives in being plus a contingent remainder vesting at majority.

See Oliver Rundell, Perpetuities in Personal Property in Wisconsin, 4 Wis. L. Rev. 1 (1926).

(n8)Footnote 390. D.C. Code Ann. 1929, tit. 25, ch. 6. In re Hinckley's Estate, 58 Cal. 457 (1881).

South Dakota exempts employee trusts from the rule against perpetuities and suspension of power of alienation. S.D. Codified Laws, 1967, §§ 60-13-1, 60-13-2.

"Lives in being" where settlor has the power to revoke are determined as of time settlor surrenders the right to revoke. Va. Code Ann. 1950, § 55-13.2.

Wis. Stat. 1973, Cemeteries, § 157.11.

Wyoming has the common-law rule against remoteness. Wyo. Stat. 1957, §§ 34-39, 34-40.

(n9)Footnote 391. Restraints on alienation limited to real property and allowable for lives in being plus 25 years with no rule against perpetuities as to either realty or personalty, denies presumption that person is able to have children at any stage of life and eliminates only violative part of a trust. Idaho Code 1947, § 55-111.

Lives in being at the creation of the estate and 30 years thereafter as the limitation of suspension of alienation except charitable uses, or literary, or charitable corporations, or cemetery corporations, or gifts for medicine. Wis. Stat. 1955, §§ 230.14, 230.15.

(n10)Footnote 392. Lowell v. Lowell, 240 P. 280 (Ariz. 1925). In re Hinckley's Estate, 58 Cal. 457 (1881); Huxford v. Milligan, 50 Ind. 542 (1875).

See Robert J. Lynn, Reforming the Rule Against Perpetuities: Choosing the Measuring Lives, 1965 Duke L.J. 720; Daniel M. Schuyler, The Statute Concerning Perpetuities, 65 Nw. U. L. Rev. 3 (1970).

(n11)Footnote 393. Lowell v. Lowell, 240 P. 280 (Ariz. 1925).

(n12)Footnote 394. Wagner v. Wagner, 79 N.W.2d 319 (Iowa 1956); In re Dees' Estate, 308 P.2d 90 (Kan. 1957); Taylor v. Dooley, 297 S.W.2d 905 (Ky. 1956).

See Future Interests -- Rule Against Perpetuities -- Legislation Exempting Options to Purchase in Leases. 56 Mich. L. Rev. 146 (1957).

(n13)Footnote 395. De Buck v. Bousson, 294 N.W. 135 (Mich. 1940).

After Sept. 1, 1959, successive life estates are not valid except to persons in being at date of creation. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 43, as amended Acts 1959.

New York has now virtually returned to the common-law rule. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law, § 14-1.1.

N.Y. Laws 1972, ch. 583, amended N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.3 to prevent the rule being applied so as to invalidate a gift because of the possibility a person might have a child by adoption. No other rules affecting instruments other than the rule against remoteness is affected. It applies to dispositions made after September 1, 1972. Subsection (3) of N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.3 would appear to knock out evidence of a later hysterectomy as defeating the possibility of later born issue.

(n14)Footnote 396. In re Friend's Will, 28 N.E.2d 377 (N.Y. 1940).

New York has exempted real estate investment trusts from the rule against remoteness. N.Y. Laws 1961, ch. 341-45; N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.1.

(n15)Footnote 397. In re Walkerly's Estate, 41 P. 772 (Cal. 1895); In re Gray's Estate, 146 N.W. 722 (N.D. 1914), l.r.a. 1917A, 611. See Cal. Civ. Code 1931, §§ 715, 716; Idaho Code 1932, § 54-111; 1913 N.D. Comp. Laws §§ 5287, 5288; S.D. Codified Laws 1929, § 294.

(n16)Footnote 398. Burns Stat. 1933, §§ 51-101, 56-142, 56-143; Richmond v. Davis, 3 N.E. 130 (Ind. 1885).

Indiana in 1945 returned to the "common law rule against perpetuities." Burns Stat. § 51-105.

(n17)Footnote 399. Ohio Gen. Code, § 10512-8.

(n18)Footnote 400. Wis. Stat. § 700.16(a)(1).

Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60 § 36. Successive life estates must be to living persons. Remainders on successive lives must be in fee. tit. 60 § 37. Contingent remainders cannot be limited on terms unless vested within lives in being, tit. 60 § 38.

(n19)Footnote 401. Miss. Code Ann. 1930, § 89-1-15.

Mississippi has a statute making a conveyance or devise of lands to a succession of donees then living and then to any person or heir. Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-15. This is supplemental to the Mississippi common-law rule against perpetuities. Shannon v. Riley, 121 So. 808 (Miss. 1929) and applies only to successions of donees. Lloyd's Estate v. Mullen Tractor & Equip. Co., 4 So. 2d 282 (Miss. 1941).

Devise to wife for life as long as she remained a widow and then after 30 years after testator's death to such of the children or lined descendants who had not conveyed or tried to convey their interest or any part thereof in the interim was void under perpetuities statute. McCormack v. Blanks, 85 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1956).

Redmond v. Redmond, 61 So. 552 (Miss. 1913) (this has been variously held as amending the common-law rule against remoteness); Russell v. Federal Land Bank, 176 So. 737 (Miss. 1937) (as a substitute for the common-law rule); Anderson v. Anderson, 115 So. 2d 531, 121 So. 2d 393 (Miss. 1959).

(n20)Footnote 402. Fosdick v. Fosdick, 88 Mass. 41 (6 Allen 1863).

(n21)Footnote 403. Miller v. Douglass, 213 N.W. 320 (Wis. 1927).

(n22)Footnote 404. See Hawks v. Hamill, 288 U.S. 52 (1933).

Okla. Stat Ann. tit. 60 § 75.

(n23)Footnote 405. See Phillip A. Brigg, A Defense of Pennsylvania's Statute on Perpetuities, 23 Temp. L.Q. 313 (1950); Oval A. Phipps, The Pennsylvania Experiment in Perpetuities, 23 Temp. L.Q. 20 (1950).

(n24)Footnote 406. Also reached by court decision in Worcester County Trust Co. v. Marble, 55 N.E.2d 446 (Mass. 1944); Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Curtis, 97 A.2d 207 (N.H. 1953).

See W. Barton Leach, An Act Modifying and Clarifying the Rule Against Perpetuities, 39 Mass. L.Q. 15 (1954).

The wait and see doctrine is followed in:

Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. §§ 45a-502 - 45a-508.

Idaho Code § 55-111.

Iowa Code Ann., § 558.68.

Md. Ann. Code § 11-103.

Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184a § 1.

Pa. Stat. Ann., §§ 6104-6105.

Vt. Stat. Ann., tit. 27, §§ 501-503.

Wash. Rev. Code Ann., § 11.98.130.

Some courts destroy the succeeding estate though vested, where the preceding estate fails by reason of violating the rule against remoteness. Thornton v. Kirtley, 249 S.W.2d 803 (Ky. 1952).

If, however, the interests created are so intertwined that they cannot be separated, the entire gift fails. Vickery v. Maryland Trust Co., 52 A.2d 100 (Md. 1947).

Maryland now has a "wait and see" statute. See Murphy v. Mercantile-Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 203 A.2d 889 (Md. 1964).

"Wait and see" in Mississippi. Phelps v. Shropshire, 183 So. 2d 158 (Miss. 1966), 37 Miss. L.J. 487.

Wait and see doctrine applied to options. Mumma v. Hinkle, 74 Dauph. (Pa.) 97 (1958).

Pennsylvania "wait and see" statute applies only to trusts created after January 1, 1948. In re Davis' Estate, 297 A.2d 451 (Pa. 1972).

See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in Perspective: Ending the Rules Reign of Terror, 65 Harv. L. Rev. 721 (1952); Lynn, Reforming the Common Law Rule Against Perpetuities, 28 U. Chi. L. Rev. 488 (1961); Harry M. Cross, Rule Against Perpetuities in Trust Dispositions, 34 Wash. L. Rev. 330 (1959); Jesse Dukeminier Jr., Kentucky Perpetuities Law Restated and Reformed, 49 Ky. L.J. 3 (1961) (analyzing the new Kentucky perpetuities act which adopts the common law subject to cy pres as to invalid interests in trusts and further subject to the "wait and see" doctrine).

See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities Legislation: Hail Pennsylvania!, 108 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1124 (1960); William S. Paddock The Rule Against Perpetuities -- Statutory Reform, 20 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 295 (1968).

(n25)Footnote 407. See also In re Estate of Kreuzer, 243 A.D.2d 207 (N.Y. 1998) (the codification of the rule against perpetuities allowed reformation of interests so as not to violate the rule against perpetuities: "Where an estate would, except for this section, be invalid because made to depend, for its vesting or its duration, upon any person attaining or failing to attain an age in excess of twenty-one years, the age contingency shall be reduced to twenty-one years as to any or all persons subject to such contingency." The court therefore ordered that the provision "attaining the age of twenty-one (21) years" be substituted for the phrase directing distribution upon "attaining the age of thirty-five years (35)").

(n26)Footnote 408. Mass. Gen. L., 1954, ch. 184A.

Where there is an executory limitation over after a determinable fee and the limitation is void for remoteness the possibility of reverter remains and is valid. Brown v. Independent Baptist Church, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950).

See Lawrence M. Jones, Reforming the Law -- The Rule Against Perpetuities, 22 Md. L. Rev. 269 (1962).

Ronald Maudsley, Perpetuities: Reforming the Common-Law Rule -- How to Wait and See, 60 Cornell L. Rev. 355 (1975); Samuel M. Fedders, Perpetuities: The Wait and See Disaster -- A Brief Reply to Professor Maudsley, With a Few Asides to Professors Leach, Simes, Wade, Dr. Morris, et al., 60 Cornell L. Rev. 380 (1975).

(n27)Footnote 409. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184A, § 1-11. It applies only to instruments dated prior to its effective date; Howson v. Crombie Street Congregational Church, 412 Mass. 526, 528, 590 N.E.2d 687, 689 (1992).

(n28)Footnote 410. Page's Rev. Code, § 2131.8.

(n29)Footnote 411. Laws 1949, ch. 92.; Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-139.

Arizona has adopted the common-law rule against remoteness of vesting. Ariz. Rev. Stat., § 33-261.

(n30)Footnote 412. Joseph Schonthal Co. v. Sylvania, 21 N.E.2d 1008 (Ohio App. 1938).

(n31)Footnote 413. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.1.

See Richard R. Powell, Changes in New York Statutes on Perpetuities and Accumulations: A Report and a Proposal, 58 Colum. L. Rev. 1196 (1958).

A power of revocation will save an otherwise invalid trust. Von Hesse v. MacKaye, 32 N.E. 615 (N.Y. 1892).

A trust for six named children provided that when each child reached 30 his share of principal would be paid to him -- New York held the trust valid even with respect to the youngest child who would not reach age 30 within 21 years. The age contingency was reduced to 21 years under a statute providing for the reduction to validate the otherwise invalid trust. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.2. In re Pendleton's Estate, 246 N.Y.S.2d 351 (1964).

See Richard R. Powell, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Spendthrift Trusts in New York: Comments and Suggestions, 71 Colum. L. Rev. 688 (1971).

(n32)Footnote 414. Minnesota seems to have no common-law rule against remoteness and its statute covers only restraints on alienation. Young Men's Christian Ass'n v. Horn, 139 N.W. 805 (Minn. 1913); Mineral Land Inv. Co. v. Bishop Iron Co., 159 N.W. 966 (Minn. 1916), l.r.a. 1917D, 900.

(n33)Footnote 415. In re Wilcox, 87 N.E. 497 (N.Y. 1909).

California has repealed § 715.8 of the Civil Code, which would permit family trusts to be perpetual as long as living persons could convey a fee simple. Stat. 1970, ch. 45, p. 63.

Connecticut contemplates that where the rule would be violated because the interest is contingent upon a person reaching an age in excess of 21 years, the age contingency is reduced to 21 Conn. Gen. Stat. § 45a-504.

Revising the rule against remoteness. 765 ilcs 305-4.

See I. Leo Glasser, Trusts, Perpetuities, Accumulations and Powers Under the Estates, Powers and Trusts Law, 33 Brooklyn L. Rev. 551 (1967); Daniel M. Schuyler, The Statute Concerning Perpetuities, 65 Nw. U. L. Rev. 3 (1971).

(n34)Footnote 416. 765 ilcs 305-4.

See New York's Two-Part Statutory Substitute for the Common Law Rule Against Perpetuities, 38 Albany L. Rev. 570 (1974).

(n35)Footnote 417. See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: New Absurdity, Judicial and Statutory Correctives, 73 Harv. L. Rev. 1318 (1960); William S. Paddock, The Rule Against Perpetuities -- Statutory Reform, 20 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 295 (1968); Daniel M. Schuyler, The Statute Concerning Perpetuities, 65 Nw. U. L. Rev. 3 (1971).

See also James J. Lenoir, A Reexamination of Perpetuities in Arizona, 10 Ariz. L. Rev. 347 (1968).

(n36)Footnote 418. Arizona now has the common-law rule against perpetuities. Ariz. Rev. Stat., § 33-261.

Common-law rule restored: Ga. Code Ann. § 44-6-200; Ohio Rev. Code Ann., § 2131.08; Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-139.

Common-law rule. Dallapi v. Campbell, 114 P.2d 646 (Cal. App. 1941); Beverlin v. First Nat'l Bank, 98 P.2d 200 (Kan. 1940); In re Lewis' Estate, 37 A.2d 482 (Pa. 1944).

See James J. Lenoir, A Reexamination of Perpetuities in Arizona, 10 Ariz. L. Rev. 347 (1968).

(n37)Footnote 419. Invalid separated from valid gifts. In re Schuette's Estate, 311 N.Y.S.2d 415 (1970).

See Robert L. Fletcher, A Rule of Discrete Invalidity: Perpetuities Reform Without Waiting, 20 Stan. L. Rev. 459 (1968).

(n38)Footnote 420. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 9-1.3(c), makes a rebuttable presumption that the "unborn widow" does not violate the rule.

(n39)Footnote 421. Mississippi has now joined the "wait and see" states under the doctrine cited by res in the case before the Madison Superior Court. See Phelps v. Shropshire, 183 So. 2d 158 (Miss. 1966).

Ohio has adopted the "wait and see" rule. Applicable retroactively to a power of appointment. Dollar Sav. & Trust Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Boston, 285 N.E.2d 768 (Ohio 1972). See also Robert J. Lynn, The Ohio Perpetuities Reform Statutes, 29 Ohio St. L.J. 1 (1968).

See Richard R. Powell, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Spendthrift Trusts in New York: Comments and Suggestions, 71 Colum. L. Rev. 688.

(n40)Footnote 422. See Robert L. Fletcher, A Rule of Discrete Invalidity: Perpetuities Reform Without Waiting, 20 Stan. L. Rev. 459 (1968).

(n41)Footnote 423. Hill v. State Box Co., 249 P.2d 903 (Cal. App. 1952).

(n42)Footnote 424. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, §§ 175.43, 175.47.

Oklahoma permits the court to apply the cy pres doctrine to the reformation of interests which violate the rule against perpetuities, both legal and equitable, to give effect to the general intent of the creator of the instrument. Okla. Stat. tit. 60, §§ 75-78.

Arizona has adopted the common-law rule.

(n43)Footnote 425. Pa. Stat. Ann. §§ 6104-6105.

But mere retention of income is insufficient. McCreary's Trust Estate v. Pitts, 47 A.2d 235 (Pa. 1946).

See Phillip Mechem, Further Thoughts on the Pennsylvania Perpetuities Legislation, 107 U. Pa. L. Rev. 965 (1959).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.08

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.08 A Short Course in the Modern Rule Against Perpetuities

[Go To Supp]

The contents of the following section were prepared by Professor John Makdisi and are intended to provide a helpful introduction to the incidents and operation of the modern rule against perpetuities.

§ 28.08(a) History of the Rule n426

The history of the development of the Rule against Perpetuities lies in part in the dual court system in England which treated terms of years differently than freehold estates. Chattels were regulated by the ecclesiastical courts, and a term of years (otherwise known as a leasehold or non-freehold estate) was considered a chattel real. No certain reason for the classification of leaseholds as chattels is known, but it appears that while the ecclesiastical courts could entertain suits concerning the bequest of a term of years, they were prohibited from interfering with suits concerning freehold estates which fell within the jurisdiction of the common law courts. n427

In the 15th century, the owner of a chattel real could not grant a life estate in the term to another person without giving the grantee the whole term. n428 A life estate, being an estate of freehold, was considered of greater magnitude than a term of years no matter how long the term actually lasted. Upon such a grant, no reversion remained in the grantor; upon the death of the termor before the expiration of the term, the term passed to the personal representative. If a remainder had been granted by the original owner of the term of years to follow the life estate, this remainder was void. Likewise, a grant by a termor to take effect upon the termor's death was void as an attempt to reserve a life estate in a term. There was one exception. A grant of a term after the death of a stranger was good because there was no presumption that the stranger might not die within the term. n429

In 1579, a step was made towards removing the bar on future interests after a devise for life in a term of years. The court in Welcden v. Elkington n430 reconciled a subsequent devise to a son after a devise of the occupation for life to the wife by treating the devises as if they had been made in reverse order: first to the son and then to the wife. This transposition allowed the devise of the term of years to the wife to be > upon a limitation only, viz. if she lived so long, for if it had amounted to an estate for life, (as it was objected) it would have swallowed up the whole term, an estate for life being in judgment of law greater than for years, in which case no remainder could be appointed over. n431

The court also noted that the devise for the occupation of the wife was a gift of the land itself and not of the occupation only. n432

In 1609, the court that decided Matthew Manning's Case n433 confirmed the validity of a future interest in a term of years following a devise to one for life. A possessor of a fifty-year term in a farm devised his lease to Matthew Manning after the death of his wife and gave the use and occupation of the farm to his wife during her life. The court determined that Matthew Manning took the lease by way of an executory devise and not by way of remainder. The court further stated that there was no difference devising a term for life with remainder over and devising a term for the use and occupation of another. "[T]he law will make construction of the words to satisfy his [the testator's] intent, and to put them into such order and course that his will shall take effect." n434 Thus, it was firmly established that the future interest after a devise for life was an executory devise, and the preceding estate for life was a gift of the land itself whether it had been devised as such or only for the use and occupation of the devisee.

Once the common law had accepted the concept of an executory devise in a term of years, it was an easy step technically to accept the concept of a devise over of the remainder of a term after the limitation of the term to one and the heirs of one's body. Such a devise was protected in 1612 in Retherick v. Chappel, n435 which cited Manning's Case and Welcden for support. It was not long, however, before a problem with perpetuity was recognized in permitting an executory devise to take effect following the limitation of a term in a fee-tail-like estate to one and the heirs of his body. A devise conceivably could be made to follow a limitation of indeterminate length.

This problem had already arisen and been settled in the law of freehold interests. In 1285, Parliament had enacted the Statute De Donis Conditionalibus, n436 which permitted landowners to tie up their land for several generations in fee tail estates without permitting the holder of the estate in the line of succession to convey an absolute interest in the land. This restraint on alienation was eventually avoided in 1472 when the courts sanctioned methods to evade the statute, and by the 16th century it was possible to convert an estate tail into a fee simple through a process known as "docking" or "barring the entail." n437 This procedure barred the rights of issue as well as those of the reversioner and remainderman.

Conveyancers attempted nonetheless to get around the ability to dock the entail, but to no avail. n438 It was therefore with some interest that they then turned to the term of years as a device for tying up interests in land for their clients. A fee tail estate technically could not be created in a term of years because its creation was permitted only in freehold estates by the Statute De Donis. It was thought, however, that a fee-tail-like interest could be created as in Retherick and prove immune to docking because the devices available to disentail a fee tail estate in freehold were not adaptable to the term of years. n439

The courts caught on to this scheme and soon prevented it as a mischievous perpetuity. In Bennet v. Lewknor, n440 the court found that a devise after a fee tail interest in a term was void. In Child v. Baylie, n441 this point was made even more emphatically. The limitation to one after an entail of a term was void "for such an entail of a term is not allowable in law, for the mischief which otherwise would ensue, if there should be such a perpetuity of a term." n442 Furthermore, the limitation over was void even after an interest in a term to one and one's assigns, the interest to take if one died without issue then living (a definite failure of issue construction which would give the limitation over, if at all, at the time of the first taker's death and no later). n443

The decision in Child v. Baylie was affirmed in 1623. It is therefore surprising that, despite their efforts to stem the tide of restraints on alienation, the judges decided in Pells v. Brown n444 (two years after the initial decision in Child and three years before its affirmance) that where freehold estates were concerned such a limitation over upon definite failure of issue was valid and, furthermore, indestructible. The limitation's validity was decided on the basis of precedent, n445 and its indestructibility was decided in accordance with the policy of protecting the executory devisee from losing the interest through a common recovery. n446 The judges in Pells believed that any problem with perpetuities was insignificant when the contingency of an executory devise was at issue. (As Professor George Haskins has noted, "the word perpetuity connoted an inconvenient fettering of property in the sense that the interest created in a grantee might be inalienable for too long a time.") n447 In Pells, the estate which was subject to the executory devise was classified as a fee simple interest subject only to "a mere contingency, which peradventure never may happen." n448 Alienability was not considered a serious problem. In Child v. Baylie, despite the similarity to Pells in the type of contingent interest involved, the judges were apparently concerned with a larger problem: permitting entails within a term of years. Entails in freehold estates could be destroyed but not entails in terms of years, and to permit the latter would create estates which could be fettered indefinitely. In 1631, the courts resolved this problem directly by declaring that a term of years could not be entailed. n449

The holding in Pells v. Brown was not fully exploited by those desiring to tie up their estates. The case itself did not involve a serious perpetuity, and it has been suggested that its sudden and unexpected departure from pre-existing law raised considerable doubt among conveyancers and judges as to its soundness. n450 Consequently, terms of years subject to the rules established by Manning's Case and its progeny were largely preferred over freehold estates as a technique of estate planning. n451

This state of affairs lasted until 1682 n452 and led, along with problems besetting conveyancers, to the seminal case for the modern Rule against Perpetuities, the Duke of Norfolk's Case. n453 This case involved an attempt to entail an interest in a term of years with a devise over upon failure of issue within the lifetime of another person. When the Chancellor, Lord Nottingham, called on the heads of the three common law courts to advise him, they maintained in accordance with Child v. Bailie that the devise over was invalid. Lord Nottingham decided, nevertheless, that the devise over was valid. Asked where he would stop if not at the limit of Child v. Baylie, he replied:

> I answer, I will stop everywhere when any inconvenience appears, no where before. It is not yet resolved what are the utmost bounds of limiting a contingent fee upon a fee; and it is not necessary to declare what are the utmost bounds to the springing trust of a term, for whensoever the bounds of reason or convenience are exceeded, the law will quickly be known. n454

In the Duke of Norfolk's Case, Child v. Baylie was rejected and Pells v. Brown affirmed, not merely for a freehold estate but also with respect to a term of years. The Norfolk court fully established the place of executory interests in the law both for freeholds and terms of years, and it extended the period of time during which such a future interest might validly take. n455 The present limit on the period evolved over the next 150 years until it was finally settled in the early 19th century n456 and eventually stated by Gray as follows: "No interest is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than twenty-one years after some life in being at the creation of the interest." n457

It is evident that interests created in terms of years were treated similarly to interests created in freehold estates with one major exception. What would ordinarily have been a remainder in a freehold estate after a grant of a life estate or a fee tail estate was an executory devise in a term of years. Consistent with the rule that executory interests could not vest in interest before they vested in possession, these interests were void if they could vest in possession beyond the perpetuities period. Gray notes the difference between a remainder in freehold and an executory devise in a term of years in the following example:

> Suppose a term is devised to A., who is now a bachelor, for life, on his death to A.'s eldest son for life, and on the death of such eldest son to A.'s other children absolutely. Here, had the subject of the devise been a fee instead of a chattel real, the gift to A.'s eldest son for life and the gifts in remainder to A.'s other children would all have vested in the lifetime of A., and so none of them would have been bad for remoteness. If, therefore, upon this devise of a term the estates for life are really life estates, then the > final limitation to A.'s younger children is vested and good. But if what purport to be life estates in the term are really absolute interests, then the final limitation is an executory devise, which does not vest until it comes into possession, and is therefore too remote. n458

§ 28.08(b) The Separate Path of Chattels Personal n459

Since chattels personal can be held as present interests with possession postponed or as vested remainders with possession postponed, it is possible for some conveyances of such property to be valid where the same conveyance of real property would be invalid. This difference has confused some of the best commentators in the field and has produced an enduring misinterpretation of the famous case of Jee v. Audley. n460

In Jee v. Audley the testator attempted to convey an executory bequest in personalty. He bequeathed £1,000, the interest to be paid to his wife for life and the principal to go to his niece and the issue of her body, and "in default of such issue" to "the daughters then living" of John and Elizabeth Jee. Sir Lloyd Kenyon, the Master of the Rolls, found that the limitation to the daughters was void for remoteness under the Rule against Perpetuities. He interpreted the phrase "in default of such issue" as an indefinite failure of issue construction -- the condition would be satisfied when the issue of the niece ran out. Since the daughters' interest was contingent on their survival until the niece's line ran out, it was legally possible that the existing daughters would die and presently unborn daughters would be living at the time the niece's issue failed. A violation of the Rule against Perpetuities existed because the interest of the daughters could conceivably vest more than twenty-one years after a life in being at the creation of the interest.

The nature of the interests in this conveyance differed from that of interests in real property. Jee involved the conveyance of personal property: £1,000. In the law of chattels personal, there was no legal estate in fee tail; the Statute De Donis only authorized a fee tail in land. n461 Therefore, Mary Hall was considered to take an absolute interest in the money with an attempted executory limitation over. Gray maintains that a gift or bequest of the absolute property in a chattel personal can be followed by an executory limitation over -- as, for example, in the case of an executory bequest of a painting to A, but if A dies without issue (with a definite failure of issue construction), then to B. n462

It appears then from an application of these principles governing the law of chattels personal that the niece, Mary Hall, took a present vested absolute interest in the money subject to the use and occupation of the wife for life and subject to being cut short by an executory bequest in favor of the Jees' daughters living at the time Mary Hall's line expired. In such a case, the rule against perpetuities is violated, and the niece receives an indefeasibly vested interest in the money.

The analysis so far is standard fare for this case. Let us move on to Lord Kenyon's dictum in Jee: "If [the limitation in the conveyance of the £1,000] had been to "daughters now living,' or "who should be living at the time of my death,' it would have been very good; but as it stands, this limitation may take in after-born daughters." n463

In 1938 Professor Leach asserted that this dictum was "one hundred per cent wrong." n464 Twenty-three years later, he reiterated the same conclusion in more colorful language:

> Since I consider this case so bad, I take a certain ghoulish pleasure in pointing out that at page 688 Lord Kenyon makes a clear error. He says that if the gift had been to "daughters now living" it would have been good. This is wrong. To make it good the gift would have had to have been to "daughters now living who shall be living at the death without issue of Mary Hall." n465

In their textbook on property, Professors Dukeminier and Krier concur with Professor Leach's opinion. n466

If, however, one examines the law of personal property in this area, Lord Kenyon's statement may be taken as technically correct. In Hide v. Parratt, n467 the Court of Chancery held that a bequest of personal property to a wife for life and then to a son, Joseph, was valid. It stated that "the rule is, where personal chattels are devised for a limited time, it shall be intended the use of them only, and not the devise of the thing itself, and therefore [the Lord Keeper] allowed the remainder over to be good." n468 Since the wife was considered to have only the use of the personal property, the present absolute interest (subject to the use in the wife) appears to have existed in the son (despite the Court's use of the term "remainder over"). The only other alternative is for the grantor's heirs to have held the present interest subject to an executory interest in the son, but this interpretation is doubtful in light of an earlier 1459 opinion.

The 1459 case n469 permitted the bequest of a Mass book to two people successively for their lives and upon the death of the second person to the parishioners of a certain parish. The case was in trespass, and although its report was inconclusive, it appears that the "life tenants" received a right to the use and occupation of the Mass book while the property or absolute interest remained in others. n470 This case proposes the rule that a gift of personal property is present and absolute in the final grantee subject to the use and occupation of "life tenants."

Relating these precedents to Jee v. Audley, one can formulate an argument justifying Lord Kenyon's dictum. If the bequest had been to Mary Hall and her issue and on the indefinite failure of her issue to the daughters now living of the Jees, the daughters now living take a present absolute vested interest subject to the use and occupation of Mary Hall and her issue. Such a present interest is valid under the rule against perpetuities. The use in Mary Hall would be a fee-tail-like interest recognized in an earlier 1565 opinion. n471 The opinion considered a devise of the use of jewels and pieces of plate of the late Chief Justice of England, Lord Fitz-James, to Nicholas Fitz-James and the heirs male of his body. The court held that the grantee of the plate had only the use and occupation. n472

What has not been recognized by the commentators is that the gift over upon failure of issue with an indefinite failure of issue construction was not necessarily a shifting executory bequest as it was in the actual conveyance in Jee. Where the gift over is subject to a condition precedent as in the facts of Jee, it is executory; where the "gift over" is not subject to a condition precedent but will take in possession at the end of a life-estate-like or fee-tail-like interest as in the dictum of Jee, it is present. Under this reasoning the dictum of Lord Kenyon would be correct.

This rule is applied at the time of the conveyance to prevent future interests from vesting too remotely. It does not apply to present interests not subject to open, vested remainders not subject to open, or reversionary interests (i.e., possibilities of reverter, n473 rights of re-entry, or reversions n474 It does apply to test for remoteness of vesting in the case of present interests subject to open, vested remainders subject to open, contingent remainders and executory interests. It also applies to equitable interests as it does to legal interests. n475

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: chattels personal w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(c) The Concept of Vesting

The concept of "vesting" under the rule against perpetuities is fairly straightforward. A remainder becomes vested when it loses its contingencies, i.e., that the interest is in a person or persons born and ascertained and is not subject to a condition precedent.

In Seaver v. Fitzgerald n476 the testator devised to trustees in trust:

> to use so much of the income thereof as shall be needed to give to my daughter ... a good and suitable support so long as she live; also if she shall ever have a child or children, my said [trustees] shall support them in a proper manner from said income or property during the life of each and all; the balance of said income and the property after the death of my said child, and her child or children (if any), shall all be paid for the sole use and benefit of the Augustinian Society of Lawrence.

The court found the devise to the Augustinian Society valid under the rule against perpetuities since it vested immediately.

As for executory interests, Professor Leach states the considered view:

> It is of fundamental importance that executory interests have not the capacity, which remainders have, of vesting in interest before they vest in possession. Hence executory interests must become possessory within the period of perpetuities, while remainders need only become vested. n477

Professor Gray adds that this is true unless, of course, the executory interest is turned into a vested remainder. n478 Care must be exercised in reading authors who suggest that an executory interest, as such, may be vested for purposes of the rule against perpetuities. n479 As for interests subject to open, the requirement for vesting is dependent on the vesting of the interest in every member of the class; until vesting in every member occurs, at least one member has an executory interest. Reversionary interests are considered vested because these interests are technically not created; they are the leftovers from a vested interest and therefore remain vested. n480

In Mann, Crossman & Paulin, Ltd. v. Registrar of the Land Registry, n481 plaintiffs held the lease of a public-house for a term of fifty years. The lessor died, leaving the reversion to his wife and children, who in 1917 conveyed the reversion to the plaintiffs for 30 years, to commence from the date of expiration in 1946 of their existing lease. The question was raised whether the 1917 conveyance violated the Rule against Perpetuities since the leasehold would not vest in possession for another twenty-nine years. The court found that the lease in reversion was vested and did not violate the Rule.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: vest! w/5 interest! w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(d) Four Aspects of the Rule

The rule against perpetuities deserves careful attention to each phrase of its formulation. There are four aspects of the rule that are particularly important:

> (1) The rule states that for an interest to be valid it "must vest, if at all" within a certain period of time. This phrase requires that there be no situation that could ever occur after the conveyance in which the interest could vest beyond this period. The possible future situations are determined at the time of the conveyance regardless of the actual situation that occurs after the conveyance. If any situation, no matter how unlikely, n482 can be hypothesized that would cause the interest to vest too late, the interest is invalid. On the other hand, it is not necessary that the interest vest at all. It is only necessary that it not be able to vest too late under any hypothetical situation that could occur after the conveyance.

In Warren v. Albrecht n483 the testator devised a life estate followed by four alternative contingent remainders. Since each of these remainders was designated to vest, if at all, on the death of a life in being, the remainders were valid under the rule against perpetuities.

> (2) The period beyond which the vesting of an interest would be too late is "twenty-one years after some life in being at the creation of the interest." A life in being at the creation of the interest is just that--anyone who is alive at the time the conveyance became effective. Twenty-one years after some such life is twenty-one years after the death of every person alive at the time the conveyance became effective. If it is possible to hypothesize at the time of the conveyance a situation in the future in which the interest could vest more than twenty-one years after the death of every person alive at the time the conveyance became effective, then the interest is invalid.

One way in which to ensure validity of an interest under the rule is to link explicitly in the conveyance the vesting of the interest to a period of time within 21 years from the deaths of certain designated lives in being. These lives do not need to be involved with the taking of any interest in the property; they may be totally unconnected. The only caution is to avoid designating too many lives in being for this purpose. The courts in In re Villar n484 and in Warren's Will Trusts n485 sustained provisions in wills which postponed vesting until 20 years after the deaths of all descendants of Queen Victoria living at the time of the testator's death. There were 120 known descendants in 1929 and 194 in 1961. On the other hand, the court in In re Moore n486 did not permit the use of "all persons who shall be living at [the testator's] death."

One interesting case provided another restriction in England which Professor Leach n487 called the Rule Against Double Possibilities. Professor Leach also stated that it has never been applied in the United States. n488 In Whitby v. Mitchell n489 lands were conveyed in trust to a husband and wife for their lives, then to their descendants as they should by deed appoint and who are living at the time of the appointment. The husband and wife subsequently had two daughters and used their special power of appointment to give one half of the lands to each daughter for life, then to the use of such persons as each daughter should by will appoint, and in default of appointment, to the use of the daughters' children presently alive. The court found that the appointment by the husband and wife was bad, except for the life estate to the daughter: "the law as to land has always been that you cannot limit an estate to an unborn person for life, with remainder to the issue of that unborn person. Stated broadly, no one would dispute that proposition for a single moment; but it is said that if you do so limit, with a proviso that the unborn children of the unborn person who are to take shall be persons coming into existence within the period limited by the rule against perpetuities, that is good... . I do not know of any authority whatever for that limitation of the rule." Since the validity (for purposes of the rule against perpetuities) of the limitations under a special power of appointment are determined by reading them back into the original conveyance (but taking into consideration the facts existing at the time the appointment is made), the court likened this conveyance to one "to A for life, remainder to B for life, remainder to the first child of A by B for life, remainder to the children of that first child ... provided that such children shall be born within a life or lives now in being [naming the lives of A and B] and twenty-one years afterwards." This conveyance would be good under the rule against perpetuities, but the court found it invalid as a possibility on a possibility. Specifically, the Court of Appeal stated "you cannot have a limitation for the life of an unborn person, with a limitation after his death to his unborn children to take as purchasers."

> (3) In determining the twenty-one year period after the death of every person alive at the time the conveyance, actual periods of gestation are included where the child in gestation is born alive. Thus, O's devise "to his great-grandchildren when his first grandchild reaches twenty-one and no later," is valid even though at O's death his wife is pregnant with their first child, A, who might die thirty years later leaving his twenty-five year old wife pregnant with their first child, B, who might become pregnant with her first child, C, when she reaches twenty-one. O's child is considered a life in being at the time of the devise, despite his birth occurring after O's death. n490 The grandchild, B, when she reaches twenty-one, does so more than twenty-one years after A's death, but the extra time is permitted as an actual period of gestation. The great-grandchild, C, is born after the end of the twenty-one year period, but again the extra time is permitted as an actual period of gestation. Since no great-grandchild may take an interest more than twenty-one years after the death of a life in being at the creation of the interest (except for periods of actual gestation which are permitted), n491 the interest in the great-grandchild is valid under the rule against perpetuities.

In Thellusson v. Woodford n492 the testator gave the residue of his estate to trustees in trust to collect the rents and profits during the lives of all of his issue who should be living at the time of his death or "born in due time afterwards," and at the death of the last survivor, to divide the property equally and convey it to certain descendants then living in tail male. The court interpreted the words, "born in due time afterwards," from the intention of the testator manifested in the will to mean the time of gestation, and the life of a child en ventre sa mere was allowed to fix the time during which the vesting of the property could be protracted. Furthermore, at the end of the perpetuities period, the court allowed that a child en ventre sa mere could be a taker when actually born.

> (4) The interests of members of a class are dependent on each other. None of the interests must be able to vest beyond the period of the rule or all the interests of the members of the class will be invalid. n493

In Ward v. Van der Loeff n494 the testator in a codicil to his will declared "that after her [his wife's] death my trustees shall stand possessed of the residuary trust funds in trust for all or any the children or child of my brothers and sisters who shall be living at the death of my wife or born at any time afterwards before any one of such children for the time being in existence attains a vested interest and who being a son or sons attain the age of 21 or being a daughter or daughters attain that age or marry if more than one, in equal shares." The court found that, despite the fact that on the date of the codicil the parents of the testator were both over the age of 66, n495 the gift to the children was void under the rule against perpetuities. As Lord Blanesburgh explained the perpetuity that could have eventuated upon the testator's death:

> It was ... necessary that they [the testator's parents] should have another child... . That child, in turn, had to have a child born after the death of the testator's widow -- one born in her lifetime would not have been excluded by the rule. And even a child so born would have brought about an infraction of the rule, only if it had also eventuated that no one of the already substantial and apparently increasing families of the testator's four living brothers and sisters had survived his widow having married or attained twenty-one.

§ 28.08(e) Difficulty of the Rule

In Feeney's Estate n496 the testator gave property to a trustee in trust to pay the income to his son William for life, and then > the fund shall continue in trust during the lifetime of the children of the said son ... living at the time of his death ... in equal shares ... . Upon the death of any of the children of my son ... [that] child's proportionate share of the corpus of the said fund shall be paid to the residuary legatees [six other children of the testator] or their heirs.

The court determined that the gift to "the residuary legatees or their heirs" created a substitutionary gift to the heirs, thus making the gift to the residuary legatees contingent on their remaining alive until the termination of the preceding estates.

On these facts, the court found that the contingent remainders in the residuary legatees were invalid under the rule against perpetuities. The court concluded that these interests were invalid because they might vest too late:

> since it is apparent that a child might be born to the first life tenant after the latter comes into his estate at the death of the testator; that this child, if alive at the demise of its parent, would take an interest for life and might live more than twenty-one years; and that those entitled under the will to be paid the share of the principal on which such child had received income could not be ascertained, so that their interests would vest, till its death; finally, the person in question might be the only child of the first life tenant living at the time of the latter's death... . It may readily be seen that the contingent ultimate remainders thus created possibly may not vest until the death of a child born to the first life tenant after the death of testator, who would survive its parent more than twenty-one years, -- a period longer than that allowed by the rule against perpetuities.

The court made a mistake in its application of the rule against perpetuities. Each of the residuary legatees was living at the death of the testator and therefore was a life in being. The contingency of his remainder was his death before the termination of the preceding estates. If he died before this time, his heirs would be determined and would have a vested remainder; if he died after this time, he would have a vested remainder upon the termination of the preceding estates. In either case, vesting would occur within the perpetuities period because the residuary legatees were the measuring lives n497

The difficulty in determining the validity of an interest under the rule against perpetuities is well recognized. In Lucas v. Hamm n498 the California Supreme Court held that an attorney who drafted a will provision violating the rule against perpetuities was not liable for negligence because the rule against perpetuities is " 'a technicality-ridden legal nightmare' and "a dangerous instrumentality in the hands of most members of the bar' ", and it would not be proper to find negligence. It is ironic that Cornelius Moynihan mentions this case in a footnote in his book, n499 and in the text on the same page he himself misstates the rule when he says "a future interest which, by any possibility, may not vest within twenty-one years after a life or lives in being at the time of its creation is void in its inception." In fact, a future interest may not vest within this time period and yet still be valid; it may never vest. For example, where O conveys "to A for life and then to B if B gets married," if B never gets married B's interest will never vest, but B's interest is a valid contingent remainder at the time it is created. Thomas Bergin and Paul Haskell n500 make the same mistake as Moynihan when they state that "the rule makes void any "contingent" interest created in a transferee that, viewed from the moment of its creation, is not certain to "vest" within the life of a person living at the time the interest is created, plus 21 years." Undoubtedly, these statements are oversights. The misstatements of the rule in both texts may be corrected by adding the words "if at all" after the word "vest," as Bergin and Haskell later do in their book. n501

Therefore, it may be helpful to examine at least one quick method for determining validity of interests under the rule against perpetuities.

§ 28.08(f) A Quick Method for Determining Validity

Validity of an interest under the rule against perpetuities can be determined by asking four questions. If the answers to any of these questions is affirmative, the interest is valid. If not, the interest is most likely invalid and merely needs a hypothetical example of an invalid situation to prove it.

QUESTION #1:

Must the vesting events, if they happen, all happen within the period of the rule? A vesting event is an event that must occur before the interest can vest. It may be birth or ascertainment of the interest holder or the occurrence of an event specified in a condition precedent.

QUESTION #2:

Must the interest terminate within the period? A life estate measured by a life in being at the time of the conveyance must terminate within the period because the twenty-one years cannot start to run until the life estate is over. n502

QUESTION #3:

If the destructibility rule is in operation within the jurisdiction, does the interest as a contingent remainder, not in a class nor transformable into an executory interest, follow a prior life estate(s) measured by a life(lives) in being? Such a contingent remainder is destroyed by the Destructibility of Contingent Remainders Rule if it does not vest on or before the termination of the prior life estate(s). Note that the Destructibility Rule does not apply to equitable contingent remainders. n503

QUESTION #4:

In the case of a class gift, must the class close and the interests of every member of the class vest, if at all, within the period of the rule? Where O conveys "to A for life, then to the children of A's first-born son who reach age fifteen" and A has no children at the time of the conveyance, the interest in the children of A's first-born son is valid. If no children of A's first-born son are born by the time A's life estate terminates, the children's interest will be destroyed by the destructibility rule. If a child is born to A's first-born son, that child (or representative) will become entitled to distribution no later than the death of A, thus closing the class on or before the death of all lives in being. No child of A's first-born son would be able to take a vested interest more than fifteen years (plus any actual period of gestation) later.

Note that in Question #3 above, the destructibility rule will not guarantee validity in the case of a class gift. For example, O's conveyance when A has no children "to A for life, then to the children of A who reach the age of fifty" creates an invalid (and therefore no) interest in the children. The hypothetical situation that proves the invalidity of the children's contingent remainder is that the first child of A might reach fifty when the second child is twenty (transforming the first child's interest into a vested remainder subject to open and the second child's interest into an executory interest), and then A and all lives in being at the time of the conveyance might die at this time and thirty years later the second child might reach fifty causing her interest to vest beyond the period of the rule.

Also the destructibility rule will not guarantee validity in the case of a contingent remainder transformable into an executory interest, such as O's conveyance "to A for life and then to the first child of A, but if that child does not reach fifty, then to B" when A has no children. B has an invalid (and therefore no) interest. At the time of the conveyance, B and the unborn first child of A have alternative contingent remainders. The hypothetical situation that proves the invalidity of B's interest is that the first child might be born (transforming that child's interest into a vested remainder in fee simple subject to executory limitation and transforming B's interest into an executory interest), and then A, B and all lives in being at the time of the conveyance might die at this time and then thirty years later the first child of A might die causing C's interest to vest beyond the period of the rule.

§ 28.08(g) Effect of Invalidity of an Interest

An interest that is invalid under the rule against perpetuities is struck from the conveyance, leaving the valid gifts to take effect with all remaining interests in the property left with the grantor. Thus, O's conveyance "to A for life, then ten years later to the first child of A to go to law school" is an invalid attempt to create an executory interest in the first child of A to go to law school. O's conveyance is valid only to give A a present interest in a life estate and to leave a reversion in O in fee simple absolute.

If the invalid interest is an executory interest that cuts short a fee simple estate in another grantee, the fee simple estate may be determinable or subject to condition subsequent. If the language of the condition is durational such as to create a fee simple determinable, the invalid future interest is struck but the condition remains as a condition subsequent and the grantor retains a possibility of reverter.

In Institution for Savings in Roxbury v. Roxbury Home for Aged Women n504 property was conveyed to the Institution "for their use as long as the present Institution shall continue to exists ... [and t]hat when the Institution shall cease to exist the Trustees shall convey the whole estate to [the Roxbury Home]. The court found that the Institution was not a charity and that the gift over to the Home was void under the rule against perpetuities. The Institution was left with a fee simple determinable and the original donor with a possibility of reverter.

If the condition is conditional such as to create a fee simple subject to condition subsequent, the invalid interest is struck as well as the condition and the fee simple becomes a fee simple absolute.

In Proprietors of the Church in Brattle Square v. Grant n505 there was a devise of realty:

> to the present deacons of the Church ... and their successors ... forever, upon this express condition and limitation, that is to say, that the minister... and in case the same is not improved for his use only, I then declare this bequest to be void and of no force, and order that said house and land then revert to my estate, and I give the same to my nephew, ... and to his heirs forever.

The court found that the gift over to the nephew was an executory devise that was void under the rule against perpetuities. "The general principle applicable to such cases is, that when a subsequent condition or limitation is void by reason of its being impossible, repugnant or contrary to law, the estate becomes vested in the first taker, discharged of the condition or limitation over, according to the terms in which it was granted or devised." The first taker took a fee simple absolute.

Thus, O's conveyance "to A as long as the old oak tree remains standing, then to B" gives A a fee simple determinable and leaves O with a possibility of reverter. O's conveyance "to A, but if the old oak tree falls, then to B" gives A a fee simple absolute. However, O's conveyance "to A, but if the old oak tree falls, then to the heirs of O" appears to give O a possibility of reverter after application of the Doctrine of Worthier Title, with no need to apply the rule against perpetuities. n506

If the invalid gift is an essential part of the testator's plan such that the testator would not have wished to grant the valid interests without the interests found invalid under the rule against perpetuities, the doctrine of "infectious invalidity" causes the valid gifts to fail as well.

In Taylor v. Dooley n507 testator's will devised one half of his real estate to his son and one half to his daughter, subject to the dower right in their mother. However, the son was designated to receive a fee simple absolute while the daughter was to receive a life estate "with remainder to the heirs of her body for and during their natural lives with remainder in fee to the children of her bodily heirs, and in the event she should die without bodily heirs surviving her, then the share herein devised to her shall pass to and become the property of [the son] in fee simple." The remainder in fee to the children of the bodily heirs of the daughter was void under the rule against perpetuities. If it were the only invalid interest, the testator would die intestate as to this interest and it would be split equally between daughter and son. This would result in the son receiving three-quarters of the property while the daughter received only one-quarter. The court found "that the testator intended to make equal gifts to his daughter and her descendants and to his son." Therefore, the court invalidated the gifts to both son and daughter and these interests passed by intestacy in equal shares to both.

In Barrett v. Barrett n508 the testator gave in trust a life estate to his widow, then life estates to the sons, then life estates to the grandchildren, then the corpus to be divided among the great-grandchildren. The interests of the great-grandchildren were void under the rule against perpetuities, and the court determined that all the interests must fail:

> We think it obvious, however, from the language of the entire will that the testator had in his mind, when he executed his will, a plan for the disposition of all his estate and not for the creation therein only of certain life estates... . [W]hen some of the trusts in the will are legal and some are illegal, if they are so connected together as to constitute an entire scheme for the disposition of the estate, so that the presumed wishes of the testator would be defeated if one portion were retained and other portions rejected, or if manifest injustice would result from such construction to the beneficiaries or to some of them, then all the trusts must be construed together, and all must stand or all must fall.

Conversely, if the invalid portions can be separated from the valid portions and still give effect to the general testamentary scheme, the valid clauses are upheld.

In Lovering v. Worthington n509 the testator made "a devise to Nancy Gay for her life, with a limitation over of a life estate to her children, and a further limitation over of a fee in the heirs at law of such children." The court stated that if they "assume[d] that this devise includes children born after the death of the testator, and therefore that it is contingent and executory, yet it is not void for remoteness. The devise takes effect, and the life estate in each child necessarily becomes absolute, at the death of Mrs. Gay." In such a case the interest in the heirs at law would be void, but "it is clear that the effect of such invalidity is not to defeat the prior life estates. The general rule is, that, if a limitation over is void for remoteness, it places all prior gifts in the same situation as if the devise over had been wholly omitted."

A particular instance in which this question of infectious invalidity arises is the case where an interest which does not violate the rule against perpetuities is given after an interest which does infringe the rule. The cases go both ways in determining whether the whole conveyance fails or merely the interest which violates the rule.

In In re Hewett's Settlement n510 life estates were given in trust to a husband and wife, and upon the death of the survivor then in trust to the children of the marriage who being sons should attain the age of twenty-five or being daughters should attain that age or marry in equal shares, and, if there are none, then upon trust to pay the income in equal shares to the husband's three sisters, Helga, Hilda, and Hulda, for their lives, and then to others. The interest in the children was invalid under the rule against perpetuities, and the court found that the succeeding interests which did not violate the rule in themselves were invalid under English law, even though Gray on Perpetuities was cited for the opinion that they ought to be held valid in America.

If an interest subject to two conditions precedent, that are explicitly separated into two separate conditions by the language in the grant, is invalid because one of the conditions might occur beyond the period of the rule against perpetuities so as to vest the interest too late, the invalidating condition is struck from and the valid condition is left in the conveyance. n511

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: invalid! w/2 interest w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(h) Class Gifts

It was established as early as 1817 in the English case of Leake v. Robinson n512 that an entire class gift is void if it is possible for some member of that class to take a vested interest beyond the period of the rule against perpetuities. In Leake v. Robinson n513 the testator devised and bequeathed in trust for the benefit of William, his grandson, for life, then for the benefit of and ultimately to the children of William, but "in case [William] shall happen to die without leaving issue, living at the time of his decease, ... [then] unto and amongst all and every the brothers and sisters of [William], share and share alike, upon his, her, or their attaining twenty-five, if a brother or brothers, and if a sister or sisters, at such age or marriage... ." William died without issue. The court found that the class of his brothers and sisters consisted of all who were living at the time of William's death and no interest of a member of the class vested until he reached twenty-five or she reached twenty-five or married, since there was no antecedent gift with enjoyment postponed. Thus, the gift to the class of William's siblings was void since a member of the class could be an after-born who might not reach the age of twenty-five until after the period designated by the rule against perpetuities.

In In re Helme n514 the testator attempted to give the residue of a trust fund to his grandchildren with the following provision: "Upon the arrival at age of the youngest grandchild, or upon the death of the last surviving grandchild, who may be a minor, the residue of the trust fund, both income and capital, shall be equally divided among the grandchildren, then living and the issue of such as may be dead, the issue of deceased grandchild taking the share or interest the parent would have taken if living." The court determined that after-born grandchildren were included in this provision and that after-born grandchildren could not be separated as a class from prior born grandchildren. The court concluded that the gift was invalid under the rule against perpetuities.

Of course, the Rule of Convenience may close the class in such a way as to ensure that every member of the class could not take a vested interest beyond the period of the rule against perpetuities.

In Picken v. Matthews n515 the testator gave in trust to "such of the children of my daughter Helen by her first husband (but not her children by her present husband), and the children of my daughter Charlotte, who being sons shall live to attain the age of twenty-five years, or being daughters shall attain that age or previously marry, whichever shall first happen; and I expressly direct that all such grandchildren shall participate equally without regard to the number of each family." At testator's death, one of these grandchildren had attained the age of twenty-five. The court followed the Rule of Convenience and allowed only those who were living at the death of the testator to take. Since these were all lives in being, the gift was valid under the rule against perpetuities.

In applying this rule it is important to determine when vesting takes place. In Helme, discussed above, vesting took place at the time for distribution, that is, "[u]pon the arrival at age of the youngest grandchild, or upon the death of the last surviving grandchild, who may be a minor." It is possible in other cases that vesting may take place earlier than the time for distribution, such as in the case of a freehold subject to a non-freehold and the case of a direction to pay after the vesting of the estate.

In McKibben v. Pioneer Trust & Savings Bank, n516 the testatrix left the residue of her estate to a trustee in trust for the children of her son, and stated that:

> [t]he trust estate ... shall continue until the youngest of said children living at the time of my death shall reach the age of thirty-five years, or if said youngest child shall die before reaching such age, at the date such child would have reached such age if he or she had lived... . In the period from my death until the termination of said trust, the income from said trust estate shall be divided equally among such children as may be living [and then to their children or their siblings]... . When said trust is so terminated, the corpus thereof and any undistributed income shall be divided equally among such children ... as may then be living, the children of any who may have died to take their parents share, per stirpes and not per capita.

At the death of the testatrix, there were three children of her son, the youngest of whom was one year old. The court found that the children took a valid vested interest with payment of principal postponed for thirty-four years. The estate was subject to open "to let in any children born to [the son] after the death of testatrix." n517

An exception to the rule of Leake v. Robinson is the doctrine of vertical separability established in 1853 in the English case of Cattlin v. Brown. n518 This doctrine has been restated by John Chipman Gray as follows: "When gifts are made to several persons by one description, but the amount of the gift to one is not affected by the existence or non-existence of the others, then the gifts are separable... . When, on a gift to a class, the number of shares is definitely fixed within the time required by the rule against perpetuities the question of remoteness is to be considered with reference to each share separately. n519

In Cattlin v. Brown n520 the testator devised to Thomas Cattlin for life, with remainder to all his children for life, with remainder as to every share of every child to the children of that child in fee. The court stated "suppose Thomas Bannister Cattlin to have four sons, A., B., C., and D., and A. and B. to be living at the testator's death and the others to be born afterwards. A. and B., on the testator's death, take an immediate vested interest in remainder for life, expectant on their father's death, with remainder to their respective children in fee, subject to their respective moieties being diminished on the birth of C. and D., but their exact shares are ascertained within the legal limits at the death of their father, and neither their life interests nor the remainder in fee are capable of being wholly divested in favor of any party beyond the legal limits... . The limitation as to the shares of C. and D. [going to their children] in the case I have supposed would be clearly void, as their children might be born at a period exceeding the limits which the law allows, they themselves not being in esse at the death of the testator."

In Estate of Weaver n521 a residuary trust formed by a will "provided life estates in the interest income for the testator's widow and his children, then to his grandchildren, with the principal to be liquidated and distributed to each of the testator's great-grandchildren upon the death of their beneficiary parent." It was claimed that the remainders in the great-grandchildren were invalid because at the time of the testator's death it was possible that a great-grandchild could be born beyond the perpetuities period. (A grandchild could be born, all lives in being could die, a period of more than twenty-one years could pass, and then a great-grandchild could be born, taking a vested remainder in fee simple absolute beyond the perpetuities period.) When the testator died, his grandchild, Heil Macklin was alive. The court found that Heil Macklin's children took a valid remainder interest as the great-grandchildren of the testator under the doctrine of vertical separability adopted in Pennsylvania in 1929 n522 (although they also found that the wait-and-see doctrine applied to make the interest valid). The court stated that the doctrine was applicable in this case because the separation "would not have been disruptive to the testator's overall testamentary plan." Therefore, the shares of the grandchildren living at the death of the testator could be separated from those of the grandchildren not living and the children of Heil Macklin would take valid interests under the rule against perpetuities.

Another form of this exception to the rule of Leake v. Robinson is the gift of a specific sum to each member of a class.

In Storrs v. Benbow n523 the testator bequeathed £500 apiece "to each child that may be born to either of the children of either of my brothers, to be paid to each of them on his or her attaining twenty-one." Although the class closed immediately and therefore all members were lives in being at the time of the bequest, the court offered the following dictum:

> I must add, however, that I do not say that the gift was at all remote if it meant a child to be born at any time, because this is not the case of a class; it is a gift of a pecuniary legacy of a particular amount to every child of every nephew which the testator then had, or of every nephew that might be born after his death, and is therefore good as to the children of the nephews he then had, and bad as to the children of nephews to be born after his death.

In In re Gay's Estate n524 the testatrix gave property in trust "[t]o pay $4,000 per annum to each of her six children for life. Out of the balance of the income to pay $1,000 per annum to a granddaughter, Deborah Gay Thomas, for life. Upon the death of each of her six children, to pay $1,000 per annum to their children ("who are living at the time of my death') for their lives. Upon the death of [these grandchildren], to pay $25,000 to his or her children or grandchildren then living, in such sums or proportions as he or she may by will appoint." At the death of the last surviving child of the testatrix, there were fifteen grandchildren, all of whom were alive at the death of the testatrix. Although the court did not discuss the validity of the powers of appointment given to the grandchildren, the court found them valid. This determination is correct since each grandchild was a life in being and was given a power over a specific sum. The possibility that other grandchildren might have been born after the death of the testatrix does not affect the validity of the powers in the grandchildren who are lives in being, although the power in an afterborn grandchild would have been void. n525

Care must be exercised in applying the severability exception to the Leake v. Robinson exception. There is no severability where, even though the maximum size of a class may be determined within the period of the rule against perpetuities, there is a possibility that the minimum number may be determined beyond the period (with the result that each class member's share may be enlarged beyond the period); in such a case the interest in the whole class is void. Note that in Cattlin v. Brown the shares found to be invalid in certain of the grandchildren were first held validly by their parents as members of a different class, and if the parents had died without issue, these shares would have reverted to the grantor's estate and would not have gone to the other grandchildren. If they had gone to the other grandchildren, there would have been no severability and the interests of all the grandchildren as a class would have been void.

In Pearks v. Moseley n526 the testator gave a legacy in trust to pay the interest to his child for life, then "in trust for all the children of my [child] who shall attain the age of twenty-one years, and the lawful issue of such of them as shall die under that age leaving lawful issue at his, her, or their decease or respective deceases, which issue shall afterwards attain the age of twenty-one years, or die under that age leaving issue at his, her, or their decease or deceases respectively, as tenants in common, if more than one, but such issue to take only the share or shares which his, her, or their parent or parents respectively would have taken if living." The class consisted of both the testator's grandchildren who reached twenty-one and certain of his great-grandchildren who reached twenty-one or died before that age with issue. The court found that the contingency on the vesting of the interests of the great-grandchildren caused these interests as well as the interests of the grandchildren to be invalid. There was no severability. n527

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: class! w/2 gift! w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(i) Powers of Appointment

The Rule against Perpetuities applies to powers of appointment in two respects: (1) the validity of the power, and (2) the validity of the appointed interests.

The validity of the power is determined for special powers and general testamentary powers by whether it is possible for the power to be exercised beyond the perpetuities period as measured from the time the power is created.

In Burlington County Trust Co. v. Di Castelcicala n528 the testatrix gave the residue of her estate by will in trust for the benefit of her husband for life, then to her two daughters for life, then the share of each daughter to their children for their lives, "with the power of disposal by will of the mother's share of the principal." The court stated that "[t]he grandchildren of the testatrix ... were all living at the time of the death of the testatrix, but the possibility of the birth of additional grandchildren after the death of the testatrix is conceded." Therefore, since one of these additional grandchildren might be the one to exercise the power, the court found that the power could be exercised beyond the period of the rule and was void.

In Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Scott n529 the testator gave property in trust to his two daughters one-half each for each of their lives, then each of their shares to their children with the Trustee directed:

> to continue holding upon trust the shares of my granddaughters during the terms of their natural lives, and to continue holding upon trust the shares of my grandsons until they shall severally arrive at the age of thirty years... . And in case of the death of any one of my grandsons before attaining the age of thirty years and in case of the death of my granddaughters, I direct that my Trustee shall distribute the trust fund of the grandchild so dying in such manner as said grandchild shall by will direct but in default of such instructions then I direct that said deceased grandchild's share shall be distributed equally between the remaining brothers and sisters of the grandchild so dying, or in case of no brothers or sisters, then I direct it shall be distributed equally between all of my surviving grandchildren.

The court found that the testamentary power of appointment given to the grandchildren who might include persons not alive at the time of the creation of the power (as well as the gift over to the other grandchildren in default of appointment) was void under the rule against perpetuities.

The validity of the power is determined for general powers exercisable by deed or by deed or will by whether it is possible for the power to be acquired (become exercisable) beyond the perpetuities period as measured from the time the power is created.

In In re Hargreaves n530 a will created successive equitable life estates in the testatrix's two sisters and their surviving children, gave a general power of appointment of the remainder to the surviving life tenant, and gave the remainder in default of appointment to the testatrix's heir at law. The court held the appointment to be invalid, stating: "This power is given to the last survivor of the sisters and their children. The children might not all be in being at the death of the testatrix; the power, therefore, is not given to a person who must necessarily be ascertained within the period allowed by the rule against perpetuities."

The validity of the appointed interests is determined for special powers and general testamentary powers by applying the rule against perpetuities at the time the power is created as if the appointed interests were created in the instrument creating the power, but taking into consideration the facts existing at the time the appointment is made. This method is sometimes called the "second look" doctrine. n531 The second look doctrine is also applied to gifts in default of appointment. n532

In Bundy v. United States Trust Co. n533 the testatrix left a will giving property to Carlotta to be held for her for life and then paid to such person as she should by will appoint. Carlotta left a will in which the appointive property was given in trust to pay to [her] adopted children, Emily and Martha, during their lives and the life of the survivor, so much of the income and in such shares and proportions as the trustee should determine, and the balance of the income elsewhere, and when both Emily and Martha should be dead to pay the principal in equal shares to their then living issue per stirpes and, in default of such issue, elsewhere. Emily and Martha were born after the death of the original testatrix. The court found that Carlotta's exercise of the power given to her by the testatrix was invalid: "It is clear that a discretionary trust is not vested, and if it continues beyond the period within which future interests can be created it is bad... . The discretionary provision for life to Emily, and Martha, and to their issue is void." n534

In Northern Trust Co. v. Porter n535 the donee of a general testamentary power attempted to appoint the principal and remaining income of a trust "[u]pon the death of the last surviving child of Pauline Porter White, or twenty-one years after the death of the last surviving child of Pauline Porter White who was living at the time of my [the donee's] death, whichever event shall happen first" to the then surviving lawful children of Pauline Porter White and the then surviving lawful descendants of her deceased child. The donee was the daughter of the donor; Pauline was the daughter of the donee; none of Pauline's children were in being at the death of the donor. Since Pauline's children were not lives in being at the time of creation of the power of appointment and the vesting event could not take place before the death of the last surviving child, the court found the exercise of the power invalid. The court rejected the idea that the period of the rule should be figured from the date of exercise of the power since the donee is not practically the owner since she cannot appoint to herself.

In Warren's Estate n536 the testator bequeathed in trust to pay the income to his daughter, Caroline, for life and then to hold and dispose of the principal in such manner as should be directed by Caroline's will. Caroline by will appointed to her trustee to hold for her husband for life and then > to divide the income of the said trust estate into as many parts or shares as at the times of half-yearly distributions there shall be children of mine then living and children of mine then dead represented by descendants then living, ... and to pay ... to each child and descendant of a deceased child who shall thus be found entitled, his or her share of the income half-yearly [and the principal to be distributed upon the death of Caroline's surviving child].

If the bequest to the children had come directly from the testator to Caroline's children and descendants rather than through Caroline's appointment, it would have been void because the contingent interest in income did not vest until the time came for its payment and such income, viewed from the time of the testator's will, could conceivably have been paid beyond the perpetuities period if Caroline had had a child born after the testator's death. However, at the time of Caroline's appointment, her only two children had been born by the time of testator's death and the life of the survivor was the measuring life for the contingent interest in income. This fact, since it actually existed at the time the appointment was made, was usable in the perpetuities calculation (second look doctrine) and made the disposition valid even though the fact occurred at a later time than the time the rule against perpetuities became operative (the time of the testator's creation of the general testamentary power of appointment in Caroline).

The validity of the appointed interests is determined for general powers exercisable by deed or by deed or will by applying the rule against perpetuities at the time the appointed interests are created.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: power! w/2 appointment w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(j) Exceptions to the Rule

The rule against perpetuities does not apply to gifts of future interests to charities when the prior interests are also to charities. If the prior gift is to a non-charity, the future gift to a charity is subject to the rule.

The rule against perpetuities does apply generally to options for the purchase of land, n537 but in some jurisdictions it does not apply to preemptive options n538 nor to a tenant's option in a lease to purchase the land or renew the lease, n539 nor to mortgages. n540

The rule does apply to accumulations of rents and profits for a period during which the title does not vest and the property remains unalienable, but such accumulations are permitted if the period falls within the rule against perpetuities. This pronouncement was made in Thellusson v. Woodford, n541 but the period granted by the rule against perpetuities was considered too long. In 1800 the Thellusson Act n542 was passed declaring that provisions for accumulation shall be void if made "for any longer term than the life or lives of any such grantor or grantors, settlor or settlors; of the term of twenty-one years from the death of any such grantor, settlor, devisor or testator; or during the minority or respective minorities of any person or persons, who shall be living, or en ventre sa mere, at the time of the death of such grantor, devisor, or testator; or during the minority or respective minorities only of any person or persons, who under the uses or trust of the deed, surrender, will, or other assurances, directing such accumulations, would for the time being, if of full age, be entitled unto the rents, issues, and profits, or the interest, dividends, or annual produce so directed to be accumulated."

Restrictions on accumulations do not apply to charitable gifts. In Frazier v. Merchants National Bank of Salem n543 the testator gave the bulk of his estate to a trustee with certain directions that ultimately required that the income be "permitted to accumulate and be added to principal until such time as the principal and accumulated interest shall amount to the sum of one million dollars," at which point the trustee was to hold the principal as a permanent trust fund for the benefit of the Salem Hospital. Since the gross value of the estate did not exceed $117,000, the court recognized that the period of accumulation would be long, but it found that the trust did not violate the rule against perpetuities.

The rule against perpetuities does apply to restraints on alienation if they are not otherwise invalid. In Colonial Trust Co. v. Brown n544 the court found that a restraint on a trustee preventing it from selling certain property during a period which could extend beyond the perpetuities period was invalid under the rule against perpetuities.

§ 28.08(k) Wait-and-See Doctrine

Professor W. Barton Leach started a movement to change the Rule against Perpetuities by advocating that the validity of interests should be judged by what actually happens rather than what might happen. n545 This new rule was thought by its proponents as "placing the validity of all non-vested interests on the same plane, whether the interest is created by a skilled draftsman or one not so skilled." n546

Under the traditional rule, if there is a life (or lives) that guarantees as of the time of the conveyance creating an interest that that interest will not vest too late, the interest is valid. Under the wait-and-see doctrine, one looks at all the lives

"which in some way restrict the time within which the gift can vest, and which are expressly or impliedly connected with the gift by the donor's directions," n547 one calculates the perpetuities period based on these lives, and one waits until the perpetuities period as calculated runs its course to determine whether an interest is invalid.

The first jurisdiction to put such a rule into operation was Pennsylvania in 1947 whose statute read: "Upon the expiration of the period allowed by the common law rule against perpetuities as measured by actual rather than possible events, any interest not then vested and any interest in members of a class the membership of which is then subject to increase shall be void." n548 Following Pennsylvania, a number of jurisdictions have adopted some form of this doctrine that has saved interests from invalidity under the old rule. n549

In Foley v. Evans n550 the testator's will placed the residue of his estate in trust for his two named daughters and then it stated: "Upon the death of my surviving daughter, I give, bequeath and devise all my estate to the children of my daughter, Ruth Evans, and to any children that my daughter, Dorothy Leonard, may have, said income to be divided equally among them, or the survivor of them, until each of said grandchildren shall reach the age of 25 years, when each grandchild shall receive his or her share of the principal of my estate." The court found that even if the will arguably violated the common law rule against perpetuities, the "wait-and-see" approach, adopted by statute, allowed a look at events that actually happened after the creation of the interests in the grandchildren. "Since all of the testator's grandchildren had been born and were in fact older than twenty-five at Dorothy's [the survivor's] death in 1984, no possible contingency could prevent vesting of the entire remainder interest in them [at that time within the period of the rule]."

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (wait w/1 see) or (actual! w/1 happen!) w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(l) Discretionary Trusts

A trustee may have discretionary power over the income or principal of a trust. If such power can be exercised beyond the perpetuities period, it may be viewed as one power that is totally void or as a succession of powers void only as to those powers which are exercisable beyond the perpetuities period. n551 Some courts also have struck down trusts that endure beyond the perpetuities period. n552

Professor Dukeminier suggests that the careful lawyer should always limit the duration of trusts to the perpetuities period with a saving clause such as the following:

> Notwithstanding any other provision in this instrument, this trust shall terminate, if it has not previously terminated, twenty-one years after the death of the survivor of the settlor's issue living at the date this instrument becomes effective. In case of such termination, the then remaining principal and undistributed income of the trust shall be distributed to the settlor's issue then living per stirpes. n553

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: discretionary w/5 trust! w/30 rule against perpetuities

§ 28.08(m) Cy Pres Doctrine or Equitable Approximation

A number of states have adopted legislation that allows reformation of interests that would violate the rule against perpetuities. n554 There also are a few jurisdictions who have reformed interests without the aid of legislation. n555

In Estate of Chun Quan Yee Hop n556 the court modified the terms of a testamentary trust in order to avoid its violation of the rule against perpetuities. The will provided that the trust would end on the death of the testator's wife or thirty years from the date of his death, whichever was later, and at the termination of the trust the estate would be transferred to the survivors of the children and the lawful issue of any deceased child. The court limited the invalid term of thirty years to the twenty-one year period prescribed by the rule against perpetuities.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 426. The discussion in this section is reprinted with modifications from John Makdisi, The Vesting of Executory Interests, 59 Tul. L. Rev. 366, at 370-376 (1984). The Rule was first formulated in the Duke of Norfolk's Case, 3 Ch. Cas. 1, 26 (1682), cited in W. Barton Leach & Owen Tudor, The Rule Against Perpetuities, at 14 (1957). However, its formulation evolved over the next 150 years until it attained the form we see today after Cadell v. Palmer, 1 Cl. & F. 372 (H.L. 1833), cited in W. Barton Leach & Owen Tudor, The Rule Against Perpetuities, at 14.

(n2)Footnote 427. Frederick William Maitland, The Seisin of Chattels, 1 Law Q. Rev. 324, at 338 (1885).

(n3)Footnote 428. 3 W. William Walsh, Commentaries on the Law of Real Property § 313, at 229 (1947) (citing Popham's argument in Welcden v. Elkington, 2 Plowd. 516, 520, 75 Eng. Rep. 763, 769 (K.B. 1579)). See also Gray, supra note 1, at 168, 728-729.

(n4)Footnote 429. 3 Walsh, supra note 7, at 229, and Gray, supra note 1, at 730-731 (citing Rayman v. Gold, Moore 635, 72 E.R. 807 (K.B. 1592)).

(n5)Footnote 430. 2 Plowd. 516, 75 Eng. Rep. 763 (K.B. 1579).

(n6)Footnote 431. 2 Plowd. 516, at 519, 75 Eng. Rep. 763, at 767 (K.B. 1579).

(n7)Footnote 432. 2 Plowd. 516, at 524, 75 Eng. Rep. 763, at 774 (K.B. 1579). One year after Welcden, counsel in Paramour v. Yardley, 2 Plowd. 539, 542-43, 75 Eng. Rep. 794, 799-800 (K.B. 1579), argued:

> [I]n some things the occupation, profit, or use is a distinct thing from the property. As one may have the occupation or use of a glass to look at himself in, and another may have the property of it. So one may have the use of a map or of a globe, and another the property. And so one may have the use of a fire, and another the property. And so also of a book, one may have the occupation or use of it to read in it, and the property may be in another. So that in things of this kind the use, occupation, or function is distinct from the property. But otherwise in the case of land, for there he who has the occupation and use of it has the property of it for the time.

See also Percy Bordwell, Interests in Chattels Real and Personal, 1 Mo. L. Rev. 119, 131-132 (1936) (citing the quoted case).

(n8)Footnote 433. 8 Co. 94b, 77 Eng. Rep. 618 (1609).

(n9)Footnote 434. 8 Co. 94b, at 95b, 77 Eng. Rep. 618, at 621 (1609).

(n10)Footnote 435. 2 Bulst. 28, 80 Eng. Rep. 932 (K.B. 1612). See Bordwell, supra note 11, at 138-139 & n.174 (cases are cited to show that Chancery had evidently long given protection to the devisee in such a case).

(n11)Footnote 436. 13 Edw., ch. 1 (1285).

(n12)Footnote 437. Cornelius Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property (2d ed. 1988); George Haskins, "Inconvenience" and the Rule for Perpetuities, 48 Mo. L. Rev. 451, 460-461 (1983).

(n13)Footnote 438. See Bordwell, supra note 432, at 139; Haskins, supra n.16, at 461.

(n14)Footnote 439. Bordwell, supra note 432, at 139.

(n15)Footnote 440. 1 Rolle 356, 81 Eng. Rep. 531 (K.B. 1616).

(n16)Footnote 441. Cro. Jac. 459, 79 Eng. Rep. 393 (K.B. 1618).

(n17)Footnote 442. Cro. Jac. 459, at 461, 79 Eng. Rep. 393, at 395 (K.B. 1618).

(n18)Footnote 443. See Bordwell, supra n.16, at 139-140.

(n19)Footnote 444. Cro. Jac. 590, 79 Eng. Rep. 504 (K.B. 1620). See Bordwell, supra note 11, at 140.

(n20)Footnote 445. Pells v. Brown, Cro. Jac. 590, 592, 79 Eng. Rep. 504, 506. (K.B. 1620) (citing Wellock v. Hammond, Cro. Eliz. 204, 78 Eng. Rep. 460 (K.B. 1590), and Fulmerston v. Steward, 38 Eliz. Rot. 867, 73 Eng. Rep. 73).

(n21)Footnote 446. Cro. Jac. at 592-593, 79 Eng. Rep. at 506.. For an explanation of the common recovery, see A. James Casner & W. Barton Leach, Cases and Text on Property 256-257 n.13 (2d ed. 1969).

(n22)Footnote 447. Haskins, supra note 16, at 464.

(n23)Footnote 448. Cro. Jac. at 593, 79 Eng. Rep. at 506.

(n24)Footnote 449. Haskins, supra note 16, at 461 & n.53 (citing Sanders v. Cornish, Cro. Car. 230, 79 Eng. Rep. 801 (K.B. 1631)).

(n25)Footnote 450. Id. at 465.

(n26)Footnote 451. Id. at 465-466.

(n27)Footnote 452. See Bordwell, supra note 11, at 140.

(n28)Footnote 453. Howard v. Duke of Norfolk, 2 Swans. 454, 36 Eng. Rep. 690 (Ch. 1682). This case was reversed in 1683 upon a bill of review but affirmed upon appeal to the House of Lords in 1685. For a well-documented history of this period through the Duke of Norfolk's Case, see George Haskins, Extending the Grasp of the Dead Hand: Reflections on the Origins of the Rule Against Perpetuities, 126 U. Pa. L. Rev. 19 (1977); Haskins, supra note 16.

(n29)Footnote 454. 2 Swans. at 468, 36 Eng. Rep. at 695.

(n30)Footnote 455. See Haskins, supra note 32, at 19-21 & 35-45; Haskins, supra note 386, at 466-473.

(n31)Footnote 456. Jesse Dukeminier and Stanley Johanson describe this period of history in Wills, Trusts, and Estates, supra note 4, at 757, as follows:

> In Scatterwood v. Edge, 1 Salk. 229, 91 Eng. Rep. 203 (K.B. 1699), it was held that it was sufficient if an interest would vest within a considerable number of lives in being, not merely one or two, "For let the lives be never so many, there must be a survivor, and so it is but the length of that life; for Twisden used to say, the candles were all lighted at once." In Thellusson v. Woodford, 11 Ves. 112, 32 Eng. Rep. 1030 (Ch. 1805), it was held that any number of lives reasonably capable of being traced could be used to measure the applicable perpetuities period. Concurrently with the expansion of lives in being from one or two to a considerable number, the courts were adding, first, a minority period and, subsequently, a period of 21 years in gross. Finally, in Cadell v. Palmer, 1 Cl. & Fin. 372, 6 Eng. Rep. 956 (H.L. 1832, 1833), the period allowed by the Rule was settled: any reasonable number of lives in being plus 21 years thereafter plus any actual periods of gestation.

(n32)Footnote 457. Gray, supra note 1, at 191. Interests following fee tail estates in freehold may be valid under the Rule against Perpetuities as vested remainders. A fee tail estate in a term of years could only be followed by an executory devise which would be void under the rule because it could vest only in possession. An attempt to convey a term in the form of a fee tail estate followed by an executory devise would seem, therefore, to convey an absolute interest. The question remains whether a reversionary interest after the "fee tail" in a term would be considered vested. In Eyres v. Faulkland, 1 Salk. 231, 91 Eng. Rep. 204 (K.B. 1697), the court decided that a devise of a term of years to several successively for life gave the executor of the devisor the residue of the estate after the life estates terminated. The court called this interest a possibility of reverter. Id. at 231, 91 Eng. Rep. at 205. See generally Albert M. Kales, Estates, Future Interests and Illegal Conditions and Restraints in Illinois §109, at 106-107 (1920). Gray called this interest a reversion. Gray, supra note 1, at 734-735. He also thought that in theory the estate should go, not to the executor of the devisor, but to the executor of the legatee, but he recognized that the only authority opposed such a result. Id. at 749. Gray's interpretation is problematical insofar as a reversion suggests that the preceding estate may be followed by a remainder. But if the only interest in a devisee which can follow a life estate in a term is an executory interest, it would seem that in the absence of the executory interest, the life estate in the term resembles more a fee simple determinable followed by a possibility of reverter as the case maintains. Accord Homer F. Carey & Daniel M. Schuyler, Illinois Law of Future Interests 61 (1941); Lewis M. Simes, Future Interests in Chattels Personal, 39 Yale L.J. 771, 772-773 n.4 (1930).

(n33)Footnote 458. Gray, supra note 1, at 734; see also id. at 111. Gray is not aware of this problem arising in England or the United States. Id. at 735. He is of the opinion that the final limitation is void for remoteness. Id. at 749.

(n34)Footnote 459. The discussion in this section is reprinted with modifications from Makdisi, supra note 5, at 377, 384-86, and John Makdisi, Estates in Land and Future Interests: Examples and Explanations at 87-90 (1991). Wedel v. American Elec. Power Serv. Corp., 681 N.E.2d 1122 (Ind. Ct. App. 1997) (the question of when a royalty interest vests is dependent upon whether it is considered personal property or real property); Luecke v. Wallace, 951 S.W.2d 267 (Tex. App. 1997) (Royalty interests are "interests in real property" and "subject to the rule against perpetuities").

(n35)Footnote 460. 1 Cox 324, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186 (Ch. 1787). For a discussion of advancements in reproduction technology and the effects of the rule against perpetuities, see Les A. McCrimmon, Gametes, Embryos, and the Life in Being: The Impact of Reproductive Technology on the Rule Against Perpetuities, 34 Real Prop. Prob. & Tr. J. 679 (2000).

(n36)Footnote 461. Jesse Dukeminier And James Krier, Property (3d ed. 1993), supra n.84, at 261; Gray, supra note 1, at 109.

(n37)Footnote 462. Gray, supra note 1, at 741-742, 745. See Carey & Schuyler, supra note 36, at 65. Butler's Note to 1 Fearne, Contingent Remainders, in W. Barton Leach, Cases and Materials on the Law of Future Interests 217 (2d ed. 1940), confirms that there are no remainders in personal property. The only future interest in a grantee is executory.

(n38)Footnote 463. 1 Cox 324, 326, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186, 1187 (Ch. 1787).

(n39)Footnote 464. W. Barton Leach, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Gifts to Classes, 51 Harv. L. Rev. 1329, 1341 (1938).

(n40)Footnote 465. W. Barton Leach & James K. Logan, Manual for Teachers to Accompany Cases and Text on Future Interests and Estate Planning 171 (1961).

(n41)Footnote 466. Dukeminier & Krier, supra note 40, at 262.

(n42)Footnote 467. 2 Vern. 331 (1696).

(n43)Footnote 468. 2 Vern. 331, at 332 (1696).

(n44)Footnote 469. Y.B. Trin., 37 Hen. 6, pl. 11 (1459). For an account of the case, see Paramour v. Yardley, 2 Plowd. 539, 542-543, 75 Eng. Rep. 794, 799-800 (K.B. 1579).

(n45)Footnote 470. See 7 William Searle Holdsworth, A history of English Law 472-473 (2d ed. 1937); Bordwell, supra note 11, at 129; Gray, supra note 1, at 737.

(n46)Footnote 471. Owen 33, 74 Eng. Rep. 879 (1565).

(n47)Footnote 472. See Holdsworth, supra note 49, at 473, n.2.

(n48)Footnote 473. See Collins v. Church of God of Prophecy, 800 S.W.2d 418 (Ark. 1990) (rejecting the "total annihilation [of the vestedness of a possibility of reverter] by a sweep of the trial court's pen in characterizing it as "archaic' ").

(n49)Footnote 474. See Brown v. Brown, 93 N.E. 357 (Ill. 1910) ("all reversions are vested").

(n50)Footnote 475. See Abbiss v. Burney, 17 Ch. D. 211 (1881) (dictum).

(n51)Footnote 476. 6 N.E. 73 (Mass. 1886).

(n52)Footnote 477. Leach, supra note 41, at 57. See also White v. Fleet Bank of Maine, 739 A.2d 373 (Me. 1999); White v. fleet Bank of Maine, 739 A.2d 373 (Me. 1999).

(n53)Footnote 478. Gray, supra note 1, § 14, at 108.

(n54)Footnote 479. See Jesse Dukeminier, Contingent Remainders and Executory Interests: A Requiem for the Distinction, 43 Minn. L. Rev. 13, at 23-28 (1958), with rebuttal in Makdisi, supra note 5.

(n55)Footnote 480. Of course, if the owner of a non-vested interest, such as a contingent remainder in fee simple, were to convey away a life estate, the recipient would take a contingent remainder in a life estate, leaving a reversion in a contingent remainder in fee simple in the grantor. Such a reversion would be contingent due to the fact that it is part of a contingent remainder. Prieskorn v. Maloof, 991 P.2d 511 (N.M. Ct. App. 1999).

(n56)Footnote 481. 1 Ch. 202 (1918).

(n57)Footnote 482. Situations include even the medically impossible. See, e.g., the case of Jee v. Audley, 1 Cox 324, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186 (1787), where an interest was found invalid on the basis, among other things, that a very old person could have children. This notion has been colorfully captured in the label "fertile octogenarian." W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in a Nutshell, 51 Harv. L. Rev. 638, 643 (1938). Another medical impossibility, a very small child capable of reproduction, has been labelled the "precocious toddler." W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: The Nutshell Revisited, 78 Harv. L. Rev. 973, 992 (1965). Although recent developments in reproductive technology are challenging the incredibility of these assertions, see Les A. McCrimmon, Gametes, Embryos, and the Life in Being: The Impact of Reproductive Technology on the Rule Against Perpetuities, 34 Real Prop. Prob. & Tr. J. 679 (2000).

(n58)Footnote 483. 571 N.E.2d 1179 (Ill. App. 1991).

(n59)Footnote 484. 1 Ch. 243 (1929).

(n60)Footnote 485. 105 Sol. J. 511 (1961).

(n61)Footnote 486. 1 Ch. 936 (1901).

(n62)Footnote 487. Leach, supra n.41, at 804-808.

(n63)Footnote 488. Id. at 808 n.1.

(n64)Footnote 489. 42 Ch. D. 494 (1889), aff'd, 44 Ch. D. 85 (1890).

(n65)Footnote 490. Leach, supra n.41, at 754 n.10, states that for purposes of the rule against perpetuities, the child in gestation "is treated as born whether or not it is to his interest thus to be considered."

(n66)Footnote 491. Note that the rule, that a class stays open until it closes naturally if there is no member of the class at the time designated for distribution, is not applicable here because the grantor has manifested an intent to close the class no later than the time the first grandchild reaches 21.

(n67)Footnote 492. 4 Ves. 227, 11 Ves. 112 (1799).

(n68)Footnote 493. See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in a Nutshell, 51 Harv. L. Rev. 638, 648 n.27, citing the English case of Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, 35 Eng. Rep. 979 (1817); and W. Barton Leach, The Rule Against Perpetuities and Gifts to Classes, 51 Harv. L. Rev. 1329 (1938).

(n69)Footnote 494. [1924] A.C. 653.

(n70)Footnote 495. The court found that under the rule laid down in Jee v. Audley, the fact that the testator's mother was past the age of child-bearing was inadmissible for determining the validity of the interest under the rule against perpetuities.

(n71)Footnote 496. 142 A. 284 (Pa. 1928).

(n72)Footnote 497. It is curious that Professor Leach used this case in his Cases and Materials on the Law of Future Interests 782-786 (2d ed. 1940), and he did not point out the mistake except for a cryptic footnote at the end of the case which stated that "[t]his case is discussed without adverse comment in [two law reviews]." Dennis v. Bird, 941 S.W.2d 486 (Ky. Ct. App. 1997) (because an option in a lease was personal to Bird, it did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

(n73)Footnote 498. 364 P.2d 685 (Cal. 1961), rev'g, Lucas v. Hamm, 11 Cal. Rptr. 727 (1961). As Jesse Dukeminier has observed, the technicalities of the rule are such that they can trap even well-revered lawyers. Jesse Dukeminier, A Modern Guide to Perpetuities, 74 Calif. L. Rev. 1867, 1912 (1986).

(n74)Footnote 499. Moynihan, supra note 16, at 197, n.14.

(n75)Footnote 500. Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 116 (2d ed. 1984).

(n76)Footnote 501. See Id. at 178 (citing Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 201 (4th ed. 1942)) and at 181-82.

(n77)Footnote 502. Cf. In re Estate of Maguire, 466 P.2d 358 (Kan. 1970) (option that could only be exercised within the lifetime of a life in being was held valid).

(n78)Footnote 503. See Abbiss v. Burney, 17 Ch. D. 211 (C.A. 1881) (dictum).

(n79)Footnote 504. 139 N.E. 301 (Mass. 1923).

(n80)Footnote 505. 3 Gray 142 (1855).

(n81)Footnote 506. See Joseph Morris, The Wills Branch of the Worthier Title Doctrine, 54 Mich. L. Rev. 451, 479 (1956).

(n82)Footnote 507. 297 S.W.2d 905 (Ky. 1956), reh'g den. (1957).

(n83)Footnote 508. 99 N.E. 625 (Ill. 1912).

(n84)Footnote 509. 106 Mass. 86 (1870).

(n85)Footnote 510. 1 Ch. 810 (1915).

(n86)Footnote 511. But see Abrams v. Templeton, 465 S.E.2d 117 (S.C. App. 1995) (will which violated rule against perpetuities by making gift over of interest in real property to testator's great-grandchildren was upheld after court inserted savings clause to use testator's grandchildren who were alive at the time of death as the measuring lives).

(n87)Footnote 512. 2 Mer. 363, 35 Eng. Rep. 979 (1817).

(n88)Footnote 513. Id. Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. App.1999) (a brief but good synopsis of the law of class gifts in Texas).

(n89)Footnote 514. 123 A. 43 (N.J. Eq. 1923).

(n90)Footnote 515. 10 Ch. D. 264 (1878).

(n91)Footnote 516. 6 N.E.2d 619 (Ill. 1937).

(n92)Footnote 517. The court also stated that "the children of any [of the son's children] who die take their parents' share, and the share of any child who dies without children goes to the survivors." In this part of the devise a violation of the Rule against Perpetuities which the court did not mention was the possibility that the testatrix's son could have another child (X), then all lives in being at the time of the devise (including the son and all his other children) could die without leaving any issue other than X, then X could have another child, and then X could die more than twenty-one years after the deaths of all lives in being but before the end of the thirty-four year period for payment of the principal of the trust. In such a case X's child would take the full beneficial interest in the trust beyond the period allowed under the Rule against Perpetuities and such an interest is void.

(n93)Footnote 518. 11 Hare 372, 68 Eng. Rep. 1319 (1853).

(n94)Footnote 519. Gray, supra note 1, at 342, 345. See William J. Murphy, Separability and the Rule Against Perpetuities, 77 Dick. L. Rev. 277 (1973).

(n95)Footnote 520. 11 Hare 372, 68 Eng. Rep. 1319 (1853).

(n96)Footnote 521. 572 A.2d 1249, appeal denied, 582 A.2d 325 (Pa. Super. 1990). For a case that purports to follow Weaver but actually misconstrues the vertical separability doctrine to make a void interest valid, see Estate of Coates, LEXIS 3770 (Pa. 1994) (contingent remainders having a possibility of vesting beyond the perpetuities period were found valid).

(n97)Footnote 522. Kern's Estate, 145 A. 824 (Pa. 1929).

(n98)Footnote 523. 3 De Gex, M. & G. 390 (Court of Chancery 1853), cited in Cattlin v. Brown, supra.

(n99)Footnote 524. 164 A. 786 (Pa. 1933).

(n100)Footnote 525. See Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Scott, 189 A. 653 (N.J. Eq. 1936), cited infra.

(n101)Footnote 526. 5 App. Cas. 714 (1880).

(n102)Footnote 527. Johnson v. Cohan, 2000 Mass. Super. LEXIS 45 (Mass. Super. 2000) (citing a state statute which allows a court to reform a disposition when a power of appointment violates the rule against perpetuities; addresses the subjects of powers of appointment and rule against perpetuities in Massachusetts).

(n103)Footnote 528. 66 A.2d 164 (N.J. 1949).

(n104)Footnote 529. 189 A. 653 (N.J. Eq. 1937).

(n105)Footnote 530. 43 Ch. D. 401 (C.A., 1890).

(n106)Footnote 531. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 79, at 202, gives the following example:

> Assume settlor irrevocably transfers inter vivos in trust to pay the income to A for life, remainder to such persons as A shall by will appoint. A appoints in trust for his children for their lives, and upon the death of the last surviving child, to pay the corpus to the grandchildren of A. All of A's children were alive at the date of the settlor's transfer in trust. A had a general testamentary power. Reading the appointment back into the donor's instrument of trust, the disposition is to A for life, then to A's children for their lives, then upon the death of the last surviving child of A, to the grandchildren of A. On its face, the remainder to grandchildren is invalid, but we are permitted to consider the fact that all of A's children were alive at the time of the creation of the grandchildren's interests; the children of A constitute measuring lives and the future interests in the grandchildren are valid because the interest of every member of the class must vest not later than the death of the last surviving child of A.

(n107)Footnote 532. Sears v. Coolidge, 108 N.E.2d 563 (Mass. 1952).

(n108)Footnote 533. 153 N.E. 337 (Mass. 1926).

(n109)Footnote 534. This case might have fit under the section on the validity of special powers and general testamentary powers if one considers that the discretionary power in the trustees to apply income is, in effect, a power of appointment in the trustees. See Leach, supra note 41, at 892 n.16. In such a case, this special power of appointment in the trustees is invalid because it could be exercised beyond the period of the rule against perpetuities as measured from the time when the testatrix created the general testamentary power in Carlotta.

(n110)Footnote 535. 13 N.E.2d 487 (Ill. 1938).

(n111)Footnote 536. 182 A. 396 (Pa. 1936). Lilly v. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust Co., 859 S.W.2d 666 (Ky. App. 1993) (rule against perpetuities was not violated by testamentary power of appointment over portion of trust which could "continue until the death of the longest liver of my wife and the three children of ours").

(n112)Footnote 537. See Neustadt v. Pearce, 143 A.2d 437 (Conn. 1958) (unrestricted option to purchase real property); Central Del. County Auth. v. Greyhound Corp., 588 A.2d 485 (Pa. 1991) (discussing the constructional preference for the option to purchase in this case as opposed to an estate subject to condition subsequent and reversing the lower court which sought to remove repurchase options from the rule against perpetuities on the grounds of public policy). In re Estate of Ohrt, 516 N.W.2d 896 (Iowa 1994) (right of first refusal does not violate the rule against perpetuities when right is exercised during the lives of the named beneficiaries); Adler v. Simpson, 610 N.Y.S.2d 351 (1994) (rule against perpetuities applies to right of first refusal to acquire real property); Citgo Petroleum Corp. v. Hopper, 429 S.E.2d 6 (Va. 1993) (rule against perpetuities does not apply to option to purchase that is appendant to long-term lease, and exercisable within term of lease); Low v. Spellman, 629 A.2d 57 (Me. 1993) (right of first refusal to buy property for specified sum violated rule against perpetuities since it applied to heirs and assigns); Pathmark Stores, Inc. v. 3821 Assoc., 663 A.2d 1189 (Del. 1995) (holding rule against perpetuities inapplicable to 30-year option contract between commercial entities). However, the rule against perpetuities does not apply to the state for the purpose if invalidating the state's repurchase option that otherwise would be subject to defeat by the rule against perpetuities. Tolland Enterprises v. Commissioner of Transp., 647 A.2d 1045 (Conn. App. 1994); Symphony Space, Inc., v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 669 N.E.2d 799 (N.Y. App. 1996) (rule against perpetuities applies to commercial purchase options, as well as to noncommercial options); In re Bradlees Stores, Inc., 194 B.R. 555 (N.Y. 1996) (creditor's option to purchase real estate from Chapter 11 debtor was void under the rule against perpetuities, because the option did not contain a specified time period within which it had to vest).

(n113)Footnote 538. See Hornsby v. Holt, 359 S.E.2d 646 (Ga. 1987); Metropolitan Transp. Auth. v. Bruken Realty Corp., 501 N.Y.S.2d 306 (1986) (rule does not apply to preemptive rights in commercial and governmental transactions); Singer Co. v. Makad, Inc., 518 P.2d 493 (Kan. 1974) (rule does not apply to commercial leases). Contra, Village of Pinehurst v. Regional Invs. of Moore, Inc., 412 S.E.2d 645 (N.C. 1992) (rule against perpetuities applicable to preemptive rights [see also dissenting opinion]), Adler v. Simpson, 610 N.Y.S.2d 351 (N.Y. App. Div. 1994) (rule against perpetuities applicable to right of first refusal to acquire residential/agricultural land), and Stuart Kingston, Inc. v. Robinson, 596 A.2d 1378 (Del. 1991) (a right of first refusal in a seller of property when the buyer received notice of an offer to purchase that he desired to accept was found to be invalid under the rule against perpetuities). The court in Robinson did recognize that a right of first refusal that terminates upon the death of either party is personal and does not violate the rule against perpetuities. Kershner v. Hurlburt, 277 S.W.2d 619, 623 (Mo. 1955). The discussion of the court focussed on the factors to be taken into consideration in determining whether the parties intended the right of first refusal to be personal. Cronin v. McCarthy, 637 N.E.2d 668 (Ill. App. 1994); (partnership agreement that granted managing partner option without specific time limitation for its exercise did not violate rule against perpetuities inasmuch as right was personal and terminated on death); Jones v. Herald, 881 P.2d 116 (Okla. App. 1994) (rule against perpetuities was not applicable to power of developer under restrictive covenant to unilaterally approve particular roofing materials, unless majority of lot owners amended the covenant; duration of time in which developer could unilaterally amend covenants involved neither a future interest nor was it aimed at preventing restrictions on alienation of property, as lot owners' interest in their property had vested); Swartz v. Bianco Family Trust, 874 P.2d 430 (Colo. App. 1993) (contractual provision creating preemptive right on part of any one of four property owners to purchase interests of co-owners at any time that one owner desired to sell his portion was unenforceable, although the provision created a technical violation of rule against perpetuities, because it was binding upon heirs and assigns of co-owner). Symphony Space, Inc., v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 669 N.E.2d 799 (N.Y. App. 1996) (rule against perpetuities does not apply to preemptive options if the option arises in a governmental or commercial transaction); Royer v. Wineland Equip., Inc., 663 A.2d 780 (Pa. 1995) (right of first refusal contained in deed violates rule against perpetuities, because the option did not set forth a time limit after which it would expire). Annotation, Pre-emptive Rights to Realty as Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on Alienation, 40 A.L.R. 3d 920..

(n114)Footnote 539. See Lonergan v. Connecticut Food Store, Inc., 357 A.2d 910 (Conn. 1975) (option to renew the term of a real property lease), and Texaco Refining & Mktg., Inc. v. Samowitz, 570 A.2d 170 (Conn. 1990) (option to purchase contained in a long-term commercial lease of real property where the option must be exercised within the leasehold term; cases cited from Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Ohio, Oklahoma and Washington in favor and a case from West Virginia against). See Jesse Dukeminier, A Modern Guide to Perpetuities, 74 Cal. L. Rev. 1867, 1908 nn.142-143 (1986). Warren St. Assoc. v. City Hall Tower Corp., 608 N.Y.S.2d 429 (N.Y.A.D. 1 Dept. 1994) (where the option could be exercised after the initial lease term had expired, the rule against perpetuities has been held to apply); The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, which has been adopted in twenty jurisdictions, excludes such nondonative commercial transactions as options to renew, rights of first refusal, and commercial leases from coverage under the common-law rule against perpetuities. See Shaver v. Clanton, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 595 (Cal. App. 1994). Symphony Space, Inc., v. Pergola Properties, Inc., 669 N.E.2d 799 (N.Y. App. 1996) (option to purchase contained in a lease violated the rule against perpetuities on public policy grounds, since the option could be exercised after the lease term had expired); Donzella v. New York Telephone Co., 641 N.Y.S.2d 423, (N.Y. 1996) (purchase option written into lease did not violate the rule against perpetuities, because the option did not impermissibly suspend the property owner's power of alienation); Buck v. Banks, 668 N.E.2d 1259 (Ind. 1996) (preemptive option in contract, giving purchasers right to purchase additional 14 acres of land, violated the rule against perpetuities); Getty Realty Corp. v. Hettler, No. 97-5637 (E.D. Penn. 1998) (LEXIS 1960) (court recognizes exception in lease agreements: "the rule against perpetuities does not apply to options to purchase contained in a lease and exercisable within the life of that lease").

(n115)Footnote 540. O'Reilly v. O'Reilly, LEXIS 3074 (Conn. 1991). (unreported as yet) ("mortgage is a vested fee simple interest subject to complete defeasance by the timely payment of the mortgage debt" in a title theory state such as Connecticut).

(n116)Footnote 541. 4 Ves. 227, 11 Ves. 112 (1799).

(n117)Footnote 542. 39 & 40 geo. Ill, c. 98 (1800).

(n118)Footnote 543. 5 N.E.2d 550 (Mass. 1936). Matter of Estate of Kirk, 907 P.2d 794 (Id. 1995) (since rule against perpetuities does not apply to charitable trusts, disposition of trust property providing that income from oil and gas leases was to be given to charitable organization did not violate rule against perpetuities).

(n119)Footnote 544. 135 A. 555 (Conn. 1926).

(n120)Footnote 545. W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities in Perspective: Ending the Rule's Reign of Terror, 65 Harv. L. Rev. 721, at 730 (1952) (new approach called the wait-and-see doctrine). Murphy Exploration & Prod. Co. v. Sun Operating L.P. 747, So. 2d 260 (Miss. 1999); Terry Homes, Inc. v. Crocker, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 5823 (Ohio Ct. App. 1999).

(n121)Footnote 546. Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 1.4 (1981).

(n122)Footnote 547. Robert Edgar Megarry & H.W.R. Wade, The Law of Real Property 253-54 (5th ed. 1984). Jesse Dukeminier has specified these lives as "(1) Any person who can affect the time the future interest vests in possession; (2) Any person who can affect vesting in interest, namely -- (a) The beneficiary or beneficiaries of the contingent interest; (b) Any person who can affect the identity of the beneficiary or beneficiaries; and (c) Any person who can affect any condition precedent attached to the gift or, in case of a class gift, any person who can affect any condition precedent attached to the interest of any member of the class." Jesse Dukeminier, A Modern Guide to Perpetuities, 74 Calif. L. Rev. 1867, 1881-1882 (1986).

(n123)Footnote 548. 20 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 6104(b). For a recent application of Pennsylvania's wait-and-see doctrine, see Estate of Royer v. Wineland Equip., Inc., 663 A.2d 780 (Pa. 1995) (preemptive option without term enforceable until twenty-one years after death of last life in being at time of its creation).

(n124)Footnote 549. Statutes exist in Alaska, Connecticut, Florida, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia, and, for trusts only, in Washington and Illinois; courts have adopted the wait-and-see doctrine in Mississippi and New Hampshire. See Jesse Dukeminier, A Modern Guide to Perpetuities, 74 Calif. L. Rev. 1867, 1882-1883 nn. 49-50 (1986). Pond v. Pond, 678 N.E.2d 1321 (Mass. 1997) (court reaffirms the validity of the "wait-and-see" doctrine in Massachusetts); Indiana, Iowa, Montana, North Carolina, and South Carolina join the list of states adopting a statutory form of the "wait-and-see" doctrine. Tiger, Inc. v. Time Warner Entertainment Co., No. 5:98-CV-713 (N.D. Ohio 1998) (LEXIS 18149) (possible events that may have caused a corporation's right of first refusal to violate the rule against perpetuities were insufficient to invoke the rule because the more lenient "wait-and-see" doctrine prescribed by statute required actual events as the basis for invoking the rule); Freeman v. Greenville Convalescent Home, Inc., No. 96-CA-00466 COA (Miss. Ct. App. 1998) (LEXIS 995) (Mississippi has adopted the "wait-and-see" approach: "The supreme court has adopted an ameliorative doctrine labeled the 'wait-and-see' approach. Only if the contingent future interest in fact fails to vest within the period of the rule will it be void. If it vests within the period, it will be valid"); In re Estate of Brown, No.

97-CA-00125 COA (Miss. Ct. App. 1998) (LEXIS 624) (under Mississippi's "wait-and-see" doctrine, right of first refusal deemed valid despite rule against perpetuities because the sale actually occurred well within the 21 year time period); In re Trust ex rel. Wold, 708 A.2d 787 (N.J. 1998) (in New Jersey, a 1991 statute provided a lenient "wait-and-see" period of 90 years. In this case, the court concluded that the 1991 statute applied to a 1944 trust in that the permissible period is determined by the law in effect at the time of the exercise of the power of appointment, rather than by the law in effect when the power of appointment was created); Venture Stores v. Pacific Beach Co., WD 55151 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) (LEXIS 1995) ("tenant's option to buy or renew is not affected by the rule against perpetuities if the option is exercisable not later than the end of the term of the option to purchase, as long as it is part of the existing lease"); White v. Fleet Bank of Maine, 739 A.2d 373 (Me. 1999) (stating that Maine has adopted the wait-and-see doctrine).

(n125)Footnote 550. 570 N.E.2d 179 (Mass. App. Ct. 1991). Matter of Estate of Keenan, 519 N.W.2d 373 (Iowa 1994) ("wait and see" provision of statute regarding rule against perpetuities is remedy of choice for vesting problems under rule against perpetuities, and reformation provisions are not triggered unless "wait and see" fails to validate challenged interest).

(n126)Footnote 551. See Jesse Dukeminier, A Modern Guide to Perpetuities, 74 Calif. L. Rev. 1867, 1904-1905 n.132 (1986) (citing Gray for the latter approach and cases for and against Gray's position).

(n127)Footnote 552. See Id. at 1910 & n.151 (1986) (citing cases but suggesting that these courts did not know what they were doing). State ex rel. Champion v. Holden, 953 S.W.2d 151 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) (for a private trust to be valid under the rule against perpetuities, a beneficiary must be "definitely ascertained at the time of the creation of the trust" or within the standard time allowed by the rule against perpetuities); In re Estate of West, 560 N.W.2d 810 (Neb. 1997) (trust beneficiary must be "definitely ascertained at the time of the trust's creation" or within the time allotted by the rules against perpetuities); In re Clayton J. Richardson Trust, 634 A.2d 1005 (N.H. 1993) (determination that will violates rule against perpetuities does not mandate that the will's provisions must entirely fail).

(n128)Footnote 553. Id. at 1911 (1986), and referring the reader to William M. McGovern Jr., Perpetuities Pitfalls and How Best to Avoid Them, 6 Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. 155 (1971). Ludwig v. Amsouth Bank of Fla., 686 So. 2d 1373 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997) (savings clause in trust manifested the settlor's intent for the trust to be valid for the maximum period allowed by the rule against perpetuities).

(n129)Footnote 554. See Bergin & Haskell, supra note 79, at 218-219 nn.14-15 (naming Alaska, California, Idaho, Iowa, Kentucky, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, and Washington, with limited reformation statutes to provide for the reduction of an age contingency in Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, and New York). Matter of Estate of Holt, 857 P.2d 1355 (Hawaii 1993) (courts have generally held that if explicit termination date is lacking, but specific beneficiaries are named in trust instrument, then such beneficiaries are applicable measuring lives for calculation of legal trust duration under rule against perpetuities); Johnson v. McLaughlin, 840 S.W.2d 668 (Tex. App. 1992) (will, viewed in its entirety, manifested intent that title to residuary assets vest at death in trustees; contrary interpretation would violate rule against perpetuities, because administration of estate might have lasted more than 21 years after testator's death); Trust Created Under Will of Damon, 869 P.2d 1339 (Hawaii 1994) (if language of will is fairly open to more than one reasonable construction, reasonable construction that will turn provision into illegal perpetuity will not be preferred over another, if such other upholds validity of provision consistent with rule against perpetuities). In Estate of Keenan, 519 N.W.2d 373 (Iowa 1994), for example, the court permitted reformation of a bequest that only allowed scholarships to be paid from the income of a trust to allow accelerated vesting through payment of scholarships from trust corpus as well as from trust income.

(n130)Footnote 555. See Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 4, at 844, citing cases in Colorado (commercial agreement reformed), Hawaii (Estate of Chun Quan Yee Hop), Kansas (semble), Mississippi (saving clause), and West Virginia. Buck v. Banks, 668 N.E.2d 1259 (Ind. 1996) (court expressed willingness to reform contract to bring it within rule against perpetuities; however, contract had been fully performed, leaving nothing to reform).

(n131)Footnote 556. 469 P.2d 183 (Haw. 1970).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 28.09

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31. George W. Thompson, Commentaries on The Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law on perpetuities. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 28.09 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Books

Gray, John Chipman. The Rule Against Perpetuities. Boston: Little Brown, 1915.

Lynn, Robert J. The Modern Rule Against Perpetuities. Indianapolis, Indiana: Bobbs-Merrill, 1966.

Maudsley, Ronald Harling. The Modern Law of Perpetuities. London: Butterworth, 1979.

Morris, John Humprey Carile. The Rule Against Perpetuities. London: Stevens, 1956.

Raban, Sandra. Mortmain Legislation and the English Church. New York: Cambridge University Press, 1982.

Schwartz, Frederic S. A Student's Guide to the Rule Against Perpetuities. New York: Times Mirror Books, 1988.

Articles

Atkinson, Rob. "Reforming Cy Pres Reform." Hastings L.J. Vol. 44 (1993) 1111.

Avril, Nanette Ann. "Wait-and-See Doctrine Adopted as Judicial Modification of Rule Against Perpetuities in Rhode Island." Suffolk U. L. Rev. Vol. 22 (1988) 514.

Bailey, James E.. "An Analytical Framework for Resolving the Issues Raised by the Interaction Between Reproductive Technology and the Law of Inheritance." DePaul L. Rev. Vol. 47 (1998) 743 (this article includes a discussion of how reproductive technology may cause the rule against perpetuities to invalidate certain bequests, that before such technology, were always valid [e.g. freezing sperm and using it at date much later than the sperm donor's death]).

Becker, David M. "A Methodology for Solving Perpetuities Problems Under the Common Law Rule: A Step-by-Step Process That Carefully Identifies All Testing Lives In Being." Wash. U. L. Q. Vol. 67 (1989) 949.

Becker, David M. "Tailoring Perpetuities Provisions to Avoid Problems," Prob. & Prop. Vol. 9 (Mar.-Apr. 1995) 10.

Becker, David M. "If You Think You No Longer Need To Know Anything About The Rule Against Perpetuities, Then Read This!" Wash. U. L.Q. Vol. 74 (1996) 713.

Becker, David M. "Uniform Probate Code Section 2-207 and the Experienced Estate Planner: Unexpected Disasters and How to Avoid Them." 47 UCLA L. Rev. 339 (1999).

Belcher, Jonathan. "Virginia's Reform of the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities." Colonial Law. Vol. 20 (1991) 46.

Bloom, Ira Mark. "Perpetuities Refinement: There is an Alternative." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 62 (1987) 23.

Keith L. Butler, "Long Live the Dead Hand: A Case for Repeal of the Rule Against Perpeuities in Washington," 75 Washington Law Review (2000).

Carroll, Phillip. "Uniform Laws in Arkansas." 52 Ark. L. Rev. 313 (1999).

Chase, James S. "Perpetuity Reform: How Much Do We Need?" Prob. L.J. Vol. 11 (1992) 1.

Chester, Ronald. "Cy Pres or Gift Over? The Search for Coherence in Judicial Reform of Failed Charitable Trusts." Suffolk U. L. Rev. Vol. 23 (1989) 41.

Cunningham, John R. "Mortmain Statutes: The Dead Hand Still Survives." Idaho L. Rev. Vol. 27 (1991) 49.

Dawson, Norma. "Cy Pres: Means, Motive and Opportunity -- and Other Matters." N. Ireland Legal Q. Vol. 39 (1988) 177.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "Perpetuities: The Measuring Lives." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 85 (1985) 1648.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "A Response by Professor Dukeminier." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 85 (1985) 1730.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "The Uniform Probate Code Upends the Law of Remainders." Mich. L. Rev. Vol. 94 (1995) 148.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities: Ninety Years in Limbo." UCLA L. Rev. Vol. 34 (1987) 1023.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities and the GST Tax: New Perils for Practitioners and New Opportunities." Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. Vol. 30 (Summer 1995) 185.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "Wait-and-See: The Causal Relationship Principle." L. Q. Rev. Vol. 102 (1986) 250.

Fellows, Mary Louise. "Testing Perpetuity Reforms: A Study of Perpetuity cases 1984-1989." Real Prop., Prob. and Tr. J. Vol. 25 (1991) 597.

French, Susan F. "Perpetuities: Three Essays in Honor of My Father." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 65 (1990) 323.

Fruehwald, Kristin G. "Rule Against Perpetuities Saving Clauses." Res Gestae Vol. 30 (1987) 378.

Garmisa, Steven P. "Without a Deadline, Purchase Option Dies." Chi. Daily L. Bull. (Jan. 10, 1997) 6.

Gibbes, Laura Limerick. "Perpetuating the Rule of Confusion: Mississippi's Reform of the Rule Against Perpetuities." Miss. L.J. Vol. 59 (1989) 513.

Gravells, Nigel P. "Discretionary Trusts and Powers of Appointment: Progressive Assimilation." Canterbury L. Rev. Vol. 5 (1992) 67.

Gunn, Malcolm. "Discretionary Trusts." Tax'n Vol. 123 (1989) 539.

Haskell, Paul G. "A Proposal for a Simple and Socially Effective Rule Against Perpetuities." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 66 (1988) 545.

Hayton, David. "English Fiduciary Standards and Trust Law." 32 Vand. J. Transnat'l L. 555 (1999).

Hess, Amy Morris. "Freeing Property Owners from the Rap Trap: Tennessee Adopts the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities." Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 62 (Winter 1995) 267.

Hirsch, Adam J. & William K.S. Wang. "A Qualitative Theory of the Dead Hand." Ind. L.J. Vol. 68 (1992) 1.

Hirsch, Adam J. "Trusts for Purposes: Policy, Ambiguity, and Anomaly in the Uniform Laws." 26 Fla. St. U.L. Rev. 913 (1999).

Robert J. Hopperton, 31 University of Toledo Law Review 55, Teaching the Rule Against Perpetuities in First Year Property (1999).

Jennings, Marianne M. "Real Property Could Use Some Updating." Real Est. L. J. Vol. 24 (Fall 1995) 103.

Jones, Shirley Norwood. "The Demise of Mortmain in the United States." Miss. C. L. Rev. Vol. 12 (1992) 407.

Kemp, J. Hovey & J. Forbes Newman. "Hidden Rule Against Perpetuities Problems in Oil and Gas Transactions." Rocky Mtn. Min. L. Inst. Vol. 32 (1986) 16.

King, David S. & Alexander M. Mejklejohn. "The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities: Wait-and-See for 90 Years." Est. Plan. Vol. 17 (1990) 24.

Kruger, Andrew C. "Are Charitable Trusts and the Doctrine of Cy Pres Alive?" Conn. Prob. L.J. Vol. 8 (1994) 241.

Laird, Vaness. "Phantom Selves: The Search for a General Charitable Intent in the Application of the Cy Pres Doctrine." Stan. L. Rev. Vol. 40 (1988) 973.

Link, Ronald C. and Kimberly A. Licata. "Perpetuities Reform in North Carolina: The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, Nondonative Transfers, and Honorary Trusts." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 74 (1996) 1783.

Lundy, James P. "New York Court of Appeals Excludes Preemptive and Exclusive Consignment Rights in Commercial Settings from the Rule Against Perpetuities." St. John's L. Rev. Vol. 67 (1993) 455.

Luria, David. "Prying Loose the Dead Hand of the Past: How Courts Apply Cy Pres to Race, Gender, and Religiously Restricted Trusts." U.S.F. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1986) 41.

Luxton, Peter. "Giving the Go-by to Cy-pres: An Anglo-American Perspective." New L.J. Vol. 137 (1987) SVIII(4).

Macaluso, Zino I. "Cy Pres and Yet So Far or the Buck Stops Here: An Examination and Discussion of the Equitable Doctrine." U. West L.A. L. Rev. Vol. 24 (1993) 55.

Marsh, Thompson G. "Misstatements of the Rule Against Perpetuities by Experts." Colo. Law. Vol. 15 (1986) 210.

Marsh, Thompson G. "The Moribund Rule Against Perpetuities." Colo. Law. Vol. 16 (1987) 37.

Mee, John. "Land Law -- The Rule Against Perpetuities; Return of the Fertile Octogenarians." Dublin U. L.J. Vol. 25 (1992) 182.

Moore, John D. "The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities: Taming the Technicality-ridden Legal Nightmare." W. Va. L. Rev. Vol. 95 (1992) 193.

Mortland, Jean A. "Cy Pres Doctrine Applied to Charitable Bequest to College for Specific Purposes, but Unnecessary Where Bequest was General in Nature." Est. Plan. Vol. 12 (1985) 58.

Note, "The Tennessee Supreme Court Interprets the Rule Against Perpetuities." Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 57 (1990) 575.

O'Quinn, William L. "Perpetuating the Rule Against Perpetuities in the Realm of Preemptive Rights -- North Carolina Refuses to Accept an Exception to the Rule." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 71 (1993) 2115.

Pedowitz, James M. "Modernizing the Rule Against Perpetuities." Prob. and Prop. Vol. 1 (1987) 47.

Perkins, Matthew R. "The Cy Pres Doctrine in the 1980's: The Case for Charitable Favoritism." Prob. L.J. Vol. 10 (1990) 163.

Petrucci, Mark. "The Cy Pres Doctrine -- Is It State Action?" Cap. U. L. Rev. Vol. 18 (1989) 383.

Radford, Mary F. "The Case Against the Georgia Mortmain Statute." Ga. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 8 (1992) 313.

Reyhan, Patricia Y. "Perpetuities Perpetuated: Symphony Space, Inc. V. Pergola Properties, Inc." Alb. L. Rev. Vol. 60 (1997) 1259.

Sacks, Jeffrey W. "Options to Purchase and the Rule Against Perpetuities: The Dangerous Legacy for the Unwary Practitioner." Boston B.J. Vol. 30 (1986) 23.

John G. Shively, 78 Washington University Law Quarterly 371 The Death of the Life in Being--The Required Federal Response to State Abolition of the Rule Against Perpetuities (2000).

Sisson, Roger G. "Relaxing the Dead Hand's Grip: Charitable Efficiency and the Doctrine of Cy Pres." Va. L. Rev. Vol. 74 (1988) 635.

Sparkes, Peter & Richard Snape. "Class Closing and the Wait and See Rule." Conv. & Prop. Law.(n.s.) (Sept.-Oct. 1988) 339.

Stake, Jeffrey E. "Darwin, Donations, and the Illusion of Dead Hand Control." Tul. L. Rev. Vol. 64 (1990) 705.

Stebbings, Chantal. "Charity Land: A Mortmain Confusion." J. Legal Hist. Vol. 12 (1991) 7.

Sterk, Stewart E. "Real Estate and the Rule Against Perpetuities." n.y . Real Est. L. Rep. Vol. 10 No. 8 (1996) 3.

Sugar, Barbara Carey. "Future Interests -- Commerce Union Bank v. Warren County: Confronting the Rule Against Perpetuities Again." Mem. St. U. L. Rev. Vol. 17 (1987) 317.

Taylor, Jennifer R. "A 'Pet' Project for State Legislatures: The Movement Toward Enforceable Pet Trusts in the Twenty-First Century." 13 Quinn. Prob. L. J. 419 (1999).

Volkmer, Ronald R. "Application of Rule Against Perpetuities." Est. Plan. Vol. 19 (1992) 382.

Waggoner, Lawrence W. "Perpetuities: A Perspective on Wait-and-see." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 85 (1985) 1714.

Waggoner, Lawrence W. "A Rejoinder by Professor Waggoner." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 85 (1985) 1739.

Waggoner, Lawrence W. "The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities: Oregon Joins Up." Williamette L. Rev. Vol. 26 (1990) 259.

Waggoner, Lawrence W. "The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities: The Rationale of the 90-year Waiting Period." Cornell L. Rev. Vol. 73 (1988) 157.

Waggoner, Lawrence W. "Wait-and-see: The New American Uniform Act." Cambridge L.J. Vol. 46 (1987) 234.

Waite, G. Graham. "Let's Abolish the Rule Against Perpetuities." Real Est. L.J. Vol. 21 (1992) 93.

White, David J. "Remember the Mortmain." Fla. B.J. Vol. 56 (1982) 853.

Zartman, James N. "Discretionary Trusts for Disabled Beneficiaries." Ill. B.J. Vol. 81 (1993) 516.

Annotations

Annotation, Allowance of Attorney's Fees in Litigation Involving Cy Pres Doctrine, 89 A.L.R. 2d 691.

Annotation, Applicability of Doctrine of Equitable Approximation to Cut Down to a Permissible Time Period the Time of a Testamentary Gift that Violates Rule Against Perpetuities, 95 A.L.R. 2d 807.

Annotation, Application of Cy Pres Doctrine to Trust for Promulgation of Particular Political or Philosophical Doctrines, 67 A.L.R. 3d 417.

Annotation, Character of Remainder Limited Generally to the Life Tenant's Children, 57 A.L.R. 2d 103.

Annotation, Character of Remainder Limited to Surviving Children of Life Tenant, 57 A.L.R. 2d 197.

Annotation, Cy Pres Doctrine as Affected by Sectarian or Doctrinal Differences or Factors, 3 A.L.R. 2d 78.

Annotation, Family Settlement of Testator's Estate, 29 A.L.R. 3d 8 (mentions that the complicated nature of the rule against perpetuities may warrant judicial construction of a will so as not to deplete the decedent's estate in expensive, drawn-out family litigation. It is not, however, the main focus of the annotation).

Annotation, Independent Option to Purchase Real Estate as Violating Rule Against Perpetuities or Restraints on Alienation, 66 A.L.R. 3d 1294.

Annotation, Lease for Term of Years, or Contract Therefor, as Violating Rule Against Perpetuities, 66 A.L.R. 2d 733.

Annotation, Modern Status of Presumption Against Possibility of Issue Being Extinct, 98 A.L.R. 2d 1258.

Annotation, Mortmain Statutes -- Validity and Effect, 6 A.L.R. 4th 603.

Annotation, Pre-emptive Rights to Realty as Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on Alienation, 40 A.L.R. 3d 920.

Annotation, Rule Against Perpetuities Where Estate is Limited on Alternative Contingencies, one Within and One Beyond the Period Allowed by the Rule, 98 A.L.R. 2d 807.

Annotation, Rule Against Perpetuities Where Estate is Limited on Alternative Contingencies, one Within and One Beyond the Period Allowed by the Rule for Vesting Estates, 64 A.L.R. 1077.

Annotation, Separability, for Purposes of the Rule Against Perpetuities, of Gift to Several Persons by one Description, 56 A.L.R. 2d 450.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Application of Statutes or Ordinances Regulating Perpetual-Care Trust Funds of Cemeteries and Mausoleums, 54 A.L.R. 5th 681 (cites Perry v. Twentieth Street Bank, 206 S.E.2d 421 (1974), which indicates that statutes can validate perpetual care trusts that might otherwise violate the rule against perpetuities. Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Provisions of Charitable Trust Providing for Accumulation of Income, 6 A.L.R. 4th 903.

Annotation, Validity of Option to Purchase Realty as Affected by Indefiniteness of Term Provided for Exercise, 31 A.L.R. 3d 522.

Annotation, Validity of Provision of Will or Conveyance Limiting Alienation to Certain Individuals or Those of a Limited Class, 36 A.L.R. 2d 1437.

Annotation, Validity, under Rule Against Perpetuities, of Gift in Remainder to Creator's Great-grandchildren, Following Successive Life Estates to Children and Grandchildren, 18 A.L.R. 2d 671.

Annotation, Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities, or Unlawful Restraint of Alienation or Suspension of Ownership, by Postponement of Vesting or Alienation of Ownership until Exercise of Discretion as to Sale or Disposal, 89 A.L.R. 1047.

Annotation, What Constitutes Negligence Sufficient to Render Attorney Liable to Person Other Than Immediate Client, 61 A.L.R. 4th 464 (includes a discussion of whether drafting a will in violation of the rule against perpetuities is sufficient negligence to create liability in the attorney as to third parties).

Annotation, When Statute of Limitations Begins to Run Upon Action Against Attorney for Malpractice, 32 A.L.R. 4th 260 (statute of limitation began to run even though the rule against perpetuities is difficult to understand. The negligently drafted provision in the will should have been discovered immediately, no matter how difficult the law is).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.02

Supp. to § 28.02 Definition and History of the Rule Against Perpetuities.

[Go To Main]

§ 28.02(a) Rules Against Perpetuities Generally. [Go To Main]

add:

Brown Bros. Harriman Trust Co., N.A. v. Benson, 688 S.E.2d 752 (N.C. App. 2010) (upholding constitutionality of a statute expressly superseding the common law rule against perpetuities).

Add:

Reynolds v. Gagen, 739 N.Y.S.2d 704 (2002) (contractual right to purchase one-half interest in real property did not violate rule against perpetuities).

After the citation to "Lucas v. Hamm ... " add:

cert. denied, 368 U.S. 987 (1962) .

After the citation to "In re Frederick's Estate ... " add:

cert. denied, Estate of Fredericks, 320 So. 2d 394 (1975) .

After the citation to "Weber v. Texas Co ... " add:

cert. denied, 299 U.S. 561 (1936) .

Owenby v. Holley, 567 S.E.2d 351 (Ga.App. 2002) (brother's option to purchase property upon sister's death did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

Add:

Meduna v. Holder, 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 10568 (Tex. App. 2003) (Although the Rule against Perpetuities is one of law, the interpretation of a written instrument or instruments is ordinarily required for application of the rule; Texas law favors a construction allowing vesting at the earliest possible time and the courts will not construe an interest as contingent when it reasonably can be construed as vested.).

§ 28.02(b) Relation of Rules Against Remoteness of Vesting to the Common Law. [Go To Main]

After the citation to "Rekdahl v. Long ... " add:

aff'd, 417 S.W.2d 387 (1967) .

Add:

Park Station L.P. v. Bosse, 378 Md. 122, 835 A.2d 646 (Md. App. 2003) (a provision granting the right of first refusal does not violate the rule against perpetuities); Firebaugh v. Whitehead, 263 Va. 398, 559 S.E.2d 611 (Va. 2002) (the lack of duration limitation in the right of first refusal did not violate the rule against the rule of perpetuities).

Add:

Hochberg v. Proctor, 805 N.E.2d 979 (Mass. 2004) (The life estate was vested in interest, although not in possession, when the trust was created, so there was no violation of the rule against perpetuities.).

Add:

Dimon v. Starr, 749 N.Y.S.2d 78 (2002) (a contract which gave the plaintiff a future right to receive additional compensation for the sale of an interest in real property was held to violate the rule against perpetuities' prohibition against remoteness of vesting). Cf Rich, Rich, & Nance v. Carolina Constr. Corp., 355 N.C. 190, 558 S.E.2d 77 (N.C.

2002) (a requirement that a subsequent purchaser pay the vendor an "availability fee" did not violate the common-law rule against perpetuities).

Add:

Alexander ex rel. Alexander v. Estate of Alexander, 93 S.W.3d 688 (Ark. 2002) (use of the term "issue" in a rule against perpetuities provision did not indicate that the testator contemplated a grandson).

Add:

In re Certain Trusts Created by Certain Agreements, 742 N.Y.S.2d 777 (2002) (a trust provision granting granting to any "child" who was a beneficiary the right to exercise a power of appointment over the trust corpus upon reaching age of 25 was not ambiguous).

§ 28.02(c) Mortmain. [Go To Main]

Correct the name of the citation to:

Hood v. First Nat'l Bank of Columbus, 133 S.E.2d 19 ...

Correct the page of the citation of "Riley's Estate" to:

511.

After the citation to "In re Halpern's Will ..." add:

aff'd, In re Estate of Dewey, 387 N.Y.S.2d 426, 355 N.E.2d 386 (1976) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.03

Supp. to § 28.03 Interests That Are Subject to the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting.

[Go To Main]

§ 28.03(a) Contingent Interests. [Go To Main]

Add:

E-470 Public Highway Authority v. Argus Real Estate, 70 P.3d 481 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) (after owners transferred property to the highway authority, the owners did not have a present, reversionary interest in the property, and thus the agreement conveying the property was subject to the rule against perpetuities).

Argus Real Estate v. E-470 Public Highway Authority (2003 Colo. App. LEXIS 2038 (02CA2044, Dec. 31, 2003) (a party not involved in E-470 Public Highway Authority v. Argus Real Estate, 70 P.3d 481 [Colo. Ct. App. 2002] brought an action based on the same claims made in Argus I. The court held that the Colorado Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities Act, § 15-11-1106(2) (1991) permits a reformation claim in the action that determined the rule was violated in Argus I).

Change the page number in the citation of "Cook v. Cook ..." to:

568.

Add

Washington State Grange v. Brandt, 148 P.3d 1069 (Wash. App. 2006) (executory interest violated the rule against perpetuities).

§ 28.03(b) Powers of Appointment. [Go To Main]

After the citation to "In re Stewart's Estate ..." add:

aff'd in part, quashed in part by Stewart's Estate v. Caldwell, 271 So. 2d 754 (Fla. 1972) .

After the citation to "Cleveland Trust Co. v. McQuade ..." add:

order reversed by Cleveland Trust Co. v. McQuade, 6 Ohio Op. 2d 493, 142 N.E.2d 249 (Ohio App. Ct. 1957) .

§ 28.03(d) Miscellaneous Interests. [Go To Main]

Add:

In re County Treasurer and ex Officio County Collector, 869 N.E.2d 1065 (Ill. App. 2007) (a covenant for assessments did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

add:

Tourneau, LLC v. 53rd and Madison Tower Development LLC, 896 N.Y.S.2d 631 (2010) (a lease whose commencement date was described as the date when the landlord substantially completed its work on the premises did not violate the Rule Against Perpetuities); Johnson v. Nisbet, 891 N.Y.S.2d 180 (2009) (a stipulation by one neighbor to not interfere with another neighbor's effort to acquire another parcel of land did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

Add

Omar v. Rozen, 867 N.Y.S.2d 458 (2008) (an option with no termination date did not violate the rule against perpetuities; a reasonable termination date was presumed); Power Gas Marketing & Transmission, Inc. v. Cabot Oil & Gas Corp., 948 A.2d 807 (Pa. Super. 2008) (a "preferential right to purchase" did not violate the rule against perpetuities). Stephens v. Trust for Public Land, 475 F. Supp. 2d 1299 (N.D. Ga. 2007) (right of first offer did not violate rule against perpetuities); In the Matter of Estate of Owen, 855 N.E.2d 603 (Ind. App. 2006) (right of first refusal did not violate the statutory rule against perpetuities); Randolph v. Reisig, 727 N.W.2d 388 (Mich. App. 2007) (right of first refusal did not violate rule against perpetuities).

Add:

Harrington v. Gage, 843 N.Y.S.2d 745 (2007) (option agreement violated rule against perpetuities).

change to read:

There are authorities holding that options to purchase contained in Bortolotti v. Hayden, 866 N.E.2d 882 (Mass. 2007) (the rule against perpetuities did not bar a right of first refusal); Stephens v. Trust for Public Land, 475 F. Supp. 2d 1299) (a right of first offer did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

Add:

Add:

Malone v. Guynes, 250 S.W.3d 260 (Ark. App. 2007) (a restrictive covenant limiting uses of the land to single-family dwellings did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

Add:

Horse Creek Conservation Dist. v. State ex rel. Wyoming Attorney General, 221 P.3d 306 (Wyo. 2009) (a grant of public access did not violate the rule against perpetuities). PCS Phosphate Co., Inc. v. Norfolk Southern Corp., 520 F. Supp. 2d 705 (E.D. N.C. 2007) aff'd 559 F.3d 212, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 5024 (provisions for relocating an easement did not violate the rule against perpetuities).

add:

Hensley-O'Neal v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 297 S.W.3d 610 (Mo. App. 2009) (holding that a pre-emptive right contract violated the rule against perpetuities).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.04

Supp. to § 28.04 The Operation of the Rule Against Remoteness of Vesting.

[Go To Main]

After the citation to "Lucas v. Hamm ... add:

cert. denied, 368 U.S. 987 (1962) .

Frazer v. Millington, 63 Va. Cir. 458 (Va. 2003) (A right of first refusal for the disposition of stock was an unreasonable restraint on alienability because it allowed the stock to be transferred intestate but did not allow it to be bequeathed; the right of first refusal, which was indefinite in duration, was also void ab initio under the common law Rule against Perpetuities.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.05

Supp. to § 28.05 The Rule Against Remoteness as Applied to Gifts in Charity.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Marsh v. Frost Nat'l Bank, 129 S.W.3d 174 (Tex. 2004) (a general gift in trust to all Americans eighteen years or older is not exempted from the rule against perpetuities as a general charitable trust when there is no intent that the trust would promote the social interest of the community).

Replace the citation of "Boxer v. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. ..." with:

Boxer v. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., 174 N.E.2d 363 (Mass. 1961) , overruled in part by Colby v. Carney Hospital, 254 N.E.2d 407 (Mass. 1969) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.06

Supp. to § 28.07 The Rule Against Overlong Duration of Trusts.

[Go To Main]

Add:

In re Mary E. Griffin Revocable Grantor Trust, 760 N.W.2d 318 (Mich. App. 2008) (a trust with no provision for distributing the corpus violated the rule against perpetuities); Robinson v. North Pond Hunting Club, 890 N.E.2d 535 (Ill. App. 2008) (a trust document with no provision terminating the trust violated the rule against perpetuities).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.07

Supp. to § 28.07 Statutory Modifications of the Rule Against Perpetuities.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Selig v. State Highway Admin., 383 Md. 655 (Md. 2004) (In Maryland, the repeal of a statutory exception to the Rule against Perpetuities did not apply retroactively to a contract that was formed or a deed that was executed before the effective date of such changes.). Old Port Cove Condominium Ass'n One, Inc. v. Old Port Cove Holdings, Inc., 954 So. 2d 742 (Fla. App. 2007) (the statute repealing the common-law rule against perpetuities is fully retroactive).

add:

Brown Bros. Harriman Trust Co., N.A. v. Benson, 688 S.E.2d 752 (N.C. App. 2010) (upholding constitutionality of a statute expressly superseding the common law rule against perpetuities).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.08

Supp. to § 28.08 A Short Course in the Modern Rule Against Perpetuities.

[Go To Main]

§ 28.08(c) The Concept of Vesting. [Go To Main]

Add:

Hochberg v. Proctor, 805 N.E.2d 979 (Mass. 2004) (the rule against perpetuities is not violated when vesting of possession occurs after the prescribed period as long as an interest is vested within the prescribed period).

§ 28.08(d) Four Aspects of the Rule. [Go To Main]

Add:

White Mt. Apache Tribe v. United States, 249 F.3d 1364, 1368 (Fed. Cir. 2001) (noting that the rule against perpetuities does not apply to conveyances made by the government).

§ 28.08(e) Difficulty of the Rule. [Go To Main]

After the citation to "Lucas v. Hamm ... " add

cert. denied, 368 U.S. 987 (1962) .

§ 28.08(g) Effect of Invalidity of an Interest. [Go To Main]

Add:

Meduna v. Holder, 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 10568 (03-03-00781-CV, Dec. 18, 2003) (Under Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.043 when a conveyance partially violates the rule against perpetuities, the court should enforce the provisions of the conveyance that do not violate the rule and reform or construe the provisions that do violate the rule to effectuate the grantors intent within the rule).

§ 28.08(j) Exceptions of the Rule. [Go To Main]

Add:

Deer Cross Shopping LLC v. Stop & Shop Supermarket Co., 773 N.Y.S.2d 211 (N.Y. 2003) (appurtenant options to renew a lease do not violate the rule against perpetuities).

Add new note 544.1 at the end of the last paragraph of the section: n544.1

Add to text at end of page:

Utah has abolished the common law rule against perpetuities and now requires that vesting of interests be determined within 1,000 years from the time the interest is created.

Add:

Utah Code Ann. § 75-2-1203 (2003).

§ 28.08(k) Wait-and-See Doctrine. [Go To Main]

Bd. of County Comm'rs v. City of Cincinnati, 154 Ohio App. 3d 504 (Ohio App. 2003) (The city's right of first refusal to purchase property, valid under the state's statutory "wait and see" doctrine, did not violate the Rule against Perpetuities because actual events did not violate the rule.).

Arundel v. Marie, 860 A.2d 886 (Md. 2004) (The right of first refusal, void under the common law Rule against Perpetuities, was not covered by a statutory "wait and see" doctrine which provided for an election, because the interest was subject to vesting prior to the end of a life estate or a life in being, and the sellers never elected to sell previously.).

§ 28.08(m) Cy Pres Doctrine or Equitable Apportionment. [Go To Main]

United Bank, Inc. v. Blosser, 624 S.E.2d 815 (W. Va. 2005) (under the state statute, the trust was held to be a valid charitable trust and exempt from application of the rule against perpetuities).

FOOTNOTES:
(n2)Footnote 544.1. Larson Operating Co. v. Petroleum, Inc., 32 Kan. App. 2d 460 (Kan. App. 2004) (The rule against perpetuities does not apply to commercial transactions.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 28 RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

3-28 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 28.09

Supp. to § 28.09 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Add to Articles:

Crown, Barry C. "Private Purpose Trusts and the Rule Against Perpetuities," 2009 Sing. J. Legal Stud. 646 (December, 2009).2010 Update for Ch. 29.

Culler, M. Patricia. "Opting-Out From the Rule Against Perpetuities in Ohio: Nine Years Later," 18 Ohio Pro. L.J. 145 (January/February 2008).

Dobris, Joel C. "Undoing Repeal of the Rule Against Perpetuities: Federal and State Tools for Breaking Dynasty Trusts," 27 Cardozo L. Rev. 2537 (April, 2006).

Eitel, Michael R. "Wyoming's Trepidation Toward Conservation Easement Legislation: A Look at Two Issues Troubling the Wyoming State Legislature," 4 Wyo. L. Rev. 57 (2004).

Foster, Lynn. "Fifty-One Flowers: Current Perpetuities Law in the States," 22 Prob. & Prop. 30 (July/August, 2008) .

Gallanis, T.P. "The Future of Future Interests," 60 Wash & Lee L. Rev. 513 (Spring 2003).

Wayne M. Gazur, "Colorado Revisits the Rule Against Perpetuities," 35 Colo. Law. 75 (November, 2006) .

Greenfield, Joshua. "Dad Was Born a Thousand Years Ago? An Examination of Port-Mortem Conception and Inheritance, With a Focus on the Rule Against Perpetuities," 8 Minn. J.L. Sci. & Tech. 277 (Winter 2007) .

Hoffman, Sharona. "Birth after Death: Perpetuities and the New Reproductive Technologies," 38 Ga. L. Rev. 575 (Winter 2004).

Holbrook, Dan W. "The Rule Against Perpetuities: Time to Re-Examine?" 38 Tenn. B.J. 31 (April, 2002).

Jordan, Martha W. "Requiem for Pennsylvania's Rule Against Perpetuities," 46 Duquesne L. Rev. 555 (Summer, 2008).

King, Emily J. "Recent Development: A Right of First Refusal is Void Under the Traditional Common Law Rule Against Perpetuities as Well as the Legislative Modification of that Rule," 35 U. Balt. L.F. 140 (Spring 2005).

Lindstrom, C. Timothy. "Hicks v. Dowd: The End of Perpetuity?" 8 Wyo L. Rev. 25 (2008).

Knaplund, Kristine S. "Postmortem Conception and a Father's Last Will," 46 Ariz. L. Rev. 91 (Spring 2004).

Markey, Maureen E. "Ariadne's Thread: Leading Students Into and Out of the Labyrinth of the Rule Against Perpetuities," 54 Clev. St. L. Rev. 337 (2006).

Note, "Dynasty Trusts and the Rule Against Perpetuities," 116 Harv. L. Rev. 2588 (June 2003).

Reed, Darren J. "The Perpetual Problem of Perpetuities in Saskatchewan: Scurry-Rainbow Oil (Sask.) Ltd. v. Taylor: A Strong Signal to the Legislature from the Court of Appeal," 66 Sask. L. Rev. 511 (2003).

"Right of First Refusal: Rule Against Perpetuities," 37 Real Est. L. Rep. 2 (October 2007).

Schneider, Frederick R. "A Rule Against Perpetuities for the Twenty-First Century," 41 Real Prop. Prob. & Tr. J. 743 (Winter 2007).

Vaughan, Ashley. "You Can't Take It With You: Property Rights After Death and Rethinking the Rule Against Perpetuities," 47 S. Tex. L. Rev. 615 (Spring 2006)

Walker, Julia C. "Get Your Dead Hands Off Me: Beneficiaries' Right to Terminate or Modify a Trust Under the Uniform Trust Code," 67 Mo. L. Rev. 443 (2002).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 29.syn

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.syn Synopsis to Chapter 29: RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

§ 29.01 Introduction to the Chapter

§ 29.02 Overview of Restraints on Alienation

§ 29.03 History of Restraints on Alienation

§ 29.03(a) Restraints on Alienation Under the Common Law

§ 29.03(b) Restraints on Alienation in the American States

§ 29.04 Partial Restraints on Alienation

§ 29.05 Provisions for Defeasance on Alienation

§ 29.06 Bibliography

Professor David A. Thomas n*
J. Reuben Clark Law School
Brigham Young University

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *.
This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 29.01

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.01 Introduction to the Chapter

This chapter reviews the development of doctrines governing restraints on alienation of property interests under the common law and in the jurisprudence of the American states. The law governing partial restraints is reviewed. The chapter concludes with a discussion of disposition of interests that are defeated under the rule against restraints on alienation.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 29.02

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.02 Overview of Restraints on Alienationn1

[Go To Supp]

A restraint on alienation is "a provision which disables the owner of an interest in property from transferring it," n2 and is generally considered invalid. However, when a restraint on alienation is incorporated in a condition subsequent, the restraint may be considered valid in certain cases. n3

Restraints differ from conditions subsequent, inasmuch as the act that is subject to the restraint prevents transfer of property, whereas the act that is subject to the condition subsequent produces transfer of property. n3.1 Thus, if O conveys "to A" with a provision that prevents A from conveying the property to any other person, the provision is a restraint on alienation which, if it were valid (which it is not), would invalidate any attempt by A to convey and would leave the property in A's hands. If O conveys "to A as long as A does not drink alcohol, otherwise to B," A's not drinking alcohol is a condition subsequent which would produce the transfer of the property to B if A should drink alcohol. n4

A restraint on alienation is incorporated into a condition subsequent cutting short an estate in property when it prevents the transfer of the property to one person but the attempted transfer causes a forfeiture with the resulting transfer of the property to another person. Thus, O's conveyance "to A for life as long as A does not attempt to convey the property to B, otherwise the property shall revert to O" contains both a restraint on alienation (preventing transfer of the property to B) and a condition subsequent (producing transfer of the property to O).

A restraint on alienation is effective when it appears in a condition subsequent in a life estate followed by a reversion; it is not effective when it appears in a condition subsequent in a fee and prohibits alienation to any person at any time. n5 Other cases fall in between and are subject to the vagaries of policy.

In Morse v. Blood, n6 the court rejected the idea that a condition against alienation is good unless it takes away substantially the whole power of alienation. The testator gave his widow property "on condition that in no case shall she give or bequeath one cent of said estate to any member of my family, or to any relation of her own." The court found this condition void as against public policy on the ground that it was "a most effectual method of restraining all alienation of the property during the life of [the widow], and until such time after her death as it can be definitely ascertained that she committed no breach of the condition in her lifetime."

In Furst v. Lacher, n7 the court found that the following clause created a condition subsequent which allowed the grantee to avoid the claims of creditors when he quitclaimed the property back to Annie Lacher, one of the grantors:

> This conveyance is made subject to the following agreement, to-wit: It is agreed and understood by and between the parties herein named that the above described property shall not be sold or conveyed or in any manner whatsoever encumbered, during the lifetime of either of the grantors herein named. And should the grantee herein named sell, convey or in any manner whatsoever encumber the above described property before the death of either of the Grantors herein named, then and in that case this conveyance shall be null and void and the title to the aforesaid parcels of land shall revert to and be vested in said Annie Lacher, her heirs or assigns.

A common type of restraint on alienation is implicit in the spendthrift trust. A spendthrift trust is:

> [a] trust created to provide a fund for the maintenance of a beneficiary and at the same time to secure the fund against his improvidence or incapacity; provisions against alienation of the trust fund by the voluntary act of the beneficiary or by his creditors are its usual incidents. n8

Spendthrift clauses are void as unlawful restraints on alienation and as against public policy in a few states, but are valid in a majority of states, sometimes subject to some statutory restrictions. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. § 29.02 was written by Dean John Makdisi.

(n2)Footnote 2. W. Barton Leach, Cases and Materials on the Law of Future Interests 944 (2d ed. 1940).

(n3)Footnote 3. Cusick v. Meyer, 863 P.2d 486 (Or. App. 1993) (condition subsequent was valid which allowed grantor to regain possession of a portion of land if the grantor partitioned the property within a certain time period).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Drayson v. Wolff, 661 N.E.2d 486 (Ill. App. 1996).

(n5)Footnote 4. Loveland v. CSX Transp., 622 So. 2d 1120 (Fla. App. 1993) (condition subsequent was valid which required land to revert to the grantor if used for purposes other than that of maintaining a railroad).

(n6)Footnote 5. Id. at 944-945.

(n7)Footnote 6. 71 N.W. 682 (Minn. 1897).

(n8)Footnote 7. 182 N.W. 720 (Minn. 1921)

(n9)Footnote 8. Black's Law Dictionary 1400 (6th ed. 1990).

(n10)Footnote 9. Eugene Scoles & Edward C. Halbach, Jr., Problems and Materials on Decedents' Estates and Trusts 460 (4th ed. 1987). In re Pearson, 212 B.R. 128 (Bankr. E.D. Va 1997) (Restraint on alienation of the right to receive the principal from [a spendthrift trust] is effective until the principal is no longer in the hands of the trustee.); Burns v. Miller, Hiersche, Martens, & Hayward, P.C., 948 S.W.2d 317 (Tex. App. 1997) (Texas courts have long upheld restraints on alienation in spendthrift trusts.); Domo v. McCarthy, 612 N.E.2d 706 (Ohio 1993) (Spendthrift provision of trust given full force and effect). Patricia E. Dilley, Hidden in Plain View: The Pension Shield Against Creditors, 74 Ind. L.J. 355 (1999); Eric Henzy, Offshore and "Other" Shore Asset Protection Trusts, 32 Vand.J. Transna'l L. 739 (1999); In re Orr, 180 F.3d 656 (5th Cir. 1999); Veit, Jeremy M., Self-Settled Spendthrift Trusts and the Alaska Trust Act: Has Alaska Moved Offshore?, Jeremy M. Veit, 16 Alaska L. Rev. 269 (1999).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 29.03

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.03 History of Restraints on Alienationn10

[Go To Supp]

§ 29.03(a) Restraints on Alienation Under the Common Law

It has been surmised n11 that many of the early enfeoffments were made for the purpose of requiring the feoffee to render personal service, primarily military, to the feoffor. As long as the consideration for the transfer of land was the rendition of future services it was natural to suppose that feoffments were made on condition created to prevent the feoffee from avoiding these requirements of service by transferring the feoff to another. Restraints on alienation were therefore undoubtedly a permanent feature of the early feudal land law. But as the common law flowered through quia emptores terrorum n12 and as the fee simple became freely alienable the right of alienation became an integral part of the fee simple. n13 Such restriction has nothing to do with the rule against perpetuities, but some courts apply the same limitations to such a provision if extended over what is considered an unreasonable period of time. n14

Under the feudal law, conditions in restraint of alienation were good wherever the grantor had the reversion. The feudal lord had the reversion. Upon the death of the lord's grantee without heirs, the land reverted to the grantor or lord from whom it proceeded. "The grantee, during the whole period from the Conquest down to the 18 Edward I, when the statute of quia emptores was passed, could not alien his land without the license or consent of the lord, who was the owner of his reversionary interest." n15 This statute provided that from henceforth it shall be lawful for any freeman to sell at his own pleasure his lands and tenements, or part of them, so that the feoffee shall hold the same lands and tenements of the chief lord of the same fee, by such service and customs as the feoffor held before. The effect of this statute was to change the tenure from the immediate to the superior lord, from the grantor to the king. It deprived the ordinary grantor of all power to impose any restraint on alienation. The statute did not apply to the king. n16

The feudal law further imposed a limitation upon alienation by the idea of homage. Seisin involved not merely the idea of possession and therefore title but also the requirement of loyalty to the liege lord. Seisin was therefore not merely a title concept but also an ethical relationship. n17 This relationship could not be shed by a transfer to another without the lord's consent. But, by the time of Bracton, homage as well as possession could be transferred, n18 unless the terms of the feoffment had prevented alienation n19 and, by the time of Littleton, an absolute restraint on alienation was void as repugnant to the fee. n20 But partial restraints were valid. n21 So inseparable did this right of alienation become that, said the common law, any attempt to absolutely prevent the alienation even for a single hour was void. n22 This became a rule of law protected as a fundamental public policy to permit the free flow of land in commerce. n23

Although Coke had indicated that conditions against at least partial alienation were still permissible in his time this ceased to be the law. As evidence of the cliche that the English feudal law was what the eighteenth century lawyers thought it had been, the common law developed to the point that any absolute restraint on alienation was as repugnant to the fee, wholly void. n24 This is purely a matter of public policy. The historical reasons have been forgotten. So the rule is applicable in those states where quia emptores terrorum never became part of the common law. n25

§ 29.03(b) Restraints on Alienation in the American States

While the force of the rule against restraints on alienation is everywhere recognized in the United States its common-law application is by no means uniform. In Kentucky, and formerly Nebraska, n26 a doctrine of reasonable restraints is followed. n27 Some states rigidly apply the restraints rule. Others permit limited restraints n28 and still others permit conditions against alienation. n29

The law in the United States became confused when the 1828 New York code provided "the absolute power of alienation, shall not be suspended by any limitation or condition whatever, for a longer period than during the continuance of not more than two lives in being at the creation of the estate, except in the single case mentioned in the next section." n30 This, with variations, was adopted by other states. It had the effect of permitting an absolute limitation on alienation for a limited period. n31 As is elsewhere shown, the courts came to realize that this language embraced two concepts, the rule against remoteness of vesting and the rule against restraints on alienation. n32

As mentioned, the New York Code contemplated that every future estate should be void in its creation which suspended the absolute power of alienation for more than two lives in being. It also provided that the absolute power of alienation should not be suspended by any limitation or condition for longer than two lives in being. This has had the effect of permitting restraints on alienation for a period of two lives in being but no longer. No suspension for any period of time in gross is permitted, however. n33

Other states have followed the New York pattern of statutes contemplating "restraints on alienation" but the results have not been the same. California indicated that her statute enlarged the time for restraints on alienation but did not affect the rule against remoteness of vesting. n34 The California statute has now been repealed. n35 The courts have divided as to whether a provision in a mortgage accelerating the debt upon alienation is or is not a restraint. n36 Arizona, n37 Idaho, n38 Michigan, n39 Minnesota, n40 Montana, n41 North Dakota, n42 Oklahoma, n43 South Dakota, n44 Wisconsin, n45 all have statutory provisions for "restraints on alienations."

Under the leading rule any provision of a will or deed requiring the consent of any person other than owner, trustee or beneficiary as a condition for the sale of real estate is an illegal restraint on alienation. n46 Most of the cases, however, take the position that the right of alienation has been an inseparable incident to an estate in fee ever since the statute quia emptores. n47 In some states conditions against alienation of fee simple estates are void, n48 even though they are but for a limited time. n49

A will provision violating the statute prohibiting restraints on alienation was void as against public policy. n50

Other cases permit, as restraints on alienation, conditions which are limited to specified times, persons or purposes. n51 Some states uphold a condition against alienation which terminates the estate. n52 And the rule has been applied to fees only so that restraints may be affixed to life estates. n53 The majority rule today, however, permits restraints on alienation of legal interests. n54

Thus, a restriction in a deed to a father and son as joint tenants that neither shall sell or encumber the property without the consent of the other has been held void as constituting a restraint on the inherent right of alienation. n55 Under the common-law rule no restriction can be imposed upon a fee simple estate, and any attempt to limit or restrict the right of the owner of such estate for a single hour is repugnant to the estate and void. n56 So, in some states, the absolute power of alienation cannot be suspended by any limitation or condition for a longer period than during the continuance of two lives in being at the creation of the estate, and that such suspension occurs when there are no persons in being by whom an absolute interest in possession can be conveyed. n57 A provision restraining the grantee from offering or attempting to alienate is ordinarily void for uncertainty, n58 as is a clause prohibiting the grantee from conveying without the consent of the grantor. n59

A provision that property shall not be mortgaged or conveyed without the consent of named persons is a void restraint on alienation. n60 After an absolute conveyance in fee simple a clause providing that the grantee shall not mortgage or dispose of the property is repugnant and void, n61 as is a clause that the grantee shall not offer to mortgage or suffer a fine or recovery. n62

Under this doctrine one's estate in real property is that which one can sell or dispose of at pleasure or what one can pass on to another. n63 The owner of a fee-simple estate in land possesses certain rights that are incidental to such estate. Among these are the right to use and dispose of the estate, the latter being an inseparable incident of such estate. A fee simple estate and a restraint upon its alienation cannot in their nature coexist. Such a condition is clearly repugnant to the grant in fee simple. n64 So, unlimited power of alienation is one of the essential incidents of a fee-simple estate n65 and, conversely, an unlimited condition in restraint of alienation attached to a grant in fee is void. n66

Some cases hold that, if the restraints are limited in time and reasonable in application, they are valid. n67 One who owns a fee simple in real property has an estate that may last forever, having no termination; an estate which one may dispose of as one chooses, by will, deed or otherwise, and one descendible, not to some of one's heirs, but to any and all of the heirs one may have. n68 It has been held that a provision in a will prohibiting or postponing partition for a reasonable time or until the happening of a prescribed event is not a restraint on alienation, or a limitation repugnant to a fee. n69 It must not be understood from this that a fee simple estate is one free from the limited restraints which the law imposes on alienation, such as a limitation of the amount of land one may devise for charitable purposes, disposition in defraud of creditors, sale during the pendency of an action involving the title, and conveyances in derogation of the rights of dower, curtesy and homestead.

A permanent first call on the right to sell or lease is an invalid restraint on alienation. n70 A similar rule has been applied to options. n71 An attempt to restrict the sale of real estate by a provision in the deed when title is vested in fee is void as repugnant to the purpose of the grant. n72 Where the owners of an interest in realty conveyed such interest but, by agreement in the deed retained an interest in the realty, it was held that such retained interest would support the imposition on alienation where it was reasonably necessary to protect the interest retained. n73

Even where not void, agreements restricting the right to alienate or to make provision for any person by will are within the Statute of Frauds. n74

A condominium requirement that one who leases to sell must give a first call to the association is not an illegal restraint against alienation. n75

A contractual right granted by a person, and heirs and assignees, unlimited as to the time to purchase land on the same terms as the owner could and would observe, is void as a restraint on alienation. n76

An option violates the rule against remoteness of vesting where the parties had intended to exercise the option, if at all, only on the current contingency and that there was a possibility that the contingency might not occur within lives in being plus twenty-one years. n77

Some courts have distinguished between options appurtenant to leases which would not violate the rule and those which are independent which are held to be subject to the rule. n78

An implied covenant not to partition is not void as a restraint on alienation. n79

The Restatement of Property classifies restraints on alienation into disabling restraints, forfeiture restraints and promissory restraints. n80 The public policy against restraints on alienation has sometimes taken on a constitutional aspect extending to legislation. n81

If an invalid restraint on alienation is so interwoven with the deed as to constitute a part thereof, the grant itself is a defeasible estate. n82

The courts are divided as to the validity of clauses in mortgages purporting to give the mortgagee the right to accelerate the indebtedness on sale of the mortgage premises. n83

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: restraint! w/2 alienation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 10. See Ralph Norvell, The Power of Alienation: Direct Restraint v. Suspension, 31 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 894 (1956); Merrill I. Schnebly, Restraints Upon the Alienation of Legal Interests, 44 Yale L.J. 960 (1935).

See Richard E. Manning, The Development of Restraints on Alienation Since Gray, 48 Harv. L. Rev. 373 (1935); Jack J. Rappeport, The Equitable Separate Estate and Restraints on Anticipation, Its Modern Significance, 11 Miami L.Q. 85 (1957); Herbert A. Bernhard, The Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation, 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173 (1959); Direct Restraints on Alienation of Property in Mississippi, 34 Miss. L.J. 333 (1963).

See also Oliver E. Laymon, The Residence Requirement -- Indirect Restraint on Alienation?, 17 S.D.L. Rev. 327 (1972); Ronald R. Volkmer, The Application of the Restraints on Alienation Doctrine to Real Property Security Interests, 58 Iowa L. Rev. 747 (1973).

Distinguishing between rule against restraints and rule against remoteness. Davies v. McDowell, 549 S.W.2d 619 (Mo. App. 1977).

A fee upon condition subsequent providing for forfeiture is not an illegal restraint on alienation. Floyd v. Hoover, 234 S.E.2d 89 (Ga. App. 1977).

See Bernhard, The Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation, 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173; Direct Restraints on Alienation in Iowa, 22 Drake L. Rev. 342. Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. App. 1999).

(n2)Footnote 11. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852).

(n3)Footnote 12. 18 Edw.

(n4)Footnote 13. Coke on Littleton, § 201 b. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries, ch. 7. See John Dalrymple, An Essary Toward a General History of Fendal Property in Great Britian (3d ed. 1758) ch. 384.

"This is a principle founded in natural law." Aristotle has it that, "It is the definition of property to have in one's self the power of alienation." Grotius said: "Since the establishment of property, men who are masters of their own goods have by the law of nature the power of disposing of or of transferring all or any part of their effects to other persons, for this is the very nature of property, -- I mean of full and complete property." Grotius, b. 1, ch. 6, § 1. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852).

Holding that a vested remainder after an income trust for the life of another can be made inalienable by the donor. In re Vought's Estate, 250 N.E.2d 343 (N.Y. 1969).

Free alienation of property is one of the essential ownerships of common-law property. Board of County Comm'rs Pitkin County v. Pfeifer, 546 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1976).

(n5)Footnote 14. Howell v. Deady, 48 F. Supp. 104 (D. Or. 1939).

(n6)Footnote 15. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467, (1852).

> Restraints upon alienation of lands held in fee simple were of feudal origin. A feoffment in fee did not originally pass an estate in the sense in which we now understand it. The purchaser took only an usufructuary interest, without the power of alienation in prejudice of the heir, or of the lord. In default of heirs, the tenure became extinct, and the land reverted to the lord. The heir took by purchase and independent of the ancestor, who could not alien, nor could the lord alien the seigniory without the consent of the tenant. This restraint on alienation was a violent and unnatural state of things, contrary to the nature and value of the property, and the inherent and universal love of independence. It arose partly from favor to the heir, and partly from favor to the lord; and the genius of the feudal system was originally so strong in favor of restraint upon alienation that, by a general ordinance mentioned in the Book of Feifs, the hand of him who wrote a deed of alienation was directed to be struck off... . All the land in the kingdom is supposed, says Blackstone, to be holden mediately or immediately of the king, who is styled the lord paramount, or above all. Such tenants as held under the king immediately, when they granted out portions of their lands to inferior persons, became also lords with respect to those inferior persons, as they were still tenants with respect to the king, and, thus partaking of a middle nature, were called mesne or middle lords. So that, if the king granted a manor to A, and he granted a portion of the land to B, now B was said to hold of A, and A of the king; or, in other words, B held his lands immediately of A, but mediately of the king. The king, therefore, was styled lord paramount; A was both tenant and lord, or was a mesne lord, and B was called tenant paravail, or the lowest tenant, being he who was supposed to make avail or profit of the land. Out of the feudal tenures or holdings sprung certain rights and incidents, among which were fealty and escheat. Both these were incidents of socage tenure, of which alone it is necessary to speak. Fealty was the obligation of fidelity which the tenant owed to his lord. Escheat was the reversion of the estate on a grant in fee simple upon a failure of the heirs of the owner. Fealty was annexed to and attendant on the reversion. They were inseparable. These incidents of feudal tenure belonged to the lord of whom the lands were immediately holden; that is to say, to him of whom the owner for the time being purchased.

(n7)Footnote 16. Other cases recognized the force of quia emptores or the rule against restraint on alienation. So the statute quia emptores was never in force in New York, and restraints upon alienation could be made until July 4, 1776, from which time the statutes of 1779 and 1787 took effect retrospectively. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852).

(n8)Footnote 17. Kenelm Edward Digby, An Introduction to the Law of History of Real Property (9th ed. 1892), 157, so in Magna Carta.

(n9)Footnote 18. Bracton, Lib. 11, cap. 19, fol. 18.

(n10)Footnote 19. Bracton, Lib. 11, cap. 19, fol. 45. "If a feoffment be made upon this condition that the feoffee shall not alien the land to any, this condition is void, because, when a man is so enfeoffed of lands or tenements, he hath power to alien them to any person by the law. For if such a condition should be good, then the condition should oust him of all power which the law gives him, which should be against reason and therefore such a condition is void." Littleton, Tenures, § 360; Coke on Littleton, § 222b.

(n11)Footnote 20. Littleton, Tenures, § 361.

(n12)Footnote 21. Littleton, Tenures, § 361; Coke on Littleton, § 233b, mentioning restraints on alienation to religious men and Jews since this was mortmain.

(n13)Footnote 22. Littleton, Tenures, § 263, indicated that a condition could not be imposed against alienation. Similar early decisions appear in Chudleigh's case, 1 Coke 120a, 1 Coke 131 b.

Littleton held that conditions against alienation of estates in fee were void.

Tenures, § 360, unless they merely prohibited alienation to certain persons or the like in which case the condition did not take away all power of alienation, § 361. And conditions against alienation of fee lands were good, § 362. But Coke insisted that this could not prevent the suffering of a common recovery. Coke on Littleton, § 224a.

Disabling restraint on alienation invalid though only for a limited time. Page v. Page, 394 P.2d 612 (Utah 1964).

A covenant of first refusal is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Gilmore v. Letcher, 508 S.W.2d 257 (Mo. App. 1974). Emmons v. Trout Lake Club, Inc., 605 N.Y.S.2d 169 (1993) (Right of first refusal is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation.); Gore v. Beren, 867 P.2d 330 (Kan. 1994) (Right of first refusal did not violate rule against perpetuities).

(n14)Footnote 23. See Digby, supra, note 15 at 157-168, 234-236.

Any attempt to annex a general restriction on alienation to a gift of any property is void as being repugnant to the gift. Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Real Property (17th ed.), 88. In re Dugdale, 38 Ch. Div. 176.

See Everett Fraser, The Rule Against Restraints on Alienation and Against Suspension of the Absolute Power of Alienation in Minnesota, 8 Minn. L. Rev. 185, 295, 9 Minn. L. Rev. 314 (1925); Edwin C. Goddard, Perpetuity Statutes, 22 Mich. L. Rev. 95 (1923); Ralph E. Kharas, Trusts and the Suspension of the Power of Alienation in New York, 13 N.Y.U. L.Q. Rev. 191 (1936); Manning, The Development of Restraints on Alienation since Gray, 48 Harv. L. Rev. 373 (1935); Rundell, Perpetuities in Personal Property in Wisconsin, 4 Wis. L. Rev. 1 (1935); Oliver S. Rundell, The Suspension of the Absolute Power of Alienation, 19 Mich. L. Rev. 235 (1921); Louisa Barcroft Runk, American Statutory Modifications of the Rule Against Perpetuities of Trusts for Accumulations and of Spendthrift Trusts, 80 U. Pa. L. Rev. 397 (1932); Merrill I. Schnebly, Restraints Upon the Alienation of Legal Interests, 44 Yale L.J. 961 (1935); Lowell Turrentine, Suggestions for Revision of Provisions of the California Civil Code Regarding Future Interests, 21 Cal. L. Rev. 1 (1933); William Walsh, Indestructible Trusts as Perpetuities in New York, 43 Yale L.J. 1211; Horace E. Whiteside. Suspension of the Power of Alienation in New York, 13 Cornell L.Q. 31, 167 (1928).

Absolute restraint on alienation for life is valid, and implying a right of re-entry where attempted alienation. Atkinson v. Kish, 420 S.W.2d 104 (Ky. 1967).

Sustaining restraint on alienation as designed to obtain or encourage acceptance of social or economic end. Baker v. Loves Park Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 333 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. 1975).

Holding absolute restraint of power of alienation of life estate is void. Miller v. O'Neil, 361 N.E.2d 1165 (Ill. App. 1977).

Inhibition against alienation reserved in a deed is repugnant to the fee. Floyd v. Hoover, 234 S.E.2d 89 (Ga. App. 1977).

(n15)Footnote 24. Wright v. Pritchett, 102 S.E.2d 602 (Ga. 1958); Thompson v. Murphy, 37 N.E. 1094 (Ind. 1894); Morse v. Blood, 71 N.W. 682 (Minn. 1897); Diamond v. Rotan, 124 S.W. 196 (Tex. Civ. App. 1909); Bergin v. Bergin, 312 S.W.2d 409 (Tex. Civ. App. 1958); Kitchens v. Kitchens, 372 S.W.2d 249 (Tex. Civ. App. 1964).

A void restraint was found. La Sala v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 489 P.2d 1113 (Cal. 1971); Cherry v. Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 81 Cal. Rptr. 135 (1969).

Public policy against restraints on alienation. Ambrose v. First Nat'l Bank of Nev., 482 P.2d 828 (Nev. 1971).

General restraints on alienation are void as against public policy. Southwestern Bell Tel. Co. v. Gravitt, 551 S.W.2d 421 (Tex. Civ. App. 1976).

Direct Restraints on Alienation in Iowa, 22 Drake L. Rev. 342 (1973). Robbins v. HNG Oil Co., 878 S.W.2d 351 (Tex. App. 1994) (Restraints on alienation are contrary to public policy and forbidden and disallowed).

(n16)Footnote 25. "But the case before us, is the devise of an absolute fee, with a clause restraining the alienation and incumbering of the estate for a limited period, intended, no doubt, for the protection of the devisees, who alone are interested in the estate devised. In holding that such restraint is repugnant to the nature of the estate devised, and is void as against public policy, which in this state, in the interest of trade and commerce, gives to every absolute owner of property, who is sui Juris, the power to control and dispose of such property, and subjects the same to the payment of his debts, we are fully aware of the fact that many authorities may and have been cited to the contrary. Others, however, support the view we have taken, but I shall not attempt either to review or reconcile the cases, being content to rest the decision upon what we conceive to be sound principle and sound policy. The owner of property cannot transfer it absolutely to another, and at the same time keep it himself. We fully admit that he may restrain or limit its enjoyment by trusts, conditions or covenants, but we deny that he can take from a fee simple estate its inherent alienable quality, and still transfer it a fee simple." Anderson v. Cary, 36 Ohio St. 506 (1881).

In re Budd's Estate, 105 N.W.2d 358 (Wis. 1960) (limit. in a devise against sale for five years held void).

(n17)Footnote 26. Kentland Coal & Coke Co. v. Keen, 183 S.W. 247 (Ky. 1916); Hiles v. Benton, 196 N.W. 903 (Neb. 1924); Andrews v. Hall, 58 N.W.2d 201 (Neb. 1953) (partial restraint on alienation doctrine now repudiated based on public policy).

(n18)Footnote 27. Cotney v. Eason, 113 So. 2d 512 (Ala. 1959) (provision for termination of life estate and to go to testator's heirs if life estate was sold was valid). Catholic Bishop of Chicago v. Murr, 120 N.E.2d 4 (Ill. 1954). See § 2016.

Gift of life estate without right of alienation without consent of children together with residuary clause carrying the remainder, created a fee simple absolute with no restraint on alienation permitted. Harvey v. Smith, 305 P.2d 718 (Cal. App. 1957).

(n19)Footnote 28. Bergin v. Bergin, 315 S.W.2d 943 (Tex. 1958) (there could be a restriction on alienation in a bequest of stock).

Denying the reasonable restraints on alienation. Andrews v. Hall, 58 N.W.2d 201 (Neb. 1953).

See Herbert A. Bernhard, The Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation, 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173 (1959). Wonsey v. Life Ins. Co. of North America, No. 98-40239, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20744, at *1 (S.D. Mich. Dec. 18, 1998) (Michigan held assignment of periodic payments pursuant to an annuity contract to be a fair restraint on alienation); Johnson v. First Colony Life Ins. Co., F. Supp. 2d 1227 (W.D. Cal. 1998) (California upheld nonassignability clause prohibiting assignment of right to receive proceeds of a contract as a valid restraint in denying summary judgment); Mardis v. Brantley, 717 So. 2d 702, (La. Ct. App. 1998) (In dictum, Louisiana court stated that persons who benefit from a restraint may enforce it in equity for injunctive relief).

(n20)Footnote 29. Los Angeles Inv. Co. v. Gary, 186 P. 596, (Cal. 1919); Littlejohns v. Henderson, 295 P. 95 (Cal. App. 1931); Parmalee v. Morris, 188 N.W. 330 (Mich. 1922).

A covenant against resale of realty without consent of adjoining lots is not an invalid absolute restraint on alienation. Ink v. Plott, 175 N.E.2d 94 (Ohio 1960).

Strict construction against restraints on alienation or assignment. Chertkof v. Southlands Corp., 371 A.2d 124 (Md. 1977).

(n21)Footnote 30. New York Rev. Stat. 1829, pt. 2, ch. 4, t. 4.

Relating perpetuities to restraints on alienation. Robinson v. Speer, 185 So. 2d 730 (Fla. 1966).

Free alienation of property is one of the essentials of common-law property ownership. Board of County Comm'rs of Pitkin County v. Pfeifer, 546 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1976).

(n22)Footnote 31. "The view that there was no such general New York rule as ... Vesting, appears to have been based upon a supposition that at the time when the Revisers were framing, and the Legislature enacting, the sections of the Revised Statutes which deal with these matters, it was still generally thought that the common-law Rule against Perpetuities was confined to a requirement, by the end of a term prescribed by law, of absolute alienability, and that it was only later that it came to be recognized that the Rule was a rule against remoteness of vesting." Chaplin, Suspension of the Power of Alienation (3d Ed.) §§ 2-4.

New York has held that a restraint on alienation imposed a vested remainder limited upon an entrusted life estate. In re Vought's Estate, 250 N.E.2d 343 (N.Y. 1969).

Restraint provision in a mortgage restricting the sale of property was a valid restraint on alienation. Baker v. Loves Park Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 333 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. 1975).

Holding the due on alienation clause in mortgages as an unreasonable restraint on alienation without a showing of necessity of protection of the mortgagee's legitimate interests. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

(n23)Footnote 32. In re Sahlender's Estate, 201 P.2d 69 (Cal. App. 1948); Rodey v. Stotz, 273 N.W. 404 (Mich. 1937); Buck v. Walker, 132 N.W. 205 (Minn. 1911); In re Wilcox, 87 N.E. 497 (N.Y. 1909); Gange v. Hayes, 237 P.2d 196 (Or. 1951) (distinguishing between restraints on alienation and rule against perpetuities).

Distinguishing between the rule against remoteness of vesting and the rule against restraints on alienation. Atchison v. Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970).

Holding that a vested remainder after a life estate in trust is inalienable if the donor expressly so provided. In re Vought's Estate, 250 N.E.2d 343 (N.Y. 1969).

Mississippi has a common-law rule against remoteness plus a statute controlling restraints on alienation of life estates. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

The District of Columbia has both a statute against perpetuities and the common-law rule against perpetuities. In re Burrough's Estate, 521 F.2d 277 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

Held that a statute permitting absolute restraints for a reasonable period on alienation was intended to cover remoteness of vesting, restated the common law and did not repeal the common-law rule against unreasonable restraints and power of alienation but that an absolute restraint for life was unreasonable. Robertson v. Simmons, 322 S.W.2d 476 (Ky. 1959).

(n24)Footnote 33. Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N.Y. 298 (1861); Kalish v. Kalish, 59 N.E. 917 (N.Y. 1901); Smith v. Chesebrough, 68 N.E. 625 (N.Y. 1903); In re Hitchcock's Will, 118 N.E. 220 (N.Y. 1917).

New York is not definite as to the effect of limitations on assignment of trust principal. Affirmative as valid, In re Vought's Estate, 293 N.Y.S.2d 34 (1967), but see Schrader v. Smith, 169 N.Y.S.2d 797 (1958). Carroll v. Eno, 654 N.Y.S.2d 368 (1997).

(n25)Footnote 34. Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1872, 715, 716, 770, 772, 773, 777. In re McCray's Estate, 268 P. 647 (Cal. 1928), rev'd, P. 940 (Cal. App. 1927). In re Hinckley's Estate, 58 Cal. 457 (1881), California before the statute, had and now has the common law.

See Robert H. Gerdes, Perpetuities and the California Rule Against Suspension of the Absolute Power of Alienation, 16 Cal. L. Rev. 81; Wesley N. Hohfeld, The Need of Remedial Legislation in the California Law of Trusts and Perpetuities, 1 Cal. L. Rev. 305 (1913).

But the power to alienate is not suspended if there are persons in being who can join to alienate. Toland v. Toland, 55 P. 681 (Cal. 1898); In re Campbell's Estate, 87 P. 573 (Cal. 1906); In re Phelp's Estate, 190 P. 17 (Cal. 1920).

A provision of the California Constitution which prohibits the state from limiting the right of any person to alienate as he in his absolute discretion chooses, violates the 14th Amendment of the Constitution and is invalid. Mulkey v. Reitman, 13 P.2d 825 (Cal. App. 1966), aff'd Reitman v. Mulkey, 387 U.S. 369 (1967).

(n26)Footnote 35. Cal. Stat. 1951, ch. 1463, § 7.

Restraint on alienation is statutory. Dallapi v. Campbell, 114 P.2d 646 (Cal. App. 1941).

Lacking any danger to the security or frustration of purpose, a due on sale clause could not be enforced. Fidelity Land Dev. Corp. v. Reider & Sons, 377 A.2d 691 (N.J. Super. 1977).

See Connie B. Leonis, The Due-On-Sale Clause as a Reasonable Restraint on Alienation -- Proposal for Texas. 8 St. Mary's L.J. 514 (1976); Philip S. Ashley Use of clauses "due on" to gain collateral benefits: A Common Sense Defense, 10 Tulsa L.J. 590 (1975).

(n27)Footnote 36. Held a restraint on alienation. Tucker v. Lassen Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 526 P.2d 1169 (Cal. 1974); Baker v. Loves Park Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 333 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. 1975); Coast Bank v. Minderhout, 392 P.2d 265 (Cal. 1964).

Held not a restraint on alienation. Board of Church Erection Fund v. First Presbyterian Church, 53 P. 671 (Wash. 1898); Baltimore Life Ins. Co. v. Harn, 486 P.2d 190 (Ariz. App. 1971); Tucker v. Pulaski Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 481 S.W.2d 725 (Ark. 1972); Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 205 N.W.2d 762 (Wis. 1973).

Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Strand, 876 P.2d 1362 (Kan. 1994) (Due on sale clause in mortgage held not a restraint on alienation).

"Due on sale" held an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Tucker v. Lassen Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 526 P.2d 1169 (Cal. 1974).

See Geoffrey S. Mombach & Robert Levin, Debt Acceleration on Transfer of Mortgaged Property, 29 U. Miami L. Rev. 584 (1975); Ronald R. Volkmer, The Application of the Restraints on Alienation Doctrine to Real Property Security Interests, 58 Iowa L. Rev. 747 (1973); Deeds of Trust -- Restraints Against Alienation -- "Due on" Clause is an Unreasonable Restraint on Alienation, Absent a Showing of Protection of Mortgagee's Legitimate Interests, 47 Miss. L.J. 331 (1976).

"Due on sale" provision in a mortgage held enforceable without a showing that foreclosure is necessary to protect security. Wellenkamp v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n, 137 Cal. Rptr. 488 (1977).

Due on sale clauses are void in Michigan as unreasonable restraint in alienation. Nickols v. Ann Arbor Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 250 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. 1977).

Refusing to permit enforcement of due on sale clause in mortgage. Continental Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Fetter, 564 P.2d 1013 (Okla. 1977) (court found transfer fee charged was unreasonable and see cases cited).

"Due on sale" upheld. Ashley v. Leitch, 533 S.W.2d 831 (Tex. Civ. App. 1976).

Due on sale clause upheld only where transfer increased lender's risk. Bellingham First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Garrison, 553 P.2d 1090 (Wash. 1976).

See also Robert William Cherry, Jr. Mortgages -- Use of Due on Sale Clause by a Lender Is Not a Restraint on Alienation in North Carolina, 55 N.C.L. Rev. 310 (1977).

Holding that restraints on alienations in mortgages are not invalid per se but valid only if reasonable under the circumstances. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

Mortgage "due on sale" applicable only where security threatened. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Britton, 345 So. 2d 300 (Ala. App. 1977).

Due on sale provision in mortgage held a restraint on alienation. Nichols v. Ann Arbor Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 250 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. App. 1977).

Due on sale valid only if security risk is increased by transfer. Bellingham First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Garrison, 553 P.2d 1090 (Wash. 1976).

Due on sale clause held valid. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 205 N.W.2d 762 (Wis. 1973); Baker v. Love's Parks Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 333 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. 1975).

See Richard W. Barke & Iona I. Tagaropulos Michigan's Looking Glass World of Due on Sale Clauses, 24 Wayne L. Rev. 971 (1978); Herbert A. Bernhard, The Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation, 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173 (1959); William M. Flaherty, Illinois Land Trusts and the Due-On-Sale Clause, 65 Ill. B.J. 376 (1977); Griffith L. Humphrey, Tucker v. Larson -- The Demise of the Due on Sale Clause in California? 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 665 (1976); Ronald R. Volkmer, The Application of the Restraints on Alienation Doctrine to Real Property Security Interests, 58 Iowa L. Rev. 747-804 (1973); Bernie Wolfe, Beyond Tucker v. Lassen: The Future of the Due on Sale

Clause of California, 27 Hastings L.J. 475 (1975); Mortgages--Use of Due On Sale Clause by a Lender Is Not a Restraint on Alienation in North Carolina, 55 N.C. L. Rev. 310; Kathy Agan Knox The Due On Sale Clause: A Preemptive Controversy, 10 Loyola L. L.A. Rev. 629 (1977); Connie B. Leonis, The Due-On-Sale Clause as a Reasonable Restraint on Alienation -- Proposal for Texas, 8 St. Mary's L. Rev. 514 (1976).

(n28)Footnote 37. Ariz. Rev. Code 1928, §§ 2761-2765, 2768. Originally this came from Wisconsin. Lowell v. Lowell, 240 P. 280 (Ariz. 1925) (two lives in being and 21 years thereafter except as to charitable and public trusts).

(n29)Footnote 38. Idaho Code 1932, §§ 54-111, 54-202 (lives in being).

A restraint on alienation of the right of a beneficiary to receive immediately the principal of a trust was void. Ullman v. Cameron, 78 N.E. 1074 (N.Y. 1906).

(n30)Footnote 39. Mich. Rev. Stat. 1846, ch. 14, §§ 14-16, 20; Mich. Comp. Laws 1929, §§ 12934-12936, 12940, 12943 (two lives in fee but a contingent remainder on a prior remainder in fee to take effect before reaching 21 by the first remainderman, is valid).

Alienation is not suspended if all in being can convey. Cary v. Toles, 177 N.W. 279 (Mich. 1920); Russell v. Musson, 216 N.W. 428 (Mich. 1927).

(n31)Footnote 40. Minn. Stat. 1927, §§ 8044, 8046, 8050, 8053 (two lives in being plus minority thereafter).

Alienation not suspended if all in being can convey. Buck v. Walker, 132 N.W. 205 (Minn. 1911); Mineral Land Inv. Co. v. Bishop Iron Co., 159 N.W. 966 (Minn. 1916); Larson v. Johnson, 221 N.W. 871 (Minn. 1928).

Minn. Stat. § 500.13. Absolute power of alienation may not be suspended for longer than two lives except a contingent remainder may be limited on death or other contingency before 18.

(n32)Footnote 41. Mont. Rev. Code 1921, §§ 6732-6735, 6738 (lives in being plus minorities).

(n33)Footnote 42. N.D. Laws 1933, ch. 203.

N.D. Cent. Code. Absolute power of alienation not suspended longer than lives in being and 21 years, § 47-02-27.

Restraints on alienation repugnant to the interest created are void, § 47-02-26.

N.D. Cent. Code. Alienation is suspended when there are no existing persons who can convey, § 47-02-31.

(n34)Footnote 43. Okla. Stat. §§ 11756, 11757, 11759, 11760 (lives in being plus minority).

See Garrett Logan, Oklahoma Perpetuities and Such, 7 Tulsa L.J. 5 (1971).

Okla. Stat. Ann. Absolute power of alienation suspension prohibited beyond lives in being, § 60-31.

But a contingent remainder in fee may be limited on death or other contingency before majority.

Restraints on alienation arising by contract are void if there is no forfeiture clause (dictum). Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975) (enforcing forfeiture clause).

(n35)Footnote 44. S.D. Comp. Laws §§ 294, 295, 320-323, 326 (lives in being plus minority).

(n36)Footnote 45. Wis. Stat. now §§ 230.14, 230.15 (lives in being plus 30 years).

Until 1925 (Wis. Stat. § 230.14) in Wisconsin, neither the rule against remoteness nor against restraints on alienation was applicable to personalty. Dodge v. Williams, 50 N.W. 1103 (Wis. 1879); Becker v. Chester, 91 N.W. 87 (Wis. 1902).

(n37)Footnote 46. A void restraint was found. La Sala v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 489 P.2d 1113 (Cal. 1971); Cherry v. Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 81 Cal. Rptr. 135 (1969).

Prohibition against alienation in life estate is void. Johnson v. Flanders, 89 S.E.2d 829 (Ga. App. 1955).

Restriction on alienation of stock of a cooperative apartment upheld on the grounds that the restraint was of greater utility to the cooperative than to the damage which could be done to the public interest by reason of the rule against restraint on alienation. Gale v. York Ctr. Community Coop., Inc., 171 N.E.2d 30 (Ill. 1960).

A statute relating to the rule against remoteness does not affect the common-law rule against suspension of the power of alienation. Robertson v. Simmons, 322 S.W.2d 476 (Ky. 1959).

Both direct and indirect restraints which affect the marketability are void. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

Devise on condition that if devisee ever desired to sell, he must give the first call to X limited the right of alienation. Holien v. Trydahl, 134 N.W.2d 851 (N.D. 1965).

Devise to three children not to be sold except by mutual agreement held a void restraint on alienation. Pavlikowski v. Ehrhardt, 161 A.2d 652 (Pa. Super. 1960).

Restraint on alienation until grandchild became 21 was void.

A devise subject to a right of repurchase by a third person is an invalid restraint on alienation and being unlimited also violates the rule against remoteness. Herzog v. Mattern, 359 S.W.2d 86 (Tex. Civ. App. 1962).

Option to repurchase when church was financially able was limited on a life in being and so did not violate the rule against perpetuities, but was an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Trustees of Casa View Assembly of God Church v. Williams, 414 S.W.2d 697 (Tex. Civ. App. 1967).

Not to sell or mortgage deceased husband's real property until A became 21 was a void restriction on alienation of property. Page v. Page, 394 P.2d 612 (Utah 1964).

Provision in a will that devisee was not to sell, mortgage or lease any of the real estate devised for three years without the written agreement of a third party was an invalid restraint on alienation. Ford v. Allen, 526 S.W.2d 643 (Tex. Civ. App. 1975).

Florida prevents only unlimited or absolute restraints. Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629 (1885); Davis v. Geyer, 9 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1942). LaFond v. Rumler, 574 N.W.2d 40 (Mich. App. 1997) (Although the addendum did not restrict plaintiff's right to sell the property, the court found that it unduly restricted her right to sell the property at her chosen price and therefore was an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

(n38)Footnote 47. Coke on Littleton, § 436.Murray v. Green, 28 P. 118 (Cal. 1883) (restraint held void as repugnant); Alderman v. Crenshaw, 66 S.E.2d 265 (Ga. App. 1951) (restraint void); McCleary v. Ellis, 6 N.W. 571 (Iowa 1880); Hutchinson v. Loomis, 244 S.W.2d 751 (Ky. 1951) (forbidding conveyance of realty to anyone except heir of grantor and placing the burden of supporting grantor, providing for forfeiture and reserving life estate, restraint on alienations of realty during life of grantor was reasonable and if unreasonable, restraint was void and deed stood the same as if no restraint on alienations had been imposed and in either event grantee's son took fee); Williams v. Robinson, 36 A.2d 547 (Md. 1944); Kessner v. Phillips, 88 S.W. 66 (Mo. 1905); Loosing v. Loosing, 122 N.W. 707 (Neb. 1909), Watson v. Dalton, 18 N.W.2d 658, 20 N.W.2d 610 (Neb. 1945); Drachenberg v. Drachenberg, 58 A.2d 861 (N.J. Eq. 1948) (conditions against alienation to be strictly construed); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852), Hardy v. Galloway, 15 S.E. 890 (N.C. 1892); Hamilton v. Link-Hellmuth, Inc., 146 N.E.2d 615 (Ohio App. 1957) (restraints on alienation not favored); Grossman v. Hill, 122 A.2d 69 (Pa. 1956) (building restrictions which in effect prevented dividing two lots held void as a restraint on alienation); Knight v. Chicago Corp., 183 S.W.2d 666 (Tex. Civ. App. 1944).

See Percy Bordwell, Alienability and Perpetuities, 22 Iowa L. Rev. 437 (1937); 23 Iowa L. Rev. 1 (1938).

Both direct and indirect restraints which affect the marketability are void. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

See Direct Restraints on Alienation in Iowa, 22 Drake L. Rev. 342 (1933). Anderson & Middleton Lumber Co. v. Quinault Indian Nation, 929 P.2d 379 (Wash. 1996).

(n39)Footnote 48. Littleton, Tenures, § 360. Wills v. Pierce, 67 S.E.2d 239 (Ga. 1951); Alderman v. Crenshaw, 66 S.E.2d 265 (Ga. App. 1951) (even though the grantor and grantee are cotenants); Johnson v. Flanders, 89 N.E.2d 829 (Ga. App. 1955); Clayton v. Burch, 80 S.E.2d 29 (N.C. 1954).

Conveyance on Condition of release of claims as expectant heir was valid. Owens v. Lackey, 25 So. 2d 423 (Ala. 1946).

See William F. Fratcher, Restraints on Alienation of Legal Interests in Michigan Property, 50 Mich. L. Rev. 675 (1952).

Kass v. Lewin, 104 So. 2d 572 (Fla. 1958) (statute preventing the conveyance of certain lands without recording a plat was held an unconstitutional restraint on alienation); Jackson v. Jackson, 113 S.E.2d 766 (Ga. 1960) (limitation not to convey to anyone not bearing the Jackson name was an invalid restraint).

A void restraint was found. La Sala v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 489 P.2d 1113 (Cal. 1971); Cherry v. Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 81 Cal. Rptr. 135 (1969).

(n40)Footnote 49. Wright v. Pritchett, 102 S.E.2d 602 (Ga. 1958); Buckner v. Hawkins, 52 S.E.2d 16 (N.C. 1949); Bergin v. Bergin, 312 S.W.2d 409 (Tex. Civ. App. 1958).

"Who can say whether the time is reasonable, until the question has been settled in the court of last resort; and upon what standard of certainty can the court decide it? Or, depending as it must upon all the peculiar facts and circumstances of each particular case, is the question to be submitted to a jury? The only safe rule of decision is to hold, as I understand the common law for ages to have been, that a condition or restriction which would suspend all power of alienation for a single day, is inconsistent with the estate granted, unreasonable and void." Mandlebaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78 (1874).

Absolute restraints on alienation even for a limited time is void. Hankins v. Mathews, 425 S.W.2d 608 (Tenn. 1968).

A covenant of first refusal is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Gilmore v. Letcher, 508 S.W.2d 257 (Mo. App. 1974).

If the limitation on alienation is so interwoven with the deed as to be part thereof, the deed is treated as defeasible estate and upon alienation the estate terminates. Floyd v. Hoover, 234 S.E.2d 89 (Ga. App. 1977).

(n41)Footnote 50. Schenk v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 377 F. Supp. 477 (1974).

Conditions in restraint of alienation are to be strictly construed in view of the public policy against the same. First United Presbyterian Church v. Christenson, 339 N.E.2d 15 (Ill. 1975).

Holding that restraints on alienations in mortgages are not invalid per se but valid only if reasonable under the circumstances. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

Devise for life with remainders but limitation over if remaindermen sold before 25. Limitation held a void restraint on alienation. Harvey v. Harvey, 524 P.2d 1187 (Kan. 1974).

(n42)Footnote 51. Swain v. Maxwell, 196 S.W.2d 780 (Mo. 1946).

Restraint for life of grantor is reasonable. Frazier v. Combs, 130 S.W. 812 (Ky. 1910); Pond Creek Coal Co. v. Runyan, 170 S.W. 501 (Ky. 1914); Kentland Coal & Coke Co. v. Keen, 183 S.W. 247 (Ky. 1916); Turner v. Lewis, 226 S.W. 367 (Ky. 1920).

Restraint for life of grantee is reasonable. Harkness v. Lisle, 117 S.W. 264 (Ky. 1909); Cropper v. Bowles, 150 S.W. 380 (Ky. 1912); Thurmond v. Thurmond, 228 S.W. 29 (Ky. 1921); Cammack v. Allen, 250 S.W. 963 (Ky. 1923).

Restraint during life tenant's life valid. Lawson v. Lightfoot, 84 S.W. 739 (Ky. 1905). Restraint until grantee reaches a certain age. Stewart v. Brady, 66 Ky. 623 (3 Bush 1868); Wallace v. Smith, 68 S.W. 131 (Ky. 1902); Call v. Shewmaker, 69 S.W. 749 (Ky. 1902); Smith v. Isaacs, 78 S.W. 434 (Ky. 1904). Not to sell for 20 years without other heir's consent. Francis v. Big Sandy Co., 188 S.W. 345 (Ky. 1916); Cooper v. Knuckles, 279 S.W. 1084 (Ky. 1926). Not to sell for 15 years after grantor's death. Speckman v. Meyer, 220 S.W. 529 (Ky. 1920).

Limitation that life estate was not to be subject to claims of creditors was void. Luther v. Patman, 141 S.W.2d 42 (Ark. 1940); Ehrisman v. Sener, 29 A. 719 (Pa. 1894).

Restraint against selling to anyone but grantor's heirs held void. Chappell v. Frick Co., 179 S.W. 203 (Ky. 1915). Restraints void. Saffold v. Wright, 15 S.W.2d 456 (Ky. 1929); Courts v. Courts, 18 S.W.2d 957 (Ky. 1929).

Agreement not to alienate except to grantor's heirs is invalid. In re Vincent's Estate, 324 P.2d 403 (Mont. 1958).

The old Nebraska rule followed Kentucky. Loosing v. Loosing, 122 N.W. 707 (Neb. 1909) (restraint void where for lives of stated persons); Hiles v. Benton, 196 N.W. 903 (Neb. 1924) (life estate); Peters v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 227 N.W. 917 (Neb. 1929) (10 years); Nebraska Nat'l Bank v. Bayer, 243 N.W. 115 (Neb. 1932) (during life of life tenant).

Proviso in absolute gift that devisee could only alienate to daughter was void. In re Jeromo's Will, 166 N.Y.S.2d 959 (1957).

Condition subsequent in deed is not an invalid restraint on alienation. Genet v. Florida East Coast Ry. Co., 150 So. 2d 272 (Fla. App. 1963).

The mere fact that the restriction placed on property makes it less valuable does not constitute an invalid restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Fla. App. 1973).

Restraints on alienation of vested remainder held valid. In re Vought's Estate, 250 N.E.2d 343 (N.Y. 1969).

A direct restraint on alienation of property given to charitable corporation was upheld. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 168 S.E.2d 358 (N.C. 1979).

Condition that property be used only for a charitable purpose was not an invalid restraint. Ohio Soc. for Crippled Children & Adults, Inc. v. McElroy, 191 N.E.2d 543 (Ohio St. 1963).

An agreement with an association of lot owners that membership in the association was a condition precedent to the purchase of a lot. Three objections could prevent membership. It was held an invalid restraint on alienation. Lauderbaugh v. Williams, 186 A.2d 39 (Pa. 1962).

Provision in the declaration of condominium allowing unit owners to lease or rent units no more than a month's rent period of ownership was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Kroop v. Caravelle Condominium, Inc., 323 So. 2d 307 (Fla. App. 1975).

Articles of incorporation which gave corporation option to purchase shares of deceased stockholder was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Genter v. Palmer & Co., 566 P.2d 1358 (Colo. App. 1977).

Restriction as to use by "family" means those related by blood marriage or adoption. Feely v. Birenbaum, 554 S.W.2d 432 (Mo. App. 1977). Lorentzen v. Smith, 5 P.3d 1082 (N.M. Ct. App. 2000) (holding right of first refusal for purchase of land were not unlawful restraints on alienation).

(n43)Footnote 52. Condition subsequent of forfeiture if grantees conveyed or encumbered during lifetime of grantor was valid. Furst v. Lacher, 182 N.W. 720 (Minn. 1921), or to one of colored race; Los Angeles Inv. Co. v. Gary, 186 P. 596 (Cal. 1919); Queensborough Land Co. v. Cazeaux, 67 So. 641 (La. 1915); Koehler v. Rowland, 205 S.W. 217 (Mo. 1918).

(n44)Footnote 53. Ricks v. Riddell, 26 So. 2d 782 (Miss. 1946); Lockyer v. Savage, 2 Str. 947, 93 Eng. Rep. 959.

(n45)Footnote 54. Spendthrift trust held valid. Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U.S. 716 (1875); Broadway Nat'l Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170 (1881).

Spendthrift trust created by the settlor for his own benefit is invalid. Pacific Nat'l Bank v. Windram, 133 Mass. 175 (1882); Brahmey v. Rollins, 179 A. 186 (N.H. 1935).

The mere fact that the restriction placed on property makes it less valuable does not constitute an invalid restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Mo. App. 1973).

See Herbert A. Bernhard, The Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173.

Conditions in restraint of alienation in a will must be stated unequivocally and are strictly construed. Moody v. Moody Nat'l Bank of Galveston, 522 S.W.2d 710 (Tex. Civ. App. 1975).

Leasing restriction in condominium held not an invalid restraint on alienation. Seagate Condominium Ass'n, Inc. v. Duffy, 330 So. 2d 484 (Fla. App. 1976).

Restraints on alienation void only if unreasonable. Carpenter v. Winn, 566 P.2d 370 (Colo. App. 1977). Carey v. Lincoln Loan Co., 998 P.2d 724 (Or. Ct. App. 2000) (prepayment limitation in land sale contract was not a restraint on alienation).

(n46)Footnote 55. Smith v. Smith, 287 N.W. 411 (Mich. 1939). Alaska v. Native Village of Venite Tribal Gov't., 522 U.S. 520 (1998)..

(n47)Footnote 56. Northwest Real Estate Co. v. Serio, 144 A. 245 (Md. 1929); Hall v. Hoak, 36 S.E.2d 567 (Va. 1946). Floyd v. Hoover, 234 S.E.2d 89 (Ga. App. 1977).

(n48)Footnote 57. Defreese v. Lake, 67 N.W. 505 (Mich. 1896); Casgrain v. Hammond, 96 N.W. 510 (Mich. 1903); In re Rong's Estate, 123 N.W. 471, 806 (Minn. 1909); Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N.Y. 298 (1861); Greenland v. Waddell, 22 N.E. 367 (N.Y. 1889); Cross v. United States Trust Co., 30 N.E. 125 (N.Y. 1892); Murphy v. Whitney, 35 N.E. 930 (N.Y. 1894);Schlereth v. Schlereth, 66 N.E. 130 (N.Y. 1903); State ex rel. Analis v. Hunter, 39 N.E.2d 851 (Ohio St. 1942); Bartron v. Codington County, 2 N.W.2d 337 (S.D. 1942); Campbell v. State, 122 P.2d 458 (Wash. 1942); Ford v. Ford, 33 N.W. 188 (Wis. 1887); Lamberton v. Pereles, 58 N.W. 776 (Wis. 1894).

See Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Scott, 189 A. 653 (N.J. Eq. 1937); In re Friday's Estate, 170 A. 123 (Pa. 1933) Mich. Comp. Laws 1929, §§ 12934, 12935; Minn. Stat. Supp. §§ 8044, 8045; Wis. Stat. 1937, §§ 230.14, 230.15.

See Maurice Finkelstein, Notes on the Rule Against Perpetuities in New York 26, St. Johns L. Rev. 245 (1952); 27 St. Johns L. Rev. 291 (1953).

(n49)Footnote 58. Knight v. Chicago Corp., 183 S.W.2d 666 (Tex. Civ. App. 1944); Carson v. Simmons, 96 S.E.2d 800 (Va. 1957).

(n50)Footnote 59. Coke on Littleton, § 223a; William Sheppard, The Touchstone of Common Assurances (6th ed. 1785) 130. See Murray v. Green, 28 P. 118 (Cal. 1883); Bassett v. Budlong, 43 N.W. 984 (Mich. 1889).

Any annuity which may be assigned, sold or transferred does not suspend the power of alienation. In re Clark's Will, 284 N.Y.S.2d 244 (1967).

(n51)Footnote 60. Arndt v. Miller, 144 N.E.2d 835 (Ill. App. 1957); In re Dees' Estate, 308 P.2d 90 (Kan. 1957).

Robertson v. Simmons, 322 S.W.2d 476 (Ky. 1959) (option for unlimited time violated rule against unreasonable suspension of alienation).

Striking down conditions that prevented sale or mortgage of donated property. Ada C. Pollock-Blundon Ass'n v. Evans' Heirs, 273 So. 2d 552 (La. App. 1973).

(n52)Footnote 61. Alderman v. Crenshaw, 66 S.E.2d 265 (Ga. App. 1951); Hall v. Tufts, 35 Mass. 455 (18 Pick 1836); Gleason v. Fayerweather, 70 Mass. 348 (4 Gray 1855); Walker v. Vincent, 19 Pa. 369 (1852); Lawrence v. Singleton, 17 S.W. 265 (Tenn. 1875); Laval v. Staffel, 64 Tex. 370 (1885).

(n53)Footnote 62. Ware v. Cann, 10 Barn. & C. 433 (1885).

Covenant in a contract of sale, that the purchaser would see that the buildings on lots were connected with sewer company facilities, was not a restraint on alienation. Kempsville Util. Corp. v. Willis, 194 S.E.2d 740 (Va. 1973).

(n54)Footnote 63. Smith v. Federal Land Bank, 243 P.2d 1027 (Kan. 1952); Howard v. Mitchell, 105 S.W.2d 128 (Ky. 1936).

(n55)Footnote 64. Potter v. Couch, 141 U.S. 296 (1891); Howell v. Deady, 48 F. Supp. 104 (D. Or. 1939); Letzkus v. Nothwang, 279 S.W. 1006 (Ark. 1926); Murray v. Green, 28 P. 118 (Cal. 1883); Colonial Trust Co. v. Brown, 135 A. 555 (Conn. 1926); Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629 (1885); Davis v. Geyer, 9 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1942); Daniel v. Stewart, 110 S.E. 178 (Ga. 1921); McIntyre v. Dietrich, 128 N.E. 321 (Ill. 1920); Havely v. Comerford, 174 N.E. 830

(Ill. 1931); Porter v. Porter, 45 N.E.2d 635 (Ill. 1942); Allen v. Craft, 9 N.E. 919 (Ind. 1887); Harkness v. Lisle, 117 S.W. 264 (Ky. 1909); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); Bowen v. Campbell, 181 N.E.2d 342 (Mass. 1962); Clark v. Ferguson, 144 S.W.2d 116 (Mo. 1940); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852); Welch v. Murdock, 135 S.E. 611 (N.C. 1926); Baker v. Alexander, 156 N.E. 223 (Ohio App. 1926); Friswold v. United States Nat'l Bank, 257 P. 818 (Or. 1927); In re Fairman's Estate, 135 A. 262 (Pa. 1926); Berry v. Hughes, 138 S.E. 846 (S.C. 1927); Dunlop v. Dunlop, 132 S.E. 351 (Va. 1926); McCreery v. Johnston, 110 S.E. 464 (W. Va. 1922). Deviney v. Nations Bank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. Ct. App. 1999) (devise granting life estate but prohibiting conveyance without mutual consent was a restraint on alienation and, thus, void).

(n56)Footnote 65. Reeder v. Antrim, 110 N.E. 568, 112 N.E. 551 (Ind. App. 1915); Kerlee v. Smith, 124 P. 777 (Mont. 1912); Blair v. Muse, 2 S.E. 31 (Va. 1887).

(n57)Footnote 66. Hill v. Gray, 49 So. 676 (Ala. 1909); Graves v. Wheeler, 61 So. 341 (Ala. 1913); Gamble v. Gamble, 75 So. 924 (Ala. 1917); Ripperdan v. Weldy, 87 P. 276 (Cal. 1906); Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629 (1885); Alderman v. Crenshaw, 66 S.E.2d 265 (Ga. App. 1951); Simerson v. Simerson, 20 Haw. 57 (1910); Walker v. Shepard, 71 N.E. 422 (Ill. 1904); Allen v. Craft, 9 N.E. 919 (Ind. 1887); In re Dees' Estate, 308 P.2d 90 (Kan. 1957) (dictum) (restraint on alienation is void unless there is provided "an effective barrier to enforce it"); Miller v. Denny, 34 S.W. 1079 (Ky. 1896); Wilson v. Barnes, 169 A. 791 (Md. 1934) (provision for forfeiture if any of the devisees attempted to sell property left them as a home held valid); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); Kessner v. Phillips, 88 S.W. 66 (Mo. 1905); Pritchard v. Bailey, 18 S.E. 668 (N.C. 1893); Johnson v. Gaines, 55 S.E.2d 191 (N.C.); Clayton v. Burch, 80 S.E.2d 29 (N.C. 1954); Sandford v. Sandford, 91 S.E. 294 (S.C. 1917); Lawrence v. Singleton, 17 S.W. 265 (Tenn. 1875); Bouldin v. Miller, 28 S.W. 940 (Tex. 1894); Kerns v. Carr, 95 S.E. 606 (W. Va. 1918); Bartkowiak v. Bartkowiak, 283 N.W. 49 (Mich. 1938); In re Budd's Estate, 105 N.W.2d 358 (Wis. 1960) (conditioned upon the real estate not being sold, transferred or encumbered for five years from death).

Devise restricting sale of property until grandchildren reached 25 was an illegal restraint on alienation and was void. Harvey v. Harvey, 524 P.2d 1187 (Kan. 1974).

Will may not restrict alienation of fee simple estate. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

Reservation of proceeds of condemnation in a deed was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Application of Mazzone, 22 N.E.2d 315 (N.Y. 1939), rev'g 4 N.Y.S.2d 1. See 52 Harv. L. Rev. 323.

Absolute restraints on alienation are void. Chianese v. Culley, 397 F. Supp. 1344 (1975).

A restraint in a contract of conveyance or deed that withholds from the conveyee the right of power to alienate without provision for forfeiture is void. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975).

Absolute restraint of power of alienation of life estate is void. Miller v. O'Neil, 361 N.E.2d 1165 (Ill. 1977). Cole v. Peters, 3 S.W.3d 846 (Mo. Ct. App. 1999) (preemptive right to buy property was a restraint on alienation and, thus, void).

(n58)Footnote 67. McCullough v. Gilmore, 11 Pa. 370 (1849); Fowlkes v. Wagoner, 46 S.W. 586 (Tenn. 1898).

A condition in a gift of property for charitable purposes against sale or lease is valid since an equity court can authorize the prohibited sale when necessary. Ohio Soc'y for Crippled Children & Adults, Inc. v. McElroy, 191 N.E.2d 543 (Ohio St. 1963).

See Herbert A. Bernhard, Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation, 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173

(1959). Carroll v. Eno, 654 N.Y.S.2d 386 (1997) (Preemptive right to purchase plaintiff's cooperative apartment is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

(n59)Footnote 68. Sumner v. Borders, 98 S.W.2d 918 (Ky. 1936).

(n60)Footnote 69. Hedricks v. Beam, 4 So. 2d 176 (Ala. 1941); Heininger v. Meissmer, 103 N.E. 565 (Ill. 1913); Swannell v. Wilson, 79 N.E.2d 26 (Ill. 1948); Elberts v. Elberts, 141 N.W. 57 (Iowa 1913); Porter v. Tracey, 162 N.W. 800 (Iowa 1917); Highfill v. Konnerman, 43 S.W.2d 657 (Ky. 1931); Roberts v. Jones, 30 N.E.2d 392 (Mass. 1940); Haeussler v. Missouri Iron Co., 19 S.W. 75 (Mo. 1892); Peterson v. Damoude, 152 N.W. 786 (Neb. 1915); Majerus v. Santo, 10 N.W.2d 608 (Neb. 1943); In re Currier's Estate, 245 N.Y.S. 703 (1930); Greene v. Stadiem, 152 S.E. 398 (N.C. 1930).

As to what is a reasonable time, see 2 Restatement, Property, § 173, cmt. c.

(n61)Footnote 70. Winsor v. Mills, 32 N.E. 352 (Mass. 1892); Roberts v. Jones, 30 N.E.2d 392 (Mass. 1940); Mahrt v. First Church of Christ Scientist, 142 N.E. 567 (Ohio Com. Pl. 1955), aff'd 142 N.E.2d 678.

Extension of time for settlement of land sale contract until the court settled on title question did not violate the rule against perpetuities. Wilkes v. German, 316 A.2d 200 (Del. 1974).

The mere fact that the restriction placed on property makes it less valuable does not constitute an invalid restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Fla. App. 1973). Pyramid Constr. Co. v. Wind River Petroleum, Inc., 866 F. Supp. 513 (D. Utah 1994).

It was held in National Lumber Co. v. Goodman, 123 N.W.2d 147 (Mich. 1963), that a clause in a land contract, requiring the vendee to obtain the approval of the vendor on instruments purporting to assign or convey the vendee's interest, was not an invalid restraint on alienation.

Restraints on alienation of vendee's interest set forth in land sale contract were valid and also prevented mortgaging so that the vendor can foreclose the vendee's interest over the objection of the vendee's mortgagee. National Lumber Co. v. Goodman, 123 N.W.2d 147 (Mich. 1963).

See Mortgages -- Use of Due On Sale Clause by a Lendor Is Not a Restraint on Alienation in North Carolina, 55 N.C. L. Rev. 310 (1977).

Non-assignability clause in real estate contract held invalid. Murray First Thrift & Loan Co. v. Stevenson, 534 P.2d 909 (Utah 1975); Coraci v. Noack, 212 N.W.2d 164 (Wis. 1973).

(n62)Footnote 71. Locklear v. Tucker, 203 P.2d 380 (Idaho 1949); Windiate v. Lorman, 211 N.W. 62 (Mich. 1926); Mineral Land Inv. Co. v. Bishop Iron Co., 159 N.W. 966 (Minn. 1916); Epstein v. Werbelovsky, 184 N.Y.S. 330 (1920), aff'd 135 N.E. 902.

Deed with option to repurchase if grantee did not build a warehouse within two years was not a restraint on alienation. Genet v. Florida E. Coast Ry., 150 So. 2d 272 (Fla. App. 1963).

Declaration of condominium provision that developer had exclusive right to rent both units held by him and units sold to members of condominium was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Fla. App. 1973).

An option was held to violate the Rule Against Restraints On Alienation in Commonwealth Realty Corp. v. Bowers, 274 A.2d 353 (Md. 1971). Fallschase Dev. Corp. v. Blakey, 696 So. 2d 833 (Fla. App. 1997) (Right of first refusal which runs with ownership of the land rather than a right to be exercised within the lifetime of either of the original parties to the contract is void because it violates the common-law rule against perpetuities). Developers Mgmt. Ass'n, Inc. v. Eagle Creek Holdings, Inc., 636 So. 2d 91 (Fla. App. 1994) (Fixed price option of unlimited duration was void as an unreasonable restraint on alienation). Arclar v. Gates, 17 F. Supp. 2d 818, (S.D. Ill. 1998) (Generally, an option to purchase or sell real estate exercisable outside period of rule against perpetuities is void as unreasonable restraint upon alienation; however, an option to purchase part of an overlying surface estate is an exception when granted for mining purposes); D-F Fund VIII v. Resolution Trust Corp., No. CA 3-96-CV-3367-R, 1009, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 5, 1998) (Texas court denied summary judgment when plaintiff failed to show how a repurchase option was invalid as a restraint on alienation); Venture Stores v. Pacific Beach Co., 980 S.W.2d 176, (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) (Court upheld option to purchase a commercial lease at a set purchase price). But see Urquhart v. Teller, No. 97-382, 1998 Mont. LEXIS 86, (Mont. February 12, 1998) (grantor's right of first refusal in an option to sell or transfer a 10-acre parcel at or upon his death not triggered when property transferred because it was an unreasonable restraint on alienation). However, courts may permit special affirmative defenses to alleged breach of option agreements. Silberstein v. SMO Associates, No. CV 970405625S, 1998 Conn. Super. LEXIS 851 (Although court granted plaintiff's motion to strike defendant's special defense of an unreasonable restraint on alienation, court implied that the defense would be allowed if supported by fact).

(n63)Footnote 72. Porter v. Porter, 45 N.E.2d 635 (Ill. 1942).

Holding that a covenant prohibiting sale or resale or rental to anyone who would be disapproved for membership in the property owners' association, constituted an unreasonable restraint on alienation and void as against public policy. Tuckerton Beach Club v. Bender, 219 A.2d 529 (N.J. Super. 1966).

A reservation in a deed of awards to be received from eminent domain was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Application of Mazzone, 22 N.E.2d 315 (N.Y. 1939).

(n64)Footnote 73. Majerus v. Santos, 10 N.W.2d 608 (Neb. 1943).

Conditions in restraint of alienation will not be implied. Moody v. Moody Nat'l Bank of Galveston, 522 S.W.2d 710 (Tex. Civ. App. 1975).

Covenant in a contract of sale that the purchaser would see that the buildings on lots were connected with sewer company facilities was not a restraint on alienation. Kempsville Utils. Corp. v. Wills, 194 S.E.2d 740 (Va. 1973).

If an invalid restraint on alienation is so interwoven with the deed as to constitute a part thereof the grant itself is a defeasible estate. Floyd v. Hoover, 234 S.E.2d 89 (Ga. App. 1977).

Restraint on alienation by life tenant and remaindermen was void since no provision for forfeiture and no beneficial interest remaining in grantor. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975).

Permanent first call was a perpetuity. Saulsberry v. Saulsberry, 160 S.W.2d 654 (Ky. 1942); Roberts v. Jones, 30 N.E.2d 392 (Mass. 1940); Haeussler v. Missouri Iron Co., 19 S.W. 75 (Mo. 1892).

Contra: and to the effect that such agreements may exist in perpetuity. Hunt v. Wright, 47 N.H. 396 (1867).

Because it was a perpetuity the court refused to enforce a covenant requiring the owner to receive and pay for a seasonal water supply. Affirmative covenants are disfavored. Eagle Enters, Inc. v. Gross, 349 N.E.2d 816 (N.Y. 1976).

(n65)Footnote 74. In re Baglione's Estate, 417 P.2d 683 (Cal. 1966).

(n66)Footnote 75. Chianese v. Culley, 397 F. Supp. 1344 (1975). Maddock v. Greenville Retirement Community,

L.P., 1997 Del. Ch. LEXIS 24 (Repurchase option may be upheld if such a restraint is deemed reasonable under the circumstances). See also Camino Gardens Ass'ns v. McKim, 612 So. 2d 636 (Fla. App. 1993) (Rule which prohibits transfer of lots to nonmembers of homeowners association was void as an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

(n67)Footnote 76. Atchison v. Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970). See also Procter v. Foxmeyer Drug Co., 884 S.W.2d 853 (Tex. App. 1994) (Option agreement which extended perpetually and gave right to purchase for a specified sum was void as an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

(n68)Footnote 77. United Va. Bank Citizens & Marine v. Union Oil Co. of Cal., 197 S.E.2d 174 (Va. 1973).

(n69)Footnote 78. Commonwealth Realty Corp. v. Bowers, 274 A.2d 353 (Md. 1971).

(n70)Footnote 79. Raisch v. Schuster, 352 N.E.2d 657 (Ohio App. 1975).

(n71)Footnote 80. 4 Property, Restatement, 404.

As to the theory of reasonable restraints, see Herbert A. Bernhard, Minority Doctrine Concerning Direct Restraints on Alienation, 57 Mich. L. Rev. 1173 (1959).

(n72)Footnote 81. A statute requiring the recordation of plots as a condition precedent to the conveyance of plots of land of a certain size was unconstitutional as an unreasonable restraint of the right to alienate property. Kass v. Lewin, 104 So. 2d 572 (Fla. 1958).

(n73)Footnote 82. Floyd v. Hoover, 234 S.E.2d 89 (Ga. App. 1977).

(n74)Footnote 83. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970).

Restraints on alienation arising by contract are void if there is no forfeiture clause (dictum). Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975) (enforcing forfeiture clause).

Lacking any danger to the security or frustration of purpose, a due on sale clause could not be enforced. Fidelity Land Dev. Corp. v. Reider & Sons, 377 A.2d 691 (N.J. Super. 1977).

Richard W. Barke & Iona I. Tagropulos, Michigan's Looking Glass World of Due on Sale Clauses, 24 Wayne L. Rev. 971 (1978).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 29.04

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.04 Partial Restraints on Alienation

Quite generally, the courts have recognized the wisdom of Littleton's precepts n84 that there are valid partial restraints on alienation based on the persons to whom alienation may or may not be made or the conditions under which it may not be made. n85 Fees determinable upon alienation, conditions subsequent against alienation and executory limitations over on alienation are generally held to have no effect. n86 Conditions subsequent upon attempted alienation or limitations over in the event of alienation have, however, been recognized by the courts. n87 Conditions subsequent of this type are, however, like conditions subsequent generally subject to the courts' tendency to treat them as covenants. n88

A condition that the grantee or devisee shall not sell the land until reaching a certain age, such as twenty-five years or thirty-five years, is valid, the restriction not being unreasonable. n89 A condition not to alien within a limited time or during the lifetime of the grantor, is valid. n90 A condition not to convey before complying with certain stipulations as to improvements is valid. n91 A condition not to sell property disposed of by will until some fixed time, or until the happening of some contingency, is valid. n92

In a conveyance to several members of an association as tenants in common in undivided shares, a condition that the grantees will hold without partition or division is valid. It is not in restraint of alienation because each tenant may convey his share at his pleasure, n93 but the authorities differ in construing restraints on alienation for a limited time. One line of cases holds that a restraint upon the alienation of a fee simple title for a limited period, however brief, is inconsistent with and repugnant to the nature of such an estate, because one of the most important characteristics thereof is the power of alienation. n94 The other class of cases holds a restraint upon the alienation even of a fee simple title, if for a reasonable time, to be a valid restriction. n95

In some jurisdictions a partial restraint upon alienation may be imposed for a reasonable period, even in the case of the grant of the fee as, for instance, a provision prohibiting the grantee from selling or renting the land during the grantor's lifetime. n96 A limited restraint on alienation for a particular purpose is not repugnant to a grant of a fee simple estate.

n97 "It is entirely within the right and power of the grantor to impose a condition or restraint upon the power of alienation in certain cases, to certain persons, or for a certain time, or for certain purposes." n98

Reasonable restrictions may be placed upon the alienation or devolution of property for a limited period, to make provision for the support of persons ill-fitted to support themselves, as for instance to furnish sustenance for an improvident son or to prevent or hinder a testator's estate from being dissipated by grandchildren for whom, in his natural affection and solicitude, he would provide a life-enduring competence. n99 A mere admonitory clause in a deed or will is insufficient to create such a restriction. To make such restriction effective, some practical bar to a breach of such restriction must appear, such as the intervention of trustees having active duties to discharge during the restrictive period, a provision for re-entry or an alternative grant or devise over for breach of the conditions prescribed in the instrument itself. n100 A provision temporarily suspending partition is generally considered a reasonable and valid exercise of testamentary power. n101

Under the English rule, a condition against alienation by suffering a fine or common recovery was void. n102 But the American law permits conditions against a use for a particular purpose. n103 Sometimes the purpose behind restraint has been held to outweigh the effect of alienation. n104 Under the leading rule conditions alien only to a particular person or persons, n105 that land devised to a number of persons shall not be divided, n106 or sold during the lifetime of the grantee are void. n107 The doctrine that a condition in restraint of alienation is void has no application when the condition is contained in a grant by the United States to certain Indians, as the purpose of the proviso in such case is not to prevent the alienation of the land, but to protect the Indians from an improvident disposition of the land. n108

The English cases have indicated that a limitation that alienation not be made "outside the family" is valid. n109 The condition does not take away all power of alienation, but only imposes a limited restraint on alienation. The American cases have been inclined, however, to construe the rule more strictly and to require that a greater circle of possible transferees be created before the restriction is valid. n110 So a condition prohibiting the grantee from alienating to anyone except the heirs of the grantors was held invalid. n111 The more modern view is that limitations restraining alienation except to a particular class of persons are invalid. n112

The common-law rule against restraints on alienation does not apply to property held in trust where the trustee has the power to sell. n113 Restraint on alienation is valid where a charitable trust is created. n114 Conditions against alienation of leaseholds have been almost universally upheld. Until held unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court n115 while restraints on alienation to persons of a particular race were void, n116 restraints on occupation and use by such person were valid. Conditions or restraints against alienation without the consent of another are void. n117 Kentucky permits absolute restraints on alienation if "reasonable." Nebraska also has a limited similar doctrine. Where the restraint takes the form of a covenant in a deed, the deed is good and the covenant fails. n118

Where there is an illegal condition subsequent with a right of re-entry or a limitation over an alienation, the condition is void and the right of re-entry or limitation over fails. n119

If the deed does not convey an estate in fee simple absolute, a provision that it shall revert to the grantor is not repugnant. Sometimes a deed, which upon its face seems to be void for repugnancy by reason of provisions restraining alienation, may be carried into effect if from the whole instrument the intention of the parties is manifest that the deed should not convey a fee simple absolute in the land for even the strongest words of conveyance will not pass an estate if, from other parts of the deed, the intention appears otherwise. n120 Thus, a quitclaim deed from a husband to his wife, with condition that she should not convey the land during his lifetime without his written consent, and that in case of her death before his decease the land should revert to him, was held not to convey the land to the grantee in fee simple absolute, but that the effect of it was that the title should, in the event of the death of either of the parties, pass to the survivor. n121 In some jurisdictions, a condition against alienation of a life estate is void, n122 while in others such conditions are held valid. n123 A life tenant, in the absence of restrain imposed by the instrument creating the life estate, may convey the life interest by deed, but can pass no greater interest in the property than the estate for life. n124

Under what appears to be a minority rule a life estate may be created which is not subject to claims of creditors. n125

A deed conveying a base fee is not rendered void by a condition restraining alienation. n126 A conveyance to a trustee by a husband forever in fee simple for the use of his wife and her children by him, born and to be born, with a condition in the habendum that if he should survive her the whole property should revert to him free from the trust, conveyed to the trustee a fee defeasible upon the contingency specified. On the happening of that contingency the title revested in the husband, and thenceforth, the property was his absolutely. n127

The grantor may, by a condition, reserve the power to revoke a voluntary conveyance during the grantor's lifetime. Such a condition is not open to the objection that it is contrary to public policy, on the ground that it enables the parties to the deed to defeat the rights of the grantee's creditors, for the deed is notice to the creditors of the power reserved. n128 A grantor may by condition reserve the power to revoke the voluntary conveyance during the grantor's lifetime, since such reservation is not inconsistent with the conveyance, but merely creates an executory limitation in favor of the grantor. n129 It has been held that a reservation of a right to revoke an absolute gift is void. n130 Thus, a deed to the grantee and his heirs forever, reciting an intent that if the grantee should die without heirs, the property should revert to the living heirs of the grantor's estate, and that the grantee should have only a lifetime interest, was held to convey a fee simple estate, notwithstanding the attempted limitations. n131 Where a grantor reserved a life estate in the land and provided in the deed that he had power to mortgage, sell, convey or otherwise dispose of the land, it was held that he had the power to mortgage or dispose of his life estate only. n132

Conditions in mortgages prohibiting alienation by the mortgagor without the mortgagee's consent have been questioned as being illegal restraints on alienation. n133 This has had varying treatment in the courts. Other restrictive clauses have been at issue on the same grounds.

California has distinguished between outright sales and sales contracts as respects "due on sale," validating the clause in a mortgage on outright sale n134 and invalidating in case of sales contracts as a restraint on alienation. n135

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: partial w/5 restraint! w/2 alienation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 84. "If the condition be such, that the feoffee shall not alien to such a one, naming his name, or to any of his heirs, or of the issue of such a one, or the like, which conditions do not take away all power of alienation from the feoffee, then such condition is good." Littleton, Tenures, § 361; Coke on Littleton, § 223a. See Langdon v. Ingram, 28 Ind. 360 (1867); Francis v. Big Sandy Co., 188 S.W. 345 (Ky. 1916); Price v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 188 S.W. 658 (Ky. 1916); Dougal v. Fryer, 3 Mo. 40 (1831).

(n2)Footnote 85. Langdon v. Ingram, 28 Ind. 360 (1867); Stewart v. Barrow, 70 Ky. 368 (7 Bush 1870); Cornelius v. Den, 26 N.J.L. 376 (1857); Hill v. Hill, 4 N.Y. 419 (Barb. 1848) (condition was not to alienate for 15 years, except to certain persons); Large's Case, 2 Leon 82. See Imbrie v. Hartrampf, 198 P. 521 (Or.).

Nebraska has overruled its earlier decisions that "reasonable" restraints on alienation be permitted. Andrews v. Hall, 58 N.W.2d 201 (Neb. 1953).

Holding that all restraints on alienation direct or indirect are void. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

Seagate Condo. Ass'n, Inc. v. Duffy, 330 So. 2d 484 (Fla. App. 1976), citing Thompson On Real Property. Craft v. Commissioner, 140 F.3d 638 (6th Cir. 1998) (concurring opinion argued that IRS could attach trust income despite the fact that the trust was unalienable); Four Bros. Homes at Heartland Condo. II v. Gerbino, 262 A.D.2d 279 (N.Y. App. Div. 1999) (holding that "under the circumstances presented, the prohibition on leasing is not an unreasonable restraint on the alienation of property").

(n3)Footnote 86. Freeman v. Phillips, 38 S.E. 943 (Ga. 1901); Davis v. Hutchinson, 118 N.E. 721 (Ill. 1918); Cushing v. Spalding, 41 N.E. 297 (Mass. 1895); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852); Diamond v. Rotan, 124 S.W. 196 (Tex. Civ. App. 1909); Dunlop v. Dunlop, 132 S.E. 351 (Va. 1926); Contra: Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922); Hinshaw v. Wright, 262 P. 601 (Kan. 1928); Furst v. Lacher, 182 N.W. 720 (Minn. 1921).

Holding that a restrictive provision regarding alienation in the transfer of stock inter vivos is not applicable to testamentary dispositions. In Matter of Estate of Riggs, 540 P.2d 361 (Colo. 1975).

(n4)Footnote 87. Potter v. Couch, 141 U.S. 296 (1891); Roemhild v. Jones, 239 F.2d 492 (1957); Bevins v. Dietrich, 7 S.E. 662 (Ga. 1940); McIntyre v. Dietrich, 128 N.E. 321 (Ill. 1920); Latimer v. Waddell, 26 S.E. 122 (N.C. 1896).

Declaration of condominium provision that developer of a travel trailer park would receive a percentage of all rentals was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Fla. App. 1973).

Contra: conditions subsequent restraining alienation are void whether direct or indirect. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

(n5)Footnote 88. See Bonnell v. McLaughlin, 159 P. 590 (Cal. 1916); Cushing v. Spalding, 41 N.E. 297 (Mass. 1895); Christmas v. Winston, 67 S.E. 58 (N.C. 1910); Zillmer v. Landguth, 69 N.W. 568 (Wis. 1896).

(n6)Footnote 89. Stewart v. Brady, 66 Ky. 623 (3 Bush 1868); Dougal v. Fryer, 3 Mo. 40 (1831). See, however, to the contrary, Twitty v. Camp, 62 N.C. 61 (Phil. Eq. 1866); Christmas v. Winston, 67 S.E. 58 (N.C. 1910); Bouldin v. Miller, 28 S.W. 940 (Tex. 1894) (conveyance to minors, "to be held in common and unsold" until the youngest shall become of age, is a conveyance of a fee simple without a condition, the breach of which would void the estate).

(n7)Footnote 90. Frazier v. Combs, 130 S.W. 812 (Ky. 1910); McWilliams v. Nisly, 2 Pa. 507 (Serg. & Rawle 1816). See, however, Taylor v. Mason, 22 U.S. 325 (1824).

(n8)Footnote 91. Grigg v. Landis, 21 N.J. Eq. 494 (1870). See Clarke v. Brookfield, 81 Mo. 503 (1884). See also Suffolk Business Ctr., Inc. v. Applied Digital Data Sys., 615 N.Y.S.2d 64 (1994) (Real estate sales contract provision giving vendor option of repurchasing parcel if purchaser did not make certain improvements did not violate rule against unreasonable restraints on alienation).

(n9)Footnote 92. Legge v. Canty, 4 A.2d 465 (Md. 1939).

(n10)Footnote 93. Hunt v. Wright, 47 N.H. 396 (1867). Contra: *Smith v. Clark, 10 Md. 186 (1856); Lovett v. Gillender, 35 N.Y. 617 (1866).*Statutes may impose restraints on condominium owners who lease common areas appurtenant to independent living units. Brown v. Rice, 716 So. 2d 807, (Fl. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) (statutory restraint on limited common elements appurtenant to living units upheld to forbid a condo owner from conveying a garage independent of the apartment unit to which it was assigned).

(n11)Footnote 94. See in general: Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922); Stamey v. McGinnis, 88 S.E. 935 (Ga. 1916); Jones v. Port Huron Engine & Thresher Co., 49 N.E. 700 (Ill. 1898); Goldsmith v. Petersen, 141 N.W. 60 (Iowa 1913); Ammon v. Ammon, 237 P. 926 (Kan. 1925); Hause v. O'Leary, 161 N.W. 392 (Minn. 1917); Holloway v. Green, 83 S.E. 243 (N.C. 1914); Schwren v. Falls, 87 S.E. 49 (N.C. 1915); Combs v. Paul, 133 S.E. 93 (N.C. 1926); Anderson v. Cary, 36 Ohio St. 506 (1881); O'Connor v. Thetford, 174 S.W. 680 (Tex. Civ. App. 1915); Gladstone Mtn. Mining Co.

v. Tweedell, 232 P. 306 (Wash. 1925); White v. White, 150 S.E. 531 (W. Va. 1929).

In Mandlebaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78 (1874), it was declared that a condition that would suspend all power of alienation for a single day is void. To like effect, see McCleary v. Ellis, 6 N.W. 571 (Iowa 1880). See also Watkins v. Minor, 183 N.W. 186 (Mich. 1921) (a provision against the grantees conveying or encumbering the property during the lifetime of the grantor void).

A provision in a deed granting the fee but restraining alienation by the grantee for 20 years after the death of the grantor is repugnant to the grant and void. McFadden v. McFadden, 135 N.E. 31 (Ill. 1922); Goodman v. Andrews, 213 N.W. 605 (Iowa 1927).

A restraint on alienation, although for a limited time, is as repugnant to the grant of a life estate as a fee in the land and is void as against public policy. Department of Pub. Works v. Porter, 158 N.E. 366 (Ill. 1927).

Both direct and indirect restraints which affect the marketability are void. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

(n12)Footnote 95. See in general: Kentland Coal & Coke Co. v. Keen, 183 S.W. 247 (Ky. 1916); Cities Serv. Oil Co. v. Taylor, 45 S.W.2d 1039 (Ky. 1932); Chenault v. Burgess, 93 S.W. 664 (Ky. 1906); Queensborough Land Co. v. Cazeaux, 67 So. 641 (La. 1915); Dougal v. Fryer, 3 Mo. 40 (1831); Kessner v. Phillips, 88 S.W. 66 (Mo. 1905); Hunt v. Wright, 47 N.H. 396 (1867); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852); Christmas v. Winston, 67 S.E. 58 (N.C. 1910); McWilliams v. Nisly, 2 Pa. 507 (Serg. & Rawle 1816); Camp v. Cleary, 76 Va. 140 (1882); Gladstone Mtn. Mining Co. v. Tweedell, 232 P. 306 (Wash. 1925); White v. White, 150 S.E. 531 (W. Va. 1929); In re Budd's Estate, 105 N.W.2d 358 (Wis. 1960) (condition in devise against alienating for five years held void).

Doctrine of reasonable restraints. Malouff v. Midland Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 509 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1973).

Permitting restraints on alienation for limited periods. Fleming v. Blarent, 151 S.W.2d 88 (Ark. 1941). Furst v. Lacher, 182 N.W. 720 (Minn. 1921). Contra: Hankins v. Mathews, 425 S.W.2d 608 (Tenn. 1968); In re Budd's Estate, 105 N.W.2d 358 (Wis. 1960).

(n13)Footnote 96. Turner v. Lewis, 226 S.W. 867 (Ky. 1920).

Reasonable restraints on alienation to attain or encourage accepted social or economic ends are valid. Hanigan v. Wheeler, 504 P.2d 972 (Ariz. App. 1972).

Lauderbaugh v. Williams, 186 A.2d 39 (Pa. 1962) (dictum) (limited and reasonable restraints on alienation may be valid, holding agreement limiting conveyances only to members of an association, where consent of all but two was necessary to membership, was an unreasonable restraint).

A covenant of first refusal is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Gilmore v. Letcher, 508 S.W.2d 257 (Mo. App. 1974).

Florida prevents only unlimited or absolute restraints. Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629; Davis v. Geyer, 309 So. 2d 180 (Fla. 1975).

(n14)Footnote 97. Lynch v. Lynch, 159 S.E. 26 (S.C. 1931).

(n15)Footnote 98. Koehler v. Rowland, 205 S.W. 217 (Mo. 1918).

Requirement of reconveyance to housing association which gave deeds to members to permit them to obtain mortgages was valid. Gale v. York Ctr. Community Coop., Inc., 171 N.E.2d 30 (Ill. 1960). First Rebecca Bapt. Church, Inc. v. Atlantic Cotton Mills, 440 S.E.2d 159 (Ga. 1993) (Reverter clause in deed to charitable organization is enforceable).

(n16)Footnote 99. Wright v. Jenks, 261 P. 840 (Kan. 1927).

A restraint on alienation is not reasonable merely because commercially beneficial to the restrainer. La Sala v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 489 P.2d 113 (Cal. 1971).

Reasonable restraints on alienation. Lazzareschi Inv. Co. v. San Francisco Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 99 Cal. Rptr. 417 (1971).

The fact that restriction on use makes the property less desirable and less valuable is not of itself an unlawful, unlimited restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Fla. App. 1973). Tamen v. Alhambra World Inv., Inc., 22 F.3d 199 (9th Cir. 1994) (Restraints restricting sale of property prior to development were reasonable and not invalid).

Holding that a condition subsequent must be reasonable and not materially affect marketability. If it is unreasonable and affects marketability adversely, it is an indirect restraint on alienation and is void against public policy. Cast v. National Bank of Commerce Trust & Sav. Ass'n of Lincoln, 183 N.W.2d 485 (Neb. 1971).

See Kenneth A. Norsworthy, Forfeiture Conditions on the Use of Land as Restraints on the Power of Alienation: A Question of Degree of Tolerance, 25 Baylor L. Rev. 135 (1973).

(n17)Footnote 100. Wright v. Jenks, 261 P. 840 (Kan. 1927); Hinshaw v. Wright, 262 P. 601 (Kan. 1928).

(n18)Footnote 101. Peterson v. Damoude, 152 N.W. 786 (Neb. 1915).

See the following cases: Chapman v. York, 103 S. 567 (Ala. 1925); Ruggles v. Powers, 207 N.W. 116 (Iowa 1926); Crossan v. Crossan, 262 S.W. 701 (Mo. 1924); Dennig v. Mispagel, 260 S.W. 72 (Mo. 1924); Freeland v. Andersen, 211 N.W. 167 (Neb. 1926); Allison v. Coffin, 211 N.Y.S. 545 (1925).

(n19)Footnote 102. Anonymous, Y. B. 21 Henry vi pt. 21, to the contrary, changed by Sonday's Case, 9 Coke 127b, 77 Eng. Rep. 915; Portington's Case, 10 Coke 35a, 77 Eng. Rep. 976; Foye v. Hyrde, Cro. Jac. 697, 79 Eng. Rep. 605.

(n20)Footnote 103. Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co., 100 U.S. 55 (1879); Gray v. Blanchard, 25 Mass. 284 (8 Pick 1829); Sperry v. Pond, 5 Ohio 387 (1832), 24 Am. Dec. 296.

See Milton I. Goldstein, Rights of Entry and Possibilities of Reverter or Devises to Restrict the Use of Land, 54 Harv. L. Rev. 248 (1940); Howard R. Williams, Restrictions on the Use of Land: Conditions Subsequent and Determinable Fees, 27 Tex. L. Rev. 158 (1948).

An agreement was construed to give an option for six months to purchase the lands at a fixed price if the owner ever desired to sell. Brace v. Black, 144 A.2d 885 (N.J. Super. 1958). The principle of the Restatement of Property was applied, balancing degree of restraint against social utility in order to determine the unreasonableness of a restraint. Restatement, Property, §§ 406-411, 413. Munson v. Milton, 948 S.W.2d 486 (Tex. App. 1997) (Temporary injunction, enjoining homeowners from "renting and/or leasing said property to the public for temporary or transient housing purposes" pursuant to subdivision's residential use restrictive covenant, did not impose unreasonable restraint on alienation).

(n21)Footnote 104. Holding a perpetual option was not a restraint on alienation, but was subject to the rule against remoteness subject, however, to the wait-and-see doctrine. Three Rivers Rock Co. v. Reed Crushed Stone, 530 S.W.2d 202 (Ky. 1975). Griggs v. Driftwood Landing, 620 So. 2d 582 (Ala. 1993) (Conditions subsequent in conveyances of real property are to be strictly construed against the grantor).

(n22)Footnote 105. Schermerhorn v. Negus, 1 Denio (N.Y.) 448; Attwater v. Attwater, 18 Beav. 330, overruling Gill v. Pearson, 6 East 173.

(n23)Footnote 106. Smith v. Clark, 10 Md. 186 (1856).

(n24)Footnote 107. Hardy v. Galloway, 15 S.E. 890 (N.C. 1892); Pritchard v. Bailey, 18 S.E. 668 (N.C. 1893).

(n25)Footnote 108. Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U.S. 310 (1892). Jicarilla Apache Tribe v. Board of County Comm'rs of County of Rio Arriba, 883 P.2d 136 (N.M. 1993) (Lands acquired by Indian tribe by purchase are subject to Federal Restraints against alienation); State of Connecticut v. Babbitt, 26 F. Supp. 2d 397 (D. Conn. 1998) (affirmed federal restraints against alienation of tribal land held in trust by the government but denied restraints on land or natural resources located outside of settlement lands, held in fee by the Tribe).

(n26)Footnote 109. McCullough v. Gilmore, 11 Pa. 370 (1849).

"You may restrict alienation by prohibiting a particular class of alienation, or you may restrict alienation by prohibiting it to a particular class of individuals, or you may restrict alienation by restricting it to a particular time. In all these ways you may limit it, and it appears to me that in two ways, at all events, this condition is limited. First, it is limited as to the mode of alienation, because the only prohibition is against selling. There are various modes of alienation besides sale: a person may lease, or he may mortgage, or he may settle; therefore it is a mere limited restriction on alienation in that way. Then, again, it is limited as regards class; he is never to sell it out of the family, but he may sell it to any one member of the family. It is not, therefore, limited in the sense of there being only one person to buy. The will shows there were a great many members of the family when she made her will; a great many are named in it: therefore you have a class which probably was large, and was certainly not small."

A provision never to convey outside of the family held void as restraint on alienation. Jackson v. Jackson, 113 S.E.2d 766 (Ga. 1960).

(n27)Footnote 110. Alienation confined to nephews and nieces held good. Gray v. Gray, 188 S.W.2d 440 (Ky. 1945).

Race restrictions valid. Queensborough Land Co. v. Cazeaux, 67 So. 641 (La. 1915); Koehler v. Rowland, 205 S.W. 217 (Mo. 1918).

Contra: Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Garrott, 183 P. 470 (Cal. App. 1919); Porter v. Barrett, 206 N.W. 532 (Mich. 1925).

(n28)Footnote 111. Chappell v. Chappell, 119 S.W. 218 (Ky. 1909); Dills v. Deavors, 266 S.W.2d 788 (Ky. 1953).

(n29)Footnote 112. Dills v. Deavors, 266 S.W.2d 788 (Ky. 1953); Wool v. Fleetwood, 48 S.E. 785 (N.C. 1904); Langston v. Wooten, 59 S.E.2d 605 (N.C. 1950); Manierre v. Welling, 78 A. 507 (R.I. 1911).

A provision that the beneficiaries under a will shall "never sell or dispose of" any of the estate except to each other is an unreasonable restriction upon the power to alienate and therefore void. Carpenter v. Allen, 248 S.W. 523 (Ky. 1923).

A covenant of first refusal is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Gilmore v. Letcher, 508 S.W.2d 257 (Mo. App. 1974). Kellner v. Bartman, 620 N.E.2d 607 (Ill. App. 1993) (Right of first refusal not subject to RAP if sufficiently definite as to price and terms, but still limited to life of parties).

(n30)Footnote 113. In re Walker's Will, 45 N.W.2d 94 (Wis. 1950).

Delaware now permits a spendthrift trust to assign up to 50% of the income to a charity. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Carpenter, 168 A.2d 306 (Del. Ch. 1961).

Profit-sharing plans may contain spendthrift trust provisions. Hines v. Sands, 312 S.W.2d 275 (Tex. Civ. App. 1958). In re Persky, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) & 77,820 (Bankr. E.D. Penn. Oct 5, 1998) (Pennsylvania bankruptcy court allows a federal tax lien to attach to a beneficiary's interest in a spendthrift trust).

(n31)Footnote 114. Perin v. Carey, 65 U.S. 465 (1861); Stanley v. Colt, 72 U.S. 119 (1867); Jones v. Habersham, 107 U.S. 174 (1883); Dickenson v. Anna, 141 N.E. 754 (Ill. 1923); Smart v. Durham, 86 A. 821 (N.H. 1913); Mills v. Davison, 35 A. 1072 (N.J. Eq. 1896); First Presbyterian Church v. Wheeler, 149 A. 589 (N.J. Eq. 1930). In re Curtis v. Amquest Bank, No. 89,263 1998 Okla. Civ. App. LEXIS 124 (Okla. Ct. App. September 15, 1998) (trust fund provision prohibiting voluntary or involuntary alienation by trustor's son upheld as valid).

(n32)Footnote 115. Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1 (1948).

(n33)Footnote 116. Title Guarantee Trust Co. v. Garrott, 183 P. 470 (Cal. App. 1919).

(n34)Footnote 117. Hill v. Gray, 49 S. 676 (Ala. 1909); Maynard v. Polhemus, 15 P. 451 (Cal. 1887); Pacific Trust Co. v. Nagamori, 32 Haw. 323 (1932); Muhlke v. Tiedemann, 52 N.E. 843 (Ill. 1899); Manierre v. Welling, 78 A. 507 (R.I. 1911); Schwren v. Falls, 87 S.E. 49 (N.C. 1915); McCravey v. Otts, 74 S.E. 142 (S.C. 1912).

Covenant in a contract of sale that the purchaser would see that the buildings on lots were connected with sewer company facilities was not a restraint on alienation. Kempsville Utils. Corp. v. Wills, 194 S.E.2d 740 (Va. 1973). Pacific First Bank v. New Morgan Park Corp., 857 P.2d 895 (Or. App. 1993) (Restraint on alienation without the consent of the landlord for any reason is valid).

(n35)Footnote 118. Prey v. Stanley, 42 P. 908 (Cal. 1895); Northwest Real Estate Co. v. Serio, 144 A. 245 (Md. 1929); White v. White, 150 S.E. 531 (W. Va. 1929); Michalski v. Michalski, 142 A.2d 645 (N.J. Super. 1958) (restraints on partitions are valid if for a reasonable time).

Restraints on alienation void only if unreasonable. Carpenter v. Winn, 566 P.2d 370 (Colo. App. 1977).

(n36)Footnote 119. The mere fact that the restriction placed on property makes it less valuable does not constitute an invalid restraint on alienation. Holiday Out in Am. at St. Lucie, Inc. v. Bowes, 285 So. 2d 63 (Fla. App. 1973).

(n37)Footnote 120. Williams v. Bentley, 27 Pa. 294 (1856); Ogden v. Brown, 33 Pa. 247 (1859). Williams v. Estate of G.A. Williams, 865 S.W.2d 3 (Tenn. 1993) (Despite the restraints on alienation, the intention of the drafter of the will controlled the will).

(n38)Footnote 121. Bassett v. Budlong, 43 N.W. 984 (Mich. 1889), Champlin, J., said: "It is evident that, by executing the deed to his wife, the grantor did not intend to part with the title to his real estate unless the contingency should occur of his dying before his wife died... . The condition in the deed ... is a clear indication that the title should not pass, because, if it was the intention that it should pass and the estate vest in his wife, the condition would be nugatory, and no force or effect be given to this part of the instrument."

(n39)Footnote 122. Hunt v. Hawes, 54 N.E. 953 (Ill. 1899); Fell v. McCready, 259 N.Y.S. 572 (1933).

(n40)Footnote 123. Trammell v. Johnston, 54 Ga. 340 (1875); Conger v. Lowe, 24 N.E. 889 (Ind. 1890); Roberts v.

Stevens, 24 A. 873 (Me. 1892); Lampert v. Haydel, 9 S.W. 780 (Mo. 1888); Weller v. Noffsinger, 77 N.W. 1075 (Neb. 1899); Gaines v. Sullivan, 109 S.E. 276 (S.C. 1921); Dulin v. Moore, 70 S.W. 742 (Tex. 1902).

(n41)Footnote 124. Hawkins v. Jerman, 35 P.2d 248 (Or. 1934).

A covenant of first refusal is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Gilmore v. Letcher, 508 S.W.2d 257 (Mo. App. 1974). Perdew v. Townley, 623 So. 2d 798 (Fla. App. 1993) (Quitclaim deed given by life tenant of real property conveyed grantor's life estate, but not remainder interest that reverted to life tenant's estate after quitclaim deed was executed).

(n42)Footnote 125. Hiles v. Benton, 196 N.W. 903 (Neb. 1924). See Richard E. Manning, The Development of Restraints on Alienation Since Gray, 48 Harv. L. Rev. 373 (1975). It has been held that a contractual perpetual preemptive right to repurchase violates Rule 3. But an exception to this preemptive rule has been found in fees upon condition. Alebison v. City of Eaglewood, 463 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1970); French v. Old South Soc'y, 106 Mass. 479 (1871); Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922).

(n43)Footnote 126. Pennsylvania Horticultural Soc'y v. Craig, 87 A. 678 (Pa. 1913).

(n44)Footnote 127. Hauser v. St. Louis, 170 F. 906 (1909); Woods v. Woods, 13 S.E. 692 (Ga. 1891).

(n45)Footnote 128. Ricketts v. Louisville, St. L. & T. Ry. Co., 15 S.W. 182 (Ky. 1891), per Holt, C. J., said: "Such a condition has always been known to the law of conveyancing. Coke says that grants may be revoked by virtue of a power expressly reserved in the deed"; Butler's case, 3 Coke on Littleton 25. See Tennant v. John Tennant Mem. Home, 140 P. 242 (Cal. 1914).

A provision in a deed that the property conveyed shall not be sold, conveyed, or encumbered during the life of either of the grantors, and that, if the grantee shall sell, convey or encumber the same before the death of either of the grantors the conveyance shall be void, and the title to the land shall revert to and be vested in the grantor, creates a condition subsequent, and if the grantee fails to comply therewith the title will revert. Furst v. Lacher, 182 N.W. 720 (Minn. 1921).

(n46)Footnote 129. Bradish v. Sullivan, 173 A. 117 (R.I. 1934).

(n47)Footnote 130. Daniel v. Veal, 32 Ga. 589 (1861). See Crookum v. Ketchum, 50 P.2d 710 (Okla. 1935).

(n48)Footnote 131. Keels v. Crosswell, 185 S.E. 39 (S.C. 1936).

(n49)Footnote 132. Brady v. Fuller, 96 P. 854 (Kan. 1908).

(n50)Footnote 133. Mortgage covenant against alienation was valid. Coast Bank v. Minderhout, 392 P.2d 265 (Cal. 1964).

Upholding clause providing for a foreclosure of a mortgage by accelerating at the option of mortgagee if the mortgagor conveys. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 205 N.W.2d 762 (Wis. 1973).

Clause in a mortgage denying the mortgagor's right to sell without a consent of mortgagees held unreasonable. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

"Due on sale" held not an improper restraint on alienation. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 239 N.W.2d 20 (Wis. 1976); Baker v. Loves Park Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 333 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. 1975); Crockett v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 224 S.E.2d 580 (N.C. 1976).

(n51)Footnote 134. Upholding clause providing for a foreclosure of a mortgage by accelerating at the option of mortgagee if the mortgagor conveys. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 205 N.W.2d 762 (Wis. 1973).

Tucker v. Lassen Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 526 P.2d 1169 (Cal. 1974), struck down the arbitrary enforcement of a due on sale clause in a mortgage; William M. Flaherty, Illinois Land Trusts and the Due On Sale Clause, 65 Ill. B.J. 376 (1977).

(n52)Footnote 135. Cherry v. Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 81 Cal. Rptr. 135 (1969).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 29.05

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.05 Provisions for Defeasance on Alienation

Littleton concluded that a condition against alienation, as well as direct restraints on alienation, are void. n136 This precept is generally followed today, so that a condition in restraint of alienation general as to time and person is void. n137 This rule obtains even though the restraint is for a limited or particular time. n138 Such a condition is void on the ground of public policy. n139 In a deed in fee simple, a condition that if the grantee shall die seised of the land, or of any part of it, such land shall revert to the grantor or the grantor's heirs, is repugnant to the grant and void. Upon the death of the grantee the land goes to the heirs. n140 In estates for life or for years, conditions in restraint of alienation are lawful. Such restraint is good by reason of a reversion remaining in the lessor. n141

A fee simple estate and a restraint upon its alienation cannot in their nature coexist. n142 A will provision violating the statute prohibiting restraint on alienation was void as against public policy. n143 Such a condition is repugnant to the nature of the estate granted or devised. n144 An absolute title to real estate cannot be devised subject to a restriction that the devisee shall not alienate the land before the devisee's youngest child arrives at a certain age, or before a certain date if such child dies before reaching such age. n145 A provision in a deed that the land shall not be conveyed or sold by the grantee without the grantor's consent has been held not void as repugnant to the estate conveyed by the granting clause. n146

Before determining whether or not a covenant, in reliance upon which persons other than the parties to the action may have acted in the purchase and improvement of land within its intended operation, should be held void as an undue restraint on alienation, all the provisions of the deed of which it forms a part should be considered insofar as they may reveal the general objects of the restriction, and the extent of its actual application should also be described. n147 Provisions in a deed which seek to prevent alienation are strictly construed. n148 The rules against restraints on alienations have nothing to do with the use and occupancy of property, but are intended only to make conveyancing free and unrestrained. n149 Conditions against alienation of contracts for sale of land have been sustained, the vendee's interest being equitable. n150 The courts are divided as to whether conditions against alienation of equitable interests are void in the same manner as those affecting legal interests, or whether they may be valid. n151

A condition not to convey without first giving the grantor the privilege of repurchasing is void, as is a condition requiring the payment of money for the privilege of alienating to a stranger. n152 A condition not to alien the land without first giving the grantor, the grantor's heirs or assigns, the privilege of repurchasing, was held void in North Carolina because the condition was indefinite as to time and might be exercised whenever the property should be sold, and indefinite as to the amount to be paid upon repurchase. n153 A condition or covenant that the grantor should "at any time" have the right of "pre-emption" of the property conveyed "at and after the same price as the above-mentioned consideration," gives the grantor the option to purchase at that price in preference to any other person, in case the owner desired or offered to sell at the price specified. n154 It is held that an owner of land may, for a valuable consideration, make a binding agreement that a certain person shall have the right to say whether or not he will take the property at such owner's death at a stipulated price. n155 Some states uphold a condition against alienation which terminates the estate. n156

A will provision violating the statute prohibiting restraint on alienation was void as against public policy. n157

Provisions for acceleration in mortgages upon alienation have generally been upheld as not being invalid restraints. n158 So the courts are not in accord as to whether "due-on-sale" acceleration or encumbrance clauses in mortgages are invalid restraints on alienation. n159

But other courts require the presence of some factors which would justify enforcement of the due on sale clause. These factors include the lender's inability to determine the transferee's financial capabilities, or disparity between stated and market place interest rates. n160

A due on sale clause is enforceable where a long-term sales contract is entered into since equitable conversion results. n161

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: defeasance w/15 alienation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 136. Littleton, Tenures, § 360. Co. Litt. § 222b.

(n2)Footnote 137. Coke on Littleton § 436. Taylor v. Mason, 22 U.S. 325 (1824); Hill v. Gray, 49 So. 676 (Ala. 1090); Libby v. Winston, 93 So. 631 (Ala. 1922) (restraint for limited period does not defeat application of rule); Norris v. Hensley, 27 Cal. 439 (1865); Murray v. Green, 28 P. 118 (Cal. 1883); Prey v. Stanley, 42 P. 908 (Cal. 1895); Cronk v. Shoup, 197 P. 756 (Colo. 1921); Stamey v. McGinnis, 88 S.E. 935 (Ga. 1916); Walker v. Shepard, 71 N.E. 422 (Ill. 1904); McFadden v. McFadden, 135 N.E. 31 (Ill. 1922) (restraint of 20 years after death of grantor); Easley v. Little, 145 N.E. 625 (Ill. 1924) (conditions repugnant to grant are void); Department of Pub. Works v. Porter, 158 N.E. 366 (Ill. 1927); McCleary v. Ellis, 6 N.W. 571 (Iowa 1880); Woodford v. Glass, 150 N.W. 69 (Iowa 1914); Goodman v. Andrews, 213 N.W. 605 (Iowa 1927) (20 year restraint subsequent to death of life tenant); Kirby v. Broaddus, 145 P. 875 (Kan. 1915); Ammon v. Ammon, 237 P. 926 (Kan. 1925); Bank of Powhattan v. Rooney, 72 P.2d 993 (Kan. 1937); Chappell v. Chappell, 119 S.W. 218 (Ky. 1909); Smith v. Clark, 10 Md. 186 (1856); Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3 (1811); Hall v. Tufts, 35 Mass. 455 (18 Pick 1837); Blackstone Bank v. Davis, 38 Mass. 42 (21 Pick 1838); Gleason v. Fayerweather, 70 Mass. 348 (4 Gray 1855); Lane v. Lane, 90 Mass. 350 (8 Allen 1864); Mandlebaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78 (1874); Watkins v. Minor, 183 N.W. 186 (Mich. 1921); Schulte v. Starks, 213 N.W. 102 (Mich. 1927) (restraint on alienation to colored person held void); Sloman v. Cutler, 242 N.W. 735 (Mich. 1932); Triplett v. Triplett, 60 S.W.2d 13 (Mo. 1933); Flanders v. Parker, 120 A. 558 (N.H. 1923); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852); Oxley v. Lane, 35 N.Y. 340 (1866); Calvary Presbyterian Church v. Putnam, 221 N.Y.S. 692 (1927); Dick v. Pitchford, 21 N.C. 480 (1 Dev. & B. Eq. 1837); Twitty v. Camp, 62 N.C. 61 (Phil. Eq. 1866); Munroe v. Hall, 1 S.E. 651 (N.C. 1887); Hardy v.

Galloway, 15 S.E. 890 (N.C. 1892); Pritchard v. Bailey, 18 S.E. 668 (N.C. 1893); Lee v. Oates, 88 S.E. 889 (N.C. 1916); Combs v. Paul, 133 S.E. 93 (N.C. 1926) (the rule holds even though the restraint is for a limited time); Anderson v. Cary, 36 Ohio St. 506 (1881); Reifsnyder v. Hunter, 19 Pa. 41 (1852); Walker v. Vincent, 19 Pa. 369 (1852); In re Doebler's Appeal, 64 Pa. 9 (1870); In re Yard's Appeal, 64 Pa. 95 (1870); Pennsylvania Horticultural Soc'y v. Craig, 87 A. 678 (Pa. 1913); Kepler v. Kepler, 199 A. 198 (Pa. 1938); Lawrence v. Singleton, 17 S.W. 265 (Tenn. 1875); Bouldin v. Miller, 28 S.W. 940 (Tex. 1894); O'Connor v. Thetford, 174 S.W. 680 (Tex. Civ. App. 1915); Gladstone Mtn. Mining Co. v. Tweedell, 232 P. 306 (Wash. 1925); Fowler v. Wyman, 13 P.2d 501 (Wash. 1932); Bartlett v. Bartlett, 48 P.2d 560 (Wash. 1935); Deepwater Ry. v. Honaker, 66 S.E. 104 (W. Va. 1909); Kerns v. Carr, 95 S.E. 606 (W. Va. 1918); Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429.

See Reynolds v. Nicks, 172 S.W.2d 239 (Ark. 1943); Davis v. Geyer, 9 So. 2d 727 (Fla. 1942); Smith v. Smith, 287 N.W. 411 (Mich. 1939).

A subsequent limitation on the power of alienation of property, devised in fee simple, is void for repugnancy. Letzkus v. Nothwang, 279 S.W. 1006 (Ark. 1926); Burr v. Tierney, 122 A. 454 (Conn. 1923); Welch v. Murdock, 135 S.E. 611 (N.C. 1926); Baker v. Alexander, 156 N.E. 223 (Ohio App. 1926) (prohibition against executors closing estate for five years); Friswold v. United States Nat'l Bank, 257 P. 818 (Or. 1927); In re Fairman's Estate, 135 A. 262 (Pa. 1926).

Illinois excepts deeds to charitable trusts from this rule. Catholic Bishop of Chicago v. Murr, 120 N.E.2d 4 (Ill. 1954).

A devise in fee with a direction that the real estate shall not be sold, mortgaged, or encumbered during the life of the devisee, and that all taxes and repairs paid and the property kept insured is void as a restraint on alienation in the absence of any limitation over. Davidson v. Auwerda, 186 N.W. 406 (Iowa 1922).

A testator has the right to suspend the power of alienation for a limited time. Wohlgemuth v. Des Moines Nat'l Bank, 192 N.W. 248 (Iowa 1923).

See Kenneth A. Norsworthy Forfeiture Conditions on the Use of Land as Restraints on the Power of Alienation: A Question of Degree of Tolerance, 25 Baylor L. Rev. 135 (1973).

Distinguishing between absolute restraints on alienation and restraints would terminate the grantee's interest if there is an attempt to alienation. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975).

(n3)Footnote 138. Sisters of Mercy v. Lightner, 274 N.W. 86 (Iowa 1937); Douglass v. Stevens, 200 S.E. 366 (N.C. 1938).

(n4)Footnote 139. Haeussler v. Missouri Iron Co., 19 S.W. 75 (Mo. 1892), 16 L.R.A. 220; Pritchard v. Bailey, 18 S.E. 668 (N.C. 1893); Sharp v. Guthrie, 152 P. 403 (Okla. 1915); Deepwater Ry. v. Honaker, 66 S.E. 104 (W. Va. 1909).

An intent to limit alienation in a will which does not provide for a limitation over on alienation, does not affect the fee simple given. Stanton v. Dickson, 239 S.E.2d 741 (Ga. 1977); White v. Brown, 559 S.W.2d 938 (Tenn. 1977). Allison v. Vintage Sports Plaques, 136 F.3d 1443 (11th Cir. 1998) (court extends patent law first-sale doctrine to celebrities' right of publicity based on the policy opposing restraints on alienation).

(n5)Footnote 140. Wills v. Pierce, 67 S.E.2d 239 (Ga. 1951); McCleary v. Ellis, 6 N.W. 571 (Iowa 1951); Case v. Dwire, 15 N.W. 265 (Iowa 1883); Ide v. Ide, 5 Mass. 500 (1809); Bassett v. Budlong, 43 N.W. 984 (Mich. 1889); Second Reformed Presbyterian Church v. Disbrow, 52 Pa. 219 (1866).

(n6)Footnote 141. Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U.S. 716 (1875); Cotney v. Eason, 113 So. 2d 512 (Ala. 1959) (if there is a limitation over or provision for forfeiture on alienation).

In the case of Alsup v. Montoya, 488 S.W.2d 725 (Tenn. 1972), the court held that while under Keeling v. Keeling, 203 S.W.2d 601 (Tenn. 1947), an absolute restraint on alienation of a life estate is valid, strange circumstances would justify the court from abrogating the restraint after a period of time; Lewis v. Lewis, 57 A. 735 (Conn. 1904); Braman v. Stiles, 19 Mass. 460 (2 Pick. 1825); Hayward v. Kinney, 48 N.W. 170 (Mich. 1891); Watson v. Dalton, 18 N.W.2d 658, 20 N.W.2d 610 (Neb. 1945); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852), per Ruggles, C. J.; White v. White, 30 Vt. 338 (1857); Camp v. Cleary, 76 Va. 140 (1882).

"If a man have lands for a term of years on condition that he shall not grant over his estate, this is good by reason of the reversion remaining in the lessor." In re Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. 113 (1864).

Some early English cases held that alienation was a necessary incident of a life estate. Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429 (1811); Rochford v. Hackman, 9 Hare. 480 (1852). See the following cases which adopted the English doctrine: Pace v. Pace, 73 N.C. 119 (1875); Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R.I. 205 (1858).

In the later case in England of Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 3 Swanst. 515 (1819), Sir Thomas Plumer, M. R., holds that a restraint on the alienation of a life estate is valid.

Upholding a forfeiture clause upon alienation of the real estate. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975). Payne v. Palisades Interstate Park Comm'n, 611 N.Y.S.2d 699 (1994) (Power of alienation was valid which was suspended only during the life estates of husband and wife).

(n7)Footnote 142. Hauser v. St. Louis, 170 F. 906 (1909); Murray v. Green, 28 P. 118 (Cal. 1883); McCleary v. Ellis, 6 N.W. 571 (Iowa 1880); Kepler v. Larson, 108 N.W. 1033 (Iowa 1906); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852).

Warranty deed held invalid where it appeared that its sole purpose was to prevent the grantor from mortgaging the property. McCuiston v. Rollman, 420 S.W.2d 925 (Ark. 1967).

(n8)Footnote 143. Schenk v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 377 F. Supp. 477 (1974).

(n9)Footnote 144. See Potter v. Couch, 141 U.S. 296 (1891); Crumpler v. Barfield & Wilson Co., 40 S.E. 808 (Ga. 1902); State Bank v. Thiessen, 289 N.W. 791 (Neb. 1939).

(n10)Footnote 145. Hudnutt v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 275 N.W. 581 (Iowa 1938).

Devise for life with remainders but limitation over if remainder sold before age 25. Limitation held a void restraint on alienation. Harvey v. Harvey, 524 P.2d 1187 (Kan. 1974).

(n11)Footnote 146. Iowa Farm Credit Corp. v. Halligan, 241 N.W. 475 (Iowa 1932).

(n12)Footnote 147. Shaw v. St. Paul's M. E. Church, 142 A. 380 (Md. 1927).

(n13)Footnote 148. Commonwealth ex rel. Bard v. Delaware Div. Canal Co., 1 A.2d 672 (Pa. 1938).

(n14)Footnote 149. Meade v. Dennistone, 196 A. 330 (Md. 1938).

(n15)Footnote 150. Sloman v. Cutler, 242 N.W. 735 (Mich. 1932); Bethel v. Matthews, 59 P.2d 1125 (Wash. 1936).

See Edwin C. Goddard, Non-Assignment Provisions in Land Contracts, 31 Mich. L. Rev. 1 (1932).

Brokers' exclusive listing contract for 15 years was undue restraint on alienation. Stone v. Reinhard, 183 S.E.2d 601

(Ga. App. 1971).

Provision in sales contract preventing alienation without consent of vendors held unlawful restraint. Lemon v. Nicolai, 190 N.W.2d 549 (Mich. App. 1971).

(n16)Footnote 151. Valid. Hartwell v. Mobile Towing & Wrecking Co., 102 S. 450 (Ala. 1924) (though direct restraint would be bad); Waldo v. Cummings, 45 Ill. 421 (1867); Branhall v. Ferris, 14 N.Y. 41 (1856); Symmes v. Cauble, 67 S.E. 548 (S.C. 1910).

Void. Potter v. Couch, 141 U.S. 296.

(n17)Footnote 152. Sheppard, supra, note 57 at 130. Bassett v. Budlong, 43 N.W. 984 (Mich. 1889); Livingston v. Stickles, 7 N.Y. 253 (1852); De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467 (1852).

The case of Jackson v. Schutz, 18 N.Y. 174 (1820), which is sometimes cited in favor of the validity of a condition giving the grantor the option of repurchasing, was upon this point the decision of a single judge, the other judges basing their decision upon another ground.

(n18)Footnote 153. Hardy v. Galloway, 15 S.E. 890 (N.C. 1892). Low v. Spellman, 629 A.2d 57 (Me. 1993) (Perpetual right of first refusal to purchase property for specified sum was void and violated the Rule Against Perpetuities because the right was perpetual to all heirs and assignees and thus was an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

(n19)Footnote 154. In re Sullivan's Estate, 218 P.2d 1064 (Colo. 1950); Garcia v. Callender, 26 N.E. 283 (N.Y. 1891), O'Brien, J., said: "The right of a person to purchase some part of the public lands at a specified price when opened for sale in preference to anyone else, is called the right of pre-emption in the practice of the government and in the decisions of the United States courts. The term is used here to express the idea that some one has the first right to purchase when the land is offered for sale, or the option of buying first."

(n20)Footnote 155. Elliott v. Delaney, 116 S.W. 494 (Mo. 1909).

(n21)Footnote 156. Graham v. Johnson, 49 N.W.2d 540 (Iowa 1951) (dictum); Superior Oil Co. v. Johnson, 171 P.2d 658 (Kan. 1946); Outlaw v. Bowen, 285 S.W.2d 280 (Tex. Civ. App. 1955).

Contra: Andrews v. Hall, 58 N.W.2d 201 (Neb. 1953) (a limitation over on breach of condition against alienation is void as against public policy).

(n22)Footnote 157. Schenk v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 377 F. Supp. 477 (1974).

(n23)Footnote 158. See Ronald R. Volkmer, The Application of the Restraints on Alienation Doctrine to Real Property Security Interests, 58 Iowa L. Rev. 747 (1973).

(n24)Footnote 159. Mortgage covenant against alienation was held valid. Coast Bank v. Minderhout, 392 P.2d 265 (Cal. 1964), overruled prior Melenkamp case.

Acceleration on sale clause in mortgage was not an unreasonable restraint. Malouff v. Midland Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 509 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1973).

See Lawrence J. Warren, Is the Practice of Raising the Interest Rate in Return for Not Exercising an Acceleration Clause on Assumption of a Mortgage Illegal in Texas as a Restraint on Alienation?, 13 S. Tex. L.J. 296 (1972).

"Due on Sale" held an unreasonable restraint on alienation. Tucker v. Lassen Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 526 P.2d 1169 (Cal.

1974).

Mortgagor entering into land sale contract does not accelerate mortgage debt. Tucker v. Lassen Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 526 P.2d 1169 (Cal. 1974), see Griffith L. Humphrey, Tucker v. Lassen: The Demise of the Due On Sale Clause in California, 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 665 (1976).

Leasing restriction in condominium held not an invalid restraint on alienation. Seagate Condo. Ass'n, Inc. v. Duffy, 330 So. 2d 484 (Fla. App. 1976).

Absolute restraint on alienation is void. Miller v. O'Neil, 361 N.E.2d 1165 (Ill. App. 1977).

"Due on Sale" held not an improper restraint on alienation. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 239 N.W.2d 20 (Wis. 1976); Baker v. Loves Park Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 333 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. 1975).

Holding the "due on sale" alienation clause in mortgages as an unreasonable restraint on alienation without a showing of necessity of protection of the mortgagee's legitimate interests. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

Enjoining "due on sale" default as unreasonable. Restraint clauses subject to strict construction. Sanders v. Hicks, 317 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 1975).

Due on sale clause held enforceable. First Commercial Title, Inc. v. Holmes, 546 P.2d 232 (Nev. 1976).

Due on sale was not an invalid restraint on alienation. Crockett v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of Charlotte, 224 S.E.2d 380 (N.C. 1976).

"Due on sale" clauses upheld. Coast Bank v. Minderhout, 392 P.2d 265 (Cal. 1964); Cherry v. Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 81 Cal. Rptr. 135 (1969); Jones v. Sacramento Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 56 Cal. Rptr. 741 (1967); Hellbaum v. Lytton Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 79 Cal. Rptr. 9 (1969).

Restraint on alienation by life tenant and remaindermen was void since there was no provision for forfeiture and no beneficial interest remaining in grantor. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975).

Restraint on alienation with forfeiture clause held valid. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975).

Mortgage clause permitting increase of interest rate on sale of the property was not a restraint of alienation. Miller v. Pacific First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 545 P.2d 546 (Wash. 1976).

Due on sale clause upheld. Bellingham First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Garrison, 553 P.2d 1090 (Wash. 1976).

Due on sale clause held valid. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 205 N.W.2d 792 (Wis. 1973).

See also Griffith L. Humphrey, Tucker v. Lassen -- The Demise Of The Due On Sale Clause in California?, 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 665; Ronald R. Volkmer, The Application of the Restraints on Alienation Doctrine to Real Property Security Interests, 58 Iowa L. Rev. 747 (1973); Bernie Wolf, Beyond Tucker v. Lassen: The Future of the Due on Sale Clause of California, 27 Hastings L.J. 475 (1975); Mortgages -- Use of Due On Sale Clause by a Lender Is Not a Restraint On Alienation in North Carolina, 55 N.C.L. Rev. 310 (1977); Mortgages: Restrictions in the Transfer of the Fee -- Effect of Due on Sale Clauses, 28 Okla. L. Rev. 418 (1975).

Mombach & Levin, Debt Acceleration on Transfer of Mortgaged Property Restraints on Alienation, 29 U. Miami. L. Rev. 587 (1975).

Absolute restraint on alienation is void. Miller v. O'Neil, 361 N.E.2d 1165 (Ill. 1977).

Upholding a forfeiture clause upon alienation of the real estate. Lohmann v. Adams, 540 P.2d 552 (Okla. 1975).

Use of clauses "due on" to gain collateral benefits: Philip S. Ashley, A Common Sense Defense, 10 Tulsa L.J. 590.

(n25)Footnote 160. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Wisconsin Wire Works, 239 N.W.2d 20 (Wis. 2d 1976).

(n26)Footnote 161. Century Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Van Glahn, 364 A.2d 558 (N.J. Super. 1976).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 29.06

AUTHOR: Professor David A. Thomas This chapter is based in part on Ch. 31, George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property (John S. Grimes, ed. 1979), which made a significant contribution toward preserving the American common law governing restraints on alienation. J. Reuben Clark Law School Brigham Young University

§ 29.06 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Articles

Brophy, Alfred L. and Shubha Ghosh. "Whistling Dixie: The Invalidity and Unconstitutionality of Covenants Against Yankees." 10 Vill. Envtl. L.J. 57 (1999).

Candler, Lynne M. "Wills and Trusts." SMU L. Rev. Vol. 46 (1993) 1831.

Clinton, Robert N. "Redressing the Legacy of Conquest: A Vision Quest for a Decolonized Federal Indian Law." Ark. L. Rev. Vol. 46 (1993) 77.

Cross, Terry I. "The Ties that Bind: Preemptive Rights and Restraints on Alienation that Commonly Burden Oil and Gas Properties." 5 Tex. Wesleyan L. Rev. 193 (1999).

Eason, John K. "Home From the Islands: Domestic Asset Protection Trust Alternatives Impact Traditional Estate and Gift Tax Planning Considerations." 52 Fla. L. Rev. 41 (2000).

Hirsch, Adam J. "Spendthrift Trusts and Public Policy: Economic and Cognitive Perspectives." Wash. U. L.Q. Vol. 73 (Spring 1995) 1.

O'Quinn, William L. "Village of Pinehurst v. Regional Investments of Moore: Perpetuating the Rule Against Perpetuities in the Realm of Preemptive Rights -- North Carolina Refuses to Accept an Exception to the Rule." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 71 (1993) 2115.

Roberts, Kent H. "Prepayment Penalties in Texas: The Triumph of Logic and the Need for Legislative Reform." Baylor L. Rev. Vol. 45 (1993) 585.

Rogers, C. Paul, III. "Restraints on Alienation in Antitrust Law: A Past With No Future." SMU L. Rev. Vol. 49 (1996) 497.

Rothschild, Gideon, Daniel S. Rubin, and Jonathan G. Blattmachr. "Self-Settled Spendthrift Trusts: Should a Few Bad Apples Spoil the Bunch?" 32 Vand. J. Transnat'l L. 763 (1999).

Wach, Martha. Note, "Withholding Consent to Alienate: If Your Landlord is in a Bad Mood, Can He Prevent You From Alienating Your Lease?" Duke L.J. Vol. 43 (1993) 671.

Whitman, Dale A. "Mortgage Prepayment Clauses: An Economic and Legal Analysis." UCLA L. Rev. Vol. 40 (1993) 851.

Annotations

Annotation, Application of Rule Against Perpetuities to Limitation Over on Discontinuance of Use for Which Premises Are Given or Granted, or the Commencement of a Prohibited Use, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1154.

Annotation, Conflict Between Granting and Habendum Clauses as to Estate Conveyed, 58 A.L.R. 2d (1958) 1374.

Annotation, Constitutionality, Construction, and Application of Statute as to Effect of Taking Appeal, or Staying Execution, on Right to Redeem from Execution or Judicial Sale, 44 A.L.R. 4th 1229.

Annotation, Construction and Application of "First Refusal" Option Contained in Trust Instrument and Relating to Sale of Shares of Stock, 51 A.L.R. 3d 1327.

Annotation, Determination of Price under Testamentary Option to Buy Real Estate, 13 A.L.R. 4th 947.

Annotation, Doctrine that Gift which Might be Void under Rule Against Perpetuities will be Given Effect Where Contingency Actually Occurs Within Period of Rule, 20 A.L.R. 3d 1094.

Annotation, Effect of Impossibility of Performance of Condition Precedent to Devise or Bequest, 39 A.L.R. 2d 522.

Annotation, Effect of Statute upon Determination Whether Disposition of All or Residue of Testator's Property, Without Referring to Power of Appointment, Sufficiently Manifests Intention to Exercise Power, 16 A.L.R. 3d 911.

Annotation, Gift or Grant in Terms Sufficient to Carry the Whole Property Absolutely or so Operating Where Followed by a Limitation Over of Property Not Disposed of by the First Taker, 17 A.L.R. 2d 7.

Annotation, Grant to Lessee of First Privilege or Right to Purchase Leased Premises as Constituting Absolute or Conditional Option, 34 A.L.R. 2d 1158.

Annotation, Grazing or Pasturage Agreement as Violation of Covenant in Lease or Provision of Statute Against Assigning or Subletting Without Lessor's Consent, 71 A.L.R. 3d 780.

Annotation, Independent Option to Purchase Real Estate as Violating Rule Against Perpetuities or Restraints on Alienation, 66 A.L.R. 3d 1294.

Annotation, Invalidity of Spendthrift Provisions as Affecting Other Provisions of Trust, 9 A.L.R. 1361. Annotation, Lease for Term of Years, or Contract Therefore, as Violating the Rule Against Perpetuities, 66 A.L.R. 2d 733.

Annotation, Merger or Consolidation of Corporate Lessee as Breach of Clause in Lease Prohibiting, Conditioning, or Restricting Assignment or Sublease, 39 A.L.R. 4th 879.

Annotation, Option Created by Will to Purchase Real Estate, 44 A.L.R. 2d 1214.

Annotation, Preemptive Rights to Reality as Violations of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on Alienation, 40 A.L.R. 3d 920.

Annotation, Restraints on Alienation -- Validity, 42 A.L.R. 2d 1247.

Annotation, Restrictive Covenants, Conditions, or Agreements in Respect of Real Property Discriminating Against Persons on Account of Race, Color, or Religion, 3 A.L.R. 2d 466.

Annotation, Rights of Holder of "First Refusal" Option on Real Property in Event of Sale at Foreclosure or Other Involuntary Sale, 17 A.L.R. 3d 962.

Annotation, Rule Limiting Duration of Restraints on Alienation as Applicable to Covenant in Deed Restricting Use of Property, 10 A.L.R. 2d 824.

Annotation, Self-Dealing by Developers of Condominium Project as Affecting Contracts or Leases with Condominium Association, 73 A.L.R. 3d 613.

Annotation, Sufficiency of Provision of Lease to Effect Second or Perpetual Right of Renewal, 29 A.L.R. 4th 172.

Annotation, Validity and Construction of Condominium Bylaws or Regulation Placing Special Regulations, Burdens, or Restrictions on Nonresident Unit Owners, 76 A.L.R. 4th 295.

Annotation, Validity and Construction of Provision of Mortgage or Other Real Estate Financing Contract Prohibiting Prepayment for a Fixed Period of Time, 81 A.L.R. 4th 423.

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Provision or Condition Against Alienation in Gift for Charitable Trust or to Charitable Corporation, 100 A.L.R. 2d 1208.

Annotation, Validity and Enforceability of Condominium Owner's Covenant to Pay Dues or Fees to Sports or Recreational Facility, 39 A.L.R. 4th 129.

Annotation, Validity and Enforceability of Due-on-Sale Real Estate Mortgage Provisions, 61 A.L.R. 4th 1070.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Application of Clause Entitling Mortgagee to Acceleration of Balance Due in Case of Conveyance or Transfer of Mortgaged Property, 69 A.L.R. 3d 713.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Application of Statutes, or of Condominium Association's Bylaws or Regulations, Restricting Number of Units That May Be Owned by Single Individual or Entity, 39 A.L.R. 4th 88.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Application of Statutes, or of Condominium Association's Bylaws or Regulations, Restricting Sale, Transfer, or Lease of Condominium Units, 17 A.L.R. 4th 1247.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Application of Provisions Entitling Mortgagee to Increase Interest Rate on Transfer of Mortgaged Property, 92 A.L.R. 3d 822.

Annotation, Validity, Construction, and Effect of Clause in Franchise Contract Prohibiting Transfer of Franchise or Contract, 59 A.L.R. 3d 244.

Annotation, Validity, Construction and Effect of Contract, Option, or Provision for Repurchase by Vendor, 44 A.L.R. 2d 342.

Annotation, Validity of Option to Purchase Realty as Affected by Indefiniteness of Term Provided for Exercise, 31 A.L.R. 3d (1970) 522.

Annotation, Validity of Restraint, Ending Not Later Than Expiration of a Life or Lives in Being, on Alienation of an Estate in Fee, 42 A.L.R. 2d 1243.

Annotation, Validity of Spendthrift Trusts, 34 A.L.R. 2d 1335.

Annotation, Vertical Territorial and Customer Restraints as Per Se Violations of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 30 A.L.R. Fed. 19.

Annotation, What Law Governs Validity, Effect, and Construction of Separation or Property Settlement Agreement, 18 A.L.R. 2d 760.

Annotation, What Transfers Justify Acceleration under Due-on-Sale Clause of Real Estate Mortgage, 22 A.L.R. 4th 1266.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 29.02

Supp. to § 29.02 Overview of Restraints on Alienation.

[Go To Main]

Add:

Meduna v. Holder, 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 10568 (No. 03-02-00781-CV, Dec. 18, 2003) (an unreasonable restraint on alienation does not void an entire deed; only the improper restraint clause is void).

Add:

Dennison v. North Dakota Department of Human Services, 640 N.W.2d 447 (N.D. 2002) (the state held a restraint on alienation that was excepted from the marketable record title act), aff'd, 656 N.W.2d 25 (N.D. 2003) ; Alby v. Banc One Financial, 82 P.3d 675 (Wash. App. 2003) (the postponement of full enjoyment of property, through a transaction that creates an estate that is already vested at the time of the transaction, is not a restraint on alienation).

Add:

Niemann v. Vaughn Community Church, 77 P.3d 1208 (Wash. App., 2003) (a deed requiring that a church be perpetually used only as a Protestant church was an unenforceable restraint on alienation); Statham v. Kelly, 584 S.E.2d 246 (Ga. 2003) (a condition subsequent that was repugnant to the fee simple estate was void as an absolute restraint on alienation).

Add:

In re Andrews, 301 B.R. 211 (N.D. Ohio 2003) (spendthrift clause was void because it was designed to prevent creditors from collecting from debtor).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 29.03

Supp. to § 29.03 History of Restraints on Alienation.

[Go To Main]

§ 29.03(b) Restraints on Alienation in the American States. [Go To Main]

Add:

Alfaro v. Community Housing Imp. System & Planning Ass'n, Inc., 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659 (2009) (a deed restriction limiting the resale prices of houses was ruled not an unreasonable restraint on alienation); R & G Properties, Inc. v. Column Financial, Inc., 968 A.2d 286 (Vt. 2008) (a security agreement provision barring substitution of collateral was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation); Alby v. Banc One Financial, 82 P.3d 675 (Wash. App. 2003) (Washington also uses the reasonableness standard to determine whether or not a restraint on alienation is void).

Mr. Sign Sign Studios, Inc. v. Miguel, 877 So. 2d 47 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App., 2004) (Florida uses the reasonableness doctrine).

Add:

Kelley v. Burnsed, 805 So. 2d 1101 (Fla. App. 2002) (an option was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation); Sander v. Ball, 781 So. 2d 527 (Fla. App. 2001) (an option for an unlimited period was held to be an unreasonable restraint on alienation); Gangemi v. Zoning Board of Appeal of the Town of Fairfield, 763 A.2d 1011 (Conn. 2001) (a condition of a zoning variance that prohibited rental of the property was held to violate the public policy against restraints on alienation).

Mr. Sign Sign Studios, Inc. v. Miguel, 877 So. 2d 47 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App., 2004) (an option to buy property did not act as an unreasonable restraint on the owner's right of alienation).

Add:

WFR Assocs. v. Mem'l Hosp., 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 421 (No. 6248-03, Apr. 18, 2004) (holding that owners and occupants of a condominium were not required to become members of the hospital because such requirement would have been in violation of the current NY law which requires a restraint on alienation to be reasonable).

Add:

But see Norville v. Carr-Gottstein Foods Co., 84 P.3d 996 (Alaska 2004) (the landlord's refusal to consent to the tenant granting a sublease to a bank was not a restraint on alienation).

Add:

Reagan Nat'l Adver. Of Austin, Inc. v. Capital Outdoors, Inc., 96 S.W.3d 490 (Tex. App. 2002) (A lease clause prohibiting releasing of a grandfathered billboard site to other advertisers for five years after termination of the lease was unenforceable against the grantee of an easement in the site allowing the erection of a new billboard.)

Add:

Reagan Nat'l Adver. Of Austin, Inc. v. Capital Outdoors, Inc., 96 S.W.3d 490 (Tex. App. 2002) (A lease clause prohibiting releasing of a grandfathered billboard site to other advertisers for five years after termination of the lease was unenforceable against the grantee of an easement in the site allowing the erection of a new billboard.); Holtkamp v. State Univ. of Iowa Found., 2004 Iowa App. LEXIS 889 (Iowa Ct. App., 2004) (a will requiring that all three of the testator's children be deceased before the beneficiary can alienate property is not binding upon the beneficiary).

Add:

Alby v. Banc One Financial, 128 P.3d 81 (Wash. 2006) (a reverter clause in a deed was upheld as a valid restraint on alienation); Griffith v. Kirsch, 886 A.2d 249 (Pa. Super. 2005) (a provision in a will barring conveyance without prior consent was upheld as a reasonable restraint on alienation); Vande Guchte v. Kort, 703 N.W.2d 611 (Neb. App. 2005) (option to repurchase property was not an unlawful restraint on alienation); Sandpiper Development and Construction, Inc. v. Rosemary Beach Land Co., 907 So.2d 684 (Fla. App. 2005) (option to repurchase for a limited time was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation); Libeau v. Fox. 880 A.2d 1049 (Del. Ch. 2005) (restrictions on a joint tenant's right to dispose of her interest were not unreasonable restraints on alienation).

But see WFR Assocs. v. Mem'l Hosp., 3 Misc. 3d 766 (N.Y. Misc., 2004) (a restriction on leasing a condominium unit to a dentist that had fewer than 25 annual patient contacts with a hospital was unreasonable).

Add:

Firebaugh v. Whitehead, 559 S.E.2d 611 (Va. 2002) (Right of first refusal was valid and bound co-executors; because the property description was sufficient, lack of duration did not violate rule against perpetuities or create alienation restraint, and contract did not involve special skills).

Add:

Aldridge v. Overstreet, 584 S.E.2d 46 (Ga. App. 2003) (holding that a restrictive covenant that would prevent future owners from growing corn or cotton was unenforceable as a restraint on alienation).

Haines v. Great N. Paper, Inc., 808 A.2d 1246 (Maine 2002) (A Maine landowner's agreement to let members of a hunting and fishing club enter its timberland without paying access fees did not run with the land and did not limit the landowner's right to sell the land).

Add:

Statham v. Kelly, 584 S.E.2d 246 (Ga. 2003) (a condition subsequent that was repugnant to the fee simple estate was void as an absolute restraint on alienation); Imerys Marble Co. v. J. M. Huber Corp., 577 S.E.2d 555 (Ga. 2003) (restricting clause in a will that prevented the heirs of a fee simple estate from selling mineral interests was void as a restraint on alienation); Spanish Oaks, Inc. v. Hy-Vee, Inc., 655 N.W.2d 390 (Neb. 2003) (holding that a landlord can challenge a restraint clause in a sublease by the landlord's tenant, even though the landlord was not a party to the sublease, because the sublease clause against alienation interferes with the landlord's interest in fee simple).

Add:

Beachcomber Properties, L.L.C. v. Station One, Inc., 611 S.E.2d 191 (N.C. App. 2005) (a prohibition against conveying property as a time share unit was an unlawful restraint on alienation).

Add:

Town of Pinebluff v. Marts, 673 S.E.2d 740 (N.C. App. 2009) (an ordinance requiring developers to install a mini-park and reserve open space could not be collaterally attacked as an illegal restraint on alienation); Navasota Resources, L.P. v. First Source Texas, Inc., 249 S.W.3d 526 (Tex. App. 2008) (a preferential right provision is not an unreasonable restraint on alienation); Godley Park Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. v. Bowen, 649 S.E.2d 308 (Ga. App. 2007) (a restrictive covenant against erecting "For Sale" signs was not an unenforceable restraint on alienation).

Smith v. Osguthorpe, 58 P.3d 854 (Ut. App. 2002) (Family had to share lease payments received for leasing property to ski resort, where unambiguous language established that a partnership dissolution agreement was integrated, and reservation of share of lease payments was not a direct restraint).

Add:

Fohr v. Fohr, 735 N.W.2d 570 (Wis. App. 2007) (a will's prohibition on partition and sale was not an unlawful restraint on alienation).

Add:

Navasota Resources, L.P. v. First Source Texas, Inc., 249 S.W.3d 526 (Tex. App. 2008) (a preferential right to purchase an oil well was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation); Stephens v. Trust for Public Land, 475 F. Supp. 2d 1299 (N.D. Ga. 2007) (a right of first offer was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

Peavey v. Reynolds, 946 So. 2d 1125 (Fla. App. 2006) (a lease with an indefinite right to renew was an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

Spanish Oaks, Inc. v. Hy-Vee, Inc., 655 N.W.2d 390 (Neb. 2003) (Use restriction against subletting to certain retailers in commercial sublease was not a restraint on alienation or a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in a ground lease; rent-adjustment provision was unambiguous).

RTS Landfill, Inc. v. Appalachian Waste Sys., 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 441 (No. A03A2027, Mar. 29, 2004); Herrmann v. AMD Realty, Inc., 765 N.Y.S.2d 232 (2003) (holding that a right of first refusal represented an unreasonable restraint on alienation because it had no time limit and it allowed the company with the right of first refusal to pay a lower price than the purchasing company); Meduna v. Holder, 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 10568 (No. 03-02-00781-CV, Dec. 18, 2003) (right of first refusal was an unreasonable restraint on alienation because the price for a holder of the interest of first refusal was fixed and the interest was unlimited in duration). But see Lehn's Court Management LLC v. My Mouna Inc., 837 A.2d 504 (Pa. Super. 2003) (a reasonable right of first refusal is allowable and does not constitute an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

Add

Bortolotti v. Hayden, 866 N.E.2d 882 (Mass. 2007) (right of first refusal did not violate the rule against restraints on alienation); Old Port Cove Condominium Ass'n One, Inc. v. Old Port Cove Holdings, Inc., 954 So. 2d 742 (Fla. App. 2007) (an option giving a right of first refusal was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

Stephens v. Trust for Public Land, 475 F. Supp. 2d 1299 (N.D. Ga. 2007) (right of first offer was not an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

Add:

Inwood Park Apts., Inc. v. Coinmach Indus. Co., 2004 NY Slip Op 24392 (N.Y. Misc., 2004) (a right of first refusal on a lease was an unreasonable restraint on alienation because it was not appurtenant to the lease and it could be exercised at any time after the lease expired).

Add

Vinson v. Johnson, 931 So. 2d 245 (Fla. App. 2006) (a will clause prohibiting sale or partition except upon unanimous agreement of the heirs was an unreasonable restraint on alienation).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 29 RESTRAINTS ON ALIENATION

3-29 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 29.06

Supp. to § 29.06 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Add Books

Burby, William E. Handbook of the Law of Real Property (3d ed. 1965).

Cribbet, John E. and Corwin W. Johnson. Principles of the Law of Property (3d ed. 1989).a

Moynihan, Cornelius J. and Sheldon F. Kurtz. Introduction to the Law of Real Property (4th ed. 2005).

Add to Articles

Abramowicz, Michael. "On the Alienability of Legal Claims." 114 Yale L.J. 697 (January, 2005).

"Right of First Refusal: As Restraint on Alienation," 35 Real Estate Law Report 4 (March 2006).

Robinson, Glen O. "Personal Property Servitudes." 71 U. Chi. L. Rev. 1449, 1454 (Fall, 2004).

Add to Annotations

Annotation, Nature of Estates or Interests Created by Grant or Devise to One and Heirs if Donee Should Have Any

Heirs, 16 A.L.R.2d 670 .

Annotation, Restraint upon voluntary alienation of legal life estate, 160 A.L.R. 639 .

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Transfer of Possibility of Reverter or Right of Re-Entry, following Conveyance of Determinable Fee or Fee Subject to Condition Subsequent, 53 A.L.R.2d 224 .

Annotation, Violation of rule against perpetuities, or unlawful, restraint of alienation or suspension of ownership, by postponement of vesting or alienation of ownership until exercise of discretion as to sale or disposal, 89 A.L.R. 1046 .

Annotation, Words of Survivorship in Will Disposing of Estate in Remainder as Referable to Death of Testator or to Termination of Intervening Estate, 20 A.L.R.2d 830 .

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 30.syn

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.syn Synopsis to Chapter 30: SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

§ 30.01 Introduction to the Chapter

§ 30.02 Specialized Definitions Pertaining to Future Interests

§ 30.02(a) Present and Future Interests Distinguished

§ 30.02(b) Words of Limitation

§ 30.02(c) "Heirs"

§ 30.02(d) "Issue"

§ 30.02(e) "Die Without Issue"

§ 30.02(f) Lapse

§ 30.02(g) Repudiation or Renunciation

§ 30.02(h) Acceleration

§ 30.03 Specialized Rules Pertaining to Future Interests

§ 30.03(a) How Estates End and Interests Begin

§ 30.03(b) Alienability

§ 30.03(c) Valuation

§ 30.03(d) Merger Rule

§ 30.03(e) Piggyback Rule

§ 30.03(f) Rules of Construction and Rules of Law

§ 30.03(f)(1) Surplusage

§ 30.03(f)(2) Implication

§ 30.03(f)(3) Preference for Vesting

§ 30.03(g) Adoption

§ 30.03(h) The Rule in Wild's Case

§ 30.03(i) The Rule in Shelley's Case

§ 30.03(j) The Doctrine of Worthier Title

§ 30.03(k) The Rule Against Perpetuities

§ 30.03(l) Interest with Possession Postponed

§ 30.04 Survivorship

§ 30.04(a) Implied

§ 30.04(b) Express

§ 30.05 Alternative Grants Using "Or"

§ 30.06 Cross Remainders

§ 30.07 Acceleration of Remainders

§ 30.08 Substitutional Gifts

§ 30.09 Class Gifts

§ 30.09(a) Definition

§ 30.09(b) Exclusion

§ 30.09(c) Shares

§ 30.10 Powers of Appointment

§ 30.10(a) Definitions

§ 30.10(b) Types of Powers

§ 30.10(b)(1) General Testamentary Power

§ 30.10(b)(2) General Power Exercisable by Deed or Will

§ 30.10(b)(3) Special Testamentary Power

§ 30.10(b)(4) Special Power Exercisable by Deed

§ 30.10(c) Words That Create or Exercise a Power

§ 30.10(d) Power and Ownership Compared

§ 30.10(e) Unexercised Power or Ineffective Appointment

§ 30.10(e)(1) General Power

§ 30.10(e)(2) Special Power

§ 30.10(f) Contract to Exercise an Appointment

§ 30.10(g) Conditions

§ 30.10(h) Release

§ 30.10(i) Claims of Creditors

§ 30.11 Bibliography

Dean John Makdisi
College of Law
University of Tulsa

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.01

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.01 Introduction to the Chapter

Future interests are regarded as the most complex aspect of American property law, partly because many of the basic legal doctrines are of ancient origin and forgotton rationale. Nevertheless, the doctrines, once mastered, are usually straightforward and reliable in application. It is probably inevitable that over the centuries those venerable doctrines would collect variants, exceptions and other special rules which, in their total impact, give additional substance to future interests' reputation for complexity. In this volume whose chapters are devoted to the various future interests in American property law, it is fitting that this concluding chapter survey these special rules, exceptions and other observations that apply to the modern American law of future interests. The chapter first surveys definitions of words and terms, then explains some of the more important specialized and often obscure legal rules, and gives clarifying explanations to various concepts and relationships unique to future interests.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.02

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.02 Specialized Definitions Pertaining to Future Interests

[Go To Supp]

§ 30.02(a) Present and Future Interests Distinguished

A present interest is present ownership of a present right to dominion over property. Such an interest is vested in possession. n1 Since a present interest in property may be an estate that ends at some time in the future, the person who holds the interest after the estate ends is the holder of a future interest. A future interest is a present ownership of a future right to dominion over property. If the future interest is created by one in oneself, it is called a reversionary interest. If it is created in one other than the grantor, it is called a remainder or an executory interest. A future interest is ownership that exists at the moment of creation, the time of conveyance, but it is not "ownership" of property in the common parlance of that term. The future interest holder does not have dominion over the property until it becomes a present interest.

The holder of a future interest is to be distinguished from the holder of a present interest with enjoyment postponed. Although enjoyment, one of the attributes of dominion, is postponed in both cases, the future interest holder follows some present interest holder who enjoys the property. In the case of the holder of a present interest with enjoyment postponed, the property is held by another for the benefit of the present interest holder. This difference becomes important in determining rights of inheritance n2 and the vested nature of the property interest under the Rule against Perpetuities. An estate is another way to describe a right to ownership. Whereas "interest" describes when and how an ownership in property begins, "estate" describes when and how it ends. There are three basic types of estates: fee simple, fee tail and life estate.

§ 30.02(b) Words of Limitation

Words of limitation need not be in a specific form or according to a specific content. They may be gathered from the whole conveyance.

In Webb v. Hearing n3 the testator stated in his will: "I bequeath to Francis my son my houses in London, after the death of my wife; and if my three daughters, or either of them, do overlive their mother, and Francis their brother and his heirs, then they to enjoy the same houses for term of their lives." The court found that Francis had a fee tail and interpreted "heirs" as "heirs of his body," "for the limitation being to his sisters, it is necessarily to be intended, that it was if he should die without issue of his body; for they are his heirs collateral."

§ 30.02(c) "Heirs"

The heirs (or other groups described by words of similar import) of a designated person in a conveyance are defined by the laws of intestate succession that are (1) in existence at the time of that person's death and (2) in the jurisdiction governing the intestate devolution of the property if it were owned by the person at the time of death. n4

In Farmers Trust Co. v. Wilson n5 the testatrix devised her property to her husband for life and then to her heirs at law. At the time of the execution of the will in 1906 a spouse was not included within the statutory meaning of heir at law. The Intestate Act of 1917 then changed the law to include a spouse within this designation. The testatrix died in 1918. The court ruled that although the testatrix's intent was to be determined at the time of the execution of the will, the meaning of heir at law was to be determined by the law in effect at the time the will became effective. Thus, the husband received not only a life estate but also shared a vested remainder in the property with the other heir at law.

The statutes of each jurisdiction must be examined to determine whether the term "heirs" is declared to mean "children." n6

Heirs of a person are usually determined at the point of that person's death. n7 However, there are times when the use of the word "heirs" suggests that the testator meant those who would be heirs at a time other than the testator's death. n8

In Welch v. Brimmer n9 the testator devised a fee simple subject to an executory devise to his son with an executory devise "to the person or persons who shall be my heir or heirs at law" in the event his son should die without issue living at his death and Eliza Oliver should not then be living. The son was the sole heir presumptive and the court found that the testator's heirs should be determined as if he died at the time of the death of his son. The court stated that "[i]t is argued that it is absurd to suppose from such indefinite language that a testator intended to give to an only child -- a son, for example -- real estate in fee if he survive the testator, and then, if the son die leaving no issue surviving him, to devest him of it in order to give it back to him in fee."

Professor Leach points out that in Massachusetts the court reached opposite results within a period of four months upon facts that are strikingly similar. n10 In Gilman v. Congregational Home Missionary Society n11 the court construed "heirs" of the testator in the ordinary sense of the term as determined at the death of the testator when the testator gave a life estate to his daughter who turned out to be his sole heir at law, and at her death:

> to the children of my said daughter, living at the time of her said decease, or the issue of any deceased child, so living, by right of representation ... in case at the death of my said daughter, she leaves no issue or the issue of any deceased child, living, then ... her present [named] husband [to take a life estate] ... and at his decease, all ... to go to my heirs at law ... but if [he] is not living ... to go to my heirs at law.

In Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Waite n12 the court construed "heirs" of the testator as determined at the death of his only son (who died without issue after the testator) when the testator gave a beneficial life estate to each of his children (he had only the one son at the time of his death who was his real heir at law) with remainder over to the then living issue, and if there be no such issue, then to the child's brothers and sisters then living or their issue then living, and if there be none such, then to the testator's heirs at law (who were the brothers and sisters of the testator when the testator was treated as having died after all his issue -- his only son -- died).

§ 30.02(d) "Issue"

Issue means descendants of all generations. n13 Heirs of the body means lineal descendants who would succeed under the intestacy laws. n14 Despite the difference in technical meaning, the term issue often is interpreted to mean heirs of the body. n15 At times it also may be interpreted to mean children. n16

In Kelly v. Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. n17 a will provided for a gift over in favor of a testator's daughter's "issue, share and share alike." The court rejected the interpretation of a gift to all descendants of whatever generation and found "issue" to be the equivalent of "heirs of the body." The testator's daughter's child took to the exclusion of her two children and her grandchild.

In Newick v. Mason n18 the income from a trust created by will:

> was made payable to the testator's four children in equal shares during their lifetime, and 'as death occurs [the trustee is] to pay the income to the issue of said deceased child, but if any of ... said children should die without issue the share of said deceased child shall be equally divided among the survivors[.] [O]n the death of the survivor [the trustee is] to pay the income annually to the trustees when appointed of Hartley Masons reservation... .'

The lower court construed the word "issue" to be synonymous with "child" or "children." The Supreme Court upheld this construction, stating that " '[t]he cardinal rule of construction is to give effect to the intent of the testator, discerned within the four corners of the instrument, bearing in mind that such intention must be related to the time when the instrument was executed.'

A gift to issue may be considered contingent on their existence at the time for distribution. n19

§ 30.02(e) "Die Without Issue"

The condition subsequent "if A die without issue" is ordinarily construed to mean exactly what it says: At the point of A's death, if A has no issue, then the condition has occurred that will cut short (along with re-entry in the case of an estate subject to condition subsequent) the prior estate. n20 Thus, O's conveyance "to A and his heirs, but if A die without issue, then to B" creates a present interest in fee simple subject to executory limitation in A and an executory interest in fee simple absolute in B. When A dies, if A has issue, then A's estate loses the condition subsequent which can never occur and becomes a fee simple absolute. If A has no issue at the time of A's death, then A's estate is cut short automatically and B's interest becomes a present interest in fee simple absolute. The construction given to the condition in this ordinary case is called a definite failure of issue construction.

The preference today is for the definite failure of issue construction except in one case where the condition subsequent "if A die without issue" is construed to mean something else. n21 Following an estate in fee tail, it is construed to mean the termination of the line of issue designated in the fee tail estate. Thus, O's conveyance "to A and the heirs of his body, but if A die without issue, then to B" requires that the condition "if A die without issue" be read to mean "when the line of issue of A's body runs out." The meaning given to this condition in these circumstances essentially makes the condition superfluous, because it describes the termination of the fee tail estate. Thus, O's conveyance creates a present interest in fee tail in A and a vested remainder in B in fee simple absolute. The construction given to the condition in this exceptional case is called an indefinite failure of issue construction.

In White v. Summers n22 a devise gave a life estate to John Bowen, then a fee tail to each of his sons successively according to seniority, and in default of such issue to each of the sons (who attained the age of twenty-one) of his nephew in fee tail successively according to seniority, "and in default of such issue" to the daughter of his nephew for life, then to each of her sons in fee tail successively according to seniority. John Bowen died without sons and none of the sons of the nephew had attained the age of twenty-one at that time (with the consequent destruction of their remainders by the Destructibility Rule). A question raised was whether the gift to the nephew's daughter was vested or contingent on the nephew having no son who lived to reach the age of twenty-one. The court stated that "[i]n my opinion, the words 'in default of such issue' are, and as a matter of conveyancing always have been, considered and used as apt words for the introduction of a remainder, and not as words of contingency." The court compared these words to those of "after the death" in a conveyance "to A for life, and after his death to... ." The remainder after A's life estate is not contingent on the death of A, but will take upon the forfeiture of A's life estate even though A still would be alive. Thus the remainder to the daughter's nephew was vested.

After the condition is determined to be superfluous, the fee tail can then be changed into the estate or estates designated in each state by statute.

Some courts construe the devise "to my daughter A, but if she dies without issue, to B" as substitutional, thereby giving the property to B only if A dies before the testator. n23 Also, there is some authority for construing the devise "to my spouse for life, remainder to my daughter A, but if she dies without issue, to her brothers and sisters or their issue" to allow the gift over only if A predeceases the life tenant. n24

§ 30.02(f) Lapse

A will speaks from the date of death of the testator, not from the date the will is made, unless a different intention is expressed. n25 Therefore, when a beneficiary under a will dies before the testator or disclaims the gift, the gift lapses in the absence of a testamentary or statutory provision for other disposition of the gift. n26 A lapsed gift does not pass to the beneficiary's estate. If it is neither a residuary nor a class gift, it passes to the general residuary legatees if there is a general residuary clause broad enough to cover the subject matter; otherwise it passes by intestacy. n27 If it is a residuary gift, it passes by intestacy, except in a few states where it may go to the remaining residuary beneficiaries. n28 If it is a class gift, it passes to the surviving members of the class. n29

A statutory provision for a disposition of a gift by will other than by lapse is called an antilapse statute. Most statutes substitute the beneficiary's lineal descendants in the case of a beneficiary who dies before the conveyance on the assumption that they are preferred to residuary or intestate takers. n30 The question arises, however, whether an antilapse statute should apply if the beneficiary dies before the will is made, and there is authority both ways. n31

§ 30.02(g) Repudiation or Renunciation

When a prior estate has been renounced, the remainder interest following it may not be accelerated if there is a condition precedent that bars its vesting. The primary consideration is the intention of the testator. Therefore, some conditions precedent that are contingent more on the termination of the prior estate than on the expressed event, such as death of the prior life tenant, do not bar vesting upon renunciation of the prior estate.

In Compton v. Rixey's Executors, n32 the testator stated in his will that "[u]pon the majority of my youngest child, my wife being alive and unmarried, I direct one-third of the net annual income ... to be paid over to my wife, as long as she live, and remains my widow, and the remaining two-thirds to be divided equally between my surviving children... . Upon the death of my wife, or her marriage, my youngest child living being of age, I direct my entire estate to go to and be divided equally between my children then living and the descendants per stirpes of such as may be then dead with issue surviving." The widow renounced her share seven years after the death of her husband. The four living children of the testator had reached majority and requested delivery of the estate to them. The court found that the children had contingent remainders that could not be accelerated because the children "then living" could not be ascertained until the death or remarriage of the wife. The court stated that acceleration generally has been allowed where the remainder "has been either vested, defeasible or an estate to one person followed by a substitutionary gift." However, here the court found the gift to the descendants was not substitutionary, that they took as purchasers, and "only those children who are living at the death or remarriage of the wife answer the description of donees."

§ 30.02(h) Acceleration

In Disston's Estate, n33 the testator devised his residuary estate in trust to pay his sister-in-law an annuity for life, then the income to be divided equally between his wife, his son, and his daughter. He then provided that "in the event of the death of either his son or daughter, leaving issue, during the lifetime of his widow, the share of the income of the one so dying should be paid to his or her issue; that should either of his children die without issue, during the lifetime of his widow, the income of the one so dying should be paid in equal shares to the widow and surviving child, so long as the former lived; further, that, upon the death of such surviving child, without issue, during the lifetime of his or her mother, all, income, subject to the payment of the before-mentioned annuity, should go to the testator's wife. As to the principal, subject to the annuity, at the death of his widow, the testator gave one-half of his residuary estate to his son, providing, however, that should the son then be deceased, the share in question should go to the latter's issue; the other half he directed [to his daughter] with remainder to her issue; he then provided that if either of his children should be dead, without issue, at the decease of his widow, the share of the one so dying should be paid to or held for the survivor; finally, should both children be so deceased, he gave the principal of his residuary estate to his nephews and nieces or their issue living at the time." The testator's widow elected to take against his will. The contingent remainders in the children were accelerated, subject to payment of the annuity, because the court found that the primary intent of the testator was to provide the alternative remainders as substitutionary "to prevent the occurrence of a lapse should either of the children die during the continuance of the trust."

Acceleration will not be allowed to the detriment of a disappointed legatee. If a wife renounces a life estate in order to take a statutory share payable out of the residue given to one legatee and the remainders after the life estate are to other legatees, the court may allow the income from the life estate to go to the residuary to help offset the loss of the statutory share. n34

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 180 (2d ed. 1984) for a general discussion of the difference between "vested in possession" and "vested in interest." Picard v. Vermilion Parish Sch. Bd., 742 So. 2d 589 (La. Ct. App. 1999) (defining a vested right as one which has become the property of a person in the form of a present interest). See also Fairbanks v. Tulane Univ., 731 So. 2d 983 (La. Ct. App. 1999).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Neuschafer v. McHale, 709 P.2d 734 (Or. 1985) (transaction did not create a present interest with enjoyment postponed but rather an interest that vested in the event of deaths and, as such, was testamentary and void).

(n3)Footnote 3. Cro. Jac. 415 (K.B. 1617).

(n4)Footnote 4. 3 Restatement of The Law of Property §§ 305, 308, at 1671-72, 1706 (1940). See Conway v. Childress, 896 S.W.2d 15 (Ky. App. 1994) (intestacy statute in effect at the date of life tenant's death determines whether the life tenant's illegitimate children come within the class of remaindermen designated by the will as the life tenant's "heirs-at-law"). Cf. Matter of Dodge Testamentary Trust, 330 N.W.2d 72 (Mich. App. 1982), in which a will directed that upon the happening of certain events the corpus of a testamentary trust consisting of personal property should be distributed to the heirs of the testator's children. The court found that the heirs should be determined as of the date of death of each child and that the heirs should be defined according to the statutes of distribution in effect at the time of that child's death. However, the court looked to the intestate laws of the domicile of the testator rather than of the domicile of each child, quoting from another opinion to the effect that the testator is more familiar with the law of his own domicile than with the law of other jurisdictions. In re Boyter, 2000 La. LEXIS 2 (La. 2000) (stating that the law in existence at the time of decedent's death governs issues related to that death). See also In re Dolese, 2000 La. App. LEXIS 35 (La. Ct. App. 2000); In re Estate of Fleming, 991 P.2d 128 (Wash. Ct. App 2000).

(n5)Footnote 5. 63 A.2d 14 (Pa. 1949).

(n6)Footnote 6. See W. Barton Leach, Cases and Materials on The Law of Future Interests 480 n.5 (2d ed. 1940).

(n7)Footnote 7. It is a well-established basic rule of construction in most jurisdictions according to Edward C. Halbach, Jr. & Eugene F. Scoles, Problems and Materials on Future Interests 147 (1977). They name the following exception: heirs of a person determined at the death of the testator where the testator devises to the heirs of the person who predeceased the testator. Adams, Cynthia, Survey: Trusts and Decedents' Estates, 32 Ind. L. Rev. 1097 (1999) (stating that Indiana generally determines a person's heirs at the time of his or her death).

(n8)Footnote 8. One argument is to prevent property from going to non-relatives. William M. McGovern, Facts and Rules in the Construction of Wills, 26 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 285, 291 (1978) [hereinafter Facts and Rules].

(n9)Footnote 9. 47 N.E. 699 (Mass. 1897). Compare Holloway v. Holloway, 5 Ves. Jr. 399 (Ch. 1800) ("heirs" given its normal meaning although one of the heirs was a named taker of another part of the bequest). A case similar to Welch v. Brimmer is Warren-Boynton State Bank v. Wallbaum, 528 N.E.2d 640 (Ill. 1988).

(n10)Footnote 10. Leach, supra note 6, at 465.

(n11)Footnote 11. 177 N.E. 621 (Mass. 1931).

(n12)Footnote 12. 179 N.E. 624 (Mass. 1932).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Freeman v. Parsley, 3 Ves. Jr. 421 (Ch. 1797). Bilbrey v. Smithers, 937 S.W.2d 803 (Tenn. 1996) (children born out of wedlock whose paternity is not decided before their father's death can establish a right to inherit through him if they file their claim within the proper time frame); Johnson v. Cohan, 2000 Mass. Super. LEXIS 45 (2000) (stating that a court will ordinarily define issue as all lineal descendants). See also In re Shumavon, 260 A.D.2d 140, 701 N.Y.S.2d 84 (1999)..

(n14)Footnote 14. 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 306, at 1696 (1940)..

(n15)Footnote 15. See 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 303, at 1658 (1940).

(n16)Footnote 16. Elefante v. Newhall, 690 N.E.2d 283 (Mass. App. Ct. 1998) (the word "issue" as used in the estate meant "child" and included son's adopted children).

(n17)Footnote 17. 278 A.2d 584 (Md. 1971).

(n18)Footnote 18. 581 A.2d 1269 (Me. 1990).

(n19)Footnote 19. See In re Estate of Hylin, 286 N.E.2d 278 (N.Y. 1972).

(n20)Footnote 20. It could also mean death without ever having had issue, but this meaning is not usually used. See Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to The Law of Property 40 n.1 (2d ed. 1988); Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 236-237.

(n21)Footnote 21. See 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 267 & cmt. i (1940); Moynihan, supra note 20, at 41, where it is noted nevertheless that this constructional preference is not universal, and even where it exists now it may not apply to deeds or wills taking effect before a certain date.

(n22)Footnote 22. 2 Ch. D. 256, at 271-74 (1908).

(n23)Footnote 23. Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 291. See Friedman v. Marshall, 876 S.W.2d 745 (Mo. App. 1994) (devise to children and "in the event any of my heirs die without issue the real estate hereinabove bequeathed unto either of such children shall revert to and become the property of my estate for equal distribution among the surviving heirs, including my beloved wife").

(n24)Footnote 24. Id. at 295; Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 689 (4th ed. 1990), stating that it is the majority view and citing 5 American Law of Property, § 21.53 (A. James Casner, ed. 1952).

(n25)Footnote 25. Campbell v. Clark, 10 A. 702 (N.H. 1887).

(n26)Footnote 26. Thomas E. Atkinson, Handbook of The Law of Wills 777 (2d ed. 1953). The time in which a gift may be disclaimed may be regulated by statute. See Estate of Balson, 515 N.W.2d 474 (Wis. App. 1994).

(n27)Footnote 27. Id. at 784.

(n28)Footnote 28. Id. at 784-785.

(n29)Footnote 29. Leonard Levin, Lapse and Vesting of Interest Revisited, 3 Hofstra Prop. L.J. 155, at 156 (1990).

(n30)Footnote 30. Mary Louise Fellows, In Search of Donative Intent, 73 Iowa L. Rev. 611, at 637 (1988). See Early v. Bowen, 447 S.E.2d 167 (N.C. App. 1994) (devise to two brothers or to the survivor does not prevent application of anti-lapse statute to distribute estate to issue of both brothers when both brothers died before the testator).

(n31)Footnote 31. Compare 2 Simes & Smith, supra note 61 § 64, at 150-151 (exclude), with 5 American Law of Property supra note 15 § 22.50, at 400 (include).

(n32)Footnote 32. 98 S.E. 651 (Va. 1919).

(n33)Footnote 33. 101 A. 804 (Pa. 1917).

(n34)Footnote 34. See Sellick v. Sellick, 173 N.W. 609 (Mich. 1919) (quoting from another case that "[i]t is well settled, when a widow elects not to take under a will, but to take under the law, her portion under the will will be sequestered to compensate those beneficiaries under the will whose shares are cut down by her election"). Cf. Trustees Church Home v. Morris, 99 Ky. 317 (1896).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.03

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.03 Specialized Rules Pertaining to Future Interests

[Go To Supp]

§ 30.03(a) How Estates End and Interests Begin

The fee simple absolute never ends naturally. n35 It is infinite in duration and can only be divided. The life estate and fee tail do end naturally at the end of a lifetime. In the case of the life estate, the lifetime is designated; the fee tail estate ends upon the death of the last in a line of issue. When the life estate and the fee tail end in this way, it is called a natural termination.

There are two other ways in which all three estates may end. They may be forfeited for waste of the property. n36 Such an ending is called an unnatural termination. Or they may be cut short by a condition subsequent.

A future interest that follows the ending of an estate or estates is characterized by how the estate or estates end. If no preceding estate must be cut short by a condition subsequent before the future interest can become a present interest, the future interest is called one of two things: a reversion if the grantor leaves the interest in himself n37 or a remainder if it is created by the grantor in one other than himself. If any preceding estate must be cut short by a condition subsequent before the future interest can become a present interest, the future interest is called one of three things: a possibility of reverter if the condition subsequent cuts short an estate determinable, a right of reentry n38 if the condition subsequent cuts short an estate subject to condition subsequent, or an executory interest if the estate cuts short an estate subject to executory limitation. n39 The possibility of reverter and the right of reentry are future interests left in the grantor. n40 The executory interest is a future interest created by the grantor in one other than himself.

Thus, for example, a conveyance from O "to A for life, then to B" creates a remainder in B; a conveyance from O "to A for life, then to O" creates a reversion in O; and a conveyance from O "to A for life, then to B, but if A ever gets married, then to C" creates a remainder in B and an executory interest in C. A conveyance from O "to A for life as long as A never gets married, then to B" creates a remainder in B because B's future interest can take upon the natural termination of A's life estate and does not have to follow the cutting short of the life estate by the condition subsequent of A's marriage (although it will follow the cutting short of the life estate if the condition subsequent occurs). A conveyance from O "to A as long as A does not get married, then to O" creates a possibility of reverter in O. A conveyance from O "to A for life as long as A does not get married, then to O" creates a reversion in O because O's future interest can take upon the natural termination of A's life estate and does not have to follow the cutting short of A's life estate by the condition subsequent of A's marriage. A conveyance from O "to A but if A gets married then O shall have the right to reenter" creates a right of reentry in O that becomes a present interest upon the happening of the condition subsequent coupled with exercise of the right of reentry by the grantor or the grantor's successor in interest.

In Donehue v. Nilges n41 a grant to a school district for "so long as the aforesaid premises shall be used for a school house site and no longer, and if the aforesaid premises be no longer used for a school house site, it shall revert to and become the property of the grantors herein or those claiming ... by, through or under said grantors" was considered "a determinable fee, a fee simple estate which automatically terminates upon the occurrence of a specified event [and] there remained in the grantors a 'possibility of reverter.' " (The limitation over to those claiming by, through or under the grantors was found void under the rule against perpetuities, leaving only the possibility of reverter in the grantors.)

§ 30.03(b) Alienability

Most interests are alienable in all jurisdictions. Some jurisdictions do restrict the alienability of some interests, such as the possibility of reverter, n42 the right of re-entry, n43 and the contingent remainder. n44 The fee tail and the life estate are not devisable by definition, except the life estate pur autre vie. n45 A life estate is not inheritable by definition, except the life estate pur autre vie. n46 By definition, an interest in a fee tail is inheritable only by issue.

§ 30.03(c) Valuation

A gratuitous transfer of a property interest is subject to gift or estate taxation. Valuation of a future interest may be accomplished as follows:

> To value a remainder we must ascertain the present value of a sum of money to be received on the life tenant's death. The right to $1 one year from now is not worth $1 now, but only $1 less the amount of interest that could be earned on it. Assuming a 6 percent rate of interest, 94 cents today will grow to $1 a year from today. Hence, assuming a 6 percent interest rate, the right to $1 a year from now is now worth 94 cents. The more distant the right to receive the sum, the lower its present value. A dollar due in two years is worth 89 cents today (at 6 percent interest); by reinvesting interest, 89 cents today will grow into 94 cents one year from now, which will grow into $1 two years from now. The present value of the right to receive $1 at the end of three years is 84 cents... . To put it another way, 84 cents invested at 6 percent with interest compounded annually will be worth $1 at the end of three years.
>
> In order to value a remainder we must know the number of years the right to receive the sum will be deferred. Since we do not know how long the life tenant will actually live, we assume the life tenant will die at the time predicted by a life expectancy (mortality) table.
>
> The present value of a life estate and of a remainder together equal the present value of the whole property. Let us assume that we have property worth $100,000 today, an interest rate of 6 percent, a life estate in A, a remainder in B. How do we apportion this $100,000 present value between A's and B's interests? First, as for A, what is the present value of the right to receive $6,000 annually (6 percent of $100,000) for the life tenant's life expectancy? We seek a sum which, invested for the life tenant's life expectancy at 6 percent, will pay $6,000 for the given number of years and exhaust itself on final payment -- in short, the price of an annuity. To simplify the problem let us assume A has a life expectancy of only three years. As shown above the present value of $1 due at the end of one year is 94 cents; the present value of $1 due at the end of two years is 89 cents; and the present value of the right to receive $1 at the end of three years is 84 cents. The present value of the right to receive $1 for each of the three years is the sum of 94 cents and 89 cents and 84 cents, which is $2.67. Now what is the present value of the right to receive $6,000 for three years? $6,000 x 2.67 = $16,020, which is the present value of the life estate. The remainder has a present worth of $83,980. n47

§ 30.03(d) Merger Rule

Merger of two separate interests occurs when they are owned by the same person(s), one immediately follows the other, and the interests are both vested (or both contingent on the satisfaction of the same condition(s) precedent). n48

In Purefoy v. Rogers n49 a devise gave a life estate to the testator's widow and then, if she should have a son and name him after the testator, to such son and his heirs, but if the son should die under 21, then to the testator's heirs. The testator's heir conveyed his interest in the property to the widow before she had a son. The court found that the heir's conveyance to the widow merged out the intervening contingent remainder.

In Blocker v. Blocker n50 testator devised an undivided one-third of two thirds of a certain lot of land to his son John for life, "with remainder to such child or children of said John C. Blocker, Jr., as survive him, and if he should not be survived by a child or children, then to a non-sectarian orphanage... ." The sole heirs of the testator were his son John and his daughter Marguerite. John conveyed his life estate and both John and Marguerite conveyed their reversion in this property to one William Hill. The court found that "the life estate merged in the fee and the contingent remainders which theretofore had been supported by the said life estate were destroyed in spite of testator's intention as expressed in the will."

There are two exceptions to this rule:

> (1) A fee tail does not merge with a fee simple.
>
> (2) Although a vested interest is considered to follow another vested interest immediately even when there exists an intervening contingent remainder(s), two successive vested interests in the same person(s) do not merge if they are created in that person(s) simultaneously with the creation of the contingent remainder(s). n51

Merger may occur at the time of the conveyance, such as in the case of O's conveyance "to A for life, then to A's heirs" which is subject to the Rule in Shelley's Case. Merger may also occur at a time after the conveyance has become effective.

§ 30.03(e) Piggyback Rule

A term of years does not figure in the calculus of future interests. It merely takes from one of the interest holders the right to possession of the property for a fixed period of time. In this sense it rides piggyback on the interest.

In Cunliffe v. Brancker n52 a will devised:

> for the term of 120 years if the testator's niece, Sarah Cunliffe, should so long live, in trust to pay the yearly rents to said Sarah Cunliffe for her separate use; [then] to the use of John Cunliffe during his life, with remainder to the use of [the trustees] during the life of the said John Cunliffe, upon trust to preserve contingent uses and estates thereafter limited from being defeated or destroyed, and after the death of John Cunliffe to the use of such children of John and Sarah Cunliffe living at the death of Sarah as they or the survivor should appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of the children of John and Sarah Cunliffe living at the death of Sarah equally, with remainders over in the event that there should be no child of John and Sarah Cunliffe living at the death of the survivor of them.

The court found that the interests were legal and that the death of John before Sarah caused the freehold estates (lasting for the life of John and supporting the contingent remainders in the children) to terminate. Since the remainders did not vest before the termination of their supporting estates, the Destructibility of Contingent Remainders Rule caused them to fail. The result was an intestacy upon the death of Sarah. [The term of years was non-freehold and could not support interests such as the contingent remainders in freehold. When the will became effective, the present interest was in John in a life estate with Sarah's term of years riding piggyback on his estate. It is interesting that both attempts to evade the Destructibility Rule -- a long term of years and a remainder in trustees to preserve contingent remainders -- failed in this case.]

§ 30.03(f) Rules of Construction and Rules of Law

The primary objective in construing a conveyance is to determine the disposition a conveyor intended to make. n53 This intent is usually determined "by the language employed in his conveyance [including vocabulary peculiar to the conveyor], read as an entirety and in light of the circumstances of its formulation." n54 However, the intent of the conveyor cannot always be ascertained and rules have developed to construe intent according to certain preferences such as the intent commonly prevalent among conveyors similarly situated, the public interest, and an interpretation of the conveyance that will make it legally more effective. n55 This chapter is devoted to the constructional preferences that have manifested themselves in the cases. In reading this chapter it is wise to keep in mind the words of Professor Leach:

> Any considerable examination of the authorities will indicate that English judges give far greater weight to prior decisions in matters of interpretation than American judges; in the main the English cases can be relied upon for the content and historic basis for a given rule but are deceptive as to its strength before an American court. Modern courts take rules of construction less seriously than used to be the practice. n56

§ 30.03(f)(1) Surplusage

Some words that appear to create a condition may be no more than mere surplusage. Thus, in a conveyance "to A for life, and then after A's death to B," B's remainder is vested and takes in possession even if A's life estate ends before A's death by disclaimer, release or forfeiture. n57

In Webb v. Hearing n58 the testator stated in his will: "I bequeath to Francis my son my houses in London, after the death of my wife; and if my three daughters, or either of them, do overlive their mother, and Francis their brother and his heirs, then they to enjoy the same houses for term of their lives." The court found that the interest of the daughters was not contingent since the words "do overlive their mother, and Francis their brother and his heirs" merely showed when their interest was to commence.

§ 30.03(f)(2) Implication

Some words do not create an estate explicitly but the court may find an estate by implication in order to prevent a partial intestacy n59 or incomplete dispositions in inter vivos transfers or to give effect to the manifest intention of the testator. It may be an alternative gift to issue.

In Estate of Blake n60 the testator devised the residue of his estate to trustees "to hold ... and pay over the net income therefrom in equal proportions quarterly to my said daughters ... and my granddaughter ..., until they shall respectively arrive at the age of thirty years, and as each of my said daughters and granddaughter arrives at the age of thirty years she shall have the right to demand and receive one third of the rest and residue of my said estate as her distributive share thereof, and to have and hold the same to her and her heirs forever, and if either of my said daughters or granddaughter shall die without issue and before she receives her distributive share of my estate, it is my desire that her share of my estate shall go to the surviving daughter, daughters or granddaughter as the case may be, share and share alike." The court found that the gift of the corpus was contingent on the beneficiary reaching the age of thirty; it did not vest with possession postponed. Although the entire interim income was given to the beneficiary, the presumption from Clobberie's Case of a present vested gift was not adopted because of the language used in connection with the right "to demand and receive" and the presence of a gift over. Thus, the testator did not provide explicitly for the case where a daughter or granddaughter should die with issue before receiving her distributive share. The court found that in such a case the issue took the ancestor's share under the will by implication.

It may be a life estate. In Ralph v. Carrick n61 the testator gave the residue of his property to the children (or their descendants) of seven named aunts after the death of his wife. Some but not all of the children were heirs-at-law. The court determined that the wife did not receive a life estate by implication under the terms of the will, but it stated the principle on which a life estate by implication could be created:

> As regards an heir-at-law, if the real estate is given to him alone after the death of A.B., there is a gift to him at that time of what, in the absence of any gift, he would take immediately after the death of the testator. To make sense of this you must take it as expressing an intention to exclude the heir-at-law till that time arrives. Now an heir-at-law can only be excluded by giving the property to somebody else, and therefore, when there is a gift to the heir-at-law alone of real estate after the death of A., a gift of a life estate to A. is implied, because in no other way can the heir-at-law be excluded. But if the gift of the estate after the death of A. is to a stranger, that reasoning does not apply, for the stranger takes simply and entirely by the bounty of the testator, and in the absence of any gift, neither after the death of the named person nor at any other time, will he take anything, and it is not necessary to give anything to A. in order to postpone the gift to the stranger, for there is no difficulty in giving an estate to the stranger on the death of A., leaving it in the meantime to go to the heir-at-law.

The court then found that where the heirs-at-law after the death of the testator's wife would take under the will only a share of that which independently of the will would have come to them, it was not necessary to give the wife a life estate to postpone that smaller interest they would take under the will.

It may be cross-remainders. In Purdy v. Hayt n62 the testator gave real estate to his two sisters "during their respective lives" with a direction to sell it after their deaths and pay the income to his niece for life and then the principle to go to others. The court found that cross-remainders were implied and that upon the death of one of the sisters the other took a life estate in her share. In Smith v. Usher n63 testator gave a tract of land, Mixon place, to his two daughters "to be used and enjoyed by them during their natural lives ... and should [the two daughters] have lawful children, then at their decease, I give and devise said plantation to said heirs forever. But should both of said daughters die childless, I give and devise said Mixon place to my grandson Michael Smith." One daughter died leaving no children. Michael Smith's heir sought her one-half undivided interest in the property under the will. However, the court found that the living daughter was entitled to the dead daughter's share by an implied cross-remainder and that Smith's share was contingent on the death of both daughters without children.

It may be the creation of a remainder where otherwise there would have been a reversion. In Metcalf v. Framingham Parish n64 a bequest was given to Nancy Green and her husband, William:

> for and during their natural lives, as follows: First, during the life of said Nancy, the net income of the same shall be paid over semiannually to said Nancy. In case said Nancy should die before said William, then ... one half of said stock in equal parts to said Association and said Home. The income of the remainder shall be paid to said William as aforesaid during his natural life. Second. In case the said William should die before said Nancy, then at the decease of said Nancy the whole of said stock shall be transferred in equal shares to said Association and said Home, and said trust estate shall cease.

There is no express provision in this will for the disposition of William's share upon his death after Nancy's death. The court implied a gift to the named charities, the Association and the Home.

Some words that appear to create an estate by implication do not. In Bond v. Moore n65 the testatrix gave land to her "son, Lester Curtis, during his lifetime [with a power of sale]; but should he die without children, then the estate, or so much of it as may remain after his reasonable expenses for living, etc., shall go to my nearest relatives." Lester, who had no children at the time the will was executed but did have children at the time of the testatrix's death, conveyed this land to a William Bond who reconveyed to Lester, upon which Lester claimed a fee simple absolute in this land. The court agreed that he had received a life estate by will and a reversion by intestate succession; when Lester conveyed these two vested interests in the property, the intervening contingent remainder in the nearest relatives was destroyed. The court (with three dissenters) did not imply a vested remainder in Lester's children subject to Lester's life estate, despite the gift over to the nearest relatives should Lester die without children.

§ 30.03(f)(3) Preference for Vesting

Due to the fragility of contingent interests, early vesting and early indefeasibility were considered in the public interest and judicial constructions made this a preference. n66 The consequences of a vested construction are the avoidance of the Destructibility of Contingent Remainders Rule, transferability inter vivos in states where contingent interests are not transferable, acceleration into possession upon the termination of the preceding estates, and avoidance of the rule against perpetuities. n67 It also promotes marketability by avoiding the uncertainty that exists in a contingent interest.

The early vesting of interests is particularly evident in the construction of conditions. The construction of conditions as precedent or subsequent is generally based on a common sense reading of the conveyance. Thus, O's conveyance "to A for life, then to B if B gets married, and if B does not get married, then to C" creates alternative contingent remainders in B and C. B's remainder is subject to the condition precedent of B's marriage. C's remainder is subject to the condition precedent of B's non-marriage. On the other hand, O's conveyance "to A for life, then to B, but if B does not get married, then to C" creates a vested remainder in B and an executory interest in C. The condition of non-marriage is a cutting off condition -- a condition subsequent. B gets a vested remainder at the time of the conveyance and this vested remainder will become a present interest upon A's death if B has not yet married, but as soon as B dies without having married, B's estate is cut off in favor of C's interest. At that time C's interest is transformed from an executory interest into a vested interest (either a remainder or a present interest depending on whether B has a remainder or a present interest at that time). n68

In Matter of Krooss, n69 Herman Krooss gave his residuary estate by will to his wife for life and then to his two children "to and for their own use absolutely and forever. In the event that either of my children aforesaid should die prior to the death of my beloved wife, Eliese Krooss, leaving descendants, then it is my wish and I so direct that such descendants shall take the share their parent would have taken if then living, share and share alike, to and for their own use absolutely and forever." The court interpreted the will to give to the two children of Herman vested remainders subject to divestment on the happening of two conditions, death before the life beneficiary and the leaving of descendants. The occurrence of only one of the conditions was not enough to divest a vested remainder in this case.

John Chipman Gray stated that "[i]f the conditional element is incorporated into the description of, or into the gift to, the remainder-man, then the remainder is contingent ["to A. for life, remainder to such of his children as survive him"]; but if, after words giving a vested interest, a clause is added divesting it ["to A. for life, remainder to his children, but if any child dies in the lifetime of A. his share to go to those who survive"], the remainder is vested." n70

In Festing v. Allen n71 the testator devised to his wife for life, then to his granddaughter for life, remainder to the children of his granddaughter who shall attain the age of twenty-one, and in the absence of such children, to other designated persons. The court found that the condition of attaining the age of twenty-one was a condition precedent on the interests of the granddaughter's children, and since no child had reached twenty-one by the termination of the preceding life estates, the contingent remainders in the granddaughter's children failed [under the Destructibility Rule].

In In re Trust of Lane n72 the court found that the distribution of the proceeds of a trust upon the deaths of the testator's children to "my grandchildren; Nancy Marie Brownell, Lois Lane, and Patricia Lane, or to the survivors of them if any be deceased" created a vested remainder in these grandchildren subject to divestment by the condition subsequent of death of any of them leaving at least one of them surviving the deaths of the testator's children. The court stated that there is a preference for early vesting and refused to find that the grandchildren had contingent remainders because after the words giving the interest to them the testator added the clause "or to the survivors of them if any be deceased." n73 Thus, if all three remaindermen died before the deaths of the testator's children, the divesting condition would not take place and the property would be vested indefeasibly in the takers from the grandchildren.

Other examples of conveyances in which the nature of the condition is precedent so as to produce alternative contingent remainders in B and C are "to A for life, then if B gets married, to B, and if B does not get married, then to C," "to A for life, then to B if B gets married, and to C if B does not get married," "to A for life, then if B gets married, to B, and to C if B does not get married," and "to A for life, then if B gets married, to B and her heirs, otherwise to C and his heirs."

The one exception to this construction of conditions through a common sense reading is in the case where two conditions that are mirror images of each other are used to refer to an age contingency. Some cases have found that although the conveyance appears to create two alternative contingent remainders, it in fact creates a vested remainder and an executory interest. n74

In Edwards v. Hammond n75 a copyholder of land "surrendered to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of his eldest son and his heirs, if he live to the age of 21 years; provided, and upon condition, that if he die before 21, that then it shall remain to the surrenderer and his heirs." The court found that the interest in the son vested on the death of his father, subject to the condition subsequent that he reach 21, i.e., that if he failed to reach 21, the son's interest would be divested.

In Price v. Hall n76 the testator devised his real estate to his wife for life, and "after the death of my wife I give, devise, and bequeath the same equally to the child or children of my said grandson William Hall, if he leave any him surviving, but in case he leave no child or children him surviving, I give, devise, and bequeath my said real estates, or the residue thereof, unto the children or child of my cousin, Jonas Wilman." Mary Hall died after the testator, leaving William Hall and three children of William Hall surviving her. After Mary Hall's death, William Hall had two more children. The court found that the children had contingent remainders that were not satisfied by the time the preceding estate in Mary Hall had terminated, and therefore they failed. Edwards v. Hammond was distinguished on the ground that it was a gift to children on their attaining a particular age.

In a conveyance of the kind in Edwards v. Hammond it is also possible to create a present interest subject to divestment by an executory interest. In Phipps v. Ackers n77 the testator devised certain land to his godson, stating:

> [T]hey my trustees shall stand seised and be possessed thereof in trust and to the intent and purpose to assign, convey, and assure the same unto my godson, George Holland Ackers, ..., when and so soon as he, my said godson, shall attain his age of twenty-one years; and also do and shall pay unto my said godson, G.H. Ackers, the sum of 7000 l. at and upon his attaining his said age of twenty-one years. But in case my said godson, G.H. Ackers, shall depart this life before he attains the said age of twenty-one years without leaving issue of his body, lawfully to be begotten, then and in such case the [property], together with the said sum of 7000 l., shall sink into and become part of the residue of my real and personal estate.

The court found that Ackers had an equitable present interest subject to divestment in favor of the person taking the residuary of the estate if Ackers died under age twenty-one and without leaving lawful issue.

§ 30.03(g) Adoption

When adoption laws were enacted in the second half of the 19th century, adopted children ordinarily could not take unless the donor was the adoptive parent. n78 The presumption today in most jurisdictions is that adopted children are included in the designation of "children," "issue," descendants," and "heirs." n79 However, if adoption is used for the purpose of bringing a person under the provisions of a pre-existing testamentary instrument when the person clearly was not intended to be so covered, some courts may exclude the adopted person from the class. n80 Also, a child adopted by another may possibly not be included within the class of children of the natural parent "if such adoption removes the child from the broader family circle" of the natural parent. n81

§ 30.03(h) The Rule in Wild's Case

In 1599, Wild's Case n82 established two resolutions that have since influenced the construction of a devise "to A and A's children." The first resolution interpreted the devise when the children were not living at the time of death of the testator as a fee tail in A. The second resolution interpreted the devise when the children were living at the time of death of the testator as a life estate held concurrently by A and A's children as joint tenants.

Since the time of that case, the Rule in Wild's Case has been modified. n83 The preferred view gives a life estate to A and a contingent remainder to the children when the children are not living at the time of the conveyance, and a fee simple estate to A and A's children as a tenancy in common when the children are living at the time of the conveyance.

Where the devise is "to A for life, then to B and B's children" the existence of children at the death of the testator has been used to determine that the children share a fee simple with their parent.

In Wills v. Foltz, n84 the testator gave "to M.F. Wills a support as long as she remains single and the balance of my property I give to L.M. Grapes, S.A. Wills & Minnie V. Wills and their children after all my just debts are paid." The three named takers of the remainder were the daughters of the testator. At the time of the testator's death each had children; one child was born to one of the daughters after the testator's death. By applying the Rule in Wild's Case as of the testator's death, the court found that the daughters and their children took per capita a fee simple. Apparently, they had a vested remainder subject to open because the child born after the testator's death seems to have been included in the devise.

There are variations on these views of the Rule in Wild's Case. In Mississippi, in a grant to A and her children, while the modified view is adopted where children are in existence on the effective date of the grant, n85 children are excluded from the conveyance if they are not in existence at that time. n86

The shares taken by A and A's children when they take concurrently varies among the jurisdictions. They may all take as one class and share equally, or A may take an undivided one-half share and the children may take the other undivided one-half share equally. n87

§ 30.03(i) The Rule in Shelley's Case

The Rule in Shelley's Case n88 operates to convert a remainder in heirs into a remainder in the ancestor. If a conveyance or will gives a freehold estate in real property to a person preceding a remainder to that same person's heirs (or heirs of the body), and the estates are both legal or both equitable, the remainder is considered a remainder in fee simple (or fee tail) in the ancestor.

In City Bank & Trust Co. v. Morrissey, n89 Margaret Tyne left a will in which a trust was established for the benefit of William Tyne for life and then upon his death "that all the assets of the trust be converted into cash or distributed in kind to the heirs at law of the said William Tyne who survive him." The Rule in Shelley's Case applied to convert the equitable remainder in the real property of the trust into a remainder in William Tyne giving him, after merger, an equitable present interest in fee simple absolute in the realty. Since the Rule does not apply to personalty, the heirs retained their equitable remainder in the personal property. Therefore, the legatees under William Tyne's will received the realty of the trust which Tyne was entitled to devise, while his heirs at law received the personalty that they had held until Tyne's death as an equitable remainder. This case confirmed that the Rule in Shelley's Case does apply to equitable interests, and both the interest in the ancestor and the interest in the heirs were equitable: The duty in the trustee to convert or distribute in kind the property of the remainder after the death of Tyne required the legal interest to be vested in the trustee and the equitable interest in the heirs. Furthermore, the fact that this duty was discretionary in the trustee prevented an equitable conversion of the heirs' property into personalty from taking place.

The Rule in Shelley's Case applies where the freehold estate is held by the ancestor as a cotenant. The rule also applies where the freehold estate is held as a vested remainder or as a contingent remainder subject to the same condition precedent as the following remainder in the heirs.

In Starnes v. Hill, n90 a deed conveyed land to C. A. Moore, trustee, "to the use of Madara J. Patterson for and during the time of her natural life, and, in the event that the said R.O. Patterson shall outlive his said wife, Madara J., that the said C.A. Moore and his heirs will then hold the same to the use of said R. O. Patterson for and during the term of his natural life, and, after the termination of the said life estates, that the said C. A. Moore and his heirs will then hold the same to the use of the heirs of the said R. O. Patterson, and them and their heirs forever." It was held that in equity R. O. received a contingent remainder in a life estate following the present interest in a life estate in Madara; R. O.'s heirs received a contingent remainder in fee simple absolute following the estates of Madara and R.O. The Rule in Shelley's Case could not apply until R.O. satisfied the condition precedent of survival of his wife because R.O.'s heirs were not subject to the same condition precedent.

The Rule in Shelley's Case does operate on a delayed basis, and if R.O. Patterson in the first case above did survive his wife, the rule would have operated to transform the heirs' contingent remainder into a remainder in R.O. At that time the present interest in a life estate in R.O. would merge with the vested remainder in fee simple absolute in R.O. to form a present interest in fee simple absolute in R.O.

The Rule in Shelley's Case is a rule of law and not a rule of construction. It is not possible to avoid the Rule based on a showing of the grantor's intent, unless the word "heirs" is intended to mean something other than heirs and the Rule is not applicable.

In Lydick v. Tate, n91 the testator devised to his "daughter during her widowhood, ... to have and to hold for and during her natural life, and at her death or remarriage the said land shall descend to her heirs." By the time the testator died, the daughter was no longer a widow; she also had three sons. The court considered the question whether "heirs" should be read in its technical sense, thus giving the daughter a fee simple absolute through operation of the Rule in Shelley's Case; n92 or whether "heirs" should be read as "children," thus giving the daughter's sons a fee simple absolute upon the death of the testator with the daughter no longer a widow. The court found no reason to read the word "heirs" in any way other than its technical sense, but its discussion suggested that a nontechnical reading would be acceptable if the proper circumstances existed.

Many states have abrogated the Rule in Shelley's Case. n93

§ 30.03(j) The Doctrine of Worthier Title

The Doctrine of Worthier Title operates to convert a future interest (remainder or executory interest) n94 or, in a devise, a present interest in real or personal property n95 in the heirs n96 of the grantor (not heirs of the body) n97 or next of kin n98 of the grantor or, in a devise, a named person(s) who is (are) the heir(s) n99 of the grantor into a reversionary interest in the grantor. If the limitation to the heirs is an executory interest, the doctrine has the effect of giving the grantor a possibility of reverter. n100 There are two branches to the Doctrine of Worthier Title: the testamentary branch and the inter vivos branch. The testamentary branch requires one additional element: The heir taking by the devise must take the same interest in quantity and quality that he would have taken if the devise would have been stricken out of the will. n101

Authority for this doctrine developed in the 16th century in a number of cases, the most noted of which was Bingham's Case. n102 Although the doctrine was abolished in England in 1833, n103 it continues to be effective in both branches in several of the United States today. However, some states have abrogated the Doctrine of Worthier Title. n104

The testamentary branch of this rule appears to be a rule of law. n105 The inter vivos branch of this rule is a rule of construction and can be avoided by showing a contrary intent in the grantor. n106 A factor that may be taken into consideration in determining that there is an intent by the grantor to create a remainder in the grantor's heirs rather than a reversion in the grantor is a provision in the trust instrument that the grantor has the power to dispose of the property by will only. n107 Factors that may indicate an intent by the grantor to create a reversion are the retention of broad and extensive powers of control over trust property by the grantor, a provision that the property shall "revert" to the heirs or next of kin, a provision stating that the corpus of the trust is to be paid over to the grantor at the end of a certain period of time or upon the happening of some event but to the heirs or next of kin if the settlor is not living, and the fact that the settlor is the sole beneficiary other than the prospective heirs or next of kin. n108

In Whittemore v. Equitable Trust Co., n109 a trust was created in personal property for the lives of two beneficiaries, and then, in the summary words of the court:

> [a]t the death of the life beneficiary, the trustee is directed to do one of three things: pay the principal of the estate to the settlor, if he be alive; or, if he be dead, to pay it as directed in the settlor's last will and testament; or, if the settlor leave no will, to pay it to the persons who would then take under the Statute of Distributions.

The court found that:

> the settlor intended to make a complete disposition of all the estate at the time of the making of the instrument, ... [and t]he children or next of kin were given a vested remainder which might be divested by the last will and testament of the settlor; it could not be divested by the deed or assignment of the settlor.

The settlor did not have a reversion after the two life estates in the trust.

In Matter of Burchell, n110 the New York court determined that a limitation over to the heirs of the grantor in an inter vivos conveyance created a remainder in the heirs. The court relied on indications of the grantor's intent to create a remainder in the trust instrument, such as the reservation of a testamentary power of appointment as the sole control over the subsequent disposition of the corpus of the trust estate:

> The fact that the trust instrument reserved a power of appointment [as the sole control] is evidence that the settlor believed she had created an interest in the property on the part of others and reserved the power in order to defeat that interest or to postpone until a later date the naming of specific takers.

The consequences of the doctrine can be quite important, although in many cases the effect of taking by descent rather than by purchase is inconsequential. n111 When the inter vivos branch of the doctrine is applied and the grantor retains a reversionary interest, the grantor's interest continues to be alienable, the interest is subject to the claims of creditors, as sole beneficiary of a trust the grantor may terminate it, and the grantor's interest may be subject to certain tax consequences. n112

When the testamentary branch of the doctrine is applied and the heir(s) take by descent, the property taken by descent by a minor who then dies unmarried, under age and without issue, descends in turn to surviving brothers and sisters or their issue rather than to the surviving parent in several jurisdictions. n113 Also, the property taken by descent rather than by will may have an effect on whether a spouse has waived the homestead, whether the spouse takes the homestead, as in Iowa, free from antecedent debts, whether the spouse will be affected by the fact that intestate assets are resorted to before testate assets in satisfying the claims of creditors or in paying specific legacies, whether dower is barred by statute, whether the rights of creditors can be defeated by renouncing the will, and whether the heir takes a possibility of reverter that may be inalienable. n114

§ 30.03(k) The Rule Against Perpetuities

In the case of an ambiguous construction in which one interpretation would violate the rule against perpetuities, there is authority both for resolving the ambiguity without regard for the rule and for avoiding violation of the rule. n115 Thus, in the latter case, for example, many courts have saved gifts by changing the age specified in the will to twenty-one. n116

§ 30.03(l) Interest with Possession Postponed

The Lord Chancellor in Clobberie's Case n117 stated: "If money were bequeathed to one at his age of twenty-one; if he dies before that age the money is lost. On the other side, if money be given to one, to be paid at the age of twenty-one years; there, if the party dies before, it shall go the executors." This case has been the basis for finding (1) that O's conveyance "to A at age twenty-one" creates an executory interest subject to the condition precedent of A's reaching twenty-one, (2) that O's conveyance "to A payable at age twenty-one" creates a present interest with payment postponed until A reaches the age of twenty-one, and (3) O's conveyance "to trustee X to pay the income to A until age twenty-one, and then to pay the principal to A at age twenty-one" creates a present interest in A with possession of the principal postponed until A reaches the age of twenty-one. n118

If a person who owns a present interest with possession postponed dies before reaching the time of postponement, the administrator is not entitled to the interest immediately but must wait until the time of postponement, unless the whole interest of the legacy is given in the meantime; a person claiming the legacy by a limitation over is entitled to it immediately. n119

The concept of a present vested interest with possession postponed appears to contradict the notion of a present interest that is considered vested in possession. Interests that are enjoyed in possession at some future time are generally considered future interests -- either executory interests or remainders. In fact, the concept of a present interest with possession postponed is contrary to the law of estates and future interests in land. It belongs to the law of chattels personal which developed from the Roman law through the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts over legacies. n120

In the law of chattels personal before the 15th century, the treatment of future interests was similar to that of chattels real. "[Personalty] given to one for life, or even for a day, was a gift forever and would not bear a limitation over." n121 Absolute property was the only kind of property recognized in chattels personal; there was no tenure, and there were no estates as existed in the law of freehold estates. n122 The explanation for this rule of absolute ownership probably lies in the absence of a right of action which a potential reversioner or remainderman could pursue against the life tenant of a chattel personal. Professor Ames points out that:

> There was no action for chattels corresponding to the formedon in reverter and remainder for land. Detinue would, of course, lie in general on a contract of bailment; but the contract of bailment, like a contract for the payment of money, must be conceivably performable by the obliger himself, and therefore before his death; he could not create a duty binding only his executor. Consequently, there being no right of action against him, the life tenant's power of enjoyment was unrestricted. His ownership was necessarily absolute. n123

It does appear that terms of years could be created in chattels personal, but the grantee was thereby given the possession or use and occupation of the goods, not the property interest. The grantor retained a present ownership in the chattel, or if the chattel were bequeathed to another person subject to the term of years, that person was considered its present owner. n124

In 1459, a case n125 appeared which permitted the bequest of a Mass book to two people successively for their lives and upon the death of the second person to the parishioners of a certain parish. The case was in trespass, and although its report was inclusive, it appears that the "life tenants" received a right to the use and occupation of the Mass book while the property or absolute interest remained in others. n126 This case did not change the rule that a gift of personal property was absolute because the absolute interest in the property was never divided. It was merely subject to the use and occupation of the "life tenants." In 1565, the court considered a case n127 which involved a devise of the use of jewels and pieces of plate of the late Chief Justice of England, Lord Fitz-James, to Nicholas Fitz-James and the heirs male of his body. The court held that the grantee of the plate had only the use and occupation. n128

From what source does the concept of use and occupation, separate from the property itself, of a chattel personal arise? Professor Bordwell points out that it has always been confined to testamentary gifts and that therein lies the clue to its origin:

> Testamentary gifts were within the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical courts and later of Chancery and the greater part of the law relating to them was developed under the influence of the canon or civil law. That use and occupation had its genesis in the closely related usus and habitatio of the civil law is convincing. Chancery judges of the late Stuarts turned to the civilians to find the true doctrine. The civilian rule that there could not be a usufruct in perishables is reflected in the like English rule as to life estates in consumables. In the later civil law, usus and habitatio were classed as personal servitudes. These were "much more like limited ownerships than like servitudes, but since a terminable ownership was not recognized, the fact that they were of limited duration caused them to be considered as rights different from, and less than, ownership-n jura, in re aliena." Exactly the same distinction was made between the use and occupation of the English law and the property in the goods. The law of life estates was a law of limited ownership. Not so with use and occupation. It was something different and apart from the property or ownership. Again, in the classical Roman law "ownership could not be conferred on the terms that it was to end at a certain time or on the occurrence of a certain event: there was no such thing as a terminable ownership, expressly created." Compare this with Brooke's famous comment that "a gift or devise of a chattel for an hour is for ever," but "where a man devises that W.O. shall have the occupation of his plate for term of his life, and if he dies, that it shall remain to I.S. this is a good remainder: for the first hath but the occupation, and the other after him shall have the property." n129

It is evident that the concept of use and occupation was derived from the Roman law through the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts over legacies, and because of this, the concept of possession in these courts developed a meaning quite distinct from the concept of seisin in the lay courts.

It should be noted that the 1459 case confronted two successive life estates, but that the 1565 case went further and dealt with a devise of chattels personal to an individual and the "heires males of his body." The courts did not comment adversely on this attempt to create an entail in a chattel personal by way of use and occupation as there was in the case of chattels real when the specter of a perpetuity was raised. The courts probably considered the absolute property undivided in the case of a chattel personal. The bequest of an interest which was less than the absolute property was a bequest of the use and occupation and not of the property itself. n130

This historical development in the law of chattels personal has been obscured by a number of textwriters, n131 including Gray, who initially supported the theory of the executory devise or bequest (from the law governing chattels real) in the case of future interests in chattels personal after a bequest for life. In later editions of his work, however,

Gray rejected his first opinion and reverted to the older theory of use and occupation:

> There can be no doubt, I think, that this notion arose from overlooking the distinction between chattels real and personal. There is a legal presumption that a life estate is larger than any term for years, but there is no legal presumption that an interest for life in a picture will last longer than the picture itself. And, further, there can be no bailment of land, while there can be bailment of a chattel. n132

Holdsworth, too, favored the older view. n133 He noted that, although the theory of the executory bequest in the case of chattels personal was supported by three English cases around the turn of the 20th century, n134 these cases never fully considered the issue. n135 Considering its history, the theory of use and occupation does make sense.

Gray's change of opinion appears to have prompted the composition of a Socratic dialogue between him and a Harvard law student. n136 The question was raised whether a gift to a college was too remote where the testator bequeathed a cup to his son for life, and on his death to the son's eldest son for life, and then to the college. In the dialogue, Gray asserts that the interest is executory, but that it is not too remote: "It is, indeed, on the one hand, executory, but on the other hand it is to be considered, on a question of remoteness, as if it were a devise of land, and, if it were land, the gift to the college would be vested and therefore not too remote." n137 The student pointed out that although Gray called the future interest executory it was still treated as vested. Gray confirmed this observation, and the student then asked, "but why, if you always treat them as if they were vested, do you persist in calling them executory?" Gray replied, "Because Lord Coke and Mr. Preston, and Mr. Joshua Williams say I must. We should revere the gods." n138

It is apparent from this dialogue that although a future interest after a life estate in a chattel personal may be called executory, it is in fact not executory. It is instead a vested interest which, as Gray explains elsewhere in his treatise, is a present absolute interest in personalty in accordance with the old common-law view on the subject. n139

In Clobberie's Case, n140 the seminal case for the present interest with possession postponed, a gift of money was given to A "at her age of 21 years, or day of marriage, to be paid unto her with interest." n141 She died before either contingency, and the court found that the money should go to her executor, which was another way of saying that the gift had vested in interest in A and was therefore part of the property which passed from her upon death. The court also stated that a gift to A to be paid at age twenty-one is treated in like manner, but a gift to A at twenty-one is lost if A dies before that age. n142

Clobberie's Case was decided in 1677 and involved a chattel personal. The court found that the interest vested immediately with possession postponed. If the use theory for chattels personal is applied, A did not have a future interest but rather a present, vested, and absolute interest in the property subject to the use and occupation of another (or possibly of A?) until the age of twenty-one when possession would become possible.

If the gift had been a freehold or chattel real, then A theoretically would have had an executory interest, and, in such a case, the interest would not have vested until it vested in possession. In Chandos v. Talbot, n143 decided fifty-four years after Clobberie's Case, the Court of Chancery found that a legacy given to a nephew, "to be paid at his age of twenty-five," was not vested insofar as it was charged upon land. As we saw in the development of chattels real, the creation of a future interest in a term of years became permissible in the form of an executory devise. In the law of chattels personal, the influence of the civil law caused a different course of development which allowed the courts to distinguish between the absolute property of personalty and its use and occupation. Consequently, a future interest like that in Clobberie's Case was vested only in the case of chattels personal.

Clobberie's Case has provoked widespread discussion from modern courts and textwriters. n144 They correctly believe that the case arose because of the influence of the civil law n145 and "doctrines about seisin which have no application to chattels." n146 Given the historical explanation just pursued, it would be logical to conclude that the present interest with possession postponed in this case pertains uniquely to chattels personal and should never be confused with an executory interest.

In time, the principles in Clobberie's Case were applied to interests in land n147 as well as to interests in chattels personal, and herein some confusion may have arisen. A future interest like that in Clobberie's Case, when it appears for a landed estate, may seem to be an executory interest, but, by analogy with Clobberie's Case, it may in fact be a present interest with possession postponed. Since this interest vests under the case not only for purposes of transmissibility n148 but also for purposes of the Rule against Perpetuities, n149 it is now possible for these interests in land, which would have been non-vested executory interests in the absence of Clobberie's Case, to vest in interest before vesting in possession in those jurisdictions which apply Clobberie's Case to land.

The case of an interest presently vested but postponed in possession does exist legitimately for land in one situation--where the present interest is subject to a term of years. However, this situation requires that there be a non-freehold estate that occupies the property for a fixed period of time until the present interest holder takes in possession. Perhaps this situation existed in the late 16th century in Boraston's Case n150 as it is stated by Jarman: n151

> A testator devised land to A and B for eight years, and after the said term, the land to remain to his executors, for the performance of his will, till such time as H should accomplish his age of twenty-one years; and when the said H should come to his age of twenty-one, then to him, his heirs and assigns for ever. H died under twenty-one. It was contended, that the remainder was not to vest in him, unless he attained the prescribed age; but the court held it to be vested immediate, the case being, it was said, nothing else in effect than a devise to the executors, till H attained the age of twenty-one, remainder to H in fee; and that the adverbs of time, when, etc., do not make any thing necessary to precede the settling (i.e., the vesting) of the remainder, but merely expressed the time when it shall take effect in possession.
>
> It is observable, that in the greater number of the cited cases, the prior interest was created for the benefit of the ulterior devisee; but this circumstance does not seem to vary the principle, for the material fact, and that which constitutes the special characteristic for this class of cases, is, that there is a prior interest extending over the whole period for which the devise in question is postponed. It is therefore in effect a devise of the whole estate instanter to B, with the exception of a partial interest carved out for some (no matter what) purpose.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 35. Hopperton, Robert J. Teaching Present and Future Interests: A Methodology for Students That Unifies Estates in Land Concepts, Structures, and Principles. 26 U. Tol. L. Rev. 621 (Spring 1995).

(n2)Footnote 36. Forfeiture for waste is generally disfavored. It generally requires the existence of a statute. See, e.g., Smith v. Smith, 241 S.W.2d 113 (Ark. 1951) (no action permitted against a life tenant by a remainderman because no Arkansas statute granted such authority). Even where statutory authority exists, forfeiture is generally limited to forfeiture of the specific property wasted. See, e.g., Smith v. Mattingly, 28 S.W. 503 (Ky. 1894) (averment of voluntary waste in the destruction and removal of a large portion of fencing). Furthermore, if the waste to the property does not equal the value of the estate held by the one committing the waste, forfeiture may not be allowed. See, e.g., Perry v. Perry, 170 N.Y.S. 415 (1918) (no forfeiture when waste was $178 and estate valued at $186). However, when waste has occurred to the entire property to a serious degree, forfeiture has been permitted. See, e.g., Trent v. Trent, 174 N.E.2d 274 (Ohio App. 1960) (the property of a life tenant was forfeited when he mortgaged it and did not make subsequent improvements or repayment of the loan). The plaintiff in a forfeiture action may be a remainderman or reversioner, but not an heir expectant of a fee tail estate. See Cook v. Hardin County Bank Co., 63 N.E.2d 686 (Ohio App. 1945). A contingent remainderman does not generally have a right to maintain an action for damages for past waste but may be allowed an injunction to prevent a person in possession from committing future waste. See, e.g., Edens v. Foulks, 163

S.E.2d 51 (N.C. 1968).

Forfeiture of a felon's property to the government as a penalty for his crime was a part of English law that was transmitted to the United States in colonial times but has been abrogated by constitutional and statutory abolishment. See Estate of Shields, 584 P.2d 139 (Kan. 1978), for a discussion of the history of forfeiture for felony in the United States.

Note that an estate also may fail because the person to whom it is limited renounces it. The estate is considered ineffective in the inception with the renunciation relating back to the time when the creating instrument became operative. 2 Restatement of The Law of Property § 231 cmt. d (1936).

(n3)Footnote 37. According to Blackstone, a reversion is "the residue of an estate left in the grantor, to commence in possession after the determination of some particular estate granted out by him." See Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to The Law of Property 104 (2d ed. 1988).

(n4)Footnote 38. Also called a power of termination, this interest is a reversionary interest. But see Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 59 n.7 (noting that the Restatement of The Law of Property (1936) does not regard the right of reentry as a reversionary interest like the reversion and the possibility of reverter).

(n5)Footnote 39. Executory interests were made legal by the Statute of Uses in 1535. 27 Hen. 8, c. 10. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 181-84; Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 102-115. Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex App. Waco 1999) (defining an executory interest).

(n6)Footnote 40. A question is raised whether a reversionary interest can be created by the grantor in a will. In a well-known Massachusetts case, the court found that a possibility of reverter created in a will may be taken under the will. In Brown v. Independent Baptist Church of Woburn, 91 N.E.2d 922 (Mass. 1950), the court held that the testator's gift of land to a church "and if the said Church shall be dissolved, or its religious sentiments shall be changed or abandoned, then my will is that this real estate shall go to my legatees" created an invalid executory interest under the rule against perpetuities. Therefore, the future interest became a possibility of reverter following a fee simple determinable and fell into and was passed on to the takers under the residuary clause of the will. Jesse Dukeminier claims that the case is wrong under orthodox doctrine "since a possibility of reverter retained by a will is created in the testator's heirs, not in the testator, who is dead." Jesse Dukeminier, A Modern Guide to Perpetuities, 74 Cal. L. Rev. 1867, 1906 n.138 (1986) [hereinafter Modern Guide]. According to Dukeminier, "[o]rthodox doctrine would hold that there is a possibility of reverter in [the intestate] heirs, not in the residuary devisees," and he cites In re Pruner's Estate, 162 A.2d 626 (Pa. 1960) for this proposition. J. Dukeminier & J. Krier, Property 269 (2d ed. 1988). However, Dukeminier goes on to contradict himself. He states that one "cannot have simultaneous creation and transfer of a future interest." Id. But the creation of the possibility of reverter in a will is simultaneous with the transfer of the testator's interest by intestate succession; both take place at the moment of death of the testator. Furthermore, In re Pruner's Estate, cited by Dukeminier as a case contrary to Brown, in fact cites Brown extensively as authority for its holding. The reason that the intestate heirs rather than the residuary devisees in Pruner took the possibility of reverter created in the will was that there were no residuary legatees to take!

One explanation that might be advanced for the compatibility of the result in Brown with the notion that one cannot have simultaneous creation and transfer of a future interest is found in the concept of a reversionary interest itself. A reversionary interest is not "created" in a technical sense. It is left in the grantor after other interests are created. See W. Barton Leach, Cases and Materials on The Law of Future Interests 3, 21 (2d ed. 1940). It is for this reason that a grantor owning an estate in fee simple absolute cannot create a reversionary interest in a life estate from that fee simple absolute; all she can do is cut down her fee simple estate. Therefore, transfer of a reversionary interest can occur simultaneously with the creation of a prior interest that leaves (rather than creates) that reversionary interest that was in the grantor up to her death. What a testator cannot do is specifically grant this future interest as a reversionary interest in her will, because then the future interest is no longer a reversionary interest but rather an executory interest. The only way she can transfer this future interest as a reversionary interest is through the general residuary clause of her will (see Brown) or by intestate succession (see Pruner). See City of Palm Springs v. Living Desert Reserve, 70 Cal. App. 4th 613 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999); Prieskorn v. Maloof, 991 P.2d 511 (N.M. Ct. App. 1999) (employing a possibility of reverter); Cathedral of the Incarnation in the Diocese of Long Island, Inc. v. Garden City Co., 697 N.Y.S.2d 56 (1999) (distinguishing right of reentry and possibility of reverter); Order of the Teachers of the Children of God, Inc. v. Trustees of the Estate of Diocese of Long Island, 687 N.Y.S.2d 684 (1999) (explaining when and how a possibility of reverter can be extinguished).

(n7)Footnote 41. 266 S.W.2d 553 (Mo. 1954).

(n8)Footnote 42. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 110 & n.1 (inter vivos) and 111 & n.5 (devise). ;For a case in Missouri finding possibilities of reverter both alienable and devisable, see City of Carthage v. United Missouri Bank, 873 S.W.2d 610 (Mo. App. 1994).

(n9)Footnote 43. See id. at 115-17; Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 60-61 (inter vivos and devise). Although a power of termination may not be transferred alone in a number of jurisdictions, it may be transferred as incident to a reversion. In some jurisdictions the attempted alienation of a right of re-entry destroys it. For statutes limiting the duration of the right of re-entry, see Moynihan, supra note 20, at 117 & n.2.

(n10)Footnote 44. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 139-40; 1 American Law of Property § 4.67 (A. James Casner, ed. 1952) (inter vivos).

(n11)Footnote 45. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 37, 57.

(n12)Footnote 46. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 57.

(n13)Footnote 47. Dukeminier & Krier, supra note 40, at 223-224. Estate of Fisher, 645 N.Y.S.2d 1020 (1996) (the valuation for a person with a life estate is based upon the life tenant's age at the time of the sale of the property and not the date of the decedent's death).

(n14)Footnote 48. Tarlton v. Stidham, 469 S.E.2d 38 (N.C. App. 1996).

(n15)Footnote 49. 2 Wms. Saund. 380 (1671).

(n16)Footnote 50. 137 So. 249 (Fla. 1931).

(n17)Footnote 51. See Purefoy v. Rogers, 2 Wms. Saund. 380 (1671). If the person(s) acquires one or both of the vested interests after their creation, the two successive interests in that person(s) do merge at that time, even though the vested interests were originally created simultaneously with the contingent remainder.

(n18)Footnote 52. 3 Ch. D. 393 (1876).

(n19)Footnote 53. 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 241, at 1192 (1940).

(n20)Footnote 54. 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 242, at 1196, 1199 (1940).

(n21)Footnote 55. 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 243, at 1208-09 (1940).

(n22)Footnote 56. Leach, supra note 6, at 242.

(n23)Footnote 57. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 655 (4th ed. 1990).

(n24)Footnote 58. Cro. Jac. 415 (K.B. 1617).

(n25)Footnote 59. William McGovern in Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 309-310, advises that the facts of each case, such as the distortion of a scheme for equal distribution or an increase in taxes, should indicate the weight to be given the preference against intestacy: "Among other things, the court should ask, 'Who are the heirs?' An intestacy which results in escheat because the testator has no known heirs is undesirable. An intestacy is also undesirable if the testator's only heirs are remote collateral relatives. But if the heirs are the testator's children, a court should be less reluctant to allow intestate distribution. Some courts rely on extrinsic evidence of hostility or lack of affection between the heirs and the testator to bolster the presumption against intestacy." (footnotes omitted) Estate of Sandstead v. Sandstead, 897 P.2d 883 (Colo. App. 1995) (gift by implication cannot be inferred by mere silence, but must be founded on expressions in the will which lead to the inescapable inference of what the testator intended but failed adequately to express). In re Bieley, 673 N.Y.S.2d 38 (N.Y. 1998) (will called for residuary estate to be held in trust for life of testator's mother, and upon mother's death to two named beneficiaries or their decedents, but did not provide for a disposition if the mother predeceased the testator; court held the will created a gift by implication in favor of the two named beneficiaries).

(n26)Footnote 60. 108 P. 287 (Cal. 1910).

(n27)Footnote 61. 5 Ch. D. 984 (Court of Chancery 1877), 11 Ch. D. 873 (Court of Appeal 1879).

(n28)Footnote 62. 92 N.Y. 446 (1883).

(n29)Footnote 63. 33 S.E. 876 (Ga. 1899).

(n30)Footnote 64. 128 Mass. 370 (1880).

(n31)Footnote 65. 86 N.E. 386 (Ill. 1908).

(n32)Footnote 66. 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 243, at 1217-1219 (1940). Sir Edward Coke stated that "the law always delights in vesting of estates, and contingencies are odious in the law, and are the causes of troubles, and vesting and settling of estates, the cause of repose and certainty." Roberts v. Roberts, 2 Bulst. 123, 131, 80 Eng. Rep. 1002, 1009 (K.B. 1613). On the other hand, Professor Leach finds that there are not many judicial declarations as to why this preference exists, and he questions whether it is "possible that (apart for perpetuities cases, where a vested construction tends to save a gift) the preference for vested interests which the cases repeat ad nauseam has no foundation at all at the present time." Leach, supra note 6, at 257 n.3. For other commentators, see Susan French, Imposing a General Survival Requirement on Beneficiaries of Future Interests: Solving the Problems Caused by the Death of a Beneficiary Before the Time Set for Distribution, 27 Ariz. L. Rev. 801, at 802 n.8 (against) and at 803 n.10 (for). Trust of Cross v. Tett, 551 N.W.2d 344 (Iowa App. 1996) (the status of a vested interest given to a person is not altered if that person predeceases the giver); Jesse Dukeminier, The Uniform Probate Code Upends the Law of Remainders, 94 Mich. L. Rev. 148 (Oct. 1995); In re DiBiasio, 705 A.2d 972 (R.I. 1998) (Law favors immediate vesting of remainders unless clearly indicated to the contrary. Preference for vesting is particularly strong when: (1) remaindermen are in existence at the death of the testator; (2) remainder is the residue of the estate; (3) gift is to the testator's relative; and (4) intestacy would otherwise result).

(n33)Footnote 67. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 646 (4th ed. 1990).

(n34)Footnote 68. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 72, suggests the following rules to determine whether a condition is subsequent or precedent:

> When conditional language in a transfer (e.g., "but if," "provided that," "on condition that") follows language that, taken alone, would be said to create a vested remainder, the condition so created is a condition subsequent. If, however, the conditional language appears before the language creating the remainder, or the conditional language seems to be a part of the description of the remainderman, the condition created thereby is a condition precedent. The rules we have given, we hasten to add, are not > fixed rules of law. The intent of the parties to the transfer will, in theory, determine whether a condition is subsequent or precedent to the vesting of the remainder. But absent evidence of intent to the contrary, courts will use these mechanical rules to determine what the intent was. The rules are pretty much a fixture of our law of future interests. (emphasis removed.)

(n35)Footnote 69. 99 N.E.2d 222 (N.Y. 1951). But see Webb v. Underhill, 882 P.2d 127 (Or. App. 1994), wherein the court found the following will provision to create alternative contingent remainders: For her use, benefit and enjoyment, for such period of her natural life as she shall remain unmarried, I give to my beloved wife, Agnes Webb, all of my property of every kind and nature, with the provision, ... At the death of my said wife, if she shall yet be in the use and enjoyment of said property, such as remains shall be divided as follows: One dollar ($1.00) each to Irene Barton and to Vivian Morse. The remainder shall be divided equally between: [four children who are here named]. But if one or more of these shall be dead, their share shall go to their lineal descendants, if any. If one or more of the four who live in Oregon and are last mentioned, shall be dead leaving no lineal descendants, the share of the deceased one, dead without lineal descendants, shall go to the survivors of the four who live in Oregon (last mentioned) or to their lineal descendants ... .

(n36)Footnote 70. John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 108. (4th ed. 1942) [hereinafter GRAY]. See also Lewis M. Simes & Allan F. Smith, The Law of Future Interests § 147 (2d ed. 1956).

(n37)Footnote 71. 12 Mees. & W. 279, 152 Eng. Rep. 1204 (Ex. 1843).

(n38)Footnote 72. 592 A.2d 492 (Md. 1991).

(n39)Footnote 73. Coleman v. Coleman, 500 S.E.2d 507 (Va. 1998) (court held that a beneficiary's interest in residuary estate vested on the death of the testator and was not contingent by a life estate).

(n40)Footnote 74. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 128 (citing the English case of Edwards v. Hammond, 3 Lev. 132, 83 Eng. Rep. 614 (1683), in n.10), where the first future interest in each of the following conveyances is considered a vested remainder subject to divestment: "to B for life, then to C and his heirs when C attains the age of twenty-one, but if C dies under twenty-one to D and his heirs" and "to B for life, then to B's children, if they attain 21; and for want of such issue to X in fee." When the contingency is not concerned with age, the preference for vesting exception almost never operates. Thus Moynihan, id. at 192, describes the future interests in the following conveyance as alternative contingent remainders: "to B for life, and on B's death to C and his heirs, if C survives B; and if C dies before B, to D and his heirs." As Professor George Haskins used to say in his Property class at the University of Pennsylvania Law School, this last example "is too uncompromisingly contingent." Although Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, applies the constructional preference for vesting to the conveyance "to A for life, remainder to B if he survives A, but if B does not survive A, then to C," the two cases cited for this proposition both contain an age contingency. See id. at 134-135 & n.47.

(n41)Footnote 75. 3 Lev. 132, 83 Eng. Rep. 614 (C.P., 1683).

(n42)Footnote 76. L.R. 5 Eq. 399 (Court of Chancery 1868).

(n43)Footnote 77. 9 Cl. & F. 583 (House of Lords 1835).

(n44)Footnote 78. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 681 (4th ed. 1990), referring to the stranger-to-the-adoption rule.

(n45)Footnote 79. Id. at 682, referring to the Uniform Probate Code § 2-611 (1983). See, e.g., Estate of Hannan, 523 N.W.2d 672 (Neb. 1994) (adopted child considered within meaning of the word "issue"). Cf. Boatmen's Trust Co. v. Conklin, 888 S.W.2d 347 (Mo. App. 1994) (adopted child not considered within meaning of the word "issue" as it was defined in 1911 when testator executed his will, but may be considered within meaning of the words "heirs-at-law"); D'Accardi v. Charter, 96 F.3d 97 1996 (4th Cir. 1996) (equitably adopted children have rights where a valid contract to adopt exists, but does not actually occur; the contract in equity will be enforced for the benefit of the adoptive child; a subsequent unilateral decision to rescind does not affect the existence of an enforceable agreement); Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Smith, 657 So. 2d 1369 (La. App. 1995) (an adopted child is entitled to proceeds from his biological father's life insurance policy that says "surviving issue"); Gardner v. Hancock, 924 S.W.2d 857 (Mo. App. 1996) (the doctrine of equitable adoption does not bar a child's inheritance rights in a natural parent's estate); Fifth Third Bank v. Crosley, 669 N.E. 2d 904 (Ohio Misc. 1996) (the adoption creates a parent-child relationship between the adoptee and the adopter for all purposes including inheritance); MacCallum v. Seymour, 1996 Vt. LEXIS 111 (adopted children have the right to inherit from their "new" collateral or lineal relatives just as a child of blood relation does). Williams v. Estate of Pender, 738 So. 2d 453 (Fla. App. 1999) (children equitably adopted can inherit under Florida law, if equitable adoption is proven by clear and convincing evidence); Miller v. Walker, 514 S.E.2d 22 (Ga. 1999) (for the purposes of intestacy, an adopted child is not related to his or her biological parents). See also Gloria J. Banks, Traditional Concepts and Nontraditional Conceptions: Social Security Survivor's Benefits for Posthumously Conceived Children, 32 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 251 (1999); Susan N. Gary, Adapting Intestacy Laws to Changing Families, 18 LAW & INEQ. J. 1 (2000); James R. Robinson, Comment, Untangling the "Loose Threads": Equitable Adoption, Equitable Legitimation, and Inheritance in Extralegal Family Arrangements, 48 Emory L.J. 943 (1999).

(n46)Footnote 80. See Rhay v. Johnson, 867 P.2d 669 (Wash. App. 1994) (adult adoptee), and*Minary v. Citizens Fid. Bank & Trust Co., 419 S.W.2d 340 (1967),* although Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 685 (4th ed. 1990) state that most recent cases hold to the contrary.

(n47)Footnote 81. Restatement (Second) of The Law of Property § 25.5 (Tent. Draft No. 8, 1985). Estate of Ryan v. Ryan, 928 P.2d 735 (Ariz. App. 1996) (an adopted child retains inheritance rights from both biological parents); Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank, 926 P.2d 969 (Cal. 1996) (adopted children will not be treated as children of the natural parent in the eyes of the law and will not be included among the children or issue for their natural father's sister's will); Little v. Smith, 1997 Tex. LEXIS 10 (an adopted child may have rights of inheritance through their natural parents if the claim is brought within the statutory limitations period); Wicks v. Veterens Steel Erection Co., 1996 Tenn. App. LEXIS 115 (children do not inherit from the natural parent or participate in the proceeds of a recovery in a wrongful death action occasioned by the natural parent's death); Unsel v. Meier, 972 S.W.2d 466 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) (adopted granddaughter was precluded from taking double share C although she was the adopted grandchild of the testator, she was also the natural grandchild of the testator). But see Foor v. Foor, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 1885 (Ohio App. 1999) (stating that Ohio law allows an adopted child to inherit from his or her biological parents even when neither one remains a parent after adoption).

(n48)Footnote 82. 6 Co. 16b, 77 Eng. Rep. 277 (1599).

(n49)Footnote 83. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 42-43.

(n50)Footnote 84. 56 S.E. 473 (W. Va. 1907).

(n51)Footnote 85. Reddoch v. Williams, 92 So. 831,832 (Miss. 1922).

(n52)Footnote 86. Ewing v. Ewing, 22 So. 2d 225 (Miss. 1945) (giving the parent a fee simple absolute to the exclusion of children). The dissent pointed out that the word "children" was inappropriately used as the equivalent of the word "heirs" in this case. For a description of what happens in other jurisdictions, see In re Parant's Will, 240 N.Y.S.2d 558 (1963).

(n53)Footnote 87. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 138-139 & n.9. See Ronald C. Link, The Rule in Wild's Case in North Carolina, 55 N.C. L. Rev. 751 (1977), for a general discussion and criticism of the Rule.

(n54)Footnote 88. 1 Co. Rep. 93b, 76 Eng. Rep. 206 (1581). The Rule did not originate in Shelley's Case but in fact appeared at least as early as 1366. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 142.

(n55)Footnote 89. 454 N.E.2d 1195 (Ill. App. 1983).

(n56)Footnote 90. 16 S.E. 1011 (N.C. 1893).

(n57)Footnote 91. 44 N.E.2d 583 (Ill. 1942).

(n58)Footnote 92. This case poses an interesting question beyond the interpretation of the word "heirs." The Rule in Shelley's Case was applied even though the precedent life estate was subject to the condition subsequent of widowhood, and this condition was broken before the devise became effective (at the testator's death). Id. at 590-591. This holding appears to violate the Rule which requires the existence of a precedent life estate.

(n59)Footnote 93. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 150; Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 97; John v. Orth, Requiem for the Rule in Shelley's Case, 67 N.C. L. Rev. 681 (1989). In re Estate of Hendrickson, 736 A.2d 540 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1999) (rejecting the Rule in Shelley's Case). See also Paul M. Sullivan, Customary Revolutions: The Law of Custom and the Conflict of Traditions in Hawai'i, 20 Haw. L. Rev. 99, 124 (1998) (stating that Hawaii has rejected the Rule in Shelley's Case as the law in that state).

(n60)Footnote 94. For cases applying the doctrine to executory interests, see Coomes v. Frey, 133 S.W. 758 (Ky. 1911), and In re Brolasky's Estate, 153 A. 739 (Pa. 1931).

(n61)Footnote 95. For cases applying the doctrine to personal property, see Joseph Morris, The Inter Vivos Branch of the Worthier Title Doctrine, 2 Okla. L. Rev. 133, 141 n.35 (1949) [hereinafter Inter Vivos Branch]. There is some question whether the doctrine in its testamentary branch applies only to real property. See Joseph Morris, The Wills Branch of the Worthier Title Doctrine, 54 Mich. L. Rev. 451, 456, 493-94 (1956) [hereinafter Wills Branch]. Estate of Grulke, 546 N.W.2d 626 (Iowa App. 1996) (in wills prior to 1979 a devise in a will that gives the same estate to the devisee that he or she would take by the laws of intestacy if there were no will the ultimate title passes by descent rather than under the will); Marianne M. Jennings, Real Property Could Use Some Updating, 24 Real Est. L.J. 103 (Fall 1995).

(n62)Footnote 96. Heirs are determined as of the death of the grantor and according to the law of the jurisdiction governing inheritance of the particular property. If the grantor indicates that the heirs or next of kin are to be determined at a time other than his death or by the laws of a jurisdiction other than that governing inheritance of the particular property, the doctrine does not apply. See Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 156-159.

(n63)Footnote 97. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 159.

(n64)Footnote 98. See Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 142-143.

(n65)Footnote 99. See Wills Branch, supra note 114, at 453-454.

(n66)Footnote 100. See Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 135. Judge Morris also believes that this conclusion should hold for the testamentary branch of the doctrine. See Wills Branch, supra note 114, at 478.

(n67)Footnote 101. See Wills Branch, supra note 114, at 454-455, 462-466, 488-491.

(n68)Footnote 102. 2 Co. 91a, 76 Eng. Rep. 611 (1598-1600). For a brief history, see Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 136-137. The court in Matter of Burchell, 87 N.E.2d 293 (N.Y. 1949), states that:

> The doctrine had its origin in the feudal custom of awarding certain valuable incidents to the overlord upon the descent of property held by a feoffee. These incidents did not accrue if the property was acquired through purchase, and, in order to obviate this means of curtailing the payment of incidents, title by descent was declared to be more worthy than title by purchase. If a gift over might pass to an heir by descent rather than by gift, he took his title through inheritance. Although the reason for the rule disappeared with the disappearance of feudal customs, the rule itself remained as part of the common law.

(n69)Footnote 103. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 106, § 3 (1833).

(n70)Footnote 104. Thirteen states have abolished the doctrine by statute: Arkansas, California, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Texas and West Virginia. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 161 n.2, and Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 170-173, and Wills Branch, supra note 114, at 494-495. It has also been repudiated without the aid of legislation. See, e.g., Hatch v. Riggs Nat'l Bank, 361 F.2d 559 (D.C. Cir. 1966), Lucas v. Parsons, 24 Ga. 640 (1857), and Mitchell v. Dauphin Deposit Trust Co., 142 S.W.2d 181 (Ky. 1940). Iowa is among those states abrogating the doctrine jurisprudentially. See In re Estate of Kern, 274 N.W.2d 325 (Iowa 1979). An Iowa appeals court recently affirmed the Kern Court's ruling that the abrogation was prospective only. In re Estate of Grulke, 1996 546 N.W.2d 626 (Iowa App. 1996)..

(n71)Footnote 105. See Wills Branch, supra note 114, at 456, 493. Dennis v. Bird, 941 S.W.2d 486 (Ky. App. 1997) (doctrine of worthier title noted as applying to remainders).

(n72)Footnote 106. Justice Cardozo in Doctor v. Hughes, 122 N.E. 221 (N.Y. 1919), stated that a "clear expression" of intention by the grantor was needed "to transform into a remainder what would ordinarily be a reversion." However, later cases have weakened this presumption and allowed only a weak constructional preference for a reversion. See Moynihan, supra note 20, at 158 & n.10. On the other hand, a very small number of jurisdictions apply the doctrine as a rule of law. See Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 143-150.

(n73)Footnote 107. See Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 151-154 (there is a difference of opinion among jurisdictions on this point).

(n74)Footnote 108. See id. at 154-160.

(n75)Footnote 109. 165 N.E. 454 (N.Y. 1929).

(n76)Footnote 110. 87 N.E.2d 293 (N.Y. 1949).

(n77)Footnote 111. The lack of consequences under the testamentary branch of the doctrine is such that the Restatement has called this branch dead. Restatement of Property § 314, cmt. on subsection (2) (1940). See 1 American Law of Property, supra note 15, § 419, p. 440.

(n78)Footnote 112. See Inter Vivos Branch, supra note 114, at 160-164.

(n79)Footnote 113. See Wills Branch, supra note 114, at 470-474 & nn.105-106 (listing statutes of this type in fourteen jurisdictions).

(n80)Footnote 114. See id. at 474-483.

(n81)Footnote 115. Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 286, citing Ward v. Van der Loeff, A.C. 653, 660 (1924) (ignore rule) and 6 American Law of Property supra, note 15, §§ 24.45, 24.46 and Restatement of The Law of Property §§ 375 (1944) (avoid violation of rule). David M. Baxter, If You Think You No Longer Need to Know Anything about the Rule Against Perpetuities, Then Read This! 74 WASH. U. L.Q. 713 (Fall, 1995); Ronald C. Link and Kimberly A. Licata, Perpetuities Reform in North Carolina: The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, Nondonative Transfers, and Honorary Trusts. 74 N.C. L. RV. 1783 (September, 1996).

(n82)Footnote 116. Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 312-313. In re Estate of Kreuzer, 674 N.Y.S.2d 505 (N.Y. App. Div. 1998) (class gifts violated the rules against perpetuities but could be remedied by reducing the age contingency to 21 years of age).

(n83)Footnote 117. 2 Vent. 342, 86 Eng. Rep. 476 (1677).

(n84)Footnote 118. The difference in result generated by the words "at" and "payable at" has long been criticized but nevertheless followed. See Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 316. Moyars v. Moyars, 717 N.E.2d 976 (Ind. Ct. App. 1999) (holding that an interest with possession postponed is an alienable interest).

(n85)Footnote 119. Roden v. Smith, Amb. 588 (Court of Chancery 1744).

(n86)Footnote 120. The discussion on the history of the law of chattels personal in this note and in the main text following this note is reprinted with modifications from John Makdisi, The Vesting of Executory Interests, 59 Tulane L. Rev. 366, at 368-369, 376-382 (1984).

The distinction between interests in land and interests in personal property finds its basis, according to Professors Leach and Logan, "in the Roman Law, which was imported in England via the Canon Law, the Ecclesiastical Courts, Swinburne on Wills (1590) and the priestly status of the early Chancellors." W. Barton Leach & James K. Logan, Cases and Text on Future Interests and Estate Planning 286 (1961). Present interests with possession postponed developed along a path influenced by the civil law totally different from that of executory interests in the common-law courts. The reason for this bifurcation is found in the dual court system. Between the time of William the Conqueror and Henry II, the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts was separated from that of the lay courts, and the ecclesiastical courts exercised jurisdiction over testamentary and intestate succession to personal property. Thomas F. Atkinson, Brief History of English Testamentary Jurisdiction, 8 Mo. L. Rev. 107, 108-110 (1943); Sir William Holdsworth, The Ecclesiastical Courts and Their Jurisdiction, in 2 Select Essays in Anglo-American Legal History 255, 262 (1908); Thomas Edward Scrutton, Roman Law Influence in Chancery, Church Courts, Admiralty, and Law Merchant, in 1 Select Essays in Anglo-American Legal History 208, 227-230 (1907); Walter Lichtenstein, The Date of Separation of Ecclesiastical and Lay Jurisdiction in England, 3 Ill. L. Rev. 347, 353 (1908). Ecclesiastical courts ruled on the validity and construction of testaments in the time of Glanvill (circa 1188), and by the time of Bracton and the reign of Henry III (1216-1272), they were probating testaments and compelling executors to carry out their testator's will. See Atkinson, supra, at 110, 112; O.W. Holmes, Jr., Early English Equity, 1 Law Q. Rev. 162, 169 (1885). The ecclesiastical courts did not administer the common law, which recognized the king as sovereign, but rather canon law, which recognized the Pope and which was studied in conjunction with Roman civil law, drawing on the latter for many of its doctrines and procedures. Atkinson, supra, at 115-116; Holdsworth, supra, at 259. As a result, the divergence in doctrine between the secular and the church courts produced different rules for the property interests governed by each court. The interests governed by the ecclesiastical courts consisted primarily of chattels bequeathed to the Church, as opposed to the freehold interests governed by the common-law courts.

(n87)Footnote 121. Gray, supra note 70 at 71.

(n88)Footnote 122. Id. at 735; see Percy Bordwell, Interests in Chattels Real and Personal, 1 Mo. L. Rev. 119, at 126-127 (1936) [hereinafter Bordwell]. This view of the law still persists for chattels personal which are consumed in the using. 7 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 470-471 (2d ed. 1937) [hereinafter Holdsworth]; Albert Martin Kales, Estates, Future Interests and Illegal Conditions and Restraints in Illinois at 559 (1920); Homer F. Carey & Daniel M. Schuyler, Illinois Law of Future Interests at 66 (1941). For a description of consumables, see 1 Simes & Smith, supra note 61, at 404-405. The discussion of chattels personal in this section refers to personalty which is not consumed in the using.

(n89)Footnote 123. J.B. Ames, The Disseisin of Chattels, 3 Harv. L. Rev. 313, 315-316 (1890). But see Gray, supra note 61, at 736.

(n90)Footnote 124. Gray, supra note 70, at 110, 742; Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 471-472.

(n91)Footnote 125. Y.B. Trin. 37 Hen. 6, pl. 11 (1459). For an account of the case, see Paramour v. Yardley, 2 Plowd. 539, 542-43, 75 Eng. Rep. 794, 799-800 (K.B. 1579).

(n92)Footnote 126. See Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 472-73; Bordwell, supra note 122, at 129; Gray, supra note 61, at 737.

(n93)Footnote 127. Owen 33, 74 Eng. Rep. 879 (1565).

(n94)Footnote 128. See Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 473 n.2.

(n95)Footnote 129. Bordwell, supra note 122, at 128-129 (footnotes omitted).

(n96)Footnote 130. The courts insisted at first that the words "use and occupation" or similar words be used in devising less than an absolute interest in a chattel personal. Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 474 n.3, indicates that in 1608 there was a decision cited for the proposition that a devise of a chattel personal to one for life with remainder over to another was not permitted. By the late 17th century, however, courts accepted the argument that the exact words used were immaterial, and the devise of a chattel personal for life was construed as the devise of its use and occupation. Hyde v. Parrat, 1 P. Wms. 1, 24 Eng. Rep. 269 (1695); Bordwell, supra note 122, at 132; Gray, supra note 61, at 738-739; Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 476-477.

(n97)Footnote 131. Preston, Butler, Jarman, Lewis, Marsden, and possibly Lord Thurlow, but not Williams nor Fearne. See Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 476; David T. Oliver, Interests for Life and Quasi-Remainders in Chattels Personal, 24 Law Q. Rev. 431, 431, 437-438 (1908).

(n98)Footnote 132. Gray, supra note 61, at 739-740 (emphasis in the original).

(n99)Footnote 133. Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 477. Accord Leach & Logan, supra note 120, at 184; Kales, supra note 122, at 106. Contra 1 Simes & Smith, supra note 61, at 797, 800.

(n100)Footnote 134. In re Tritton, 6 Morell 250, [1889], 61 L.T.R. 301 (Q.B.); In re Thynne, [1911], 1 Ch. 282; In re Backhouse, [1921], 2 Ch. 51. But see Oliver, supra note 150, at 439 (citing In re Percy, [1883], 24 Ch. D. 616).

(n101)Footnote 135. Holdsworth, supra note 122, at 477.

(n102)Footnote 136. John Chipman Gray, Future Interests in Personal Property, 14 Harv. L. Rev. 397-398 (1901), reprinted in Gray, supra note 61, at app. F, 723-724 n.1, and Leach & Logan, supra note 120, at 186-187.

(n103)Footnote 137. Gray, supra note 155, at 397, reprinted in Gray, supra note 61, app. F at 723 n.1. See also Gray, supra note 70 at 750 (chattel personal).

(n104)Footnote 138. Gray, supra note 155, at 398, reprinted in Gray, supra note 61, app. F, at 724 n.1.

(n105)Footnote 139. See also Leach & Logan, supra note 120 at 184 (pointing out the clear error of explaining the rule as to chattels personal on the reading-backward basis which was applicable only to chattels real -- from which came the oft-repeated statement that "all future interests in chattels are executory").

(n106)Footnote 140. 2 Vent. 342, 86 Eng. Rep. 476 (Ch. 1677).

(n107)Footnote 141. 2 Vent. 342, at 342, 86 Eng. Rep. 476, at 476 (Ch. 1677).

(n108)Footnote 142. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 670 (4th ed. 1990) states that the gift at a designated age with interest and the gift payable at a designated age are both considered vested as in Clobberie's Case, but the gift at a designated age without interest has engendered a split among American jurisdictions over whether it is contingent on survivorship as in Clobberie's Case.

(n109)Footnote 143. 2 P. Wms. 601, 24 Eng. Rep. 877 (Ch. 1731), reprinted in part in Leach & Logan, supra note 120, at 288.

(n110)Footnote 144. See Joyner v. Duncan, 264 S.E.2d 76 (N.C. 1980); Elsbree Estate, 66 A.2d 851, 853 (Pa. 1949) (Stern, J., dissenting); 3 Restatement of The Law of Property § 257 cmts. d & e (1940); 5 American Law of Property, supra note 15 §§ 21.17-18; Daniel M. Schuyler, Should the Rule Against Perpetuities Discard Its Vest?, 56 Mich. L. Rev. 887, 902-03 (1958). Support for the existence of the rule in Clobberie's Case before the 17th century can be found in H. Swinburne, A Brief Treatise of Testaments and Last Wills 171-75 (I. Windet 1590 & photo reprint 1978).

Commentators cite the tendency of modern courts to combine the rules applying to land and personalty. See Carey & Schuyler, supra note 122, at 439; Gray, supra note 61, at 69; Leach & Logan, supra note 120, at 288 n.35; 1 Simes & Smith, supra note 61, at 380; Schuyler, supra, at 897, 903 n.27, 916.

In the case of a gift to A to be paid at age twenty-one, there is an exception to vesting when the divide-and-pay-over rule for class gifts is applied, but this rule appears to be on the wane in the United States. See 5 American Law of Property, supra note 15 §§ 21.21, at 159-162 (1952); Schuyler, supra, at 903-904.

(n111)Footnote 145. See, e.g., Leach & Logan, supra note 120, at 256, 286. See also Hanson v. Graham, 6 Ves. Jr. 239, 31 Eng. Rep. 1030 (Ch. 1801), reprinted in Leach & Logan, supra note 120, at 290-295 (citing passages from the Digest of Justinian and Code of Justinian to show the influence of the civil law on the common law).

(n112)Footnote 146. Lewis M. Simes, Future Interests in Chattels Personal, 39 Yale L.J. 771, at 801 (1930).

(n113)Footnote 147. See 5 American Law of Property, supra note 15 § 21.18, at 154; Carey & Schuyler, supra note 122, at 440 n.5 (citing Bush v. Hamill, 112 N.E. 375, 376 (Ill. 1916)); Restatement of The Law of Property § 257 comment f (1940); Schuyler, supra note 163, at 903.

(n114)Footnote 148. For an explanation of this meaning of "vested," see Gray, supra note 61, at 112 n.2. See generally Kales, supra note 122, at 571-572.

(n115)Footnote 149. Carey & Schuyler, supra note 122, at 440-441 (discussing Howe v. Hodge, 38 N.E. 1083 (Ill. 1984)); Simes, supra note 165, at 801.

Vesting in this case for purposes of the Rule against Perpetuities has been questioned. See Jesse Dukeminier, Kentucky Perpetuities Law Restated and Reformed, 49 Ky. L.J. 3, 22-23 (1960). Schuyler, supra note 163, at 907-908 states:

> Once again, however, one is justified in wondering whether validity or invalidity under the rule against perpetuities should be made to depend upon the application or non-application of a rule of construction which is largely lacking in logical foundation. That is exactly what happens in connection with the rule as to the effect of an intermediate income gift, for it is applied indiscriminately in determining whether future interests are vested in the sense of being non-contingent on survivorship or whether they are vested for purposes of the rule against perpetuities.

(n116)Footnote 150. 3 Co. Rep. 16 (1587).

(n117)Footnote 151. 2 Jarman, Wills 1345, 1346 (7th ed. 1930).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.04

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.04 Survivorship

[Go To Supp]

The preference for the vesting rule of construction is evident throughout the discussion of survivorship in this section.

§ 30.04(a) Implied

O's conveyance "to A, but if A dies without issue, then to B" gives B an executory interest with no condition of survivorship. If B predeceases A, B's executory interest will pass to B's heirs if not otherwise conveyed or devised by B.

In Pinbury v. Elkin, n152 testator devised to his wife "all his lands and tenements, money, clothes and yarn, to be freely by her possessed and enjoyed: provided if the said Hester died without issue by the testator Giles Davis, that then 80 l. should remain to his brother, John Davis, after her decease." The testator died without issue with only a personal estate, and John Davis predeceased Hester. The court found no condition of survivorship on the interest to John Davis.

O's conveyance "to A for life, then to B and B's heirs" gives a vested remainder to B. n153 This principle of vesting when there is an intermediate gift applies to a remainder in a class as well. n154 O's conveyance "to A for life, then to the children of A" gives a vested remainder subject to open to each child of A as it is born. n155

In In re Stanford's Estate, n156 the testatrix bequeathed the income of a fund of money to Amy Hansen, her niece, for life, and on her death the principal to "be delivered to the child or children" of Amy. Amy had one child, Walter, who predeceased her, and three adopted children who survived her. The court found that Walter's interest vested upon birth.

In Security Trust Co. v. Irvine, n157 the testator gave property to his two sisters, Martha and Mary, during their joint lives and during the lifetime of the survivor of them, and then he directed that the property "shall be equally divided among my brothers and sisters, share and share alike, their heirs and assigns forever, the issue of any deceased brother or sister to take his or her parent's share." The testator was survived by five brothers and sisters, all of whom died before Mary, the surviving life tenant. The court found that each of the five (including Martha and Mary) had a vested remainder from the time of the testator's death, subject to divestment by the issue that survived each and, where no issue survived a particular brother or sister, then that brother or sister had a vested remainder that became indefeasible upon death. n158 There was no survivorship condition for the brothers and sisters of the testator, although there was a survivorship condition for the issue (as will be discussed in Altman below).

O's conveyance to a trustee to pay the income to A for life, then to divide the corpus and pay it over to B, C and D, generally gives vested remainders to B, C and D. n159 The divide-and-pay-over rule, which argues that the requirement of an act that cannot occur until a future time is a requirement of survivorship, has been widely criticized and generally discarded. n160

In Knight v. Pottgieser, n161 the testator gave real and personal property to his wife for life, "and upon and at her death the same to go to and be divided amongst my children and their descendants in equal shares, the descendant or descendants of a deceased child to take the parent's share in equal proportions." One of the testator's children died without issue after the testator's death and before the death of the wife. The court found that the deceased child had a vested remainder that was inheritable at his death. The court stated that "though a gift arises wholly out of directions to pay or distribute in futuro, yet if such payment or distribution is not deferred for reasons personal to the legatee, but merely because the testator desired to appropriate the subject matter of the legacy to the use and benefit of another for and during the life of such other, the vesting of the gift in remainder will not be postponed but will vest at once, the right of enjoyment only being deferred."

On the other hand, assuming the Rule in Shelley's Case does not apply, O's conveyance "to A for life, then to the issue of A" usually imposes a requirement of survivorship to the termination of A's life estate (particularly when the distribution is per stirpes and not per capita) either by condition precedent or condition subsequent. n162

In Altman v. Rider, n163 the testator left his estate to his daughter for life, with directions that upon her death the estate be liquidated and certain bequests paid in money, including $10,000 to Wolf Bodenheimer's descendants. The court found that a requirement of survivorship existed, that the descendants were determined at the death of the life tenant, and that distribution should be per stirpes. Since one of the sons of Wolf had died without issue, his share was to be divided among the lineal descendants of the other children of Wolf.

O's conveyance, in the absence of the Rule in Shelley's Case, "to A for life, then to A's issue, then to B" gives B a contingent remainder that is subject to the birth and survival of A's issue at the time of A's death but not subject to the survival of B at the time of A's death. n164

O's conveyance "to A for life, then to her children, if any; if none, to her brothers and sisters" gives alternative contingent remainders to A's children on the one hand and to A's brothers and sisters on the other. In some jurisdictions, only the brothers and sisters who survive A's death with no children can take. n165 However, this implied survivorship condition is rejected by a majority of states. n166

In a devise by A "to B for life, remainder to A's heirs," A's heirs may be determined at A's death but may have to survive B's death to take. n167

O's conveyance to a trustee to pay the income to herself for life, remainder to her sister, and with the reservation of a power in O "during her life, to amend, alter, revoke, or terminate" the trust, gives a vested remainder to O's sister subject to divestment by exercise of the power of revocation. n168

A springing executory interest in a legacy [can an interest in a legacy be springing?] may have a condition of survivorship of the taker to the time of taking with the exception of a legacy "with interest" or "to be paid at" a time in the future. n169

§ 30.04(b) Express

O's conveyance "to A for life, then to my surviving children" usually gives the children a remainder contingent on survivorship to the termination of the preceding life estate. n170 Likewise, O's conveyance "to A for life, then to my three sons or their survivors" gives the sons a remainder contingent on survivorship to the termination of the preceding life estate. n171 O's devise "to A for life, remainder to my children, the descendants of any deceased child to take the parent's share" may give the children a vested remainder subject to divestment if a child died before the life tenant, leaving children. n172 O's devise "to A's children and, if any of them should die before twenty-one, their share to the survivors" gives the children a present interest closing the class at the time of the testator's death. The survivors have an executory interest that becomes distributable if a child dies under the age of twenty-one; however, survivor is interpreted to be a part of the first class of children rather than using the Rule of Convenience to close a class of surviving children at the time of distribution. n173 The devise of a fee simple to one person and, in case of the person's death, to another may be a provision against lapse; in such a case, the first devisee must survive the death of the testator. n174

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 152. 2 Vernon 758 (Court of Chancery 1718).

(n2)Footnote 153. Some commentators have suggested that general survival requirements should be imposed on future interest beneficiaries in order to increase the chances that the property will pass to beneficiaries the donor would have intended. One approach would analogize to the law of lapsed gifts and permit the testator to retain more control over the disposition of his property (presumably through the disposition of the reversionary interest). Leonard Levin, Lapse and Vesting of Interest Revisited, 3 Hofstra Property L.J. 155 (1990). Another more flexible approach would provide "that the property shall pass as the beneficiary appoints by his or her will to anyone except her creditors, her estate, or the creditors of her estate, and in default of appointment to her heirs determined as if she had died at the time for distribution." French, supra note 57, at 836. The Joint Editorial Board for the Uniform Probate Code advocates an antilapse statute approach which would provide that the property pass to the issue of the predeceasing beneficiary. See Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 668-669 (4th ed. 1990). These suggestions have not been adopted generally. In re Estate of Mendelson, 697 N.E.2d 1210 (Ill. App. 1998) (where the beneficiary predeceases the decedent in an Illinois Land Trust, and where the language of the trust instrument is unclear regarding whether the interest reverts to the beneficiary's or the decedent's estate, the interest will go to the estate of the decedent; in an Illinois Land Trust the trustee continues to hold legal and equitable title so there was nothing to go to the beneficiary's estate if she died before the decedent.).

(n3)Footnote 154. See cases cited in Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 307 n.133. See Dauer v. Butera, 642 N.E.2d 848 (Ill. App. 1994) (devise in trust to life tenant and then to named children gave vested remainder to children that was inheritable when children predeceased life tenant).

(n4)Footnote 155. There is some authority for holding the children's interest contingent on the ground that the interest of a child who dies before the life tenant may go to a stranger. See id. at 290-291 (citing Lady Poulet v. Lord Poulet, 23 Eng. Rep. 415 (Ch. 1683)), and at 307 n.134 (for cases construing the interest of the child who predeceases the life tenant as contingent but distributable to the children who survive the life tenant).

(n5)Footnote 156. 315 P.2d 681 (Cal. 1957), although the dissent cites Simes & Smith, supra note 61, § 640 at 78, for support of the requirement of survivorship to the time of taking.

(n6)Footnote 157. 93 A.2d 528 (Del. 1953).

(n7)Footnote 158. Contra, Restatement (Second) of Property, Donative Transfers § 27.3, cmt. e (Tent. Draft No. 9, 1986):

> Because of the undesirability of having the gift pass through the deceased member's estate and because the provision for substitution of issue is a sufficient indication of the donor's intent that he did not wish such a result, it should be presumed, in the absence of contrary indication, that the donor who provides for substitution of issue intends that the share of the other class members be enlarged if a class member fails to survive to the date of distribution and leaves no issue who so survive.

(n8)Footnote 159. See Matter of Carne, 58 N.E. 47, 49 (N.Y. 1900).

(n9)Footnote 160. Halbach & Scoles, supra note 27, at 90.

(n10)Footnote 161. 52 N.E. 934, 935 (Ill. 1898).

(n11)Footnote 162. Halbach & Scoles, supra note 27, at 111.

(n12)Footnote 163. 291 S.W.2d 577 (Ky. App. 1956). See also Payne v. Palisades Interstate Park Comm., 611 N.Y.S.2d 699 (1994) (99-year lease to descendants following a life estate did not violate rule against perpetuities because court interpreted "descendants" to mean "descendants living at the death of the life tenants").

(n13)Footnote 164. Tapley v. Dill, 217 S.W.2d 369 (Mo. 1949). The interest in B is an alternative contingent remainder and not a vested remainder because the contingent remainder in the issue is not allowed to divest a vested remainder. See Loddington v. Kime, 1 Salk. 224 (1695).

(n14)Footnote 165. Lawson v. Lawson, 148 S.E.2d 546 (N.C. 1966). Accord, Fletcher v. Hurdle, 536 S.W.2d 109 (Ark. 1976), and Schau v. Cecil, 136 N.W.2d 515 (Iowa 1965).

(n15)Footnote 166. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 667 (4th ed. 1990), citing 5 American Law of Property, supra note 47, § 21.25; 2 Simes & Smith, supra note 61, at § 594.

(n16)Footnote 167. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Eliel, 161 N.E.2d 107 (Ill. 1959).

(n17)Footnote 168. First Nat'l Bank of Cincinnati v. Tenney, 138 N.E.2d 15 (Ohio 1956).

(n18)Footnote 169. See Smell v. Dee, 2 Salk. 415 (Court of Chancery 1707) ("wherever the time is annexed to the legacy itself, and not to the payment of it, if the legatee dies before the time of payment, it is a lapsed legacy," i.e., the condition of survivorship exists). Henry Swinburne, A Briefe Treatise of Testaments and Last Willes at 172 (1590), claimed that the condition of survivorship exists if the time of taking is uncertain [e.g., marriage or death] and it does not exist if the time of taking is certain [e.g., a date certain], but Clobberie's Case, 2 Vent. 342, 86 Eng. Rep. 476 (Ch. 1677), separated out three situations without apparent differentiation between whether the time of taking was certain or uncertain: The condition of survivorship exists "if money were bequeathed to one at his age of twenty-one years"; the condition of survivorship does not exist "where one bequeathed a sum of money to a woman at her age of twenty-one years, or day of marriage, to be paid unto her with interest" or "if money be given to one, to be paid at the age of twenty-one years." (italics added) For a case where the intermediate income was given to the beneficiary and survivorship was not a condition, see Coddington v. Stone, 9 S.E.2d 420 (N.C. 1940).

(n19)Footnote 170. See Halbach & Scoles, supra note 27, at 120-122, which also gives a list of cases for and against a survival requirement to the time of possession when the word "or" is used. Accord: Lawyer v. Munro, 118 So. 2d 654 (Fla. App. 1960) (named nephews or their survivors or survivor); Taylor v. Taylor, 92 N.W. 71 (Iowa 1902) (children or their heirs); Koelliker v. Denkinger, 83 P.2d 703 (Kan. 1938), modified on another point, 86 P.2d 740 (Kan. 1938) (children, except that the heirs of any deceased child shall receive the child's share); In re Gulbenkian's Will, 174 N.E.2d 481 (N.Y. 1961) (court construed "and" to mean "or" and treated as "brothers or their heirs"). Contra: Dow v. Bailey, 77 A.2d 567 (Me. 1950) (son or his heirs); Uphaus v. Uphaus, 315 S.W.2d 801 (Mo. 1958) (children or their descendants); In re Ferdinand's Estate, 97 N.W.2d 414 (Wis. 1959) (sisters and brothers or the survivors of them).

(n20)Footnote 171. See In re Montgomery's Estate, 2 N.Y.S.2d 406 (1938). Lamb v. Nationsbank, N.A., 507 S.E.2d 457 (Ga. 1998) (Upon the death of my last surviving daughter, the corpus of my estate is to be divided into two equal parts, one of the parts to be immediately paid over and delivered to my nieces and nephew then living. In the event of the death of any of my nieces and nephews leaving children, the share of the parent shall be paid over and delivered to such children or their legal guardians." The court held this language imposed an express condition of survivorship on the nieces' and nephews' children.).

(n21)Footnote 172. See Faris v. Nickel, 107 P.2d 721 (Kan. 1941).

(n22)Footnote 173. See Davidson v. Dallas, 14 Ves. 576 (Ch. 1808).

(n23)Footnote 174. See In re New York, L. & W.R.R. Co., 11 N.E. 492 (N.Y. 1887).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.05

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.05 Alternative Grants Using "Or"

O's conveyance in the disjunctive "to A or to B" is void for uncertainty if the grantor has not otherwise manifested the intent as to the person who is to take. There are a number of cases, however, where a construction is possible.

In Ready v. Kearsley, n175 a grant "to J.S. or to his heirs" was interpreted to give a present interest in fee simple absolute to J.S. if he was living at the time the grant became effective or to his heirs if he was dead at that time. The court stated: "If J.S. is living, he has no heirs; and no two parties can claim adversely as grantees under the deed."

In Estate of Christen, n176 a will leaving the residue of an estate "to Joseph P. Kelly or Father Flanagan's Boys Home, or the survivor of them" was held to give the home the interest when Kelly predeceased the testator. The court did not concern itself with the interpretation had both parties survived the testator.

O's conveyance in the disjunctive "to A for life, then to B or to C" also offers a number of constructions. Dukeminier and Johanson interpret the conveyance "to A for life, remainder to B or C" to mean "to A for life, remainder to B, if B is then living, and if not, to C." n177 Another construction may switch the "or" to an "and."

In Peterson v. Neeld, n178 the court interpreted "or his heirs" to mean "and his heirs."

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 175. 14 Mich. 215, at 224 (1866).

(n2)Footnote 176. 48 Cal. Rptr. 26 (1965).

(n3)Footnote 177. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Wills, Trusts and Estates 664 (4th ed. 1990), citing 5 American Law of Property, supra note 47, § 21.16.

(n4)Footnote 178. 92 A.2d 62 (N.J. Super. 1952).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.06

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.06 Cross Remainders

The conveyance "to A and B for their lives, remainder to C" is construed by many courts to create a cross remainder in the surviving life tenant in order to avoid an intestacy. n179

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 179. Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 307 & n.135. Id. at 307 & n.136, suggests two other methods of distribution: to pay the share of the first life tenant to die to his estate until the other life tenant dies, or to pay his share of the income to the remainderman. In re Trust of Hasch, 721 N.E.2d 1111 (Ohio Ct. App. 1999).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.07

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.07 Acceleration of Remainders

If a beneficiary gives up the interest before accepting it, the act is one of disclaimer or renunciation. If a beneficiary gives up the interest after accepting it, the act is one of release.

The Uniform Probate Code n180 allows a person to renounce the right to succession to any property, including a future interest, within nine months of the time the interest becomes indefeasibly vested. In such a case, the person renouncing is treated as if having predeceased the decedent at the time of the decedent's death. On the other hand, a person releasing the interest is not treated as if having predeceased the decedent.

In Ohio National Bank of Columbus v. Adair, n181 the testator created a testamentary trust with income beneficiaries, all of whom had died by 1978 except for Maribel. The trust provided that if they "shall die leaving issue surviving them, ... to such issue or to the issue of the survivor or survivors of them in equal shares, per stirpes." An alternative distribution was provided in case there should be no surviving issue. In 1978, Maribel had two children and three grandchildren. The court found that the trust would not terminate upon Maribel's renunciation of the income of the trust. While acceleration is permitted in the case of a vested remainder, it is not permitted in this case where it contravenes the intent of the testator in the expressed condition of survivorship referring to the time of death of Maribel. n182

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 180. § 2-801 (1983).

(n2)Footnote 181. 374 N.E.2d 415 (Ohio 1978).

(n3)Footnote 182. See also 2A Richard L. Powell and Patrick J. Rohan, Powell on Real Property §§ 309 & 310 (1968), 5 Austin Wakeman Scott, The Law of Trusts § 412.1 (3d ed. 1967), 2 Restatement of The Law of Property § 233 and cmt. e, 2 Simes & Smith, supra note 61, at § 796. Radford, Mary F., Wills, Trusts, & Administration of Estates, 51 Mercer L. Rev. 527 (1999).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.08

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.08 Substitutional Gifts

In the devise "to my children, the issue of any deceased child to take such child's share," the testator provides for children who predecease him. The question arises whether this class of children includes those who are dead at the time the will is made, and there is authority both ways. n183

In a devise "to each of my children for life, and upon the death of each child, that child's share shall go to his or her issue then living, but if no issue are then living, the share shall go to the child's surviving brothers and sisters," there is a question concerning the interpretation of the designation "surviving brothers and sisters." If the first child to die is survived by children and the second child to die is not, will the second child's share go only to the remaining brothers and sisters, or will it also go to the children of the first child to die? There is authority both ways. n184

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 183. See Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 288, citing Restatement of The Law of Property § 297 (1944) (exclude), and In re Sibley's Trusts, 5 Ch. D. 494, 502 (1877) (include).

(n2)Footnote 184. Id. at 289, citing In re Estate of Thall, 219 N.E.2d 397 (N.Y. 1966) (include children of the first child to die), and In re Will of Gautier, 146 N.E.2d 771 (N.Y. 1957) (exclude).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.09

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.09 Class Gifts

[Go To Supp]

§ 30.09(a) Definition

A class consists of a group of people who are designated to share in an interest without regard to the condition(s) precedent on their taking a share in the interest. John Chipman Gray stated: "A class is a number of persons having a common characteristic. By a gift to a class is meant a gift to persons, the share of each of whom is determined by the number of the class." n185 A class may be children, heirs, basketball players on the Chicago Bulls team, grandchildren by one's oldest daughter, or law students at The University of Tulsa. Thus, O's conveyance "to the children of my deceased sister A" gives a present interest in fee simple absolute to the class of A's children. In O's conveyance "to A's children who reach the age of twenty-one" the class is still A's children (not A's children who have reached the age of twenty-one), but each child who takes a share in the interest must satisfy the condition precedent of reaching the age of twenty-one.

In O's conveyance to an individual with a group, such as "to A for life, then to B and the children of C," the class consists of both, B and the children of C.

In In re Moss, n186 the testator gave his share in the Daily Telegraph newspaper "upon trust to pay the income thereof to my said wife for her life, and after her decease, upon trust for the said E.J. Fowler and the child or children of my sister Emily Walter who shall attain the age of twenty-one years equally to be divided between them as tenants in common." Before the testator's death E.J. Fowler died. Upon the wife's death after the testator, the five children of Emily Walter were all twenty-one. The court found that E.J. Fowler was designated as part of the class and therefore she did not have a share which lapsed by her death before the testator. The children were entitled to share the whole of the remainder.

Usually, a gift to named individuals, such as "to my children, A and B," is held not to give a class gift. n187 However, even in this case, if the testator evinces an intention to treat the individuals as a class, they will be so treated. n188 One situation in which no class gift will be found, even if the language is otherwise appropriate for a class gift, is when the shares are specified, such as "one-half to A, and one-half to B." n189

In O's conveyance "to A for life, then to A's children" A's children share a remainder as a class. If there are no children at the time of the conveyance, the unborn children share a contingent remainder and each must be born before they can share a vested remainder; the event of birth is a condition precedent. When the first child is born, that child's share in the contingent remainder is transformed into a vested remainder while the contingent remainder of the rest of the unborn children is transformed into an executory interest. The unborn children's interest is called an executory interest since it no longer follows the termination of the preceding estates but stands ready to cut into the estate(s) of the born child(ren) holding the vested remainder each time the condition precedent of birth of another child occurs. In this sense, the birth of each child is not only a condition precedent to the interest of that child, but a condition subsequent to the estate held by the children who are born; the occurrence of the event specified in the condition (birth) cuts down the share of each child who is born in order to let in the newly born child to share in their estate. The vested remainder held by the children who are born is thus "subject to open" or "subject to partial divestment."

§ 30.09(b) Exclusion

A class closes when there are no more members who can be or are allowed to be born into it. Thus, after O's conveyance "to X for life, then to A's children" when A dies, the class of A's children closes at the time of A's death because A cannot conceive any more children. The class of A's children includes all of A's children alive at the time of the conveyance or born thereafter, including any children conceived at the time of the conveyance or any time thereafter, as long as they are later born alive. n190 In this case, the class closes naturally because A cannot have any more children. n191 (The fact that A could have children through the preservation of the sperm or egg for fertilization at a point in time later than A's death is not considered, and such child would not be considered a member of the class.)

Since the birth of a member of a class may not occur until a long period of time has elapsed, a rule has been developed to close a class artificially if it does not close sooner naturally. It is called the Rule of Convenience n192 and can be stated as follows: A class will close to exclude future-born persons who would otherwise be members of the class when some member of the class (or one who holds the interest of a member of the class) becomes entitled to distribution, but only if the time designated in the conveyance for distribution (whether the time be immediate or the time be postponed until the termination of a prior interest or the happening of an event (other than the implied event of birth) or both) has arrived and the taker is born (or conceived and later born alive) at that time. n193

In In re Werhner's Settlement Trusts, n194 an inter vivos trust gave to "all such children of the settlor (whether now living or hereafter to be born) as being male attain the age of twenty-one years or being female attain that age or marry." The court found that the class closed when the first child reached twenty-one even though the settlor was still alive at that time. Any child born later would be excluded.

In Britton v. Miller, n195 the testatrix left her entire estate, including a remainder interest in certain property, "to the children of my brother, Stephen W. Britton, and of my sister, Mary F. Miller." Stephen had one child at the time of the testatrix's death (which child died later that year before the remainder interest became a present interest) and one child born later (but also before the remainder interest became a present interest). The court found that both children were included in the class and shared in the remainder interest, the deceased child's share going to the father. (The child born after the death of the testatrix, however, was not entitled to any of the property which was in the possession of the testatrix at the time of her death.) n196

It should be noted that this is a rule of construction and may give way to the contrary intent of the grantor. n197

The Rule of Convenience has four aspects that require special attention to ensure proper application of the rule. (1) The time designated in the conveyance for distribution is the occurrence of all events that terminate all prior estates and satisfy all conditions necessary to give a present interest to a class member except the condition of birth. (2) At the time designated in the conveyance for distribution a member of the class or one who has taken the interest of such member is entitled to distribution if such person is in existence. The existence of such person entitled to take distribution at that time causes the Rule of Convenience to become operable, i.e., to close the class. The nonexistence of such person at that time causes the rule never to become operable and the class must close naturally. n198 (3) A person who would have been a member of the class but has died before the conveyance becomes effective is not a member of the class. A class member must be alive (or conceived, as long as later born alive) at or after the time the conveyance is effective. A person who is a member of the class and conveys away the interest or dies and leaves the interest to another has created one who takes the interest of the member of the class. If a condition precedent to that member's interest cannot be satisfied, however, neither the member nor the person who takes the member's interest can ever be entitled to distribution. (4) When the class closes, all members of the class then in existence (including persons in the womb as long as they are later born alive) continue to be members of the class. If a child is adopted, the time of adoption must occur before the class closes for the child to be included in the class. n199 Those persons who would have been members of the class except that they were later born or later adopted are excluded from membership.

In Thomas v. Thomas, n200 the testator gave to the six children of his son David and David's wife Elizabeth, stating that "[s]hould any of these children die unmarried and without issue, or any other children be born to my said son, I will that all of his children divide equally share and share alike." A previous clause in the will had provided that no gift should be paid over to any child until he reached his majority. After the testator's death, David had another son. At that time three of David's children had reached twenty-one. The court found that the after-born son of David was excluded from the devise because the time of distribution was the attainment of majority by the oldest child of David, and this event had closed the class before the birth of the after-born son. In the above-quoted section of the testator's will, the reference to "all" of the children was construed to mean all of those who came into being between the time of the testator's death and the period of distribution of the gift.

Thus, O's conveyance "to A's children" is a gift designated to be taken immediately. If A has any children alive (or in the womb and later born alive) at the time of the conveyance, those children are entitled to distribution immediately and the Rule of Convenience operates to close the class to all future-conceived (or presently-conceived but not born alive) children of A. On the other hand, if A has no children at the time of the conveyance, the Rule of Convenience can never operate in this case and the class will include all future born children of A. A's death will close the class naturally.

Likewise, O's conveyance "to A for life, then one day later to B's children" creates an interest in the class of B's children. The interest is an executory interest that will not become a present interest in any child until one day has passed after the death of A. The time designated in the conveyance for distribution is one day after the death of A. At that time the class will close to include all children born (or conceived and later born alive), and all other children later born will be excluded from membership in the class. If there are no children born (or conceived and later born alive) at the time designated for distribution, the Rule of Convenience will never apply in this case and the class will only close naturally by the death of B.

Likewise, O's conveyance "to A for life, then one day later to B's children who reach the age of eighteen" creates an interest in the class of B's children. The interest is an executory interest that will not become a present interest in any child until one day has passed after the death of A and the condition precedent is satisfied that that child must reach the age of eighteen. The time designated in the conveyance for distribution is one day after the death of A and when a child has reached the age of eighteen. n201 At that time the class will close to include all children of B who are born (or conceived and later born alive) at that time even if they have not yet reached the age of eighteen. All children who are conceived at a later time or conceived at that time but not born alive are excluded from membership of the class under the Rule of Convenience. Those children who are born but have not yet reached eighteen continue to hold an executory interest that will become upon each reaching eighteen a present interest with their siblings who have reached eighteen.

Likewise, O's conveyance "to A's children when the youngest reaches 21 with interest paid to A's children in the interim" creates an interest in the class of A's children. Under the rule in Clobberie's Case n202 A's children have a vested present interest with possession postponed. The class will close at the time for distribution which will occur when the youngest child of A at any one time reaches 21. At that time the class will close to include all of A's children who are alive or were alive at some time between the time of the conveyance and the time for distribution. (If a child was born and died before reaching 21, that child is still a member of the class and her representatives will be entitled to a share at the time of distribution.)

In Lux v. Lux, n203 the testatrix left the residue of her estate "to my grandchildren, share and share alike. Any real estate included in said residue shall be maintained for the benefit of said grandchildren and shall not be sold until the youngest of said grandchildren has reached twenty-one years of age." The court found that the testatrix intended that her property be held in trust for the benefit of her grandchildren with income payable to the beneficiaries as it accrued. It also held that distribution of the trust corpus would be made at the time when the youngest of the then living grandchildren should attain the age of twenty-one.

When a member of the class becomes entitled to distribution, that member may take her minimum proportionate share of the whole estate. The remaining share of the estate may be held in trust to be distributed to the other members of the class as they become entitled to distribution. In some cases, particularly where the Rule of Convenience does not operate, it may be difficult to ascertain how many members of the class will become entitled to distribution. In such a case the members who are entitled to distribution may actually take the whole estate subject to partial divestment as and when the other members of the class become entitled to distribution. n204

When the gift is of income, the rule of convenience operates separately for each distribution.

In In re Wenmoth's Estate, n205 the testator gave the residue of his property upon trust to pay an annuity to his daughter for life, and then to apply the whole income "unto and equally between my grandchildren ... on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years, during their respective lives, share and share alike. The court found that "there is no reason why the rule [of convenience] should be applied beyond each periodical payment," and, assuming the life estate were over, the rule did not close the class as soon as the eldest reached the age of twenty-one. Rather, "any child at any time attaining twenty-one years will be entitled to a share of the income."

When a gift is of a specific sum to each member of a class, the class closes immediately even if there are no members of the class alive at the time of conveyance. n206

§ 30.09(c) Shares

The share of each member of a class is usually equal. However, where the class consists of a single individual plus a separate group of individuals, some courts have ruled that one-half goes to the single individual and the other half to be divided equally among the group. Professor Leach cites the following interesting case:

> The will of Griswold E. Warner of Sewickley, Pa., has the dubious distinction of having been construed in two of the possible three ways n207 by different courts. The will left realty and personalty "to A (a grandchild) and the heirs of B (a daughter)." The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, dealing with the residuary personalty, ruled that one-half passed to A and the other half to the heirs of B. The Supreme Court of Illinois, dealing with realty in Chicago, ruled that A and the children of B took equal shares as a single class. n208

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 185. Gray, supra, note 70, § 369, n.1. Canoy v. Canoy, 520 S.E.2d 128 (N.C. Ct. App. 1999) (defining the meaning of a class for the purposes of a class gift).

(n2)Footnote 186. 2 Ch. 314 (C.A. 1899), affirmed in House of Lords sub. nom. Kingsbury v. Walter, A.C. 187 (1901).

(n3)Footnote 187. Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 317.

(n4)Footnote 188. See In re Ives' Estate, 148 N.W. 727 (Mich. 1914), stating:

> We recognize the general rule contended for by appellee that, where property is given to several persons by name, to be equally divided between them, they take as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, or as a class. But the authorities hold, we think, that this rule yields to a different construction when it plainly appears from the will that it was the intention of the testator that the survivors [of the testator] should take the whole. Estate of Joslyn v. Davis, 38 Cal. App. 4th 1428 (1995) (a granddaughter who was adopted fifteen years after her grandmother's death was entitled to enjoy the benefits from the trust set up in her father's name); In re Estate of Schwake, 543 N.W.2d 125 (Minn. App. 1996) (in Minnesota the antilapse statute applies to a class gift unless the testator's will indicates a specific intent contrary to its application).

(n5)Footnote 189. Facts and Rules, supra note 8, at 317-318.

(n6)Footnote 190. See Simes & Smith, supra note 61, § 650. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 673, states that a class of children also includes a child's issue if the child predeceases the testator and if the gift does not lapse but goes to the child's issue under an anti-lapse statute.

(n7)Footnote 191. There is a conclusive presumption that a person may have children up to the time of death. See Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 143. Estates of Herman v. Urteago, 39 Cal. App. 1525 (1995) (mere statements in a will of gifts to "my spouse's issue" and "my spouse's children" are unenforceable if that spouse has been divorced); Bowles v. Bradley, 461 S.E.2d 811 (S.C. 1995) (in South Carolina class gifts include adopted children).

(n8)Footnote 192. In England it is called the rule in Andrews v. Partington, 3 Bro. C.C. 401, 29 Eng. Rep. 610 (Ch. 1791). See Halbach & Scoles, supra note 27, at 132-133.

(n9)Footnote 193. See Devisme v. Mello, 1 Bro. C.C. 537 (1782), cited by Professor Leach as the leading English case on the rule that the class stays open until the time for first principal distribution. Leach, supra note 7, at 390 n.21.

(n10)Footnote 194. 1 All Eng. Rep. 184 (1961).

(n11)Footnote 195. 63 N.C. 271 (1869).

(n12)Footnote 196. The opposite conclusion was reached by the court in Baylies v. Hamilton, 55 N.Y.S. 390 (1899). In that case the testator gave an equitable life estate to his brother in trust "and upon his death the same shall go with my residuary estate." He gave the residue to his brother's children, "the share of any child dying before attaining the age of twenty-one years to go to the survivor, and in case all said children die before attaining the age of twenty-one years, ... to the children of Nathalie E. Baylies." At the date of the testator's will, his brother had two children. Another was born before the testator's death, and a fourth was born after the testator's death. The court found that "under the residuary clause, only those children who were living at the death of the testator were entitled to take," excluding the child born after the testator's death. The fact that the testator gave the residuaries a future interest after a life estate did not leave a class open until the life estate was over. The court stated that "had the testator provided in respect to the remainder of the real estate devised to [the brother] for life, that upon his death such remainder should go to the children of his brother, the after born child of [his brother] would have been entitled to participate."

(n13)Footnote 197. McDowell National Bank of Sharon v. Applegate, 388 A.2d 666 (Pa. 1978), citing Earle Estate, 85 A.2d 90 (Pa. 1951).

(n14)Footnote 198. Weld v. Bradbury, 2 Vern. 705 (Ch. 1715) (bequest to children of J.S. and J.N. but no child was living at the death of the testator).

(n15)Footnote 199. In re Silberman's Will, 242 N.E.2d 736 (N.Y. 1968), discussed in Samuel M. Fetters, The Determination of Maximum Membership in Class Gifts in Relation to Adopted Children: In Re Silberman's Will Examined, 21 Syracuse L. Rev. 1 (1969).

(n16)Footnote 200. 51 S.W. 111 (Mo. 1899).

(n17)Footnote 201. See Austin's Estate, 173 A. 278 (Pa. 1934) (in which the class closed after a class member had reached the prescribed age).

(n18)Footnote 202. Clobberie's Case, 2 Vent. 342, 86 Eng. Rep. 476 (Ch. 1677).

(n19)Footnote 203. 288 A.2d 701 (R.I. 1972).

(n20)Footnote 204. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 143, citing 5 American Law of Property, supra note 15 § 22.42, at 355, but nevertheless indicating that there is little case authority on this subject.

(n21)Footnote 205. 37 Ch. D. 266 (Ch. 1887).

(n22)Footnote 206. See Rogers v. Mutch, 10 Ch. D. 25 (1878).

(n23)Footnote 207. (1) All take the same share as members of the same class; (2) the single individual takes one-half and the group as a separate class takes one-half; and (3) the single individual takes one-half and the group takes one-half, but they are all treated as one class.

(n24)Footnote 208. Leach, supra note 6, at 364 n.8 (case cites omitted). Moore v. Stern, 468 S.E.2d 607 (N.C. App. 1995) (if the predecessor would have taken a share of a lapsed residuary gift, then the qualified issue of that person may also participate in the lapsed gift).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.10

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.10 Powers of Appointment

[Go To Supp]

§ 30.10(a) Definitions

It is possible for a donor to give a power to a donee to create a future interest in the donor's property. Thus, O may convey a life estate to A and give A a power to appoint the property in A's will to one of A's children, otherwise the remainder in fee simple absolute after the life estate to go to B. O is the donor of the power to sell; A is the donee; A's children are the objects or beneficiaries of the power; the child who actually receives the property is the appointee; and B is the taker or beneficiary in default of appointment of the gift in default of appointment.

The appointee generally is considered a taker from the donor, not from the donee. n209 As Professor Simes has stated, "the exercise of a power of appointment relates back to the creation of the power." n210 However, the appointment may not be made by the donee to one who has died before the appointment even though the death of the appointee be after the power has been created by the donor. n211 The interest in the taker of the gift over in default of appointment is considered vested subject to divestment upon the exercise of the power of appointment. n212 Exercise of a power involves exercise of a condition subsequent cutting short the gift over in default of appointment. Thus, where the life tenant has the power to dispose of the remainder in fee simple after the life estate, the remainder is vested. n213 It is possible for the gift over in default of appointment to be contingent by its terms, n214 but not on the ground that it is subject to the non-exercise of a power of appointment. n215

§ 30.10(b) Types of Powers

There are several types of powers. n215.1 A general power of appointment can be exercised in favor of anyone, including the donee. It may be (1) testamentary or exercisable by will, (2) exercisable by deed, or (3) exercisable by deed or will.

A special power of appointment can be exercised only in favor of a group of persons not including the donee, the donee's estate, creditors or creditors of the donee's estate. n216 It may be (1) testamentary or exercisable by will, (2) exercisable by deed, or (3) exercisable by deed or will n217

§ 30.10(b)(1) General Testamentary Power

In In re Estate of Curtis, n217.1 the court found that a devise "to my daughter, Mary Louise Curtis Bok, for her lifetime" with "full power by will or other testamentary instrument to dispose of any or all of said property, but failing such disposition, upon her death, ... to such of my grandchildren as shall be living at the death of my said daughter" gave her a life estate and a general testamentary power of appointment. The gift over in default of the exercise of the power precluded the enlargement of the estate to a fee simple.

§ 30.10(b)(2) General Power Exercisable by Deed or Will

In New England Trust Co. v. Wood, n217.2 the testator left the residue of a trust to trustees, who "shall pay the income thereof to my wife ... during her life and after her death shall hold the said trust premises and the income thereof for such heir or heirs as my said wife shall by deed will or codicil appoint... ." The court interpreted the words "heir or heirs" as "beneficiary or beneficiaries," and found that the will created a life estate in the wife with a general power of appointment by deed or will. The wife exercised the power by her will.

§ 30.10(b)(3) Special Testamentary Power

In Estate of duPont, n218 the testator left one-third of the residue of his estate in trust for the benefit of his daughter and created in her a special testamentary power of appointment over this share. The will provided that the trustee was "upon her death to transfer, assign, and pay over the principal of her share of [the testator's] residuary estate unto such of her children and issue of deceased children, and in such proportions as she may by her Last Will and Testament or any writing in the nature thereof direct, limit and appoint." The court found that she exceeded the bounds of her special power in its subsequent exercise.

§ 30.10(b)(4) Special Power Exercisable by Deed

In Estate of Colman, n219 the testator's wife was given a life estate in two trusts with two powers of appointment. By a general power of appointment by will, she was empowered to distribute the remainder of one of the trusts. By a special power of appointment by deed "[s]he had the right to require that the trustee distribute principal to her in an amount not exceeding $5,000 or 5% of the total trust estate, whichever is greater, in any one year, ... only in favor of [her] four children, their spouses or descendants, or to organizations existing primarily for charitable, educational, or religious purposes." The court found that the inheritance tax upon the remainder interest was deferred until the death of the donee (testator's wife) even in the case, as here, where the trustee Bank had the power to invade trust corpus for the wife's benefit to meet her needs and expenses.

The special power may be exclusive or non-exclusive. When no right of selection or exclusion is granted to the donee of the power, it is non-exclusive, i.e., each member of the group must receive some minimum amount by the appointment. Inappropriate exclusion, including the failure to give a substantial share of the fund to each object of the power, will invalidate the attempted exercise of the power. If the donee is granted the right to exclude entirely any members of the class, it is exclusive, i.e., the donee may or may not appoint to every member of the group.

In Young v. Waterpark, n220 a marriage settlement directed that £10,000 should be paid and distributed among certain younger children (there were seven) of the marriage in such shares as Sir H. Cavendish and Sarah his wife, or the survivor of them, should by deed appoint, and, for want of appointment, equally. Cavendish and his wife appointed the whole of the £10,000 in different sums, the last being £3,000 to George Cavendish. Since two children who died were excluded and this special power was non-exclusive, the court declared that the personal representative of the two children was entitled to2/7 of the £3,000.

In Barrett's Executor v. Barrett, n221 the objects of a non-exclusive power consisted of a widow, two brothers and a sister. The donee appointed $147,000 to the widow and $1,000 each to the two brothers and the sister. The court found the appointments to the siblings to be manifestly illusory and therefore void.

To avoid the unfairness of a division of the last appointment of a fund among all the objects of a power, as happened in Young v. Waterpark above, a hotchpot clause may be added to the power of appointment, providing that "no one who takes by appointment shall (in the absence of an expressed direction in the appointment to the contrary) share in the unappointed part without bringing his appointed share into the general fund to be distributed as in default of appointment." n222

If there is no restriction placed by the donor against a partial exercise of the special power, such an exercise is valid. n223 A power of appointment, general or special, is personal to the donee and cannot be transferred or assigned, but a further power of appointment may be created during the exercise of a power. n224 Professor Leach has elaborated rules to govern this situation:

> May the donee of a power delegate his discretion by creating a new power of appointment? In the first place it must be borne in mind that a general power of appointment is the practical equivalent of ownership of the property. Hence if the donee has a general power of appointment the creation by him of a new power is not treated as the delegation of delegated authority but as the creation of new authority by a substantial owner. Similarly, in the execution of a special power it is permissible to give a general power of appointment to an object of the power, since the general power is the equivalent of ownership even, it seems, where the power is exercisable by will only. Apart from these situations, however, the maxim delegatus delegare non potest must be reckoned with; and to whatever extent a discretion personal to the donee has been given, the authority is non-delegable. In the ordinary case of a power in A to appoint among his children it is plainly impossible for him to transfer the power of selection, even to a surviving spouse or to the trustees of the fund to be appointed. Still, if the power is couched in broad terms, it might be possible to create some little discretion in the trustees -- as, for instance, a discretionary authority to advance income to the presumptive taker of a share. In proportion as the class of appointees becomes diffuse the apparent personal quality of the discretion reposed in the donee diminishes, and the possibility of delegation increases. Thus, where a power was given to a daughter to appoint among the donor's lineal descendants it was held that she could properly appoint to her son for life and give to him a power to appoint the remainder among the donor's lineal descendants. Each particular case becomes a problem in determining whether the attempted delegation violates the intention of the donor. n225

Other terminology used in this area of powers of appointment include power in gross (donee has one estate in the property and the power to appoint another), power appendant (donee has an estate that will be cut short by the exercise of the power), n226 power simply collateral n227 (donee only has a power in the property), and reserved power (donor makes himself or herself also a donee of a power).

§ 30.10(c) Words That Create or Exercise a Power

No special words are necessary to create a power of appointment, as long as the donor manifests an intent to do so implicitly or explicitly. Care must be taken to avoid precatory words. Care also must be taken in the language used to exercise the power. In order for an act to be deemed an exercise, the intent to exercise must be shown:

> The power may be executed without reciting it, or even referring to it, provided the act shows that the donee had in view the subject of the power. In the case of wills, it has been repeatedly declared, and is now the settled rule, that in respect to the execution of the power, there must be a reference to the subject of it, or to the power itself; unless it be in a case in which the will would be inoperative, without the aid of the power, and the intention to execute the power became clear and manifest. The general rule > of construction, both as to deeds and wills, is, that if there be an interest and a power existing together in the same person, over the same subject, and an act be done without a particular reference to the power, it will be applied to the interest, and not to the power. n228

However, courts have permitted the exercise of a power without specific reference to it. Where a will neither expresses nor implies an intention to exercise a power but no contrary intent is shown, a general residuary clause in the will may be considered an exercise of a general power of appointment n229 and also may be considered an exercise of a special power of appointment, n230 but in neither case is this the majority position n231 and it is contrary to the Uniform Probate Code. n232

In Hartford-Connecticut Trust Co. v. Thayer, n233 Darius Miller left $500,000 in trust to pay the income to Elizabeth Miller for life, and "upon her death to pay, transfer and deliver the principal of said fund ... to such beneficiaries as my said wife, by her will, may direct" and in default of appointment to her heirs at law. Elizabeth's will contained a residuary clause but did not mention the power of appointment nor the $500,000 fund. The court found, nevertheless, that the power was executed in Elizabeth's will because she knew she had a right to dispose of the fund and executed her will at a time she had no such property herself.

If the power is exercised by the residuary clause, whether by court interpretation as in the Hartford-Connecticut Trust Co. case above or by statute, the assets may not be marshaled against the intent of the donee so as to avoid application of the rule against perpetuities. n234

§ 30.10(d) Power and Ownership Compared

A power appendant is a power to appoint an interest that is owned by the donee. It is generally not valid in the United States. There is no justification for such a power, and there are two reasons for rejecting it: "First, the power might permit the defeat of rights of third persons (creditors, spouses) which had attached to the owned interest. Second, disabilities to transfer the owned interest (infancy, coverture) or to transfer it to particular persons or in a particular way (direct transfers to a spouse, direct creation of estates in co-ownership in the transferor and another) might not prevent an effective appointment." n235

In Niemann v. Zacharias, n236 a devise of the residue of an estate to certain individuals and "to their heirs, devisees and legatees as set forth in their last wills ... in fee simple" passed the residue only to the named individuals because "there can be no such thing as a power appendant."

Likewise, an unqualified power given to a life tenant to dispose of property devised by will enlarges the life estate to a fee simple title and may trigger the rule of repugnancy.

In Sterner v. Nelson, n237 the testator devised property to his wife "absolutely with full power in her to make such disposition of said property as she may desire; conditioned, however, that if any of said property is remaining upon the death of [the wife], or in the event that she predeceases me then and in such event such of said property as remains shall vest in my foster daughter ... and her children." The court found that the testator created a fee simple absolute rather than a life estate with authority to dispose of so much of the property as the wife chose during her lifetime, and the purported gift over to the foster daughter and her children was considered an invalid repugnancy. n238 The court adopted "the majority rule to the effect that where there is a grant, devise, or bequest to one in general terms only, expressing neither fee nor life estate, and there is a subsequent limitation over of what remains at the first taker's death, if there is also given to the first taker an unlimited and unrestricted power of absolute disposal, express or implied, the grant, devise, or bequest to the first taker is construed to pass a fee. The attempted limitation over, following a gift which is in fee with full power of disposition and alienation, is void."

The rule of repugnancy has received critical treatment by some authors. n239

§ 30.10(e) Unexercised Power or Ineffective Appointment

§ 30.10(e)(1) General Power

A donee of a general power may exercise the power as if disposing of the donee's own property. This power generally includes the right to appoint in trust and to create new powers of appointment. If the power is not exercised or is exercised only partially, the property not appointed passes to the takers in default or, if there are none, back to the donor. n240

An appointment under a general testamentary power which lapses as to the interest of the appointee by the death of the appointee before the death of the donee is not an effective appointment, n241 but when the appointment is to a trustee for the benefit of one who dies before the death of the donee n242 or for the benefit of one who cannot take because the gift fails for remoteness under the rule against perpetuities, n243 the appointment is not invalid but goes by way of resulting trust to the person who would be entitled to the donee's property.

The doctrine of allocation is the marshaling of appointive assets and assets owned by the donee, both of which are blended in a common disposition, in such a way as to avoid an ineffective appointment or a violation of the rule against perpetuities and to give effect to the donee's intent. n244 A second means of avoiding the passing of appointive property in default of appointment or back to the donor's estate, when allocation is not possible, is the doctrine of capture, which gives the appointive property that is the subject of an ineffective appointment to the donee who manifests an intent (often by the blending of appointive assets with assets owned by the donee in a common disposition) to assume control of it for all purposes and not merely for the purposes of the ineffective appointment. n245

In Fiduciary Trust Co. v. Mishou, n246 Martha Parker created a general testamentary power of appointment in herself in a trust fund in 1851, and in default of such appointment, directed that the income should be paid to her husband, Richard, for life with a general testamentary power of appointment, and in default of such appointment to others. Martha attempted to dispose of all her property, including all property over which she had any power of appointment, by a will in which she bequeathed the residue of her estate to trustees in trust with distributions until the decease of her last surviving child at which time the fund was to be distributed to certain people then living. Since the rule against perpetuities started running on the appointive property from the date of creation in 1851 rather than the date the exercise of the power by will became effective (Martha died in 1878), the distribution of the fund to interests that would vest upon the decease of her last surviving child (who was not born in 1851) was invalid. The court found "that the complete blending by Mrs. Parker in her will of the appointive property with any property owned by her outright shows her intent to capture the appointive property for her own estate" even in the presence of a gift in default of appointment. The appointive property became part of Martha's estate, but the court determined that it would not pass by way of the residuary clause according to the otherwise invalid limitations. Rather, it would pass as intestate property.

An attempted exercise of a power of appointment by will may not be valid if the power itself is created after the will has been executed even though before the death of the donee.

In Matteson v. Goddard, n247 the court found that powers of appointment reserved by a donor in deeds after he executed his will were not exercised by the following words in his will: "All the rest and residue of my property, real, personal, and mixed, wherever situated and of whatever kind, of which I may be possessed at the time of my death, or over which I at the time of my death may have the power of testamentary disposition, I give, devise, and bequeath to... ." The court read the language of the will technically not to cover the powers created in the deeds but appears to have been influenced more by its interpretation of the intent of the donor: "There is one way, however, in which it may be that a power can be executed by or according to a pre-existing will; namely, where the power is created or reserved with the intent that it shall be so executed, in case the will is left to take effect." The court then found that the donor did not intend to have the power executed by his then existing will.

§ 30.10(e)(2) Special Power

A donee of a special power is restricted by the limitations imposed by the donor. n248 He may not be allowed to appoint in further trust n249 or to create a new power. n250 If the special power is not exercised, the property not appointed passes to the takers in default or, if there are none, to either the donor or the class of appointees depending on the intention of the donor. n251

In Burrough v. Philcox, n252 the surviving child of the testator was made a donee of a special power by will "to dispose of all my real and personal estates amongst my nephews and nieces or their children, either all to one of them, or to as many of them as my surviving child shall think proper." The donee failed to exercise this power. The court found evidence in the will of the testator's intention "of giving the property to the nephews and nieces, and their children, subject to the selection and distribution of the survivor of the son and daughter; and that they all constitute the class to take all the property as to which no such selection and distribution has been made." As the court stated, "When there appears a general intention in favor of a class and a particular intention in favor of individuals of a class to be selected by another person, and the particular intention fails, from that selection not being made, the court will carry into effect the general intention in favor of the class... . [I]n such a case, the court will not permit the objects of the power to suffer by the negligence or conduct of the donee, but fastens upon the property a trust for their benefit."

In Bridgewater v. Turner, n253 the testator gave to Eliza Seay a tract of land and household furniture for her life and "at her death I desire it to go to one of my nephews and I leave it with her to decide which one it shall be... . It is my desire that the above described tract shall remain in the hands of the family as long as possible, for here sleeps my wife, my father and mother." At the death of Seay there were three nephews and children of a fourth deceased nephew. Seay did not exercise the power. Despite the power to appoint to only one member of the class, the court found the general intent of the testator in favor of an implied gift to the whole class of nephews in default of appointment. Since this class had a vested remainder subject to be (but was not) defeated by the exercise of the power, the children of the deceased nephew inherited his share.

In In re Combe, n254 the testator gave life estates to his wife and son and then "In trust for such person or persons as my said son ... shall by will appoint but I direct that such appointment must be confined to any relation or relations of mine of the whole blood." The court found no intent on the part of the testator to give a gift to a class in default of appointment and therefore declared "that upon the release of the power of appointment the property will go, subject to the life interests of the widow and the son, as upon an intestacy" (even though the widow and the son would then take the entire estate between them!).

If the appointment in a non-exclusive power excludes a member of the group it is completely invalid; it passes to the takers in default or, if there are none, to the class of appointees in equal parts. n255 If the appointment in a special power otherwise violates the restrictions imposed by the donor, only that part of the appointment which does not violate the restrictions is valid; the other part passes to the takers in default or, if there are none, to the class of appointees in equal parts. n256

In Loring v. Marshall, n257 the testatrix left the residue of her estate in trust with income payable to certain designated individuals, and then "to the use of the wife and issue of each of my said [two] nephews as he may by will have appointed" with a provision that restricted the income to each wife for her life if she was living at the testatrix's death. The will provided that if either of the nephews left no appointees living, then the trust fund should be paid to the appointees of the other nephew, and if both nephews left no living appointees, then it should be paid to charities. One nephew died leaving no living appointees. The other left a wife, who was living at the testatrix's death, and a child. The latter nephew appointed to his wife the right to income for her life. No provision was made for the principal of the trust fund and this case was brought to determine the taker. The court found that there was no gift in default of appointment since the gift to the charities was contingent on the nephews leaving no living appointees. In the absence of any explicit direction in the will, the court stated that the property not appointed should go in equal shares to the members of the class to whom the property could have been appointed. Applying this rule of law, the court determined that the principal should go to the nephew's child, since the wife was restricted by the terms of the appointment to a life interest.

The doctrine of allocation is used where possible to avoid violation of the restrictions imposed by the donor. Allocation is the marshalling of appointive assets and assets owned by the donee, both of which are blended in a common disposition, in such a way as to avoid an ineffective appointment to a non-object, or a violation of the rule against perpetuities, and to give effect to the donee's intent. n258

§ 30.10(f) Contract to Exercise an Appointment

If the appointment of a special power is made "to an object of the power in consideration of a benefit conferred upon or promised to a non-object, the appointment is ineffective to whatever extent it was motivated by the purpose to benefit the non-object." n259

In Matter of Carroll, n260 the donee of a special power to dispose to children or kindred willed $250,000 to her cousin with the understanding that the cousin would give $100,000 of this bequest to the donee's husband. The court found that a bargain had been made to benefit a non-object. Since the court found it impossible to separate the valid from the invalid disposition, the whole appointment was found invalid.

On the other hand, an appointment pursuant to a contract to exercise a testamentary special power of appointment in favor of an object is effective.

In Coffin v. Cooper, n261 Sarah Field received a life estate and a testamentary power of appointment to such of her children as she should appoint, and in default of appointment for her children equally. Sarah covenanted with one of her children, John, and with two strangers in title to appoint in her will to her son John certain sums of money in order that he might use this interest for the purpose of securing advances of goods to him. The purpose was to benefit the son and not a non-object. The court held the subsequent appointment effective and suggested that the covenant would have been enforceable had it been breached in favor of other appointees.

The contract to exercise a testamentary power of appointment itself is unenforceable. n262 Unlike a contract to appoint under a power exercisable by deed, which is considered an exercise of discretion to appoint, n263 a contract to exercise a testamentary power of appointment is considered an interference with the will of the donor that the power be exercised upon the donee's death. This principle applies to general and special testamentary powers alike.

In In re Bradshaw, n264 Bradshaw received a life estate and a testamentary power of appointment for such children or other issue as he should appoint, and in default of appointment the children were to receive equally. Bradshaw covenanted to appoint not less than £6,000 to the children of his second marriage, but in his will Bradshaw failed to make an effective appointment because he violated the rule against perpetuities, among other reasons. The court found that the covenant was not valid because the donee of a testamentary special power has a fiduciary duty to exercise it by his will alone.

In Northern Trust Co. v. Porter, n265 Frances Porter was given a general testamentary power to appoint a fund. She contracted to exercise this power by appointing one-half of it to her son. Her will only appointed a life estate to the son in one-third of the fund, with a remainder that was void under the rule against perpetuities. The court found the life estate and remainder to be inseparable and the whole appointment failed. The son sought to recover damages under these circumstances, but his claim was rejected by the court.

§ 30.10(g) Conditions

Conditions may not be annexed to an appointment and may be the cause of failure of the appointment itself:

> [W]hile it may be that, if the intention of the donee of the power is that the beneficiary to whom he appoints and who falls within the class of beneficiaries designated by the donor of the power should receive the benefits of the appointment, even at the expense of the failure of the conditions which he has annexed to the appointment, then the appointment may stand, but the conditions will fall because under such circumstances the donee of the power is really carrying out, as the quasi trustee that he is, the wishes of the donor, yet, if it is plain that the intention of the donee in the exercise of the power is not to benefit the appointee unless and except benefit to himself or to some one not an object of the power result, then the appointment itself is bad. n266

§ 30.10(h) Release

A power of appointment may be released. n267 One celebrated English case n268 has elaborated the rules governing release:

> [A] power simply collateral, that is, a power to a stranger, who has no interest in the land, cannot be extinguished or suspended by any act of his own or others with respect to the land. It is clear, too, that it cannot be released, where it is to be exercised for the benefit of another.
>
> It must be equally clear that it may be released, where it is for his own benefit, as a power to charge a sum of money for himself. In such case, his joining in a conveyance of the land clear of the charge, would be a release.
>
> I think that every power reserved by the grantor, whether he has retained an interest in the estate as tenant for life or otherwise, is an interest in him, which may be released or extinguished... . It differs altogether from a naked authority given to a mere stranger. It is so much reserved by him out of the estate.
>
> I think that every power reserved to a grantee for life, though not appendant to his own estate, as a leasing power, to take effect after the determination of his own estate, and therefore, in gross, may be extinguished. In respect of his freehold interest he can act upon the estate, and his dealing with the estate so as to create interests inconsistent with the exercise of his power, must extinguish his power. The general principle is, that it is not permitted to a man to defeat his own grant. Such a power in gross in tenant for life would not be defeated by a conveyance of his life estate, as a power appendant or leasing power would be defeated; because the conveyance of his life estate is not inconsistent with the exercise of his power.
>
> Quaere. Could such a power in gross in a tenant for life be released? If he were grantor, ... it could be released; and I think it may equally be released, if he is grantee... .

These rules govern cases of powers appendant, n269 powers in gross, powers simply collateral and reserved powers.

In Jones v. Winwood, n270 William and Frances Davies were given a joint power appendant to their estates in certain lands. William conveyed away his interest in the land. Then William and his wife exercised their joint power to convey the whole fee. The court found that William could not derogate from his own previous conveyance and that the exercise of the joint power was effective to convey only that part of the fee which William had not previously conveyed.

In Smith v. Death, n271 the testator gave Charles Brown a life estate with a power in gross to appoint the remaindermen from among his children, and in default of such appointment to Charles' first son in fee tail with remainders over. The court held that Charles was permitted to extinguish his power by joining with his son in suffering a recovery. His action created an interest inconsistent with the exercise of his power and he was not permitted to defeat it.

In Seidel v. Werner, n272 a life tenant, now deceased, with a testamentary power of appointment, provided in a separation agreement (later approved as part of a Mexican consent judgment for divorce) that he would make, and would not revoke, a will in which he would exercise his testamentary power of appointment in favor of his children by his second wife. Instead, he executed a will in which he exercised his testamentary power of appointment in favor of his third wife. The court found that the provision in the separation agreement was a contract to exercise a testamentary power of appointment not presently exercisable and as such was invalid. The argument was made that this provision should at least be construed as a release of the power of appointment, in which case the children had a share in the remainder in default of appointment (which was given to "issue of [the life tenant] then surviving per stirpes"). The court rejected this argument on the grounds that there was no intent to release given the contemplation of future action and that the substantial effect of the promised exercise of the power would not have been the same as would have followed from a release.

A release of testamentary power to appoint may be an effective alternative to an unenforceable contract to appoint under a testamentary power.

In In re Evered, n273 a wife took a life estate in realty with a testamentary special power to appoint to issue of the marriage, and in default of appointment, sons and daughters would take. The wife covenanted that she would not exercise her testamentary power of appointment to reduce the share of each of her three sons below £7,000 and she released her power of appointment to that extent. When the wife died, she had seven children, and her will failed to appoint in such a way that each of her three sons would receive £7,000. Such an appointment would have satisfied the wife's covenant. In the absence of such an appointment, the court found that, although the covenant was not specifically enforceable, it governed the extent of the release of her power of appointment so that "she was bound to leave the fund unappointed to the extent necessary to leave each son £7000. under the ultimate trust in default of appointment in favor of her seven children in equal shares, that is to say to the extent of £49,000."

§ 30.10(i) Claims of Creditors

A power to appoint may be subject to the claims of creditors if the power is exercised. n274 It is immune to the claims of creditors if the power is not exercised. n275

In Irwin Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Long, n276 the court found that the right to withdraw up to 4% of market value from the principal of a trust created a general power of appointment. Insofar as it remained unexercised, "then creditors are in no position to either force the exercise of the power or to reach the trust corpus."

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 209. Hogarth-Swann v. Weed, 174 N.E. 314 (Mass. 1931), which also states that "[t]he validity and effect of the instrument whereby the power of appointment as to personal property is exercised must be determined as to both form and substance by the law of the domicil of the donor and not of the donee of the power."

(n2)Footnote 210. Lewis M. Simes, Handbook of The Law of Future Interests § 57, at 128 (2d ed. 1966).

(n3)Footnote 211. Duke of Marlborough v. Lord Godolphin, 2 Vesey Sr. 61 (Court of Chancery 1750).

(n4)Footnote 212. Doe d. Willis v. Martin, 4 T.R. 39, 100 Eng. Rep. 882 (K.B. 1790). Lambert v. Thwaites, L.R. 2 Eq. 151 (Court of Chancery 1866), states a general principle to govern the case where no express gift over in default of appointment exists:

> If the instrument itself gives the property to a class, but gives a power to A. to appoint in what shares and in what manner the members of that class shall take, the property vests, until the power is exercised, in all the members of the class, and they will all take in default of appointment; but if the instrument does not contain a gift of the property to any class, but only a power to A. to give it, as he may think fit, > among the members of that class, those only can take in default of appointment who might have taken under an exercise of the power. In that case the court implies an intention to give the property in default of appointment to those only to whom the donee of the power might give it.

(n5)Footnote 213. Ammco Ornamental Iron, Inc. v. Wing, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564 (Cal. App. 1994); Ducker v. Burnham, 34 N.E. 558 (Ill. 1893).

(n6)Footnote 214. See Seidel v. Werner, 364 N.Y.S.2d 963, aff'd on opinion below, 376 N.Y.S.2d 139 (1975), discussed infra.

(n7)Footnote 215. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 731.

(n8)Footnote 215.1. See Forsee v. United States, 76 F. Supp. 2d 1135 (D. Kan. 1999) (discussing the rules of general powers of appointment). See also Dickinson v. Wilmington Trust Co., 734 A.2d 605 (Del. Ch. 1999); Estate of Walsh v. Commissioner, 110 T.C. 393 (T.C. 1998); Gilroy v. Gilroy, 235 B.R. 512 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1999); Ahren v. Thomas, 730 A.2d 756 (Conn. 1999).

(n9)Footnote 216. See Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 151, although Leach, supra note 6, at 577 n.1, points out that in Wetmore v. Henry, 102 N.E. 189 (Ill. 1913), a special power to appoint was given to a donee who was also included among the beneficiaries of the power.

(n10)Footnote 217. In re Carmichael v. Heggie, 506 S.E.2d 308 (S.C. App. 1998) (surviving spouse could not use the general powers given to her as executor to convey fee simple interest to her son in property in which she had a life estate and general testatmentary power of appointment; she could not convey an interest she didn't have).

(n11)Footnote 217.1. 307 A.2d 251 (Pa. 1973). Catch v. Phillips, 73 Cal. App. 4th 648 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (holding a power of appointment invalid because the appointing document was unsigned).

(n12)Footnote 217.2. 93 N.E.2d 547 (Mass. 1950). E. Norman Peterson Marital Trust v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 78 F.3d 795 (2d Cir. 1996) (for tax purposes a general power of appointment is viewed as being essentially identical to outright ownership of the property). Dean v. United States, 17 F. Supp. 2d 972, 974 n.5 (W.D. Mo. 1999) (a donee cannot use a special power of appointment to appoint property to himself); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Ingold, 523 S.E.2d 725 (N.C. Ct. App. 1999) (defining the restrictions on passage of property under a special power of appointment).

(n13)Footnote 218. 379 A.2d 570 (Pa. 1977). Nowlin v. Frost Nat'l Bank, 908 S.W.2d 283 (Tex. App. 1995) (Karl Nowlin validly exercised his special testamentary power of appointment in favor of a Heart Institution and AIDS Foundation, and his heirs could not collect on that part of Karl's estate.); Frazer v. Millington, 475 S.E.2d 811 (Va. 1996). See also Simpson v. Simpson, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 2886 (1999) (refusing to grant a special testamentary power of appointment to the settlor's sons).

(n14)Footnote 219. 552 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1976).

(n15)Footnote 220. 13 Sim. 199 (Court of Chancery 1842).

(n16)Footnote 221. 179 S.W. 396 (Ky. 1915). The application of the doctrine of illusory appointment in this case is rejected in many jurisdictions. See Hawthorn v. Ulrich, 69 N.E. 885 (Ill. 1904).

(n17)Footnote 222. Kales, supra note 122, at 712.

(n18)Footnote 223. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 157-160.

(n19)Footnote 224. Id. at 154, 157-159.

(n20)Footnote 225. Leach, supra note 6, at 732-733 (footnotes omitted).

(n21)Footnote 226. A power appendant is generally not valid in the United States.

(n22)Footnote 227. See In re McKallip's Estate, 188 A. 343 (Pa. 1936).

(n23)Footnote 228. Dunning v. Vandusen, 47 Ind. 423 (1874), quoting from 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law (Rev. ed. 1889) 334, 335. Wright v. Greenberg, 2 S.W.3d 666 (Tex. App. Houston 1999) (unless it is very clear that a person is exercising a power of appointment by means of a will, the power will be deemed unused).

(n24)Footnote 229. Armory v. Meredith, 7 Allen 397 (1863). Compare Bank of New York v. Black, 139 A.2d 393 (N.J. 1958) (general rule "that a residuary clause, general in its nature, will not ordinarily suffice to exercise a power of appointment" was not applied because intent to appoint was found implied from the facts of the case including the close family connection between the parties involved).

(n25)Footnote 230. See Beals v. State St. Bank and Trust Co., 326 N.E.2d 896 (Mass. 1975), reversed by statute in 1978 (Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 191, § 1(A)(4) (1981)).

(n26)Footnote 231. See Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 737-738, citing Susan French, Exercise of Powers of Appointment: Should Intent to Exercise Be Inferred from a General Disposition of Property?, 1979 Duke L.J. 749.

(n27)Footnote 232. § 2-610.

(n28)Footnote 233. 134 A. 155 (Conn. 1926).

(n29)Footnote 234. See Low v. Bankers' Trust Co., 200 N.E. 674 (N.Y. 1936).

(n30)Footnote 235. 2 Restatement (Second) of The Law of Property § 12.3 (1986).

(n31)Footnote 236. 176 N.W.2d 671 (Neb. 1970).

(n32)Footnote 237. 314 N.W.2d 263 (Neb. 1982).

(n33)Footnote 238. This rule of repugnancy is followed in a majority of jurisdictions.

(n34)Footnote 239. See Fox v. Snow, 76 A.2d 877 (N.J. 1950) (dissenting opinion); 3 Simes & Smith, supra note 61, at §§ 1481-1491; 6 American Law of Property supra note 15 § 26.43. These sources are cited in Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 724, which gives the rule of repugnancy as one reason never to create a legal fee simple with the power to consume or a legal life estate. A trust is a much better device to accomplish the creation of a power to dispose. See, e.g., Beals v. State St. Bank & Trust Co., 326 N.E.2d 896 (Mass. 1975) (will placing the residue of property in a trust, the income of which was to be paid to the wife during her life, then to be divided among each daughter to be paid during her life, and on her death the principal of such portion to be paid and disposed of as she may appoint by will).

(n35)Footnote 240. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 153-154, 160, 164. See Estate of Leighton, 638 A.2d 723 (Me. 1994) (donee of a general power of appointment granted in a will died before the testatrix and the court found that the power failed for lack of a donee).

(n36)Footnote 241. In re Davies' Trusts, L.R. 13 Eq. 163 (Court of Chancery 1871) (distinguishing the case of an appointment to A in trust for B with B dying before the death of the donee). It should be noted that in some cases a seeming appointment to one other than the donee may in fact be an appointment by the donee to herself with a subsequent distribution. See Willoughby Osborne v. Holyoake, 22 Ch. D. 238 (Court of Chancery 1882). In such cases the appointment is obviously valid and the gift by will to one who has died before the death of the donee lapses, leaving the property to be distributed under the residuary clause of the donee's will or by intestate succession to the heirs of the donee.

(n37)Footnote 242. In re Van Hagan, L.R. 16 Ch. D. 18 (1880).

(n38)Footnote 243. Talbot v. Riggs, 191 N.E. 360 (1934).

(n39)Footnote 244. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 743-744, citing Restatement (Second) of Property, Donative Transfers §§ 22.1, 22.2 (1986).

(n40)Footnote 245. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 744-745, citing Restatement (Second) of Property, Donative Transfers § 23.2 (1986), and Thomas L. Jones, Consequences of an Ineffective Appointment -- Capture, 18 Ala. L. Rev. 229 (1966).

(n41)Footnote 246. 75 N.E.2d 3 (Mass. 1947).

(n42)Footnote 247. 21 A. 914 (R.I. 1891).

(n43)Footnote 248. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 157.

(n44)Footnote 249. But see Loring v. Karri-Davies, 357 N.E.2d 11 (Mass. 1976).

(n45)Footnote 250. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 740.

(n46)Footnote 251. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 165. For different theories by Lord Eldon, Professor Gray and Professor Kales supporting the allocation of the gift to the class of appointees, see Leach, supra note 6, at 630-631 n.12.

(n47)Footnote 252. 5 Mylne & C. 72 (Court of Chancery 1840).

(n48)Footnote 253. 29 S.W.2d 659 (Tenn. 1930).

(n49)Footnote 254. Ch. 210 (Court of Chancery 1925).

(n50)Footnote 255. Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 155, 165.

(n51)Footnote 256. Id. at 158-160.

(n52)Footnote 257. 484 N.E.2d 1315 (Mass. 1985).

(n53)Footnote 258. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 743-744, citing Restatement (Second) of Property, Donative Transfers §§ 22.1, 22.2 (1986).

(n54)Footnote 259. Horne v. Title Insurance & Trust Co., 79 F. Supp. 91 (S.D. Cal. 1948), citing Restatement of Property §§ 353.

(n55)Footnote 260. 8 N.E.2d 864 (N.Y. 1937).

(n56)Footnote 261. 2 Drew. & S. 365 (Court of Chancery 1865). An appointment pursuant to a contract to exercise a general testamentary power is also effective. Benjamin v. Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of N.Y., 609 N.Y.S.2d 276 (1994)..

(n57)Footnote 262. The promisee who has given value does have a remedy in restitution. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 726.

(n58)Footnote 263. Leach, supra note 6, at 688.

(n59)Footnote 264. 1 Ch. 436 (Chancery Division 1902).

(n60)Footnote 265. 13 N.E.2d 487 (Ill. 1938).

(n61)Footnote 266. Chenoweth v. Bullitt, 6 S.W.2d 1061 (Ky. 1928).

(n62)Footnote 267. See Bergin & Haskell, supra note 1, at 167-168, indicating possible restrictions. See Dean v. United States, 183 F.3d 812 (8th Cir. 1999); Green v. Finney 593 N.W.2d 190 (Mich. Ct. App. 1999).

(n63)Footnote 268. West v. Berney, 1 Russ. & M. 431, 434 (Court of Chancery 1819).

(n64)Footnote 269. A power appendant is generally not valid in the United States.

(n65)Footnote 270. 3 Mees. & W. 653 (Court of Exchequer 1838).

(n66)Footnote 271. 5 Mad. 371 (Court of Chancery 1820). The holding of this case was followed in Thorington v. Thorington, 1 So. 716 (Ala. 1887), which permitted the donee of a testamentary power in gross to release it in favor of her children, the takers in default.

(n67)Footnote 272. 364 N.Y.S.2d 963, aff'd on opinion below 376 N.Y.S.2d 139 (1975).

(n68)Footnote 273. 2 Ch. 147 (1910).

(n69)Footnote 274. See Clapp v. Ingraham, 126 Mass. 200 (1879), Quinn v. Tuttle, 177 A.2d 391 (N.H. 1962) (stating that some jurisdictions other than New Hampshire have alleviated this situation by statute and occasionally by some "not very sure-footed" cases), and In re Masson's Estate, 298 P.2d 619 (Cal. App. 1956) (finding that the donee of a general testamentary power of appointment appointed the property to her estate to be distributed by her executors and therefore the property was subject to the claims of her creditors). But see Rhode Island Hosp. Trust Co. v. Anthony, 142 A. 531 (R.I. 1928) (rejecting the idea that a general power of appointment when exercised gave the donee an interest subject to the claims of creditors or subject to the claim of a child to a statutory share).

(n70)Footnote 275. A number of state statutes are to the contrary. Creditors of a donee of a general power presently exercisable can reach the property immediately; creditors of a general testamentary power can reach the property at the donee's death. Dukeminier & Johanson, supra note 24, at 712.

(n71)Footnote 276. 312 N.E.2d 908 (Ind. App. 1974), following Gilman v. Bell, 99 Ill. 144 (1881).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 30.11

AUTHOR: Dean John Makdisi College of Law University of Tulsa

§ 30.11 Bibliography

[Go To Supp]

Articles

Baxter, David M. "If You Think You No Longer Need to Know Anything about the Rule Against Perpetuities, Then Read This!" Wash. U. L.Q. Vol. 74 (Fall, 1995) 713.

Becker, David M. "Uniform Probate Code Section 2-707 and the Experienced Estate Planner: Unexpected Disasters and How to Avoid Them." 47 UCLA L. Rev. 339 (1999).

Cole, Joseph E. "Introduction to Estate and Tax Planning Fundamentals." 47 A.F. L. Rev. 189 (1999).

Cunningham, Laura E. "The Hazards of Tinkering with the Common Law of Future Interests." Hastings L.J. Vol. 48 (1997) 667.

Dukeminier, Jesse. "The Uniform Probate Code Upends the Law of Remainders." Mich. L. Rev. Vol. 94 (October, 1995) 148.

Gary, Susan N. "Adapting Intestacy Laws to Changing Families." 18 Law & Ineq. J. 1 (2000).

Heller, Michael A. "The Boundaries of Private Property." 108 Yale L.J. 1163 (1999).

Hernandez, Tanya K. "The Property of Death." 60 *U. Pitt. L. Re*v. 971 (1999).

Hirsch, Adam J. "Trusts for Purposes: Policy, Ambiguity, and Anomaly in the Uniform Laws." 26 Fla. St. U.L. Rev. 913 (1999).

Hirsch, Adam J. "Bequests for Purposes: A Unified Theory." 56 Wash. & Lee L. Rev. 33 (1999).

Hopperton, Robert J. "Teaching Present and Future Interests: a Methodology for Students That Unifies Estates in Land Concepts, Structures, and Principles." U. Tol. L. Rev. Vol. 26 (Spring 1995) 621.

Jennings, Marianne M. "Real Property Could Use Some Updating." Real Est. L.J. Vol. 24 (Fall 1995) 103.

Jensen, Ronald H. "Estate and Gift Tax Effects of Selling a Remainder: Have D'Ambrosio, Wheeler, and Magnin Changed the Rules?" 4 Fla. Tax Rev. 537 (1999).

Link, Ronald C. and Kimberly A. Licata, "Perpetuities Reform in North Carolina: The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, Nondonative Transfers, and Honorary Trusts." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 74 (September, 1996) 1783.

Radford, Mary F. "Wills, Trusts & Administration of Estates." 51 Mercer L. Rev. 527 (1999).

Reppy, William A., Jr. "Judicial Overkill in Applying the Rule in Shelley's Case." Notre Dame L. Rev. Vol. 3 (1997) 83.

Schwartz, Frederic S. "Models of Will and Negative Disinheritance." Mercer L. Rev. Vol. 48 (1997) 1127.

Soled, Jay A. & Charles Davenport. "Cremating Transfer Taxes: Is There Hope for a Resurrection." 34 Wake Forest L. Rev. 229 (1999).

Volkmer, Ronald R. "The Complicated World of the Electing Spouse: In Re Estate of Myers and Recent Statutory Developments." 33 Creighton L. Rev. 121 (1999).

Annotations

Annotation, Court's Power to Order Sale of Property Subject to Legal Life Estate, in Order to Relieve Economic Distress of Life Tenant, 57 A.L.R.3D 1189.

Annotation, Divorce Distribution: Treatment and Method of Valuation of Future Interest in Real Estate or Trust not Realized During Marriage, 62 A.L.R.4TH 107 (1988).

Annotation, Doctrine that Gift Which Might be Void Under Rule Against Perpetuities Will be Given Effect Where Contingency Actually Occurs Within Period of Rule, 20 A.L.R. 3D 1094.

Annotation, Effect of Anticipated Inflation on Damages for Future LossesCModern Cases, A.L.R.4TH 21.

Annotation, Independent Option to Purchase Real Estate as Violating Rule Against Perpetuities or Restraints on Alienation, 66 A.L.R.3D 1294.

Annotation, Life Tenant's Death as Affecting Rights Under Leases Given by Him, 14 A.L.R.4TH 1054.

Annotation, Power to Appoint Realty in Fee or Personalty Absolutely as Including Power to Appoint Lesser Estate or Interest, 94 A.L.R.3D 895.

Annotation, Powers of Appointment: Revocation or Amendment of Exercise of Power to Appoint Future Interest, After Exercise by Inter Vivos Instrument, 60 A.L.R.3D 143.

Annotation, Pre-emptive Rights to Realty as Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities or Rule Concerning Restraints on

Alienation, 40 A.L.R.3D 920.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 30.02

Supp. to § 30.02 Specialized Definitions Pertaining to Future Interests.

[Go To Main]

§ 30.02(a) Present and Future Interests Distinguished. [Go To Main]

Add:

Temple Beth Israel v. Feiss, 2 P.3d 388 (Or. App. 2000) (A "future interest," by definition, involves a postponement of possession and enjoyment of property.).

§ 30.02(c) "Heirs." [Go To Main]

Add:

Brown v. Johnson, 97 S.W.3d 924 (Ark. App. 2003) ("Children," as used in a will or deed, is a broader term than the word "heirs" and may include adopted children.).

§ 30.02(d) "Issue." [Go To Main]

Add:

Alexander ex rel. Alexander v. Estate of Alexander, 93 S.W.3d 688 (Ark. 2002) (Testator's uses of the term "issue" in section of will referring to issue of testator's son and daughter, and in section that defined terms in will, were insufficient under permitted-child statute to suggest that testator contemplated grandson, who was the issue of testator's predeceased child.).

In re Estate of Harrison, 689 A.2d 939 (Pa. Super. App. 1997) (When used in its common legal or technical sense, "issue" is multigenerational term meaning all succeeding generations.).

Scaife v. Roberson, 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 230 (No. E2002-02666-COA-R3-CV, Mar. 21, 2003) (daughter born out of wedlock must clearly establish paternity before she can inherit from decedent father).

Add:

In re Estate of Goodwin, 739 N.Y.S.2d 239 (N.Y. Sur. 2002) (Term "descendants," used in will, was synonymous with "issue," referring to all those proceeding from body of another, such as child or grandchild, to remotest degree.).

Add:

Alexander ex rel. Alexander v. Estate of Alexander, 93 S.W.3d 688 (Ark. 2002) (Testator's use of the term "issue" in language stating that "any gift, devise of bequest hereunder shall vest not later than twenty-one (21) years after the death of the last survivor of [testator's] issue living on the date of [testator's] death" was a technical usage of term within language incorporated to avoid the rule against perpetuities, rather than an indication that testator contemplated grandson, who was the issue of testator's predeceased child, for purposes of determining grandchild's heirship under pretermitted-child statute.).

§ 30.02(f) Lapse. [Go To Main]

Add:

Taylor v. Taylor, 547 S.E.2d 161 (N.C. App. 2001) (Remainders vest at the death of the testator, unless some later time for vesting is clearly expressed in the will, or is necessarily implied therefrom.).

Coleman v. Coleman, 500 S.E.2d 507 (Va. 1998) (Beneficiary's fee simple interest in residue of testator's estate vested upon testator's death, and was not rendered contingent by testator's giving beneficiary a life estate in property, where nothing in testator's will indicated any intent to postpone vesting of remainder interest in residuary estate.).

Add:

Jones v. Hill, 2004 Va. LEXIS 56 (No. 031514, Apr. 23, 2004) (holding that if a lapse occurs, the share that would have gone to the now deceased remainderman can be reached by his creditors).

In re Estate of Peterson, 64 Va. Cir. 428 (2004) (Words of limitation giving to beneficiary's "heirs and assigns forever" did not prevent lapse.); Baldwin v. Branch, 888 So. 2d 482 (Ala. 2004) (Although the state's anti-lapse statue does not apply to trusts, the beneficiary's share did not lapse upon her death because it had already vested in interest).

Add:

Deviney v. NationsBank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. App. 1999) (When a member of the class predeceases the testator, his share lapses in favor of the surviving class members; however, class members with vested interests cannot drop out of the class by virtue of their death after vesting but before distribution.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 30.03

Supp. to § 30.03 Specialized Rules Pertaining to Future Interests.

[Go To Main]

§ 30.03(a) How Estates End and Interests Begin. [Go To Main]

Add:

Gutierrez v. Rodriguez, 30 S.W.3d 558 (Tex. App. Texarkana 2000) (When a grantor grants or devises a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, the grantor retains the right of reentry and the right to terminate the grantor's estate if the condition occurs.).

Add:

Cooley v. Williams, 31 S.W.3d 810 (Tex. App. Houston 2000) (A fee simple estate subject to an executory limitation is a "determinable fee simple estate," which is a fee simple interest in every respect, except that it passes to another, who has an "executory interest," if the contingency happens.).

Board of County Sup'rs of Prince William County v. United States, 48 F.3d 520 (Fed. Cir. 1995) ("Fee simple subject to executory limitation" is created when fee simple is by its terms subject to divestment in favor of person other than conveyor upon happening of specified event; other person has "executory interest.").

§ 30.03(b) Alienability. [Go To Main]

Add:

Willhite v. Masters, 965 S.W.2d 406 (Mo. App. 1998) (Upon creation of determinable fee simple estate, grantor retains interest of "possibility of reverter," which is both alienable and devisable.).

Add:

In re Incorporated Village of Garden City, 734 N.Y.S.2d 225 (N.Y.A.D. 2001) (Right of reentry allegedly created by deeds conveying property to church, which contained restriction requiring property to be used for religious and educational purposes, could not be assigned, where common law in effect at time deeds were executed in late 1800s did not allow such a right to be assigned or devised.).

§ 30.03(c) Valuation. [Go To Main]

Add:

In re Estate of Sauer, 757 N.Y.S.2d 709 (2003) (value of life estate is based on the age of the person holding the life estate at the time of sale of the property, not at the time of the decedent's death).

In re Estate of Strohe, 791 N.Y.S.2d 818 (2005) (In allocating sale proceeds between a life tenant and a remainderman, the court directed the calculation be based on the life tenant's age and the interest rate as outlined by New York property law and not on the IRS actuarial tables or the specific facts of the case.).

§ 30.03(d) Merger Rule. [Go To Main]

Add:

Sanderson v. Hudlett, 832 So.2d 845 (Fla. App. 2002) (There can be no merger at law, without a union of titles in the same person; nor, in equity unless, also, there is an express or presumed intention on the part of those concerned in the transaction that it should operate as a merger.).

Auerbach v. Great Western Bank, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 (Cal. App. 1999) (Under the doctrine of "merger," if a single person is simultaneously the owner of identical legal and equitable interests in the same thing, the equitable interest merges in the legal and absolute ownership ensues, without any division into legal and equitable interests.).

Steger v. Muenster Drilling Co., 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 10437 (No. 2-02-228-CV, Dec. 11, 2003) (estates will not be merged if the result is adverse to the holder of the interests); Word Invs., Inc. v. Bruinsma (In re TML, Inc.), 291 B.R. 400 (W.D. Mich. 2003) (when one party holds a dominant and a servient interest in property, the lesser interest is merged into the greater interest); Conrad/Dommel v. W. Dev. Co., 815 A.2d 828 (Md. App. 2003) (when the greater interest and the lesser interest meet in one person, the lesser interest is merged into the greater). But see In re Hutchins, 306 B.R. 82 (D. Vt. 2004) (court can decline to apply merger of greater and lesser interests if there is an equitable reason to do so).

§ 30.03(f) Rules of Construction and Rules of Law. [Go To Main]

Add:

In re Estate Of Sawyer, 772 N.Y.S.2d 170 (N.Y. App. Div. 2004) (Intention of drafter ultimate guide, estate only meant to descend to survivors.); Woodring v. Woodring, 596 S.E.2d 370 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) (Trial court must try to ascertain testator's intent when determining whether he meant to bequeath two separate shares to a husband and wife or one share for both.).

§ 30.03(f)(1) Surplusage.

Add:

Berry v. Trible, 626 S.E.2d 440 (Va. 2006) (surplusage theory not applied to a purported holographic will).

§ 30.03(f)(2) Implication.

Add:

In re Will of Standish, 772 N.Y.S.2d 430 (2004) (holding that, in cases of obvious omission or error in a will, the court can grant a gift by implication).

In re Standish, 4 A.D.3d 858 (N.Y. App. Div. 2004) (Gift by implication only in "rare and exceptional" cases.).

§ 30.03(f)(3) Preference for Vesting.

Add:

Dyer v. Dyer, 566 S.E.2d 665 (Ga. 2002) (It is the policy of the law to encourage free alienability of property, and attempts to remove either land or chattels from circulation in trade are discouraged not only by the rule against perpetuities, the abolition of fee tails, the early vesting of estates, and the doctrine of virtual representation, but by the rule against unreasonable restraints on alienation.).

Ransom v. Bebernitz, 782 A.2d 1155 (Vt. 2001) (The law favors early vesting, and no estate will be held contingent unless positive terms are employed in the will indicating a contrary intention.).

Besch v. Schumacher, 599 N.W.2d 846 (Neb. App. 1999) (The policy of the law has always been to look with favor upon the early vesting of estates, and a remainder will never be held to be contingent if it can reasonably be held to be a vested remainder.).

Coleman v. Coleman, 500 S.E.2d 507 (Va. 1998) (Early vesting rule provides that unless the intention to postpone vesting is clearly indicated in the will, all devises and bequests are to be construed as vesting at the testator's death.).

Summers v. Summers, 699 N.E.2d 958 (Ohio App. 1997) (Law favors early vesting of testamentary bequest, and will postpone vesting beyond death of testator only if will clearly expresses an intent to do so.).

Goelet v. Manice, 2003 R.I. Super. LEXIS 69 (No. 99-0107, Apr. 15, 2003) (testamentary construction is not warranted if the testator's intent is clear).

Peters v. Allison, 814 N.E.2d 568 (Ohio Ct. App. 2004) (Remainder in grandchildren vested upon testator's death and interest passed to grandchild's widow even though grandchild predeceased father.); In re Uchtorff, 693 N.W.2d 790 (Iowa 2005) (Remainderman's interest vested at testator's death, remainderman did not need to survive life tenant.); Hochberg v. Proctor, 805 N.E.2d 979 (Mass. 2004) (Beneficiary's life estate vested in interest, although not in possession, when trust was created and so did not violate the rule against perpetuities.)

§ 30.03(g) Adoption. [Go To Main]

Add:

Brown v. Johnson, 97 S.W.3d 924 (Ark. App. 2003) (Deed, which conveyed remainder interest in property to mother's heirs "by" father, unambiguously excluded any of their adopted children; in common-sense terms, a person's heirs "by" a particular person means that person's child or children "born or begot of" that particular person, meaning natural children.).

Unsel v. Meier, 972 S.W.2d 466 (Mo. App. 1998) (Public policy and intent expressed in grandfather's will that his children have equal fee tail interest in real estate precluded recognition of adoption of adult grandchild in relation to entailed interest so as to enable her to receive double share through both her natural and adoptive parents.).

Add:

But see Smalley v. Parks, 108 S.W.3d 138, 141 (Mo. App., 2003) (the doctrine of equitable adoption only applies if a person can show clear evidence of the intent of the decedent to adopt).

Commerce Bank v. Blasdel, 141 S.W.3d 434 (Mo. Ct. App. 2004) (According to the law in effect at time of the trust's execution, adopted children are "lineal descendants" of adoptive parents' ancestors.); Ehrenclou v. MacDonald, 117 Cal. App. 4th 364 (Cal. Ct. App. 2004) (Adopted adults do not qualify as "children then living."); McGehee v. Edwards, 268 Va. 15, 268 Va. 23, 597 S.E.2d 99 (Va. 2004) (According to the law in effect at time of the trust's execution, adopted children could not inherit from adoptive parents' ancestors).

Add:

Demund v. LaPoint, 647 N.Y.S.2d 662 (N.Y. Sup. 1996) (Even though life tenant under testator's will adopted adult nephew, nephew could not inherit properties as tenant's child, under precautionary addendum of statutory provision allowing adopted person to inherit from adoptive parent, since this would have cut off nephew's sisters' remainder rights.).

In re Medeiros Testamentary Trust, 96 P.3d 1098 (Haw. 2004) (According to the law in effect at time of the trust's execution, adopted child could not inherit from natural father).

§ 30.03(i) The Rule in Shelley's Case. [Go To Main]

Add:

Lusk v. Broyles, 694 So.2d 4 (Ala. Civ. App. 1997) (Under common-law "Rule in Shelley's Case," when ancestor by any gift or conveyance took estate of freehold, and in same gift or conveyance estate was limited to his or her heirs in fee or in tail, words "the heirs" were deemed as matter of substantive law to be words of limitation and not of purchase; however, this rule is not followed in Alabama, as it has been superseded by statute which requires that grantor's intent to sever grantee's life estate interest from grantee's heirs' remainder interest be honored according to express terms of conveyance.).

John V. Orth, "The Mystery of The Rule in Shelley's Case," 7 Green Bag 2d 45 (2003).

§ 30.03(j) The Doctrine of Worthier Title. [Go To Main]

Add:

Dennis v. Bird, 941 S.W.2d 486 (Ky. App. 1997) (Rule against perpetuities and doctrine of worthier title apply to remainders, that is, in cases in which grantor doesn't convey entire fee simple absolute but holds back something for third party, not himself or herself.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 30.04

Supp. to § 30.04 Survivorship.

[Go To Main]

§ 30.04(a) Implied. [Go To Main]

After the citation to "Schau v. Cecil ..." add:

superseded by statute as stated in Davies v. Radford, 433 N.W.2d 704 (Iowa 1988) .

§ 30.04(b) Express. [Go To Main]

After the citation to "In re Montgomery's Estate ..." add:

order reversed by In re Montgomery's Estate, 15 N.Y.S.2d 729 (N.Y.A.D. 1939) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 30.09

Supp. to § 30.09 Class Gifts.

[Go To Main]

§ 30.09(a) Definition. [Go To Main]

Add:

Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. App. Waco 1999) (A devise constitutes a "class gift" when it grants property to a group of persons bearing a certain relationship to the testator or to each other, such that they can be designated by the same general name, as "brothers" or "sisters.").

In re Estate of Prioleau, 606 S.E.2d 769 (S.C. 2004) (Class of "then-living grandchildren" closed at grandfather's death.).

§ 30.09(b) Exclusion. [Go To Main]

Add:

Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. App. Waco 1999) (Requirement of uncertainty as applied to a class gift by devise can be satisfied by the possibility that the number in the class may increase or decrease in the future.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 30.10

Supp. to § 30.10 Powers of Appointment.

[Go To Main]

§ 30.10(a) Definitions. [Go To Main]

Add:

Estate of Sieber v. Oklahoma Tax Com'n, 41 P.3d 1038 (Okla. Civ. App. 2001) (A "general power of appointment" is a power exercisable in favor of anyone, including the donee, his or her estate, or his or her creditors or creditors of the estate.).

§ 30.10(b) Types of Power. [Go To Main]

Edwards v. Urice, 99 P.3d 256 (Okla. Civ. App. 2004) (Power of appointment was effective even though property was not delivered until settlor's death since.).

§ 30.10(b)(2) General Power Exercisable by Deed or Will.

Add

In re Chervitz Trust, 198 S.W.3d 658 (Mo. App. 2006) (a husband's exercise of the power of appointment to appoint assets of his wife's trust to his trust was effective); In re Johnson, 190 S.W.3d 469 (Mo. App. 2006) (limited power of appointment created by trust).

Replace "Dean v. United States" with:

Simpson v United States

§ 30.10(f) Contract to Exercise an Appointment. [Go To Main]

Add:

Montgomery v. Browder, 930 S.W.2d 772 (Tex. App. Amarillo 1996) (Life tenant's illegal promise in purchase and sale contract for land to make testamentary gift to purchasers, in excess of her authority under will, of balance on promissory note given for purchase was not severable from remainder of the contract, and therefore contract was void and court would leave parties as it found them; express terms of contract provided that forgiveness of unpaid balance of promissory note was part of consideration therein, and purchasers conceded that forgiveness of debt was important part of agreement.).

§ 30.10(g) Conditions. [Go To Main]

Add:

Giammarrusco v. Simon, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 50 (2009) (application for declaratory judgment relating to exercise of power of appointment did not violate the will's no contest clause).

§ 30.10(h) Release. [Go To Main]

Replace "Dean v. United States" with:

Simpson v United States

Add:

In re Albasi, 765 N.Y.S.2d 213 (2003) (New York statute requires that property covered by a power of appointment is subject to creditor's claims).

§ 30.10(i) Claims of Creditors [Go To Main]

add:

In re Chappell, 883 N.Y.S.2d 857 (2009) (creditors of a donee of an appointive power can reach the trust's appointive property).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 30 SPECIAL LEGAL RULES RELATING TO FUTURE INTERESTS

3-30 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 30.11

Supp. to § 30.11 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Change: "Baxter, David M." to "Becker, David M."

Add to Articles:

Alan S. Acker, "Using Testamentary Powers of Appointment to Maximize Estate Exemptions and Basis Step Up: Best Thing Since Sliced Bread?" 17 Ohio Prob. L.J. 106 (January/February 2007).

Andersen, Roger W. "Present and Future Interests: A Graphic Explanation." Seattle U. L. Rev. Vol. 19 (Fall 1995) 101.

Bell, Abraham & Gideon Parchomovsky. "A Theory of Property." Cornell L. Rev. Vol. 90 (March 2005) 531.

Butler, Keith L. Comment. "Long Live the Dead Hand: A Case for Repeal of the Rule Against Perpetuities in Washington." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 75 (Oct. 2000) 1237.

Dobris, Joel C. "The Death of the Rule Against Perpetuities, or the RAP Has No Friends." Real Prop., Prob & Tr. J. Vol. 35 (Fall 2000) 601.

Hoffman, Sharona. "Birth After Death: Perpetuities and The New Reproductive Technologies." Ga. L. Rev. Vol. 38 (Winter 2004) 575.

Knaplund, Kristine S. "Postmortem Conception and a Father's Last Will." Ariz. L. Rev. Vol. 46 (Spring 2004) 91.

Morris, Joseph W. "The Worthier Title Doctrine: Does the Draft Restatement III of Property Write a Premature Obituary?" 45 Washburn L.J. 387 (Winter 2006).

Orth, John V. "Intention in The Law Of Property: The Law of Unintended Consequences." Green Bag 2d Vol. 8 (Fall 2004) 59.

VanCannon, Kayla. Comment. "Fathering A Child From The Grave: What Are The Inheritance Rights Of Children Born Through New Technology After The Death Of A Parent?" Drake L. Rev. Vol. 52 (Winter 2004) 331.

Add to Annotations

Annotation, Election to take against will as extinguishing power of appointment, 38 A.L.R.2d 977.

Annotation, Gift over by implication after estate during life or until marriage, where property is expressly given over at death and first taker marries, or vice versa, 73 A.L.R.2d 484.

Annotation, Implication of gift in inter vivos trust instrument, 11 A.L.R.2d 681.

Annotation, Implication of right of life tenant to entrench upon or dispose of corpus from language contemplating possible diminution or elimination of gift over, 31 A.L.R.3d 6.

Annotation, Implication of right of life tenant to entrench upon or dispose of corpus from language relating to the extent of his dominion over the corpus, of the beneficial purpose of the provision for the life tenant, 31 A.L.R.3d 169.

Annotation, Partial exercise of power of appointment, 4 A.L.R.2d 919 .

Annotation, Power of appointment as exclusive or nonexclusive-modern views, 69 A.L.R.2d 1285 .

Annotation, Power to appoint as exercisable by creation of new power by donee, 169 A.L.R. 727 .

Annotation, Validity of testamentary exercise of power of appointment by donee sane when will was executed but insame thereafter, 19 A.L.R.4th 1002 .

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 31.syn

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.syn Synopsis to Chapter 31: JOINT TENANCIES

§ 31.01 Concurrent Estates.

§ 31.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.03 Joint Tenancies in the Context of Concurrent Estates.

§ 31.04 Outline of the Chapter.

§ 31.05 History of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.06 Creation of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.06(a) Creation of Joint Tenancies at Common Law.

§ 31.06(b) The Doctrine of the Four Unities.

§ 31.06(c) Special Problem in Creation of Joint Tenancies Caused by the Doctrine of the Four Unities: Conveyance by Grantor to Grantor and Another or Others.

§ 31.06(d) Modern Statutes Concerning Creation of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.06(e) Joint Tenancies of Personal Representatives and Trustees.

§ 31.06(f) Joint Life Estates.

§ 31.06(g) Creation of Estates Similar to Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.07 Incidents of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.07(a) Action of Waste.

§ 31.07(b) Action for Contribution.

§ 31.07(c) Action of Account.

§ 31.07(d) Action of Ejectment.

§ 31.07(e) Creditors' Rights.

§ 31.08 Termination of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.08(a) Termination by Act of All Joint Tenants.

§ 31.08(b) Termination by Act of One Joint Tenant.

§ 31.08(c) Termination by Operation of Law.

§ 31.09 The Future of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

§ 31.10 Bibliography.

Professor John V. Orth
School of Law
University of North Carolina

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.01

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.01 Concurrent Estates.

Whenever two or more persons own the same thing at the same time, a form of concurrent ownership exists. At common law n1 concurrent estates in land are of three types: joint tenancies, tenancies in common, and tenancies by the entirety -- the latter limited to persons married to one another. (A fourth form of concurrent estate, tenancy in coparcenary, was important historically, but is now obsolete). n2 Concurrent estates in land are not restricted to freehold estates but may exist in leaseholds, easements, and other interests in real property; nor are they restricted to present estates, but may exist in future interests as well. A further form of concurrent ownership is recognized by statute, as opposed to common law, in those states adopting the Uniform Partnership Act. n3 Concurrent ownership of personalty is also recognized, the forms of ownership being copied from those for land.

Whenever property is owned by one person alone, there exists a sole ownership, known (by contrast to the concurrent tenancies) as a tenancy in severalty. At common law there is a presumption in favor of sole ownership: in the words of Sir William Blackstone, "all estates are supposed to be of this sort, unless where they are expressly declared to be otherwise." n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The "common law" referred to is the common law of England as it was at the time of American Independence, for which the best and most convenient source is Sir William Blackstone's four-volume Commentaries on the Laws of England, first published in 1765 to 1768. The present author is acutely aware that continuing to refer to this body of law in the present tense is peculiar for a number of reasons: first, because the common law of England continued to grow and change in its native land; second, because the transplanted common law continued to grow and change in the various American jurisdictions; and finally, because there is something truly metaphysical in talking presently about a "law" that is not now recognized and enforced in at least one jurisdiction. Nonetheless, the author is convinced that there continues to be value, not merely heuristic, in using the common law in this sense as the background against which to place all later developments.

(n2)Footnote 2. On tenancy in coparcenary, see Chapter 35, infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. On tenancy in partnership, see Chapter 34, infra. Ever since the days of Joseph Story, it has been recognized that concurrent ownership in and of itself does not establish a partnership. Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Law of Partnership 3-4 (1841); Uniform Partnership Act § 7(2) ("Joint tenancy, tenancy in common, tenancy by the entireties, joint property, common property, or part ownership does not of itself establish a partnership, whether such co-owners do or do not share any profits made by the use of the property."), 7 U.L.A. 18 (1949).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 179 (1766).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.02

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Supp]

Joint tenancy is a form of concurrent estate; as such, it implies the ownership by two or more persons of the same property at the same time. n5 Forms of concurrent ownership are distinguishable by reference to three incidents: (1) alienability, the quality of being transferable inter vivos by sale or gift; (2) devisability, the quality of being transferable at death by devise; and (3) inheritability, the quality of passing at death to the heir of the deceased. Each joint tenant possesses the power to alienate an undivided interest in the concurrent estate, but no joint tenant possesses a devisable or inheritable interest. n6 By contrast, each tenant in common has a share that is alienable, devisable, and inheritable; no tenant by the entirety has a share that is devisable or inheritable. n7

Types of concurrent ownership without devisable and inheritable shares for each co-owner are described as including a "right of survivorship" or jus accrescendi, meaning that on the death of one co-owner the interest of the deceased accrues to the surviving co-owner or co-owners. n8 The survivor or survivors benefit, in other words, at the decease of the co-owner whose interest terminates. "The common law theory," as explained by eminent authorities, "is that the decedent's interest vanishes at death, and therefore no probate is necessary because no interest passes to the survivor at death." n9 No true right exists, the so-called "right of survivorship" merely describing the effect of the death of a co-owner in such forms of concurrent estate. n10

Survivorship is an incident of joint tenancies and tenancies by the entirety; it is lacking in tenancies in common. Because of the right of survivorship, dower was not exigible in joint tenancies when husbands held estates with persons other than their wives. n11 Dower, the common law provision for widows, was obviously not an issue with respect to tenancies by the entirety. Despite the existence of the right of survivorship in an otherwise valid joint tenancy held by husband and wife, certain agreements, such as a prenuptial agreement or an agreement to execute a mutual will, can affect the disposition of the estate at the death of one of the spouses. n12

At the older common law the anomalous combination in joint tenancies of alienability and the right of survivorship was summarized by describing the individual joint tenant's holding as per my et per tout, a Law French phrase meaning "by the share (moiety) and by the whole." n13 Because each held "by the whole," the death of one joint tenant left the other or others still holding the entire estate as before. Because each held also "by the share," each joint tenant had the power to alienate an undivided fractional interest. The phrase is not, of course, an explanation but only a restatement of the result.

By virtue of English statutes universally accepted as part of the common law in America, each joint tenant and each tenant in common (but no tenant by the entirety) has a right to demand partition of the estate, that is, its division into shares, each divided share to be held in severalty. n14 Partition in kind is obviously best suited to large, especially rural, estates. Because some estates are unsuited to partition in kind, a later English statute, also copied in America, provided for partition by sale and division of the proceeds. n15

Because joint tenancies are commonly used by married couples in states in which tenancies by the entirety are not recognized, it is perhaps appropriate to notice here the existence in many states of homestead exemptions. n16 Although conceptually distinct from the form of concurrent estate by which married persons hold real property, the homestead exemption may in some cases affect results, particularly where creditors' rights are involved. n17 Also, in case of joint tenants married to one another, distribution of assets on divorce will be governed by the state's law of equitable distribution rather than by the technicalities of title.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 5. The common law did not at first use the concept of ownership with respect to land, preferring to describe those with interests in real property as "tenants," a word derived from the Latin for "holders." What was "held" was, therefore, a "tenancy." See A.W.B. Simpson, A History of the Land Law 47-48 (2d ed. 1986). In modern parlance tenancy means ownership, and the words are used interchangeably in this chapter.

(n2)Footnote 6. "A joint tenant has not an interest which is devisable." 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law 513 (12th ed. by O.W. Holmes, 1873). Explaining this rule, Kent observed that Lord Coke, relying on Littleton, had maintained that there was a momentary priority in favor of the survivor over the devisee (citing Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 287, p. 185b (1628)); a "better reason," as Kent (and Coke) recognized is that "the survivor claims under the first feoffor, which is title paramount to that of the devisee."

(n3)Footnote 7. At one time, the husband holding in tenancy by the entirety with his wife was recognized as having a power to alienate his interest subject only to his wife's right of survivorship; the wife had no comparable power. See § 33.05, infra.

(n4)Footnote 8. One state has codified the common law rule concerning the right of survivorship:

> No will or other testamentary disposition or testamentary provision of one of the owners in joint tenancy of real or personal property or of an interest in real or personal property shall destroy or affect the joint tenancy or prevent the entire title and interest owned by the joint tenants from becoming vested upon his death in the joint tenants who shall have survived him. Upon the death of an owner in joint tenancy of real or personal property or of an interest in real or personal property, leaving surviving him coowners under such joint tenancy, all of the interest and title which, immediately before such death was owned by all of the joint tenants under such joint tenancy, shall become vested in the survivors of such joint tenants in spite of and without regard to the provisions of a will of the joint tenant so dying or the admission to probate of such will and without regard to whether such will was executed before or after the creation of the joint tenancy.

Colo. Rev. Stat. § 15-15-102.

(n5)Footnote 9. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Willls, Trusts, and Estates 350 (6th ed. 2000).

(n6)Footnote 10. The right of survivorship has been described as not a property interest at all, but a "mere expectancy," analogous to a devisee's expectancy under the will of a living person. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 (Cal. App. 1999). Although bearing some resemblance to a contingent remainder in the survivor, the right of survivorship in joint tenancies differs in a material way: it may be eliminated by the act of one joint tenant. See, e.g., Geib v. McKinney, 617 A.2d 1377 (Conn. 1992). See also § 31.08(b), infra.

Gifts to classes involve a feature similar to the right of survivorship: if one class member predeceases the testator, the surviving class members divide the gift. See Dewire v. Haveles, 534 N.E.2d 782 (Mass. 1989) ("The general rule is that ... members of a class are joint tenants with rights of survivorship."). Until the death of the testator, no true right of survivorship is involved, and certainly no joint tenancy.

(n7)Footnote 11. Where dower remains, the rule is still applies. See Funches v. Funches, 413 S.E.2d 44 (Va. 1992).

(n8)Footnote 12. King v. King, 962 P.2d 1118 (Kan. App. 1998) (prenuptial agreement); Murphy v. Glenn, 964 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1998) (agreement to execute a mutual will).

The equitable doctrine of election, by which a devisee may be forced to choose between accepting a benefit under the will while surrendering some interest the will undertakes to dispose of, or alternatively rejecting the benefit provided by the will and retaining the interest, has been applied to property held in joint tenancy by the testator and the devisee, but the intention to put the survivor to an election must be clearly expressed. Williamson v. Williamson, 657 N.E.2d 651 (Ill. App. 1995), noted in 21 S. ILL. U. L.J. 211 (1996). See also In re Estate of Vittorio, Sr., 546 N.W.2d 751 (Minn. App. 1996) (a will may in an appropriate case impose enforceable duties on the surviving joint tenant).

(n9)Footnote 13. Thomas Littleton, Tenures § 288 (ca. 1481). The Law French word "my," equivalent to the English "moiety," means generally "share" or more particularly "half." Because joint tenants at common law hold equal interests, Blackstone translated the phrase per my et per tout as "by the half or moiety, and by all." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1766). If there are more than two joint tenants, however, each holds "by the [equal] share and by the whole."

(n10)Footnote 14. 31 Hen. 8, c. 1 (1539); 32 Hen. 8, c. 32 (1540). On partition, see Chapter 38, infra.

(n11)Footnote 15. 31 & 32 Vict., c. 40 (1868). See Heather Conway, The Repeal of an Act for Jointenants 1542 and the Jurisdiction to Order Partition or Sale Under the Partition Acts 1868 and 1876, 19 Dublin U. L.J. 1 (1997). Although partition by sale and division is most common due to the difficulty of partitioning many estates in kind, it is important to remember that a joint tenant against whom a partition action is brought retains the right to insist on partition in kind if it is possible. Kellner v. Kellner, 593 N.W.2d 1 (Neb. App. 1999); Eli v. Eli, 557 N.W.2d 405 (S.D. 1997). Minor inequalities in value and minor losses incidental to sale of smaller parcels may be offset by requiring the party insisting on partition in kind to make cash payments to the others, a payment historically known as "owelty."

(n12)Footnote 16. E.g., N.C. CONST. art. x, § 1 (exempting realty "to a value fixed by the General Assembly but not less than $1,000, to be selected by the owner thereof"). See John V. Orth, The North Carolina State Constitution: A Reference Guide 151-53 (1993). Other states have more generous provisions.

(n13)Footnote 17. See, e.g., O'Hagan v. United States, 86 F.3d 776 (8th Cir. 1996) (applying Minnesota law) (creditor of spouse holding residence as joint tenant with other spouse can force sale of debtor spouse's right of survivorship, but present possession of non-debtor spouse is secured from creditor by state homestead exemption). See also Pratt v. Langston, 669 So. 2d 967 (Ala. 1995) (purported conveyance by one spouse of half interest subject to life estate in other spouse in jointly owned homestead could not affect homestead and was therefore ineffective as a severance).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.03

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.03 Joint Tenancies in the Context of Concurrent Estates.

At the time of American Independence the joint tenancy was the common law's preferred form of concurrent estate. Although never created by operation of law, it was presumed in all voluntary transfers to two or more persons. n18 (If two transferees were married to one another, they took a tenancy by the entirety, a form of concurrent ownership available only to married persons). n19 Soon after Independence, dissatisfaction with the joint tenancy's right of survivorship emerged; the absence of devisable and inheritable shares sometimes defeated expectations within the family of the deceased tenant. In consequence, corrective statutes were passed in many states. Despite a wide variety of wording, they operated in one of two ways: either they eliminated the right of survivorship in joint tenancies, making the estate largely indistinguishable from tenancies in common, or they reversed the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies to favor tenancies in common, ensuring that all joint tenancies were knowingly entered into. Statutes eliminating the right of survivorship tended to be earlier than statutes reversing the presumption. Today, in all jurisdictions still recognizing the joint tenancies, it can be confidently asserted that the old common law presumption in its favor is gone; transfers by sale, gift, or devise to two or more persons now create tenancies in common unless otherwise plainly stated.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 18. The common law presumption operated only in transfers to natural persons. This was because of the right of survivorship which Blackstone thought ought to be "mutual." Thus he explained the rule that "neither the king, nor any corporation, can be a joint-tenant with a private person" by the absence of mutuality: "for the king and the corporation can never die." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 184 (1766). The rule against corporations holding as joint tenants was altered by statute in England a century ago. 62 & 63 Vict., c. 20 (1899). Joint tenancies in America are not limited to natural persons; indeed, in trusts, it is frequently the case that one of the co-trustees will be a bank or trust company and the other a family member, friend, or financial advisor. The institutional trustee is valued precisely because its immortality lends continuity. See Paul G. Haskell, Preface To Wills, Trusts And Administration 82 (2d ed. 1994).

(n2)Footnote 19. On tenancies by the entirety, see Chapter 33, infra.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.04

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.04 Outline of the Chapter.

The product of a long history, the joint tenancy was a well-defined form of concurrent estate on the eve of the American War of Independence; in consequence, this chapter must begin with a review of the history of the law of joint tenancies (§ 31.05). Thereafter, the modern estate is considered under three broad headings: creation of joint tenancies (§ 31.06), incidents of joint tenancies (§ 31.07), and termination of joint tenancies (§ 31.08). A glimpse at the future of the law of joint tenancies is also attempted (§ 31.09). Finally, the chapter concludes with a select bibliography of the law of joint tenancies (§ 31.10).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.05

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.05 History of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

In a typically memorable phrase Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes once observed, "Upon this point a page of history is worth a volume of logic." n20 The law of concurrent estates is another such point. Although the common law of concurrent estates begins with feudalism, it is worth noting that concurrent ownership is very much older than feudalism. Despite the centuries-old legal assumption that individual ownership is the norm and concurrent ownership the exception, the fact is that ancient law, as Sir Henry Maine long ago pointed out, "knows next to nothing of individuals... . It is more than likely that joint-ownership, and not separate ownership, is the really archaic institution... ." n21 Nonetheless, the long history of English feudalism left its mark on the joint tenancy and explains the common law presumption in its favor, just as traditional concepts of marriage and the role of women lie behind the law of tenancy by the entirety. Tenancy in common, the form of concurrent ownership that historically arose in default of any other, was least marked by the contingencies of the past. In modern times it displaced the joint tenancy as the preferred form of concurrent ownership of land.

Under feudalism, land was thought of as owing various services to the feudal overlord higher up the tenurial ladder. There was thus a practical advantage in preserving estates intact. Whenever an estate passed to two or more persons, they were expected to hold it as a unit. The right of survivorship, preserving the entire estate in the survivor, gave effect to this expectation. Until statutes adopted during the reign of King Henry VIII, n22 a joint tenant could not compel the partition of the joint estate; partition required the consent of all the joint tenants. In this respect the early joint tenancy resembled the modern tenancy by the entirety.

As feudalism decayed, the joint tenancy found a new role, one that also favored the right of survivorship. Among the services owed by feudal estates were charges payable to the overlord on succession at death (relief), as well as opportunities for profit by the overlord in case the heir was underage (wardship and marriage). Other disadvantages of feudal landholding included lack of the power to devise and inflexibility in the future interests that could be created. All these could be avoided by the feoffment to uses in which equitable ownership was separated from legal ownership with its onerous duties and restraints; the estate was transferred to a legal owner who held "for the use of" the beneficial owner. Since feudal incidents still attached to the legal owner, it was desirable to avoid if possible succession on death and inheritance by a minor. Here the joint tenancy could be of service. By enfeoffing a group of joint tenants, one could postpone succession at death; the right of survivorship maintained the estate until the death of the last to die. n23

Indeed, by periodic transfers to still more joint tenants, one could -- barring bungling or major catastrophes -- keep the estate from passing at death indefinitely. (The arrangement resembles modern trusts in which, incidentally, joint tenancies remain useful.) n24 The prevalence of joint tenancies in feoffments to uses reinforced the older expectation that concurrent ownership would be accompanied by a right of survivorship. Ironically, while the original preference for survivorship was based on a desire to maintain feudalism, the subsequent frequency of joint tenancies in feoffments to uses was designed to undercut it.

The Statute of Uses (1535), n25 which transformed equitable estates into legal ones, and the final extinction of feudal dues by the Statute of Tenures (1660) n26 eliminated the justification for the presumption in favor of joint tenancies. Nonetheless, legal inertia was sufficient to maintain it until the time of the American Revolution. As a practical matter, of course, no one with competent legal counsel should have fallen foul of the rule; express language or adroit conveyancing could always produce a tenancy in common, rather than a joint tenancy with its associated right of survivorship.

In the newly independent American states, legal advice was less readily available (and perhaps less competent). Landholdings tended to be much smaller than the patrimonial estates in the "Mother Country," and reliance on professional counselors less routine. In addition, the political break caused by the Revolution created an opening for wide-ranging reform. Inherited legal practices such as entail and primogeniture attracted criticism. Property law was reformed to one degree or another in all states. n27 In North Carolina, for example, an omnibus statute in 1784 abolished entail, modified primogeniture, reformed dower, and eliminated the right of survivorship in joint tenancies. n28 The sole expression of legislative intention with respect to the change in concurrent estates appeared in the preamble to the relevant section of the statute: "in real and personal estate held in join-tenancy the benefit of survivorship is a manifest injustice to the families of such as may happen to die first." n29 The injustice referred to is presumably that of reasonable expectations defeated; widows and heirs or devisees of deceased owners discovering that they take no share in the concurrent estate because it was held, unbeknownst to them and perhaps even to the co-owners themselves, in joint tenancy. n30 The legislative remedy was to abolish the "benefit of survivorship." With only a few insignificant changes in wording, the Act of 1784 has endured to the present, its current form appearing in North Carolina General Statutes § 41-2:

> [I]n all estates, real or personal, held in joint tenancy, the part or share of any tenant dying shall not descend or go to the surviving tenant, but shall descend or be vested in the heirs, executors, or administrators, respectively, of the tenant so dying, in the same manner as estates held by tenancy in common... . n31

The North Carolina Act of 1784 did not abolish joint tenancies as such, but by ending the right of survivorship in inheritable estates it made them practically indistinguishable from tenancies in common. n32

A second type of statute dealing with the problem of the unwanted right of survivorship reversed the common law presumption. In Illinois, for example, an 1827 statute still in force provides:

> No estate in joint tenancy in any lands, tenements or hereditaments, or in any parts thereof or interest therein, shall be held or claimed under any grant, legacy or conveyance whatsoever heretofore or hereafter made, other than to executors and trustees, unless the premises therein mentioned shall expressly be thereby declared to pass not in tenancy in common but in joint tenancy... . n33

Experience simplified the drafting. An Iowa statute of 1851, also still in force, provides simply:

> Conveyances to two or more in their own right create a tenancy in common unless a contrary intent is expressed. n34

As a result of these two types of statutes, joint tenancies were either shorn of their right of survivorship or relegated to second place. Just as legal policy makers in the late 19th century favored the unencumbered fee simple absolute and sole over concurrent ownership, so they preferred tenancies in common over joint tenancies. Curiously, the 20th century has witnessed a resurgence of joint tenancies. Professor Thompson described the revolution:

> The law's treatment of the survivorship philosophy has made a circle. Its origin has been ascribed to the needs of the feudal system. So as the idols of seisin were overthrown so did the law develop a distaste for the right of survivorship, but the expense and delay incident upon administration of a decedent's estate today has led to a widespread revival of the survivorship tool as means of effecting a simple and economical transfer of property on death. n35

In states like Maine that have eliminated tenancies by the entirety, married purchasers of property have begun to choose joint tenancies over tenancies in common, presumably because of the right of survivorship. n36 The same is true in Iowa n37 and West Virginia. n38 Even in North Carolina, which still offers married persons the choice of tenancies by the entirety, the joint tenancy has made a surprising comeback, presumably to serve unmarried persons holding property together. n39

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 20. New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U.S. 345, 349 (1921) (construing constitutional limitation on the imposition of a "direct tax").

(n2)Footnote 21. Henry Maine, Ancient Law 152-53 (1861).

(n3)Footnote 22. 31 Hen. 8, c. 1 (1539); 32 Hen. 8, c. 32 (1540).

(n4)Footnote 23. See S.F.C. Milsom, Historical Foundations of the Common Law 211 (2d ed. 1981).

(n5)Footnote 24. See § 31.06(e), infra.

(n6)Footnote 25. 27 Hen. 8, c. 10 (1535).

(n7)Footnote 26. 12 Car. 2, c. 24 (1660).

(n8)Footnote 27. See John V. Orth, After the Revolution: "Reform" of the Law of Inheritance, 10 Law & History Rev. 33 (1992); Stanley Katz, Republicanism and the Law of Inheritance in the American Revolutionary Era, 76 Mich. L. Rev. 1 (1977).

(n9)Footnote 28. Act of 1784, ch. 22, reprinted in 24 The State Records of North Carolina 574 (Walter Clark ed. 1904).

(n10)Footnote 29. Id. § 6. In the 18th century, the words "joint tenancy" were often hyphenated. See, e.g., 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180, 193-94 (1766). The form "join-tenancy," used in the North Carolina statute, occasionally appeared. Joseph Story ran the two words together, "jointenancy." Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Law of Partnership 4 (1841). Earlier, the form "joyntenants" was common. See Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 277, p. 180a.

(n11)Footnote 30. In Ohio the state supreme court early held that the right of survivorship did not exist: "The jus accrescendi is not founded in principles of natural justice, nor in any reasons of policy applicable to our society or institutions." Seargent v. Steinberger, 2 Ohio 305 (1826).

(n12)Footnote 31. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2. In 1784 what is now the state of Tennessee was then the western part of North Carolina, so the Act of 1784 applied there as well; it remains in effect in that jurisdiction too. Tenn. Code Ann. §

66-1-107.

By amendment in 1991 it again became possible, for the first time in two centuries, for North Carolinians to create joint tenancies with right of survivorship by express provision. See John V. Orth, The Joint Tenancy Makes a Comeback in North Carolina, 69 N.C. L. Rev. 491 (1991). Because a comparable concession has not been made in Tennessee, the jurisprudence of that state continues to exhibit a variety of unconventional estates with attached "rights of survivorship." E.g., Runions v. Runions, 207 S.W.2d 1016 (Tenn. 1948).

(n13)Footnote 32. At common law widows had no dower rights in estates held by their husbands in joint tenancies with another or others, while they had such rights in their husbands' tenancies in common. The elimination of the right of survivorship eliminated the basis for this distinction, and no North Carolina case has been found indicating any continuing difference in this regard. In Connecticut, where the right of survivorship was early rejected as "odious and unjust," there existed "no essential difference between the rights of joint tenants and tenants in common." Whittlesey v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 337 (1836).

(n14)Footnote 33. 765 ILCS 1005/1.

(n15)Footnote 34. Iowa Code Ann. § 557.15.

(n16)Footnote 35. 4 George W. Thompson, Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property 29 (John S. Grimes ed. 1979). See also John V. Orth, Joint Tenancy Law: Plus Ca Change... 5 Green Bag 2d 173 (2002).

(n17)Footnote 36. "A high percentage of conveyances to husband and wife, or to persons in close relationship, especially of residential property, have contained these words ['as joint tenants and not as tenants in common'] in some part of the instrument of conveyance." Palmer v. Flint, 161 A.2d 837, 842 (Me. 1960).

(n18)Footnote 37. "Starting from a base of less than 1% in 1933, the incidence of joint tenancy in Iowa rose to 6% of all transfers in 1938, escalated to 10% in 1940, and then rocketed to 31% by 1944. The rate of increase slowed down somewhat during the next decade, but by 1954 the 45% level was reached in most of the counties. Between 1954 and 1964, the expansion in usage generally continued, and the latest figures show that in 1964 an average of 52% of all Iowa land transfers created joint tenancies." N. William Hines, Real Property, Joint Tenancies: Law, Fact, and Fancy, 51 Iowa L. Rev. 582, 586-87 (1966).

(n19)Footnote 38. "[L]awyers practicing in the field of real property now estimate that about 90% of the deeds written in the more populous counties of this state, conveying real property for use as a home, are made to both husband and wife, and about 90% of such deeds contain some sort of language, creating or attempting to create some kind of survivorship between such husband and wife." Robert L. Merricks, Joint Estates in Real Property in West Virginia, 61 W. Va. L. Rev. 101, 101 (1959).

(n20)Footnote 39. See John V. Orth, The Joint Tenancy Makes a Comeback in North Carolina, 69 N.C. L. Rev. 491 (1991).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.06

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.06 Creation of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Supp]

First to be examined is the creation of joint tenancies at common law (§ 31.06(a)); then, the doctrine of the four unities, a description of the nature of joint tenancies used to determine whether one was created (§ 31.06(b)), and a special problem of common occurrence involving the four unities, conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others (§ 31.06(c)). Next are modern statutes concerning the creation of joint tenancies (§ 31.06(d)), and, routinely excepted from such statutes, joint tenancies of executors or trustees (§ 31.06(e)). Finally attention turns to joint life estates (§ 31.06(f)) and the creation of estates similar to joint tenancies (§ 31.06(g)).

§ 31.06(a) Creation of Joint Tenancies at Common Law.

At common law on the eve of the American Revolution the transferor of real property to two or more unmarried persons could designate the form of concurrent estate created: joint tenancy or tenancy in common. n40 In the absence of a clear expression one way or the other, the law presumed an intention to create a joint tenancy. In 1766 Sir William Blackstone could thus lay down the law: "Now, if an estate be given to a plurality of persons, without adding any restrictive, exclusive, or explanatory words, as if an estate be granted to A and B and their heirs, this makes them immediately joint-tenants in fee of the lands." n41

At common law a joint tenancy could be created only by inter vivos transfer or by testamentary disposition, in other words, only by deed or devise. Joint tenancies could never arise by operation of law; that is, co-heirs never received an estate in joint tenancy by intestate succession. The explanation lies originally in the law of inheritance rather than in the law of joint tenancies: the canons of inheritance at common law were designed to produce a single male heir in each generation if at all possible. n42 Sole ownership excludes concurrent ownership. If no male heir existed, then at common law females of the same degree succeeded together in a form of concurrent ownership, but not joint tenancy. At common law co-heirs took as tenants in coparcenary. n43 Reform of the law of inheritance, admitting all males of the same degree of relationship and eliminating the preference given to males over females, greatly increased the number of co-heirs in each generation. Although sometimes explained in terms of a presumed common law rule against the creation of joint tenancies by operation of law, the process really reflected an independent preference at the relevant time for tenancies in common over joint tenancies.

In further corroboration of the last point is the fact that at common law joint tenancies could arise by adverse possession. "If two or three, etc. disseise another of any lands or tenements to their own use," wrote Sir Thomas Littleton in the 15th century, "then the disseisors are joint-tenants." n44 Today in the case of a plurality of adverse possessors it is expected that the modern preference in favor of tenancy in common would prevail. n45

Even at common law problems of construction could arise respecting deeds and devises. The schematic transfer mentioned by Blackstone, "to A and B and their heirs," resulted in a joint tenancy in fee only in the absence of "restrictive, exclusive, or explanatory words." The common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies was not a rule of law but only a rule of construction; as such, it could be rebutted by a plain statement in favor of some other form of concurrent ownership. A transfer of distinct shares, as "to A one-half and to B one-half," would not produce a joint tenancy because it did not purport to transfer a joint interest in the whole. n46

At common law the presumption in favor of joint tenancies could sometimes clash with the rule in the law of wills favoring intention even if inartfully expressed. Blackstone recited a hyper-technical distinction in the interpretation of the words "to A and B, equally to be divided between them": in a deed, he said, it had been held to produce a joint tenancy because "it implies no more than the law has annexed to that estate, viz. divisibility," while in a devise it produced a tenancy in common because "the devisor may be presumed to have meant what is most beneficial to both the devisees." n47 After reviewing the pitfalls, Blackstone concluded that the "most usual as well as the safest way" to avoid an unintended joint tenancy was "to add express words of exclusion as well as description, and limit the estate to A and B, to hold as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants." n48 Some conveyancers favored the phrase "share and share alike" in grants creating tenancies in common; by indicating that each grantee took a share or moiety, it excluded the holding "by the whole" (per tout) requisite for joint tenancies.

At common law the hypertechnical Rule in Wild's Case could be involved in the unintentional creation of a joint tenancy. By the so-called Second Resolution in Wild's Case, a devise to a person and to that person's children is presumed, if the person has living children at the time the devise becomes effective, to be a gift to the person and the children as a class; the form of concurrent estate is presumed to be joint tenancy because of the common law presumption in favor of that estate. n49

At common law although each joint tenant held by the whole as well as by the share, each had to hold equal shares; that is to say, the share of each joint tenant could always be determined by dividing the whole estate by the number of joint tenants. This requirement was summed up in the unity of interest, described in the next subsection. Today, legislation may permit joint tenants to hold unequal shares at law, contrary to the requirement of unity of interest. n50 By contrast, tenants in common could hold unequal shares; unity of interest was not a requisite of their estate.

Where purchasers contribute unequally toward the price of land, title to which is taken in joint tenancy, a question may arise concerning the purchasers' respective shares. Although at law the shares of joint tenants must be equal, it is possible in equity for unequal shares to be recognized, or for a constructive trust to be impressed on one shareholder in favor of another to prevent unjust enrichment. n51 Nonetheless, because of the legal requisite of unity of interest and the equal chance of enjoying the benefit of the right of survivorship, it is appropriate to place the burden of proof on the party claiming unequal shares in equity. The possibility of a gift from the party contributing a disproportionate share should not be ignored, even if later hotly denied in the midst of a dispute between the co-tenants. A creditor aware of a deed in joint tenancy is not required to investigate the possibility of unequal ownership and may presume equal shares. n52

The problem of unequal contributions to the acquisition of property held in joint tenancy most often arises in the marital context. When spouses acquire real property as joint tenants, a rebuttable presumption exists that the purchasing spouse made a gift to the marital estate. No such presumption exists when the parties are merely engaged to be married. n53 Gifts may be made subject to condition, and a gift of an interest as joint tenant made in contemplation of marriage is presumed to be conditional on the occurrence of the marriage. n54

The estate of joint tenancy is created at the moment the operative instrument becomes effective. In case of a variance in the description of the estate between the contract for deed and the deed itself, the deed prevails in accordance with the general doctrine of merger. n55

§ 31.06(b) The Doctrine of the Four Unities.

Although really a description of the nature rather than the creation of the joint tenancy, the doctrine of the "four unities" must be introduced at this point because of its relevance to the creation of joint tenancies at common law. Sir William Blackstone's statement of the doctrine has become classic:

> The properties of a joint estate are derived from it's unity, which is fourfold; the unity of interest, the unity of title, the unity of time, and the unity of possession: or, in other words, joint-tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. n56

The significance of the four unities for purposes of the creation of joint tenancies is that their presence -- all of them together -- was the touchstone for whether any given transfer resulted in a joint tenancy. Where the four unities were, there was a joint tenancy. (If the transferees were married to one another, they had a "fifth unity," the unity of person, and a tenancy by the entirety resulted. n57) Conversely, where one or more of the four unities was lacking, there could be no joint tenancy, regardless of a transferor's intent to create that form of concurrent estate.

Even in Blackstone's day, the requisite unity of time was subject to an exception where a transfer was to a class not all of whose members had yet qualified, such as to the children of a living person. n58 In addition, adepts at conveyancing under the Statute of Uses could also work wonders with time by means of springing or shifting uses or executory devises. n59

The requisite unity of possession required a unity of right to possess, not actual possession -- as seen from the fact that future interests could be held in joint tenancy. n60 As Blackstone himself put it: "estates of any quantity or length of duration, and whether they be in actual possession or expectancy, may be held ... in joint-tenancy ... and in common." n61 By the same token, a joint tenant out of possession of a present estate does not suffer loss to a joint tenant in possession, absent ouster. n62 Joint tenants can formalize the relationship by an agreement regulating their possessory rights, even to the point of providing for the exclusive possession by one. n63

In the modern world, agreements between joint tenants concerning exclusive rights to possession are sometimes encountered in property settlements incident to divorce. While it would be wiser to sever the joint tenancy, some divorcing couples who hold property as joint tenants leave the title as is, agreeing (for example) that one has the right to exclusive possession until death or remarriage. In and of itself, such an agreement does not sever the joint tenancy, although a court may find a severance in the totality of the circumstances. n64 Despite a divorce decree providing that property "shall remain in joint tenancy," either joint tenant retains the right to sever the joint tenancy, severance being an inherent incident of the estate, although it is a violation of the decree and subject to penalty. n65

By the time of Blackstone the drawbacks of joint tenancies were well recognized, despite the common law's presumption in their favor. Blackstone himself admitted: "In general it is advantageous for the joint-tenants to dissolve the jointure." n66 The strictness with which the doctrine of the four unities was applied in the early cases may, paradoxically, have been part of an effort to mitigate the harshness of the rule by avoiding unwanted joint tenancies. In modern times, when in many states the creation of joint tenancies is largely a matter of intent, it is natural to find the rigors of the doctrine of the four unities being relaxed. n67

§ 31.06(c) Special Problem in Creation of Joint Tenancies Caused by the Doctrine of the Four Unities: Conveyance by Grantor to Grantor and Another or Others.

For a transfer to result in the creation of a joint tenancy, it must, in order to satisfy the doctrine of the four unities create a concurrent estate in which all transferees have "one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession." n68 A special problem of common occurrence is the attempted transfer by a grantor to the grantor and another or others, for example "A to A and B and their heirs." The intention is to share the ownership. (A similar problem arises in the law of tenancies by the entirety when one spouse conveys property owned by that spouse to the two spouses together: "H to H and W and their heirs" or "W to W and H and their heirs.") n69 The transfer, obviously one between living persons, must be by deed; the special problem considered here cannot arise in a devise.

Unlike the problems described earlier in the creation of joint tenancies at common law, the problem is not one of ascertaining intention. The grant in question may be in express terms "A to A and B and their heirs as tenants in common and not as joint tenants." The problem is with the doctrine of the four unities: because A as grantor is conveying directly to A and B as grantees, at least two of the four unities are lacking, title and time. The grantees' interests do not accrue "by one and the same conveyance," nor do they commence "at one and the same time"; A's interest stemmed from some original transfer to A, while B's stems from the grant in question. At common law even the presumption in favor of joint tenancies did not help in this situation; the presumption took effect if intention was unexpressed or unclear, but the problem here, as pointed out earlier, is not with intention. The problem is that without the unities no joint tenancy could be created -- no matter how ardently the transferor desired to produce that estate. n70

The common law solution to this common law problem was to use two successive conveyances: a grantor desiring to create a joint tenancy in the grantor and another would first convey to one with no interest in the property (a "straw man") who would then promptly reconvey the estate to the grantor and the co-tenant. n71 Schematically, the two conveyances would run "A to X and heirs," then "X to A and B and their heirs." In this manner, the doctrine of the four unities would indubitably be satisfied. It may be worth noting that the common law rule is perfectly logical and would produce no hardship (and very little extra paperwork) if every grantor were properly counseled. It is homemade deeds or careless lawyering that causes the problem. n72

Long after the time of Blackstone it was argued that the four unities are in fact present despite a grant directly (without mesne conveyance to a "straw man") from grantor to grantor and another or others. The theory is that the grant creates a new unit, the joint tenancy, so the title of the new unit accrues by one and the same conveyance and commences at one and the same time. n73 (The theory has also been advanced more plausibly in the context of the attempted creation of a tenancy by the entirety by a grant directly from one spouse to the two spouses together; in this case it has the advantage that the married pair is recognized for other purposes as a legal unit. n74) Despite that ingenuity, in the creation of joint tenancies the theory must be recognized as a departure from the received common law. The problem is not only historical, but also logical: the grant is sought to be justified by its result, when the question is whether the grant can in fact create this result, the fallacy of "begging the question," classically labeled petitio principii, when what is to be proved is all along taken for granted. n75

More straightforward is a resolution based on abandonment of the requirement that the four unities must be present when a grantor intends unmistakably to create a joint tenancy by conveyance directly from grantor to grantor and one or more others. Although sometimes accomplished by judicial decision, n76 this is more simply done by statute. A Maine statute, typical of statutes in many states, provides:

> A conveyance of real property by the owner thereof to himself and another or others, or by the owners thereof to themselves or to themselves and another or others, as joint tenants or with the right of survivorship, or which otherwise indicates by appropriate language the intent to create a joint tenancy between such owner or owners and such other or others or between themselves by such conveyance, > shall create an estate in joint tenancy in the property so conveyed between all of the grantees, including the grantor. n77

Unusually one state, Minnesota, in addition to a provision analogous to that in Maine, n78 strikes directly at the root of the problem in another provision:

> The common law requirement for unity of time, title, interest, and possession in the creation of a joint tenancy is abolished. n79

A similar but analytically distinct problem arises when an owner makes a grant of an undivided one-half of his property to another. Here again the intention may be to share the ownership, but no joint tenancy results, either by application of the common law presumption in its favor or by express words describing that estate, because joint tenants do not hold only a share in the estate; each holds the whole as well. n80 In one state, Utah, the statute permitting the direct conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others in joint tenancy also permits the creation of that estate by the grantor's conveyance of "an interest in land in which an interest is retained by the grantor" if the grantor expressly declares that intention. n81 In states without such express authorization one must trust the courts to perceive, if necessary, the functional equivalence of such a partial transfer and the more common direct conveyance.

More than half the states have statutes dealing with the problem of a conveyance by grantor to grantor and one or more others as joint tenants. In general the statutes are clear enough. Although only a few, like the West Virginia statute, expressly eliminate the need for a "straw party deed," n82 all have that effect. Particular attention must be paid to the formula required to express the requisite intention. Although many statutes permit any form of words that clearly declares the grantor's will, it is probably safest to add words of exclusion as well as words of description, as "A to A and B and their heirs as joint tenants and not as tenants in common." In some states it may be necessary to include a specific reference to survivorship: "as joint tenants with right of survivorship." n83 Although few statutes follow the example from Maine set out supra and explicitly include the case of a conveyance by two owners, presumably tenants in common, to themselves as joint tenants (or to themselves and another or others as joint tenants), it is submitted that all the statutes cover it because of the rule of statutory construction that the singular generally includes the plural. For the same reason the Hawaii statute seems redundant when after authorizing grants from a grantor to the grantor and another or others as joint tenants, it goes on to authorize grants by joint tenants to themselves and another or others as joint tenants. n84

Current statutes, from 29 states and the District of Columbia, are summarized below:

Alabama. Grantor may convey directly to grantor and another or others as joint tenants with right of survivorship but only if those words are used or "it clearly appears that the intent is to create such a survivorship between joint tenants." n85

California. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others creates joint tenancy when expressly declared to be so. n86

Colorado. Grantor may create joint tenancy by conveyance to grantor and another or others so long as conveyance is expressly declared to be "in joint tenancy." n87

Connecticut. Joint tenancy may be created by conveyance to two or more persons "among whom may be the grantor or grantors." n88

Delaware. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others "as joint tenants, with right of survivorship" is effective. n89

District of Columbia. Joint tenancy may be created by conveyance in which one or more of the grantors is also one of the grantees. n90

Georgia. Conveyance in which grantor conveys to grantor and another or others may create joint tenancy. n91

Hawaii. Land may be conveyed by grantor to grantor and another or others as joint tenants. n92

Illinois. Estate with right of survivorship may be created notwithstanding that grantor is also grantee; estate with right of survivorship has all the effects of a common law joint tenancy. n93

Kansas. Conveyance from grantor to grantor and one or more persons as joint tenants is effective. n94

Maine. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others "as joint tenants or with the right of survivorship, or which otherwise indicates by appropriate language the intent to create a joint tenancy" shall create that estate. n95

Maryland. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others in joint tenancy is valid "without the use of a straw man as an intermediate grantee-grantor." n96

Massachusetts. Grantor may convey to grantor "jointly with another person" in the same manner as to another person. n97

Michigan. Conveyance expressing intent to create joint tenancy in grantor together with grantee or grantees is effective. n98

Minnesota. Grantor may convey directly to grantor and another or others as joint tenants. n99

Mississippi. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others in joint tenancy "with right of survivorship" creates that estate. n100

Montana. Conveyance by grantor to named joint tenants including grantor creates joint tenancy "without the necessity of any transfer or conveyance to or through a third person." n101

Nebraska. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others as joint tenants is effective. n102

Nevada. Joint tenancy may be created by conveyance from a sole grantor to grantor and others. n103

New Jersey. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others as joint tenants is as effective as if the interest had been conveyed to a third party and by such third party to the grantees. n104

New Mexico. Joint tenancy may be created when "expressly declared" in a conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others. n105

North Carolina. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others "as joint tenants with right of survivorship" creates that estate. n106

Ohio. Conveyance in which grantor is also grantee is effective to create estate indicated in the conveyance. n107

Oklahoma. Joint tenancy may be created by conveyance from grantor to grantor and one or more other persons. n108

South Carolina. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or other persons creates joint tenancy with right of survivorship if instrument "expressly provides for a right of survivorship." n109

South Dakota. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others which "by the method of describing such grantees, or by the language of the granting or habendum clause therein evinces an intent to create a joint tenancy" has such an effect. n110

Utah. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others with words declaring joint tenancy creates that estate; same result for conveyance by grantor of an interest to another or others with words declaring joint tenancy. n111

Virginia. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another is as valid "as if the deed had been made by one or more persons who are not also grantee or grantees." n112

Washington. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and others may create joint tenancy. n113

West Virginia. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another or others in joint tenancy with right of survivorship is as valid as if conveyed by "a straw party deed." n114

Wisconsin. Common law requirements of unity of title and time for creation of joint tenancy abolished. n115

Wyoming. Grantor may convey to grantor and another or others as joint tenants "without the necessity of any transfer or conveyance to or through a third person." n116

§ 31.06(d) Modern Statutes Concerning Creation of Joint Tenancies.

Most American states today have statutes bearing on the creation of joint tenancies. These statutes are of two general types, one eliminating the right of survivorship, the other reversing the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies. A few states have abolished joint tenancies altogether, although by a variety of devices estates with right of survivorship may still be created.

Statutes doing away with the right of survivorship as an incident of joint tenancies actually alter the nature of the estate. Joint tenancies may theoretically still be created. Indeed, there may theoretically still be a residual presumption in their favor, but no joint tenancy as it existed at common law may be created, because it no longer exists in the jurisdiction. The Tennessee statute, for example, provides:

> In all estates, real and personal, held in joint tenancy, the part or share of any tenant dying shall not descend or go to the surviving tenant or tenants, but shall descend or be vested in the heirs, executors, or administrators, respectively, of the tenant so dying, in the same manner as estates held by tenancy in common. n117

The more common type of statute leaves the estate untouched and merely reverses the presumption in its favor. Under such statutes one must by appropriate words make plain an intention to create a joint tenancy; it will not be presumed. The Delaware statute, for example, excludes the finding of a joint tenancy in any deed or devise "unless the premises therein mentioned are expressly granted, devised, or conveyed to such persons, to be held as joint tenants and not as tenants in common," n118 while the Iowa statute on conveyances more simply provides that deeds to two or more persons shall create a tenancy in common "unless a contrary intent is expressed." n119 Although the wording of the statutes may vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, it should be true that no particular formula is required to create a joint tenancy; the intention must only be plainly expressed. To paraphrase Blackstone, the safest way -- in the absence of a statutory formula -- would seem to be to add words of exclusion as well as words of description: "to A and B, as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common."

A particular problem may arise where the word "jointly" appears, as in "to A and B jointly." The word "jointly" has an ordinary sense of "together," as well as a legal connotation of "as joint tenants." When coupled with a presumption in favor of tenancies in common, this will usually result in a finding that an intention to create a joint tenancy has not been plainly expressed. n120 In a few states, however, the statute raising a presumption in favor of tenancies in common expressly permits the presumption to be rebutted by, among other phrases, the declaration that transferees take "jointly," n121 a result unlikely to be reached in the absence of statute.

In states that have abolished tenancies by the entirety, it is possible that transfers evidencing an intent to create that estate will result instead in joint tenancies as the only alternative offering a right of survivorship. Connecticut and New Hampshire statutes, for example, provide that a transfer to two persons "as tenants by the entirety" creates a joint tenancy. n122 The same result for the same reason may be reached in states recognizing tenancies by the entirety when transfers to two persons name that estate but the transferees are not in fact husband and wife. n123 Usually the mere description of the grantees as husband and wife -- inaccurate in this case -- is held insufficient as an expression of an intent to create a right of survivorship. n124

In deeds, words of limitation describing the estate are normally placed in the habendum clause, introduced by the memorable phrase "to have and to hold" (habendum et tenendum). In case of inconsistency within the various parts of a deed, the ancient rules of conveyancing give preference to the granting clause if it describes a greater estate, but with respect to concurrent estates deciding relative degrees of "greatness" may be metaphysical indeed. In Kansas a statute resolves all doubts:

> Where a deed, transfer or conveyance grants an estate in joint tenancy in the granting clause thereof and such deed, transfer, or conveyance has a habendum clause inconsistent therewith, the granting clause shall control. n125

In general, it may be fervently hoped that the entire instrument will be read to effectuate the intention of the parties, notwithstanding the technicalities; a statute may require this result, n126 or it may be reached by judicial construction. n127 In case of ambiguity it may be necessary to admit extrinsic evidence. n128

Harder to categorize are statutes that abolish joint tenancies and create in lieu thereof a tenancy with right of survivorship. An Oregon statute candidly describes this estate as a "tenancy in common in the life estate with cross-contingent remainders in the fee simple." n129 Such estates, described more fully elsewhere (§ 31.06(g)), raise intricate problems concerning the alienability of both present and future interests. n130 Few of the statutes address these problems, although an Ohio enactment expressly permits the conveyance of the life interest by one of the survivorship tenants, subject to the indestructible remainder of the other. n131

The years have played their usual tricks in the interpretation of dubious grants. In Oregon, which has abolished joint tenancies, a transfer to two or more persons "as joint tenants" results in a tenancy in common. n132 In Virginia, which has eliminated the right of survivorship as an incident of common law joint tenancies, n133 a statutory right of survivorship may be created, n134 but merely conveying to grantees "as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common" has been held insufficient to create the right of survivorship. n135 In West Virginia, which has also eliminated the right of survivorship as an incident of common law joint tenancies, n136 a statutory "joint tenancy with right of survivorship" is recognized; n137 the same statute also provides that a transfer to multiple owners whose names are linked together with the word "or" is declared to create such a survivorship tenancy. n138 In Alabama words of survivorship must be used: a grant to two or more "as joint tenants" creates a functional tenancy in common; that is, on death the interest of the so-called joint tenant descends as if it had been severed, n139 but in Michigan, which permits joint tenancies if expressly described, the addition of words of survivorship has been held to indicate an estate for joint lives with alternative contingent remainders in the survivor, rather than a joint tenancy as such. n140 In Virginia, a conveyance to a husband and wife "as joint tenants with the full common law right of survivorship" is held to create a tenancy by the entirety. n141 In Massachusetts a conveyance to a husband and wife "as joint tenants" is held to create a tenancy by the entirety unless a contrary intention appears. n142

Like all deeds, conveyances in joint tenancy must in general be in writing. However, an oral agreement by two tenants in common to create a joint tenancy may be enforceable if an appropriate exception to the Statute of Frauds is available. n143 Also like all deeds, conveyances by a grantor to the grantor and another as joint tenants are voidable if induced by fraud. n144 Equally, conveyances into joint tenancy, even if induced by fraud, are subject to ratification. n145

Because based in intention, a joint tenancy can be created only by a person who is legally competent to execute the operative instrument. As to adults, competency will be presumed, so a challenger must prove lack of competence. n146 The intention to create a joint tenancy will be presumed from the use of the appropriate words; one who denies the requisite intention bears the burden of proving its absence at the time title was taken by clear and convincing evidence. n147 Conversely, one who claims that the intention to create a joint tenancy was present at the time title was taken although the necessary words were omitted, bears the burden of proving the same by clear and convincing evidence. n148

Even with respect to joint tenancies properly described for purposes of local law, a question may arise concerning the exact moment of the estate's creation. Only at the effective date does the right of survivorship attach. In case two or more purchasers enter into an installment land contract and the deed ultimately to be delivered is stipulated to be in joint tenancy, the question of what type of tenancy they hold while the contract remains executory may be dispositive of the rights of a survivor, should one purchaser die before delivery. In general, the doctrine of "equitable conversion" treats the contract as the operative event if it is specifically enforceable: the purchasers acquire an equitable title, while the vendor holds legal title as security for the payment of the purchase price. Although it is possible to recognize a right of survivorship in equity and at least one state has legislation requiring that it be done in this case, n149 it may equally be argued that the statutes concerning creation of joint tenancies refer to taking legal, not equitable, title. In resolving this problem much will probably depend on the state of sympathy for or against joint tenancies. Whatever the resolution, it should correlate with the result reached in the reverse situation, when vendors holding as joint tenants enter into an installment land contract: if their legal title is ipso facto converted into a tenancy in common, that would indicate that the equitable title is indeed primary. If, on the other hand, their legal title as joint tenants is unaffected, that would indicate that, absent an expressed intention to the contrary, the joint tenancy commences with the acceptance of the deed. n150

A related problem arises in the situation, probably not uncommon, in which two persons intend to buy property and to take title as joint tenants, but only one signs the contract for deed. When the deed describing the estate as in joint tenancy is delivered, the Doctrine of the Four Unities (see § 31.06(b)) may not be technically satisfied; specifically, the unity of time (and perhaps the unity of title as well) may be found lacking because, by virtue of the doctrine of equitable conversion, the party to the contract had acquired an equitable title earlier. Thanks to the relaxation of the rigor of the old law, intention has been allowed to prevail, even in a case in which the contract described the signer as the sole purchaser. n151 When a contract for deed provides for a conveyance to the purchasers in joint tenancy and the deed as subsequently delivered runs to them as tenants in common, the contract will control unless it can be shown that the parties intended to terminate the joint tenancy. n152

The various state statutes concerning the creation of joint tenancies are summarized below:

Alabama. Right of survivorship as incident of joint tenancy abolished, but if instrument creating joint tenancy states that it is "with right of survivorship" or uses other words showing such intention, then right of survivorship will be recognized. n153

Alaska. Joint tenancy in real property abolished. n154 Transfer to two or more persons (except transfer to executors and trustees) construed to create tenancy in common; transfer to married couple presumed to create tenancy by the entirety. n155

Arizona. Transfers to two or more persons create tenancies in common, not joint tenancies, except transfers in trust, or to executors, or to a husband and wife; transfers may, however, by express words "vest the estate in the survivor upon the death of a grantee or devisee." n156 Property acquired by husband and wife is community property, n157 although the spouses may by express agreement take title as joint tenants. n158

Arkansas. Right of survivorship abolished. n159 Transfers to two or more persons (except transfers to executors and trustees) create tenancies in common, unless expressly declared to create joint tenancies. n160

California. Transfer to two or more persons creates joint tenancy when expressly declared to be so. n161 Devise to two or more persons vests in them tenancy in common unless the will otherwise provides. n162

Colorado. No joint tenancy shall be created unless it is declared to be "in joint tenancy," except in transfers to executors, trustees, or fiduciaries. n163

Connecticut. Joint tenancy created by transfer to two or more natural persons (1) as joint tenants or as tenants in common and to the survivor and heirs, or (2) for their joint lives with a remainder to the survivor and heirs, or (3) as joint tenants with right of survivorship, or (4) as tenants by the entirety, or (5) as joint tenants. n164

Delaware. Joint tenancy may be created only by transfer expressly declared to create estate "to be held as joint tenants and not as tenants in common," except transfer to executors or trustees. n165

District of Columbia. Transfer to two or more persons, including married couples, creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be a joint tenancy. n166

Florida. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless instrument creating the estate expressly provides for "the right of survivorship." n167

Georgia. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, "unless the instrument expressly refers to the takers as 'joint tenants,' 'joint tenants and not as tenants in common,' or 'joint tenants with survivorship' or as taking 'jointly with survivorship.'" ("Language essentially the same" may also be used.) n168

Hawaii. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, but joint tenancy may be created if it manifestly appears that it was intended to create joint tenancy (exception for executors and trustees). n169

Idaho. Transfer to two or more persons (except executors or trustees) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be otherwise. n170 Every interest created in favor of two or more persons (except partners for partnership purposes) is an interest in common, unless declared to be a "joint interest" or community property. n171

Illinois. Concurrent estates (except of executors and trustees) deemed to be tenancies in common, but transfers expressly declared to pass estates "not in tenancy in common but in joint tenancy" create joint tenancies. n172

Indiana. Transfers to two or more persons create tenancy in common, unless expressly declared that transferees hold "in joint tenancy and to the survivor of them" or unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy. n173 Exception for mortgages, conveyances in trust, and conveyances to husband and wife; executors and trustees hold in joint tenancy. n174

Iowa. Conveyances to two or more persons create tenancies in common, unless a contrary intent is expressed. n175

Kansas. Transfer to two or more persons including transfer to husband and wife creates tenancy in common, unless the language used makes it clear that a joint tenancy was intended (exception for executors or trustees). n176

Kentucky. No right of survivorship in joint tenancies. n177 Exception for executors and trustees and estates for which it manifestly appears that right of survivorship was intended. n178

Maine. Transfers to two or more persons (except conveyances in mortgage) create estates in common, unless otherwise expressed. n179

Maryland. Presumption against joint tenancy unless instrument expressly provides that the property granted is to be held in joint tenancy. n180

Massachusetts. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless it is expressed in transfer that transferees shall take "jointly," or "as joint tenants," "or in joint tenancy," or "to them and the survivor of them" or unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy. n181

Michigan. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. n182 Exception for mortgages, transfers in trust, to executors, and to husband and wife. n183

Minnesota. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. Exception for mortgages, transfers in trust or to executors. n184

Mississippi. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy with right of survivorship (exception for mortgages and transfers in trust). n185

Missouri. Transfer to two or more persons (other than executors and trustees and husband and wife) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. n186

Montana. Joint interest created when expressly declared in the transfer to be a joint tenancy, or when granted or devised to executors or trustees as joint tenants. n187 Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless declared to be "a joint interest." n188

Nevada. Transfer to two or more persons (except to executors and trustees) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. n189

New Hampshire. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly stated that estate is to be held "as joint tenants, or to them and the survivor of them" or unless other words are used clearly expressing an intention to create a joint tenancy. The addition, following the names in the granting clause of the words "as joint tenants with right of survivorship" or "as tenants by the entirety" constitutes a clear expression of intention to create a joint tenancy. n190

New Jersey. To create an estate in joint tenancy, transfer must expressly set forth that it is intended to create an estate in joint tenancy, and not an estate of tenancy in common. n191

New Mexico. Transfer to two or more persons (other than executors or trustees) creates tenancy in common, unless clearly expressed to create joint tenancy. n192 Conveyance or mortgage to two or more persons designated "as joint tenants" means to them as joint tenants "and to the survivor of them and the heirs and assigns of the survivor." n193 Transfer "to two or more persons as joint tenants, to two or more persons and to the survivor of them and the heirs and assigns of the survivor, or to two or more persons with right of survivorship" is prima facie evidence of a joint tenancy and conclusive as to purchasers or encumbrancers for value; in litigation joint tenancy may be established by a preponderance of the evidence. n194

New York. Transfer to two or more persons (except as executors, trustees or guardians) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be a joint tenancy. n195

North Carolina. Right of survivorship in joint tenancy abolished, but a "joint tenancy with right of survivorship" may be created if the instrument expressly provides for a right of survivorship. n196 Joint tenancies preserved for joint trustees, n197 joint mortgagees or trustees with a power of sale, n198 and joint executors or administrators. n199

North Dakota. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless acquired by them in partnership for partnership purposes, or "unless declared in its creation to be a joint tenancy." n200 Devise to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless a different intention clearly appears. n201

Ohio. Transfer to two or more persons "for their joint lives and then to the survivor or survivors of them" creates a "survivorship tenancy"; transfer containing language showing clear intent to create a survivorship tenancy to be liberally construed to do so. n202 Although a survivorship tenant may transfer the tenant's share, it is conditioned on the survivorship of the grantor and does not affect the interest of a survivorship tenant who does not join in the conveyance; that is, it does not sever the estate. n203

Oklahoma. Devise to more than one person creates tenancy in common. n204 Joint tenancy may be created by transfer if expressly declared. n205

Oregon. Transfer to two or more persons (except to husband and wife or to executors or trustees) creates tenancy in common, unless it is clearly and expressly declared that transferees take "with right of survivorship." Declaration of right of survivorship creates "tenancy in common in the life estate with cross-contingent remainders in the fee simple." Joint tenancy abolished; use of words "joint tenants" without indication of an intent to create a right of survivorship creates tenancy in common. n206

Pennsylvania. Right of survivorship abolished. n207

Rhode Island. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, "unless it be declared that the tenancy is to be joint, or that the same is to such persons and the survivors or survivor of them, or to them as trustees or executors, or unless the intention manifestly appears that such persons shall take as joint tenants and not as tenants in common." n208

South Carolina. Joint tenancy severed by death of joint tenant, and estate is distributed as a tenancy in common, "unless the instrument which created the joint tenancy expressly provides for a right of survivorship." n209

South Dakota. Transfer to two or more persons creates joint tenancy when expressly declared to be in joint tenancy (or when to executors or trustees as joint tenants). n210 Every interest in favor of two or more persons is an interest in common, "unless acquired by them in partnership, for partnership purposes, or unless declared on its creation to be a joint interest." n211

Tennessee. Right of survivorship abolished. n212

Texas. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant, but right of survivorship may be provided by written agreement of joint owners; no agreement may be inferred from fact that property is held in joint ownership. n213

Utah. Conveyance to two or more persons creates a tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be otherwise; joint tenancy may be described by words "joint tenancy," "with rights of survivorship," "and to the survivor of them," or words of similar import. n214

Vermont. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless it is expressed that transferees take "jointly" or "as joint tenants" or "in joint tenancy" or "to them and the survivors of them"; exception for transfers in trust or to husband and wife or in which it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy. n215

Virginia. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant. n216 Exceptions for joint tenancy of executors or trustees and for transfer in which it manifestly appears that it was intended that the decedent's portion should then belong to the others. n217

Washington. Joint tenancy may be created by written instrument that expressly declares interest to be joint tenancy. n218 Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless acquired by partners for partnership purposes, or declared to be a joint tenancy, or acquired by executors or trustees. n219

West Virginia. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant. n220 Exceptions for joint tenancy of executors or trustees and for transfer in which it manifestly appears that it was intended that the part of one dying should then belong to the others. n221 Title in multiple owners whose names are linked by "the disjunctive 'or'" is joint tenancy with right of survivorship, unless expressly stated otherwise. n222

Wisconsin. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless intention to create joint tenancy is expressed. n223 Joint tenancy may be created if intention to do so is expressed; expressions of intention include "as joint tenants," "as joint owners," "jointly," "or the survivor," "with right of survivorship." n224 Transfer to husband and wife is presumed to be in joint tenancy, unless the intention to create a tenancy in common is expressed. n225 Co-personal representatives and co-trustees hold property as joint tenants. n226

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: creat! or establish w/15 (joint w/3 tenan!)

§ 31.06(e) Joint Tenancies of Personal Representatives and Trustees.

In certain contexts joint tenancies are useful in carrying out the special purposes for which land is held; the right of survivorship makes the continuance of the estate less subject to the accidents of human mortality. Personal representatives, whether executors or administrators, hold property for the temporary purpose of settling an estate; trustees hold property for the benefit of others. In such cases, joint tenancies facilitate the work of titleholders, and statutes that abolish the right of survivorship in general or that reverse the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancy often preserve the estate or presumption for certain purposes. An Arkansas statute, for example, provides that "every interest in real estate granted or devised to two (2) or more persons, other than executors and trustees as such, shall be in tenancy in common unless expressly declared in the grant or devise to be a joint tenancy," n227 and the Pennsylvania statute abolishing the right of survivorship in joint tenancies concludes with the proviso, "That nothing in this act shall be taken to affect any trust estate." n228 Joint guardians are also within the reason of the rule; a New York statute makes express provision for joint guardians. n229

It may be recalled from the history of the law of joint tenancies that that concurrent estate was routinely chosen for those holding legal title "for the use of" another, an arrangement that led to the modern trust. n230 The same considerations remain operative today. Whether or not expressly excepted from the legislation concerning joint tenancies, the estate should be more readily recognized in transfers to executors or trustees. Although a few statutes (like Montana's) literally limit their exception to grants or devises to executors or trustees "as joint tenants," n231 it is submitted that the express description of the concurrent estate is unnecessary; it may be implied from the role to be performed by the grantees or devisees.

Less common than exceptions in favor of joint executors and trustees are exceptions in favor of joint mortgagees. (In states in which deeds of trust substitute for mortgages the exception in favor of joint trustees serves the purpose.) Again the object is to aid the titleholders in performing their function, and again the exception deserves generous construction; indeed, in the absence of an express exception, an intention to create a joint tenancy may well be inferred from the role to be performed by the grantees. n232

At one time, partnership property was held by the partners in joint tenancy. The advantages of the right of survivorship for continuity of business operations are obvious, but so is the risk of loss by spouses, heirs, or devisees of deceased partners. With respect to personal property an exception to the right of survivorship was anciently made, derived from the law merchant, summed up in the phrase, "Jus accrescendi inter mercatores locum non habet" (The right of survivorship has no place between merchants). n233 The exception never applied to real property. The law of joint tenancy, even as modified, was not well suited to the needs of partners, and in modern times a new tenancy in partnership was created by statute. n234 Some of the older statutes on joint tenancy still contain detailed provisions on partnerships. The North Carolina statute, for example, originally adopted in 1784, includes a lengthy proviso:

> Provided, that estates held in joint tenancy for the purpose of carrying on and promoting trade and commerce, or any useful work or manufacture, established and pursued with a view of profit to the parties therein concerned, are vested in the surviving partner, in order to enable him to settle and adjust the partnership business, or pay off the debts which may have been contracted in pursuit of the joint business; but as soon as the same is effected, the survivor shall account with, and pay, and deliver to the heirs, executors and administrators respectively of such deceased partner all such part, share, and sums of money as he may be entitled to by virtue of the original agreement, if any, or according to his share or part in the joint concern, in the same manner as partnership stock is usually settled between joint merchants and the representatives of their deceased partners. n235

More commonly, a statute (as in Idaho) reversing the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies preserves it for property acquired by persons "in partnership, for partnership purposes." n236 Like the exception for joint tenancies of executors and trustees, the exception for partnership property even if not express should be implied.

§ 31.06(f) Joint Life Estates.

Joint tenancies may be created in estates other than estates fee simple. n237 As Blackstone himself put it: "estates of any quantity or length of duration ... may be held ... in joint-tenancy." n238 Joint life estates involve the concurrent ownership of property by two or more persons as long as both or all are alive; on the death of one joint life tenant, the right of survivorship preserves the estate in the other or others. The effect of a joint life estate, in other words, is to create an estate that will last (unless severed) until the death of the last to die. n239

At common law, when words of inheritance were required to create an estate in fee, a joint life estate could be created simply by a transfer to two or more, for example, "to A and B." n240 In most jurisdictions today there is a presumption in favor of fee estates, so words descriptive of a life estate are required, as "to A and B for life." In many states, furthermore, the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancy has been reversed, so words expressing an intent to create that form of concurrent ownership would also be required, as "to A and B as joint tenants for life." In states that have eliminated the right of survivorship rather than reverse the presumption in favor of joint tenancy, it is possible that joint life estates are unaffected, indeed, that the old presumption in favor of joint tenancies still has effect with regard to them; the wording of the statute eliminating the right of survivorship may apply only to estates of inheritance, not to life estates. n241

The joint life estate should be distinguished from the similar sounding estate for joint lives. Two or more persons holding an estate, the duration of which is measured by their joint lives, hold an estate that will last so long as both are alive; that is, an estate for joint lives will end at the death of the first to die. n242 (Confusingly, this estate is actually a tenancy in common, that is, a tenancy in common for joint lives.) Such an estate may be created by a transfer limiting the estate to the joint lives of the transferees, as "to A and B for their joint lives." There is an unfortunate tendency in the cases to describe such estates as "indestructible." n243 Obviously, they are destructible by the act of all the joint owners, and individual shares are alienable. What is indestructible by the act of one joint owner is whatever future interest follows the estate for joint lives -- unlike the right of survivorship in joint tenancy, which can be "destroyed" by any act of one joint tenant that terminates the joint tenancy. n244

Distinguishing the joint life estate from the estate for joint lives is complicated by the fact that a given transfer may provide for a remainder to the survivor for life, as "to A and B for their joint lives, then to the survivor of them for life." Technically, the estate that results would be a tenancy in common for joint lives with alternative contingent remainders for life in the survivor. One who holds with another an estate for joint lives plus a contingent remainder for life can convey no more than the share in the estate for joint lives and -- if the jurisdiction permits the alienation of contingent interests -- the contingent remainder for life.

§ 31.06(g) Creation of Estates Similar to Joint Tenancies.

In jurisdictions in which joint tenancies have been abolished or in which the right of survivorship has been eliminated, the joint tenancy as it was at common law does not exist. There, one may encounter attempts to create estates similar to common law joint tenancies. The judges may be acquiescent in many cases, since the right of survivorship as such has never been found to be contrary to public policy; the problem addressed by the statutes was the unwitting creation of an estate with right of survivorship.

The most common expedient, and the one best grounded in common law estates and future interests, is an estate for joint lives followed by a remainder in fee to the survivor; the transfer would run "to A and B for their joint lives, then to the survivor of them and the survivor's heirs." Such an estate resembles a joint tenancy in that possession is shared during life and the survivor ends up with the entire estate. In terms of legal concepts, the difference is that during life each has only an estate for their joint lives (technically a tenancy in common) plus a contingent remainder in fee simple absolute. The consequence of the concepts is that each has an alienable interest in the estate for joint lives. The remainder in fee, being contingent, was not alienable at common law; whether it is now depends on the law of the jurisdiction. n245 In any event, the contingent remainder of one is not destructible by the act of the other, whatever else may be the case with destructibility. n246 By contrast, each joint tenant possesses the power to alienate a share, in effect withdrawing the share and terminating the right of survivorship as to that share. n247

Further complicating matters, as seen in subsection on modern statutes concerning the creation of joint tenancies (§ 31.06(d)) are statutes conflating joint tenancies with estates for joint lives plus contingent remainders in the survivor. The Connecticut statute does so expressly:

> A conveyance of real estate or any interest therein by deed or will or other instrument of conveyance to two or more natural persons ... in such form that the conveyance runs unto the grantees or devisees for their lives, or their joint lives, with a remainder or other interest limited to the survivor of them and to the last survivor's heirs and assigns ... creates a joint tenancy in fee simple with right of survivorship added and the tenants holding under any such conveyance shall be known as joint tenants. n248

The same effect may be achieved less obviously by statutes like Alabama's recognizing rights of survivorship, but not joint tenancies as such. n249 Kentucky's statute and caselaw is to the same effect. n250

Sometimes anomalous estates are recognized by courts when a transfer apparently intended to create a joint tenancy runs afoul of some technical rule, such as the common law rule referred to in the subsection concerning direct conveyances in joint tenancy by a grantor to the grantor and another or others (§ 31.06(c)). n251

In addition to the estate for joint lives with cross contingent remainders in fee, there exists in some jurisdictions an ill-defined right of survivorship created "by contract." n252 Here two or more persons hold an estate, usually in fee simple, subject to an agreement that the survivor shall have the whole estate. While recognized by the case law in a few jurisdictions, it is unclear how a legal estate in real property can be created by contract rather than conveyance. Nor is it clear why wills or mutual agreements to make a will would not better express what is being attempted. The incidents of such an "estate" are vague; the cases usually arise after the death of one of the contracting parties and the only issue is whether to give effect to the express intention that the survivor take all. n253

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 40. Tenancies by the entirety were available only to persons married to one another. At common law married persons taking title together took as tenants by the entirety. See Chapter 33, infra.

In case of a transfer to a husband and wife and another or others as joint tenants, the married pair took as tenants by the entirety, holding their share in joint tenancy with the other or others. Bednar v. Bednar, 688 A.2d 1200 (Pa. Super. 1997). At common law because of the "unity of person" based on matrimony, the married couple took the share of one person, not two. See § 33.06(d), infra.

There is nothing to prevent two married couples (or more) who hold undivided shares as tenants by the entirety from holding the entire estate together as joint tenants. See, e.g., Hercules v. Jones, 609 A.2d 837 (Pa. 1992) ("To H1 or W1, his wife, or H2 or W2, his wife ..., as joint tenants with the right of survivorship ... and not as tenants in common"). Today, when married persons are free to hold property other than as tenants by the entirety, two (or more) couples may hold their undivided shares as joint tenants, while holding together as tenants in common. See, e.g., Wachter Dev. v. Gomke, 544 N.W. 2d 127 (N.D. 1996) ("Arnold and Luella Gomke owned one-half of the property as joint tenants. Similarly, Nyla and Wayne Kilber owned one-half of the property as joint tenants. Together, Gomkes and Kilbers owned the property as tenants in common"). With the use of apt language, married couples can hold together as joint tenants, each individual holding separately as joint tenant. See, e.g., Tedesco v. Tedesco, 702 N.Y.S.2d 459 (Sup. Ct., App. Div. 2000) (grant to H1 and W1 and H2 and W2, "all as joint tenants with right of survivorship" held to create estate with 4 joint tenants).

(n2)Footnote 41. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766). Bizarrely, one court found that use of the plural, "their heirs and assigns," indicated a tenancy in common. "If 'his or her' heirs and assigns had been used a strong argument could be made that the grantor intended a right of survivorship." In re Estate of Michael, 238 A.2d 338 (Pa. 1966). See also Kipp v. Chip's Estate, 732 A.2d 127 (Vt. 1999).

(n3)Footnote 42. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 208, 212, 214 (1766).

(n4)Footnote 43. On tenancy in coparcenary, see Chapter 35, infra.

(n5)Footnote 44. Thomas Littleton, Tenures § 278 (ca. 1481) (Eugene Wambaugh ed. 1903).

(n6)Footnote 45. Cf. Preston v. Smith, 293 S.W.2d 51 (Tenn. 1956) (husband and wife acquiring title by adverse possession take as tenants in common), noted in 16 Md. L. Rev. 352 (1956), 22 Mo. L. Rev. 91 (1957), 24 Tenn. L. Rev. 892 (1957), 10 Vand. L. Rev. 460 (1957). Note that joint tenancy is not a meaningful alternative in Tennessee, the right of survivorship being eliminated by statute, Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-1-107; the choice in Tennessee when married persons are involved is between tenancy in common and tenancy by the entirety.

(n7)Footnote 46. Thomas Littleton, Tenures § 298 (ca. 1481). Because words of inheritance are not included in the example, the estate created at common law would have been for life rather than in fee simple. This result has probably been reversed in all American jurisdictions. In this chapter, estates in fee simple are presumed unless otherwise expressly declared. For joint life estates, see § 31.06(f), infra.

(n8)Footnote 47. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 193 (1766). For a recent case, collecting authorities, see Estate of Madeska, 8 Conn. Prob. L.J. 216 (Conn. Probate Ct. 1993).

(n9)Footnote 48. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 193-94 (1766).

(n10)Footnote 49. Wild's Case, 6 Co. Rep. 16b, 77 Eng. Rep. 277 (K.B. 1599). See Ronald C. Link, The Rule in Wild's Case in North Carolina, 55 N.C. L. Rev. 751 (1977). See also David M. Becker, Debunking the Sanctity of Precedent, 76 Wash. U. L.Q. 853 (1998) (discussing modern interpretations of Second Resolution in Wild's Case).

(n11)Footnote 50. See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14a. See also Estate of Lasater, 54 P.3d 511 (Kan. App. 2002) (presumption that joint tenants hold legal estate in equal undivided shares is rebuttable).

(n12)Footnote 51. The result may be criticized as the recognition in equity of a "tenancy in common with right of survivorship," although it is perhaps possible to explain the situation by saying that the joint tenants hold the legal estate in equal undivided shares in trust for themselves as tenants in common holding the equitable estate in unequal undivided shares.

The Maine Supreme Judicial Court has consistently drawn a distinction between unequal contributions made in the purchase of the joint tenancy and unequal contributions made thereafter: "To allow the consideration of contributions preceding the joint tenancy would defeat the joint ownership." Boulette v. Boulette, 627 A.2d 1017 (Me. 1993); Bradford v. Dumond, 675 A.2d 957 (Me. 1996). Although in 1997, the court overruled a line of cases holding that joint tenancy property acquired with nonmarital funds could not be marital property, Long v. Long, 697 A.2d 1317 (Me. 1997), noted in 50 Me. L. Rev. 471 (1998), it subsequently reaffirmed its holding in Boulette and Bradford. Ackerman v. Hojnowski, 804 A.2d 412 (Me. 2002).

(n13)Footnote 52. In the Matter of Teranis, 128 F.3d 469 (7th Cir. 1997) (applying Wisconsin law).

(n14)Footnote 53. Hofferkamp v. Brehm, 652 N.E.2d 1381 (Ill. 1995); Larman v. Larman, 991 P.2d 536 (Okla. 1999) (presumption of gift from purchasing spouse is rebuttable, but only by clear and convincing evidence).

(n15)Footnote 54. Boydston v. Loveless, 890 P.2d 267 (Colo. 1995).

(n16)Footnote 55. Epstein v. Wintroub, 561 N.W.2d 82 (Iowa App. 1996) (contract described grant as to H and W "as tenants in common," while deed described grant as to H and W "as joint tenants").

(n17)Footnote 56. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766). In Blackstone's day proper usage for the possessive of "it" was "it's," not, as it would be today, "its."

(n18)Footnote 57. See § 33.06(b) infra.

(n19)Footnote 58. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180-82 (1766).

(n20)Footnote 59. W. D. Edwards, Law of Property in Land 155 (5th ed. 1888).

(n21)Footnote 60. Cookman v. Silliman, 2 A.2d 166 (Del. 1938) (joint tenancy in possibility of reverter), noted in 17 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. 187 (1939).

(n22)Footnote 61. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 179 (1766).

(n23)Footnote 62. On ouster, see § 31.07(d), infra.

(n24)Footnote 63. Tindall v. Yeats, 64 N.E.2d 903 (Ill. 1946); Downing v. Downing, 606 A.2d 208 (Md. 1992) (agreement between joint tenants by which one retains all rental income held not to affect unity of possession).

(n25)Footnote 64. Mann v. Bradley, 535 P.2d 213 (Colo. 1975); United States v. Gibbons, 71 F.3d 1496 (10th Cir. 1995) (applying Colorado law); Waxler v. Dalsted, 529 N.W.2d 176 (N.D. 1995).

(n26)Footnote 65. Smolen v. Smolen, 956 P.2d 128 (Nev. 1998).

(n27)Footnote 66. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 187 (1766). Although, as Blackstone expressly acknowledged, "jointure" had a specific meaning in the law of marriage settlements, he used the word here as a synonym for joint tenancy.

(n28)Footnote 67. E.g., Nunn v. Keith, 268 So. 2d 792 (Ala. 1972) (in creation of joint tenancy requirement of the unity of time is eliminated), noted in 25 Ala. L. Rev. 851 (1973).

(n29)Footnote 68. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766).

(n30)Footnote 69. See § 33.06(c), infra.

(n31)Footnote 70. Deslauriers v. Senesac, 163 N.E. 327 (Ill. 1928), noted in 14 Iowa L. Rev. 352 (1929), 38 Yale L.J. 682 (1929); Porter v. Porter, 45 N.E.2d 635 (Ill. 1942) (construing deed by A and B as tenants in common to themselves as joint tenants), noted in 38 Ill. L. Rev. 104 (1943). See also Dolley v. Powers, 89 N.E.2d 412 (Ill. 1949), noted in 45 Ill. L. Rev. 132 (1950) (result reversed by statute in Illinois, 765 ILCS 1005/1b); Stuehm v. Mikulski, 297 N.W. 595 (Neb. 1941), noted in 27 Iowa L. Rev. 149 (1941), 26 Minn. L. Rev. 128 (1941) (result reversed by statute in Nebraska, Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-118).

(n32)Footnote 71. "'The term "straw man" originated in the early British halls of justice. Professional witnesses loitering in such halls signalled their willingness to testify to any matter -- for a price -- by wearing straw in their shoes.' Note. The Use of Straw Men in Massachusetts Real Estate Transactions, 44 B.U. L. Rev. 187, 187-88 (1964). From this shady origin the straw man came to be used in more legitimate ways, particularly as a conduit in real estate transactions." Charles Donahue, Et Al., Cases And Materials on Property 625 n. 1 (2d ed. 1983).

(n33)Footnote 72. It may also be worth noting that the whole problem could have been avoided by closer attention to the potentials of conveyancing. In a deed operating under the Statute of Uses a grantor could create a joint tenancy in grantor and another or others. Strout v. Burgess, 68 A.2d 241 (Me. 1949).

(n34)Footnote 73. Therrien v. Therrien, 46 A.2d 538 (N.H. 1946), noted in 32 Corn. L.Q. 291 (1946); 36 Ky. L.J. 202 (1948); Lipps v. Crowe, 100 A.2d 361 (N.J. 1953) (concerning effectiveness of conveyance executed prior to statute, N.J. Stat. Ann. § 46:3-17.1, expressly authorizing such conveyance).

(n35)Footnote 74. See § 33.06(c), infra.

(n36)Footnote 75. See Aristotle, Prior Analytics II:16.

(n37)Footnote 76. Switzer v. Pratt, 23 N.W.2d 837 (Iowa 1946), noted in 32 Iowa L. Rev. 155 (1946), 45 Mich. L. Rev. 638 (1947), 36 Ky. L.J. 202 (1948); Irvine v. Helvering, 99 F.2d. 265 (C.C.A. 8th 1938), noted in 23 Minn. L. Rev. 385 (1939).

(n38)Footnote 77. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 159.

(n39)Footnote 78. Minn. Stat. § 500.19(4).

(n40)Footnote 79. Minn. Stat. § 500.19(3). Cf. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700-19(5) (common law requirements of unity of time and title for creation of joint tenancy abolished).

(n41)Footnote 80. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 193 (1766).

(n42)Footnote 81. Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5.

(n43)Footnote 82. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(a). See also Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 4-108(A) (eliminating need for "straw man as an intermediate grantee-grantor"); Mont. Code Ann. § 70-20-105(a) (eliminating necessity for transfer "through a third person"); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 46:3-17.1 (direct conveyance as effective as conveyance through "third party"); Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-140 (eliminating necessity for transfer "through a third person").

(n44)Footnote 83. E.g., Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 311; Miss. Code § 89-1-7; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2.

(n45)Footnote 84. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-2.

(n46)Footnote 85. Ala. Code § 35-4-7.

(n47)Footnote 86. Cal. Civ. Code § 683(a).

(n48)Footnote 87. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 38-31-101.

(n49)Footnote 88. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14a.

(n50)Footnote 89. Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 311.

(n51)Footnote 90. D.C. Code Ann. § 45-216.

(n52)Footnote 91. Ga. Code § 44-6-190(a).

(n53)Footnote 92. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-2.

(n54)Footnote 93. 765 ILCS 1005/1b.

(n55)Footnote 94. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-501.

(n56)Footnote 95. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 159.

(n57)Footnote 96. Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 4-108(A).

(n58)Footnote 97. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 8.

(n59)Footnote 98. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 565.49. See Edward H. Hoenicke, Comment, Elimination of the Straw Man in the Creation of Joint Estates in Michigan, 54 Mich. L. Rev. 118 (1955).

(n60)Footnote 99. Minn. Stat. § 500.19(4).

(n61)Footnote 100. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n62)Footnote 101. Mont. Code Ann. § 70-20-105(a).

(n63)Footnote 102. Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-118.

(n64)Footnote 103. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 111.065(1).

(n65)Footnote 104. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 46:3-17.1.

(n66)Footnote 105. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. 1978, § 47-1-36.

(n67)Footnote 106. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2. See John V. Orth, The Joint Tenancy Makes a Comeback in North Carolina, 69 N.C. L. Rev. 491 (1991) (recommending adoption of statute).

(n68)Footnote 107. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.18.

(n69)Footnote 108. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74.

(n70)Footnote 109. S.C. Code Ann. § 62-2-804.

(n71)Footnote 110. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-2-14. The same rule applies with respect to conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-2-13.

(n72)Footnote 111. Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5.

(n73)Footnote 112. Va. Code Ann. § 55-9.

(n74)Footnote 113. Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 64.28.010.

(n75)Footnote 114. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(a).

(n76)Footnote 115. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(5).

(n77)Footnote 116. Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-140.

(n78)Footnote 117. Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-1-107.

(n79)Footnote 118. Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 701.

(n80)Footnote 119. Iowa Code Ann. § 557.15.

(n81)Footnote 120. Mustain v. Gardner, 67 N.E. 779 (Ill. 1903) ("The word 'jointly,' found in the devise, cannot be accepted as sufficient to show, clearly and explicitly, that the testator intended that the estate devised should possess the attribute of survivorship. Tenants in common or coparceners hold the estate 'jointly,' until a severance is effected."); Taylor v. Taylor, 17 N.W.2d 745 (Mich. 1945), noted in 43 Mich. L. Rev. 1180 (1945); Montgomery v. Clarkson, 585 S.W.2d 483 (Mo. 1979); In re Estate of Hillyer, 664 So. 2d 361, 362 (Fla. App. 1995) ("A tenancy in common is considered jointly owned property"); Application of Girard, 653 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1997) (construing devise of all property held "jointly" to include all property held in any form of co-ownership, not limited to that held in joint tenancy).

(n82)Footnote 121. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 27, § 2; Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(1). See also Ga. Code Ann. § 44-6-190(a) ("jointly with survivorship").

(n83)Footnote 122. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 47-14a; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:18. See Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(2) (transfer to husband and wife presumed to create joint tenancy). See also Epstein v. Wintroub, 561 N.W.2d 82 (Iowa App. 1996) (grant to "husband and wife as joint tenants" sufficient to rebut statutory presumption in favor of tenancy in common, although an expanded description is preferred: "to husband and wife as joint tenants with full rights of survivorship and not as tenants in common").

(n84)Footnote 123. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7 (transfer to two persons as tenants by the entirety, who are not married, creates joint tenancy); N.Y. Estates, Powers And Trusts Law § 6-2.2(c) (transfer to unmarried persons described as husband and wife creates joint tenancy unless expressly declared to be tenancy in common); 765 Ill Comp. Stat. 1005/1c (a devise, conveyance, assignment, or other transfer to two grantees who are not in fact husband and wife that purports to create an estate by the entirety shall be construed as having created an estate in joint tenancy). See also Young v. Young, 376 A.2d 1151 (Md. App. 1977) (conveyance to A and B, who were not married but thought they were, "as tenants by the entireties with right of survivorship" held to create joint tenancy despite statutory presumption against that estate); Powers v. Buckowitz, 347 S.W.2d 174 (Mo. 1961) ("straw party" deed to A and B, mother and daughter, "as tenants by entirety and to the survivor of them" held to create joint tenancy despite statutory presumption against that estate), noted in 27 Mo. L. Rev. 287 (1962). Contra: State ex rel. Ashauer v. Hostetter, 127 S.W.2d 697 (Mo. 1939) (devise by father to two daughters "as tenants by the entirety" held to create tenancy in common), noted in 5 Mo. L. Rev. 114 (1940).

Compare In re Estate of Reigle, 652 A.2d 853 (Pa. 1995) (conveyance "to A and B, son and mother... as tenants by the entirety" held to create joint tenancy) with In re Estate of Bruce, 538 A.2d 923 (Pa. Super. 1988) (conveyance to unmarried grantees mistakenly described as husband and wife held not to create joint tenancy).

(n85)Footnote 124. Compare Brissett v. Sykes, 855 S.W.2d 330 (Ark. 1993) ("to A and B, husband and wife" held not to create joint tenancy) and Snyder v. Snyder, 880 S.W.2d 596 (Mo. App. 1994) ("to A and B his wife" held not to create joint tenancy) with Wood v. Wood, 571 S.W.2d 84 (Ark. App. 1978) ("to A and B, husband and wife, as tenants by the entirety" held to create joint tenancy). See also In re Estate of Bruce, 538 A.2d 923 (Pa. Super. 1988) (conveyance to unmarried grantees mistakenly described as husband and wife held not to create joint tenancy).

(n86)Footnote 125. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-501. See also Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74 (granting clause controls inconsistent habendum).

(n87)Footnote 126. E.g., N. C. Gen. Stat. § 39-1.1(a):

> In construing a conveyance executed after January 1, 1968, in which there are inconsistent clauses, the courts shall determine the effect of the instrument on the basis of the intent of the parties as it appears from all the provisions of the instrument.

(n88)Footnote 127. Riggs v. Snell, 350 P.2d 54 (Kan. 1960), noted in 1 Washburn L.J. 498 (1961); Hennigh v. Hennigh, 309 P.2d 1022 (Mont. 1957), noted in 19 Mont. L. Rev. 69 (1957); Kipp v. Chip's Estate, 732 A.2d 127 (Vt. 1999) (rejecting common law rule of construction favoring granting over habendum clause in case of inconsistency).

(n89)Footnote 128. This prescription obviously presumes the desuetude of the old rule excluding extrinsic evidence in cases of patent ambiguity. But see James v. Taylor, 969 S.W.2d 672 (Ark. App. 1998) (refusing to admit extrinsic evidence to aid in construing conveyance to A, B, and C "jointly and severally"); Kipp v. Chip's Estate, 732 A.2d 127 (Vt. 1999) (despite inconsistency between granting and habendum clauses, refusing to admit extrinsic evidence of grantor's intent, including scrivener's testimony, because of statutory preference in favor of tenancy in common).

(n90)Footnote 129. Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.180.

(n91)Footnote 130. See, e.g., Wallace v. Wallace, 396 S.E.2d 208 (Ga. 1990) (stating that the effect of one joint tenant's alienation of that tenant's interest "is unclear").

(n92)Footnote 131. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20(C)(2).

(n93)Footnote 132. Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.180.

(n94)Footnote 133. Va. Code Ann. § 55-20.

(n95)Footnote 134. Va. Code Ann. § 55-21.

(n96)Footnote 135. Hoover v. Smith, 444 S.E.2d 546 (Va. 1994).

(n97)Footnote 136. W. Va. Code § 36-1-19.

(n98)Footnote 137. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(a).

(n99)Footnote 138. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(b).

(n100)Footnote 139. Marshall v. Nelson, 622 So. 2d 889 (Ala. 1993).

(n101)Footnote 140. Ames v. Cheyne, 287 N.W. 439 (Mich. 1939) ("to A and B as joint tenants and not tenants in common, and to the survivor thereof"), noted in 3 U. Det. L.J. 20 (1939), 6 U. Pitt. L. Rev. 44 (1939), 38 Mich. L. Rev. 875 (1940); Rowerdink v. Carothers, 54 N.W.2d 715 (Mich. 1952) ("to A and B or the survivor of them"); Jones v. Green, 337 N.W.2d 85 (Mich. App. 1983) ("to A and B as joint tenants with full rights of survivorship and not as tenants in common").

(n102)Footnote 141. In re Zella, 196 B.R. 752 (E.D. Va. 1996).

(n103)Footnote 142. Fekkes v. Hughes, 237 N.E.2d 19 (Mass. 1968).

(n104)Footnote 143. Davis v. Roberts, 563 N.W.2d 16 (Iowa Ct. App. 1997).

(n105)Footnote 144. Marden v. Dorthy, 54 N.E. 726 (N.Y. 1899).

(n106)Footnote 145. Rosen v. Rosen, 663 N.Y.S.2d 228 (1997) (ratification by execution of deed severing joint tenancy and by failing for many years to seek cancellation of original transfer).

(n107)Footnote 146. Hofferkamp v. Brehm, 652 N.E.2d 1381 (Ill. 1995) (elderly and hospitalized purchaser took title as joint tenant with younger fiancee).

(n108)Footnote 147. Matter of Estate of Ashton, 898 P.2d 824 (Utah 1995); In re Marriage of Finer, 920 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1996); Hatcher v. Hatcher, 933 P.2d 1222 (Ariz. App. 1996).

(n109)Footnote 148. Matter of Estate of Vadney, 634 N.E.2d 976 (N.Y. 1994) (scrivener's error); In re Snyder, 880 S.W.2d 596 (Mo. App. 1994) (fact that parties live together, have children prior to purchase and later marry does not clearly indicate intention to take as joint tenants).

(n110)Footnote 149. Ill. Ann. Stat. ch. 76, para. 1a. See In re Estate of Martinek, 488 N.E.2d 1332 (Ill. App. Ct. 1986).

(n111)Footnote 150. See § 31.08(a), infra.

(n112)Footnote 151. Cornell v. Heirs of Walik, 235 N.W.2d 828 (Minn. 1975); Pappas v. Pappas, 177 N.W.2d 401 (Minn. 1970). A more technical explanation of this result may be that the title conferred by equitable conversion is an equitable, as opposed to a legal, title; the latter to which the doctrine of the four unities properly applies passes to the joint tenants at the closing.

(n113)Footnote 152. Remus v. Schwass, 92 N.E.2d 127 (Ill. 1950).

(n114)Footnote 153. Ala. Code § 35-4-7. See Ex Parte Martin, 775 So.2d 202 (Ala. 2000) (construing deed to three persons "for and during their joint lives and upon the death of either of them, then to the survivor of them in fee simple" to create a joint tenancy).

(n115)Footnote 154. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.130.

(n116)Footnote 155. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.110.

(n117)Footnote 156. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 33-431.

(n118)Footnote 157. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 25-211.

(n119)Footnote 158. Collier v. Collier, 242 P.2d 537 (Ariz. 1952).

(n120)Footnote 159. Ark. Code § 28-8-101.

(n121)Footnote 160. Ark. Code § 18-12-603.

(n122)Footnote 161. Cal. Civ. Code § 683(a).

(n123)Footnote 162. Cal. Probate Code § 21106.

(n124)Footnote 163. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 38-31-101.

(n125)Footnote 164. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14a.

(n126)Footnote 165. Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 701.

(n127)Footnote 166. D.C. Code Ann. § 45-216.

(n128)Footnote 167. Fla. Stat. § 689.15.

(n129)Footnote 168. Ga. Code § 44-6-190(a).

(n130)Footnote 169. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509.1.

(n131)Footnote 170. Idaho Code § 55-508.

(n132)Footnote 171. Idaho Code § 55-104.

(n133)Footnote 172. 765 ILCS 1005/1b.

(n134)Footnote 173. Ind. Code Ann. § 32-1-2-7.

(n135)Footnote 174. Ind. Code Ann. § 32-1-2-8.

(n136)Footnote 175. Iowa Code Ann. § 557.15.

(n137)Footnote 176. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-501.

(n138)Footnote 177. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.120.

(n139)Footnote 178. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.130. See Sanderson v. Saxon, 834 S.W.2d 676 (Ky. 1992) (construing statute to provide for creation of right of survivorship indestructible by act of one joint tenant). The Sanderson case, which was decided by a closely divided court, makes the joint tenancy in Kentucky functionally an estate for joint lives with alternative contingent remainders in the survivor. For a discussion of this estate, see § 31.06(g), infra.

(n140)Footnote 179. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 158.

(n141)Footnote 180. Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 2-117.

(n142)Footnote 181. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7.

(n143)Footnote 182. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554.44.

(n144)Footnote 183. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554.45.

(n145)Footnote 184. Minn. Stat. § 500.19(1).

(n146)Footnote 185. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n147)Footnote 186. Mo. Ann. Stat. § 442.450 (Vernon).

(n148)Footnote 187. Mont. Code Ann. § 70-1-307.

(n149)Footnote 188. Mont. Code Ann. § 70-1-314.

(n150)Footnote 189. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 111.060.

(n151)Footnote 190. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:18.

(n152)Footnote 191. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 46:3-17.

(n153)Footnote 192. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. 1978, § 47-1-15.

(n154)Footnote 193. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. § 47-1-35.

(n155)Footnote 194. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. § 47-1-16.

(n156)Footnote 195. N.Y. Estates, Powers And Trusts Law § 6-2.2(a).

(n157)Footnote 196. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2. See John V. Orth, The Joint Tenancy Makes a Comeback in North Carolina, 69 N.C. L. Rev. 491 (1991).

(n158)Footnote 197. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-3.

(n159)Footnote 198. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 45-8.

(n160)Footnote 199. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 28A-13-5.

(n161)Footnote 200. N.D. Cent. Code § 47-02-08.

(n162)Footnote 201. N.D. Cent. Code § 56-05-34.

(n163)Footnote 202. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20. Survivorship deed in blank given in statutory short form. Id. § 5302.17.

(n164)Footnote 203. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20(C)(2).

(n165)Footnote 204. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 84, § 184.

(n166)Footnote 205. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74.

(n167)Footnote 206. Or. Rev. Stat. § 92.18.

(n168)Footnote 207. Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.180. Notwithstanding the statute, joint tenancy with right of survivorship may be created by transfer if expressly declared, the usual form of words being "as joint tenants with right of survivorship and not as tenants in common." In re Estate of Michael, 218 A.2d 338 (Pa. 1966). The effect of judicial construction, in other words, has been to transform the statute from one abolishing the right of survivorship in joint tenancies into one raising a rebuttable presumption in favor of tenancies in common.

(n169)Footnote 208. R.I. Gen. Laws § 34-3-1.

(n170)Footnote 209. S.C. Code Ann. § 62-2-804. See also S.C. Code Ann. § 27-7-40 (in a conveyance use of the words "as joint tenants with rights of survivorship, and not as tenants in common" is conclusive of the intention to create a joint tenancy).

(n171)Footnote 210. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-2-12.

(n172)Footnote 211. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-2-17.

(n173)Footnote 212. Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-1-107. Although the right of survivorship in joint tenancies created by law is abolished, Tennessee courts have long recognized the right of parties to create a right of survivorship (and in effect a joint tenancy with right of survivorship) by agreement. Jones v. Jones, 206 S.W.2d 801 (Tenn. 1947); Bunch v. Bunch, C.A. No. 02*A01-9705-CH-00106, 1998 Tenn. App. LEXIS 8.*

(n174)Footnote 213. Tex. Probate Code § 46(a). See Don T. Cates, Legislation, Joint Tenancy in Texas, 9 Baylor L. Rev. 118 (1957).

(n175)Footnote 214. Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5 (amended to provide that "beginning on May 5, 1997, every ownership interest in real estate granted to two persons in their own right who are designated as husband and wife in the granting documents is presumed to be a joint tenancy interest with rights of survivorship, unless severed, converted, or expressly declared in the grant to be otherwise").

(n176)Footnote 215. Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 27, § 2.

(n177)Footnote 216. Va. Code Ann. §§ 55-20, 55-20.1 now permits ownership of real or personal property as joint tenants with or without the right of survivorship. A joint tenancy without the right of survivorship would be the functional equivalent of a tenancy in common.

(n178)Footnote 217. Va. Code Ann. § 55-21.

(n179)Footnote 218. Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 64.28.010.

(n180)Footnote 219. Va. Code Ann. § 64.28.020.

(n181)Footnote 220. W. Va. Code § 36-1-19.

(n182)Footnote 221. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(a).

(n183)Footnote 222. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(b).

(n184)Footnote 223. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.18.

(n185)Footnote 224. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(1).

(n186)Footnote 225. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(2).

(n187)Footnote 226. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(4).

(n188)Footnote 227. Ark. Code § 18-12-603.

(n189)Footnote 228. Pa. Stat. Ann. tit. 68, § 110 (Purdon).

(n190)Footnote 229. N.Y. Estates, Powers And Trusts Law § 6-2.2(a).

(n191)Footnote 230. See § 31.05, supra.

(n192)Footnote 231. Mont. Code. Ann. § 70-1-307.

(n193)Footnote 232. E.g., Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 160 (conveyance in mortgage or trust to two or more persons with power to appoint a successor if one dies is in joint tenancy unless otherwise expressed).

(n194)Footnote 233. Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 283, p. 182a (1628). See Chantal Stebbings, Jus Accrescendi Inter Mercatores Locum Non Habet, 5 J. Legal Hist. 152 (1984).

(n195)Footnote 234. Uniform Partnership Act, 6 U.L.A. 1(1969). On tenancy in partnership, see Chapter 34, infra.

(n196)Footnote 235. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2.

(n197)Footnote 236. Idaho Code § 55-104.

(n198)Footnote 237. Anciently joint tenancies in fee tail were known. A grant to two or more persons "and the heirs of their bodies" created a joint life estate (lasting until the death of the last to die), with several inheritance in fee tail. The heirs held as tenants in common and not as joint tenants. Thomas Littleton, Tenure § 283 (ca. 1481). See Anne L. Spitzer, Joint Tenancy with Right of Survivorship: A Legacy from Thirteenth Century England, 16 Tex. Tech. L. Rev. 629, 636 (1985).

(n199)Footnote 238. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 179 (1766).

(n200)Footnote 239. See, e.g., Deviney v. Nationsbank, 993 S.W.2d 443 (Tex. App. 1999) (devise created joint life estate with right of survivorship in testator's daughters and remainder in fee simple subject to executory interest in testator's siblings).

(n201)Footnote 240. Eminent conveyancers repeatedly pointed out that while at common law a grant "to A and B and to the survivor of them" created a joint life estate, the words "and to the survivor of them" were surplusage. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 note (John Frederick Archbold ed. 1811); id. (Joseph Chitty ed. 1826).

(n202)Footnote 241. Powell v. Allen, 75 N.C. 450 (1876) (construing statute directing that share of deceased joint tenant "shall not descend or go to the surviving tenant, but shall descend or be vested in the heirs, executors, or administrators, respectively, of the tenant so dying, in the same manner as estates held by tenancy in common"); Burton v. Cahill, 135 S.E. 332 (N.C. 1926); Dew v. Shockley, 243 S.E.2d 177 (N.C. App. 1978). Contra: Briggs v. Estate of Briggs, 950 S.W.2d 710 (Tenn. App. 1997) (construing devise to two persons for "their lifetime" to create estate lasting until death of second and holding share of first to die to be inheritable and devisable).

(n203)Footnote 242. See, e.g., Hollowell v. Hollowell, 430 S.E.2d 235 (N.C. 1993).

(n204)Footnote 243. See, e.g., In re Tibbetts, 186 B.R. 140 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. 1995).

(n205)Footnote 244. See § 31.09(b) infra.

(n206)Footnote 245. See, e.g., Wallace v. Wallace, 396 S.E.2d 208 (Ga. 1990) (stating that the effect of one joint tenant's alienation of that tenant's interest "is unclear").

(n207)Footnote 246. Hilterbrand v. Carter, 27 P.3d 1086 (Ore. 2001) (where cotenants hold concurrent life estates with contingent remainders in fee, the contingent remainder of each cotenant cannot be defeated by any act of the other cotenant). In jurisdictions still recognizing the doctrine of the destructibility of contingent remainders, it is possible that if one of the tenants for joint lives receives the remainder, it would merge with the life estate and destroy the intervening contingent remainders (saving the present estate of the other tenant for joint lives).

(n208)Footnote 247. Durant v. Hamrick, 409 So. 2d 731 (Ala. 1982), noted in 34 Ala. L. Rev. 147 (1983) (grant to tenants in common with a contingent remainder in fee in the survivor differs from joint tenancy in that right of survivorship is indestructible by act of one).

(n209)Footnote 248. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14a.

(n210)Footnote 249. Ala. Code § 35-4-7. See Nettles v. Matthews, 627 So. 2d 870 (Ala. 1993) (describing grant to two persons "for and during their joint lives and upon the death of either of them, then to the survivor of them in fee simple" as creating a joint tenancy with right of survivorship).

(n211)Footnote 250. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.130. See Sanderson v. Saxon, 834 S.W.2d 676 (Ky. 1992).

(n212)Footnote 251. Anson v. Murphy, 32 N.W.2d 271 (Neb. 1948), noted in 28 Neb. L. Rev. 117 (1948); Hass v. Hass, 21 N.W.2d 398 (Wis. 1946), noted in 44 Mich. L. Rev. 1144 (1946), 23 Notre Dame Lawyer 103 (1947), 30 Marq. L. Rev. 182 (1946), 1947 Wis. L. Rev. 117. But see Palmer v. Flint, 161 A.2d 837 (Me. 1960) (finding joint tenancy despite technical difficulties with the grant because an estate for joint lives followed by cross contingent remainders in the survivor is "such an unusual estate").

(n213)Footnote 252. Vettori v. Fay, 137 S.E.2d 810 (N.C. 1964); Chandler v. Kountze, 130 S.W.2d 327 (Tex. Civ. App. 1939), noted in 18 Tex. L. Rev. 232 (1940). Enacting the contract theory, a Texas statute authorizes the creation of a right of survivorship by written agreement of the joint owners. Tex. Probate Code § 46(a). See Don T. Cates, Joint Tenancy in Texas, 9 Baylor L. Rev. 118 (1957).

(n214)Footnote 253. A joint tenancy with right of survivorship, in a jurisdiction where such estates may be created "by agreement," despite the abolition by statute of a right of survivorship in joint tenancies in general, has been held to be partitionable like any other joint tenancy. Bunch v. Bunch, C.A. No. 02*A01-9705-CH-00106, 1998 Tenn. App. LEXIS 8.*

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.07

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.07 Incidents of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Supp]

Various incidents of joint tenancies have been described in earlier sections. In the analytical synopsis of the law of joint tenancies (§ 31.02*)* it was pointed out that each joint tenant possesses the power to alienate an undivided share but that no joint tenant possesses a devisable or inheritable share; in the same section was described the right of survivorship, referred to by Sir William Blackstone as the "grand incident of joint estates." n254 It was also noted that each joint tenant has a right to partition, in kind or by sale and division of the proceeds. The most famous features of joint tenancies, the four unities, were described in the context of the creation of joint tenancies at common law (§ 31.06(b)). To be covered in this section are the incidents relevant to the relationship between joint tenants during the existence of the estate.

In contrast to the technicality, even hyper-technicality, of the law concerning the creation of joint tenancies, the law governing the relations between joint tenants is marked by a degree of vagueness. In place of strict rules, causing uncertainty only by the extent to which they will be enforced, are loose rules applied "under all the circumstances." To a degree, this is unavoidable: many of the disputed relationships between joint tenants are sorted out in the context of partition proceedings, which are equitable in nature. Furthermore, the courts are understandably reluctant to assume a supervisory role in continuing relationships marked by discord. The power of alienation and the right to partition, possessed by every joint tenant, provide openings for exit from contentious relationships, and rules are sometimes applied with an eye to encouraging their exercise.

The incidents of joint tenancies are organized in this section according to the remedies available to one joint tenant as against the other or others: for damage to the freehold to the detriment of a cotenant, n255 the action of waste (§ 31.07(a)); for contribution to the necessary expenses of preserving the estate, the action for contribution (§ 31.07(b)); for profits from the estate at the expense of a cotenant, the action of account (§ 31.07(c)); and for the ouster of one cotenant by another, the action of ejectment (§ 31.07(d)). Creditors' rights, dependent on the rights of individual cotenants, are also considered (§ 31.07(e)). Because the mutual rights and duties of joint tenants with respect to use of the property are the same as those of tenants in common, the comparable section of the next chapter may also be consulted. n256

§ 31.07(a) Action of Waste.

Joint tenants have equal rights of possession. From this unity of possession it follows that damage to the freehold caused by one joint tenant is an injury to another joint tenant. n257 Waste may be committed by one joint tenant personally or through the actions of third parties, as where one joint tenant gives permission to a stranger to enter and cut timber. n258 The remedy is an action of waste, first made available as Blackstone explained, "by construction of the statute Westm. 2. c. 22." n259 Ordinarily the action of waste protects the holder of a future interest against damage to the freehold by a present possessor, so its use by one joint tenant against another is not free from difficulty: the right of survivorship gives each joint tenant only a contingent interest in the future estate.

Damage to the freehold includes any diminishment in its value. In the case of mineral deposits, the classic example of "wasting assets," removal by one joint tenant causes obvious injury to the interest of another joint tenant. The case is not so clear where the resource is a renewable one. Cutting timber was recognized in England for centuries as waste, presumably because of the long period of maturation. Ordinary farming operations that do not unreasonably deplete the soil should not, however, be treated as waste since they leave the productive asset unaffected.

Whether one joint tenant has caused damage to the freehold constituting waste may be difficult to determine when the alleged waste is the result not of action but of inaction; permissive waste results from a failure to act, as by failing to keep a structure wind and water tight. This problem should be addressed in tandem with the problem of contribution for necessary expenses, covered in the following subsection. If a joint tenant in possession is chargeable with permissive waste for allowing a building to fall into disrepair, that is, has breached a duty to an out-of-possession joint tenant to make necessary expenditures, then the joint tenant in possession should have a correlative right to call on the other for contribution. Without a duty to share the cost, a joint tenant out of possession should have no right to hold a joint tenant in possession liable for permissive waste.

It is sometimes implied that a joint tenant in possession making necessary repairs is not entitled to contribution because of the tenant's enjoyment of the benefits of use and occupation. n260 Yet this seems contradictory both to the theory of concurrent ownership and to practical fairness. The theory of concurrent estates is that each co-tenant has an equal right to possession. The "unity of possession" does not require actual occupancy. In practice, it would be capricious to hold a joint tenant in possession liable for the cost of repairs only if they happen to become necessary during his or her occupation.

If waste has already occurred, the remedy is damages, measured by the diminishment in value of the complaining joint tenant's undivided share. Following an early English precedent, legislation in some states provides for treble damages in certain cases. n261 If waste is in prospect, an injunction should be granted. Where the issue of past waste arises in a partition proceeding, it should be charged to the one responsible. In a partition in kind the part wasted, if geographically distinct, should be assigned to the one who committed the waste; the shares, of course, should be valued as if the waste had not occurred. The idea is as old as the Statute of Westminster II, cited by Blackstone: "And if he do choose to take his Part in a Place certain, the Part wasted shall be assigned for his Part, as it was before he committed the Waste." n262 In a partition by sale and division of the proceeds, the cost should be attributed to the share of the one responsible.

One joint tenant is under no obligation to insure the property held in joint tenancy against the risk of loss by accidental fire. In consequence, if one joint tenant does take out a fire insurance policy, paying all the premiums, and a fire occurs, the insured joint tenant is entitled to the entire proceeds. n263

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: waste w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!)

§ 31.07(b) Action for Contribution.

Claims for waste arise against a joint tenant in possession for damage to the freehold; claims for contribution arise against a joint tenant, usually one out of possession, for a proportionate share of expenses. When a joint tenant improves the property on his or her own initiative, a claim against another joint tenant for a share of expenses should be rejected. n264 "A man cannot be improved out of his estate"; n265 in other words, a joint tenant cannot be compelled to contribute to the expenses of improvement, because the costs may equal or even exceed the unrealized value of the undivided share. An improver dissatisfied with this rule can always exercise the right to partition. In a partition in kind, the improver should be awarded, insofar as possible, the share benefited by the improvement. In a partition by sale and division of the proceeds, the improver should, if possible, be awarded, not the cost of the improvement, but the increment in value attributable to the improvement; this is appropriate because the out-of-pocket cost of the improvement may exceed the incremental value. Short of partition, an action of account (described in the next subsection) can take the improvement into consideration in determining the joint tenants' respective shares; increased income attributable to the improvement should be allotted to the improver. Exactitude in any of these calculations will be impossible, and doubts should be resolved against the improver. Before making the improvement a prudent joint tenant would have secured the agreement of the other joint tenant or tenants or have partitioned the estate.

On the contrary, when the expenses are not discretionary, contribution should be enforced. In this case there is no possibility of being "improved out of one's estate"; rather, the expenses are a necessary cost of preserving the estate. Repairs needed to keep a structure wind and water tight are a case in point. If an action of waste is available to enforce the duty to make such repairs, then an action for contribution should be available to enforce the duty to share the cost. As pointed out in the preceding subsection, the two should go together.

In the case of repairs, even "necessary" repairs, it is imaginable to deny both the action of waste and the action for contribution; there may be no public interest in discouraging what would otherwise be permissive waste. As in the case of improvements, partition is always available to a dissatisfied joint tenant. Taxes are another matter. Unlike improvements, they are not discretionary, and unlike deterioration of private property, their prompt and efficient collection is a matter of public concern. n266 Where taxes on joint property are a joint and several liability, their payment by one joint tenant is a public duty and discharges the public duty of another joint tenant. n267 In such cases the tax-paying joint tenant should be entitled to contribution from the other joint tenant or tenants. While there seems to be no reason to refuse a present action for money, it is also possible to attain the same economic result by adjusting the equitable shares of the joint tenants so that in case of subsequent partition (in kind or by sale and division of the proceeds) or an action of account, the tax-paying joint tenant will be compensated. n268

Mortgage payments are often analogized to taxes, although they differ in that the original source of the obligation was voluntarily assumed, not imposed by law; the joint tenants had no duty to give a mortgage. While it is certainly appropriate to enforce an express agreement to contribute, and while an implied agreement may well be instinct in the circumstances, it is submitted in this case that it is not essential for the law to impose a duty to contribute apart from agreement. The parties have voluntarily encumbered their own property and may be expected to provide for the associated obligation. n269

Courts are divided on the issue of the right of a surviving joint tenant to demand from the estate of a deceased joint tenant contribution of a pro rata share of the payment due on a debt represented by a jointly executed promissory note secured by a mortgage on the joint estate. Since title to the joint estate is now in the surviving joint tenant or tenants, it seems inequitable to require the estate of the deceased joint tenant, in the absence of prior agreement by the deceased, to contribute to exonerate the debt on property in which, by virtue of the right of survivorship, it has no further interest. n270

Although not strictly part of the discussion of the action for contribution, failure to pay taxes or a mortgage raises the question of a joint tenant's duty in case of foreclosure and sale. May one joint tenant bid at a sale in an attempt to buy the property for himself or herself as sole owner? The answer depends on whether there exists a relationship of trust and confidence between the joint tenants. Although often recognized by the courts, the fiduciary relationship is properly grounded in a relationship apart from the merely proprietary one; joint tenants, for example, may be husband and wife or members of the same family who took the property by testate or intestate succession, or they may be business associates embarked on a common venture. n271 Even if a fiduciary relationship is found to exist, it may be questioned whether it ought to prevent a joint tenant from acting in his or her own interest in the absence of any evidence of fraud or overreaching. Obviously, if one joint tenant does buy but is not permitted to take the estate in severalty, another joint tenant is required to make contribution before claiming an unencumbered share. n272 Any such belated right to a share conditioned on a duty to contribute suggests that an action for contribution was available all along.

The cases on contribution are often complicated by the fact that one of the joint tenants, usually the one demanding contribution, is enjoying the use and occupation of the premises, while the other joint tenant is not. As noted in the following subsection, an action of account does not normally provide recovery for anything except rents and profits received in excess of the joint tenant's proportionate share. The benefits of possession may often seem in a rough way to offset the claim for contribution. It would appear, however, that the fact of who is in possession of the property should properly be irrelevant since each joint tenant has an equal right to possession. As always, a dissatisfied joint tenant can alienate or secure a partition.

COMPUTER ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: contribution w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!)

§ 31.07(c) Action of Account.

Just as the action of waste protects a joint tenant if another joint tenant damages the estate, so the action of account protects a joint tenant if another joint tenant profits from the estate. The common law originally refused to recognize a right by one joint tenant to demand an accounting: the unity of possession was thought to entitle each joint tenant equally to any proceeds, so the first to receive profits could keep them. The only exception was if one joint tenant had agreed to act as bailiff for another, collecting rents and profits, then an action could be brought if the terms of the agreement were breached. A general remedy was finally created by statute in 1706, the oft-cited "Statute of Queen Anne," which permitted actions of account "by one joint tenant, and tenant in common, his executors and administrators, against the other, as bailiff for receiving more than comes to his just share or proportion... ." n273 By constituting each joint tenant a bailiff for the other insofar as receipts were concerned, the statute brought every joint tenancy within the erstwhile exception.

Received in America as part of the common law or adopted in various forms by the several states, n274 the Statute of Queen Anne continues to shape the remedy. A Michigan statute, for example, closely tracks its English forerunner:

> One joint tenant or tenant in common, and his executors or administrators, may maintain an action for money had and received, against his co-tenant for receiving more than his just proportion of the rents or profits of the estate owned by them as joint tenants or tenants in common. n275

The key word in the Statute of Queen Anne is "receiving." The theory of the statute was based on the legal fiction of each joint tenant serving as bailiff for the other and was effective as far as it went. Left outside the scope of the statute were benefits enjoyed by one joint tenant, as the benefit of occupying part or all of the estate. No receipts are generated in such a case, so the stewardship of the fictitious bailiff cannot be invoked. Because of the unity of possession, each joint tenant is equally entitled to the intangible benefits of ownership.

Some commentators have argued that the economic value of the benefit enjoyed should be treated as a receipt. n276 It is submitted that it is better policy not to extend the remedy. n277 A dissatisfied joint tenant is free to sever the estate or demand partition at any time. Furthermore, it should be noted that under the Statute of Queen Anne and its progeny no compensation is provided the "bailiff" for services rendered; the receiver is held to account for everything in excess of "his just share or proportion." n278 Obviously, if a joint tenant in possession is liable for the imputed value of occupancy, a credit ought to be allowed for the value of any work performed on behalf of the joint tenant out of possession. The difficulty of valuing these services is an additional argument against a too nice attempt at adjudicating continuing disputes between parties who would do better in going their separate ways.

Property settlements incident to divorce sometimes unwisely leave joint tenancies intact while providing for exclusive possession by one of the ex-spouses. In the absence of express agreement for rent, none is owed by the joint tenant in possession. n279

Obviously, an unequivocal claim of sole dominion and control signals adverse possession of the estate and implicates the action of ejectment, the subject of the next subsection. Once adverse possession has been established, but before it has ripened into a limitation title, the adversely possessing cotenant is liable for rent to the cotenant out of possession. n280

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: accounting w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!)

§ 31.07(d) Action of Ejectment.

Joint tenants hold "by one and the same undivided possession." n281 Because each joint tenant is entitled to possession of the whole, each is enabled to defend the estate against strangers. Title may be vindicated and trespassers removed from any part by an action of ejectment brought by any joint tenant. n282 Failure to remove adverse possessors of the concurrent estate may eventually result in loss of title, as with any present estate. Permission given by one joint tenant to a third party to enter and cut timber is a sufficient defense to an action for trespass brought by another joint tenant against the third party, although the situation may give rise to an action for waste against the joint tenant who gave the permission. n283

More difficult is the question whether an action of ejectment may be brought by one joint tenant against another. In general, the action may be brought if the possession of the complaining joint tenant has been interfered with by another joint tenant; however, recognizing the accrual of such a cause of action has momentous consequences, since it may begin the running of the statute of limitations for purposes of adverse possession. As a result, courts have been slow to find an interference with possession in theory, normally insisting on an actual ouster. This protects the joint tenant out of possession, who is entitled to rely on his or her own right to possession, unless it is unequivocally contravened. While a joint tenant in possession need not necessarily communicate his or her adverseness directly to the joint tenant out of possession, the act signaling ouster must be so open and continuous that any prudent person would have noticed it. n284 Evidence of ouster will vary from case to case. One court has wisely remarked that there can be "no 'open and shut' rule," but that many factors may need to be considered:

> What in one case would be sufficient as a warning might not be enough in another. Relationship of the parties, their reasonable access to the property and opportunity or necessity for dealing with it, their right to rely upon conduct and assurances of the tenant in possession, kinship, business transactions directly or incidentally touching the primary subject-matter, silence when one should have spoken, natural inferences arising from indifference -- these and other means of conveying or concealing intent may be important in a particular case, but not controlling in another; for after all what a designated plaintiff or defendant had in mind when he or she consummated an act or engaged in a course of conduct often depends upon the personal equation and the individual's method of expression. n285

Sometimes property settlements incident to divorce are the source of problems concerning the right to possession. A divorcing couple who held title to their residence in joint tenancy may leave the title unchanged while giving one spouse exclusive possession. Certainly such an agreement is no evidence of ouster, and ordinarily it does not give rise to an obligation on the part of the joint tenant in possession to pay any rent, even to the extent of one-half in value, to the joint tenant out of possession. n286 In the charged emotional environment surrounding divorce, it may happen that the non-possessing joint tenant may enter without the permission of the possessing joint tenant. While undoubtedly a breach of the agreement, the entry is not technically a trespass, n287 although it may constitute the statutory crime of "home invasion." The best solution, obviously, is to eliminate the source of the problem by severing the tenancy.

Because each joint tenant is entitled to possession of the whole, each is enabled to give consent to a police search of the entire estate; each joint tenant is held to have assumed the risk that another joint tenant will permit the search in the absence of the other. n288 The consent is generally not valid to permit a search if another joint tenant, present at the same time, objects. n289

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: ejectment or trespass w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!)

§ 31.07(e) Creditors' Rights.

Because each joint tenant has a title, an interest, and a right to possession, the concurrent estate is an asset that creditors may seek to attach. Nonetheless, nothing may be done to the prejudice of another joint tenant so long as the estate lasts. Of real interest to creditors, therefore, is the joint tenant's power to sever the estate by alienating an undivided share. A judgment lien on the property does not, in and of itself, work a severance, because it does not destroy any one of the unities; it becomes valueless on the death of the debtor survived by another joint tenant. n290 "Jus accrescendi praefertur oneribus" (The right of survivorship is preferred to encumbrances), was described as "a maxime in law" by Sir Edward Coke hundreds of years ago. n291

Execution of the lien and a judicial sale of the interest during the debtor's lifetime obviously does result in severance because it ends the unities of title, interest, and possession; as an exercise of the power of alienation, even if involuntary, it terminates the joint tenancy. n292 Legislation in individual states may, of course, alter the effect of the common law rules, n293 and homestead exemptions commonly affect creditor's rights where married joint tenants are involved. n294

In case of the bankruptcy of one joint tenant, the joint tenancy is severed as to the bankrupt's share since the appointment of a bankruptcy trustee transfers title to the trustee. The trustee is empowered to sell the debtor's interest and may, under circumstances in which the sale of an undivided interest is impractical, sell the interests of both the debtor and the non-debtor cotenant as well. n295 In such cases, the non-debtor cotenant has a right of first refusal to purchase the property at the price at which the sale is to be consummated; n296 if that right is not exercised, the non-debtor cotenant is entitled to the appropriate share of the sale proceeds. n297

Because the death of an indebted joint tenant extinguishes that joint tenant's share, nothing transfers from the deceased joint tenant to the surviving joint tenant or tenants, so there is ordinarily no possibility of using statutes against fraudulent transfers to set aside the right of survivorship. n298

Increasingly, criminal law provides for the forfeiture of property used in criminal activity. Ordinarily the interest of innocent co-owners are spared by statute, although this seems not to be constitutionally required. n299

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: (creditor w/3 right) w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 254. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 183-84 (1766).

(n2)Footnote 255. Although often used to describe co-owners of an estate held in tenancy in common, the label "cotenants" can also refer to co-owners of estates held in joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety.

(n3)Footnote 256. See § 32.07, infra.

(n4)Footnote 257. It would be tempting to base many of the remedies available to one joint tenant against another on the unity of interest rather than on the unity of possession. This would, however, obscure the fact that for centuries joint tenants and tenants in common have been treated as having the same rights inter se, despite the fact that tenants in common share only the unity of possession.

(n5)Footnote 258. Kapler v. Kapler, 755 A.2d 502 (Me. 2000).

(n6)Footnote 259. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 183 (1766). The statute Blackstone cites, Westminster II, enacted in 1285, is among the earliest in the English statute book. Technically 13 Edw. I, it is most famous for its first chapter, better known as De Donis Conditionalibus, the legal basis of the fee tail. Chapter 22 literally provides the action of waste to tenants in common, rather than to joint tenants, which is why "construction" was required:

> Whereas two or more do hold Wood, Turfland, or Fishing, or other such Thing in common, wherein none knoweth his several, and some of them do Waste against the Minds of the other, an Action may lie by a Writ of Waste; (2) and when it is come unto Judgement, the Defendant shall choose either to take his Part in a Place certain, by the Sheriff, and by the View, Oath, and Assignment of his Neighbours sworn and tried for the same Intent, or else he shall grant to take nothing from henceforth in the same Wood, Turf-land, and such other, but as his Partners will take. (3) And if he do choose to take his Part in a Place certain, the Part wasted shall be assigned for his Part, as it was before he committed the Waste. (4) And there is such a Writ in this Case, that is to say, Cum A. & B. tenent boscum pro indiviso, B. fecit vastum, & c.

It is instructive that tenants in coparcenary were not granted the action of waste because they, alone among concurrent owners at the time, could compel partition. See 2 Edward Coke, Institutes 403. (Joint tenants were not enabled to compel partition until the statutes of Henry VIII. See § 31.05, supra). The lesson seems to be that the founders of the common law saw no need to arbitrate disputes among co-owners who could escape the concurrent ownership at will.

(n7)Footnote 260. 2 American Law of Property 78 at n. 2 (A. James Casner ed. 1952).

(n8)Footnote 261. E.g., Iowa Code § 658.1. Cf. 6 Edw. I, c. 5 (Statute of Gloucester) (1278).

(n9)Footnote 262. 13 Edw. I, c. 22 (1285).

(n10)Footnote 263. Furnace v. Comins, 693 N.Y.S. 2d 755 (App. Div. 1999).

(n11)Footnote 264. Contributions for improvements may be recovered only where the improvements are necessary to preserve the premises. Bednar v. Bednar, 688 A.2d 1200 (Pa. Super. 1997).

(n12)Footnote 265. Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 217 (2d ed. 1988). See also Hernandez v. Hernandez, 645 So. 2d 171 (Fla. App. 1994).

(n13)Footnote 266. Adam Smith compared governments to joint tenancies and taxes to the contributions required of joint tenants: "The expence of government to the individuals of a great nation, is like the expence of management to the joint tenants of a great estate, who are all obliged to contribute in proportion to their respective interests in the Estate." An Inquiry into the Nature and Causes of the Wealth of Nations 777 (Edwin Cannan ed. 1937).

(n14)Footnote 267. Where taxes are not joint obligations, payment by one joint tenant of the taxes owed by another is voluntary and therefore not subject to recovery in an action for contribution. Bednar v. Bednar, 688 A.2d 1200 (Pa. Super. 1997).

(n15)Footnote 268. Because of the relationship of trust and confidence between the joint tenants, the statute of limitations does not ordinarily begin to run until a demand is made for contribution or for partition. But see Bednar v. Bednar, 688 A.2d 1200 (Pa. Super. 1997) (statute of limitations began to run at time of expenditure for necessary repairs).

(n16)Footnote 269. Giles v. Sheridan, 137 N.W.2d 828 (Neb. 1965) (joint tenants agreed to pay mortgage in equal shares).

(n17)Footnote 270. See Matter of Estate of Zahn, 702 A.2d 482 (N.J. Super. 1997); Mellor v. O'Connor, 712 A.2d 375 (R.I. 1998) (describing result, refusing right of contribution from estate of deceased joint tenant, as "the minority rule"). Contra: Vincent v. Troutman, No. E-2001-03035-COA-R3-CV, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 378 (Tenn. App. 2002) (promissory note signed only by deceased joint tenant). A similar problem may arise in the case of tenancies by the entirety. See § 33.07(b), infra.

(n18)Footnote 271. Cooper v. Cooper, 783 A.2d 430 (Vt. 2001).

(n19)Footnote 272. The joint tenant's share may be subject to an equitable lien, or the joint tenant may be found to hold the share as a constructive trustee.

(n20)Footnote 273. Often cited as 4 Anne, c. 16, § 27, and dated 1705, the statute is properly 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, § 27 (1706). Although the most widely used edition of the English statutes, Pickering's Statutes At Large, makes it appear that Queen Anne's parliament adjourned in December 1705, it actually continued in session into January, when the present statute was enacted. See 11 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 519, 526 (1938). The complete text of the relevant section of the statute is as follows:

[A]ctions of account shall and may be brought and maintained against the executors and administrators of every guardian, bailiff, and receiver; and also by one joint tenant, and tenant in common, his executors and administrators, against the other, as bailiff for receiving more than comes to his just share or proportion, and against the executor and administrator of such joint tenant, or tenant in common; and the auditors appointed by the court, where such action shall be depending, shall be, and are hereby empowered to administer an oath, and examine the parties touching the matters in question, and for their pains and troubles in auditing and taking such account, have such allowance as the court shall adjudge to be reasonable, to be paid by the party on whose side the balance of the account shall appear to be.

(n21)Footnote 274. Ala. Code § 6-7-40; Alaska Stat. § 34.15.120; Ark. Code § 18-60-101; Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 52-404; Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 702; D.C. Code Ann. § 16-101; Ga. Code § 44-6-121 to 122; 765 ILCS 1005/4a; Ind. Code Ann. § 34-1-51-1; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-2522; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 953; Md Real Prop. Code Ann. § 14-106; Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554-138; Minn. Stat. § 557-06; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 507:3; N.Y. Real Prop. Acts Law § 1201; Or. Rev. Stat. § 105.820; R.I. Gen. Laws § 10-2-1; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 12, § 4251; Va. Code Ann. § 8.01-31; W. Va. Code § 55-8-13; Wyo. Stat. § 1-32-119.

(n22)Footnote 275. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554.138.

(n23)Footnote 276. Lawrence Berger, An Analysis of the Economic Relations Between Cotenants, 21 Ariz. L. Rev. 1015 (1979).

(n24)Footnote 277. Clark v. Covington, 438 N.E.2d 628, 629 (Ill. App. 1982) ("In order to render one co-tenant liable to another co-tenant for the rent or use of jointly owned property, there must be something more than mere occupancy of the property by one and forbearance from occupancy by another.").

(n25)Footnote 278. Bunch v. Bunch, C.A. No. 02*A01-9705-CH-00106, 1998 Tenn. App. LEXIS 8* ("absent an agreement, a cotenant is not entitled to credit for the value of personal services in managing and caring for the property").

(n26)Footnote 279. Hernandez v. Hernandez, 645 So. 2d 171 (Fla. App. 1994).

(n27)Footnote 280. Cf. Cox v. Cox, 71 P.3d 1028 (Idaho 2003) (tenants in common).

(n28)Footnote 281. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766).

(n29)Footnote 282. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 80 (1766).

(n30)Footnote 283. Kapler v. Kapler, 755 A.2d 502 (Me. 2000).

(n31)Footnote 284. Arizona v. Superior Court of Maricopa County, 936 P.2d 558 (Ariz. App. 1997) (in context of dispute between spouses holding property as joint tenants, one joint tenant held liable under criminal damage statute for damage to jointly held property). Even if accurate as a matter of criminal law, the holding should not begin the running of the statute of limitations for purposes of adverse possession.

(n32)Footnote 285. Linebarger v. Late, 216 S.W.2d 56, 59 (Ark. 1948).

(n33)Footnote 286. See § 31.07(c) supra. One joint tenant may sue for damage to her proportionate share. McClurkin v. Ziebach & Webb Timber Co., 666 So. 2d 520 (Ala. App. 1995).

(n34)Footnote 287. Hernandez v. Knutson, No. C1-95-268, 1995 Minn. App. LEXIS 1198 (Minn. App. 1995) (unpublished).

(n35)Footnote 288. United States v. Matlock, 415 U.S. 164 (1974).

(n36)Footnote 289. State v. Walker, 941 P.2d 1 (Wash. App. 1997).

(n37)Footnote 290. Musa v. Segelke & Kohlhaus Co., 272 N.W. 657 (Wis. 1937); Eder v. Rothamel, 95 A.2d 860 (Md. 1953), noted in 14 Md. L. Rev. 151 (1954); Grothe v. Cortlandt Corp., 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 (Cal. App. 1992); Helinski v. Harford Mem. Hosp., 831 A.2d 40 (Md. 2003).

A statute may in certain cases preserve the effectiveness of a judgment lien on the debtor's share after death. See United States v. Librizzi, 108 F.3d 136 (7th Cir. 1997) (federal tax lien); John E. Talsky, Comment, Concurrent Ownership: Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common Under Chapter 700, 55 Marq. L. Rev. 321 (1975) (state tax lien).

See also Dieden v. Schmidt, 104 Cal. App. 4th 645 (2002) (judgment lien perfected on property held in tenancy in common that was later converted into joint tenancy may be executed even after death of the indebted tenant).

(n38)Footnote 291. Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 286, p. 185a (1628).

(n39)Footnote 292. Boissonnault v. Savage, 625 A.2d 454 (N.H. 1993). Termination may not be effective until the period of redemption has expired. Jackson v. Lacey, 97 N.E.2d 839 (Ill. 1951), noted in 30 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. 189 (1952).

(n40)Footnote 293. See, e.g., S.C. Code Ann. § 27-7-40 (joint tenancy may not be encumbered without all joint tenants joining in the encumbrance).

(n41)Footnote 294. See, e.g., O'Hagan v. United States, 86 F.3d 776 (8th Cir. 1996) (applying Minnesota law) (creditor of spouse holding residence as joint tenant with other spouse can force sale of debtor spouse's right of survivorship, but present possession of non-debtor spouse is secured from creditor by state homestead exemption). See also Pratt v. Langston, 669 So. 2d 967 (Ala. 1995) (purported conveyance by one spouse of half interest subject to life estate in other spouse in jointly owned homestead could not affect homestead and was therefore ineffective as a severance).

(n42)Footnote 295. Bankruptcy Code § 363(h):

The trustee can sell both the estate's interest and the interest of the non-debtor in property owned as tenants in common, joint tenants, or tenants by the entirety only if:

(1) partition in kind of such property among the estate and such co-owners is impracticable;

(2) sale of the estate's undivided interest in such property would realize significantly less for the estate than sale of such property free of the interest of such co-owners;

(3) the benefit to the estate of a sale of such property free of the interests of co-owners outweighs the detriment, if any, to such co-owners; and

(4) such property is not used in the production, transmission, or distribution, for sale, of electric energy or of natural or synthetic gas for heat, light, or power.

One commentator has described this section as going "too far." Thomas E. Plank, The Constitutional Limits of Bankruptcy, 63 Tenn. L. Rev. 487, 571 (1996).

(n43)Footnote 296. Bankruptcy Code § 363(i).

(n44)Footnote 297. Bankruptcy Code § 363(j).

(n45)Footnote 298. Mahlin v. Goc, 547 N.W.2d 129 (Neb. 1996). But see Gallagher v. Kirschner, 632 N.Y.S.2d 857 (1995) (in case of deceased murderer whose estate was insufficient to satisfy wrongful death judgment, right of survivorship set aside as fraudulent conveyance).

(n46)Footnote 299. Cf. Bennis v. Michigan, 516 U.S.442 (1996) (forfeiture of personal property).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.08

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.08 Termination of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Supp]

As a form of concurrent ownership, joint tenancies can exist only when there are two or more owners of the same property at the same time. If, for whatever reason, ownership of the estate passes to a single person, joint tenancies and all other forms of concurrent ownership cease. Multiple ownership is only a necessary and not a sufficient condition of joint tenancies; for any given case of concurrent ownership to be a joint tenancy there must also be present the four unities of time, title, interest, and possession. n300 A joint tenancy can be terminated by any act destructive of its constituent unities. In fact, for purposes of termination only three of the four unities matter: title, interest, and possession. As Sir William Blackstone long ago conceded, the unity of time, "which respects only the original commencement of the joint estate, cannot indeed (being now past) be affected by any subsequent transactions." n301 In this section will be examined termination by act of all the joint tenants (§ 31.08(a)), by act of one joint tenant (§ 31.08(b)), and -- regardless of the act of any or all joint tenants -- by operation of law (§ 31.08(c)).

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: termin! w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!) & sever!

§ 31.08(a) Termination by Act of All Joint Tenants.

Joint tenancies may be terminated by the act of all joint tenants. Obviously, a grant by all joint tenants to a stranger as sole owner ("A and B to C and heirs") terminates the joint tenancy; what had been held as a concurrent estate is now held in severalty. A grant by all joint tenants of less than the complete fee simple ("A and B, the lower forty acres to C and heirs") does not terminate the joint tenancy in the remaining interest. By the same token, all joint tenants may lease or mortgage the property without causing a severance. n302 Although subject to some doubt, the same should hold true even in states that still nominally regard mortgages as conveyances. n303

As among themselves, all joint tenants may terminate the joint tenancy by destroying the unity of title, interest, or possession. (The unity of time is now beyond change.) For example, a grant of a described part of the estate by all joint tenants to one joint tenant ("A and B, the lower forty acres to A and heirs") terminates the joint tenancy as to that part;

the remaining part of the estate is, of course, still held in joint tenancy. The same result will follow if an undivided share is granted ("A and B, one-half to A and heirs"); although the unity of possession remains, the unities of title and interest in the granted share are destroyed. For the same reason, joint tenants can terminate the joint tenancy altogether by conveying it in undivided shares to one another ("A and B, one-half to A and heirs, one-half to B and heirs"). The effect is to transform the joint tenancy into a tenancy in common. n304 A fortiori a joint tenancy is terminated if the whole estate is divided into shares and conveyed ("A and B, the lower forty acres to A and heirs, the remaining forty acres to B and heirs"); this is, in fact, a voluntary partition in kind. Mere negotiations to divide land held in joint tenancy are obviously not enough to terminate the joint tenancy. n305

When property held in joint tenancy is sold, a question may arise concerning the tenancy in which the proceeds of the sale are held. Because of the power each joint tenant has to sever the tenancy, the distinction between joint tenancies and tenancies in common in regard to use of the money is rarely significant. The problem, as ever, concerns the right of survivorship. What should be done with the proceeds of sale when one joint tenant dies before division? In general, the presumption in favor of tenancies in common in personalty should be applied in the absence of an expressed intention in favor of joint tenancy. n306 In other words, a voluntary sale by joint tenants should be treated like a partition by sale and division of the proceeds. Wisconsin, to the contrary, has legislation on the subject preserving the right of survivorship in the money. n307

If a voluntary sale by joint tenants is treated as operating to sever the tenancy, a question may arise concerning the moment at which the sale is effective. The ordinary sale begins with a contract to convey, and the law of "equitable conversion" has long treated the contract, if it is specifically enforceable, as the operative event; at the moment of contracting, the purchaser acquires an equitable title to the property, while the vendors hold the legal title as security for the payment of the purchase price. A persuasive argument can be made, based on the doctrine of the four unities, that delivery of the deed, that is, transfer of the legal title, is the operative event for purposes of terminating the joint tenancy. The unities have always been legal, as opposed to equitable, prerequisites for the estate of joint tenancy, and the legal estate continues, regardless of the state of the equitable title, until its "legal" termination by the delivery of the deed. n308 Should specific performance be sought and obtained by either party to the land sale contract, it would be the vendors, collectively as joint tenants, who would be required to deliver the deed. A South Dakota statute adopts the rule that a contract for the sale of land does not terminate the vendors' joint tenancy unless the contract expressly so provides. n309 In one state, a court reached the same result, although its holding was affected by the fact that the jurisdiction does not recognize the doctrine of equitable conversion. n310

There is some modern authority to the effect that joint tenants can terminate the joint tenancy by mutual agreement to hold as tenants in common without a deed. n311 This cannot be reconciled with the doctrine of the four unities and reflects the modern preference for intention over technicalities.

§ 31.08(b) Termination by Act of One Joint Tenant.

Joint tenancies may be terminated by any act of one joint tenant that destroys the unity of title, interest, or possession. n312 (The unity of time is now beyond change.) Although the common law insisted that a joint tenant had an interest in every part of the joint estate, it nonetheless recognized a power in each joint tenant to convey an interest in an undivided share, in effect withdrawing that share from the joint tenancy. So, if A holding an estate with B in joint tenancy makes a conveyance to C, C receives an undivided one-half. n313 The process is known as severance: A has severed the joint tenancy. After the conveyance, B and C each hold undivided one-half shares; the form of concurrent estate must perforce be tenancy in common since A's conveyance destroyed the unities of title and interest. C holds a new interest by a new title; only possession remains united. Severance also occurs if A holding an estate in joint tenancy with B conveys a remainder interest to C and reserves a life estate. n314

The effect of recognizing a power of alienation in joint tenants is to permit each joint tenant to convey an interest that, strictly speaking, he or she did not have; the conveyance creates the interest. n315 Furthermore, where only two joint tenants are involved, the conveyance transforms the remaining interest, terminating the so-called right of survivorship. n316 The moment the conveyance becomes legally operative is the moment the joint tenancy is terminated; until then the joint tenancy with its associated incident of the right of survivorship remains in effect. n317 Ordinarily a joint tenancy can be severed by one joint tenant without the knowledge or consent of the other joint tenant or tenants. n318 Local legislation may modify this common law result. n319 California, for example, requires that a severing instrument be recorded before the severing joint tenant dies. n320

A special case exists where there are three or more joint tenants and one of them makes a conveyance. The grantee receives as an undivided share the pro rata interest of the grantor; for example, if A, B, and C are joint tenants and A conveys to D, D receives an undivided one-third. Because the severance terminated the joint tenancy as to that share, D holds the share as tenant in common, but because the severance left two concurrent owners, B and C, the joint tenancy persists as to them. In consequence, an undivided two-thirds share is held by B and C as joint tenants, while an undivided one-third share is held by D as tenant in common with them. As Blackstone himself reminded us: "estates of any quantity or length of duration, and whether they be in actual possession or expectancy, may be held ... in joint-tenancy." n321 As between B and C, all the incidents of joint tenancy persist, including the right of survivorship. This is only just, since there is no reason why A's unilateral act should alter the joint tenancy as between B and C; should either wish to sever the tenancy, each has the power to do so. By contrast, where there are only two joint tenants and one conveys, the remaining share must be affected. n322

In terms of legal concepts, it makes no difference whether the grantee of the alienating joint tenant is a stranger -- D in the above example -- or another one of the joint tenants; that is, where A, B, and C are joint tenants and A conveys to B. The severed share is still held by tenancy in common, and the remaining share is still held by joint tenancy. The only difference is that the same person -- B in the present example -- holds two interests by two distinct tenancies: the one-third share granted by A in tenancy in common with C, and the remaining two-thirds in joint tenancy with C. n323 It is not exactly true to say that B holds a total share of two-thirds, since the part held in joint tenancy is held, as all joint tenancies are held, "by the share and by the whole" (per my et per tout), and is subject to the right of survivorship.

Because each joint tenant is already seised "by the whole," it was not required at common law that the normally indispensable words of inheritance appear in a release by one joint tenant to another. n324 Because severance is a voluntary act, it is effective only if the severing party is legally competent. Although a severance that appears proper on its face is presumed to be effective, it remains open to challenge for undue influence in appropriate cases. n325

A singular but revealing problem concerning termination of joint tenancies occurs when one joint tenant attempts to sever the joint tenancy by a self-conveyance; that is, when A and B are joint tenants and A, intending to terminate the joint tenancy and convert it into a tenancy in common, conveys from A as joint tenant to A as tenant in common. The common law would unhesitatingly hold the joint tenancy still in effect; a conveyance to oneself has no legal consequence and therefore does not destroy any unities. n326 In modern American law with its emphasis on intention this result seems harsh, since the object sought by the grantor is not contrary to public policy and, by use of a conveyance to a "straw man" and reconveyance, could have been obtained at common law. n327 The objection is even stronger if the jurisdiction has a statute expressly eliminating the need for a "straw man" in the creation of a joint tenancy when grantor transfers to grantor and another or others. n328

Although permitting termination of joint tenancies by a self-conveyance comports with a preference for effectuating intention, it does create the opportunity for one joint tenant to gain an advantage over the other or others by executing the self-conveyance and delivering it to an heir or devisee with instructions to record it, if but only if, the self-conveyor dies first, in which case the severance will be effective and the interest will pass by intestacy or devise; if the self-conveyor survives the other joint tenant or tenants, the self-conveyance can be suppressed and the survivor take all by right of survivorship. n329 In consequence, some states require recording for effectiveness of self-conveyances, although it is unlikely in ordinary cases that an unsuspecting joint tenant would think to inspect the records of title. n330

Whether a lease by one joint tenant severs the joint tenancy is a question almost as old as the estate itself; one judge likened it to "a comet in our law: though its existence in theory has been frequently recognized, its observed passages are few." n331 Because a lease is a conveyance of a present estate, albeit a non-freehold estate, it might be held to destroy the unities of title and interest, and thereby sever the joint tenancy. There is respectable authority to this effect. n332 Yet what the lessor retains is an interest in fee simple subject to the lease (although commonly called a reversion), which is still held with the other joint tenant or tenants. The right of survivorship, and therefore the joint tenancy, should still be recognized in the fee simple estate. If the joint tenancy is regarded as unsevered by the lease, the question may arise whether the lease can extend beyond the life of the lessor; that is, if the lessor dies before the lease expires, is the right of survivorship in the other joint tenant or tenants subject to the lease? An affirmative answer enjoyed wide support in America for several decades. n333 But it has now been abandoned in favor of the more logical view that, if a lease by one joint tenant does not sever the fee simple estate, it does not encumber the survivorship rights of the other joint tenant or tenants. Should the leasing joint tenant die before the term expires, the lease would terminate -- just as it would if a life tenant had made a lease and died before it expired. n334

This result has the benefit of being consistent with other aspects of the law of joint tenancy. Because it is generally accepted that joint tenants may agree among themselves on their respective use of the property, even providing by contract for the exclusive possession of one, without causing a severance, n335 it seems only logical to permit one joint tenant to lease his or her interest to a stranger without terminating the joint tenancy. n336 This conclusion is bolstered by the fact that the lessor does not ordinarily intend by the lease to sever the tenancy; other acts, such as the conveyance of the entire interest in the freehold, unequivocally express an intention to sever.

A mortgage given by one joint tenant raises the same problem as a lease: is the joint tenancy severed? This question too is like a "comet in our law," an intriguing academic question of limited practical significance. It is a rare (or negligent) commercial lender who would accept a mortgage from a joint tenant without first seeing that the joint tenancy was severed or that all the joint tenants had signed. n337 In consequence, the cases almost always involve private arrangements, usually within a family. At common law a mortgage was a conveyance, so it necessarily destroyed the unities of title and interest. n338 Yet in modern law a mortgage is generally recognized to be in reality only a pledge of the title as security for a loan rather than a conveyance. In many American states, particularly in the West, the "title theory" of mortgages has been explicitly replaced with the "lien theory." In these states it is easy to see why a mortgage by one joint tenant is held not to sever the joint tenancy: no more than any other unforeclosed lien does it destroy any of the constitutive unities. n339 It is harder to see why the common law result should continue to pertain even in "title theory" states, unless there remains a real rather than a technical sense in which title or interest is affected by the mortgage. n340 Statutes in some jurisdictions alter the common law result. In Wisconsin, for example, a statute provides that on the death of a mortgaging joint tenant the survivor takes subject to the mortgage. n341 In South Carolina a statute prohibits any encumbrance of a joint tenancy unless all joint tenants join in the encumbrance.

Although each joint tenant has a right to sever the joint tenancy, this right may be restricted by express agreement, as by an agreement not to sell or partition. If limited to a reasonable time, agreements against partition are presumptively valid, n342 although courts are often reluctant to enforce them against an unwilling party, particularly if circumstances have changed since the inception of the agreement. n343 Agreements against sale may be unenforceable as restraints on alienation, unless construed merely as agreements not to demand partition by sale. n344 Given the greater weight accorded intention in modern law, agreements against sale of an undivided interest may pass muster today, at least if limited to a reasonable time and so long as circumstances have not changed. In addition, the right to sever may be limited by estoppel, as where one joint tenant has permitted another to rely on the continuation of the joint tenancy. n345

In addition to termination by a voluntary conveyance by one joint tenant, a joint tenancy may be terminated by judicial action on the demand of one joint tenant. Originally authorized by English statutes, the right to judicial partition is now accepted as an essential feature of the joint tenancy. n346 Although partition will sever a joint tenancy, the severance is effective only on the entry of the final partition order; merely filing an action for partition will not end the joint tenancy.

Consequently, the death of a joint tenant during the pendency of the partition action will result in the extinction of the deceased joint tenant's share; the remaining joint tenant or tenants will then hold the entire estate by right of survivorship. n347

Legislation in most states gives a surviving spouse a right to elect a share in the estate of a deceased spouse in lieu of whatever is offered by the decedent's will. Traditionally the decedent's estate for purposes of calculating the elective share was limited to the probate estate, but modern statutes may provide for the probate estate to be augmented by the value of interests passing outside probate, including joint tenancies passing by right of survivorship. n348 In such cases, if the decedent's estate is otherwise unable to fund the elective share, it may be necessary to deny recognition to the right of survivorship, in effect causing the severance of the joint tenancy. n349

The Uniform Probate Code permits a surviving joint tenant to "disclaim" the interest accruing by the right of survivorship, n350 and at least one state has held that a surviving joint tenant may "renounce" the right of survivorship. n351 In this case, while death would ordinarily terminate the share of the dying joint tenant, the survivor's disclaimer would relate back to the moment of death and sever the joint tenancy, converting it into a tenancy in common. n352 An analogy is attempted to the renunciation of an intestate share and the disclaimer of a testamentary gift. This is, however, to mistake the nature of the right of survivorship. Rather than an interest passing from the deceased joint tenant to the surviving joint tenant, the right of survivorship registers the subtraction from the estate of the interest of the deceased and consequent enlargement of the interest of the survivor. The true rationale would seem to be a recognition of estates with rights of survivorship as substitutes for wills.

A Uniform Disclaimer of Property Interests Act, promulgated in 1999 and incorporated in 2002 into the Uniform Probate Code, n353 changes the treatment of disclaimers by joint tenants. n354 Under the Act, a joint tenant can disclaim either the decedent's equal fractional share of the property (without tracing the source of contributions to the purchase price) or all of the jointly held property other than the part contributed by the disclaimant (that is, with tracing). n355

§ 31.08(c) Termination by Operation of Law.

Joint tenancies may be terminated by operation of law without regard to the act of the joint tenants, together or separately. Again, the key is terminating the concurrent ownership or, if that continues, destroying at least one of the unities of title, interest, or possession. (The unity of time is now beyond change.) By right of survivorship the estate continues after the death of a joint tenant; when only one is left, that one holds no longer in joint tenancy but in severalty. n356 Any legal event that destroys one of the unities also ends the joint tenancy. As an example Sir William Blackstone described two joint tenants for life when the remainder descends to one of them: by operation of the law of inheritance and the doctrine of merger, the unity of interest is destroyed and the joint tenancy thereby terminated. n357

Joint tenancies are terminated by operation of law when taken by the state through the power of eminent domain. Transfer to a sole owner, even if the result of an involuntary taking, ends the state of concurrent ownership and with it the joint tenancy. In case of a taking, of course, money is substituted for the land, the "just compensation" required by constitutional law. The money paid for the estate should itself be held in joint tenancy; by operation of law it has been substituted for the estate, a process referred to as "involuntary conversion" -- conversion in the sense of transformation from realty to personalty -- so the nature of the holding should be unaffected. Of course, property held in joint tenancy, including money, is subject to the right of survivorship only so long as the estate remains unsevered. n358

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: termin! w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!) & "eminent domain" or condem!

Other involuntary events resulting in the substitution of money for real property held in joint tenancy are sometimes mistakenly likened to the exercise of the power of eminent domain. For example, the value of land and buildings held by joint tenants may be insured; if damaged by casualty, the insurer will be obligated to pay. The proceeds of the policy are in a sense money substituted for property and the precipitating event is in fact involuntary, but the money need not be held in the same tenancy as the realty because, unlike the taking by eminent domain, the money is not substituted for the estate. The estate has not been terminated by operation of law. The dispositive question must be who owned the policy of insurance and by what title.

An involuntary sale of the share of one joint tenant, as in the foreclosure of a mortgage, tax lien, or judgment lien, severs the joint tenancy, substituting the purchaser of the share as tenant in common with the remaining tenant or tenants. n359 (If two or more joint tenants remain, they continue to hold their shares in joint tenancy.) Perfection of a judgment lien on the property does not itself work a severance because it does not destroy any of the unities. n360 Even the sale itself may not finally terminate the joint tenancy until the period of redemption has expired. n361

Where married persons hold property in joint tenancy a problem can arise in case of divorce. Unless the parties voluntarily sever the joint tenancy, the right of survivorship is unaffected by the change in marital status; divorce has no effect on the necessary unities. n362 The problem is particularly acute in jurisdictions in which tenancy by the entirety is not available, so the only survivorship tenancy is the joint tenancy. (Where married persons hold as tenants by the entirety the effect of divorce is to sever the tenancy. n363) Obviously, as part of the property settlement, prudent divorce counsel should arrange to sever any joint tenancies between the separating spouses. As one court has observed, "We cannot expect divorced parties to continue a business relationship that will optimize resources and profits[;]... it is particularly important to avoid creating situations where the divorced parties remain in joint management of income producing property." n364

In a growing number of states, statutes provide for the automatic termination of joint tenancies on the divorce of the owners:

Alaska. Divorce converts joint tenancy with right of survivorship into tenancy in common. n365

Arkansas. Final decree of divorce terminates right of survivorship unless court order specifically provides otherwise; parties become tenants in common. n366

Connecticut. Divorce severs joint tenancy, effective on the recording of certified copy in land records of the town where the land lies. n367

Michigan. Joint tenancy of husband and wife becomes tenancy in common on divorce. n368

Ohio. If two "survivorship tenants" married to one another are divorced, estate becomes tenancy in common. n369

South Carolina. Filing of divorce decree converts joint tenancy into tenancy in common unless otherwise specifically ordered. n370

Virginia. Divorce converts joint tenancy into tenancy in common. n371

The Uniform Probate Code, in a provision copied by legislation in many states, provides that, absent agreement or court order to the contrary, divorce "severs the interest of the former spouses in property held by them at the time of the divorce or annulment as joint tenants with the right of survivorship..., transforming the interests of the former spouses into tenancies in common." n372

In states without statutes on the subject, the courts may be expected to scrutinize the parties' behavior in search of an agreement to sever the joint tenancy. n373 Problems of peculiar complexity can arise if the estate, rather than being in joint tenancy, was in tenancy in common for joint lives followed by alternative contingent remainders in fee simple in the survivor. n374

A melancholy instance of termination by operation of law is the murder by one joint tenant of another. As one court remarked, "Unfortunately, courts of our nation too often have had to deal with the disposition of property after a killing of one co-tenant by the other." n375 If A and B are joint tenants and A murders B, the joint tenancy is terminated; on the death of B the right of survivorship preserves the estate in A, who now holds in severalty. Thus far, one might say the joint tenancy was terminated not by operation of law but by the act of one joint tenant. So outrageous is the act, however, that courts have struggled to devise means to prevent ordinary rules from operating in this case. n376 The resulting hodge-podge has been cataloged by one court:

> (1) The killing does not affect the right of the surviving tenant to take the entire interest in the joint tenancy property.
>
> (2) The killing destroys the survivorship characteristics of the tenancy and the estate in the property reverts to a tenancy in common. In some instances a constructive trust is imposed on a one-half interest in the property to effect this result.
>
> (3) The killing does not result in a termination of the joint tenancy; the survivor and the heirs of the victim remain joint tenants.
>
> (4) The killing deprived the wrongdoer of all interest in the property.
>
> (5) The killing does not interfere with the vesting of title in the survivor but: (a) The killer is chargeable as a constructive trustee of the whole of the property absolutely, or, in some instances, subject to a life estate in himself as to a one-half interest therein, or the equivalent of such a life estate. (b) The killing raises a conclusive presumption that in the natural course of events the deceased joint tenant would have survived the killer and a constructive trust is imposed to effect this result. (c) The killing raises a doubt as to who would survive, which should be resolved against the killer and the whole property subjected to a constructive trust. (d) A constructive trust is imposed on the property to the extent the interest of the killer is enlarged by his wrongful act. n377

Most states nowadays have statutes on the subject, and the Uniform Probate Code includes a sensible provision severing the joint tenancy (option 2 above without the imposition of a constructive trust). n378

Rejection of the right of survivorship in the case of the murdering joint tenant is dependent upon a final determination of responsibility, n379 but once determined, the legal consequence for the right of survivorship -- whatever it is -- relates back to the time of the crime. During the interval between the death and the final determination of responsibility, a constructive trust may need to be imposed on the legal title-holder in order to preserve the property. No rule should be applied, however, to the injury of a good faith purchaser who reasonably relied on the appearance of title in the meantime, although money paid to a murderer by such a purchaser should be traced and subjected to the rule.

Because the reason for refusing to recognize the usual right of survivorship is to prevent a wrongdoer from profiting from the wrong, a difficulty can arise in the case of so called murder-suicide, that is, when the slayer immediately commits suicide. Any rule that deprives the slayer of a momentary benefit actually deprives the slayer's heirs or devisees, who most often are totally innocent. Some courts have recognized that such cases raise difficult questions under provisions of the federal and most state constitutions that prohibit forfeiture or corruption of blood. n380 Conversely, where a guilty slayer survives the victim for an appreciable period of time, the policy against profiting from wrongdoing may encourage a court to go beyond the usual presumption of equal shares in joint tenancies, n381 and to trace the respective contributions of slayer and victim, as in cases of divorce. If the slayer contributed less than half the value of the property, the slayer may be deprived of proportionately more than one-half. n382 In one state, Kansas, a special rule applies if the murdering joint tenant immediately commits suicide: murderer and victim are treated as if they died simultaneously. n383

One issue too often left obscure by the statutes is the type of crime that triggers their application. Many slayer statutes preclude one joint tenant convicted of the "willful killing" of a co-tenant from benefiting from the right of survivorship, but whether the provision applies to a joint tenant pleading guilty to manslaughter is left for judicial resolution. n384

Care must be taken not to let the technical form of the estate impede the application of the chosen rule. Legislation in one state, Alabama, explicitly applies as well to tenancies in common for life with cross-contingent remainders in fee to the survivor. n385 In Rhode Island the complex problem of a joint tenancy of three or more persons including a slayer and victim is addressed. n386

A curious variation on the usual slayer problem is presented by a recent New York case. n387 A slayer, who was not a concurrent owner with the victim, was shot and killed by the police in the course of their investigation. In a wrongful death action against the slayer's estate, the victim's estate was awarded damages. The slayer's estate was insolvent, but the slayer had been a joint tenant with others who benefited from the right of survivorship. On petition of the victim's estate, the court set aside the survivorship as a fraudulent conveyance, in effect severing the joint tenancy and making the slayer's share available for attachment.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: termin! w/50 (joint w/3 tenan!) & slayer or murder! or kill

In case of the insanity of a joint tenant, a guardian may be appointed to manage the incompetent's affairs. There is no transfer of legal title in this situation, so no severance should be recognized. n388 The remaining joint tenant or tenants are not disadvantaged by the appointment of the guardian since they remain free to sever the joint tenancy at will.

One final problem concerns the simultaneous death of joint tenants. The right of survivorship assumes the possibility of determining the order of death. If that is impossible, there is no choice but to treat the joint tenancy as terminated and to dispose of the estate as if it had been a tenancy in common; that is, providing a pro rata share to each joint tenant's heirs or devisees. The Uniform Simultaneous Death Act as adopted in many states enforces this result by raising a presumption of simultaneous death unless there is "sufficient evidence" to the contrary. n389 In 1991 the Uniform Simultaneous Death Act was revised to require survivorship by at least 120 hours in order to prevent the diversion of property based only on a brief and perhaps technical survivorship. n390

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 300. For the doctrine of the four unities, see § 31.06(b), supra.

(n2)Footnote 301. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 185 (1766).

(n3)Footnote 302. The case of a mortgage or lease by all joint tenants should be distinguished from the case of a mortgage or lease executed by only one of the joint tenants, examined in the next subsection.

(n4)Footnote 303. Downing v. Downing, 606 A.2d 208 (Md. 1992) (mortgage by all joint tenants). See also Conn. Gen. Stat. § 47-14e.

(n5)Footnote 304. Cf. S.C. Code Ann. § 27-7-40 (conveyance by all joint tenants to themselves "as tenants in common" converts the joint tenancy into a tenancy in common).

(n6)Footnote 305. In the Matter of Pollard, 678 N.Y.S.2d 126 (1998).

(n7)Footnote 306. In re Estate of King, 572 S.W.2d 200 (Mo. Ct. App. 1978); Hughes v. Hughes, 356 N.E.2d 225 (Ind. App. 1976); Illinois Pub. Aid Comm'n v. Stille, 153 N.E.2d 59 (Ill. 1958), noted in 1958 U. Ill. L.F. 658.

(n8)Footnote 307. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.21(a) (if co-vendors held as joint tenants, purchase price is payable to them as joint tenants). See also id. § 700.19(3) (if co-vendors held as joint tenants and purchase money mortgage names them as mortgagees, they take mortgage as joint tenants, unless intention to take mortgage as tenants in common is expressed).

(n9)Footnote 308. Weise v. Kizer, 435 So. 2d 381 (Fla. App. 1983); Wonka v. Cari, 637 N.W.2d 92 (Wis. 2001); Watson v. Watson, 126 N.E.2d 220 (Ill. 1955).

(n10)Footnote 309. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-26-4. Contra: In re Baker's Estate, 78 N.W.2d 863 (Iowa 1956), noted in 42 Iowa L. Rev. 646 (1957), 55 Mich. L. Rev. 1194 (1957), 33 N.D. L. Rev. 246 (1957), 32 Tul. L. Rev. 153 (1957); Buford v. Dahlke, 62 N.W.2d 252 (Neb. 1954), noted in 41 Cornell L.Q. 154 (1955), 34 Neb. L. Rev. 501 (1955). But see Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2.109 (no contract executed by all joint tenants severs the joint tenancy unless the intention to sever expressly appears in the instrument).

For the special problems raised when the land to be conveyed is registered under the Torrens Act, see Naiburg v. Hendriksen, 19 N.E.2d 348 (Ill. 1939), noted in 17 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. 393 (1939).

(n11)Footnote 310. Estate of Phillips v. Nyhus, 874 P.2d 154 (Wash. 1994).

(n12)Footnote 311. See William E. Burby, Handbook of the Law of Real Property 220 (3d ed. 1965) ("A joint tenancy may be terminated by mutual agreement of the owners. The agreement need not be in writing and may be express or implied."). The most common examples found in the cases involve divorced joint tenants who fail to destroy any of the unities. See § 31.08(c), infra.

(n13)Footnote 312. The terminating act must be done during life; because of the right of survivorship, one joint tenant cannot sever the joint tenancy posthumously, as by testamentary provision. The rule dates to a time before Lord Coke, who stated "the rule of law" to be "jus accrescendi praefertur ultimae voluntati" (the right of survivorship is preferred to the last will). Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 287, p. 185b (1628). In the Matter of the Estate of Huff, 676 So. 2d 264 (Miss. 1996); Colo. Rev. Stat. § 15-15-102 (interest held in joint tenancy is not devisable). See generally R.H. Helmholz, Realism and Formalism in the Severance of Joint Tenancies, 77 Neb. L. Rev. 1 (1998).

If state law allows deeds effective on death, such deeds should not operate to sever joint tenancies unless the other joint tenant or tenants agree. See 2003 Nev. Stat. 409.

An exception to the rule that a joint tenancy may not be severed posthumously arises when a surviving spouse's elective share cannot be satisfied out of probate assets; if the deceased spouse had made transfers into joint tenancies during life, the joint tenancies can be reached to satisfy the surviving spouse's elective share to the extent of the deceased spouse's contribution. N.Y. Est., Powers & Trusts Law § 5-1.1-A; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 30-3.2(d)(4); Estate of Antonopoulos, 993 P.2d 637 (Kan. 1999) (citing Kan. Stat. Ann. § 59-6a209(a)). The same result is indicated by the Uniform Probate Code § 2-205 (1990, as amended in 1993).

Another exception, more apparent than real, arises when a will expressly requires a devisee to make an election whether to retain property acquired by right of survivorship or take a benefit offered by the will; severance, if it occurs, is actually the result of the survivor's choice. Estate of Williamson v. Williamson, 657 N.E.2d 651 (Ill. App. 1995) (intention to put the survivor to an election must be clearly expressed). See also In re Estate of Vittorio, Sr., 546 N.W.2d 751 (Minn. App. 1996) (a will may in an appropriate case impose enforceable duties on the surviving joint tenant). Merely consenting to the probate of a will purporting to transfer a portion of real estate held in joint tenancy is not an election nor does it estop the surviving joint tenant from asserting the right of survivorship. Harbin v. Harbin, 582

S.E.2d 131 (Ct. App. Ga. 2003).

(n14)Footnote 313. The power of one joint tenant to convey a share in the estate does not extend to a conveyance by metes and bounds, because the conveyance by one joint tenant cannot effect a partition in kind. Such a conveyance may, however, be effective to transfer an undivided interest, and its indication of the location of the share on the ground may be taken into account in a subsequent judicial partition. Johnson v. MacIntyre, 740 A.2d 599 (Md. App. 1999).

One of two joint tenants obviously cannot convey the entire estate. Where one joint tenant nonetheless contracts to convey the joint estate, although specific performance is not possible, the contracting joint tenant will be liable in damages for breach of contract. Warner v. Denis, 933 P.2d 1372 (Haw. App. 1997).

(n15)Footnote 314. Klouda v. Pechousek, 110 N.E.2d 258 (Ill. 1953). Cf. Hammond v. McArthur, 183 P.2d 1 (Cal. 1947) (one of two joint tenants conveyed life estate to the other), noted in 36 Cal. L. Rev. 133 (1948), 21 S. Cal. L. Rev. 295 (1948).

(n16)Footnote 315. A less extreme instance of the same phenomenon is the reservation of an easement in the conveyance of a fee simple. Since the grantor had no easement in the granted property prior to the conveyance, the reservation creates the interest.

(n17)Footnote 316. Boissonnault v. Savage, 625 A.2d 454 (N.H. 1993) (severance by partition sale; one joint tenant's expectation of owning entire property on death of other joint tenant not sufficient to defeat severance); Crowther v. Mower, 876 P.2d 876 (Utah App. 1994) (severance by unrecorded quitclaim deed by one joint tenant; other joint tenant not good faith purchaser for purpose of recording statute).

(n18)Footnote 317. See Heintz v. Hudkins, 824 S.W.2d 139 (Mo. App. 1992) (in partition proceeding brought by one joint tenant, interlocutory order of sale did not sever joint tenancy); In re Marriage of Hilke, 841 P.2d 891 (Cal. 1992) (in divorce proceeding, dissolution of marriage and reservation of jurisdiction over property issues did not sever joint tenancy).

(n19)Footnote 318. Boissonnault v. Savage, 625 A.2d 454 (N.H. 1993) (severance by partition sale; one joint tenant's expectation of owning entire property on death of other joint tenant not sufficient to defeat severance); Crowther v. Mower, 876 P.2d 876 (Utah App. 1994) (severance by unrecorded quitclaim deed by one joint tenant; other joint tenant not good faith purchaser for purpose of recording statute).

(n20)Footnote 319. See, e.g., S.C. Code Ann. § 27-7-40 (joint tenancy may not be conveyed without all joint tenants joining in the conveyance); Nev. Const. Art. 4, § 30 (homestead property held in joint tenancy may not be alienated without the joint consent of husband and wife).

(n21)Footnote 320. Cal. Civ. Code § 683.2 (severing instrument must be recorded before the severing joint tenant dies or must be notarized less than three days before severing joint tenant dies and recorded less than seven days after severing joint tenant dies; exception for conveyances from one joint tenant to another).

(n22)Footnote 321. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 179 (1766).

(n23)Footnote 322. At least one state, North Carolina, has codified the common law rule:

Upon conveyance to a third party by less than all of three or more joint tenants holding property in joint tenancy with right of survivorship, a tenancy in common is created among the third party and the remaining joint tenants, who remain joint tenants with right of survivorship as between themselves. Upon conveyance to a third party by one of two joint tenants holding property in joint tenancy with right of survivorship, a tenancy in common is created between the third party and the remaining joint tenant.

N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2. The use of the words "third party" in the first quoted sentence is somewhat misleading: the person referred to is the grantee of the conveying joint tenant, whoever that may be, even another one of the joint tenants.

(n24)Footnote 323. Jackson v. O'Connell, 177 N.E.2d 194 (Ill. 1961) (citing Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 312, p. 196a (1628)). One commentator has observed that many modern cases on common law severance of joint tenancies are "embellished with quotations from Coke upon Littleton" and shrewdly attributes this to the fact that "where logical deduction is impossible, it is tempting instead to appeal to authority." Barry C. Crown, Partial Alienation by One Co-Owner of Land, 2000 Singapore Journal of Legal Studies 92.

(n25)Footnote 324. Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 1, p. 9b (1628); 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law 7 (12th ed. by O.W. Holmes, 1873).

(n26)Footnote 325. Mathis v. Hammond, 486 S.E.2d 356 (Ga. 1997).

(n27)Footnote 326. Clark v. Carter, 70 Cal. Rptr. 923 (1968); Canterbury v. Kovacich, 74 P.3d 457 (Colo. App. 2003).

(n28)Footnote 327. Riddle v. Harmon, 162 Cal. Rptr. 530 (1980); In re Estate of Carpenter, 189 Cal. Rptr. 651 (1983). For a recent case illustrating the use of a "straw party" conveyance by one joint tenant to convert the joint tenancy into a tenancy in common, see Estate of Hoffman, 653 N.W.2d 94 (S.D. 2002).

(n29)Footnote 328. For a list of such statutes, see § 31.06(c), supra. See Minonk State Bank v. Grassman, 447 N.E.2d 822 (Ill. 1983). On this case, see Jeffrey Jackson, Voluntary Termination of Joint Tenancies: Illinois Eliminates the Straw Man, 17 John Marshall L. Rev. 765 (1984). See also Re v. Re, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 (1995) (two of three joint tenants created joint tenancy between themselves -- and tenancy in common with third joint tenant -- by self conveyance); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-118(4) (conveyance by one joint tenant to himself with "the intention to effect a severance of the joint tenancy" has that effect). Contra: In re Lambert, 34 B.R. 41 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983). See generally Peter Butt, Severance of Joint Tenancy by Unilateral Declaration: New Proposals in New South Wales, 69 Australian L.J. 570 (1995).

A transfer by one joint tenant from himself to himself as trustee of his revocable trust severs the joint tenancy. Smolen v. Smolen, 956 P.2d 128 (Nev. 1998).

Severance by self-conveyance does not violate an injunction against transfer or disposition pending a dissolution of marriage. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 (Cal. App. 1999). Cf. Estate of Hoffman, 653 N.W.2d 94 (S.D. 2002) (holding that severance of joint tenancy and its conversion into a tenancy in common -- in this case by use of a "straw party" conveyance -- does not violate a restraining order against transfers).

(n30)Footnote 329. See Samuel M. Fetters, An Invitation to Commit Fraud: Secret Destruction of Joint Tenant Survivorship Rights, 55 Fordham L. Rev. 173 (1986).

(n31)Footnote 330. California. Cal. Civ. Code § 683ff. See also Patience v. Snyder, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 (2000) (holding that purpose of statute is prevent fraud or secret suppression of the severance, not to provide record notice to purchasers concerning the state of the title).

Kentucky. KY. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.130 (not applicable to property that constitutes principal residence of married couple).

Utah. In re Estate of Knickerbocker, 912 P.2d 969 (Utah 1996) (requiring recordation for validity of self-conveyance, in order to give other joint tenant or tenants an opportunity to discover the severance), noted in 1997 Utah L. Rev. 226.

In 2002 Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5 was amended to make clear that the interest of one joint tenant in the joint tenancy is severed and thereafter held in tenancy in common when one joint tenant makes a "bona fide" self-conveyance.

(n32)Footnote 331. Tenhet v. Boswell, 554 P.2d 330, 334-35 (Cal. 1976) (Mosk, J.). The question is as old as Littleton and Coke. See Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 302, p. 191b.

(n33)Footnote 332. 2 American Law of Property 10 at n.10 (A. James Casner ed. 1952).

(n34)Footnote 333. Swartzbaugh v. Sampson, 54 P.2d 73 (Cal. 1936), noted in 25 Cal. L. Rev. 202 (1937); William E. Burby, Handbook of the Law of Real Property 221 (3d ed. 1965).

(n35)Footnote 334. Tenhet v. Boswell, 554 P.2d 330 (Cal. 1976), noted in 66 Cal. L. Rev. 69 (1978). The surviving joint tenant who did not sign the lease may, of course, have acted in such a way during its existence as to have ratified the lease or at least be estopped to reject it. Lindseth v. Huffman, No. D038138, 2002 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 6003 (Cal. App. 2002) (finding no estoppel in the facts of that case).

(n36)Footnote 335. Tindall v. Yeats, 64 N.E.2d 903 (Ill. 1946). As leases come to be treated "like any other contract," this analogy should become ever more obvious.

(n37)Footnote 336. Bangen v. Bartelson, 553 N.W.2d 754 (N.D. 1996) ("when one joint tenant leases her own interest in the common property to another without the consent of the other joint tenant, the lessee succeeds to the rights of the lessor, and is entitled to enjoy the possession of the property with the other joint tenant just as fully as the lessor would but for the lease").

(n38)Footnote 337. Comment, Protecting a Mortgagee's Interest Against a Surviving Joint Tenant, 11 Stan. L. Rev. 574, 578 n. 30 (1959) ("Current policy among commercial lenders in California is to refuse loans on the security of a mortgage by one joint tenant, probably because title companies refuse to insure them due to the lack of positive law in the area.").

For an illustration of the negligence referred to the text, see Stewart v. AmSouth Mortgage Co., 679 So. 2d 247, 248 (Ala. App.) rev'd, 679 So. 2d 251 (Ala. 1996). At trial, the AmSouth lawyer testified that, at the time of closing, AmSouth had not furnished him with the deed and he was not aware that the mother and the daughter owned the property as joint tenants. He further explained:

> This was during what we call the glut of refinancing. We were doing forty of these in a given day, literally, and we were sending abstracts out to abstract companies. Abstract companies were behind. I did know from AmSouth that the deed was to be conveyed from [the mother] to her daughter... . So when this particular loan came up on that given day the abstract had not come back to me. I called the abstract [company] and got what I commonly call "a verbal," which is done by one of my real estate secretaries. They came back and said ... "there are no liens or judgments on the property." Unfortunately, I presumed the deed had been transferred and strictly into [the daughter's] name and not knowing that we did not request that [the mother] sign the mortgage. If I had seen the abstract and if I had seen the deed then I would have had to insist [the mother] sign the mortgage... .

(n39)Footnote 338. York v. Stone, 1 Salk. 158, 91 Eng. Rep. 146 (Ch. 1709); Simpson's Lessee v. Ammons, 1 Bin. Pa. 175 (1806); Moliere's Lessee v. Noe, 4 U.S. 450 (Pa. 1806). Some modern cases continue to adhere to the common law. E.g., Stewart v. AmSouth Mortgage Co., 679 So. 2d 247, 248 (Ala. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 679 So. 2d 251 (Ala. 1996); Schaefer v. Peoples Heritage Sav. Bank, 669 A.2d 185 (Me. 1995) (but noting that if mortgage had been discharged rather than foreclosed, mortgagor would have remained a joint tenant).

(n40)Footnote 339. People v. Nogarr, 330 P.2d 858 (Cal. 1958), noted in 11 Stan. L. Rev. 574 (1959), 47 Ky. L.J.

565 (1959); Harms v. Sprague, 456 N.E.2d 976 (Ill. App. 1983) ("a mortgage creates only a lien and does not pass or interfere with the mortgaging joint tenant's title"); Townsend v. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corp, 657 N.W.2d 741 (Mich. App. 2002) (mortgage given by one joint tenant does not survive death of mortgagor even when proceeds of mortgage were used to purchase the property). See also Brant v. Hargrove, 632 P.2d 978 (Ariz. App. 1981) (finding no severance when husband who held with his wife as joint tenants executed a deed of trust signing for himself and forging his wife's signature). Contra: General Credit Co. v. Cleck, 609 A.2d 553 (Pa. 1992) (despite jurisdiction's acceptance of "lien theory" of mortgages, mortgage given by one joint tenant held to sever joint tenancy).

(n41)Footnote 340. It has been argued that a mortgage by one joint tenant severs the estate because it destroys the unity of interest. 2 American Law of Property 10 at n.13 (A. James Casner ed. 1952). Yet this view seems inconsistent with the view that an unforeclosed creditor's lien does not destroy the unity of interest.

(n42)Footnote 341. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.24.

(n43)Footnote 342. See Lewis M. Simes, Handbook of the Law of Future Interests § 117, p. 249 (2d ed. 1966).

(n44)Footnote 343. See, e.g., Michalski v. Michalski, 142 A.2d 645 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1958).

(n45)Footnote 344. See 6 American Law of Property § 26.76, p. 522 (A. James Casner ed. 1952).

(n46)Footnote 345. O'Hagan v. United States, 86 F.3d 776 (8th Cir. 1996) (applying Minnesota law) (joint tenant relied on continued existence of joint tenancy by signing mortgage note). But see Estate of Gulledge, 673 A.2d 1278 (D.C. App. 1996) (payment of consideration for undivided one-half interest in joint tenancy did not create protected expectation of survivorship sufficient to defeat severance).

(n47)Footnote 346. On partition, see Chapter 38, infra.

(n48)Footnote 347. Brown v. Brown, 706 N.E.2d 872 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. 1998).

(n49)Footnote 348. E.g., N.Y. Est., Powers & Trusts Law § 5-1.1-A; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 30-3.2. See also Uniform Probate Code § 2-205(1).

(n50)Footnote 349. In re Estate of Antonopoulos, 993 P.2d 637 (Kan. 1999).

(n51)Footnote 350. Uniform Probate Code § 2-801(b)(3):

A surviving joint tenant [or tenant by the entireties] may disclaim as a separate interest any property or interest therein devolving to him [or her] by right of survivorship. A surviving joint tenant [or tenant by the entireties] may disclaim the entire interest in any property or interest therein that is the subject of a joint tenancy [or tenancy by the entireties] devolving to him [or her], if the joint tenancy [or tenancy by the entireties] was created by act of a deceased joint tenant [or tenant by the entireties], the survivor did not join in creating the joint tenancy [or tenancy by the entireties], and has not accepted a benefit under it.

Without a power to disclaim, the only way to avoid the automatic right of survivorship was to sever prior to death, a practice once commonly recommended by estate planners. See Severing Joint Property Interests, 16 Real Property, Probate, and Trust Law J. 435 (1981) (Report of the Committee on Estate Planning and Drafting: Inter Vivos Transfers and Property Ownership).

(n52)Footnote 351. Boucher v. Johnson, 373 A.2d 349 (N.H. 1977). See also In re Estate of Lamson, 662 A.2d 287 (N.H. 1995) (executor of estate of survivor may renounce on behalf of estate).

(n53)Footnote 352. See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat. § 45a-583(f):

The disclaimer of an interest in real property by a joint tenant following the death of another joint tenant shall have the same effect as if (1) before dying, the deceased joint tenant had severed his interest by a conveyance to, and receipt of, reconveyance from, a stranger, (2) such severed interest of the deceased joint tenant, upon his death, had passed in equal shares to any nondisclaiming joint tenant or joint tenants, and (3) if there were no nondisclaiming joint tenants, as if such interest had passed as part of estate of the deceased joint tenant.

See also Wis. Stat. Ann. § 701.27 (permitting disclaimer by surviving joint tenants); MD. Ann. Code, Est. & Trust § 9.201 (same).

(n54)Footnote 353. UPC art. 2, pt. 11, replacing § 2-801.

(n55)Footnote 354. For a critical analysis of the act, see Adam J. Hirsch, Revisions in Need of Revising: The Uniform Disclaimer of Property Interests Act, 29 Fla. St. U. L. Rev. 109 (2001). See also the candid discussion by the reporter for the UDOPIA, William P. LaPiana, Some Property Law Issues in the Law of Disclaimers, 38 Real Property, Probate & Trust L. J. 207 (2003).

(n56)Footnote 355. Uniform Disclaimer of Property Interests Act § 7(a).

(n57)Footnote 356. As a legal matter, the right of survivorship in joint tenancy is clear enough; as a practical matter, it may require time and money to establish title in the survivor to the satisfaction of title examiners. A few states have adopted statutes aimed at streamlining the process. See, e.g., Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 58, § 912, criticized in A. F. Ringold, Comment, Concurrent Estates: A Job Not Well Done -- Oklahoma's New Joint Tenancy Termination Statute, 29 Okla. L. Rev. 121 (1976). See also Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5.1 (documents evidencing the termination of joint tenancies may not be recorded unless they include an affidavit with the legal description of the property, a description of the interest to be terminated, indexing identification of the instrument by which the interest was created, and a copy of any relevant death certificate).

(n58)Footnote 357. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 186 (1766).

(n59)Footnote 358. In at least one state, Illinois, this result is required by statute. 765 ILCS 1005/2 (in case of condemnation of property held in joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety proceeds in the hands of the County Treasurer are subject to survivorship, but any tenant may claim a share without consent of other and thereby terminate the right of survivorship).

(n60)Footnote 359. Boissonnault v. Savage, 625 A.2d 454 (N.H. 1993). Under the Bankruptcy Act the trustee in bankruptcy is empowered under certain circumstances to sell the interests of both debtor and non-debtor joint tenant or tenants, preserving to the non-debtor only the appropriate share of the sale proceeds. Bankruptcy Code § 363(h) & (j). See § 31.07(e), supra. A similar power exists to collect delinquent federal income taxes. I.R.C. § 7403.

(n61)Footnote 360. Musa v. Segelke & Kohlhaus, 272 N.W. 657 (Wis. 1937); Eder v. Rothamel, 95 A.2d 860 (Md. 1953), noted in 14 Md. L. Rev. 151 (1954); Grothe v. Cortlandt Corp., 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 (Cal. App. 1992) (recorded levy that has not yet resulted in execution sale did not sever joint tenancy). See also Perrot v. Frankie, 605 So. 2d 118 (Fla. App. 1992) (by statute, judgment against one joint tenant does not become effective lien on property until recorded); Knibb v. Security Ins. Co., 399 A.2d 1214 (R.I. 1979) (levy of execution is a mere lien which does not sever a joint tenancy until the judicial sale).

(n62)Footnote 361. Jackson v. Lacey, 97 N.E.2d 839 (Ill. 1951), noted in 30 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. 189 (1952).

(n63)Footnote 362. Porter v. Porter, 472 So. 2d 630 (Ala. 1985).

(n64)Footnote 363. See § 33.08(d), infra.

(n65)Footnote 364. Berry v. Berry, 658 A.2d 1097, 1099 (Me. 1995). Another court has observed that "[i]t is generally improper to continue a joint or common tenancy between the parties, as contrary to the public policy of discouraging continued litigation and ongoing financial interaction between divorced spouses." In re Marriage of Simon, 856 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1993). The courts are not unanimous on the point. See Hodson v. Keiser, 81 S.W.3d 363 (Tex. App. 2002) ("[I]t is not uncommon for spouses to retain a joint tenancy in the marital homestead until the children reach majority... . This compromise may be necessary when there are insufficient assets to permit offsetting property awards to the spouses... . Where minor children are involved, it may be preferable for both spouses to maintain an interest in the property so that the children may continue to live in the home.").

(n66)Footnote 365. Alaska Stat. § 13.12.804.

(n67)Footnote 366. Ark. Code § 9-12-317.

(n68)Footnote 367. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14g.

(n69)Footnote 368. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 552.102.

(n70)Footnote 369. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20(C)(5).

(n71)Footnote 370. S.C. Code Ann. § 27-7-40.

(n72)Footnote 371. Va. Code Ann. § 20-111.

(n73)Footnote 372. Uniform Probate Code § 2-804(b), 8 U.L.A. 184 (Supp. 1994). For states adopting the Uniform Probate Code section, see Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 14-2804(A)(2); Colo. Rev. Stat. § 15-11-804(2)(b); Haw Rev. Stat. § 506:2-804(b)(2); Mont Code Ann. § 72-2-804(2)(b); N.M. Stat. Ann. § 42-2-804(B)(2); N.D. Cent. Code § 30.1-10-04(2)(b); S.D. Codified Laws § 29A-2-804(b)(2).

(n74)Footnote 373. Mann v. Bradley, 535 P.2d 213 (Colo. 1975); Wardlow v. Pozzi, 338 P.2d 564 (Cal. 1959); Sondin v. Bernstein, 467 N.E.2d 926 (Ill. App. 1984); Watford v. Hale, 410 So. 2d 885 (Ala. 1982); In the Matter of Estate of Bates, 492 N.W.2d 704 (Iowa App. 1992); Zulk v. Zulk, 502 N.W.2d 116 (S.D. 1993); Waxler v. Dalstead, 529 N.W.2d 176 (N.D. 1995); United States v. Gibbons, 71 F.3d 1496 (10th Cir. 1995) (applying Colorado law). See Estate of Croteau v. Croteau, 722 A.2d 464 (N.H. 1998) (Broderick, J. concurring) (advocating recognition of a presumption that divorce severs a joint tenancy held by husband and wife unless there is "a clear expression" of a contrary intention).

In a bizarre twist on the usual situation, in which a court finds a presumed intention to sever to save the parties the inconveniences of a continued joint tenancy after divorce, a Virginia court held that a statute converting joint tenancies into tenancies in common when the owners divorce operated to defeat the intention of a divorcing couple who converted their tenancy by the entirety into a joint tenancy apparently with the intention of preserving the right of survivorship after divorce. McDaniel v. May, 43 Va. Cir. 589 (1997) (construing Va. Code Ann. § 20-111).

(n75)Footnote 374. In re Tibbetts, 186 B.R. 140 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. 1995) (divorce decree converted tenancy in common for joint lives with alternative contingent remainders into joint tenancy).

(n76)Footnote 375. Estate of Castiglioni, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288, 289 n.2 (Cal. App. 1995).

(n77)Footnote 376. Re Estate of Larendon, 266 A.2d 763, 42 A.L.R.3 D 1107 (Pa. 1970), noted in 9 Duquesne L. Rev. 297 (1970); Anderson v. Grasberg, 78 N.W.2d 450 (Minn. 1956), noted in 3 How. L.J. 163 (1957), 33 N.D. L. Rev. 118 (1957), 43 Va. L. Rev. 265 (1957); Bradley v. Fox, 129 N.E.2d 699 (Ill. 1955), noted in 5 De Paul L. Rev. 316 (1956), 31 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 963 (1956), 58 W. Va. L. Rev. 422 (1956), 9 Vand. L. Rev. 892 (1956), 1 Vill. L. Rev. 358 (1956), 34 Chi.-Kent. L. Rev. 318 (1956); In re King's Estate, 52 N.W.2d 885 (Wis. 1952), noted in 5 ala. L. Rev. 152 (1952), 2 De Paul L. Rev. 101 (1952), 27 Tul. L. Rev. 131 (1952), 6 Okla. L. Rev. 228 (1953), 1953 Wis. L. Rev. 567;

Welsh v. James, 95 N.E.2d 872 (Ill. 1950), noted in 29 Chi.-Kent. L. Rev. 260 (1951), 20 Fordham L. Rev. 211 (1951), 1951 U. Ill. L.F. 172, 1951 Wash. U. L.Q. 582; Ponke v. Ponke, 564 N.W.2d 101 (Mich. App. 1997); Gallimore v. Washington, 666 A.2d 1200 (D.C. App. 1995) (murder of one joint tenant by another severs joint tenancy); Lakatos v. Billotti, 509 S.E.2d 594 (W. Va. 1998) (interpreting slayer statute to deprive murdering joint tenant of all interest in property).

(n78)Footnote 377. Whitfield v. Flaherty, 228 Cal. App. 2d 753 (1964). A somewhat similar list appears in Duncan v. Vassaur, 550 P.2d 929, 930-31 (Okla. 1976).

(n79)Footnote 378. Uniform Probate Code § 2-803:

(b) Any joint tenant who feloniously and intentionally kills another joint tenant thereby effects a severance of the interest of the decedent so that the share of the decedent passes as his property and the killer has no rights by survivorship. This provision applies to joint tenancies [and tenancies by the entirety] in real and personal property, joint and multiple-party accounts in banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions and other institutions, and any other form of co-ownership with survivorship incidents.

...

(d) Any other acquisition of property or interest by the killer shall be treated in accordance with the principles of this section.

(e) A final judgment of conviction of felonious and intentional killing is conclusive for purposes of this section. In the absence of a conviction of felonious and intentional killing the Court may determine by a preponderance of evidence whether the killing was felonious and intentional for purposes of this section.

(f) This section does not affect the rights of any person who, before rights under this section have been adjudicated, purchases from the killer for value and without notice property which the killer would have acquired except for this section, but the killer is liable for the amount of the proceeds or the value of the property... .

8 U.L.A. 172 (1983). In 1990 a revised Uniform Probate Code was promulgated. Section 2-803 was substantially revised, although the general effect of the new version remains the same. The pre-1990 version is printed here because of the large number of states whose legislation it influenced.

(n80)Footnote 379. As a comment to the Uniform Probate Code § 2-803 makes clear, guilt or innocence in the sense of criminal law is not the issue:

While conviction in the criminal prosecution under this section is treated as conclusive on the matter of succession to the murdered person's property, acquittal does not have the same consequences. This is because different considerations as well as a different burden of proof enter into the finding of guilty in the criminal prosecution. Hence it is possible that the defendant on a murder charge may be found not guilty and acquitted, but if the same person claims as an heir or devisee of the decedent, he may in the probate court be found to have feloniously and intentionally killed the decedent and thus be barred under this section from sharing in the estate... . In many of the cases arising under this section there may be no criminal prosecution because the murderer has committed suicide.

8 U.L.A. 173 (1983).

(n81)Footnote 380. For a sensitive discussion of the murder-suicide problem, see Estate of Castiglioni, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288, 295-96 (1995), noted in 33 Idaho L. Rev. 53 (1997). See also Williams v. Thoman, 649 N.W.2d 1 (Iowa 2002) (although local law provides that slaying joint tenant loses the right of survivorship, in a case of murder-suicide held that the slaying severed the joint tenancy, allowing the slayer's share to pass through the slayer's estate).

In some cases involving murder-suicide, the Simultaneous Death Act may also be relevant. See the discussion later in this subsection. See also In re Estate of Miller, 840 So.2d 703 (Miss. 2003).

(n82)Footnote 381. See § 31.06(a) supra.

(n83)Footnote 382. Estate of Castiglioni, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (1995) (failure to require tracing would result in "placing in a better financial condition a spouse who terminates the marriage by murder than one who terminates the marriage by the legal process of dissolution of marriage"); Estate of Garland, 928 P.2d 928 (Mont. 1996).

(n84)Footnote 383. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 59-513.

(n85)Footnote 384. See Hood v. Vandevender, 661 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 1996) (holding that slayer statute does not apply to manslaughter). Cf. In re Estate of Bartolovitch, 616 A.2d 1043 (Pa. 1992) (one spouse's conviction of voluntary manslaughter severs tenancy by the entirety).

(n86)Footnote 385. Ala. Code § 43-8-253(b).

(n87)Footnote 386. R.I. Gen. Laws § 33-1-1-6(b): victim's estate receives any enrichment that would have accrued to slayer as result of victim's death; if innocent tenant survives slayer, he or she receives benefit from victim's estate; if slayer survives all innocent tenants, victim's estate gets one-half at once and other half at slayer's death.

(n88)Footnote 387. Gallagher v. Kirschner, 632 N.Y.S.2d 857 (App. Div. 1995).

(n89)Footnote 388. Moore v. Self, 473 S.E.2d 507 (Ga. 1996). See also Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74 (incompetency does not terminate joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety).

(n90)Footnote 389. Uniform Simultaneous Death Act § 24-3:

(a) Where there is no sufficient evidence that two joint tenants or tenants by the entirety have died otherwise than simultaneously, the property shall be distributed one half as if one had survived and one half as if the other had survived. If there are more than two joint tenants and all of them have so died, the property thus distributed shall be the proportion that one bears to the whole number of joint tenants.

(b) For the purpose of this section, the term "joint tenants" includes owners of property held under circumstances which entitled one or more to the whole of the property on the death of the other or others.

8A U.L.A. 164 (1985).

(n91)Footnote 390. 8B U.L.A. 257 (1993). Uniform Probate Code § 2-702(c) now also requires that "co-owners with the right of survivorship" survive for at least 120 hours. 8 U.L.A. 150 (Supp. 1994). Note that this provision, treating survivorship for no more than 120 hours as if the deaths were in fact simultaneous, causes the loss of the marital deduction in estate taxation.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.09

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.09 The Future of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

The law of joint tenancies is deeply rooted in Anglo-American legal history. That in itself would seem to secure it a continuing place in the American law of property, but unless it corresponds to some present and future human need, it will not flourish. The right of survivorship, which Sir William Blackstone called "the grand incident of joint estates," n391 seems perennially popular; it has certainly demonstrated its appeal by spreading to forms of personal property unknown in the Middle Ages, such as bank accounts and investment securities. The joint tenancy today is often a convenient alternative to a will.

Yet the right of survivorship is the weakness as well as the strength of the joint tenancy. Because of the injustice of unexpected rights of survivorship, some American states early eliminated it as an incident of joint tenancies, and many others created a statutory presumption against joint tenancies. Blackstone long ago conceded that "in general it is advantageous for the joint tenants to dissolve the jointure; since thereby the right of survivorship is taken away, and each may transmit his own part to his own heirs." n392 Misgivings about the right of survivorship may explain the joint tenant's anomalous power to alienate; they certainly explain some modern cases recognizing a severance in situations short of the destruction of one of the time-hallowed unities.

A joint tenant's power to sever the joint estate by a simple conveyance may defeat the expectations in another way: the other joint tenant or tenants may have expected to benefit on the death of the first to die. This has led some practitioners to counsel clients electing a joint tenancy to include an agreement against sale or partition, or to advise against the use of the traditional joint tenancy altogether in favor of a joint life estate with alternative contingent remainders or a trust with beneficial co-owners. The problem is acute in jurisdictions permitting severance by a self-conveyance, particularly by a self-conveyance undisclosed to the other joint tenant or tenants and perhaps even unrecorded and therefore undiscoverable. An unscrupulous joint tenant could use this power to preserve a share for heirs or devisees, while retaining the option to suppress the self-conveyance in case of the prior decease of the other joint tenant or tenants and gain the entire estate by right of survivorship. Courts and legislatures have begun to display some hostility to secret severance.

Perhaps the greatest threat to the traditional right of survivorship, however, is the slowly growing acceptance of the survivor's power to disclaim. The traditional theory that each joint tenant is seised of the whole and that, in consequence, the death of one joint tenant does not result in the conferral of any benefit on the survivor but only in the termination of the decedent's right may be yielding to an acceptance of the joint tenancy as simply a means of providing for succession at death, in other words, a "will substitute."

The erosion of the doctrine of the four unities in cases involving both the creation and the severance of joint tenancies has greatly reduced the technical distinction between this form of concurrent ownership and tenancies in common. The driving force here has been the increased emphasis on intention. Intention has always been important in the law, but heretofore it was as important that it be expressed in stereotyped legal forms. The law of joint tenancies is approaching, although it has not yet reached, the point at which two or more persons owning property together may hold in joint tenancy only if and so long as each intends to do so. When that day arrives, it will inevitably be marked by an even greater need for individual judicial determinations of the state of many titles. Then at last it might be possible to begin the search for manifestations of intention that will be universally accepted as legally binding.

One other source of pressure for further development of the law of joint tenancies may be noticed. In jurisdictions that have eliminated tenancies by the entirety (a form of concurrent ownership restricted to married persons), the choice of concurrent estates is limited to joint tenancies and tenancies in common; the same choice is available to all. In jurisdictions that still have tenancies by the entirety, on the contrary, the menu of choices is longer and includes one available only to co-owners married to one another. To the extent that renewed demand for joint tenancies in such jurisdictions comes from married persons seeking a form of concurrent ownership comparable to tenancies by the entirety, it may generate pressure to assimilate joint tenancies to tenancies by the entirety. To the extent unmarried persons seek whatever advantages inhere in the "marital estate," it may lead to pressure to admit all "couples" (however defined).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 391. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 183-84 (1766).

(n2)Footnote 392. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 187 (1766).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 31.10

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 31.10 Bibliography.

[Go To Supp]

Books

Blackstone, William. 2 Commentaries on the Laws of England, Ch. 12, "Of Estates in Severalty, Joint-Tenancy, Coparcenary, and Common." Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1766.

Burby, William E. Handbook of the Law of Real Property, Ch. 18, "Common Law Types of Concurrent Ownership." 3d ed. St. Paul: West Pub. Co., 1965.

Cunningham, Roger A., William B. Stoebuck and Dale A. Whitman. The Law of Property, Ch. 5, "Concurrent Ownership of Realty and Personalty". St. Paul: West Pub. Co., 1984.

Freeman, Abraham C. Cotenancy and Partition. 1874.

Moynihan, Cornelius J. Introduction to the Law of Real Property, Ch. 10, "Concurrent Ownership." 3d ed. St. Paul: West Pub. Co., 1988.

Niles, Russell D. and William F. Walsh. 2 American Law of Property, Part 6, "Concurrent Estates and Their Characteristics." Boston: Little Brown, 1952.

Osborne, Duncan. Asset Protection: Domestic and International Law and Tactics, Ch. 12. (1995).

Thomas, David. Powell on Real Property(R), Ch. 51, "Joint Tenancy" (Michael Allan Wolf ed., Matthew Bender).

Thompson, George W. Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property, Ch. 29, "Separate and Concurrent Ownership." Indianapolis: Bobbs Merrill, 1979.

Tiffany, Herbert Thorndike. The Law of Real Property, Ch. 9, "Co-ownership." Chicago: Callaghan & Co., 3d ed. 1939.

Articles

Aton, Wilbers. "Effect of Owner's Execution of Land Contract or Mortgage Upon a Joint Tenancy." Neb. L. Rev. Vol. 34 (1955) 297.

Berger, Lawrence. "An Analysis of the Economic Relations Between Cotenants." Ariz. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1979) 1015.

Brown, Londo H. "Some Aspects of Joint Ownership of Real Property in West Virginia." W. Va. L. Rev. Vol. 63 (1961) 207.

Conway, Heather "The Repeal of an Act for Jointenants 1542 and the Jurisdiction to Order Partition or Sale Under the Partition Acts 1868 and 1876," 19 Dublin U. L. J. Vol. 19 (1997) 1.

Cotter, Patrick W. "Observations on the Law of Joint Tenancy in Wisconsin." Marq. L. Rev. Vol. 39 (1955) 110, Marq. L. Rev. Vol. 40 (1956) 92.

"Creation and Termination of Joint Tenancies in Pennsylvania." Dickinson L. Rev. Vol. 80 (1975) 92.

"Creation of Joint Tenancies." Harv. L. Rev. Vol. 23 (1910) 214 (noting Goddard v. Lewis, 25 T.L.R. 813 (Eng. K.B.D. 1909)).

Crown, Barry C. "Partial Alienation by One Co-Owner of Land." Singapore Journal of Legal Studies (2000) 92.

"Disposition of Property Held in Joint Tenancy When One Cotenant Causes the Death of the Other." Minn. L. Rev. Vol. 41 (1957) 639.

Eckhardt, William L. "Property Law in Missouri -- Joint Tenancies and Tenancies by Entireties -- Direct Conveyances -- Express Limitations." Mo. L. Rev. Vol. 27 (1962) 65.

Effland, Richard W. "Rights of Creditors in Nonprobate Assets." Mo. L. Rev. Vol. 48 (1983) 431.

English, Joseph. "Concurrent Estates in Real Property." Catholic U. L. Rev. Vol. 11 (1962) 63 (1963).

"Estate Planning -- Joint Tenancy -- Illinois Destroys the Unity of Interest Requirement for Joint Tenancy." 1980 So. Ill. U.L.J. 355 (noting In re Estate of Wilson, 410 N.E.2d 23 (Ill. 1980)).

"Family Law -- Division of Property -- Separate Property Invested in a Joint Tenancy Residence Cannot Be Reimbursed, Unless the Spouses Had an Agreement or Understanding to That Effect." Whittier L. Rev. Vol. 3 (1981) 617 (noting In re Marriage of Lucas, 614 P.2d 285 (Cal. 1980)).

Fetters, Samuel M. "An Invitation to Commit Fraud: Secret Destruction of Joint Tenant Survivorship Rights." Fordham L. Rev. Vol. 55 (1986) 173.

Fisher, John W. "Joint Tenancy in West Virginia: A Progressive Court Looks at Traditional Property Rights." W. Va. L. Rev. Vol. 91 (1988) 267.

Fisher, John W. "Creditors of a Joint Tenant: Is There a Lien After Death?" W. Va. L. Rev. Vol.99 (1997) 637.

Fitzgibbons, Leo E. "Joint Tenancy in Iowa." Iowa L. Rev. Vol. 34 (1948) 41.

Goldberg, Charlotte K. "Estate of Castiglioni: Spousal Murder and the Clash of Joint Tenancy and Equity in California Community Property Law." Idaho L. Rev. Vol. 33 (1997) 513.

Ginsburg, Herman. "Effect of Owner's Execution of Land Contract or Mortgage Upon a Joint Tenancy." Neb. L. Rev. Vol. 34 (1955) 280.

Griffith, Yale B. "Joint Tenancy and Community Property." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1962) 30.

Helmholz, R.H. "Realism and Formalism in the Severance of Joint Tenancies," Neb. L.Rev. Vol. 77 (1998) 1.

Hines, William N. "Real Property, Joint Tenancies: Law, Fact, and Fancy." Iowa L. Rev. Vol. 51 (1966) 582.

Hirsch, Adam J. "Revisions in Need of Revising: The Uniform Disclaimer of Property Interests Act." 29 Fla. St. U. L. Rev. 109 (2001).

Holdernes, Clifford G. "Joint Ownership and Alienability." Int'l Rev. L. & Econ. Vol. 23 (2003) 75.

Jackson, Jeffrey L. "Voluntary Termination of Joint Tenancies: Illinois Eliminates the Strawman." John Marshall L. Rev. Vol. 17 (1984) 765.

"Joint Tenancy in New Mexico." Rocky Mt. L. Rev. Vol. 27 (1955) 210.

"Joint Tenancy in Pennsylvania." Temp. L. Q. Vol. 19 (1946) 503.

"Joint Tenancy in Texas." Baylor L. Rev. Vol. 9 (1957) 118.

"Joint Tenancy in California Revisited: A Doctrine of Partial Severance." Cal. L. Rev. Vol. 61 (1973) 231.

"Joint Tenancy -- Severance -- Effect of Non-Acceptance of Deed Before Death of Grantor." Harv. L. Rev. Vol. 35 (1921) 89 (noting Green v. Skinner, 197 P. 60 (Cal. 1921)).

LaPiana, William P. "Some Property Law Issues in the Law of Disclaimers." Vol. 38 (2003) Real Property, Probate & Trust L. J. 207.

"Legal Consequences of the Severance of a Joint Tenancy." Iowa L. Rev. Vol. 32 (1947) 539.

"Liability of Surviving Joint Tenant for Debts of Deceased Joint Owner: A Review of Section 30-624, Nebraska Revised Statutes." Neb. L. Rev. Vol. 40 (1960) 153.

Mamer, Stuart M. "Legal Consequences of Joint Ownership." 1959 U. Ill. L. F. 944.

Mann, John. "Joint Tenancies Today." 1956 U. Ill. L. F. 48.

Mattis, Taylor. "Joint Tenancy: Notice of Severance; Mortgages and Survivorship." N. Ill. U.L. Rev. Vol. 7 (1986) 41.

Mattis, Taylor. "Severance of Joint Tenancies by Mortgages: A Contextual Approach." S. Ill. U.L. J. (1977) 27.

Merricks, Robert L. "Joint Estates in Real Property in West Virginia." W. Va. L. Rev. Vol. 61 (1959) 101.

Moss C. Malcolm and Walter W. Siebert "Classification and Creation of Joint Interests." 1959 U. Ill. L. F. 883.

"Mortgage of Property Held in Joint Tenancy." Iowa L. Rev. Vol. 41 (1956) 425.

Murphy, W. Tayloe, Jr. "Cotenancies: A Critique for Creditors." Va. L. Rev. Vol. 48 (1962) 405.

O'Connell, Kenneth J. "Are Joint Tenancies Abolished in Oregon?" Or. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1942) 159.

Orth, John V. "The Joint Tenancy Makes a Comeback in North Carolina." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 69 (1991) 491.

Orth, John V. "Joint Tenancy Law: Plus Ca Change ..." Green Bag 2d Vol. 5 (2002) 173.

"Property Law: Joint Tenancy Severance and the Slayer Statute." Washburn L. J. Vol. 18 (1979) 682.

"Real Property -- Cotenancy -- Right of Cotenant to Contribution From Other Cotenants for Unauthorized Repairs and Improvements Made to the Common Property." Notre Dame L. Vol. 32 (1957) 493.

"Real Property -- Elimination of the Straw Man in the Creation of Joint Estates in Michigan." Mich. L. Rev. Vol. 54 (1955) 118.

"Recovery for Injury to Jointly-Owned Property Caused by the Negligence of a Co-owner." U. Pitt. L. Rev. Vol. 20 (1959) 682.

Reichelderfer, Frank A. "Severance of Joint Interests." 1959 U. Ill. L. F. 932.

Reynolds, Osborne M., Jr. "Co-ownership of Property in Oklahoma." Okla. L. Rev. Vol. 27 (1974) 585.

Simmons, Robert G., Jr. "Effect of Owner's Execution of Land Contract or Mortgage Upon a Joint Tenancy." Neb. L. Rev. Vol. 34 (1955) 285.

Spitzer, Anne L. "Joint Tenancy With Right of Survivorship: A Legacy From Thirteenth Century England." Tex. Tech. L. Rev. Vol. 16 (1985) 629.

Stacey, Charles B. "Joint Tenancy and Estate Planning." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1962) 44.

Stebbings, Chantal. "Jus Accrescendi Inter Mercatores Locum Non Habet." J. Legal Hist. Vol. 5 (1984) 152.

Swenson, Robert W. and Ronan E. Degnan, "Severance of Joint Tenancies." Minn. L. Rev. Vol. 38 (1954) 466.

"The Inter Vivos Rights of Cotenants Inter Se." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1962) 70.

"The Liability of a Cotenant to Other Cotenants for Rents, Profits and Use and Occupation." Marq. L. Rev. Vol. 42 (1959) 363.

"The Use of Straw Men in Massachusetts Real Estate Transactions." B.U. L. Rev. Vol. 44 (1964) 187.

"Toward a Uniform Cotenancy Law." Wash. & Lee L. Rev. Vol. 23 (1966) 391.

Treadwell, Kenneth S. and Jerome Shulkin. "Joint Tenancy -- Creditor-Debtor Relations." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1962) 58.

Tully, H. E. "Joint Tenancy in Real Property -- The Title Insurer's Viewpoint." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1962) 7.

"The Uniform Simultaneous Death Act and Its Effect on Jointly Owned Property." Wyo. L. J. Vol. 15 (1961) 229.

Weber, Craig O. "Will Construction -- Equitable Doctrine of Election and Joint Tenancy Property." S. Ill. U. L.J. Vol. 21 (1996) 211 (noting Williamson v. Williamson, 657 N.E.2d 651 (Ill. App. 1995)).

Wilson, Derrick. Note, "Drug Asset Forfeiture: In the War on Drugs, Is the Innocent Spouse the Loser?" J. Fam. L. Vol. 30 (1991) 135.

Wilson, John. "Words Necessary for Creation of a Joint Tenancy." Neb. L. Rev. Vol. 34 (1954) 67.

Wright, L. Hort. "Transfers of Joint Property in Contemplation of Death: A Call for Immediate Statutory Revision." Mich. L. Rev. Vol. 55 (1956) 1.

Annotations

Annotation, Accountability of Cotenants for Rents and Profits or Use and Occupation, 27 A.L.R. (1923) 184; 39 A.L.R. (1925) 408; 51 A.L.R.2d (1957) 388.

Annotation, Adverse Possession Between Cotenants, 82 A.L.R.2d (1962) 5.

Annotation, Basis of Computation of Cotenant's Accountability for Minerals and Timber Removed From the Property, 5 A.L.R.2d (1949) 1368.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Instrument Purporting to Convey One's Own Title or Interest to Himself and Another, 62 A.L.R. (1929) 514.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Instrument Purporting to Convey One's Own Title or Interest to Himself and Another, 137 A.L.R. (1942) 348.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Instrument Purporting to Convey One's Title or Interest to Himself and Another, or an Undivided Part Thereof to Another, 166 A.L.R. (1947) 1026.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Owner's Conveyance to Himself and Another, or to Another Alone, of an Undivided Interest, 44 A.L.R.2d (1955) 595.

Annotation, Construction of Devise to Persons as Joint Tenants and Expressly to the Survivor of Them, or to Them "With the Right of Survivorship," 69 A.L.R.2d (1960) 1058.

Annotation, Contract of Sale or Granting of Option to Purchase, to Third Party, by Both or all of Joint Tenants or Tenants by Entirety as Severing or Terminating Tenancy, 39 A.L.R.4th (1985) 1068.

Annotation, Contribution or Allowance as Between Cotenants in Remainder as Affected by Fact That One or More of Them Owns, or Did Own, the Life Estate or an Interest Therein, 98 A.L.R. (1935) 859.

Annotation, Contribution, Subrogation, and Similar Rights as Between Cotenants Where One Pays the Other's Share of Sum Owing on Mortgage or Other Lien, 48 A.L.R.2d (1956) 1305.

Annotation, Cotenant's Right to Contribution in Respect of Taxes, Improvements or Repairs as Subject to Reduction on Account of Rents and Profits for Which He is Not Otherwise Responsible, 136 A.L.R. (1942) 1022.

Annotation, Creation of Right of Survivorship by Instrument Ineffective to Create Estate by Entireties or Joint Tenancy, 1 A.L.R.2d (1948) 247.

Annotation, Estate Created by Conveyance to Husband and Wife as Affected by Language Used in Deed, 161 A.L.R. (1946) 457.

Annotation, Estate Created by Deed to Persons Described as Husband and Wife But Not Legally Married, 9 A.L.R.4th (1981) 1189.

Annotation, Felonious Killing of One Cotenant or Tenant by the Entireties by the Other as Affecting the Latter's Right in the Property, 42 A.L.R.3 D (1972) 1116.

Annotation, Lease to Two or More as Creating a Tenancy in Common or a Joint Tenancy, 113 A.L.R. (1938) 573.

Annotation, Possession by Stranger Claiming Under Conveyance by Cotenant as Adverse to Other Cotenants, 32 A.L.R.2d (1953) 1214.

Annotation, Purchase of Cotenant's Interest at Judicial Sale as Making Purchaser Cotenant, 159 A.L.R. (1945) 395.

Annotation, Real-estate Mortgage Executed by One of Joint Tenants as Enforceable After His Death, 67 A.L.R.2d (1959) 999.

Annotation, Right of Defendant to Diminution Damages to Real Property on Account of Interest of Plaintiff's Cotenant Who Is Not a Party to Action, 80 A.L.R. (1932) 992.

Annotation, Rights and Incidents Where Real Property Purchased With Wife's Funds is Taken in Spouses' Joint Names, 43 A.L.R.2d (1955) 917.

Annotation, Rights and Remedies of Judgment Creditor or Purchaser Under Execution in Respect of Estate in Real Property Held in Joint Tenancy, 111 A.L.R. (1937) 171.

Annotation, Rights of Cotenants Inter Se as to Oil and Gas, 40 A.L.R. (1926) 1400; 91 A.L.R. (1934) 205.

Annotation, Rights of Cotenants Inter Se as to Timber, 2 A.L.R. (1926) 993, 41 A.L.R. (1934) 582.

Annotation, Right of Surviving Spouse to Contribution, Exoneration, or Other Reimbursement Out of Decedent's Estate Respecting Liens on Estate by Entirety or Joint Tenancy, 76 A.L.R.2d (1961) 1004.

Annotation, Right Under Mortgage by Co-owners of Undivided Interests to Foreclose as Against Less Than All of Such Interests, 82 A.L.R. (1933) 1347.

Annotation, Severance or Termination of Joint Tenancy by Conveyance of Divided Interest Directly to Self, 7 A.L.R.4th (1981) 1268.

Annotation, Survivorship in Respect of Real or Personal Property as Affected by Murder of One of The Parties Jointly Interested by Other Party so Interested, 98 A.L.R. (1935) 773.

Annotation, Use of Word "Joint" or "Jointly" in Provision of Deed Other Than the Granting or Habendum Clause as Indicating Intention to Create a Joint Tenancy Rather Than One in Common Between the Grantees, 157 A.L.R. (1957) 566.

Annotation, What Acts by Joint Tenant or Joint Tenants Will Sever or Terminate Joint Tenancy, 129 A.L.R. (1940) 813.

Annotation, What Acts by One or More Joint Tenants Will Sever or Terminate the Tenancy, 64 A.L.R.2d (1959) 918.

Annotation, What Constitutes a Devise or Bequest in Joint Tenancy Notwithstanding Statute Raising a Presumption Against Joint Tenancy, 46 A.L.R.2d (1956) 523.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 31.02

Supp. to § 31.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Main]

Add at the end of the note:

Revised Uniform Partnership Act § 202 (to the same effect).

Add at end of note:

Legal systems derived from Roman law express the right to partition with the maxim, "Nemo in communione potest invitus detineri" (No one can be kept in co-ownership against his will).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 31.06

Supp. to § 31.06 Creation of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Main]

§ 31.06(a) Creation of Joint Tenancies at Common Law. [Go To Main]

Add after second sentence:

Even in the absence of legislation, there may now be no more than a presumption that joint tenants hold equal shares in the property.

Add at the end of the first sentence in the note:

Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 27, § 2 (joint tenants may own unequal interests in the joint tenancy).

Add at the end of the first paragraph in note 51:

The Indiana Court of Appeals has refused to allow equitable adjustment of the equal shares of joint tenants. Ramer v. Smith, 896 N.E.2d 563 (Ind. App. 2008) .

§ 31.06(b) The Doctrine of the Four Unities. [Go To Main]

Add to note 60:

Nelson v. Killman (In re Killman), 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 625 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. Feb. 26, 2010) (finding no authority for the premise that unity of possession requires that all of the tenants live on the property).

Add at the end of the note:

Estate of Johnson, 739 N.W.2d 493 (Iowa 2007) (renouncing Doctrine of Four Unities in favor of an "intent-based approach" but still rejecting evidence of intent unless expressed in an "instrument effectuating the intent"). Cf In re Estate of Potthoff, 733 N.W.2d 860 (Neb. 2007) (maintaining Doctrine of Four Unities and denying effect to notarized and recorded "notice of severance"); Gonzalez v. Sanchez, 2008 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 3533 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 2008) (utilizing Doctrine of Four Unities to determine whether joint tenancy was created).

§ 31.06(d) Modern Statutes Concerning Creation of Joint Tenancies. [Go To Main]

Add at the end of the note:

See Estate of Sherman ex rel. Maddock v. Estate of Sherman ex rel. Snodgrass, 597 S.E.2d 850 (S.C. App. 2004) .

At the end of the first full sentence in the run-over paragraph, add new footnote: n118.1

Add before See signal:

Colo. Rev. Stat. § 38-31-201 (conveyance purporting to create a tenancy by the entirety creates instead a joint tenancy).

Add to note 123:

Estate of Thomas, 199 P.3d 1090 (Wyo. 2009) (conveyance to grantors' two children "as tenants by the tntireties [sic] with right of survivorship, and not as tenants in common" held to create a joint tenancy).

Add at the end of the note:

See Estate of Shelton, 796 N.E.2d 955 (Ohio App. 2003) (transfer to two unmarried persons "as husband and wife, for their joint lives, remainder to the survivor" creates joint tenancy with right of survivorship).

Add at the end of the note:

See Smith v. Rucker, 593 S.E.2d 497 (S.C. App. 2004) (construing grant to two persons "for and during their joint lives and upon the death of either of them, then to the survivor... in fee simple" as creating a joint tenancy).

At the end of the first sentence of the first full paragraph, Add new Note 244.1: n244.1

Add at end of note:

Smith v. Cutler, 623 S.E.2d 644 (S.C. 2005) (explaining that "the Court created the estate of tenancy in common with a right of survivorship because South Carolina did not permit husband and wife to hold property as tenants by the entirety").

§ 31.06(g) Creation of Estates Similar to Joint Tenancies. [Go To Main]

Add to note 246 after citation of Hilterbrand:

In Oregon, a conveyance to two persons "not as tenants in common, but with right of survivorship," creates concurrent life estates with contingent remainders in the survivor. Such a conveyance is known as an "Erickson deed" after Erickson v. Erickson, 115 P.2d 172 (1941) , which recognized the estate. In re Domestic Partnership of Branam and Beaver, 202 P.3d 886 (Or. App. 2009) .

Add after the last sentence of the runover paragraph:

A South Carolina court has reached the same conclusion.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 118.1. For Native Americans subject to the American Indian Probate Reform Act of 2004, Pub. L. No. 108-374, 118 Stat. 1773, the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancy with right of survivorship was reinstated in devises to two or more, as part of a program to reduce further fractionation of Indian allotments. 25 U.S.C. § 2206(c).

(n2)Footnote 244.1. In Michigan, the same result is reached by a grant in "joint tenancy with full rights of survivorship." Jackson v. Green, 771 N.W.2d 675 (Mich. 2009) . In Oregon, the appropriate words are "not as tenants in common, but with right of survivorship." In re Domestic Partnership of Branam and Beaver, 202 P.3d 886 (Or. App. 2009) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 31.07

Supp. to § 31.07 Incidents of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Main]

§ 31.07(b) Action for Contribution. [Go To Main]

Add at end of first full paragraph:

Once an improvement is agreed to by a co-tenant, the co-tenant may not refuse to contribute to its cost merely because the improvement does not result in a permanent increase in the value of the common owned property.

§ 31.07(d) Action of Ejectment. [Go To Main]

Delete.

Add after the block quotation at the end of the first full paragraph:

Special problems may arise if the purportedly ousted cotenant is incompetent during some or all of the relevant period. n258.1

Add at the end of the note:

Parker v. Shecut, 562 S.E.2d 620 (S.C. 2002) (changing locks and refusing a key constitutes ouster).

Replace cited case with:

Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103, 126 S.Ct. 1515 (2006) .

§ 31.07(e) Creditors' Rights. [Go To Main]

Add after second paragraph:

In states still recognizing the common law of exoneration of debt in the law of wills, a general direction in a will to "pay all just debts" may not be interpreted to require the estate to pay the mortgage debt on property passing by right of survivorship to the joint tenant of the testator.[299.1] n299.1

Add after the last full sentence on the page:

The judgment lien also becomes valueless if the debtor's property becomes subject to a contract of sale prior to execution. By virtue of the doctrine of equitable conversion, the seller's interest is mere legal title held as security for the payment of the purchase price. "For purposes of determining whether a judgment lien may attach, it is equitable title that matters."

Add at end of note:

Bankers' Trust Co. v. Woodall, 144 P.3d 126 (N. Mex. App. 2006) .

Add at end of note:

Wisner v. Pavlin, 719 N.W.2d 770 (S.D. 2006) (refusing to extend homestead right to survivor of unmarried couple).

Add new note 294.1 at the end of the first sentence of the second paragraph: n294.1

FOOTNOTES:
(n3)Footnote 299.1. Manders v. King, 667 S.E.2d 59 (Ga. 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 294.1. Bankruptcy courts, applying state law, disagree concerning the time of severance of the joint tenancy and its conversion into a tenancy in common. Compare In re Lambert, 34 B.R. 41 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983)

(holding that filing of the petition severs the joint tenancy) with Durnal v. Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. (In re DeMarco), 114 B.R. 121 (Bankr. N.D. W.Va. 1990) (holding that filing of the petition does not sever the joint tenancy).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 31.08

Supp. to § 31.08 Termination of Joint Tenancies.

[Go To Main]

§ 31.08(a) Termination by Act of All Joint Tenants. [Go To Main]

Add to note 302:

Estate of Quick, 905 A.2d 471 (Pa. 2006) (leases executed by joint tenants individually did not sever joint tenancy although executed at different times because action did not signify intent to sever).

Add at end of note:

A judgment lien against the interest of one of the joint tenants cannot be levied against the equitable interest acquired by the purchaser by virtue of the doctrine of equitable conversion. Chambers v. Cardinal, 935 A.2d 502 (Md. App. 2007) .

Add to note 311:

Beudert-Richard v. Richard, 894 N.Y.S.2d 22 (Sup. Ct. App. Div. 2010) (separation agreement incident to divorce severs joint tenancy).

§ 31.08(b) Termination by Act of One Joint Tenant. [Go To Main]

Add before the See generally signal at the end of the first paragraph of the note:

Nicholas v. Nicholas, 83 P.3d 214 (Kan. 2004) (in the absence of a deed, neither informal writings nor an executed will sufficient to sever joint tenancy).

After the third sentence in the first full paragraph, add new sentence:

Similarly, a judicial partition is effective only on the date of the final decree, not on the filing of the petition.[317.1] n317.1

Add to note 317.1:

Jackson v. Estate of Green, 771 N.W.2d 675 (Mich. 2009) (a dissenting justice thought the state's survival statute permitted the estate of a deceased joint tenant to maintain a partition action commenced while the estate's decedent was still alive).

Add to note 338:

Land America Commonwealth Title Ins. Co. v. Kolozetski, 992 A.2d 681 (N.H. 2010) (mortgage by one joint tenant severs joint tenancy).

Add at the beginning of the note:

Taylor v. Canterbury, 92 P.3d 961 (Colo. 2004) (recognizing effectiveness of severance by self-conveyance, but declining to decide whether the self-conveyance must be recorded to provide notice to other joint tenants).

Add at end of note:

Bankers' Trust Co. v. Woodall, 144 P.3d 126 (N. Mex. App. 2006) .

Add at end of note:

Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20(C)(2) (in a joint tenancy with right of survivorship, one joint tenant can not unilaterally terminate the survivorship rights of another joint tenant).

Add after Minonk State Bank case:

Sathoff v. Sutterer, 869 N.E.2d 354 (Ill. App. Ct. 2007) (when two of three joint tenants conveyed from themselves to themselves also as joint tenants, the joint tenancy with the remaining co-tenant was severed) ("Common sense, as well as legal efficiency, dictates that [the two] should have been able to accomplish directly what they could otherwise achieve indirectly by the use of elaborate legal fictions.").

Add to paragraph on Utah:

In 2006 Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5 was further amended to make clear that where there are more than two joint tenants, a self-conveyance by one joint tenant does not sever the joint tenancy as to the remaining joint tenants.

Add paragraph between California and Kentucky:

Colorado. Taylor v. Canterbury, 92 P.3d 961 (Colo. 2004) (declining to decide whether self-conveyance by one joint tenant must be recorded to provide notice of severance to other joint tenants).

Add to note 330 after Kentucky:

New York.

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 240-c.

Add at the end of the note:

See Biggers v. Crook, 656 S.E.2d 835 (Ga. 2008) (a mortgage or "deed to secure debt" does not sever a joint tenancy).

Add at the end of the run-over paragraph:

Where all joint tenants join in the mortgage, the unities are preserved and the joint tenancy is unaffected.

Add to note 339:

Biggers v. Crook, 656 S.E.2d 835 (Ga. 2008) (in case of first impression, held deed to secure debt executed by one joint tenant did not sever joint tenancy).

At the end of the first full paragraph, add new sentence:

If a joint tenant can disclaim the right of survivorship, then the will of the dying joint tenant can put the survivor to the election of disclaiming or taking some other offered benefit, but the intention to require the election must be clearly expressed. n355.1

§ 31.08(c) Termination by Operation of Law. [Go To Main]

Add at end of note:

Bankruptcy courts, applying state law, disagree concerning the time of severance of the joint tenancy and its conversion into a tenancy in common. Compare In re Lambert, 34 B.R. 41 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983) (holding that filing of the petition severs the joint tenancy) with Durnal v. Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. (In re DeMarco), 114 B.R. 121 (Bankr. N.D. W.Va. 1990) (holding that filing of the petition does not sever the joint tenancy).

Add at end of note:

Bankers' Trust Co. v. Woodall, 144 P.3d 126 (N. Mex. App. 2006) .

At the end of the first full paragraph, add new sentences:

Short of sale, a joint tenancy may be severed by operation of law when a joint tenant receives state-supplied Medicare benefits, in order for the state to recover the cost of care. As the states, at the urging of the federal government implement "asset recovery programs," the frequency of such severances may be expected to increase.

Add to note 373:

Young v. McIntyre, 672 S.E.2d 196 (W.Va. 2008) (in case of divorce, an agreement to sever a joint tenancy can be implied from conduct inconsistent with continuation of the joint tenancy).

Add to note 378:

In 2007 North Dakota followed Massachusetts and adopted legislation that deprived the slayer of the slayer's own share in property held in joint tenancy with the victim, raising a question of an unconstitutional forfeiture. Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 265, § 46; N.D. Cent. Code § 30.1-10-03(3)(b). Each statute is the subject of a critical student comment. See Robert F. Hennessy, "Property--The Limits of Equity: Forfeiture, Double Jeopardy, and the Massachusetts 'Slayer Statute," 39 Western New England L. Rev. 159 (2009). See Bradley Myers, "The New North Dakota Slayer Statute: Does It Cause a Criminal Forfeiture?" 83 N.D. L. Rev. 997 (2007).

Add at end of the paragraph:

Although recognizing that statutes may require a different result, the latest Restatement of Property reaffirms the position of the Restatement of Restitution that a slaying joint tenant is entitled only to one-half the income from the property for life.[378.1] n378.1

Add at the end of the note:

But see Ellis v. Ellis, 71 S.W.3d 705 (Tenn. 2002) (survivorship properties in Tennessee unaffected by the 120 hour provision of the Uniform Simultaneous Death Act), noted in 33 U. Memphis L. Rev. 681 (2003).

FOOTNOTES:
(n5)Footnote 317.1. Rusnak v. Phebus, 2008 Tenn. App. LEXIS 328 (No. M2007-01592-COA-R9-CV, May 29, 2008) (matter of first impression in Tenn.); Mercurio v. Headrick, 983 So.2d 773 (Fla. App. 2008) (matter of first impression in Fla.); Orlando v. DePrima, 870 N.Y.S.2d 871 (N.Y. Sup. 2008) (citing Rusnak).

(n6)Footnote 355.1. Williamson v. Williamson, 657 N.E.2d 651 (Ill. App. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 378.1. Restatement (Third) of Property: Wills and Other Donative Transfers § 8.4 (2003) (reaffirming Restatement of Restitution § 188).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 31 JOINT TENANCIES

4-31 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 31.10

Supp. to § 31.10 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Books

Smith, Roger J. Plural Ownership. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005.

Articles

Bell, Kristen B. "Preserving Your Pocketbook: Narrowing the Unilateral Power of a Co-Owner." 69 La. L. Rev. 139 (2008).

Myers, Bradley. "The New North Dakota Slayer Statute: Does It Cause a Criminal Forfeiture?" 83 N.D. L. Rev. 997 (2007).

Orth, John V. "The Perils of Joint Tenancies." 44 R*eal Property, Trust & Estate L. J.* (2009): 427.

Randolph, Megan D. Note. "Let No Man Put Asunder: Divorce, Joint Tenancy, and Notices of Severance." 47 U. Louisville L. Rev.(2009): 607.

Annotations

Annotation, Judgment Lien or Levy of Execution on One Joint Tenant's Share or Interest as Severing Joint Tenancy, 51 A.L.R.4th 906 .

Annotation, Rights in Proceeds of Insurance on Property Held Jointly with Right of Survivorship, Where One of Joint Owners Dies Pending Payment of Proceeds, 4 A.L.R.3d 427 .

Annotation, What Constitutes a Devise or Bequest in Joint Tenancy Notwithstanding Statute Raising a Presumption Against Joint Tenancy, 46 A.L.R.2d 523 .

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 32.syn

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.syn Synopsis to Chapter 32: TENANCIES IN COMMON

§ 32.01 Concurrent Estates.

§ 32.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

§ 32.03 Tenancies in Common in the Context of Concurrent Estates.

§ 32.04 Outline of the Chapter.

§ 32.05 History of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

§ 32.06 Creation of Tenancies in Common.

§ 32.06(a) Creation by Operation of Law: The Single Unity, Possession.

§ 32.06(b) Creation by Express Limitation.

§ 32.06(b)(1) At Common Law.

§ 32.06(b)(2) Under Modern Statutes.

§ 32.07 Incidents of Tenancies in Common.

§ 32.07(a) Action of Waste.

§ 32.07(b) Action for Contribution.

§ 32.07(c) Action of Account.

§ 32.07(d) Action of Ejectment.

§ 32.07(e) Creditors' Rights.

§ 32.08 Termination of Tenancies in Common.

§ 32.08(a) Termination by Act of All Tenants in Common.

§ 32.08(b) Termination by Act of One Tenant in Common.

§ 32.08(c) Termination by Operation of Law.

§ 32.09 The Future of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

§ 32.10 Bibliography.

Professor John V. Orth
School of Law
University of North Carolina

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.01

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.01 Concurrent Estates.

Whenever two or more persons own the same thing at the same time, a form of concurrent ownership exists. At common law n1 concurrent estates in land are of three types: joint tenancies, tenancies in common, and tenancies by the entirety -- the latter limited to persons married to one another. (A fourth form of concurrent estate, tenancy in coparcenary, is now obsolete). n2 Concurrent estates in land are not restricted to freehold estates but may exist in leaseholds, easements, and other interests in real property; nor are they restricted to present estates, but may exist in future interests as well. A further form of concurrent ownership is recognized by statute, as opposed to common law, in those states adopting the Uniform Partnership Act. n3 Concurrent ownership of personalty is also recognized, the forms of ownership being copied from those for land.

Whenever property is owned by one person alone, there exists a sole ownership, known -- by contrast to the concurrent tenancies -- as a tenancy in severalty. At common law there is a presumption in favor of sole ownership: in the words of Sir William Blackstone, "all estates are supposed to be of this sort, unless where they are expressly declared to be otherwise." n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The "common law" referred to is the common law of England as it was at the time of American Independence, for which the best and most convenient source is Sir William Blackstone's four-volume Commentaries on the Laws of England, first published in 1765 to 1768. The present author is acutely aware that continuing to refer to this body of law in the present tense is peculiar for a number of reasons. First, because the common law of England continued to grow and change in its native land; second, because the transplanted common law continued to grow and change in the various American jurisdictions; and finally, because there is something truly metaphysical in talking presently about a "law" that is not now recognized and enforced in at least one jurisdiction. Nonetheless, the author is convinced that there continues to be value, not merely heuristic, in using the common law in this sense as the background against which to place all later developments.

(n2)Footnote 2. On tenancy in coparcenary, see Chapter 35, infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. On tenancy in partnership, s*ee* Chapter 34, infra. Ever since the days of Joseph Story, it has been recognized that concurrent ownership in and of itself does not establish a partnership. Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Law of Partnership 3-4 (1841); Uniform Partnership Act § 7(2) ("Joint tenancy, tenancy in common, tenancy by the entireties, joint property, common property, or part ownership does not of itself establish a partnership, whether such co-owners do or do not share any profits made by the use of the property"), 7 U.L.A. 18 (1949).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 179 (1766).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.02

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

[Go To Supp]

Tenancy in common is a form of concurrent estate; as such, it implies the ownership by two or more persons of the same property at the same time. n5 Forms of concurrent ownership are distinguishable by reference to three incidents: (1) alienability, the quality of being transferable inter vivos by sale or gift; (2) devisability, the quality of being transferable at death by devise; and (3) inheritability, the quality of passing at death to the heir of the deceased. Each tenant in common possesses an interest in the concurrent estate that is alienable, devisable, and inheritable. By contrast, each joint tenant possesses the power to alienate an interest, but no joint tenant possesses a devisable or inheritable interest; no tenant by the entirety has an interest that is devisable or inheritable. n6 Unlike joint tenancies and tenancies by the entirety, tenancies in common involve no right of survivorship.

By virtue of English statutes widely accepted as part of the common law in America, each tenant in common (like each joint tenant) has a right to demand partition of the estate, that is, its division into shares, each divided share to be held in severalty. n7 Partition in kind is obviously best suited to large, especially rural, estates. Because some estates are unsuited to partition in kind, a later English statute, also copied in America, provides for partition by sale and division of the proceeds. n8

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 5. The common law did not at first use the concept of ownership with respect to land, preferring to describe those with interests in real property as "tenants," a word derived from the Latin for "holders." What was "held" was, therefore, a "tenancy." See A.W.B. Simpson, A History of The Land Law 47-48 (2d ed. 1986). In modern parlance, tenancy means ownership, and the words are used interchangeably in this chapter.

(n2)Footnote 6. At one time, the husband holding in tenancy by the entirety with his wife was recognized as having a power to alienate his interest subject only to his wife's right of survivorship; the wife had no comparable power. See § 33.05, infra.

(n3)Footnote 7. 31 Hen. 8, c. 1 (1539); 2 Hen. 8, c. 32 (1540). On partition, see Chapter 38, infra.

(n4)Footnote 8. 31 & 32 Vict., c. 40 (1868).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.03

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.03 Tenancies in Common in the Context of Concurrent Estates.

Although at the time of American Independence the joint tenancy was the common law's preferred form of concurrent estate, it has now been decisively displaced by the tenancy in common. Very much a residual form of concurrent ownership in colonial days -- it was what arose in default of a joint tenancy -- the tenancy in common is today the paradigmatic form of concurrent ownership. Just as Sir William Blackstone in his Commentaries on the Laws of England began his discussion of forms of concurrent ownership with a description of joint tenancies and then proceeded to describe other forms in terms of how far they departed from this model, n9 so a modern commentator is tempted, but for the joint tenancy's historical precedence, to begin with the tenancy in common. Although historically the tenancy in common was, one might say, a joint tenancy manque, today the tenancy in common might logically come first, with the other forms of concurrent ownership being treated as tenancies in common plus one or two peculiarities.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 9. 2 William Blackstone, Of Estates in Severalty, Joint-Tenancy, Coparcenary, and Common, in Commentaries ch. 12 (1766).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.04

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.04 Outline of the Chapter.

As old as the joint tenancy -- it was the form of concurrent estate that arose in case of the failure of a joint tenancy -- the tenancy in common was not favored by the common law. Perhaps in consequence it was not burdened by the perplexing doctrines that collected around the joint tenancy, remaining a remarkably simple form of concurrent ownership. After a review of the history of the law of tenancies in common (§ 32.05), the chapter examines the estate under three broad headings: creation of tenancies in common (§ 32.06), incidents of tenancies in common (§ 32.07), and termination of tenancies in common (§ 32.08). A glimpse at the future of the law of tenancies in common is also attempted (§ 32.09). Finally, the chapter concludes with a select bibliography of the law of tenancies in common (§ 32.10).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.05

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.05 History of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

The law of tenancies in common developed in tandem with the law of joint tenancies. As formal requirements accumulated for the creation of a joint tenancy, particularly the learning later epitomized in the doctrine of the four unities, n10 the need emerged to recognize a residual form of concurrent estate, basically a catch-all for concurrent tenancies that were not, for one reason or another, joint tenancies.

Because the latter estate had formal requirements for its creation, a grantor to two or more persons, even a grantor intending to create a joint tenancy, could fail to create that estate, while nevertheless succeeding in transferring the property. The result was a tenancy in common. Because a joint tenancy had formal requirements for its continued existence, joint tenants, even those intending to maintain the estate, could experience its termination. The result again was a tenancy in common.

Because a joint tenancy could not arise by operation of law, it was necessary to recognize some kind of concurrent estate when property passed involuntarily to two or more persons. Once again the result was a tenancy in common. Here the development of the estate was furthered by the parallel development of the tenancy in coparcenary. n11 At common law that estate arose when land descended from an ancestor to two or more heirs; it was largely limited to females since the canons of inheritance preferred males to females and, among males of equal degree, the first born (primogeniture). n12 Unlike joint tenants, tenants in coparcenary had no right of survivorship, an incident also lacking from tenancies in common. Tenants in coparcenary were the first concurrent owners entitled to compel partition, hence their distinctive name, "parceners," and this power was eventually extended by statute to tenancies in common (and joint tenancies). n13

Although at the date of American Independence the joint tenancy remained the common law's favored form of concurrent estate, leading lawyers by then recognized that it involved many risks for owners. In 1766 Sir William Blackstone counseled: "In general it is advantageous for the joint-tenants to dissolve the jointure." n14 In America unwanted, even unknown, joint tenancies could wreak havoc on settled expectations. When North Carolina abolished the right of survivorship in joint tenancies in 1784, the statute recited: "in real and personal estate held in join-tenancy the benefit of survivorship is a manifest injustice to the families of such as may happen to die first." n15 In Ohio the state supreme court early held that the right of survivorship did not exist: "The jus accrescendi is not founded in principles of natural justice, nor in any reasons of policy applicable to our society or institutions," n16 while a

Connecticut court in 1836 succinctly labeled the right of survivorship "odious and unjust." n17

American legislation and, to a lesser extent, judicial decisions set about altering the status quo with respect to concurrent estates, shearing joint tenancies of the right of survivorship or reversing the common law presumption in their favor. The result was an upsurge in tenancies in common (or in joint tenancies without the right of survivorship, which were functionally similar). n18 When legislation in many states abolished tenancies by the entirety, a special form of concurrent ownership limited to married persons, n19 the field of concurrent estates was further narrowed. Although most states retained either joint tenancies or tenancies by the entirety, and some retained both, all continued to offer tenancies in common. Increasingly the estate once relegated to last place in the common law system of concurrent ownership, has become the preferred form.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 10. On the doctrine of the four unities, see § 31.06(b), supra. On tenancy in coparcenary, see Chapter 35, infra.

(n2)Footnote 11. On tenancy in coparcenary, see Chapter 35, infra.

(n3)Footnote 12. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 208, 212, 213 (1766).

(n4)Footnote 13. 31 Hen. 8, c. 1 (1539); 32 Hen. 8, c. 32 (1540). On partition, see Chapter 38, infra.

(n5)Footnote 14. 2 iWlliam Blackstone, Commentaries 187 (1766). Although, as Blackstone elsewhere acknowledged, "jointure" had a specific meaning in the law of marriage settlements, he used the word here as a synonym for joint tenancy.

(n6)Footnote 15. Act of 1784, ch. 22, § 6, reprinted in 24 The State Records of North Carolina 574 (Walter Clark ed. 1904). In the 18th century, the words "joint tenancy" were often hyphenated. See, e.g., 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180, 193-94 (1766). The form "join-tenancy," used in the North Carolina statute, occasionally appeared. Joseph Story ran the two words together, "jointenancy." Joseph Story, Commentaries on The Law of Partnership 4 (1841). Earlier, the form "joyntenants" was common. See edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 277, p. 180a.

(n7)Footnote 16. Seargent v. Steinberger, 2 Ohio 305 (1826).

(n8)Footnote 17. Whittlesey v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 337, 339 (1836).

(n9)Footnote 18. See Whittlesey v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 337, 339 (1836) (without the right of survivorship, there was "no essential difference between the rights of joint tenants and tenants in common").

(n10)Footnote 19. In some states the Married Women's Property Act, which recognized the right of married women to own property in their own right, was interpreted to abolish the tenancy by the entirety. See § 33.05, infra.

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.06

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.06 Creation of Tenancies in Common.

[Go To Supp]

Tenancies in common can arise unintentionally by operation of law (§ 32.06(a)), or intentionally, by express limitation (§ 32.06(b)). The intentional creation of tenancies in common is facilitated by modern statutes, so creation by express limitation is considered as at common law (§ 32.06(b)(1)) and under modern statutes (§ 32.06(b)(2)).

§ 32.06(a) Creation by Operation of Law: The Single Unity, Possession.

Because the tenancy in common was a residual estate at common law, Sir William Blackstone listed as the first means of its creation the destruction of a joint tenancy without severance of possession n20 and cited as an example the case of two joint tenants for life when the remainder descends to one of them. n21 The complexities of the doctrine of the four unities made it possible for the intentional creation of a joint tenancy to fail, as, for example, at common law when a grantor attempted a conveyance to grantor and another or others as joint tenants; because the unities of time and title were lacking, a tenancy in common resulted. n22 The same was true of a tenancy by the entirety, also dependent on the constant presence of the four unities, n23 plus a fifth unity "of person" based on marriage. A tenancy in common may be created by the divorce of a married couple holding as tenants by the entirety without the destruction of any of the four unities. n24 The same result may follow in jurisdictions in which the only marital estate is a joint tenancy. n25

Although it is possible for joint tenants or tenants by the entirety to intend the conversion of their estate into a tenancy in common and to destroy one of the unities in order to accomplish this, the creation of the tenancy in common in such a case is still "by operation of law," because the effect is caused by the destruction of the unities, whether or not the destruction is deliberately intended to create a tenancy in common.

Perhaps the most common example of the creation of tenancies in common by operation of law today occurs in cases of intestate succession: when two or more persons of equal degree of kinship inherit property together they take title under modern intestacy statutes as tenants in common. Upon the termination of a trust with multiple beneficiaries of the same equitable estate, the legal title vests in the beneficiaries as tenants in common by operation of law. n26

Because the doctrine of the four unities is central to the creation and continued existence of joint tenancies and tenancies by the entirety, it is worthwhile to note explicitly its absence from the law of tenancies in common. For the creation and preservation of a tenancy in common only a single unity is necessary: the unity of possession. This is, of course, simply another way of saying that the tenancy in common is a form of concurrent ownership. Without two or more sharing the right to possess the same property at the same time there would be no concurrent ownership at all. It should be emphasized that the unity of possession means the right to possess, not necessarily actual possession -- as seen from the fact that future interests could be held in tenancy in common. As Blackstone himself put it: "estates of any quantity or length of duration, and whether they be in actual possession or expectancy, may be held ... in joint-tenancy ... and in common." n27 Tenants in common can formalize the relationship by an agreement regulating their possessory rights, even to the point of providing for the exclusive possession by one. n28

Because unity of interest is not required, it is not necessary that tenants in common have equal shares. Nonetheless, there is a presumption that the shares are equal. n29 A tenant in common claiming other than an equal share bears the burden of proving it; n30 in some states the presumption of equal shares in tenancy in common may be rebutted only by clear and convincing evidence. n31 A creditor aware of a deed in tenancy in common is not required to investigate the possibility of unequal ownership and may presume equal shares. n32

Although at common law title acquired by multiple adverse possessors was in joint tenancy, n33 today the modern presumption in favor of tenancy in common would prevail. n34

§ 32.06(b) Creation by Express Limitation.

The intention to create a tenancy in common by a transfer to two or more persons could always be accomplished if expressed in the proper terms. Since the required form of expression has been affected by legislation, it is necessary to consider, first, the situation at common law (§ 32.06(b)(1)), then, the effect of modern statutes (§ 32.06(b)(2)).

§ 32.06(b)(1) At Common Law.

At common law a presumption existed in favor of joint tenancies as a form of concurrent ownership. In 1766 Sir William Blackstone laid down the law as follows: "Now, if an estate be given to a plurality of persons, without adding any restrictive, exclusive, or explanatory words, as if an estate be granted to A and B and their heirs, this makes them immediately joint-tenants in fee of the lands." n35 Much learning was devoted at common law to whether one form or another of express limitation was sufficient to avoid the effect of this rule. For example, although it was always accepted that a devise of land to two or more persons "equally to be divided among them, share and share alike" created a tenancy in common because of the deference accorded to intention in the construction of wills, there long remained doubt about whether the same words in deeds would have that effect. n36 After reviewing the pitfalls, Blackstone concluded that the "most usual as well as the safest way" to avoid an unintended joint tenancy was "to add express words of exclusion as well as description, and limit the estate to A and B, to hold as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants." n37

Without words of inheritance, grants at common law resulted in estates for life only. Blackstone's last example, "to A and B as tenants in common and not as joint tenants" would have resulted in a tenancy in common for joint lives, an estate that would end at the death of the first to die. (By contrast, a joint life estate would by virtue of the right of survivorship last until the death of the last to die). n38 Where a grantor seized in fee simple created an estate for joint lives (or, for that matter, a joint life estate), a residuum obviously was left, retained as a reversion or disposed of by a further limitation in remainder. As explored elsewhere, n39 a few states like Ohio have created by statute a "survivorship tenancy" in lieu of the common law joint tenancy; such an estate results from a transfer to two or more persons "for their joint lives and then to the survivor or survivors of them." n40 As expressly recognized in a similar Oregon statute, this estate is properly described as a "tenancy in common in the life estate with cross-contingent remainders in fee simple." n41

Tenancies in common may be created in estates other than fee simple and in all forms of future interests. n42 Tenancies in common may be combined with other forms of concurrent ownership; that is, an undivided interest held by plural owners in joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety may be held with the owner or owners of another undivided interest in tenancy in common. For example, A and B may hold one-half as joint tenants, and C and D may hold the other one-half as joint tenants, while the two units hold the whole as tenants in common. n43 Married couples holding their respective interests as joint tenants or as tenants by the entirety may hold together as tenants in common. n44

Despite the common law's general presumption in favor of joint tenancies, a different presumption obtained in the case of party walls, that is, walls built on the property line between adjoining owners, usually providing support for structures on each lot. At common law party walls were presumed to be held by the adjoining owners as tenants in common. n45 Today party walls may be found to be owned in severalty with mutual easements of support. n46

§ 32.06(b)(2) Under Modern Statutes.

Legislation bearing on the creation of tenancies in common is often aimed principally at reversing the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies or, in the case of married persons, of tenancies by the entirety; in other words, telling how a joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety is not created, a statute tells how a tenancy in common is created. An Alaska statute, for example, provides:

> (a) A conveyance or devise of land or an interest in land made to two or more persons, other than to executors and trustees, as such, shall be construed to create a tenancy in common in the estate, except, as provided in (b) of this section.
>
> (b) A husband and wife who acquire title in real property hold the estate as tenants by the entirety, unless it is expressly declared otherwise in the conveyance or devise. The conveyance shall recite the marital status of the parties acquiring title to real property. n47

Without an express declaration to the contrary, a tenancy in common is created. n48 Other statutes addressing the same problem are more simply phrased. An Iowa statute, for example, provides: "Conveyances to two or more in their own right create a tenancy in common unless a contrary intent is expressed." n49

As described elsewhere, n50 an earlier type of statute, also aimed at problems caused by the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies, altered the nature of joint tenancies by eliminating the right of survivorship. Read literally, such statutes leave the common law presumption in place, although they eliminate the major distinction between joint tenancies and tenancies in common. In jurisdictions with statutes of this type it would probably be wise, in order to avoid any risk from lingering rules concerning joint tenancies, to follow Blackstone's formula and add "express words of exclusion as well as description," that is, to transfer "to A and B and their heirs as tenants in common and not as joint tenants."

Special rules concern concurrent estates transferred to joint executors, administrators, and trustees; n51 joint mortgagees are also within the reason of the rule, as are joint guardians. n52 In many states such estates are presumed to be joint tenancies rather than tenancies in common, in order to facilitate the performance of the tasks for which the land was acquired. n53 Concurrent estates acquired by business partners may be held in special "tenancies in partnership." n54 In states still recognizing tenancies by the entirety transfers to married couples may, as in Alaska, be presumed to be in that form of concurrent ownership; express language to the contrary can in all states rebut the presumption. In deeds, words of limitation describing the estate are normally placed in the habendum clause, introduced by the memorable phrase "to have and to hold" (habendum et tenendum). In case of inconsistency within the various parts of a deed, the ancient rules of conveyancing give preference to the granting clause if it describes a greater estate, n55 but with respect to concurrent estates deciding relative degrees of "greatness" may become metaphysical. In general, it may be fervently hoped that the entire instrument will be read to effectuate the intention of the parties, notwithstanding the technicalities;

a statute may require this result. n56 In an appropriate case it may be necessary to admit extrinsic evidence. n57

Apart from the special cases listed above, the creation of tenancies in common in multiple transferees should be unproblematic. Although probably not necessary, it is always better to describe the estate created as "tenancy in common"; in special cases words of exclusion, "and not as joint tenants or tenants by the entirety," may be necessary. The word "jointly" is ambiguous: it may mean simply "together," or it may be meant to connote "in joint tenancy." Coupled with the strong presumption in favor of tenancies in common, it will not usually result in the finding of a joint tenancy. n58 Under no circumstances should a drafter desiring to create a tenancy in common in fee simple ever use the words "with right of survivorship," "to them and the survivor of them," or similar expressions. n59

A grant to one person or another ("to A or B") may be construed to mean to the two together ("to A and B") as tenants in common. n60 In Oregon, which has abolished joint tenancies, a transfer to two or more persons "as joint tenants" results in a tenancy in common. n61 In Virginia, which has eliminated the right of survivorship as an incident of common law joint tenancies, n62 a statutory right of survivorship may be created, n63 but merely conveying to grantees "as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common" has been held insufficient to create the right of survivorship and a tenancy in common results. n64 In Alabama, too, words of survivorship must be used to create a joint tenancy (or its functional equivalent): a grant to two or more "as joint tenants" creates an estate that operates as a tenancy in common; that is, on death the interest descends as if it had been severed. n65

Although recording of deeds is standard practice (and brings material benefits), recording is not essential to validity: a properly executed but unrecorded deed from a grantor to two grantees as tenants in common is effective from the date of delivery.

The various state statutes are summarized below:

Alabama. Right of survivorship as incident of joint tenancy abolished, but if instrument creating joint tenancy states that it is "with right of survivorship" or uses other words showing such intention, then right of survivorship will be recognized. n66

Alaska. Joint tenancy in real property abolished. n67 Transfer to two or more persons (except transfer to executors and trustees) shall be construed to create tenancy in common; transfer to married couple presumed to create tenancy by the entirety. n68

Arizona. Transfers to two or more persons create tenancies in common not joint tenancies, except transfers in trust, or to executors, or to a husband and wife; transfers may, however, "by express words vest the estate in the survivor upon the death of a grantee or devisee." n69 Property acquired by husband and wife is community property, n70 although the spouses may by express agreement take title as joint tenants. n71

Arkansas. Right of survivorship abolished. n72 Transfers to two or more persons (except transfers to executors and trustees) create tenancies in common, unless expressly declared to create joint tenancies. n73

California. Transfer to two or more persons creates joint tenancy when expressly declared to be so. n74 Devise to two or more persons vests in them tenancy in common unless the will otherwise provides. n75

Colorado. No joint tenancy shall be created unless estate is declared to be "in joint tenancy," except in transfers to executors, trustees, or fiduciaries. n76

Connecticut. Joint tenancy created by transfer to two or more natural persons (1) as joint tenants or as tenants in common and to the survivor and heirs, or (2) for their joint lives with a remainder to the survivor and heirs, or (3) as joint tenants with right of survivorship, or (4) as tenants by the entirety, or (5) as joint tenants. n77

Delaware. Joint tenancy may be created only by transfer expressly declared to create estate "to be held as joint tenants and not as tenants in common," except transfer to executors or trustees. n78

District of Columbia. Transfer to two or more persons, including married couples, creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be a joint tenancy. n79

Florida. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless the instrument creating the estate shall expressly provide for "the right of survivorship." n80

Georgia. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, "unless the instrument expressly refers to the takers as 'joint tenants,' 'joint tenants and not as tenants in common,' or 'joint tenants with survivorship' or as taking 'jointly with survivorship.'" ("Language essentially the same" may also be used.) n81

Hawaii. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, but joint tenancy may be created if it manifestly appears that it was intended to create joint tenancy (exception for executors and trustees). n82

Idaho. Transfer to two or more persons (except executors or trustees) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be otherwise. n83 Every interest created in favor of two or more persons (except partners for partnership purposes) is an interest in common, unless declared to be "a joint interest" or community property. n84

Illinois. Concurrent estates (except of executors and trustees) deemed to be tenancies in common, but transfers expressly declared to pass estates "not in tenancy in common but in joint tenancy" create joint tenancies. n85

Indiana. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared that transferees hold "in joint tenancy and to the survivor of them" or unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy. n86 Exception for mortgages, conveyances in trust, and conveyances to husband and wife; executors and trustees hold in joint tenancy. n87

Iowa. Conveyances to two or more persons create tenancies in common, unless a contrary intent is expressed. n88

Kansas. Transfer to two or more persons, including transfer to husband and wife, creates tenancy in common, unless the language used makes it clear that a joint tenancy was intended (exception for executors or trustees). n89

Kentucky. No right of survivorship in joint tenancies, n90 except for transfers to executors and trustees and estates for which it manifestly appears that right of survivorship was intended. n91

Maine. Transfers to two or more persons (except conveyances in mortgage) create estates in common, unless otherwise expressed. n92

Maryland. Presumption against joint tenancy, unless instrument expressly provides that the property granted is to be held in joint tenancy. n93

Massachusetts. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless it is expressed in transfer that transferees shall take "jointly," or "as joint tenants," or "in joint tenancy," or "to them and the survivor of them" or unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy. n94

Michigan. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. n95 Exception for mortgages, transfers in trust, to executors, and to husband and wife. n96

Minnesota. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. Exception for mortgages, transfers in trust or to executors. n97

Mississippi. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy with right of survivorship (exception for mortgages and transfers in trust). n98

Missouri. Transfer to two or more persons (other than executors and trustees and husband and wife) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. n99

Montana. Joint interest created when expressly declared in the transfer to be a joint tenancy, or when granted or devised to executors or trustees as joint tenants. n100 Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless declared to be "a joint interest." n101

Nevada. Transfer to two or more persons (except to executors and trustees) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be in joint tenancy. n102

New Hampshire. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless expressly stated that estate is to be held "as joint tenants, or to them and the survivor of them" or unless other words are used clearly expressing an intention to create a joint tenancy. The addition, following the names in the granting clause of the words "as joint tenants with right of survivorship" or "as tenants by the entirety" constitutes a clear expression of intention to create a joint tenancy. n103

New Jersey. To create an estate in joint tenancy, the transfer must expressly set forth that it is intended to create an estate in joint tenancy and not an estate of tenancy in common. n104

New Mexico. Transfer to two or more persons other than executors or trustees creates tenancy in common, unless clearly expressed to create joint tenancy. n105 Conveyance or mortgage to two or more persons designated "as joint tenants" means to them as joint tenants "and to the survivor of them and the heirs and assigns of the survivor." n106 Transfer "to two or more persons as joint tenants, to two or more persons and to the survivor of them and the heirs and assigns of the survivor, or to two or more persons with right of survivorship" is prima facie evidence of a joint tenancy and conclusive as to purchasers or encumbrancers for value; in litigation joint tenancy may be established by a preponderance of the evidence. n107

New York. Transfer to two or more persons (except as executors, trustees or guardians) creates tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be a joint tenancy. n108

North Carolina. Right of survivorship in joint tenancy abolished, but a "joint tenancy with right of survivorship" may be created if the instrument expressly provides for a right of survivorship. n109 Joint tenancies preserved for joint trustees, n110 joint mortgagees or trustees with a power of sale, n111 and joint executors or administrators. n112

North Dakota. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless acquired by them in partnership for partnership purposes, or "unless declared in its creation to be a joint tenancy." n113 Transfer to executors or trustees as joint tenants creates joint tenancy. n114

Ohio. Transfer to two or more persons "for their joint lives and then to the survivor or survivors of them" creates a "survivorship tenancy"; transfer containing language showing clear intent to create a survivorship tenancy to be liberally construed to do so. n115 Although a survivorship tenant may transfer his or her share, it is conditioned on the survivorship of the grantor and does not affect the interest of a survivorship tenant who does not join in the conveyance, that is, it does not sever the estate. n116

Oklahoma. Devise to more than one person creates tenancy in common. n117 Joint tenancy may be created if expressly declared. n118

Oregon. Transfer to two or more persons (except to husband and wife) or to executors or trustees creates tenancy in common, unless it is clearly and expressly declared that transferees take "with right of survivorship." Declaration of right of survivorship creates "tenancy in common in the life estate with cross-contingent remainders in the fee simple." Joint tenancy abolished; use of words "joint tenants" without indication of an intent to create a right of survivorship creates tenancy in common. n119

Pennsylvania. Right of survivorship abolished. n120

Rhode Island. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, "unless it be declared that the tenancy is to be joint, or that the same is to such persons and the survivors or survivor of them, or to them as trustees or executors, or unless the intention manifestly appears that such persons shall take as joint tenants and not as tenants in common." n121

South Carolina. Joint tenancy severed by death of joint tenant, and estate is distributed as a tenancy in common, "unless the instrument which created the joint tenancy expressly provides for a right of survivorship." n122

South Dakota. Transfer to two or more persons creates joint tenancy when expressly declared to be in joint tenancy (or when to executors or trustees as joint tenants). n123 Every interest in favor of two or more persons is an interest in common, "unless acquired by them in partnership, for partnership purposes, or unless declared on its creation to be a joint interest." n124

Tennessee. Right of survivorship abolished. n125

Texas. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant, but right of survivorship may be provided by written agreement of joint owners; no agreement may be inferred from fact that property is held in joint ownership. n126

Utah. Conveyance to two or more persons creates a tenancy in common, unless expressly declared to be otherwise; joint tenancy may be described by words "joint tenancy," "with rights of survivorship," "and to the survivor of them," or words of similar import. n127

Vermont. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless it is expressed that transferees take "jointly" or "as joint tenants" or "in joint tenancy" or "to them and the survivors of them"; exception for transfers in trust or to husband and wife or in which it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy. n128

Virginia. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant. n129 Exceptions for joint tenancy of executors or trustees and for transfer in which it manifestly appears that it was intended that the part of one dying should then belong to the others. n130

Washington. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant. n131 Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless acquired by partners for partnership purposes, or declared to be a joint tenancy, or acquired by executors or trustees. n132

West Virginia. Joint tenancy severed by death of one joint tenant. n133 Exceptions for joint tenancy of executors or trustees and for transfer in which it manifestly appears that it was intended that the part of one dying should then belong to the others. n134 Title in multiple owners whose names are linked by "the disjunctive 'or'" is joint tenancy with right of survivorship, unless expressly stated otherwise. n135

Wisconsin. Transfer to two or more persons creates tenancy in common, unless intention to create joint tenancy is expressed. n136 Joint tenancy may be created if intention to do so is expressed; expressions of intention include "as joint tenants," "as joint owners," "jointly," "or the survivor," "with right of survivorship." n137 Transfer to persons married to one another creates joint tenancy, unless intention to create tenancy in common is expressed. n138 Co-personal representatives and cotrustees hold property as joint tenants. n139

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: creat! or establis! w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 20. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 192 (1766). Blackstone added that a tenancy in common would also arise in case of the destruction of a tenancy in coparcenary without severance of possession.

(n2)Footnote 21. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 186 (1766). On joint life estates, see § 31.06(f), supra.

(n3)Footnote 22. See § 31.06(c), supra.

(n4)Footnote 23. See § 33.06(c), infra.

(n5)Footnote 24. See § 33.08(d), infra. The transformation of the tenancy by the entirety into a tenancy in common, once it occurs, is final; that is to say, the remarriage of the parties does not revive the tenancy by the entirety. Barrett v. Barrett, 614 A.2d 299 (Pa. 1992).

(n6)Footnote 25. See § 31.08(c), supra.

(n7)Footnote 26. Sorel v. Sorel, 1 S.W.3d 867 (Tex. App. 1999).

(n8)Footnote 27. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 179 (1766).

(n9)Footnote 28. See Butler ex rel. Butler v. Rafferty, 792 N.E.2d 1055 (N.Y. 2003) (brother and sister, tenants in common, contracted for exclusive possession of respective halves; brother not liable in tort for injury occurring on sister's half).

(n10)Footnote 29. At least one state, Wisconsin, has enacted the presumption. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.20 (tenants in common presumed to own equal shares, unless contrary intent expressed in instrument of transfer).

(n11)Footnote 30. Tipp v. Skjelset, 947 P.2d 480 (Mont. 1997) (presumption of equal shares may by rebutted by parol evidence); Bradford v. Dumond, 675 A.2d 957 (Me. 1996) (unequal contributions to purchase of tenancy in common is evidence of intention to hold unequal shares).

(n12)Footnote 31. See Burt v. Skrzyniarz, 526 S.E.2d 848 (Ga. 2000).

(n13)Footnote 32. In the Matter of Teranis, 128 F.3d 469 (7th Cir. 1997) (applying Wisconsin law).

(n14)Footnote 33. Thomas Littleton, Tenures § 278 (ca. 1481).

(n15)Footnote 34. Cf. Preston v. Smith, 293 S.W.2d 51 (Tenn. 1956) (husband and wife acquiring title by adverse possession take as tenants in common), noted in 16 Md. L. Rev. 352 (1956), 22 Mo. L. Rev. 91 (1957), 24 Tenn. L. Rev. 892 (1957), 10 Vand. L. Rev. 460 (1957). Note that joint tenancy is not a meaningful alternative in Tennessee, the right of survivorship having been eliminated by statute; the choice in Tennessee when married persons are involved is between tenancy in common and tenancy by the entirety.

(n16)Footnote 35. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766).

(n17)Footnote 36. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 note (Joseph Chitty ed. 1826).

(n18)Footnote 37. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 193-94 (1766) (italics in original).

(n19)Footnote 38. See § 31.06(f), supra.

(n20)Footnote 39. See § 31.06(d), supra.

(n21)Footnote 40. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20(A).

(n22)Footnote 41. Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.180. See also Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14a; Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-117; Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.17(3).

(n23)Footnote 42. See, e.g., Dalton v. Real Estate & Improvement Co., 92 A.2d 585 (Md. 1952) (tenancy in common in right-of-way easement); ECM, Inc. v. Placer Dome U.S., Inc., Nos. 96-15966, 96-16019, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 34851 (9th Cir. 1997) (tenancy in common in leasehold); Enron Oil & Gas Co. v. Worth, 947 P.2d 610 (Okla. Ct. App. 1997) (tenancy in common in mineral estate). Owners of boundary line trees are considered tenants in common. Holmberg v. Bergin, 172 N.W.2d 739 (Minn. 1969).

(n24)Footnote 43. E.g., Wachter Dev. v. Gomke, 544 N.W.2d 127 (N.D. 1996).

(n25)Footnote 44. Margarite v. Ewald, 381 A.2d 480 (Pa. Super. 1977) (grant "to H and W, his wife, and X" held to create tenancy by the entirety in H and W in one-half with other one-half held by X, the two halves held in tenancy in common); In re Estate of Michael, 218 A.2d 338 (Pa. 1966) (tenants by the entirety).

(n26)Footnote 45. Watson v. Gray, 14 Ch. D. 192 (1880); 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law 438 (12th ed. by O.W. Holmes, 1873).

(n27)Footnote 46. Covert v. Richards, 535 N.W.2d 701 (Neb. 1995); Sakele Brother, LLC v. Safdie, 752 N.Y.S.2d 626 (2002).

(n28)Footnote 47. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.130.

(n29)Footnote 48. Voss v. Brooks, 907 P.2d 465 (Alaska 1996) (grant to two unmarried persons "as joint tenants" held to create tenancy in common).

(n30)Footnote 49. Iowa Code Ann. § 557.15.

(n31)Footnote 50. See § 31.05, supra.

(n32)Footnote 51. See § 31.06(e), supra.

(n33)Footnote 52. N.Y. Estates, Powers And Trusts Law § 6-2.2(a).

(n34)Footnote 53. See § 31.06(e), supra.

(n35)Footnote 54. On tenancy in partnership, see Chapter 34, infra.

(n36)Footnote 55. Tiffany, Real Property 674 (new abridged ed. 1940).

(n37)Footnote 56. E.g., N. C. Gen. Stat. § 39-1.1(a):

In construing a conveyance executed after January 1, 1968, in which there are inconsistent clauses, the courts shall determine the effect of the instrument on the basis of the intent of the parties as it appears from all the provisions of the instrument.

(n38)Footnote 57. This prescription obviously presumes the desuetude of the old rule excluding extrinsic evidence in cases of patent ambiguity. Kipp v. Chip's Estate, 732 A.2d 127 (Vt. 1999) (rejecting common law rule of construction favoring granting over habendum clause in case of inconsistency, but refusing to admit extrinsic evidence of grantor's intent, including scrivener's testimony, because of statutory preference in favor of tenancy in common).

(n39)Footnote 58. In re Estate of Hillyer, 664 So. 2d 361, 362 (Fla. App. 1995) ("A tenancy in common is considered jointly owned property.") But see Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7 (transfer to two or more persons to hold "jointly" results in joint tenancy).

(n40)Footnote 59. A drafter may, of course, in creating a tenancy in common for joint lives, limit a remainder to the survivor (or to some other person).

(n41)Footnote 60. In re McDow, 248 B.R. 466 (M.D. Fla. 2000); Keiser v. Koester, No. A-96-1045, 1997 Neb. App. LEXIS 122.

(n42)Footnote 61. Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.180. See also Alaska Stat. § 34.15.130; Voss v. Brooks, 907 P.2d 465 (Alaska 1996) (grant to two unmarried persons "as joint tenants" held to create tenancy in common).

(n43)Footnote 62. Va. Code Ann. § 55-20.

(n44)Footnote 63. Va. Code Ann. § 55-21.

(n45)Footnote 64. Hoover v. Smith, 444 S.E.2d 546 (Va. 1994).

(n46)Footnote 65. Marshall v. Nelson, 622 So. 2d 889 (Ala. 1993).

(n47)Footnote 66. Ala. Code § 35-4-7.

(n48)Footnote 67. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.130.

(n49)Footnote 68. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.110.

(n50)Footnote 69. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 33-431.

(n51)Footnote 70. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 25-211.

(n52)Footnote 71. Collier v. Collier, 242 P.2d 537 (Ariz. 1952).

(n53)Footnote 72. Ark. Code § 28-8-101.

(n54)Footnote 73. Ark. Code § 18-12-603.

(n55)Footnote 74. Cal. Civ. Code § 683(a).

(n56)Footnote 75. Cal. Probate Code § 21106.

(n57)Footnote 76. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 38-31-101.

(n58)Footnote 77. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 47-14a.

(n59)Footnote 78. Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 701.

(n60)Footnote 79. D.C. Code Ann. § 45-216.

(n61)Footnote 80. Fla. Stat. § 689.15.

(n62)Footnote 81. Ga. Code § 44-6-190(a).

(n63)Footnote 82. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509.1.

(n64)Footnote 83. Idaho Code § 55-508.

(n65)Footnote 84. Idaho Code § 55-104.

(n66)Footnote 85. 765 Ill Comp. Stat. 1005/1.

(n67)Footnote 86. Ind. Code Ann. § 32-1-2-7.

(n68)Footnote 87. Ind. Code Ann. § 32-1-2-8.

(n69)Footnote 88. Iowa Code Ann. § 557.15.

(n70)Footnote 89. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-501.

(n71)Footnote 90. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.120.

(n72)Footnote 91. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.130.

(n73)Footnote 92. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 158.

(n74)Footnote 93. Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 2-117.

(n75)Footnote 94. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7.

(n76)Footnote 95. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554.44.

(n77)Footnote 96. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554.45.

(n78)Footnote 97. Minn. Stat. § 500.19(1).

(n79)Footnote 98. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n80)Footnote 99. Mo. Ann. Stat. § 442.450 (Vernon 1986).

(n81)Footnote 100. Mont. Code Ann. § 70-1-307.

(n82)Footnote 101. Mont. Code Ann. § 70-1-314.

(n83)Footnote 102. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 111.060.

(n84)Footnote 103. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:18.

(n85)Footnote 104. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 46:3-17.

(n86)Footnote 105. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. 1978, § 47-1-15.

(n87)Footnote 106. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. 1978, § 47-1-35.

(n88)Footnote 107. N. Mex. Stat. Ann. 1978, § 47-1-16.

(n89)Footnote 108. N.Y. Estates, Powers and Trusts Law § 6-2.2(a).

(n90)Footnote 109. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-2. See John V. Orth, *The Joint Tenancy Makes a Comeback in North Caro*lina, 69 N.C. L. Rev. 491 (1991).

(n91)Footnote 110. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 41-3.

(n92)Footnote 111. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 45-8.

(n93)Footnote 112. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 28A-13-5.

(n94)Footnote 113. N.D. Cent. Code § 47-02-08.

(n95)Footnote 114. N.D. Cent. Code § 47-02-06.

(n96)Footnote 115. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.20. Survivorship deed is given statutory short form in Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.17.

(n97)Footnote 116. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 53-2.20(C)(2).

(n98)Footnote 117. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 84, § 184.

(n99)Footnote 118. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74.

(n100)Footnote 119. Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.180.

(n101)Footnote 120. Pa. Stat. Ann. tit. 68, § 110. Notwithstanding the statute, a joint tenancy with right of survivorship may be created by transfer if expressly declared, the usual form of words being "as joint tenants with right of survivorship and not as tenants in common." In re Estate of Michael, 218 A.2d 338 (Pa. 1966). The effect of judicial construction, in other words, has been to transform the statute from one abolishing the right of survivorship in joint tenancies into one raising a rebuttable presumption in favor of tenancies in common.

(n102)Footnote 121. R.I. Gen. Laws § 34-3-1.

(n103)Footnote 122. S.C. Code Ann. § 62-2-804.

(n104)Footnote 123. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-2-12.

(n105)Footnote 124. S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 43-2-17.

(n106)Footnote 125. Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-1-107.

(n107)Footnote 126. Tex. Probate Code § 46(a). See Don T. Cates, Legislation, Joint Tenancy in Texas, 9 Baylor L. Rev. 118 (1957).

(n108)Footnote 127. Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-5.

(n109)Footnote 128. Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 27, § 2.

(n110)Footnote 129. Va. Code Ann. § 55-20.

(n111)Footnote 130. Va. Code Ann. § 55-21.

(n112)Footnote 131. Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 64.28.010.

(n113)Footnote 132. Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 64.28.020.

(n114)Footnote 133. W. Va. Code § 36-1-19.

(n115)Footnote 134. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(a).

(n116)Footnote 135. W. Va. Code § 36-1-20(b).

(n117)Footnote 136. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.18.

(n118)Footnote 137. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(1).

(n119)Footnote 138. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(2).

(n120)Footnote 139. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 700.19(4).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.07

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.07 Incidents of Tenancies in Common.

[Go To Supp]

As already observed in the analytical synopsis of the law of tenancies in common (§ 32.02), each tenant in common has a share that is alienable, devisable, and inheritable. Although lacking what Sir William Blackstone called the "grand incident" of concurrent estates -- the right of survivorship n140-- and bound together by only one of the four unities -- the unity of possession -- tenancies in common nonetheless share with other forms of concurrent ownership the same potential for problems caused by two or more cotenants n141 having simultaneous rights in the same thing. The same problems are met by the same remedies: for damage to the freehold to the detriment of a cotenant, the action of waste (§ 32.07(a)); for contribution to the necessary expenses of preserving the estate, the action for contribution (§ 32.07(b)); for profits from the estate at the expense of a cotenant, the action of account (§ 32.07(c)); and for the ouster of one cotenant by another, the action of ejectment (§ 32.07(d)). Creditors' rights, dependent on the rights of individual cotenants, are also considered (§ 32.07(e)).

As a preliminary matter, it may be observed that the law governing the relations between cotenants is marked by a degree of vagueness; rules are applied "under all the circumstances." To an extent, this is unavoidable: many of the disputed relationships between cotenants are sorted out in the context of partition proceedings, which are equitable in nature. Furthermore, the courts are understandably reluctant to assume a supervisory role in on-going relationships marked by discord. The power of alienation and the right to partition, possessed by every cotenant (except tenants by the entirety), provide openings for exit from contentious relationships, and rules are sometimes applied with an eye to encouraging their exercise.

§ 32.07(a) Action of Waste.

Tenants in common hold "by one and the same undivided possession." n142 From this unity of possession it follows that damage to any part of the freehold caused by one tenant in common is an injury to another tenant in common. The remedy is an action of waste, made available as Blackstone explained, by the ancient Statute of Westminster II, adopted in 1285. n143 Ordinarily the action of waste protects the holder of a future interest against damage to the inheritance by a present possessor, so its use by one tenant in common against another is not free from difficulty: each has a share only, albeit an undivided one, in the estate of inheritance. Nonetheless, until the shares are divided by partition, the cotenant accused of waste cannot assert in defense that the damage was to an interest no larger than the cotentant's own share.

Damage to the freehold includes any permanent diminishment in its value. In the case of mineral deposits, the classic example of "wasting assets," removal by one tenant in common causes injury to another tenant in common. n144 The case is not so clear where the resource is a renewable one. Cutting timber was recognized in England as waste, presumably because of the long period of maturation, although in America, where trees were once superabundant, this rule was abandoned. Ordinary farming operations that do not unreasonably deplete the soil should not be treated as waste, since they leave the productive asset unaffected.

Whether one tenant in common has caused damage to the freehold constituting waste may be difficult to determine when the alleged waste is permissive, that is, resulting from an omission to act, such as by failing to keep a structure wind and water tight. This problem should be addressed in tandem with the problem of contribution for necessary expenses, covered in the following subsection. If a cotenant in possession is chargeable with permissive waste for allowing a building to fall into disrepair, that is, has a duty to a cotenant out of possession to make necessary repairs, then the cotenant in possession should have a correlative right to call on the other for contribution. Without a duty to share the cost, a cotenant out of possession should not be able to hold a cotenant in possession liable for permissive waste.

It is sometimes implied that a cotenant in possession making necessary repairs is not entitled to contribution because of the benefit enjoyed of use and occupation. n145 Yet this seems contradictory both to the theory of concurrent ownership and to practical fairness. The theory of concurrent estates is that each cotenant has an equal right to possession: the "unity of possession" does not require actual occupancy. In practice it would be capricious to hold a cotenant in possession liable only for the cost of repairs that happen to become necessary during his or her occupation.

If waste has already occurred, the remedy is damages, measured by the diminishment in value of the complaining cotenant's undivided share. As with waste in other circumstances, waste by one co-tenant may give rise to treble damages; this may be particularly true with respect to those concurrent estates in which a fiduciary relationship is recognized. n146 If waste is in prospect, an injunction may be granted, but only if the threatened conduct is particularly serious or malicious. Where the issue of past waste arises in a partition proceeding, it should be charged to the one responsible. In a partition in kind, the part wasted, if geographically distinct, should be assigned to the one who committed the waste; the shares, of course, should be valued as if the waste had not occurred. The idea is as old as the Statute of Westminster II: "And if he do choose to take his Part in a Place certain, the Part wasted shall be assigned for his Part, as it was before he committed the Waste." n147 In a partition by sale and division of the proceeds, the cost should be attributed to the share of the one responsible.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: waste w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

§ 32.07(b) Action for Contribution.

Claims for waste typically arise against a cotenant in possession for damage to the freehold; claims for contribution arise against a cotenant out of possession for a proportionate share of expenses. When a cotenant improves the property at the cotenant's own initiative, a claim against another cotenant for a share of expenses should be rejected. "A man cannot be improved out of his estate"; n148 in other words, a cotenant cannot be compelled to contribute to the expenses of improvement, lest the costs reduce, or even destroy, the unrealized value of the undivided share. An improver dissatisfied with this rule can always exercise the right to partition. In a partition in kind, the improver should be awarded, insofar as possible, the share benefited by the improvement; in a partition by sale and division of the proceeds, the improver should be awarded the increment in value attributable to the improvement, which is not necessarily the same amount as the cost of the improvement. Short of partition, an action of account (described in the next subsection) can take the improvement into consideration in determining the cotenants' respective shares; increased income attributable to the improvement should be allotted to the improver. Exactitude will be impossible in any of these calculations, and doubts should be resolved against the improver. Before making the improvement a prudent cotenant would have secured the agreement of the other cotenant or cotenants or have partitioned the estate.

On the contrary, when the expenses are not discretionary, contribution should be enforced. In this case there is no possibility of being "improved out of the estate"; rather, the expenses are a necessary cost of preserving the estate. Repairs needed to keep a structure wind and water tight are a case in point. If the action of waste is available to enforce the duty to make such repairs, then, as pointed out in the preceding subsection, the cotenant who could have enforced the duty against another cotenant should logically be required to contribute to its cost. In the case of necessary repairs, it is possible to deny both the action of waste and the action for contribution; there may be no public policy in discouraging what would otherwise be permissive waste. As in the case of improvements, partition is always available to a dissatisfied cotenant.

Taxes are another matter. Unlike improvements, they are not discretionary, and unlike deterioration of private property, their prompt and efficient collection is a matter of public concern. Where taxes on co-owned property are a joint and several liability, their payment by one cotenant is a public duty and discharges the public duty of another cotenant; in such cases the tax-paying cotenant should be entitled to contribution from another cotenant. n149 The result should be the contrary where the undivided interests are separately assessed for taxes. n150 Separate assessment for taxes may raise another issue. Failure of one tenant in common to pay the assessed taxes will trigger a tax foreclosure and eventual sale of the undivided interest, but unless a notice of the delinquency is served on the other tenants in common before sale, they may discover themselves in a cotenancy with a stranger. The courts are divided on whether notice is required in such cases, n151 although it is difficult to see why an involuntary sale should trigger a right to notice when a voluntary sale does not. While there seems to be no reason to refuse a present action for money in appropriate cases, it is also possible to attain the same economic result by equitable liens so that in case of partition (in kind or by sale and division of the proceeds) or in an action of accounting the tax-paying cotenant will be compensated. n152

Mortgage payments are often analogized to taxes although they differ in that the original source of the obligation was voluntarily assumed. While it is certainly appropriate to enforce an express agreement to contribute and while an implied agreement may well be instinct in the circumstances, it is submitted in this case that it is not essential for the law to impose a duty to contribute apart from agreement.

While not strictly part of the discussion of the action for contribution, failure to pay taxes or a mortgage may raise the question of a cotenant's scope of action in case of foreclosure and sale. May a cotenant bid at the sale in an attempt to buy the property as sole owner? The answer depends on whether there exists a relationship of trust and confidence between the cotenants. Although often recognized by the courts, the fiduciary relationship is properly grounded in a relationship apart from the merely proprietary one; the co-owners, for example, may be members of the same family who took the property by testate or intestate succession, or they may be business associates engaged in a common venture. n153 But, as one court pointed out: "Although tenants in common have a good faith obligation in their dealings in regard to jointly owned property, unless other facts show that one party reposed special confidence in the other, a fiduciary relationship does not exist between the tenants." n154 No fiduciary relationship would seem to bind strangers who happen to share ownership, as for example, a cotenant and another who acquired the share of a deceased cotenant. n155 As another court observed: "One co-tenant may not even know who other co-tenants are." n156

Even if a fiduciary relationship is found to exist, it may be questioned whether it ought to prevent a cotenant from acting in the cotenant's own interest in the absence of any evidence of fraud or overreaching. Obviously, if one cotenant is not permitted to hold the redeemed estate in severalty, another cotenant is required to make contribution before claiming an unencumbered share. To preserve the interest the delinquent cotenant must contribute within a reasonable time, a period that must be determined with respect to all the circumstances. n157 Any such belated right to a share conditioned on a duty to contribute suggests that an action for contribution was available all along.

The cases on contribution are often complicated by the fact that one of the cotenants, usually the one demanding contribution, is enjoying the benefits of possession, while the other cotenant is not. As noted in the following subsection, an action of account does not normally provide recovery for anything except rents and profits received in excess of the cotenant's proportionate share. The benefits of possession often may seem in a rough way to offset the claim for contribution. It would appear, however, that the fact of who is in possession of the property should properly be irrelevant since each cotenant has an equal right to possession. As always, a dissatisfied cotenant can secure a partition. The action for contribution, which is the legal remedy provided for violation of a cotenant's right, should be distinguished from an action for violation of a contract; that is to say, cotenants may by contract impose duties other than and greater than those imposed by law on all tenants in common. n158

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: contribution w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

§ 32.07(c) Action of Account.

Just as the action of waste protects a tenant in common if another tenant in common damages the estate, so the action of account protects a tenant in common if another tenant in common profits from the estate. The common law originally refused to recognize a right by one tenant in common to demand an accounting: the unity of possession was thought to entitle each tenant in common equally to any proceeds, so the first to receive any profits could keep them. The only exception was where one tenant in common agreed to act as bailiff for the other, then an action could be brought if the terms of the agreement were breached. The action of account was finally created by statute in 1706, the oft-cited "Statute of Queen Anne," which permitted actions of account "by one ... tenant in common ... against the other, as bailiff for receiving more than comes to his just share or proportion... ." n159 By constituting each tenant in common a bailiff for the other insofar as receipts were concerned, the statute brought every tenancy in common within the exception.

Received in America as part of the common law or adopted in various forms by the states, n160 the Statute of Queen Anne continues to shape the remedy. An Oregon statute, for example, closely tracks its English forerunner:

> A tenant in common may maintain any proper action, suit or proceeding against his cotenant for receiving more than his just proportion of the rents or profits of the estate owned by them in common. n161

The key word in the statute is "receiving." The theory, as has been described, was based on the legal fiction of each tenant in common serving as bailiff for the other and was effective as far as it went. Left outside the scope of the statute were benefits enjoyed by one tenant in common, for example, the benefit of occupying part or all of the estate. No receipts are generated in such cases, so the stewardship of the fictitious bailiff cannot be invoked. Because of the unity of possession, each tenant in common is equally entitled to the intangible benefits of ownership. Some commentators have argued that the economic value of the benefit enjoyed should be treated as a receipt. n162 It is probably better policy not to extend the remedy. n163 A dissatisfied tenant in common is free to enter and enjoy the possession or to transfer the cotenant's share of the estate or demand partition at any time.

Because a cotenant is entitled to rely on the faithfulness of the other cotenant, there is no time limit set for the bringing of an action of account; that is to say, one cotenant may rely on the cotenant receiving rents and profits ("the bailiff") to account for the excess no matter how long the lapse of years. n164 Only if an agreement to account at a certain time is breached or if a demand for an accounting is made and refused does the statute of limitations begin to run on the action. n165

Obviously, an unequivocal claim of sole dominion and control signals adverse possession of the estate and implicates the action of ejectment, the subject of the next subsection. Once adverse possession has been established, but before it has ripened into a limitation title, the adversely possessing cotenant is liable for rent to the cotenant out of possession. n166

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: accounting w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

§ 32.07(d) Action of Ejectment.

Tenants in common hold "by one and the same undivided possession." n167 Because each tenant in common is entitled to possession of the whole, each is enabled to defend the whole possession against strangers. Title may be vindicated and trespassers removed by an action of ejectment brought by any tenant in common. n168 Failure to remove adverse possessors of the concurrent estate may eventually result in loss of title, as with any present estate.

Although possession of real property is normally notice to all the world of the possibility of some kind of claim on behalf of the possessor, in the case of tenancies in common the possession of one tenant in common is not necessarily notice of a claim to more than a share in the tenancy in common; specifically, the possession of a tenant in common who has a prior unrecorded deed from another tenant in common is not secured against the claim of a subsequent purchaser in good faith of the same share. n169

Because each tenant in common is entitled to possession of the whole, each is enabled to give consent to a police search of the entire estate; each tenant in common is held to have assumed the risk that another tenant in common will permit the search in the absence of the other. n170 The consent is generally not valid to permit a search if another tenant in common, present at the same time, objects. n171

More difficult is the question whether an action of ejectment may be brought by one tenant in common against another. In general, the action may be brought if the complaining cotenant has been interfered with in possession, but recognition of the accrual of such a cause of action has momentous consequences, since it may begin the running of the statute of limitations for purposes of adverse possession. In consequence, the courts have been slow to find a merely theoretical interference with possession, normally insisting on an actual ouster. n172 This protects the cotenant out of possession who is entitled to rely on his or her own right to possession unless it is unequivocally contravened.

A cotenant in possession need not necessarily communicate adverseness directly to the cotenant out of possession, but the act signaling ouster must be so open and continuous that any prudent cotenant out of possession would have noticed it. Ordinarily ouster is accomplished by acts in pais, that is, on the ground, but in exceptional cases it may appear in judicial records. n173 Ouster is obvious where one tenant in common conveys the whole estate to a third party who enters into possession, n174 and the recording of a conveyance to a stranger of a fee simple interest by one tenant in common may be evidence of ouster from the entire parcel for purposes of adverse possession. n175 A tenant in common who claims sole title by adverse possession and who alleges that ignorance of the cotenancy excused a failure to provide the other tenants in common with notice bears the burden of proving that there was no reason to believe that a cotenancy existed. n176 In New York a statute restates the common law presumption that possession by one tenant in common is not adverse to the right to possession of another tenant in common but limits the presumption to ten years; n177 thereafter, a presumption of adversity arises. n178 In some cases the evidence of presumptive ouster may be overwhelming. As one court put it:

> [W]here one tenant in common enters upon the whole estate, substantially improves it beyond that ordinarily proper for full enjoyment or use of the estate as a tenant in common, takes all the rents and profits, pays all the taxes, makes it his home and openly claims the whole for more than the period of the statute of limitations, an ouster of his cotenants will be presumed although not otherwise proved. n179

The power of one tenant in common to alienate that tenant's share includes the power to lease the share. Where one tenant in common leases the whole parcel, the presumption is that the lessor is not acting adversely to the interests of the other tenants in common; however, leasing may in combination with other circumstances be evidence of adversity. n180

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: ejectment or trespass w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

§ 32.07(e) Creditors' Rights.

Because each tenant in common has an interest in the estate, a creditor of one cotenant can attach that cotenant's share. Attachment, levy, and even foreclosure and sale of the debtor's interest do not compromise any protected expectation of the other cotenant or cotenants: the creditor is only forcing the debtor to do what the debtor was entitled to do at any time. By the same token, the non-debtor cotenant retains all the usual rights in the estate: the creditor cannot complain, for example, if another cotenant transfers an interest or begins partition proceedings. n181 The creditor, in short, can have no greater rights in the estate than the debtor. A creditor aware of a deed in tenancy in common is not required to investigate the possibility of unequal ownership and may presume equal shares. n182

In case of the bankruptcy of one tenant in common, the bankruptcy trustee is empowered to sell the debtor's interest and may, under circumstances in which the sale of an undivided interest is impractical, sell the interests of the debtor cotenant and the non-debtor cotenant or cotenants. n183 In such cases, a non-debtor cotenant has a right of first refusal to purchase the property at the price at which the sale is to be consummated; n184 if that right is not exercised, the non-debtor cotenant is entitled to the appropriate share of the sale proceeds. n185

Because a judgment creditor's interest in the tenancy in common is limited to the share of the indebted cotenant, another cotenant can convey an undivided share by warranty deed without breach of the covenants for title: the lien is not an encumbrance on the title of the non-debtor cotenant. n186 The courts are divided on whether a non-debtor cotenant has a right to notice of a foreclosure sale of the interest in the commonly owned property of a indebted tenant in common, n187 although, it is difficult to see why an involuntary sale should trigger a right to notice when a voluntary sale does not.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: (creditor w/3 right) w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 140. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 183-84 (1766).

(n2)Footnote 141. Although often used to describe co-owners of an estate held in tenancy in common, the label "cotenants" can also refer to co-owners of estates held in joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety. It is used in this chapter, particularly in the present section on incidents of tenancies in common, to emphasize the fundamental similarities with the law concerning the incidents of joint tenancies and, to a certain degree, the incidents of tenancies by the entirety.

(n3)Footnote 142. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766).

(n4)Footnote 143. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 183, 194 (1766). The Statute of Westminster II is among the earliest in the English statute book. Technically 13 Edw. 1, it is most famous for its first chapter, better known as De

Donis Conditionalibus. Chapter 22 provides the action of waste to one tenant in common against another:

> Whereas two or more do hold Wood, Turfland, or Fishing, or other such Thing in common, wherein none knoweth his several, and some of them do Waste against the Minds of the other, an Action may lie by a Writ of Waste; (2) and when it is come unto Judgement, the Defendant shall choose either to take his Part in a Place certain, by the Sheriff, and by the View, Oath, and Assignment of his Neighbours sworn and tried for the same Intent, or else he shall grant to take nothing from henceforth in the same Wood, Turf-land, and such other, but as his Partners will take. (3) And if he do choose to take his Part in a Place certain, the Part wasted shall be assigned for his Part, as it was before he committed the Waste. (4) And there is such a Writ in this Case, that is to say, Cum. A. & B. tenant boscum pro indiviso, B. fecit vastum, & c.

It is instructive that tenants in coparcenary were not granted the action of waste because they, alone among concurrent owners at the time, could compel partition. See 2 Edward Coke, Institutes 403. The lesson seems to be that the founders of the common law saw no need to arbitrate disputes among co-owners who could escape the concurrent ownership at will.

(n5)Footnote 144. White v. Smyth, 214 S.W.2d 967 (Tex. 1948), noted in 1 Baylor L. Rev. 364 (1949), 27 Tex. L. Rev. 863 (1949). A tenant in common of a mineral estate may prospect and develop the estate but not to the exclusion of the other tenant or tenants in common. Enron Oil & Gas Co. v. Worth, 947 P.2d 610 (Okla. Ct. App. 1997) (tenancy in common in mineral estate).

(n6)Footnote 145. American Law of Property 78 at n. 2 (A. James Casner ed. 1952).

(n7)Footnote 146. Watts v. Krebs, 962 P.2d 387 (Idaho 1998); Iowa Code § 658.1.

(n8)Footnote 147. 13 Edw. 1, c. 22 (1285).

(n9)Footnote 148. Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction To The Law of Real Property 217 (2d ed. 1988).

(n10)Footnote 149. Richardson v. Gibson, 793 So. 2d 801 (Ala. Civ. App. 2001).

(n11)Footnote 150. Jennings v. Bradfield, 454 P.2d 81 (Colo. 1969); Stoltz v. Maloney, 630 P.2d 560 (Ariz. App. 1981); In re Proceedings for Clallam County for Foreclosure of Liens, 922 P.2d 73 (Wash. 1996).

(n12)Footnote 151. Requiring notice: Kneedler v. League Wide, Inc., 979 P.2d 163 (Mont. 1999); Burbach v. Sussex County Municipal Utilities Auth., 723 A.2d 137 (N.J. App. 1999). Not requiring notice: Jennings v. Bradfield, 454 P.2d 81 (Colo. 1969); Jesberg v. Klinger, 358 P.2d 770 (Kan. 1961).

(n13)Footnote 152. Rose v. Holbrook, 287 S.W.2d 914 (Ky. App. 1956), noted in 9 Baylor L. Rev. 232 (1957).

(n14)Footnote 153. Givens v. Givens, 387 S.W.2d 851 (Ky. 1965) (family members); Watts v. Krebs, 962 P.2d 387 (Idaho 1998) (divorced spouse).

(n15)Footnote 154. Turkey Creek, LLC v. Rosania, 953 P.2d 1306, 1312 (Colo. Ct. App. 1998). See also Douglas v. Jepson, 945 P.2d 244 (Wash. App. 1997) (mere existence of tenancy in common without more does not create a fiduciary relationship). But see Alan M. Weinberger, Expanding the Fiduciary Relationship Bestiary: Does Concurrent Ownership Satisfy the Family Resemblance Test, 24 Seton Hall L. Rev. 1767 (1994) (arguing that legal relationship between co-owners is so "intermingled and intertwined" that it ought to be recognized as a fiduciary relationship).

(n16)Footnote 155. Wilson v. S. L. Rey, Inc., 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 (1993) (cotenant acquired share by foreclosure).

(n17)Footnote 156. Douglas v. Jepson, 945 P.2d 244, 248 (Wash. App. 1997).

(n18)Footnote 157. Laura v. Christian, 537 P.2d 1389 (N.M. 1975) (payment of mortgage after foreclosure but prior to sale); Bradley v. Bradley, 554 N.W.2d 761 (Minn. 1996) (action by redeeming cotenant to extinguish right of nonredeeming cotenant for failure to contribute). See also Ex Parte Walker, 739 So.2d 3 (Ala. 1999) (cotenants who waited 63 years to offer to share cost of redemption from tax sale barred from reclaiming their interests).

(n19)Footnote 158. Kalman v. Perry, 1999 Mass. App. Div. 1 (1999).

(n20)Footnote 159. Often cited as 4 Anne, c. 16, § 27, and dated 1705, the statute is properly 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, § 27 (1706). Although the most widely used edition of the English statutes, Pickering's Statutes At Large, makes it appear that Queen Anne's parliament adjourned in December 1705, it actually continued in session into January, when the present statute was enacted. See 11 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 519, 526 (1938). The complete text of "the Statute of Anne" is as follows:

> actions of account shall and may be brought and maintained against the executors and administrators of every guardian, bailiff, and receiver; and also by one joint tenant, and tenant in common, his executors and administrators, against the other, as bailiff for receiving more than comes to his just share or proportion, and against the executor and administrator of such joint tenant, or tenant in common; and the auditors appointed by the court, where such action shall be depending, shall be, and are hereby empowered to administer an oath, and examine the parties touching the matters in question, and for their pains and troubles in auditing and taking such account, have such allowance as the court shall adjudge to be reasonable, to be paid by the party on whose side the balance of the account shall appear to be.

(n21)Footnote 160. Ala. Code § 6-7-40; Alaska Stat. § 34.15.120; Ark. Code §§ 18-60-101; Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 52-404; Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 702; D.C. Code Ann. § 16-101; Ga. Code §§ 44-6-121 to 122; 765 ILCS 1005/4a; Ind. Code Ann. § 34-1-51-1; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-2522; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 953; Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 14-106; Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 554.138; Minn. Stat. § 557.06; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 507:3; N.Y. Real Prop. Acts Law § 1201; Or. Rev. Stat. § 105.820; R.I. Gen. Laws § 10-2-1; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 12, § 4251; Va. Code Ann. § 8.01-31; W. Va. Code § 55-8-13; Wyo. Stat. § 1-32-119.

(n22)Footnote 161. Or. Rev. Stat. § 105.820.

(n23)Footnote 162. Lawrence Berger, An Analysis of the Economic Relations Between Cotenants, 21 Ariz. L. Rev. 1015 (1979).

(n24)Footnote 163. Baird v. Moore, 141 A.2d 324 (N.J. 1958) (no accounting for imputed value of possession by one of two tenants in common); Esteves v. Esteves, 775 A.2d 163 (N.J. App. 2001) (reaffirming the holding in Baird but qualifying it to permit recovery of imputed rent when, on a final accounting following sale, the tenant who had been in possession demands contribution from the tenant who had been out of possession for operating and maintenance expenses); Heyse v. Heyse, 176 N.W.2d 316 (Wis. 1970) (tenant in common in possession is not ordinarily obliged to pay rent to cotenant out of possession); Martin v. Martin, 878 S.W.2d 30 (Ky. App. 1994); Keith v. El-Kareh, 729 P.2d 377 (Colo. App. 1986) ("in the absence of a written agreement, tenants in common are not entitled to rent from each other unless the tenant seeking rent has been ousted from possession"); Ashley v. Baker, 867 P.2d 792 (Alaska 1994); Parceluk v. Knudtson, 139 N.W.2d 864 (N.D. 1966); Yakavonis v. Tilton, 968 P.2d 908 (Wash. App. 1998) ("prior to ouster, there must be an agreement to pay rent ...; after ouster, the occupying cotenant owes the nonoccupying tenant rent"). Contra: Modic v. Modic, 633 N.E.2d 1151 (Ohio App. 1993).

(n25)Footnote 164. Goergen v. Maar, 153 N.Y.S.2d 826 (1956).

(n26)Footnote 165. Heller v. Heller, 45 P.3d 859 (Kan. App. 2002) (action of account accrued when one tenant in common agreed to lease the undivided interest to the other tenant in common, thereby changing their relationship to that of landlord and tenant).

(n27)Footnote 166. Diaz v. Security Union Title Ins. Co., 639 So.2d 1004 (Fla. App. 1994); Yakavonis v. Tilton, 968 P.2d 908 (Wash. App. 1998); Cox v. Cox, 71 P.3d 1028 (Idaho 2003).

(n28)Footnote 167. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766).

(n29)Footnote 168. Dahlberg v. Holden, 238 S.W.2d 699 (Tex. 1951), noted in 30 Tex. L. Rev. 379 (1952).

(n30)Footnote 169. Martin v. Thomas, 49 S.E. 118 (W.Va. 1904).

(n31)Footnote 170. United States v. Matlock, 415 U.S. 164 (1974).

(n32)Footnote 171. State v. Walker, 941 P.2d 1 (Wash. App. 1997).

(n33)Footnote 172. Spiller v. Mackereth, 334 So.2d 859 (Ala. 1976); Coggan v. Coggan, 239 So.2d 17 (Fla. 1970); Smith v. Tremaine, 350 P.2d 180 (Or. 1960); Fallon v. Davidson, 320 P.2d 976 (Colo. 1958), noted in 56 Mich. L. Rev. 1360 (1958); Farnsworth v. O'Neal, 130 So. 101 (Miss. 1930), noted in 4 So. Cal. L. Rev. 325 (1931); Martin v. Martin, 878 S.W.2d 30 (Ky. App. 1994) ("ouster must amount to exclusive possession of the entire jointly held property"); Pitson v. Sellers, 613 N.Y.S.2d 1005 (1994) (ouster requires "a distinct assertion of a right hostile to the owner and brought home to him"); Wheeling Dollar Bank v. City of Delray Beach, 639 So.2d 113 (Fla. App. 1994) (ouster found where one-quarter owner conveyed whole to city which operated public tennis courts on property for 50 years); Freeman v. Freeman, 473 S.E.2d 467 (S.C. App. 1996) ("Only in rare, extreme cases will the ouster by one cotenant of the other cotenants be implied from exclusive possession and dealings with the property, such as collection of rents and improvement of the property."); Perez v. Perez, 644 N.Y.S.2d 168 (N.Y. Sup. 1996); Gonzalez v. Gonzalez, 653 N.Y.S.2d 700 (1997) ("exclusive occupation standing alone, does not constitute an ousting"); Cox v. Cox, 71 P.3d 1028 (Idaho 2003) (ouster found in case of disagreement between cotenants leading one to vacate the premises). See also Purtle v. Denver Roller, Inc., No. CA 99-872, 2000 Ark. App. LEXIS 251 (Ark. App. 2000) (in action concerning disputed ownership of grave plot held as tenancy in common, court observed "[t]here could hardly be any more complete ouster from a grave plot than burial of another in it.").

(n34)Footnote 173. See, e.g., Beck v. Beck, 481 S.E.2d 317 (N.C. App. 1997) (in answer to petition for partition filed over 20 years earlier but not prosecuted, one tenant in common had denied that petitioning tenant in common had any interest in property); Yakavonis v. Tilton, 968 P.2d 908 (Wash. App. 1998) (ouster on date trial court erroneously ruled, in partition action brought by the other cotenant, that the other cotenant was sole owner).

(n35)Footnote 174. Snook v. Bowers, 12 P.3d 771 (Alaska 2000).

(n36)Footnote 175. Wright v. Wright, 512 S.E.2d 618 (Ga. 1999); Buchanan v. Redinger, 975 P.2d 1235 (Kan. App. 1999).

(n37)Footnote 176. Petran v. Allencastre, 985 P.2d 1112 (Haw. App. 1999).

(n38)Footnote 177. N.Y. Real Prop. Actions & Proceedings Law § 541. See Jason Legg, Comment, Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law Section 541: The Mind-Buster Busted, 58 Albany L. Rev. 1485 (1996).

(n39)Footnote 178. See Myers v. Bartholomew, 697 N.E.2d 160 (N.Y. 1998).

(n40)Footnote 179. Unick v. Saint Joseph Loan & Trust Co., 21 N.W.2d 752, 755 (Neb. 1946). See also Collier v. Welker, 199 S.E.2d 691 (N.C. App. 1973) (applying "concept of presumptive ouster": ouster presumed if one tenant in common has been in undisturbed possession for twenty years), noted in 10 Wake Forest L. Rev. 300 (1974); Wachovia Bank of North Carolina v. Weeks, 562 S.E.2d 304 (N.C. App. 2002) (reaffirming Collier and applying concept of "constructive ouster").

(n41)Footnote 180. Wright v. Wright, 512 S.E.2d 618 (Ga. 1999).

(n42)Footnote 181. Rostan v. Huggins, 5 S.E.2d 162 (N.C. 1939), noted in 24 Minn. L. Rev. 707 (1940).

(n43)Footnote 182. In the Matter of Teranis, 128 F.3d 469 (7th Cir. 1997).

(n44)Footnote 183. Bankruptcy Code § 363(h):

> The trustee can sell both the estate's interest and the interest of the non-debtor in property owned as tenants in common, joint tenants, or tenants by the entirety only if:
>
> (1) partition in kind of such property among the estate and such co-owners is impracticable;
>
> (2) sale of the estate's undivided interest in such property would realize significantly less for the estate than sale of such property free of the interest of such co-owners;
>
> (3) the benefit to the estate of a sale of such property free of the interests of co-owners outweighs the detriment, if any, to such co-owners; and
>
> (4) such property is not used in the production, transmission, or distribution, for sale, of electric energy or of natural or synthetic gas for heat, light, or power.

One commentator has described this section as going "too far." Thomas E. Plank, The Constitutional Limits of Bankruptcy, 63 Tenn. L. Rev. 487, 571 (1996).

(n45)Footnote 184. Bankruptcy Code § 363(i).

(n46)Footnote 185. Bankruptcy Code § 363(j).

(n47)Footnote 186. Windell v. Miller, 687 N.E.2d 585 (Ind. App. 1997).

(n48)Footnote 187. Requiring notice: Kneedler v. League Wide, Inc., 979 P.2d 163 (Mont. 1999); Burbach v. Sussex County Municipal Utilities Auth., 723 A.2d 137 (N.J. App. 1999). Not requiring notice: Jennings v. Bradfield, 454 P.2d 81 (Colo. 1969); Jesberg v. Klinger, 358 P.2d 770 (Kan. 1961).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.08

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.08 Termination of Tenancies in Common.

As the simplest form of concurrent ownership, marked by the single unity of possession, the tenancy in common can be terminated by any act that ends the state of multiple ownership. In keeping with the treatment of the termination of other forms of concurrent ownership, the terminating acts are considered under the headings: termination by act of all the tenants in common (§ 32.08(a)), termination by act of one tenant in common (§ 32.08(b)), and termination by operation of law (§ 32.08(c)).

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: termin! w/50 (tenan! w/3 common)

§ 32.08(a) Termination by Act of All Tenants in Common.

Tenancies in common may be terminated by the act of all the tenants in common. Obviously, a grant by all the tenants in common to a stranger as sole owner ("A and B to C and heirs") terminates the tenancy in common; what had been held as a concurrent estate is now held in severalty. It is equally obvious that grants of divided shares ("A and B, the lower forty acres to A and heirs, the upper forty acres to B and heirs") terminate the tenancy in common; what had been an undivided estate held concurrently has become divided estates held in severalty. The former resembles partition by sale and division of the proceeds; the latter is a voluntary partition in kind.

It is also possible for tenants in common to terminate their tenancy by a transfer from themselves as tenants in common to themselves as joint tenants ("A and B to A and B as joint tenants and not as tenants in common"), or -- if they are married to one another -- to themselves as tenants by the entirety ("A and B to A and B, husband and wife, as tenants by the entirety and not as joint tenants"). At common law an intermediate conveyance to a straw man was required to perfect the unities in these cases. As tenants in common, they hold undivided shares by several titles, or several shares by one title, while joint tenants hold by the share and by the whole (per my et per tout). Also joint tenants and tenants by the entirety must, at common law, hold equal shares in order that the unity of interest be satisfied. Straw conveyances are probably no longer required anywhere, although only a few states have legislation expressly addressing the matter. n188

To convey land held in tenancy in common, the joinder of all the tenants is, of course, necessary. Because all the multiple owners may in some cases be difficult to locate, a state may by statute provide means by which less than all the co-owners may transfer a complete interest. n189 Where conveyances by tenants in common take the form of a warranty deed, as is the usual practice, the warrantors are jointly liable in case of breach; an exception to this rule is recognized if the warranty expressly limits each warrantor's liability to his or her own interest. n190

Obviously, it is possible for one tenant in common to authorize the other tenant or tenants in common to convey the concurrent estate on behalf of all. If, however, the requisite statutory formalities for granting the authority, such as the Statute of Frauds' requirement of a writing, are not complied with, the resulting deed is voidable, not void, and therefore susceptible to ratification by the nonparticipating tenant in common. n191

§ 32.08(b) Termination by Act of One Tenant in Common.

Tenancies in common may be terminated by the act of one tenant in common. Obviously, if two persons hold as tenants in common, the release by one of that one's interest to the other will terminate the tenancy in common. The common law requirement of the use of words of inheritance whenever fee interests are conveyed does not apply to releases by one tenant in common to another. n192

Although at common law one tenant in common had no right to force a partition in kind, that right was conceded by statute as early as the reign of King Henry VIII. n193 The proceedings were simplified a century and a half later, at the time of King William III. n194 These statutes were received as part of the common law in America (or local substitutes were adopted), so one tenant in common is now everywhere entitled to a partition in kind; the effect is to give one tenant in common the right to demand a divided share in the estate. Because some estates are unsuited to partition in kind, a later English statute, also copied in America, provides for partition by sale and division of the proceeds. n195

Because a transfer by one tenant in common of that tenant's share to a stranger merely substitutes the grantee for the grantor in the undivided possession, it does not terminate the tenancy in common, in contrast to a joint tenancy. n196 What one tenant in common has to transfer is an undivided interest. An attempt to convey a divided interest, as by describing a particular fraction of the property, is an attempt to partition in kind without the consent of the other tenant or tenants in common and without the safeguards of a judicial partition. While some of the older authorities hold such a conveyance void, the modern rule is to hold it voidable, that is, valid as between the parties until and unless voided by the nontransferring tenant or tenants in common. n197

Although one tenant in common can transfer or encumber that tenant's share, the tenant cannot alter the share of the other tenant or tenants in common; for instance, one tenant in common cannot impose an easement by grant or dedication on the common property. n198 Neither can one tenant in common, by offering the share for sale, compel the other tenant or tenants in common to purchase the offering tenant's share. n199

Each tenant in common has a title that is separate and distinct. In the absence of an agreement to sell the property together, each tenant in common is free to transfer or encumber the interest without the consent or knowledge of the other tenant or tenants in common. In consequence, absent additional facts indicating a fiduciary relationship between the tenants, one tenant in common may profit from information concerning the common property; for example, one tenant in common may purchase another's interest for resale at a higher price without disclosure of the opportunity to the other. n200

In case property is held in tenancy in common, an option in favor of one tenant in common to purchase the share of another tenant in common that is unlimited as to time violates the common-law Rule Against Perpetuities and is void. n201

§ 32.08(c) Termination by Operation of Law.

Tenancies in common may be terminated by operation of law without regard to the act of the tenants in common, together or separately. The key is terminating the concurrent ownership. When the state in its exercise of the power of eminent domain takes part or all of the estate owned by tenants in common, it transfers what had been owned concurrently to itself as sole owner; the cotenants receive the estate's value in money. The effect is identical to a voluntary transfer by all the tenants in common to a sole owner (or to a partition by sale and division of the proceeds) and terminates the tenancy in common. In case of a partial taking, the estate is terminated as to that part and continues as to the rest; the cotenants share the condemnation award in proportion to their respective interests. n202

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 188. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-2 (also authorizing conveyance by tenants in common to themselves and another or others as joint tenants and conveyance by married co-owners to themselves as tenants by the entirety); Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 159 (also authorizing conveyance by tenants in common to themselves and another or others as joint tenants).

(n2)Footnote 189. See, e.g., Ark. Code Ann. § 15-32-501 (sale and removal of timber permitted when at least eighty percent of co-owners join in grant and remaining co-owners cannot be located despite "diligent search and inquiry"; absentee owners' share of sale proceeds to be held by clerk of court).

(n3)Footnote 190. Windell v. Miller, 687 N.E.2d 585 (Ind. App. 1997) (construing grant from two tenants in common who "are each conveying and warranting their respective undivided one-half interest").

(n4)Footnote 191. Treglia v. Zanesky, 788 A.2d 1263 (Conn. App. 2001).

(n5)Footnote 192. 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law 7 (12th ed. by O.W. Holmes, 1873).

(n6)Footnote 193. 31 Hen, 8, c. 1 (1539); 32 Hen. 8, c. 32 (1540).

(n7)Footnote 194. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 3 (1697).

(n8)Footnote 195. 31 & 32 Vict., c. 40 (1868).

(n9)Footnote 196. See § 31.08(b), supra.

(n10)Footnote 197. Toulouse v. Board of Comm'rs of Island County, 949 P.2d 829 (Wash. App. 1998) ("A tenant in common cannot convey her fractional undivided interest in a parcel of property so as to divide it into separate lots."); Kean v. Dench, 413 F.2d 1 (3d Cir. 1969) (applying law of Virgin Islands).

(n11)Footnote 198. Texas Mortgage Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 470 F.2d 497 (5th Cir. 1972) (applying Texas law).

(n12)Footnote 199. In re Scipio, 203 B.R. 237 (Bankr. D Md. 1996).

(n13)Footnote 200. Douglas v. Jepson, 945 P.2d 244 (Wash. App. 1997).

(n14)Footnote 201. Nash v. Scott, 966 S.W.2d 936 (Ark. App. 1998).

(n15)Footnote 202. In re Development Authority of Philadelphia, 257 A.2d 520 (Pa. 1969).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.09

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.09 The Future of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

The future of the law of tenancies in common is almost certainly bright. It is inconceivable that a system of property law would dispense altogether with concurrent ownership. It is only to be expected that two or more persons will want to hold property together, and it is inevitable under modern laws of inheritance that property will sometimes pass to two or more heirs. No imaginable public policy will prohibit concurrent ownership; even in days when the rule of primogeniture expressed a preference for keeping estates together, tenancies in common (as well as other forms of concurrent ownership) were tolerated. The real question, as explored elsewhere, n203 is whether any form of concurrent ownership other than tenancies in common will continue to exist. With its freedom of alienation and devise, its inheritable shares, and its right to partition, the estate of tenancy in common seems ideally suited to the modern ethos of individualism. Tenants in common remain together only so long as each and every one wants to, and no longer. What had been for Blackstone a residual estate, recognized when all else failed, has become the modern paradigm of concurrent ownership. Rather than viewing it as some kind of defective joint tenancy, modern observers tend to see the tenancy in common as the norm from which other forms of concurrent ownership (if any) deviate to one degree or another.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 203. See § 31.09, supra; see § 33.09, infra.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 32.10

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 32.10 Bibliography.

[Go To Supp]

Books

Blackstone, William. "Of Estates in Severalty, Joint-Tenancy, Coparcenary, and Common," in Commentaries on the Laws of England. Vol. 2, Ch. 12. 1766.

Burby, William E. "Common Law Types of Concurrent Ownership," in Handbook of the Law of Real Property. Ch. 18. 3d ed. 1965.

Cunningham, Roger A., William B. Stoebuck & Dale A. Whitman. "Concurrent Ownership of Realty and Personalty," in The Law of Property. Ch. 5. 1984.

Freeman, Abraham C. Cotenancy and Partition (1874).

Moynihan, Cornelius J. "Concurrent Ownership," in Introduction to the Law of Real Property. Ch. 10. 2d ed. 1988.

Niles, Russell D. & William F. Walsh. "Concurrent Estates and Their Characteristics," in American Law of Property. Vol. 2, Part 6. 1952.

Osborne, Duncan. Asset Protection: Domestic and International Law and Tactics, ch. 12 (1995).

Thomas, David. Powell on Real Property(R) Ch. 50, "Tenancy in Common, Tenancy in Partnership, and Tenancy in Coparcenary" (Matthew Bender).

Thompson, George W. "Separate and Concurrent Ownership," in Commentaries on the Modern Law of Real Property. Vol. 4, Ch. 29. 1979.

Tiffany, Herbert Thorndike. "Co-ownership," in The Law of Real Property. Vol. 2, Ch. 9. 3d ed. 1939.

Articles

Adams, J. G., Jr. Note, "Mortgages -- Tenancy in Common -- Right to Improvements." N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 8 (1930) 469 (noting Layton v. Bird, 152 S.E. 161 (N.C. 1930)).

Berger, Lawrence. "An Analysis of the Economic Relations Between Cotenants." Ariz. L. Rev. Vol. 21 (1979) 1015.

Craig-Taylor, Phyllis. "Through a Colored Looking Glass: A View of Judicial Partition, Family Land Loss, and Rule Setting," Wash. U. L. Q. Vol. 78 (2000) 737.

Griffin, Eugene G. Note, "Right of Cotenant to Contribution From Other Cotenants for Unauthorized Repairs and Improvements Made to the Common Property." Notre Dame L. Rev. Vol. 32 (1957) 493.

Heon, Alfred A. Comment, "The Liability of a Cotenant to Other Cotenants for Rents, Profits and Use and Occupation." Marq. L. Rev. Vol. 42 (1959) 363.

Kremer, Dale E. Comment, "The Inter Vivos Rights of Cotenants Inter Se." Wash. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1962) 70.

Legg, Jason. Comment. "Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law Section 541: The Mind-Buster Busted." Alb. L. Rev. Vol. 58 (1996) 1485.

Lewis, Evelyn Alicia. "Struggling with Quicksand: The Ins and Outs of Cotenant Possession Value Liability and a Call for Default Rule Reform." Wis. L. Rev. Vol. 1994 (1994) 331.

Macy, Richard J. Note, "Accountability of a Cotenant for Use and Occupation." Wyo. L.J. Vol. 12 (1958) 156.

Mietus, Edwin R. Note, "The Rights, Duties and Liabilities of Tenants in Common Inter Sese." Marq. L. Rev. Vol. 24 (1940) 148.

Mitchell, Thomas W. "From Reconstruction to Deconstruction: Undermining Black Landownership, Political Independence, and Community Through Partition Sales of Tenancies in Common." Nw. U. L. Rev. Vol. 95 (2001) 505.

Moore, Ronald W. Case Comment, "Toward a Uniform Cotenancy Law." Wash. & Lee L. Rev. Vol. 23 (1966) 391.

Moss, C. Malcolm and Walter W. Siebert. "Classification and Creation of Joint Interests," 1959 U. Ill. L. F. 883.

Murphy, W. Tayloe, Jr. "Cotenancies: A Critique for Creditors." Va. L. Rev. Vol. 48 (1962) 405.

Note, "Brown v. Burton. Tenancy in Common and Survivorship." Va. L.J. Vol. 3 (1879) 517.

Note, "Restrictions on Rights of Co-tenants Respecting the Common Property." Minn. L. Rev. Vol. 5 (1921) 134.

Orr, Eston Wycliffe. Comment, "Adverse Possession Against Tenants in Common in Tennessee," Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 37 (1970) 776.

Ransdell, Phillip C. Note, "One Cotenant's Attempt to Devise or Convey a Specific Portion of Common Property," N.C. L. Rev. Vol. 35 (1957) 431 (noting Taylor v. Taylor, 92 S.E.2d 136 (N.C. 1956)).

Recent Case Note, "Deed of Entire Estate in Severalty by One Cotenant to a Stranger -- Adverse Possession Under Such a Deed." Yale L.J. Vol. 30 (1921) 422 (noting O'Banion v. Simpson, 191 P. 1083 (Nev. 1920)).

Recent Decision, "Accounting of Profits Derived from Illegal Use of Property." Colum. L. Rev. Vol. 22 (1922) 281 (noting Daniel v. Daniel, 198 P. 728 (Wash. 1921)).

Reynolds, Osborne M., Jr. "Co-ownership of Property in Oklahoma." Okla. L. Rev. Vol. 27 (1974) 585.

Townsend, Mahlon L. Comment, "Tenancy in Common in Tennessee." Tenn. L. Rev. Vol. 24 (1957) 853.

Weible, Dudley. "Accountability of Cotenants." Iowa L. Rev. Vol. 29 (1944) 558.

Weinberger, Alan M. "Expanding the Fiduciary Relationship Bestiary: Does Concurrent Ownership Satisfy the Family Resemblance Test?" Seton Hall L. Rev. Vol. 24 (1994) 1767.

Woodul, Robert Y. Note, "Adverse Possession -- Notice to Tenants in Common," Tex. L. Rev. Vol. 10 (1932) 336 (noting Coleman v. Buttram, 40 S.W.2d 977 (Tex. Civ. App. 1931)).

Annotations

Annotation, Accountability of Cotenants for Rents and Profits or Use and Occupation, 27 A.L.R. 184; 39 A.L.R. (1925); 51 A.L.R.2d (1957) 388.

Annotation, Adverse Possession Between Cotenants, 82 A.L.R.2d (1962) 5.

Annotation, Adverse Possession Between Cotenants Who Are Unaware of Cotenancy, 27 A.L.R.4th 420.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Owner's Conveyance to Himself and Another, or to Another Alone, of an Undivided Interest, 44 A.L.R.2d (1955) 595.

Annotation, Basis of Computation of Cotenant's Accountability for Minerals and Timber Removed from the Property, 5 A.L.R.2d (1949) 1368.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Instrument Purporting to Convey One's Own Title or Interest to Himself and Another, 62 A.L.R. (1929) 514.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Instrument Purporting to Convey One's Own Title or Interest to Himself and Another, 137 A.L.R. (1929) 348.

Annotation, Character of Tenancy Created by Instrument Purporting to Convey One's Title or Interest to Himself and Another, or an Undivided Part Thereof to Another, 166 A.L.R. (1947) 1026.

Annotation, Contribution or Allowance as Between Cotenants in Remainder as Affected By Fact That One or More of Them Owns, or Did Own, the Life Estate or an Interest Therein, 98 A.L.R. (1935) 859.

Annotation, Contribution, Subrogation, and Similar Rights as Between Cotenants Where One Pays the Other's Share of Sum Owing on Mortgage or Other Lien, 48 A.L.R.2d (1956) 1305.

Annotation, Cotenant's Right to Contribution in Respect of Taxes, Improvements, or Repairs as Subject to Reduction on Account of Rents and Profits for Which He is Not Otherwise Responsible, 136 A.L.R. (1942) 1022.

Annotation, Estate Created by Conveyance to Husband and Wife as Affected by Language Used in Deed, 161 A.L.R. (1946) 457.

Annotation, Estate Created by Deed to Persons Described as Husband and Wife But Not Legally Married, 9 A.L.R.4th (1981) 1189.

Annotation, Lease to Two or More as Creating a Tenancy in Common or a Joint Tenancy, 113 A.L.R. (1938) 573.

Annotation, Possession by Stranger Claiming Under Conveyance by Cotenant as Adverse to Other Cotenants, 32 A.L.R.2d (1945) 1214.

Annotation, Purchase of Cotenant's Interest at Judicial Sale as Making Purchaser Cotenant, 159 A.L.R. (1945) 395.

Annotation, Right of Defendant to Diminution Damages to Real Property on Account of Interest of Plaintiff's Cotenant Who Is Not Party to the Action, 80 A.L.R. (1932) 992.

Annotation, Right Under Mortgage by Cotenants of Undivided Interests to Foreclose as Against Less Than All of Such Interest, 82 A.L.R. (1933) 1347.

Annotation, Rights and Remedies of Tenant in Common Who Pays His Cotenant's Share of Taxes or Assessments, 48 A.L.R. (1927) 586.

Annotation, Rights of Cotenants inter se as to Oil and Gas, 40 A.L.R. (1926) 1400; 91 A.L.R. (1934) 205.

Annotation, Rights of Cotenants inter se as to Timber, 2 A.L.R. (1919) 993, 41 A.L.R. (1926) 582.

Annotation, Validity and Effect of Devise of a "House," or "Lot," etc. (There Being Two or More) or Devise of Specified Acreage or Other Quantity out of a Larger Tract or from Testator's Estate, with or Without a Right of Selection Expressed, 157 A.L.R. (1945) 1129.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 32.02

Supp. to § 32.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Tenancies in Common.

[Go To Main]

Add at end of note:

Legal systems derived from Roman law express the right to partition with the maxim, "Nemo in communione potest invitus detineri" (No one can be kept in co-ownership against his will).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 32.06

Supp. to § 32.06 Creation of Tenancies in Common.

[Go To Main]

§ 32.06(a) Creation by Operation of Law: The Single Unity: Possession. [Go To Main]

Add at end of the note:

Clark v. Dady, 131 S.W.3d 382 (Mo. App. 2004) (presumption of equal shares may be rebutted by proof of unequal contributions toward purchase price, "provided there is neither a family relationship among the co-tenants nor any evidence of donative intent on the part of those who contributed more than their pro rata amounts").

Add new note 26.1 at end of 5th sentence in second full paragraph: n26.1

§ 32.06(b). Creation by Express Limitation [Go To Main]

§ 32.06(b)(1). At Common Law.

Add at the end of the run-over paragraph:

By judicial decision South Carolina recognizes a so-called "tenancy in common with a right of survivorship."

§ 32.06(b)(2). Under Modern Statutes. Va. Code § 1

Add at the end of the first full paragraph:

For Native Americans subject to the American Indian Probate Reform Act of 2004, the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancy with right of survivorship is reinstated in devises to two or more persons, as part of a program to reduce further fractionation of Indian allotments.

At the end of the first sentence of the second full paragraph, add new note: n57.1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 26.1. Because each tenant in common has "a separate and distinct interest," notice of tax foreclosure proceedings must be sent separately to each cotenant whose interest is being foreclosed. Homeowners Solutions v. Nguyen, 200 P.3d 743 (Wash. App. 2009) .

(n2)Footnote 57.1. Perhaps nothing is simple. A Massachusetts court wrestled with the meaning of a devise to multiple devisees, one of whom was expressly given a "right to occupy for life" and concluded that it resulted in an ordinary tenancy in common with no additional rights to possession in any co-tenant. Hershman-Tcherepnin v. Tcherepnin, 873 N.E.2d 771 (Mass. App. 2007) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 32.07

Supp. to § 32.07 Incidents of Tenancies in Common.

[Go To Main]

§ 32.07(b) Action of Contribution. [Go To Main]

Add at the end of the first full paragraph:

Once an improvement is agreed to by a co-tenant, the co-tenant may not refuse to contribute to its cost merely because the improvement does not result in a permanent increase in the value of the common owned property.

§ 32.07(c) Action of Account. [Go To Main]

Add to Note 163:

Daly v. Shepherd, 645 S.E.2d 485 (Va. 2007) (in absence of ouster, cotenant in possession of property that is capable of co-occupation is not liable to cotenant out of possession for pro rata share of fair rental value).

§ 32.07(d) Action of Ejectment. [Go To Main]

Add at the end of the first full paragraph:

Although each tenant in common is entitled to defend the whole possession against strangers, recovery in an action for damages brought by fewer than all the tenants in common entitles them only to a proportionate share of the total damages.

Replace cited case with:

Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103, 126 S.Ct. 1515 (2006) .

Add before See also signal:

Estate of Duran, 66 P.3d 326 (N.M. 2003) (silence and evasive answers by cotenant in possession about intention regarding property did not constitute ouster).

Add:

Preciado v. Wilde, 139 Cal. App. 4th 321, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792 (2006) (evidence of ouster of a cotenant must "be stronger than that which would be required to establish a title by adverse possession in a stranger").

Scott v. Yarbro, 2008 Tenn. App. LEXIS 615 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 15, 2008) (distinguishing between acts required to extinguish cotenants' title by adverse possession and those required to extinguish cotenants' title by prescription, but finding neither on facts of this case).

Add at the end of the first full paragraph:

Special problems may arise if the purportedly ousted cotenant is incompetent during some or all of the relevant period.

§ 32.07(e) Creditors' Rights. [Go To Main]

Add at the end of the runover paragraph:

Although tenants in common generally have the right to possession of the entire premises, they may contract otherwise. While not affecting the rights of a creditor without notice, a contract may limit liability for personal injuries to the cotenant in possession and control of the site of the injury.

§ 32.08(b) Termination by Act of One Tenant in Common. [Go To Main]

At the end of the last paragraph, add new sentence:

Because partition is considered an essential element of tenancy in common, an attempt by a grantor to prohibit partition is viewed as an invalid restraint on alienation.

At the end of the note, add:

Gray v. Caldwell, 904 So. 2d 212 (Miss. 2005) .

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Supp. To CHAPTER 32 TENANCIES IN COMMON

4-32 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions Supp. to § 32.10

Supp. to § 32.10 Bibliography.

[Go To Main]

Books

Add:

Smith, Roger J. Plural Ownership. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005.

Articles

Bell, Kristen B. "Preserving Your Pocketbook: Narrowing the Unilateral Power of a Co-Owner." 69 La. L. Rev. 139 (2008).

Borden, Bradley T. "Open Tenancies in Common." 39 Seton Hall Law Review. (2009): 387.

Lopez, Lenin E. "A Matter of Semantics: Should Tenancies in Common be Treated as Securities or Real Estate Interests?" 8 Journal of Business & Securities Law. (2007): 1.

Pridemore, Meghan E. B. "Tides, Torrens, and Family Trees: Heirs Property Preservation Challenges," 23 Probate & Property 25 (May/June 2009).

Rivers, Faith. "Inequity in Equity: The Tragedy of Tenancy in Common for Heirs' Property Owners Facing Partition in Equity." 17 Temp. Pol. & Civ. Rts. L. Rev. 1 (2007).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions 33.syn

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.syn Synopsis to Chapter 33: TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

§ 33.01 Concurrent Estates.

Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 520495Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.03 Tenancies by the Entirety in the Context of Concurrent Estates.

§ 33.04 Outline of the Chapter.

Va. Code § 1History of the Law of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.06 Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.06(a) Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety at Common Law.

§ 33.06(b) The Doctrine of the Four Unities, Plus One, "Unity of Person," Based on Marriage.

§ 33.06(c) Special Problem in Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety Caused by the Doctrine of the Four Unities: Conveyance by Grantor to Grantor and Spouse.

§ 33.06(d) Special Problem in Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety Caused by the "Unity of Person": Transfer to Husband, Wife, and Another or Others.

§ 33.06(e) Modern Statutes Concerning Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.06(f) Creation of Estates Similar to Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.07 Incidents of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.07(a) Action of Waste.

§ 33.07(b) Action for Contribution.

§ 33.07(c) Action of Account.

§ 33.07(d) Action of Ejectment.

§ 33.07(e) Creditors' Rights.

§ 33.08 Termination of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.08(a) Termination by Act of Both Tenants by the Entirety.

§ 33.08(b) Termination by Act of One Tenant by the Entirety.

§ 33.08(c) Termination by Operation of Law.

§ 33.08(d) The Effect of Termination by Divorce.

§ 33.09 The Future of the Law of Tenancies by the Entirety.

§ 33.10 Bibliography.

Professor John V. Orth
School of Law
University of North Carolina

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.01

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.01 Concurrent Estates.

Whenever two or more persons own the same thing at the same time, a form of concurrent ownership exists. At common law n1 concurrent estates in land are of three types: joint tenancies, tenancies in common, and tenancies by the entirety -- the latter limited to persons married to one another. (A fourth form of concurrent estate, tenancy in coparcenary, is now obsolete). n2 Concurrent estates in land are not restricted to freehold estates but may exist in leaseholds, easements, and other interests in real property; nor are they restricted to present estates, but may exist in future interests as well. A further form of concurrent ownership is recognized by statute, as opposed to common law, in those states adopting the Uniform Partnership Act. n3 Concurrent ownership of personalty is also recognized, the forms of ownership being copied from those for land.

Whenever property is owned by one person alone, there exists a sole ownership, known -- by contrast to the concurrent tenancies -- as a tenancy in severalty. At common law there is a presumption in favor of sole ownership: in the words of Sir William Blackstone, "all estates are supposed to be of this sort, unless where they are expressly declared to be otherwise." n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The "common law" referred to is the common law of England as it was at the time of American Independence, for which the best and most convenient source is William Blackstone's four-volume Commentaries on the Laws of England, first published in 1765 to 1768. The present author is acutely aware that continuing to refer to this body of law in the present tense is peculiar for a number of reasons: first, because the common law of England continued to grow and change in its native land; second, because the transplanted common law continued to grow and change in the various American jurisdictions; and finally, because there is something truly metaphysical in talking presently about a "law" that is not now recognized and enforced in at least one jurisdiction. Nonetheless, the author is convinced that there continues to be value, not merely heuristic, in using the common law in this sense as the background against which to place all later developments.

(n2)Footnote 2. On tenancy in coparcenary, see Chapter 35, infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Chapter 34, infra. Ever since the days of Joseph Story, it has been recognized that concurrent ownership in and of itself does not establish a partnership. Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Law of Partnership 3-4

(1841); Uniform Partnership Act § 7(2) ("Joint tenancy, tenancy in common, tenancy by the entireties, joint property, common property, or part ownership does not of itself establish a partnership, whether such co-owners do or do not share any profits made by the use of the property."), 7 U.L.A. 18 (1949).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 179 (1766).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.02

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.02 Analytical Synopsis of the Law of Tenancies by the Entirety.

Tenancy by the entirety is a form of concurrent estate; as such, it implies the ownership by more than one person of the same property at the same time. n5 Unlike other forms of concurrent ownership, tenancy by the entirety is limited to persons married to one another. n6 Forms of concurrent ownership are distinguishable by reference to three qualities: (1) alienability, the quality of being transferable inter vivos by sale or gift; (2) devisability, the quality of being transferable at death by devise; (3) inheritability, the quality of passing at death to the heir of the deceased. Neither tenant by the entirety has an interest in the concurrent estate that is devisable or inheritable. n7 By contrast, each joint tenant possesses the power to alienate an undivided interest and sever the estate, but no joint tenant possesses a devisable or inheritable interest; each tenant in common has an interest that is alienable, devisable, and inheritable.

Types of concurrent ownership without devisable and inheritable shares for each co-owner are described as including a "right of survivorship" or jus accrescendi, meaning that on the death of one co-owner the interest of the deceased accrues to the surviving co-owner or co-owners. n8 The survivor or survivors benefit, in other words, at the decease of the co-owner whose interest terminates. "The common law theory," as explained by eminent authorities, "is that the decedent's interest vanishes at death, and therefore no probate is necessary because no interest passes to the survivor at death." n9 No true right exists, the so-called "right of survivorship" merely describing the effect of the death of a co-owner in such forms of concurrent estate. n10 Survivorship is an incident of tenancies by the entirety and joint tenancies; it is lacking in tenancies in common.

Unlike the right of survivorship in joint tenancies, the right of survivorship in tenancies by the entirety is indestructible by any act of one co-tenant, short of ending the marriage. To summarize the result at common law, the holding of each co-tenant in a tenancy by the entirety was described in Law French as being per tout et non per my, "by the whole and not by the share (moiety)," n11 meaning each holds the whole or entire interest but not an undivided share and therefore lacks the power to alienate.

Unlike a tenant in common and a joint tenant, a tenant by the entirety has no right to demand partition of the estate. n12 Before the modern era of fading interspousal immunity, the rule against partition of tenancies by the entirety could be explained on the ground that neither husband nor wife could sue the other. n13 Today it must be supported by a public policy in favor of protecting marital property from the unilateral act of one spouse, including the claims of one spouse's creditors.

Marital property, particularly residential real estate, is in many states also protected from the claims of creditors by a homestead exemption. n14 To this extent homesteads and tenancies by the entirety are similar, but they differ in significant respects. As itemized by one court:

> In contrast to the homestead right, a tenancy by the entirety: (1) is a form of ownership in property; (2) does not arise unless both spouses are owners of the property; (3) is accompanied by a right of survivorship which grants the surviving spouse a fee interest in the entire property (not a personal privilege akin to a life estate); and (4) is a right which cannot pass by intestate succession or will of the predeceased spouse. n15

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 5. The common law did not at first use the concept of ownership with respect to land, preferring to describe those with interests in real property as "tenants," a word derived from the Latin for "holders." What was "held" was, therefore, a "tenancy." See A.W.B. Simpson, A History of the Land Law 47-48 (2d ed. 1986). In modern parlance, tenancy means ownership, and the words are used interchangeably in this chapter.

(n2)Footnote 6. The form of concurrent ownership limited to persons married to one another is referred to in various sources as "tenancy by the entirety," "tenancy by the entireties," and "tenancy by entireties." All mean the same, but in this chapter only the first is used.

(n3)Footnote 7. At one time, the husband holding in tenancy by the entirety with his wife was recognized as having a power to alienate his interest subject only to his wife's right of survivorship; the wife had no comparable power. See § 33.05, infra.

(n4)Footnote 8. See In re Birney, 200 F.3d 225 (4th Cir. 1999) (applying Maryland law) (bankrupt tenant by the entirety does not "inherit" any interest on the death of the other tenant by the entirety, so the entirety property is not available to creditors whose claims are against the bankrupt alone); Fazekas v. Fazekas, 737 A.2d 1262 (Pa. Super. 1999) ("When one spouse dies, the surviving spouse takes no new estate; rather, the only change is in the legal entity holding the estate").

(n5)Footnote 9. Jesse Dukeminier & Stanley M. Johanson, Willls, Trusts, and Estates 350 (6th ed. 2000).

(n6)Footnote 10. The right of survivorship in tenancies by the entirety is sometimes analogized to a future interest. E.g., United States v. Diemer, 859 F. Supp. 126 (D.N.J. 1994) ("Under New Jersey law, tenants by the entirety each 'hold as tenants in common for their joint lives' ..., subject to the other spouse's right of survivorship."); United States v. 44133 Duchess Dr., 863 F. Supp. 492 (E.D. Mich. 1994) ("Under Michigan law, the individual interest of a tenant by the entireties is the functional equivalent of a life estate with a right of survivorship."); Newman v. Chase, 359 A.2d 474 (N.J. 1976) ("[e]ach tenant by the entirety is a tenant in common with the other during the joint lives of the spouses"). The analogy is inexact, as will appear below.

(n7)Footnote 11. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n8)Footnote 12. On partition, see Chapter 38, infra.

(n9)Footnote 13. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 note (W. Lewis ed. 1902).

(n10)Footnote 14. E.g., N.C. Const. art. x, § 1 (exempting realty "to a value fixed by the General Assembly but not less than $1,000, to be selected by the owner thereof"). See John V. Orth, The North Carolina State Constitution: A Reference Guide 151-53 (1993). Other states have more generous provisions.

(n11)Footnote 15. United States v. Jones, 877 F. Supp. 907, 919 (D. N.J. 1995).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.03

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.03 Tenancies by the Entirety in the Context of Concurrent Estates.

At the time of American Independence tenancy by the entirety had only indistinctly emerged as a separate form of concurrent estate. In the first edition of his Commentaries on the Laws of England in 1766 Sir William Blackstone did not so much as mention it in his discussion of concurrent ownership; only in the final, posthumous edition of 1783 was a single-sentence summary of the estate added. n16 No oversight, the omission had occurred because Blackstone did not view ownership by husband and wife as a situation involving multiple owners, "husband and wife being considered as one person in law." In fact, tenancy by the entirety was as much a creature of common law concepts of marriage and the status of women as it was of concepts of concurrent ownership. If marriage resulted in the formation of one new legal entity, then it would be no truer of the marital unit than of a corporation to speak of it as holding a concurrent estate. n17 As married women gradually gained recognition of their legal personality, the estate of tenancy by the entirety came to be seen as a specialized form of joint tenancy, limited to persons married to one another and, for reasons of public policy, inseverable by the act of one spouse.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 16. "And therefore, if an estate in fee be given to a man and his wife, they are neither properly joint-tenants, nor tenants in common: for husband and wife being considered as one person in law, they cannot take the estate by moieties, but both are seised of the entirety, per tout et non per my; the consequence of which is, that neither the husband nor the wife can dispose of any part without the assent of the other, but the whole must remain to the survivor." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783). See John V. Orth, Tenancy by the Entirety: The Strange Career of the Common Law Marital Estate, 1997 B.Y.U. L. Rev. 35.

(n2)Footnote 17. While admitting that "there is something metaphysical -- and to the modern mind something peculiar -- about this ancient transformation upon death of the first tenant," one judge likened it to a corporation owning real property:

> If the corporation is owned by two shareholders and one shareholder dies, the ownership of the real property does not change. Title remains vested in the corporation even if the shareholder's death results in the transfer of the decedent's stock interest to the survivor.

In re Hunter, 284 B.R. 806, 811 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 2002) (Mayer, J.).

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.04

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.04 Outline of the Chapter.

Because tenancy by the entirety was to begin with as much a part of the law concerning marriage as it was of the law of concurrent estates, the historical survey of the law of tenancies by the entirety with which the chapter begins (§ 33.05) must take into account the legal capacity of married women to own property, as well as concepts of concurrent ownership among persons sui juris. Thereafter, the modern estate is considered under three broad headings: creation of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.06), incidents of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.07), and termination of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.08). After a brief consideration of the likely future of the law of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.09), the chapter will conclude with a select bibliography of the law of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.10).

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.05

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.05 History of the Law of Tenancies by the Entirety.

Va. Code § 1

From very early times the common law recognized the capacity of unmarried women (femes sole) to hold property. Although in the law of inheritance males of the same degree were preferred to females, women were accepted as heirs. n18 For reasons no longer completely clear, the rule of primogeniture, preferring the firstborn over others of the same degree, was not applied to female heirs, n19 so a form of concurrent ownership, tenancy in coparcenary, n20 was early recognized.

Married women (femes covert) were in an altogether different situation from unmarried women and widows. Property they owned in their own right (in severalty) passed into the control of their husbands on marriage. Women acquired dower rights in their husbands' real property, unless it was held in joint tenancy with another or others, and married men acquired more extensive rights in their wives' real property, known as curtesy, contingent on the birth of live offspring to the couple. n21 Beginning in the 17th century, equity began to enforce trusts created, usually by landowning fathers, to preserve property for the sole and separate use of women during marriage. n22

The property rights of married women mentioned in the preceding paragraph -- real property owned by women during marriage, dower rights, and equitable interests in trusts for their sole and separate use -- were always distinct from tenancy by the entirety. These rights all were rights in severalty; although profoundly affected by the marriage and the rights of husbands, none of them was held by the spouses together. By contrast, tenancy by the entirety described the situation in which husband and wife owned the same property at the same time.

Despite the fact that the title was in husband and wife together, the common law accorded the husband all the powers of dominion and control over the property: as to the land, the two became one, the quip ran, and "the husband was the one." n23 He had all the powers of ownership except the power to defeat her right of survivorship. In terms of the analysis used earlier (§ 33.02, supra), his interest was not devisable or inheritable. Although the predominance of the husband was originally rooted in concepts of sex roles and matrimony, by the time of American Independence it was associated almost inextricably with the estate of tenancy by the entirety.

The movement for women's rights in the 19th century resulted eventually in the removal in all jurisdictions of the disability of married women to control their own property during marriage. The effect, as A.V. Dicey pointed out, was to give to all married women the rights with respect to all property once limited to the beneficiaries of trusts for their sole and separate use. n24 The intimate connection between the status of women and the estate of tenancies by the entirety is nowhere better illustrated than in the judicial decisions that, once the rights of married women to hold property had been recognized by Married Women's Property Acts, there was no longer any such estate as tenancy by the entirety. n25 It was only in those states that permitted the estate after recognizing married women's rights that tenancy by the entirety became what it is today, simply a form of concurrent ownership and not also (or mainly) an expression of women's disability during marriage. England, the land of its birth, eliminated the estate in 1925 by converting the tenancy by the entirety into a joint tenancy. n26

So far had the law traveled from 1783 when Blackstone declared in an afterthought: "if an estate in fee be given to a man and his wife, they are neither properly joint-tenants, nor tenants in common," n27 that in 1893 a Massachusetts judge could declare with equal assurance: "an estate in entirety is an estate in joint tenancy." n28 The distinguishing characteristic, the inseverable right of survivorship, was explained by Blackstone, logically enough, as the inevitable consequence of the legal effect of matrimony, "husband and wife being considered as one person in law," n29 while his Massachusetts counterpart had to leave it as a special "limitation" on the peculiar joint tenancy. n30 Blackstone's unqualified assertion that "neither the husband nor the wife can dispose of any part without the assent of the other" n31 came to be understood to mean that "during their joint lives neither the husband nor the wife can destroy the right of survivorship without the assent of the other party." n32 In consequence, a limited power of alienation in the husband, limited by his wife's indefeasible right of survivorship, came to be recognized in some jurisdictions. n33

The classification of tenancy by the entirety as a mere variant of joint tenancy was to cause almost as many problems as it solved. n34 The concurrence of the four unities (time, title, interest, and possession), a necessary prerequisite for the estate of joint tenancy, n35 had never before been a problem with tenancy by the entirety, "husband and wife being considered as one person in law." Once the distinct legal personhood of married women was accepted, the paradox arose in states continuing to recognize tenancy by the entirety that husband and wife were two persons, yet "the husband was the one." What could the unities of interest and possession mean when the husband had all rights of dominion and control?

With glacial slowness, in a process not completed until late in the 20th century, state after state acted to equalize the rights of spouses over property held by the entirety. n36 At last, the modern reality of the estate emerged: a form of concurrent estate limited to married persons and offering them security of title and some degree of protection from creditors. The legal benefits of the tenancy by the entirety, coupled perhaps with the decline of male-dominated notions of marriage, may explain the increasing prevalence of the estate. Even in states where the tenancy by the entirety remained available in the nineteenth century, many parcels of residential real estate continued to be held by the husband in sole ownership; increasingly in the twentieth century the married grandchildren hold in tenancy by the entirety. n37 In Professor Moynihan's apt phrase, tenancy by the entirety is "an anomaly based on an anachronism," n38 yet (like so many of the common law's anomalies) it serves a modern purpose. Having broken free at last from its roots in the male-dominated world of feudal England, tenancy by the entirety has become the common law's answer to the civil law system of community property. n39

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 18. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 212 (1766) (second canon of descent: "the male issue shall be admitted before the female").

(n2)Footnote 19. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 214 (1766) (third canon of descent: "where there are two or more males in equal degree, the eldest only shall inherit; but the females all together"). It has been suggested that at least one reason for admitting all female heirs of the same degree was that it was more profitable for the lord to have the wardship and marriage of all heiresses. A.W.B. Simpson, A History of the Land Law 58-59 (2d ed. 1986).

(n3)Footnote 20. See Chapter 35, infra.

(n4)Footnote 21. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 126, 129 (1766).

(n5)Footnote 22. For the development over time of trusts for the sole and separate use of married women, see 5 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 312-15 (3d ed. 1945), 6 id. 644-45 (2d ed. 1937), and 12 id. 275-76 (1938).

(n6)Footnote 23. John E. Cribbet, Et Al., Cases and Materials on Property 329 (6th ed. 1990).

(n7)Footnote 24. A.V. Dicey, Lectures on the Relation Between Law and Public Opinion in England During the 19th Century 393 (2d ed. 1914).

(n8)Footnote 25. Clark v. Clark, 56 N.H. 105 (1875); Cooper v. Cooper, 76 Ill. 57 (1875); Davis v. Davis, 75 S.E.2d 46 (S.C. 1953); Appeal of Robinson, 33 A. 652 (Me. 1895); Lawler v. Byrne, 96 N.E. 892 (Ill. 1911), noted in 7 Ill. L. Rev. 52 (1912). Contra: Bloomfield v. Brown, 25 A.2d 354 (R.I. 1942).

(n9)Footnote 26. Law of Property Act, 1925, 15 & 16 Geo. 5, ch. 20, § 39(6), sched. 1, pt. 6.

(n10)Footnote 27. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n11)Footnote 28. Morris v. McCarty, 32 N.E. 938, 939 (Mass. 1893).

(n12)Footnote 29. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n13)Footnote 30. Morris v. McCarty, 32 N.E. 938, 939 (Mass. 1893).

(n14)Footnote 31. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n15)Footnote 32. Morris v. McCarty, 32 N.E. 938, 939 (Mass. 1893).

(n16)Footnote 33. See King v. Greene, 153 A.2d 49 (N.J. 1959) ("the husband could, at common law, alienate his right of survivorship, or, more properly, his fee simple subject to defeasance").

(n17)Footnote 34. The Uniform Probate Code conflates joint tenancies and tenancies by the entirety by defining "joint tenants with the right of survivorship" to include "co-owners of property held under circumstances that entitle one ... to the whole of the property on the death of the other," that is, to include tenants by the entirety. U.P.C. § 1-201(26), 8 U.L.A. 10 (Supp. 1994).

(n18)Footnote 35. On the doctrine of the four unities in the law of joint tenancy, see § 31.06(b), supra.

(n19)Footnote 36. In what was probably the last law of its type in the United States, North Carolina adopted the Tenancy by the Entirety Reform Act in 1982, now codified in N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.6:

A husband and wife shall have an equal right to the control, use, possession, rents, income, and profits of real property held by them in tenancy by the entirety. Neither spouse may bargain, sell, lease, mortgage, transfer, convey or in any manner encumber any property so held without the written joinder of the other spouse... .

See William A. Reppy, North Carolina's Tenancy by the Entirety Reform Legislation of 1982, 5 Campbell L. Rev. 1 (1982). In states that did not view the Married Women's Property Acts as sounding the death knell for tenancies by the entirety, the acts could at least be read to prevent the husband from exercising exclusive possession and control of such estates. See, e.g., Bloomfield v. Brown, 25 A.2d 354 (R.I. 1942).

(n20)Footnote 37. See Carole Shammas Et al., Inheritance in America: From Colonial Times to the Present (1987) (in Bucks County, Pa., in 1890 less than 1% of married couples held residential real estate "together"; in the 1920s "deeds belonging to married couples rose to 20%; by 1940 to 54.8%; by 1960 to 80%"). In the present author's own family in nearby Lancaster County, Pa., his grandparents' home was titled in the name of his grandfather as sole owner, while his parents took title to their home as tenants by the entirety.

(n21)Footnote 38. Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 223 (2d ed. 1988).

(n22)Footnote 39. See John V. Orth, Tenancy by the Entirety The Strange Career of the Common Law Marital Estate, 1997 B.Y.U. L. Rev. 35.

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.06

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.06 Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety.

[Go To Supp]

First to be examined is the creation of tenancies by the entirety at common law (§ 33.06(a)); then, the doctrine of the four unities, encountered also in the law of joint tenancies, is reviewed, n40 plus the additional "unity of person," based on marriage (§ 33.06(b)). The requirement of the four unities generates a special problem in the creation of tenancies by the entirety, similar to one in the creation of joint tenancies: n41 conveyance by the grantor to the grantor and the grantor's spouse (§ 33.06(c)). Likewise, the requirement of the fifth unity, that of "person," also generates a special problem in the creation of tenancies by the entirety: transfer to spouses and another or others (§ 33.06(d)). Next to be considered are modern statutes concerning the creation of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.06(e)), and finally the creation of estates similar to tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.06(f)).

§ 33.06(a) Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety at Common Law.

At common law at the time of American Independence, the transfer of real property to persons married to one another resulted in the creation of a tenancy by the entirety, an estate in which the husband had complete power of dominion and control, but in which the wife had an indefeasible right of survivorship. n42 Because of the disability of a married woman to exercise property rights, the result was functionally similar to a transfer to a married woman in severalty (unless a trust to her sole and separate use was involved). No special words were required to create a tenancy by the entirety, because it was presumed at common law that a transfer of an estate in fee simple to married persons ("to H and W, husband and wife, and their heirs") was in tenancy by the entirety and not in any other form of concurrent ownership. It was not even necessary to describe in so many words the transferees as husband and wife; the presumption applied if they were in fact married to one another. Because the matrimonial tie was an objective fact, a tenancy by the entirety could be created unintentionally, as by a transfer to a married couple, "to H and W and their heirs," when the grantor did not intend to create a tenancy by the entirety; it could even be created unwittingly, as by a transfer "to A and B and their heirs," when the grantees were, unknown to the grantor, in fact married to one another.

It was difficult, if not impossible, at common law to avoid the creation of a tenancy by the entirety when the grantees were a married couple. n43 Blackstone explained the rule: "if an estate in fee be given to a man and his wife, they are neither properly joint-tenants, nor tenants in common: for husband and wife being considered as one person in law, they cannot take the estate by moieties, but both are seised of the entirety, per tout et non per my ... ." n44 Once it became established that husband and wife could hold land by a tenancy other than a tenancy by the entirety, the question arose: What form of words would be required to rebut the presumption in favor of a tenancy by the entirety? It would seem that any restrictive, exclusive, or explanatory words expressing the requisite intent would suffice. n45 It would be safest, however, after naming the estate intended to be created, to add the words "and not as tenants by the entirety."

At common law a tenancy by the entirety could be created only by inter vivos transfer or by testamentary disposition, in other words, only by deed or devise. The intention to create a tenancy by the entirety will be presumed from the use of the appropriate words; one who denies the requisite intention bears the burden of proving its absence at the time title was taken. Conversely, one who claims that the intention to create a tenancy by the entirety was present at the time title was taken although the necessary words were omitted bears the burden of proving the same. A transfer by one spouse of solely owned property into a tenancy by the entirety with the other spouse may, of course, be challenged on the grounds that undue influence was exerted. n46 Tenancies by the entirety could never arise by operation of law. As with the same rule concerning joint tenancies, n47 the explanation lies originally in the law of inheritance rather than in the law of tenancies by the entirety: spouses could never be co-heirs of a deceased ancestor.

Although at common law joint tenancies could arise by adverse possession, n48 it is today assumed that the presumption in favor of tenancies in common in the construction of written instruments of title applies as well to original titles. The case with tenancies by the entirety is, however, more complicated. The question of what estate a married couple acquired by adverse possession did not arise at common law: the married woman's state of subordination to her husband precluded her from securing an interest by her own possession. Today in states still recognizing tenancies by the entirety, particularly those that have eliminated common law joint tenancies, the estate by the entirety is often presumed in written transfers of title. Possessing practical advantages for married persons, tenancy by the entirety is routinely chosen in such states. Unhampered by any authentic common law rule against tenancies by the entirety arising from adverse possession, the courts may well recognize the estate in appropriate cases. n49

Because marriage is a prerequisite to the creation of tenancy by the entirety, the problem sometimes arises of what estate is created by a transfer to two unmarried persons "as tenants by the entirety." At common law the result would have been governed by the general presumption in favor of joint tenancy: all transfers to two or more persons were presumed to create that estate. Now that that presumption has been everywhere replaced with a general presumption in favor of tenancy in common, it is necessary to scrutinize the transfer for expressions of intention. The better result seems to be to recognize a joint tenancy in such cases, since that estate, unlike tenancy in common, provides a right of survivorship, albeit a destructible one. n50 In a few states statutes direct that result. n51 In states in which common law joint tenancies are not available, one may find a court recognizing an unusual estate, such as a tenancy in common for life with alternative contingent remainders in fee simple in the survivor. n52 Even in a jurisdiction that recognizes joint tenancies one court has signaled a willingness to entertain the argument, in case of an attempted conveyance of a tenancy by the entirety to unmarried persons, that it "approximate a tenancy by the entirety by creating, for each party, a tenancy in common for life with a contingent future interest in the whole." n53 Where a deed erroneously recites that the grantees are husband and wife, successors in interest to one or both of the grantees may be estopped to deny the recital. n54

Although the common law presumption in favor of joint tenancies has been everywhere reversed, the common law presumption in favor of tenancies by the entirety for estates transferred to married persons has held its own in those states still recognizing the tenancy. Usually, as detailed below (§ 33.06(e)), the presumption in favor of tenancies by the entirety is now produced by legislation, but in a few states it continues as a matter of common law. n55

Tenancies by the entirety may be created in contracts for the sale of land or in purchase money mortgages. Although legal title to the fee simple subject to the contract or mortgage is usually also in tenancy by the entirety, there is no necessity that it be so; in other words, a sole owner with fee simple title may arrange to convey it by a contract or subject to a mortgage that is held concurrently with a spouse as tenants by the entirety. n56

§ 33.06(b) The Doctrine of the Four Unities, Plus One, "Unity of Person," Based on Marriage.

Because tenancies by the entirety came to be viewed as a special type of joint tenancies, once the legal capacity of married women was accepted, it is necessary at this point to review the doctrine of the four unities, a summary description of the nature of joint tenancies used as a touchstone for determining whether they had been created. Sir William Blackstone's statement of the four unities, quoted before in the chapter on joint tenancies, n57 is also relevant here:

> The properties of a joint estate are derived from it's unity, which is fourfold; the unity of interest, the unity of title, the unit of time, and the unity of possession: or, in other words, joint-tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. n58

The significance of the doctrine of the four unities for purposes of the creation of tenancies by the entirety is that their presence, all of them together, was necessary for the creation of any form of joint estate. Where the four unities were, there was a joint estate. Conversely, where one or more of the four unities was lacking, there could be no joint estate, regardless of a transferor's intent to create one.

What sets tenancies by the entirety apart from other joint tenancies is the existence of a so-called "fifth unity": the unity of persons based on marriage. n59 Although sometimes dignified by reference to the biblical notion that the two married persons became "one flesh" (Gen. 2:24), the true legal explanation was that in consequence of marriage the woman lost her capacity to exercise control over property. She became, in effect, the ward of her husband, a consequence acknowledged by the gloss applied to the text "the two became one": "and the husband was the one." n60 Without the "fifth unity" there can be no tenancy by the entirety; unmarried persons cannot hold together by that form of concurrent ownership. If unmarried persons take title to real property "as tenants by the entirety" or "as husband and wife," no tenancy by the entirety can arise. (What estate is created is discussed in the preceding subsection.) Whether the subsequent marriage of unmarried persons who originally took title "as tenants by the entirety" or "as husband and wife," can transform the estate into a tenancy by the entirety has been decided in the negative. n61 The mere fact of subsequent marriage by co-owners cannot transform the concurrent estate; the marriage tie must exist at the creation of the estate for it to be a tenancy by the entirety.

Restricting tenancies by the entirety to persons married to one another necessarily makes marriage law an adjunct to property law: marriage law determines if the "unity of persons" necessary for a tenancy by the entirety exists between the parties. Whether restricting the advantages incident to tenancy by the entirety to married persons is fair or constitutional is a much-contested question today. n62 The problem is posed in its most challenging form in the case of same-sex couples who are denied the legal opportunity to marry. Hawaii has addressed the problem by legislation permitting couples who cannot otherwise be legally married to register as "reciprocal beneficiaries," who are granted many of the rights of married persons, including the right to hold property together as tenants by the entirety. n63 By contrast, Vermont permits same-sex couples who have entered into "civil unions" to hold property as tenants by the entirety. n64

§ 33.06(c) Special Problem in Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety Caused by the Doctrine of the Four Unities: Conveyance by Grantor to Grantor and Spouse.

Although Sir William Blackstone, writing at the time of American Independence, emphatically denied that husband and wife could take title as joint tenants, n65 the view has since become firmly established in America that tenancy by the entirety is in fact only a species of joint tenancy. In consequence, for a transfer to result in the creation of a tenancy by the entirety, it must satisfy the requirements of a joint tenancy, most notably the doctrine of the four unities; that is, it must create a concurrent estate in which both transferees have "one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession." n66 A special problem of common occurrence is caused by the attempted conveyance by a grantor to the grantor and the grantor's spouse: "H to H and W and their heirs" or "W to W and H and their heirs." A similar problem arises in the law of joint tenancies when a grantor conveys property owned by the grantor to the grantor and another or others as joint tenants: "A to A and B and their heirs." n67

The problem here is not one of intention: it arises even if the grant is unambiguously intended to create a tenancy by the entirety, as "H to H and W and their heirs, as tenants by the entirety and not as joint tenants or tenants in common." At common law the problem was occasioned by the legal incapacity of married women: "a man cannot grant any thing to his wife," Blackstone baldly stated, "for the grant would be to suppose her separate existence." n68 Today, after the universal recognition of married women's "separate existence," the problem is the technical one caused by the doctrine of the four unities: because one spouse as grantor is conveying directly to that spouse and the other as grantees, at least two of the four unities are lacking, title and time. The grantees' interests do not accrue "by one and the same conveyance," nor do they commence "at one and the same time": the interest of the grantor stemmed from some original transfer, while the interest of the grantor's spouse stems from the grant in question. Without all the unities a joint tenancy and a fortiori a tenancy by the entirety could not arise, no matter how much the transferor desired to create that estate.

The common law solution to this common law problem was to use two successive conveyances: a grantor desiring to create a tenancy by the entirety in the grantor and the grantor's spouse would first convey to one with no interest in the property (a "strawman"), n69 who would then promptly reconvey the estate to the grantor and the grantor's spouse. n70 Schematically the conveyances would run "H to X and heirs," then "X to H and W and their heirs." In this manner the doctrine of the four unities would indubitably be satisfied. It may be worth noting that the common law rule is perfectly logical and produces no hardship (and only a little extra paperwork) if every grantor is properly counseled. It is homemade deeds or sloppy lawyering that causes the problem. n71

It has sometimes been argued that the four unities are in fact present despite a grant directly (without mesne conveyance to a straw man) from grantor to grantor and spouse. The theory is that the grant is to a legally recognized unit, the "one person" of the married pair, so the title of the unit accrues by one and the same conveyance at one and the same time, thereby supplying the missing unities of title and time. n72 (A similar theory has also been advanced in the context of an attempted creation of a joint tenancy by a grant directly from a grantor to the grantor and another; in this case, however, the unit is supposedly constituted by the grant itself.) n73 If the theory were accepted, it would mean that the creation of tenancies by the entirety do not require four unities plus one, but only the fifth unity because it would subsume all the others.

More straightforward is a resolution based on abandonment of the requirement that the four unities must be present when a grantor unmistakably intends to create a tenancy by the entirety through conveyance directly from the grantor to the grantor and the grantor's spouse. Although sometimes accomplished by judicial decision, n74 this is more simply done by statute. A North Carolina statute, for example, provides:

> A conveyance of real property, or any interest therein, by a husband or a wife to such husband and wife vests the same in the husband and wife as tenants by the entirety unless a contrary intention is expressed in the conveyance. n75

A similar but analytically distinct problem arises when an owner makes a grant of an undivided one-half of the property to a spouse. Here again the intention may be to share the ownership. No tenancy by the entirety results, either by application of the common law presumption in its favor where a married couple is the grantee or by express words describing that estate, because tenants by the entirety do not each hold a half share (or moiety) in the estate; each has an interest in the entirety. The same reasoning prevents the creation of a joint tenancy in a comparable case. Legislation may, obviously, change the common law rule. In Florida the statute permitting direct conveyance by the grantor to the grantor and the grantor's spouse as tenants by the entirety also permits the creation of that estate by the grantor's direct conveyance of a half interest to the spouse if "the purpose to create the estate is stated." n76 In Oregon the only means expressly authorized by statute to create a tenancy by the entirety by direct conveyance by one spouse to another is by conveyance of an undivided one-half with "words indicating an intention to create an estate in entirety." n77

A majority of states still recognizing tenancy by the entirety have legislated on the subject of a conveyance by the grantor to the grantor and the grantor's spouse as tenants by the entirety. In general the statutes are self-explanatory. Although the statutes of only a small minority of states (such as Maryland) expressly eliminate the need for a "straw man as an intermediate grantee-grantor," n78 all have that effect. Particular attention must be paid to the formula required to express the requisite intention: under the North Carolina statute a tenancy by the entirety is presumed "unless a contrary intention is expressed," n79 but in most states an express declaration of intention is required. It is probably sufficient to describe the estate created as tenancy by the entirety, but it is safest to add words of exclusion as well: "and not as joint tenants or tenants in common." In a few states, such as Mississippi, it may be necessary to include a specific reference to survivorship: tenants by the entirety "with right of survivorship." n80 Although the Hawaii statute explicitly includes the case of a conveyance by spouses, presumably already tenants in common or joint tenants, to themselves as tenants by the entirety, n81 it is submitted that all the statutes should be interpreted to cover that case as well because of the rule of statutory construction that the singular generally includes the plural.

Current statutes are summarized below:

Alaska. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse as tenants by the entirety is effective. n82

Delaware. Conveyance by either spouse to themselves as tenants by the entireties is authorized. n83

District of Columbia. Tenancy by the entireties may be created by conveyance in which grantor is also grantee. n84

Florida. Tenancy by the entirety may be created by (1) conveyance by one spouse to the other if "the purpose to create the estate is stated," or (2) conveyance by one spouse to both spouses. n85

Hawaii. Land may be conveyed by a person to himself and his spouse or by spouses to themselves as tenants by the entirety. n86

Illinois. Tenancy by the entirety may be created notwithstanding the fact that grantor or grantors are also grantee or grantees. n87

Maryland. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse in tenancy by the entirety is valid "without the use of a straw man as an intermediate grantee-grantor." n88

Massachusetts. Conveyance by a person to himself and spouse as tenants by the entirety creates that estate. n89

Michigan. Conveyance expressing intent to create tenancy by the entireties in grantor together with grantee is effective. n90

Mississippi. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse in "entirety with right of survivorship" creates that estate. n91

Missouri. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another may create tenancy by the entireties. n92

New Jersey. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse creates tenancy by the entirety. n93

North Carolina. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse creates tenancy by the entirety, "unless a contrary intention is expressed." n94

Oklahoma. Tenancy by the entirety may be created by conveyance from grantor to grantor and spouse. n95

Oregon. Conveyance by one spouse to other of undivided one-half with "words indicating an intention to create an estate in entirety" is effective. n96

Tennessee. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and spouse creates tenancy by the entirety if the conveyance is intended to have that effect. n97

Virginia. Conveyance by grantor to grantor and another is valid. n98

Wyoming. Grantor may convey to grantor and spouse as tenants by the entirety "without the necessity of any transfer or conveyance to or through a third person." n99

§ 33.06(d) Special Problem in Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety Caused by the "Unity of Person": Transfer to Husband, Wife, and Another or Others.

For a transfer to result in the creation of a tenancy by the entirety, it must not only satisfy the doctrine of the four unities, required for a joint tenancy, it must also satisfy the requirement of the fifth unity, the "unity of person," based on marriage. Only when all five unities are present, is there a tenancy by the entirety. At common law a transfer of an estate in fee simple to married persons ("to H and W and their heirs") would result, all other things being equal, in a tenancy by the entirety. So would a transfer "to H, W, and X and their heirs" result in a tenancy by the entirety as between the married couple. H and W would hold their share as tenants by the entirety, and X would hold X's share in some form of concurrent estate with them -- at the older common law, as joint tenant. n100 The special problem here is not whether H and W take as tenants by the entirety, but how much they take. Do H and W, being in some sense one person, take one-half, X taking the other half? Or, do H and W, being in a stronger sense two persons, take two-thirds together, X taking the remaining one-third?

There is certainly ancient and eminent authority that the "unity of person" created by marriage makes the married pair equal to one person in the distribution of undivided shares in transfers to them and another or others; in other words, that in case of a transfer "to H, W, and X and their heirs," H and W share one-half, not two-thirds. n101 It is submitted that this result is now anachronistic: since 1925 husband and wife in England, the original home of the "unity of person," have been treated as two persons in the acquisition of property. n102

The special problem considered here does not arise where the grantor stipulates the share each grantee is to take, n103 further proof, if any were required, that the law no longer requires that husband and wife be treated as "one person." It is submitted that recognizing the personhood of both spouses would be more likely to comport with the grantor's intention, as well as be consistent with the legal effect of modern marriage. n104

In one state, Massachusetts, a statute partially addresses the problem: in a transfer to three or more persons words creating a joint tenancy apply to all transferees regardless of marital status, unless a contrary intent appears. n105 The result in this limited case is to recognize the legal personality of all transferees and presumably secure each an equal share, without of course solving the problem of what share a couple taking as tenants by the entirety would receive.

§ 33.06(e) Modern Statutes Concerning Creation of Tenancies by the Entirety.

Many American states have statutes dealing with tenancies by the entirety. In Connecticut and New Hampshire the estate is merged with joint tenancies: a transfer to two persons "as tenants by the entirety" results in a joint tenancy. n106 In other states the estate of tenancy by the entirety is abolished by indirection: either the Married Women's Property Act is construed to have made the estate impossible n107 or a list of permitted concurrent estates simply omits tenancy by the entirety. n108 In Washington and West Virginia the right of survivorship as an incident of tenancies by the entirety is eliminated, n109 leaving an anomalous estate, the exact contours of which are unclear. In those jurisdictions still recognizing tenancies by the entirety, n110 legislation may deal with the common law presumption favoring such tenancies in transfers to married couples. The statute of one state, North Carolina, simply enacts the common law presumption:

> A conveyance of real property, or any interest therein, to a husband and wife vests title in them as tenants by the entirety when the conveyance is to:
>
> (1) A named man "and wife," or
>
> (2) A named woman "and husband," or
>
> (3) Two named persons, whether or not identified in the conveyance as husband and wife, if at the time of conveyance they are legally married;
>
> unless a contrary intention is expressed in the conveyance. n111

More commonly, as in the Massachusetts statute, it reverses the common law presumption, making it necessary to add express words in order to create the estate:

> A devise of land to a person and his spouse shall, if the instrument creating the devise expressly so states, vest in the devisees a tenancy by the entirety. n112

In the absence of legislation, the common law presumption in favor of tenancies by the entirety may still be recognized. n113 In Massachusetts, so strong is the presumption in favor of tenancy by the entirety when transfers to a husband and wife are involved, that a conveyance to a husband and wife "as joint tenants" is held to create a tenancy by the entirety unless a contrary intention is expressed. n114

The exact words required to create a tenancy by the entirety vary from state to state. In New York a grant to a named man and "his wife" and, presumably, a named woman and "her husband" -- in the older fashion of conveyancing et ux. and et vir, respectively -- is sufficient. n115 It is probably safest to use the formula required by the Illinois statute: "to H and W, husband and wife, not as joint tenants or tenants in common but as tenants by the entirety." n116 A few states (such as Mississippi) require explicit reference to the intended right of survivorship: "as tenants by the entirety with right of survivorship." n117

Even with respect to tenancies by the entirety properly described for purposes of local law, a question may arise concerning the exact moment of the estate's creation. Only at the effective date do the incidents, including the right of survivorship, attach. In case two married purchasers enter into an installment land contract and the deed ultimately to be delivered is stipulated to be in tenancy by the entirety, the question of what type of tenancy they hold while the contract remains executory may be important, if, for example, one purchaser should die or the marriage be terminated by divorce before delivery. In general, the doctrine of "equitable conversion" treats the contract as the operative event if it is specifically enforceable: the purchasers acquire an equitable title, while the vendor holds legal title as security for the payment of the purchase price. Although it is possible to recognize the incidents of a tenancy by the entirety in equity, it may equally be argued that the statutes concerning the creation of tenancies by the entirety refer to taking legal, not equitable title. Legislation in one state, Indiana, answers the question of what effect divorce has on married purchasers under an installment land contract: they own "equal shares," n118 presumably as tenants in common. In resolving disputes in complicated situations much will probably depend on the jurisdiction's state of sympathy for or against tenancies by the entirety.

Whatever the resolution, it should correlate with the result reached in the reverse situation, when vendors holding as tenants by the entirety enter into an installment land contract: if their legal title is automatically converted into a tenancy in common, that would indicate that the equitable title is indeed primary. If, on the other hand, their legal title as tenants by the entirety is unaffected, that would indicate that, absent an expressed intention to the contrary, the tenancy by the entirety commences with the acceptance of the deed. n119 Whether property to which title is taken in tenancy by the entirety during marriage is marital property for purposes of division on divorce may depend on the local equitable distribution statute. n120

A related problem arises in the situation, probably not uncommon, in which two persons intend to buy property and to take title as tenants by the entirety, but only one signs the contract for deed. n121 When the deed describing the estate as in tenancy by the entirety is delivered, the Doctrine of the Four Unities (see § 33.06(b)) is not technically satisfied; specifically, the unity of time (and perhaps the unity of title as well) is lacking because, by virtue of the doctrine of equitable conversion, the party to the contract had acquired an equitable title earlier. As the rigor of the old law lessens, intention should be allowed to prevail, even in a case in which the contract described the signer as the sole purchaser.

A summary of the legislation concerning the creation of tenancies by the entirety is as follows:

Alaska. Transfer to married couple creates tenancy by the entirety unless it is expressly declared otherwise; for this rule to apply to a conveyance, it must "recite the marital status of the parties." n122

Hawaii. Transfer to two persons creates tenancy in common, but tenancy by entirety may be created if it manifestly appears that it was intended. n123

Illinois. Transfer of homestead property to persons "named and expressly identified ... as husband and wife, not as joint tenants or tenants in common but as tenants by the entirety" creates tenancy by the entirety. n124

Indiana. When husband and wife purchase real property or lease with option to purchase, that contract presumptively creates tenancy by the entireties, unless it is expressly declared that it is intended to create a tenancy in common. n125

Kentucky. Transfer to husband and wife presumed to create tenancy in common, but if "a right of survivorship" is expressly provided for, then there is "a mutual right to the entirety by survivorship." n126

Massachusetts. Devise to married couple creates tenancy by the entirety if the devise expressly so states. n127

Mississippi. Transfer to husband and wife creates tenancy in common, unless it manifestly appears that it was intended to create an estate in "entirety with the right of survivorship." n128

New York. Transfer to husband and wife creates tenancy by the entirety, unless expressly declared to be joint tenancy or tenancy in common. n129

North Carolina. Conveyance to husband and wife creates tenancy by the entirety, unless a contrary intention is expressed in the conveyance. n130

Oklahoma. Tenancy by the entirety created by transfer if expressly declared. n131

Virginia. Right of survivorship abolished. Exception for transfer in which it manifestly appears that it was intended that the part of one dying should then belong to the other. n132

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: creat! w/15 (tenan! w/3 entiret!)

§ 33.06(f) Creation of Estates Similar to Tenancies by the Entirety.

When it is not possible, for one reason or another, for two grantees to take title to property as tenants by the entirety, the issue may arise whether an estate or combination of estates and future interests with characteristics similar to a tenancy by the entirety may be used to create its functional equivalent. The issue may arise in the case of a married couple in a jurisdiction that does not recognize tenancies by the entirety, or in the case of unmarried persons in a jurisdiction that does recognize the estate. The joint tenancy, as already observed (§ 33.02), is not the functional equivalent of the tenancy by the entirety: although without a devisable or inheritable interest, a joint tenant does have the power to alienate a share and sever the estate. Any joint tenant may demand a partition at any time. By contrast, a tenant by the entirety has no power to sever the estate and no right to partition. In any event, of course, the joint tenancy itself is not available in all jurisdictions.

The creation of an estate for joint lives with cross contingent remainders to the survivor in fee begins to approximate the tenancy by the entirety. n133 Although each co-tenant has an interest alienable for life, neither can extinguish the remainder of the other. Alternatively, the creation of a tenancy in common when coupled with mutual and enforceable agreements against partition or alienation and agreements to devise each interest to the other achieves some of the attributes of a tenancy by the entirety. Notably lacking, however, is the blanket security from creditors of one co-tenant provided by tenancies by the entirety in some jurisdictions. (See § 33.07(e), infra). Creditors can certainly reach the several interest of the debtor. The agreements against partition or alienation and the agreements to make wills are obviously not effective to prevent a creditor from foreclosing a lien on one share. n134

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 40. See § 31.06(b), supra.

(n2)Footnote 41. See § 31.06(c), supra.

(n3)Footnote 42. Tenancies by the entirety are generally permitted only in real property for reasons rooted deep in the common law of marital estates. Since a woman lost all control of her personalty on marriage, there was no marital estate in personalty. In realty, by contrast, the common law did recognize tenancy by the entirety while seemingly denying, because of the marital unity, that it was truly a form of concurrent estate, as explained in the preceding subsection.

In New York, where cooperative apartments are common, these interests, represented by shares of stock with an appurtenant proprietary lease, were considered personal property and therefore ineligible for holding in tenancies by the entirety. Effective January 1, 1996 the New York Estates, Powers and Trusts Law §§ 6-2.1 and 6-2.2 were amended to permit spouses to hold these interests as tenants by the entirety. In addition, the amendment raises a presumption that all transfers of interests in cooperative apartments after the effective date to persons married to one another are to them as tenants by the entirety, thereby paralleling the law concerning real property.

(n4)Footnote 43. Blackstone, both as judge and as commentator, declared against the proposition that husband and wife could hold otherwise than by the entirety. Green v. King, 2 Black. W. 1211, 96 Eng. Rep. 713 (K.B. 1777) (Blackstone, J.); 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783). But other, later authorities have argued the contrary. H. W. Challis, Law of Real Property 305 (1887); 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 note (William Draper Lewis ed. 1902) ("There is nothing ... in the relation of husband and wife which prevents them from being tenants in common.").

(n5)Footnote 44. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n6)Footnote 45. Dearman v. Bruns, 181 S.E.2d 809 (N.C. App. 1971) (devise to H and W "to share equally" held to create tenancy in common).

(n7)Footnote 46. Kar v. Hogan, 150 N.W.2d 77 (Mich. 1976).

(n8)Footnote 47. See § 31.06(a), supra.

(n9)Footnote 48. Thomas Littleton, Tenures § 278 (c. 1481).

(n10)Footnote 49. Contra: Preston v. Smith, 293 S.W.2d 51 (Tenn. 1956), noted in 16 Md. L. Rev. 352 (1956), 22 Mo. L. Rev. 91 (1957), 24 Tenn. L. Rev. 892 (1957), 10 Vand. L. Rev. 460 (1957); Whiteside v. Rottger, 913 S.W.2d 114 (Mo. App. 1995).

(n11)Footnote 50. Morris v. McCarty, 32 N.E. 938 (Mass. 1893); Coleman v. Jackson, 286 F.2d 98 (D.C. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U.S. 933 (1961); Young v. Young, 376 A.2d 1151 (Md. 1977); In re Estate of Shelton, 796 N.E.2d 955 (Ohio App. 2003). Contra: Smith v. Stewart, 596 S.W.2d 346 (Ark. 1980); In Matter of Estate of Kappler, 341 N.W.2d 113 (Mich. 1983). Whether a joint tenancy or a tenancy in common will be found may depend on whether more than a mere recital of the supposititious marital relationship is included. Compare Wood v. Wood, 571 S.W.2d 84 (Ark. 1978) ("to A and B, husband and wife, as tenants by the entirety" held sufficient to create a joint tenancy with right of survivorship) with Brissett v. Sykes, 855 S.W.2d 330 (Ark. 1993) ("to A and B, husband and wife," held insufficient to create a right of survivorship) and Snyder v. Snyder, 880 S.W.2d 596 (Mo. App. 1994) ("to A and B his wife" held insufficient to create a right of survivorship). Compare In re Estate of Reigle, 652 A.2d 853 (Pa. 1995) (conveyance "to A and B, son and mother ... as tenants by the entirety" held to create joint tenancy) with In re Estate of Bruce, 538 A.2d 923 (Pa. Super. 1988) (conveyance to unmarried grantees mistakenly described as husband and wife held not to create joint tenancy). See also Lee v. Estate of Peay, C.A. No. 1862-S, 1998 Del. Ch. LEXIS 95 (Del. Ch. 1998) (grant to brother and sister "as tenants by the entireties and not as tenants in common" held to create a joint tenancy with right of survivorship).

(n12)Footnote 51. Transfer to two persons, who are not married to one another, as tenants by the entirety creates a joint tenancy. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7. Transfer to unmarried persons described as husband and wife creates a joint tenancy unless expressly declared to be a tenancy in common. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 6-2.2(c). A devise, conveyance, assignment, or other transfer to two grantees who are not in fact husband and wife that purports to create an estate by the entirety shall be construed as having created an estate in joint tenancy. 765 ILCS 1005/1c.

(n13)Footnote 52. Runions v. Runions, 207 S.W.2d 1016 (Tenn. 1948).

(n14)Footnote 53. Gallimore v. Washington, 666 A.2d 1200, 1202 n.2 (D.C. App. 1995).

(n15)Footnote 54. Jacobs v. Miller, 15 N.W. 42 (Mich. 1883). See Malcolm John Montague, Note and Comment, Tenancies by the Entirety -- Conclusive Presumption of Marriage from False Recital in a Deed or Contract, 32 Or. L. Rev. 254 (1953) (noting Merit v. Losey, 240 P.2d 933 (Or. 1952) and Hughes v. Kay, 242 P.2d 788 (Or. 1952)). In case of a long-continued cohabitation under circumstances of apparent marriage, one spouse may be estopped from denying the legal validity of the marriage required for the creation of a tenancy by the entirety. Lambertini v. Lambertini, 655 So. 2d 142 (Fla. App. 1995).

(n16)Footnote 55. Parramore v. Parramore, 368 So. 2d 1308 (Fla. 1978); In re Ginn, 186 B.R. 898 (Bankr. D. Md. 1995); In re Meyer, 187 B.R. 650 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1995).

(n17)Footnote 56. Vandenberg v. Wells, 721 So. 2d 453 (Fla. App. 1998).

(n18)Footnote 57. See § 31.06(b), supra.

(n19)Footnote 58. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766). In Blackstone's day proper usage for the possessive of "it" was "it's," not, as it would be today, "its."

(n20)Footnote 59. Whether a valid marriage exists is, of course, a matter of state law, so that, for instance, a tenancy by the entirety can be recognized in a couple bound by a "common law marriage" if such is recognized in that jurisdiction. Veneziale v. Midfirst Bank, 267 B.R. 695 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2001).

(n21)Footnote 60. John E. Cribbet, Et Al., Cases and Materials on Property 329 (6th ed. 1990).

(n22)Footnote 61. Snyder v. Snyder, 880 S.W.2d 596 (Mo. App. 1994). Persons with an interest in legal history may see a similarity in this case to the ancient debate in the common law about whether an illegitimate child was legitimated by the subsequent marriage of the parents. At the Parliament of Merton in 1235 the barons of England refused to permit legitimation per subsequens matrimonium despite canon law in favor, proudly proclaiming "Nolumus leges Angliae mutare." See 2 William S. Holdsworth, A History or English Law 218 (4th ed. 1936).

(n23)Footnote 62. See Goodridge v. Dept. of Public Health, 440 Mass. 309, 798 N.E.2d 941 (Mass. 2003) (holding denial of marriage license to same-sex couples a violation of due process); Opinions of the Justices to the Senate, 440 Mass. 1201, 802 N.E.2d 565 (2004) (proposed legislation prohibiting same-sex couples from marrying but allowing them to form civil unions with all the consequences of marriage does not satisfy the state constitution's equal protection and due process clauses). See also John V. Orth, Night Thoughts: Reflections on the Debate Concerning Same-Sex Marriage, 3 Nev. L.J. 560 (2003).

(n24)Footnote 63. Haw Rev. Stat. § 509.2.

(n25)Footnote 64. 15 Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 23, § 1204.

(n26)Footnote 65. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n27)Footnote 66. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 180 (1766).

(n28)Footnote 67. See § 31.06(c), supra.

(n29)Footnote 68. 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries 430 (1765) (citing Edward Coke, Commentary Upon Littleton § 168, p. 112a (1628)).

(n30)Footnote 69. "'The term 'straw man' originated in the early British halls of justice. Professional witnesses loitering in such halls signalled their willingness to testify to any matter, for a price, by wearing straw in their shoes." Note, The Use of Straw Men in Massachusetts Real Estate Transactions, 44 B.U. L. Rev. 187, 187-88 (1964). From this shady origin the straw man came to be used in more legitimate ways, particularly as a conduit in real estate transactions." Charles Donahue, Et Al., Cases and Materials on Property 625 n.1 (2d ed. 1983). In addition to the common-law solution to the problem involving the use of a straw-party conveyance, an equitable alternative was available, although rarely used: a married grantor could enfeoff himself and his wife to their use, relying on the Statute of Uses to "execute" the use and convert it into a legal estate. See Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 182 (2d ed. 1988).

(n31)Footnote 70. One court described the process as the usual means for creating the estate:

> Where a husband owns land and conveys it to a third party (strawman) who in turn conveys it to said husband and his wife, such conveyance creates an estate by the entireties... . Indeed, this is the device customarily used in creating such an estate in land owned by one spouse, when it is desired that it be held by the entireties.

Smith v. Smith, 107 S.E.2d 530, 536 (N.C. 1959).

(n32)Footnote 71. A Mississippi case illustrates a peculiar problem with a transfer through a strawman: Although the conveyances were apparently in proper form, the second (to husband and wife as tenants by the entirety) was recorded before the recording of the initial conveyance to the strawman. At the time of the recording of the conveyance to the husband and wife, in other words, the grantor did not yet have record title. Using the doctrine of after-acquired title, the court held the title in the husband and wife to be in tenancy by the entirety. Lampley v. United States, 17 F. Supp. 2d 609 (N.D. Miss. 1998).

(n33)Footnote 72. Woolard v. Smith, 94 S.E.2d 466 (N.C. 1956) (married couple is "an entity separate from the individuals"), noted in 14 Wash. & Lee L. Rev. 291 (1957); In re Klatzl's Estate, 110 N.E. 181 (N.Y. 1915) (Collin, J., dissenting) ("The husband did not convey to himself, but to a legal unity or entity which was the consolidation of himself and another."); In re Meyer, 206 B.R. 410 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997) (construing tenancy by the entirety in Virginia as entity separate from individual spouses). Contrast Cox v. Commissioner, 97 TNT 152-6 (Tax Ct. 1997) (holding that "both [tenants by the entirety] had title to the building in question, and not a fictional but separate entity"). In a somewhat different context, that of civil procedure, the argument that a married couple in their character as tenants by the entirety form but a single entity has been rejected as "ingenious but fallacious." Fry v. Marconi, 20 Pa. D. & C. 2d 575 (Pa. Com. Pl. 1959).

(n34)Footnote 73. See § 31.06(c), supra.

(n35)Footnote 74. Ebrite v. Brookhyser, 244 S.W.2d 625 (Ark. 1951); Boehringer v. Schmid, 232 N.Y.S. 360 (1928), 9 B.U. L. Rev. 134 (1929), 17 Geo. L.J. 266 (1929), 13 Minn. L. Rev. 612 (1929), 13 Minn. L. Rev. 618 (1929).

(n36)Footnote 75. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.3(b).

(n37)Footnote 76. Fla. Stat. § 689.11.

(n38)Footnote 77. Or. Rev. Stat. § 108.090.

(n39)Footnote 78. Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 4-108. See also Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-140.

(n40)Footnote 79. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.3(b).

(n41)Footnote 80. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n42)Footnote 81. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-2.

(n43)Footnote 82. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.140(c).

(n44)Footnote 83. Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 309.

(n45)Footnote 84. D.C. Code Ann. § 45-216.

(n46)Footnote 85. Fla. Stat. § 689.11.

(n47)Footnote 86. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-2.

(n48)Footnote 87. Ill. Ann. Stat. ch. 76, para. 1c.

(n49)Footnote 88. Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 4-108.

(n50)Footnote 89. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 8.

(n51)Footnote 90. Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 565.49. See Edward H. Hoenicke, Comment, Elimination of the Straw Man in the Creation of Joint Estates in Michigan, 54 Mich. L. Rev. 118 (1955).

(n52)Footnote 91. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n53)Footnote 92. Mo. Ann. Stat. § 442.025.

(n54)Footnote 93. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 37:2-18.

(n55)Footnote 94. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.3(b).

(n56)Footnote 95. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74.

(n57)Footnote 96. Or. Rev. Stat. § 108.090.

(n58)Footnote 97. Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-1-109. See Russell v. Russell, No. No. 01*A01-9611-PB-00516, 1997 Tenn. App. LEXIS 333 (Tenn. App. 1997)* (conveyance by one spouse to both spouses raises a presumption of intent to create tenancy by the entirety).

(n59)Footnote 98. Va. Code Ann. § 55-9.

(n60)Footnote 99. Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-140.

(n61)Footnote 100. In terms of legal concepts the problem is no more complicated if two married couples are involved, as "to H1 and W1 and H2 and W2 and their heirs." The married couples would each hold their shares as tenants by the entirety; together the couples would hold, at the unreformed common law, in joint tenancy. Today for a joint tenancy to result, even in those jurisdictions still recognizing the estate, express words would be required. See § 31.06(d), supra.

For modern cases, see Nelson v. Hotchkiss, 601 S.W.2d 14 (Mo. 1980), noted in 46 Mo. L. Rev. 439 (1981); In re Estate of Michael, 218 A.2d 338 (Pa. 1966); Hercules v. Jones, 609 A.2d 837 (Pa. 1992) ("to H1 or W1, his wife, or H2 or W2, his wife ..., as joint tenants with the right of survivorship ... and not as tenants in common" held to create joint tenancy between married couples with each couple holding undivided half-interest in tenancy by the entirety).

(n62)Footnote 101. If a joint estate be made of land to a husband and wife and to a third person, in this case the husband and wife have in law in their right but the moiety, [and the third person shall have as much as the husband and wife, viz. the other moiety, etc.] And the cause is, for that the husband and wife are but one person in law, and are in like case as if an estate be made to two joint-tenants, where the one hath, by force of the jointure, the one moiety in law, and the other the other moiety, [etc.] In the same manner it is where an estate is made to the husband and wife and to two other men, in this case the husband and wife have but the third part, and the other two men the other two parts, etc., causa qua supra.

Thomas Littleton, Tenures § 291 (c. 1481) (Eugene Wambaugh ed. 1903).

For 20th century cases applying this rule, see Mosser v. Dolsay, 27 A.2d 155 (N.J. 1942); In re Gardner, 202 S.E.2d 318 (N.C. 1974); Jenni v. Gamel, 602 S.W.2d 696 (Mo. Ct. App. 1980); Margarite v. Ewald, 381 A.2d 480 (Pa. Super. 1977). See also Matter of Buttonow, 49 Misc. 2d 445 (N.Y. 1966) (grant to married couple and third person "jointly" held to create tenancy by the entirety in one-half and joint tenancy in one-half); Bednar v. Bednar, 688 A.2d 1200 (Pa. Super. 1997) (husband and wife held one-half as tenants by the entirety with third person who held one-half as joint tenant with right of survivorship).

(n63)Footnote 102. Law of Property Act, 1925, 15 & 16 Geo. 5, ch. 20, § 37.

(n64)Footnote 103. Fekkes v. Hughes, 237 N.E.2d 19 (Mass. 1968).

(n65)Footnote 104. A question of intention may arise where, for example, in a state preserving the common law presumption in favor of tenancy by the entirety in grants to married persons, parents having two adult children convey to a married child and spouse and to an unmarried child, without words describing the estate granted. Does each child take one half? Or do the three grantees take each one-third?

(n66)Footnote 105. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7.

(n67)Footnote 106. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 47-14a; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:18.

(n68)Footnote 107. Appeal of Robinson, 33 A. 652 (Me. 1895); Clark v. Clark, 56 N.H. 105 (1875); Cooper v. Cooper, 76 Ill. 57 (1875).

(n69)Footnote 108. Iws. Stat. Ann. § 700.17(1) ("Interests in property may be owned concurrently by 2 or more persons as joint tenants or as tenants in common.").

(n70)Footnote 109. Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 11.04.071; W. Va. Code § 36-1-19

(n71)Footnote 110. It is believed that 25 American jurisdictions still recognize tenancies by the entirety:

See Alaska Stat. § 34.15.140(c) & § 34.15.110(b). See Ark. Code § 9-12-317. See Del. Code Ann. tit. 25, § 309. See D.C. Code Ann. § 45-216 & § 16-910. See Fla. Stat. § 689.11 & § 689.15. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-1 & § 509-1. See Ill. Ann. Stat. ch. 76, para. 1c. See Ind. Code Ann. § 32-4-2-1 & § 56-402/o3. See Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.050. See Md. Real Prop. Code Ann. § 4-108. See Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 8. See Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 552.102, § 57-71, § 557.81, § 57.101. See Miss. Code § 89-1-7. See Mo. Ann. Stat. § 442.025. See N.J. Stat. Ann. § 37:2-18. See N.Y. Estates, Powers and Trusts Law § 6-2.2(b). See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.3(b) & § 39-13.6(b). See Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74. See Or. Rev. Stat. § 108.090. See Pa. Cons. Stats. 23, § 3507. See R.I. Gen. Laws § 34-11-3. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-1-109 & § 66-1-110. See Town of Corinth v. Emery, 22 A. 618 (Vt. 1891); Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 15, § 67. See Va. Code Ann. § 55-21; Vasilion v. Vasilion, 66 S.E.2d 599 (Va. 1951). See Wyo. Stat. § 34-1-140. Ohio briefly experimented with tenancy by the entirety. See Koster v. Bondrieux, 463 N.E.2d 39 (Ohio App. 1982). See also Patricia J. Reedy, Legislation Note, S.201: Ohio's Statute Creating a New Survivorship Tenancy, 11 U. Dayton L. Rev. 481 (1986). Ohio tenancies by the entirety created during the state's brief experiment with the estate remain valid despite the subsequent repeal of the enabling legislation. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.21(A).

(n72)Footnote 111. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.6(b). An intention not to create a tenancy by the entirety may be indicated by words describing any incident of the created estate inconsistent with tenancy by the entirety. See Dearman v. Bruns, 181 S.E.2d 809 (N.C. App. 1971) (devise to H and W "to share equally" held to create tenancy in common).

(n73)Footnote 112. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7. See also N.Y. Estates, Powers and Trusts Law § 6.2-2(b) (grant to husband and wife creates tenancy by the entirety "unless expressly declared to be a joint tenancy or tenancy in common").

(n74)Footnote 113. See, e.g., In re Arango, 992 F.2d 611 (6th Cir. 1993) (applying Tennessee law); Parramore v. Parramore, 368 So. 2d 1308 (Fla. App. 1978); In re Ginn, 186 B.R. 898 (Bankr. D. Md. 1995); In re Meyer, 187 B.R. 650 (Bankr. W.D. Mo.1995); In re Kelly, 289 B.R. 38 (Bankr. D. Del. 2003).

(n75)Footnote 114. Fekkes v. Hughes, 237 N.E.2d 19 (Mass. 1968).

(n76)Footnote 115. Federal Home Loan Mtg. Corp. v. Toles, 95-7167, 99 F.3d 401 (E.D.N.Y. 1996).

(n77)Footnote 116. Ill. Ann. Stat. ch. 76, para. 1c. See Travelers Indem. Co. v. Engel, 81 F.3d. 711 (7th Cir. 1996) (applying Illinois law) (grant "to H and W as tenants by the entirety" held not to create that estate because grantees were not expressly identified as "husband and wife"). Illinois law no longer requires that a conveyance creating a tenancy by the entirety expressly state that the grantees are husband and wife, although they must in fact be so.

(n78)Footnote 117. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n79)Footnote 118. Ind. Code Ann. § 32-4-2-2.

(n80)Footnote 119. See § 31.08(a), infra

(n81)Footnote 120. See, e.g., Robertson v. Robertson, 593 So. 2d 491 (Fla. 1991) (contract to purchase land entered into by unmarried woman but title taken as tenancy by entirety after marriage).

(n82)Footnote 121. For the reverse situation, see Sunshine v. Del Sole, N.J. Sup. Ct., App. Div. No. (N.J. May 30, 2003) (unmarried woman executed contract to convey real property but married prior to closing and husband refused to release his interest; held: specific performance ordered and husband's interest extinguished).

(n83)Footnote 122. Alaska Stat. § 34.15.110(b).

(n84)Footnote 123. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 509-1.

(n85)Footnote 124. 765 ILCS 1005/1c. By amendment effective January 1, 2002, the Illinois statute no longer requires that a conveyance creating a tenancy by the entirety expressly state that the grantees are husband and wife (although they must in fact be so); nor need the conveyance any longer expressly exclude the intention to create a tenancy in common or a joint tenancy.

(n86)Footnote 125. Ind. Code Ann. § 32-4-2-1.

(n87)Footnote 126. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 381.050.

(n88)Footnote 127. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 184, § 7.

(n89)Footnote 128. Miss. Code § 89-1-7.

(n90)Footnote 129. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 6-2.2(b).

(n91)Footnote 130. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.6(b).

(n92)Footnote 131. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 60, § 74.

(n93)Footnote 132. Va. Code Ann. § 55-21. Tenancy by the entirety "with right of survivorship" comes within the exception. Vasilion v. Vasilion, 66 S.E.2d 599 (Va. 1951). Compare In re Zella, 202 B.R. 712 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1996) (conveyance to husband and wife "as joint tenants with the full common law right of survivorship" held to create tenancy by the entirety in Virginia) with In re Scialdone, 197 B.R. 225 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1996) ("When real property is conveyed to a husband and wife, the deed must specify that a tenancy by the entireties is intended, or this intent must otherwise appear in the deed.").

(n94)Footnote 133. See § 31.06(g), supra.

(n95)Footnote 134. See, e.g., Central Benefits Mut. Ins. Co. v. RIS Adm'rs Agency, 637 N.E.2d 291 (Ohio 1994) (grant "to H and W for their joint lives, remainder to the survivor of them" created joint tenancy with right of survivorship, not tenancy by the entirety, so property could be reached by husband's judgment creditors). For further reflections on this subject, see John V. Orth, Night Thoughts: Reflections on the Debate Concerning Same-Sex Marriage, 3 Nev. L. J. 560 (2003

LexisNexis®

Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 33 TENANCIES BY THE ENTIRETY

4-33 Thompson on Real Property, Thomas Editions § 33.07

AUTHOR: Professor John V. Orth School of Law University of North Carolina

§ 33.07 Incidents of Tenancies by the Entirety.

[Go To Supp]

Several of the incidents of tenancies by the entirety have been described in earlier sections. In the analytical synopsis of the law of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.02), it was observed that neither tenant by the entirety has a share in the joint estate that is devisable or inheritable. Although some courts recognized in the husband a power of alienation, it was limited by the wife's indefeasible interest. In the same section was described the right of survivorship, the "grand incident" of tenancies by the entirety, as it is of joint tenancies. Because a tenant by the entirety lacks the power to sever the estate, the right of survivorship is, if anything, even "grander" because it is indestructible by any act of the other tenant by the entirety. Other properties that tenancies by the entirety share with joint tenancies are summed up in the doctrine of the four unities, described in the context of the creation of tenancies by the entirety (§ 33.06(b)); in the same subsection was described a fifth unity, the so-called "unity of person" based on marriage, unique to tenancies by the entirety.

To be covered in this section are the incidents relevant to the relationship between tenants by the entirety during the subsistence of the estate. Historically, few if any actions could be maintained by one tenant by the entirety against the other, because, in general, one spouse could not sue the other. This rule has steadily eroded, so the materials are organized in terms of the remedies that will presumably become progressively available: actions of waste (§ 33.07(a)); for contribution (§ 33.07(b)); of account (§ 33.07(c)); and of ejectment (§ 33.07(d)); as well as creditors' rights (§ 33.07(e)). Because the mutual rights and duties of joint tenants and tenants in common with respect to the property have been far more fully developed than the respective rights and duties of tenants by the entirety, the comparable sections of the chapters on the other concurrent estates may also be consulted. n135

§ 33.07(a) Action of Waste.

Tenants by the entirety are "seised of the entirety." n136 From this simple fact it follows that any damage to the freehold caused by one tenant by the entirety is an injury to the other tenant by the entirety. Unlike joint tenancies and tenancies in common, for which actions of waste were provided directly or by judicial construction of the venerable Statute of Westminster II (1285), n137 no remedy for waste of a tenancy by the entirety was available at common law because of the fifth unity, the matrimonial bond between tenants by the entirety. Whether viewed as an incident of the tenancy ("the action of waste does not lie between tenants by the entirety") or, more properly, as a specific incident of the general principle that one spouse could not sue another, the fact remained that waste was a wrong for which no remedy was offered tenants by the entirety. Since the husband had complete dominion and control of the estate, the effect was to make his holding "without impeachment for waste." With the general weakening of interspousal immunity from suit and changing concepts of the legal effect of marriage, it may be doubted whether the inability of either spouse to sue the other for waste can remain the rule for much longer.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH:

LEXIS: waste w/15 (tenan! w/3 entiret!)

§ 33.07(b) Action for Contribution.

As between co-tenants, claims for contribution may arise when one makes an expenditure in connection with the property. The most common forms of expenditure giving rise to claims for contribution involve repairs, taxes, mortgage payments, and improvements. Historically claims for contribution were not made by one tenant by the entirety against another, not only because spouses could not sue one another at common law but also because the husband had complete dominion and control over the property, subject only to the wife's indefeasible right of survivorship.

The logic of equal rights for each spouse in property held in tenancy by the entirety and the decline of interspousal immunity from suit seem to lead to the possibility of actions for contribution by one tenant by the entirety against another, particularly where spouses are estranged and living apart but not divorced. If so, the principles developed with respect to other forms of concurrent ownership will apply to tenancies by the entirety as well, with the exception that a policy of encouraging dissentient co-tenants to partition the estate will necessarily be inapplicable: one tenant by the entirety has no right to partition. In general, however, it ought to remain true that one co-tenant should not be compelled to contribute to improvements or other expenses not necessary to the preservation of the estate. Conversely, a co-tenant ought to share expenses such as for taxes and necessary repairs required to preserve the estate for the benefit of both. n138

Courts are divided on the issue of the right of a surviving tenant by the entirety to demand from the estate of a deceased tenant by the entirety contribution of a share of the payment due on a debt represented by a jointly executed promissory note secured by a mortgage on the property held in tenancy by the entirety. Since sole title to the property is now in the surviving tenant by the entirety, it seems inequitable to require the estate of the deceased tenant by the entirety, in the absence of prior agreement by the deceased, to contribute to exonerate the debt on property in which, by virtue of the right of survivorship, it has no further interest. n139

§ 33.07(c) Action of Account.

Just as the action of waste was not available at common law to protect one tenant by the entirety from injury to the freehold caused by the other tenant by the entirety -- most often it was the wife's interest that was damaged by the husband -- so the action of account was not available to protect one tenant by the entirety when the other profited from the estate. Again, most often it was the husband who profited at the wife's expense. The absence of the action of account in the context of tenancies by the entirety was just a negative way of saying that the husband was entitled to all the rents and profits from the estate. n140

More recent legislation indicates that the old order is changing. Consider, for example, a Massachusetts statute of 1980:

> A husband and wife shall be equally entitled to the rents, products, income or profits and to the control, management and possession of property held by them as tenants by the entirety. n141

As the situation of the spouses is equalized, making the tenancy by the entirety in more and more aspects merely a specialized form of joint tenancy reserved for married persons, it can be expected that actions of account will eventually become available to each tenant by the entirety. n142 The venerable "Statute of Queen Anne," n143 the foundation for the action of account with respect to joint tenancies and tenancies in common, could today be read as authorizing the action between tenants by the entirety.

§ 33.07(d) Action of Ejectment.

At common law the husband had complete dominion and control over property held with his wife in tenancy by the entirety; he could even exclude her from possession. n144 In this state of affairs (ignoring for the moment interspousal immunity from suit), it goes without saying that the wife could not maintain an action of ejectment against the husband. An ouster of the husband by the wife, if imaginable at common law, would seem to give rise to an action, assuming rules of procedure permitted it to proceed.

The reconceptualization of tenancy by the entirety as a specialized form of joint tenancy entails a recognition of the spouses' equal rights of interest and possession, two of the four requisite unities. Now having equal rights of possession, neither spouse can exclude the other. n145 In addition, statutes remedying the wife's historic disabilities in tenancies by the entirety often explicitly recognize equal rights to possession. n146 Once she has a right to possession, she has an action of ejectment if possession is infringed.

Because each tenant by the entirety is entitled to possession of the whole, each is enabled to give consent to a police search of the entire estate; each tenant by the entirety is held to have assumed the risk that the other tenant by the entirety will permit the search. n147 The consent is generally not valid to permit a search if the other tenant by the entirety, present at the same time, objects. n148

§ 33.07(e) Creditors' Rights.

Creditors' rights in property held in tenancy by the entirety depend on the extent of the debtor's interest. At common law the wife lacked dominion and control over property she held with her husband, so her creditors (if at common law she could have any creditors in her own right) could not attach her "property." n149 The husband, on the contrary, had dominion and control at common law but no (or only a limited) power of alienation. As states that still recognized the tenancy by the entirety came to regard it as a specialized form of joint tenancy, n150 one in which the husband had a power of alienation, albeit one limited by the wife's indefeasible right of survivorship, creditors of the husband were enabled to reach his entire interest. n151

As the rights of the spouses in the property have approached equality, it might have been expected that creditor's rights would have grown correspondingly. In a few states they did:

> If ... the husband could alienate his right of survivorship at common law, the wife, by virtue of the [Married Women's Property Act], can alienate her right of survivorship. And it follows, that if the wife takes equal rights with the husband in the estate, she must take equal disabilities. Such are the dictates of complete equality. Thus, the judgment creditors of either spouse may levy and execute upon their separate rights of survivorship. n152

In states adopting this view, the bankruptcy of one tenant by the entirety may lead to the sale by the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor's interest. In addition, in such cases the Bankruptcy Act permits the trustee, under circumstances in which the sale of an undivided interest is impractical, to sell the interests of both debtor and non-debtor. n153 In such cases, the non-debtor has a right of first refusal to purchase the property at the price at which the sale is to be consummated; n154 if that right is not exercised, the non-debtor is entitled to the appropriate share of the sale proceeds. n155 Also in states adopting this view, one spouse can encumber the entirety property, but only to the extent of that spouse's share; a mortgage by one tenant by the entirety is secured by the mortgagee's right to possession and right of survivorship. n156 Encumbrance by one spouse, where permitted, does not sever the tenancy by the entirety. n157

A substantial majority of states still recognizing tenancies by the entirety have, however, rejected this view and held that the estate may not be attached by creditors of only one spouse. n158 In these states, property held in tenancy by the entirety may be attached only by creditors of both spouses; so for example, in order to encumber entirety property by mortgage, both spouses must grant the mortgage. n159 It follows that a creditor with distinct judgments, one against the husband and another against the wife, cannot levy on the entirety property. n160

The older line of argument was to the effect that since the owners of a tenancy by the entirety are, in some sense, one person, then only creditors of both spouses -- that is, creditors of that fictional one person -- can reach the entirety property. A more modern argument is that since each has equal, indefeasible rights in the entirety property, then it would be unfair to subject the interest of one to the debts of the other. The result is often justified in terms of a public policy in favor of matrimony:

> The Married Woman's Property Statutes have changed the common-law principles of marital unity so that the husband cannot now assert an exclusive right to the rents and profits or divest the wife of her share directly by conveyance or indirectly by execution. Although it is said that no technical changes have been made in the estate by entirety, the results are different. Now each is entitled to the enjoyment and benefits of the whole and neither has a separate estate therein which may be subjected to a conveyance or execution. These are obvious advantages, some of which can be attained by no other form of tenancy. They are frequently the cause or motive of creating the entirety. The reason for this is no longer merely the fictional unity of husband and wife. The interest in family solidarity retains some influence upon the institution. It is available only to husband and wife. It is a convenient mode of protecting a surviving spouse from inconvenient administration of the decedent's estate and from the other's improvident debts. In that protection the estate finds its peculiar and justifiable function. n161

Tenancy by the entirety can also be justified as protecting the interests of those especially vulnerable. n162 One judge expressed the policy more bluntly: "the archaic fiction of a tenancy by the entireties is preserved only because it makes it almost impossible for creditors to reach a debtor's family house." n163

The effect is to permit any amount of real property to be shielded from the creditors of either spouse, a major incentive for married persons to hold property in tenancies by the entirety in such jurisdictions, subject only to an exception for fraudulent conveyance. n164 The implications for public policy, already serious in the case of immunity from creditors' rights, become grave indeed in law enforcement cases seeking the forfeiture of property used in criminal activity: where one spouse is innocent, the interest of the guilty party in property held in tenancy by the entirety is immune from forfeiture. n165

Whether a particular obligation is sufficiently the act of both parties is a question of fact. There is a presumption that during the marriage either spouse has the power to act for both, so long as the benefits inure to both. n166 For example, a construction contract executed by only one spouse may, if breached, give rise to a mechanics' lien. n167 Even a land sale contract executed by only one tenant by the entirety may bind the other if conditions of estoppel exist. n168 A statute may make certain debts of one spouse the joint debt of the married couple; in that case property held in tenancy by the entirety would be available to the creditor of the indebted spouse. n169 Without a power of attorney, however, one tenant by the entirety may not, it has been held, effectively consent to changes in restrictive covenants binding the property. n170

Recently, the United States Supreme Court held for the first time that a federal tax lien on property held in tenancy by the entirety is not necessarily governed by state law concerning creditors' rights. n171 Although the details have yet to be worked out, it appears that the Court has refused to recognize, for purposes of federal tax law, the common law basis of the tenancy by the entirety -- that the married couple constitute a single entity -- and has chosen instead to treat the tenancy by the entirety as a matter of federal law as a special form of joint tenancy, one inseverable on the act of (or on behalf of) one of the two tenants. n172

The application of bankruptcy law to tenancies by the entirety can produce surprises. For example, after a filing in bankruptcy by one tenant by the entirety, the death of the other tenant by the entirety does not result in the addition of the property to the bankruptcy estate, even though the property is now solely owned by the bankrupt. When owned by both tenants by the entirety, the property was not subject to the claims of the creditors of only one, and the death of the other did not result in succession by the bankrupt to new ownership; it only eliminated one of the former owners. n173 One court, confronting the question of the effect of the death of one tenant by the entirety after a bankruptcy sale of the entirety property but before distribution of the proceeds to joint creditors, held that the involuntary sale had not severed the tenancy by the entirety and therefore distributed the proceeds to creditors of the surviving spouse. n174 Where both spouses survive, another unexpected result may ensue: the discharge of the bankrupt spouse converts the remaining undischarged debt into the sole debt of the non-bankrupt spouse, whose share in any remaining property held in tenancy by the entirety cannot be reached by the creditor, since only a creditor of both spouses can reach entirety property. n175

Incident to the property settlement of divorcing tenants by the entirety, a court may award the property to one of the spouses in sole ownership. Creditors of the spouse not receiving title to the property, who were unable to reach it to satisfy their claim while it was held in tenancy by the entirety, have argued that the effect of the decree is to convert the title, however briefly, into a tenancy in common before vesting it in the sole owner, and that their claim attaches in that instant. n176 The Florida Supreme Court has rejected the argument: "Even though ...a tenancy by the entirety becomes a tenancy in common by operation of law upon dissolution of marriage, we reject the 'twinkling of a legal eye' analysis... . Entireties property is not subject to a lien against only one tenant." n177

COMPUTER-ASSISTED RESEARCH

LEXIS: (creditor w/3 right) w/50 (tenan! w/3 entiret!)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 135. See §§ 31.07 and 32.07, supra.

(n2)Footnote 136. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries 182 (1783).

(n3)Footnote 137. 13 Edw., c. 22 (1285). It is instructive that tenants in coparcenary were not granted the action of waste because they, alone among concurrent owners at the time, could compel partition. See 2 Edward Coke, Institutes 403. (Joint tenants were not enabled to compel partition until the statutes of King Henry VIII. See § 31.05, supra.) The lesson seems to be that the founders of the common law saw no need to arbitrate disputes among co-owners who could escape the concurrent ownership at will. The modern application would seem to be that tenants by the entirety are more in need of the remedy provided by the action of waste than other concurrent owners.

(n4)Footnote 138. Baran v. Jaluski, 689 A.2d 1283 (Md. App. 1997) ("a co-tenant in a tenancy by the entireties is entitled, to the same extent as a co-tenant in a tenancy in common or joint tenancy is entitled, to contribution for that spouse's payment of the carrying charges which preserve the property").

(n5)Footnote 139. In re Keil's Estate, 145 A.2d 563 (Del. 1958) (action by wife against husband's executors for contribution toward joint mortgage debt), noted in 73 Harv. L. Rev. 425 (1959), 42 Marq. L. Rev. 555 (1959), 37 N.C. L. Rev. 333 (1959), 13 Wyo. L.J. 267 (1959), 58 Mich. L. Rev. 137 (1959), 11 Stan. L. Rev. 778 (1959); Florio v. Greenspan, 165 N.E.2d 753 (Mass. 1960).

(n6)Footnote 140. Childs v. Childs, 199 N.E. 383 (Mass. 1936); Pineo v. White, 70 N.E.2d 294 (Mass. 1946).

(n7)Footnote 141. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 209, § 1.

Michigan. "A husband and wife shall be equally entitled to the rents, products, income, or profits, and to the control and management of real or personal property held by them as tenants by the entirety." Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 557-71.

North Carolina. "A husband and wife shall have an equal right to the control, use, possession, rents, income, and profits of real property held by them in tenancy by the entirety. Neither spouse may bargain, sell, lease, mortgage, transfer, convey or in any manner encumber any property so held without the written joinder of the other spouse... ." N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.6(a). See William A. Reppy, North Carolina's Tenancy by the Entirety Reform Legislation of 1982, 5 Campbell L. Rev. 1 (1982).

(n8)Footnote 142. Lindenfelser v. Lindenfelser, 153 A.2d 901 (Pa. 1959) ("we believe the modern rule to be that where husband and wife are separated but not divorced and where one of them is excluded from the exercise or enjoyment of rights inherent in an estate held by the entireties, an accounting of the property so held may be ordered and the property or proceeds divided equally between them").

(n9)Footnote 143. Often cited as 4 Anne, c. 16, § 27, and dated 1705, the statute is properly 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, § 27 (1706). Although the most widely used edition of the English statutes, Oickering's Statutes At Large, makes it appear that Queen Anne's parliament adjourned in December 1705, it actually continued in session into January, when the present statute was enacted. See 11 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 519, 526 (1938). The relevant section of the statute is as follows:

> actions of account shall and may be brought and maintained ... by one joint tenant, and tenant in common, his executors and administrators, against the other, as bailiff for receiving more than comes to his just share or proportion, and against the executor and administrator of such joint tenant, or tenant in common... .

(n10)Footnote 144. D'Ercole v. D'Ercole, 407 F. Supp. 1377 (U.S. Dist. Ct., D. Mass. 1976) (husband's right to exclusive possession of property held in tenancy by entirety not violation of wife's rights under Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to U.S. Constitution); Voight v. Voight, 147 N.E. 887 (Mass. 1925).

(n11)Footnote 145. T.A. v. Allen, 669 A.2d 360 (Pa. Super. 1995).

(n12)Footnote 146. See, e.g., Mass Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 209, § 1; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-13.6(a).

(n13)Footnote 147. United States v. Matlock, 415 U.S. 164 (1974).

(n14)Footnote 148. State v. Walker, 941 P.2d 1 (Wash. App. 1997).

(n15)Footnote 149. Licker v. Gluskin, 164 N.E. 613 (Mass. 1929).

(n16)Footnote 150. Morris v. McCarty, 32 N.E. 938 (Mass. 1893).

(n17)Footnote 151. Raptes v. Pappas, 155 N.E. 787 (Mass. 1927).

(n18)Footnote 152. King v. Greene, 153 A.2d 49, 60 (N.J. 1959), noted in 5 Vill. L. Rev. 154 (1959), 58 Mich. L. Rev. 601 (1960), 14 Rutgers L. Rev. 457 (1960), 73 Harv. L. Rev. 792 (1960). But see N.J. Stat. Ann. § 43:3-17.4 (as to estates created after 1988, either spouse prohibited from severing, alienating, or otherwise affecting their respective interests in the property during the marriage or upon separation without the written consent of the other).

See also Coraccio v. Lowell Five Cents Sav. Bank, 612 N.E.2d 650 (Mass. 1993) (by virtue of legislation equalizing rights of spouses in property held as tenants by the entirety, either spouse may convey or encumber his or her interest), noted in 30 New Eng. L. Rev. 85 (1995). But see Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 209, §§ 1, 1A (tenants by the entirety holding under a deed dated prior to Feb. 11, 1980 may elect to have tenancy exempted from claims of creditors of debtor spouse).

Because in states taking this view creditors of one spouse can levy on the debtor's interest but cannot affect the non-debtor's interest, tenancies by the entirety have been labeled "partial bars" to creditors' rights. See Steve R. Johnson, Fog, Fairness, and the Federal Fisc: Tenancy-by-the-Entireties Interests and the Federal Tax Lien, 60 Mo. L. Rev. 839 (1995) (listing ten "partial bar jurisdictions").

(n19)Footnote 153. Bankruptcy Code § 363(h):

The trustee can sell both the estate's interest and the interest of the non-debtor in property owned as tenants in common, joint tenants, or tenants by the entirety only if:

(1) partition in kind of such property among the estate and such co-owners is impracticable;

(2) sale of the estate's undivided interest in such property would realize significantly less for the estate than sale of such property free of the interest of such co-owners;

(3) the benefit to the estate of a sale of such property free of the interests of co-owners outweighs the detriment, if any, to such co-owners; and

(4) such property is not used in the production, transmission, or distribution, for sale, of electric energy or of natural or synthetic gas for heat, light, or power.

One commentator has described this section as going "too far." Thomas E. Plank, The Constitutional Limits of Bankruptcy, 63 Tenn. L. Rev. 487, 571 (1996).

(n20)Footnote 154. Bankruptcy Code § 363(i).

(n21)Footnote 155. Bankruptcy Code § 363(j).

(n22)Footnote 156. United States v. Avila, 88 F.3d 229 (3d Cir. 1996) (applying New Jersey law). Even in states permitting the encumbrance by one spouse of property held in tenancy by the entirety, the mortgagee's interest in possible distribution rights following divorce would be subject to the equitable distribution rights of the non-mortgagor spouse. Vander Weert v. Vander Weert, 700 A.2d 894 (N.J. Super. 1997) (concerning tenancy by the entirety acquired before legislation prohibiting, as to estates created after 1988, either spouse from severing, alienating, or otherwise affecting their respective interests in the property during the marriage or upon separation without the written consent of the other).

(n23)Footnote 157. United States v. Lee, 12 F. Supp. 2d 858 (C.D. Ill. 1998); V.R.W., Inc. v. Klein, 503 N.E.2d 496 (N.Y. 1986).

(n24)Footnote 158. Sawada v. Endo, 561 P.2d 1291 (Haw. 1977) (listing support for majority rule); In re Persky, 134 B.R. 81 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1991) (applying majority rule), noted in 31 U. Louisville J. Fam. L. 164 (1992-93).

