- " 'Recklessness' refers to a subjective state of culpability greater than simple negligence, which has been described as a 'deliberate disregard' of the 'high degree of probability' that an injury will occur. Recklessness, unlike negligence, involves more than 'inadvertence, incompetence, unskillfulness, or a failure to take precautions' but rather rises to the level of a 'conscious choice of a course of action ... with knowledge of the serious danger to others involved in it.' " (Delaney v. Baker (1999) 20 Cal.4th 23, 31-32 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 610, 971 P.2d 986] , internal citations omitted.)

- In Conservatorship of Gregory v. Beverly Enterprises, Inc. (2000) 80 Cal.App.4th 514, 521 [95

Cal.Rptr.2d 336] , the court found that the following instruction adequately defined "recklessness": "[T]he term 'recklessness' requires that the defendant have knowledge of a high degree of probability that dangerous consequences will result from his or her conduct and acts with deliberate disregard of that probability or with a conscious disregard of the probable consequences. Recklessness requires conduct more culpable than mere negligence."

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 500, provides: "The actor's conduct is in reckless disregard of the safety of another if he does an act or intentionally fails to do an act which it is his duty to the other to do, knowing or having reason to know of facts which would lead a reasonable man to realize, not only that his conduct creates an unreasonable risk of physical harm to another, but also that such risk is substantially greater than that which is necessary to make his conduct negligent."

CACI 3114 "Malice" Explained

"Malice" means that [[name of individual defendant]/[name of employer defendant]'s employee] acted with intent to cause injury or that [his/her] conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

If the individual responsible for the elder abuse is a defendant in the case, use "[name of individual defendant]." If only the individual's employer is a defendant, use "[name of employer defendant]'s employee."

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3294(c)(1) provides: " 'Malice' means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others."

- "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. The additional component of 'despicable conduct' must be found." (*College Hospital, Inc. v. ■ "Malice, for purposes of awarding exemplary damages, includes 'despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.' To establish conscious disregard, the plaintiff must show 'that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his conduct, and that he wilfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences.' New September 2003; Revised June 2005, April 2007, April 2008, October 2008, April 2009

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 3100, Financial Abuse--Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 3101, Financial Abuse--Decedent's Pain and Suffering.

If the plaintiff alleges that the defendant assisted in the wrongful conduct, modify question 1 as in element 2 of CACI No. 3100.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 4 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If the jury answers "yes" to questions 1, 2, and 3, attorney fees and costs are recoverable from the individual defendant without any additional showing of any kind. (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15657.5(a).) Attorney fees are also recoverable from the employer, assuming that standard vicarious liability is shown. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15657.5(c).) Incorporate questions 3 and 4 from CACI No. VF-3700, Negligence--Vicarious Liability, to address the liability of the employer for the acts of the employee.

Should the financial abuse in some way have caused the victim's death, the decedent's pain and suffering before death is recoverable on a showing by clear and convincing evidence that the individual defendant acted with recklessness, oppression, fraud, or malice. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15657.5(b); Code Civ. Proc., § 377.34.) In such a case, in question 4, include only item 4a for past economic loss. But also include questions 5 and 6.

If punitive damages are sought, incorporate a verdict form for punitive damages. (See CACI Nos. VF-3900 -VF-3904.)

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 3103, Neglect--Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 3104, Neglect--Enhanced Remedies Sought, and CACI No. 3102A, Employer Liability for Enhanced Remedies--Both Individual and Employer Defendants.

Question 3 can be modified to correspond to the alleged wrongful conduct as in element 3 of CACI No. 3103.

Optional questions 6, 7, and 8 address enhanced remedies. If the neglect is proved by clear and convincing evidence, and it is also proved by clear and convincing evidence that the individual defendant acted with recklessness, malice, oppression, or fraud, attorney fees, costs, and a decedent's predeath pain and suffering may be recovered. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15657.) If any of these remedies are sought against the employer, include question 6. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15657(c).) Question 6 may be altered to correspond to one of the alternative bracketed options for employer liability in CACI No. 3102A.

If any enhanced remedies are sought against either the individual or the employer, include question 7. If the neglect led to the elder's death, in question 5 include only item 5a for past economic loss. But also include the transitional language after question 7 and include question 8.

In the transitional language after question 4, direct the jury to answer questions 6 or 7 or both, depending on which questions are to be included. If question 7 is to be included but question 6 is not, then 7 will be renumbered as 6.

If punitive damages are sought, incorporate language from a verdict form for punitive damages. (See CACI Nos. VF-3900 -VF-3904.)

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 3106, Physical Abuse--Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 3107, Physical Abuse--Enhanced Remedies Sought, and CACI No. 3102A, Employer Liability for Enhanced Remedies--Both Individual and Employer Defendants.

Optional questions 5, 6, and 7 address enhanced remedies. If the physical abuse is proved by clear and convincing evidence, and it is also proved by clear and convincing evidence that the individual defendant acted with recklessness, malice, oppression, or fraud, attorney fees, costs, and a decedent's predeath pain and suffering may be recovered. If punitive damages are sought, incorporate language from a verdict form for punitive damages. (See CACI Nos. VF-3900 -VF-3904.)

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

CHAPTER 32 California Judicial Council Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act Instructions

5-32 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3200

CACI 3200 Failure to Purchase or Replace Consumer Good After Reasonable Number of Repair Opportunities--Essential Factual Elements (Civ. Code, § 1793.2(d))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s failure to purchase or replace [a/an] [consumer good] after a reasonable number of repair opportunities. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] bought [a/an] [consumer good] [from/distributed by/manufactured by] [name of defendant];

2. That [name of defendant] gave [name of plaintiff] a warranty by [insert at least one of the following]

[making a written statement that [describe alleged express warranty];] [or]

[showing [him/her] a sample or model of the [consumer good] and representing, by words or conduct, that [his/her] [consumer good] would match the quality of the sample or model;]

3. That the [consumer good] [insert at least one of the following]

[did not perform as stated for the time specified;] [or]

[did not match the quality [of the [sample/model]] [or] [as set forth in the written statement];]

4. [That [name of plaintiff] delivered the [consumer good] to [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facilities for repair;]

[or]

[That [name of plaintiff] notified [name of defendant] in writing of the need for repair because [he/she] reasonably could not deliver the [consumer good] to [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facilities because of the [size and weight/method of attachment/method of installation] [or] [the nature of the defect] of the [consumer good]]; [and]

5. That [name of defendant] or its representative failed to repair the [consumer good] to match the [written statement/represented quality] after a reasonable number of opportunities; [and]

6. [That [name of defendant] did not replace the [consumer good] or reimburse [name of plaintiff] an amount of money equal to the purchase price of the [consumer good], less the value of its use by [name of plaintiff] before discovering the defect[s].]

[A written statement need not include the words "warranty" or "guarantee," but if those words are used, a warranty is created. It is also not necessary for [name of defendant] to have specifically intended to create a warranty. A warranty is not created if [name of defendant] simply stated the value of the [consumer good] or gave an opinion about the [consumer good]. General statements concerning customer satisfaction do not create a warranty.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2007

Directions for Use

An instruction on the definition of "consumer good" may be necessary if that issue is disputed. Civil Code section 1791(a) provides: " 'Consumer goods' means any new product or part thereof that is used, bought, or leased for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, except for clothing and consumables. 'Consumer goods' shall include new and used assistive devices sold at retail."

Select the alternative in element 4 that is appropriate to the facts of the case.

Regarding element 4, if the plaintiff claims that the consumer goods could not be delivered for repair, the judge should decide whether written notice of nonconformity is required. The statute, Civil Code section 1793.2(c), is unclear on this point.

Depending on the circumstances of the case, further instruction on element 6 may be needed to clarify how the jury should calculate "the value of its use" during the time before discovery of the defect.

If remedies are sought under the Commercial Code, the plaintiff may be required to prove reasonable notification within a reasonable time. (Cal. U. Com. Code, § 2607(3).) If the court determines that proof is necessary, add the following element to this instruction:

That [name of plaintiff] took reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [consumer good] [did not match the quality [of the [sample/model]]/as set forth in the written statement];

See also CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time.

If appropriate to the facts, add: "It is not necessary for [name of plaintiff] to prove the cause of a defect in the [consumer good]." The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act does not require a consumer to prove the cause of the defect or failure, only that the consumer good "did not conform to the express warranty." (See Oregel v. American Isuzu Motors, Inc. (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1094, 1102, fn. 8 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 583] .)

In addition to sales of consumer goods, the Consumer Warranty Act applies to leases. (Civ. Code, §§ 1791(g)-(i), 1795.4.) This instruction may be modified for use in cases involving an express warranty in a lease of consumer goods.

See also CACI No. 3202, "Repair Opportunities" Explained.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1794(a) provides, in part: "Any buyer of consumer goods who is damaged by a failure to comply with any obligation under this [Act] or under an ... express warranty ... may bring an action for the recovery of damages and other legal and equitable relief."

- Civil Code section 1791.2 provides:

- (a) "Express warranty" means:

- (1) A written statement arising out of a sale to the consumer of a consumer good pursuant to which the manufacturer, distributor, or retailer undertakes to preserve or maintain the utility or performance of the consumer good or provide compensation if there is a failure in utility or performance; or

- (2) In the event of any sample or model, that the whole of the goods conforms to such sample or model.

- (b) It is not necessary to the creation of an express warranty that formal words such as "warranty" or "guarantee" be used, but if such words are used then an express warranty is created. An affirmation merely of the value of the goods or a statement purporting to be merely an opinion or commendation of the goods does not create a warranty.

- (c) Statements or representations such as expressions of general policy concerning customer satisfaction which are not subject to any limitation do not create an express warranty.

- Civil Code section 1795 provides, in part: "If express warranties are made by persons other than the manufacturer of the goods, the obligation of the person making such warranties shall be the same as that imposed on the manufacturer."

- Civil Code section 1793.2(d) provides, in part:

- (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), if the manufacturer or its representative in this state does not service or repair the goods to conform to the applicable express warranties after a reasonable number of attempts, the manufacturer shall either replace the goods or reimburse the buyer in an amount equal to the purchase price paid by the buyer, less that amount directly attributable to use by the buyer prior to discovery of the nonconformity.

(2) If the manufacturer or its representative in this state is unable to service or repair a new motor vehicle ... to conform to the applicable express warranties after a reasonable number of attempts, the manufacturer shall either promptly replace the new motor vehicle ... or promptly make restitution to the buyer However, the buyer shall be free to elect restitution in lieu of replacement, and in no event shall the buyer be required to accept a replacement vehicle.

■ Under Civil Code section 1793.1(a)(2), if the warranty period has been extended, it cannot expire any sooner than 60 days after the last repair of a claimed defect.

■ Civil Code section 1793.2(c) provides, in part: "The buyer shall deliver nonconforming goods to the manufacturer's service and repair facility within this state, unless, due to reasons of size and weight, or method of attachment, or method of installation, or nature of the nonconformity, delivery cannot reasonably be accomplished. If the buyer cannot return the nonconforming goods for any of these reasons, he or she shall notify the manufacturer or its nearest service and repair facility within the state. Written notice of nonconformity to the manufacturer or its service and repair facility shall constitute return of the goods for purposes of this section."

■ Civil Code section 1795.5 provides, in part: "Notwithstanding the provisions ... defining consumer goods to mean 'new' goods, the obligation of a distributor or retail seller of used consumer goods in a sale in which an express warranty is given shall be the same as that imposed on manufacturers," with limited exceptions provided by statute.

■ Civil Code section 1790.3 provides: "The provisions of [the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act] shall not affect the rights and obligations of parties determined by reference to the Commercial Code except that, where the provisions of the Commercial Code conflict with the rights guaranteed to buyers of consumer goods under the provisions of [the act], the provisions of [the act] shall prevail."

■ Civil Code section 1793.1(a)(2) provides, in part: "The warranty period will be extended for the number of whole days that the product has been out of the buyer's hands for warranty repairs. If a defect exists within the warranty period, the warranty will not expire until the defect has been fixed. The warranty period will also be extended if the warranty repairs have not been performed due to delays caused by circumstances beyond the control of the buyer, or if the warranty repairs did not remedy the defect and the buyer notifies the manufacturer or seller of the failure of the repairs within 60 days after they were completed."

■ Civil Code section 1795.6 provides, in part:

(a) Every warranty period relating to an ... express warranty accompanying a sale or consignment for sale of consumer goods selling for fifty dollars ($50) or more shall automatically be tolled for the period from the date upon which the buyer either (1) delivers nonconforming goods to the manufacturer or seller for warranty repairs or service or (2), pursuant to [sections 1793.2(c) or 1793.22], notifies the manufacturer or seller of the nonconformity of the goods up to, and including, the date upon which (1) the repaired or serviced goods are delivered to the buyer, (2) the buyer is notified the goods are repaired or serviced and are available for the buyer's possession or (3) the buyer is notified that repairs or service is completed, if repairs or service is made at the buyer's residence.

(b) Notwithstanding the date or conditions set for the expiration of the warranty period, such warranty period shall not be deemed expired if ... : (1) after the buyer has satisfied the requirements of subdivision (a), the warranty repairs or service has not been performed due to delays caused by circumstances beyond the control of the buyer or (2) the warranty repairs or service performed upon the nonconforming goods did not remedy the nonconformity for which such repairs or service was performed and the buyer notified the manufacturer or seller of this failure within 60 days after the repairs or service was completed. When the warranty repairs or service has been performed so as to remedy the nonconformity, the warranty period shall expire in accordance with its terms, including any extension to the warranty period for warranty repairs or service.

■ Broadly speaking, the Act regulates warranty terms; imposes service and repair obligations on manufacturers, distributors and retailers who make express warranties; requires disclosure of specified information in express warranties; and broadens a buyer's remedies to include costs, attorney fees and civil penalties... [P] [T]he purpose of the Act has been to provide broad relief to purchasers of consumer goods with respect to warranties." (National R.V., Inc. v. Foreman (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 1072, 1080 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 672] .)

■ "[S]ection 1793.2, subdivision (d)(2), differs from section 1793.2, subdivision (d)(1), in that it gives the new motor vehicle consumer the right to elect restitution in lieu of replacement; provides specific procedures for the motor vehicle manufacturer to follow in the case of replacement and in the case of restitution; and sets forth rules for offsetting the amount attributed to the consumer's use of the motor vehicle. These 'Lemon Law' provisions clearly provide greater consumer protections to those who purchase new motor vehicles than are afforded under the general provisions of the Act to those who purchase other consumer goods under warranty." (National R.V., Inc., supra, 34 Cal.App.4th at p.1079 , internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

■ The act does not require a consumer to give a manufacturer, in addition to its local representative, at least one opportunity to fix a problem. Regarding previous repair efforts entitling an automobile buyer to reimbursement, "[t]he legislative history of [Civil Code section 1793.2] demonstrates beyond any question that... a differentiation between manufacturer and local representative is unwarranted." (Ibrahim v. Ford Motor Co. (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 878, 888 [263 Cal.Rptr. 64] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using CACI No. 3200: This is a lengthy and relatively complicated instruction that sets forth all the required elements for breach of an express warranty. If some of the required elements are not in dispute, it may be possible to stipulate as to those elements and shorten the instruction. If that is not possible, it is essential to go over each element in closing argument, preferably with the use of visual aids (such as a chart or powerpoint), to review the evidence as to each required element. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

CACI 3201 Failure to Promptly Purchase or Replace New Motor Vehicle After Reasonable Number of Repair Opportunities--Essential Factual Elements (Civ. Code, § 1793.2(d))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to promptly purchase or replace [a/an] [new motor vehicle] after a reasonable number of repair opportunities. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] [bought/leased] [a/an] [new motor vehicle] [from/distributed by/manufactured by] [name of defendant];
- 2. That [name of defendant] gave [name of plaintiff] a written warranty that [describe alleged express warranty];
- 3. That the vehicle had [a] defect[s] that [was/were] covered by the warranty and that substantially impaired its use, value, or safety to a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s situation;
- 4. [That [name of plaintiff] delivered the vehicle to [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility for repair of the defect[s];]

[That [name of plaintiff] notified [name of defendant] in writing of the need for repair of the defect[s] because [he/she] reasonably could not deliver the vehicle to [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility because of the nature of the defect[s];]
- 5. That [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility failed to repair the vehicle to match the written warranty after a reasonable number of opportunities to do so; and

6. That [name of defendant] did not promptly replace or buy back the vehicle.

[It is not necessary for [name of plaintiff] to prove the cause of a defect in the [new motor vehicle].]

[A written warranty need not include the words "warranty" or "guarantee," but if those words are used, a warranty is created. It is also not necessary for [name of defendant] to have specifically intended to create a warranty. General statements concerning customer satisfaction do not create a warranty.]

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, December 2005, April 2007, December 2007

Directions for Use

If remedies are sought under the Commercial Code, the plaintiff may be required to prove reasonable notification within a reasonable time. (Cal. U. Com. Code, § 2607(3).) If the court determines that proof is necessary, add the following element to this instruction:

That [name of plaintiff] took reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [new motor vehicle] had a defect covered by the warranty;

See also CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time.

Regarding element 4, if the plaintiff claims that the consumer goods could not be delivered for repair, the judge should decide whether written notice of nonconformity is required. The statute, Civil Code section 1793.2(c), is unclear on this point.

Include the bracketed sentence preceding the final bracketed paragraph if appropriate to the facts. The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act does not require a consumer to prove the cause of the defect or failure, only that the consumer good "did not conform to the express warranty." (See Oregel v. American Isuzu Motors, Inc. (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1094, 1102, fn. 8 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 583] .)

In addition to sales of consumer goods, the Consumer Warranty Act applies to leases. (Civ. Code, §§ 1791(g)-(i), 1795.4.) This instruction may be modified for use in cases involving an express warranty in a lease of a motor vehicle.

Regarding previous repair efforts entitling an automobile buyer to reimbursement, "[t]he legislative history of [Civil Code section 1793.2] demonstrates beyond any question that... a differentiation between manufacturer and local representative is unwarranted." (Ibrahim v. Ford Motor Co. (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 878, 888 [263 Cal.Rptr. 64] .)

■ "[T]he only affirmative step the Act imposes on consumers is to 'permit[] the manufacturer a reasonable opportunity to repair the vehicle.' " (Oregel, supra, 90 Cal.App.4th at p. 1103 , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he Act does not require consumers to take any affirmative steps to secure relief for the failure of a manufacturer to service or repair a vehicle to conform to applicable warranties--other than, of course, permitting the manufacturer a reasonable opportunity to repair the vehicle. ... In reality, ... , the manufacturer seldom on its own initiative offers the consumer the options available under the Act: a replacement vehicle or restitution. Therefore, as a practical matter, the consumer will likely request replacement or restitution. But the consumer's request is not mandated by any provision in the Act. Rather, the consumer's request for replacement or restitution is often prompted by the manufacturer's unforthright approach and stonewalling of fundamental warranty problems." (Lukather v. General Motors, LLC (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1050 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 853] , original italics.)

CACI 3202 "Repair Opportunities" Explained

Each time the [consumer good/new motor vehicle] was given to [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] for repair counts as an opportunity to repair, even if [it/they] did not do any repair work.

In determining whether [name of defendant] had a reasonable number of opportunities to fix the [consumer good/new motor vehicle], you should consider all the circumstances surrounding each repair visit. [Name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] must have been given at least two opportunities to fix the [consumer good/new motor vehicle] [unless only one repair attempt was possible because the [consumer good/new motor vehicle] was later destroyed or because [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] refused to attempt the repair].

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, December 2005, June 2006

Directions for Use

This instruction applies only to claims under Civil Code section 1793.2(d) and not to other claims, such as claims for breach of the implied warranty of merchantability. (See Mocek v. Alfa Leisure, Inc. (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 402, 406-407 [7 Cal.Rptr.3d 546] .)

The final bracketed portion of the last sentence of this instruction is intended for use only in cases where the evidence shows that only one repair attempt was possible because of the subsequent malfunction and destruction of the vehicle or where the defendant refused to attempt the repair. (See Bishop v. Hyundai Motor America (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 750 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 134] ; Gomez v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 921 [215 Cal.Rptr. 507] .)

- Civil Code section 1793.2(d) provides, in part:

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), if the manufacturer or its representative in this state does not service or repair the goods to conform to the applicable express warranties after a reasonable number of attempts, the manufacturer shall either replace the goods or reimburse the buyer. ...

(2) If the manufacturer or its representative in this state is unable to service or repair a new motor vehicle ... to conform to the applicable express warranties after a reasonable number of attempts, the manufacturer shall either promptly replace the new motor vehicle ... or promptly make restitution to the buyer.

- "[T]he only affirmative step the Act imposes on consumers is to 'permit[] the manufacturer a reasonable opportunity to repair the vehicle.' Whether or not the manufacturer's agents choose to take advantage of the opportunity, or are unable despite that opportunity to isolate and make an effort to repair the problem, are matters for which the consumer is not responsible." - "Section 1793.2(d) requires the manufacturer to afford the specified remedies of restitution or replacement if that manufacturer is unable to repair the vehicle 'after a reasonable number of attempts.' 'Attempts' is plural. The statute does not require the manufacturer to make restitution or replace a vehicle if it has had only one opportunity to repair that vehicle." (*Silvio v. Ford Motor Co. CHAPTER 32 California Judicial Council Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act Instructions

CACI 3203 Reasonable Number of Repair Opportunities--Rebuttable Presumption (Civ. Code, § 1793.22(b))

The number of opportunities to make repairs is presumed to be reasonable if [name of plaintiff] proves that within [18 months from delivery of the [new motor vehicle] to [him/her/it]] [or] [the first 18,000 miles] [insert option A, B, and/or C:]

[A. 1. The vehicle was made available to [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] for repair of the same substantially impairing defect two or more times; [and]

2. The defect resulted in a condition that was likely to cause death or serious bodily injury if the vehicle were driven; [and]

3. [[Name of plaintiff] directly notified [name of manufacturer] in writing about the need to repair the defect;] [or]]

[B. 1. The vehicle was made available to [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] for repair of the same substantially impairing defect four or more times; [and]

2. [[Name of plaintiff] directly notified [name of manufacturer] in writing about the need to repair the defect;] [or]]

[C. The vehicle was out of service for repair of substantially impairing defects by [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] for more than 30 days.]

If [name of plaintiff] has proved these facts, then the number of opportunities to make repairs was reasonable unless [name of defendant] proves that under all the circumstances [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] was not given a reasonable opportunity to repair the defect.

[The 30-day limit for repairing defects will be lengthened if [name of defendant] proves that repairs could not be made because of conditions beyond the control of [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility.]

New September 2003; Revised February 2005

Directions for Use

This instruction should not be given if none of the enumerated situations apply to the plaintiff's case. (Jiagbogu v. Mercedes-Benz USA (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 1235, 1245 [13 Cal.Rptr.3d 679] .)

Note that the factfinder's inquiry should be focused on overall reasonableness of the opportunities plaintiff gave defendant to make repairs. Therefore, while satisfying the rebuttable presumption (without having it overcome by defendant) is one way for plaintiff to satisfy the reasonable opportunities requirement, he or she may do so in other ways instead. Likewise, because the statutory presumption is rebuttable, defendant is allowed an opportunity to overcome it.

The rebuttable presumption concerning the number of repair attempts applies only to new motor vehicles--see the Tanner Consumer Protection Act. (Civ. Code, § 1793.22(b).)

The bracketed language in the first two optional paragraphs concerning notice made directly to the manufacturer are applicable only if "the manufacturer has clearly and conspicuously disclosed to the buyer, with the warranty or the owner's manual, the provisions of [the Tanner Consumer Protection Act] and that of [Civil Code section 1793.2(d)], including the requirement that the buyer must notify the manufacturer directly." (See Civ. Code, § 1793.22(b)(3).) This is a matter that the judge should determine ahead of time as an issue of law.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1793.2(d)(2) provides, in part: "If the manufacturer or its representative in this state is unable to service or repair a new motor vehicle ... to conform to the applicable express warranties after a reasonable number of attempts, the manufacturer shall either promptly replace the new motor vehicle ... or promptly make restitution to the buyer."

- "We believe ... that the only affirmative step the Act imposes on consumers is to 'permit[] the manufacturer a reasonable opportunity to repair the vehicle.' Whether or not the manufacturer's agents choose to take advantage of the opportunity, or are unable despite that opportunity to isolate and make an effort to repair the problem, are matters for which the consumer is not responsible." (Oregel v. American Isuzu Motors, Inc. (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1094, 1103-1104 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 583] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- Civil Code section 1793.22(b) provides, in part:

It shall be presumed that a reasonable number of attempts have been made to conform a new motor vehicle to the applicable express warranties if, within 18 months from delivery to the buyer or 18,000 miles on the odometer of the vehicle, whichever occurs first, one or more of the following occurs:

(1) The same nonconformity results in a condition that is likely to cause death or serious bodily injury if the vehicle is driven and the nonconformity has been subject to repair two or more times by the manufacturer or its agents, and the buyer or lessee has at least once directly notified the manufacturer of the need for the repair of the nonconformity.

(2) The same nonconformity has been subject to repair four or more times by the manufacturer or its agents and the buyer has at least once directly notified the manufacturer of the need for the repair of the nonconformity.

(3) The vehicle is out of service by reason of repair of nonconformities by the manufacturer or its agents for a cumulative total of more than 30 calendar days since delivery of the vehicle to the buyer. The 30-day limit shall be extended only if repairs cannot be performed due to conditions beyond the control of the manufacturer or its agents. The buyer shall be required to directly notify the manufacturer pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) only if the manufacturer has clearly and conspicuously disclosed to the buyer, with the warranty or the owner's manual, the provisions of this section and that of subdivision (d) of Section 1793.2, including the requirement that the buyer must notify the manufacturer directly pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2). The notification, if required, shall be sent to the address, if any, specified clearly and conspicuously by the manufacturer in the warranty or owner's manual. This presumption shall be a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof, and it may be asserted by the buyer in any civil action."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Reasonable" Number of Repairs: CACI No. 3203 sets forth a rebuttal presumption as to what constitutes a "reasonable" number of repair attempts. As a practical matter, this presumption will be difficult if not impossible to rebut. Most jurors will consider four attempts at repair for non-life threatening defects and two attempts for defects likely to cause death or serious bodily injury to be more than sufficient. By Ronald Oster

CACI 3204 "Substantially Impaired" Explained

In deciding whether a reasonable person would believe that the vehicle's defect[s], if any, substantially impaired the vehicle's use, value, or safety, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) [The nature of the defect[s];]
- (b) [The cost and length of time required for repair;]
- (c) [Whether past repair attempts have been successful;]
- (d) [The degree to which the vehicle could be used while awaiting repair;]
- (e) [The availability and cost of comparable transportation during the repairs;] [and]
- (f) [Insert other appropriate factor.]

New February 2005; Revised December 2005

Directions for Use

Some or all of the stated factors may not be necessary in every case. Depending on the facts of the case, other factors may be added as appropriate.

Sources and Authority

■ "Whether the impairment is substantial is determined by an objective test, based on what a reasonable person would understand to be a defect. This test is applied, however, within the specific circumstances of the buyer." (Lundy v. Ford Motor Co. (2001) 87 Cal.App.4th 472, 478 [104 Cal.Rptr.2d 545] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The issue of whether the problems constituted substantial impairment is one for the trier of fact." (Schreidel v. American Honda Motor Co. (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 1242, 1250 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 576] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The term ['substantially'] modifies its object, 'impairment.' It injects an element of degree; not every impairment is sufficient to satisfy the statute. The most analogous definition of 'substantially' we have found in a context similar to its usage here is in the Uniform Commercial Code, section 2-608. Like the clause at issue here, this provision requires a determination of whether a defect 'substantially impairs' the value of goods sold to a buyer. Under it, the trier of fact may consider: 'the nature of the defects; the cost and length of time required for repair; whether past repair attempts have been successful; the degree to which the goods can be used while repairs are attempted; [inconvenience to buyer]; and the availability and cost of alternative goods pending repair. ...' It may be that this term, like 'reasonable,' is incapable of precise definition. At the least, the requirement is not satisfied by any impairment, however insignificant, that affects use, value, or safety." (Lundy, supra, 87 Cal.App.4th at p. 478 , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 3210 Breach of Implied Warranty of Merchantability--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the [consumer good] did not have the quality that a buyer would reasonably expect. This is known as "breach of an implied warranty." To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] bought a[n] [consumer good] [from/manufactured by] [name of defendant];
2. That at the time of purchase [name of defendant] was in the business of [selling [consumer goods] to retail buyers] [manufacturing [consumer goods]]; and
3. That the [consumer good] [insert one or more of the following:]
 - [was not of the same quality as those generally acceptable in the trade;] [or]
 - [was not fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used;] [or]
 - [was not adequately contained, packaged, and labeled;] [or]
 - [did not measure up to the promises or facts stated on the container or label.]

New September 2003; Revised December 2005

Directions for Use

If remedies are sought under the Commercial Code, the plaintiff may be required to prove reasonable notification within a reasonable time. (Cal. U. Com. Code, § 2607(3).) If the court determines such proof is necessary, add the following element to this instruction:

That [name of plaintiff] took reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [consumer good] did not have the quality that a buyer would reasonably expect;

See also CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time. Instructions on damages and causation may be necessary in actions brought under the Commercial Code.

Delete element 2 if the defendant is the manufacturer of the consumer good in question or if it is uncontested that the defendant was a retail seller within the meaning of the act.

If appropriate to the facts, add: "It is not necessary for [name of plaintiff] to prove the cause of a defect of the [consumer good]." The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act does not require a consumer to prove the cause of the defect or failure, only that the consumer good "did not conform to the express warranty." (See Oregel v. American Isuzu Motors, Inc. (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1094, 1102, fn. 8 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 583] .)

In addition to sales of consumer goods, the Consumer Warranty Act applies to leases. (See Civ. Code, §§ 1791(g)-(i), 1795.4.) This instruction may be modified for use in cases involving the implied warranty of merchantability in a lease of consumer goods.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1794(a) provides: "Any buyer of consumer goods who is damaged by a failure to comply with any obligation ... under an implied ... warranty ... may bring an action for the recovery of damages and other legal and equitable relief."

- Civil Code section 1794(b) provides in part:

The measure of the buyer's damages in an action under this section shall include ... the following:

(1) Where the buyer has rightfully rejected or justifiably revoked acceptance of the goods or has exercised any right to cancel the sale, Sections 2711, 2712, and 2713 of the Commercial Code shall apply.

(2) Where the buyer has accepted the goods, Sections 2714 and 2715 of the Commercial Code shall apply, and the measure of damages shall include the cost of repairs necessary to make the goods conform.

- Civil Code section 1791.1(a) provides:

"Implied warranty of merchantability" ... means that the consumer goods meet each of the following:

(4) Conform to the promises or affirmations of fact made on the container or label.

■ Civil Code section 1791.1(c) provides: "The duration of the implied warranty of merchantability ... shall be coextensive in duration with an express warranty which accompanies the consumer goods, provided the duration of the express warranty is reasonable; but in no event shall such implied warranty have a duration of less than 60 days nor more than one year following the sale of new consumer goods to a retail buyer. Where no duration for an express warranty is stated with respect to consumer goods, or parts thereof, the duration of the implied warranty shall be the maximum period prescribed above."

■ Civil Code section 1791.1(d) provides in part: "Any buyer of consumer goods injured by a breach of the implied warranty of merchantability ... has the remedies provided in Chapter 6 (commencing with Section 2601) and Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2701) of Division 2 of the Commercial Code, and, in any action brought under such provisions, [Civil Code] Section 1794 ... shall apply."

■ Civil Code section 1792 provides, in part: "Unless disclaimed in the manner prescribed by [the act], every sale of consumer goods that are sold at retail in this state shall be accompanied by the manufacturer's and the retail seller's implied warranty that the goods are merchantable. The retail seller shall have a right of indemnity against the manufacturer in the amount of any liability under this section."

■ Commercial Code section 2714(1) provides: "Where the buyer has accepted goods and given notification (subdivision (3) of Section 2607) he or she may recover, as damages for any nonconformity of tender, the loss resulting in the ordinary course of events from the seller's breach as determined in any manner that is reasonable."

■ Commercial Code section 2714(2) provides: "The measure of damages for breach of warranty is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted, unless special circumstances show proximate damages of a different amount."

■ "As defined in the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act, 'an implied warranty of merchantability guarantees that 'consumer goods meet each of the following: [P] (1) Pass without objection in the trade under the contract description. As applied to personal injuries, and notice to a remote seller, it becomes a booby-trap for the unwary.' " (*Greenman v. CHAPTER 32 California Judicial Council Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act Instructions

CACI 3211 Breach of Implied Warranty of Fitness for a Particular Purpose--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because the [consumer good] was not suitable for [his/her] intended use. This is known as a "breach of an implied warranty." To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] bought a[n] [consumer good] [from/manufactured by/distributed by] [name of defendant];
- 2. That, at the time of purchase, [name of defendant] knew or had reason to know that [name of plaintiff] intended to use the [consumer good] for a particular purpose;
- 3. That, at the time of purchase, [name of defendant] knew or had reason to know that [name of plaintiff] was relying on [his/her/its] skill and judgment to select or provide a [consumer good] that was suitable for that particular purpose;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] justifiably relied on [name of defendant]'s skill and judgment; and
- 5. That the [consumer good] was not suitable for the particular purpose.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If remedies are sought under the Commercial Code, the plaintiff may be required to prove reasonable notification within a reasonable time. (Cal. U. Com. Code, § 2607(3).) If the court determines such proof is necessary, add the following element to this instruction:

That [name of plaintiff] took reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [consumer good] was not suitable for its intended use;

See also CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time.

If appropriate to the facts, add: "It is not necessary for [name of plaintiff] to prove the cause of a defect of the [consumer good]." The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act does not require a consumer to prove the cause of the defect or failure, only that the consumer good "did not conform to the express warranty." (See Oregel v. American Isuzu Motors, Inc. (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1094, 1102, fn. 8 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 583] .)

In addition to sales of consumer goods, the Consumer Warranty Act applies to leases of consumer goods--see Civil Code sections 1791(g)-(i) and 1795.4. This instruction may be modified for use in cases involving the implied warranty of fitness in a lease of consumer goods.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1791.1(b) provides, in part: "'Implied warranty of fitness' means ... that when the retailer, distributor, or manufacturer has reason to know any particular purpose for which the consumer goods are required, and further, that the buyer is relying on the skill and judgment of the seller to select and furnish suitable goods, then there is an implied warranty that the goods shall be fit for such purpose."

- Civil Code section 1792.1 provides: "Every sale of consumer goods that are sold at retail in this state by a manufacturer who has reason to know at the time of the retail sale that the goods are required for a particular purpose and that the buyer is relying on the manufacturer's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods shall be accompanied by such manufacturer's implied warranty of fitness."

- Civil Code section 1792.2(a) provides: "Every sale of consumer goods that are sold at retail in this state by a retailer or distributor who has reason to know at the time of the retail sale that the goods are required for a particular purpose, and that the buyer is relying on the retailer's or distributor's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods shall be accompanied by such retailer's or distributor's implied warranty that the goods are fit for that purpose."

- Commercial Code section 2714(2) provides: "The measure of damages for breach of warranty is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted, unless special circumstances show proximate damages of a different amount."

- "The Consumer Warranty Act makes ... an implied warranty [of fitness for a particular purpose] applicable to retailers, distributors, and manufacturers. ... An implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose arises only where (1) the purchaser at the time of contracting intends to use the goods for a particular purpose, (2) the seller at the time of contracting has reason to know of this particular purpose, (3) the buyer relies on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish goods suitable for the particular purpose, and (4) the seller at the time of contracting has reason to know that the buyer is relying on such skill and judgment." (Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 25 [220 Cal.Rptr. 392] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "'A "particular purpose" differs from the ordinary purpose for which the goods are used in that it envisages a specific use by the buyer which is peculiar to the nature of his business whereas the ordinary purposes for which goods are used are those envisaged in the concept of merchantability and go to uses which are customarily made of the goods in question.'" (American Suzuki Motor Corp. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1291, 1295, fn. 2 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 526] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The reliance elements are important to the consideration of whether an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose exists. ... The major question in determining the existence of an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose is the reliance by the buyer upon the skill and judgment of the seller to select an article suitable for his needs." (Keith, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 25 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Civil Code section 1792.3 provides, in part: "[N]o implied warranty of fitness shall be waived, except in the case of a sale of consumer goods on an 'as is' or 'with all faults' basis where the provisions of this [act] affecting 'as is' or 'with all faults' sales are strictly complied with."

■ "The question of reimbursement or replacement is relevant only under [Civil Code] section 1793.2. ... [T]his section applies only when goods cannot be made to conform to the 'applicable express warranties.' It has no relevance to the implied warranty of merchantability." (Music Acceptance Corp. v. Lofing (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 610, 620 [39 Cal.Rptr.2d 159] .)

■ Civil Code section 1791.1(d) provides, in part: "Any buyer of consumer goods injured by a breach of ... the implied warranty of fitness has the remedies provided in Chapter 6 (commencing with Section 2601) and Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2701) of Division 2 of the Commercial Code, and, in any action brought under such provisions, [Civil Code] Section 1794 ... shall apply."

■ "The Song-Beverly Act incorporates the provisions of [Commercial Code] sections 2314 and 2315. It 'supplements, rather than supersedes, the provisions of the California Uniform Commercial Code' by broadening a consumer's remedies to include costs, attorney's fees, and civil penalties." (American Suzuki Motor Corp., supra, 37 Cal.App.4th at p. 1295, fn. 2 , internal citation omitted.)

■ Civil Code section 1794(b) provides, in part:

The measure of the buyer's damages in an action under this section shall include the following:

(1) Where the buyer has rightfully rejected or justifiably revoked acceptance of the goods or has exercised any right to cancel the sale, Sections 2711, 2712, and 2713 of the Commercial Code shall apply.

(2) Where the buyer has accepted the goods, Sections 2714 and 2715 of the Commercial Code shall apply, and the measure of damages shall include the cost of repairs necessary to make the goods conform.

■ Commercial Code section 2714(1) provides: "Where the buyer has accepted goods and given notification (subdivision (3) of Section 2607) he or she may recover, as damages for any nonconformity of tender, the loss resulting in the ordinary course of events from the seller's breach as determined in any manner that is reasonable."

■ "The notice requirement of [former Civil Code] section 1769 ... is not an appropriate one for the court to adopt in actions by injured consumers against manufacturers with whom they have not dealt. As between the immediate parties to the sale [the notice requirement] is a sound commercial rule, designed to protect the seller against unduly delayed claims for damages. As applied to personal injuries, and notice to a remote seller, it becomes a booby-trap for the unwary.' " (Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 57, 61 [27 Cal.Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defending Implied Warranty Claims Can Be Difficult: Implied warranty claims based on statements by a salesperson as to suitability for a particular purpose can be difficult to defend. The consumer almost always testifies in some detail about the sales transaction and the specific statements made by the salesperson. The salesperson, on the other hand, rarely remembers the transaction and has to fall back on general procedures or habits. By Ronald Oster

CACI 3212 Duration of Implied Warranty

An implied warranty is in effect for one year after the sale of the [consumer good], unless a shorter period is stated in a writing that comes with the [consumer good], provided that the shorter period is reasonable. In no event will an implied warranty be in effect for less than 60 days.

[The time period of an implied warranty is lengthened by the number of days that the [consumer good] was made available by [name of plaintiff] for repairs under the warranty, including any delays caused by circumstances beyond [name of plaintiff]'s control].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the consumer goods at issue are not new, the instruction must be modified to reflect the shorter implied warranty period provided in Civil Code section 1795.5(c) (i.e., no less than 30 days but no more than three months).

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1791.1(c) provides: "The duration of the implied warranty of merchantability and where present the implied warranty of fitness shall be coextensive in duration with an express warranty which accompanies the consumer goods, provided the duration of the express warranty is reasonable; but in no event shall such implied warranty have a duration of less than 60 days nor more than one year following the sale of new consumer goods to a retail buyer. Where no duration for an express warranty is stated with respect to consumer goods, or parts thereof, the duration of the implied warranty shall be the

■ Civil Code section 1795.6 provides, in part:

(a) Every warranty period relating to an implied ... warranty accompanying a sale or consignment for sale of consumer goods selling for fifty dollars ($50) or more shall automatically be tolled for the period from the date upon which the buyer either (1) delivers nonconforming goods to the manufacturer or seller for warranty repairs or service or (2), pursuant to subdivision (c) of Section 1793.2 or Section 1793.22, notifies the manufacturer or seller of the nonconformity of the goods up to, and including, the date upon which (1) the repaired or serviced goods are delivered to the buyer, (2) the buyer is notified the goods are repaired or serviced and are available for the buyer's possession or (3) the buyer is notified that repairs or service is completed, if repairs or service is made at the buyer's residence.

(b) Notwithstanding the date or conditions set for the expiration of the warranty period, such warranty period shall not be deemed expired if ... : (1) after the buyer has satisfied the requirements of subdivision (a), the warranty repairs or service has not been performed due to delays caused by circumstances beyond the control of the buyer or (2) the warranty repairs or service performed upon the nonconforming goods did not remedy the nonconformity for which such repairs or service was performed and the buyer notified the manufacturer or seller of this failure within 60 days after the repairs or service was completed. When the warranty repairs or service has been performed so as to remedy the nonconformity, the warranty period shall expire in accordance with its terms, including any extension to the warranty period for warranty repairs or service.

■ Civil Code section 1795.5 provides, in part: "[T]he obligation of a distributor or retail seller of used consumer goods in a sale in which an express warranty is given shall be the same as that imposed on manufacturers under [the act] except: ... [t]he duration of the implied warranty of merchantability and where present the implied warranty of fitness with respect to used consumer goods sold in this state, where the sale is accompanied by an express warranty, shall be coextensive in duration with an express warranty which accompanies the consumer goods, provided the duration of the express warranty is reasonable, but in no event shall such implied warranties have a duration of less than 30 days nor more than three months following the sale of used consumer goods to a retail buyer. Where no duration for an express warranty is stated with respect to such goods, or parts thereof, the duration of the implied warranties shall be the maximum period prescribed above."

■ "On appeal, [defendants] concede that the duration provision is not a statute of limitations and that the applicable statute of limitations is four years. They argue, however, that the judgment can be affirmed on other grounds. Among other arguments, they contend that the duration provision of the Song-Beverly Act should be interpreted as barring an action for breach of the implied warranty of merchantability when the purchaser fails to discover and report the defect to the seller within the time period specified in that provision. We reject this argument because the plain language of the statute, particularly in light of the consumer protection policies supporting the Song-Beverly Act, make clear that the statute merely creates a limited, prospective duration for the implied warranty of merchantability; it does not create a deadline for discovering latent defects or for giving notice to the seller." LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--California's Short Duration for Implied Warranties: California has a relatively short duration (one year) for implied warranties [*see Civ. CHAPTER 32 California Judicial Council Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act Instructions

CACI 3213 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations (U. Com. Code, § 2725)

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that

[the date of [tender of] delivery occurred before [insert date four years before filing of complaint].]

[any breach was discovered or should have been discovered before [insert date four years before filing of complaint].]

New June 2010

Directions for Use

Use this instruction to assert a limitation defense based on the four-year period of California's Uniform Commercial Code section 2725. (See Mexia v. Rinker Boat Co., Inc. (2009) 174 Cal.App.4th 1297, 1305 [95 Cal.Rptr.3d 285] [four-year statute of U. Com. Code, § 2725 applies to warranty claims under Song-Beverly].)

A breach of warranty occurs when tender of delivery is made. (U. Com. Code, § 2725(2).) Include "tender of" if actual delivery was not made or if delivery was made after tender. If whether a proper tender was made is at issue, the jury should be instructed on the meaning of "tender." (See U. Com. Code, § 2503.)

Under the statute, a breach of warranty occurs when tender of delivery is made regardless of the aggrieved party's knowledge of the breach--that is, there is no delayed-discovery rule. However, if an express warranty explicitly extends to future performance of the goods (for example, a warranty to repair defects for three years or 30,000 miles) and discovery of the breach must await the time of the performance, the cause of action accrues when the breach is or should have been discovered. (U. Com. Code, § 2725(2).) In such a case, give the second option in the second sentence. If delayed discovery is alleged, CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery, may be adapted for use. (See Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imports, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 205, 215-220 [285 Cal.Rptr. 717] .)

Under the Uniform Commercial Code, by the original agreement the parties may reduce the period of limitation to not less than one year but may not extend it. (U. Com. Code, § 2725(1).) Presumably, this provision does not apply to claims under the Song-Beverly Act. (See Civ. Code, §§ 1790.1 [buyer's waiver of rights under Song-Beverly Act is unenforceable], 1790.3 [in case of conflict, provisions of Song-Beverly Act control over U. Com. Code].)

■ Uniform Commercial Code section 2725 provides:

(1) An action for breach of any contract for sale must be commenced within four years after the cause of action has accrued. By the original agreement the parties may reduce the period of limitation to not less than one year but may not extend it.

(2) A cause of action accrues when the breach occurs, regardless of the aggrieved party's lack of knowledge of the breach. A breach of warranty occurs when tender of delivery is made, except that where a warranty explicitly extends to future performance of the goods and discovery of the breach must await the time of such performance the cause of action accrues when the breach is or should have been discovered.

(3) Where an action commenced within the time limited by subdivision (1) is so terminated as to leave available a remedy by another action for the same breach such other action may be commenced after the expiration of the time limited and within six months after the termination of the first action unless the termination resulted from voluntary discontinuance or from dismissal for failure or neglect to prosecute.

(4) This section does not alter the law on tolling of the statute of limitations nor does it apply to causes of action which have accrued before this code becomes effective.

■ Civil Code section 1790.1 provides: "Any waiver by the buyer of consumer goods of the provisions of this chapter, except as expressly provided in this chapter, shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be unenforceable and void."

■ Civil Code section 1790.3 provides: "The provisions of this chapter shall not affect the rights and obligations of parties determined by reference to the Commercial Code except that, where the provisions of the Commercial Code conflict with the rights guaranteed to buyers of consumer goods under the provisions of this chapter, the provisions of this chapter shall prevail."

■ "The [Song Beverly] Act was intended to supplement the provisions of the California Uniform Commercial Code, rather than to supersede the rights and obligations created by that statutory scheme. (See Civ. Code, § 1790.3.) California Uniform Commercial Code section 2725 specifically governs actions for breach of warranty in a sales context. We conclude that this special statute of limitations controls rather than the general provision of Code of Civil Procedure section 338, subdivision (a) for liabilities created by statute." (Krieger, supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 215 .)

■ "[Defendants] now concede that the statute of limitations for an action for breach of warranty under the Song-Beverly Act is four years pursuant to section 2725 of the California Uniform Commercial Code. Under that statute, a cause of action for breach of warranty accrues, at the earliest, upon tender of delivery. Thus, the earliest date the implied warranty of merchantability regarding [plaintiff]'s boat could have accrued was the date [plaintiff] purchased it Because he filed this action three years seven months after that date, he did so within the four-year limitations period. Therefore, [plaintiff]'s action is not barred by a statute of limitations." (Mexia, supra, 174 Cal.App.4th at p. 1306 .)

- 1. That at the time of sale a clearly visible written notice was attached to the [consumer good]; and

 - a. That the [consumer good] was being sold on an "as is" or "with all faults" basis;
 - b. That the buyer accepted the entire risk of the quality and performance of the [consumer good]; and

New September 2003; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

If the consumer goods in question were sold by means of a mail-order catalog, the instruction must be modified in accordance with Civil Code section 1792.4(b).

In addition to sales of consumer goods, the Consumer Warranty Act applies to leases--see Civil Code sections 1791(g)-(i) and 1795.4. This instruction may be modified for use in cases involving leases of consumer goods.

If at the time of sale, or within 90 days thereafter, the defendant sold the plaintiff a service contract that applied to the product, the federal Magnuson-Moss Warranty--Federal Trade Commission Improvement Act preempts use of this defense. (See 15 U.S.C. § 2308.)

■ Civil Code section 1791.3 provides: "[A] sale 'as is' or 'with all faults' means that the manufacturer, distributor, and retailer disclaim all implied warranties that would otherwise attach to the sale of consumer goods under the provisions of this [act]."

■ Civil Code section 1792.4 provides:

(a) No sale of goods, governed by the provisions of this [act], on an "as is" or "with all faults" basis, shall be effective to disclaim the implied warranty of merchantability or, where applicable, the implied warranty of fitness, unless a conspicuous writing is attached to the goods which clearly informs the buyer, prior to the sale, in simple and concise language of each of the following:

(1) The goods are being sold on an "as is" or "with all faults" basis.

(2) The entire risk as to the quality and performance of the goods is with the buyer.

(3) Should the goods prove defective following their purchase, the buyer and not the manufacturer, distributor, or retailer assumes the entire cost of all necessary servicing or repair.

(b) In the event of sale of consumer goods by means of a mail order catalog, the catalog offering such goods shall contain the required writing as to each item so offered in lieu of the requirement of notification prior to the sale.

■ Civil Code section 1795.4(e) provides: "A lessor who re-leases goods to a new lessee and does not retake possession of the goods prior to consummation of the re-lease may, notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1793, disclaim as to that lessee any and all warranties created by this chapter by conspicuously disclosing in the lease that these warranties are disclaimed."

■ Title 15 United States Code section 2308 provides:

(a) Restrictions on disclaimers or modifications. No supplier may disclaim or modify (except as provided in subsection (b)) any implied warranty to a consumer with respect to such consumer product if (1) such supplier makes any written warranty to the consumer with respect to such consumer product, or (2) at the time of sale, or within 90 days thereafter, such supplier enters into a service contract with the consumer which applies to such consumer product.

(b) Limitation on duration. For purposes of this title [15 USCS §§ 2301 et seq.] (other than section 104(a)(2)) [15 USCS § 2304(a)(2)] implied warranties may be limited in duration to the duration of a written warranty of reasonable duration, if such limitation is conscionable and is set forth in clear and unmistakable language and prominently displayed on the face of the warranty.

(c) Effectiveness of disclaimers, modifications, or limitations. A disclaimer, modification, or limitation made in violation of this section shall be ineffective for purposes of this title [15 USCS § 2304(a)] and State law.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Value of the Use": For motor vehicles, there is a formula for determining the "value of the use" of the product by the consumer [see *Civ. CACI 3241 Restitution From Manufacturer--New Motor Vehicle

If you decide that [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility failed to repair the defect(s) after a reasonable number of opportunities, then [name of plaintiff] is entitled to recover the amounts [he/she] proves [he/she] paid for the car, including:

- 1. The amount paid to date for the vehicle, including finance charges [and any amount still owed by [name of plaintiff]];
- 2. Charges for transportation and manufacturer-installed options; and
- 3. Sales tax, license fees, registration fees, and other official fees.

In determining the purchase price, do not include any charges for items supplied by someone other than [name of defendant].

[[Name of plaintiff]'s recovery must be reduced by the value of the use of the vehicle before it was [brought in/submitted] for repair. [Name of defendant] must prove how many miles the vehicle was driven between the time when [name of plaintiff] took possession of the vehicle and the time when [name of plaintiff] first delivered it to [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility to fix the defect. [Insert one of the following:]

[Using this mileage number, I will reduce [name of plaintiff]'s recovery based on a formula.]

[Multiply this mileage number by the purchase price, including any charges for transportation and manufacturer-installed options, and divide that amount by 120,000. Deduct the resulting amount from [name of plaintiff]'s recovery.]]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use with claims involving new motor vehicles under the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act. For claims involving other consumer goods, see CACI No. 3240, Reimbursement Damages--Consumer Goods. For claims involving incidental damages, see CACI No. 3242, Incidental Damages.

This instruction can be modified if it is being used for claims other than those described in the instructions. In lieu of restitution, plaintiff may request replacement with "a new motor vehicle substantially identical to the vehicle replaced," pursuant to Civil Code section 1793.2(d)(2)(A). If plaintiff so requests, elements 1-3 should be replaced with appropriate language.

Modify element 1 depending on whether plaintiff still has an outstanding obligation on the financing of the vehicle.

The last two bracketed options are intended to be read in the alternative. Use the last bracketed option if the court desires for the jury to make the calculation of the deduction. The "formula" referenced in the last bracketed paragraph can be found at Civil Code section 1793.2(d)(2)(C).

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1794(b) provides:

The measure of the buyer's damages in an action under this section shall include the rights of replacement or reimbursement as set forth in subdivision (d) of Section 1793.2, and the following:

(1) Where the buyer has rightfully rejected or justifiably revoked acceptance of the goods or has exercised any right to cancel the sale, Sections 2711, 2712, and 2713 of the Commercial Code shall apply.

(2) Where the buyer has accepted the goods, Sections 2714 and 2715 of the Commercial Code shall apply, and the measure of damages shall include the cost of repairs necessary to make the goods conform.

- Civil Code section 1793.2(d)(2) provides, in part:

If the manufacturer or its representative in this state is unable to service or repair a new motor vehicle ... to conform to the applicable express warranties after a reasonable number of attempts, the manufacturer shall either promptly replace the new motor vehicle in accordance with subparagraph (A) or promptly make restitution to the buyer in accordance with subparagraph (B). However, the buyer shall be free to elect restitution in lieu of replacement, and in no event shall the buyer be required by the manufacturer to accept a replacement vehicle.

(A) In the case of replacement, the manufacturer shall replace the buyer's vehicle with a new motor vehicle substantially identical to the vehicle replaced. The replacement vehicle shall be accompanied by all express and implied warranties that normally accompany new motor vehicles of that specific kind. The manufacturer also shall pay for, or to, the buyer the amount of any sales or use tax, license fees, registration fees, and other official fees which the buyer is obligated to pay in connection with the replacement, plus any incidental damages to which the buyer is entitled under Section 1794, including, but not limited to, reasonable repair, towing, and rental car costs actually incurred by the buyer.

(B) In the case of restitution, the manufacturer shall make restitution in an amount equal to the actual price paid or payable by the buyer, including any charges for transportation and manufacturer-installed options, but excluding nonmanufacturer items installed by a dealer or the buyer, and including any collateral charges such as sales tax, license fees, registration fees, and other official fees, plus any incidental damages to which the buyer is entitled under Section 1794, including, but not limited to, reasonable repair, towing, and rental car costs actually incurred by the buyer.

(C) When the manufacturer replaces the new motor vehicle pursuant to subparagraph (A), the buyer shall only be liable to pay the manufacturer an amount directly attributable to use by the buyer of the replaced vehicle prior to the time the buyer first delivered the vehicle to the manufacturer or distributor, or its authorized service and repair facility for correction of the problem that gave rise to the nonconformity. When restitution is made pursuant to subparagraph (B), the amount to be paid by the manufacturer to the buyer may be reduced by the manufacturer by that amount directly attributable to use by the buyer prior to the time the buyer first delivered the vehicle to the manufacturer or distributor, or its authorized service and repair facility for correction of the problem that gave rise to the nonconformity. The amount directly attributable to use by the buyer shall be determined by multiplying the actual price of the new motor vehicle paid or payable by the buyer, including any charges for transportation and manufacturer-installed options, by a fraction having as its denominator 120,000 and having as its numerator the number of miles traveled by the new motor vehicle prior to the time the buyer first delivered the vehicle to the manufacturer or distributor, or its authorized service and repair facility for correction of the problem that gave rise to the nonconformity. Nothing in this paragraph shall in any way limit the rights or remedies available to the buyer under any other law.

■ "[A]s the conjunctive language in Civil Code section 1794 indicates, the statute itself provides an additional measure of damages beyond replacement or reimbursement and permits, at the option of the buyer, the Commercial Code measure of damages which includes 'the cost of repairs necessary to make the goods conform.' ■ "[F]inding an implied prohibition on recovery of finance charges would be contrary to both the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act's remedial purpose and section 1793.2(d)(2)(B)'s description of the refund remedy as restitution. CHAPTER 32 California Judicial Council Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act Instructions

CACI 3244 Civil Penalty--Willful Violation (Civ. Code, § 1794(c))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s failure to [describe violation of Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act] was willful and therefore asks that you impose a civil penalty against [name of defendant]. A civil penalty is an award of money in addition to a plaintiff's damages. The purpose of this civil penalty is to punish a defendant or discourage [him/her/it] from committing such violations in the future.

If [name of plaintiff] has proved that [name of defendant]'s failure was willful, you may impose a civil penalty against [him/her/it]. "Willful" means that [name of defendant] knew what [he/she/it] was doing and intended to do it. However, you may not impose a civil penalty if you find that [name of defendant] believed reasonably and in good faith that [describe facts negating statutory obligation].

The penalty may be in any amount you find appropriate, up to a maximum of two times the amount of [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages.

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, December 2005

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff requests a civil penalty under Civil Code section 1794(c). The parties will need to draft a separate instruction for cases involving a civil penalty based on the defendant's violation of Civil Code section 1793.2(d)(2).

If there are multiple causes of action, ensure that the jury knows to which claim this instruction applies.

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 1794 provides, in part:

(a) Any buyer of consumer goods who is damaged by a failure to comply with any obligation under this chapter or under an implied or express warranty or service contract may bring an action for the recovery of damages and other legal and equitable relief.

(c) If the buyer establishes that the failure to comply was willful, the judgment may include, in addition to the amounts recovered under subdivision (a), a civil penalty which shall not exceed two times the amount of actual damages. This subdivision shall not apply in any class action ... or with respect to a claim based solely on a breach of an implied warranty.

■ "[I]f the trier of fact finds the defendant willfully violated its legal obligations to plaintiff, it has discretion under [Civil Code section 1794,] subdivision (c) to award a penalty against the defendant. Subdivision (c) applies to suits concerning any type of 'consumer goods,' as that term is defined in section 1791 of the Act." (Suman v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1309, 1315 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 507] .)

■ " 'In civil cases, the word "willful," as ordinarily used in courts of law, does not necessarily imply anything blamable, or any malice or wrong toward the other party, or perverseness or moral delinquency, but merely that the thing done or omitted to be done was done or omitted intentionally. It amounts to nothing more than this: That the person knows what he is doing, intends to do what he is doing, and is a free agent.' " (Ibrahim v. Ford Motor Co. (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 878, 894 [263 Cal.Rptr. 64] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] violation ... is not willful if the defendant's failure to replace or refund was the result of a good faith and reasonable belief the facts imposing the statutory obligation were not present. This might be the case, for example, if the manufacturer reasonably believed the product did conform to the warranty, or a reasonable number of repair attempts had not been made, or the buyer desired further repair rather than replacement or refund. [P] Our interpretation of section 1794(c) is consistent with the general policy against imposing forfeitures or penalties against parties for their good faith, reasonable actions. Unlike a standard requiring the plaintiff to prove the defendant actually knew of its obligation to refund or replace, which would allow manufacturers to escape the penalty by deliberately remaining ignorant of the facts, the interpretation we espouse will not vitiate the intended deterrent effect of the penalty. And unlike a simple equation of willfulness with volition, which would render 'willful' virtually all cases of refusal to replace or refund, our interpretation preserves the Act's distinction between willful and nonwillful violations. Accordingly, '[a] decision made without the use of reasonably available information germane to that decision is not a reasonable, good faith decision.' " (Lukather v. General Motors, LLC (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1051 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 853] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he penalty under section 1794(c), like other civil penalties, is imposed as punishment or deterrence of the defendant, rather than to compensate the plaintiff. In this, it is akin to punitive damages." (Kwan v. Mercedes Benz of N. Am. (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 174, 184 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 371] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Intentional Violations: The willfulness requirement in CACI No. 3244 is much lower than that found in punitive damage instructions. As a practical matter, juries routinely find violations to be "intentional" in the consumer products area if for no other reason than the defendant is disputing the claim. Accordingly, defendants should try to substantiate their good faith whenever possible even while resisting the underlying claim. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 33 California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions

5-33 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Unfair Practices Act Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 3300 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for causes of action alleging locality discrimination [CACI No. 3300], below cost sales [CACI No. 3301], and loss leader sales [CACI No. 3302].
- A definition of "cost" [CACI No. 3303], presumptions concerning costs [CACI Nos. 3304, 3305], and methods of allocating costs to an individual product [CACI No. 3306].
- Essential factual elements for a cause of action alleging secret rebates [CACI No. 3320], and a definition of "secret rebate" [CACI No. 3321].
- Affirmative defenses to claims of locality discrimination [CACI Nos. 3330-3334], and the affirmative defense of "good faith" [CACI No. 3335].

The unfair practices series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-3300-VF-3307].

5-33 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3300

CACI 3300 Locality Discrimination--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] engaged in unlawful locality discrimination. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [offered to sell/sold/furnished] [product/service] at a lower price in one [location/section/community/city] in California than in another [location/section/community/city] in California;
- 2. That [name of defendant] intended to destroy competition from an established dealer [or to prevent competition from any person who in good faith intended and attempted to become such a dealer];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

The word "price" as used here should be read sufficiently broadly to include "special rebates, collateral contracts, or any device of any nature whereby such discrimination is in substance or fact effected." (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17049.) To the extent the circumstances of the case warrant it, the word "price" in the instruction may be supplemented or supplanted by other price-related terms.

Business and Professions Code sections 17071 and 17071.5 create rebuttable presumptions regarding the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. The Supreme Court has observed: "The obvious and only effect of this provision is to require the defendants to go forward with such proof as would bring them within one of the exceptions or which would negative the prima facie showing of wrongful intent." (People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 114 [153 P.2d 9] .)

- Business and Professions Code section 17031 provides: "Locality discrimination means a discrimination between different sections, communities or cities or portions thereof, or between different locations in such sections, communities, cities or portions thereof in this State, by selling or furnishing an article or product, at a lower price in one section, community or city, or any portion thereof, or in one location in such section, community, or city or any portion thereof, than in another."

- Business and Professions Code section 17040 provides: "It is unlawful for any person engaged in the production, manufacture, distribution or sale of any article or product of general use or consumption, with intent to destroy the competition of any regular established dealer in such article or product, or to prevent the competition of any person who in good faith, intends and attempts to become such dealer, to create locality discriminations. [P] Nothing in this section prohibits the meeting in good faith of a competitive price."

- Business and Professions Code section 17024 provides, in part: " 'Article or product' includes any article, product, commodity, thing of value, service or output of a service trade."

- "The purpose of the Unfair Practices Act (UPA) is 'to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition, by prohibiting unfair, dishonest, deceptive, destructive, fraudulent and discriminatory practices by which fair and honest competition is destroyed or prevented.' It forbids most locality discriminations, the use of loss leaders, gifts, secret rebates, boycotts, and 'deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising.' It also prohibits the sale of goods and services below cost." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp. v. Hearst Corp. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 424, 431-432 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Sections 17031 and 17040 are tailored to address the problem of a distributor, typically a retailer, selling out of many locations, who might use geographical price discrimination as a predatory practice against its own competitors." (ABC International Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Electric Corp. of America (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1266 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290] .)

- "As section 17031 is presently worded, we conclude that the smallest geographic unit it envisages is the individual store or outlet, not the individual purchaser regardless of location." (Harris v. Capitol Records Distributing Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 460 [50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139] .)

- "[T]o fall within [the] prohibition a seller must have at least two different places of business and must sell at a lower price in one than in the other." (Harris, supra, 64 Cal.2d at p. 460 .)

- Business and Professions Code section 17082 provides, in part: "In any action under this chapter, it is not necessary to allege or prove actual damages or the threat thereof, or actual injury or the threat thereof, to the plaintiff. But, in addition to injunctive relief, any plaintiff in any such action shall be entitled to recover three times the amount of the actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff, as well as three times the actual damages, if any, sustained by any person who has assigned to the plaintiff his claim for damages resulting from a violation of this chapter."

- "While, similar to other cases, damages cannot be awarded in antitrust cases upon sheer guesswork or speculation, the plaintiff seeking damages for loss of profits is required to establish only with reasonable probability the existence of some causal connection between defendant's wrongful act and some loss of the anticipated revenue. Once that has been accomplished, the jury will be permitted to act upon probable and inferential proof and to 'make a just and reasonable estimate of the damage based on relevant data, and render its verdict accordingly.' " (Suburban Mobile Homes, Inc. v. AMFAC Communities, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 545 [161 Cal.Rptr. 811] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The federal law most comparable to the Unfair Practices Act is the Robinson-Patman Act (15 U.S.C. § 13 et seq.); that act differs substantially from the Unfair Practices Act, however. For a discussion of this subject, see Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transportation (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 811 [268 Cal.Rptr. 856] . One notable difference is that the Robinson-Patman Act requires at least two actual sales. Thus, mere offers to sell cannot violate that act.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Costs: In determining costs, California uses the "fully allocated cost" method that takes into account fixed as well as variable costs. CHAPTER 33 California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions

CACI 3302 Loss Leader Sales--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [offered to sell/sold/offered the use of] [product/service] as an unlawful loss leader. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [offered to sell/sold/offered the use of] [product/service] at prices that were below [his/her/its] costs;

2. [Insert one or more of the following:]

[That [name of defendant]'s purpose was to influence, promote, or encourage the purchase of other merchandise from [him/her/it]; [or]]

[That the [offer/sale] had a tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers or potential purchasers; [or]]

[That the [offer/sale] took business away from or otherwise injured competitors;]

3. That [name of defendant]'s intent was to injure competitors or destroy competition;

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

5-33 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3302

The word "price" as used here should be read sufficiently broadly to include "special rebates, collateral contracts, or any device of any nature whereby such sale below cost is in substance or fact effected." (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17049.) To the extent the circumstances of the case warrant it, the word "price" in the instruction may be supplemented or supplanted by other price-related terms.

For instructions on "cost," see CACI No. 3303, Definition of "Cost"; CACI No. 3304, Presumptions Concerning Costs--Manufacturer; CACI No. 3305, Presumptions Concerning Costs--Distributor; and CACI No. 3306, Methods of Allocating Costs to an Individual Product.

Business and Professions Code sections 17071 and 17071.5 create rebuttable presumptions regarding the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. The Supreme Court has observed: "The obvious and only effect of this provision is to require the defendants to go forward with such proof as would bring them within one of the exceptions or which would negative the prima facie showing of wrongful intent." (People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 114 [153 P.2d 9] .)

■ Business and Professions Code section 17044 provides: "It is unlawful for any person engaged in business within this State to sell or use any article or product as a 'loss leader' as defined in Section 17030 of this chapter."

■ Business and Professions Code section 17030 provides:

"Loss leader" means any article or product sold at less than cost:

(a) Where the purpose is to induce, promote or encourage the purchase of other merchandise; or

(b) Where the effect is a tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers; or

(c) Where the effect is to divert trade from or otherwise injure competitors.

■ Business and Professions Code section 17024 provides, in part: " 'Article or product' includes any article, product, commodity, thing of value, service or output of a service trade."

■ "The purpose of the Unfair Practices Act (UPA) is 'to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition, by prohibiting unfair, dishonest, deceptive, destructive, fraudulent and discriminatory practices by which fair and honest competition is destroyed or prevented.' It forbids most locality discriminations, the use of loss leaders, gifts, secret rebates, boycotts, and 'deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising.' It also prohibits the sale of goods and services below cost." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp. v. Hearst Corp. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 424, 431-432 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[N]otwithstanding the absence of any language to this effect in either section 17044 or section 17030, intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition is required for violation of section 17044. In other words, for competition to be unfair under the Act, the person engaging in the challenged practice must possess an intent to injure his competitors or destroy his competition." (Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Markets, Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517 [98 Cal.Rptr. 543] .)

■ "We conclude that to violate sections 17043 and 17044, part of the Unfair Practices Act, which prohibit below-cost sales and loss leaders, a company must act with the purpose, i.e., the desire, of injuring competitors or destroying competition." (Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 169 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527] .)

■ It has been held by one federal district court interpreting California's loss leader statute that it applies only to product sales, not giveaways. (Co-Opportunities, Inc. v. National Broadcasting Co., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1981) 510 F.Supp. 43, 50 .)

■ Business and Professions Code section 17082 provides, in part: "In any action under this chapter, it is not necessary to allege or prove actual damages or the threat thereof, or actual injury or the threat thereof, to the plaintiff. But, in addition to injunctive relief, any plaintiff in any such action shall be entitled to recover three times the amount of the actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff, as well as three times the actual damages, if any, sustained by any person who has assigned to the plaintiff his claim for damages resulting from a violation of this chapter."

■ "While, similar to other cases, damages cannot be awarded in antitrust cases upon sheer guesswork or speculation, the plaintiff seeking damages for loss of profits is required to establish only with reasonable probability the existence of some causal connection between defendant's wrongful act and some loss of the anticipated revenue. Once that has been accomplished, the jury will be permitted to act upon probable and inferential proof and to 'make a just and reasonable estimate of the damage based on relevant data, and render its verdict accordingly.' " (Suburban Mobile Homes, Inc. v. AMFAC Communities, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 545 [161 Cal.Rptr. 811] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The federal law most comparable to the Unfair Practices Act is the Robinson-Patman Act (15 U.S.C. § 13 et seq.); that act differs substantially from the Unfair Practices Act, however. For a discussion of this subject, see Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transportation (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 811 [268 Cal.Rptr. 856] . One notable difference is that the Robinson-Patman Act requires at least two actual sales. Thus, mere offers to sell cannot violate that act.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Loss Leaders vs. Promotional Sales: Many jurors will associate the term "loss leader" with promotional sales. Therefore, it is important to explain that "loss leaders" are unlawful because they are "below cost" and because they injure competition. This is different from promotional sales in which the seller still makes a profit, albeit a reduced profit. By Ronald Oster

CACI 3303 Definition of "Cost"

The term "cost" means all costs of doing business, including fixed costs that do not tend to change with sales, such as heat and light, as well as variable costs that do tend to change with sales, such as sales commissions.

Costs of doing business may include the following:

- 1. Labor, including salaries of executives and officers;
- 2. Rent and utilities;
- 3. Interest on loans;
- 4. Depreciation;
- 5. Selling cost;
- 6. Maintenance of equipment;
- 7. Delivery costs;
- 8. Credit losses;
- 9. Advertising costs;
- 10. Licenses, taxes; [and]

11. Insurance; [and]12. [Insert other cost(s).]

[The term "cost" as applied to warranty service agreements also includes the cost of parts and delivery of the parts.]

[The term "cost" as applied to distribution also includes either the invoice cost or replacement cost of the product, whichever is lower.]

[The term "cost" as applied to services also includes the prevailing wage at the time and place these services were provided if [name of defendant] was paying less than the prevailing wage.]

Any discounts given for cash payments may not be used to lower costs.

New September 2003

The bracketed paragraphs should be inserted as appropriate to the facts.

In cases involving the sale of cellular telephones and cigarettes, Business and Professions Code sections 17026.1 and 17026.5 measure "cost" somewhat differently.

■ Business and Professions Code section 17026 provides:

"Cost" as applied to production includes the cost of raw materials, labor and all overhead expenses of the producer.

"Cost" as applied to distribution means the invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, of the article or product to the distributor and vendor, plus the cost of doing business by the distributor and vendor and in the absence of proof of cost of doing business a markup of 6 percent on such invoice or replacement cost shall be prima facie proof of such cost of doing business.

"Cost" as applied to warranty service agreements includes the cost of parts, transporting the parts, labor, and all overhead expenses of the service agency.

Discounts granted for cash payments shall not be used to reduce costs.

■ Business and Professions Code section 17029 provides: " 'Cost of doing business' or 'overhead expense' means all costs of doing business incurred in the conduct of the business and shall include without limitation the following items of expense: labor (including salaries of executives and officers), rent, interest on borrowed capital, depreciation, selling cost, maintenance of equipment, delivery costs, credit losses, all types of licenses, taxes, insurance and advertising."

■ Business and Professions Code section 17076 provides: "In any action brought under this chapter, where persons are employed or performing services for any person or in the conduct of the business wherein such person is charged with a violation of this chapter, and are so employed or performing such services without compensation or at a wage lower than that prevailing at the time and place of the service for the particular services performed, such services shall be charged as an expense of the business in which rendered and at the rate of the wage for the services rendered prevailing at the time of the service at the place where rendered."

■ "Determination of the defendant's cost has always been treated as an issue of fact." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp. v. Hearst Corp. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 424, 433 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] .)

■ "These statutes embody California's fully allocated cost standard, that is, a fair allocation of all fixed or variable costs associated with production of the article or product." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp., supra, 74 Cal.App.4th at p. 432 , footnote omitted.)

■ "Cost is to be measured as 'the fair average cost of production over a reasonable time, rather than the cost of one item on a particular occasion.' " (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp., supra, 74 Cal.App.4th at p. 432, fn. 6 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Variable costs are costs that vary with changes in output, while fixed costs are those that do not vary with changes in output." (Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transportation Inc. (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 811, 820 [268 Cal.Rptr. 856] .)

■ "California employs a fully allocated cost standard to determine whether a sale has violated section 17043. Under sections 17026 and 17029 ... cost means invoice cost plus the vendor's full cost of doing business or six percent." (G.H.I.I. v. Mts, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 256, 275 [195 Cal.Rptr. 211], internal citations omitted.)

■ "We find the use of the fully allocated cost method, when viewed in conjunction with the injurious intent requirement of section 17043, is rationally related to the valid legislative purpose ... as it assists in preventing the creation or perpetuation of monopolies." (Turnbull & Turnbull, supra, 219 Cal.App.3d at p. 822 .)

■ "To be legally acceptable, the allocation of indirect or fixed overhead costs to a particular product or service must be reasonably related to the burden such product or service imposes on the overall cost of doing business." (Turnbull & Turnbull, supra, 219 Cal.App.3d at p. 822 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Costs: CACI No. 3303 sets forth the "fully allocated cost" method that takes into account both fixed and variable costs. This method is considered favorable from the plaintiff's standpoint because it increases the cost by including overhead items, thus making it easier to establish that defendant was selling "below cost." By Ronald Oster

CACI 3304 Presumptions Concerning Costs--Manufacturer

A manufacturer's costs include the cost of raw materials and the cost of manufacturing.

The cost of manufacturing is the average cost of manufacture over a reasonable time, rather than the cost of one item at a particular time.

[If [name of defendant]'s cost for raw materials cannot be computed, the cost is presumed to be the prevailing price for similar raw materials at the time and place those materials would usually be purchased.]

[If [name of defendant]'s trade or industry has an established cost study or survey for the geographic area in this case, that cost survey may be considered in calculating [name of defendant]'s costs.]

[[Name of defendant]'s delivery costs are presumed to be the tariffs set by the California Public Utilities Commission, but this presumption may be overcome by other evidence.]

- Business and Professions Code section 17026 provides, in part: " 'Cost' as applied to production includes the cost of raw materials, labor and all overhead expenses of the producer."

- Business and Professions Code section 17072 provides: "Where a particular trade or industry, of which a person complained against is a member, has an established cost survey for the locality and vicinity in which the offense is committed, that cost survey is competent evidence to be used in proving the costs of such person."

■ Business and Professions Code section 17073 provides: "Proof of average overall cost of doing business for any particular inventory period when added to the cost of production of each article or product, as to a producer, or invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, of each article or product, as to a distributor, is presumptive evidence of cost of each such article or product involved in any action brought under this chapter."

■ Business and Professions Code section 17074 provides: "Proof of transportation tariffs when fixed and approved by the Public Utilities Commission of the State of California is presumptive evidence of delivery cost."

■ Business and Professions Code section 17077 provides: "In any action or prosecution for sales below cost in violation of this chapter, if the defendant acquires his raw materials for a consideration not wholly or definitely computable in money, the cost of the raw materials shall be presumed to be the prevailing market price for similar raw materials in the ordinary channels of trade in the locality or vicinity in which such raw materials were acquired, at the time of the acquisition."

■ "Determination of the defendant's cost has always been treated as an issue of fact." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp. v. Hearst Corp. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 424, 432 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] .)

CACI 3305 Presumptions Concerning Costs--Distributor

A distributor's costs include the cost of the product being distributed and the cost of doing business as a distributor.

The cost of the product being distributed is the amount [name of defendant] paid for the product or [his/her/its] cost of replacing the product, whichever is less.

[Name of defendant]'s cost of doing business as a distributor is the average cost of distribution over a reasonable time, rather than the cost of distributing one item at a particular time.

[If [name of defendant]'s trade or industry has an established cost study or survey for the geographic area in this case, that cost survey may be considered in calculating [name of defendant]'s costs.]

[If there is no other proof of the cost of doing business, a markup of six percent on the invoice or replacement cost of an article or product is presumed to be [name of defendant]'s additional cost of doing business.]

[[Name of defendant]'s delivery costs are presumed to be the tariffs set by the California Public Utilities Commission, but this presumption may be overcome by other evidence.]

New September 2003

Presumably, this instruction would also apply to sellers that are denominated "retailers."

The bracketed sentences should be inserted as necessary.

There is an additional presumption regarding costs in Business and Professions Code section 17026 for warranty service providers: " 'Cost' as applied to warranty service agreements includes the cost of parts, transporting the parts, labor, and all overhead expenses of the service agency."

- Business and Professions Code section 17026 provides, in part: " 'Cost' as applied to distribution means the invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, of the article or product to the distributor and vendor, plus the cost of doing business by the distributor and vendor and in the absence of proof of cost of doing business a markup of 6 percent on such invoice or replacement cost shall be prima facie proof of such cost of doing business."

- Business and Professions Code section 17074 provides: "Proof of transportation tariffs when fixed and approved by the Public Utilities Commission of the State of California is presumptive evidence of delivery cost."

- "Determination of the defendant's cost has always been treated as an issue of fact." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp. v. Hearst Corp. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 424, 432 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] .)

CACI 3306 Methods of Allocating Costs to an Individual Product

Although no formula for determining the appropriate cost of a particular [product/service] is set by law, [insert one of the following:]

[the determination of the appropriate cost of [manufacture/distribution] of a particular product must be reasonably related to the burden the product puts on [name of defendant]'s overall cost of doing business.]

[the determination of the cost of providing particular services must be reasonably related to the burden the service puts on [name of defendant]'s overall cost of doing business.]

New September 2003

Regarding the first bracketed sentence, if all of the defendant's products are approximately the same, there is no need to allocate the indirect expense, i.e., overhead, according to the unique "burden" each product generates. In such cases, this paragraph could unnecessarily confuse the jury and should be modified or deleted.

5-33 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3320

CACI 3320 Secret Rebates--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [insert one or both of the following:]

[secretly [gave/received] [payments/rebates/refunds/ commissions/unearned discounts;]] [or]

[secretly [gave to some buyers/received] services or privileges that were not given to other buyers purchasing on like terms and conditions.]

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] secretly [[gave/received] [payments/rebates/refunds/commissions/unearned discounts]] [or] [[gave to some buyers/received] services or privileges that were not given to other buyers purchasing on like terms and conditions];
- 2. That a competitor was harmed;
- 3. That the [payment/allowance] had a tendency to destroy competition;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

5-33 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3320

Element 2 should be omitted if the plaintiff is a competitor of the defendant; that issue is covered by element 4.

■ Business and Professions Code § 17045 provides: "The secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions, or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or secretly extending to certain purchasers special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers purchasing upon like terms and conditions, to the injury of a competitor and where such payment or allowance tends to destroy competition, is unlawful."

■ "The purpose of the Unfair Practices Act (UPA) is 'to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition, by prohibiting unfair, dishonest, deceptive, destructive, fraudulent and discriminatory practices by which fair and honest competition is destroyed or prevented.' It forbids most locality discriminations, the use of loss leaders, gifts, secret rebates, boycotts, and 'deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising.' It also prohibits the sale of goods and services below cost." (Pan Asia Venture Capital Corp. v. Hearst Corp. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 424, 431-432 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]here are three elements to a violation of section 17045. First, there must be a 'secret' allowance of an 'unearned' discount. Second, there must be 'injury' to a competitor. Third, the allowance must tend to destroy competition." (Diesel Elec. Sales & Serv. v. Marco Marine San Diego, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 202, 212 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 62].)

■ "By its terms, section 17045 requires the plaintiff to prove not only injury to a competitor, but, in addition, a tendency 'to destroy competition.' " (ABC International Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Electric Corp. of America (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1262 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290] , original italics.)

■ "[S]ection 17045 does not require a proof of an 'intent' to destroy competition, but only that the secret, unearned discount had a tendency to destroy competition." (Diesel Elec. Sales & Serv., supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 215, original italics.)

■ Those competing against a seller who provides the secret rebate, on the "primary line," have standing to sue under the statute. Likewise, a customer of the seller who is disfavored by that seller providing a secret rebate to competitors of that customer, creating so-called "secondary line" injury, also has standing to sue. (ABC International Traders, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1257 .)

■ Business and Professions Code section 17082 provides, in part: "In any action under this chapter, it is not necessary to allege or prove actual damages or the threat thereof, or actual injury or the threat thereof, to the plaintiff. But, in addition to injunctive relief, any plaintiff in any such action shall be entitled to recover three times the amount of the actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff, as well as three times the actual damages, if any, sustained by any person who has assigned to the plaintiff his claim for damages resulting from a violation of this chapter."

■ "While, similar to other cases, damages cannot be awarded in antitrust cases upon sheer guesswork or speculation, the plaintiff seeking damages for loss of profits is required to establish only with reasonable probability the existence of some causal connection between defendant's wrongful act and some loss of the anticipated revenue. Once that has been accomplished, the jury will be permitted to act upon probable and inferential proof and to 'make a just and reasonable estimate of the damage based on relevant data, and render its verdict accordingly.' " (Suburban Mobile Homes, Inc. v. AMFAC Communities, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 545 [161 Cal.Rptr. 811] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain "Secret Rebates" to Jury: A "rebate" is a unique concept to most jurors. A "secret rebate" even more so. In addition, jurors will not necessarily understand why "secret rebates" are unlawful. Counsel should explain in closing argument why such rebates injure competition, and that the Legislature has therefore determined they are unlawful. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

CACI 3330 Affirmative Defense to Locality Discrimination Claim--Cost Justification

[Name of defendant] claims that any locality discrimination proven by [name of plaintiff] is within the law. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that the difference in [his/her/its] price is justified by: [insert one or more of the following:]

[A difference in the [grade/quality/quantity] of the [product] [he/she/it] sold in the different locations;] [or]

[The difference in the cost of the [manufacture/sale/delivery] of [his/her/its] [product] in the different locations;] [or]

[A difference in the actual cost of transportation from the place the [product] was [produced/manufactured/shipped] to the place where the [product] was sold.]

New September 2003

This defense applies to locality discrimination only.

■ Business and Professions Code section 17041 provides: "Nothing in this chapter prohibits locality discriminations which make allowances for differences, if any, in the grade, quality or quantity when based and justified in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery, or the actual cost of transportation from the point of production, if a raw product or commodity, or from the point of manufacture if a manufactured product or commodity, or from the point of shipment to the point of destination."

■ "We ... conclude that appellants are not required to negative the exception for differences in grade or other enumerated factors found in section 17041, and deem the complaint sufficient to withstand demurrer without such allegations." (G.H.I.I. v. Mts, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 256, 273 [195 Cal.Rptr. 211], internal citations and footnote omitted.)

CACI 3331 Affirmative Defense to Locality Discrimination, Below Cost Sales, and Loss Leader Sales Claims--Closed-out, Discontinued, Damaged, or Perishable Items

[Name of defendant] claims that any [locality discrimination/below cost sales/loss leader sales] proven by [name of plaintiff] [is/are] within the law because the [product] was being sold as [a close-out/seasonal goods/damaged goods/perishable goods]. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [his/her/its] sales were [insert one or more of the following:]

[in the course of closing out, in good faith, all or any part of [his/her/its] supply of [product], in order to stop trade in [product];] [or]

[of seasonal goods to prevent loss by depreciation;] [or]

[of perishable goods to prevent loss by spoilage or depreciation;] [or]

[of goods that were damaged or deteriorated in quality;] and

2. That [name of defendant] gave sufficient notice of the sale to the public.

Notice is sufficient only if:

1. The sale goods are kept separate from other goods;

2. The sale goods are clearly marked with the reason[s] for the sales; and

3. Any advertisement of such goods sets forth the reason[s] for the sale and indicates the number of items to be sold.

New September 2003

This defense applies to locality discrimination, below cost sales, and loss leader sales only.

■ Business and Professions Code section 17050 provides, in part:

The prohibitions of this chapter against locality discriminations, sales below cost, and loss leaders do not apply to any sale made:

(a) In closing out in good faith the owner's stock or any part thereof for the purpose of discontinuing his trade in any such article or product and in the case of the sale of seasonal goods or to the bona fide sale of perishable goods to prevent loss to the vendor by spoilage or depreciation; provided, notice is given to the public thereof.

(b) When the goods are damaged or deteriorated in quality, and notice is given to the public thereof.

The notice required to be given under this section shall not be sufficient unless the subject of such sales is kept separate from other stocks and clearly and legibly marked with the reason for such sales, and any advertisement of such goods must indicate the same facts and the number of items to be sold.

[Name of defendant] claims that any [locality discrimination/below cost sales/loss leader sales/secret rebates] proven by [name of plaintiff] [is/are] within the law because they apply to different classes of customers. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] created different classes of customers, such as [broker/jobber/wholesaler/retailer/[insert other]];
- 2. That customers in the different classes performed different functions and assumed the risk, investment, and costs involved;
- 3. That the difference in [price/rebate/discount/special services/privileges] for [product/service] was given only in those sales where the favored buyer performed the function on which the claim of a different class is based; and
- 4. That the difference in price was reasonably related to the value of such function.

New September 2003

This defense applies to locality discrimination, sales below cost, loss leader sales, and secret rebates.

- Business and Professions Code section 17042 provides:

Nothing in this chapter prohibits any of the following:

(a) A selection of customers.

(b) A functional classification by any person of any customer as broker, jobber, wholesaler or retailer.

(c) A differential in price for any article or product as between any customers in different functional classifications.

■ "[T]he law should tolerate no subterfuge. For instance, where a wholesaler-retailer buys only part of his goods as a wholesaler, he must not claim a functional discount on all. Only to the extent that a buyer actually performs certain functions, assuming all the risk, investment, and costs involved, should he legally qualify for a functional discount. Hence a distributor should be eligible for a discount corresponding to any part of the function he actually performs on that part of the goods for which he performs it." (Diesel Elec. Sales & Serv. v. Marco Marine San Diego, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 202, 217 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 62], internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] pricing structure in which a distributor sells to a retailer at one discount and to a rack-jobber at another is expressly permitted by section 17042." (Harris v. Capitol Records Distributing Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 463 [50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139] , footnote omitted.)

CACI 3333 Affirmative Defense to Locality Discrimination, Below Cost Sales, and Loss Leader Sales Claims--Meeting Competition

[Name of defendant] claims that any [locality discrimination/below cost sales/loss leader sales] proven by [name of plaintiff] [is/are] justified by the need to meet competition. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that the sales of [product/service] were made in an attempt, in good faith, to meet the legal prices of a competitor selling the same [product/service] in the ordinary course of business in the same area.

To meet legal prices means to lower the price to a point that the seller believes in good faith is at or above the legal price of the competitor it is trying to meet. That is, a seller may attempt to "meet," but not "beat," what in good faith it believes to be that competitor's legal price.

New September 2003

This defense applies to locality discrimination, sales below cost, and loss leader sales only.

CACI 3334 Affirmative Defense to Locality Discrimination Claim-- Manufacturer Meeting Downstream Competition

[Name of defendant] claims that any locality discrimination proven by [name of plaintiff] was justified by the need to meet competition. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that [his/her/its] sales of [product/service] to [name of reselling customer] were made in an attempt, in good faith, to meet the legal prices of [name of competitor's reseller] selling in the ordinary course of business in the same locality or trade area.

To meet legal prices means to lower the price to a point that the seller believes in good faith is at or above the legal price of the competitor of the reseller whose price it is trying to meet. That is, a seller may attempt to "meet," but not "beat," what in good faith it believes to be that competitor's legal price.

New September 2003

This defense applies to locality discrimination when the manufacturer is providing a lower price to its reseller, so that the reseller can compete fairly against the lower prices charged by the reseller of another manufacturer.

CACI 3335 Affirmative Defense--"Good Faith" Explained

In deciding whether [name of defendant] acted in good faith in attempting to meet competition, you must decide whether [his/her/its] belief was based on facts that would lead a reasonable person to believe that the price he or she was offering would meet the legal price of his or her competitor. You must consider all of the facts and circumstances present, including, but not limited to:

- 1. The nature and source of the information on which [name of defendant] relied;
- 2. [Name of defendant]'s prior experience, if any, with similar information or with persons who provided the information;
- 3. [Name of defendant]'s prior pricing practices; and
- 4. [Name of defendant]'s general business practices.

[Name of defendant] does not have to prove that [his/her/its] price did actually meet the legal price of its competitor; only that [he/she/it] reasonably believed that [he/she/it] was offering a price that would meet the competitor's price.

New September 2003

This instruction provides the jury with a general listing of circumstances against which it might consider evidence in the record to decide whether a defendant's attempts to meet competition were in good faith. The final paragraph eases the defendant's burden of proof with respect to the "meet but don't beat" element because a defendant is required only to prove its reasonable belief that its prices would meet, but not beat, a competitor's prices.

■ Business and Professions Code section 17050(d) and (e) provides, in part: "The prohibitions of this chapter against locality discriminations, sales below cost, and loss leaders do not apply to any sale made ... [i]n an endeavor made in good faith to meet the legal prices of a competitor selling the same article or product, in the same locality or trade area and in the ordinary channels of trade [or] [i]n an endeavor made in good faith by a manufacturer, selling an article or product of his own manufacture, in a transaction and sale to a wholesaler or retailer for resale to meet the legal prices of a competitor selling the same or a similar or comparable article or product, in the same locality or trade area and in the ordinary channels of trade."

■ "The requirement [to ascertain the 'legal prices' of competitors] is not absolute. It is merely that the defendants shall have endeavored 'in good faith' to meet the legal prices of a competitor." (People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 117 [153 P.2d 9] .)

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter covers the law of unfair competition. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on the Unfair Practices Act, see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions. Ch. 33 includes Judicial Council instructions on locality discrimination, sales and costs, secret rebates, and affirmative defenses. For California Judicial Council jury instructions on trade secrets, see Ch. 44, California Judicial Council Trade Secret Instructions. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions on causes of action based on the Unfair Practices Act [see MB 3300A.01 -MB 3300A.51]. These include instructions on the burden of proof, prohibitions under the Act, defenses, and damages.
- Part B includes instructions on the requirements for a protectable mark or name and the elements of an infringement claim [see MB 3300A.60 -MB 3300A.67]. An instruction on damages is also included. California law in this area is derived from both the Business and Professions Code and the common law.
- Part C includes instructions on the plaintiff's burden of proof and damages for the emerging cause of action for breach of confidence [see MB 3300A.80, MB 3300A.81].

For jury instructions on the right to privacy, see Ch. 18, California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions.

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.01

MB 3300A.01 Introductory Instruction

[1] Instruction Introductory Instruction

Plaintiff's claim is that Defendant is liable to Plaintiff for money damages for _____ [specify violation of Unfair Practices Act, e.g., selling goods below cost]. The instructions that follow will apply to this claim. Those instructions will use certain terms that the law defines in a particular way. As the need arises, I will instruct you on these definitions so that you may apply them when you consider the Plaintiff's claim.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to introduce the jury to the plaintiff's Unfair Practices Act claim and prepare the jury to hear whatever definitional instructions the court will give later. If desired, this instruction may be combined with the general instruction that informs the jury of the nature of the dispute between the plaintiff and the defendant [see generally Ch. 1, California Judicial Council Pretrial Instructions, CACI No. 101].

[3] Comment

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17001 sets forth the legislative purpose of the Unfair Practices Act. It states that the Act's purpose "is to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition, by prohibiting unfair, dishonest, destructive, fraudulent and discriminatory practices by which fair and honest competition is destroyed or prevented." Rather than introduce the jury to the Unfair Practices Act with this litany of purpose--and thereby run the risk of prejudicing the jury--this instruction avoids any attempt to characterize the purposes of the Act or the nature of the defendant's conduct. Instead, it simply describes the plaintiff's claim and advises the jury that it may have to apply statutory definitions to the facts.

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.02

MB 3300A.02 Persons Liable for Violation of Unfair Practices Act

[1] Instruction Persons Liable for Violation of Unfair Practices Act

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

For purposes of Plaintiff's claim that Defendant is liable for _____ [type of violation alleged], the word "person" includes any individual, firm, association, organization, partnership, business trust, company, corporation, or municipal or other public corporation.

[OR]

For purposes of Plaintiff's claim that Defendant is liable for _____ [type of violation alleged], Defendant, _____ [specify type of entity, e.g., a corporation], is a "person."

Authority: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17021.

[2] Use of Instruction

Either of these alternative instructions should be used when there is a dispute over whether a particular defendant is subject to the Unfair Practices Act, or if counsel seeks a definitional instruction to avoid possible juror confusion on the question of whether a corporation or other business entity is a "person" under the Act. It is appropriate to use this instruction after the first time the term "person" is used in the instructions. Of course, this instruction will not be necessary if the remaining instructions refer only to the plaintiff and the defendant rather than using the statutory term "person."

Further instructions on the circumstances in which individual employees, agents, or co-conspirators may be liable for violations of the Act will be necessary if the plaintiff seeks recovery from defendants other than the person or entity claimed to have violated the Act [see MB 3300A.03 (agent), MB 3300A.16 (colluder)].

[3] Comment

This instruction is a paraphrase of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17021, which broadly defines "person" for purposes of the Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.]. The broad statutory definition makes it unlikely that disputes over whether a particular defendant is subject to the Act will arise.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17095, 17096.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when liability is asserted against individuals for Unfair Practices Act violations committed by their employers or other principals for whom they act. The instruction is not needed when an individual is claimed to have violated the Act, but only when individual liability is asserted for a violation committed by another person or entity.

If the plaintiff seeks to impose liability on an individual claimed to be only an agent of the primary actor, and not a director or officer, a further instruction on the subject of agency will be required. If the agency claim is based on the existence of an employer-employee relationship, a simple instruction that an employee is an agent of the employer should suffice. In other cases, specific attention to the question of whether the individual is an agent will be necessary [see Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, MB 300C.50 et seq. for instructions on agency generally].

[3] Comment

[a] Civil Liability of Directors, Officers, and Agents--Intent

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17095 makes a director, officer, or agent of a firm violating the Act who "assists or aids, directly or indirectly" in the commission of a violation of the Unfair Practices Act equally responsible with the violator see also [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17048 (liability of nonagent who "colludes" or "participates" in violation); for instructions on responsibility of corporations for acts of officers, agents, and employees, see Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions]. Section 17095 does not address the intent requirement applicable to an individual defendant in this situation. However, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17096 states that in injunction proceedings against an individual acting as an officer, director, or agent, only the employer's intent need be proved. This suggests that some additional intent requirement must be met to establish individual liability for damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17095. No cases have addressed this issue.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proof of Intent: The instruction in [1], above, addresses the level of intent required to hold an individual defendant (usually an officer or director) liable for the unlawful acts of the corporation. The plaintiff is not required to prove that the individual defendant intended to violate the law, or that the individual defendant even knew that the corporation's act was unlawful. All that is required is proof that the individual defendant "directly or indirectly" assisted the corporation "with knowledge of the [corporation's] purpose." This is a relatively low threshold of proof [see also [d], below]. By Ronald Oster

[b] Criminal Intent Requirements Compared

The situation is complicated by the criminal liability provisions of the Act. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17100 makes any person who, acting "for himself, [herself,] or for another person, or for any firm or corporation," guilty of a misdemeanor if he or she "violates" the Act. An agent of a corporation that violates the Act does not literally "violate" the Act himself or herself when the violation is a sale by the corporation. Nonetheless, the use of the term "violate" suggests that the individual must have the intent required to prove a violation. For example, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 prohibits a sale below cost only if it is made "for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition" [see Wholesale Tobacco Dealers Bureau v. National Candy & Tobacco Co. (1938) 11 Cal.2d 634, 646-650, 82 P.2d 3; see also Sybersound Records, Inc. v. UAV Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 517 F.3d 1137, 1153; Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 174-175, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 (to violate Corp. Code § 17043, company must act with purpose, i.e., desire, of injuring competitors or destroying competition)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17100 would therefore seem to require that an agent charged with a criminal violation of the sale below cost prohibition have the proscribed purpose to injure competitors, even though the corporation for which the agent acted could be convicted or held civilly liable on the basis of another's intent.

However, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17101 contradicts this apparent meaning. Section 17101 states (as does Bus. & Prof. Code § 17096 in the case of injunction proceedings) that all that need be proved in the criminal prosecution of an agent is the intent of the employer. Although it is difficult to resolve the inconsistency between proof of a "violation" as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17100 and the allowance of proof of corporate intent in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17101, it appears that a misdemeanor conviction may be had without proof of individual intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. A fortiori, civil liability must also be available without proof of the statutory intent needed to show a violation.

[c] Liability of Joint Participants or Colluders Compared

Further confusion may be created by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17048, which makes it unlawful for manufacturers and other sellers and their agents "jointly to participate or collude" with another in violating the Act. In Harris v. Capitol Records Distributing Corp., the California Supreme Court stated that more than "reason to know" of another's unlawful intent is required for liability under § 17048, and that the colluder or participant "must share a common purpose" with the primary actor [Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 462, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139]. Harris shows that an intent standard more rigorous than that suggested by the interplay of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17095, 17096, 17100, and 17101 must be met when liability is asserted against an outsider. The difference seems understandable. The requirement of § 17048 of joint participation or collusion is suggestive of a greater involvement than mere direct or indirect aid or assistance, as required by § 17095, and a more restrictive limitation on liability thus seems appropriate. As a policy matter, the Legislature might well have thought it appropriate to make proof of liability of corporate insiders--those whose action is necessary to perpetrate violations of the Act--easier than that of other firms who might conspire with a violator. The liability of other firms seems to be governed by principles closely similar to those generally applicable to coconspirator liability, under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17048 and Harris.

[d] Requirement That Officer, Director, or Agent Act With Knowledge or Intent

Although it is not entirely clear how these issues will be resolved, the differences in the language of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17048 and 17095 and the differences in the nature of those subjected to liability by §§ 17048 and 17095 suggest that a lesser standard of liability is appropriate under § 17095.

It thus appears unlikely that a plaintiff must prove that an individual agent defendant had the statutorily required intent necessary to establish a violation of the Act to impose damage liability on the agent under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17095. However, it seems equally unlikely that mere proof of corporate intent is sufficient, given the limitation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17096 to injunction proceedings. The appropriate resolution of the ambiguities in the statutes thus appears to be a requirement that the individual act with knowledge of an unlawful intent attributable to the employer defendant.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Connecting Individual Liability to Corporation

May Be Difficult: It may be difficult to "connect" an individual defendant's liability to that of a corporate defendant. The instruction in [1], above, addresses that challenge, especially in light of the "assisted or aided" part of this charge. By Rex Heeseman

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.04

MB 3300A.04 Definition of "Sell"[1] Instruction Definition of "Sell"[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

For purposes of Plaintiff's claim that Defendant unlawfully _____ [specify violation, e.g., sold goods below cost], the word "sell" includes selling, offering for sale, or advertising for sale.

[OR]

For purposes of Plaintiff's claim that Defendant unlawfully _____ [specify violation, e.g., sold goods below cost], the word "sell" includes not only a sale, offer to sell, or an advertisement, but also includes _____ [describe transaction involved, e.g., a lease].

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17022; Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 501-504, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42 ; Los Angeles Check Sellers Ass'n v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 570, 573, 80 Cal.Rptr. 321 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the term "sell." Various provisions of the Unfair Practices Act prohibit certain types of "sales" [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17040 (locality discrimination), 17043 (sales below cost), 17044 (loss leaders)). The first alternative instruction is phrased in the language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17022 and should be used when the allegation involves an offered or advertised price, rather than a completed sale. If preferred, the second alternative may be substituted. It emphasizes to the jury that the term "sell" includes not only a sale, offer to sell, or advertisement, but also the particular type of transaction involved in the case. When the case involves undisputed evidence that a sale or sales took place, and no claim involving any other type of transaction, a definitional instruction should not be necessary.

This instruction should be modified in appropriate cases to reflect the particular type of transaction, for example, a lease. When a transaction other than a sale, offer to sell, or advertisement is in issue, the reference to types of transactions identified in the statute may be deleted, and a reference to the type of transaction in issue used instead.

[3] Comment

[a] Statutory Basis For Broad Definition of "Sale"

The definitional language of the Unfair Practices Act is broad, reflecting the nature of the Act's purposes [see MB 3300A.01[3]]. Additionally, the Act specifically states that it must be liberally construed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17002], and further extends its prohibitions of locality discrimination and below-cost selling to "any device of any nature whereby such discrimination or sale below cost is in substance or fact effected in violation of the spirit and intent" of the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17049]. One court read these directives and the Act's broad definitional language to reflect a legislative effort "to avoid the pitfall of circumscribing the transactions covered by the Act with such precision that its substantive purpose could be evaded by methods of marketing contrary to the spirit but without the literal reach of the Act" [Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 501, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42]. The court noted that every relevant definition in the Act uses the word "includes," and adopted the view that this is a word of enlargement and not of limitation. The court went on to hold that a lease-services arrangement would come within the below cost selling prohibition of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 [Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 501-502, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42 ; see MB 3300A.06 for an instruction on "article or product"]. Similarly, in another court of appeal case, holding that the sale of money orders was subject to the Act, the court noted that the Act covers a great variety of transactions other than the conventional sale of real or personal property [Los Angeles Check Sellers Ass'n v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 570, 573, 80 Cal.Rptr. 321].

[b] Probability That "Sell" Includes Leases and Similar Transactions

For these reasons, although the statutory definition of "sell" does not include a reference to leases, licenses, or other transactions that do not involve a sale, offer to sell, or advertisement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17022], it is likely that courts will read the definition to include leases, licenses, and other transactions not specifically mentioned cf. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024 (motion pictures licensed for exhibition excluded from statutory definition of "article or product")]. Although one court has refused to decide whether a "pure" lease--one not involving associated services--would come within the Act [Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 503 n. 10, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42], the same court stated that the statutory terms "sell" and "give" "obviously refer to any method--sale, lease, consignment, and similar methods--of marketing articles or products" [Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 504, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42].

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.05

MB 3300A.05 Definition of "Give"

[1] Instruction Definition of "Give"

For the purposes of Plaintiff's claim that Defendant unlawfully _____ [specify violation, e.g., sold goods below cost], the word "give" includes giving, offering to give, or advertising the intent to give.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17023; see Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the allegation is that an article or product was given, rather than sold, leased, or licensed, or when a giveaway was offered or advertised. The instruction is phrased in the language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17023,

[3] Comment

The principles supporting broad interpretation of the definitional provisions of the Unfair Practices Act are discussed in MB 3300A.04[3]. Although not likely to be necessary to the interpretation of the term "give," those principles should be remembered in the event of any disputes over whether or not a particular transaction involves a giving, offering to give, or advertising the intent to give.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Carefully Prepare Argument: Almost all jurors understand "sale." However, "give" is much more amorphous. As a result, the related closing argument should be carefully prepared. By Rex Heeseman

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.06

MB 3300A.06 Definition of "Article or Product"

[1] Instruction Definition of "Article or Product"

_____ [type of article or product] is an "article or product" that is subject to the provisions of the Unfair Practices Act.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024; Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 Cal.3d 920, 927, 130 Cal.Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833 ; Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 502, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42 ; Los Angeles Check Sellers Ass'n v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 570, 573, 80 Cal.Rptr. 321 ; Page v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union of Am. (1963) 223 Cal.App.2d 101, 107, 35 Cal.Rptr. 693 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to inform the jury that the specific product involved is an "article or product" within the meaning of the Unfair Practices Act. In light of the broad statutory definition of article or product, this instruction will be appropriate in virtually all cases.

[3] Comment

Like the other definitional provisions of the Unfair Practices Act, the definition of article or product in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024 is broadly stated. Unlike § 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Act [15 U.S.C.S. § 13(a)], which applies only to "commodities," the Unfair Practices Act applies to services [Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc.

(1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 496, 502-504, 117 Cal.Rptr. 42 (office space and associated services); Los Angeles Check Sellers Ass'n v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 570, 571, 80 Cal.Rptr. 321 (money orders); Page v. Bakersfield Unif. & Towel Supply Co. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 762, 764, 49 Cal.Rptr. 46 (uniform rental and cleaning services); Garner v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union of Am. (1963) 223 Cal.App.2d 101, 107-108, 35 Cal.Rptr. 693 (haircutting); see Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 Cal.3d 920, 927, 130 Cal.Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833 (services are "commodities" under Cartwright Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.); Cellular Plus, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1224, 1240-1243, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 308 (cellular telephone services are actionable under Cartwright Act)].

However, the scope of the Unfair Practices Act is not unlimited. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024 excludes motion picture films that are licensed for exhibition to motion picture houses from the broad definition of "article or product," and Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(1) and (2) generally exclude the output of public utilities from the Act [see Hladek v. City of Merced (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 585, 591, 138 Cal.Rptr. 194 ; but see Cellular Plus, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1224, 1240-1243, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 308 (regulatory authority of Public Utilities Commission over company's rates does not preclude price-fixing violation of Cartwright Act)].

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.07

MB 3300A.07 Liability for Loss Leader Activities--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of "Injurious Effect"

[1] Instruction Liability for Loss Leader Activities--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of "Injurious Effect"

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable to [him/her/it] for unlawful sales of _____ [specify article or product] as a loss leader. To prove that Defendant has engaged in unlawful loss leader sales, Plaintiff must first prove both of the following:

- 1. Defendant sold the _____ [specify article or product] at less than [his/her/its] cost; and
- 2. Defendant's sale of _____ [specify article or product] below cost:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

(a) Was done to promote or encourage the purchase of other merchandise.

(b) Had a tendency or ability to mislead or deceive buyers or potential buyers.

[AND/OR]

(c) Had the effect of diverting trade from or otherwise injuring the Defendant's competitors.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] as a loss leader, then you must consider whether Defendant acted with an unlawful purpose or intent. For purposes of Plaintiff's claim of unlawful loss leader sales, unlawful purpose or intent means purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

If in addition to proving that Defendant sold a loss leader, Plaintiff also proves that Defendant's loss leader sales had an injurious effect, for example by _____ [specify injurious effect (see Use of Instruction)], then Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] did not act with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. If, however, you find that Plaintiff has not proved that Defendant's sales produced an injurious effect, then it is Plaintiff who must prove that Defendant sold loss leaders with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition.

[or]

Because Defendant _____ [specify proved or admitted fact that justifies presumption of intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition, e.g., sold _____ (specify product) below cost], Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] did not act with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030, 17044, 17071; Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 175-178, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 ; Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517-518, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff asserting a loss leader claim alleges that the defendant's conduct has produced an "injurious effect" and that the presumption of intent found in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 is therefore applicable. No attempt has been made to indicate precisely what constitutes an "injurious effect" because, as discussed in [3][a], below, the courts have not fleshed out the meaning of this term.

Paragraph 2 of the plaintiff's burden of proof in this instruction offers three alternative subparagraphs. These alternatives are based on those set forth in the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17030 definition of "loss leader." Proof of any one of these alternatives is sufficient to meet the statutory definition. Counsel should use as many of these alternatives as are placed at issue by the facts of the case.

This instruction concludes with two alternative paragraphs on the burden of proving unlawful intent. If the facts supporting the presumption of intent under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 are in dispute, then counsel should use the first alternative paragraph. If the facts underlying the presumption are not disputed, for example if there is no dispute on the question of whether any proved or conceded loss leader activity has produced an "injurious effect," counsel should use the second alternative paragraph, which places the burden on the defendant to prove the absence of unlawful intent.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution!: "Loss leader" may confuse many jurors.

Hence, be careful of the supporting evidence as well as the related argument to the jury. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Presumption of Injurious Intent

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044 prohibits "loss leader" activity as that term is defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17030 [see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3302]. Loss leader activity is unlawful only when it is done with the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition [Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 175-178, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 (to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, and thus Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, company must act with purpose, i.e., desire, of injuring competitors or destroying competition; see CACI No. 3302); Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 516, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543].

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 provides that, in any case brought under the Unfair Practices Act, proof of one or more sales below cost, or of sales at discriminatory prices, plus proof of "injurious effect" is "presumptive evidence" of the purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition [see, e.g., Fisherman's Wharf Bay Cruise Corp. v. Superior Court (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 309, 322, 7 Cal.Rptr.3d 628]. Proof of diversion of business from a competitor, one of the alternative definitional elements of a loss leader sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17030(c)], is apparently sufficient to show injurious effect [E & H Wholesale, Inc. v. Glaser Bros. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 728, 735, 204 Cal.Rptr. 838 ; see People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 113, 153 P.2d 9 (injury to competitor or destruction of competition is injurious effect)]. Thus, if one of the definitional elements of what constitutes a loss leader--as set out in the second element of the plaintiff's burden--is proved, the presumption of unlawful intent may arise. However, the cases have not identified any more expansive meaning for "injurious effect" than diversion of trade.

This instruction is based on the assumption that the presumption established by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 affects the burden of persuasion and not merely the burden of producing evidence. If the burden is one of persuasion, then proof of the underlying facts (sale below cost; injurious effect) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071] would have the effect of shifting to the defendant the burden of proving that it did not intend to injure competitors or destroy competition [see Evid. Code § 606 (effect of presumption affecting burden of persuasion)]. In that case, an instruction informing the jury of the shift of the burden of proof to the defendant would be appropriate. On the other hand, if the presumption only affects the burden of producing evidence, then the defendant is required only to introduce evidence supporting the nonexistence of the presumed fact; and if the defendant introduces this evidence, then the trier of fact must determine the existence or nonexistence of the presumed fact without regard to the presumption [see Evid. Code § 604 (effect of presumption affecting burden of producing evidence)]. Thus, if the presumption affects the burden of producing evidence, rather than the burden of persuasion, the presumption would effectively "disappear" if the defendant has introduced evidence to rebut the presumption, and the jury should not be instructed on the presumption.

Whether the presumption created by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 affects the burden of persuasion or the burden of producing evidence has not been specifically decided by a California appellate court. One court of appeal held, with little analysis, that the similar presumption in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 (discussed in MB 3300A.08[3]) is a presumption affecting the burden of persuasion [see Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517-518, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543]. Without expressly addressing the issue, some later cases seem to have treated the presumption of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 as if it were a presumption affecting the burden of persuasion [see William Inglis & Sons v. Continental Baking (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 1332, 1338-1339 ; E & H Wholesale, Inc. v. Glaser Bros. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 728, 737, 204 Cal.Rptr. 838]. However, another court, again without expressly addressing the issue of the nature of the presumption, appeared to treat the presumption as affecting the burden of presenting evidence. The court stated that the only effect of the presumption created by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 is "to require ... [the defendant] to go forward with proof to negate the presumption of wrongful intent"; once the defendant has done that, the burden of proof regarding intent shifts back to the plaintiff [Western Union Fin. Servs., Inc. v. First Data Corp. (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 1530, 1540, 25 Cal.Rptr.2d 341 ; see People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 114, 153 P.2d 9 (identically worded predecessor statute required that defendant "go forward with evidence to rebut a prima facie showing")]. The language in the latter case appears more consistent with a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence than a presumption affecting the burden of persuasion.

Assuming that the presumption under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 affects the burden of persuasion, the exact operation of the presumption depends on whether the underlying facts have been established as a matter of law or are subject to dispute. If the facts underlying the presumption (discriminatory or below cost sales and injurious effect) are conceded or have been established by motion for summary adjudication, then these undisputed facts are "presumptive evidence" of the intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition, and the burden is on the defendant to prove that it did not act with unlawful intent [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 (discriminatory or below cost sales plus injurious effect constitute presumptive evidence of intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition)]. When the underlying facts are in dispute, the ultimate allocation of the burden of persuasion on the intent issue will vary with the proof or lack of proof of the underlying facts, and the jury should be so instructed.

No reference is made in this instruction to one of the underlying facts that may give rise to the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 presumption--discriminatory sales. Since the plaintiff in a loss leader case must prove the alternative basis for the presumption (that is, sales below cost) as a basic element of the plaintiff's case, there is no need for the plaintiff to prove discriminatory sales.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Loss Leader vs. Promotional Sale: Many jurors may confuse an unlawful "loss leader" with a promotional sale. Counsel should explain that a "loss leader" is a sale "below cost" that damages competition. With a promotional sale, the seller still makes a profit. Note that if plaintiff can prove that sales were diverted, then the burden shifts to defendant to prove the defendant had no intent to injure competition. By Ronald Oster

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.08

MB 3300A.08 Liability for Loss Leader Activities--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of Limited Sales Below Invoice or Replacement Cost

[1] Instruction Liability for Loss Leader Activities--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of Limited Sales Below Invoice or Replacement Cost

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable to [him/her/it] for unlawful sales of _____ [specify article or product] as a loss leader. To prove that Defendant has engaged in unlawful loss leader sales, Plaintiff must first prove all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant sold the _____ [specify article or product] at less than [his/her/its] cost; and
- 2. That the sale of Defendant's _____ [specify article or product] below cost:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

(a) Was done to promote or encourage the purchase of other merchandise.

(b) Had a tendency or ability to mislead or deceive buyers or potential buyers.

[AND/OR]

(c) Had the effect of diverting trade from or otherwise injuring the Defendant's competitors.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant has sold a loss leader, then you must determine whether or not Plaintiff has proved both of the following:

1. That Defendant sold at a price less than [his/her/its] invoice cost or replacement cost, whichever is lower; and
2. That Defendant limited sales at that price, to any customer, to less than the entire quantity of the _____ [specify article or product] Defendant owned, possessed, or was otherwise authorized to sell at _____ [specify place of sale].

Unless Plaintiff has proved both that Defendant sold below invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, and that Defendant limited sales at that price, to any one customer, to less than all of the _____ [specify article or product] that [he/she/it] owned or possessed or was authorized to sell, Plaintiff must go on to prove that Defendant acted with "unlawful intent." That is, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant had the purpose or intent to either injure competitors or destroy competition. If, however, Plaintiff has proved both that Defendant sold below invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, and that Defendant did not sell to any one customer all of the _____ [specify article or product] that [he/she/it] owned or possessed or was authorized to sell, it is Defendant who must prove that [he/she/it] did not sell a loss leader with the purpose or intent to either injure competitors or destroy competition.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030, 17044, 17071.5; Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 175-178, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527; Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517-518, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a plaintiff asserting a loss leader claim alleges that a retailer defendant has sold below invoice or replacement cost and has limited the quantity of its sales at the challenged price. Proof of these underlying facts raises a presumption of intent or purpose to injure competitors or to destroy competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5.

This instruction may be modified if, for example, the underlying facts are not in dispute. In that case the burden of proving the absence of anticompetitive intent would be placed on the defendant and no mention need be made of the facts underlying the presumption.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution!: This instruction is complicated in many aspects. It should be shortened in some situations. In addition, it should be carefully explained to the jury. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Presumption Regarding Proof of Retailer's Limitation of Quantity

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 provides a presumption of purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition that applies only to retailers who sell products other than products they have produced or manufactured themselves. The presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of persuasion [Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517-18, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543].

Both of the following underlying facts must be proved for the presumption to arise:

- The plaintiff must prove--in addition to proving that a sale below "cost" [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17026, 17029] was made--that a sale below the lesser of the retailer's invoice or replacement cost was made; and
- The plaintiff must prove that the defendant limited the quantity it would sell at that price to any customer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5].

The California Supreme Court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044 contains the same mental state requirement as Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 [Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 175-178, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 (to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, and thus Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, company must act with the purpose, i.e., desire, of injuring competitors or destroying competition)].

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.09

MB 3300A.09 Liability for Locality Discrimination--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of "Injurious Effect"

[1] Instruction Liability for Locality Discrimination--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of "Injurious Effect"

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable to it for unlawful locality discrimination. For purposes of this claim, discrimination means a difference in price and locality means a geographic location such as a section, community, or city, or a location with a section, community, or city. Locality discrimination means selling _____ [either: an article or product or an article or product of like grade and quality] at a different price in one locality than in another.

To prove that Defendant engaged in unlawful locality discrimination, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] at a lower price in _____ [location at which Plaintiff competes with Defendant or would compete with Defendant] than it sold _____ [specify, e.g., the same item or an item of a like grade and quality] in another location.

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant has engaged in locality discrimination, then you must consider whether Defendant acted with an unlawful intent. For purposes of Plaintiff's claim of unlawful locality discrimination, unlawful intent means intent to _____ [either: destroy the competition of Plaintiff or to prevent Plaintiff from becoming a competitor].

If in addition to proving that Defendant engaged in locality discrimination, Plaintiff has also proved that Defendant's locality discrimination had an injurious effect, then Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] did not act with the intent to _____ [either: destroy the competition of Plaintiff or to prevent Plaintiff from becoming a competitor]. If, however, you find that Plaintiff has not proved an injurious effect from Defendant's locality discrimination, then it is Plaintiff who must prove that Defendant acted with intent to _____ [either: destroy the competition of Plaintiff or to prevent Plaintiff from becoming a competitor].

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17040, 17071.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a locality discrimination case when the plaintiff relies on the presumption of intent found in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071. When the facts underlying the presumption are not in dispute, the instruction should be modified to impose the burden of proof on the question of intent on the defendant. The instruction may also be particularized to indicate what facts specifically constitute the alleged "injurious effect."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution!: This instruction is complicated and should be shortened in some situations. In addition, it should be carefully explained to the jury. Phrases such as "locality" and "downstream" competition are understood by few. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proof of "Injurious Effect" Raises Presumption: As with other sections of the Unfair Practices Act, proof of an "injurious effect" raises the presumption that defendant acted with the intent to destroy or damage competition. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Similarity to Loss Leader Claim

This instruction, like the instruction in MB 3300A.07 that addresses loss leader claims, applies the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 presumption of intent. Many of the issues discussed in MB 3300A.07[3] are equally applicable, although there are certain differences between the use of the presumption in a loss leader case and in one involving a claim of locality discrimination.

[b] No Need to Prove Sales Below Cost

One important difference involves the utilization of the underlying fact of sales at "discriminatory prices" that triggers the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 presumption. As noted in MB 3300A.07[3], a loss leader plaintiff seeking to rely on Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 will not be likely to attempt to prove that the defendant made sales at discriminatory prices because the plaintiff will be required to establish the existence of the other basic underlying fact--below cost sales--in any loss leader case. The situation is reversed in a locality discrimination case. A plaintiff challenging alleged locality discrimination will most likely not find it necessary to attempt to prove sales below cost to take advantage of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 because proof of discrimination will be required as an element of the cause of action. A plaintiff alleging both below cost selling and locality discrimination may find it helpful to emphasize both underlying facts, but proof of below cost selling for purposes of the locality discrimination claim will be of no help in the absence of proof of discrimination.

[c] Meaning of "Discriminatory Price"

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 does not define what is meant by its use of the term "discriminatory prices." It is possible, but unlikely, that the term was meant to include more than the locality discrimination that is the subject of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040. It would be strange for Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 to provide for a presumption of unlawful intent to arise on proof of a type of discriminatory pricing that is not even regulated by the Unfair Practices Act. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 should thus be read to refer only to locality discrimination. Under that reading, in any locality discrimination case when the plaintiff proves the basic elements of the cause of action and proves an injurious effect, the defendant will have the burden of proof on the intent issue. As noted in MB 3300A.07[3], when the plaintiff fails to prove injurious effect, it will usually ultimately fail on its claim for lack of damages.

[d] Type of Intent Required for Locality Discrimination Contrasted With Intent Supplied by Presumption

The application of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 to a locality discrimination case also illustrates another of the examples of confusing drafting that plague the Unfair Practices Act. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 provides a presumption of an "intent to injure competitors or destroy competition" when there is proof of "injurious effect." However, this presumed intent differs from the intent necessary to establish a violation of the locality discrimination prohibition, even though § 17071 is stated to apply in "all actions" brought under the Unfair Practices Act. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 prohibits locality discrimination undertaken "with intent to destroy the competition of any regularly established dealer ... or to prevent the competition of any person who in good faith, intends and attempts to become" a dealer. In this instance, the differences in the statutory language appear to be reconcilable. The "intent to injure competitors" seems to include the "intent to destroy the competition of any regularly established dealer," and, given the nature and purpose of the Unfair Practices Act, may be read to include those who attempt to become dealers as well.

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.10

MB 3300A.10 Liability for Locality Discrimination--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of Limited Sales Below Invoice or Replacement Cost

[1] Instruction Liability for Locality Discrimination--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of Limited Sales Below Invoice or Replacement Cost

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable to [him/her/it] for unlawful locality discrimination. For purposes of this claim, discrimination means a difference in price, and locality means a geographic location such as a section, community, or city, or a location within a section, community, or city. Locality discrimination means selling _____ [either: an article or product or an article or product of like grade and quality] at a different price in one locality than in another.

To prove that Defendant engaged in unlawful locality discrimination, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] at a lower price in _____ [location at which Plaintiff competes with Defendant or would compete with Defendant] than it sold _____ [specify, e.g., the same item or an item of a like grade and quality] in another location.

If you do find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant engaged in locality discrimination, then you must determine whether or not Plaintiff has proved both of the following:

- 1. That Defendant sold at a price less than [his/her/its] invoice cost or replacement cost, whichever is lower; and
- 2. That Defendant limited sales at that price, to any customer, to less than the entire quantity of the _____ [specify article or product] Defendant owned, possessed, or was otherwise authorized to sell at _____ [specify place of sale].

Unless Plaintiff has proved both that Defendant sold below invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, and that Defendant limited sales at that price, to any one customer, to less than all of the _____ [specify article or product] that [he/she/it] owned or possessed or was authorized to sell, Plaintiff must go on to prove that Defendant engaged in locality discrimination with "unlawful intent." That is, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant had the intent to _____ [either: destroy the competition of Plaintiff or to prevent Plaintiff from becoming a competitor]. If, however, Plaintiff has proved both that Defendant sold below invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, and that Defendant limited sales at that price, to any one customer, to less than all of the _____ [specify article or product] that [he/she/it] owned or possessed or was authorized to sell, it is Defendant who must prove that [he/she/it] did not sell with the intent to _____ [either: destroy the competition of Plaintiff or to prevent Plaintiff from becoming a competitor].

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17040, 17071.5.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a locality discrimination case against a retailer when the plaintiff relies on Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 to raise a presumption of intent. The instruction should be modified to place the burden of proof on intent on the defendant when the facts underlying the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 presumption are conceded or established.

[3] Comment

[a] Presumption Regarding Proof of Retailer's Limitation of Quantity

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 provides a presumption of intent to injure competitors or destroy competition in a case when a retailer defendant makes sales below the lesser of its invoice or replacement cost and limits the quantity sold at that price [see MB 3300A.08[3]]. This instruction may be used to address the applicability of this presumption in a locality discrimination case.

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.11

MB 3300A.11 Like Grade and Quality[1] Instruction Like Grade and Quality

A locality discrimination does not exist unless Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] at a lower price in one locality than it sold _____ [specify article or product] of like grade and quality in another. Articles or products are not required to be identical to be of like grade and quality. Articles or products are of like grade and quality if they are identical or if they do not have physical differences that would affect a buyer's decision to buy one or the other.

Authorities: Federal Trade Comm'n v. Borden Co. (1966) 383 U.S. 637, 641, 86 S.Ct. 1092, 16 L.Ed.2d 153 ; Atlanta Trading Corp. v. Federal Trade Comm'n (2d Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 365, 369 ; William Inglis & Sons v. ITT Cont'l Baking (N.D. Cal. 1978) 461 F.Supp. 410, 420 , aff'd in part, rev'd in part (9th Cir. 1981) 668 F.2d 1014 ; Unedus v. California Shoppers, Inc. (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 932, 937-938, 150 Cal.Rptr. 596 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a locality discrimination case when the defendant resists the claim of discrimination by asserting that the articles or products it sells at different prices in different localities are of a different grade or quality. For coverage of the considerations that affect a determination of comparability, see generally Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3300.

[3] Comment[a] Like Grade and Quantity

A locality discrimination may be claimed even though the seller's products are not identical in all regards. Because of the broad applicability of the Unfair Practices Act to numerous goods and services, a variety of differences between products may be alleged to make them so dissimilar that a claim of discrimination cannot be sustained. In many cases involving intangibles or real property, the uniqueness of the products will preclude a claim of discrimination. This instruction addresses the standard for similarity of tangible goods followed under the Robinson-Patman Act, and likely to be applied to Unfair Practices Act claims involving tangible goods as well [see Unedus v. California Shoppers, Inc. (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 932, 937, 150 Cal.Rptr. 596 (noting "close parallel" between Unfair Practices Act and Robinson-Patman Act and that both state and federal statutes apply to discriminatory sales of goods of like grade and quality)].

The key to the like grade and quality determination under the federal statute, which applies only to "commodities," is physical similarity. Thus, mere differences in labeling, such as that between "premium" and "private label" products do not preclude a claim of discrimination [Federal Trade Comm'n v. Borden Co. (1966) 383 U.S. 637, 86 S.Ct. 1092, 16 L.Ed.2d 153 ; William Inglis & Sons v. ITT Cont'l Baking (N.D. Cal. 1978) 461 F.Supp. 410, 421 , aff'd in part, rev'd in part (9th Cir. 1981) 668 F.2d 1014]. Similarly, insubstantial physical differences, such as merely decorative differences, do not foreclose application of the Act [Report of the Attorney General's Nat'l Comm. to Study the Antitrust Laws (1955) 158]. However, genuine physical differences that affect consumer preference for an item do render articles or products sufficiently distinct to preclude Robinson-Patman Act price discrimination claims [Atlanta Trading Corp. v. Federal Trade Comm'n (2d Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 365, 371].

Even though a defendant may not defeat a discrimination claim by relying on labeling or similar matters to establish a difference in grade or quality, those differences may be relevant to other defensive matters. For example, federal cases recognize that the consumer preference based on differential labeling may prevent a plaintiff from showing a threat to competition or damages [see Federal Trade Comm'n v. Borden Co. (1966) 383 U.S. 637, 644-645, 86 S.Ct. 1092, 16 L.Ed.2d 153].

Many of the troubling grade and quality issues that arise under federal law are not likely to be present in Unfair Practices Act cases because of the narrow scope of the locality discrimination prohibition. For example, a seller who sells both premium and private label products may be said to be "discriminating" in price if the products are physically identical. This may be significant under statutes such as the Robinson-Patman Act that prohibit discriminatory sales to different customers. However, if two items separately labeled are sold at different prices, and the price differential is the same at both or all locations, it is difficult to find a locality discrimination.

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.12

MB 3300A.12 Liability for Sales Below Cost--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of "Injurious Effect"

[1] Instruction Liability for Sales Below Cost--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of "Injurious Effect"

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable to it for unlawful sales below cost. To prove that Defendant has unlawfully sold _____ [specify article or product] below cost, Plaintiff must first prove that Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] at less than [his/her/its] cost.

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant has sold below cost, then you must consider whether Defendant acted with an unlawful purpose or intent. For purposes of Plaintiff's claim that Defendant has unlawfully sold _____ [specify article or product] below cost, unlawful purpose or intent means the purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

If in addition to proving Defendant's sale below cost, Plaintiff has also proved that Defendant's sales below cost had an injurious effect, for example by _____ [specify injurious effect (see Use of Instruction)], then Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] did not act with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. If, however, you find that Plaintiff has not proved that Defendant's sales produced an injurious effect, then it is Plaintiff who must prove that Defendant acted with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition.

[OR]

Because Defendant _____ [specify proved or admitted fact that justifies presumption of intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition, e.g., sold _____ (specify product) below cost], Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] did not act with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or to destroy competition.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043, 17071; William Inglis & Sons v. Continental Baking (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 1332, 1338 ; Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a case when the plaintiff alleges that below-cost sales have produced an injurious effect and that the presumption of intent found in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 is therefore applicable. Although the term "injurious effect" is not defined by statute, there is some case authority on the subject. In this instruction, the precise nature of the injurious effect should be described. For further discussion of "injurious effect," see MB 3300A.07[3].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Diversion of Business Constitutes Injurious Effect: The "injurious effect" can be the diversion of business from plaintiff to defendant [see MB 3300A.07[3]]. Once this is established, there is a presumption that defendant intended to destroy or damage competition. By Ronald Oster

This instruction concludes with two alternative paragraphs on the burden of proving unlawful intent. If the facts supporting the presumption of intent under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 are in dispute, counsel should use the first alternative paragraph. If the facts underlying the presumption are not disputed, counsel should use the second alternative paragraph, which places the burden on the defendant to prove that there was no unlawful intent.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Spend Time on Your Argument: This instruction will be challenging for some jurors to understand or apply. Consequently, the related closing argument should be as clear as possible. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Below-Cost Selling

This instruction applies the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 presumption of intent to a case involving an allegation of below-cost selling. The questions presented are similar to those raised by application of the presumption to claims of loss leader activity and locality discrimination, particularly in the area of what constitutes an injurious effect [see MB 3300A.07[3] (loss leader), MB 3300A.09[3] (locality discrimination)]. As is the case with a plaintiff asserting a loss leader claim under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, a plaintiff attempting to prove below-cost sales will be required to prove that the defendant sold below cost as an element of its case. Sales below cost or sales at discriminatory prices plus an injurious effect are the underlying facts necessary for the application of the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 presumption.

The California Supreme Court held that to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, a company must act with the purpose, i.e., the desire, of injuring competitors or destroying competition [Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 174-175, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 ; see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3302].

For a more complete discussion of the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 presumption of intent, see MB 3300A.07[3]. As discussed in MB 3300A.07[3], no case has expressly decided whether the presumption created by Bus. & Prof. Code §

17071 affects the burden of persuasion or affects the burden of producing evidence, although one court of appeal held that the similar presumption in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 (discussed in MB 3300A.08[3], MB 3300A.13[3]) affects the burden of persuasion [see Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517-518, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543]. This instruction is based on the assumption that the presumption under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 affects the burden of persuasion. However, as discussed in MB 3300A.07[3], if the presumption created by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 affects the burden of producing evidence, as suggested by the language of some cases [see People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 114, 153 P.2d 9 ; Western Union Fin. Servs., Inc. v. First Data Corp. (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 1530, 1540, 25 Cal.Rptr.2d 341], then this instruction would not be appropriate.

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

*5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.13MB 3300A.13 Liability for Sales Below Cost--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of Limited Sales Below Invoice or Replacement Cost

[1] Instruction Liability for Sales Below Cost--Presumption of Intent Claimed to Arise From Proof of Limited Sales Below Invoice or Replacement Cost

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable to [him/her/it] for unlawful sales below cost. To prove that Defendant has unlawfully sold _____ [specify article or product] below cost, Plaintiff must first prove that Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] at less than [his/her/its] cost.

If you do find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant engaged in sales below cost, then you must determine whether Plaintiff has proved both of the following:

- 1. That Defendant sold at a price less than [his/her/its] invoice cost or replacement cost, whichever is lower; and
- 2. That Defendant limited sales at that price, to any customer, to less than the entire quantity of the _____ [specify article or product] Defendant owned, possessed, or was otherwise authorized to sell at _____ [specify place of sale].

Unless Plaintiff has proved both that Defendant sold below invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, and that Defendant limited sales at that price, to any one customer, to less than all of the _____ [specify article or product] that [he/she/it] owned or possessed or was authorized to sell, Plaintiff must go on to prove that Defendant sold below cost with "unlawful intent." That is, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant sold below cost with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. If, however, Plaintiff has proved both that Defendant sold below invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, and that Defendant limited sales at that price, to any one customer, to less than all of the _____ [specify article or product] that [he/she/it] owned or possessed or was authorized to sell, it is Defendant who must prove that [he/she/it] did not sell with the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043, 17071.5; Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 513, 517-518, 98 Cal.Rptr. 543 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a below cost selling case when the plaintiff alleges that a retailer defendant has sold below invoice or replacement cost and has limited the quantity of its sales at the challenged price. These underlying facts give rise to the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 presumption of intent to injure competitors or destroy competition.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Spend Time on Your Argument: This instruction will be challenging for some jurors to understand or apply. Consequently, the related closing argument should be as clear as possible. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Below Cost Selling

This instruction applies the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071.5 presumption of intent to a case involving an allegation of below cost selling. The questions presented are similar to those raised by application of the presumption to claims of loss leader activity and locality discrimination [see MB 3300A.08 (loss leader), MB 3300A.10 (locality discrimination)].

The California Supreme Court held that to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, a company must act with the purpose, i.e., the desire, of injuring competitors or destroying competition [Cel-Tech Commc'ns Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 174-175, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 ; see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3302].

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.14

MB 3300A.14 Liability for Secret Rebates or Privileges[1] Instruction Liability for Secret Rebates or Privileges[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable for unlawful _____ [either: payment of secret rebates or secret extension of special services or privileges]. To prove [his/her/its] claim, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant _____ [specify, e.g. , made a secret payment or allowance of a rebate] not extended to all of those purchasing under similar terms and conditions;
- 2. That the _____ [specify, e.g., payment] had a tendency to destroy competition; and
- 3. That the _____ [specify, e.g., payment] actually injured Plaintiff.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045; ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1256, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290 ; Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 256, 271-272, 195 Cal.Rptr. 211 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to provide the standard for liability for payment of secret rebates or other violations of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045. The instruction should be used in conjunction with a general burden of proof instruction [ see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True").

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Concepts to Jury: The concept of a "rebate" or a "secret" something will be difficult for some jurors. Thus, this is another area where counsel should explain in closing argument why the practice is unlawful (i.e. the damage to competition). Otherwise, some jurors may conclude that rebates are just another way of lowering prices. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Secret Rebates

Under existing case law, conduct violative of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 must be "secret" and satisfy the other elements of § 17045 [ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1267, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290 ; Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 463, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139 ; E & H Wholesale, Inc. v. Glaser Bros. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 728, 738, 204 Cal.Rptr. 838 ; G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 256, 271-72, 195 Cal.Rptr. 211 ; see Eddins v. Redstone (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 290, 331-336, 35 Cal.Rptr.3d 863 ("like terms and conditions" clause and secrecy element)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 also prohibits buyers from receiving special privileges just as it forbids sellers from granting them [G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 256, 271-72, 195 Cal.Rptr. 211 ; see Diesel Elec. Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Marco Marine San Diego, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 202, 211-212, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 62 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 applies to competitive buyer who receives volume discount to which it is not entitled)]. Therefore, in an appropriate case the instruction should be modified to reflect a claim of receipt instead of payment of secret rebates or other payments.

The purpose of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 is to prevent a manufacturer or other supplier from discriminating among its customers [ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1267, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290 ; Kunert v. Mission Fin. Servs. Corp. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 242, 260, 1 Cal.Rptr.3d 589]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 addresses secret payments from a seller to a purchaser. It therefore was not applicable to a lender's payment to a dealer of a "dealer reserve" on automobile conditional sales contracts (a purportedly secret payment that flowed from purchasers (lenders) to sellers (dealers)) [Kunert v. Mission Fin. Servs. Corp. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 242, 259-260, 1 Cal.Rptr.3d 589].

The protection of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 extends to competition in the secondary line of commerce as well as in the primary line. In other words, the destruction of "competition" referred to in the statute includes both competition among sellers of the particular good or service and economic competition among buyers [ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1268, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290 ; see American Booksellers Ass'n, Inc. v. Barnes & Noble, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2001) 135 F.Supp.2d 1031, 1043 (defendants entitled to summary judgment because no injury to competitor shown); Eddins v. Redstone (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 290, 339, 35 Cal.Rptr.3d 863 (whether secret rebate or discount has tendency to destroy competition is factual question that cannot be decided without regard to evidence of harm to competition in secondary line of commerce)]. In ABC International Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita, after examining the language, context, purposes, and history of § 17045, the California Supreme Court concluded that a disfavored buyer adequately pled a cause of action against a seller for violation of § 17045. The buyer alleged that the seller's secret discrimination through an allegedly unearned, secret 5 percent discount to two other buyers injured the buyer and tended to destroy competition among buyers [ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1254-1268, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290]. For purposes of § 17045, the Unfair Practices Act's price discrimination provision, competition is competition, whether among retailers, wholesalers, or producers [ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1247, 1262, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 112, 931 P.2d 290].

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

1. Definitional and Burden of Proof Instructions

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.15

MB 3300A.15 Liability for Effecting Violation of the Unfair Practices Act Through Threats, Intimidation, or Boycotts
[1] Instruction

Plaintiff claims that Defendant is liable for unlawful _____ [specify e.g., boycotts] with the intent to carry out unlawful _____ [specify type of violation]. To prove that Defendant is liable for unlawful _____ [specify, e.g., boycotts], Plaintiff must prove that Defendant engaged in a _____ [specify, e.g., boycott] and that Defendant did so for the purpose of carrying out unlawful _____ [specify type of violation].

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17046; Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great W. Fin. Corp. (1968) 69 Cal.2d 305, 324-325, 70 Cal.Rptr. 849, 444 P.2d 481 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the standard of liability in the rare case when damages are sought for threats, intimidations, or boycotts used "to effectuate a violation of" the Unfair Practices Act. The instruction should be used with a general burden of proof instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

[3] Comment

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17046 is a statute designed to impose liability on those who would assist or collude in violations of the Unfair Practices Act through boycotts or threatening conduct. However, damage liability under Bus. & Prof.

Code § 17046 should be rare. Threatening conduct or boycotting is prohibited by the statute only when it is undertaken to effectuate a violation of the Unfair Practices Act [Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great W. Fin. Corp. (1968) 69 Cal.2d 305, 324-25, 70 Cal.Rptr. 849, 444 P.2d 481 (boycott)]. Although it may be expected that the occurrence of activities of this type designed to effectuate statutory violations of the Act will not be uncommon, the class of cases in which threats, intimidations, or boycotts designed to effectuate Unfair Practices Act violations would cause damage seems not to be large. In most situations, any injury that would occur would be the product of the underlying violation, rather than the threat or intimidation designed to make it possible. When that is the case, liability may still be imposed on one who aids a violation of the Act under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17048.

However, it is less difficult to imagine boycotts designed to effectuate violations of the Unfair Practices Act that would cause damage independent of the damage caused by the violation. In many boycott situations, however, a plaintiff will choose to rely on the Cartwright Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.] or Sherman Act [15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq.] prohibitions on certain types of boycotts [see Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 Cal.3d 920, 930-937, 130 Cal.Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when co-conspirator liability is asserted against a person or entity other than a director, officer, or agent of the defendant alleged to have violated the Unfair Practices Act. The instruction should be used with a general burden of proof instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip --Using MB 3300A . 16: This instruction applies to third parties who are not officers, directors, or agents of the primary defendant. In addition, the term "participated" is better than the term "colluded," which could be confusing. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Spend Time on Your Closing: "Secret rebates" and "collusive practices" are challenging to explain. Thus, the closing argument must carefully address the related facts. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17048 contains no express intent requirement, and there are no cases directly holding what intent must be shown to render a "participant" or "colluder" liable. However, in Harris v. Capitol Records Distributing Corp., the California Supreme Court stated that more than proof that the defendant "had reason to know" of another's unlawful plans is needed. Instead, the defendant "must share a common purpose" with the other [Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 462, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139]. This language could be read to require proof that the allegedly colluding party acted with the intent necessary to prove a violation of the Unfair Practices Act of the type in question.

An intent requirement would mean, however, that the statutory standard for liability would be more restrictive than the generally applicable standard for co-conspirator liability. Under that standard all "who concurred in the tortious scheme with knowledge of its unlawful purpose" are liable [Wyatt v. Union Mortgage Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 773, 784, 157 Cal.Rptr. 392, 598 P.2d 45]. Given the purposes of the Unfair Practices Act, and the statutory requirement of liberal interpretation [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17002], it seems appropriate that the standard for co-conspirator liability be no more restrictive. It therefore seems most likely that the courts will require that a co-conspirator have knowledge of the primary actor's unlawful purpose and expressly or tacitly join in the scheme involving a violation of the Unfair Practices Act.

Defendant claims as one of its defenses to Plaintiff's claim of unlawful _____ [specify, e.g., below cost sales] that it is not liable because its sale was a _____ [specify, e.g., close out sale or sale of seasonal goods or sale to prevent loss by spoilage or sale of damaged goods]. To prove this defense, Defendant must prove:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

That the _____ [specify, e.g., below cost sale] was made by Defendant in closing out its stock of _____ [specify article or product] in good faith for the purpose of discontinuing its business in that item.

[OR]

That the _____ [specify, e.g., sale below cost] was made to prevent a loss because of a change in the season for _____ [specify article or product].

That the _____ [specify, e.g., sale below cost] was made to prevent loss by spoilage of _____ [specify article or product].

[OR]

That the _____ [specify articles or products] that Defendant _____ [sold or gave away] were damaged or deteriorated.

In addition, Defendant must also prove:

1. That notice of the fact that the sale was a _____ [close out sale or sale of seasonal goods or sale of perishable goods or sale of damaged goods] was given to the public, and the _____ [specify articles or products] were kept separate from Defendant's other _____ [specify e.g., stock] and were clearly and legibly marked with the reason for the sale; and

2. If Defendant advertised the _____ [specify, e.g., close out sale], that Defendant's advertisements stated the reason for the sale and the number of items to be sold.

Authority: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on the defendant's burden of proof on the various defenses for sales of close outs, seasonal goods, perishable goods, and damaged goods under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050.

[3] Comment

[a] Defenses for Close-Out Sales, and Sales of Seasonal or Damaged Goods

This instruction provides the standards for defenses to the locality discrimination, sales below cost, and loss leader prohibitions of the Unfair Practices Act for close out sales, and sales of seasonable, perishable, or damaged goods. The defenses will often be closely related to the defendant's efforts to negate plaintiff's claim that the defendant acted with the intent required to show a violation of the Unfair Practices Act. It is unlikely that a close out sale, for example, would be made "to injure competitors or destroy competition." Evidence that goods were sold to close out stock would generally negate the existence of an intent to harm competitors or competition and thus preclude establishment of the plaintiff's case.

There is thus a possibility of confusion from the assertion of these defenses. The plaintiff has the burden of proving that the defendant acted with the proscribed intent, while the defendant has the burden of proving its entitlement to one or more of the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050 defenses. Often, the plaintiff will be able to shift the burden to the defendant through one or both of the statutory presumptions of intent [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17070, 17071.5]. However, when no presumption is available, the parties will have conflicting burdens of proof (the plaintiff to show wrongful intent, the defendant to show entitlement to a defense) on matters often controlled by the same evidence. Counsel, particularly defense counsel, should therefore take care in presenting and arguing their cases to avoid confusion on the burden of proof.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defenses: If plaintiff can establish that sales were made "below cost," then defendant will have to rely on one of these defenses, or the "meeting competition" defense [see MB 3300A.31]. Note the requirement in the above instruction that the goods in question be separated and identified. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions

PART A. UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT

2. Defenses

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.31

MB 3300A.31 Defense of Meeting Competition[1] Instruction

Defendant claims as one of its defenses that it is not liable for _____ [specify, e.g., sales below cost] because its actions were intended in good faith to meet prices offered by _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)]. This defense is known as the meeting competition defense.

To prove this defense, Defendant must prove that [his/her/its] _____ [specify, e.g., sale] was made in a good faith attempt to meet, but not beat, the lawful price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)] in the same area for articles that were the same or similar or comparable, and that were sold in the ordinary channels of trade.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d),(e); Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 446, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174 ; United States v. United States Gypsum Co. (1978) 438 U.S. 422, 453-454, 98 S.Ct. 2864, 57 L.Ed.2d 854 ; Standard Oil Co. v. Federal Trade Comm'n (1951) 340 U.S. 231, 241-243, 71 S.Ct. 240, 95 L.Ed. 239 ; People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 114, 153 P.2d 9 ; E & H Wholesale, Inc. v. Glaser Bros. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 728, 736-739, 204 Cal.Rptr. 838 ; Northern Cal. Food Dealers, Inc. v. Farmers Mkt. of N. Cal., Inc., 1956 Tr. Cas. § 68,402 (Super. Ct., Sacramento County 1956).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the meeting competition defense available to a seller who acts in good faith to meet the equally low price of a competitor. It must be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 3300A.32, which defines "good faith."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution! "Competition" often means different things to different jurors. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Nature of Competitor's Products

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d) provides a meeting competition defense to a seller who attempts in good faith to meet the price of a competitor who sells the "same" article or product see also [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 (meeting competition exception to locality discrimination stating "Nothing in this section prohibits the meeting in good faith of a competitive price")]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(e) also provides a meeting competition defense to certain defendants when the "same or a similar or comparable" article or product is sold by a competitor. In Northern California Food Dealers, Inc. v. Farmers Market of Northern California, Inc., the court resolved the anomalous difference in the statutory language by interpreting the word "same" in § 17050(d) in a broad fashion that includes "similar" or "comparable." As the court noted, a limitation of the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d) defense to cases in which the defendant sought to meet a price offered for the identical brand it sold would render the defense useless in a circumstance when it would commonly be important, i.e., when the seller, particularly a small retailer competing with large chain sellers of private label products, sought to meet prices offered by competitors for brands that were competitive with its brands [Northern Cal. Food Dealers, Inc. v. Farmers Mkt. of N. Cal., Inc., 1956 Tr. Cas. § 68,402, 71,726-27 (Super. Ct., Sacramento County 1956)]. The court declined to conclude that the Legislature intended so to limit the defense. The appellate courts have not addressed the difference in the statutory language.

The question presented by the comparison of the defendant's products with those of its competitors is different from the comparison of the defendant's own products in the context of locality discrimination [see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3300]. As indicated by the reference in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(e) to "similar" or "comparable" products, the standard for inter-seller product comparison is less rigorous [see, e.g., Callaway Mills Co. v. Federal Trade Comm'n (5th Cir. 1966) 362 F.2d 435, 440-441]. Thus, a defendant seeking to rely on the meeting competition defense need not prove that its products are physically identical to those of the competitors whose prices are met. It is sufficient that the competitors' products and the defendant's products are in a competitive relationship.

[b] "Meet Not Beat" and Lawful Price Limitations on Defense

Federal cases interpreting the meeting competition defense afforded by § 2(b) of the Robinson-Patman Act [15 U.S.C.S. § 13(b)] should be helpful in interpreting the similar defenses provided by the Unfair Practices Act. For example, both federal and California cases seem to agree, in accordance with similar statutory language, that a seller is allowed to "meet not beat" competitive prices [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 446, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174 ; United States v. United States Gypsum Co. (1978) 438 U.S. 422, 454, 98 S.Ct. 2864, 57 L.Ed.2d 854 ; E & H Wholesale, Inc. v. Glaser Bros. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 728, 738-739, 204 Cal.Rptr. 838]. The state and federal statutes also similarly provide a defense only when the price to be met is a "lawful" price [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d); Standard Oil Co. v. Federal Trade Comm'n (1951) 340 U.S. 231, 246, 71 S.Ct. 240, 95 L.Ed. 239]. However, a seller is not held to an absolute standard on either of these subjects [see [d], below, and MB 3300A.33[3]].

Although the Unfair Practices Act closely parallels the Robinson-Patman Act, and is based on the same policy considerations, it is not the same. Because the Unfair Practices Act is not a clone of the Robinson-Patman Act, courts cannot apply a "meeting competition" defense that does not exist under the Unfair Practices Act merely because the Robinson-Patman Act provides that defense [see Eddins v. Redstone (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 290, 340-341, 35 Cal.Rptr.3d 863].

There is no "meeting competition" defense to a Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 violation (secret rebates and privileges) [

Eddins v. Redstone (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 290, 339, 35 Cal.Rptr.3d 863 ; see also Diesel Elec. Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Marco Marine San Diego, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 202, 218, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 62 ; see generally MB 3300A.14]. However, the meeting of a competitor's pricing may disprove the existence of one of the elements of a § 17045 violation--that is, the element of a tendency to destroy competition may not exist if there is merely a legitimate meeting of a competitor's pricing [see Eddins v. Redstone (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 290, 339, 35 Cal.Rptr.3d 863 ; see also Diesel Elec. Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Marco Marine San Diego, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 202, 218, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 62 ; see generally MB 3300A.14].

[c] Gaining New Business and Multiple Customer Pricing

One dispute resolved by the United States Supreme Court under federal law will also probably be resolved in the same manner under the Unfair Practices Act. Before the Supreme Court's decision in Falls City Industries v. Vanco Beverage [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174], there was some disagreement as to whether the meeting competition defense was available to a seller who sought to gain new business, rather than to retain existing customers. Falls City held that the defense is available in either situation [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 446, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174].

Another important question resolved in Falls City involved a dispute over whether the defense is limited to prices offered to specific customers to whom competitive offers have been made, or whether a seller may take advantage of the defense to justify more general, e.g., state-wide, pricing. The Supreme Court held that a seller may invoke the defense even if its competitive pricing is not customer specific, so long as the pricing it adopts is "a genuine, reasonable response to prevailing competitive circumstances," and otherwise satisfies the statutory requirements for the defense [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 450-451, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174]. In other words, if a reasonable person in the seller's position would believe that a price offered by a competitor to one customer or group of customers was generally available to all buyers in a given area or to other groups of customers, it may adjust its prices accordingly. However, across the board pricing not justified by the reasonably perceived scope of the competitor's offer will not satisfy the good faith test [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 450-451, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174 ; see also William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Continental Baking Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 668 F.2d 1014, 1045-1046]. The case for the Falls City interpretation may be even stronger under the Unfair Practices Act, in light of a slight variation in the statutory language. The Robinson-Patman Act defense is available to meet "an equally low price of a competitor" [15 U.S.C.S. § 13(b)], while the Unfair Practices Act authorizes the good faith meeting of "the legal prices of a competitor" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d)].

[d] Good Faith

An additional important feature of the federal defense is also applicable under the Unfair Practices Act. The Robinson-Patman Act defense is available when the seller makes a discriminatory sale "in good faith to meet" a competitive offering [15 U.S.C.S. § 13(b)]. Similarly, the Unfair Practices Act allows "an endeavor made in good faith to meet" a competitor's price [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d)]. The United States Supreme Court made clear that the good faith language does not require that a seller be absolutely certain that a competitor has offered the price to be met, or that its price will not actually beat the competitor's price [United States v. United States Gypsum Co. (1978) 438 U.S. 422, 453-454, 98 S.Ct. 2864, 57 L.Ed.2d 854]. The seller must act on the basis of facts that would lead a reasonable person to believe that the challenged price would meet a competitor's price, and must act for the purpose of meeting that price [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 451, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174]. If these requirements are met, the seller has a defense even if it actually exceeds a competitor's price. The California courts appear to follow this same approach [People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 117, 153 P.2d 9].

The meeting competition defense may lead to confusion of the type that may result from assertion of the close-out sale defense. Again, the evidence showing that the seller was attempting to meet a competitive price may also negate the existence of an unlawful intent. When the statutory presumptions of intent are not available, the parties will have conflicting burdens of proof (the plaintiff to show wrongful intent, the defendant to show entitlement to a defense) on matters often controlled by the same evidence. Counsel, particularly defense counsel, should therefore take care in presenting and arguing their cases to avoid confusion on the burden of proof.

[e] Meeting Competition by Manufacturers

No cases have interpreted the separately stated meeting competition defense provided by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(e). Section 17050(e) provides a defense to a "manufacturer, selling an article or product of his own manufacture" for sales to wholesalers or retailers for resale. A manufacturer, like any seller, would be entitled to the meeting competition defense under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d) if it was competing with another manufacturer or seller for sales to the same customers. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(e) is thus apparently intended to make it clear that a manufacturer may meet competition in the form of low prices offered by another manufacturer to its dealers even if the manufacturer does not compete for sales to those dealers compare [Federal Trade Comm'n v. Sun Oil Co. (1963) 371 U.S. 505, 83 S.Ct. 358, 9 L.Ed.2d 466 ; with Bargain Car Wash, Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (Ind.) (7th Cir. 1972) 466 F.2d 1163].

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.32

MB 3300A.32 Definition of Good Faith

[1] Instruction Definition of Good Faith

To prove the meeting competition defense, Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] acted in good faith in attempting to meet the lawful price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)]. In determining whether Defendant has acted in good faith, you must consider all of the facts and circumstances present. Among the facts and circumstances you may consider are the nature of the information on which Defendant relied, the source of the information, the Defendant's prior experience, if any, with similar information or with the person who provided the information, and the Defendant's business experience.

To prove that it acted in good faith, Defendant must prove that it believed that the price(s) that [he/she/it] offered would meet, but not beat, the price(s) of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)], that Defendant formed this belief on the basis of facts that would lead a reasonable and prudent person to believe that the price would meet, but not beat, the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)], and that Defendant acted for the purpose of meeting that price.

Defendant is not required to prove that [his/her/its] price actually met, but did not beat the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)]. If Defendant proves that [he/she/it] believed that Defendant's price would meet, but not beat, the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)], that Defendant formed this belief on the basis of facts that would lead a reasonable and prudent person to believe that the price would meet, but not beat, the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)], and that Defendant acted for the purpose of meeting that price, then Defendant has proved the meeting competition defense even if Defendant's price was actually lower than that of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)].

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d),(e); United States v. United States Gypsum Co. (1978) 438 U.S. 422, 453-454, 98 S.Ct. 2864, 57 L.Ed.2d 854 ; People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 117, 153 P.2d 9 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to provide the definition of "good faith" when a defendant relies on the meeting competition defense. The instruction may be modified to address the additional issues that may arise when the lawfulness of the price the defendant sought to meet is questioned [see MB 3300A.33[3]].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defining Good Faith: "Good Faith" is a concept that, to many jurors, means one thing in "real life" but maybe something different in a legal sense. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Establishing Good Faith: This instruction utilizes both a subjective and objective test for establishing "good faith." Defendant must prove (1) that defendant actually believed that defendant's price was necessary to meet competition, and (2) that a reasonable and prudent person would objectively reach the same conclusion. If defendant fails to prove either element, the defense fails. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

As noted in MB 3300A.31[3][d], good faith and not absolute certainty is the standard a seller must meet in establishing the meeting competition defense [United States v. United States Gypsum Co. (1978) 438 U.S. 422, 453, 98 S.Ct. 2864, 57 L.Ed.2d 854 ; People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 117, 153 P.2d 9]. This instruction explains that all of the circumstances that would be relevant to a seller in the place of the defendant must be considered in the good faith determination.

MB 3300A.33 Lawful Price[1] Instruction Lawful Price

Defendant is not required to prove that the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)] was actually a lawful price. If Defendant proves that [he/she/it] believed the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)] was lawful, that Defendant formed this belief on the basis of facts that would lead a reasonable and prudent person to believe that the price was lawful, and that Defendant acted for the purpose of meeting that price, and Defendant proves the other elements of the meeting competition defense, then Defendant has proved the defense even if the price of _____ [name(s) of competitor(s)] was unlawful.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d),(e); Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 442, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174 ; *Cadigan v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims that the price the defendant attempted to meet was itself unlawful. The instruction is unnecessary, and should not be given, when no such claim is made.

When the competitor's price is claimed to be unlawful, the instruction in MB 3300A.32 may also be modified to reflect the additional factors, such as the defendant's knowledge of industry costs, that may be relevant in determining the good faith of a belief that a competitor's price was lawful.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explaining "Lawful Price": Most jurors understand the meaning of "price." But "lawful price" may need to be explained more thoroughly. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Establishing Lawful Price: As with the instruction in MB 3300A.32 (regarding establishing "good faith"), the test set forth in this instruction again uses a subjective and objective test: (1) defendant must prove that the defendant subjectively believed the price was lawful, and (2) defendant must prove that a reasonable and prudent person would objectively come to the same conclusion. Both elements of the test must be satisfied or the defense fails. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17050(d) and (e) allow a seller to justify the meeting of competitors' prices only when the prices met are lawful. Consistent with the general good faith standard of the Unfair Practices Act, a defendant is not required to prove that its competitor's price was lawful or that it was absolutely certain of the lawfulness of the competitor's price [see People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 117, 153 P.2d 9].

The Robinson-Patman Act meeting competition defense is not expressly limited to lawful prices, but has been interpreted to be so limited. When the plaintiff claims that the competitive price the defendant attempted to meet is unlawful, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that this is the case [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 442 n. 9, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174]. The leading case cited with approval lower federal courts that had required a plaintiff either to prove that the defendant knew the competitive price was unlawful, or that the price was "inherently unlawful" [Falls City Indus. v. Vanco Beverage (1983) 460 U.S. 428, 442 n. 9, 103 S.Ct. 1282, 75 L.Ed.2d 174 ; see also Cadigan v. Texaco, Inc. (9th Cir. 1974) 492 F.2d 383, 387 ; National Dairy Prods. Corp. v. Federal Trade Comm'n (7th Cir. 1968) 395 F.2d 517, 524]. The defendant's knowledge of the illegality of the competitive price would obviously preclude a good faith belief that it was lawful. The "inherent unlawfulness" concept, apparently based on such things as known industry cost structures, can be addressed by a reference in the instruction to the factors alleged to establish inherent unlawfulness. Both of these types of issues may be addressed under the general good faith standard.

One California case appears to have required the defendant at least to come forward with evidence that the competitive price was lawful [People v. Gordon (1951) 105 Cal.App.2d 711, 724, 234 P.2d 287]. In that case, however, the defendant claimed only to be meeting actual, not lawful, competitive prices, in disregard of the express statutory lawfulness requirement. Because the defendant intentionally ignored the statutory language, the court found an absence of good faith. Regardless of whether the defendant has any burden, the general recognition that only good faith and not absolute certainty is required of one seeking to invoke the meeting competition defense will preclude any absolute requirement of legality [see, e.g., People v. Pay Less Drug Store (1944) 25 Cal.2d 108, 117, 153 P.2d 9] .

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.34

MB 3300A.34 Cost Justification Defense to Locality Discrimination[1] Instruction

Defendant claims as one defense that [he/she/it] is not liable for locality discrimination because the differences in Defendant's prices were based on differences in costs. This defense is known as the cost justification defense. To prove this defense, Defendant must prove that any difference between the price at which Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product] in _____ [location at which Plaintiff competes, or would compete, with Defendant] and the price at which Defendant sold _____ [specify article or product or an article or product of like grade and quality] in another location was based on a difference in Defendant's cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery, or a difference in the actual cost of transportation from the _____ [point of production or manufacture or shipment] to the point of destination.

Authority: Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to provide the standard for the cost justification defense to the locality discrimination prohibition of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Spend Time on Your Closing: "Cost of doing business" in the sense of this instruction will often require a carefully framed closing argument. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Cost Justification and Locality Discrimination

The Unfair Practices Act prohibition of locality discrimination addresses discrimination between different localities, rather than between different purchasers, and does not apply unless a seller has more than a single sales outlet [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040; Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 460, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139]. However, the cost justification defense found in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041 appears to be derived from the Robinson-Patman Act defense for discriminatory sales to different buyers. The Robinson-Patman Act provides a defense for discriminations in sales to different purchasers that are justified by differences "in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which [products] are to such purchasers sold or delivered" [15 U.S.C.S. § 13(a)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041 provides a cost justification defense for locality discriminations in similar language, but without a reference to individual buyers. Thus, a seller may justify a difference between prices charged in one locality than another by relying on differences "in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery, or the actual cost of transportation from the point of production, if a raw product or commodity, or from the point of manufacture if a manufactured product or commodity, or from the point of shipment to the point of destination" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041].

Sellers with the multiple sales outlets necessary to trigger application of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 [Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 460, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139], but a central manufacturing or warehouse facility, may justify lower prices in localities closer to the centralized operations through differences in delivery or transportation costs between the local and more remote sales outlets. Similarly, sales made by a manufacturer with multiple production locations may be made at lower prices at sales outlets serviced by plants with lower costs. In these cases, the cost justification defense will mirror the prohibition of locality discrimination.

In other situations, however, the defense will focus more specifically on the costs associated with dealing with a particular buyer or group of buyers. As discussed below, a claim of locality discrimination that is actually based on a claim of discrimination among buyers will often fail. When a locality discrimination claim that is based on favored treatment offered a particular buyer or buyers can overcome the initial hurdle of satisfying the statutory requirement of geographically-based discrimination, the seller should be allowed to defend on the basis of the reduced costs associated with sales to particular buyers. Thus, if a locality discrimination is based on favorable treatment of some buyers and not across the board geographic discrimination, the seller should be allowed to prove that the sales to these buyers are less costly.

[b] Quantity Differences

The role of another of the factors identified in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041, quantity differences, has not been established by the courts. Quantity is listed in § 17041 along with grade and quality which appear not to be matters requiring cost justification. The situation is likely different with regard to quantity differences.

Questions regarding price differences based on quantity differences are most likely to be raised when sellers offer quantity discounts for larger volume purchasers or purchases. When a buyer receives a volume discount, it may be said that there is a discrimination, i.e., difference, between the price the buyer pays and what others who do not buy in the same quantity pay. Under the Robinson-Patman Act, quantity discounts that are not "functionally" available to all buyers may be actionable [see Federal Trade Comm'n v. Morton Salt Co. (1948) 334 U.S. 37, 68 S.Ct. 822, 92 L.Ed. 1196]. It is difficult to identify a locality discrimination in a volume discount arrangement. If a particular buyer purchases from a seller at both or all of the seller's sales outlets, there is no locality discrimination if the same discount schedule is applied at each location. If different discount schedules are used in different localities, the situation would be different. However, when the same pricing schedule is used, the favorable treatment afforded larger volume buyers does not create a discrimination between or among different localities. The "functional" discrimination recognized under the Robinson-Patman Act when a discount rate is not practically available to all buyers could not be used to create a violation because the Unfair Practices Act is not concerned with discrimination among buyers. Moreover, those in a position to be injured by discrimination created by volume discounts, competitors of the large volume buyer, have no standing under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 [see Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 460, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139].

Even when large volume purchasers do not buy at all of the seller's outlets, no locality discrimination is present so long as the same discount schedule is applied at each location. In this case, too, there would at most be a functional discrimination among buyers, but Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 does not apply in the absence of locality discrimination [Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal.2d 454, 460, 50 Cal.Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139].

In some cases, such as that of a seller who offered lower prices in an area where its total sales volume exceeded its volumes in other areas, the concept of locality discrimination based on quantity might be applicable. It does not seem likely that a seller would be allowed to justify differential pricing in different localities simply by showing greater volume in the locality in which the lower price is offered. The federal courts require "discriminatory," i.e., not functionally available, quantity differences to be cost justified, and it is likely that the California courts would follow the same approach [see Federal Trade Comm'n v. Morton Salt Co. (1948) 334 U.S. 37, 68 S.Ct. 822, 92 L.Ed. 1196].

Although a seller asserting a cost justification defense is allowed to rely only on actual differences in costs associated with sales to a particular buyer or buyers, federal cases allow sellers to base cost justification claims on representative cost sampling or cost averaging over a group of buyers if the sampling is "truly representative" of the overall costs [see United States v. Borden Co. (1962) 370 U.S. 460, 467, 82 S.Ct. 1309, 8 L.Ed.2d 627]. No cases have addressed the applicability of a similar concept to claims of locality discrimination, but it appears that the cost averaging technique might be useful in measuring differences in a seller's costs of selling at different locations.

When you consider Defendant's costs, you are to determine the cost to Defendant of making the sale of _____ [specify article or product]. Costs of doing business that are not part of the cost of making the sale are not to be considered, but all costs of doing business that are part of the cost of making the sale must be allocated to the sale to the extent that they fairly represent part of the cost of making the sale.

Authorities: Tri-Q, Inc. v. Sta-Hi Corp. (1965) 63 Cal.2d 199, 207-208, 45 Cal.Rptr. 878, 404 P.2d 486 ; Johnson v. Farmer (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 874, 882-883, 107 P.2d 959 ; People v. Kahn (1936) 19 Cal.App.2d Supp. 758, 765-766, 60 P.2d 596 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction on the definition of cost in Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3303, to provide guidance to the jury on the nature of the cost determination process.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Costs: Expert testimony will be required in most cases to determine "costs." The expert's testimony should track the language in the instruction to the extent possible. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment[a] Determination of Cost

The Unfair Practices Act provides a broadly-inclusive definition of "cost" [see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, CACI No. 3303]. The requirement that all of a seller's costs be considered does not call for a simple determination of total average cost in all cases. When a seller sells different products or otherwise has distinct operations, division of total cost by units sold will not provide a fair determination of costs. Allocation of cost to particular transactions or to particular segments of the seller's business in accordance with normal accounting practice will be necessary in many cases [see, e.g., Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 811, 819-822, 268 Cal.Rptr. 856]. However, in one case, the California Supreme Court held that when the defendants had no accurate idea of costs of production based on extended experience in manufacture, testimony that the defendant intended to sell at a profit by following its customary method of price-setting was sufficient to show not only that it was not selling below cost but also that it did not have the requisite intent to injure competition [Tri-Q, Inc. v. Sta-Hi Corp. (1965) 63 Cal.2d 199, 207-208, 45 Cal.Rptr. 878, 404 P.2d 486].

The few cases that have addressed the subject of measuring cost recognize that allocation of the portion of the seller's costs attributable to the challenged conduct will be required. The cases establish that an article or product must bear only "its share" of overhead and thus allow either party to present any reasonable case for allocation or nonallocation of particular costs to the matters in issue [see Johnson v. Farmer (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 874, 880-881, 107 P.2d 959 ; People v. Kahn (1936) 19 Cal.App.2d Supp. 758, 765-766, 60 P.2d 596]. The plaintiff, as part of its burden of proving that the defendant sold below cost, bears the burden of proving the defendant's cost [Johnson v. Farmer (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 874, 880, 107 P.2d 959], although the Unfair Practices Act contains certain procedural provisions that may lessen the difficult task of proving cost [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17026 (6 percent markup on invoice or replacement cost, whichever is less, as prima facie proof of distributor's cost in absence of other proof), 17072 (admissibility of industry cost surveys), 17073 (proof of average total cost for particular inventory period as "presumptive evidence" of cost)].

The determination of what costs and revenues are to be considered depends on a proper definition of the relevant "product" (see MB 3300A.06). In one case, a court of appeal permitted the defendant, denying a charge that it sold money transfer services below cost, to show simply that it made a profit on its total sales of that type of service, including transfers made to both domestic and foreign destinations. The plaintiff had alleged that the defendant's promotional sales price for money transfer services for domestic transfers of less than $300 was below cost. On appeal the plaintiff contended that the trial court erred in considering the revenues and costs for the defendant's entire money transfer operation instead of limiting itself to a consideration of domestic money transfers. The court of appeal concluded that the trial court properly classified all money transfers as one "product" and that the defendant was not required to allocate its costs according to some artificial subproduct standard dictated by its competitor [see Western Union Fin. Servs., Inc. v. First Data Corp. (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 1530, 1536-1538, 25 Cal.Rptr.2d 341].

3. Damages

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.50

MB 3300A.50 Fact of Damage[1] Instruction Fact of Damage

Plaintiff claims that as a result of Defendant's _____ [specify, e.g., loss leader sales], [he/she/it] suffered damages. If you find that Plaintiff has proved [his/her/its] claim, and if you further find that Defendant has failed to prove _____ [specify defense or absence of intent], then you must consider whether Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages.

Plaintiff is required to prove two additional elements to recover damages. Plaintiff must first prove, with reasonable certainty, that Defendant's _____ [specify, e.g., sale of loss leaders] was the cause of some damage to [him/her/it]. Next, Plaintiff must also prove the amount of the damages.

Authorities: Suburban Mobile Homes, Inc. v. AMFAC Cmtys., Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 545, 161 Cal.Rptr. 811 ; Page v. Bakersfield Unif. & Towel Supply Co. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 762, 774, 49 Cal.Rptr. 46 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to provide the standard for proof of the fact of damage. It must be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 3300A.51 on proof of the amount of damage. In some cases, such as a locality discrimination case involving one who "intends and attempts in good faith to become" a competitor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041], additional fact-of-damage instructions will be required to reflect the additional facts the plaintiff will be required to prove.

Since this instruction requires the jury to determine that the plaintiff's harm was "caused" by the defendant's conduct, an instruction defining proximate cause as "substantial factor" must also be used with this instruction [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")].

[3] Comment

There are few cases decided under the Unfair Practices Act on the subject of damages. Numerous federal antitrust cases discuss damages, however, and California cases decided under the Cartwright Act generally follow the federal cases [see Suburban Mobile Homes, Inc. v. AMFAC Cmtys., Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 545, 161 Cal.Rptr. 811]. Both the California cases in the antitrust and other areas and the federal antitrust cases call for different standards in assessing the fact and the amount of damage [see Page v. Bakersfield Unif. & Towel Supply Co. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 762, 773-774, 49 Cal.Rptr. 46 (Unfair Practices Act)]. The cases recognize that a plaintiff will not be held to as demanding a standard in proving the amount of damages as proving the fact of damage [see MB 3300A.51[3]].

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that [he/she/it] was damaged, then you must consider the amount of the damages, if any, that Plaintiff may recover. Plaintiff is entitled to recover only those damages that Plaintiff proves were caused by Defendant's [specify, e.g., sale of loss leaders] and Plaintiff is required to prove the amount of any damages. Damages may not be recovered on the basis of speculation or guesswork. On the other hand, plaintiff is not required to prove the amount of damages with absolute precision. Damages for which there is a reasonable basis of computation may be recovered, even if the damages awarded are an approximation of the actual damage suffered.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 3300A.50 on the fact of damage to provide the standard for determining the amount of damage.

[3] Comment

California cases, in the antitrust and other areas, following a series of United States Supreme Court decisions under the federal antitrust laws, do not require that a plaintiff prove the amount of damages with exactness. If the damages are not based on speculation, and the theories and assumptions on which a damage case is based are supported by the evidence, an award in an approximate amount is appropriate [Suburban Mobile Homes, Inc. v. AMFAC Cmtys., Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 545, 161 Cal.Rptr. 811 ; Page v. Bakersfield Unif. & Towel Supply Co. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 762, 774, 49 Cal.Rptr. 46]. There must be a reasonable basis of computation for the damages, but precision is not required [Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research (1969) 395 U.S. 100, 123-125, 89 S.Ct. 1562, 23 L.Ed.2d 129 ; Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc. (1946) 327 U.S. 251, 264-265, 66 S.Ct. 574, 90 L.Ed. 652 ; Story Parchment Co. v. Southern Photo Materials Co. (1926) 273 U.S. 359, 378-379, 47 S.Ct. 400, 71 L.Ed. 684].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Calculating Damages: This is an important instruction for the plaintiff because damage calculations are frequently based on estimates and assumptions. Plaintiff should emphasize that the law does not require "absolute precision" and that an "approximation" is all that is required. By Ronald Oster

PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.60

MB 3300A.60 Elements of Plaintiff's Cause of Action for Trademark Infringement

[1] Instruction

In this case, Plaintiff seeks to recover damages from Defendant for Defendant's use of _____ [describe word(s) or symbol(s) comprising the mark or name] on or in connection with _____ [describe goods, services, or business bearing or using the mark or name]. Plaintiff claims that this is an infringement of Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name], _____ [describe word(s) or symbol(s) comprising the mark], which [he/she/it] uses on or in connection with _____ [describe goods, services, or business bearing or using the mark or name].

To prove an infringement, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [his/her/its] _____ [describe mark or name] is a protectable [trademark/service mark/trade name];
- 2. That Plaintiff used [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name] before the time that Defendant began use of [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name]; and
- 3. That use of Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name] and Defendant's [trademark/service mark/trade name] at the same time is likely to confuse the public.

Plaintiff must prove each of these elements by a preponderance of the evidence. I will now discuss each of these elements.

Authority: Cowles Magazines & Broad., Inc. v. Elysium, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 731, 733, 63 Cal.Rptr. 507 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introduction to the trademark infringement case or cause of action. It sets forth the plaintiff's burden of proof and a general description of the elements the plaintiff must prove. The instructions in MB 3300A.61-MB 3300A.67 discuss each of the elements in greater detail.

Throughout these instructions, a description of the marks or names at issue can be used instead of a designation such as "Plaintiff's mark." However, if both marks are identical it may be necessary to identify each mark by the appropriate party's name to avoid a confusing instruction.

For an instruction on the standard of proof, see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True").

For further discussion and forms related to trademark infringement, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Technical Topics Require Special Care: A

"trademark" is not commonly encountered by most jurors. As with any technical topic, the evidence and closing argument should be cautiously put together. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Right to Jury Trial

Generally, a jury is proper in a trademark infringement suit if (1) the plaintiff is seeking damages for infringement [Dairy Queen v. Wood (1962) 369 U.S. 469, 479, 82 S.Ct. 894, 8 L.Ed.2d 44], or (2) the defendant cross-complains for damages, provided the issues raised in the cross-complaint are related to the plaintiff's allegations and do not involve an entirely different set of facts and theories [Gilson, Trademark Protection and Practice, vol. 1, § 8.06[2] (Matthew Bender)]. When both legal relief (damages) and equitable relief (an injunction) are sought, the jury will decide the legal issues, and the trial court will dispose of the equitable issues [Sheila's Shine Prods., Inc. v. Sheila Shine, Inc. (5th Cir. 1973) 486 F.2d 114, 122].

[b] Test for Infringement

Although the general test for trademark or trade name infringement is a likelihood of confusion [see, e.g., Internet Specialties West, Inc. v. Milon-Digiorgio Enters. (9th Cir. 2009) 559 F.3d 985, 993 (containing Model Instructions for elements of trademark infringement in internet case); Jada Toys, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 628, 632 ; Perfumbay.com Inc. v. eBay Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1165, 1173 ; Grocery Outlet, Inc. v. Albertson's Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 497 F.3d 949, 951 (competitor's use of "LUCKY" mark for retail grocery services was likely to cause consumer confusion; remaining issue involved abandonment of trademark by nonuse); Jada Toys, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 974, 979 ; Rearden LLC v. Rearden Commerce, Inc. (N.D.Cal. 2009) 597 F.Supp.2d 1006, 1015 ; Nissan Motor Co., Ltd. v. Nissan Computer Corp. (C.D. Cal. 2000) 89 F.Supp.2d 1154, 1162 , aff'd, 246 F.3d 675 (9th Cir. 2000) ; Cairns v. Franklin Mint Co. (C.D. Cal. 2000) 107 F.Supp.2d 1212, 1216], a plaintiff, to prevail, must first prove that its mark or name is protectable as a mark or name and that it began commercial use of its name or mark before the defendant commenced use of its name or mark [Cowles Magazines & Broad., Inc. v. Elysium, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 731, 733, 63 Cal.Rptr. 507]. Most cases implicitly recognize this, but in most cases all three factors--protectability, priority, and likelihood of confusion--are not at issue. In Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho, for example, the court noted that the plaintiff had used its mark first, reviewed and upheld the district court's determination that plaintiff's mark was strong enough to deserve protection, and then considered the factors necessary to determine whether a likelihood of confusion existed [Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho (9th Cir. 1980) 646 F.2d 347, 349-351 ; see AMF Inc. v. Sleekcraft Boats (9th Cir. 1979) 599 F.2d 341, 345-346 (district court found plaintiff's mark was valid but not infringed)].

[c] Presumptive Right to Use Trade Name

California law gives a party that has filed a fictitious business name statement, filed articles of incorporation, or obtained a certificate of qualification to do business in California a rebuttable presumption that it has the exclusive right to use its trade name (as reflected in such filing), as well as any confusingly similar name, if the party (1) was the first to file, and (2) actually uses that name in a business in the county or state of filing. That right extends to the county where the fictitious name statement was filed or the entire state if articles of incorporation were filed or a qualification to do business was obtained. Note that by its terms this applies only to trade names and not to trademarks or service marks [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14411-14416].

The rebuttable presumption affects the burden of producing evidence [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14411, 14415]. A presumption of this type is established to facilitate the determination of an action [Evid. Code § 603]. It requires the trier of fact to assume that the person filing has the exclusive right to use the name until another party to the action offers evidence that could negate the exclusive right. Once the other party offers this evidence, the presumption is lost and the trier of fact must make the necessary factual findings [Evid. Code § 604].

Although there are few reported cases applying this presumption, a presumption that a person has the exclusive right to use a trade name must actually presume both that the trade name is a protectable name and that the person has priority of use over other users, thereby meeting two of the requirements of this instruction [see Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho (9th Cir. 1980) 646 F.2d 347 (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14411-14416 described and applied without discussion of breadth of statutory presumption or of defendant's attempts, if any, to rebut it)]. If a defendant in an infringement case does not rebut a plaintiff's presumption, and if the marks at issue are identical and are used on identical goods, the plaintiff prevails and there are no issues of fact for the jury. If the marks or goods are not identical, the only issue for the jury is likelihood of confusion. If, however, the defendant rebuts the presumption, the presumption is lost and the jury must decide the factual issues. Thus, it is not necessary to instruct the jury as to the presumption, although the presumption may affect which issues will be submitted to the jury.

[d] California Trademark Law and Common Law

The instructions that follow in this part are to be used in an infringement action brought under either the California common law or the Model State Trademark Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14200 et seq.; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 14270 (former Bus. & Prof. Code § 14200 et seq., applicable to suit, proceeding, or appeal pending on January 1, 2008)]. The Model State Trademark Law sets forth a registration procedure for trademarks and service marks [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14200 et seq.] and provides a cause of action for infringement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14245], but it does not affect the rights or the enforcement of rights in marks acquired in good faith at any time at common law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14259]. Thus, California registration of a mark is optional. Although the registration certificate is admissible in evidence as competent and sufficient proof of the registration of the mark in any judicial proceeding [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14215(b)], and a registered trademark is prima facie evidence of the ownership of the mark [see Colvig v. KSFO (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 357, 368, 36 Cal.Rptr. 701], registration is not required to establish a protectable, proprietary interest in a mark under the common-law rules [see Grupo Gigante S.A. de C.V. v. Dallo & Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 391 F.3d 1088, 1106 n.40; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 106-107, n.5, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794]. Other than the effect of the registration certificate, the California common-law and the statutory law are basically the same, and these instructions can be used in an action based on either.

For additional discussion and forms for use in litigation under California statutory and common law trademark laws, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names (Matthew Bender).

[e] Comparison With Federal Protection of "Trade Dress"

As distinguished from a trademark, "trade dress" refers to the total image of a product or service and may include such features as size, shape, color, color combinations, texture, or graphics [TrafFix Devices v. Marketing Displays, Inc. (2001) 532 U.S. 23, 121 S.Ct. 1255, 149 L.Ed.2d 164, 172 ; E.S.S. Entertainment 2000, Inc. v. Rock Star Videos, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 547 F.3d 1095, 1098 n1 ; Sybersound Records, Inc. v. UAV Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 517 F.3d 1137, 1143 ; International Jensen v. Metrosound U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 819, 822 ; see Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 765 n.1, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615 ; Ale House Mgmt., Inc. v. Raleigh Ale House (4th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 137, 142 ; Switchmusic.com, Inc. v. U.S. Music Corp. (C.D. Cal. 2006) 416 F.Supp.2d 812, 820 ; Magic Kitchen LLC v. Good Things Int'l, Ltd. (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 1144, 1155, 63 Cal.Rptr.3d 713 ; El-Com Hardware, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 205, 208 n.1, 111 Cal.Rptr.2d 670]. Federal courts have held that a seller's adoption of a trade dress (or an unregistered trademark) [see 15 U.S.C. § 1114 (infringement of federally registered trademark is separately actionable)] that is confusingly similar to a competitor's constitutes a form of unfair competition that is actionable under § 43(a) of the federal Lanham Act (15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)) [see Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 783-784, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615 ; Sybersound Records, Inc. v. UAV Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 517 F.3d 1137, 1143 ; International Jensen v. Metrosound U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 819, 822]. To recover under § 43(a), the plaintiff must establish that its trade dress (1) is non-functional, (2) is either inherently distinctive or has acquired secondary meaning, and (3) is likely to be confused with a competitor's products by members of the consuming public [Speedplay, Inc. v. Bebob, Inc. (Fed. Cir. 2000) 211 F.3d 1245, 1258 ; International Jensen v. Metrosound U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 819, 823 ; see Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 767, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615]. A trademark or trade dress is functional if it is essential to the product's use or affects the product's cost or quality [International Jensen v. Metrosound U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 819, 823 ; HWE, Inc. v. JB Research, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 993 F.2d 694, 696].

In the absence of a protectable trademark, California common law recognizes a cause of action for unfair competition based on a competitor's use of a name, design, or physical appearance in connection with its goods or services that tends to deceive buyers regarding the origin of those goods or services [see Cytanovich Reading Ctr. v. Reading Game (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 107, 113, 208 Cal.Rptr. 412 ; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 14259 (California statutory trademark law does not affect any rights in marks acquired in good faith under common law)]. Arguably, this common law principle would protect "trade dress" as defined by federal cases; however, no reported California appellate decision has expressly applied the federal concept of trade dress. The California common-law unfair competition decisions have generally involved disputes over trade names [see, e.g., Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 289, 300-301, 92 Cal.Rptr. 228 ; see also Cytanovich Reading Ctr. v. Reading Game (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 107, 113-114, 208 Cal.Rptr. 412 (use of confusingly similar telephone number)].

Assuming that California law would recognize a common law cause of action for unfair competition based on infringement of trade dress, similar to that recognized by federal cases under the Lanham Act, these instructions could be modified for use in such an action by substituting the word "trade dress" for the word "trademark" or "service mark" or "mark" throughout the instruction in [1], above, and the instructions in MB 3300A.62-MB 3300A.67. In addition, the jury should be instructed on the definition of "trade dress" and on the requirement of non-functionality, as discussed above.

For further discussion of the protection against unfair competition under the Lanham Act, see Gilson, Trademark Protection and Practice, Ch. 7 (Matthew Bender), and California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions
PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.61

MB 3300A.61 Definitions of Trademark, Service Mark, and Trade Name

[1] Instruction

Not every word or symbol is protectable. To be protectable, the word or symbol that Plaintiff claims is a [trademark/service mark/trade name] must actually be a [trademark/service mark/trade name.] You must determine whether Plaintiff's word or symbol falls within one of the following definitions.

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

A trademark is any word, name, symbol, or device, or any combination of those things, used by a person to identify and distinguish the goods of that person, including a unique product, from those manufactured or sold by others, and to indicate the source of the goods, even if that source is unknown.

[OR]

A service mark is any word, name, symbol, or device, or any combination of those things, used by a person to identify and distinguish the services of that person, including a unique service, from the services of others, and to indicate the source of the services, even if that source is unknown. Titles, character names used by a person, and other distinctive features of radio or television programs may be registered as service marks notwithstanding that they, or the programs, may advertise the goods of the sponsor.

[OR]

A trade name is any name used by a person to identify a business or vocation of that person.

[CONTINUE]

The term "person" includes a natural person, and a firm, partnership, corporation, union, association, or other organization capable of suing and being sued in a court of law.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202; KGB, Inc. v. Giannoulas (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 844, 856-857, 164 Cal.Rptr. 571 ; Balesteri v. Holler (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 717, 721, 151 Cal.Rptr. 229 ; Colvig v. KSFO (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 357, 368, 36 Cal.Rptr. 701 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the terms "trademark," "service mark," and "trade name," to help the jury determine whether the word or symbol at issue is a protectable name or mark. Former Bus. & Prof. Code § 14200 et seq. (repealed effective January 1, 2008), applies to any suit, proceeding, or appeal pending on January 1, 2008 [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14270].

In many cases, only one type of name or mark is at issue and only one of the definitions in this instruction will be necessary. However, a plaintiff may, for example, sue for infringement of its trademark caused by the defendant's use of its trade name. The definitions of both "trademark" and "trade name" should be used in this case, as the defendant may argue that the different types of uses of the two words mitigates the likelihood of confusion.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Technical Topics Require Special Care: A

"trademark," "service mark," or "trade name" is not commonly encountered by most jurors. As with any technical topic, the evidence and closing argument should be cautiously put together. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

This instruction is taken from the definitions in the Model State Trademark Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202], which are similar to the definitions used in common law actions [see Balesteri v. Holler (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 717, 721, 151 Cal.Rptr. 229 ; Colvig v. KSFO (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 357, 368, 36 Cal.Rptr. 701]. The definitions are also similar to those in the federal Lanham Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 1127; Cleary v. News Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 30 F.3d 1255, 1262-1263].

KGB, Inc. v. Giannoulas illustrates how these definitions can be applied. In that case, the plaintiff radio station sued the defendant for making personal appearances in a chicken costume, contending that the figure of a person in a chicken suit was the plaintiff's protectable service mark. The court rejected this contention, finding that a person in a chicken suit does not fit the statutory definition of a service mark [see 15 U.S.C. § 1127; former Bus. & Prof. Code § 14206 (see now Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(b))] because it is not a symbol used in the sale or advertising of services to identify the source of the services. The court stated that the symbol must be stationary and unchanging to be entitled to protection as a mark [KGB, Inc. v. Giannoulas (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 844, 856-857, 164 Cal.Rptr. 571].

The United States Supreme Court has held that under the Lanham Act, sometimes a color will meet ordinary legal trademark requirements. When it does so, no special legal rule prevents color alone from serving as a trademark [Qualitex Co. v. Jacobson Prods. Co. (1995) 514 U.S. 159, 160-162, 170, 115 S. Ct. 1300, 131 L. Ed. 2d 248 ; see Blockbuster Videos, Inc. v. City of Tempe (1998) 141 F.3d 1295, 1300 ; Lebas Fashion Imports of USA, Inc. v. ITT Hartford Ins. Group (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 548, 563, n.11, 59 Cal.Rptr.2d 36].

As with other marks, a court can restrict use of a person's full name if it is likely to cause consumer confusion with an established, famous mark [Paul Frank Indus. v. Sunich (C.D. Cal. 2007) 502 F.Supp.2d 1094, 1098-1099].

PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.62

MB 3300A.62 Distinctiveness Requirement

[1] Instruction

To be protectable, Plaintiff's [name or mark] must be distinctive. This means that it must be capable of distinguishing Plaintiff's [goods or services or business] from [goods made or sold by or the services of or the business of] others.

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

If Plaintiff's [mark or name] is an invented or coined word or symbol, without any meaning of its own, it is inherently distinctive. For example, EXXON is a word that was invented and is now used for an oil company.

[OR]

If Plaintiff's [mark or name] is a fanciful word or symbol, then it is inherently distinctive. A fanciful [mark or name] differs from an invented or coined [mark or name] in that it may bear a relationship to another word. For example, FAB is an abbreviated term for "fabulous," and it is a fanciful mark when used on a detergent.

[OR]

If Plaintiff's [mark or name] is comprised of one or more known words, but the words do not have any meaning as applied to Plaintiff's [goods or services or business], and the [mark or name] is an arbitrary use of the words, then the [mark or name] is inherently distinctive. For example, OLD CROW is comprised of known words, but it is an arbitrary mark when used on whiskey.

[OR]

If Plaintiff's [mark or name] is suggestive of some quality or characteristic of Plaintiff's [goods or services or business] without actually describing Plaintiff's [goods or services or business], then it is inherently distinctive. For example, STRONGHOLD is suggestive of superior holding power when it is used on nails, but it does not actually describe the goods.

[OR]

If Plaintiff's [mark or name] describes Plaintiff's [goods or services or business] or is a geographic name or designation or is a surname, then it is not inherently distinctive, and Plaintiff must prove that [his/her/its] [mark or name] has acquired secondary meaning, which I will explain later, to prevail in this case. For example, TENDER VITTLES is descriptive of cat food.

[OR]

If Plaintiff's [mark or name] is a generic term whose principal significance is as the common name for _____ [either goods such as those made or services such as those rendered or business such as that conducted] by Plaintiff, then Plaintiff cannot prevail in this case. For example, BUTTER is a generic term for butter and no one person or company can claim the exclusive right to use it on butter.

Authorities: Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615, 623-625 ; Grupo Gigante S.A. de C.V. v. Dallo & Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 391 F.3d 1088, 1096 ; E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1291 ; Golden Door, Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 106-111, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794 ; Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 289, 302, 92 Cal.Rptr. 228 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the basis for deciding whether a mark is distinctive and, therefore, protectable. The descriptions of different kinds of marks and names listed in MB 3300A.61[1] each include distinctiveness as one characteristic of a mark or name, and this instruction is intended to help determine whether this distinctiveness requirement is met. It also describes when the jury needs to consider whether the plaintiff's mark or name has acquired secondary meaning and when the plaintiff has no cause of action because its mark or name is not distinctive and thus not protectable.

The paragraphs that describe types of marks not involved in the case can be omitted. For example, a common dispute in trademark cases is whether the plaintiff's mark is "suggestive" and capable of protection without proof of secondary meaning or is, instead, "descriptive" and capable of protection only if secondary meaning is shown. Another common issue is whether a mark is generic or descriptive, because it can never be protected as a trademark if it is generic.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Carefully Consider Your Arguments and Use

Examples: "Distinctiveness" is complicated for judges and attorneys, let alone jurors. In addition, the categories set forth in this instruction are not going to be intuitively obvious to most jurors. Thus, the approach in arguing this topic should be thoughtfully pondered. The use of examples is helpful and should be further explained in closing argument. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Generic marks or names are not entitled to protection [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615, 624 ; Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho (9th Cir. 1980) 646 F.2d 347, 350 ; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 106-107, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794]. Every competitor must be able to use a generic term to compete. For example, "The Laundry" is a generic name for a laundry, and no one is entitled to exclusive use of that name.

Descriptive words, including geographic terms and surnames, tell something about a product and can be protected only if they have acquired secondary meaning and have come to signify goods or services provided by only one particular producer [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615, 624 ; E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1291 ; AMF Inc. v. Sleekcraft Boats (9th Cir. 1979) 599 F.2d 341, 349 ; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 107-108, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794 ; Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 289, 302, 92 Cal.Rptr. 228]. Such things as sales and advertising expenses will be considered, as well as surveys of public perceptions, to determine whether the public perceives a descriptive word as indicating a single source [North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 109-111, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794 ; see E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1291 (mark strengthened by long, continued use and by extensive and expensive advertising and promotion); Ocean Garden, Inc. v. Marktrade Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1991) 953 F.2d 500, 506 (mark strengthened by use for 30 years and extensive advertising)]. See MB 3300A.63 for further discussion of secondary meaning.

The other types of marks--suggestive, arbitrary, fanciful, and invented or coined marks--can be protected without proof of secondary meaning because they are inherently distinctive [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615, 623-624 ; Ocean Garden, Inc. v. Marktrade Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1991) 953 F.2d 500, 506 ; Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho (9th Cir. 1980) 646 F.2d 347, 350 ; Rearden LLC v. Rearden Commerce, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2009) 597 F.Supp.2d 1006, 1019 ; Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1243 , modified, 561 F.2d 1365 (10th Cir. 1977) ; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 106-107, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794]. The classification of marks (in order of generally increasing distinctiveness, as generic, descriptive, suggestive, arbitrary, or fanciful) follows "the classic formulation set out by Judge Friendly" in Abercrombie & Fitch Co. v. Hunting World, Inc. [Abercrombie & Fitch v. Hunting World, Inc. (2d Cir. 1976) 537 F.2d 4, 9] and cited with approval by the Supreme Court [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615, 623 ; see E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1291 (classification of marks in order of increasing distinctiveness from generic to fanciful)]. The examples of the different types of marks used in this instruction were taken from the jury instructions in Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber [Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1243 , modified, 561 F.2d 1365 (10th Cir. 1977)].

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions
PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.63

MB 3300A.63 Definition of Secondary Meaning

[1] Instruction

If you decide that Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name] is descriptive, geographic, or a surname, then you must decide whether that [trademark/service mark/trade name] has acquired secondary meaning. A [mark or name] has acquired secondary meaning when there is an association in an average buyer's mind between the [mark or name] and a single source of origin for the [product or service or business] bearing the [mark or name]. This does not mean that a buyer must actually know the name of the source, but only that a buyer must directly associate the [mark or name] with only one source, even if it is an anonymous source.

If you decide that Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name] is descriptive and has not acquired secondary meaning, then Plaintiff cannot prevail in this case.

Authorities: Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 766 n.4, 769, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615 ; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 107-108, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define secondary meaning and to give the jury guidelines to use in determining whether a descriptive mark has acquired secondary meaning. It also reiterates that the owner of a descriptive, geographic, or surname mark cannot prevail in an infringement suit if the mark has not acquired secondary meaning. The instruction should be used immediately following the instruction in MB 3300A.62[1], which explains descriptive marks.

This instruction should not be used if the case does not present the issue of whether the plaintiff's mark is descriptive and whether such a mark has acquired secondary meaning.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Examples in Closing Argument: As with "distinctiveness" [see MB 3300A.62], "secondary meaning" is another challenging topic. Thus, examples in closing argument will be necessary to explain the concept "secondary meaning" to the jury. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Competitors must be able to use common, descriptive words to sell and advertise their goods in the marketplace [Invisible, Inc. v. National Broad. Co., Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1980) 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17006], but the doctrine of secondary meaning recognizes that this interest in competition and the unrestricted use of descriptive words must be limited when the use of certain words will mislead or confuse the public. Once the public comes to associate a descriptive word with a single source of products, the trademark and unfair competition laws will protect that word to prevent deception of the public [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 766 n.4, 769, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 120 L.Ed.2d 615 ; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 108-109, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794 ; see Japan Telecom, Inc. v. Japan Telecom Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 866, 876 (California courts require plaintiffs suing under California Trade Name Statute to establish secondary meaning if trade names are descriptive)].

Secondary meaning refers to a mark's ability to identify particular goods and services in the minds of consumers [Grupo Gigante S.A. de C.V. v. Dallo & Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 391 F.3d 1088, 1095 ; see, e.g., Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 2757, 120 L.Ed.2d 615]. Secondary meaning can be proven directly by surveys showing that the public associates a descriptive term with a single source or indirectly by relevant facts such as the duration and continuity of the use of the mark, the extent of advertising of the name or mark and the amount spent for that purpose, or the volume of sales of goods bearing the mark. These factors can show that a significant segment of the purchasing public has been exposed to the mark [E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1291 ; North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 109-110, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794 ; see also Cowles Magazines & Broad., Inc. v. Elysium, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 731, 735, 63 Cal.Rptr. 507].

In addition, secondary meaning can be inferred from the defendant's intent in adopting its mark. If the defendant adopted a mark similar to the plaintiff's mark to trade off the plaintiff's goodwill, a court can presume that the plaintiff's mark must have some goodwill and, therefore, secondary meaning [see E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1293]. Proof of secondary meaning is sufficient if it shows that a substantial segment of the buying population associated the mark with a single source [North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 110, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794].

It is not necessary that the buying public actually know the name of the source where the trademarked goods originate. The public need only associate the mark with one source, even if that source is anonymous [North Carolina Dairy Found., Inc. v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 98, 108, 154 Cal.Rptr. 794].

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions
PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.64

MB 3300A.64 Priority of Use

[1] Instruction

The next element of Plaintiff's case to consider is whether Plaintiff has priority of use.

If you decided that Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name] is inherently distinctive, then you must decide whether Plaintiff used [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name] before the time that Defendant began to use [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name].

If you decided that Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name] is not inherently distinctive, but has acquired secondary meaning, then you must decide whether Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name] acquired secondary meaning before the time Defendant began to use [his/her/its] [mark or name].

If Plaintiff did not use [his/her/its] [mark or name] or [his/her/its] [mark or name] had not acquired secondary meaning before the time that Defendant began to use [his/her/its] [mark or name], then Plaintiff cannot prevail in this case.

Authorities: Saratoga Vichy Spring Co., Inc. v. Lehman (2d Cir. 1980) 625 F.2d 1037, 1043 ; Scott Paper Co. v. Scott's Liquid Gold, Inc. (3d Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 1225, 1231-1232 ; Derringer v. Plate (1865) ; Gordon v. Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 31, 36-38, 74 Cal.Rptr. 499 ; Weatherford v. Eytchison (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 379, 383-384, 386, 202 P.2d 1040 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define whether the plaintiff has used its mark before the defendant's use of its mark. It should be used when either distinctiveness or secondary meaning is at issue. It defines priority of use both for inherently distinctive marks and for marks which, though not inherently distinctive, have acquired secondary meaning. This instruction should be used after the instructions on distinctiveness (MB 3300A.62) and secondary meaning (MB 3300A.63).

If priority of use is not an issue in the case, this instruction can be omitted. If the distinctiveness of the plaintiff's mark is not at issue in the case, the third paragraph of this instruction can be omitted, as well as the portions of the second and fourth paragraphs that deal with distinctiveness.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution!: This instruction on "priority" of use must be presented in an explainable manner. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Priority of use is often not at issue in infringement cases, but it is a determinative element of any case. The party that first used a mark or name is its original owner and has the right to use that mark or name [Derringer v. Plate (1865) ; Weatherford v. Eytchison (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 379, 383-384, 386, 202 P.2d 1040 ; see Grupo Gigante S.A. de C.V. v. Dallo & Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 391 F.3d 1088, 1093]. However, when "use" of a mark began must be determined by reference to when the word became a protectable mark. If a word is inherently distinctive, priority begins from its first use as a mark. If a word is not inherently distinctive, priority cannot attach until it has acquired secondary meaning [see Allied Artists Pictures Corp. v. Friedman (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 127, 135, 137 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Gordon v. Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 31, 36-38, 74 Cal.Rptr. 499 ; Gilson, Trademark Protection and Practice, Ch. 3, § 3.03 (Matthew Bender)].

For example, in Scott Paper Co. v. Scott's Liquid Gold, Inc., the court held that priority depends on whether the plaintiff's mark acquired secondary meaning before the time that the defendant adopted its mark. Under this test, the court decided that although the plaintiff had used its SCOTT mark on paper products since 1911 and the defendant began its use of SCOTT on furniture polish in 1925, the plaintiff did not have priority of use on furniture polish because its mark did not acquire secondary meaning in the furniture polish market until at least 1965, if at all [Scott Paper Co. v. Scott's Liquid Gold, Inc. (3d Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 1225, 1231-1232].

The Second Circuit reached a similar decision in Saratoga Vichy Spring Co. Inc. v. Lehman, involving use of the geographically descriptive SARATOGA mark on mineral water. The plaintiff began use of its SARATOGA mark in 1876, but by the time the defendant began use of a SARATOGA mark in 1910, the plaintiff's mark had not yet acquired secondary meaning. In these circumstances, the plaintiff did not have priority and the court would not enjoin the defendant's use [Saratoga Vichy Spring Co., Inc. v. Lehman (2d Cir. 1980) 625 F.2d 1037, 1043].

The first to use a mark in commerce is deemed the "senior user" of that mark [Brookfield Communications, Inc. v. West Coast Entertainment Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 1036, 1047 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]. The senior user has the right to enjoin "junior users" from using confusingly similar marks in the same industry and market or within the senior user's natural zone of expansion [Brookfield Communications, Inc. v. West Coast Entertainment Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 1036, 1047].

The Ninth Circuit has adopted a totality of the circumstances test for determining whether a "use" is sufficient to establish rights in the service mark [Chance v. Pac-Tel Teletrac Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1151, 1159 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]. Factors to consider in making this determination include [Chance v. Pac-Tel Teletrac Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1151, 1159 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]:

- The genuineness and commercial character of the activity;
- Whether the mark was sufficiently public to identify or distinguish the marked service in an appropriate segment of the public mind as those of the holder of the mark;

- The scope of the nonsales activity relative to what would be a reasonable attempt to market the service;
- The degree to which the holder conducts ongoing business activity using the mark; and
- The amount of business transacted.

Mere advertising by itself does not necessarily establish prior use [New West Corp. v. NYM Co. of Cal., Inc. (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1194, 1200 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]. However, advertising combined with other nonsales activity is sufficient to establish use in commerce [Chance v. Pac-Tel Teletrac Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1151, 1159 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235].

PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.65

MB 3300A.65 Requirement of Actual Use as Trademark, Service Mark, or Trade Name

[1] Instruction Requirement of Actual Use as Trademark, Service Mark, or Trade Name

To prove priority of use, Plaintiff must also prove that [he/she/it] actually used [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name] as a [trademark/service mark/trade name].

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. To prove use of a trademark, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] displayed the mark on the goods, on labels for the goods, on tags affixed to the goods, or on displays, such as in stores, associated with the goods.

[OR]

2. To prove use of a service mark, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] used or displayed the mark in the sale or advertising of [his/her/its] services.

[OR]

3. To prove use of a trade name, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] displayed or used the name in connection with _____ [doing business or describe plaintiff's business activities], and not merely while setting up or planning the business.

It is not enough for Plaintiff to prove that [he/she/it] discovered or selected [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name] or that [he/she/it] used [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name] in establishing a business or before actually doing business. Neither of these types of use establishes priority of use.

Authorities: 15 U.S.C. § 1127; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(h); Dynamet Tech., Inc. v. Dynamet Inc. (C.C.P.A. 1979) 593 F.2d 1007, 1011 ; Invisible, Inc. v. National Broad. Co., Inc. (C.D. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define what the trademark laws consider the "use" necessary to establish priority of use. It sets forth the definitions of "use" that apply to trademarks, service marks, and trade names. It should be used following the instruction in MB 3300A.64[1] to define the type of use required by that instruction.

The three numbered paragraphs define the type of commercial use which establishes priority for trademarks, service marks, and trade names, respectively. Only the paragraph or paragraphs that relate to the type of marks or names at issue should be included in the instruction.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution!: This instruction on "actual" use must be presented in an explainable manner. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Rights in a mark or name begin to accrue from the time a word or symbol is first used as a mark or name [see American Petrofina v. Petrofina of Cal., Inc. (9th Cir. 1979) 596 F.2d 896, 897 ; see also MB 3300A.64[3]]. For trademarks, this requires use on the goods or containers for the goods, and for service marks, this requires use or display in connection with selling or advertising the services [15 U.S.C. § 1127; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(h); KGB, Inc. v. Giannoulas (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 844, 856-857, 164 Cal.Rptr. 571 ; see CreAgri, Inc. v. Usana Health Sciences, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 626, 630 (former Bus. & Prof. Code § 14209 (see now Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(h)) mirrors federal law)]. A trademark must serve to distinguish and identify goods. When a trademark is used in advertising, but it has not been used on the goods themselves, it cannot distinguish the goods, and, therefore, the owner's trademark rights have not yet begun [see Gordon Bennett & Assocs., Inc. v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1975) 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13398]. Similarly, preparing to do business by simply filing articles of incorporation or soliciting capital in connection with the name without actual use does not give the business's owners any rights in its trade name [see Dynamet Tech., Inc. v. Dynamet Inc. (C.C.P.A. 1979) 593 F.2d 1007, 1011]. A company must actually be engaged in a business for its trade name to become associated with its business [see Gilson, Trademark Protection and Practice, Ch. 3, Establishing Trademark Rights, § 3.03 (Matthew Bender)].

The Ninth Circuit has adopted a totality of the circumstances test for determining whether a "use" is sufficient to establish rights in the service mark [Chance v. Pac-Tel Teletrac Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1151, 1159 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]. Factors to consider in making this determination include [Chance v. Pac-Tel Teletrac Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1151, 1159 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]:

- The genuineness and commercial character of the activity;
- Whether the mark was sufficiently public to identify or distinguish the marked service in an appropriate segment of the public mind as those of the holder of the mark;
- The scope of the nonsales activity relative to what would be a reasonable attempt to market the service;

- The degree to which the holder conducts ongoing business activity using the mark; and
- The amount of business transacted.

Mere advertising by itself does not necessarily establish prior use [New West Corp. v. NYM Co. of Cal., Inc. (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1194, 1200 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235]. However, advertising combined with other nonsales activity is sufficient to establish use in commerce [Chance v. Pac-Tel Teletrac Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1151, 1159 ; Hana Fin., Inc. v. Hana Bank (C.D. Cal. 2007) 500 F.Supp.2d 1228, 1235].

In Invisible, Inc. v. National Broadcasting Co., Inc., the plaintiff advertising agency sued the defendant television station for its use of the slogans "WE'RE 4" and "WE'RE 4 YOU." The plaintiff claimed it had created the slogans and sold them in connection with promotional campaigns to three Channel 4 television stations across the country. The defendant used a similar slogan not purchased from the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued for service mark infringement, but was unsuccessful because it did not use the slogans as service marks to identify its own services. Its only use of the slogans was to sell them to others. Without any service mark use, the plaintiff could not have protectable rights [Invisible, Inc. v. National Broad. Co., Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1980) 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17006].

The court reached a similar decision in Gordon Bennett & Associates, Inc. v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. There, plaintiff advertising agency invented the trademark, SECURITY BLANKET, for banks to use on checkbook holders. The plaintiff's only use of the mark, however, was in soliciting business from financial institutions. As the conception of the mark and the efforts to sell it were not trademark or service mark uses, the plaintiff did not own any proprietary rights in the mark [Gordon Bennett & Assocs., Inc. v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1975) 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13398].

PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.66

MB 3300A.66 Test of Likelihood of Confusion Between Plaintiff's Mark and Defendant's Mark

[1] Instruction

Plaintiff must prove that use of both [his/her/its] [trademark/service mark/trade name] and Defendant's [trademark/service mark/trade name] in the marketplace is likely to confuse or deceive a person of ordinary intelligence or is likely to cause mistakes by a person of ordinary intelligence. To determine whether this likelihood of confusion exists, you must consider all of the following:

- 1. The similarity of the [marks or names];
- 2. The similarity of the goods or services involved;
- 3. The similarity of or the relationship between the parties' channels of trade, including _____ [list indicia of parties' channels of trade, such as their methods of distribution, retail outlets, and modes of advertising];
- 4. The likelihood of expansion of the product lines, services, or business;
- 5. The types of people who buy each party's goods or services and how careful they are likely to be in selecting those goods or services;
- 6. Any evidence of actual confusion between the [marks or names];
- 7. Whether Defendant intended to create confusion or mistakes by adopting [his/her/its] [mark or name] or whether Defendant adopted [his/her/its] [mark or name] with an innocent purpose; and

8. No one factor is conclusive. You must consider and weigh all of these factors, but not all of these factors need to be decided in Plaintiff's favor for Plaintiff to win. Instead, you must determine whether, considering all the factors, ordinary consumers who are neither overly careful nor overly careless would be likely to be confused about the source of the parties' goods or services when they encounter both [marks or names]. The test is a likelihood of confusion. Actual confusion is not required.

The distinctiveness of Plaintiff's [trademark/service mark/trade name].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the tests by which the jury is to decide one of the elements of trademark infringement--likelihood of confusion. It lists all of the factors that need to be considered and explains how the factors interrelate by stating that the factors are to be weighed as a whole to determine whether a likelihood of confusion exists.

[3] Comment

Both California law and federal law are intended to protect the public from confusion about the services and products it encounters [Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho (9th Cir. 1980) 646 F.2d 347, 349-351 ; Mallard Creek Indus., Inc. v. Morgan (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 426, 435, 65 Cal.Rptr.2d 461 ; see, e.g., E.S.S. Entertainment 2000, Inc. v. Rock Star Videos, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 547 F.3d 1095, 1100 ; Rearden LLC v. Rearden Commerce, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2009) 597 F.Supp.2d 1006, 1015-1016]. A trademark can be used by someone other than its owner (with permission) if that use does not confuse the public [United States v. Able Time, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 824, 835].

The public is protected against the probability or likelihood of confusion, as well as the actuality of confusion [Century 21 Real Estate Corp. v. Sandlin (9th Cir. 1988) 846 F.2d 1175, 1179 ; Hair v. McGuire (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 348, 353, 10 Cal.Rptr. 414]. Thus, once a plaintiff has established that it owns a protectable mark and has priority of use, the essential question in a trademark infringement case is whether a likelihood of confusion exists [Jada Toys, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 628, 632 ; Perfumebay.com Inc. v. eBay Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1165, 1173 ; Grocery Outlet, Inc. v. Albertson's Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 497 F.3d 949, 951 (competitor's use of "LUCKY" mark for retail grocery services was likely to cause consumer confusion; remaining issue involved abandonment of trademark by nonuse); Jada Toys, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 974, 979 ; Image Online Design, Inc. v. Core Ass'n (C.D. Cal. 2000) 120 F.Supp.2d 870, 875 ; Mallard Creek Indus., Inc. v. Morgan (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 426, 435, 65 Cal.Rptr.2d 461 (distributor of trademarked product not entitled to complete defense under Bus. & Prof. Code § 14342, which protects prior users of mark); Cowles Magazines & Broad., Inc. v. Elysium, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 731, 733, 63 Cal.Rptr. 507].

The plaintiff has the burden of proving likelihood of confusion [Americana Trading, Inc. v. Russ Berrie & Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 1284, 1287 ; see Gracie v. Gracie (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 1060, 1066-1067 (in federal case for infringement of service marks under California common law, jury instruction that defendant could be found liable for infringement only if defendant used plaintiff's logo in manner likely to cause confusion, rather than logo similar to plaintiff's, did not warrant new trial, although instruction could have been more detailed and precise)].

Actual confusion is not necessary to a finding of likelihood of confusion [E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280, 1292 ; Academy of Motion Picture Arts v. Creative House (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 1446, 1456 ; American Int'l Group v. American Int'l Bank (9th Cir. 1991) 926 F.2d 829, 832 ; see Perfumbay.com Inc. v. eBay Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1165, 1175-1176 (difficulties in gathering evidence of actual confusion make its absence generally unnoteworthy)].

A likelihood of confusion exists when simultaneous use of two marks creates a likelihood that the consuming public, when encountering the two marks, would assume that the products or services represented by the marks are associated or emanate from the same source. Without a likelihood of confusion, there is no liability for trademark infringement [Lindy Pen Co., Inc. v. Bic Pen Corp. (9th Cir. 1984) 725 F.2d 1240, 1243, 1247 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14245 (use of registered mark may be grounds for civil action if use is likely or intended to cause confusion or mistake or to deceive)]. Although the defendant's intent in adopting its mark is relevant to whether a likelihood of confusion exists, the defendant may be liable for infringement even if it acted in good faith, because an intent to infringe is not required [E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 955 F.2d 1327, 1341 ; Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 289, 306, 92 Cal.Rptr. 228].

The infringement test focuses on the confusion likely to be experienced by ordinary consumers, who are neither overly careful nor overly careless [see Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 289, 309, 92 Cal.Rptr. 228]. From that perspective, each of the factors listed above is weighed to determine whether it favors a finding of infringement or a finding of no infringement, but no single factor or consideration is conclusive. The evidence must be considered as a whole [E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 955 F.2d 1327, 1338 ; Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1247 , modified 561 F.2d 1365 (10th Cir. 1977) ; see AMF Inc. v. Sleekcraft Boats (9th Cir. 1979) 599 F.2d 341, 348-354]. The Ninth Circuit has held that dissimilarity alone is insufficient to find no likelihood of confusion [Jada Toys, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 974, 979].

The eight factors listed in this instruction have been stated by courts in many different ways. For example, "the relationship between the parties' advertising" may be treated as a factor separate from "channels of trade" [see Pignons S.A. de Mecanique v. Polaroid Corp. (1st Cir. 1981) 657 F.2d 482, 487-489 ; see also E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 955 F.2d 1327, 1338-1341 (list of eight factors stated in slightly different way)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defendant's Intent Is Not Dispositive: This instruction lists the factors to be considered on the issue of the "likelihood of confusion." Note that defendant's intent (7th factor) is only one consideration and is not dispositive. Even if defendant acted in good faith, defendant could still be liable for infringement. By Ronald Oster

PART B. TRADEMARK AND TRADE NAME INFRINGEMENT

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.67

MB 3300A.67 Damages

[1] Instruction

If you find that Defendant has infringed Plaintiff's [mark or name], then you must decide whether Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages, and, if so, the amount of those damages. There are two kinds of damages intended to compensate Plaintiff that you may consider: (1) special compensatory damages, and (2) general compensatory damages.

Special compensatory damages are the direct economic losses, such as lost sales and out-of-pocket expenses, that Plaintiff suffered as the result of Defendant's actions.

General compensatory damages are the amount of money necessary to compensate Plaintiff for indirect losses. These may include all of the following:

1. Compensation for injury to or the loss of Plaintiff's reputation or goodwill;
2. The expense of preventing customers from being deceived; and
3. The cost of the advertising necessary in the future to erase or repair the effects of the infringement.

Although this type of damage may be difficult to measure, you should use your best judgment in determining the amount of these damages to Plaintiff, if any, based on the relevant evidence.

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict of infringement, but you do not believe that Plaintiff has demonstrated any damages, you may return a verdict for Plaintiff and fix compensatory damages in a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

You must also decide whether Plaintiff should be awarded punitive damages.

Authority: Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1248-1250 , modified (10th Cir. 1977) 561 F.2d 1365 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the amount and types of damages the jury can award. It explains the basis for each type of award and describes the purpose of each type of award.

The plaintiff may also be able to recover punitive damages if the defendant acted fraudulently or maliciously [Civ. Code § 3294(a)] and if the plaintiff sustained some actual damages [see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 6, Torts, §§ 1607-1610 (10th ed. 2005); see generally Ch. 39, California Judicial Council Damages Instructions].

[3] Comment

There were few reported cases in which a jury decided issues of trademark infringement. However, since the $19,600,000 jury verdict in Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber [Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1244 , modified, (10th Cir. 1977) 561 F.2d 1365], demands for jury trials in trademark infringement suits seeking monetary damages are more common [see Gilson, Trademark Protection and Practice, Ch. 10, § 10.13 (Matthew Bender)].

The damages awarded for a trademark infringement are intended to make the plaintiff whole through compensation for direct economic losses and compensation for intangible losses, such as the loss of reputation or goodwill [15 U.S.C. § 1117; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14340; Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1248-1250 , modified, (10th Cir. 1977) 561 F.2d 1365 ; see Gilson, Trademark Protection and Practice, Ch. 8, § 8.08 (Matthew Bender)]. In addition, punitive damages may be available if the defendant has acted fraudulently or maliciously [Civ. Code § 3294(a)] and if the plaintiff sustained some actual damages [see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 6, Torts, §§ 1607-1610 (10th ed. 2005)].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is a cause of action based on breach of confidence.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")] as must an instruction defining "cause" [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages"), and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.04].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Definitions: This is a topic where the "practical" definition seems relatively clear, but the "legal" definition is tough for many jurors. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Nature of Actionable Breach of Confidence

The tort of breach of confidence is based on the concept of an implied obligation or contract between the parties [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. PacificTel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 455, 464, 214 Cal.Rptr. 276 ; Mann v. Columbia Pictures, Inc. (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 628, 646, 180 Cal.Rptr. 522]. It is an obligation in law when in fact the parties made no promise. It is not based on apparent intentions of the involved parties; it is an obligation created by law for reasons of justice [Fink v. Goodson-Todman Enters., Ltd. (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 996, 1010, 88 Cal.Rptr. 679].

Appellate decisions have uniformly required that an idea must be confidential and novel to warrant protection [Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 309, 322-323, 158 Cal.Rptr. 704 ; Fink v. Goodson-Todman Enters., Ltd. (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 996, 1009, 88 Cal.Rptr. 679 ; Ojala v. Bohlin (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 292, 300, 2 Cal.Rptr. 919]. The cause of action certainly arises when a trade secret is disclosed without privilege to do so, but under appropriate circumstances, disclosure of information that is not a trade secret but is substantially secret is also actionable [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 455, 462-463, 214 Cal.Rptr. 276 ; Thompson v. California Brewing Co. (1957) 150 Cal.App.2d 469, 475-476, 310 P.2d 436]. Similarly, when the action for breach of confidence involves a literary work, the literary work does not have to be copyrighted or protectable to be the subject of a breach of confidence action [Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 309, 320-323, 158 Cal.Rptr. 704].

[b] Elements of Cause of Action

The parameters of the breach of confidence action have not yet been well defined, but the basic elements of the tort have been enumerated. An actionable breach of confidence arises when an idea, whether or not protectable, is (1) offered to another in confidence, (2) voluntarily received by the offeree in confidence with the understanding that it is not to be disclosed to others, and (3) not to be used by the offeree for purposes beyond the limits of the confidence without the offeror's permission. To prevent the unwarranted creation or extension of a monopoly and restraint on progress in art, a confidential relationship will not be created from the mere submission of an idea to another. There must exist evidence of the communication of the confidentiality of the submission or evidence from which a confidential relationship can be inferred [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 455, 462, 214 Cal.Rptr. 276 ; see Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 309, 323, 158 Cal.Rptr. 704].

A cause of action for breach of confidence based on a plaintiff's theory that the defendant used defendant's ideas to its benefit, rather than guarding its confidences or paying the defendant reasonable compensation, requires a showing that the defendant did use those ideas [Hollywood Screentest of America, Inc. v. NBC Universal, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 631, 649, 60 Cal.Rptr.3d 279] .

Although no particular form of notice of confidentiality is required, mere constructive notice is not sufficient. However, knowledge of the confidential nature of the information may be proved by circumstantial evidence [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 455, 463-464, 467, 214 Cal.Rptr. 276 ; see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 202, for a general instruction on direct and indirect ("circumstantial") evidence].

[c] Derivation of Instruction

This instruction is based on an instruction set forth and approved in Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 455, 461-467, 214 Cal.Rptr. 276]. The court of appeal opinion considered the propriety of the instruction to the jury on breach of confidence when a telephone cable counting contractor sued a telephone company for disclosure of counting forms by the telephone company to a second contractor. The court held that, although the confidential information does not have to be a trade secret, (1) the information must be substantially secret; (2) the defendant must have known it was confidential and have had the opportunity to reject it before receiving it as confidential; and (3) there must have been an understanding that confidentiality would be protected [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 455, 461-467, 214 Cal.Rptr. 276].

CHAPTER 33A Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions
PART C. BREACH OF CONFIDENCE

5-33A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3300A.81

MB 3300A.81 Damages for Breach of Confidence

[1] Instruction

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages from Defendant for breach of confidence, those damages should be an amount that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff for all of [his/her/its] loss or harm to the extent that the loss or harm was caused by the Defendant's conduct, whether or not the loss or harm could have been anticipated by Defendant.

Plaintiff is entitled to recover only for the loss or harm actually suffered because of any breach of confidence by Defendant. You may not consider any loss or harm suffered by Plaintiff that was not caused by any breach by Defendant.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3333.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in actions for breach of confidence. It should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 3300A.80 defining the plaintiff's burden of proof.

An instruction defining "cause" as a "substantial factor" should be adapted for use with this instruction [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")].

[3] Comment

Civ. Code § 3333 specifies the damages recoverable for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract. The measure of damages is the amount that will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not. Such damages may not in all cases be limited to the amount of the defendant's gain, which may be more or less than the loss suffered by the injured party. Damages for breach of confidence may include the plaintiff's loss of business or injury to the plaintiff's business reputation [see Ojala v. Bohlin (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 292, 302-303, 2 Cal.Rptr. 919 (action for unfair competition before development of breach of confidence tort)].

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Cartwright Act Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 3400 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

5-34 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3400

CACI 3400 Horizontal and Vertical Restraints (Use for Direct Competitors)--Price Fixing--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims [name of defendant] was involved in price fixing. Price fixing is an agreement to set, raise, lower, maintain, or stabilize the prices or other terms of trade charged or to be charged for a product or service, whether the prices agreed on were high or low, reasonable or unreasonable. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [and [name(s) of alleged coparticipant(s)]] agreed to fix [or] [set/raise/lower/maintain/stabilize] prices [or other terms of trade] charged or to be charged for [product/service];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended to apply to both actual and potential competitors. For cases involving vertical restraints, use this instruction but see additional special vertical restraint instructions contained in this series (CACI Nos. 3409, Vertical Restraints--Termination of Reseller, and 3410, Vertical Restraints--Agreement Between Seller and Reseller's Competitor).

In addition to price, price fixing includes any combination that "tampers with price structures." Like its federal counterpart, the Cartwright Act would seem to prohibit combinations that fix aspects of price such as costs, discounts, credits, financing, warranty, and delivery terms. Therefore, if this case concerns the fixing of an aspect of price, other than price itself, this instruction and those that are related to it should be adapted accordingly.

■ Business and Professions Code section 16726 provides: "Except as provided in this chapter, every trust is unlawful, against public policy and void."

■ Business and Professions Code section 16720(d) and (e) provides:

A trust is a combination of capital, skill or acts by two or more persons for any of the following purposes:

(d) To fix at any standard or figure, whereby its price to the public or consumer shall be in any manner controlled or established, any article or commodity of merchandise, produce or commerce intended for sale, barter, use or consumption in this State.

(e) To make or enter into or execute or carry out any contracts, obligations or agreements of any kind or description, by which they do all or any or any combination of any of the following:

(1) Bind themselves not to sell, dispose of or transport any article or any commodity or any article of trade, use, merchandise, commerce or consumption below a common standard figure, or fixed value.

(2) Agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure.

(3) Establish or settle the price of any article, commodity or transportation between them or themselves and others, so as directly or indirectly to preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves, or any purchasers or consumers in the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity.

(4) Agree to pool, combine or directly or indirectly unite any interests that they may have connected with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity, that its price might in any manner be affected.

■ " ' "To state a cause of action for conspiracy, the complaint must allege (1) the formation and operation of the conspiracy, (2) the wrongful act or acts done pursuant thereto, and (3) the damage resulting from such act or acts." ' Thus, the Supreme Court applied the pleading requirements for a civil conspiracy action under common law to a statutory action under the Cartwright Act for antitrust conspiracies." (Cellular Plus, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1224, 1236 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 308] , quoting Chicago Title Insurance Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp. (1968) 69 Cal.2d 305, 316 [70 Cal.Rptr. 849, 444 P.2d 481] .)

■ "A complaint for unlawful price fixing must allege facts demonstrating that separate entities conspired together. Only separate entities pursuing separate economic interests can conspire within the proscription of the antitrust laws against price fixing combinations." (Freeman v. San Diego Assn. of Realtors (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 171, 188-189 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 534] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The Cartwright Act prohibits every trust, defined as 'a combination of capital, skill or acts by two or more persons' for specified anticompetitive purposes. The federal Sherman Act prohibits every 'contract, combination ... or conspiracy, in restraint of trade.' The similar language of the two acts reflects their common objective to protect and promote competition. Since the Cartwright Act and the federal Sherman Act share similar language and objectives, California courts often look to federal precedents under the Sherman Act for guidance." (Chavez v. Whirlpool Corp. (2001) 93 Cal.App.4th 363, 369 [113 Cal.Rptr.2d 175] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The Cartwright Act, like the Sherman Act, prohibits 'combinations' for the purpose of restraining trade. '[A] combination means a concert of action by individuals or entities maintaining separate and independent interests.'" (Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 530, 543 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 706] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Two forms of conspiracy may be used to establish a violation of the antitrust laws: a horizontal restraint, consisting of a collaboration among competitors; or a vertical restraint, based upon an agreement between business entities occupying different levels of the marketing chain." (G.H.I.I. v. Mts, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 256, 267] , internal citations omitted.)

- " 'Horizontal combinations are cartels or agreements among competitors which restrain competition among enterprises at the same level of distribution. They are ordinarily illegal per se. Vertical restraints are imposed by persons or firms further up the chain of distribution of a specific product (or in rare cases, further down the chain) than the enterprise restrained. Vertical non-price restraints are tested under the rule of reason; that is, the plaintiff must prove that the restraint had an anticompetitive effect in the relevant market in order to prevail.' " (Exxon Corp. v. Superior Court (1997) 51 Cal.App.4th 1672, 1680-1681 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 195] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "In general, a Cartwright Act price fixing complaint must allege specific facts in addition to stating the purpose or effect of the price fixing agreement and that the accused was a member of or acted pursuant to the price fixing agreement." (Cellular Plus, Inc., supra, 14 Cal.App.4th at p. 1237 .)

- "[A] conspiracy among competitors to restrict output and/or raise prices [is] unlawful per se without regard to any of its effects" (Aguilar v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2001) 25 Cal.4th 826, 851 [107 Cal.Rptr.2d 841, 24 P.3d 493] .)

- " 'Among the practices which the courts have heretofore deemed to be unlawful in and of themselves are price fixing, division of markets, group boycotts, and tying arrangements.' The "per se" doctrine means that a particular practice and the setting in which it occurs is sufficient to compel the conclusion that competition is unreasonably restrained and the practice is consequently illegal.' " (Oakland-Alameda County Builders' Exchange v. F. P. Lathrop Construction Co. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 354, 361-362 [93 Cal.Rptr. 602, 482 P.2d 226] , internal citations omitted.)

- "It has long been settled that an agreement to fix prices is unlawful per se. It is no excuse that the prices fixed are themselves reasonable." (Catalano Inc. v. Target Sales, Inc. (1980) 446 U.S. 643, 647 [100 S.Ct. 1925, 64 L.Ed.2d 580] .)

- "Under both California and federal law, agreements fixing or tampering with prices are illegal per se." (Oakland-Alameda County Builders' Exchange, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 363 .)

- "These rules apply whether the price-fixing scheme is horizontal or vertical; that is, whether the price is fixed among competitors or businesses at different economic levels." (Mailand v. Burckle (1978) 20 Cal.3d 367, 377 [143 Cal.Rptr. 1, 572 P.2d 1142] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Under the authorities ... the agreement between plaintiffs and defendants and between defendants and Powerine were unlawful per se. It is, therefore, not necessary to inquire whether these arrangements had an actual anticompetitive effect." (Mailand, supra, 20 Cal.3d at p. 380 .)

- "The alleged antitrust violation need not be the sole or controlling cause of the injury in order to establish proximate cause, but only need be a substantial factor in bringing about the injury." (Saxer v. Philip Morris, Inc. (1975) 54 Cal.App.3d 7, 23 [126 Cal.Rptr. 327] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The plaintiff in a Cartwright Act proceeding must show that an antitrust violation was the proximate cause of his injuries. The frequently stated 'standing to sue' requirement is merely a rule that an action for violation of the antitrust laws may be maintained only by a party within the 'target area' of the antitrust violation, and not by one incidentally injured thereby. An 'antitrust injury' must be proved; that is, the type of injury the antitrust laws were intended to prevent, and which flows from the invidious conduct which renders defendants' acts unlawful. Finally, a plaintiff must show an injury within the area of the economy that is endangered by a breakdown of competitive conditions." (Kolling v. Dow Jones & Co. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 709, 723-724] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "We acknowledge that a plaintiff ... must often rely on inference rather than evidence since, usually, unlawful conspiracy is conceived in secrecy and lives its life in the shadows. But, when he does so, he must all the same rely on an inference implying unlawful conspiracy more likely than permissible competition, either in itself or together with other inferences or evidence." (Aguilar, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 857 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The exact parameters of 'antitrust injury' under section 16750 have not yet been established through either court decisions or legislation." (Cellular Plus, Inc., supra, 14 Cal.App.4th at p. 1234 .)

■ Business and Professions Code section 16750(a) confers a private right of action for treble damages and attorneys fees on "[a]ny person who is injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden or declared unlawful by this chapter."

This instruction applies to agreements between competitors that are directly intended to affect competition facing them. In determining whether to give this per se instruction or the rule of reason instructions, it is important whether the challenged combination was horizontal (between competitors), vertical (between sellers and buyers), or some combination of the two. Horizontal combinations are subject to per se instructions; vertical combinations to the rule of reason instructions. Those combinations falling in between must be carefully scrutinized to determine whether their principal purpose is to restrain competition between competitors or to downstream resellers by the seller.

Directions for Use

This instruction applies to agreements between competitors that are directly intended to affect competition facing them. In determining whether to give this per se instruction or the rule of reason instructions, it is important whether the challenged combination was horizontal (between competitors), vertical (between sellers and buyers), or some combination of the two. Horizontal combinations are subject to per se instructions; vertical combinations to the rule of reason instructions. Those combinations falling in between must be carefully scrutinized to determine whether their principal purpose is to restrain competition between competitors or to downstream resellers by the seller.

For additional instructions regarding the rule of reason, see CACI Nos. 3411 through 3414.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended for actions that are limited only by the bounds of human ingenuity. Any such conduct, if it does not fit into a per se category, is judged under the rule of reason. Thus, the illegality of a termination that results from a buyer's disobedience with a seller's exclusive "dealing," territorial location, or customer restrictions, unless ancillary to price fixing, should be resolved under the rule of reason. For cases involving vertical restraints, see also the vertical restraint instructions contained in this series.

It is possible for a complaint to include both per se and rule of reason claims. Also, per se claims alternatively may be tested under the rule of reason if there is reason to believe that proof of the per se claims may fall short. If either is the case, connecting language between the pertinent instructions should be provided, such as: "If you find that [name of defendant]'s conduct did not amount to an agreement to [specify conduct, e.g., "fix resale prices," "boycott," "allocate markets"], [name of plaintiff] may still prove that the conduct otherwise lessened competition."

For additional instructions regarding the rule of reason, see CACI Nos. 3411 through 3414.

CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

5-34 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3406

CACI 3406 Horizontal and Vertical Restraints--"Agreement" Explained

An agreement exists if two or more persons or companies combine or join together for a common purpose. No written document or specific understanding is necessary for an agreement to exist. For [name of defendant] to be part of an agreement, [he/she/it] must have known [he/she/it] was joining in an agreement, even if [he/she/it] was not aware of all of its aspects.

[An agreement also may exist if a [person/company] unwillingly participates--that is, if another person coerces [him/her/it] to join the agreement against [his/her/its] wishes.]

[To prove the existence of an agreement, [name of plaintiff] must show more than a similarity between [name of defendant]'s conduct and the conduct of others. Independent business judgment in response to market forces sometimes leads competitors to act in a similar way because of their individual self-interests. That conduct alone is not enough to prove an agreement. However, similar behavior, along with other evidence suggesting joint conduct, may be used to decide whether there was an agreement.]

In deciding whether [name of defendant]'s conduct was the result of an agreement, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) The nature of the acts;
- (b) The relationship between the parties;
- (c) Whether the conduct was contrary to the best interests of some of the persons or companies in question;
- (d) Whether the conduct lacked a legitimate business purpose; and

(e) Whether the conduct occurred following communications concerning the subject of the conduct.

New September 2003

The third paragraph should be read only where a horizontal agreement is involved.

■ Business and Professions Code section 16720(a) provides, in part: "A trust is a combination of capital, skill or acts by two or more persons for any of the following purposes: To create or carry out restrictions in trade or commerce. ..."

■ "[A] necessary 'conspiracy' or 'combination' cognizable as an antitrust action is formed where a trader uses coercive tactics to impose restraints upon otherwise uncooperative businesses. ■ "Price information published without 'plus factors,' which indicate an agreement, is judged under the rule of reason. CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

CACI 3407 Horizontal and Vertical Restraints--Agreement Between Company and Its Employee

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant's agent/employee/officer], who is an [agent/employee/officer] of [name of defendant], had an agreement with [name of defendant]. You may find that [name of defendant's agent/employee/officer] and [name of defendant] had the required agreement only if you decide that [he/she] had a separate economic interest from [name of defendant] and acted in [his/her] own separate interest.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended to clarify the circumstances under which an employee, agent, or officer can form an unlawful agreement. The parties may wish to develop an example to illuminate the issue, such as an employee running a side business that may combine with the business of his employer to restrain trade.

- "[T]he Act prohibits the combination of resources of two or more independent interests for the purpose of restraining commerce and preventing market competition in the variety of ways listed in the statute." (Lowell v. Mother's Cake and Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 13, 23 [144 Cal.Rptr. 664] , internal citation omitted.)
- "[A] corporation cannot conspire with itself or its agents for purposes of the antitrust laws." (Kolling v. Dow Jones & Co. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 709, 720 [187 Cal.Rptr. 797] , internal citation omitted.)
- "It is also held that an individual acting alone through his agent or a corporation acting alone through its officers is not a combination in restraint of trade proscribed by the statute. The rationale of these decisions is that the acts of the agents or employees in the operation of the business are the acts of the principal. ... We are of the opinion that the language of section 16720 of the Business and Professions Code contemplates concert of action by separate individuals or entities maintaining separate and independent interests" (Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d 672, 677-678 [73 Cal.Rptr. 494] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]t is well settled that a complaint for antitrust violations which fails to allege such concerted action by separate entities maintaining separate and independent interests is subject to demurrer." CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

CACI 3408 Vertical Restraints--"Coercion" Explained

Coercion is conduct that interferes with the freedom of a reseller to sell in accordance with his or her own judgment. [It may include a threat by [name of defendant] to stop doing business with [name of plaintiff]/a reseller] or to hold back any product or service important to [his/her/its] competition in the market.] A unilateral decision to deal or refuse to deal with a particular reseller does not constitute coercion.

Coercion may be proven directly or indirectly. In deciding whether there was coercion, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) Whether [name of defendant] penalized or threatened to penalize [name of plaintiff] for not following [his/her/its] suggestions;
- (b) Whether [name of defendant] made or threatened to make an important benefit depend on [name of plaintiff] following [his/her/its] suggestions;
- (c) Whether [name of defendant] required [name of plaintiff] to get approval before doing something other than what [he/she/it] suggested; and
- (d) The relative bargaining power of [name of defendant] and [name of plaintiff].

New September 2003

In the bracketed portion of the first paragraph, the word "reseller" should be used if the plaintiff is not the reseller.

■ "[T]he 'conspiracy' or 'combination' necessary to support an antitrust action can be found where a supplier or producer, by coercive conduct, imposes restraints to which distributors involuntarily adhere. If a 'single trader' pressures customers or dealers into adhering to resale price maintenance, territorial restrictions, exclusive dealing arrangements or illegal 'tie-ins,' an unlawful combination is established, irrespective of any monopoly or conspiracy, and despite the recognized right of a producer to determine with whom it will deal." (Kolling v. Dow Jones & Co. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 709, 720 [187 Cal.Rptr. 797] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If a seller does no more than announce a policy designed to restrain trade, and declines to sell to those who fail to adhere to the policy, no illegal combination is established." (Kolling, supra, 137 Cal.App.3d at p. 721 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A manufacturer may choose those with whom it wishes to deal and unilaterally may refuse to deal with a distributor or customer for business reasons without running afoul of the antitrust laws. It will thus be rare for a court to infer a vertical combination solely from a business's unilateral refusal to deal with distributors or customers who do not comply with certain conditions. Nonetheless, there is a line of cases that supports the proposition that a manufacturer may form a 'conspiracy' or 'combination' under the antitrust laws if it imposes restraints on dealers or customers by coercive conduct and they involuntarily adhere to those restraints." (Dimidowich v. Bell & Howell (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 1473, 1478 , internal citations omitted.)

5-34 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3409

CACI 3409 Vertical Restraints--Termination of Reseller

A supplier, acting independently, may choose those resellers to which it wishes to sell or not sell. It may announce to those resellers the terms of resale, including resale prices, in advance. The supplier may terminate those resellers that do not follow these terms as long as the supplier acts independently in doing so.

However, if a supplier coerces a reseller to follow its suggested terms of resale, and the reseller does so, this conduct is an agreement to restrain competition.

New September 2003

There are circumstances where the terminated party that has combined with the supplier, other than as a buyer, may have a claim. For example, a customer that leases the supplier's product and then subleases it may also invoke this law. In such cases, this instruction should be adapted accordingly.

■ "If a seller does no more than announce a policy designed to restrain trade, and declines to sell to those who fail to adhere to the policy, no illegal combination is established. Also, a supplier may suggest policies and use persuasion to obtain adherence. At the same time, an illegal combination may be found where a supplier secures compliance with announced policies in restraint of trade by means which go beyond mere announcement of policy and the refusal to deal. If, for example, the supplier takes 'affirmative action' to bring about the involuntary acquiescence of its dealers, an unlawful combination exists." (Kolling v. Dow Jones & Co. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 709, 721 [187 Cal.Rptr. 797] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] manufacturer's announcement of a resale price policy and its refusal to deal with dealers who do not comply coupled with the dealers' voluntary acquiescence in the policy does not constitute an implied agreement or an unlawful combination as a matter of law. An unlawful combination arises, however, if the manufacturer goes beyond those measures by seeking communication of a dealer's acquiescence or agreement to secure the dealer's compliance, such as by means of coercion, and the dealer so communicates." CACI 3410 Vertical Restraints--Agreement Between Seller and Reseller's Competitor

If a reseller coerces a supplier to refuse to do business with a competing reseller, and the supplier does so, this conduct is an agreement to restrain competition.

Refusing to do business with a reseller after receiving complaints by a competing reseller is not, by itself, an agreement to restrain competition. However, if a supplier receives such complaints and then agrees with the complaining reseller to act on them, that becomes an agreement to restrain competition.

New September 2003

If the complaining competitor is also a named defendant, this instruction must be rewritten to reflect that circumstance.

■ In Bert G. Gianelli Distrib. Co. v. Beck & Co. (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 1020, 1043-1044 [219 Cal.Rptr. 203], overruled on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal.4th 384, 389 [46 Cal.Rptr.3d 668, 139 P.3d 56], the Court of Appeal held that proof that the reseller competing against the plaintiff complained to the seller about plaintiff's pricing and that the seller then took action against the plaintiff reseller in response to the complaint was sufficient to support a finding of a combination.

■ "[T]he plaintiff must present evidence that tends to exclude, although it need not actually exclude, the possibility that the alleged conspirators acted independently rather than collusively. In deciding whether [name of defendant]'s challenged restraint had an anticompetitive or beneficial purpose or effect on competition, you should consider the results the restraint was intended to achieve or actually did achieve. In balancing these purposes or effects, you also may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) The nature of the restraint;
- (b) The probable effect of the restraint on the business involved;
- (c) The history of the restraint;
- (d) The reasonableness of the stated purpose for the restraint;
- (e) The availability of less restrictive means to accomplish the stated purpose;
- (f) The portion of the market affected by the restraint; [and]
- (g) The extent of [name of defendant]'s market power; [and]
- (h) [Insert other relevant consideration].

New September 2003

- "The basic purpose of the antitrust laws is to prevent undue restraints upon trade which have a significant effect on competition. A contract, combination, or conspiracy is an illegal restraint of trade if it constitutes a per se violation of the statute or has as its purpose or effect an unreasonable restraint of trade. The determination of the existence of such an illegal restraint of trade turns upon findings of fact and involves 'weigh[ing] all of the circumstances of a case.' " (Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Service Bur. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 302, 314-315 [148 Cal.Rptr. 918, 583 P.2d 777] , internal citations omitted and footnotes.)

■ "The 'rule of reason' permits certain restraints upon trade to be found reasonable. In order to determine whether the restrictions are reasonable, 'the court must ordinarily consider the facts peculiar to the business to which the restraint is applied; its condition before and after the restraint was imposed; the nature of the restraint and its effect, actual or probable. The history of the restraint, the evil believed to exist, the reason for adopting the particular remedy, the purpose or end sought to be attained, are all relevant facts.' 'Whether a restraint of trade is reasonable is a question of fact to be determined at trial.' " (*Kolling v. CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

CACI 3412 Rule of Reason--"Market Power" Explained

Market power is the ability to increase prices or reduce output without losing market share. The higher a seller's market share, the more likely it has market power.

In deciding whether a seller has market power, you should consider how difficult it is for a potential competitor to successfully enter the market. The more difficult it is to successfully enter a market, the more likely a seller has market power within that market. Market power is less likely to exist if it is not difficult for potential competitors to enter a market successfully.

Each market has two components: a product market and a geographic market.

New September 2003

See instructions that follow explaining the concepts of product market and geographic market: CACI Nos. 3413, Rule of Reason--"Product Market" Explained, and 3414, Rule of Reason--"Geographic Market" Explained.

- "[C]ase law holds that the need to prove market power is a threshold consideration in an antitrust case and is the sine qua non of recovery." (Exxon Corp. v. Superior Court (1997) 51 Cal.App.4th 1672, 1681 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 195] , footnote omitted.)

- " 'To meet his initial burden in establishing that the practice is an unreasonable restraint of trade, plaintiff must show that the activity is the type that restrains trade and that the restraint is likely to be of significant magnitude... . Ordinarily, a plaintiff to do this must delineate a relevant market and show that the defendant plays enough of a role in that market to impair competition significantly.' " (Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 530, 542 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 706] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "As a practical matter, market power is usually equated with market share. 'Since market power can rarely be measured directly by the methods of litigation, it is normally inferred from possession of a substantial percentage of the sales in a market carefully defined in terms of both product and geography.' " (Redwood Theatres, Inc. v. Festival Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 687, 704 [248 Cal.Rptr. 189] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "By reducing the substitutability of products, a high level of product differentiation results in relative inelasticity of cross-product demand. This inelasticity creates opportunities for suppliers to manipulate the price and quantity of goods sold or to entrench their market position by creating barriers to entry in a market." (Redwood Theatres, Inc., supra, 200 Cal.App.3d at pp. 706-707 , footnote omitted.)

CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

5-34 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3413

CACI 3413 Rule of Reason--"Product Market" Explained

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the product market is [insert claimed product market, e.g., "paper clips"]. [Name of defendant] claims that the product market is [insert claimed product market, e.g., "all paper fasteners"].

To define the product market, you must determine which [products/services] are in the market in which [name of defendant] is claimed to have carried out its restraint of trade.

A product market consists of all [products/services] that can reasonably be used for the same purpose. [Products/services] are not in the same product market if users are not likely to substitute one for the other.

In deciding whether products are reasonable substitutes, you may consider whether a small increase in the price of one product would cause a considerable number of customers of that product to switch to a second product. If so, these two products are likely to be in the same market. If a significant increase in the price of one product does not cause a significant number of consumers to switch to a second product, these products are not likely to be in the same market.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The word "services" should be substituted for "products" wherever that word appears if the case concerns services instead of products.

In some cases, an example may be helpful to illustrate the principle of "reasonable interchangeability," such as the following. Of course, this example may be modified to best suit the facts of the case.

If the price of a loaf of whole wheat bread increases by 10 or 15 cents, a considerable number of customers may decide to purchase white bread instead. Although these products are somewhat different, they may be reasonably interchangeable for purposes of making toast and sandwiches. They are likely then to be in the same relevant product market. However, the relationship between whole wheat bread and other bread products may be different. Thus, customers may not believe hot dog buns as quite so interchangeable. Therefore, a 10, 15, or even 50-cent increase in the price of a loaf of wheat bread is not likely to cause too many customers to buy hot dog buns instead. These two products, then, are not likely to be in the same relevant market.

Sources and Authority

■ "The United States Supreme Court has declared that the relevant market is determined by considering 'commodities reasonably interchangeable by consumers for the same purposes.' Or, in other words, the relevant market is composed of products that have reasonable interchangeability for the purpose for which they are produced." (Exxon Corp. v. Superior Court (1997) 51 Cal.App.4th 1672, 1682 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 195] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In antitrust law, the interchangeability of products is usually considered in the definition of markets; the boundary of a relevant market is defined by a significant degree of product differentiation." (Redwood Theatres, Inc. v. Festival Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 687, 705 [248 Cal.Rptr. 189] .)

CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

5-34 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3414

CACI 3414 Rule of Reason--"Geographic Market" Explained

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the relevant geographic market is [identify area, e.g., "the city of Los Angeles"]. [Name of defendant] claims that the relevant geographic market is [identify area, e.g., "the state of California"].

A geographic market is the area where buyers turn for alternate sources of supply or where sellers normally sell. The geographic market may or may not be the same as the area where the parties in this case currently compete or do business. It may be smaller or larger than that area.

A geographic market may be limited to the area where a product can be shipped and sold profitably. You may consider whether purchasing patterns are so different in the two areas that products sold in one area tend not to be sold in another. For example, this might occur if the cost of transporting a product into or out of the claimed geographic market is large compared to the value of the product.

In deciding whether products are in the same geographic market, you may consider whether a small increase in the price of the product in one area would cause a considerable number of customers in that area to buy the product in another area. If so, these two areas are likely to be in the same geographic market. If a significant increase in the price in one area does not cause a significant number of consumers to buy the product in another area, these areas are not likely to be in the same geographic market.

New September 2003

The word "service" should be substituted for "product" wherever that word appears if the case concerns services rather than products.

In some cases an example may be helpful to illustrate the terms used. Regarding the significance of price increases, an example like that given in the Directions for Use in CACI No. 3413, Rule of Reason--"Product Market" Explained, may be adapted. Regarding the significance of customer purchasing patterns, the following example may suffice:

Retail customers are not likely to travel too far to buy shoes. So, a product market defined as "shoe stores" is not likely to include shoe stores in two towns that are 25 miles from each other. However, if the product market is for an inventory of shoes purchased by shoe stores at wholesale, the geographic market is likely to be nationwide, since shoe stores are likely to purchase shoes no matter where companies distributing shoes are located.

Regarding the significance of transporting costs, the following example may suffice:

Gravel, which is relatively cheap but heavy, and therefore relatively costly to ship, is likely to compete in a narrower geographic market than computer software, which, if valued by weight, is more costly per pound than gravel but also much less costly to ship per unit. Accordingly, a geographic market defined as a city or a region may be appropriate for assessing gravel competition, while a nationwide, or even worldwide, geographic market may be more appropriate for assessing the competition between software sellers.

■ The "area of effective competition in the known line of commerce must be charted by careful selection of the market area in which the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practicably turn for supplies." (U.S. v. Philadelphia National Bank (1963) 374 U.S. 321, 359 [83 S.Ct. 1715, 10 L.Ed.2d 915] .)

■ "The term 'relevant market' encompasses notions of geography as well as product use, quality, and description. The geographic market extends to the ' " 'area of effective' " competition ... where buyers can turn for alternate sources of supply.' " (Oltz v. St. Peter's Community Hospital (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 1440, 1446 , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

5-34 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3420

CACI 3420 Tying--Real Estate, Products, or Services--Essential Factual Elements (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16720)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that there is an unlawful tying arrangement in which [specify the particular real estate, product, or services] is the tying product and [specify the particular real estate, product, or services] is the tied product. A "tying arrangement" is the sale of one product, called the "tying product," in which the buyer is required or coerced to also purchase a different, separate product, called the "tied product." For example, if a supermarket sells flour only if its customers also buy sugar, that supermarket would be engaged in tying. Flour would be the tying product and sugar the tied product.

To establish this claim against [name of defendant], [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [tying item] and [tied item] are separate and distinct;
- 2. That [name of defendant] will sell [tying item] only if the buyer also purchases [tied item], or that [name of defendant] sold [tying item] and required or otherwise coerced buyers to [also purchase [tied item]] [agree not to purchase [tied item] from any other supplier];
- 3. That [name of defendant] has sufficient economic power in the market for [tying item] to coerce at least some buyers of [tying item] into [purchasing [tied item]] [agreeing not to purchase [tied item] from a competitor of [name of defendant]];
- 4. That the conduct involves a substantial amount of sales, in terms of the total dollar value of [tied item];
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction is written for claims brought under Business and Professions Code section 16720. A claim under this section may involve products, land, or services as the tying item and products, land, or services as the tied item. Section 16720 applies a stricter test for unlawful tying than does Business and Professions Code section 16727. (See CACI No. 3421, Tying--Products or Services--Essential Factual Elements.) Therefore, if products are the tying item and products or services the tied item, CACI No. 3421 should be used instead.

The example given in the instruction involving flour and sugar was used in two federal cases, Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States (1958) 356 U.S. 1, 5-6 [78 S.Ct. 514, 2 L.Ed.2d 545] and Jefferson Parish Hospital District No. 2 v. Hyde (1984) 466 U.S. 2, 12 [104 S.Ct. 1551, 80 L.Ed.2d 2], but also can help explain the Cartwright Act. The terms "product," "sell," and "purchase" used in this instruction may need to be modified to reflect the facts of the particular case, since tying arrangements challenged under Business and Professions Code section 16720 may involve services, real property, intangibles, leases, licenses, and the like.

An unlawful tying arrangement may also be shown if the buyer agrees not to purchase the tied product or service from any other supplier as a condition of obtaining the tying product. If the tying claim involves such a "tie-out" agreement, select the appropriate options in elements 2 and 3.

If the "tying product" is land and the "tied product" is a service or a commodity, logic suggests that the first element, i.e., their distinctness, is beyond dispute and that including this element may create confusion. In such a case, the court may recite this element and then advise the jury that it has been established by the plaintiff or is undisputed by the defendant. The word "parcels," "lots," or similar terms should be used if both items are land, as in these cases the separateness of the tying and tied land could be in dispute.

Sources and Authority

- Business and Professions Code section 16720 provides:

A trust is a combination of capital, skill or acts by two or more persons for any of the following purposes:

- (a) To create or carry out restrictions in trade or commerce.
- (b) To limit or reduce the production, or increase the price of merchandise or of any commodity.
- (c) To prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transportation, sale or purchase of merchandise, produce or any commodity.
- (d) To fix at any standard or figure, whereby its price to the public or consumer shall be in any manner controlled or established, any article or commodity of merchandise, produce or commerce intended for sale, barter, use or consumption in this State.

(e) To make or enter into or execute or carry out any contracts, obligations or agreements of any kind or description, by which they do all or any or any combination of any of the following:

(1) Bind themselves not to sell, dispose of or transport any article or any commodity or any article of trade, use, merchandise, commerce or consumption below a common standard figure, or fixed value.

(2) Agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure.

(3) Establish or settle the price of any article, commodity or transportation between them or themselves and others, so as directly or indirectly to preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves, or any purchasers or consumers in the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity.

(4) Agree to pool, combine or directly or indirectly unite any interests that they may have connected with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity, that its price might in any manner be affected.

■ "It is unlawful under California's Cartwright Act, as relevant here, for a seller to use its market power in one market to force or coerce a buyer to purchase its product or service in a distinct market in which the seller does not have such market power or to refrain from buying from the seller's competitor. The result of such coercion is called a tying arrangement, in which the market controlled by the seller consists of sales of the 'tying' product or service, and the market over which derivative power is exercised consists of sales of the 'tied' product or service. Where such an arrangement is found, it is illegal per se; that is, the seller's justifications for the arrangement are not measured by a rule of reasonableness." (UAS Management, Inc. v. Mater Misericordiae Hospital (2008) 169 Cal.App.4th 357, 368-369 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 81] .)

■ "Antitrust laws against tying arrangements seek to eradicate the evils that (1) competitors are denied free access to the market for the tied product not because the seller imposing the tying requirement has a better or less expensive tied product, but because of the seller's power or leverage in the market for the tying product; and (2) buyers are forced to forego their free choice between competing tied products. Tying arrangements are illegal per se 'whenever a party has sufficient economic power with respect to the tying product to appreciably restrain free competition in the market for the tied product' and when 'a total amount of business, substantial enough in terms of dollar-volume so as not to be merely de minimis, is foreclosed to competitors by the tie.' " (Freeman v. San Diego Assn. of Realtors (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 171, 184 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 534] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Even when not per se illegal, a tying arrangement violates the Cartwright Act if it unreasonably restrains trade." (Morrison v. Viacom, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 1514, 1524 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 544] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The threshold element for a tying claim is the existence of separate products or services in separate markets. Absent separate products in separate markets, the alleged tying and tied products are in reality a single product." (Freeman, supra, 77 Cal.App.4th at p. 184 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Plaintiff alleged the conspiratorial agreement among defendants constituted an illegal tying arrangement per se pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 16720. 'The elements of a per se tying arrangement violative of section 16720 are: "(1) a tying agreement, arrangement or condition existed whereby the sale of the tying product was linked to the sale of the tied product or service; (2) the party had sufficient economic power in the tying market to coerce the purchase of the tied product; (3) a substantial amount of sale was affected in the tied product; and (4) the complaining party sustained pecuniary loss as a consequence of the unlawful act." ' ' (SC Manufactured Homes, Inc. v. Liebert (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 68, 86 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 73] , footnotes and internal citations omitted.)

■ " ' "[T]ying agreements serve hardly any purpose beyond the suppression of competition." They deny competitors free access to the market for the tied product, not because the party imposing the tying requirements has a better product or a lower price but because of his power or leverage in another market. At the same time buyers are forced to forego their free choice between competing products. For these reasons "tying agreements fare harshly under the laws forbidding restraints of trade." ' ' (Suburban Mobile Homes v. AMFAC Communities (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 532, 542 [161 Cal.Rptr. 811] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he burden of proving an illegal tying arrangement differs somewhat under section 16720 and section 16727. Under section 16727 the plaintiff must establish that the tie-in substantially lessens competition. This standard is met if either the seller enjoys sufficient economic power in the tying product to appreciably restrain competition in the tied product or if a not insubstantial volume of commerce in the tied product is restrained. Under section 16720 standard, both conditions must be met." (Suburban Mobile Homes, supra, 101 Cal.App.3d at p. 549 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The alleged antitrust violation need not be the sole or controlling cause of the injury in order to establish proximate cause, but only need be a substantial factor in bringing about the injury." (Saxer v. Philip Morris, Inc. (1975) 54 Cal.App.3d 7, 23 [126 Cal.Rptr. 327] , internal citation omitted.)

Directions for Use

This instruction applies to claims under Business and Professions Code section 16727, which applies only where the tying product consists of "goods, merchandise, machinery, supplies, [or] commodities" and the tied product consists of "goods, merchandise, supplies, commodities, or services." Section 16727 does not apply if the tying product is land or services, nor does it apply if the tied product is land.

The example given was used in two federal cases, Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States (1958) 356 U.S. 1, 5-6 [78 S.Ct. 514, 2 L.Ed.2d 545] and Jefferson Parish Hospital District No. 2 v. Hyde (1984) 466 U.S. 2, 12 [104 S.Ct. 1551, 80 L.Ed.2d 2], but also can help explain the Cartwright Act. The terms "product," "sell," and "purchase" used in this instruction may need to be modified to reflect the facts of the particular case, since tying arrangements challenged under Business and Professions Code section 16720 may involve services, real property, intangibles, leases, licenses, and the like.

Also, an unlawful tying arrangement may be shown where the buyer agrees not to purchase the tied product or service from any other supplier as a condition of obtaining the tying product. If the tying claim involves such a "tie-out" agreement, this instruction must be modified accordingly.

- Business and Professions Code section 16727 provides: "It shall be unlawful for any person to lease or make a sale or contract for the sale of goods, merchandise, machinery, supplies, commodities for use within the State, or to fix a price charged therefor, or discount from, or rebate upon, such price, on the condition, agreement or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, merchandise, machinery, supplies, commodities, or services of a competitor or competitors of the lessor or seller, where the effect of such lease, sale, or contract for sale or such condition, agreement or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of trade or commerce in any section of the State."

- "It is unlawful under California's Cartwright Act, as relevant here, for a seller to use its market power in one market to force or coerce a buyer to purchase its product or service in a distinct market in which the seller does not have such market power or to refrain from buying from the seller's competitor. - "[T]he specific elements of an unlawful tying cause of action have been stated as follows: '(1) a tying agreement, arrangement or condition ... whereby the sale of the tying product [or service] was linked to the sale of the tied product or service; (2) the party had sufficient economic power in the tying market to coerce the purchase of the tied product; (3) a substantial amount of sale was effected in the tied product; and (4) the complaining party sustained pecuniary loss as a consequence of the unlawful act.' " (UAS Management, Inc., supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 369 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he burden of proving an illegal tying arrangement differs somewhat under section 16720 and section 16727. CACI 3422 Tying--"Separate Products" Explained

In deciding whether [tying product or service] and [tied product or service] are separate and distinct, you should consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) Whether competitors offer to sell [tied product or service] separately from [tying product or service] or only as a unit;
- (b) Whether the combined product is composed of varying assortments of component parts;
- (c) Whether buyers are or can be charged separately for the [products/services]; and
- (d) Whether [name of defendant] ever sells or offers to sell [tied product or service] separate from [tying product or service].

Not all of these factors need be present in order for you to conclude that [tying product or service] and [tied product or service] are separate and distinct [products or services, etc.].

Directions for Use

If an example is thought to be in order, users may wish to consider the following:

For example, even though belt buckles are sometimes sold separately from belts, a belt buckle is normally considered a component of a belt. Therefore, a belt and buckle would normally be considered one product under the law in this case. On the other hand, while belts and wallets are sometimes packaged and sold together, they are not normally considered components of a single product and are normally purchased separately. Therefore, belts and wallets would normally be considered two separate products under the law in this case.

Sources and Authority

■ "Although we have not found ... any definitive test for the determination of this question, the following factors should be taken into account: (1) Whether competitors offer to sell the products or services separately or only as a unit. (2) Whether the combined product or service is composed of varying assortments of component parts. (3) Whether buyers are or can be charged separately for the allegedly separate products or services. (4) Whether the defendant ever sells or offers to sell the products or services separately." (*Corwin v. CHAPTER 34 California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions

CACI 3423 Tying--"Economic Power" Explained

In determining whether [name of defendant] has sufficient economic power in the market for [tying item], you may consider whether [name of defendant] has such a large share of the market for [tying item] that buyers do not have alternate sources of [tying item] or a reasonably available substitute. If [name of defendant] has economic power, it may be established even though it exists with respect to some, but not all, buyers.

You may also consider whether a buyer would be unable to easily locate a similar or equally desirable product in the marketplace. If buyers do not generally consider other products to be substitutes, this fact may give [name of defendant] economic power over its [tied item]. The fact that [name of defendant] can produce [tying item] in an efficient manner or at a high level of quality does not, by itself, mean that competitors do not offer a similar product.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes that the plaintiff is seeking relief under Business and Professions Code section 16720. If the plaintiff is instead seeking relief under Business and Professions Code section 16727, this element is not required, so long as the plaintiff proves that the claimed tie-in affected a "not insubstantial amount" of sales of the tied product. If that proof is not summarily established or agreed to, then this instruction also must be read in such cases.

Sources and Authority

- "[W]e emphasize that the power over the tying product ... can be sufficient even though the power falls short of dominance and even though the power exists only with respect to some buyers in the market. As the cases unanimously underline, such crucial economic power may be inferred from the tying product's desirability to consumers or from uniqueness in its attributes." (*Suburban Mobile Homes v. ■ "Tying arrangements are illegal per se 'whenever a party has sufficient economic power with respect to the tying product to appreciably restrain free competition in the market for the tied product' and when 'a total amount of business, substantial enough in terms of dollar-volume so as not to be merely de minimis, is foreclosed to competitors by the tie.' - "The Noerr-Pennington doctrine provides that there is no antitrust liability under the Sherman Act for efforts to influence government which are protected by the First Amendment right to petition for redress of grievances, even if the motive behind the efforts is anticompetitive. An exception to the doctrine arises when efforts to influence government are merely a sham; such efforts are not protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine and are subject to antitrust liability." (Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer

- "Stated most generally, the Noerr-Pennington doctrine declares that efforts to influence government action are not within the scope of the Sherman Act, regardless of anticompetitive purpose or effect." (Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal.3d 311, 320 [216 Cal.Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58] , internal citations omitted.)

- " 'The right of the people to inform their representatives in government of their desires with respect to the passage or enforcement of laws cannot properly be made to depend upon their intent in doing so. It is neither unusual nor illegal for people to seek action on laws in the hope that they may bring about an advantage to themselves and a disadvantage to their competitors.' " (Hi-Top Steel Corp., supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 576 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[B]ecause Noerr-Pennington protects federal constitutional rights, it applies in all contexts, even where a state law doctrine advances a similar goal." (Theme Promotions, Inc. v. News Am. Mktg. FSI (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 991, 1007 .)

- "An entity loses Noerr-Pennington immunity from antitrust liability if its conduct falls within the 'sham' exception to the doctrine. That is, '[t]here may be situations in which a publicity campaign, ostensibly directed toward influencing governmental action, is a mere sham to cover what is actually nothing more than an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor and the application of the Sherman Act would be justified.' " (Kaiser Found. Health Plan, Inc. v. Abbott Labs, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 552 F.3d 1033, 1044 , internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he sham exception 'encompasses situations in which persons use the governmental process--as opposed to the outcome of that process--as an anticompetitive weapon.' It 'involves a defendant whose activities are "not genuinely aimed at procuring favorable government action" at all, not one "who 'genuinely seeks to achieve his governmental result, but does so through improper means.' " ' " (Hi-Top Steel Corp., supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 577 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[W]e hold the sham exception to the Noerr-Pennington doctrine is applicable in California." (Hi-Top Steel Corp., supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 579 .)

- "[W]e identified three circumstances in which the sham litigation exception might apply: first, where the lawsuit is objectively baseless and the defendant's motive in bringing it was unlawful; second, where the conduct involves a series of lawsuits 'brought pursuant to a policy of starting legal proceedings without regard to the merits' and for an unlawful purpose; and third, if the allegedly unlawful conduct 'consists of making intentional misrepresentations to the court, litigation can be deemed a sham if 'a party's knowing fraud upon, or its intentional misrepresentations to, the court deprive the litigation of its legitimacy.' " (Sosa v. DIRECTV, Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 437 F.3d 923, 938 , internal citations omitted.)

- "The Supreme Court has endorsed a two-part test for sham litigation. First, the lawsuit must be objectively baseless in the sense that no reasonable litigant could reasonably expect success on the merits. Only if the challenged litigation is objectively baseless may we consider the litigant's subjective motivation. The question then is 'whether the baseless lawsuit conceals an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor, through the use of the governmental process--as opposed to the outcome of that process--as an anticompetitive weapon.' " (Theme Promotions, Inc., supra, 546 F.3d at p. 1007 , internal citations omitted.)

- "Even though [plaintiff] must ultimately prove the existence of a 'sham' by clear and convincing evidence, it need only show that there is a genuine issue of material fact to avoid summary judgment." (Kaiser Found. Health Plan, Inc., supra, 552 F.3d at p. 1044.)

■ "While the Noerr-Pennington doctrine was formulated in the context of antitrust cases, it has been applied or discussed in cases involving other types of civil liability, including liability for interference with contractual relations or prospective economic advantage or unfair competition." (Hi-Top Steel Corp., supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at pp. 577-578 , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 3440 Damages

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that was caused by [name of defendant], even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

- 1. [Loss of reasonably anticipated sales and profits];
- 2. [An increase in [name of plaintiff]'s expenses];
- 3. [Insert other applicable item of damage].

● Business and Professions Code section 16750(a) confers a private right of action for treble damages and attorneys fees on "[a]ny person who is injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden or declared unlawful by this chapter."

■ "The plaintiff in a Cartwright Act proceeding must show that an antitrust violation was the proximate cause of his injuries. The frequently stated 'standing to sue' requirement is merely a rule that an action for violation of the antitrust laws may be maintained only by a party within the 'target area' of the antitrust violation, and not by one incidentally injured thereby. An 'antitrust injury' must be proved; that is, the type of injury the antitrust laws were intended to prevent, and which flows from the invidious conduct which renders defendants' acts unlawful. Finally, a plaintiff must show an injury within the area of the economy that is endangered by a breakdown of competitive conditions." (Kolling v. Dow Jones & Co. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 709, 723-724 [187 Cal.Rptr. 797] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "[D]amage issues in these cases are rarely susceptible of the kind of concrete, detailed proof of injury which is available in other contexts. ... [I]n the absence of more precise proof, the factfinder may "conclude as a matter of just and reasonable inference from the proof of defendants' wrongful acts and their tendency to injure plaintiffs' business, and from the evidence of the decline in prices, profits and values, not shown to be attributable to other causes, that defendants' wrongful acts had caused damage to the plaintiffs." " (Diesel Elec. Sales and Serv., Inc. v. Marco Marine San Diego (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 202, 219-220] , internal citations omitted.)

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3500

CACI 3500 Introductory Instruction

Public agencies such as the [name of condemnor] have the right to take private property for public use if they pay the owner just compensation.

New September 2003

- Article I, section 19, of the California Constitution provides: "Private property may be taken or damaged for public use only when just compensation, ascertained by a jury unless waived, has first been paid to, or into court for, the owner. The Legislature may provide for possession by the condemnor following commencement of eminent domain proceedings upon deposit in court and prompt release to the owner of money determined by the court to be the probable amount of just compensation."
- The Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution provides, in part: "[N]or shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation."
- Code of Civil Procedure section 1240.010 provides: "The power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire property only for a public use. Where the Legislature provides by statute that a use, purpose, object, or function is one for which the power of eminent domain may be exercised, such action is deemed to be a declaration by the Legislature that such use, purpose, object, or function is a public use."
- "The power of eminent domain arises as an inherent attribute of sovereignty that is necessary for government to exist. Properly exercised, the eminent domain power effects a compromise between the public good for which private land is taken, and the protection and indemnification of private citizens whose property is taken to advance that public good. The Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment, and California Constitution, article I, section 19 require this protection of private citizens' property." This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI No. 11.70.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Parties' Roles: Eminent domain cases can initially be confusing to a jury due to the reversed roles of plaintiff and defendant. It would be helpful to explain to the jury that in eminent domain cases, the public entity "takes" the property by filing a condemnation complaint. Hence, unlike in most cases, the defendant (property owner) seeks money damages (in the form of just compensation) from the plaintiff (public entity). By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Property Owner's Right to Compensation: Explain to jurors that the defendant has a constitutional right to receive just compensation from a governmental entity that takes the defendant's private property for public use. The only issue for the jury to decide is how much compensation the defendant is entitled to receive as a result of the taking of the property. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35 California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions *

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3501

CACI 3501 "Fair Market Value" Explained

Just compensation includes the fair market value of the property as of [insert date of valuation]. Fair market value is the highest price for the property that a willing buyer would have paid in cash to a willing seller, assuming that:

- 1. There is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
- 2. The buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably capable of being used.

New September 2003

Do not give this instruction in cases where there is no relevant market for the property. Instead, instruct on the appropriate alternative method of valuation.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.320 provides:

(a) The fair market value of the property taken is the highest price on the date of valuation that would be agreed to by a seller, being willing to sell but under no particular or urgent necessity for so doing, nor obliged to sell, and a buyer, being ready, willing, and able to buy but under no particular necessity for so doing, each dealing with the other with full knowledge of all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably adaptable and available.

(b) The fair market value of property taken for which there is no relevant, comparable market is its value on the date of valuation as determined by any method of valuation that is just and equitable.

■ " 'Market value,' in turn, traditionally has been defined as 'the highest price estimated in terms of money which the land would bring if exposed for sale in the open market, with reasonable time allowed in which to find a purchaser, buying with knowledge of all of the uses and purposes to which it was adapted and for which it was capable.' " (Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 43 [104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Recognized alternatives to the market data approach to valuation are reproduction or replacement costs less depreciation or obsolescence." (Redevelopment Agency of the City of Long Beach v. First Christian Church of Long Beach (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 690, 698 [189 Cal.Rptr. 749] , internal citation omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Continental Development Corp. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 694, 720-721 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809] .)

■ Alternative methods of valuation particularly apply to properties such as schools, churches, cemeteries, parks, and utilities for which there is no relevant market; therefore these properties may be valued on any basis that is just and equitable. (County of San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1060 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 675] .)

■ "[T]he fair market value of property taken has not been limited to the value of the property as used at the time of the taking, but has long taken into account the 'highest and most profitable use to which the property might be put in the reasonable near future, to the extent that the probability of such a prospective use affects the market value.' " (City of San Diego v. Neumann (1993) 6 Cal.4th 738, 744 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 480, 863 P.2d 725] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In condemnation actions, California courts have long recognized what has been referred to as the 'appraisal trinity.' This term encompasses three methods or approaches used by appraisers to determine the fair market value of real estate: (1) the current cost of reproducing (or replacing) the property less depreciation from all sources; (2) the 'market data' value as indicated by recent sale of comparable properties; and (3) the 'income approach,' or the value of which the property's net earning power will support based upon the capitalization of net income. In 1965, the state Legislature codified these three approaches in Evidence Code section 815-820. A qualified appraiser in an eminent domain proceeding may use one or more of these valuation techniques to ascertain the fair market value of the condemned property." (Redevelopment Agency of the City of Long Beach, supra, 140 Cal.App.3d at p. 705 , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Define "Just Compensation": Consider preceding this instruction with an instruction on the definition of "just compensation," which has a special meaning under the California and United States Constitutions. It means that the property owner must be made whole financially, as if the taking had never occurred. The principle behind the concept of just compensation is to put the owner in as good a position pecuniarily as he or she would have occupied if his/her property had not been taken. (City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 1013, 1027-1028 [130 Cal.Rptr.2d 108].) "The just compensation required by the constitution to be made to the [property] owner is to be measured by the loss caused to him by the appropriation. He is entitled to receive the value of what he has been deprived of, and no more. To award him less would be unjust to him; to award him more would be unjust to the public." (Los Angeles Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Continental Development Corp. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 694, 715 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809].) For such an instruction, see Ch. 35A, Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions, MB 3500A.02. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Experts Testimony of Fair Market Value: The determination of fair market value is the most critical aspect of the jury's charge. This will largely come down to expert credibility. A savvy practitioner will direct conservative assumptions by his or her experts so that they withstand cross-examination and convey to the jury that they have not taken liberties with the valuation analysis. This will help shore up other areas where the expert may be weak. The practitioner should anticipate weaknesses in the expert valuation and deal with them early. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Valuation Method to Jury: "Fair market value" encompasses valuation methodologies such as the comparable sale value, cost of replacement and value, and the capitalized income approach. Depending on the facts of the case, one or more of these approaches may be preferable. If the expert will rely primarily on one of these approaches, it is important to explain to the jury why a particular valuation methodology is being used and why it is preferable to other approaches. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Valuation Date: The valuation date is typically the date of the taking, which in eminent domain cases will be the date the lawsuit is filed and estimated just compensation is deposited and credited to the owner. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3502

CACI 3502 "Highest and Best Use" Explained

You must determine fair market value based on the property's highest and best use. The highest and best use is the most profitable legally permissible use for which the property is physically, geographically, and economically adaptable.

Do not consider any personal value of the property to [name of property owner] or [his/her/its] need for the property. Also, do not consider the particular need of [name of condemnor] for the property.

New September 2003

- "The property taken is valued based on the highest and best use for which it is geographically and economically adaptable." (County of San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1058 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 675] , internal citation omitted.)

- "It is long settled that the condemned property may not be valued based on its special value to the property owner. ... Thus, the cases have generally held that a property owner may not value his property based upon its use for a projected special purpose or for a hypothetical business." (County of San Diego, supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1058-1059 .)

- "Just as the property may not be valued based on its special value to the owner, the property may not be valued on the basis of its special value to the government." (County of San Diego, supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 1061 , internal citation omitted.)

- "Simply stated, purchasers of property that is known to be condemned are prevented from inflating the value of the property by conjecturing what the condemner will actually pay for the property." (People ex rel. Dept. of Water Resources v. Andresen (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 1144, 1156 [238 Cal.Rptr. 826] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In condemnation cases it is a firmly established principle that the compensation payable is to be based upon the loss to the owner rather than upon the benefit received by the taker. The California Supreme Court early stated that 'it seems monstrous to say that the benefit arising from the proposed improvement is to be taken into consideration as an element of the value of the land.' This has been construed to mean that '[the] beneficial purpose to be derived by the condemnor's use of the property is not to be taken into consideration in determining market values, for it is wholly irrelevant.' This rule, however, does not mean that evidence of the highest and best use of the property must be excluded simply because that is the use that the condemner intends to make of the property. ... [I]n City of Los Angeles v. Decker, the court reiterated that it is improper to award compensation based upon the value to the condemner, but held that it was proper in that case to consider the value of the property for parking purposes (the highest and best use) despite the fact that the city intended to use it for such purposes." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Zuckerman (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1113, 1127 [234 Cal.Rptr. 630] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Once the highest and best use of the property is determined, one of several approaches to valuation must be selected. Evidence Code sections 815-820 set forth various methodologies sanctioned for use by valuation experts, including considering sales contracts of comparable properties and capitalizing income from the subject land and its existing improvements." (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd. v. Cushman (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 918, 926 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 121] , internal citations omitted.)

"[I]n determining fair market value, including its highest and best use and the reasonable probability of a zoning change, any increase or decrease in the property's value caused by the project itself may not be considered. ..." (City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 1013, 1028 [130 Cal.Rptr.2d 108] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Highest and Best Use: Highest and best use may include uses to which the property is not currently subjected. For example, a parking lot located and zoned such that it could be marketed as a parcel to be developed into commercial office space could have a highest and best use as a commercial development parcel. Highest and best use does not include speculative uses, such as those that would require a change in zoning, unless the change in zoning is reasonably probable separate and apart from the project for which the property is condemned. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35 California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions *

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3503

CACI 3503 Change in Zoning or Land Use Restriction

A determination of the property's highest and best use is not necessarily limited by current zoning or land use restrictions. If you decide that as of [insert date of valuation] there was a reasonable probability of a change in zoning or other use restrictions in the near future, then you must determine the highest and best use of the property based on that change.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

■ "Where due to zoning restrictions the condemned property is not presently available for use to which it is otherwise geographically and economically adaptable, the condemnee is entitled to show a reasonable probability of a zoning change in the near future and thus to establish such use as the highest and best use of the property. ... 'The general rule is that present market value must be determined only by uses for which land is adaptable and available. However, where land sought to be condemned is not presently available for a particular use by reason of a zoning ordinance or other restriction imposed by law, but the evidence tends to show a "reasonable probability" of a change in the near future, the effect of such probability on the minds of purchasers generally may be taken into consideration in fixing present market value' " (City of Los Angeles v. Decker (1977) 18 Cal.3d 860, 867-868 [135 Cal.Rptr. 647, 558 P.2d 545] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A determination of the property's highest and best use is not necessarily limited to the current zoning or land use restrictions imposed on the property; the property owner 'is entitled to show a reasonable probability of a zoning [or other change] in the near future and thus to establish such use as the highest and best use of the property.' " (County of San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar, Inc. (1993)

■ "[T]he determination as to whether or not there is a reasonable probability of a [use] change is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury." (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California v. Campus Crusade for Christ, Inc. (2007) 41 Cal.4th 954, 967 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 623, 161 P.3d 1175] .)

■ "Before such evidence may be presented to the jury, however, the trial court must first determine whether there is sufficient evidence that would permit a jury to conclude there is a reasonable probability of rezoning in the near future. Evidence of a reasonable probability of a zoning change in the near future 'must at least be in accordance with the usual minimum evidentiary requirements, and that which is purely speculative, wholly guess work and conjectural, is inadmissible.' The evidence, if credited, must also be sufficient to establish that rezoning is reasonably probable. If the trial court determines that no fact finder could find a reasonable probability of rezoning on the record presented, it may exclude all evidence and opinions of value based on a use other than that authorized by the existing zoning. If, on the other hand, the trial court determines that there is sufficient evidence of a reasonable probability of rezoning to warrant submitting the issue to the jury, it is for the jury, in considering the weight to be given valuation testimony based upon a reasonable probability of rezoning, to determine whether there was a reasonable probability of rezoning and, if so, its effect on the market value of the property. Thus, before a jury may even reach the question whether a use which was unauthorized by the existing zoning otherwise meets the criteria of a highest and best use, the jury must first find that there was a reasonable probability of rezoning to permit that use. Once that has been established, neither party bears the burden to persuade the fact finder of the effect of this probability on the valuation of the property." (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California, supra, 41 Cal.4th at p. 968 , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Effect of Probable Re-Zoning: This instruction reflects the concept that speculative damages are not permitted. However, probable future events unrelated to the development project itself can be considered if they would be material to a purchaser. For example, if, as of the date of the taking, there was a reasonable probability that a favorable re-zoning would occur in the near future, a purchaser would consider the present value impact of the zone change on the property by weighing (1) the likelihood of the zone change, (2) the probable timing of the zone change, and (3) the impact the change would have on the value of the property. These impacts would be discounted to present value (the date of the taking) and factored into the total fair market valuation. For a probable zoning or land use change scenario, this (or a similar) analysis should be included in the expert witness presentation. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3504

CACI 3504 Project Enhanced Value

You must consider any increase or decrease in the property's fair market value caused by public knowledge of [insert entity's purpose for condemning the property] until [insert date of property's probable inclusion]. You may not consider any change in value caused by [insert entity's purpose for condemning the property] after that date. You may, however, consider other factors that changed the property's value after [insert date of property's probable inclusion], but before [insert date of valuation].

New September 2003

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.330 provides:

The fair market value of the property taken shall not include any increase or decrease in the value of the property that is attributable to any of the following:

- (a) The project for which the property is taken.
- (b) The eminent domain proceeding in which the property is taken.
- (c) Any preliminary actions of the plaintiff relating to the taking of the property.

- "A legitimate element of just compensation lies in the increase in value resulting from a reasonable expectation that a particular piece of property will be outside a proposed public improvement, and thus will reap the benefits of that improvement." (Merced Irrigation Dist. v. Woolstenhulme (1971) 4 Cal.3d 478, 488 [93 Cal.Rptr. 833, 483 P.2d 1] .)

- "The 'market value' of a given piece of property, of course, reflects a great variety of factors independent of the size, nature, or condition of the property itself. The general character of the neighborhood, the quality of the public and private services, and the availability of public facilities all play important roles in establishing market value. Thus, widespread knowledge of a proposed public improvement, planned for an indefinite location within a given region or neighborhood, will frequently cause the market value of land in the region or neighborhood to rise." (Merced Irrigation Dist., supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 488 .)

■ "[W]e now hold that increases in value, attributable to a project but reflecting a reasonable expectation that property will not be taken for the improvement, should properly be considered in determining 'just compensation.'" (Merced Irrigation Dist., supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 495 .)

■ "[I]n computing 'just compensation' in such a case, a jury should only consider the increase in value attributable to the project up until the time when it became probable that the land would be needed for the improvement." (Merced Irrigation Dist., supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 498 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Increase in Surrounding Values: Use this instruction when publicity concerning a large public project causes land values surrounding the proposed project (but not those anticipated to be condemned as part of the project) increase in value. Once it is reasonably probable that a parcel will be condemned as part of the project, enhanced value is not recoverable. This instruction reflects the fact that any increase in value attributable to the project may only be included during the period of time it was not anticipated the parcel would be condemned. The court decides as a legal issue whether an improvement is a fixture "pertaining to the realty." (Code Civ. Proc., § 1260.030.)

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.210(a) provides: "Except as otherwise provided by statute, all improvements pertaining to the realty shall be taken into account in determining compensation."
- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.205(a) defines "improvements pertaining to the realty" as including "any machinery or equipment installed for use on property taken by eminent domain, or on the remainder if such property is part of a larger parcel, that cannot be removed without a substantial economic loss or without substantial damage to the property on which it is installed, regardless of the method of installation."
- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.205(b) provides: "In determining whether particular property can be removed 'without a substantial economic loss' within the meaning of this section, the value of the property in place considered as a part of the realty should be compared with its value if it were removed and sold."

This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI Nos. 11.72.3 and 11.72.7.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Value of Improvement Can Vary: Use this instruction when there are structures or equipment on the property that cannot be removed without substantial damage to the property. In that case, explain to the jury that the property must be valued a whole and not as a sum of the individual pieces. Another circumstance where this instruction should be used is when structures on the property have no remaining useful life, are in need of significant uninsured repair, or would have no value to a third-party purchaser. In that case, the cost of repair and/or demolition and removal should be factored into the value of the land. However, certain types of improvements may have specialized value to a narrow range of purchaser, but hold little value to an ordinary purchaser. In that case, the jury should be reminded that they must consider the value of the land assuming its highest and best use--which would include a sale to a purchaser who could make use of the specialized value of the improvements. The prudent practitioner will have expert valuations that take these factors into consideration. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Whether Improvement Is Fixture: The issue of whether an improvement is a fixture is an issue of law for the court. The jury should be instructed that the court has already determined that the improvement at issue must be valued as part of the land, and that the jury's charge is solely to determine to what extent the improvement increases or decreases the value of the land. *By Susan S. 5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3507

CACI 3507 Personal Property and Inventory

Just compensation also includes the loss of any inventory or personal property caused by the taking. [Name of property owner] may be entitled to the retail value of the inventory or personal property if the property is unique and not readily replaceable. Otherwise, [name of property owner] is entitled to wholesale value.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "The Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, as applied to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment, conditions the power of eminent domain upon the payment of 'just compensation.' That constitutional requirement makes no distinction between real property and personal property. If personal property is taken by the government in the exercise of its eminent domain power, it must compensate the owner." (City of Needles v. Griswold (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 1881, 1891 [8 Cal.Rptr.2d 753] .)

- "We further acknowledge that where a condemner takes certain real property and the removal or relocation of either tangible or intangible personal property is impossible due to the condemnatory act, the owner is entitled to be justly compensated for the loss of property, regardless of its nature." (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd. v. Handlery Hotel, Inc. (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 517, 533 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 473] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The general rule is that the Constitution does not require compensation for personal property not affixed to the condemned realty. Movable items of personal property are not 'taken' by the public entity when it condemns real property or a business; instead, under the Relocation Assistance Act, the public entity compensates the owner for the cost of moving the personal property to a new site." (County of San

■ "Business inventory may be compensable under limited circumstances, i.e., where the loss results from the condemnatory act itself (e.g., the inventory cannot be relocated) rather than the personal circumstances of the condemnee (e.g., the owner has decided that he will not relocate)." (Chhour v. Community Redevelopment Agency of Buena Park (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 273, 283 [53 Cal.Rptr.2d 585] .)

■ "The goal of the eminent domain trial [is] 'to determine just compensation,' to wit, to put [condemnee] in 'as good a position' as if its business inventory had 'not been taken.' However, [condemnee] was only 'entitled to be reimbursed for the actual value of what [it] lost--no more and no less.'" (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 1066, 1072-1073 [116 Cal.Rptr.2d 240] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "To award [condemnee] retail value instead of wholesale value would result in a windfall to [condemnee]--an award in excess of just compensation sufficient to make [condemnee] whole. Here, the proper standard of fair market value is the wholesale value. This is what a retailer, whose inventory of nonunique, fungible, and readily replaceable goods is damaged as a result of an act of inverse condemnation, should receive." (McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700 [194 Cal.Rptr. 582] .)

■ In People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation, supra , the court held that a jury should have been allowed to consider expert witnesses' testimony on valuation of inventory based both on retail and wholesale value: "[A]lthough any 'just and equitable' method could be proper, the jury would remain 'free to accept or reject' [an expert's] valuation." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation, supra , 95 Cal.App.4th at p. 1083 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he general rule in eminent domain actions is that 'the right to a jury trial ... goes only to the amount of compensation. All other questions of fact, or mixed fact and law, are to be tried ... without reference to a jury.'" (Emeryville Redevelopment v. Harcros Pigments (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 1083, 1116 [125 Cal.Rptr.2d 12] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--When to Compensate for Damage to Personal Property: Use this instruction only when the taking results in unavoidable damage or destruction of tangible or intangible personal property. If personal property can be relocated, the owner is not entitled to compensation for its loss if the owner chooses not to do so. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Determining Value of Personal Property: In determining the value of lost inventory or personal property caused by a taking, remind the jury that their duty is to determine compensation that will restore the owner to the same position he or she would have occupied had the taking not occurred. Hence, the jury must consider the actual replacement cost to the owner. Each case must be evaluated according to its own unique circumstances. For example, a consumer who did not have access to wholesale prices would be entitled to retail value, whereas a merchant who ordinarily purchased items wholesale would be entitled to wholesale value. The jury must not consider sentimental or other uniquely personal value the items may have had to the owner. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Presenting Evidence to Jury: The jury has latitude to determine the value of property taken under any just and equitable method. Hence, it is critical to have competent and credible expert testimony supporting the valuation method (wholesale, retail, or other) presented. Emphasize the cost to the owner and advance a valuation methodology that will make the owner whole but will not result in a windfall to either side. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35 California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions *

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3508

CACI 3508 Bonus Value of Leasehold Interest

[Some/All] of the property taken was leased to [name of lessee]. You must determine the amount of compensation that [name of lessee] can recover.

To do this, you must determine the difference between:

- 1. The present value of the total rent that [name of lessee] agreed to pay during the time remaining on the lease after [insert date of possession when lessee no longer occupied the premises]; and
- 2. The present value of the total fair market rent for the leased property from [date of valuation] for the time remaining on the lease.

If the present value of the total agreed rent is less than the present value of the total fair market rent, then [name of lessee] is entitled to the difference.

New September 2003

Do not give this instruction if bonus value is allocated under the lease to the owner.

This instruction may not be appropriate in every case involving a lessee.

This instruction would be applicable to the apportionment phase of the case under Code of Civil Procedure section 1260.220(b).

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1265.150 provides: "Nothing in this article affects or impairs any right a lessee may have to compensation for the taking of his lease in whole or in part or for the taking of any other property in which he has an interest."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1265.160 provides: "Nothing in this article affects or impairs the rights and obligations of the parties to a lease to the extent that the lease provides for such rights and obligations in the event of the acquisition of all or a portion of the property for public use."

■ "Under the Eminent Domain Law, a provision of a lease that declares that the lease terminates if all the property subject thereto is acquired for public use does not deprive the lessee of any right he may have to compensation for the taking of his leasehold or other property. The Eminent Domain Law itself declares the generally applicable rules that the lease terminates if all the property subject thereto is acquired for public use, and that such termination does not affect any right of the lessee to compensation related thereto." (City of Vista v. W.O. Fielder (1996) 13 Cal.4th 612, 618 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 861, 919 P.2d 151] , original italics.)

■ "Usually the rental value of the property is measured in terms of existing tenancies. Tenants, like owners in fee, are also entitled to compensation in condemnation." (People ex rel. Dept. of Water Resources v. Andresen (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 1144, 1163 [238 Cal.Rptr. 826] .)

■ "The bonus value can be more precisely defined as the present value of the difference between economic rent, i.e., the value of market rental, and the contract rent through the remaining lease term. The bonus value usually assumes importance only in long-term commercial leases." (New Haven Unified School Dist. v. Taco Bell Corp. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 1473, 1478-1479 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 469] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Whether or not the lessor and lessee are joined in a single proceeding, these rules will ordinarily result in an aggregate award to both lessor and lessee equal to market value of the property. Where the lease rental falls below market value, the lessor will have a claim to less than the full market value of the property, since he is restricted to the present value of actual contract rental; but the lessee will have a right to recover the balance of the market value, above that recovered by the lessor, as lease bonus value." (New Haven, supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 1479 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Although generally a tenant is entitled to all compensation attributable to the tenant's interest in a lease, it is well recognized that the parties to a lease may contractually agree to allocate a condemnation award to the landlord rather than the tenant." (City of South San Francisco v. Mayer (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 1350, 1354 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 704] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A lessee's option to renew a lease should be considered to the extent that the option enhances the value of the leasehold." (San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. v. McKeegan (1968) 265 Cal.App.2d 263, 272 [71 Cal.Rptr. 204] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Calculating Value of Leasehold: This instruction is to be used when a leaseholder of condemned property claims a right to just compensation for the taking of its leasehold interest (when the lease does not, for example, provide for automatic termination on condemnation). To receive compensation, the holder of the leasehold interest must demonstrate an absolute right to continue to lease the condemned property (or a part of it) into the future at below market rent. The jury must determine, at today's dollars, the difference between market rent for the leasehold interest and the below market rent contained in the lease. Put another way, the jury is to calculate how much additional money the lessee will have to pay because it is no longer entitled to take advantage of the below-market rental rates contained in its lease. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Absolute Certainty Not Required: Remind the jury that, with respect to projections of losses into the future, the parties do not need to prove that events will occur with absolute certainty but the experts must have a reasonable factual basis (or make reasonable assumptions based on facts) on which to base future projections. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proving Lease Value Through Expert Testimony: The only way to credibly prove the present value of a below-market lease is through expert testimony, preferably a real estate economist. There are several issues that are central to this analysis. First, is the calculation of "market rents," both in the present and into the future. The longer the remaining term of the lease, the more scrutiny will be applied to assumptions concerning future rent projections. Another important issue is the appropriate discount rate to be applied to the future stream of market and lease rental payments, including whether the discount rates for market and below market should be the same. Typically, the riskier the venture, the greater the discount rate and the lower the present value. Finally, prepare the experts to respond to cross-examination on the impact, if any, of current market conditions and how those conditions affect future market projections. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35 California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions *

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3509

CACI 3509 Precondemnation Damages (Klopping Damages)

I have determined that [insert one or both of the following:]

[there was an unreasonable delay between [date of announcement of intent to condemn], when the [name of condemnor] announced its intent to condemn [name of property owner]'s property, and [date of filing], when this case was filed] [and]

In determining just compensation you must award damages that [name of property owner] has suffered as a result of the [name of condemnor]'s [delay/[describe unreasonable conduct]]. Such damages may include [insert damages appropriate to the facts, e.g., the cost of repairs, the loss of use of the property, loss of rent, loss of profits, or increased operating expenses pending repairs, and diminution of market value].

New September 2003

This instruction will need to be modified in cases where the entity does not ultimately proceed with the condemnation, or where there has been another type of unreasonable conduct other than "unreasonable delay."

■ The Supreme Court in Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 52 [104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345], held that "a condemnee must be provided with an opportunity to demonstrate that (1) the public authority acted improperly either by unreasonably delaying eminent domain action following an announcement of intent to condemn or by other unreasonable conduct prior to condemnation; and (2) as a result of such action the property in question suffered a diminution in market value."

- "The measure of damages may be the cost of repairs, the loss of use of the property, loss of rent, loss of profits, or increased operating expenses pending repairs." (City of Los Angeles v. Tilem (1983) 142 Cal.App.3d 694, 703 [191 Cal.Rptr. 229] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]bsent a formal resolution of condemnation, recovery under Klopping requires that the public entity's conduct 'directly and specially affect the landowner to his injury.' This requirement mandates that the plaintiff demonstrate conduct on the part of the public entity 'which significantly invaded or appropriated the use or enjoyment' of the property." (Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 570 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575] , internal citations omitted, original italics.)

- "[S]ince Klopping damages compensate a landowner for a public entity's unreasonable precondemnation conduct, their recovery 'is permitted irrespective of whether condemnation proceedings are abandoned or whether they are instituted at all.' " (Barthelemy, supra, 65 Cal.App.4th at p. 569 , internal citation omitted.)

- "Whether there has been unreasonable delay by the condemner and whether the condemner has engaged in unreasonable conduct are both questions of fact. What constitutes a direct and substantial impairment of property rights for purposes of compensation is also a factual question. In deciding factual matters on conflicting testimony and inferences, it is for the trier of fact to determine which evidence and inferences it finds more reasonable." (Contra Costa County Water Dist. v. Vaquero Farms, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 883, 897 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 272] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Whether the public entity has acted unreasonably is a question of fact. 'However, the threshold question of liability for unreasonable precondemnation conduct is to be determined by the court, with the issue of the amount of damages to be thereafter submitted to the jury only upon a sufficient showing of liability by the condemnee.' Because inverse condemnation damages for precondemnation conduct must be claimed in a pending eminent domain action, the appropriate procedure is to bifurcate the trial of the action so that the question of the liability of the public entity is first adjudicated by the court without a jury." (City of Ripon v. Sweetin (2002) 100 Cal.App.4th 887, 897 [122 Cal.Rptr.2d 802] , internal citations omitted.)

Publisher's Notes

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 11.79, and covers issues presented in BAJI No. 11.96.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Unreasonable Delay Damages Are in Addition to Compensation for Taking: Explain to the jury that compensation for unreasonable delay damages is over and above compensation for the taking itself. Hence, when income-generating property has been specially damaged due to improper or unreasonable precondemnation conduct, the measure of the compensable precondemnation loss may be calculated by lost rents or lost income over the delay period. Likewise, non-income-producing property may suffer a decrease in market value due to precondemnation conduct. The valuation of the property for purposes of just compensation (a separate measure of compensation) would not include these precondemnation damages. Hence, the jurors should calculate both the special losses directly caused by improper or unreasonable precondemnation conduct as well as any loss cause by the taking itself. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Choosing Valuation Method: In determining appropriate measures of damages for precondemnation conduct, use "lost rental income" or "lost profits" damage measures when the unreasonable delay affects income-generating property. Use "diminution in market value" when the property does not generate income. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Methodology for Awarding Klopping Damages: There may be circumstances where a business was forced to relocate (and incurred damages to mitigate the loss of goodwill) as a result of improper precondemnation conduct by the condemning agency. Mitigation of lost goodwill damages is potentially recoverable in the precondemnation context (though no California court has yet done so). The defendant must first show that the probable condemner (1) acted affirmatively to lower the value of the owner's property, (2) physically burdened the property, or (3) decreased the income the property produced. Second, the owner must show that it could not continue to operate its business unaffected by the possible condemnation. Once both of these are satisfied, the owner must show that its mitigation to avoid loss of business goodwill was reasonable. (Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 565, 571 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575].) If all of these parameters are met, Klopping damages (See Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345] .) for mitigation of precondemnation loss of business goodwill could conceivably be awarded under Barthelemy. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CACI 3510 Value of Easement

The [name of condemnor] has taken the right to use a portion of [name of property owner]'s land for a specific purpose. That right is called an "easement." After an easement has been taken, the property owner has the right to use the land for any purpose that does not conflict with the easement.

You must determine the fair market value of the easement on [insert date of valuation]. The fair market value of the easement is determined by subtracting the fair market value of the land after the easement was taken from the fair market value of the land before the easement was taken.

■ "The holder of an easement is entitled to damages when the easement is taken or damaged for public use." (County Sanitation Dist. No. 8 of Los Angeles County v. Watson Land Co. (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 1268, 1279 [22 Cal.Rptr.2d 117] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The value of an easement in gross ... is the difference in the before and after value of the strip of land taken, and not what has been gained by the public agency." (County Sanitation Dist., supra, 17 Cal.App.4th at p. 1279 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Ordinarily, the value of an easement is the diminution in market value of the dominant tenement caused by its loss. When a second easement is sought on land already burdened, the owner of the servient land is entitled to the difference in value of the land before and after the imposition of the second easement; and, if no substantial difference in value is shown, only nominal damages will be awarded." CHAPTER 35 California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions *

CACI 3511 Severance Damages

The [name of condemnor] has taken only a part of [name of property owner]'s property. [Name of property owner] claims that [his/her/its] remaining property has lost value as a result of the taking. This loss in value is called "severance damages" and must be included in determining just compensation.

Severance damages are the damages to [name of property owner]'s remaining property caused by the taking, or by the construction and use of the [name of condemnor]'s proposed project, or by both.

Severance damages are determined as follows:

- 1. Determine the fair market value of the remaining property on [date of valuation] by subtracting the fair market value of the part taken from the fair market value of the entire property;
- 2. Determine the fair market value of the remaining property after the [name of condemnor]'s proposed project is completed; and
- 3. Subtract the fair market value of the remaining property after the [name of condemnor]'s proposed project is completed from the fair market value of the remaining property on [date of valuation].

Directions for Use

Read CACI No. 3512, Severance Damages--Offset for Benefits, if benefits are at issue.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.410 provides:

(a) Where the property acquired is part of a larger parcel, in addition to the compensation awarded pursuant to Article 4 (commencing with Section 1263.310) for the part taken, compensation shall be awarded for the injury, if any, to the remainder.

(b) Compensation for injury to the remainder is the amount of the damage to the remainder reduced by the amount of the benefit to the remainder. If the amount of the benefit to the remainder equals or exceeds the amount of the damage to the remainder, no compensation shall be awarded under this article. If the amount of the benefit to the remainder exceeds the amount of damage to the remainder, such excess shall be deducted from the compensation provided in Section 1263.510, if any, but shall not be deducted from the compensation required to be awarded for the property taken or from the other compensation required by this chapter.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.420 provides:

Damage to the remainder is the damage, if any, caused to the remainder by either or both of the following:

(b) The construction and use of the project for which the property is taken in the manner proposed by the plaintiff whether or not the damage is caused by a portion of the project located on the part taken.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.430 provides: "Benefit to the remainder is the benefit, if any, caused by the construction and use of the project for which the property is taken in the manner proposed by the plaintiff whether or not the benefit is caused by a portion of the project located on the part taken."

- "When property acquired by eminent domain is part of a larger parcel, compensation must be awarded for the injury, if any, to the remainder. Such compensation is commonly called severance damages. When the property taken is but part of a single legal parcel, the property owner need only demonstrate injury to the portion that remains to recover severance damages." (City of San Diego v. Neumann (1993) 6 Cal.4th 738, 741 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 480, 863 P.2d 725] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Severance damages must be based upon real physical disturbance of a property right and a decrease in market value of the property rather than upon remote possibilities which are highly speculative and conjectural." (County Sanitation Dist. No. 8 of Los Angeles County v. Watson Land Co. (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 1268, 1282 [22 Cal.Rptr.2d 117] , internal citation omitted.)

- The court determines as a matter of law what constitutes the "larger parcel" for which severance damages may be obtained: "The Legislature has framed the question of whether property should be viewed as an integrated whole in terms of whether the land remaining after the taking forms part of a 'larger parcel'." (City of San Diego, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 745 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "As we said in Pierpont Inn, 'Where the property taken constitutes only a part of a larger parcel, the owner is entitled to recover, inter alia, the difference in the fair market value of his property in its "before" condition and the fair market value of the remaining portion thereof after the construction of the improvement on the portion taken. Items such as view, access to beach property, freedom from noise, etc. are unquestionably matters which a willing buyer in the open market would consider in determining the price he would pay for any given piece of real property.' Severance damages are not limited to special and direct damages, but can be based on any factor, resulting from the project, that causes a decline in the fair market value of the property." (Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Continental Development Corp. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 694, 712 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Both sides here thus agree that the court, not the jury, must make certain determinations that are a predicate to the award of severance damages. But [condemnor] is on weaker ground when it attempts to derive ... a general rule that 'as a matter of constitutional and decisional law, all issues having to do with the existence of, or entitlement to, severance damages are entrusted to the trial judge,' such that '[o]nly after the trial judge has determined that severance damages exist does the jury consider the amount of those severance damages.' [Condemnor]'s proposed rule assumes that questions relating to the measurement of severance damages can be readily distinguished from questions relating to the entitlement to them in the first place but, as we have previously cautioned, the two concepts are not necessarily 'so easily separable.' " (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California v. Campus Crusade for Christ, Inc. (2007) 41 Cal.4th 954, 972 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 623, 161 P.3d 1175] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]here the property owner produces evidence tending to show that some other aspect of the taking ... 'naturally tends to and actually does decrease the market value' of the remaining property, it is for the jury to weigh its effect on the value of the property, as long as the effect is not speculative, conjectural, or remote." (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California, supra, 41 Cal.4th at p. 973 .)

■ "In determining severance damage, the jury must assume 'the most serious damage' which will be caused to the remainder by the taking of the easement and construction of the property. The value of the remainder after the condemnation has occurred is referred to as the 'after' value of the property. The diminution in fair market value is determined by comparing the before and after values. This is the amount of the severance damage." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Daley (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 1334, 1345 [253 Cal.Rptr. 144] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 720 .)

■ "[S]everance damages are not limited to specific direct damages but can be based on any indirect factors that cause a decline in the market value of the property. California decisions have indicated the following are compensable as direct damages under section 1263.410: (1) impairment of view, (2) restriction of access, (3) increased noise, (4) invasion of privacy, (5) unsightliness of the project, (6) lack of maintenance of the easement and (7) nuisances in general such as trespassers and safety risks. Several courts have recognized that the condemnee should be compensated for any characteristic of the project which causes 'an adverse impact on the fair market value of the remainder.' " (San Diego Gas & Electric Co., supra, 205 Cal.App.3d at p. 1345 .)

■ "When 'the property acquired [by eminent domain] is part of a larger parcel,' in addition to compensation for the property actually taken, the property owner must be compensated for the injury, if any, to the land that he retains. Once it is determined that the owner is entitled to severance damages, they, too, normally are measured by comparing the fair market value of the remainder before and after the taking." (City of San Diego, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 745 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Helping Jury Understand Severance: Jurors may have trouble with the concept of severance damages. They should be instructed (and shown visually, if possible) that the property taken was part of a larger parcel. Severance damages are damages to the remaining parts of the property (parcel) that were not taken but that nevertheless suffered injury as a direct result of the taking. The injury is calculated by comparing the value of the remaining part of the property before the condemnation with the value of the remainder after the construction of the project is completed. If the remainder is worth less as a result of the taking (including factors such as impaired view, unsightliness of the project, increased noise, trespassers, safety risks, loss of access, invasion of privacy, or loss of business or goodwill) the owner is entitled to compensation for the loss in value of the remainder of the parcel. If the value of the remaining parcel is worth more as a result of the taking, no severance damages should be awarded. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explaining Enhanced Value: Best practice dictates that the practitioner offer specific expert valuation testimony addressing the value of the remainder before and after the taking, particularly if the remainder derived enhanced value from being part of the larger parcel (which enhanced value was lost as a result of the taking). The concept of enhanced value will likely not be apparent to jurors without specific testimony addressing this point. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Have Jury Specify Items in Special Verdict: CACI No. 3511 is intended to calculate the damage to the remainder as a result of the taking, whereas CACI No. 3512 is intended to calculate the benefit to the remainder as a result of the taking. However, CACI No. 3511 element 3 (which addresses the fair market value of the remainder after the project is complete) includes within its scope potential benefits to the remainder. If the case involves a contention that the remainder received a benefit, it is prudent to have the jury set out in a special verdict form their determination of the value of the remainder before the taking and after the taking (after the project is complete). It is also prudent to offer expert testimony that itemizes each item of damage and benefit to the remainder. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3512

CACI 3512 Severance Damages--Offset for Benefits

The [name of condemnor] claims that the remainder of [name of property owner]'s property has received a benefit from the project as proposed.

You must determine the amount of benefit by determining any reasonably certain increase in the fair market value of the remaining property caused by the project.

[You must then subtract that amount from the severance damages. If the project's benefit to the remaining property is equal to or greater than the loss caused by the taking, then you must award zero severance damages. Any benefits to the remaining property should not be subtracted from the value of the property that [name of condemnor] has taken.]

New September 2003

A special verdict form may be used to have the jury set forth separately the determination of severance damages and benefits. Use the bracketed paragraph if the judge will not be calculating the offset to severance damages for the benefit to the remaining property.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.410 provides:

(a) Where the property acquired is part of a larger parcel, in addition to the compensation awarded pursuant to Article 4 (commencing with Section 1263.310) for the part taken, compensation shall be awarded for the injury, if any, to the remainder.

(b) Compensation for injury to the remainder is the amount of the damage to the remainder reduced by the amount of the benefit to the remainder. If the amount of the benefit to the remainder equals or exceeds the amount of the damage to the remainder, no compensation shall be awarded under this article. If the amount of the benefit to the remainder exceeds the amount of damage to the remainder, such excess shall be deducted from the compensation provided in Section 1263.510, if any, but shall not be deducted from the compensation required to be awarded for the property taken or from the other compensation required by this chapter.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.430 provides: "Benefit to the remainder is the benefit, if any, caused by the construction and use of the project for which the property is taken in the manner proposed by the plaintiff whether or not the benefit is caused by a portion of the project located on the part taken."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1260.230 provides:

As far as practicable, the trier of fact shall assess separately each of the following:

(a) Compensation for the property taken as required by Article 4 (commencing with Section 1263.310) of Chapter 9.

(b) Where the property acquired is part of a larger parcel:

(1) The amount of the damage, if any, to the remainder as required by Article 5 (commencing with Section 1263.410) of Chapter 9.

(2) The amount of the benefit, if any, to the remainder as required by Article 5 (commencing with Section 1263.410) of Chapter 9.

(c) Compensation for loss of goodwill, if any, as required by Article 6 (commencing with Section 1263.510) of Chapter 9.

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3513

CACI 3513 Goodwill

In this case, [name of business owner] is entitled to compensation for any loss of goodwill as a part of just compensation. "Goodwill" is the benefit that a business gains as a result of its location, reputation for dependability, skill or quality, and any other circumstances that cause a business to keep old customers or gain new customers. You must include the amount of any loss of goodwill as an item in your award for just compensation.

New September 2003; Revised February 2007

Sources and Authority

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.510 provides:

(a) The owner of a business conducted on the property taken, or on the remainder if the property is part of a larger parcel, shall be compensated for loss of goodwill if the owner proves all of the following:

(1) The loss is caused by the taking of the property or the injury to the remainder.

(2) The loss cannot reasonably be prevented by a relocation of the business or by taking steps and adopting procedures that a reasonably prudent person would take and adopt in preserving the goodwill.

(3) Compensation for the loss will not be included in payments under Section 7262 of the Government Code.

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3513

(4) Compensation for the loss will not be duplicated in the compensation otherwise awarded to the owner.

(b) Within the meaning of this article, "goodwill" consists of the benefits that accrue to a business as a result of its location, reputation for dependability, skill or quality, and any other circumstances resulting in probable retention of old or acquisition of new patronage.

(c) If the public entity and the owner enter into a leaseback agreement pursuant to Section 1263.615, the following shall apply:

(2) The entering of a leaseback agreement shall not be a factor in determining goodwill. Any liability for goodwill shall be established and paid at the time of acquisition of the property by eminent domain or subsequent to notice that the property may be taken by eminent domain.

■ "Historically, lost business goodwill was not recoverable under eminent domain law. However, in 1975 the Legislature enacted section 1263.510 'in response to widespread criticism of the injustice wrought by the Legislature's historic refusal to compensate condemnees whose ongoing businesses were diminished in value by a forced relocation. [Citations.] The purpose of the statute was unquestionably to provide monetary compensation for the kind of losses which typically occur when an ongoing small business is forced to move and give up the benefits of its former location.' Thus, a business owner's right to compensation for loss of goodwill is a statutory right, not a constitutional right." (City and County of San Francisco v. Coyne (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1515, 1522 [86 Cal.Rptr.3d 255] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Compensation for loss of goodwill in eminent domain proceedings 'involves a two-step process. Whether the qualifying conditions for such compensation [citation] have been met is a matter for the trial court to resolve. Only if the court finds these conditions exist does the remaining issue of the value of the goodwill loss, if any, go to the jury. [Citations.] 'Under section 1263.510, subdivision (a), the business owner has the initial burden of showing entitlement to compensation for lost goodwill.' " (City and County of San Francisco, supra, 168 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1522-1523 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "After entitlement to goodwill is shown (which includes a showing that compensation for the loss will not be duplicated) neither party has the burden of proof with regard to valuation." (Redevelopment Agency of the City of Pomona v. Thrifty Oil Co. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 469, 475 [5 Cal.Rptr.2d 687] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Only an owner of a business conducted on the real property taken may claim compensation for loss of goodwill." (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd. v. Handlery Hotel, Inc. (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 517, 537 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 473] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]hile there are no explicit statutory requirements regarding an expert's use of a particular methodology for valuing lost goodwill, the expert's methodology must provide a fair estimate of actual value and cannot be based on hypothetical or speculative uses of a condemned business" (City and County of San Francisco, supra, 168 Cal.App.4th at p. 1523 , original italics.)

■ "The underlying purpose of this statute is to provide compensation for the kind of losses which typically occur when an ongoing business is forced to move and give up the benefits of its former location. It includes not only compensation for lost patronage itself, but also for expenses reasonably incurred in an effort to prevent a loss of patronage." (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd., supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 537 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Goodwill must, of course, be measured by a method which excludes the value of tangible assets or the normal return on those assets. However, the courts have wisely maintained that there is no single acceptable method of valuing goodwill. Valuation methods will differ with the nature of the business or practice and with the purpose for which the evaluation is conducted." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Muller (1984) 36 Cal.3d 263, 271, fn. 7 [203 Cal.Rptr. 772, 681 P.2d 1340] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Although the statutory scheme applies only to eminent domain proceedings, the right to recover lost goodwill has been extended to the indirect condemnee. Thus, 'goodwill is compensable in an inverse condemnation action to the same extent and with the same limitations on recovery found in ... section 1263.510.' " (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd., supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 537 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Goodwill may be measured by the capitalized value of the net income or profits of a business or some similar method of calculating present value of anticipated profits. Valuation methods differ with the nature of the business and the purpose for which the evaluation is conducted. There is no single method to evaluate goodwill." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Leslie (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 918, 922-923 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 252] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] 'cost to create' approach is a permissible means by which to value goodwill under [Code of Civil Procedure] section 1263.510 where, as here, a nascent business has not yet experienced excess profits but clearly has goodwill within the meaning of the statute and experiences a total loss of goodwill due to condemnation of the property on which the business is operated." (Inglewood Redevelopment Agency v. Aklilu (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 1095, 1102 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 519] .)

■ "A business which is required to move because of the taking of the property on which it operates has suffered a loss from the taking. This is true whether the tenancy is for a fixed term, or is a periodic tenancy as in this case. The value of the lost goodwill is affected by the probable remaining term of the tenancy. Evidence of the remaining length of a lease and the existence of an option to renew a lease are, of course, relevant for determining the amount of compensation, if any, to be paid for loss of goodwill. Similarly, evidence of the pre-condemnation duration of a periodic tenancy and the quality and mutual satisfaction in the landlord and tenant relationship are probative for determination of compensation for loss of goodwill." (Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. v. Pulgarin (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 101, 107 [95 Cal.Rptr.3d 527] , internal citation omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explaining Lack of Burden of Proof to Jurors:

The fact that no party carries the burden of proof may seem unusual to jurors. Inform the jurors that they must award compensation based on the evidence presented. The fact that neither party carries the burden of proof simply means that both parties share an equal burden to present evidence to support their valuations. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35 California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions *

5-35 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3515

CACI 3515 Valuation Testimony

You must decide the value of property based solely on the testimony of the witnesses who have given their opinion of fair market value. You may consider other evidence only to help you understand and weigh the testimony of those witnesses.

You may find the same fair market value testified to by a witness, or you may find a value anywhere between the highest and lowest values stated by the witnesses.

If the witnesses disagreed with one another, you should weigh each opinion against the others based on the reasons given for each opinion, the facts or other matters that each witness relied on, and the witnesses' qualifications.

New September 2003

■ Evidence Code section 813(a) provides:

The value of property may be shown only by the opinions of any of the following:

- (1) Witnesses qualified to express such opinions.
- (2) The owner or the spouse of the owner of the property or property interest being valued.
- (3) An officer, regular employee, or partner designated by a corporation, partnership, or unincorporated association that is the owner of the property or property interest being valued, if the designee is knowledgeable as to the value of the property or property interest.

■ "The only type of evidence which can be used to establish value in eminent domain cases is the opinion of qualified experts and the property owners." (Aetna Life and Casualty Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 865, 877 [216 Cal.Rptr. 831] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A jury hearing a condemnation action may not disregard the evidence as to value and render a verdict which either exceeds or falls below the limits established by the testimony of the witnesses. The trier of fact in an eminent domain action is not an appraiser, and does not make a determination of market value based on its opinion thereof. Instead it determines the market value of the property, based on the opinions of the valuation witnesses." (Aetna Life and Casualty Co., supra, 170 Cal.App.3d at p. 877 , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The trier of fact may accept the evidence of any one expert or choose a figure between them based on all of the evidence.' There is insufficient evidence to support a verdict 'only when "no reasonable interpretation of the record" supports the figure ... ' " (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd. v. Cushman (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 918, 931 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 121] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Jurors' Conclusions Based Solely on Evidence at Trial: Inform the jurors that they must base their conclusions of value solely on the opinions of the owners and/or experts at trial (including the credibility and competence of those witnesses) and not on any other factor. Jurors may not make their own independent valuations. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Credibility of Experts Is Key: In eminent domain cases, credibility of the expert witnesses is paramount. The savvy practitioner will avoid overreaching, which invariably leads to a loss of credibility and hence, less influence on the jury. In particular, among other things, jurors will look for inconsistencies between expert and percipient witnesses to determine credibility. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Ensure Experts View Property: Jurors will use the information gathered at a viewing of the property to assess the credibility of the experts and owners on opinions of value. Inaccuracies and/or exaggerations about the condition of the property or neighborhood will lead to a loss of credibility with the jury. The prudent practitioner will ensure his or her experts have viewed the property at least once (before forming their opinion) and are able to speak knowledgeably and from firsthand experience about the property and surrounding neighborhood. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Effect on Jury of Views and Photographs of Property: For well-kept, attractive property, a view of the site will enhance the jurors' perceptions of the property. On the other hand, an unattractive, poorly maintained property risks a negative impression on the jury, and in that case, the owner's experts should be prepared to deal proactively (preferably before the view) with any negative visual impression that might be created. The view can be reinforced through photographs of the site that can be blown up and color copies of which can be circulated to the jury. A view at the end of testimony is especially helpful if the opponent has based its valuation on potentially misleading characterizations of the property that can be countered by a view of the property itself. CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions for use in an inverse condemnation action. For the California Judicial Council eminent domain instructions, see Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions. The Judicial Council instructions include, for example, instructions on "fair market value" [CACI No. 3501], compensation for improvements [CACI No. 3506], pre-condemnation damages (Klopping damages) [CACI No. 3509], severance damages [CACI Nos. 3511, 3512], goodwill [CACI No. 3513], burden of proof [CACI No. 3514], valuation testimony [CACI No. 3515], and view [CACI No. 3516]. The Judicial Council instructions also include specific verdict forms relating to fair market value [CACI Nos. VF-3500-VF-3502]. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes introductory and definitional instructions [see MB 3500A.01-MB 3500A.04].
- Part B includes instructions on damages [see MB 3500A.10 -MB 3500A.19].
- Part C includes an instruction on the admissibility of and weight of opinions on the value of property [see MB 3500A.30] and instructions on substantial [see MB 3500A.31] and superseding [see MB 3500A.32] causes, an issue that may be submitted to the jury if the parties and the court agree to do so.

Most of the instructions in this chapter are on damages [see MB 3500A.10-MB 3500A.19] because the right to a jury trial in inverse condemnation cases is limited to the issue of just compensation [see MB 3500A.01[3] for discussion of scope of right to jury trial in inverse condemnation actions].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART A. INTRODUCTION

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.01

MB 3500A.01 Definition of Inverse Condemnation

[1] Instruction

The California Constitution requires a governmental, public entity to pay "just compensation" to a person who owns or holds a valuable interest in [real or personal] property, if that interest is taken or damaged as a result of a public use.

If the public entity takes the property, suing the property owner for it, the suit is called an "eminent domain" action. If the property owner believes the public entity has taken or damaged its property and sues the public entity for compensation, the suit is called an "inverse condemnation" action.

In this case, _____ [insert name of action], Plaintiff claims that Defendant has constructed, maintained, operated, or otherwise engaged in a public use and in so doing has taken or damaged a valuable property interest belonging to Plaintiff. Plaintiff claims that Defendant must pay Plaintiff monetary damages in the form of just compensation under the theory of inverse condemnation. I have concluded [Optional (See Use of Instruction): in an earlier phase of this trial] that the Defendant is liable under this theory. It is now your duty as jurors to decide--according to these instructions--the amount of "just compensation" to be awarded to Plaintiff.

Authorities: Cal. Const., art. I, § 19; Arreola v. County of Monterey (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 722, 737, 122 Cal.Rptr.2d 38 ; Downen's, Inc. v. City of Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 856, 861, 103 Cal.Rptr.2d 644 ; McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given in most inverse condemnation actions. Owners as well as leaseholders may bring inverse condemnation actions. Thus, a subtenant could maintain such an action [Kong v. City of Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2002) 108 Cal.App.4th 1028, 1041, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 260]. The only exception when this instruction should not be used is if the property owner waives the right to a jury trial on the issue of damages.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Putting the Instruction in Perspective: To put the jury's charge in perspective, it is useful to explain that in eminent domain cases, the public entity condemns private property for public use and pays the owner "just compensation" on the date the taking occurs. In an inverse condemnation case, the public entity does not condemn the property and does not pay just compensation on the date the taking occurred. Rather, the public entity disputes that there was any taking of private property for public use. Thus, to be entitled to just compensation, the plaintiff must first prove that its private property was taken for public use (in effect, condemned). Once the plaintiff proves the taking, the plaintiff is entitled to just compensation. Here, the court has already found that the public entity is liable for a taking. The jury's sole job is to determine how much the plaintiff is entitled to be compensated for that taking. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

This instruction should be modified if other theories of liability are simultaneously being tried to the jury (e.g., dangerous condition or nuisance) or if the parties stipulate to having the jury decide issues other than just compensation [see, e.g., Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 77, 83-87, 107 Cal.Rptr. 727 (issue of causation submitted to jury); see also MB 3500A.31]. An additional instruction explaining the difference between real and personal property may be helpful if both types of property are at issue [see MB 3500A.17 for instruction on damages for loss of personal property].

The optional material in the last paragraph of the instruction ("in an earlier phase of this trial") may be added if the liability and damages phases of the trial are bifurcated, as they frequently are in inverse condemnation cases.

[3] Comment

This instruction reflects the narrow scope of the jury's duty in most inverse condemnation cases. The right to a jury trial in inverse condemnation cases is generally limited to the issue of just compensation [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 513, Inverse Condemnation (Matthew Bender)], but other issues may be presented to the jury if the court and the parties agree to that procedure [Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1683, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758 (issue of plaintiff's negligence as superseding cause submitted to jury); Marshall v. Department of Water & Power (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1124, 1139-1140, 268 Cal.Rptr. 559 (plaintiff does not have unilateral right to have liability issues submitted to jury); Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 77, 83-87, 107 Cal.Rptr. 727 (issue of substantial cause submitted to jury); see MB 3500A.31 (substantial cause), MB 3500A.32 (superseding cause)].

With one or two exceptions, the Eminent Domain Law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1230.010-1273.050] does not apply to inverse condemnation, which is governed by case law [see Cal. Law Rev. Com. Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.010 (compensation provisions of Eminent Domain Law are "intended to provide rules of compensation for eminent domain proceedings; the law of inverse condemnation is left for determination by judicial development"); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.260 (Eminent Domain Law section providing inverse condemnation action as remedy for unreasonable delay in beginning eminent domain action)].

When a plaintiff alleges that a continuous or repeated course of conduct by a governmental entity has damaged its property, the determination of when a cause of action for inverse condemnation accrues is a proper subject for the jury when the facts are in dispute. The cause of action does not accrue until the situation has stabilized [Lee v. Los Angeles Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 848, 857-859, 132 Cal.Rptr.2d 444].

The right to just compensation applies to the taking or damaging of both real and personal property [People ex rel.

Dept. of Transportation v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 1066, 1069, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 240 ; Griswold v. City of Needles (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 1881, 1888, 1891, 8 Cal.Rptr.2d 753 ; McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 ; see MB 3500A.17 (instruction on damages for loss of personal property)]. However, an action for inverse condemnation does not lie to recover damages to property caused by efforts of law enforcement officers to enforce the criminal laws [Customer Co. v. City of Sacramento (1995) 10 Cal.4th 368, 41 Cal.Rptr.2d 658, 895 P.2d 900 (store owner brought inverse condemnation action against public agencies employing law enforcement officers)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Effect of Trial Delay: When income-generating property is at issue in an inverse condemnation case, any delay in trial will likely work to the greater disadvantage the plaintiff, because prejudgment interest is unlikely to compensate the plaintiff for the full value of the lost opportunity costs associated with loss of use of the income stream from the property. CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART A. INTRODUCTION

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.02

MB 3500A.02 Definition of Just Compensation

[1] Instruction

"Just compensation" means the Plaintiff must be made whole. This means the Plaintiff is to be awarded the full and fair value of the property taken on the date the taking occurred such that the Plaintiff is put in the same position financially as if the taking had not occurred. This value must be determined in accordance with the instructions that follow.

Authorities: Regency Outdoor Advertising, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (2006) 39 Cal.4th 507, 46 Cal.Rptr.3d 742, 139 P.3d 119 ; San Diego Gas and Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 939-940, 55 Cal.Rptr. 2d 724, 920 P.2d 669 ; Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Authority (1985) 39 Cal.3d 862, 866, 218 Cal.Rptr. 293, 705 P.2d 866 ; Beaty v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 897, 903, 231 Cal.Rptr. 128 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "just compensation" for the jury in an inverse condemnation case. This instruction is chiefly an introduction to later instructions, which contain more specific directions to the jury on how it should perform its duties [see, e.g., MB 3500A.30 (amount of award is limited by testimony as to value)].

[3] Comment

Inverse condemnation is one of the two procedural devices for ensuring that the constitutional proscription that private property not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having first been made to the owner is not violated [Cal. Const., art. I, § 19]. The other is eminent domain [see Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 43, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345]. The starting point for a determination of compensation is fair market value [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.310; see MB 3500A.12 (definition of fair market value)].

A key difference between them is that in eminent domain litigation, the focus is usually limited to the amount of compensation owed the property owner; in an inverse condemnation action, before the compensation issue is even reached, the property owner must establish that the public entity has, in fact, taken or damaged his or her property [San Diego Gas and Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 939-940, 55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669; Beaty v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 897, 903, 231 Cal.Rptr. 128]. The United States Supreme Court has stated that "inverse condemnation" seems to have been coined merely as a shorthand description of the manner in which a landowner recovers just compensation for a taking of property when condemnation proceedings have not been instituted [United States v. Clarke (1980) 445 U.S. 253, 100 S.Ct. 1127, 63 L.Ed.2d 373, 377].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Special Meaning of "Just Compensation": In an inverse condemnation case, the court has already rendered the judgment that the plaintiff has suffered compensable injury (special injury to the plaintiff's valuable property interest that should, in fairness, be borne by the public at large). It is important to instruct the jurors that "just compensation" has a special meaning under the California Constitution. It means that the property owner must be made whole financially, as if the taking had never occurred. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

City of San Mateo* (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 1184, 1191, 198 Cal.Rptr. 447 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to determine the date of the property's value. The instruction offers two alternatives. The first reflects the general rule in inverse condemnation, which is valuation as of the date of the taking. The second alternative should be given when this general rule is not followed. Thus, the property may sometimes be valued as of the time of the trial if valuation at the earlier date would impose a hardship [see [3], below].

[3] Comment

In inverse condemnation actions, the plaintiff's damages are usually determined as of the date of the taking [McDougald v. Southern P. R. Co. (1912) 162 Cal. 1, 3, 120 P. 766 ; Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal.App.4th 98, 105, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 465 ; Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1683, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758 ; Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 1184, 1191, 198 Cal.Rptr. 447]. However, valuation at the time of trial is permissible if the plaintiff has been diligent and if valuation at an earlier date would impose a hardship [Mehl v. People (1975) 13 Cal.3d 710, 719-720, 119 Cal.Rptr. 625, 532 P.2d 489 P.2d 489; Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1683, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758 ; Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 1184, 1191, 198 Cal.Rptr. 447] .

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Importance of Date of Valuation: The date of valuation may have a significant impact on the amount of the just compensation award. This is an issue that will be determined by the court before the jury trial. Most cases will use the date of the alleged taking. However, when equity demands that an alternate valuation date be used, instruction MB 3500A.02 should be modified to omit the reference to the date the taking occurred. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Depending on the measure of damages, valuation at a later date may be helpful when a substantial period of time has elapsed between the date of the taking and the trial date. For example, the cost of repair may have increased substantially between the date of the damage and the date of trial, or the property value may have increased over time [Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1683, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758 ; Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 1184, 1190-1191, 198 Cal.Rptr. 447].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Valuation Date in Temporary Taking: The date of valuation in a temporary taking case may span a period of time--hence in such a case the jury should be instructed to determine the losses to the plaintiff over a specific window of time. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

The rules governing valuation dates in inverse condemnation actions are not the same as those in eminent domain proceedings, which are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1263.110-1263.150 [Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 1184, 1190-1191, 198 Cal.Rptr. 447].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART A. INTRODUCTION

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.04

MB 3500A.04 Overview of Damage Claims

[1] Instruction

The total compensation being sought by Plaintiff in this case is made up of claims for all of the following types of damages:

1. Just compensation for the property taken or damaged;

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

2. Severance damages minus special benefits for any parcel remaining after the taking;

[AND/OR]

3. Damages, if any, for excessive delay in commencing an eminent domain action or buying the property;

[AND/OR]

4. Damages, if any, for the loss of access to Plaintiff's property;

[AND/OR]

5. Damages, if any, for the loss of inventory or other items of personal property; and

[AND/OR]

6. Damages, if any, for loss of goodwill.

[AND/OR]

7. _____ [Describe any other damages that will be covered by instructions].

Authority: Code Civ. Proc. § 1260.230 (eminent domain statute).[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given to prevent juror confusion. Eminent domain proceedings often involve cases where the plaintiff is requesting more than one type of damages. Counsel should choose from the listed types of damages only those types that are at issue, so that the instruction accurately summarizes the damage instructions that will follow.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Organizing Expert Presentation: Organize your expert presentations at trial to coincide with the roadmap on damages provided by this instruction so that jurors can more easily understand and follow the damages presentation, particularly in complex cases. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

[3] Comment[a] Analogy to Eminent Domain Instructions

This instruction is analogous to, and suggested by, Code Civ. Proc. § 1260.230. Although § 1260.230 technically only applies to eminent domain cases, sound trial practice and common sense suggest the efficacy of an instruction providing a "road map" to subsequent instructions.

[b] Loss of Goodwill

Although loss of goodwill has been recoverable in eminent domain actions since 1976 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510; see, e.g., City of San Diego v. Sobke (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 379, 387-391, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 9 (reviewing law governing compensation for loss of business goodwill)], inverse condemnation case law traditionally has not permitted recovery for loss of goodwill [see Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 667, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719]. However, in Chhour v. Community Redevelopment Agency, the court concluded that as a matter of judicial development of the law, goodwill is compensable in an inverse condemnation action to the same extent and with the same limitations on recovery found in Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510, applicable to eminent domain actions [Chhour v. Community Redevelopment Agency (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 273, 282, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 585].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510 is a remedial statute, which should be construed liberally [see People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Leslie (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 918, 922-923, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 252 (trial court erred in excluding evidence of goodwill valuation of businesses)]. However, before evidence of loss of goodwill may be admitted, the property owner must demonstrate all of the following four threshold conditions [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510(a); Emeryville Redevelopment Agency v. Harcros Pigments, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal.App.3d 1083, 1116, 125 Cal.Rptr.2d 12]:

- That the loss is caused by the taking of the property or the injury to the remainder;
- That the loss cannot reasonably be prevented by a relocation of the business or by taking steps and adopting procedures that a reasonably prudent person would take and adopt in preserving the goodwill;
- That compensation for the loss will not be included in payments under Gov. Code § 7262 (pertaining to relocation assistance); and
- That compensation for the loss will not be duplicated in the compensation otherwise awarded to the owner.

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510, the costs of acquiring and maintaining a replacement property in anticipation of eventual loss of the existing location, i.e., mitigating loss of business goodwill, would not be recoverable if there was no direct or indirect taking of the property and Klopping damages [see Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 51-53, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345 ; see also MB 3500A.17] were sought for pre-condemnation delay [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control District (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 568-569, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575 ; see MB 3500A.15; see also Langer v. Redevelopment Agency of City of Santa Cruz (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 998, 1008-1010, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 19 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510 inapplicable when alleged losses were consequence of landlord's termination of month-to-month tenancies, with no taking or substantial equivalent by redevelopment agency)].

PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.10

MB 3500A.10 Basic Measure--Complete Taking

[1] Instruction

This case involves a complete deprivation or taking of property. The just compensation to which Plaintiff is entitled in such a case is the fair market value of the property taken.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Because the property taken is part of a larger parcel, Plaintiff is also entitled to compensation for the severance damages, if any, to the remaining parcel.

Authorities: Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 268-269, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 ; City of Carlsbad v. Rudvalis (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 667, 678, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 194 ; City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 1013, 1028, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 108 ; Saratoga Fire Protection Dist. v. Hackett (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 895, 902, 118 Cal.Rptr.2d 696 ; County of San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1058, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 675 ; Tilem v. City of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal.App.3d 694, 707, 191 Cal.Rptr. 229 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on the basic measure of damages when the property owner's entire interest has been taken. If there has been only a partial taking, i.e., damage to only a portion of the plaintiff's interest, the instruction in MB 3500A.11 should be used.

The optional paragraph is for use when severance damages are recoverable [see Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions, CACI 3511, for an instruction on severance damages]. Severance damages are recoverable in inverse condemnation cases, as well as in eminent domain cases [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 268-269, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129].

[3] Comment

In most instances, the measure of damages in an inverse condemnation case is fair market value [County of San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1058, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 675 ; see MB 3500A.14 for discussion of measures of damages other than market value]. The fair market value measure of damages is conceptually the same whether there is a complete or partial taking. In both cases, damages are measured by the difference between the fair market value of the property before and after the taking [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 268-269, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 ; Tilem v. City of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal.App.3d 694, 707, 191 Cal.Rptr. 229]. As a practical matter, however, separate instructions for complete and partial takings are helpful to avoid jury confusion. This is because a complete taking causes the "after" value to be zero, and it is generally simpler and clearer to instruct the jury that the owner is entitled to recover the property's fair market value.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Presenting Evidence of Fair Market Value: The determination of fair market value is the most critical aspect of the jury's charge. This will largely come down to expert credibility. A savvy practitioner will direct conservative assumptions by his/her experts so that they withstand cross-examination and convey to the jury that they have not taken liberties with the valuation analysis. This will help shore up other areas where the expert may be weak. The practitioner should anticipate weaknesses in his/her expert valuation and deal with them early. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Severance Damages: Jurors may have trouble with the concept of severance damages. They should be instructed (and shown visually, if possible) that the property taken was part of a larger parcel. Severance damages are damages to the remaining portions of the property (parcel) that were not taken but which nevertheless suffered injury as a direct result of the taking. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Even when the physical taking is only partial, the economic loss may sometimes be complete [see, e.g., Tilem v. City of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal.App.3d 694, 704, 191 Cal.Rptr. 229 (loss of 10-foot strip rendered remaining lot too small to build on)]. In these circumstances, this instruction should be given instead of the instruction on partial taking or damaging in MB 3500A.11.

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.11

MB 3500A.11 Basic Measure--Partial Taking or Damaging

[1] Instruction

This case involves a partial taking of or damaging to property. The just compensation to which Plaintiff is entitled in such a case is the difference between the fair market value of the property immediately before the damage occurred and the fair market value of the property immediately after the damage occurred.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Because the property taken is part of a larger parcel, Plaintiff is also entitled to compensation for the severance damages, if any, to the remaining parcel.

Authority: Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 268-269, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 .

[2] Use of Instruction

Because most inverse condemnation cases involve only damage to property, rather than taking or total destruction, this instruction will be used more often than the instruction set forth in MB 3500A.10. The optional paragraph should be used when severance damages are recoverable [see Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions, CACI 3511, for an instruction on severance damages].

[3] Comment

The leading case on the analysis of liability issues in inverse condemnation actions is Albers v. County of Los Angeles [

Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129]. In Albers, the California Supreme Court approved a measure of damages like that set out in this instruction [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 268-269, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 (property was damaged by landslide caused by construction of road, and trial court awarded plaintiffs difference between fair market value before landslide and fair market value after landslide, plus severance damages to adjoining property)]. This measure of damages has been applied in a wide variety of circumstances [see, e.g., Rose v. State of California (1942) 19 Cal.2d 713, 123 P.2d 505 (loss of street access); Parker v. City of Los Angeles (1974) 44 Cal.App.3d 556, 118 Cal.Rptr. 687 (airport noise and vibration)]. However, counsel should not assume that diminution of market value will be the measure of damages in all circumstances. As one court has stated, this measure should not be applied "inflexibly" [Amador Valley Investors v. City of Livermore (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 483, 494, 117 Cal.Rptr. 749]. Alternative measures of damage are discussed in MB 3500A.14.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Methodology of Valuation: There are various methodologies that may be used by experts to value property before and after the taking. While partially taken non-income producing real property would typically be valued by real estate appraisals to determine change in fair market value, if an ongoing business venture is partially taken, the proper measure of injury caused by the taking may best be measured by capitalizing net lost income or lost profits. In such a case, this instruction should be modified to reflect the particular methodologies that will be presented to the jurors. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.12

MB 3500A.12 Definition of Fair Market Value

[1] Instruction

The fair market value of the property taken or damaged is the highest price that would be agreed to on the date of valuation by a seller who is willing to sell but who has no particular or urgent need to sell and who is not obliged to sell, and a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to buy but who has no particular need to buy, each dealing with the other with full knowledge of all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably adaptable and available.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The fair market value of property taken or damaged for which there is no relevant, comparable market is its value on the date of valuation as determined by any method of valuation that is just and equitable.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.320 (eminent domain statute); City of Carlsbad v. Rudvalis (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 667, 678, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 194 ; City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 1013, 1028, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 108 ; Saratoga Fire Protection Dist. v. Hackett (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 895, 902, 118 Cal.Rptr.2d 696 ; McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 699-700, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in any case seeking a "market value" measure of damages. The first paragraph is based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.320(a). The optional paragraph is based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.320(b) and should be used when there is no relevant, comparable market. Note that although Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.320 is part of the Eminent Domain Law, inverse condemnation cases use the same test for fair market value [see McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 699-700, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 ; Federal Oil Co. v. City of Culver City (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 93, 98, 3 Cal.Rptr. 519].

Counsel may want to augment this instruction with additional instructions explaining the valuation methods to be used at trial. At least three methods for determining fair market value have been approved by statute [see [3][a], below].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Fair Market Value

This instruction applies to both real and personal property damage cases. In inverse condemnation cases, courts have used the definition of fair market value from Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.320(a), an eminent domain statute [Saratoga Fire Protection Dist. v. Hackett (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 895, 902, 118 Cal.Rptr.2d 696 ; McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.320(b) (fair market value when no relevant, comparable market exists); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.321 (value of nonprofit, special use property to be determined as provided in Evid. Code § 824 when no relevant, comparable market exists); Evid. Code § 824 (determining value of nonprofit, special use property when no relevant, comparable market exists)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Standard Valuation Method: This is a standard instruction in cases where takings damages can be accurately measured by the change in fair market value before and after the taking. Jurors should also be instructed that the fair market value determination must be supported by competent expert or other witness testimony. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Evid. Code §§ 810-824 govern the admissibility of evidence concerning the market value of property. Under these statutes, the following indicia may be used to establish the property's market value:

- The sale price of comparable property [Evid. Code § 816];
- The capitalized value of the property's reasonable net rental value [Evid. Code § 819]; and
- The property's value plus the cost of replacing or reproducing the existing improvements, less any depreciation or obsolescence suffered by the improvements [Evid. Code § 820].

The decision as to which of these three methods to use at trial is beyond the scope of this chapter. In brief, the comparable cost approach is commonly used in cases involving residential property, while the capitalization of rental income is most applicable to cases involving income property [Parker v. City of Los Angeles (1974) 44 Cal.App.3d 556, 562-563, 118 Cal.Rptr. 687 ; contra De Freitas v. Suisun City (1915) 170 Cal. 263, 266, 149 P. 553 (disapproving "mere capitalization" of net revenues)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Valuation Must be Comparable: One of the issues addressed by this instruction is that the valuation must not be at "fire sale" prices. An expert's use of comparable properties in a comparable sales valuation should be closely scrutinized to determine whether distressed sales are included. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Valuation for Fluctuating Market: A particular market for an asset may be subject to unusual temporary fluctuations (a short-term crash in the real estate market, for example, occurring just before the date of the taking). If that is the case with the property to be valued, this instruction should be augmented to include an explanation of the specific valuation method used if it is something other than the "comparable sales value" methodology. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Evid. Code § 822 identifies matters on which an opinion as to market value cannot be based, and should be read in conjunction with Evid. Code §§ 814-821.

In eminent domain cases, the property's fair market value does not include any increase or decrease in the property's value that is attributable to any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.330]:

- The project for which the property is taken;
- The eminent domain proceedings in which the property is taken; or
- Any preliminary actions of the governmental entity relating to the taking of the property.

Thus, the probability of rezoning or even an actual change in zoning that results from the fact that the project that is the basis for the taking was impending may not be taken into account in valuing the property in a condemnation proceeding when the condemning agency and the zoning authority are the same [City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 1013, 1029, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 108]. In City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership, the court of appeal held that the trial court properly excluded evidence of zoning restrictions affecting the taken property that the city imposed in connection with the planning of the freeway project that necessitated the taking [City of San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 1013, 1029-1034, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 108].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.13

MB 3500A.13 Land With Improvements

[1] Instruction

If there are improvements on land that have been taken or damaged, you must determine the fair market value of the land and the improvements on it as a whole. You must not add the separate value of the improvements to the separate value of the land.

Authority: Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.210 (eminent domain statute).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given if the case involves land with improvements and a request for fair market value damages. If an alternative measure of damages is requested [see MB 3500A.14 for instruction on alternative measures of damages], this instruction should not be given.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Compensation for Improvements

This instruction is based on the rule that governs takings of land with improvements in eminent domain cases as stated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.210(a), but should be equally applicable to inverse condemnation cases [see City of Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1982) 32 Cal.3d 60, 67, 183 Cal.Rptr. 673, 646 P.2d 835 (eminent domain and inverse condemnation merely different manifestations of same governmental power, with correlative duties imposed on public entities by same constitutional provisions); Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 663 n.1, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 (principles affecting parties' rights in inverse condemnation action are generally same as in eminent domain); Marshall v. Department of Water & Power (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1124, 1138, 268 Cal.Rptr. 559 (quoting Breidert)). Its primary purpose is to prevent juror confusion in determining the correct measure of damages.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Condition of Improvements: If improvements on the land have been damaged, but the damage is not reflected in a commensurate decline in fair market value of the parcel as a whole, use of the "fair market value" damages methodology will not optimize the plaintiff's recovery. Plaintiffs' counsel should consider using an alternative valuation methodology (such as cost of repair). Alternatively, if the plaintiff is proceeding under a fair market value damages theory, use of this instruction by defense counsel is necessary to prevent juror confusion as to the proper application of the decline in fair market value test. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

County of Ventura* (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 268, 274, 43 Cal.Rptr. 450 ; Frustuck v. Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 345, 365-367, 28 Cal.Rptr. 357 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever the other instructions in this chapter do not apply or do not provide a logical or equitable measure of damages. Counsel should select the desired theory of damages from the alternatives offered in the instruction.

[3] Comment

Several cases have used a measure of damages other than fair market value in inverse condemnation actions. The leading case is Frustruck v. City of Fairfax, where the plaintiff sought recovery in inverse condemnation from the City of Fairfax for property damage caused by an alleged increase in drainage water discharged on her property. Both the trial court and the appellate court found that the City's construction of a larger culvert and its enlargement of a surface ditch constituted a compensable taking, but they disagreed on the sufficiency of the evidence and the applicable measure of damages. The appellate court reversed the trial court's $5,000 award on the ground that the plaintiff did not offer evidence proving that her property values had been decreased, and on the ground that there was no evidence to support an award for future works allegedly needed to control the increased flows [Frustruck v. Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 345, 365-367, 28 Cal.Rptr. 357].

In reaching its conclusion, the appellate court restated the rules regarding alternative, that is, nonmarket-value, measures of damages in inverse condemnation cases. "Ordinarily, the recognized measure of damages in cases such as this is the difference in the value of the real property immediately before and after the injury. This method, however, is not exclusive." The court accordingly recognized that, "where appropriate to a particular situation," the measure of damages may be based on the following: the cost of making repairs; the loss of use of the property; lost profits; loss of prospective profits; increased operating expenses pending repairs; all of the detriment proximately caused by the injury "as in other tort actions"; and "present and prospective damages that are the natural, necessary or reasonable incident of the taking of property" [Frustruck v. Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 345, 28 Cal.Rptr. 357].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Income-Producing Property: This instruction should be used when there has been injury to income-producing property such as the temporary disruption of an on-going business--an injury that would cause significant pecuniary damage but would not be reflected in a change in market value of the property. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

A close reading of the cases cited by the court in Frustruck in support of these alternative measures of damages reveals the court's confusion of tort and inverse condemnation principles in its analysis of damages rules in inverse condemnation cases [see, e.g., Natural Soda Prod. Co. v. City of L.A. (1943) 23 Cal.2d 193, 199-201, 143 P.2d 12] . In Natural Soda, the court was unclear as to whether the action was one for inverse condemnation or tort. More often than not, the court refers to the underlying action as one in tort. In any case, the court in Natural Soda frequently relied on tort cases in its analysis of potential remedies [see, e.g., Linforth v. S.F. Gas & Electric Co. (1909) 156 Cal. 58, 103 P. 320 ; Higgins v. L.A. Gas & Electric Co. (1911) 159 Cal. 651, 115 P. 313]. Similar confusion of tort and inverse condemnation damage rules appears in other cases cited in Frustruck [see, e.g., Inyo Chemical Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1936) 5 Cal.2d 525, 55 P.2d 850].

However, despite its melding of tort and inverse condemnation damages rules, Frustruck has been cited by numerous subsequent inverse condemnation cases to support the use of non-market-value measures of damage [see, e.g., Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. County of Ventura (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 268, 274, 43 Cal.Rptr. 450 (cost to relocate pipeline was proper measure of damages, citing Frustruck)]. Other cases have approved nonmarket-value measures of damage without citing Frustruck [see, e.g., Kong v. City of Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2002) 108 Cal.App.4th 1028, 1043, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 260 (subtenant who was required to move his business to location with substantially higher rent could be compensated for loss of old location with cheaper rent); Orme v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 178, 182-184, 147 Cal.Rptr. 735 (plaintiff sought lost profits on crops, loss of rents, and cost of restoring damaged farm land) (dictum); Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. v. Goehring (1970) 13 Cal.App.3d 58, 66-68, 91 Cal.Rptr. 375 (cost to repair roadway awarded as separate item of damages unrelated to diminution in fair market value)]. The use of nonmarket-value measures of damages is consistent with Albers v. County of Los Angeles [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 ; see also CUNA Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 382, 393, 133 Cal.Rptr.2d 470], which held that mitigation expenses were a recoverable item of damages [see MB 3500A.19 for instruction on mitigation]. In reaching its conclusion, the California Supreme Court stated that the concept of "just compensation" is broad and necessarily serves "primarily as a point of departure for a case-by-case development of the law governing recovery for direct and inverse condemnation" [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 269, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129].

On the other hand, a court of appeal rejected the notion that inverse condemnation damages may properly be measured by the cost of repair. The court held that an instruction on the cost of repair was erroneous and that the error was prejudicial [Housley v. City of Poway (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 801, 807-811, 24 Cal.Rptr.2d 554].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.15

MB 3500A.15 Unreasonable Delay/Loss of Use

[1] Instruction

Plaintiff is entitled to just compensation if Defendant _____ [unreasonably delays in the commencement of an eminent domain action to acquire property that it has announced an intention to condemn or specify other improper action]. I have determined that Defendant is liable to Plaintiff for _____ [unreasonably delaying the direct condemnation of the property or describe other improper action]. Plaintiff is therefore entitled to just compensation for the harm suffered by _____ [specify property at issue] during the period of _____ [unreasonable delay or describe other improper action], which I have determined is from _____ to _____ [insert dates as determined by court].

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

To determine the amount of this just compensation, you must include in your verdict the amount of Plaintiff's loss of rental income from the property, if any, due to the _____ [unreasonable delay or specify other improper action].

[OR]

To determine the amount of this just compensation, you must include in your verdict the additional amount, if any, that the property would have been worth on the date of valuation but for the _____ [unreasonable delay or specify other improper action].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

To determine the amount of this just compensation, you may not include in your verdict the additional expenses, if any, that plaintiff incurred in purchasing and maintaining a new location for plaintiff's ongoing business, in order to reduce an expected loss of goodwill when the existing location is condemned.

Authorities: Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 51-53, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345 ; Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control District (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 561, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575 ; Taper v. City of Long Beach (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 590, 610, 181 Cal.Rptr. 169 ; Stone v. City of Los Angeles (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 987, 990-994, 124 Cal.Rptr. 822 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever there is a claim for unreasonable precondemnation delay or other unreasonable or improper condemnation conduct. It is based on the holding in Klopping v. City of Whittier [Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 51-53, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345 ; see [3][a], below]. The issue of the amount of damages is submitted to the jury only if the court finds that the public entity acted unreasonably or improperly [City of Ripon v. Sweetin (2002) 100 Cal.App.4th 887, 897, 122 Cal.Rptr.2d 802].

The instruction offers two options for stating the measure of damages. This is because there is some ambiguity in Klopping as to whether lost rents is intended as a separate item of damages or is merely to be used as a measure of the diminution of the property's market value [see [3][a], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Alternatives: Use the first alternative "lost rental income" when the unreasonable delay affects income-generating property. Use the second alternative "pre-condemnation reduction in market value" when the property does not generate income. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

The instruction contains an optional provision based on the holding in Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control District that expenses incurred in purchasing and maintaining a new location for an ongoing business for the purpose of mitigating an anticipated loss of goodwill when the existing business is condemned, are not recoverable Klopping damages if the public entity's conduct did not go beyond designation of the property for possible acquisition [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control District (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 570-572, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Loss of Goodwill: The optional part of this instruction should be used when a plaintiff seeks mitigation damages for loss of goodwill if there is evidence the affected business could have continued to operate at the site unaffected by the condemnation. However, there may be circumstances in which mitigation for loss of business goodwill is recoverable in the pre-condemnation context. In such circumstances, the plaintiff must show that the probable condemner (1) acted affirmatively to lower the value of the landowner's property; (2) physically burdened the property; or (3) decreased the income the property produced [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 565, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575]. Second, the party must show that it cannot continue to operate its business unaffected by the possible condemnation. Once both of these factors are satisfied, it must also show that its mitigation to avoid loss of business goodwill is reasonable [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 571-573, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575]. If all of these parameters are met, Klopping damages for mitigation of pre-condemnation loss of business goodwill could likely be awarded under Barthelemy. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

The number of cases involving Klopping awards has diminished since the subsequent enactment of the Eminent Domain

Law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1230.010-1273.050; see Stats. 1975, ch. 1275 (enactment of Eminent Domain Law)], because of Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.260. If an eminent domain proceeding is not filed within six months after the adoption of a resolution of necessity, Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.260 provides that the property owner may bring an action in inverse condemnation to force the public entity to take the property and pay compensation for it, to recover damages for interference with possession or use, or both.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][c], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Damages for Excessive Delay

In Klopping v. City of Whittier [Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 51-52, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345], the California Supreme Court held that a property owner is entitled to just compensation for the harm to property when a public entity is guilty of unreasonable precondemnation conduct "either by excessively delaying eminent domain action or by other oppressive conduct." It is not entirely clear from the opinion in Klopping whether lost rents are recoverable in themselves or are to be used merely as a measure of the loss in fair market value [Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 53, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345]:

On the date on which an announcement of future intent to condemn is made, the market value may properly be measured by the anticipated rental income to be received throughout the lifetime of the property. If as a result of precondemnation statements rental income is lost, the anticipated rental income would be diminished and a decline in the fair market value would follow.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Damages for Unreasonable Delay Are in Addition to Other Damages: The compensation due for unreasonable delay is in addition to compensation for the taking itself. Hence, when income-generating property has been specially damaged due to improper or unreasonable pre-condemnation conduct, the measure of the compensable pre-condemnation loss may be calculated by lost rents or lost income over the delay period. The valuation of the property for purposes of just compensation (a separate measure of compensation) would not include pre-condemnation damages. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

According to one case, loss rental was the measure of damages in Klopping because, in that instance, it was "an improved method of measuring a decline in market value" [City of Ripon v. Sweetin (2002) 100 Cal.App.4th 887, 896, 122 Cal.Rptr.2d 802 (emphasis in original)].

The above passage suggests that any finding regarding lost rents must be tied to testimony concerning diminution in fair market value and that the way to establish this tie is through opinion testimony on locally accepted capitalization rates and the anticipated lifespan of the property.

In Taper v. City of Long Beach [Taper v. City of Long Beach (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 590, 610, 181 Cal.Rptr. 169], the court of appeal stated that for a taking or damaging that resulted from the city's "unreasonable delay and other oppressive precondemnation conduct," the plaintiffs were "entitled to recover damages for any diminution in the market value of the property attributable to City's unreasonable conduct, which diminution in value may, of course, be measured by the loss of the reasonable value of the use of the property." However, in Stone v. City of Los Angeles [Stone v. City of Los Angeles (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 987, 990-994, 124 Cal.Rptr. 822], the plaintiff was awarded $150,000 for "loss of use based upon claimed lost rental value" on its inverse condemnation claim, while also receiving over $2,000,000 for the fair market value of its property as the cross-defendant on the city's eminent domain cross-complaint.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Jurors Must Calculate Both Kinds of Damages:

Explain to the jurors that pre-condemnation damages are in addition to the just compensation damages calculated on the date of the taking. Hence, the jurors should calculate both the special losses directly caused by improper or unreasonable pre-condemnation conduct as well as any loss cause by the taking itself (if a condemnation occurred) on the date of the taking. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

However, a delay in a governmental process other than an eminent domain action will not necessarily constitute a taking of property. For example, a legally erroneous decision of a government agency during the development approval process that results in delay does not by itself amount to a taking of property, even if the error diminishes the property's value, as long as there is an objective, sufficient connection between the land use regulation in question and a legitimate governmental purpose [see, e.g., Landgate, Inc. v. California Coastal Com. (1998) 17 Cal.4th 1006, 1010, 1022, 73 Cal.Rptr.2d 841, 953 P.2d 1188 (inverse condemnation proceeding brought against Coastal Commission due to two-year delay in issuance of building permit); see also Buckley v. California Coastal Commission (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 178, 201, 80 Cal.Rptr.2d 562 (following Landgate and finding Commission's issuance of stop-work orders did not constitute permanent or temporary taking)].

[b] Mitigating Anticipated Loss of Goodwill

In Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control District, the court of appeal held in a matter of first impression that precondemnation damages recoverable under Klopping do not include expenses incurred in purchasing and maintaining a new location for an ongoing business for the purpose of mitigating an anticipated loss of goodwill when the existing business is condemned, if the public entity did nothing to interfere with plaintiff's profitable use of the property [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 561, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575]. The court stated that actionable injury under Klopping must go beyond the unavoidable consequences of an agency's designation of property for possible acquisition [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 570-571, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575]. Otherwise, a landowner would be entitled to take whatever actions it deemed necessary to relocate its operations at public expense, without any assurance that the public entity would actually acquire the original property [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 571-572, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575]. Furthermore, those relocation expenses are not compensable as loss of goodwill under Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510 [see MB 3500A.04], because § 1263.510 does not authorize recovery without an actual taking of property [Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 558, 569, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 575 ; see Langer v. Redevelopment Agency of City of Santa Cruz (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 998, 1008-1010, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 19 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510 inapplicable when alleged losses were consequence of landlord's termination of month-to-month tenancies, with no taking or substantial equivalent by redevelopment agency)].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.16

MB 3500A.16 Loss of Access

[1] Instruction

Plaintiff has a right to reasonable access to [his/her/its] property. This includes the right to enter and leave the property by foot or by vehicle and the right to receive air and light from the adjacent street.

I have determined that Plaintiff's right of access has been impaired by _____ [specify improvement at issue] and that Defendant must pay just compensation for this impairment of access. The just compensation to which Plaintiff is entitled is the difference, if any, between the property's fair market value immediately before the loss of access and the property's fair market value immediately after the loss of access.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

This impairment of access should be considered in determining the amount of severance damages, if any.

Authorities: City of Los Angeles v. Ricards (1973) 10 Cal.3d 385, 387-388, 110 Cal.Rptr. 489, 515 P.2d 585 ; Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 663-664, 667, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 ; Bacich v. Board of Control (1943) 23 Cal.2d 343, 349-350, 144 P.2d 818 ; Rose v. State of California (1942) 19 Cal.2d 713, 727-728, 740-743, 123 P.2d 505 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the landowner's right to compensation for loss of access to his or her property. During periods of rapid construction of freeways, loss of access cases were quite common. Although the number of these cases has diminished, loss of access remains a potential issue in inverse condemnation actions.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use in Cases of Complete Loss of Access: This instruction is limited to cases of impairment to real property access rights caused by public improvements. For example, if a public works project eliminates all reasonable means of ingress and egress to the property, this instruction should be used. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

If severance damages are at issue, the optional paragraph should be added, and this instruction should be given with the instruction in Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions, CACI 3511.

[3] Comment

[a] Easement of Access

The rights of a landowner include an easement of access in the adjoining public streets. This includes the right of ingress and egress to and from the owner's land and the right to light and air [Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 663-664, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 ; Bacich v. Board of Control (1943) 23 Cal.2d 343, 349-350, 144 P.2d 818 ; Rose v. State of California (1942) 19 Cal.2d 713, 727-728, 123 P.2d 505 ; see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 512, Compensation, § 512.32 (Matthew Bender)]. If this right of access is substantially impaired by a government entity, the landowner is entitled to compensation for that impairment [City of Los Angeles v. Ricards (1973) 10 Cal.3d 385, 388, 110 Cal.Rptr. 489, 515 P.2d 585 ; Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 663-664, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719]. Whether the right of access has been substantially impaired is a question of law for the court. If there is substantial impairment, the degree of impairment and the amount of damages, if any, are questions for the trier of fact [Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 664, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 ; see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 512, Compensation, § 512.32[1] (Matthew Bender)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Calculating Loss in Expected Income Stream:

Although a property owner is not entitled to just compensation for lost profits or business goodwill caused by the ordinary effects of a public project not uniquely burdensome to one particular parcel (the rerouting of street traffic, for example), it is conceivable that access to a parcel could be impaired to such a degree that a business operated on the property can no longer operate (or is substantially diminished). If the business cannot be relocated, to be made whole, the capitalized loss in the expected income stream over the life of the business (which reflects the loss in the market value of the business) should be included as part of the diminution in market value computation. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

The landowner is entitled to be compensated for the resulting depreciation in value of the property rendered inaccessible [City of Los Angeles v. Ricards (1973) 10 Cal.3d 385, 388, 110 Cal.Rptr. 489, 515 P.2d 585]. Evidence of lost business profits, loss of goodwill, and decreased value due to changes in traffic patterns generally is not permitted [Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 659, 667, 39 Cal.Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 ; Rose v. State of California (1942) 19 Cal.2d 713, 740-743, 123 P.2d 505].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.17

MB 3500A.17 Loss of Personal Property

[1] Instruction

Personal property that is taken or damaged as a result of a public use may be the subject of an inverse condemnation action. In this case I have determined that Defendant is liable under this theory for damage done to Plaintiff's personal property. The just compensation to which Plaintiff is entitled is measured by the market to which the Plaintiff would have to resort to replace the damaged or destroyed goods.

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

Thus, Plaintiff, as a consumer, can recover the retail price.

[OR]

Thus, Plaintiff, as a [distributor/retailer], can recover the wholesale price.

[OR]

Thus, Plaintiff, as a manufacturer, can recover the selling price.

Authorities: People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 1066, 1082, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 240 ; McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700-701, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on the just compensation available for the taking or damaging of personal property. This instruction should conclude with one of the alternative final paragraphs, to be chosen according to whether the plaintiff is a consumer, a retailer or distributor, or a seller. If the plaintiff is a retailer or distributor, it may be helpful to add an instruction defining "wholesale" price as being the same as replacement cost [see McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 701, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582]. However, when there is no single price throughout the particular industry, other methodologies may be used to determine the "wholesale" price [People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 1066, 1082, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 240].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Measuring Compensation for Personal

Property: Personal property may also include contractual rights taken by governmental regulation. In such a case, the measure of just compensation is the difference between the value to the owner of the contractual right before and after the taking. Such a measure might include lost income or profits. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Right to Compensation for Personal Property

The right to just compensation applies to personal as well as real property [People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 1066, 1069, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 240 ; Griswold v. City of Needles (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 1881, 1888, 1891, 8 Cal.Rptr.2d 753 ; McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582 ; Sutfin v. State of California (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 50, 67 Cal.Rptr. 665]. This instruction is based on the language of the Restatement of Torts, § 911, comment d, which the court adopted in McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica [McMahan's of Santa Monica v. City of Santa Monica (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 683, 700-701, 194 Cal.Rptr. 582].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Each Case Is Different: Because the Just Compensation Clause of the California Constitution requires that the property owner be "made whole," the same item may warrant more or less "just compensation" depending on the plaintiff's circumstances. In this regard, it is important to keep in mind that each case will be decided on its own unique facts. Your instructions to the jury should reflect the unique facts and circumstances of your case using the underlying legal principles as a guide. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.18

MB 3500A.18 Speculative Damages Not Permitted

[1] Instruction

Whatever damages you award, if any, must not be speculative, remote, imaginary, contingent, or merely possible.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

With regard to any damages you may award for future loss or harm, they must be based on your determination that such damages are reasonably certain to occur as a result of the taking or damaging in this action and not due to some contingent or extraneous force.

Authority: Frustuck v. City of Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 345, 367-368, 28 Cal.Rptr. 357.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain that the jury is not to award speculative damages. The optional second paragraph should be used if there are allegations of future harm.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--General Prohibition on Speculative Damages:

This instruction is reflective of the contract damages rule prohibiting speculative damages and the concept of proximate cause in the tort context. As a general rule, ordinary contract and tort damages principles will guide damages analyses under inverse condemnation law, although the applications of those principles may be different in some instances. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use for Lost Profits or Lost Goodwill: This instruction should be used when a plaintiff is seeking lost profits or lost goodwill from a business venture that may not have an adequate track record to support future revenue projections. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on the language of Frustruck v. City of Fairfax. In that case, the plaintiff claimed that her property was damaged by an increase in water flow caused by an improvement built by the city. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's award of damages on the grounds that there was no proper evidence of probable future harm due to the increased water flow, thus leaving the matter of damages, if any, to speculation and conjecture [Frustruck v. Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 345, 367-368, 28 Cal.Rptr. 357].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Claims of Lost Future Income: Plaintiffs seeking lost future income (or loss in market value of a business based on capitalized income projections) are advised to make the most conservative income projections feasible, otherwise, the plaintiff risks a finding that future damages are too remote and speculative to be included as just compensation. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART B. DAMAGES

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.19

MB 3500A.19 Duty to Mitigate; Expenses of Mitigation

[1] Instruction

An owner whose property is being taken or damaged by a public use is under a duty to take all reasonable steps available to minimize [his/her/its] loss. Expenses that the owner reasonably and in good faith incurs in an effort to minimize [his/her/its] loss are to be taken into account in computing the just compensation awarded to the owner.

Therefore, you may award to Plaintiff not only _____ [specify applicable measure of damages, e.g., the fair market value of the property] but also any mitigation expenses reasonably and in good faith incurred by Plaintiff in [his/her/its] efforts to prevent or lessen the damage to the property. The fact that Plaintiff's efforts to prevent further damage failed is irrelevant--the mitigation expenses are still recoverable if incurred reasonably and in good faith.

Authorities: Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 269-272, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 ; CUNA Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 382, 392, 133 Cal.Rptr.2d 470 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the landowner's duty to mitigate damages and the landowner's right to recover reasonable mitigation expenses. Because there is a dispute as to whether mitigation expenses are a separate item of damages or merely an item to be placed on the debit side in computing the fair market value of the property after the taking [see [3], below], it may be advisable to combine this instruction with a special verdict form specifically addressing mitigation expenses.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on the holding in Albers v. County of Los Angeles, an inverse condemnation case. In Albers, the California Supreme Court held that, in addition to compensation for the diminution in market value of the property, the plaintiffs had a right to recover mitigation expenses: "Where expenses have been so incurred, an instruction declaring the difference in market value to be the measure of damages, but omitting any reference to such expenses as a part of the damages, is properly refused" [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 269-270, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129 , quoting Kane v. City of Chicago (1945) 392 Ill. 172, 64 N.E.2d 506]. The recoverable mitigation expenses in Albers included fees spent on geologists, soils analysts, and foundation engineers, as well as money spent on drilling test holes and constructing temporary stabilizing caissons [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 268, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129]. Whether the mitigation efforts are successful is irrelevant as long as the expenditures are made in good faith and are reasonable in amount [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 272, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129]. A landowner is not required to show that "but for" the mitigation efforts, the property in fact would have been damaged [CUNA Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 382, 393-396, 133 Cal.Rptr.2d 470].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plaintiff Must Make Reasonable Attempt at

Mitigation: Emphasize to the jury that the question before them is whether the attempt at mitigation was reasonable under the circumstances and not whether the mitigation was successful. The plaintiff has a duty to take reasonable steps to attempt to mitigate its losses. There will be circumstances in which reasonable mitigation attempts actually cause an increase in the total loss incurred by the plaintiff. As long as plaintiff's actions to mitigate the loss were reasonable, plaintiff is entitled to recover the cost of the mitigation. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

According to dictum in the Albers decision, mitigation expenses may be calculated as a separate item of damages or placed on the debit side in computing the fair market value of the property after the taking [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 273, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129]. Treating mitigation expenses as a separate item of damages, as in [1], above, probably minimizes juror confusion.

According to one case, mitigation expenses must be distinguished from non-recoverable expenses incurred to prevent or lessen the taking at the outset. The court therefore held that legal and expert expenses incurred trying to compel adherence to an environmental impact report were not recoverable. The court reasoned that these expenses were incurred to prevent or alter the nature of the taking and that they were therefore not expenses incurred to mitigate the damage caused by the taking [Placer County Water Agency v. Hofman (1985) 165 Cal.App.3d 890, 897, 211 Cal.Rptr. 894].

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.30

MB 3500A.30 Admissibility and Weight of Opinions on Value

[1] Instruction

You must determine the fair market value of _____ [specify property at issue] only from the opinions of the witnesses who have testified.

You may not find the market value of _____ [specify property at issue] to be any less than the lowest value testified to by any witness or any more than the highest value testified to by any witness. You may not disregard the evidence on the issue of value and render a verdict based on your own beliefs or opinions.

Although owners of property and expert witnesses may express opinions on the issue of value, those opinions are worth no more than the reasons and factual data on which they are based.

Evidence that has been received from witnesses for the reasons underlying their opinions, and all other evidence concerning the property, is to be considered only for the limited purpose of enabling you to understand and weigh the opinions of the witnesses regarding the market value, if any, of _____ [specify property at issue]. You must resolve any conflict in the testimony of the witnesses by weighing each opinion against the other opinions, the reasons given for each, the facts relied on, and the credibility and qualifications of each witness.

Authority: Marshall v. Department of Water & Power (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1124, 1147, 268 Cal.Rptr. 559 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on the admissibility and weight of opinions on the value of property.

It must be modified if used in a case involving any measure of damages other than market value. It should be given in conjunction with other general instructions on weighing evidence and the credibility of witnesses.

Cases: This instruction (or a modified version of it) should be used in every inverse condemnation case.

[3] Comment

[a] Opinion Testimony

This instruction is based on an instruction that has been used in similar form in inverse condemnation cases [Marshall v. Department of Water & Power (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1124, 1147, 268 Cal.Rptr. 559 ; Aetna Life & Casualty Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 865, 876-878, 216 Cal.Rptr. 831]. In Contra Costa Water District v. Vaquero Farms, Inc., an eminent domain case in which the court instructed the jury on determining severance damages under Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.410 [see Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions, CACI No. 3511], the court upheld the jury's award of severance damages, which fell between the ranges stated by the parties' experts [Contra Costa Water Dist. v. Vaquero Farms, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 883, 903-905, 68 Cal.Rptr.2d 272]. The court followed case law holding that it is within the province of the trier of fact to reconcile conflicting testimony in the estimates of value and damage by witnesses for each side. The trier of fact may reasonably deem unrealistic various factors on which witnesses base their respective valuations [Contra Costa Water Dist. v. Vaquero Farms, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 883, 905, 68 Cal.Rptr.2d 272].

In addition to qualified experts, a property owner or property owner's spouse, a corporation's officer or regular employee, or a partner in a partnership, may testify on the issue of property value [Evid. Code § 813 (individuals qualified to testify on issue of value)].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART C. OTHER INSTRUCTIONS

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.31

MB 3500A.31 Substantial Cause

[1] Instruction

To recover in this action, Plaintiff must show that Defendant's creation, maintenance, or operation of a public improvement was a substantial cause of the Plaintiff's damages. The _____ [describe public entity's conduct or omissions] need not be the sole cause of the Plaintiff's damages as long as it was a substantial cause. Thus, the public entity may be liable if its acts or omissions were only one of several concurring substantial causes.

If there are several concurring substantial causes, Plaintiff must show a substantial cause-and-effect relationship between Defendant's public use and the claimed damages. The fact that other substantial concurring causes exist does not preclude Plaintiff from recovering as long as Plaintiff makes a showing that excludes the possibility that other forces acting alone produced the damages.

Authorities: Belair v. Riverside County Flood Control Dist. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 550, 558-560, 562, 253 Cal.Rptr. 693, 764 P.2d 1070 ; Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 77, 83-88, 107 Cal.Rptr. 727 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the parties agree to submit the issue of proximate cause to the jury [see [3][a], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Deciding Whether to Submit Issue of Liability to Jurors: Use caution in submitting the issue of liability (that is, whether there was a taking in the first place) to the jury. There is a potential for juror confusion if they believe damages must be apportioned between several concurring substantial causes. Jurors should be carefully admonished in this regard. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

[3] Comment[a] Substantial Cause Instruction

A jury may decide the issue of causation in an inverse condemnation case if the parties agree to submit it [Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 77, 83-88, 107 Cal.Rptr. 727]. Although earlier decisions refer to this element of the inverse condemnation cause of action as "proximate cause" [Albers v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 62 Cal.2d 250, 269-272, 42 Cal.Rptr. 89, 398 P.2d 129], later cases describe it as "substantial cause" [Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 77, 83-88, 107 Cal.Rptr. 727]. The latter view is more accurate because there is no foreseeability aspect to the causation element in inverse condemnation, at least in cases involving physical damage to real property [Belair v. Riverside County Flood Control Dist. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 550, 558-560, 562, 253 Cal.Rptr. 693, 764 P.2d 1070].

In one case, the court would not award severance damages when a city's road project did not directly impact the owners' planned uses of its property as a nursery. Rather, the owners' damage claims arose from development of the surrounding area that began well before the road construction [City of Carlsbad v. Rudvalis (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 667, 681, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 194]. In addition, the owners were not entitled to compensation for unaffixed personal property (such as equipment used in the business) because the condemnation in and of itself did not destroy its value [City of Carlsbad v. Rudvalis (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 667, 689-690, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 194].

[b] Other Stipulated Instructions

Issues other than proximate cause are theoretically amenable to resolution by the jury. These include, but are not limited to, all of the following:

- Whether noise or other environmental disturbances (e.g., fumes or dust) are sufficiently severe to constitute a taking [see, e.g., Aaron v. City of Los Angeles (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 471, 115 Cal.Rptr. 162] ;
- Whether there has been unreasonable delay in commencing an eminent domain proceeding [see, e.g., Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345] ;
- Whether a sufficient "emergency" exists to render a taking non-compensable [see, e.g., Rose v. City of Coalinga (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 1627, 236 Cal.Rptr. 124 ; see also Odello Brothers v. County of Monterey (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 778, 785, 792, 73 Cal.Rptr.2d 903 (triable issues of fact existed with regard to inverse condemnation claim based on county's decision to flood property during "emergency")]; and
- Whether plaintiff's negligence was a superseding cause relieving the public entity of liability [see, e.g., Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1682, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758 ; see also MB 3500A.32].

CHAPTER 35A Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions *
PART C. OTHER INSTRUCTIONS

5-35A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 3500A.32

MB 3500A.32 Superseding Cause

[1] Instruction

If you find that there was any negligence on the Plaintiff's part, you must determine whether Defendant's _____ [describe public entity's conduct or omissions] was a "superseding cause" of the damage to Plaintiff. A "superseding cause" exists when, after a negligent act, an independent non-concurring act operates to solely produce an injury. The subsequent act breaks the chain of causation.

Whether the Defendant's _____ [describe public entity's conduct or omissions] is a superseding cause is determined under the test of foreseeability. If the risk of injury might have been reasonably foreseen by Plaintiff, Plaintiff is responsible. However, if Defendant's action was highly unusual or extraordinary, not reasonably likely to happen, or the risk of harm was not foreseeable, it is a superseding cause, and any negligence of Plaintiff does not reduce any recovery.

Authority: Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1682, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant asserts that plaintiff was negligent, and the parties agree to submit to the jury the issue of whether that negligence was a superseding cause relieving the public entity of liability [see [3], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Deciding Whether to Submit Issue of Liability to Jurors: This instruction has the potential to be confusing to the jury. The jury should be advised that this instruction addresses liability, not damages. The point of this instruction to determine whether the public entity is liable at all for a taking. If the plaintiff, through its own negligence, prompted the governmental action that caused the injury at issue, and that governmental action was a reasonably foreseeable response to plaintiff's negligent act, the public entity is not liable. On the other hand, if the governmental action had no relationship to the plaintiff's negligent act (it was not a foreseeable consequence of plaintiff's negligence), the public entity is liable for a taking. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

[3] Comment

A jury may decide the issue of causation in an inverse condemnation case if the parties agree to submit it [Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 77, 83-88, 107 Cal.Rptr. 727 ; see *Los Osos Valley Associates v. This instruction states the law of superseding cause [see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 6, Torts, § 1197 (10th ed. 2005)] as applicable in an inverse condemnation case when the public entity asserts that the plaintiff was negligent [Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1670, 1682, 36 Cal.Rptr.2d 758].

CHAPTER 36 California Judicial Council Conspiracy Instructions

5-36 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3600

CACI 3600 Conspiracy--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of coconspirator]'s [insert tort theory] and that [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm because [he/she] was part of a conspiracy to commit [insert tort theory]. A conspiracy is an agreement by two or more persons to commit a wrongful act. Such an agreement may be made orally or in writing or may be implied by the conduct of the parties.

If you find that [name of coconspirator] committed a [insert tort theory] that harmed [name of plaintiff], then you must determine whether [name of defendant] is also responsible for the harm. [Name of defendant] is responsible if [name of plaintiff] proves both of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was aware that [name of coconspirator] [and others] planned to [insert wrongful act]; and
- 2. That [name of defendant] agreed with [name of coconspirator] [and others] and intended that the [insert wrongful act] be committed.

Mere knowledge of a wrongful act without cooperation or an agreement to cooperate is insufficient to make [name of defendant] responsible for the harm.

A conspiracy may be inferred from circumstances, including the nature of the acts done, the relationships between the parties, and the interests of the alleged coconspirators. [Name of plaintiff] is not required to prove that [name of defendant] personally committed a wrongful act or that [he/she] knew all the details of the agreement or the identities of all the other participants.

■ "Conspiracy is not a cause of action, but a legal doctrine that imposes liability on persons who, although not actually committing a tort themselves, share with the immediate tortfeasors a common plan or design in its perpetration. By participation in a civil conspiracy, a coconspirator effectively adopts as his or her own the torts of other coconspirators within the ambit of the conspiracy. In this way, a coconspirator incurs tort liability co-equal with the immediate tortfeasors." (Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 510-511 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "While criminal conspiracies involve distinct substantive wrongs, civil conspiracies do not involve separate torts. The doctrine provides a remedial measure for affixing liability to all persons who have 'agreed to a common design to commit a wrong.' " (Choate v. County of Orange (2000) 86 Cal.App.4th 312, 333 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 339] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "As long as two or more persons agree to perform a wrongful act, the law places civil liability for the resulting damages on all of them, regardless of whether they actually commit the tort themselves. 'The effect of charging ... conspiratorial conduct is to implicate all ... who agree to the plan to commit the wrong as well as those who actually carry it out.' " (Wyatt v. Union Mortgage Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 773, 784 [157 Cal.Rptr. 392, 598 P.2d 45] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The elements of a civil conspiracy are '(1) the formation and operation of the conspiracy; (2) the wrongful act or acts done pursuant thereto; and (3) the damage resulting.' " (Mosier v. Southern California Physicians Insurance Exchange (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1022, 1048 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 550] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[T]he major significance of the conspiracy lies in the fact that it renders each participant in the wrongful act responsible as a joint tortfeasor for all damages ensuing from the wrong, irrespective of whether or not he was a direct actor and regardless of the degree of his activity.' " (Applied Equipment Corp., supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 511 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A complaint for civil conspiracy states a cause of action only when it alleges the commission of a civil wrong that causes damage. Though conspiracy may render additional parties liable for the wrong, the conspiracy itself is not actionable without a wrong." (Okun v. Superior Court (1981) 29 Cal.3d 442, 454 [175 Cal.Rptr. 157, 629 P.2d 1369] .)

■ "Because civil conspiracy is so easy to allege, plaintiffs have a weighty burden to prove it. They must show that each member of the conspiracy acted in concert and came to a mutual understanding to accomplish a common and unlawful plan, and that one or more of them committed an overt act to further it. It is not enough that the conspiring officers knew of an intended wrongful act, they had to agree--expressly or tacitly--to achieve it. Unless there is such a meeting of the minds, 'the independent acts of two or more wrongdoers do not amount to a conspiracy.' " (Choate, supra, 86 Cal.App.4th at p. 333 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A cause of action for civil conspiracy may not arise ... if the alleged conspirator, though a participant in the agreement underlying the injury, was not personally bound by the duty violated by the wrongdoing" (Doctors' Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal.3d 39, 44 [260 Cal.Rptr. 183, 775 P.2d 508] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Conspiracy is not an independent tort; it cannot create a duty or abrogate an immunity. It allows tort recovery only against a party who already owes the duty and is not immune from liability based on applicable substantive tort law principles." (Applied Equipment Corp., supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 514 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A conspiracy cannot be alleged as a tort separate from the underlying wrong it is organized to achieve. As long as the underlying wrongs are subject to privilege, defendants cannot be held liable for a conspiracy to commit those wrongs. Acting in concert with others does not destroy the immunity of defendants." (McMartin v. Children's Institute International (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1393, 1406 [261 Cal.Rptr. 437] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We agree ... that the general rule is that a party who is not personally bound by the duty violated may not be held liable for civil conspiracy even though it may have participated in the agreement underlying the injury. However, an exception to this rule exists when the participant acts in furtherance of its own financial gain." (Mosier, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1048 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Conspiracy liability may properly be imposed on nonfiduciary agents or attorneys for conduct which they carry out not simply as agents or employees of fiduciary defendants, but in furtherance of their own financial gain." (Skarbrevik v. Cohen, England & Whitfield (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 692, 709 [282 Cal.Rptr. 627] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The basis of a civil conspiracy is the formation of a group of two or more persons who have agreed to a common plan or design to commit a tortious act.' The conspiring defendants must also have actual knowledge that a tort is planned and concur in the tortious scheme with knowledge of its unlawful purpose." (Kidron v. Movie Acquisition Corp. (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1571, 1582 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 752] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Liability as a co-conspirator depends upon projected joint action. 'The mere knowledge, acquiescence, or approval of the act, without co-operation or agreement to cooperate is not enough' But once the plan for joint action is shown, 'a defendant may be held liable who in fact committed no overt act and gained no benefit therefrom.' " (Wetherton v. Growers Farm Labor Assn. (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 168, 176 [79 Cal.Rptr. 543] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on another ground in Applied Equipment Corp., supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 521, fn. 10 .)

■ "Furthermore, the requisite concurrence and knowledge 'may be inferred from the nature of the acts done, the relation of the parties, the interests of the alleged conspirators, and other circumstances.' Tacit consent as well as express approval will suffice to hold a person liable as a coconspirator." (Wyatt, supra, 24 Cal.3d at p. 785 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is a legal commonplace that the existence of a conspiracy may be inferred from circumstances, and that the conspiracy need not be the result of an express agreement but may rest upon tacit assent and acquiescence." (Holder v. Home Savings & Loan Assn. of Los Angeles (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d 91, 108 [72 Cal.Rptr. 704] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Of course, the agreement between conspirators need not be proved by direct evidence, but may be shown by circumstantial evidence that tends to show a common intent. In fact, in the absence of a confession by one of the conspirators, it is usually very difficult to secure direct evidence of a conspiracy, so that in the usual case the ultimate fact of a conspiracy must be determined from those inferences naturally and properly to be drawn from those matters directly proved." (Peterson v. Cruickshank (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 148, 163 [300 P.2d 915] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A]ctual knowledge of the planned tort, without more, is insufficient to serve as the basis for a conspiracy claim. Knowledge of the planned tort must be combined with intent to aid in its commission. 'The sine qua non of a conspiratorial agreement is the knowledge on the part of the alleged conspirators of its unlawful objective and their intent to aid in achieving that objective.' 'This rule derives from the principle that a person is generally under no duty to take affirmative action to aid or protect others.' " (Kidron, supra, 40 Cal.App.4th at p. 1583 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "While knowledge and intent 'may be inferred from the nature of the acts done, the relation of the parties, the interest of the alleged conspirators, and other circumstances,' '[c]onspiracies cannot be established by suspicions. There must be some evidence. Mere association does not make a conspiracy. There must be evidence of some participation or interest in the commission of the offense.' An inference must flow logically from other facts established in the action." (Kidron, supra, 40 Cal.App.4th at p. 1583 , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Conspiracy Claim Is Difficult But Worthwhile If Evidence Exists: It is not an easy task to obtain sufficient evidence to support a claim of conspiracy. Significant discovery is usually required as well as a tenacious attitude. However, if an attorney does find evidence of a conspiracy, it is powerful and can make the defendant liable for all actions of the tort, even ones that occurred before the conspirator's involvement. By Dona Cohn-Payne

"[A] civil conspiracy to commit tortious acts can, as a matter of law, only be formed by parties who are already under a duty to the plaintiff, the breach of which will support a cause of action against them--individually and not as conspirators--in tort." ... "[W]here the plaintiff alleges the existence of a civil conspiracy among the defendants to commit tortious acts, the source of substantive liability arises out of a preexisting legal duty and its breach; liability cannot arise out of participation in the conspiracy alone." (Chavers v. Gatke Corp. (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 606, 614 [132 Cal.Rptr.2d 198] .)

CHAPTER 36 California Judicial Council Conspiracy Instructions

5-36 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3601

CACI 3601 Ongoing Conspiracy

If you decide that [name of defendant] joined the conspiracy to commit [insert tort theory], then [he/she] is responsible for all acts done as part of the conspiracy, whether the acts occurred before or after [he/she] joined the conspiracy.

New September 2003

- "It is the settled rule that 'to render a person civilly liable for injuries resulting from a conspiracy of which he was a member, it is not necessary that he should have joined the conspiracy at the time of its inception; everyone who enters into such a common design is in law a party to every act previously or subsequently done by any of the others in pursuance of it.' Having been found to have joined and actively participated in the continuing conspiracy to convert, appellant became liable for the previous acts of his coconspirators under the rules relating to civil liability, and the fact that some of the missing goods may never have come into his possession would not absolve him from liability." (De Vries v. Brumback (1960) 53 Cal.2d 643, 648 [2 Cal.Rptr. 764, 349 P.2d 532] , internal citations omitted.)

- "It is well settled that a conspirator is liable for all the acts done in furtherance of a common scheme or plan even though he is not a direct actor. It is equally well settled that a party may be liable even if the intentional tort is commenced before he participates, if he, knowing the facts, then participates therein." (Peterson v. Cruickshank (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 148, 168-169 [300 P.2d 915] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[Defendant] could not join in a conspiracy that had been completed." (Kidron v. Movie Acquisition Corp. (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1571, 1595 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 752] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 36 California Judicial Council Conspiracy Instructions

5-36 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3602

CACI 3602 Affirmative Defense--Agent and Employee Immunity Rule

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] was not part of a conspiracy because [he/she] was acting as an [agent/employee] of [name of defendant entity]. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [he/she] was acting in [his/her] official capacity on behalf of [name of defendant entity]; and
- 2. That [he/she] was not acting to advance [his/her] own personal interests.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended for situations where an individual defendant is alleged to have conspired with an entity. This instruction is not intended to apply in cases where an individual defendant is alleged to have conspired with a third party and there is no agency relationship between them.

- "[A]gents or employees of a corporation cannot conspire with the corporation while acting in their official capacities on behalf of the corporation rather than as individuals acting for their individual advantage." (Zumbrun v. University of Southern California (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 1, 12 [101 Cal.Rptr. 499] , internal citations omitted.)
- "The rule 'derives from the principle that ordinarily corporate agents and employees acting for or on behalf of the corporation cannot be held liable for inducing a breach of the corporation's contract since being in a confidential relationship to the corporation their action in this respect is privileged.'" (Applied

Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 512, fn. 4 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A corporation is, of course, a legal fiction that cannot act at all except through its employees and agents. When a corporate employee acts in the course of his or her employment, on behalf of the corporation, there is no entity apart from the employee with whom the employee can conspire. '[I]t is basic in the law of conspiracy that you must have two persons or entities to have a conspiracy. A corporation cannot conspire with itself any more than a private individual can, and it is the general rule that the acts of the agent are the acts of the corporation' To hold that a subordinate employee of a corporation can be liable for conspiring with the corporate principal would destroy what has heretofore been the settled rule that a corporation cannot conspire with itself." CACI 3610 Aiding and Abetting Tort--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of actor]'s [insert tort theory, e.g., assault and battery] and that [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm because [he/she] aided and abetted [name of actor] in committing the [e.g., assault and battery].

If you find that [name of actor] committed [a/an] [e.g., assault and battery] that harmed [name of plaintiff], then you must determine whether [name of defendant] is also responsible for the harm. [Name of defendant] is responsible as an aider and abetter if [name of plaintiff] proves all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] knew that [a/an] [e.g., assault and battery] was [being/going to be] committed by [name of actor] against [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [name of defendant] gave substantial assistance or encouragement to [name of actor]; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff].

Mere knowledge that [a/an] [e.g., assault and battery] was [being/going to be] committed and the failure to prevent it do not constitute aiding and abetting.

New April 2008

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff seeks to hold a defendant responsible for the tort of another on a theory of aiding and abetting, whether or not the active tortfeasor is also a defendant.

Some cases seem to hold that in addition to the elements of knowledge and substantial assistance, a complaint must allege the aider and abettor had the specific intent to facilitate the wrongful conduct. (See Schulz v. Neovi Data Corp. (2007) 152 Cal.App.4th 86, 95 [60 Cal.Rptr.3d 810] .)

Sources and Authority

■ "The jury was also instructed on aiding and abetting, as follows: 'A person aids and abets the commission of a crime when he or she: [P] (1) With knowledge of the unlawful purpose of the perpetrator, and [P] (2) With the intent or purpose of committing or encouraging or facilitating the commission of the crime, and [P] (3) By act or advice aids, promotes, encourages or instigates the commission of the crime. [P] A person who aids and abets the commission of a crime need not be present at the scene of the crime. [P] Mere presence at the scene of a crime which does not itself assist the commission of the crime does not amount to aiding and abetting. [P] Mere knowledge that a crime is being committed and the failure to prevent it does not amount to aiding and abetting.'" (Casella v. SouthWest Dealer Services, Inc. (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 1127, 1140-1141 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 445] .)

■ "[W]e consider whether the complaint states a claim based upon 'concert of action' among defendants. The elements of this doctrine are prescribed in section 876 of the Restatement Second of Torts. The section provides, 'For harm resulting to a third person from the tortious conduct of another, one is subject to liability if he (a) does a tortious act in concert with the other or pursuant to a common design with him, or (b) knows that the other's conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives substantial assistance or encouragement to the other so to conduct himself, or (c) gives substantial assistance to the other in accomplishing a tortious result and his own conduct, separately considered, constitutes a breach of duty to the third person.' With respect to this doctrine, Prosser states that 'those who, in pursuance of a common plan or design to commit a tortious act, actively take part in it, or further it by cooperation or request, or who lend aid or encouragement to the wrongdoer, or ratify and adopt his acts done for their benefit, are equally liable with him. [para.] Express agreement is not necessary, and all that is required is that there be a tacit understanding' " (Sindell v. Abbott Laboratories (1980) 26 Cal.3d 588, 604 [163 Cal.Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " ' "Liability may ... be imposed on one who aids and abets the commission of an intentional tort if the person ... knows the other's conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives substantial assistance or encouragement to the other to so act" [Citations.]' This is consistent with Restatement Second of Torts, which recognizes a cause of action for aiding and abetting in a civil action when it provides: 'For harm resulting to a third person from the tortious conduct of another, one is subject to liability if he [P] ... [P] (b) knows that the other's conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives substantial assistance or encouragement to the other so to conduct himself' 'Advice or encouragement to act operates as a moral support to a tortfeasor and if the act encouraged is known to be tortious it has the same effect upon the liability of the adviser as participation or physical assistance. ... It likewise applies to a person who knowingly gives substantial aid to another who, as he knows, intends to do a tortious act.' " (Schulz, supra, 152 Cal.App.4th at pp. 93-94 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "California courts have long held that liability for aiding and abetting depends on proof the defendant had actual knowledge of the specific primary wrong the defendant substantially assisted. ... 'The words "aid and abet" as thus used have a well understood meaning, and may fairly be construed to imply an intentional participation with knowledge of the object to be attained.' " (Casey v. U.S. Bank Nat. Assn. (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 1138, 1145-1146 [26 Cal.Rptr.3d 401] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'Mere knowledge that a tort is being committed and the failure to prevent it does not constitute aiding and abetting. "As a general rule, one owes no duty to control the conduct of another" More specifically, a supervisor is not liable to third parties for the acts of his or her subordinates.' " (Austin B. v. Escondido Union School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal.App.4th 860, 879 [57 Cal.Rptr.3d 454] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'In the civil arena, an aider and abettor is called a cotortfeasor. To be held liable as a cotortfeasor, a defendant must have knowledge and intent. ... A defendant can be held liable as a cotortfeasor on the basis of acting in concert only if he or she knew that a tort had been, or was to be, committed, and acted with the intent of facilitating the commission of that tort.' Of course, a defendant can only aid and abet another's tort if the defendant knows what 'that tort' is. ... [T]he defendant must have acted to aid the primary tortfeasor 'with knowledge of the object to be attained.' " (Casey, supra, 27 Cal.App.4th at p. 1146, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ It appears that one may be liable as an aider and abetter of a negligent act. (See Orser v. George (1967) 252 Cal.App.2d 660, 668 [60 Cal.Rptr. 708] ["James too must be held as a defendant because, although he did not fire the fatal bullet, there is evidence (which may or may not be sufficient to prove him liable at the trial) creating a question for the trier of fact. This evidence indicates he was firing alternately with Vierra at the same mudhen, in the same line of fire and possibly tortiously. In other words (to paraphrase the Restatement ...), the record permits a possibility James knew Vierra's conduct constituted a breach of duty owed Orser and that James was giving Vierra substantial 'assistance or encouragement'; also that this was substantial assistance to Vierra in a tortious result with James' own conduct, 'separately considered, constituting a breach of duty to' Orser."], original italics; see also Rest. 2d Torts, § 876, Com. on Clause (b), Illustration 6.)

- An introductory instruction to vicarious responsibility [CACI No. 3700].
- Essential factual elements for a cause of action alleging tort liability against a principal [CACI No. 3701] and the affirmative defense of the plaintiff's agent's contributory negligence [CACI No. 3702].
- Legal relationship not disputed [CACI No. 3703].
- The disputing of the existence of employee "status" [CACI No. 3704] and "agency" relationship [CACI No. 3705].
- Responsibility in special employment cases [CACI Nos. 3706, 3707].
- Other related issues, including the peculiar-risk doctrine [CACI No. 3708], ostensible agents [CACI No. 3709], ratification [CACI No. 3710], partnerships [CACI No. 3711], joint ventures [CACI No. 3712], nondelegable duties [CACI No. 3713], scope of employment (e.g., unauthorized acts) [CACI Nos. 3720-3722], substantial deviation [CACI No. 3723], the going-and-coming rule [CACI No. 3724], the vehicle-use exception to vicarious responsibility [CACI No. 3725], and liability in social or recreational activities [CACI No. 3726].

The vicarious responsibility series also includes a special verdict form on liability for negligence [CACI No. VF-3700].

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3700

CACI 3700 Introduction

A [person/partnership/corporation] is responsible for harm caused by the wrongful conduct of [his/her/its] [employees/agents/[insert other relationship, e.g., "partners"]] while acting within the scope of their [employment/authority].

New September 2003

- Under the theory of respondeat superior, a principal/employer is vicariously liable for an agent/employee's torts committed within the scope of agency/employment. (Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal.3d 962, 967 [227 Cal.Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676] .)
- If a principal's potential liability is based solely on the acts of his or her agent, then the principal cannot be held liable if the agent is exonerated. (2 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Agency and Employment, § 167.)
- Liability may result from a principal's authorization or direction to perform a tortious act, resulting in direct liability of the principal for his or her wrongful conduct. (2 Witkin, supra, § 167.) Such authorization may be found in ratification of the agent's conduct and in delegation of a nondelegable duty.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Look for Respondeat Superior: Always look for a theory of respondeat superior in your cases. If you are able to prove vicarious liability, there is the probability of more funds available to collect a judgment or have available for settlement negotiations. A simple example of respondeat superior is when a negligent driver in an automobile accident is in the course and scope of his/her employment at the time of the collision. The employer of the negligent driver would then be vicariously liable and would be responsible for plaintiff's damages. By Dona Cohn-Payne

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3701

CACI 3701 Tort Liability Asserted Against Principal--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of agent]'s [insert tort theory, e.g., "negligence"].

[Name of plaintiff] also claims that [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm because [name of agent] was acting as [his/her/its] [agent/employee/[insert other relationship, e.g., "partner"]] when the incident occurred.

If you find that [name of agent]'s [insert tort theory] harmed [name of plaintiff], then you must decide whether [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm. [Name of defendant] is responsible if [name of plaintiff] proves both of the following:

1. That [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s [agent/employee/[insert other relationship]]; and

2. That [name of agent] was acting within the scope of [his/her] [agency/employment/[insert other relationship]] when [he/she] harmed [name of plaintiff].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The term "name of agent," in brackets, is intended in the general sense, to denote the person or entity whose wrongful conduct is alleged to have created the principal's liability.

Under other principles of law, a principal may be directly liable for authorizing or directing an agent's wrongful acts. (See 2 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Agency and Employment, § 163.)

One of the two bracketed first sentences would be used, depending on whether the plaintiff is suing both the principal and the agent or the principal alone.

If there is no issue regarding whether a principal-agent exists, see CACI No. 3703, Legal Relationship Not Disputed.

This instruction may not apply where employer liability is statutory, such as under the Fair Employment and Housing Act.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 2295 provides: "An agent is one who represents another, called the principal, in dealings with third persons. Such representation is called agency."

- "The rule of respondeat superior is familiar and simply stated: an employer is vicariously liable for the torts of its employees committed within the scope of the employment. Equally well established, if somewhat surprising on first encounter, is the principle that an employee's willful, malicious and even criminal torts may fall within the scope of his or her employment for purposes of respondeat superior, even though the employer has not authorized the employee to commit crimes or intentional torts." (Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal.4th 291, 296-297 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 510, 907 P.2d 358] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "The employer is liable not because the employer has control over the employee or is in some way at fault, but because the employer's enterprise creates inevitable risks as a part of doing business." (Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 1552, 1559 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 333] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Respondeat superior is based on a 'deeply rooted sentiment' that it would be unjust for an enterprise to disclaim responsibility for injuries occurring in the course of its characteristic activities." (Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal.3d 202, 208 [285 Cal.Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341] , internal citation omitted.)

- The Supreme Court has articulated three reasons for applying the doctrine of respondeat superior: "(1) to prevent recurrence of the tortious conduct; (2) to give greater assurance of compensation for the victim; and (3) to ensure that the victim's losses will be equitably borne by those who benefit from the enterprise that gave rise to the injury." (Mary M., supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 209 .)

- "[W]here recovery of damages is sought against a principal and an agent, and the negligence of the agent is the cause of the injury, a verdict releasing the agent from liability releases the principal." (Lehmuth v. Long Beach Unified School Dist. (1960) 53 Cal.2d 544, 550 [2 Cal.Rptr. 279, 348 P.2d 887] .)

- The doctrine of respondeat superior applies equally to public and private employers. (Mary M., supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 209 .)

CACI 3702 Affirmative Defense--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff's Agent

[Name of defendant] claims that the negligence of [name of plaintiff's agent] contributed to [name of plaintiff principal]'s harm. To succeed on this claim, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff's agent] was acting as [name of plaintiff principal]'s [agent/employee/[insert other relationship, e.g., "partner"]];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff's agent] was acting within the scope of [his/her] [agency/employment/[insert other relationship]] when the incident occurred; and
- 3. That the negligence of [name of plaintiff's agent] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff principal]'s harm.

If [name of defendant] proves the above, [name of plaintiff principal]'s claim is reduced by your determination of the percentage of [name of plaintiff's agent]'s responsibility. I will calculate the actual reduction.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction may be used by a defendant against a principal/employer to assert the comparative fault of an agent/employee. For example, in an automobile accident lawsuit brought by a corporate plaintiff, the defendant may use this instruction to assert that the negligence of the plaintiff's employee/driver contributed to causing the accident.

Sources and Authority

- The doctrine of respondeat superior is not limited to the principal's responsibility for injuries to third parties. A defendant also can use the doctrine to support a claim of contributory negligence against a plaintiff principal if the plaintiff's agent was contributorily negligent. (See 6 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Torts, § 1324.)

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3703

CACI 3703 Legal Relationship Not Disputed

In this case [name of agent] was the [employee/agent/[insert other relationship, e.g., "partner"]] of [name of defendant].

If you find that [name of agent] was acting within the scope of [his/her] [employment/agency/[insert other relationship]] when the incident occurred, then [name of defendant] is responsible for any harm caused by [name of agent]'s [insert applicable tort theory, e.g., "negligence"].

New September 2003

The term "name of agent," in brackets, is intended in the general sense, to denote the person or entity whose wrongful conduct is alleged to have created the principal's liability.

Under other principles of law, a principal may be directly liable for authorizing or directing an agent's wrongful acts. (See 2 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Agency and Employment, § 163.)

This instruction may not apply where employer liability is statutory, such as under the Fair Employment and Housing Act.

- Ordinarily, the question of agency is one of fact; however, where the evidence is undisputed the issue becomes one of law. (Mantonya v. Bratlie (1948) 33 Cal.2d 120, 128-129 [199 P.2d 677] .)

- This instruction may be appropriate in cases where vicarious liability is asserted in the context of employment, since agency and employment are often viewed as synonymous. Witkin observes: "There is seldom any reason to distinguish between the service of an agent and that of an employee. ... However, the two relationships are not considered identical. It is said that a servant or employee works for his employer, while an agent also acts for and in the place of the principal for the purpose of bringing him into legal relations with third persons." (2 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005), Agency and Employment, § 4.)

■ "It is settled that for purposes of liability to third parties for torts, a real estate salesperson is the agent of the broker who employs him or her. The broker is liable as a matter of law for all damages caused to third persons by the tortious acts of the salesperson committed within the course and scope of employment." (California Real Estate Loans, Inc. v. Wallace (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 1575, 1581 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 462] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3704

CACI 3704 Existence of "Employee" Status Disputed

In deciding whether [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s employee, you must first decide whether [name of defendant] had the right to control how [name of agent] performed the work, rather than just the right to specify the result. It does not matter whether [name of defendant] exercised the right to control. If you decide that the right to control existed, then [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s employee.

If you decide that [name of defendant] did not have the right of control, then you must consider all the circumstances in deciding whether [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s employee. The following factors, if true, may show that [name of agent] was the employee of [name of defendant]:

- (a) [Name of defendant] supplied the equipment, tools, and place of work;
- (b) [Name of agent] was paid by the hour rather than by the job;
- (c) The work being done by [name of agent] was part of the regular business of [name of defendant];
- (d) [Name of defendant] had an unlimited right to end the relationship with [name of agent];
- (e) The work being done by [name of agent] was the only occupation or business of [name of agent];
- (f) The kind of work performed by [name of agent] is usually done under the direction of a supervisor rather than by a specialist working without supervision;

(g) The kind of work performed by [name of agent] does not require specialized or professional skill;

(h) The services performed by [name of agent] were to be performed over a long period of time; and

(i) [Name of defendant] and [name of agent] acted as if they had an employer-employee relationship.

New September 2003

Not all of the secondary factors need to be given. Give only those factors that are supported by admissible evidence.

This instruction is primarily intended for employer-employee relationships. Most of the factors are less appropriate for analyzing other types of agency relationships, such as franchisor/franchisee. For an instruction more appropriate to these kinds of relationships, see CACI No. 3705, Existence of "Agency" Relationship Disputed.

- Civil Code section 2295 provides: "An agent is one who represents another, called the principal, in dealings with third persons. Such representation is called agency."

- "The existence of an agency is a factual question within the province of the trier of fact whose determination may not be disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence." (L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 300, 305 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 680] , internal citation omitted.)

- The burden of proving the existence of an agency rests on the one affirming its existence. (Burbank v. National Casualty Co. (1941) 43 Cal.App.2d 773, 781 [111 P.2d 740] .)

- One who performs a mere favor for another without being subject to any legal duty of service and without assenting to right of control is not an agent, because the agency relationship rests upon mutual consent. (Hanks v. Carter & Higgins of Cal., Inc. (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 156, 161 [58 Cal.Rptr. 190] .)

- An agency must rest upon an agreement. (D'Acquisto v. Evola (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 210, 213 [202 P.2d 596] .) "Agency may be implied from the circumstances and conduct of the parties." (Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1566, 1579 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 343] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Whether a person performing work for another is an agent or an independent contractor depends primarily upon whether the one for whom the work is done has the legal right to control the activities of the alleged agent. ... It is not essential that the right of control be exercised or that there be actual supervision of the work of the agent. The existence of the right of control and supervision establishes the existence of an agency relationship." (Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal.2d 356, 370 [232 P.2d 241] , internal citations omitted.)

- When the principal controls only the results of the work and not the means by which it is accomplished, an independent contractor relationship is established. (White v. Uniroyal, Inc. (1984) 155

Cal.App.3d 1, 25 [202 Cal.Rptr. 141] , overruled on other grounds in Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298].)

■ "Agency and independent contractorship are not necessarily mutually exclusive legal categories as independent contractor and servant or employee are. ... One who contracts to act on behalf of another and subject to the other's control, except with respect to his physical conduct, is both an agent and an independent contractor." (City of Los Angeles v. Meyers Brothers Parking System (1975) 54 Cal.App.3d 135, 138 [126 Cal.Rptr. 545] , internal citations omitted; accord Mottola v. R. L. Kautz & Co. (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 98, 108 [244 Cal.Rptr. 737] .)

■ The factors that may be considered in determining whether an agency exists are drawn from the Restatement Second of Agency, section 220, and are phrased therein as follows:

- (a) the extent of control which, by the agreement, the master may exercise over the details of the work;
- (b) whether or not the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business;
- (c) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision;
- (d) the skill required in the particular occupation;
- (e) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work;
- (f) the length of time for which the person is employed;
- (g) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job;
- (h) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer;
- (i) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relation of master and servant;
and
- (j) whether the principal is or is not in business.

■ These factors have been cited with approval by the Supreme Court. (Malloy, supra, 37 Cal.2d at pp. 370-371 .) As phrased in the Restatement, they do not indicate in whose favor each factor weighs. The draft instruction states the factors in a way to suggest whether or not they point toward an employment relationship.

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 13.20, and covers issues presented in BAJI No. 13.06 and 15.12.

"The difference between an agent and an independent contractor is primarily the degree of retained control." (Park v. Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 595, 613 [133 Cal.Rptr.2d 757] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--CACI No. 3704 vs. BAJI No. 13.20: This instruction deals with the issues raised in BAJI No. 13.20, which sets forth criteria for the jury to consider in deciding if a defendant is an agent or independent contractor. Although BAJI No. 13.20 sets forth "factors to be taken into consideration," CACI No. 3704 presents factors which "if true, may show that _____ was the employee of _____." The language changes appear to favor the plaintiff who is trying to prove the agency relationship. This bias is recognized in the last bulleted item of the Sources and Authorities: "As phrased in the Restatement, they do not indicate in whose favor each factor weighs. The draft instruction states the factors in a way to suggest whether or not they point toward an employment relationship." Thus, if you represent a defendant contending there was no agency relationship, consider offering a modified instruction. Ask the judge to replace "the following factors, if true, may show that [agent] was the employee of [defendant]" with the following: "The following factors may be considered in your determination of this issue. The factors you may consider include, but are not limited to, whether or not: _____ [list factors as set forth in CACI No. 3704]." By Joseph Devine

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Start to Establish Relationship Early: It is important in the early stages of discovery to begin collecting the facts necessary to prove an employer/employee relationship so that a jury can find vicarious liability. CACI 3705 Existence of "Agency" Relationship Disputed [Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s agent and that [name of defendant] is therefore responsible for [name of agent]'s conduct.

If [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] gave [name of agent] authority to act on [his/her/its] behalf, then [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s agent. This authority may be shown by words or may be implied by the parties' conduct. This authority cannot be shown by the words of [name of agent] alone.

New September 2003

This instruction should be used when the factual setting involves relationships such as homeowner-real estate agent or franchisor-franchisee.

- Civil Code section 2295 provides: "An agent is one who represents another, called the principal, in dealings with third persons. Such representation is called agency."
- "The existence of an agency is a factual question within the province of the trier of fact whose determination may not be disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence." (L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 300, 305 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 680] , internal citation omitted.)
- The burden of proving the existence of an agency rests on the one affirming its existence. (Burbank v. National Casualty Co. (1941) 43 Cal.App.2d 773, 781 [111 P.2d 740] .)

■ One who performs a mere favor for another without being subject to any legal duty of service and without assenting to right of control is not an agent, because the agency relationship rests upon mutual consent. (Hanks v. Carter & Higgins of Cal., Inc. (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 156, 161 [58 Cal.Rptr. 190] .)

■ An agency must rest upon an agreement. (D'Acquisto v. Evola (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 210, 213 [202 P.2d 596] .) "Agency may be implied from the circumstances and conduct of the parties." (Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1566, 1579 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 343] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Whether a person performing work for another is an agent or an independent contractor depends primarily upon whether the one for whom the work is done has the legal right to control the activities of the alleged agent. ... It is not essential that the right of control be exercised or that there be actual supervision of the work of the agent. The existence of the right of control and supervision establishes the existence of an agency relationship." (Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal.2d 356, 370 [232 P.2d 241] , internal citations omitted.)

■ When the principal controls only the results of the work and not the means by which it is accomplished, an independent contractor relationship is established. (White v. Uniroyal, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal.App.3d 1, 25 [202 Cal.Rptr. 141] , overruled on other grounds in Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] .)

Publisher's Notes

This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI Nos. 13.00, 13.01, 13.06, and 13.07.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Agent's Authority: CACI No. 3705 advises the jury on the disputed existence of the "agency" relationship which directly replaces BAJI No. 13.00's definition of "agency." The last sentence of the new instruction is troubling: "This authority cannot be shown by the words of [name of agent] alone." No authority is cited for this proposition and it appears to be contrary to law. As noted in the Sources and Authority:

- "Agency may be implied from the circumstances and conduct of the parties." (Citation omitted).
- "The existence of an agency is a factual question ..." (Citation omitted).

Thus, if this instruction is relevant to your case, and it is in the best interest of your client (i.e., the plaintiff or the agent), ask the judge to refuse to read the last sentence of this instruction because it might create prejudicial error on review. By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3706

CACI 3706 Special Employment--General Employer and/or Special Employer Denies Responsibility

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of worker] was the employee of [name of defendant first employer] when the incident occurred, and that [name of defendant first employer] is therefore responsible for [name of worker]'s conduct. [Name of defendant first employer] claims that [name of worker] was the temporary employee of [name of defendant second employer] and therefore [name of defendant second employer] is solely responsible for [name of worker]'s conduct.

In deciding whether [name of worker] was [name of defendant second employer]'s temporary employee, you must first decide whether [name of defendant second employer] had the right to fully control the activities of [name of worker], rather than just the right to specify the result.

It does not matter whether [name of defendant second employer] exercised the right to control. If [name of defendant first employer] gave [name of defendant second employer] full authority to supervise the details of [name of worker]'s work, then [he/she] was the temporary employee of [name of defendant second employer], and [he/she/it] is responsible for [name of worker]'s conduct.

If you decide that [name of defendant second employer] did not have the right of control, then you must consider all the circumstances in deciding whether [name of worker] was [name of defendant second employer]'s employee. The following factors, if true, may show that [name of agent] was the temporary employee of [name of defendant second employer]:

- (a) [Name of defendant second employer] supplied the equipment, tools, and place of work;
- (b) [Name of worker] was paid by the hour rather than by the job;
- (c) The work being done by [name of worker] was part of the regular business of [name of defendant second employer];

(d) [Name of defendant second employer] had an unlimited right to end the relationship with [name of worker];

(e) The work being done by [name of worker] was the only occupation or business of [name of worker];

(f) The kind of work performed by [name of worker] is usually done under the direction of a supervisor rather than by a specialist working without supervision;

(g) The kind of work performed by [name of worker] does not require specialized or professional skill;

(h) The services performed by [name of worker] were to be performed over a long period of time;

(i) [Name of defendant second employer] and [name of worker] acted as if they had an employer-employee relationship;

(j) [Name of worker]'s duties to [name of defendant second employer] were only for the benefit of [name of defendant second employer];

(k) [Name of worker] consented to the temporary employment with [name of defendant second employer]; and

(l) [Name of worker] and [name of defendant second employer] acted as if they had a temporary employment relationship.

New September 2003

Not all of the secondary factors need to be given. Give only those factors that are supported by admissible evidence.

The terms "first and second employer" have been substituted for "special and general employer" to make the concept more straightforward. Also, the term "temporary employee" has been substituted for the term "special employee" for the same reason.

In addition to the alleged special employer's control over the employee, there are a number of other relevant factors to use in deciding whether a special employment relationship existed. They are similar, but not identical, to the factors to be used in an independent contractor analysis.

- "[W]here the servants of two employers are jointly engaged in a project of mutual interest, each employee ordinarily remains the servant of his own master and does not thereby become the special employee of the other." (Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal.3d 486, 493 [162 Cal.Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355] .)

- "The law of agency has long recognized that a person generally the servant of one master can become the borrowed servant of another. If the borrowed servant commits a tort while carrying out the bidding of the borrower, vicarious liability attaches to the borrower and not to the general master." (Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal.3d 446, 455-456 [183 Cal.Rptr. 51, 645 P.2d 102] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Liability in borrowed servant cases involves the exact public policy considerations found in sole employer cases. Liability should be on the persons or firms which can best insure against the risk, which can best guard against the risk, which can most accurately predict the cost of the risk and allocate the cost directly to the consumers, thus reflecting in its prices the enterprise's true cost of doing business." (Strait v. Hale Construction Co. (1972) 26 Cal.App.3d 941, 949 [103 Cal.Rptr. 487] .)

■ "In determining whether a special employment relationship exists, the primary consideration is whether the special employer has ' "[t]he right to control and direct the activities of the alleged employee or the manner and method in which the work is performed, whether exercised or not. ... " ' However, '[whether] the right to control existed or was exercised is generally a question of fact to be resolved from the reasonable inferences to be drawn from the circumstances shown.' " (Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal.3d 168, 175 [151 Cal.Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811] , citations omitted.)

■ "[S]pecial employment is most often resolved on the basis of 'reasonable inferences to be drawn from the circumstances shown.' Where the evidence, though not in conflict, permits conflicting inferences, ... ' "the existence or nonexistence of the special employment relationship barring the injured employee's action at law is generally a question reserved for the trier of fact." ' " (Marsh, supra, 26 Cal.3d at p. 493 .)

■ "[I]f neither the evidence nor inferences are in conflict, then the question of whether an employment relationship exists becomes a question of law which may be resolved by summary judgment." (Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 1242, 1248-1249 [250 Cal.Rptr. 718] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The special employment relationship and its consequent imposition of liability upon the special employer flows from the borrower's power to supervise the details of the employee's work. Mere instruction by the borrower on the result to be achieved will not suffice." (Marsh, supra, 26 Cal.3d at p. 492 .)

■ Contract terms are not conclusive evidence of the existence of the right to control. (Kowalski, supra, 23 Cal.3d at p. 176 .)

■ The "secondary" factors may be more important in the special employment analysis than in the independent contractor analysis: "[S]pecial employment is most often resolved on the basis of 'reasonable inferences to be drawn from the circumstances shown.' " (Marsh, supra, 26 Cal.3d at p. 492 .)

■ The existence of a special employment relationship may be supported by evidence that: (1) the alleged special employer paid wages to the employee, (2) the alleged special employer had the power to discharge the employee, (3) the work performed by the employee was unskilled, (4) the work tools were provided by the alleged special employer, (5) the work was part of the alleged special employer's regular business, (6) the employee expressly or impliedly consented to a special employment relationship, (7) the parties believed they were creating a special employment relationship, and (8) the alleged special employment period was lengthy. (Kowalski, supra, 23 Cal.3d at pp. 176-177 .)

Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Carefully Consider This Instruction Before Offering it to Jury: The agency issue is complicated by this new "special employment" instruction. This confusing effort attempts to instruct when the alleged agent has two employers. Notes in the Sources and Authority for CACI No. 3706 demonstrate that the courts have used the phrase "special employment." However, it appears that the law is no different if two, three, four, five, six, or more possible employers could be liable for the wrongful acts of their agents. The factors for a jury to consider are similar.

The instruction provides, in part, as follows: "[Y]ou must first decide whether [name of defendant second employer] had the right to fully control the activities of [name of worker], rather than just the right to specify the result." (Emphasis added.) "Right to fully control" is confusing and inconsistent with CACI No. 3704 which refers to the "right to control." (As CACI No. 3704 reflects a plaintiff bias, CACI No. 3706 reflects a defense bias.)

In light of the above, it is this practitioner's "Tip" that CACI No. 3706 is so confusing that it should be carefully considered before ever being offered to a jury. If CACI No. 3706 is not helpful to your case, ask the judge to refuse this instruction as confusing, prejudicial, and likely to confuse the issues based on Evid. Code § 352. By Joseph Devine

If you decide that [name of worker] was the temporary employee of [name of defendant second employer], but that [name of defendant first employer] partially controlled [name of worker]'s activities along with [name of defendant second employer], then you must conclude that both [name of defendant first employer] and [name of defendant second employer] are responsible for the conduct of [name of worker].

New September 2003

■ "Facts demonstrating the existence of a special employment relationship do not necessarily preclude a finding that a particular employee also remained under the partial control of the original employer. CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3708

CACI 3708 Peculiar-Risk Doctrine

[Name of plaintiff] claims that even if [name of independent contractor] was not an employee, [name of defendant] is responsible for [name of independent contractor]'s conduct because the work involved a special risk of harm.

A special risk of harm is a recognizable danger that arises out of the nature of the work or the place where it is done and requires specific safety measures appropriate to the danger. A special risk of harm may also arise out of a planned but unsafe method of doing the work. A special risk of harm does not include a risk that is unusual, abnormal, or not related to the normal or expected risks associated with the work.

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove each of the following:

- 1. That the work was likely to involve a special risk of harm to others;
- 2. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that the work was likely to involve this risk;
- 3. That [name of independent contractor] failed to use reasonable care to take specific safety measures appropriate to the danger to avoid this risk; and
- 4. That [name of independent contractor]'s failure was a cause of harm to [name of plaintiff].

[In deciding whether [name of defendant] should have known the risk, you should consider [his/her/its] knowledge and experience in the field of work to be done.]

- In determining the applicability of the doctrine of peculiar risk, a critical inquiry "is whether the work for which the contractor was hired involves a risk that is 'peculiar to the work to be done,' arising either from the nature or the location of the work and ' "against which a reasonable person would recognize the necessity of taking special precautions." ' " (Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal.4th 689, 695 [21 Cal.Rptr.2d 72, 854 P.2d 721] , internal citations omitted.)
- "Whether the particular work which the independent contractor has been hired to perform is likely to create a peculiar risk of harm to others unless special precautions are taken is ordinarily a question of fact." (Castro v. State of California (1981) 114 Cal.App.3d 503, 511 [170 Cal.Rptr. 734] , internal citations omitted.)
- The doctrine ensures that an injured person will have a source of recovery even if the independent contractor is insolvent. (Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 253, 258 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 878, 955 P.2d 504] .)
- "The analysis of the applicability of the peculiar risk doctrine to a particular fact situation can be broken down into two elements: (1) whether the work is likely to create a peculiar risk of harm unless special precautions are taken; and (2) whether the employer should have recognized that the work was likely to create such a risk." (Jimenez v. Pacific Western Construction Co. (1986) 185 Cal.App.3d 102, 110 [229 Cal.Rptr. 575] .)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 413, states: "One who employs an independent contractor to do work which the employer should recognize as likely to create, during its progress, a peculiar unreasonable risk of physical harm to others unless special precautions are taken, is subject to liability for physical harm caused to them by the absence of such precautions if the employer (a) fails to provide in the contract that the contractor shall take such precautions, or (b) fails to exercise reasonable care to provide in some other manner for the taking of such precautions."
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 416, states: "One who employs an independent contractor to do work which the employer should recognize as necessarily likely to create during its progress a peculiar risk of physical harm to others unless special precautions are taken, is subject to liability for physical harm caused to them by the failure of the contractor to exercise reasonable care to take such precautions, even though the employer has provided for such precautions in the contract or otherwise."
- California courts have adopted the doctrine as expressed in these Restatement sections. (Castro, supra, 114 Cal.App.3d at p. 510 .)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 413, has been referred to as "direct" liability, while section 416 has been referred to as "vicarious." However, the Supreme Court has observed that "this distinction is misleading." The court also observed that these two sections overlap and are somewhat redundant because, under either section, the hiring person is subject to liability for injuries to others resulting from the contractor's negligence. (Toland, supra, 18 Cal.4th at pp. 264-265 .)
- "A peculiar risk may arise out of a contemplated and unsafe method of work adopted by the independent contractor." (Mackey v. Campbell Construction Co. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 774, 785-786 [162 Cal.Rptr. 64] .)
- "The term 'peculiar risk' means neither a risk that is abnormal to the type of work done, nor a risk that is abnormally great; it simply means 'a special, recognizable danger arising out of the work itself.' For that reason, as this court has pointed out, the term 'special risk' is probably a more accurate description than 'peculiar risk,' which is the terminology used in the Restatement." (Privette, supra, 5 Cal.4th at p. 695 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Even when work performed by an independent contractor poses a special or peculiar risk of harm, ... the person who hired the contractor will not be liable for injury to others if the injury results from the contractor's 'collateral' or 'casual' negligence." (Privette, supra, 5 Cal.4th at p. 696 .)

■ Whether or not a risk is a "peculiar risk" may be decided as a matter of law. (Jimenez, supra, 185 Cal.App.3d at p. 111 .) In that case, the jury would decide only whether the independent contractor "failed to exercise reasonable care to take the necessary special precautions." (Id. at p. 108 .)

■ The Supreme Court has described "collateral" or "casual" negligence as follows: " 'Casual' or 'collateral' negligence has sometimes been described as negligence in the operative detail of the work, as distinguished from the general plan or method to be followed. Although this distinction can frequently be made, since negligence in the operative details will often not be within the contemplation of the employer when the contract is made, the distinction is not essentially one between operative detail and general method. 'It is rather one of negligence which is unusual or abnormal, or foreign to the normal or contemplated risks of doing the work, as distinguished from negligence which creates only the normal or contemplated risk.' " (Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 502, 510 [156 Cal.Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619] , overruled on other grounds in Privette, supra, 5 Cal.4th at p. 702, fn. 4 .)

■ The question of whether the harm resulted from collateral or casual negligence is to be resolved by the trier of fact. (Caudel v. East Bay Municipal Utility Dist. (1985) 165 Cal.App.3d 1, 7-9 [211 Cal.Rptr. 222] .)

■ " 'It is elementary that there are three requirements necessary before recovery may be had against a principal for the act of an ostensible agent. The person dealing with the agent must do so with belief in the agent's authority and this belief must be a reasonable one; such belief must be generated by some act or neglect of the principal sought to be charged; and the third person in relying on the agent's apparent authority must not be guilty of negligence.' "Ratification of part of an indivisible transaction is a ratification of the whole." (Civ. Code, § 2311.) "A principal is responsible for ... wrongs committed by his agent [if] ... he has ... ratified them" (Civ. Code, § 2339.)

■ The concept of ratification is more commonly associated with contract law than tort law. Nevertheless, "[r]atification has, in fact, been a basis for imputed tort liability under the common law for centuries." (Kraus, Ratification of Torts: An Overview and Critique of the Traditional Doctrine and Its Recent Extension to Claims of Workplace Harassment (1997) 32 Tort & Ins. L.J. 807.)

■ "Ratification is the voluntary election by a person to adopt in some manner as his own an act which was purportedly done on his behalf by another person, the effect of which, as to some or all persons, is to treat the act as if originally authorized by him. A purported agent's act may be adopted expressly or it may be adopted by implication based on conduct of the purported principal from which an intention to consent to or adopt the act may be fairly inferred, including conduct which is 'inconsistent with any reasonable intention on his part, other than that he intended approving and adopting it.' LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Ratification: Ratification has been used in cases that involve harassment and/or discrimination causes of action. It is a way to hold a company liable for the acts of its agents. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Ratification of Agent's Conduct By Principal:

CACI No. 3710 is a new instruction regarding ratification of an agent's conduct by the principal. Ratification is different than Respondeat Superior liability. It can subject an employer/principal to punitive damages as an abettor who authorized the wrongful conduct of its employee/agent. Retaining the employee in service, or failure to discharge after knowledge of the wrongful conduct, may subject the employer/principal to punitive damages [Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 852, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12] . Therefore, if you represent an employer/principal alleged to have "ratified" malicious, oppressive, or fraudulent conduct of its employee/agent, ask the court to refuse to give this instruction unless there is "clear and convincing" evidence of ratification required by Civ. Code § 3294.

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3711

CACI 3711 Partnerships

A partnership and each of its partners are responsible for the wrongful conduct of a partner acting within the scope of his or her authority.

You must decide whether a partnership existed in this case. A partnership is a group of two or more persons who own a business in which all the partners agree to share the profits and losses. A partnership can be formed by a written or oral agreement or by an agreement implied by the parties' conduct.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is not intended for cases involving limited liability partnerships.

Sources and Authority

■ Corporations Code section 16202 provides, in part: "[T]he association of two or more persons to carry on as coowners a business for profit forms a partnership, whether or not the persons intend to form a partnership."

■ Corporations Code section 16305(a) provides: "A partnership is liable for loss or injury caused to a person, or for a penalty incurred, as a result of a wrongful act or omission, or other actionable conduct, of a partner acting in the ordinary course of business of the partnership or with authority of the partnership."

■ "Under traditional legal concepts the partnership is regarded as an aggregate of individuals with each partner acting as agent for all other partners in the transaction of partnership business, and the agents of the partnership act as agents for all of the partners." (Marshall v. International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (1962) 57 Cal.2d 781, 783 [22 Cal.Rptr. 211, 371 P.2d 987] .)

■ "[T]he partners of a partnership are jointly and severally liable for the conduct and torts injuring a third party committed by one of the partners." (Black v. Sullivan (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 557, 569 [122 Cal.Rptr. 119] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In determining whether a relationship such as that of partners has been created, the courts are guided not only by the spoken or written words of the contracting parties, but also by their acts." (Singleton v. Fuller (1953) 118 Cal.App.2d 733, 740-741 [259 P.2d 687] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "It is essential, however, to the existence of a partnership that there be a community of interest and an agreement to share jointly in the profits and losses resulting from the enterprise." (Sandberg v. Jacobson (1967) 253 Cal.App.2d 663, 668 [61 Cal.Rptr. 436] , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3712

CACI 3712 Joint Ventures

A joint venture and each of its members are responsible for the wrongful conduct of a member acting within the scope of his or her authority.

You must decide whether a joint venture existed in this case. A joint venture exists when two or more persons combine their property, skill, or knowledge to carry out a single business undertaking and agree to share the control, profits, and losses. A joint venture can be formed by a written or oral agreement or by an agreement implied by the parties' conduct.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction can be modified for cases involving unincorporated associations by substituting the term "unincorporated association" for "joint venture."

Sources and Authority

- "A joint venture is 'an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry out a single business enterprise for profit.' " (Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal.3d 476, 482 [286 Cal.Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892] , internal citations omitted.)

- "A joint venture has been defined in various ways, but most frequently perhaps as an association of two or more persons who combine their property, skill or knowledge to carry out a single business enterprise for profit." (Holtz v. United Plumbing and Heating Co. (1957) 49 Cal.2d 501, 506 [319 P.2d

■ Joint ventures are similar to partnerships, but the term "joint venture" commonly applies to temporary business arrangements involving a single transaction: "From a legal standpoint, both relationships are virtually the same. Accordingly, the courts freely apply partnership law to joint ventures when appropriate." (Weiner, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 482 .)

■ "It has generally been recognized that in order to create a joint venture there must be an agreement between the parties under which they have a community of interest, that is, a joint interest, in a common business undertaking, an understanding as to the sharing of profits and losses, and a right of joint control." (Holtz, supra, 49 Cal.2d at pp. 506-507 .)

■ "The joint enterprise theory, while rarely invoked outside the automobile accident context, is well established and recognized in this state as an exception to the general rule that imputed liability for the negligence of another will not be recognized." (Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal.3d 868, 893 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 79, 820 P.2d 181] , internal citation omitted.)

■ " 'There are three basic elements of a joint venture: the members must have joint control over the venture (even though they may delegate it), they must share the profits of the undertaking, and the members must each have an ownership interest in the enterprise. [Citation].' 'Whether a joint venture actually exists depends on the intention of the parties. [Citations.] [P] ... [P] [W]here evidence is in dispute the existence or nonexistence of a joint venture is a question of fact to be determined by the jury. [Citation.]' " (*Unruh-Haxton v. 4. That [name of independent contractor]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New October 2004; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

Use this instruction with regard to the liability of the hirer for the torts of an independent contractor if a nondelegable duty is imposed on the hirer by statute, regulation, ordinance, contract, or common law. (See Barry v. Raskov (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 447, 455 [283 Cal.Rptr. 463] .)

Sources and Authority

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 424, provides: "One who by statute or by administrative regulation is under a duty to provide specified safeguards or precautions for the safety of others is subject to liability to the others for whose protection the duty is imposed for harm caused by the failure of a contractor employed by him to provide such safeguards or precautions."

- "As a general rule, a hirer of an independent contractor is not liable for physical harm caused to others by the act or omission of the independent contractor. There are multiple exceptions to the rule, however, one being the doctrine of nondelegable duties. ... ' "A nondelegable duty is a definite affirmative duty the law imposes on one by reason of his or her relationship with others. One cannot escape this duty by entrusting it to an independent contractor." A nondelegable duty may arise when a statute or regulation requires specific safeguards or precautions to ensure others' safety. [Citation.] ... ' " (J.L. v. Children's Institute, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 388, 400 [99 Cal.Rptr.3d 5] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The rationale of the nondelegable duty rule is 'to assure that when a negligently caused harm occurs, the injured party will be compensated by the person whose activity caused the harm[.]' The 'recognition of nondelegable duties tends to insure that there will be a financially responsible defendant available to compensate for the negligent harms caused by that defendant's activity[.]' Thus, the nondelegable duty rule advances the same purposes as other forms of vicarious liability." (Srithong v. Total Investment Co. (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 721, 727 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 672] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "Simply stated, ' "[t]he duty which a possessor of land owes to others to put and maintain it in reasonably safe condition is nondelegable. If an independent contractor, no matter how carefully selected, is employed to perform it, the possessor is answerable for harm caused by the negligent failure of his contractor to put or maintain the buildings and structures in reasonably safe condition[.]" ' " (Srithong, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th at p. 726 .)

- "Nondelegable duties may arise when a statute provides specific safeguards or precautions to insure the safety of others." (Felmler v. Falcon Cable Co. (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 1032, 1039 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 158] .)

- "Unlike strict liability, a nondelegable duty operates, not as a substitute for liability based on negligence, but to assure that when a negligently caused harm occurs, the injured party will be compensated by the person whose activity caused the harm and who may therefore properly be held liable for the negligence of his agent, whether his agent was an employee or an independent contractor." (Maloney v. Rath (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 442, 446 [71 Cal.Rptr. 897, 445 P.2d 513] .)

- A California public agency is subject to the imposition of a nondelegable duty in the same manner as any private individual. (Gov. Code, § 815.4; Jordy v. County of Humboldt (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 735, 742 [14 Cal.Rptr.2d 553] .)

- "It is undisputable that '[t]he question of duty is ... a legal question to be determined by the court.' " (Summers v. A.L. Gilbert Co. (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1155, 1184 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 162] internal citation omitted.) "When a court finds that a defendant has a nondelegable duty as a matter of law, the instruction given by the court should specifically inform the jurors of that fact and not leave them to speculate on the subject." (Id. at p. 1187, fn. 5 .)

■ " 'Where the law imposes a definite, affirmative duty upon one by reason of his relationship with others, whether as an owner or proprietor of land or chattels or in some other capacity, such persons can not escape liability for a failure to perform the duty thus imposed by entrusting it to an independent contractor. ... It is immaterial whether the duty thus regarded as "nondelegable" be imposed by statute, charter or by common law.' " (Snyder v. Southern California Edison Co. (1955) 44 Cal.2d 793, 800 [285 P.2d 912] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]o establish a defense to liability for damages caused by a brake failure, the owner and operator must establish not only that 'he did what might reasonably be expected of a person of ordinary prudence, acting under similar circumstances, who desired to comply with the law' ' but also that the failure was not owing to the negligence of any agent, whether employee or independent contractor, employed by him to inspect or repair the brakes." (Clark v. Dziabas (1968) 69 Cal.2d 449, 451 [71 Cal.Rptr. 901, 445 P.2d 517] , internal citation omitted.)

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3720

CACI 3720 Scope of Employment

[Name of plaintiff] must prove that [name of agent] was acting within the scope of [his/her] [employment/authorization] when [name of plaintiff] was harmed.

Conduct is within the scope of [employment/authorization] if:

- (a) It is reasonably related to the kinds of tasks that the [employee/agent] was employed to perform; or
- (b) It is reasonably foreseeable in light of the employer's business or the [agent's/employee's job] responsibilities.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

For an instruction on the scope of employment in cases involving on-duty peace officers, see CACI No. 3721, Scope of Employment--Peace Officer's Misuse of Authority.

This instruction is closely related to CACI No. 3723, Substantial Deviation, which focuses on when an act is not within the scope of employment.

Sources and Authority

- "The question of scope of employment is ordinarily one of fact for the jury to determine." (Mary M.

v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal.3d 202, 221 [285 Cal.Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341] .) However, it becomes a question of law when the facts are undisputed and no conflicting inferences are possible. (Hinman v. Westinghouse Electric Co. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 956, 963 [88 Cal.Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988] .)

- Plaintiff bears the burden of proof to show that the employee's tortious act was committed within the scope of his employment. (Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal.3d 707, 721 [159 Cal.Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755] .)

- "That the employment brought the tortfeasor and victim together in time and place is not enough. ... [T]he incident leading to injury must be an 'outgrowth' of the employment [or] the risk of tortious injury must be 'inherent in the working environment' or 'typical of or broadly incidental to the enterprise [the employer] has undertaken.' " (Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal.4th 291, 298 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 510, 907 P.2d 358] , internal citations omitted.)

- "In California, the scope of employment has been interpreted broadly under the respondeat superior doctrine." (Farmers Insurance Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal.4th 992, 1004 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 478, 906 P.2d 440] .)

- "Tortious conduct that violates an employee's official duties or disregards the employer's express orders may nonetheless be within the scope of employment. So may acts that do not benefit the employer, or are willful or malicious in nature." (Mary M., supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 209 , internal citations omitted.)

- In Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal.3d 962, 968 [227 Cal.Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676] , the Supreme Court adopted the following analysis on scope of employment: "A risk arises out of the employment when 'in the context of the particular enterprise an employee's conduct is not so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the loss resulting from it among other costs of the employer's business. In other words, where the question is one of vicarious liability, the inquiry should be whether the risk was one 'that may fairly be regarded as typical of or broadly incidental' to the enterprise undertaken by the employer.' Accordingly, the employer's liability extends beyond his actual or possible control of the employee to include risks inherent in or created by the enterprise."

- California does not follow the traditional rule that an employee's actions are within the scope of employment only if motivated, in whole or part, by a desire to serve the employer's interests. (Lisa M., supra, 12 Cal.4th at p. 297 .) However, the employee's motivation is a relevant factor in the scope of employment analysis. (Id at p. 298 .)

- In Farmers, supra , and later in Lisa M., supra , the Supreme Court adopted and employed the following "foreseeability test" from Rodgers v. Kemper Construction Co. (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 608, 618-619 [124 Cal.Rptr. 143] : "One way to determine whether a risk is inherent in, or created by, an enterprise is to ask whether the actual occurrence was a generally foreseeable consequence of the activity. However, 'foreseeability' in this context must be distinguished from 'foreseeability' as a test for negligence. In the latter sense 'foreseeable' means a level of probability which would lead a prudent person to take effective precautions whereas 'foreseeability' as a test for respondeat superior merely means that in the context of the particular enterprise an employee's conduct is not so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the loss resulting from it among other costs of the employer's business."

- In Lisa M., supra , the court first analyzed whether the wrongful conduct was "engendered by" or was an "outgrowth" of the perpetrator's employment. (Lisa M., supra at p. 300 .) The court then applied the Rodgers foreseeability test: "The employment ... must be such as predictably to create the risk employees will commit [torts] of the type for which liability is sought." (Id. at p. 299 .) The court reached the same result under both analyses [ultrasound technician who sexually assaulted a patient was not acting within the scope of employment].

■ Some courts have developed a two-prong test for determining whether an act is within the scope of employment. An act is within the scope of employment if it either (1) is required or incident to his duties, or (2) could be reasonably foreseen by the employer in any event. If the employee's act satisfies either part of this two-prong test, then the employer is liable. (Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 1552, 1559 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 333] .) It has been noted that "the foreseeability-based test and the two-prong test are not so much different tests, but different ways of articulating the same test for scope of employment." (Id. at p. 1561 .)

A court, in determining whether an employee has acted outside the scope of employment, must also "consider whether the following three policy objectives underlying respondeat superior liability would be achieved: (1) imposing liability on the employer to prevent recurrence of the tortious conduct by creating a strong incentive for vigilance by those in a position to guard against the evil to be prevented; (2) giving greater assurance of compensation to the victim; and (3) spreading the risk of loss among the beneficiaries of the enterprise." 5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3721

CACI 3721 Scope of Employment--Peace Officer's Misuse of Authority

[Name of plaintiff] must prove that [name of agent] was acting within the scope of [his/her] [employment/authorization] when [name of plaintiff] was harmed.

The conduct of a peace officer is within the scope of [his/her] employment as a peace officer if all of the following are true:

- (a) The conduct occurs while the peace officer is on duty as a peace officer;
- (b) The conduct occurs while the peace officer is exercising [his/her] authority as a peace officer;
and
- (c) The conduct results from the use of [his/her] authority as a peace officer.

Sources and Authority

- "[W]e hold that when, as in this case, a police officer on duty misuses his official authority by raping a woman whom he has detained, the public entity that employs him can be held vicariously liable. This does not mean that, as a matter of law, the public employer is vicariously liable whenever an on-duty officer commits a sexual assault. Rather, this is a question of fact for the jury." (Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal.3d 202, 221 [285 Cal.Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341] .)

- "The use of authority is incidental to the duties of a police officer. The County enjoys tremendous benefits from the public's respect for that authority. Therefore, it must suffer the consequences when the authority is abused." (White v. County of Orange (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 566, 572 [212 Cal.Rptr. 493] .)

■ "It is questionable whether the holding in Mary M. is still viable. Indeed, the Chief Justice of California has described it as an 'aberrant holding' that was 'wrongly decided' and should be 'overrule[d].' Nonetheless, it remains the rule of law unless a majority of the California Supreme Court decides otherwise." (M.P. v. City of Sacramento (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 121, 124 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 812] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We reject plaintiff's effort to apply Mary M. to the facts of this case. For reasons that follow, we conclude the Mary M. holding that a public employer of a police officer may be vicariously liable for a sex crime committed by the officer against a person detained by the officer while on duty is, at best, limited to such acts by an on-duty police officer and does not extend to any other form of employment, including firefighting. Thus, as a matter of law, the alleged sexual assault by firefighters in this case was not conduct within in the scope of their employment and cannot support a finding that their employer ... is vicariously liable for the harm." (M.P., supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 124 .)

Under the facts of the case, it was "undisputed that the sexual misconduct was personal in nature, and therefore did not give rise to respondeat superior liability as a matter of law, regardless of whether or not he committed such acts in his patrol car, in uniform, or by threatening to use his officer status." [An employee's wrongful or criminal conduct may be within the scope of employment even if it breaks a company rule or does not benefit the employer.]

New September 2003

■ An "employer's liability extends beyond his actual or possible control of the employee to include risks inherent in or created by the enterprise." (Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal.3d 962, 968 [227 Cal.Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676] .)

■ "The fact that an employee is not engaged in the ultimate object of his employment at the time of his wrongful act does not preclude attribution of liability to an employer. ... [T]he proper inquiry is not whether the wrongful act itself was authorized but whether it was committed in the course of a series of acts of the agent which were authorized by the principal." (Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal.3d 202, 219 [285 Cal.Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Tortious conduct that violates an employee's official duties or disregards the employer's express orders may nonetheless be within the scope of employment. So may acts that do not benefit the employer, or are willful or malicious in nature." (Mary M., supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 209 , internal citations omitted.)

■ It is "well established, if somewhat surprising on first encounter, ... that an employee's willful, malicious and even criminal torts may fall within the scope of his or her employment for purposes of respondeat superior, even though the employer has not authorized the employee to commit crimes or intentional torts." (Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal.4th 291, 296-297 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 510, 907 P.2d 358] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "California no longer follows the traditional rule that an employee's actions are within the scope of employment only if motivated, in whole or part, by a desire to serve the employer's interests. ... [P] 'It is sufficient ... if the injury resulted from a dispute arising out of the employment. ... 'It is not necessary that the assault should have been made 'as a means, or for the purpose of performing the work he (the employee) was employed to do.' ' ' ' (Lisa M., supra, 12 Cal.4th at p. 297, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "The question, then, is whether an employee's physical eruption, stemming from his interaction with a customer, is a predictable risk of retail employment. Our Supreme Court has suggested it may well be: 'Flare-ups, frustrations, and disagreements among employees are commonplace in the workplace and may lead to "physical act[s] of aggression." In bringing [people] together, work brings [personal] qualities together, causes frictions between them, creates occasions for lapses into carelessness, and for fun-making and emotional flareup. ... These expressions of human nature are incidents inseparable from working together. They involve risks of injury and these risks are inherent in the working environment.' " (*Flores v. CACI 3723 Substantial Deviation

If [an employee/a representative] combines his or her personal business with the employer's business, then the employee's conduct is within the scope of [employment/authorization] unless the [employee/representative] substantially deviates from the employer's business.

Deviations that do not amount to abandoning the employer's business, such as incidental personal acts, minor delays, or deviations from the most direct route, are reasonably expected and within the scope of employment.

[Acts that are necessary for [an employee/a representative]'s comfort, health, and convenience while at work are within the scope of employment.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2006, April 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction is closely related to CACI No. 3720, Scope of Employment. It focuses on when an act is not within the scope of employment. Give the optional third paragraph if the employee was at the work site when the act giving rise to liability occurred, but was not directly involved in performing job duties at the time (for example, at lunch or on break).

Sources and Authority

- "[C]ases that have considered recovery against an employer for injuries occurring within the scope and during the period of employment have established a general rule of liability 'with a few exceptions' in instances where the employee has 'substantially deviated from his duties for personal purposes.' " (

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3723

Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal.3d 202, 218 [285 Cal.Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In some cases, the relationship between an employee's work and wrongful conduct is so attenuated that a jury could not reasonably conclude that the act was within the scope of employment." (Mary M., supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 213 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A]n employer cannot deny responsibility for a tort that occurs when an employee engages in an act necessary to his or her comfort and convenience while at work." (Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 1552, 1563 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 333] .)

■ "The fact that an employee is not engaged in the ultimate object of his employment at the time of his wrongful act does not preclude attribution of liability to an employer." (Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 133, 139 [176 Cal.Rptr. 287] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[D]eviations which do not amount to a turning aside completely from the employer's business, so as to be inconsistent with its pursuit, are often reasonably expected In order to release an employer from liability, the deviation must be so material or substantial as to amount to an entire departure." (DeMirjian v. Ideal Heating Corp. (1954) 129 Cal.App.2d 758, 766 [278 P.2d 114] , internal citation omitted.)

■ Where the employee combines personal business with that of the employer or attends "to both at substantially the same time, no nice inquiry will be made" into which business the employee was engaged in at the time of injury unless it is readily apparent that the employee could not have been serving the employer, either directly or indirectly. (Farmers Insurance Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal.4th 992, 1004 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 478, 906 P.2d 440] .)

■ The fact that the employee is on the same route of return that would be used for both his employer's errand and his own tends to show a combination of missions. (Trejo v. Maciel (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 487, 496 [48 Cal.Rptr. 765] .)

■ But if the employee deviates substantially from employment duties for personal purposes, or "if the misconduct is not an 'outgrowth' of the employment," the scope-of-employment test is not met. (Farmers Insurance Group, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 1005 .) Thus, " 'if the tort is personal in nature, the employee's mere presence at the worksite and attendance to job duties prior to or subsequent to the tort, will not call into play the principles of respondeat superior.' " (Ibid., internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[A]cts necessary to the comfort, convenience, health and welfare of the employee while at work, though strictly personal to himself and not acts of service, do not take him outside the scope of his employment.' " (Bailey, supra, 48 Cal.App.4th at p. 1560 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We envision the link between respondeat superior and most work-related cell phone calls while driving as falling along a continuum. Sometimes the link between the job and the accident will be clear, as when an employee is on the phone for work at the moment of the accident. Oftentimes, the link will fall into a gray zone, as when an employee devotes some portion of his time and attention to work calls during the car trip so that the journey cannot be fairly called entirely personal. But sometimes, as here, the link is de minimis--one call of less than one minute eight or nine minutes before an accident while traveling on a personal errand of several miles' duration heading neither to nor from a worksite. When that happens, we find no respondeat superior as a matter of law." (Miller v. American Greetings Corp. (2008) 161 Cal.App.4th 1055, 1063 [74 Cal.Rptr.3d 776] .)

■ "While the question of whether an employee has departed from his special errand is normally one of fact for the jury, where the evidence clearly shows a complete abandonment, the court may make the determination that the employee is outside the scope of his employment as a matter of law." (Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 926, 933 [237 Cal.Rptr. 718] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3724

CACI 3724 Going-and-Coming Rule

In general, an employee is not acting within the scope of employment while traveling to and from the workplace. But if the employee, while commuting, is on an errand for the employer, then the employee's conduct is within the scope of his or her employment from the time the employee starts on the errand until he or she returns from the errand or until he or she completely abandons the errand for personal reasons.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- " 'An offshoot of the doctrine of respondeat superior is the so-called "going and coming rule." Under this rule, an employee is not regarded as acting within the scope of employment while going to or coming from the workplace. ... This is based on the concept that the employment relationship is suspended from the time the employee leaves work until he or she returns, since the employee is not ordinarily rendering services to the employer while traveling. ...' " (Jeewarat v. Warner Brothers Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 427, 435 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 837].)

- "Generally, an exception to the going-and-coming rule will be found when the employer derives some incidental benefit from the employee's trip." (Anderson v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 254, 258 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 534] , internal citations omitted.)

- "When an employee is engaged in a 'special errand' or a 'special mission' for the employer it will negate the 'going and coming rule.' An employee 'coming from his home or returning to it on a special errand either as part of his regular duties or at a specific order or request of his employer ... is considered to be in the scope of his employment from the time that he starts on the errand until he has returned or until he deviates therefrom for personal reasons." 'The employer is 'liable for torts committed by its employee while traveling to accomplish a special errand because the errand benefits the employer. ...' " (Jeewarat, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 436, internal citations omitted.)

■ One specific exception to the going-and-coming rule is when the employer compensates the employee for travel time to and from work. (See Hinman v. Westinghouse Electric Co. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 956, 962 [88 Cal.Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988] .)

■ Some examples of the special-errand exception include: (1) where an employee goes on a business errand for his employer, leaving from his workplace and returning to his workplace; (2) where an employee is called to work to perform a special task for the employer at an irregular time; and (3) where the employer asks an employee to perform a special errand after the employee leaves work but before going home. (Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 926, 931-932 [237 Cal.Rptr. 718] .)

■ "Plaintiffs contend an employee's attendance at an out-of-town business conference authorized and paid for by the employer may be a special errand for the benefit of the employer under the special errand doctrine. [Defendant] asserts that the special errand doctrine does not apply to commercial travel. We conclude that a special errand may include commercial travel such as the business trip in this case." (Jeewarat, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 436.)

■ The employee is still within the scope of employment after the errand is completed. (Trejo v. Maciel (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 487, 495 [48 Cal.Rptr. 765] .)

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3725

CACI 3725 Vehicle-Use Exception

If an employer requires an employee to drive to and from the workplace so that the vehicle is available for the employer's business, then the drive to and from work is within the scope of employment.

New September 2003

- "If an employer requires an employee to furnish a vehicle as an express or implied condition of employment, the employee will be in the scope of his employment while commuting to and from the place of his employment." (Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 926, 932 [237 Cal.Rptr. 718] , internal citations omitted.)
- "The cases invoking the required-vehicle exception all involve employees whose jobs entail the regular use of a vehicle to accomplish the job in contrast to employees who use a vehicle to commute to a definite place of business." (Tryer v. Ojai Valley School Dist. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1476, 1481 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 114] .)
- While workers' compensation cases have recognized an exception to the going-and-coming rule when the employer defrays travel expenses, this exception does not apply to the respondeat superior doctrine. Payment of a travel allowance, in and of itself is insufficient to impose liability on the employer. (Caldwell v. A.R.B., Inc. (1986) 176 Cal.App.3d 1028, 1041 [222 Cal.Rptr. 494] .) Respondeat superior does apply where the employer pays wages for travel time. (Hinman v. Westinghouse Electric Co. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 956, 962 [88 Cal.Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988] .)
- The fact that an employee is on call does not automatically put their actions in the scope of employment. (Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 1604, 1610 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 749]).

CHAPTER 37 California Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions

5-37 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3726

CACI 3726 Social or Recreational Activities

Social or recreational activities that occur after work hours are within the scope of employment if:

- (a) They are carried out with the employer's stated or implied permission; and
- (b) They either provide a benefit to the employer or have become customary.

New September 2003

- This aspect of the scope-of-employment analysis was expressly adopted for use in respondeat superior cases in Rodgers v. Kemper Construction Co. (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 608, 620 [124 Cal.Rptr. 143], and reiterated in Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 792, 804 [235 Cal.Rptr. 641]. It is derived from the workers' compensation case of McCarty v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 677, 681-683 [117 Cal.Rptr. 65, 527 P.2d 617].

- "[W]here social or recreational pursuits on the employer's premises after hours are endorsed by the express or implied permission of the employer and are 'conceivably' of some benefit to the employer or, even in the absence of proof of benefit, if such activities have become 'a customary incident of the employment relationship,' an employee engaged in such pursuits after hours is still acting within the scope of his employment." (Rodgers, supra, 50 Cal.App.3d at 620.)

- McCarty has been overruled by statute in the context of workers' compensation (see Lab. Code, § 3600(a)(9)). However, courts have acknowledged that "it has been adopted as a test in establishing liability under respondeat superior." (West American Insurance Co. v. California Mutual Insurance Co.

(1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 314, 322 [240 Cal.Rptr. 540] .)

CHAPTER 38 California Judicial Council Equitable Indemnity Instructions

5-38 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3800

CACI 3800 Comparative Fault Between and Among Tortfeasors

[Name of indemnitee] claims that [he/she] [is/was] required to pay [describe liability, e.g., "a court judgment in favor of [name of plaintiff]"] and that [name of indemnitor] must reimburse [name of indemnitee] based on [name of indemnitor]'s share of responsibility. In order for [name of indemnitee] to recover from [name of indemnitor], [name of indemnitee] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of indemnitor] [was negligent/[describe underlying tort]]; and
- 2. That [name of indemnitor]'s [negligence/[describe tortious conduct]] contributed as a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[[Name of indemnitor] claims that [name of indemnitee] [and] [insert identification of others] contributed as [a] substantial factor[s] in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm. To succeed, [name of indemnitor] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of indemnitee] [and] [insert identification of others] [[was/were] negligent/[other basis of responsibility]]; and
- 2. That [name of indemnitee] [and] [insert identification of others] contributed as [a] substantial factor[s] in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

You will be asked to determine the percentages of responsibility of [name of indemnitee], [name of indemnitor] [, and all other persons responsible] for [name of plaintiff]'s harm.]

Read the last bracketed portion when the indemnitor claims he or she was not the sole cause.

This instruction is intended for use in cases where the plaintiff seeks equitable indemnity from another responsible tortfeasor who was not a party to the original action or proceeding from which the liability in question arose. For cases in which the indemnitee seeks equitable indemnity against a co-defendant or cross-defendant as part of the original tort action, see CACI No. 406, Apportionment of Responsibility.

■ "In order to attain ... a system ... in which liability for an indivisible injury caused by concurrent tortfeasors will be borne by each individual tortfeasor 'in direct proportion to [his] respective fault,' we conclude that the current equitable indemnity rule should be modified to permit a concurrent tortfeasor to obtain partial indemnity from other concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis." (American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal.3d 578, 598 [146 Cal.Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[C]omparative equitable indemnity includes the entire range of possible apportionments, from no right to any indemnity to a right of complete indemnity. Total indemnification is just one end of the spectrum of comparative equitable indemnification." (Far West Financial Corp. v. D & S Co., Inc. (1988) 46 Cal.3d 796, 808 [251 Cal.Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399] , internal quotation marks and citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e conclude that a cause of action for equitable indemnity is a legal action seeking legal relief. As such, the [defendant] was entitled to a jury trial." (Martin v. County of Los Angeles (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 688, 698 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 303] .)

■ "[W]e hold that ... the comparative indemnity doctrine may be utilized to allocate liability between a negligent and a strictly liable defendant." (Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal.3d 322, 332 [146 Cal.Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441] .)

■ For purposes of equitable indemnity, "it matters not whether the tortfeasors acted in concert to create a single injury, or successively, in creating distinct and divisible injury." (Blecker v. Wolbart (1985) 167 Cal.App.3d 1195, 1203 [213 Cal.Rptr. 781] .)

■ "[W]e conclude comparative fault principles should be applied to intentional torts, at least to the extent that comparative equitable indemnification can be applied between concurrent intentional tortfeasors." (Baird v. Jones (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 684, 690 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 232] .)

■ Where there is a fault-free plaintiff, "[a]n insolvent defendant's shortfall [in payment of the judgment] should be shared proportionately by the solvent defendants as though the insolvent or absent person had originally not participated." (Paradise Valley Hospital v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 87, 93 [191 Cal.Rptr. 531] .)

■ Statutes may limit one's right to recover comparative indemnity. (See, e.g., E.W. Bliss Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1254, 1259 [258 Cal.Rptr. 783] (Labor Code section 4558(d) provides that there is no right of action for comparative indemnity against an employer for injuries resulting from the removal of an operation guard from a punch press).)

New September 2003; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

The party identifications in this instruction assume a cross-complaint between indemnitor and indemnitee defendants. In a direct action by the indemnitee against the indemnitor, "name of plaintiff" will refer to the person to whom the indemnitee has incurred liability.

Implied contractual indemnity may arise for reasons other than the indemnitor's negligent performance under the contract. If the basis of the claim is other than negligence, specify the conduct involved. (See Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 937, 974 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 177] [breach of warranty].)

Read the last bracketed portion if the indemnitor claims that he or she was not the sole cause of the indemnitee's liability or loss. Select options depending on whether the indemnitor alleges contributory conduct of the indemnitee, of others, or of both. Element 1 will have to be modified if there are different contributing acts alleged against the indemnitee and others; for example, if the indemnitee is alleged to have been negligent and another party is alleged to be strictly liable.

A special finding that an agreement existed may create a need for instructions, but it is a question of law whether an agreement implies a duty to indemnify.

Sources and Authority

- "In general, indemnity refers to 'the obligation resting on one party to make good a loss or damage another party has incurred.' Historically, the obligation of indemnity took three forms: (1) indemnity expressly provided for by contract (express indemnity); (2) indemnity implied from a contract not specifically mentioning indemnity (implied contractual indemnity); and (3) indemnity arising from the equities of particular circumstances (traditional equitable indemnity). [P] Although the foregoing categories of indemnity were once regarded as distinct, we now recognize there are only two basic types of indemnity: express indemnity and equitable indemnity. Though not extinguished, implied contractual indemnity is now viewed simply as 'a form of equitable indemnity.' " (Prince v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1151, 1157 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 732, 202 P.3d 1115] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The right to implied contractual indemnity is predicated upon the indemnitor's breach of contract, 'the rationale ... being that a contract under which the indemnitor undertook to do work or perform services necessarily implied an obligation to do the work involved in a proper manner and to discharge foreseeable damages resulting from improper performance absent any participation by the indemnitee in the wrongful act precluding recovery.' ... 'An action for implied contractual indemnity is not a claim for contribution from a joint tortfeasor; it is not founded upon a tort or upon any duty which the indemnitor owes to the injured third party. It is grounded upon the indemnitor's breach of duty owing to the indemnitee to properly perform its contractual duties.' " (West v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1625, 1633 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 409] , internal citations omitted, original italics.)

- "[A]n implied contractual indemnity claim, like a traditional equitable indemnity claim, is subject to the American Motorcycle rule that a party's liability for equitable indemnity is based on its proportional share of responsibility for the damages to the injured party." (Prince, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 1165 , original italics.)

■ "[O]ur recognition that 'a claim for implied contractual indemnity is a form of equitable indemnity subject to the rules governing equitable indemnity claims' corrects any misimpression that joint liability is not a component." (Prince, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 1166 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[U]nder [Code of Civil Procedure] section 877.6, subsection (c), ... an [implied contractual] indemnity claim, like other equitable indemnity claims, may not be pursued against a party who has entered into a good faith settlement." (Bay Development, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1012, 1031 [269 Cal.Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290] .)

■ "We conclude the trial court erred in denying [the indemnitee's] implied contractual indemnity based on [indemnitee's] failure to prove [the indemnitor's] breach of warranty was the product of [indemnitor's] failure to use reasonable care in performing its contractual duties. [Indemnitee] does not need to prove a negligent breach of contract to be entitled to implied contractual indemnity." (Garlock Sealing Technologies, supra, 148 Cal.App.4th at p. 974 , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3900

CACI 3900 Introduction to Tort Damages--Liability Contested

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for each item of harm that was caused by [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

[The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:]

[Insert applicable instructions on items of damage.]

New September 2003

Read last bracketed sentence and insert instructions on items of damages here only if CACI No. 3902, Economic and Noneconomic Damages, is not being read. If CACI No. 3902 is not used, this instruction should be followed by applicable instructions (see CACI Nos. 3903A through 3903N, and 3905A) concerning the items of damage claimed by the plaintiff. These instructions should be inserted into this instruction as sequentially numbered items.

● Civil Code section 3333 provides: "For the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, the measure of damages, except where otherwise expressly provided by this code, is the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not."

- Civil Code section 3281 provides: "Every person who suffers detriment from the unlawful act or omission of another, may recover from the person in fault a compensation in money, which is called damages."

- Civil Code section 3283 provides: "Damages may be awarded, in a judicial proceeding, for detriment resulting after the commencement thereof, or certain to result in the future."

- Civil Code section 3359 provides: "Damages must, in all cases, be reasonable, and where an obligation of any kind appears to create a right to unconscionable and grossly oppressive damages, contrary to substantial justice, no more than reasonable damages can be recovered."

- Under Civil Code section 3333 "[t]ort damages are awarded to compensate a plaintiff for all of the damages suffered as a legal result of the defendant's wrongful conduct." (North American Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 764, 786 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 466] , italics omitted.)

- "Whatever its measure in a given case, it is fundamental that 'damages which are speculative, remote, imaginary, contingent, or merely possible cannot serve as a legal basis for recovery.' However, recovery is allowed if claimed benefits are reasonably certain to have been realized but for the wrongful act of the opposing party." (Piscitelli v. Friedenbergl (2001) 87 Cal.App.4th 953, 989 [105 Cal.Rptr.2d 88] , internal citations omitted.)

- "In general, one who has been tortiously injured is entitled to be compensated for the harm and the injured party must establish 'by proof the extent of the harm and the amount of money representing adequate compensation with as much certainty as the nature of the tort and the circumstances permit.' However, '[t]here is no general requirement that the injured person should prove with like definiteness the extent of the harm that he has suffered as a result of the tortfeasor's conduct. It is desirable that responsibility for harm should not be imposed until it has been proved with reasonable certainty that the harm resulted from the wrongful conduct of the person charged. It is desirable, also, that there be definiteness of proof of the amount of damage as far as is reasonably possible. It is even more desirable, however, that an injured person not be deprived of substantial compensation merely because he cannot prove with complete certainty the extent of harm he has suffered.' " (Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal.3d 202, 219 [219 Cal.Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818] , internal citations omitted.)

- "If plaintiff's inability to prove his damages with certainty is due to defendant's actions, the law does not generally require such proof." (Clemente, supra, 40 Cal.3d at p. 219 , internal citations omitted.)

- "While a defendant is liable for all the damage that his tortuous act proximately causes to the plaintiff, regardless of whether or not it could have been anticipated, nevertheless a proximate causal connection must still exist between the damage sustained by the plaintiff and the defendant's wrongful act or omission, and the detriment inflicted on the plaintiff must still be the natural and probable result of the defendant's conduct." (Chaparkas v. Webb (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 257, 260 [2 Cal.Rptr. 879] , internal citations omitted.)

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 14.00, and covers issues presented in BAJI No. 14.02.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Availability of Damages: One of the major advantages of a tort recovery is that plaintiff can recover damages caused by defendant's tortious conduct, whether or not the damages were reasonably foreseeable. Additionally, with regard to intentional torts, plaintiff has the possibility of recovering punitive damages. Contract damages do not include these options. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Monetary Damages in Torts: Exploring the issue of monetary damages in a tort case is extremely important during voir dire. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Consider Asking Court to Modify CACI No. 3900: CACI No. 3900 is the introductory instruction for damages. It replaces BAJI No. 14.00. In addition, CACI No. 3901 replaces BAJI 14.01. These new instructions incorporate changes that make it more likely that a jury will award damages to the plaintiff. The first sentence of CACI No. 3900 provides as follows: "If you decide that [plaintiff] has proved [his/her] claim against [defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [plaintiff] for the harm." This language infers that a jury must award damages if they find liability. BAJI No. 14.00 included the phrase "provided that you find that such harm or loss was suffered by the plaintiff and was caused by the act or omission upon which you base your finding of liability." Thus, CACI No. 3900 puts far less emphasis on the requirement that the jury find that the harm was caused by the wrongful conduct. "The amount of damages must include an award for each item of harm that was caused by [defendant]'s wrongful conduct."

In light of the above, if you represent a defendant in a case involving contested issues of causation, suggest that the court revise CACI No. 3900 to ensure that the jury is not misled and will be accurately instructed on the law of damages. Here is a suggested modification of CACI No. 3900: "If you decide that [plaintiff] has proved [his/her] claim against [defendant], you must also decide how much money will reasonably compensate [plaintiff] for the harm, provided that you find that such harm was suffered by the plaintiff and was caused by the wrongful conduct of the defendant. (Emphasis added; emphasis should be deleted if proposing modification.) By Joseph Devine

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] was harmed and that [name of defendant]'s [insert description of cause of action, e.g., "negligence"] was a substantial factor in causing the harm, you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for each item of harm that was caused by [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Directed Verdict on Liability: Discovery should always include a request for admissions on the issue of liability and at trial an attorney should attempt to get the judge to direct a verdict on the issue of liability. Even if it seems very clear that a jury would find 100 percent liability against a defendant, the plaintiff's counsel should still get a directed verdict and then use CACI No. 3901 for the jury. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Emphasis Depends on Which Party You Represent: Plaintiff's counsel may want to emphasize that CACI No. 3901 states that the jury "must" include an award for "each item" of harm. This includes items when proof of the "exact amount" is not possible. Defendant's counsel may wish to emphasize that portion of the instruction that states the jury "must not" speculate or guess. By Ronald Oster

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3902

CACI 3902 Economic and Noneconomic Damages

The damages claimed by [name of plaintiff] for the harm caused by [name of defendant] fall into two categories called economic damages and noneconomic damages. You will be asked on the verdict form to state the two categories of damages separately.

New September 2003

This instruction may not be necessary in every case.

■ Civil Code section 1431.2 (Prop. 51) provides:

(a) In any action for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death, based upon principles of comparative fault, the liability of each defendant for non-economic damages shall be several only and shall not be joint. Each defendant shall be liable only for the amount of non-economic damages allocated to that defendant in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault, and a separate judgment shall be rendered against that defendant for that amount.

(b)(1) For purposes of this section, the term "economic damages" means objectively verifiable monetary losses including medical expenses, loss of earnings, burial costs, loss of use of property, costs of repair or replacement, costs of obtaining substitute domestic services, loss of employment and loss of business or employment opportunities.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the term "non-economic damages" means subjective, non-monetary losses including, but not limited to, pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental suffering, emotional distress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation and humiliation.

■ Civil Code section 3333.2 provides, in part: "In any action for injury against a health care provider based on professional negligence, the injured plaintiff shall be entitled to recover noneconomic losses to compensate for pain, suffering, inconvenience, physical impairment, disfigurement and other nonpecuniary damage." The statute sets the limit for such damages at $250,000.

■ The Supreme Court has noted that section 1431.2 "carefully" defines the "important distinction" between economic and noneconomic damages. (DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 593, 600 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 238, 828 P.2d 140] .) The court stated: "Proposition 51 ... retains the joint liability of all tortfeasors, regardless of their respective shares of fault, with respect to all objectively provable expenses and monetary losses. On the other hand, the more intangible and subjective categories of damages were limited by Proposition 51 to a rule of strict proportionate liability. With respect to these noneconomic damages, the plaintiff alone now assumes the risk that a proportionate contribution cannot be obtained from each person responsible for the injury." (Ibid., internal citation omitted.)

■ "Proposition 51 ... allows an injured plaintiff to recover the full amount of economic damages suffered, regardless of which tortfeasor or tortfeasors are named as defendants. The tortfeasors are left to sort out payment in proportion to fault amongst themselves, and they must bear the risk of nonrecovery from impecunious tortfeasors. As to noneconomic damages, however, the plaintiff must sue all the tortfeasors to enable a full recovery. Failure to name a defendant will preclude recovery of that defendant's proportional share of damages, and the plaintiff will bear the risk of nonrecovery from an impecunious tortfeasor." (Aetna Health Plans of California, Inc. v. Yucaipa-Calimesa Joint Unified School Dist. (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1175, 1190 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 672] .)

This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI Nos. 14.02 and 14.76.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--When Not to Use CACI No. 3902: In a case involving only property damage, CACI No. 3902 would be inappropriate. It may also not be needed if you are using a general verdict form, or if general damages are not authorized under Civ. Code § 3333.4. In addition, if the verdict form does not set forth the two categories of damages separately, the last sentence should be removed. By Joseph Devine

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Economic vs. Noneconomic Damages: There are a number of ways in which economic damages are treated more favorably than noneconomic damages, including joint and several liability among defendants. If the case includes a significant amount of noneconomic damages (e.g., pain and suffering), it is important for plaintiff to have all potentially responsible parties included as defendants, or plaintiff cannot obtain full recovery. Moreover, plaintiff's argument to the jury should explain why each defendant should be held liable. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Illustration of Verdict Form Is Helpful: Using a blown-up illustration of the verdict form during your closing argument and filling in the amounts you are requesting for economic and noneconomic damages is helpful to the jury and gives them a look at the verdict form before deliberations while they are hearing counsel's argument. By Dona Cohn-Payne

This instruction may not be necessary in every case. For example, if the plaintiff is not claiming any noneconomic damages, there would be no need to define the claimed damages as "economic." If this instruction is used, it should be followed by applicable instructions (see CACI Nos. 3903A through 3903N) concerning the items of economic damage claimed by the plaintiff. These instructions should be inserted into this instruction as sequentially numbered items.

Sources and Authority

■ "[A] person injured by another's tortious conduct is entitled to recover the reasonable value of medical care and services reasonably required and attributable to the tort." (Hanif v. Housing Authority of Yolo County (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 635, 640 [246 Cal.Rptr. 192] , internal citations omitted.); see also Helfend v. Southern Cal Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1, 6 [84 Cal.Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61] [collateral source rule].)

■ "It is established that 'the reasonable value of nursing services required by the defendant's tortious conduct may be recovered from the defendant even though the services were rendered by members of the injured person's family and without an agreement or expectation of payment. Where services in the way of attendance and nursing are rendered by a member of the plaintiff's family, the amount for which the defendant is liable is the amount for which reasonably competent nursing and attendance by others could have been obtained. The fact that the injured party had a legal right to the nursing services (as in the case of a spouse) does not, as a general rule, prevent recovery of their value" (Hanif, supra, 200 Cal.App.3d at pp. 644-645 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Nor is it necessary that the amount of the award equal the alleged medical expenses for it has long been the rule that the costs alone of medical treatment and hospitalization do not govern the recovery of such expenses. It must be shown additionally that the services were attributable to the accident, that they were necessary, and that the charges for such services were reasonable." (Dimmick v. Alvarez (1961) 196 Cal.App.2d 211, 216 [16 Cal.Rptr. 308] .)

■ "Nishihama (Nishihama v. City and County of San Francisco (2001) 93 Cal.App.4th 298 [112 Cal.Rptr.2d 861]) and Hanif (supra) stand for the principle that it is error for the plaintiff to recover medical expenses in excess of the amount paid or incurred. Neither case, however, holds that evidence of the reasonable cost of medical care may not be admitted. Indeed, Nishihama suggests just the opposite: Such evidence gives the jury a more complete picture of the extent of a plaintiff's injuries. Thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing evidence of the reasonable cost of plaintiff's care while reserving the propriety of a Hanif/Nishihama reduction until after the verdict." (Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal.App.4th 1150, 1157 [46 Cal.Rptr.3d 780] , original italics.)

■ "The intervention of a third party in purchasing a medical lien does not prevent a plaintiff from recovering the amounts billed by the medical provider for care and treatment, as long as the plaintiff legitimately incurs those expenses and remains liable for their payment. Nor does the rule [that a plaintiff in a tort action cannot recover more than the amount of medical expenses he or she paid or incurred, even if the reasonable value of those services might be a greater sum] forbid the jury from considering the amounts billed by the provider as evidence of the reasonable value of the services." (Katiuzhinsky v. Perry (2007) 152 Cal.App.4th 1288, 1291 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 309] .)

■ "Because the provider may no longer assert a lien for the full cost of its services, the Medicaid beneficiary may only recover the amount payable under Medicaid as his or her medical expenses in an action against a third party tortfeasor." (Olszewski v. Scripps Health (2003) 30 Cal.4th 798, 827 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 1, 69 P.3d 927] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "To entitle a plaintiff to recover present damages for apprehended future consequences, there must be evidence to show such a degree of probability of their occurring as amounts to a reasonable certainty that they will result from the original injury." (Bellman v. San Francisco High School Dist. (1938) 11 Cal.2d 576, 588 [81 P.2d 894] , internal citation omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Nursing Services Qualify as Economic Losses:

Note that nursing services qualify as economic losses even if provided by family members without expectation of payment. Plaintiff's counsel should therefore introduce evidence, as a comparison if nothing else, of the cost of such services from outside service providers. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Necessity of Medical Expert: An attorney will need a medical expert witness to establish that medical expenses are reasonable. During direct examination, question the expert if he/she is familiar with the cost of the type of treatment provided to the plaintiff in the community that he/she practices. Then you will need to establish that the actual bills incurred by the plaintiff are reasonable and necessary. Future medical expenses cannot be speculative so establish during the expert's testimony that the plaintiff will require future medical care and the reasonable cost. If the medical treatment will be for the plaintiff's life, an expert economist may be required to adjust the cost for inflation and reduce the cost to present value. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using CACI No. 3903A: CACI No. 3903A regarding medical expenses puts less emphasis on the requirement that the plaintiff prove the expenses were reasonable and necessary. It states that "To recover damages for past medical expenses, [plaintiff] must prove the reasonable cost of reasonably necessary medical care that [he/she] has received." The emphasis is on proving the reasonableness of the cost. Compare this to BAJI No. 14.10, which emphasized that three things must be proven, including (1) the reasonable value (cost); (2) that the care given was reasonably required; and (3) that the care was actually given. As noted in the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 3903A, "It must be shown additionally that the services were attributable to the accident, that they were necessary, and that the charges for such services were reasonable. (Dimmick v. Alvarez (1961) 196 Cal.App.2d 211, 216, 16 Cal.Rptr. 308)."

Most Judges prefer to use the approved jury instructions and it is unlikely that they would allow substantial alterations to the CACI instructions. An important issue in many cases is whether or not the medical treatment given was "reasonable and necessary." In such a case, consider requesting that the court give a special instruction in addition to CACI No. 3903A as follows: "In addition to proving the reasonable cost of the medical care, the plaintiff must also prove that the medical care was reasonably required and actually given as a result of the defendant's wrongful conduct." By Joseph Devine

CACI 3903B Medical Monitoring--Toxic Exposure (Economic Damage)

[Insert number, e.g., "2."] The cost of future medical monitoring. To recover damages for this item, [name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That as a result of the toxic exposure, the need for future monitoring is reasonably certain; and
- 2. That the monitoring is reasonable.

In deciding these issues, you should consider the following:

- (a) The significance and extent of [name of plaintiff]'s exposure to the chemical(s);
- (b) The toxicity of the chemical(s);
- (c) The relative increase in [name of plaintiff]'s chance of getting the disease as a result of the exposure, when compared to:
 - (i) [his/her] chances of developing the disease had [he/she] not been exposed, and
 - (ii) the chances that members of the public at large will develop the disease;
- (d) The seriousness of the disease that may result from the exposure; [and]
- (e) The medical benefit of early detection and diagnosis; [and]
- (f) [Insert other relevant factor(s).]

[[Name of defendant] is not required to pay for medical monitoring that is required for reasons other than [name of plaintiff]'s exposure to toxic chemicals.]

[[Name of defendant] is only required to pay for additional or different monitoring that is required because of the toxic exposure.]

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

■ "In the context of a toxic exposure action, a claim for medical monitoring seeks to recover the cost of future periodic medical examinations intended to facilitate early detection and treatment of disease caused by a plaintiff's exposure to toxic substances." (Potter v. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 965, 1004-1005 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 863 P.2d 795] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e hold that the cost of medical monitoring is a compensable item of damages where the proofs demonstrate, through reliable medical expert testimony, that the need for future monitoring is a reasonably certain consequence of a plaintiff's toxic exposure and that the recommended monitoring is reasonable. In determining the reasonableness and necessity of monitoring, the following factors are relevant: (1) the significance and extent of the plaintiff's exposure to chemicals; (2) the toxicity of the chemicals; (3) the relative increase in the chance of onset of disease in the exposed plaintiff as a result of the exposure, when compared to (a) the plaintiff's chances of developing the disease had he or she not been exposed, and (b) the chances of the members of the public at large of developing the disease; (4) the seriousness of the disease for which the plaintiff is at risk; and (5) the clinical value of early detection and diagnosis. Under this holding, it is for the trier of fact to decide, on the basis of competent medical testimony, whether and to what extent the particular plaintiff's exposure to toxic chemicals in a given situation justifies future periodic medical monitoring." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1009 .)

■ "The crucial distinction, in other words, is in the nature of the monitoring, not the nature of the harm. '[E]ven if a defendant negligently exposes a smoker to toxins that significantly increase the smoker's risk of cancer, that defendant is not liable for reasonably certain future medical monitoring costs unless the recommended monitoring calls for tests or examinations that are in addition to or different from the type of monitoring that the smoker should prudently undertake regardless of the subsequent toxic exposure.' This accords with the policy concern being addressed in that part of [Potter], which was to avoid 'open[ing] the floodgates of litigation.' If 'the plaintiff already remains responsible for any monitoring that is shown to be medically advisable due solely to his or her smoking or other preexisting condition,' he or she will have no incentive to sue for contribution from a subsequent tortfeasor who has caused no need for additional or different monitoring." (Gutierrez v. Cassiar Mining Corp. (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 148, 156 [75 Cal.Rptr.2d 132] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Medical Monitoring Expenses: Defense counsel may want to emphasize the last portion of CACI No. 3903B that limits medical monitoring expenses to those expenses that would not otherwise be incurred. Thus, a smoker exposed to asbestos materials may not require "additional or different" monitoring. Still, this may be a difficult concept for some jurors--so, be careful in presenting such an argument. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--CACI Improves Upon BAJI: CACI No. 3903C is a vast improvement over BAJI No. 14.11, which instructed that damages may be awarded for "The reasonable value of working time lost to date." CACI No. 3903C requires the plaintiff to "prove the amount of [income] that [he/she] has lost to date." The jury is clearly informed that the plaintiff must prove the element of economic damage that he/she lost "income" rather than "working time." By Joseph Devine

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Experts, Generally: Many plaintiff's counsel use experts to provide evidence of future lost earnings, especially since present value calculations are required [see CACI No. 3904]. Having the "right" expert is especially key in this area. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Experts to Determine Past and Future Lost Earnings: An economist will be required for future lost earnings so that the amount of damages can be adjusted for inflation, cost of living increases, raises and then reduced to present value. These figures must be presented via an expert. Past lost earnings can be established through the plaintiff directly, but it may be helpful to have someone from the plaintiff's past employment testify independently as to the past earnings of the plaintiff. Remember that a plaintiff's attorney should put in the gross earnings, not net after taxes. By Dona Cohn-Payne

This instruction is not intended for use in employment cases.

If lost profits are asserted as an element of damages, see CACI No. 3903N, Lost Profits (Economic Damage).

This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI No. 14.12.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Need for Expert Testimony: If a plaintiff has no work history (because plaintiff is very young, a student, etc.), plaintiff's counsel will probably need to introduce expert testimony to establish a basis for damages for the loss of ability to earn money in the future. An argument related to a child (e.g., going to school for future success) may be easier for some jurors to understand. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using CACI No. 3903D: CACI No. 3903D concerning lost earning capacity adds a sentence not present in BAJI 14.12. "It is not necessary that [he/she] have a work history." At first glance, this addition would appear to be favorable to the ambitious plaintiff without work history. However, the instruction retains the admonition that the plaintiff must prove what he/she "would have been reasonably certain to earn if the injury had not occurred." A plaintiff without work history may find it difficult to prove that he/she was reasonably certain to earn income, but for his/her injury. Thus, if you are defending a claim of lost earning capacity by a plaintiff without work history, be sure to argue that the plaintiff must prove that he/she was reasonably certain to earn income if the injury had not occurred. The mere fact that the plaintiff has no previous work history suggests that he/she was not reasonably certain to earn income in the future. Remind the jury that speculative damages may not be awarded as they were instructed in CACI No. 3900. By Joseph Devine

- "Although the parties do not distinguish between the different types of lost years damages that were awarded, we note that lost household services damages are different than the other types of future earnings included in this category. Generally, household services damages represent the detriment suffered when injury prevents a person from contributing some or all of his or her customary services to the family unit. The justification for awarding this type of damage as part of the loss of future earnings award is that the plaintiff should be compensated for the value of the services he would have performed during the lost years which, because of the injury, will now have to be performed by someone else." LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Wrongful Death Cases: Evidence of an economic loss to provide household services is required when you have a wrongful death action of a parent or a significantly injured person who had to hire or have someone else do the household chores. This loss can be both past and future. A forensic economist or vocational expert can provide this type of testimony. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Application of These Damages: This category of damages primarily applies to spouses who do not have outside jobs and who provide all or substantially all of the household services for the family. Some jurors (e.g., younger ones) may need some explanation because of their background (e.g., both of their parents worked). By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution!: CACI No. 3903E seems to allow a tort victim the right to claim as his/her own "economic" damages for household services that he/she cannot provide to others. The authority cited for this instruction is Overly v. Ingalls Shipbuilding, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 164, 171, fn. 5, 87 Cal.Rptr.2d 626. However, practitioners should note that the Overly court did not decide the issue: "That specific issue is not presented to us here" [Overly v. Ingalls Shipbuilding, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 164, 173, 87 Cal.Rptr.2d 626]. The only case cited by the Overly court specifically dealing with the issue was Monias v. Endal (1993) 330 Md. 274. The Overly court acknowledged that Monias specifically held that a tort victim plaintiff could not recover economic damages for loss of his/her inability to provide household services. "The tort victim's family, not the tort victim himself was the injured party."

Any defendant confronted with the offer of this instruction should carefully review the case law including the authorities cited in the instruction's use notes. A written motion in limine should be prepared and the defense attorney should vigorously argue that it would be prejudicial error to give this instruction. If given, it invites appeal. By Joseph Devine

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3903F

CACI 3903F Damage to Real Property (Economic Damage)

To recover damages for harm to property, [name of plaintiff] must prove [the reduction in the property's value/ [or] the reasonable cost of repairing the harm]. [If there is evidence of both, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to the lesser of the two amounts. [However, if [name of plaintiff] has a genuine desire to repair the property for personal reasons, and if the costs of repair are reasonable given the damage to the property and the value after repair, then the costs of repair may be awarded even if they exceed the property's loss of value.]]

[To determine the reduction in value, you must determine the fair market value of the property before the harm occurred and then subtract the fair market value of the property immediately after the harm occurred. The difference is the reduction of value.

"Fair market value" is the highest price for the property that a willing buyer would have paid to a willing seller, assuming:

- 1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
- 2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably capable of being used.]

[To determine whether the cost of repairing the harm is reasonable, you must decide if there is a reasonable relationship between the cost of repair and the harm caused by [name of defendant]'s conduct. You must consider the expense and time involved to restore the property to its original condition compared to the value of the property [and [insert other applicable factors.]].

If you find that the cost of repairing the harm is not reasonable, then you may award any reduction in the property's value.]

Directions for Use

Give this instruction for damages to real property caused by trespass, permanent nuisance, or other tortious conduct. See also CACI No. 3903G, Loss of Use of Real Property (Economic Damage).

If there is evidence of both diminution in value and cost of repair, include all optional paragraphs. However, include the last bracketed sentence in the first paragraph only if the judge has determined that the claimed personal reasons are legally sufficient to justify the costs of repair.

If only the cost of repair is at issue, give just the first paragraph. However, if the reasonableness of the cost of repair is at issue, then the value of the property must be considered, and all paragraphs must be included. If only diminution of value is at issue, omit the last two optional paragraphs.

■ Civil Code section 3334(a) provides: "The detriment caused by the wrongful occupation of real property, in cases not embraced in Section 3335 of this code, the Eminent Domain Law (Title 7 (commencing with Section 1230.010) of Part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure), or Section 1174 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is deemed to include the value of the use of the property for the time of that wrongful occupation, not exceeding five years next preceding the commencement of the action or proceeding to enforce the right to damages, the reasonable cost of repair or restoration of the property to its original condition, and the costs, if any, of recovering the possession."

■ "For tortious injury to real property, the general rule is that the plaintiff may recover the lesser of (1) the diminution in the property's fair market value, as measured immediately before and immediately after the damage; or (2) the cost to repair the damage and restore the property to its pretrespass condition, plus the value of any lost use. The practical effect of this rule is to limit damages to property to the fair market value of the property prior to the damage." (Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 442, 450 [102 Cal.Rptr.3d 32] .)

■ "Diminution in market value ... is not an absolute limitation; several other theories are available to fix appropriate compensation for the plaintiff's loss. ■ "Defendant ... contends that the trial court awarded excessive damages, on the ground that when the cost of restoration is less than the depreciation in value, the former is the measure of damages. This contention cannot be sustained. Plaintiffs established their damages by showing the depreciation in value. It was then incumbent upon defendants to come forward with proof that the cost of restoration would be less." (*Herzog v. ■ "Where a plaintiff establishes damages by showing depreciation in the value of real property, courts have held defendants to the burden of coming forward with proof that cost of restoration would be less. CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3903G

CACI 3903G Loss of Use of Real Property (Economic Damage)

[Insert number, e.g., "7."] The loss of use of [name of plaintiff]'s [insert identification of real property].

To recover damages for the loss of use, [name of plaintiff] must prove [the reasonable cost to rent similar property for the time when [he/she/it] could not use [his/her/its] own property/ [or] the benefits obtained by [name of defendant] because of [his/her/its] wrongful occupation]. [If there is evidence of both, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to the greater of the two amounts.]

[Benefits obtained may include [name of defendant]'s profits if they are directly linked to the wrongful occupation.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008

Directions for Use

Use this instruction along with CACI No. 3903F, Damage to Real Property (Economic Damage). Include the optional last paragraph if plaintiff claims that the measure of damages is the benefits obtained by the defendant and that these include the defendant's profits obtained because of the tortious conduct.

This instruction may be used if the general measure of damages under CACI No. 3903F will be the cost of repair rather than diminution in value. (See Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal.4th 543, 555 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 886, 981 P.2d 978] .)

If the jury determines that the cost of repair is not reasonable, it is not clear whether loss-of-use damages are recoverable. The rule has been that when real property has been damaged so that it cannot be restored, damages for loss of use may not be recovered. (Ferraro v. Southern California Gas Co. (1980)

102 Cal.App.3d 33, 50-51 [162 Cal.Rptr. 238] .) But in 1992, the Legislature amended Civil Code section 3334 to allow for "benefits obtained" as an alternative to rental value as a measure of damages for loss of use. The legislative intent was to deter polluters from dumping toxic material on land of little value. (See Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 583, 603 [63 Cal.Rptr.3d 165] .) In Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, the court indicated that it was extremely unlikely in that case that the cost of repair could be considered to be reasonable, but also allowed the jury to consider awarding the defendant's profits as "benefits obtained." (Id. at pp. 598-606 .) The court did not limit the jury's right to award profits as damages only if it found the cost of repair to be reasonable. And it seems that if the court believed there was such a limitation, it would have expressly said so. The legislative objective would not be achieved if one could pollute land to the point that it could not reasonably be restored and also not be required to pay for the benefits obtained. Therefore, it seems most likely that this limitation on loss-of-use damages no longer applies in light of the 1992 amendment and its legislative history.

This instruction is not intended for cases in which the plaintiff is a landlord seeking to recover compensation for lost rents. A more appropriate instruction for that situation is CACI No. 3903N, Lost Profits (Economic Damage).

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 3334 provides:

(a) The detriment caused by the wrongful occupation of real property, in cases not embraced in Section 3335 of this code, the Eminent Domain Law (Title 7 (commencing with Section 1230.010) of Part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure), or Section 1174 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is deemed to include the value of the use of the property for the time of that wrongful occupation, not exceeding five years next preceding the commencement of the action or proceeding to enforce the right to damages, the reasonable cost of repair or restoration of the property to its original condition, and the costs, if any, of recovering the possession.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), for purposes of subdivision (a), the value of the use of the property shall be the greater of the reasonable rental value of that property or the benefits obtained by the person wrongfully occupying the property by reason of that wrongful occupation.

(2) If a wrongful occupation of real property subject to this section is the result of a mistake of fact of the wrongful occupier, the value of the use of the property, for purposes of subdivision (a), shall be the reasonable rental value of the property.

■ "[T]he general measure of damages where injury to property is capable of being repaired is the reasonable cost of repair together with the value of lost use during the period of injury." (Erlich, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p.555 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "There is no question that when cost of restoration is the correct measure of damages for injury to real property, compensation for loss of use ... would be appropriate." (Ferraro, supra, 102 Cal.App.3d at p 51 .)

■ "There is nothing in Civil Code section 3334 or its legislative history to suggest that the phrase 'benefits obtained' should be read narrowly. To the contrary, the intent of the Legislature was to eliminate any economic incentive to trespass as a means of waste disposal. (Sen. Com. on Judiciary, com. on Assem. Bill No. 2663 (1991-1992 Reg. Sess.)

for June 23, 1992, hearing, p. 2.) If the Legislature had wanted to limit the phrase 'benefits obtained' to costs avoided, it could easily have done so. [P] Further, this interpretation is consistent with the fundamental rule that the prime consideration in interpreting a statute is to achieve the objective of the statute. As we have indicated, the evil to be prevented by the 1992 amendments is identified in the legislative history--to prevent any economic advantage for polluters resulting from the wrongful dumping on another's land." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 604 , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ "Trial courts in trespass actions have historically been given great flexibility to award damages that fit the particular facts of the case. [Defendant] has admitted that it chose the challenged method for disposing of produced water because it was the least expensive alternative and maximized its profits. In light of these factors, we conclude that the term 'benefits obtained' may include profits enjoyed by [defendant] that are directly linked to the wrongful trespass." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 604 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts section 931 provides:

If one is entitled to a judgment for the detention of, or for preventing the use of, land or chattels, the damages include compensation for

(a) the value of the use during the period of detention or prevention or the value of the use of or the amount paid for a substitute, and

(b) harm to the subject matter or other harm of which the detention is the legal cause.

In that case a growing crop of rice had been damaged. The court pointed out that estimated costs of production must first be deducted from expected gross receipts to arrive at the expected net profit. Next, the court said, actual cost of production must be deducted from actual receipts to arrive at actual net profit. Finally, deducting actual net profit from expected net profit fixes the actual damage." (Solis v. County of Contra Costa (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 844, 847-848 [60 Cal.Rptr. 99] .)

■ "Where the roots of the grass in a pasture have been destroyed by water or fire so as to prevent the matured stocks from automatically reseeding the field, the measure of damages includes not only the rental value of the pasture, but also the additional cost of reseeding the field." (Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Pinelli (1927) 84 Cal.App. 42, 49 [257 P. 573] .)

■ "Upon the foregoing authorities, and upon good reason, we conclude that the measure of damages for the appropriation or destruction of pasturage, which is used for grazing purposes, where the grass cannot be reasonably severed and marketed separate from the land, is the reasonable rental value thereof in that vicinity for pasture purposes." (Miller & Lux, Inc., supra, 84 Cal.App. at p. 51 .)

■ "The measure of damages for the destruction of or injury to fruit, nut, or other productive trees is generally the difference in the value of the land before and after the destruction or injury. Damages may be additionally measured by the value of the trees on the premises in their growing state. Some courts have also awarded damages for the resulting crop loss. Where annual crops are damaged each year for several years, a grower may recover for loss of the crops during those years, the increased labor in the care of the land, and damages for injury to the trees themselves. [P] More recently, the measure of damages for the destruction of fruit trees has included the costs of replacing the trees or restoring the property to its condition prior to the injury. In Baker v. Ramirez, the court held that the cost of restoring an orange grove was the most appropriate measure of damages, where there was no impediment to replacing the orange trees and it was reasonable to replace the trees because only a small portion of the grove was damaged. The court noted that the difference between the value of the property before and after the injury was only one possible measure of damages." (*Santa Barbara Pistachio Ranch v. CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3903J

CACI 3903J Damage to Personal Property (Economic Damage)

To recover damages for harm to personal property, [name of plaintiff] must prove the reduction in the [item of personal property]'s value or the reasonable cost of repairing it, whichever is less. [If there is evidence of both, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to the lesser of the two amounts.]

To determine the reduction in value, you must determine the fair market value of the [item of personal property] before the harm occurred and then subtract the fair market value of the [item of personal property] immediately after the harm occurred.

"Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid to a willing seller, assuming:

- 1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
- 2. That the buyer and seller are fully informed of the condition and quality of the [item of personal property].

[If you find that [name of plaintiff]'s [item of personal property] cannot be completely repaired, the damages are the difference between its value before the harm and its value after the repairs have been made, plus the reasonable cost of making the repairs. The total amount awarded must not exceed the [item of personal property]'s value before the harm occurred.]

New September 2003

■ "The general rule is that the measure of damages for tortious injury to personal property is the difference between the market value of the property immediately before and immediately after the injury, or the reasonable cost of repair if that cost be less than the diminution in value. This rule stems from the basic code section fixing the measure of tort damage as 'the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby.' [citations]" (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Mounteer (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 809, 812 [136 Cal.Rptr. 280] .)

■ "It has also been held that the price at which a thing can be sold at public sale, or in the open market, is some evidence of its market value. In San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, the rule is announced that the judicial test of market value depends upon the fact that the property in question is marketable at a given price, which in turn depends upon the fact that sales of similar property have been, and are being, made at ascertainable prices. In Quint v. Dimond, it was held competent to prove market value in the nearest market." (Tatone v. Chin Bing (1936) 12 Cal.App.2d 543, 545-546 [55 P.2d 933] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'Where personal property is injured but not wholly destroyed, one rule is that the plaintiff may recover the depreciation in value (the measure being the difference between the value immediately before and after the injury), and compensation for the loss of use.' In the alternative, the plaintiff may recover the reasonable cost of repairs as well as compensation for the loss of use while the repairs are being accomplished. If the cost of repairs exceeds the depreciation in value, the plaintiff may only recover the lesser sum. Similarly, if depreciation is greater than the cost of repairs, the plaintiff may only recover the reasonable cost of repairs. If the property is wholly destroyed, the usual measure of damages is the market value of the property." (Hand Electronics, Inc. v. Snowline Joint Unified School Dist. (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 862, 870 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 446] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The cost of replacement is not a proper measure of damages for injury to personal property. (Hand Electronics, supra, 21 Cal.App.4th at p. 871 .)

■ "When conduct complained of consists of intermeddling with personal property 'the owner has a cause of action for trespass or case, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use.' " (Itano v. Colonial Yacht Anchorage (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d 84, 90 [72 Cal.Rptr. 823] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The measure of damage for wrongful injury to personal property is that difference between the market value of the property immediately before and immediately after the injury, or the reasonable cost of repair if such cost be less than the depreciation in value." (Smith v. Hill (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 374, 388 [47 Cal.Rptr. 49] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]t is said ... that 'if the damaged property cannot be completely repaired, the measure of damages is the difference between its value before the injury and its value after the repairs have been made, plus the reasonable cost of making the repairs. The foregoing rule gives the plaintiff the difference between the value of the machine before the injury and its value after such injury, the amount thereof being made up of the cost of repairs and the depreciation notwithstanding such repairs.' The rule urged by defendant, which limits the recovery to the cost of repairs, is applicable only in those cases in which the injured property 'can be entirely repaired.' This latter rule presupposes that the damaged property can be restored to its former state with no depreciation in its former value." (Merchant Shippers Association v. Kellogg Express and Draying Co. (1946) 28 Cal.2d 594, 600 [170 P.2d 923] , internal citations omitted.)

To recover damages for the unique value, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That the [item of personal property] had some market value;

Directions for Use

The judge should determine whether the peculiar value claimed by the plaintiff is legally sufficient. While the subcommittee been unable to locate cases that state this rule explicitly, cases have upheld the giving of this type of instruction where there is substantial evidence of peculiar value.

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 3355 provides: "Where certain property has a peculiar value to a person recovering damages for deprivation thereof, or injury thereto, that may be deemed to be its value against one who had notice thereof before incurring a liability to damages in respect thereof, or against a willful wrongdoer."

■ "[T]his section deals with property which has a market value and also a peculiar value to the owner, and not with property having no market value." (Zvolanek v. Bodger Seeds, Ltd. (1935) 5 Cal.App.2d 106, 110 [42 P.2d 92] .)

- "There appears to be no logical or practical reason why a distinction should be drawn between cases in which the property is totally destroyed and those in which it has been injured but is repairable, and we have concluded that when the owner of a negligently destroyed commercial vehicle has suffered injury by being deprived of the use of the vehicle during the period required for replacement, he is entitled, upon proper pleading and proof, to recover for loss of use in order to 'compensate for all the detriment proximately caused' by the wrongful destruction." CACI 3903N Lost Profits (Economic Damage)

To recover damages for lost profits, [name of plaintiff] must prove it is reasonably certain [he/she/it] would have earned profits but for [name of defendant]'s conduct.

To decide the amount of damages for lost profits, you must determine the gross amount [name of plaintiff] would have received but for [name of defendant]'s conduct and then subtract from that amount the expenses [including the value of the [specify categories of evidence, such as labor/materials/rents/all expenses/interest of the capital employed]] [name of plaintiff] would have had if [name of defendant]'s conduct had not occurred.

The amount of the lost profits need not be calculated with mathematical precision, but there must be a reasonable basis for computing the loss.

New September 2003

This instruction is not intended for personal injury cases. Instead, use CACI No. 3903C, Past and Future Lost Earnings (Economic Damage). (See Pretzer v. California Transit Co. (1930) 211 Cal. 202, 207-208 [294 P. 382] .)

Insertion of specified types of costs to be deducted from gross earnings is optional, depending on the facts of the case. Other types of costs may be inserted as appropriate.

- "The measure of damages in this state for the commission of a tort, as provided by statute, is that amount which will compensate the plaintiff for all detriment sustained by him as the proximate result of the defendant's wrong, regardless of whether or not such detriment could have been anticipated by the defendant. It is well established in California, moreover, that such damages may include loss of anticipated profits where an established business has been injured." (Fibreboard Paper Products Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists, Local 1304, United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 675, 702 [39 Cal.Rptr. 64] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[E]vidence of lost profits must be unspeculative and in order to support a lost profits award the evidence must show 'with reasonable certainty both their occurrence and the extent thereof.' " (Sanchez-Corea v. Bank of America (1985) 38 Cal.3d 892, 907 [215 Cal.Rptr. 679, 701 P.2d 826] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "It is enough to demonstrate a reasonable probability that profits would have been earned except for the defendant's conduct. The plaintiff has the burden to produce the best evidence available in the circumstances to attempt to establish a claim for loss of profits." (S. C. Anderson, Inc. v. Bank of America N.T. & S.A. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 529, 536 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 286] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Damages for loss of profits may be denied to an 'unestablished' or new business as being too uncertain and speculative if they cannot be calculated with reasonable certainty. 'The ultimate test is whether there has been "operating experience sufficient to permit a reasonable estimate of probable income and expense" ... or, ... "anticipated profits dependent upon future events are allowed where their nature and occurrence can be shown by evidence of reasonable reliability." ' " (Maggio, Inc. v. United Farm Workers of America, AFL-CIO (1991) 227 Cal.App.3d 847, 870 [278 Cal.Rptr. 250] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The rule denying profits to an unestablished business "is, however, 'not a hard and fast one.' The issue is, rather, whether the damages can be calculated with reasonable certainty." (S. Jon Kreedman & Co. v. Meyers Bros. Parking-Western Corp. (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 173, 184-185 [130 Cal.Rptr. 41] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Lost profits to an established business may be recovered if their extent and occurrence can be ascertained with reasonable certainty; once their existence has been so established, recovery will not be denied because the amount cannot be shown with mathematical precision. Historical data, such as past business volume, supply an acceptable basis for ascertaining lost future profits. In some instances, lost profits may be recovered where plaintiff introduces evidence of the profits lost by similar businesses operating under similar conditions. In either case, recovery is limited to net profits." (Berge v. International Harvester Co. (1983) 142 Cal.App.3d 152, 161-162 [190 Cal.Rptr. 815] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the occurrence and extent of anticipated profits is shown by evidence of reasonable reliability damages are recoverable; uncertainty as to the amount of damages is not fatal; uncertainties are to be resolved against [defendant]." LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Emphasis Depends on Which Party You Represent: As with all future calculations, plaintiff will want to emphasize that lost profits need not be determined with mathematical precision. The argument is that defendant's conduct prevented (or will prevent) the profits from being obtained, and defendant should not benefit from the uncertainty that the defendant's conduct created. On the other side, the defendant will want to emphasize any evidence of overreaching by plaintiff, and defendant will want to stress that the jury must not speculate or guess about damages. This area is particularly applicable for oral argument. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3904

CACI 3904 Present Cash Value

If you decide that [name of plaintiff]'s harm includes future [economic] damages for [loss of earnings/future medical expenses/lost profits/[insert other economic damages]], then the amount of those future damages must be reduced to their present cash value. This is necessary because money received now will, through investment, grow to a larger amount in the future.

To find present cash value, you must determine the amount of money that, if reasonably invested today, will provide [name of plaintiff] with the amount of [his/her/its] future damages.

[You may consider expert testimony in determining the present cash value of future [economic] damages.]

[You will be provided with a table to help you calculate the present cash value.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if future economic damages are sought. Include "economic" if future noneconomic damages are also sought. Future noneconomic damages are not reduced to present cash value because the amount that the jury is to award should already encompass the idea of today's dollars for tomorrow's loss. (See Salgado v. County of L.A. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 629, 646-647 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 46, 967 P.2d 585] ; CACI No. 3905A, Physical Pain, Mental Suffering, and Emotional Distress (Noneconomic Damage).)

Give the optional last sentence if the parties have stipulated to a discount rate or if evidence from which the jury can determine an appropriate discount rate has been presented. A table appropriate to this calculation should be provided. (See Schiernbeck v. Haight (1992) 7 Cal.App.4th 869, 877 [9

Cal.Rptr.2d 716] .)

Expert testimony will usually be required to accurately establish present values for future economic losses. However, tables may be helpful to the jury in many cases.

Sources and Authority

■ "The present value of a gross award of future damages is that sum of money prudently invested at the time of judgment which will return, over the period the future damages are incurred, the gross amount of the award. 'The concept of present value recognizes that money received after a given period is worth less than the same amount received today. This is the case in part because money received today can be used to generate additional value in the interim.' The present value of an award of future damages will vary depending on the gross amount of the award, and the timing and amount of the individual payments." (Holt v. Regents of the University of California (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 871, 878 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 752] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Exact actuarial computation should result in a lump-sum, present-value award which if prudently invested will provide the beneficiaries with an investment return allowing them to regularly withdraw matching support money so that, by reinvesting the surplus earnings during the earlier years of the expected support period, they may maintain the anticipated future support level throughout the period and, upon the last withdrawal, have depleted both principal and interest." (Canavin v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 512, 521 [196 Cal.Rptr. 82] .)

■ The Supreme Court has held that "it is not a violation of the plaintiff's jury trial right for the court to submit only the issue of the gross amount of future economic damages to the jury, with the timing of periodic payments--and hence their present value--to be set by the court in the exercise of its sound discretion." (Salgado, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 649 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Neither party introduced any evidence of compounding or discounting factors, including how to calculate an appropriate rate of return throughout the relevant years. Under such circumstances, the 'jury would have been put to sheer speculation in determining ... "the present sum of money which ... will pay to the plaintiff ... the equivalent of his [future economic] loss" ' " (Schiernbeck, supra, 7 Cal.App.4th at p. 877, internal citations omitted.)

CACI 3905 Items of Noneconomic Damage

The following are the specific items of noneconomic damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

[Insert applicable instructions on items of noneconomic damage.]

New September 2003

This instruction may not be needed in every case. For example, if the plaintiff is not claiming any economic damages, there is no need to define the claimed damages as "noneconomic." If this instruction is used, it should be followed by applicable instructions concerning the items of noneconomic damage claimed by the plaintiff. These instructions should be inserted into this instruction as sequentially numbered items.

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3905A

CACI 3905A Physical Pain, Mental Suffering, and Emotional Distress (Noneconomic Damage)

[Insert number, e.g., "1."] [Past] [and] [future] [physical pain/mental suffering/loss of enjoyment of life/disfigurement/physical impairment/inconvenience/grief/anxiety/humiliation/emotional distress [insert other damages]].

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of these noneconomic damages. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

[To recover for future [insert item of pain and suffering], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she] is reasonably certain to suffer that harm.

For future [insert item of pain and suffering], determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment that will compensate [name of plaintiff] for future [insert item of pain and suffering]. [This amount of noneconomic damages should not be further reduced to present cash value because that reduction should only be performed with respect to economic damages.]]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, December 2009

Directions for Use

Insert the bracketed terms that best describe the damages claimed by the plaintiff.

If future noneconomic damages are sought, include the last two paragraphs. Do not instruct the jury to further reduce the award to present cash value. (See CACI No. 3904, Present Cash Value.) The amount that the jury is to award should already encompass the idea of today's dollars for tomorrow's loss. (See Salgado v. County of L.A. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 629, 646-647 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 46, 967 P.2d 585] .) Include the last sentence only if the plaintiff is claiming both future economic and noneconomic damages.

Sources and Authority

■ "In general, courts have not attempted to draw distinctions between the elements of 'pain' on the one hand, and 'suffering' on the other; rather, the unitary concept of 'pain and suffering' has served as a convenient label under which a plaintiff may recover not only for physical pain but for fright, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, mortification, shock, humiliation, indignity, embarrassment, apprehension, terror or ordeal. Admittedly these terms refer to subjective states, representing a detriment which can be translated into monetary loss only with great difficulty. But the detriment, nevertheless, is a genuine one that requires compensation, and the issue generally must be resolved by the 'impartial conscience and judgment of jurors who may be expected to act reasonably, intelligently and in harmony with the evidence.' " (Capelouto v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1972) 7 Cal.3d 889, 892-893 [103 Cal.Rptr. 856, 500 P.2d 880] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "Compensatory damages may be awarded for bodily harm without proof of pecuniary loss. The fact that there is no market price calculus available to measure the amount of appropriate compensation does not render such a tortious injury noncompensable. 'For harm to body, feelings or reputation, compensatory damages reasonably proportioned to the intensity and duration of the harm can be awarded without proof of amount other than evidence of the nature of the harm. There is no direct correspondence between money and harm to the body, feelings or reputation. There is no market price for a scar or for loss of hearing since the damages are not measured by the amount for which one would be willing to suffer the harm. The discretion of the judge or jury determines the amount of recovery, the only standard being such an amount as a reasonable person would estimate as fair compensation.' " (Duarte v. Zachariah (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 1652, 1664-1665 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 88] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The general rule of damages in tort is that the injured party may recover for all detriment caused whether it could have been anticipated or not. In accordance with the general rule, it is settled in this state that mental suffering constitutes an aggravation of damages when it naturally ensues from the act complained of, and in this connection mental suffering includes nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation and indignity as well as physical pain." (Crisci v. The Security Insurance Co. of New Haven, Connecticut (1967) 66 Cal.2d 425, 433 [58 Cal.Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]here a plaintiff has undergone surgery in which a herniated disc is removed and a metallic plate inserted, and the jury has expressly found that defendant's negligence was a cause of plaintiff's injury, the failure to award any damages for pain and suffering results in a damage award that is inadequate as a matter of law." (Dodson v. J. Pacific, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal.App.4th 931, 933 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 920] .)

■ " 'To entitle a plaintiff to recover present damages for apprehended future consequences, there must be evidence to show such a degree of probability of their occurring as amounts to a reasonable certainty that they will result from the original injury.' " (Bellman v. San Francisco High School Dist. (1938) 11 Cal.2d 576, 588 [81 P.2d 894] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "To avoid confusion regarding the jury's task in future cases, we conclude that when future noneconomic damages are sought, the jury should be instructed expressly that they are to assume that an award of future damages is a present value sum, i.e., they are to determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment that will compensate a plaintiff for future pain and suffering. In the absence of such instruction, unless the record clearly establishes otherwise, awards of future damages will be considered to be stated in terms of their present or current value." (Salgado, supra, 19 Cal.4th at pp. 646-647 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Awards for Noneconomic Damages Can Vary Widely: Because there are "no fixed standards," awards for noneconomic damages such as pain and suffering can vary widely. CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

CACI 3920 Loss of Consortium (Noneconomic Damage)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] has been harmed by the injury to [his/her] [husband/wife]. If you decide that [name of injured spouse] has proved [his/her] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money, if any, will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for loss of [his/her] [husband/wife]'s companionship and services, including:

1. The loss of love, companionship, comfort, care, assistance, protection, affection, society, moral support; and
2. The loss of the enjoyment of sexual relations [or the ability to have children].

[Name of plaintiff] may recover for harm [he/she] proves [he/she] has suffered to date and for harm [he/she] is reasonably certain to suffer in the future. No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of these damages. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

Do not include in your award any compensation for the following:

1. The loss of financial support from [name of injured spouse];
 2. Personal services, such as nursing, that [name of plaintiff] has provided or will provide to [name of injured spouse]; or
 3. Any loss of earnings that [name of plaintiff] has suffered by giving up employment to take care of [name of injured spouse].

New September 2003

Depending on the circumstances of the case, it may be appropriate to add after "to be suffered in the future" either "during the period of [name of injured spouse]'s disability" or "as measured by the life expectancy that [name of injured spouse] had before [his/her] injury or by the life expectancy of [name of plaintiff], whichever is shorter."

Insofar as this instruction addresses the loss of a spouse's assistance in operating the household, it is not intended to include the cost of obtaining household services. (See Kellogg v. Asbestos Corp. Ltd. (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1397, 1408 [49 Cal.Rptr.2d 256] : "Although the trial court labeled the damages awarded Mrs. Kellogg as being for 'loss of consortium' (a noneconomic damages item under Proposition 51), much of the testimony at trial actually involved the 'costs of obtaining substitute domestic services' on her behalf (an economic damage item in the statute). (See Civ. Code, § 1431.2, subd. (b)(1), (2).)")

■ Civil Code section 1431.2(b)(2) provides, in part: "For purposes of this section, the term 'non-economic damages' means subjective, non-monetary losses including ... loss of consortium"

■ "We ... declare that in California each spouse has a cause of action for loss of consortium, as defined herein, caused by a negligent or intentional injury to the other spouse by a third party. (Rodriguez v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 382, 408 [115 Cal.Rptr. 765, 525 P.2d 669] .)

■ "The concept of consortium includes not only loss of support or services; it also embraces such elements as love, companionship, comfort, affection, society, sexual relations, the moral support each spouse gives the other through the triumph and despair of life, and the deprivation of a spouse's physical assistance in operating and maintaining the family home." (Ledger v. Tippitt (1985) 164 Cal.App.3d 625, 633 [210 Cal.Rptr. 814] , disapproved of on other grounds in Elden v. Sheldon (1988) 46 Cal.3d 267, 277 [250 Cal.Rptr. 254, 758 P.2d 582] .)

■ "Since he has no cause of action in tort his spouse has no cause of action for loss of consortium." (Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1048, 1067 [272 Cal.Rptr. 250] .)

■ "Rodriguez never mentions the concept of a complete loss of consortium. To the contrary, the opinion speaks of 'loss or impairment of her rights of consortium.' This dichotomy suggests that a diminution of a wife's rights are compensable, and we so hold." (Carlson v. Wald (1984) 151 Cal.App.3d 598, 602 [199 Cal.Rptr. 10] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[S]hould [husband] prevail in his own cause of action against these defendants, he will be entitled to recover, among his medical expenses, the full cost of whatever home nursing is necessary. To allow [wife] also to recover the value of her nursing services, however personalized, would therefore constitute double recovery." (Rodriguez, supra, 12 Cal.3d at p. 409 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "For the same reason, [wife] cannot recover for the loss of her earnings and earning capacity assertedly incurred when she quit her job in order to furnish [husband] these same nursing services. To do so would be to allow her to accomplish indirectly that which we have just held she cannot do directly." (Rodriguez, supra, 12 Cal.3d at p. 409 .)

■ "The deprivation of a husband's physical assistance in operating and maintaining the home is a compensable item of loss of consortium." (Rodriguez, supra, 12 Cal.3d at p. 409, fn. 31 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Whether the degree of harm suffered by the plaintiff's spouse is sufficiently severe to give rise to a cause of action for loss of consortium is a matter of proof. When the injury is emotional rather than physical, the plaintiff may have a more difficult task in proving negligence, causation, and the requisite degree of harm; but these are questions for the jury, as in all litigation for loss of consortium. In Rodriguez we acknowledged that the loss is 'principally a form of mental suffering,' but nevertheless declared our faith in the ability of the jury to exercise sound judgment in fixing compensation. We reaffirm that faith today." (Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 933 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We ... conclude that we should not recognize a cause of action by a child for loss of parental consortium." (Borer v. American Airlines, Inc. (1977) 19 Cal.3d 441, 451 [138 Cal.Rptr. 302, 563 P.2d 858] .)

■ A parent may not recover loss of consortium damages for injury to his or her child. (Baxter v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal.3d 461 [138 Cal.Rptr. 315, 563 P.2d 871] .)

■ Unmarried cohabitants may not recover damages for loss of consortium. (Elden, supra, 46 Cal.3d at p. 277 .)

■ Under Proposition 51, damages for loss of consortium may be reduced by the negligence of the injured spouse. (Craddock v. Kmart Corp. (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1300, 1309-1310 [107 Cal.Rptr.2d 881] ; Hernandez v. Badger Construction Equipment Co. (1994) 28 Cal.App.4th 1791, 1810-1811 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 732] .)

■ " 'To entitle a plaintiff to recover present damages for apprehended future consequences, there must be evidence to show such a degree of probability of their occurring as amounts to a reasonable certainty that they will result from the original injury.' " (Bellman v. San Francisco High School Dist. (1938) 11 Cal.2d 576, 588 [81 P.2d 894] , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3921

CACI 3921 Wrongful Death (Death of an Adult)

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her] claim against [name of defendant] for the death of [name of decedent], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the death of [name of decedent]. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of these damages. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The damages claimed by [name of plaintiff] fall into two categories called economic damages and noneconomic damages. You will be asked to state the two categories of damages separately on the verdict form.

[Name of plaintiff] claims the following economic damages:

- 1. The financial support, if any, that [name of decedent] would have contributed to the family during either the life expectancy that [name of decedent] had before [his/her] death or the life expectancy of [name of plaintiff], whichever is shorter;
- 2. The loss of gifts or benefits that [name of plaintiff] would have expected to receive from [name of decedent];
- 3. Funeral and burial expenses; and
- 4. The reasonable value of household services that [name of decedent] would have provided.

Your award of any future economic damages must be reduced to present cash value.

[Name of plaintiff] also claims the following noneconomic damages:

1. The loss of [name of decedent]'s love, companionship, comfort, care, assistance, protection, affection, society, moral support; [and]

[2. The loss of the enjoyment of sexual relations.]

[2. The loss of [name of decedent]'s training and guidance.]

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of noneconomic damages. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

[For noneconomic damages, determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment that will compensate [name of plaintiff] for those damages. [This amount of noneconomic damages should not be further reduced to present cash value because that reduction should only be performed with respect to economic damages.]]

In determining [name of plaintiff]'s loss, do not consider:

1. [Name of plaintiff]'s grief, sorrow, or mental anguish;

2. [Name of decedent]'s pain and suffering; or

3. The poverty or wealth of [name of plaintiff].

In deciding a person's life expectancy, you may consider, among other factors, the average life expectancy of a person of that age, as well as that person's health, habits, activities, lifestyle, and occupation. According to [insert source of information], the average life expectancy of a [insert number]-year-old [male/female] is [insert number] years, and the average life expectancy of a [insert number]-year-old [male/female] is [insert number] years. This published information is evidence of how long a person is likely to live but is not conclusive. Some people live longer and others die sooner.

[In computing these damages, consider the losses suffered by all plaintiffs and return a verdict of a single amount for all plaintiffs. I will divide the amount [among/between] the plaintiffs.]

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, February 2007, April 2008, December 2009

Directions for Use

One of the life-expectancy subjects in the second sentence of the second-to-last paragraph should be the decedent, and the other should be the plaintiff. This definition is intended to apply to the element of damages pertaining to the financial support that the decedent would have provided to the plaintiff.

Use of the life tables in Vital Statistics of the United States, published by the National Center for Health Statistics, is recommended. (See Life Expectancy Table--Male and Life Expectancy Table--Female, following the Damages series.) The first column shows the age interval between the two exact ages indicated. For example, 50-51 means the one-year interval between the fiftieth and fifty-first birthdays.

The paragraph concerning not reducing noneconomic damages to present cash value is bracketed because the law is not clear. It has been held that all damages, pecuniary and nonpecuniary, must be reduced to present value. (See Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 565, 569 [184 Cal.Rptr. 87] ; cf. Restat 2d of Torts, § 913A [future pecuniary losses must be reduced to present value].) The view of the court in Fox was that damages for lost value of society, comfort, care, protection and companionship must be monetarily quantified, and thus become pecuniary and subject to reduction to present value. However, the California Supreme Court subsequently held that with regard to future pain and suffering, the amount that the jury is to award should already encompass the idea of today's dollars for tomorrow's loss (See Salgado v. County of L.A. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 629, 646-647 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 46, 967 P.2d 585]), so there is no further reduction to present value. (See CACI No. 3904, Present Cash Value.) While it seems reasonable that Salgado should apply to wrongful death actions, no court has expressly so held. Include the last sentence only if both future economic and noneconomic damages are sought. Note that if only economic damages are to be reduced to present value, the jury must find separate amounts for economic and noneconomic damages. (See CACI No. VF-3905, Damages for Wrongful Death (Death of an Adult).)

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 377.60 provides:

A cause of action for the death of a person caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another may be asserted by any of the following persons or by the decedent's personal representative on their behalf:

(a) The decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or, if there is no surviving issue of the decedent, the persons, including the surviving spouse or domestic partner, who would be entitled to the property of the decedent by intestate succession.

(b) Whether or not qualified under subdivision (a), if they were dependent on the decedent, the putative spouse, children of the putative spouse, stepchildren, or parents. As used in this subdivision, "putative spouse" means the surviving spouse of a void or voidable marriage who is found by the court to have believed in good faith that the marriage to the decedent was valid.

(c) A minor, whether or not qualified under subdivision (a) or (b), if, at the time of the decedent's death, the minor resided for the previous 180 days in the decedent's household and was dependent on the decedent for one-half or more of the minor's support.

(d) This section applies to any cause of action arising on or after January 1, 1993.

(e) The addition of this section by Chapter 178 of the Statutes of 1992 was not intended to adversely affect the standing of any party having standing under prior law, and the standing of parties governed by that version of this section as added by Chapter 178 of the Statutes of 1992 shall be the same as specified herein as amended by Chapter 563 of the Statutes of 1996.

(f) For the purpose of this section, "domestic partner" has the meaning provided in Section 297 of the Family Code.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 377.61 provides: "In an action under this article, damages may be awarded that, under all the circumstances of the case, may be just, but may not include damages recoverable under Section 377.34. The court shall determine the respective rights in an award of the persons entitled to assert the cause of action."

■ "A cause of action for wrongful death is purely statutory in nature, and therefore 'exists only so far and in favor of such person as the legislative power may declare.' " (Barrett v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1176, 1184 [272 Cal.Rptr. 304] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "There are three distinct public policy considerations involved in the legislative creation of a cause of action for wrongful death: '(1) compensation for survivors, (2) deterrence of conduct and (3) limitation, or lack thereof, upon the damages recoverable.' " (Barrett, supra, 222 Cal.App.3d at p. 1185 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "We therefore conclude, on this basis as well, that 'wrongful act' as used in section 377 means any kind of tortious act, including the tortious act of placing defective products into the stream of commerce." (Barrett, supra, 222 Cal.App.3d at p. 1191 .)

■ "In any action for wrongful death resulting from negligence, the complaint must contain allegations as to all the elements of actionable negligence." (Jacoves v. United Merchandising Corp. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 88, 105 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 468] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Damages for wrongful death are not limited to compensation for losses with 'ascertainable economic value.' Rather, the measure of damages is the value of the benefits the heirs could reasonably expect to receive from the deceased if she had lived." (Allen v. Toledo (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 415, 423 [167 Cal.Rptr. 270] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "These benefits include the personal services, advice, and training the heirs would have received from the deceased, and the value of her society and companionship. 'The services of children, elderly parents, or nonworking spouses often do not result in measurable net income to the family unit, yet unquestionably the death of such a person represents a substantial "injury" to the family for which just compensation should be paid.' " (Allen, supra, 109 Cal.App.3d at p. 423 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Where, as here, decedent was a husband and father, a significant element of damages is the loss of financial benefits he was contributing to his family by way of support at the time of his death and that support reasonably expected in the future. The total future lost support must be reduced by appropriate formula to a present lump sum which, when invested to yield the highest rate of return consistent with reasonable security, will pay the equivalent of lost future benefits at the times, in the amounts and for the period such future benefits would have been received." CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

CACI 3922 Wrongful Death (Parents' Recovery for Death of a Minor Child)

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her] claim against [name of defendant] for the death of [name of minor], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the death of [name of minor]. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of these damages. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The damages claimed by [name of plaintiff] fall into two categories called economic damages and noneconomic damages. You will be asked to state the two categories of damages separately on the verdict form.

[Name of plaintiff] claims the following economic damages:

- 1. The value of the financial support, if any, that [name of minor] would have contributed to the family during either the life expectancy that [name of minor] had before [his/her] death or the life expectancy of [name of plaintiff], whichever is shorter;
- 2. The loss of gifts or benefits that [name of plaintiff] could have expected to receive from [name of minor];
- 3. Funeral and burial expenses; and
- 4. The reasonable value of household services that [name of minor] would have provided.

Your award of any future economic damages must be reduced to present cash value.

[Name of plaintiff] also claims the following noneconomic damages: The loss of [name of minor]'s love, companionship, comfort, care, assistance, protection, affection, society, and moral support.

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of noneconomic damages. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

[For noneconomic damages, determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment that will compensate [name of plaintiff] for those damages. [This amount of noneconomic damages should not be further reduced to present cash value because that reduction should only be performed with respect to economic damages.]]

Do not include in your award any compensation for the following:

1. [Name of plaintiff]'s grief, sorrow, or mental anguish; or
2. [Name of minor]'s pain and suffering.

In computing these damages, you should deduct the present cash value of the probable costs of [name of minor]'s support and education.

In deciding a person's life expectancy, consider, among other factors, that person's health, habits, activities, lifestyle, and occupation. Life expectancy tables are evidence of a person's life expectancy but are not conclusive.

[In computing these damages, consider the losses suffered by all plaintiffs and return a verdict of a single amount for all plaintiffs. I will divide the amount [among/between] the plaintiffs.]

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, April 2008, December 2009

Directions for Use

Use of the life tables in Vital Statistics of the United States, published by the National Center for Health Statistics, is recommended. (See Life Expectancy Table--Male and Life Expectancy Table--Female, following the Damages series.) The first column shows the age interval between the two exact ages indicated. For example, 50-51 means the one-year interval between the fiftieth and fifty-first birthdays.

The paragraph concerning not reducing noneconomic damages to present cash value is bracketed because the law is not clear. It has been held that all damages, pecuniary and nonpecuniary, must be reduced to present value. (See Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 565, 569 [184 Cal.Rptr. 87] ; cf. Restat 2d of Torts, § 913A [future pecuniary losses must be reduced to present value].) The view of the court in Fox was that damages for lost value of society, comfort, care, protection and companionship must be monetarily quantified, and thus become pecuniary and subject to reduction to present value. However, the California Supreme Court subsequently held that with regard to future pain and suffering, the amount that the jury is to award should already encompass the idea of today's dollars for tomorrow's loss (See Salgado v. County of L.A. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 629, 646-647 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 46, 967 P.2d 585]), so there is no further reduction to present value. (See CACI No. 3904, Present Cash Value.) While it seems reasonable that Salgado should apply to wrongful death actions, no court has expressly so held. Include the last sentence only if both future economic and noneconomic damages are sought. Note that if only economic damages are to be reduced to present value, the jury must find separate amounts for economic and noneconomic damages. (See CACI No. VF-3906, Damages for Wrongful Death (Parents'

Recovery for Death of a Minor Child).)

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 377.60 provides:

A cause of action for the death of a person caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another may be asserted by any of the following persons or by the decedent's personal representative on their behalf:

(a) The decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or, if there is no surviving issue of the decedent, the persons, including the surviving spouse or domestic partner, who would be entitled to the property of the decedent by intestate succession.

(b) Whether or not qualified under subdivision (a), if they were dependent on the decedent, the putative spouse, children of the putative spouse, stepchildren, or parents. As used in this subdivision, 'putative spouse' means the surviving spouse of a void or voidable marriage who is found by the court to have believed in good faith that the marriage to the decedent was valid.

(c) A minor, whether or not qualified under subdivision (a) or (b), if, at the time of the decedent's death, the minor resided for the previous 180 days in the decedent's household and was dependent on the decedent for one-half or more of the minor's support.

(d) This section applies to any cause of action arising on or after January 1, 1993.

(e) The addition of this section by Chapter 178 of the Statutes of 1992 was not intended to adversely affect the standing of any party having standing under prior law, and the standing of parties governed by that version of this section as added by Chapter 178 of the Statutes of 1992 shall be the same as specified herein as amended by Chapter 563 of the Statutes of 1996.

(f) For the purpose of this section, "domestic partner" has the meaning provided in Section 297 of the Family Code.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 377.61 provides: "In an action under this article, damages may be awarded that, under all the circumstances of the case, may be just, but may not include damages recoverable under Section 377.34. The court shall determine the respective rights in an award of the persons entitled to assert the cause of action."

- "A cause of action for wrongful death is purely statutory in nature, and therefore 'exists only so far and in favor of such person as the legislative power may declare.'" (Barrett v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1176, 1184 [272 Cal.Rptr. 304] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Where the deceased was a minor child, recovery is based on the present value of reasonably probable future services and contributions, deducting the probable cost of rearing the child." (6 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Torts, § 1695.)

- "There is authority in such cases for deducting from the loss factors--including the pecuniary loss a parent suffers by being deprived of the comfort, protection and society of a child--the prospective cost to the parent of the child's support and education. [P] Although neither the loss factors nor such offsets are readily measurable in a particular case--nor need they be measured in precise terms of dollars and cents--in the case at bench the jury had before it for consideration a court order subject to mathematical computation which required plaintiff to pay support for his child in the sum of $125 monthly. The jury was entitled and required to take into consideration the prospective cost to plaintiff of the boy's maintenance and rearing, and they may well have offset their reasonable appraisal of such costs, under the general verdict, against any pecuniary loss which they found that plaintiff suffered." (Fields v. Riley (1969) 1 Cal.App.3d 308, 315 [81 Cal.Rptr. 671] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "There are three distinct public policy considerations involved in the legislative creation of a cause of action for wrongful death: (1) compensation for survivors, (2) deterrence of conduct and (3) limitation, or lack thereof, upon the damages recoverable." (Barrett, supra, 222 Cal.App.3d at p. 1185 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "We therefore conclude, on this basis as well, that 'wrongful act' as used in section 377 means any kind of tortious act, including the tortious act of placing defective products into the stream of commerce." (Barrett, supra, 222 Cal.App.3d at p. 1191 .)

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3924

CACI 3924 No Punitive Damages

You must not include in your award any damages to punish or make an example of [name of defendant]. Such damages would be punitive damages, and they cannot be a part of your verdict. You must award only the damages that fairly compensate [name of plaintiff] for [his/her/its] loss.

New September 2003

Do not use this instruction if punitive damages are being sought in the phase of the trial in which these instructions are given.

- "Punitive damages are not permitted in wrongful death actions." (Cortez v. Macias (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 640, 657 [167 Cal.Rptr. 905] .)

- "The punitive damages theory cannot be predicated on the breach of contract cause of action without an underlying tort." (Palmer v. Ted Stevens Honda, Inc. (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 530, 536 [238 Cal.Rptr. 363] , internal citations omitted.)

- "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242] , internal citations omitted.)

- Government Code section 818 provides: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a public entity is not liable for damages awarded under Section 3294 of the Civil Code or other damages imposed primarily for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant."

CACI 3925 Arguments of Counsel Not Evidence of Damages

The arguments of the attorneys are not evidence of damages. Your award must be based on your reasoned judgment applied to the testimony of the witnesses and the other evidence that has been admitted during trial.

New September 2003

If a pleading is admitted into evidence, the following may be added: "The amount of damages that [name of plaintiff] has claimed in [his/her] written pleadings is not evidence of [name of plaintiff]'s damages."

- "[T]he trial court can and should instruct the jury that the argument of counsel as to the amount of damages claimed by the plaintiff is not evidence and that its duty is only to award such damages as will reasonably compensate the plaintiff for his pain and suffering." (Beagle v. Vasold (1966) 65 Cal.2d 166, 180-181 [53 Cal.Rptr. 129, 417 P.2d 673] , internal citation omitted.)

- Courts have held that "attempts to suggest matters of an evidentiary nature to a jury other than by the legitimate introduction into evidence is misconduct whether by questions on cross-examination, argument or other means." (Smith v. Covell (1980) 100 Cal.App.3d 947, 960 [161 Cal.Rptr. 377] .)

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3926

CACI 3926 Settlement Deduction

You have heard evidence that [name of plaintiff] has settled [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant]. Your award of damages to [name of plaintiff] should be made without considering any amount that [he/she/it] may have received under this settlement. After you have returned your verdict, I will make the proper deduction from your award of damages.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 877 provides, in pertinent part: "Where a release, dismissal with or without prejudice, or a covenant not to sue or not to enforce judgment is given in good faith before verdict or judgment to one or more of a number of tortfeasors claimed to be liable for the same tort ... it shall have the following effect: ... It shall not discharge any other such party from liability unless its terms so provide, but it shall reduce the claims against the others in the amount stipulated by the release, the dismissal or the covenant, or in the amount of the consideration paid for it whichever is the greater."

- "When the plaintiff stipulates to the fact and amount of settlement before the court, an approved procedure is for the court to reduce the verdict award by the amount paid in settlement before entering judgment on the verdict." 5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3929

CACI 3929 Subsequent Medical Treatment or Aid

If you decide that [name of defendant] is legally responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, [he/she/it] is also responsible for any additional harm resulting from the acts of others in providing medical treatment or other aid that [name of plaintiff]'s injury reasonably required, even if those acts were negligently performed.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, October 2008

Directions for Use

Under Proposition 51 (Civ. Code § 1431.2), the original tortfeasor is entitled to have the jury allocate fault to any subsequent tortfeasors with regard to the subsequent aggravation of the injury. Each is responsible only for a comparative share of the noneconomic damages attributable to the aggravated injury. (Henry v. Superior Court (2008) 160 Cal.App.4th 440, 455 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 808] ; see also Marina Emergency Medical Group v. Superior Court (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 435 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 866] .)

Sources and Authority

• "It has long been the rule that a tortfeasor responsible for the original accident is also liable for injuries or death occurring during the course of medical treatment to treat injuries suffered in that accident. In Ash v. Mortensen (1944) 24 Cal.2d 654 [150 P.2d 876] , the Supreme Court stated: 'It is settled that where one who has suffered personal injuries by reason of the tortious act of another exercises due care in securing the services of a doctor and his injuries are aggravated by the negligence of such doctor, the law regards the act of the original wrongdoer as a proximate cause of the damages flowing from the subsequent negligent medical treatment and holds him liable therefor.' " (Anaya v.

■ "Obviously, if the original tortfeasor is liable for injuries or death suffered during the course of the treatment of injuries suffered in the accident, the original tortfeasor is liable for injuries or death suffered during transportation of the victim to a medical facility for treatment of the injuries resulting from the accident." (Anaya, supra, 78 Cal.App.4th at p. 975 .)

■ "To the extent damages for [plaintiff]'s injured shoulder can in fact be divided by causation into distinct component parts--the original injury that resulted from the fall at the [defendants]' property and the aggravation of that injury caused by [plaintiff]'s negligent treatment by ... physicians--liability for each indivisible component part should be considered separately. The [defendants], if they were negligent, are solely responsible for the initial injury; liability for the indivisible enhanced or aggravated injury, however, is properly apportioned between the [defendants] and the ... physicians in accordance with the rules of comparative fault and section 1431.2." (Henry, supra, 160 Cal.App.4th at p. 455 .)

■ "While it is true the original tortfeasor is liable for additional harm (even death) resulting from the negligent care and treatment of the original injury by physicians and hospitals, such liability is not limited to negligently caused additional harm or that caused by malpractice." (Hastie v. Handeland (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 599, 604-605 [79 Cal.Rptr. 268] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ This rule applies to the first doctor who treats a patient who subsequently is treated by other doctors. (Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 1596, 1607-1608 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 62] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts section 457, states: "If the negligent actor is liable for another's bodily injury, he is also subject to liability for any additional bodily harm resulting from normal efforts of third persons in rendering aid which the other's injury reasonably requires, irrespective of whether such acts are done in a proper or a negligent manner."

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3930

CACI 3930 Mitigation of Damages (Personal Injury)

If you decide [name of defendant] is responsible for the original harm, [name of plaintiff] is not entitled to recover damages for harm that [name of defendant] proves [name of plaintiff] could have avoided with reasonable efforts or expenditures.

You should consider the reasonableness of [name of plaintiff]'s efforts in light of the circumstances facing [him/her] at the time, including [his/her] ability to make the efforts or expenditures without undue risk or hardship.

If [name of plaintiff] made reasonable efforts to avoid harm, then your award should include reasonable amounts that [he/she] spent for this purpose.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "It has been the policy of the courts to promote the mitigation of damages. The doctrine applies in tort, wilful as well as negligent. A plaintiff cannot be compensated for damages which he could have avoided by reasonable effort or expenditures." (Green v. Smith (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 392, 396 [67 Cal.Rptr. 796] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The frequent statement of the principle in the terms of a 'duty' imposed on the injured party has been criticized on the theory that a breach of the 'duty' does not give rise to a correlative right of action. It is perhaps more accurate to say that the wrongdoer is not required to compensate the injured party for damages which are avoidable by reasonable effort on the latter's part." (Green, supra, 261 Cal.App.2d at

p. 396 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The reasonableness of the efforts of the injured party must be judged in the light of the situation confronting him at the time the loss was threatened and not by the judgment of hindsight. The fact that reasonable measures other than the one taken would have avoided damage is not, in and of itself, proof of the fact that the one taken, though unsuccessful, was unreasonable. 'If a choice of two reasonable courses presents itself, the person whose wrong forced the choice cannot complain that one rather than the other is chosen.' The standard by which the reasonableness of the injured party's efforts is to be measured is not as high as the standard required in other areas of law. It is sufficient if he acts reasonably and with due diligence, in good faith." (Green, supra, 261 Cal.App.2d at pp. 396-397 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The correct rule is that an injured person must use reasonable diligence in caring for his injuries. What is reasonable diligence depends upon all the facts and circumstances of each case. There is no hard and fast rule that the injured person must seek medical care of a particular type. Self-care may be reasonable under the circumstances, and the jury should be so instructed where that factor is relevant." (Christiansen v. Hollings (1941) 44 Cal.App.2d 332, 346 [112 P.2d 723] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The rule of mitigation of damages has no application where its effect would be to require the innocent party to sacrifice and surrender important and valuable rights.' " (Valle de Oro Bank v. Gamboa (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 1686, 1691 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 329] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The duty to minimize damages does not require an injured person to do what is unreasonable or impracticable, and, consequently, when expenditures are necessary for minimization of damages, the duty does not run to a person who is financially unable to make such expenditures." (Valencia v. Shell Oil Co. (1944) 23 Cal.2d 840, 846 [147 P.2d 558] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Contributory negligence was closely allied and easily confused with the rule of mitigation of damages, on which the jury was also instructed. Both doctrines involved the plaintiff's duty to act reasonably. Contributory negligence was concerned with the plaintiff's negligence before being injured, while the mitigation rule was concerned with a lack of due care after the injury. The effect of contributory negligence was to bar all recovery by the plaintiff. In contrast, a plaintiff's failure to mitigate barred recovery of only the portion of damages which could have been avoided by ordinary care after the injury." (LeMons v. Regents of University of California (1978) 21 Cal.3d 869, 874-875 [148 Cal.Rptr. 355, 582 P.2d 946] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]hile the burden of proving the extent of injury ... actually incurred as a result of a defendant's tortious conduct lies with the plaintiff, the burden of proving the plaintiff failed to act reasonably in limiting his or her consequential damages--that is, failed to mitigate damages--is on the defendant" (Jackson v. Yarbray (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 75, 97 [101 Cal.Rptr.3d 303] .)

■ "One who contributes to damage cannot escape liability because the proportionate contribution may not be accurately measured. It is incumbent upon the party alleging injury to prove the amount of damages. Respondent sustained that burden in this case. If the damages proven could be reduced proportionately, that burden rested upon appellant." (Oakland v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 444, 450 [118 P.2d 328] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is true that plaintiff is in duty bound to minimize his damage in any way that he reasonably can, and if he negligently refuses to do so he cannot recover for that which he might have prevented. It is for appellant to establish that the steps taken by plaintiff to so minimize his loss or damage falls short of the obligation so fixed. In other words, the burden is on defendant to establish matters asserted by him in mitigation or reduction of the amount of plaintiff's damage, and defendant here has not met that burden." (McNary v. Hanley (1933) 131 Cal.App. 188, 190 [20 P.2d 966] .)

The standard by which the reasonableness of the injured party's efforts is to be measured is not as high as the standard required in other areas of law. It is sufficient if he acts reasonably and with due diligence, in good faith." (Green, supra, 261 Cal.App.2d at pp. 396-397 , internal citations omitted.)

- "A plaintiff who suffers damage as a result of either a breach of contract or a tort has a duty to take reasonable steps to mitigate those damages and will not be able to recover for any losses which could have been thus avoided. Here the jury determined that 25 percent of the 'property damage to the house' could have been avoided. That damage was measured by the cost of repair, i.e., $130,000. The court was obligated to give effect to the jury's finding and reduce this aspect of the award to $97,500." (Shaffer v. Debbas (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 33, 41 [21 Cal.Rptr.2d 110] , internal citations omitted.)

- "A plaintiff has a duty to mitigate damages and cannot recover losses it could have avoided through reasonable efforts. Thrifty-Tel's only response is that mitigation does not 'require a complex series of doubtful acts and expenditures.' 'Picking up the telephone to reach out and touch the Bezeneks or sending them a letter was complex, doubtful, or expensive? Based on Myron Bezenek's unchallenged testimony, we must presume that simple expedient would have averted the second hacking episode. Accordingly, Thrifty-Tel is not entitled to recover damages for the February 1992 event." (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1568-1569 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Contributory negligence was closely allied and easily confused with the rule of mitigation of damages, on which the jury was also instructed. Both doctrines involved the plaintiff's duty to act reasonably. Contributory negligence was concerned with the plaintiff's negligence before being injured, while the mitigation rule was concerned with a lack of due care after the injury. The effect of contributory negligence was to bar all recovery by the plaintiff. In contrast, a plaintiff's failure to mitigate barred recovery of only the portion of damages which could have been avoided by ordinary care after the injury." (LeMons v. Regents of University of California (1978) 21 Cal.3d 869, 874-875 [148 Cal.Rptr. 355, 582 P.2d 946] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The rule of [mitigation of damages] comes into play after a legal wrong has occurred, but while some damages may still be averted ... ' " (Pool v. City of Oakland (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1051, 1066 [232 Cal.Rptr. 528, 728 P.2d 1163] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Generally, '[a] person injured by the wrongful act of another is bound ... to exercise reasonable care and diligence to avoid loss or minimize the resulting damages and cannot recover for losses which might have been prevented by reasonable efforts and expenditures on his part.' The burden of proving facts in mitigation of damages rests upon the defendant." (Hunter v. Croysdill (1959) 169 Cal.App.2d 307, 318 [337 P.2d 174] , internal citations omitted.)

- "One who contributes to damage cannot escape liability because the proportionate contribution may not be accurately measured. It is incumbent upon the party alleging injury to prove the amount of damages. Respondent sustained that burden in this case. If the damages proven could be reduced proportionately, that burden rested upon appellant." (Oakland v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 444, 450 [118 P.2d 328] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts section 918 provides:

(1) Except as stated in Subsection (2), one injured by the tort of another is not entitled to recover damages for any harm that he could have avoided by the use of reasonable effort or expenditure after the commission of the tort.

(2) One is not prevented from recovering damages for a particular harm resulting from a tort if the tortfeasor intended the harm or was aware of it and was recklessly disregarding of it, unless the injured person with knowledge of the danger of the harm intentionally or heedlessly failed to protect his own interests.

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3932

CACI 3932 Life Expectancy

If you decide [name of plaintiff] has suffered damages that will continue for the rest of [his/her] life, you must determine how long [he/she] will probably live. According to [insert source of information], a [insert number]-year-old [male/female] is expected to live another [insert number] years. This is the average life expectancy. Some people live longer and others die sooner.

This published information is evidence of how long a person is likely to live but is not conclusive. In deciding a person's life expectancy, you should also consider, among other factors, that person's health, habits, activities, lifestyle, and occupation.

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, February 2007

Directions for Use

Use of the life tables in Vital Statistics of the United States, published by the National Center for Health Statistics, is recommended. (See Life Expectancy Table--Male and Life Expectancy Table--Female, following the Damages series.) The first column shows the age interval between the two exact ages indicated. For example, 50-51 means the one-year interval between the fiftieth and fifty-first birthdays.

- "The life expectancy of the deceased is a question of fact for the jury to decide, considering all relevant factors including the deceased's health, lifestyle and occupation. Life expectancy figures from mortality tables are admissible but are not conclusive. Here the jury was correctly told the figure given was not conclusive evidence of Charlene's life expectancy. It was merely 'a factor which you may consider,' along with the evidence of Charlene's health, habits, occupation and activities." (Allen v. Toledo (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 415, 424 [167 Cal.Rptr. 270] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Mortality tables are admissible to assist the jury but they are not indispensable. It has been held, for example, that, absent mortality tables, the trier of fact may still approximate the life expectancy of a statutory beneficiary who appeared in court." (*Francis v. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Life Expectancy Tables: The life expectancy tables are very good to use during your closing argument when you have future pain, suffering, and disability and/or if your client needs permanent medical care. You can always take the number of years of plaintiff's life expectancy, an amount of compensation per year for the harm, and get a figure for non-economic damages. In some cases, this approach has been successful. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Standard Tables: If either side wants to argue that a different life expectancy should be used than the one shown in standard tables, it will probably be necessary to introduce specific evidence and possibly expert testimony on this issue. Most jurors will just accept the standard tables. By Ronald Oster

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3940

CACI 3940 Punitive Damages--Individual Defendant--Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

- 1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
- 2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;
- 3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/it];
- 4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
- 5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to apply to individual persons only. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against corporate defendants, use CACI No. 3943, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Trial Not Bifurcated, or CACI No. 3945, Punitive Damages --Entity Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated. When plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against both an individual person and a corporate defendant, use CACI No. 3947, Punitive Damages--Individual and Entity Defendants--Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63] .) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176 , citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582

P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177, citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given where an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178-1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353-354 [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940] .) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] .)

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422 .) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525] , internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7 .)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.

(b) An employer shall not be liable for damages pursuant to subdivision (a), based upon acts of an employee of the employer, unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts." (Neal, supra, 21 Cal.3d at p. 928, fn. 13 .)

■ "Punitive damages are to be assessed in an amount which, depending upon the defendant's financial worth and other factors, will deter him and others from committing similar misdeeds. Because compensatory damages are designed to make the plaintiff 'whole,' punitive damages are a 'windfall' form of recovery." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 712 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It follows that the wealthier the wrongdoing defendant, the larger the award of exemplary damages need be in order to accomplish the statutory objective." (Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal.3d 43, 65 [118 Cal.Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608] .)

■ " 'A plaintiff, upon establishing his case, is always entitled of right to compensatory damages. But even after establishing a case where punitive damages are permissible, he is never entitled to them. The granting or withholding of the award of punitive damages is wholly within the control of the jury, and may not legally be influenced by any direction of the court that in any case a plaintiff is entitled to them. Upon the clearest proof of malice in fact, it is still the exclusive province of the jury to say whether or not punitive damages shall be awarded. A plaintiff is entitled to such damages only after the jury, in the exercise of its untrammelled discretion, has made the award.' " (Brewer v. Second Baptist Church of Los Angeles (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 801 [197 P.2d 713] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.' " (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 119 [284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e are afforded guidance by certain established principles, all of which are grounded in the purpose and function of punitive damages. One factor is the particular nature of the defendant's acts in light of the whole record; clearly, different acts may be of varying degrees of reprehensibility, and the more reprehensible the act, the greater the appropriate punishment, assuming all other factors are equal. Another relevant yardstick is the amount of compensatory damages awarded; in general, even an act of considerable reprehensibility will not be seen to justify a proportionally high amount of punitive damages if the actual harm suffered thereby is small. Also to be considered is the wealth of the particular defendant; obviously, the function of deterrence will not be served if the wealth of the defendant allows him to absorb the award with little or no discomfort. By the same token, of course, the function of punitive damages is not served by an award which, in light of the defendant's wealth and the gravity of the particular act, exceeds the level necessary to properly punish and deter." (Neal, supra, 21 Cal.3d at p. 928 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 353 .)

■ "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible--although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 355 .)

■ "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775] , internal citation omitted.)

■ " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. ... [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. ... While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424-425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The decision to award punitive damages is exclusively the function of the trier of fact. So too is the amount of any punitive damage award. The relevant considerations are the nature of the defendant's conduct, the defendant's wealth, and the plaintiff's actual damages." (Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1602 [260 Cal.Rptr. 305] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 427 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he purpose of punitive damages is not served by financially destroying a defendant. The purpose is to deter, not to destroy." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112 .)

■ "[A] punitive damages award is excessive if it is disproportionate to the defendant's ability to pay." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It has been recognized that punitive damages awards generally are not permitted to exceed 10 percent of the defendant's net worth." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1166 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510] .)

■ "In light of our discussion, we conclude that even where, as here, punitive but not compensatory damages are available to the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to an instruction that punitive damages must bear a reasonable relation to the injury, harm, or damage actually suffered by the plaintiff and proved at trial. Consequently, the trial court erred in failing to so instruct the jury." (Gagnon, supra, 211 Cal.App.3d at p. 1605 .)

■ "Malice, for purposes of awarding exemplary damages, includes 'despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.' To establish conscious disregard, the plaintiff must show 'that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his conduct, and that he wilfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences.' " (Hoch v. Allied-Signal, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 615] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

CACI 3941 Punitive Damages--Individual Defendant--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. At this time, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. The amount of punitive damages, if any, will be decided later.

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, December 2005

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

■ Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant. ...

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ Civil Code section 3295(d) provides: "The court shall, on application of any defendant, preclude the admission of evidence of that defendant's profits or financial condition until after the trier of fact returns a verdict for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finds that a defendant is guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud in accordance with Section 3294. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be admissible only as to the defendant or defendants found to be liable to the plaintiff and to be guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be presented to the same trier of fact that found for the plaintiff and found one or more defendants guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud."

■ "[Section 3295(d)] affects the order of proof at trial, precluding the admission of evidence of defendants' financial condition until after the jury has returned a verdict for plaintiffs awarding actual damages and found that one or more defendants were guilty of 'oppression, fraud or malice,' in accordance with Civil Code section 3294." (City of El Monte v. Superior Court (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 272, 274-275 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 490] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Evidence of the defendant's financial condition is a prerequisite to an award of punitive damages. In order to protect defendants from the premature disclosure of their financial position when punitive damages are sought, the Legislature enacted Civil Code section 3295." (City of El Monte, supra, 29 Cal.App.4th at p. 276 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[C]ourts have held it is reversible error to try the punitive damages issue to a new jury after the jury which found liability has been excused." (Rivera v. Sassoon (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1045, 1048 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 144] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Malice, for purposes of awarding exemplary damages, includes 'despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.' To establish conscious disregard, the plaintiff must show 'that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his conduct, and that he wilfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences.' " (Hoch v. Allied-Signal, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 615] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Seeking Punitive Damages: In the absence of fraud, malice is a common way for seeking punitive damages, specifically conduct done "with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights" of another. Note also that the awarding of punitive damages requires a higher standard of proof--clear and convincing evidence--but some jurors will ignore that standard. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3942

CACI 3942 Punitive Damages--Individual Defendant--Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase)

You must now decide the amount, if any, that you should award [name of plaintiff] in punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

- 1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
- 2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;
- 3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/it];
- 4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
- 5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, October 2004, June 2006, April 2007, August 2007, October 2008

Directions for Use

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63] .) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176 , citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177 , citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses]). The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178-1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract]).

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, ___ [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] .)

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422 .) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525] , internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7 .)

- Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part: "In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant."

- Civil Code section 3295(d) provides: "The court shall, on application of any defendant, preclude the admission of evidence of that defendant's profits or financial condition until after the trier of fact returns a verdict for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finds that a defendant is guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud in accordance with Section 3294. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be admissible only as to the defendant or defendants found to be liable to the plaintiff and to be guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be presented to the same trier of fact that found for the plaintiff and found one or more defendants guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud."

- "Punitive damages are to be assessed in an amount which, depending upon the defendant's financial worth and other factors, will deter him and others from committing similar misdeeds. Because compensatory damages are designed to make the plaintiff 'whole,' punitive damages are a 'windfall' form of recovery." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 712 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It follows that the wealthier the wrongdoing defendant, the larger the award of exemplary damages need be in order to accomplish the statutory objective." (Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal.3d 43, 65 [118 Cal.Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608] .)

■ "'A plaintiff, upon establishing his case, is always entitled of right to compensatory damages. But even after establishing a case where punitive damages are permissible, he is never entitled to them. The granting or withholding of the award of punitive damages is wholly within the control of the jury, and may not legally be influenced by any direction of the court that in any case a plaintiff is entitled to them. Upon the clearest proof of malice in fact, it is still the exclusive province of the jury to say whether or not punitive damages shall be awarded. A plaintiff is entitled to such damages only after the jury, in the exercise of its untrammelled discretion, has made the award.'" (Brewer v. Second Baptist Church of Los Angeles (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 801 [197 P.2d 713] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.'" (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 119 [284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e are afforded guidance by certain established principles, all of which are grounded in the purpose and function of punitive damages. One factor is the particular nature of the defendant's acts in light of the whole record; clearly, different acts may be of varying degrees of reprehensibility, and the more reprehensible the act, the greater the appropriate punishment, assuming all other factors are equal. Another relevant yardstick is the amount of compensatory damages awarded; in general, even an act of considerable reprehensibility will not be seen to justify a proportionally high amount of punitive damages if the actual harm suffered thereby is small. Also to be considered is the wealth of the particular defendant; obviously, the function of deterrence will not be served if the wealth of the defendant allows him to absorb the award with little or no discomfort. By the same token, of course, the function of punitive damages is not served by an award which, in light of the defendant's wealth and the gravity of the particular act, exceeds the level necessary to properly punish and deter." (Neal, supra, 21 Cal.3d at p. 928 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .)

■ "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible--although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p.

■ "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775] , internal citation omitted.)

■ " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. ... [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. ... While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424-425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The decision to award punitive damages is exclusively the function of the trier of fact. So too is the amount of any punitive damage award. The relevant considerations are the nature of the defendant's conduct, the defendant's wealth, and the plaintiff's actual damages." (Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1602 [260 Cal.Rptr. 305] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 427 , internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he purpose of punitive damages is not served by financially destroying a defendant. The purpose is to deter, not to destroy." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112 .)
- "[A] punitive damages award is excessive if it is disproportionate to the defendant's ability to pay." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112 , internal citations omitted.)
- "It has been recognized that punitive damages awards generally are not permitted to exceed 10 percent of the defendant's net worth." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1166 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510] .)
- "In light of our discussion, we conclude that even where, as here, punitive but not compensatory damages are available to the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to an instruction that punitive damages must bear a reasonable relation to the injury, harm, or damage actually suffered by the plaintiff and proved at trial. Consequently, the trial court erred in failing to so instruct the jury." (Gagnon, supra, 211 Cal.App.3d at p. 1605 .)
- "We conclude that the rule ... that an award of exemplary damages must be accompanied by an award of compensatory damages [or its equivalent] is still sound. That rule cannot be deemed satisfied where the jury has made an express determination not to award compensatory damages." (*Cheung v. CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

CACI 3943 Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages against [name of defendant] for [name of employee/agent]'s conduct. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages against [name of defendant] for [name of employee/agent]'s conduct only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of employee/agent] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

"Malice" means that [name of employee/agent] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of employee/agent] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

[Name of plaintiff] must also prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That [name of employee/agent] was an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant], who was acting on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]
2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of employee/agent] and employed [him/her] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]
3. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] authorized [name of employee/agent]'s conduct; [or]]
4. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] knew of [name of employee/agent]'s wrongful conduct and adopted or approved the conduct after it occurred.]

An employee is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her corporate decisionmaking such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;
3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/it];
4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking to hold only an employer or principal liable for punitive damages based on the conduct of a specific employee or agent. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3947, Punitive Damages--Individual and Entity Defendants--Trial Not Bifurcated. When punitive damages are sought against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, or managing agents, use CACI No. 3945, Punitive Damages --Entity Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63] .) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176 , citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177 , citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178-1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, ___ [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] .)

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422 .) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525] , internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7 .)

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.

(b) An employer shall not be liable for damages pursuant to subdivision (a), based upon acts of an employee of the employer, unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258] .)

■ "Subdivision (b) is not a model of clarity, but in light of California's history of employer liability for punitive damages and of the Legislature's reasons for enacting subdivision (b), we have no doubt that it does no more than codify and refine existing law. Subdivision (b) thus authorizes the imposition of punitive damages on an employer in three situations: (1) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer with advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, (2) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct, or (3) when the employer was itself guilty of the oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1151 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510] .)

■ "'California has traditionally allowed punitive damages to be assessed against an employer (or principal) for the acts of an employee (or agent) only where the circumstances indicate that the employer himself was guilty of fraud, oppression, or malice. Thus, even before section 3294, subdivision (b) was added to the Civil Code in 1980, the courts required evidence that the employer authorized or ratified a malicious act, personally committed such an act, or wrongfully hired or retained an unfit employee.' The 'additional' burden on a plaintiff seeking punitive damages from an employer is to show not only that an employee acted with oppression, fraud or malice, but that the employer engaged in conduct defined in subdivision (b).'" (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1154 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b) does not authorize an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employee's wrongful conduct. It authorizes an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employer's own wrongful conduct. Liability under subdivision (b) is vicarious only to the extent that the employer is liable for the actions of its officer, director or managing agent in hiring or controlling the offending employee, in ratifying the offense or in acting with oppression, fraud or malice. It is not vicarious in the sense that the employer is liable for the wrongful conduct of the offending employee." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1154-1155 .)

■ "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "'[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. ... [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. ... While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424-425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .)

■ "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible--although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *16] .)

■ "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[P]unitive damages are not assessed against employers on a pure respondeat superior basis. Some evidence of fault by the employer itself is also required." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 724, fn. 11 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] .)

■ "Subdivision (b) ... governs awards of punitive damages against employers, and permits an award for the conduct described there without an additional finding that the employer engaged in oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1137 .)

■ "Section 3294 is no longer silent on who may be responsible for imputing punitive damages to a corporate employer. For corporate punitive damages liability, section 3294, subdivision (b), requires that the wrongful act giving rise to the exemplary damages be committed by an 'officer, director, or managing agent.' " (White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 563, 572 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 19, 981 P.2d 944] .)

■ "[I]n performing, ratifying, or approving the malicious conduct, the agent must be acting as the organization's representative, not in some other capacity." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 723 .)

■ The concept of "managing agent" "assumes that such individual was acting in a corporate or employment capacity when the conduct giving rise to the punitive damages claim against the employer occurred." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 723 .)

■ "No purpose would be served by punishing the employer for an employee's conduct that is wholly unrelated to its business or to the employee's duties therein." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at pp. 723-724 .)

■ " 'The determination whether employees act in a managerial capacity [i.e., are managing agents] does not necessarily hinge on their "level" in the corporate hierarchy. Rather, the critical inquiry is the degree of discretion the employees possess in making decisions that will ultimately determine corporate policy.' " (Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co., Inc. (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 397, 421 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 457] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e conclude the Legislature intended the term 'managing agent' to include only those corporate employees who exercise substantial independent authority and judgment in their corporate decisionmaking so that their decisions ultimately determine corporate policy. The scope of a corporate employee's discretion and authority under our test is therefore a question of fact for decision on a case-by-case basis." (White, supra, 21 Cal.4th at pp. 566-567 .)

■ "In order to demonstrate that an employee is a true managing agent under section 3294, subdivision (b), a plaintiff seeking punitive damages would have to show that the employee exercised substantial discretionary authority over significant aspects of a corporation's business." (White, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p. 577 .)

■ " '[C]orporate policy' is the general principles which guide a corporation, or rules intended to be followed consistently over time in corporate operations. A 'managing agent' is one with substantial authority over decisions that set these general principles and rules." (Cruz v. Homebase (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 160, 167-168 [99 Cal.Rptr.2d 435] .)

■ " '[R]atification' is the '[c]onfirmation and acceptance of a previous act.' A corporation cannot confirm and accept that which it does not actually know about." (Cruz, supra, 83 Cal.App.4th at p. 168 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "For purposes of determining an employer's liability for punitive damages, ratification generally occurs where, under the particular circumstances, the employer demonstrates an intent to adopt or approve oppressive, fraudulent, or malicious behavior by an employee in the performance of his job duties." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 726 .)

■ "Corporate ratification in the punitive damages context requires actual knowledge of the conduct and its outrageous nature." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 726 .)

■ "The high court in TXO [TXO Production Corp., supra] and BMW [BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559 [116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]] has refined the disparity analysis to take into account the potential loss to plaintiffs, as where a scheme worthy of punitive damages does not fully succeed. In such cases, the proper ratio would be the ratio of punitive damages to the potential harm to plaintiff." (Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1162, fn. 15 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726] , original italics.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Corporate Liability for Punitive Damages/Use State Farm Guideposts: This complicated instruction combines several legal concepts. Note that defendants almost always request a bifurcated trial on punitive damages (so that financial information will not be introduced unless and until the jury finds fraud, malice, or oppression).

In most commercial cases, the liability of a corporation is predicated on the fact that the conduct in question was committed by an officer, director, or managing agent, or alternatively, that the conduct was ratified or approved by the corporation after it occurred. Plaintiff's counsel must be careful to introduce evidence on these points to pursue a punitive claim (e.g., evidence that the corporation accepted the benefits of the conduct or refused to reverse the decision would support ratification).

In Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1020 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 736] , the court looked to State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] , stating: "Further explicating guidelines for due process proportionality, the [Campbell] court noted facts and circumstances may call for a ratio either exceeding or falling below the norm. It suggested a ratio perhaps only equal to compensatory damages might reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee when compensatory damages are substantial. Additionally observing the wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award, the Campbell court cautioned the courts of the need to ensure that the measure of punishment is both reasonable and proportionate to the amount of harm to the plaintiff and to the general damages recovered." CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

CACI 3944 Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages against [name of defendant] for [name of employee/agent]'s conduct. At this time, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of employee/agent] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. The amount of punitive damages, if any, will be decided later.

"Malice" means that [name of employee/agent] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of employee/agent] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

[Name of plaintiff] must also prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

- 1. [That [name of employee/agent] was an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] who was acting on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]

2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of employee/agent] and employed [him/her] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]

3. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] authorized [name of employee/agent]'s conduct; [or]]

4. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] knew of [name of employee/agent]'s wrongful conduct and adopted or approved the conduct after it occurred.]

An employee is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her corporate decision making such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

CACI No. 3942, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase) may be used for the second phase of a bifurcated trial.

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking to hold only an employer or principal liable for punitive damages based on the conduct of a specific employee or agent. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3948, Punitive Damages--Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase). When punitive damages are sought against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, and managing agents, use CACI No. 3946, Punitive Damages --Entity Defendant-- Bifurcated Trial (First Phase).

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

■ Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.

(b) An employer shall not be liable for damages pursuant to subdivision (a), based upon acts of an employee of the employer, unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258] .)

■ Civil Code section 3295(d) provides: "The court shall, on application of any defendant, preclude the admission of evidence of that defendant's profits or financial condition until after the trier of fact returns a verdict for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finds that a defendant is guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud in accordance with Section 3294. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be admissible only as to the defendant or defendants found to be liable to the plaintiff and to be guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be presented to the same trier of fact that found for the plaintiff and found one or more defendants guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud."

■ "[Section 3295(d)] affects the order of proof at trial, precluding the admission of evidence of defendants' financial condition until after the jury has returned a verdict for plaintiffs awarding actual damages and found that one or more defendants were guilty of 'oppression, fraud or malice,' in accordance with Civil Code section 3294." ■ "Malice, for purposes of awarding exemplary damages, includes 'despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.' " (Hoch v. Allied-Signal, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 615] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. The additional component of 'despicable conduct' must be found." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 725 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] , internal citations omitted.)

Wohl Shoe Co., Inc.* (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 397, 421 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 457] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e conclude the Legislature intended the term 'managing agent' to include only those corporate employees who exercise substantial independent authority and judgment in their corporate decisionmaking so that their decisions ultimately determine corporate policy. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Corporate Liability for Punitive Damages: In most business cases, the liability of a corporation for punitive damages is predicated on the fact that the conduct in question was committed by an officer, director, or managing agent, or alternatively, that the conduct was ratified or approved by the corporation after it occurred. Plaintiff's counsel must be careful to introduce evidence on these points to preserve a punitive claim (e.g., evidence that the corporation accepted the benefits of the conduct or refused to reverse the decision would support ratification). By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3945

CACI 3945 Punitive Damages--Entity Defendant--Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages against [name of defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, [name of plaintiff] must prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

- 1. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was committed by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant], who acted on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]
- 2. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant]; [or]]
- 3. [That one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant] knew of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

An employee is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her corporate decisionmaking such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;
3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/it];
4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, or managing agents. When the plaintiff seeks to hold an employer or principal liable for the conduct of a specific employee or agent, use CACI No. 3943, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Trial Not Bifurcated. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3947, Punitive Damages--Individual and Entity Defendants--Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63] .) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176 , citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177 , citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178-1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, ___ [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] .)

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422.) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525] .) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7 .)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.

(b) An employer shall not be liable for damages pursuant to subdivision (a), based upon acts of an employee of the employer, unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

- "Section 3294 is no longer silent on who may be responsible for imputing punitive damages to a corporate employer. For corporate punitive damages liability, section 3294, subdivision (b), requires that the wrongful act giving rise to the exemplary damages be committed by an 'officer, director, or managing agent.' " (White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 563, 572 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 19, 981 P.2d 944] .)

■ "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258] .)

■ "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. ... [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. ... While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424-425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .)

■ "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible--although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *16] .)

■ "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[I]n performing, ratifying, or approving the malicious conduct, the agent must be acting as the organization's representative, not in some other capacity." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 723 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] .)

■ "[T]he concept [of managing agent] assumes that such individual was acting in a corporate or employment capacity when the conduct giving rise to the punitive damages claim against the employer occurred." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 723 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Corporate Liability for Punitive Damages/Use State Farm Guideposts: This complicated instruction combines several legal concepts. Note that defendants almost always request a bifurcated trial on punitive damages (so that financial information will not be introduced unless and until the jury finds fraud, malice, or oppression).

In most commercial cases, the liability of a corporation is predicated on the fact that the conduct in question was committed by an officer, director, or managing agent, or alternatively, that the conduct was ratified or approved by the corporation after it occurred. Plaintiff's counsel must be careful to introduce evidence on these points to pursue a punitive claim (e.g., evidence that the corporation accepted the benefits of the conduct or refused to reverse the decision would support ratification).

With regard to the amount of punitive damages, the U.S. Supreme Court in State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408 [123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585] provided new guideposts for courts to review punitive damage awards, including a discussion of specific permissible ratios between punitive and compensatory damages. By Ronald Oster

In Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1020 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 736], the court looked to State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], stating: "Further explicating guidelines for due process proportionality, the [Campbell] court noted facts and circumstances may call for a ratio either exceeding or falling below the norm. It suggested a ratio perhaps only equal to compensatory damages might reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee when compensatory damages are substantial. Additionally observing the wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award, the Campbell court cautioned the courts of the need to ensure that the measure of punishment is both reasonable and proportionate to the amount of harm to the plaintiff and to the general damages recovered." (Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1020, 1055-1056 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 736] .)

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3946

CACI 3946 Punitive Damages--Entity Defendant--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The amount, if any, of punitive damages will be an issue decided later.

At this time, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proved that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, [name of plaintiff] must prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

- 1. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was committed by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant] who acted on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]
- 2. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant]; [or]]
- 3. [That one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant] knew of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

An employee is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her corporate decision making such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, December 2005

CACI No. 3942, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase) may be used for the second phase of a bifurcated trial.

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, and managing agents. When the plaintiff is seeking to hold an employer or principal liable for the conduct of a specific employee or agent, use CACI No. 3944, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal For Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase). When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3948, Punitive Damages--Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase).

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

■ Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.

(b) An employer shall not be liable for damages pursuant to subdivision (a), based upon acts of an employee of the employer, unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258] .)

■ Civil Code section 3295(d) provides: "The court shall, on application of any defendant, preclude the admission of evidence of that defendant's profits or financial condition until after the trier of fact returns a verdict for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finds that a defendant is guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud in accordance with Section 3294. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be admissible only as to the defendant or defendants found to be liable to the plaintiff and to be guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be presented to the same trier of fact that found for the plaintiff and found one or more defendants guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud."

■ "[Section 3295(d)] affects the order of proof at trial, precluding the admission of evidence of defendants' financial condition until after the jury has returned a verdict for plaintiffs awarding actual damages and found that one or more defendants were guilty of 'oppression, fraud or malice,' in accordance with Civil Code section 3294." ■ "Malice, for purposes of awarding exemplary damages, includes 'despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.' To establish conscious disregard, the plaintiff must show 'that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his conduct, and that he wilfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences.' " (Hoch v. Allied-Signal, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 615] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. The additional component of 'despicable conduct' must be found." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 725 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3947

CACI 3947 Punitive Damages--Individual and Entity Defendants--Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of individual defendant]'s or [name of entity defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages against [name of individual defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of individual defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

You may award punitive damages against [name of entity defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of entity defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, [name of plaintiff] must prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

- 1. [That the malice, oppression, or fraud was conduct of one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of entity defendant], who acted on behalf of [name of entity defendant]; [or]]
- 2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of entity defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of individual defendant] and employed [him/her] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]
- 3. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of entity defendant]; [or]]
- 4. [That one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of entity defendant] knew of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

"Malice" means that a defendant acted with intent to cause injury or that a defendant's conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A defendant acts with knowing disregard when the defendant is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of [his/her/its] conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that a defendant's conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that a defendant intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

An employee is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her corporate decisionmaking such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors separately for each defendant in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was that defendant's conduct? In deciding how reprehensible a defendant's conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

- 1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
- 2. Whether the defendant disregarded the health or safety of others;
- 3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and the defendant knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her];
- 4. Whether the defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
- 5. Whether the defendant acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that the defendant knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of that defendant's financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because a defendant has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed that defendant's ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of [his/her/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to apply if punitive damages are sought against both an individual person and a corporate defendant. When punitive damages are sought only against corporate defendants, use CACI No. 3943, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Trial Not Bifurcated, or CACI No. 3945, Punitive Damages --Entity Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated. When punitive damages are sought against an individual defendant, use CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63] .) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176 , citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177 , citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178-1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, ___ [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] .)

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422 .) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525] , internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7 .)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.

(b) An employer shall not be liable for damages pursuant to subdivision (a), based upon acts of an employee of the employer, unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258] .)

■ "Subdivision (b) is not a model of clarity, but in light of California's history of employer liability for punitive damages and of the Legislature's reasons for enacting subdivision (b), we have no doubt that it does no more than codify and refine existing law. Subdivision (b) thus authorizes the imposition of punitive damages on an employer in three situations: (1) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer with advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, (2) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct, or (3) when the employer was itself guilty of the oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1151 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510] .)

■ "'California has traditionally allowed punitive damages to be assessed against an employer (or principal) for the acts of an employee (or agent) only where the circumstances indicate that the employer himself was guilty of fraud, oppression, or malice. Thus, even before section 3294, subdivision (b) was added to the Civil Code in 1980, the courts required evidence that the employer authorized or ratified a malicious act, personally committed such an act, or wrongfully hired or retained an unfit employee.' The 'additional' burden on a plaintiff seeking punitive damages from an employer is to show not only that an employee acted with oppression, fraud or malice, but that the employer engaged in conduct defined in subdivision (b)." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1154 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b) does not authorize an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employee's wrongful conduct. It authorizes an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employer's own wrongful conduct. Liability under subdivision (b) is vicarious only to the extent that the employer is liable for the actions of its officer, director or managing agent in hiring or controlling the offending employee, in ratifying the offense or in acting with oppression, fraud or malice. It is not vicarious in the sense that the employer is liable for the wrongful conduct of the offending employee." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1154-1155 .)

■ "'[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. ... [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. ... While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424-425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .)

■ "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible--although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *16] .)

■ "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Subdivision (b) ... governs awards of punitive damages against employers, and permits an award for the conduct described there without an additional finding that the employer engaged in oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1137 .)

■ "Section 3294 is no longer silent on who may be responsible for imputing punitive damages to a corporate employer. Wohl Shoe Co., Inc.* (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 397, 421 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 457] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e conclude the Legislature intended the term 'managing agent' to include only those corporate employees who exercise substantial independent authority and judgment in their corporate decisionmaking so that their decisions ultimately determine corporate policy. (White, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p. 577 .)

■ " '[C]orporate policy' is the general principles which guide a corporation, or rules intended to be followed consistently over time in corporate operations. Gore* (1996) 517 U.S. 559 [116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]] has refined the disparity analysis to take into account the potential loss to plaintiffs, as where a scheme worthy of punitive damages does not fully succeed. In such cases, the proper ratio would be the ratio of punitive damages to the potential harm to plaintiff." (Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1162, fn. 15 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726] , original italics.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Corporate Liability for Punitive Damages/Use State Farm Guideposts: This complicated instruction combines several legal concepts. Note that defendants almost always request a bifurcated trial on punitive damages (so that financial information will not be introduced unless and until the jury finds fraud, malice, or oppression).

In most commercial cases, the liability of a corporation is predicated on the fact that the conduct in question was committed by an officer, director, or managing agent, or alternatively, that the conduct was ratified or approved by the corporation after it occurred. Plaintiff's counsel must be careful to introduce evidence on these points to pursue a punitive claim (e.g., evidence that the corporation accepted the benefits of the conduct or refused to reverse the decision would support ratification).

With regard to the amount of punitive damages, the U.S. Supreme Court in State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 provided new guideposts for courts to review punitive damage awards, including a discussion of specific permissible ratios between punitive and compensatory damages. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3948

CACI 3948 Punitive Damages--Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of individual defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages against [name of individual defendant] and, if so, against [name of corporate defendant]. The amount, if any, of punitive damages will be an issue decided later.

You may award punitive damages against [name of individual defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of individual defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

"Malice" means that a defendant acted with intent to cause injury or that a defendant's conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A defendant acts with knowing disregard when the defendant is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his, her, or its conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that a defendant's conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that a defendant intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

You may also award punitive damages against [name of corporate defendant] based on [name of individual]'s conduct if [name of plaintiff] proves [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That [name of individual defendant] was an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant] who was acting on behalf of [name of corporate defendant] at the time of the conduct constituting malice oppression or fraud; [or]]

2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of individual defendant] and employed [him/her] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]

3. [That [name of individual defendant]'s conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant]; [or]]

4. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant] knew of [name of individual defendant]'s conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

An employee is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her corporate decision making such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

Use CACI No. 3949, Punitive Damages--Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)--Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase), for the second phase of a bifurcated trial.

This instruction is intended to apply to cases where punitive damages are sought against both an individual person and a corporate defendant. When damages are sought only against a corporate defendant, use CACI No. 3944, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee--Bifurcated Trial (First Phase), or CACI No. 3946, Punitive Damages --Entity Defendant-- Bifurcated Trial (First Phase). When damages are sought against individual defendants, use CACI No. 3941, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Bifurcated Trial (First Phase).

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages --Individual Defendant-- Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

- Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part:

(a) In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant. ...

(c) As used in this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258] .)

■ Civil Code section 3295(d) provides: "The court shall, on application of any defendant, preclude the admission of evidence of that defendant's profits or financial condition until after the trier of fact returns a verdict for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finds that a defendant is guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud in accordance with Section 3294. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be admissible only as to the defendant or defendants found to be liable to the plaintiff and to be guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be presented to the same trier of fact that found for the plaintiff and found one or more defendants guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud."

■ "[Section 3295(d)] affects the order of proof at trial, precluding the admission of evidence of defendants' financial condition until after the jury has returned a verdict for plaintiffs awarding actual damages and found that one or more defendants were guilty of 'oppression, fraud or malice,' in accordance with Civil Code section 3294." ■ "Malice, for purposes of awarding exemplary damages, includes 'despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. The additional component of 'despicable conduct' must be found." (*College Hospital, Inc. v. CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

CACI 3949 Punitive Damages--Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)--Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase)

You must now decide the amount, if any, that you should award [name of plaintiff] in punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors separately for each defendant in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was that defendant's conduct? In deciding how reprehensible a defendant's conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

- 1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
- 2. Whether the defendant disregarded the health or safety of others;
- 3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and the defendant knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/it];
- 4. Whether the defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
- 5. Whether the defendant acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that the defendant knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of that defendant's financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because a defendant has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed that defendant's ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of [his/her/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, October 2004, June 2006, April 2007, August 2007, October 2008

Directions for Use

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63] .) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176 , citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177 , citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178-1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, ___ [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585] .)

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422). An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525] , internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7 .)

- Civil Code section 3294 provides, in part: "In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant."

- Civil Code section 3295(d) provides: "The court shall, on application of any defendant, preclude the admission of evidence of that defendant's profits or financial condition until after the trier of fact returns a verdict for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finds that a defendant is guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud in accordance with Section 3294. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be admissible only as to the defendant or defendants found to be liable to the plaintiff and to be guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud. Evidence of profit and financial condition shall be presented to the same trier of fact that found for the plaintiff and found one or more defendants guilty of malice, oppression, or fraud."

- "[Section 3295(d)] affects the order of proof at trial, precluding the admission of evidence of defendants' financial condition until after the jury has returned a verdict for plaintiffs awarding actual damages and found that one or more defendants were guilty of 'oppression, fraud or malice,' in accordance with Civil Code section 3294." - "Evidence of the defendant's financial condition is a prerequisite to an award of punitive damages. In order to protect defendants from the premature disclosure of their financial position when punitive damages are sought, the Legislature enacted Civil Code section 3295." - "The purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts." (Neal, supra, 21 Cal.3d at p. 928, fn. 13 .)

- "Punitive damages are to be assessed in an amount which, depending upon the defendant's financial worth and other factors, will deter him and others from committing similar misdeeds. Because compensatory damages are designed to make the plaintiff 'whole,' punitive damages are a 'windfall' form of recovery." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 712 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It follows that the wealthier the wrongdoing defendant, the larger the award of exemplary damages need be in order to accomplish the statutory objective." (Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal.3d 43, 65 [118 Cal.Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608] .)

■ " 'A plaintiff, upon establishing his case, is always entitled of right to compensatory damages. But even after establishing a case where punitive damages are permissible, he is never entitled to them. The granting or withholding of the award of punitive damages is wholly within the control of the jury, and may not legally be influenced by any direction of the court that in any case a plaintiff is entitled to them. Upon the clearest proof of malice in fact, it is still the exclusive province of the jury to say whether or not punitive damages shall be awarded. A plaintiff is entitled to such damages only after the jury, in the exercise of its untrammelled discretion, has made the award.' " (Brewer v. Second Baptist Church of Los Angeles (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 801 [197 P.2d 713] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.' " (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 119 [284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e are afforded guidance by certain established principles, all of which are grounded in the purpose and function of punitive damages. One factor is the particular nature of the defendant's acts in light of the whole record; clearly, different acts may be of varying degrees of reprehensibility, and the more reprehensible the act, the greater the appropriate punishment, assuming all other factors are equal. Another relevant yardstick is the amount of compensatory damages awarded; in general, even an act of considerable reprehensibility will not be seen to justify a proportionally high amount of punitive damages if the actual harm suffered thereby is small. Also to be considered is the wealth of the particular defendant; obviously, the function of deterrence will not be served if the wealth of the defendant allows him to absorb the award with little or no discomfort. By the same token, of course, the function of punitive damages is not served by an award which, in light of the defendant's wealth and the gravity of the particular act, exceeds the level necessary to properly punish and deter." (Neal, supra, 21 Cal.3d at p. 928 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *13] .)

■ "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible--although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. ____ [2007 U.S. LEXIS 1332, *16] .)

■ "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "'[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. ... [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. ... While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424-425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The decision to award punitive damages is exclusively the function of the trier of fact. So too is the amount of any punitive damage award. The relevant considerations are the nature of the defendant's conduct, the defendant's wealth, and the plaintiff's actual damages." (Gagnon v. Continental Casualty

Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1602 [260 Cal.Rptr. 305] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he purpose of punitive damages is not served by financially destroying a defendant. The purpose is to deter, not to destroy." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112 .)

■ "[A] punitive damages award is excessive if it is disproportionate to the defendant's ability to pay." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It has been recognized that punitive damages awards generally are not permitted to exceed 10 percent of the defendant's net worth." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1166 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510] .)

■ "In light of our discussion, we conclude that even where, as here, punitive but not compensatory damages are available to the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to an instruction that punitive damages must bear a reasonable relation to the injury, harm, or damage actually suffered by the plaintiff and proved at trial. Consequently, the trial court erred in failing to so instruct the jury." (Gagnon, supra, 211 Cal.App.3d at p. 1605 .)

■ "We conclude that the rule ... that an award of exemplary damages must be accompanied by an award of compensatory damages [or its equivalent] is still sound. That rule cannot be deemed satisfied where the jury has made an express determination not to award compensatory damages." (Cheung v. Daley (1995) 35 Cal.App.4th 1673, 1677 [42 Cal.Rptr.2d 164] , footnote omitted.)

■ "With the focus on the plaintiff's injury rather than the amount of compensatory damages, the ['reasonable relation'] rule can be applied even in cases where only equitable relief is obtained or where nominal damages are awarded or, as here, where compensatory damages are unavailable." (Gagnon, supra, 211 Cal.App.3d at p. 1605 .)

■ "The high court in TXO [TXO Production Corp., supra] and BMW [BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559 [116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]] has refined the disparity analysis to take into account the potential loss to plaintiffs, as where a scheme worthy of punitive damages does not fully succeed. In such cases, the proper ratio would be the ratio of punitive damages to the potential harm to plaintiff." (Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1162, fn. 15 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726] , original italics.)

CACI 3960 Comparative Fault of Plaintiff--General Verdict

If you decide that [name of plaintiff]'s negligence combined with [name of defendant]'s [negligence/conduct/product] in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm, then you must decide the percentage of responsibility for the harm that you attribute to each of them.

First, decide the total amount of [name of plaintiff]'s damages. Then decide the percentage of responsibility that [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] have for the damages. Then reduce the total damages by the percentage of responsibility that you attribute to [name of plaintiff].

After you make these calculations, state the reduced damage award in your verdict.

Sources and Authority

- "In determining to what degree the injury was due to the fault of the plaintiff, it is logically essential that the plaintiff's negligence be weighed against the combined total of all other causative negligence; moreover, inasmuch as a plaintiff's actual damages do not vary by virtue of the particular defendants who happen to be before the court, we do not think that the damages which a plaintiff may recover against defendants who are joint and severally liable should fluctuate in such a manner." (American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal.3d 578, 590, fn. 2 [146 Cal.Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] .)

- "Proposition 51 ... retains the joint liability of all tortfeasors, regardless of their respective shares of fault, with respect to all objectively provable expenses and monetary losses. On the other hand, the more intangible and subjective categories of damage were limited by Proposition 51 to a rule of strict proportionate liability. With respect to these noneconomic damages, the plaintiff alone now assumes the risk that a proportionate contribution cannot be obtained from each person responsible for the injury." (*DaFonte v. CACI 3961 Duty to Mitigate Damages for Past Lost Earnings

[Name of plaintiff] is not entitled to recover damages for economic losses that [name of defendant] proves [name of plaintiff] could have avoided by returning to gainful employment as soon as it was reasonable for [him/her] to do so.

To calculate the amount of damages you must:

1. Determine the amount [name of plaintiff] would have earned from the job [he/she] held at the time [he/she] was injured; and
2. Subtract the amount [name of plaintiff] earned or could have earned by returning to gainful employment.

CHAPTER 39 California Judicial Council Damages Instructions

5-39 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 3963

CACI 3963 No Deduction for Workers' Compensation Benefits Paid

Do not consider whether or not [name of plaintiff] received workers' compensation benefits for [his/her] injuries. If you decide in favor of [name of plaintiff], you should determine the amount of your verdict according to my instructions concerning damages.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use in conjunction with a special verdict form, in which case the judge can make any necessary deductions if double recovery is an issue. It may also be read in cases in which there are no allegations regarding the employer's comparative fault.

Sources and Authority

- If the employer has not been negligent, the workers' compensation benefits do "not constitute an impermissible double recovery but rather a payment from a source wholly independent of the wrongdoer." (Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Department of Transportation (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 668, 682 [180 Cal.Rptr. 843] .)

- " 'The average reasonably well-informed person who may be called to serve upon a jury knows that a workman injured in his employment receives compensation. It is a delusion to think that this aspect of the case can be kept from the minds of the jurors simply by not alluding to it in the course of the trial.' " (Berryman v. Bayshore Construction Co. (1962) 207 Cal.App.2d 331, 336 [24 Cal.Rptr. 380] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "To prevent a double recovery, the court may instruct the jury to segregate types of damage as between the employee and employer, awarding to the employee only those tort damages not recoverable by the employer." (Demkowski v. Lee (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1251, 1259 [284 Cal.Rptr. 919] , footnote omitted.)

■ "Alternatively, the jury may generally be instructed on the types of tort damages to which the employee may be entitled and then given a special verdict form that requires the jury to find whether the defendant was negligent, whether the negligence was the proximate cause of the employee's injuries, what the employee's total tort damages are, without taking into account his or her receipt of workers' compensation benefits, and what the reasonable amount of benefits paid by the employer were. Thereafter, the court enters individual judgments on the special verdict for the amounts to which the employee and employer are entitled." (Demkowski, supra, 233 Cal.App.3d at p. 1259 , footnote omitted.)

■ "Prior to Proposition 51, a negligent third party was allowed an offset for the workers' compensation benefits paid to the plaintiff. This prevented double recovery under the then-existing joint and several liability rule. Proposition 51, however, limited joint and several liability to plaintiff's economic damages." (Rosales v. Thermex-Thermatron, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 187, 197 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 861] .)

■ "The Espinoza approach has provided an effective solution for pre-verdict settlements, and we believe that it is also the most suitable means of dealing with workers' compensation benefits." (Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1, 37 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 455] .)

The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for placing a "gravely disabled" individual in a conservatorship [CACI No. 4000].
- "Mental disorder" [CACI No. 4001] and "gravely disabled" [CACI Nos. 4002, 4003] explained.
- Issues a jury should not consider in determining whether a respondent is "gravely disabled" [CACI No. 4004].
- The "reasonable doubt" standard of proof in conservatorship proceedings [CACI No. 4005].
- Sufficiency of indirect circumstantial evidence [CACI No. 4006].
- "Third party assistance" issues in conservatorship cases involving adults [CACI No. 4007] and minors [CACI No. 4008].
- The fact that a respondent is in front of the jury in "physical restraints" as not being evidence of a grave disability [CACI No. 4009].
- The limited nature of using expert testimony in conservatorship proceedings [CACI No. 4010].

- The consideration of information about the history of the respondent's disorder relevant to the determination of grave disability [CACI No. 4011].
- Concluding instruction in conservatorship proceedings [CACI No. 4012].
- Completion of an affidavit of voter registration for a respondent that has been found to be gravely disabled [CACI No. 4013].

The LPS Act series also includes a conservatorship verdict form for use in setting forth whether the respondent is gravely disabled and whether all 12 jurors find that respondent is not capable of completing an affidavit of voter registration [CACI No. VF-4000].

CACI 4000 Conservatorship--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of petitioner] claims that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled due to [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism] and therefore should be placed in a conservatorship. In a conservatorship, a conservator is appointed to oversee, under the direction of the court, the care of persons who are gravely disabled due to a mental disorder or chronic alcoholism. To succeed on this claim, [name of petitioner] must prove beyond a reasonable doubt all of the following:

- 1. That [name of respondent] [has a mental disorder/is impaired by chronic alcoholism];
- 2. That [name of respondent] is gravely disabled as a result of the [mental disorder/chronic alcoholism]; and
- 3. That [name of respondent] is unwilling or unable voluntarily to accept meaningful treatment.

New June 2005

Element 3 may not be necessary in every case (see Conservatorship of Symington (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 1464, 1467 [257 Cal.Rptr. 860] ["[M]any gravely disabled individuals are simply beyond treatment."]).

- Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350(d) provides, in part: "The person for whom conservatorship is sought shall have the right to demand a court or jury trial on the issue whether he or she is gravely disabled."

- Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(A) provides, in part: " '[G]ravely disabled' ...

[means a] condition in which a person, as a result of a mental disorder, is unable to provide for his or her basic personal needs for food, clothing, or shelter."

■ Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(2) provides, in part: " '[G]ravely disabled' means a condition in which a person, as a result of impairment by chronic alcoholism, is unable to provide for his or her basic personal needs for food, clothing, or shelter."

■ "The Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (the act) governs the involuntary treatment of the mentally ill in California. Enacted by the Legislature in 1967, the act includes among its goals ending the inappropriate and indefinite commitment of the mentally ill, providing prompt evaluation and treatment of persons with serious mental disorders, guaranteeing and protecting public safety, safeguarding the rights of the involuntarily committed through judicial review, and providing individualized treatment, supervision and placement services for the gravely disabled by means of a conservatorship program." (Conservatorship of Susan T. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 1005, 1008-1009 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 40, 884 P.2d 988] .)

■ "The right to a jury trial upon the establishment of conservatorship is fundamental to the protections afforded by the LPS. As related, that right is expressly extended to the reestablishment of an LPS conservatorship." (Conservatorship of Benvenuto (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 1030, 1037 [226 Cal.Rptr. 33] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Noting that a finding of grave disability may result in serious deprivation of personal liberty, the [Supreme Court] held that the due process clause of the California Constitution requires that proof beyond a reasonable doubt and jury unanimity be applied to conservatorship proceedings under the LPS Act." (Conservatorship of Benvenuto, supra, 180 Cal.App.3d at p. 1038 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We ... hold that a person sought to be made an LPS conservatee subject to involuntary confinement in a mental institution, is entitled to have a unanimous jury determination of all of the questions involved in the imposition of such a conservatorship, and not just on the issue of grave disability in the narrow sense of whether he or she can safely survive in freedom and provide food, clothing or shelter unaided by willing, responsible relatives, friends or appropriate third persons." (Conservatorship of Davis (1981) 124 Cal.App.3d 313, 328 [177 Cal.Rptr. 369] .)

■ "The jury should determine if the person voluntarily accepts meaningful treatment, in which case no conservatorship is necessary. If the jury finds the person will not accept treatment, then it must determine if the person can meet his basic needs on his own or with help, in which case a conservatorship is not justified." (Conservatorship of Walker (1987) 196 Cal.App.3d 1082, 1092-1093 [242 Cal.Rptr. 289] .)

■ "Our research has failed to reveal any authority for the proposition [that] without a finding that the proposed conservatee is unable or unwilling to voluntarily accept treatment, the court must reject a conservatorship in the face of grave disability. ... Some persons with grave disabilities are beyond treatment. Taken to its logical conclusion, they would be beyond the LPS Act's reach, according to the argument presented in this appeal." (Conservatorship of Symington, supra, 209 Cal.App.3d at p. 1469 .)

■ "The party seeking imposition of the conservatorship must prove the proposed conservatee's grave disability beyond a reasonable doubt and the verdict must be issued by a unanimous jury." (Conservatorship of Susan T., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 1009 , internal citation omitted.)

5-40 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4002

CACI 4002 "Gravely Disabled" Explained

The term "gravely disabled" means that a person is presently unable to provide for his or her basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter because of [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism]. [The term "gravely disabled" does not include mentally retarded persons by reason of being mentally retarded alone.]

[[Insert one or more of the following:] [psychosis/bizarre or eccentric behavior/delusions/hallucinations/[insert other]] [is/are] not enough, by [itself/themselves], to find that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled. [He/She] must be unable to provide for the basic needs of food, clothing, or shelter because of [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism].]

[If you find [name of respondent] will not take [his/her] prescribed medication without supervision and that a mental disorder makes [him/her] unable to provide for [his/her] basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter without such medication, then you may conclude [name of respondent] is presently gravely disabled.]

In determining whether [name of respondent] is presently gravely disabled, you may consider evidence that [he/she] did not take prescribed medication in the past. You may also consider evidence of [his/her] lack of insight into [his/her] mental condition.]

In considering whether [name of respondent] is presently gravely disabled, you may not consider the likelihood of future deterioration or relapse of a condition.

New June 2005

Read the bracketed sentence at the end of the first paragraph if appropriate to the facts of the case.

The principle regarding the likelihood of future deterioration may not apply in cases where the respondent has no insight into his or her mental disorder. (Conservatorship of Walker (1989) 206 Cal.App.3d 1572, 1576-1577 [254 Cal.Rptr. 552] .)

If there is evidence concerning the availability of third parties that are willing to provide assistance to the proposed conservatee, see CACI No. 4007, Third Party Assistance.

- Welfare & Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(A) provides, in part: "[G]ravely disabled" ... [means] a condition in which a person, as a result of a mental disorder, is unable to provide for his or her basic personal needs for food, clothing, or shelter."

- Welfare & Institutions Code section 5008(h)(2) provides, in part: "[G]ravely disabled" means a condition in which a person, as a result of impairment by chronic alcoholism, is unable to provide for his or her basic personal needs for food, clothing, or shelter."

- Welfare & Institutions Code section 5008(h)(3) provides: "The term 'gravely disabled' does not include mentally retarded persons by reason of being mentally retarded alone."

- "The enactment of the LPS and with it the substitution of 'gravely disabled' for 'in need of treatment' as the basis for commitment of individuals not dangerous to themselves or others reflects a legislative determination to meet the constitutional requirements of precision. The term 'gravely disabled' is sufficiently precise to exclude unusual or nonconformist lifestyles. It connotes an inability or refusal on the part of the proposed conservatee to care for basic personal needs of food, clothing and shelter." (Conservatorship of Chambers (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 277, 284 [139 Cal.Rptr. 357] , footnotes omitted.)

- "The public guardian must prove the proposed conservatee was 'gravely disabled' beyond a reasonable doubt. The stricter criminal standard is used because the threat to the conservatee's individual liberty and personal reputation is no different than the burdens associated with criminal prosecutions." (Conservatorship of Smith (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 903, 909 [232 Cal.Rptr. 277] internal citations omitted.)

- "Bizarre or eccentric behavior, even if it interferes with a person's normal intercourse with society, does not rise to a level warranting conservatorship except where such behavior renders the individual helpless to fend for herself or destroys her ability to meet those basic needs for survival." (Conservatorship of Smith, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 909 .)

- "We ... hold that a person sought to be made an LPS conservatee subject to involuntary confinement in a mental institution, is entitled to have a unanimous jury determination of all of the questions involved in the imposition of such a conservatorship, and not just on the issue of grave disability in the narrow sense of whether he or she can safely survive in freedom and provide food, clothing or shelter unaided by willing, responsible relatives, friends or appropriate third persons." (Conservatorship of Davis (1981) 124 Cal.App.3d 313, 328 [177 Cal.Rptr. 369] .)

- "[A]n individual who will not voluntarily accept mental health treatment is not for that reason alone gravely disabled." (Conservatorship of Symington (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 1464, 1468 [257 Cal.Rptr. 860] .)

- "[T]he pivotal issue is whether [respondent] was 'presently' gravely disabled and the evidence demonstrates that he was not. Accordingly, the order granting the petition must be overturned." (

Conservatorship of Benvenuto (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 1030, 1034 [226 Cal.Rptr. 33] , fn. omitted, citing to Conservatorship of Murphy (1982) 134 Cal.App.3d 15, 18 [184 Cal.Rptr. 363] .)

■ "[A] conservatorship cannot be established because of a perceived likelihood of future relapse. To do so could deprive the liberty of persons who will not suffer such a relapse solely because of the pessimistic statistical odds. Because of the promptness with which a conservatorship proceeding can be invoked the cost in economic and liberty terms is unwarranted." (Conservatorship of Neal (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 685, 689 [235 Cal.Rptr. 577] .)

■ "A perceived likelihood of future relapse, without more, is not enough to justify establishing a conservatorship. Neither can such a likelihood justify keeping a conservatorship in place if its subject is not presently gravely disabled, in light of the statutory provisions allowing rehearings to evaluate a conservatee's current status." (Conservatorship of Jones (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 292, 302 [256 Cal.Rptr. 415] , internal citation omitted.)

CACI 4003 "Gravely Disabled" Minor Explained

The term "gravely disabled" means that a minor is presently unable to use those things that are essential to health, safety, and development, including food, clothing, and shelter, even if they are provided to the minor by others, because of a mental disorder. [The term "gravely disabled" does not include mentally retarded persons by reason of being mentally retarded alone.]

[[Insert one or more of the following:] [physical or mental immaturity/developmental disabilities/epilepsy/alcoholism/drug abuse/repeated antisocial behavior/psychosis/bizarre or eccentric behavior/delusions/hallucinations/[insert other]] [is/are] not enough, by [itself/ themselves], to find that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled. If there is evidence concerning the availability of third parties that are willing to provide assistance to the proposed conservatee, see CACI No. 4008, Third Party Assistance to Minor.

- Welfare and Institutions Code section 5585.25 provides: " 'Gravely disabled minor' means a minor who, as a result of a mental disorder, is unable to use the elements of life which are essential to health, safety, and development, including food, clothing, and shelter, even though provided to the minor by others. Mental retardation, epilepsy, or other developmental disabilities, alcoholism, other drug abuse, or repeated antisocial behavior do not, by themselves, constitute a mental disorder."

- "[T]he actual commitment of a mentally disordered minor who is also a ward of the juvenile court can be accomplished only in accordance with the LPS Act." (In re Michael E. (1975) 15 Cal.3d 183, 189 [123 Cal.Rptr. 103, 538 P.2d 231] .)

- "The actual commitment of a minor ward of a juvenile court to a state hospital can be lawfully accomplished only through the appointment of a conservator who is vested with authority to place the minor in such a hospital. Such conservator may be appointed only for a 'gravely disabled' minor who is entitled to a jury trial on the issue whether he is in fact 'gravely disabled.' Conservatorship shall be recommended to the court only if, on investigation, no suitable alternatives are available. The conservator's proposed powers and duties are to be recommended to the court. A conservator may commit the minor to a medical facility, including a state hospital, only when specifically authorized by the court. Conservatorships automatically terminate at the end of one year, and every six months a conservatee may petition for a rehearing as to his status. Finally, the entertainment of a petition for conservatorship is a function of the superior and not the juvenile court." (In re Michael E., supra, 15 Cal.3d at pp. 192-193 , internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

- "Although a minor may not be legally responsible to provide for his basic personal needs, or may suffer disabilities other than a mental disorder which preclude him from so providing, the [statutory] definition is nevertheless applicable. A minor is 'gravely disabled' within the meaning of section 5008, subdivision (h)(1), when the trier of fact, on expert and other testimony, finds that disregarding other disabilities, if any, the minor, because of the further disability of a mental disorder, would be unable to provide for his basic personal needs. Immaturity, either physical or mental when not brought about by a mental disorder, is not a disability which would render a minor 'gravely disabled' within the meaning of section 5008." (In re Michael E., supra, 15 Cal.3d at p. 192, fn. 12.)

CACI 4005 Obligation to Prove--Reasonable Doubt

[Name of respondent] is presumed not to be gravely disabled. [Name of petitioner] has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled. The fact that a petition has been filed claiming [name of respondent] is gravely disabled is not evidence that this claim is true.

Proof beyond a reasonable doubt is proof that leaves you with an abiding conviction that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled as a result of [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism]. The evidence need not eliminate all possible doubt because everything in life is open to some possible or imaginary doubt.

In deciding whether [name of respondent] is gravely disabled, you must impartially compare and consider all the evidence that was received throughout the entire trial.

Unless the evidence proves that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled because of [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism] beyond a reasonable doubt, you must find that [he/she] is not gravely disabled.

Although a conservatorship is a civil proceeding, the burden of proof is the same as in criminal trials.

Particularly, we conclude that, based on the civil and nonpunitive nature of involuntary commitment proceedings, a mentally ill or disordered person would not be deprived of a fair trial without such an instruction."

CACI 4006 Sufficiency of Indirect Circumstantial Evidence

You may not decide that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled based substantially on indirect evidence unless this evidence:

- 1. Is consistent with the conclusion that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled due to [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism]; and
- 2. Cannot be explained by any other reasonable conclusion.

If the indirect evidence suggests two reasonable interpretations, one of which suggests the existence of a grave disability and the other its nonexistence, then you must accept the interpretation that suggests [name of respondent] is not gravely disabled.

If, on the other hand, one interpretation of this evidence appears to you to be reasonable and the other interpretation to be unreasonable, you must accept the reasonable interpretation and reject the unreasonable one.

If you base your verdict on indirect evidence, [name of petitioner] must prove beyond a reasonable doubt each fact essential to your conclusion that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled.

CACI 4007 Third Party Assistance

A person is not "gravely disabled" if [he/she] can survive safely with the help of third party assistance. Third party assistance is the aid of family, friends, or others who are responsible, willing, and able to help provide for the person's basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter.

You must not consider offers by family, friends, or others unless they [have testified to/stated specifically in writing] their willingness and ability to help provide [name of respondent] with food, clothing, or shelter. Well-intended offers of assistance are not sufficient unless they will ensure the person can survive safely.

[Assistance provided by a correctional facility does not constitute third party assistance.]

New June 2005

■ Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350(e) provides:

(1) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) of subdivision (h) of Section 5008, a person is not "gravely disabled" if that person can survive safely without involuntary detention with the help of responsible family, friends, or others who are both willing and able to help provide for the person's basic personal needs for food, clothing, or shelter.

(2) However, unless they specifically indicate in writing their willingness and ability to help, family, friends, or others shall not be considered willing or able to provide this help.

(3) The purpose of this subdivision is to avoid the necessity for, and the harmful effects of, requiring family, friends, and others to publicly state, and requiring the court to publicly find, that no one is willing or able to assist the mentally disordered person in providing for the person's basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter.

■ "[A] person is not 'gravely disabled' within the meaning of section 5008, subdivision (h)(1) if he or she is capable of surviving safely in freedom with the help of willing and responsible family members, friends or third parties." ■ "As we view the broad purpose of the LPS Act, imposition of a conservatorship should be made only in situations where it is truly necessary. To accomplish this purpose evidence of the availability of third party assistance must be considered." (Conservatorship of Early (1983) 35 Cal.3d 244, 253 [197 Cal.Rptr. 539, 673 P.2d 209] .)

■ "In Conservatorship of Early ... the Supreme Court held that it was error for the trial court to refuse to admit evidence of and to fail to instruct on the 'availability of assistance of others to meet the basic needs of a person afflicted with a mental disorder.'" The purpose of section 5350, subdivision (e), 'is to avoid the necessity for, and the harmful effects of, requiring family, friends, and others to publicly state, and requiring the court to publicly find, that no one is willing or able to assist the mentally disordered person in providing for the person's basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter.' This was not the case here; [petitioner's mother] took the stand at trial and testified as to her willingness to provide assistance to her daughter. The fact that respondent has been brought before the court in physical restraints is not evidence of grave disability. You must not speculate on the reasons for such restraints.

When the restraints are concealed from the jury's view, this instruction should not be given unless requested by the conservatee since it might invite initial attention to the restraints and, thus, create prejudice, which would otherwise be avoided. Duran*, supra, 16 Cal.3d at pp. 288-290 .

■ "The court in *People v. CACI 4100 "Fiduciary Duty" Explained

[A/An] [agent/stockbroker/real estate agent/real estate broker/corporate officer/partner/[insert other fiduciary relationship]] owes what is known as a fiduciary duty to [his/her/its] [principal/client/corporation/partner/[insert other fiduciary relationship]]. A fiduciary duty imposes on [a/an] [agent/stockbroker/real estate agent/real estate broker/corporate officer/partner/[insert other fiduciary relationship]] a duty to act with the utmost good faith in the best interests of [his/her/its] [principal/client/corporation/ partner/[insert other fiduciary relationship]].

New June 2006

Directions for Use

This instruction may be modified if other concepts involving fiduciary duty are relevant to the jury's understanding of the case.

Sources and Authority

■ "A fiduciary relationship is ' 'any relation existing between parties to a transaction wherein one of the parties is in duty bound to act with the utmost good faith for the benefit of the other party. Such a relation ordinarily arises where a confidence is reposed by one person in the integrity of another, and in such a relation the party in whom the confidence is reposed, if he voluntarily accepts or assumes to accept the confidence, can take no advantage from his acts relating to the interest of the other party without the latter's knowledge or consent. ...' Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Overlapping Claims: A breach of fiduciary claim often overlaps with a fraud or "constructive fraud" claim, the major difference being that constructive fraud does not require intent [see Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 563, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ("[T]here is no clear line establishing when a fiduciary's breach of the duty of care will be merely negligent and when it may be characterized as constructive fraud. However, a breach of fiduciary duty usually constitutes constructive fraud."); see also Michel v. Moore & Assocs. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 763-764, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797 (trial court improperly failed to "instruct on constructive fraud's connection to fiduciary relationships" and erroneously "impos[ed] the tougher evidentiary challenge of proving actual fraudulent intent")].

Therefore, in misstatement- or omission-based cases, plaintiffs' practitioners should consider including a jury instruction for constructive fraud [see MB 1900A.05 (setting forth constructive fraud instruction, which specifically refers to duties of real estate broker to client), MB 7400A.113 ("Any violation by an escrow holder of [his/her] fiduciary duties that is without actual fraudulent intent, but that gains an advantage to the escrow holder and that causes prejudice to the principal, is a constructive fraud against the principal")]. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--When Fiduciary Duty Arises: The definition in CACI No. 4100 pertains to situations where a fiduciary duty arises by operation of law. However, fiduciary duties can also arise based on the conduct of the parties [see City of Hope Nat. Med. Center v. Genentech, Inc. (2008) 43 Cal.4th 375, 386, 75 Cal.Rptr.3d 333 ("[B]efore a person can be charged with a fiduciary obligation, he must either [1] knowingly undertake to act on behalf of and for the benefit of another, or [2] must enter into a relationship which imposes that undertaking as a matter of law")]. Plaintiffs may include a fiduciary duty claim even when the parties have an arm's-length contractual relationship. By doing this, they seek to recover punitive damages (which are generally not available in contract), or to benefit from the broader scope of a fiduciary duty claim.

In City of Hope, the California Supreme Court dealt with the question of when a contract can result in the creation of a fiduciary duty. The Court disclaimed a bright-line test for the existence of a fiduciary duty in the contractual context, indicating the existence of a fiduciary duty may be a question of fact for the jury to decide. [see City of Hope Nat. Med. Center v. Genentech, Inc. (2008) 43 Cal.4th 375, 391, 75 Cal.Rptr.3d 333 ("The secrecy of information provided by one party to another--here [a] scientific discovery by City of Hope [and shared with Genentech for commercial exploitation]--may be considered by the trier of fact in deciding whether a fiduciary relationship exists, but it does not compel the imposition of fiduciary duties by operation of law"); see also Tri-Growth Ctr. City, Ltd. v. Silldorf, Burdman, Duignan & Eisenberg (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 1139, 1151, 265 Cal.Rptr. 330 (denying summary judgment and holding that "[i]n the unique context of the transaction involved here, there is a factual question as to the existence of a fiduciary relationship, and whether defendants breached it")].

This presents a potential issue in cases when summary judgment is denied because there is a disputed factual issue as to the existence of a fiduciary duty (particularly when a contract is involved). City of Hope has been cited in California federal court as setting forth the factors that should be considered in determining whether a fiduciary duty exists. For instance, in Think Village-Kiwi, LLC v. Adobe Systems, Inc. [(N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2009) 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106687], the District Court for the Northern District of California, relying on City of Hope, stated: "Factors relevant to determining whether a contract has resulted in the creation of a fiduciary relationship are: (1) whether the contract was between 'two sophisticated parties of substantial bargaining power'; (2) whether the parties were represented by counsel during contract negotiations; (3) whether the contract specified that the parties' relationship is not of a type in which fiduciary obligations are imposed by law; (4) whether one party's reliance on the other is 'so substantial as to give rise to equitable concerns'; and (5) whether the information exchanged by contract was secret" [Think Village-Kiwi, LLC v. Adobe Systems, Inc. (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2009) 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106687, at *17; see also Portney v. CIBA Vision Corp. (C.D. Cal. July 17, 2008) 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106677, at 10-11].

In sum, when there are disputed facts relevant to a City of Hope analysis, a jury could be called on to apply the internal contractual and external equitable factors set forth in that case. Practitioners should keep this in mind, and should consider whether a special instruction to the jury on the City of Hope factors is appropriate. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series are intended for lawsuits brought by or on behalf of the principal. They also assume that the plaintiff is bringing a legal cause of action, not an action in equity. (See Van de Kamp v. Bank of America (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 819 [251 Cal.Rptr. 530] .) This instruction is not intended for cases involving insurance brokers or agents.

In appropriate cases, element 3 may be tailored to reflect the particular fiduciary duty at issue.

For a breach of fiduciary duty instruction in cases involving attorney defendants, see CACI No. 4106, Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Attorney--Essential Factual Elements.

While the advisory committee has not included "employee" as an option for identifying the defendant agent in element 1, there may be cases in which certain employees qualify as "agents," thereby subjecting them to liability for breach of fiduciary duty.

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Duty Imposed by Statute: The directions to CACI No. 4101 state that "[i]n appropriate cases, element 3 may be tailored to reflect the particular fiduciary duty at issue." This reflects that fact that certain duties of care are restricted by statute (or common law). For instance, "[a] partner's duty of care to the partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the partnership business is limited to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law" [Corp. Code § 16404(c); see Enea v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1564-1565, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d 513 (explaining that partner's duty of care is limited by statute, but that "California [leaves] the articulation of the duty of loyalty to traditional common law processes")]. Limited partnerships are another example where the duty of care is limited by statute [see Corp. Code § 15904.08(c) ("A general partner's duty of care to the limited partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's activities is limited to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law." This statute was enacted in 2006 as part of the Re-Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act ("Re-RULPA"), became effective as to limited partnerships formed on or after January 1, 2008, and is effective as to all limited partnerships as of January 1, 2010]. In addition, although a "limited partner does not have any fiduciary duty to the limited partnership or to any other partner solely by reason of being a limited partner" [Corp. Code § 15903.05(a)], he or she does owe an "obligation of good faith and fair dealing" [Corp. Code § 15903.05(b)]. A general partner likewise owes an "obligation of good faith and fair dealing" [Corp. Code § 15904.08(d)] ("A general partner shall discharge the duties to the partnership and the other partners under this chapter or under the partnership agreement and exercise any rights consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing"). Practitioners should consider carefully the correct articulation of the scope of the fiduciary duty involved in their particular matters and ensure that any limitations are set forth clearly in element 3 of this jury instruction. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series are intended for lawsuits brought by or on behalf of the principal. They also assume that the plaintiff is bringing a legal cause of action, not an action in equity. (See Van de Kamp v. Bank of America (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 819 [251 Cal.Rptr. 530] .)

For a breach of fiduciary duty instruction in cases involving attorney defendants, see CACI No. 4106, Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Attorney--Essential Factual Elements.

While the advisory committee has not included "employee" as an option for identifying the defendant agent in element 1, there may be cases in which certain employees qualify as "agents," thereby subjecting them to liability for breach of fiduciary duty.

If the parties dispute whether the plaintiff gave informed consent (element 3), the court may wish to add explanatory language or a separate instruction on what constitutes informed consent. (See, e.g., Rest. 3d Agency, § 8.06(1).)

■ "Every agent owes his principal the duty of undivided loyalty. During the course of his agency, he may not undertake or participate in activities adverse to the interests of his principal. In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, an agent is free to engage in competition with his principal after termination of his employment but he may plan and develop his competitive enterprise during the course of his agency only where the particular activity engaged in is not against the best interests of his principal." (Sequoia Vacuum Systems v. Stransky (1964) 229 Cal.App.2d 281, 287 [40 Cal.Rptr. 203] .)

■ "The determination of the particular factual circumstances and the application of the ethical standards of fairness and good faith required of a fiduciary in a given situation are for the trier of facts." (Sequoia Vacuum Systems, supra, 229 Cal.App.2d at p. 288 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he protection of the principal's interest requires a full disclosure of acts undertaken in preparation of entering into competition." (Sequoia Vacuum Systems, supra, 229 Cal.App.2d at p. 287 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "It is settled that a director or officer of a corporation may not enter into a competing enterprise which cripples or injures the business of the corporation of which he is an officer or director. An officer or director may not seize for himself, to the detriment of his company, business opportunities in the company's line of activities which his company has an interest and prior claim to obtain. In the event that he does seize such opportunities in violation of his fiduciary duty, the corporation may claim for itself all benefits so obtained." (Xum Speegle, Inc. v. Fields (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 546, 554 [31 Cal.Rptr. 104] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A fiduciary relationship is 'any relation existing between parties to a transaction wherein one of the parties is ... duty bound to act with the utmost good faith for the benefit of the other party. Such a relation ordinarily arises where a confidence is reposed by one person in the integrity of another, and in such a relation the party in whom the confidence is reposed, if he voluntarily accepts or assumes to accept the confidence, can take no advantage from his acts relating to the interest of the other party without the latter's knowledge or consent.'" (Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 25, 29 [130 Cal.Rptr.2d 860] .)

■ "Inherent in each of these relationships is the duty of undivided loyalty the fiduciary owes to its beneficiary, imposing on the fiduciary obligations far more stringent than those required of ordinary contractors. As Justice Cardozo observed, 'Many forms of conduct permissible in a workaday world for those acting at arm's length, are forbidden to those bound by fiduciary ties. A trustee is held to something stricter than the morals of the market place. Not honesty alone, but the punctilio of an honor the most sensitive is then the standard of behavior.'" LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Concepts to Include: Element number 2 leaves substantial discretion as to how to describe the alleged breach of the fiduciary duty of loyalty. When drafting this part of the instruction, practitioners may wish to incorporate, if appropriate, the following concepts: "[t]he duty of loyalty embraces several subsidiary obligations, including the duty 'to refrain from competing with the principal and from taking action on behalf of or otherwise assisting the principal's competitors,' the duty 'not to acquire a material benefit from a third party in connection with ... actions taken ... through the agent's use of the agent's position,' and the duty 'not to use or communicate confidential information of the principal for the agent's own purposes or those of a third party'" [Huong Que, Inc. v. Luu (2007) 150 Cal.App.4th 400, 416, 58 Cal.Rptr.3d 527] . By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Scope of Duty of Care: As with the duty of care, the duty of loyalty may be limited by statute, and diligent practitioners should ensure any such limitations are reflected in this jury instruction. For instance, in the context of a limited partnership, the Re-RULPA limits a general partner's duty of loyalty to the limited partnership and the other partners as follows [Corp. Code § 15904.08(b)]:

(1) To account to the limited partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by the general partner in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's activities or derived from a use by the general partner of limited partnership property, including the appropriation of a limited partnership opportunity;

(2) To refrain from dealing with the limited partnership in the conduct or winding up of the limited partnership's activities as or on behalf of a party having an interest adverse to the limited partnership; and

(3) To refrain from competing with the limited partnership in the conduct or winding up of the limited partnership's activities.

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series are intended for lawsuits brought by or on behalf of the principal. They also assume that the plaintiff is bringing a legal cause of action, not an action in equity. (See Van de Kamp v. Bank of America (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 819 [251 Cal.Rptr. 530] .)

For a breach of fiduciary duty instruction in cases involving attorney defendants, see CACI No. 4106, Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Attorney--Essential Factual Elements.

While the advisory committee has not included "employee" as an option for identifying the defendant agent in element 1, there may be cases in which certain employees qualify as "agents," thereby subjecting them to liability for breach of fiduciary duty.

A cause of action relating to the misuse of confidential information may also be brought, in certain circumstances, against non-fiduciaries. This instruction may be modified to apply to such cases.

Sources and Authority

- Restatement Second of Agency, section 395, states: "Unless otherwise agreed, an agent is subject to a duty to the principal not to use or to communicate information confidentially given him by the principal or acquired by him during the course of or on account of his agency or in violation of his duties as agent, in competition with or to the injury of the principal, on his own account or on behalf of another, although such information does not relate to the transaction in which he is then employed, unless the information is a matter of general knowledge."

- " "The law of confidential relationships governs duties of trust that one is not obligated to assume. Once a person commits himself to a confidential relationship, the law requires him to fulfill the duties attendant to the relationship. Confidential relations protect the trust that is implicit in relationships between employers and employees, between masters and servants, and between principals and agents, rather than the information that may pass between these parties.' " (Balboa Ins. Co. v. Trans Global Equities (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 1327, 1350-1351 [267 Cal.Rptr. 787] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defense of Agent's Superior Interest: This instruction does not reference a potentially important defense concerning the duties of an agent: "[A]n agent is privileged to protect interests of his own which are superior to those of the principal, even though he does so at the expense of the principal's interests or in disobedience to his orders" [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1060, 1072, 283 Cal.Rptr. 917 (quoting Restatement (Second) of Agency § 418)]. In appropriate circumstances, an instruction reflecting this defense may be prudent. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Fiduciary and Confidential Relationships Not

Synonymous: The directions for CACI No. 4103 state: "A cause of action relating to the misuse of confidential information may also be brought, in certain circumstances, against non-fiduciaries. This instruction may be modified to apply to such cases." This comment refers to the concept that fiduciary and confidential relationships are not synonymous [Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Francisco (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257, 271, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 601 (explaining differences between confidential and fiduciary relationships); Persson v. Smart Inventions, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 1141, 1160, 23 Cal.Rptr.3d 335 (setting forth "essential elements" of confidential relationship). In Persson, the court set out a four-part test for the existence of a confidential relationship [Persson v. Smart Inventions, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 1141, 1161, 23 Cal.Rptr.3d 335] :

" '1) The vulnerability of one party to the other which 2) results in the empowerment of the stronger party by the weaker which 3) empowerment has been solicited or accepted by the stronger party and 4) prevents the weaker party from effectively protecting itself.' " In short, vulnerability "is the necessary predicate of a confidential relation," and "the law treats [it] as 'absolutely essential'."

Hence, in actions for breach of a duty of confidentiality brought against a non-fiduciary, CACI No. 4103 may be modified by inserting the four-part test from Persson in element 1 of the instruction. As noted in Persson, the element of vulnerability is essential to a confidential relationship. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

Element 3 is intended only for cases involving real estate escrow.

Sources and Authority

■ "The duty of an escrow holder to obtain evidence that a real estate broker was regularly licensed before delivering compensation arises from Business and Professions Code section 10138. Respondent assumed this duty only by entering the contract to execute the escrow for appellant and the seller. Accordingly, the duty arose out of and is not outside the contract." (Kangarlou v. Progressive Title Co., Inc. (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 1174, 1179 [27 Cal.Rptr.3d 754] .)

■ "The duty to communicate any facts learned about the broker's licenses arises only because of the duty to obtain such evidence. Since the duty to obtain such evidence is not outside the contract, the duty to communicate those findings also is not outside the contract." (Kangarlou, supra, 128 Cal.App.4th at p. 1179 .)

■ "An escrow holder has a fiduciary duty to the escrow parties to comply strictly with the parties' instructions. The holder only assumes this duty by agreeing to execute the escrow. The obligation to exercise reasonable skill and diligence in carrying out the escrow instructions, and to comply strictly with the depositor's written instructions are within the duties undertaken in the contract." Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Narrow Scope of Duty for Escrow Holder: The California Supreme Court has explained that the fiduciary duty of an escrow holder is quite narrow [Summit Fin. Holdings, Ltd. v. Cont'l Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548]; see also Paul v. Schoellkopf (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 147, 154, 26 Cal.Rptr.3d 766 ("An escrow agent's role ends once he or she has successfully exchanged payments and instruments, and he or she 'has no general duty to police the affairs of depositors' "); Claussen v. First Am. Title Guarantee Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 436, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749 (same)];

In delimiting the scope of an escrow holder's fiduciary duties, then, we start from the principle that an escrow holder must comply strictly with the instructions of the parties. On the other hand, an escrow holder has no general duty to police the affairs of its depositors; rather, an escrow holder's obligations are limited to faithful compliance with [the depositors'] instructions. Absent clear evidence of fraud, an escrow holder's obligations are limited to compliance with the parties' instructions.

When applicable, defense attorneys should accordingly ask for an additional instruction emphasizing that an escrow holder's fiduciary duty is limited to faithful compliance with the parties' instructions [see MB 7400A.76 ("An escrow holder is not liable for [his/her/its] failure to do something not required by the terms of the escrow or for a loss incurred while obediently following the escrow instructions"), MB 7400A.75 ("The escrow instructions constitute the full measure of the obligations assumed by _____ as an escrow holder and owing to Plaintiff. _____ is not required to give Plaintiff information that [he/she/it] has if that information is not [related to/subject to disclosure under/ [his/her/its] specific escrow instructions")]. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Written and Oral Escrow Instructions: CACI No. 4104 states that an escrow holder must "comply strictly with the parties' written instructions," appearing to imply that there is no duty to comply with oral instructions. However, the Court of Appeal has held that " '[e]scrow instructions may be oral, even when some are in writing [citations] and [] some escrow instructions may be implicit in the express instructions given' " [Kirk Corp. v. First Am. Title Co. (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 785, 807, 270 Cal.Rptr. 24 ; Zang v. Nw. Title Co. (1982) 135 Cal.App.3d 159, 167-168, 185 Cal.Rptr. 176] (explaining that escrow agents may be liable for breach of oral instructions); see also MB 7400A.70 ("Escrow instructions may be either written or oral"). Of course, if the instructions themselves state that any further changes must be written, there is likely no duty to follow subsequent oral instructions [see Brantley v. Boyd (N.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2009) 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108214, at 16, 19 (granting summary judgment to plaintiff for breach of fiduciary claim because escrow agent failed to comply with instructions that "clearly provided that any changes to the instructions had to be given in writing by all the parties affected thereby")]. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Including Other Duties: CACI No. 4104 contains a blank space for other applicable duties. There are number of other duties that may be relevant. For example, "[i]n the event of a conflict or apparent error in instructions, the escrow holder is obliged to take corrective steps before obeying questionable instructions" [Kirk Corp. v. First. Am. Title Co. (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 785, 807, 270 Cal.Rptr. 24] .

There are several other potential duties, all of which are reflected in this publication's suggested jury instructions:

- The duty to take corrective action [see MB 7400A.74 ("If there is a conflict or an apparent error in an escrow instruction, the escrow holder has a duty to take corrective steps to clear up the conflict or apparent error")].
- The duty to remain impartial [see MB 7400A.90 ("An escrow agent is bound above all things not to take sides between the parties to the escrow")].
- The duty to accept only complete instructions, i.e., those with no blanks to be filled in. [see MB 7400A.93; see also Fin. Code § 17403.2 ("No person ... shall solicit or accept an escrow instruction ... containing any blank to be filled in")].
- The duty to deliver a copy of instructions to all parties [see MB 7400A.94; see also Fin. Code § 17403.3 ("[E]ach escrow instruction ... shall be delivered to all persons executing the same")].
- The duty to disclose information concerning the escrow instructions [see MB 7400A.85 ("An escrow agent has the duty to exercise ordinary care to communicate to [his/her/its] principal, knowledge acquired in the course of carrying out [his/her/its] escrow instructions, if the knowledge acquired concerns those instructions")].

This publication also supplies an instruction regarding the dual nature of an escrow holder's fiduciary duty, as well as the timing of the duty [see MB 7400A.110]:

As an agent, _____ [name of escrow holder] owes a fiduciary duty to the parties to the escrow. As soon as the escrow is opened, this duty begins, and it is a dual duty, because _____ [name of escrow holder] is the agent of both _____ [name of seller or grantor] and _____ [name of buyer or grantee]. After _____ [the escrow's conditions have been fully performed or _____ (name of seller or grantor) has _____ (describe escrow conditions to be performed by seller or grantor) and _____ (name of buyer or grantee) has _____ (describe escrow conditions to be performed by buyer or grantee)], _____ [name of escrow holder] is the agent not of both parties, but of each party separately, with regard to those things placed in escrow to which each is now entitled. This means that _____ [name of escrow holder] is the fiduciary of _____ [name of seller or grantor] with regard to the money and of

5-41 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4105

CACI 4105 Duties of Stockbroker--Speculative Securities

Stockbrokers who trade in speculative securities and advise clients have a fiduciary duty to those clients:

- 1. To make sure that the client understands the investment risks in light of his or her financial situation;
- 2. To inform the client that speculative investments are not suitable if the stockbroker believes that the client is unable to bear the financial risks involved; and
- 3. Not to solicit the client's purchase of speculative securities that the stockbroker considers to be beyond the client's risk threshold.

If these duties are met and the client still insists on purchasing speculative securities, the stockbroker may advise the client about various speculative securities and purchase speculative securities that the client selects.

New June 2006

Directions for Use

This instruction should be read after CACI No. 4101, Failure to Use Reasonable Care--Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- "[T]he stockbroker has a fiduciary duty (1) to ascertain that the investor understands the investment risks in the light of his or her actual financial situation; (2) to inform the customer that no speculative investments are suitable if the customer persists in wanting to engage in such speculative transactions without the stockbroker's being persuaded that the customer is able to bear the financial risks involved; and (3) to refrain completely from soliciting the customer's purchase of any speculative securities which the stockbroker considers to be beyond the customer's risk threshold. As long as these duties are met, if the customer nevertheless insists on purchasing speculative securities, the stockbroker is not barred from advising the customer about various speculative securities and purchasing for the customer those securities which the customer selects." ■ "A stockbroker's fiduciary duty requires more than merely carrying out the stated objectives of the customer; at least where there is evidence, as there certainly was here, that the stockbroker's recommendations were invariably followed, the stockbroker must 'determine the customer's actual financial situation and needs.' If it would be improper and unsuitable to carry out the speculative objectives expressed by the customer, there is a further obligation on the part of the stockbroker 'to make this known to [the customer], and [to] refrain from acting except upon [the customer's] express orders.' Under such circumstances, although the stockbroker can advise the customer about the speculative options available, he or she should not solicit the customer's purchase of any such speculative securities that would be beyond the customer's 'risk threshold.' Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Stockbroker's Duties: The CACI instruction for stockbroker's duties is drawn almost directly from Duffy v. Cavalier [(1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1517, 1532, 264 Cal.Rptr. 740] . Although the Duffy court held that "there is in all cases a fiduciary duty owed by a stockbroker to his or her customers," it also held that "the scope of this duty depends on the specific facts and circumstances presented in a given case" [Duffy v. Cavalier (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1517, 1536 n.10, 264 Cal.Rptr. 740] . "These [facts and circumstances] include the relative sophistication and experience of the customer; the customer's ability to evaluate the broker's recommendations and exercise an independent judgment thereon; the nature of the account, whether discretionary or nondiscretionary; and the actual financial situation and needs of the customer" [Duffy v. Cavalier (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1517, 1536 n.10, 264 Cal.Rptr. 740 ; see Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 938, 961, 85 Cal.Rptr.3d 817 ("The scope of a fiduciary's obligations depends on the specific facts of the case. Such factors may include, for example, the relative sophistication and experience of the vulnerable party.")]. When the scope of the duty is disputed, it may be appropriate to add a jury instruction including this language. The Duffy court also approved the following language [Duffy v. Cavalier (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1517, 1536, 264 Cal.Rptr. 740] :

If the broker, for all practical purposes, controls the account, whether by use of his [or her] discretionary power or by making recommendations which are regularly followed, there is an obligation to determine the customer's financial situation and needs.

So long as the customer is of sufficient intelligence and understanding to make the ultimate investment decision and does so, the customer controls that trade for that account. When a person invests in securities he [or she] assumes the risks inherent in the market and must bear the losses therefrom.

A stockbroker is not a guarantee [sic] of market performance

By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--When Stockbroker's Duties Begin: Another potential issue concerns when a stockbroker's fiduciary duty commences. In Rosenthal v. Great W. Fin. Sec. Corp. [(1996) 14 Cal.4th 394, 425, 58 Cal.Rptr.2d 875], the California Supreme Court found that a broker had no obligation to explain the terms of a contract (in particular, an arbitration clause) because there was no preexisting relationship between the parties. But at the same time, "when the facts establish that an investment professional has previously voluntarily induced a vulnerable individual to repose trust and confidence in the professional, that professional has a fiduciary duty toward that individual, and may be required by that duty to fully disclose, in a manner the individual understands, the material terms of a contract between them" [Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 938, 961-962, 85 Cal.Rptr.3d 817]. Thus, a fiduciary duty may exist even before the client signs a contract with the broker. Depending on the facts of a particular matter, an additional instruction concerning the date the fiduciary duty commenced may be warranted. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CACI 4106 Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Attorney--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/it] was harmed because [name of defendant] breached an attorney's duty [describe duty, e.g., "not to represent clients with conflicting interests"]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] breached the duty of an attorney [describe duty];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004; Renumbered from CACI No. 605 December 2007

Directions for Use

The existence of a fiduciary relationship is a question of law. Whether an attorney has breached that fiduciary duty is a question of fact. (David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 884, 890 [250 Cal.Rptr. 339] .)

Sources and Authority

- "To establish a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty, a plaintiff must demonstrate the existence of a fiduciary relationship, breach of that duty and damages." (Shoppoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 1489, 1509 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 268] .)

■ "[A] breach of fiduciary duty is a species of tort distinct from a cause of action for professional negligence." (Stanley v. Richmond (1995) 35 Cal.App.4th 1070, 1086 [41 Cal.Rptr.2d 768] .)

■ "The scope of an attorney's fiduciary duty may be determined as a matter of law based on the Rules of Professional Conduct which, 'together with statutes and general principles relating to other fiduciary relationships, all help define the duty component of the fiduciary duty which an attorney owes to his [or her] client.' LexisNexis Matthew Bender Practice Tip--Attorney Misconduct as Basis of Claim: Violations of applicable rules of professional conduct are used to disqualify and discipline lawyers, but they can also form the basis of breach of fiduciary duty claims. An attorney breaches his or her fiduciary duty by failing to "comply with obligations concerning the client's confidences and property, avoid impermissible conflicting interests, deal honestly with the client, and not employ advantages arising from the client-lawyer relationship in a manner adverse to the client" [Restatement (Third) of Law Governing Lawyers § 16(c)]. A breach of the duty of loyalty can be a breach of fiduciary duty [see Benasra v. Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP (2004) 123 Cal.App.4th 1179, 1186, 20 Cal.Rptr.3d 621 (attorney breaches fiduciary duty by "accept[ing] a representation in which confidences disclosed by a former client may benefit the new client due to the relationship between the new matter and the old")]. Charging improper fees can also serve as a basis for a breach of fiduciary duty action [see Charnay v. Cobert (2006) 145 Cal.App.4th 170, 185, 51 Cal.Rptr.3d 471 (claim for breach of fiduciary duty was stated when plaintiff alleged that attorney billed for unperformed tasks and billed at inflated rate)]. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Practice Tip--One-Year Statute of Limitations: Practitioners pursuing a breach of fiduciary duty claims against an attorney should assume that the one-year statute of limitations set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) applies. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Practice Tip--Affirmative Defense: If appropriate under the circumstances, defense practitioners should include an affirmative defense jury instruction as follows: "a lawyer is not liable [for breach of fiduciary duty] for any action or inaction the lawyer reasonably believed to be required by law, including a professional rule." In addition, any "defenses available under generally applicable principles of law governing ... actions for ... breach of fiduciary duty" may also be employed [Restatement (Third) of Law Governing Lawyers § 54(1)]. *By Susan S. CACI 4107 Duty of Disclosure by Real Estate Broker

As a fiduciary, a real estate broker must disclose to his or her client all material information that the broker knows or could reasonably obtain regarding the property or relating to the transaction.

The facts that a broker must learn, and the advice and counsel required of the broker, depend on the facts of the transaction, the knowledge and experience of the client, the questions asked by the client, the nature of the property, and the terms of sale. The broker must place himself or herself in the position of the client and consider the type of information required for the client to make a well-informed decision.

Directions for Use

This instruction may be read after CACI No. 4101, Failure to Use Reasonable Care--Essential Factual Elements, if a real estate broker's duty of disclosure is at issue.

Sources and Authority

• "Under the common law, ... a broker's fiduciary duty to his client requires the highest good faith and undivided service and loyalty. 'The broker as a fiduciary has a duty to learn the material facts that may affect the principal's decision. He is hired for his professional knowledge and skill; he is expected to perform the necessary research and investigation in order to know those important matters that will affect the principal's decision, and he has a duty to counsel and advise the principal regarding the propriety and ramifications of the decision. The agent's duty to disclose material information to the principal includes the duty to disclose reasonably obtainable material information. [P] ... [P] The facts that a broker must learn, and the advice and counsel required of the broker, depend on the facts of each transaction, the knowledge and the experience of the principal, the questions asked by the principal, and the nature of the property and the terms of sale. The broker must place himself in the position of the principal and ask himself the type of information required for the principal to make a well-informed decision. This obligation requires investigation of facts not known to the agent and disclosure of all material facts that might reasonably be discovered.' " (Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 18, 25-26 [73 Cal.Rptr.2d 784] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A fiduciary must tell its principal of all information it possesses that is material to the principal's interests. A fiduciary's failure to share material information with the principal is constructive fraud, a term of art obviating actual fraudulent intent. (Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'A broker who is merely an innocent conduit of the seller's fraud may be innocent of actual fraud [citations], but in this situation the broker may be liable for negligence on a constructive fraud theory if he or she passes on the misstatements as true without personally investigating them.' ■ "[T]he fiduciary duty owed by brokers to their own clients is substantially more extensive than the nonfiduciary duty codified in [Civil Code] section 2079 [duty to visually inspect and disclose material facts]." (Michel, supra, 156 Cal.App.4th at p. 763 , original italics.)

■ "[Fiduciary] duties require full and complete disclosure of all material facts respecting the property or relating to the transaction in question." (Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1286 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 373] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Practice Tip--Duty Regarded Unverified Information: This instruction accurately reflects the law, inasmuch as real estate brokers generally must personally investigate relevant information before passing it to clients. However, a broker does not breach this duty by passing on inaccurate information from a third party (such as the seller) as long as he or she tells the client that he or she did not verify the information [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 563, 29 Cal. Rptr.2d 463 (finding that broker "breached his fiduciary duty to plaintiffs by making affirmative statements as to the size, boundaries, and subdivi[s]ability of the property, knowing these facts to be material to plaintiffs and by failing to disclose that he had not confirmed their accuracy")]. In appropriate circumstances, a defense practitioner should include an instruction to this effect. By Susan S. Azad, Esq.

CACI 4120 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date four years before complaint was filed] unless [name of plaintiff] proves that before [insert date four years before complaint was filed], [he/she/it] did not discover, and did not know of facts that would have caused a reasonable person to suspect, [name of defendant]'s wrongful act or omission.

Directions for Use

Read this instruction only for a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty. For a statute-of-limitations defense to a cause of action for personal injury or wrongful death due to wrongful or negligent conduct, see CACI No. 454, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations, and CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery.

Do not use this instruction in an action against an attorney. For a statute-of-limitations defense to a cause of action, other than actual fraud, against an attorney acting in the capacity of an attorney, see CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit, and CACI No. 611, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--Four-Year Limit. One cannot avoid a shorter limitation period for attorney malpractice (see Code Civ. Proc., § 340.6) by pleading the facts as a breach of fiduciary duty. (*Stoll v. CHAPTER 42 California Judicial Council Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act Instructions

CACI 4200 Actual Intent to Defraud a Creditor (Civ. Code, § 3439.04(a)(1))--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/it] was harmed because [name of debtor] fraudulently [transferred property/incurred an obligation] to [name of defendant] in order to avoid paying a debt to [name of plaintiff]. [This is called "actual fraud."] To establish this claim against [name of defendant], [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] has a right to payment from [name of debtor] for [insert amount of claim];
- 2. That [name of debtor] [transferred property/incurred an obligation] to [name of defendant];
- 3. That [name of debtor] [transferred the property/incurred the obligation] with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud one or more of [his/her/its] creditors;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That [name of debtor]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

To prove intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, it is not necessary to show that [name of debtor] had a desire to harm [his/her/its] creditors. [Name of plaintiff] need only show that [name of debtor] intended to remove or conceal assets to make it more difficult for [his/her/its] creditors to collect payment.

[It does not matter whether [name of plaintiff]'s right to payment arose before or after [name of debtor] [transferred property/incurred an obligation].]

New June 2006

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes the defendant is a transferee of the original debtor. Read the bracketed second sentence in cases in which the plaintiff is asserting causes of action for both actual and constructive fraud. Read the last bracketed sentence in cases in which the plaintiff's alleged claim arose after the defendant's property was transferred or the obligation was incurred.

If the case concerns a fraudulently incurred obligation, users may wish to insert a brief description of the obligation in this instruction, e.g., "a lien on the property."

Courts have held that there is a right to a jury trial whenever the remedy sought is monetary relief, including even the return of a "determinate sum of money." (Wisden v. Superior Court (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 750, 757 [21 Cal.Rptr.3d 523] , internal citation omitted.) If the only remedy sought is the return of a particular nonmonetary asset, the action is an equitable action. However, even where a specific nonmonetary asset is involved, a conspiracy claim or an action against any party other than the transferee who possesses the asset (e.g., "the person for whose benefit the transfer was made" (Civ. Code, § 3439.08(b)(1)) necessarily would seek monetary relief and give rise to a right to a jury trial.

Note that there may be a split of authority regarding the appropriate standard of proof of fraudulent intent. The Sixth District Court of Appeal has stated: "Actual intent to defraud must be shown by clear and convincing evidence. (Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal.App.3d 364, 377 [125 Cal.Rptr. 804] .)" (Reddy v. Gonzalez (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 118, 123 [10 Cal.Rptr.2d 58] .) Note that the case relied on by the Hansford court (Aggregates Assoc., Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal.2d 580 [25 Cal.Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425]) was disapproved by the Supreme Court in Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal.3d 278, 291-292 [137 Cal.Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316] . The Fourth District Court of Appeal, Division Two, disagreed with Reddy: "In determining whether transfers occurred with fraudulent intent, we apply the preponderance of the evidence test, even though we recognize that some courts believe that the test requires clear and convincing evidence." (Gagan v. Gouyd (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 835, 839 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 733] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal.4th 657, 669, fn. 2 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 74 P.3d 166] .)

● Civil Code section 3439.04 provides:

(a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation as follows:

(1) With actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor.

(2) Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor either:

(A) Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction.

(B) Intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that he or she would incur, debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due.

(b) In determining actual intent under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a), consideration may be given, among other factors, to any or all of the following:

- (1) Whether the transfer or obligation was to an insider.
- (2) Whether the debtor retained possession or control of the property transferred after the transfer.
- (3) Whether the transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed.
- (4) Whether before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the debtor had been sued or threatened with suit.
- (5) Whether the transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets.
- (6) Whether the debtor absconded.
- (7) Whether the debtor removed or concealed assets.
- (8) Whether the value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred.
- (9) Whether the debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.
- (10) Whether the transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred.
- (11) Whether the debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienholder who transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

(c) The amendment to this section made during the 2004 portion of the 2003-04 Regular Session of the Legislature, set forth in subdivision (b), does not constitute a change in, but is declaratory of, existing law, and is not intended to affect any judicial decisions that have interpreted this chapter.

(a) In an action for relief against a transfer or obligation ... a creditor ... may obtain:

(2) An attachment or other provisional remedy against the asset transferred or its proceeds

(3) Subject to applicable principles of equity and in accordance with applicable rules of civil procedure, the following:

(A) An injunction against further disposition by the debtor ... of the asset transferred or its proceeds.

(B) Appointment of a receiver

(C) Any other relief the circumstances may require.

(b) If a creditor has commenced an action on a claim against the debtor, the creditor may attach the asset transferred or its proceeds

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Guide for Testimony: This instruction is a guide to follow for the presentation of testimony in an actual fraud case. These elements should be woven into both the opening and closing statements. By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Modification to Add Definitions: This instruction covers a substantial area of law and many new terms for most juries. It would be more helpful to a jury if some basic definitional instructions were used first, such as the definition of "debtor" and "right to payment." Furthermore, this instruction does not go into detail about a debt that was not owed at the time of transfer (although this is covered somewhat in CACI No. 4201), and if that situation exists, the instruction should probably be modified to cover that issue. By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Amplification to Aid Jury's Understanding: This instruction uses the statutory language "hinder, delay, or defraud" without further definition. Consider adding language that defines "defraud" and more specific language defining "hinder and delay," in light of the potential to collect from a creditor's standpoint, so that a jury understands what a creditor's potential remedies are for collecting on a debt, and how the actions of the defendant/transferee have made that impossible. By Susan Vaage

CACI 4201 Factors to Consider in Determining Actual Intent to Defraud (Civ. Code, § 3439.04(b))

In determining whether [name of debtor] intended to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditors by [transferring property/incurred an obligation] to [name of defendant], you may consider, among other factors, the following:

[(a) Whether the [transfer/obligation] was to [a/an] [insert relevant description of insider, e.g., "relative," "business partner," etc.];]

[(b) Whether [name of debtor] retained possession or control of the property after it was transferred;]

[(c) Whether the [transfer/obligation] was disclosed or concealed;]

[(d) Whether before the [transfer was made/obligation was incurred] [name of debtor] had been sued or threatened with suit;]

[(e) Whether the transfer was of substantially all of [name of debtor]'s assets;]

[(f) Whether [name of debtor] fled;]

[(g) Whether [name of debtor] removed or concealed assets;]

[(h) Whether the value received by [name of debtor] was not reasonably equivalent to the value of the [asset transferred/amount of the obligation incurred];]

[(i) Whether [name of debtor] was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the [transfer was made/obligation was incurred];]

[(j) Whether the transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred;]

[(k) Whether [name of debtor] transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienholder who transferred the assets to an insider of [name of defendant];] [and]

[(l) [insert other appropriate factor].]

Evidence of one or more factors does not automatically require a finding that [name of defendant] acted with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors. The presence of one or more of these factors is evidence that may suggest the intent to delay, hinder, or defraud.

CHAPTER 42 California Judicial Council Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act Instructions

5-42 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4202

CACI 4202 Constructive Fraudulent Transfer (Civ. Code, § 3439.04(a)(2))--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/it] was harmed because [name of debtor] [transferred property/incurred an obligation] to [name of defendant] and, as a result, was unable to pay [name of plaintiff] money that was owed. [This is called "constructive fraud."] To establish this claim against [name of defendant], [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] has a right to payment from [name of debtor] for [insert amount of claim];
2. That [name of debtor] [transferred property/incurred an obligation] to [name of defendant];
3. That [name of debtor] did not receive a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the [transfer/obligation];
4. [That [name of debtor] was in business or about to start a business or enter a transaction when [his/her/its] remaining assets were unreasonably small for the business or transaction;] [or]

[That [name of debtor] intended to incur debts beyond [his/her/its] ability to pay as they became due;] [or]

[That [name of debtor] believed or reasonably should have believed that [he/she/it] would incur debts beyond [his/her/its] ability to pay as they became due;]
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

6. That [name of debtor]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, [he/she/it] does not have to prove that [name of debtor] intended to defraud any creditors.

[It does not matter whether [name of plaintiff]'s right to payment arose before or after [name of debtor] [transferred property/incurred an obligation].]

New June 2006

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes the defendant is a transferee of the original debtor. Read the bracketed second sentence in cases in which the plaintiff is asserting causes of action for both actual and constructive fraud. Read the last bracketed sentence in cases where the plaintiff's alleged claim arose after the defendant's property was transferred or the obligation was incurred.

Courts have held that there is a right to a jury trial whenever the remedy sought is monetary relief, including even the return of a "determinate sum of money." (Wisden v. Superior Court (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 750, 757 [21 Cal.Rptr.3d 523] , internal citation omitted.) If the only remedy sought is the return of a particular nonmonetary asset, the action is an equitable action. However, even where a specific nonmonetary asset is involved, a conspiracy claim or an action against any party other than the transferee who possesses the asset (e.g., "the person for whose benefit the transfer was made" (Civ. Code, § 3439.08(b)(1)) necessarily would seek monetary relief and give rise to a right to a jury trial.

- Civil Code section 3439.04(a)(2) provides:

A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation as follows:

Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor either:

(A) Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction.

(B) Intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that he or she would incur, debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due.

- Civil Code section 3439.03 provides: "Value is given for a transfer or an obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or an antecedent debt is secured or satisfied, but value does not include an unperformed promise made otherwise than in the ordinary course of the promisor's business to furnish support to the debtor or another person."

- "There are two forms of constructive fraud under the UFTA. Civil Code section 3439.04 ... provides that a transfer is fraudulent if the debtor did not receive reasonably equivalent consideration and either '(1) Was engaged or about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction; or (2) Intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that he or she would incur, debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due.' Civil Code section 3439.05 provides that a transfer is fraudulent as to an existing creditor if the debtor does not receive reasonably equivalent value and 'was insolvent at that time or ... became insolvent as a result of the transfer' " (*Mejia v. (1) Termination of a lease upon default by the debtor when the termination is pursuant to the lease and applicable law.

(2) Enforcement of a lien in a noncollusive manner and in compliance with applicable law, including Division 9 (commencing with Section 9101) of the Commercial Code, other than a retention of collateral under Sections 9620 and 9621 of the Commercial Code and other than a voluntary transfer of the collateral by the debtor to the lienor in satisfaction of all or part of the secured obligation.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Supplement Instruction to Include Bona Fide Exceptions to UFTA: Although this is a definitional instruction, it is not complete because it does not include bona fide exceptions to UFTA. If there is a defense to the transfer--for example, the termination of a bona fide lease or the repossession of collateral legitimately pledged on another loan--consider supplementing this instruction to include that language. Left by itself, it might be confusing or misleading to a jury. By Susan Vaage

If the debtor is a partnership, refer to Civil Code section 3439.02(b). If there are issues regarding specific assets, see Civil Code sections 3439.02(e) and 3439.01(a).

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3439.02 provides:

- (a) A debtor is insolvent if, at fair valuations, the sum of the debtor's debts is greater than all of the debtor's assets.

- (b) A debtor which is a partnership is insolvent if, at fair valuations, the sum of the partnership's debts is greater than the aggregate of all of the partnership's assets and the sum of the excess of the value of each general partner's nonpartnership assets over the partner's nonpartnership debts.

(c) A debtor who is generally not paying his or her debts as they become due is presumed to be insolvent.

(d) Assets under this section do not include property that has been transferred, concealed, or removed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors or that has been transferred in a manner making the transfer voidable under this chapter.

(e) Debts under this section do not include an obligation to the extent it is secured by a valid lien on property of the debtor not included as an asset.

■ Civil Code section 3439.01(a) provides:

"Asset" means property of a debtor, but the term does not include, the following:

- (1) Property to the extent it is encumbered by a valid lien.
- (2) Property to the extent it is generally exempt under nonbankruptcy law.
- (3) An interest in property held in tenancy by the entireties to the extent it is not subject to process by a creditor holding a claim against only one tenant.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Charts and Graphs to Keep Track of Numbers: Remember that the definition of insolvency is very formulaic, and gear your presentation of evidence accordingly. In other words, make certain that you keep track of numbers as the evidence is presented to show that the debts exceed the assets. This should be presented to the jury as simple math. The use of a chart or graph, either created beforehand or prepared as the testimony progresses, is a key method of presenting this evidence. By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Testimony Crucial to Jury's Understanding: The term "fair valuation" and the issues pertaining to not including validly liened or fraudulently transferred property may be confusing in a vacuum. However, if these issues are important to your prosecution or defense of the action, have your witnesses testify about the issues and explain them so that the jury will know what you are referring them to when they receive this instruction. This should also be covered clearly and concisely in your closing argument, and potentially in the opening statement. By Susan Vaage

5-42 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4206

CACI 4206 Presumption of Insolvency

A debtor who is generally not paying [his/her/its] debts as they become due is presumed to be insolvent.

In determining whether [name of debtor] was generally not paying [his/her/its] debts as they became due, you may consider all of the following:

- (a) The number of [name of debtor]'s debts;
- (b) The percentage of debts that were not being paid;
- (c) How long those debts remained unpaid;
- (d) Whether legitimate disputes or other special circumstances explain any failure to pay the debts; and
- (e) [Name of debtor]'s payment practices before the period of alleged nonpayment [and the payment practices of [name of debtor]'s [trade/industry]].

If [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of debtor] was generally not paying debts as they became due, then you should find that [name of debtor] was insolvent unless [name of defendant] proves that [name of debtor] was solvent.

■ Civil Code section 3439.02(c) provides: "A debtor who is generally not paying his or her debts as they become due is presumed to be insolvent."

■ The Legislative Committee Comment to Civil Code section 3439.02 states: "Subdivision (c) establishes a rebuttable presumption of insolvency from the fact of general nonpayment of debts as they become due. ... The presumption imposes on the party against whom the presumption is directed the burden of proving that the nonexistence of insolvency as defined in subdivision (a) is more probable than its existence."

■ The Legislative Committee Comment to Civil Code section 3439.02 states: "In determining whether a debtor is paying its debts generally as they become due, the court should look at more than the amount and due dates of the indebtedness. The court should also take into account such factors as the number of the debtor's debts, the proportion of those debts not being paid, the duration of the nonpayment, and the existence of bona fide disputes or other special circumstances alleged to constitute an explanation for the stoppage of payments. The court's determination may be affected by a consideration of the debtor's payment practices prior to the period of alleged nonpayment and the payment practices of the trade or industry in which the debtor is engaged."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Itemize Elements in Chart: This instruction gives a road map for proof of nonpayment of debts. Each of these elements, if relevant, should figure prominently in the presentation of testimony and the closing statement, and should be itemized in a chart to clarify and emphasize that element to the jury. By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defense Must Attack Each Element: If you are defending against this issue, be prepared to attack each element of the evidence. For example, show that: the percentage of debt payment is high, either in numbers or amounts of debts; the standard in the industry is being met; there are bona fide disputes regarding each debt listed and, if those are excluded, the debts are being paid. Ask for a stronger and more definitive instruction of any exceptions that apply, such as percentages and exclusion of disputed debts. By Susan Vaage

CHAPTER 42 California Judicial Council Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act Instructions

5-42 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4207

CACI 4207 Affirmative Defense--Good Faith (Civ. Code, § 3439.08)

[Name of defendant] claims [he/she/it] is not liable to [name of plaintiff] [on the claim for actual fraud] because [name of defendant] [insert one of the following:]

[took the property from [name of debtor] in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value.]

[or]

[received the property from someone who had taken the property from [name of debtor] in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value.]

To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

[Use one of the following two sets of elements:]

[1. That [name of defendant] took the property from [name of debtor] in good faith; and

2. That [he/she/it] took the property for a reasonably equivalent value.]

[or]

[1. That [name of defendant] received the property from [name of third party], who had taken the property from [name of debtor] in good faith; and

2. That [name of third party] had taken the property for a reasonably equivalent value.]

"Good faith" means that [name of defendant/third party] acted without actual fraudulent intent and that [he/she/it] did not conspire with [name of debtor] or otherwise actively participate in any fraudulent scheme. If you decide that [name of debtor] had fraudulent intent and that [name of defendant/third party] knew it, then you may consider [his/her/its] knowledge in combination with other facts in deciding the question of [name of defendant/third party]'s good faith.

Directions for Use

This instruction is appropriate in cases involving allegations of actual fraud under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. The bracketed language in the first sentence is not necessary if the plaintiff is bringing a claim for actual fraud only.

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 3439.08 provides:

(a) A transfer or an obligation is not voidable under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.04, against a person who took in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value or against any subsequent transferee or obligee.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this section, to the extent a transfer is voidable in an action by a creditor under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.07, the creditor may recover judgment for the value of the asset transferred, as adjusted under subdivision (c), or the amount necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim, whichever is less. The judgment may be entered against the following:

(1) The first transferee of the asset or the person for whose benefit the transfer was made.

(2) Any subsequent transferee other than a good faith transferee who took for value or from any subsequent transferee.

(c) If the judgment under subdivision (b) is based upon the value of the asset transferred, the judgment shall be for an amount equal to the value of the asset at the time of the transfer, subject to adjustment as the equities may require.

(d) Notwithstanding voidability of a transfer or an obligation under this chapter, a good faith transferee or obligee is entitled, to the extent of the value given the debtor for the transfer or obligation, to the following:

(1) A lien on or a right to retain any interest in the asset transferred.

(2) Enforcement of any obligation incurred.

(3) A reduction in the amount of the liability on the judgment.

(e) A transfer is not voidable under paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.04 or Section

3439.05 if the transfer results from the following:

(1) Termination of a lease upon default by the debtor when the termination is pursuant to the lease and applicable law.

(2) Enforcement of a lien in a noncollusive manner and in compliance with applicable law, including Division 9 (commencing with Section 9101) of the Commercial Code, other than a retention of collateral under Sections 9620 and 9621 of the Commercial Code and other than a voluntary transfer of the collateral by the debtor to the lienor in satisfaction of all or part of the secured obligation.

■ Civil Code section 3439.03 provides: "Value is given for a transfer or an obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or an antecedent debt is secured or satisfied, but value does not include an unperformed promise made otherwise than in the ordinary course of the promisor's business to furnish support to the debtor or another person."

■ "The Legislative Committee comment to Civil Code section 3439.08, subdivision (a), provides that 'good faith,' within the meaning of the provision, 'means that the transferee acted without actual fraudulent intent and that he or she did not collude with the debtor or otherwise actively participate in the fraudulent scheme of the debtor. The transferee's knowledge of the transferor's fraudulent intent may, in combination with other facts, be relevant on the issue of the transferee's good faith' " (*Annod Corp. v. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Definition of "Reasonably Equivalent Value"

Needed: This instruction does not include a definition of "reasonably equivalent value," a term not readily understood by most non-attorneys. Supplement this instruction with a definitional instruction of "reasonably equivalent value," particularly if that is a strong element or defense in your case. By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Interweaving Elements: If you anticipate this as your primary defense, interweave these elements into your opening and closing statement. Make it your case "mantra." By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Consider Adding Non-Collusive Enforcement of Lien to Instruction: An element of "good faith" that is not defined in this instruction pertains to the non-collusive enforcement of a lien. Consider adding this element to the definitional instruction if it is an issue in your case. Remember that in California the preference of one debtor over another, if bona fide and in compliance with the law, is not actionable. By Susan Vaage

CACI 4208 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Actual and Constructive Fraud (Civ. Code, § 3439.09)

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law.

[[With respect to [name of plaintiff]'s claim of actual fraud,] to succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff] did not file [his/her/its] lawsuit within four years after the [transfer was made/obligation was incurred] [or, if later than four years, within one year after the [transfer/obligation] was or could reasonably have been discovered by [name of plaintiff]]. [[With respect to [name of plaintiff]'s claim of constructive fraud,] to succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff] did not file [his/her/its] lawsuit within four years after the [transfer was made/obligation was incurred].]

New June 2006; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

Read the first bracketed paragraph regarding delayed discovery in cases involving actual fraud, and the second in cases involving constructive fraud. Do not read the first bracketed phrases in those paragraphs unless the plaintiff has brought both actual and constructive fraud claims. This instruction applies only to claims brought under the UFTA.

- Civil Code section 3439.09 provides:

A cause of action with respect to a fraudulent transfer or obligation under this chapter is extinguished unless action is brought pursuant to subdivision (a) of Section 3439.07 or levy made as provided in subdivision (b) or (c) of Section 3439.07:

(a) Under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.04, within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred or, if later, within one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the claimant.

(b) Under paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.04 or Section 3439.05, within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a cause of action with respect to a fraudulent transfer or obligation is extinguished if no action is brought or levy made within seven years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

■ "[T]he UFTA is not the exclusive remedy by which fraudulent conveyances and transfers may be attacked. They may also be attacked by, as it were, a common law action. If and as such an action is brought, the applicable statute of limitations is section 338 (d) and, more importantly, the cause of action accrues not when the fraudulent transfer occurs but when the judgment against the debtor is secured (or maybe even later, depending upon the belated discovery issue)." (Macedo v. Bosio (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1044, 1051 [104 Cal.Rptr.2d 1] .)

■ "In the context of the scheme of law of which section 3934.09 is a part, where an alleged fraudulent transfer occurs while an action seeking to establish the underlying liability is pending, and where a judgment establishing the liability later becomes final, we construe the four-year limitation period, i.e., the language, 'four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred,' to accommodate a tolling until the underlying liability becomes fixed by a final judgment." LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Emphasize Defense Throughout Case: If you were not successful with this defense at summary judgment or a motion for directed verdict, the most important issue is the definition of "could reasonably have been discovered." CHAPTER 42A Matthew Bender Fraudulent Transfer Instructions

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions for use in litigation under California's Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12]. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on fraudulent transfers and the Act, see Ch. 42, California Judicial Council Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act Instructions. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on fraud and deceit, generally, see Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter includes instructions for use during litigation brought to void a transaction because of actual or constructive fraud, including several instructions defining applicable terms. The chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions defining applicable terms and on the burden of proof [see MB 4200A.01 -MB 4200A.06].
- Part B includes instructions on actual fraud--that is, when a debtor made a transfer or incurred an obligation with the intent to defraud creditors [see MB 4200A.20 -MB 4200A.24].
- Part C includes instructions on constructive fraud, including instructions on value and the debtor's insolvency as a result of a transfer or obligation [see MB 4200A.40 -MB 4200A.60].
- Part D includes instructions on defenses, including the right to sell property and to prefer creditors, the rights of good transferees and obligees, and time limitations in bringing an action under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [see MB 4200A.70 -MB 4200A.76].

The California Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act expressly provides that its provisions are supplemented by general principles of law, including the law relating to fraud, misrepresentation, estoppel, mistake, duress, and agency [Civ. Code § 3439.10]. Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, covers fraud and misrepresentation generally. Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions, contains instructions on estoppel. Instructions on mistake and duress are set forth in Ch. 3G, Matthew Bender Rescission of Contract Instructions. Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, includes instructions on agency. n

CHAPTER 42A Matthew Bender Fraudulent Transfer Instructions
PART A. DEFINITIONS, BURDEN OF PROOF, AND FUTURE CREDITORS

3-42A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4200A.01

MB 4200A.01 Definitions of Claim and Debt

[1] Instruction

A "claim" is a right to payment.

"Debt" means liability on a claim.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (d).

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used to define for the jury terms that will be used in future instructions.

The definition of "claim" omits the part of the statutory definition that explains that a right to payment may be a claim without being reduced to judgment and that it may be secured or unsecured, and so on [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(b); see also MB 4200A.01[3]]. This barrage of legal terms seems more likely to confuse than to enlighten the jury. The jury does not need to hear this part of the definition unless there is some contention that, for example, the right to payment is unsecured. In any case, that a claim exists even though the right to payment is unsecured is a point of law on which the jury need not be instructed. The court would not allow the debtor to defend against the claim on the grounds that the right to payment was unsecured, so presumably the jury has not heard any evidence on this point.

If the status of a particular right to payment as, for example, secured or unsecured is somehow at issue, or if the creditor wants to be sure that the jury knows that an unsecured debt qualifies as a claim, then of course the jury may be so instructed.

For an instruction explaining that certain obligations are not debts for the purpose of determining insolvency, see MB 4200A.51.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.01[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Definitions

The term "claim" is defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01(b) as a right to payment, whether liquidated or unliquidated, fixed or contingent, matured or unmatured, disputed or undisputed, legal or equitable, secured or unsecured. A claim exists whether or not the right is reduced to judgment [Civ. Code § 3439.01(b)].

The term "debt" is defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01(d) as a liability on a claim.

3-42A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4200A.02

MB 4200A.02 Definitions of Creditor and Debtor

[1] Instruction

A "creditor" is a person who has a claim.

A "debtor" is a person who is liable on a claim.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.01(c), (e); Weisenburg v. Cragholm (1971) 5 Cal.3d 892, 896-897, 97 Cal.Rptr. 862, 489 P.2d 1126 ; Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 1351, 1360, 251 Cal.Rptr. 859 ; Estate of Blanco (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 826, 831, 150 Cal.Rptr. 645 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used to define for the jury terms that will be used in future instructions. This instruction may be used in conjunction with MB 4200A.10 if the claim has not yet been reduced to judgment or otherwise finalized.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: --Transfers Before Judgment: It may be necessary to insert into the definitions the fact that the "creditor" is a person who "may become entitled to" a claim, and that a "debtor" is a person who "may become liable" on a claim, in keeping with the definitions in Civ. Code § 3429. For example, a "claim" can arise before a judgment is final [see Estate of Blanco (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 826, 831, 150 Cal.Rptr. 645 (claim arises when tort occurs and before action is commenced); Freeman v. LaMorte (1957) 148 Cal.App.2d 670, 675, 307 P.2d 734 (claim arises moment that fraud cause of action accrues)]. This is especially important in cases in which the transfer occurs before a judgment is entered, but after the debtor becomes "alerted" to the potential exposure [see MB 4200A.10]. By Susan Vaage

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.02[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Definitions

A "creditor" is a person who has a claim [Civ. Code § 3439.01(c)]. The term includes an assignee of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors [Civ. Code § 3439.01(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 493.010 ("general assignment for the benefit of creditors" defined)]. A person with a contingent claim for damages is a creditor within the meaning of this definition [Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 1351, 1360, 251 Cal.Rptr. 859]. However, if a person's contingent claim is litigated and denied, then that person is not entitled to the remedy of setting aside a fraudulent transfer, because the litigant was never a creditor under this Act [Weisenburg v. Cragholm (1971) 5 Cal.3d 892, 896-897, 97 Cal.Rptr. 862, 489 P.2d 1126 ; Estate of Blanco (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 826, 838, 150 Cal.Rptr. 645 ; see Allard v. De Lorean (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 464, 466 (person no longer creditor after claim's settlement); Ataka Am., Inc. v. Crateo, Inc. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 315, 318-319, 106 Cal.Rptr. 280 (creditor is not required to prove claim against debtor in third-party proceeding)].

The term "debtor" is defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01(e) as a person who is liable on a claim.

CHAPTER 42A Matthew Bender Fraudulent Transfer Instructions
PART A. DEFINITIONS, BURDEN OF PROOF, AND FUTURE CREDITORS

3-42A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4200A.03

MB 4200A.03 Definitions of Asset and Property

[1] Instruction

"Asset" means property of a debtor.

"Property" is anything that may be owned.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

"Asset" does not include property to the extent it is encumbered by a valid lien.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.01(a), (h).

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used to define the term "asset" for the jury. The optional paragraph of the instruction should be used when a party contends that property at issue is encumbered by a valid lien. This paragraph should be used with CACI No. 4200 and with the instructions in MB 4200A.04 and MB 4200A.05, which define "lien" and "valid lien," respectively.

This instruction does not instruct the jury on the exceptions for property that is generally exempt under nonbankruptcy law and property interests held in tenancy by the entireties [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(2), (3); see also MB 4200A.03[3][a]]. In the unlikely event of a factual issue involving either exception, an appropriate instruction based on Civ. Code § 3439.01(a) must be added to this instruction.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.03[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Definitions

An "asset" is property of a debtor, but assets do not include any of the following [Civ. Code § 3439.01(a) ; see, e.g., Cabral v. Martins (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 471, 483-484, 99 Cal.Rptr.3d 394 (while his mother still lived, son had no right to her property; home and other property owned by mother while alive was not "property of a debtor")]:

- Property that is encumbered by a valid lien [see Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Schroeder (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 834, 841-850, 101 Cal.Rptr.3d 854 (no relief under UFTA because creditor could not have obtained any net recovery if transfer were set aside and forced sale of property was sought, taking into account encumbrances and automatic homestead exemption; creditor has possible cause of action for resulting trust); Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 835, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884 (because encumbrance transaction not "above-board," property therefore considered asset)];
- Property that is generally exempt beyond any bankruptcy rule; or
- An interest in property held in tenancy by the entireties to the extent it is not subject to process by a creditor holding a claim against only one of the tenants.

The listed provisions exclude property that cannot generally be reached by a creditor through judicial proceedings to collect a debt [see Code Civ. Proc. § 704.210 (property that is not subject to enforcement of money judgment is exempt without making claim)].

The term "property" is defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01(h) as anything that may be the subject of ownership.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip:--Encumbered Property: If property is encumbered by a lien, the property is not included as an asset "to the extent" of the encumbrance (i.e. only net equity is included). This is important for measuring solvency. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip:--Example of Effect of Valid Lien: It may be helpful to add an example to the instruction to show what effect a valid lien has on determining if an asset exists. For example, "if you find that the property owned by the debtor had a value of $500,000, and that there was a valid lien of $200,000 on the property, then the equity in the property of up to $300,000 is an asset for the purposes of this action" [see MB 4200A.40]. By Susan Vaage

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip:--Unencumbered Property: Depending on the evidence to be presented at trial, it might also be helpful to consider the converse of this instruction--that is, that the term "asset" includes property to the extent that it is not encumbered by a valid lien. This may be particularly important if the parties are disputing the value of the property and the potential amount of an existing lien. Similarly, it may be necessary to explain the amount and value of a homestead exemption or other statutory exemption in determining value [see Code Civ. Proc. § 703.010 et seq.]. By Susan Vaage

MB 4200A.04 Definition of Lien

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A "lien" is a charge against or an interest in property to secure payment of a debt or performance of an obligation.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

It includes a security interest created by agreement.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

It includes a judicial lien.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

It includes a common law lien and a statutory lien.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3439.01(f).

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used to define "lien" for the jury. The three optional paragraphs should be used when a party contends that property at issue has a specific type of lien or liens against it. Any or all of the optional paragraphs may be included in the instruction as they are relevant to the facts alleged by the parties.

[3] Comment

The term "lien" is defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01(f) as it is defined in MB 4200A.04[1]. This definition was derived from the Bankruptcy Code [Legislative Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.01, Paragraph (6); see 11 U.S.C.S. § 101(37)]. The Bankruptcy Code also defines "judicial lien," "security interest," and "statutory lien" [11 U.S.C.S. § 101(36), (51), (53)]. These sections of the Bankruptcy Code should be used for instructions on these terms as needed.

A "valid lien" is a lien that is effective against the holder of a judicial lien.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.01(j); Pearlman v. Reliance Ins. Co. (1962) 371 U.S. 132, 141, 83 S.Ct. 232, 9 L.Ed.2d 190 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used to define the term "valid lien" for the jury. It should be used when a party maintains that property at issue is encumbered by a valid lien. The instruction should be used with the optional paragraph of the instruction in MB 4200A.03[1].

[3] Comment

The term "valid lien" is defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01(j) as it is defined in MB 4200A.05[1]. Under this definition, an equitable lien that may not be defeated by a judicial lien creditor is a valid lien [see Pearlman v. Reliance Ins. Co. (1962) 371 U.S. 132, 141, 83 S.Ct. 232, 9 L.Ed.2d 190 (upholding surety's equitable lien against fund owed to bankrupt contractor)].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In determining whether a [transfer/obligation] is fraudulent, it does not matter whether the creditor's claim arose before or after [the transfer was made/the obligation was incurred].

To recover, it is not necessary for Plaintiff to show that [he/she/it] was a creditor of _____ [name of debtor] when [he/she/it] [made the transfer/incurred the obligation]. Plaintiff need only show that [he/she/it] is now a creditor of _____ [name of debtor].

Authority: Civ. Code § 3439.04(a).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff was not a creditor of the debtor at the time of the alleged fraudulent transaction. It should be used as a supplemental instruction with the instructions in CACI No. 4201 and CACI No. 4202 on actual and constructive fraud under Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) and (b). This instruction must not be used with the instruction in CACI No. 4203 on constructive fraud under Civ. Code § 3439.05, because constructive fraud under Civ. Code § 3439.05 only applies to creditors whose claims arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.06[3][b].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Importance of Timing: This is a critical instruction in cases in which the debtor transferred before a final judgment, and it covers one of the elements that is most important to be explained to a jury. It also ties in to one of the badges of fraud--specifically, when the debtor became aware of his/her/its potential liability and exposure. By Susan Vaage

[3] Comment

[a] All Creditors Affected

When a debtor transfers property or incurs an obligation with the intent to defraud any creditor, then that transaction is fraudulent as to all of the debtor's creditors, whether their claims arose before or after the transaction [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a); see Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Schroeder (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 834, 841, 101 Cal.Rptr.3d 854 ; Kalway v. City of Berkeley (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 827, 837, 60 Cal.Rptr.3d 477 (statute inapplicable)]. The same rule applies to a constructively fraudulent transfer or obligation that was made or incurred without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange [Civ. Code § 3439.04(b)].

A transfer or obligation made or incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor if the debtor acted with actual intent to hinder, defraud, or delay any creditor [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a); Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Schroeder (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 834, 841, 101 Cal.Rptr.3d 854 ; Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 829, 834, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884]. Proof of actual fraud under Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) is in itself sufficient to establish that a transfer or an obligation is fraudulent. There is no need to show that the transfer or obligation also violates Civ. Code § 3439.04(b) [Reddy v. Gonzalez (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 118, 122-123, 10 Cal.Rptr.2d 55]. When a transfer is made or an obligation is incurred with actual intent to hinder, defraud, or delay even one creditor, then that transfer or obligation is fraudulent as to all creditors' claims whether the claim arose before or after the fraudulent transaction [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a); see MB 4200A.06 regarding future creditors].

MB 4200A.21 Malicious Intent Not Necessary

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To prove intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, it is not necessary to show that the debtor acted maliciously with the desire of causing harm to one or more creditors.

Authorities: Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal.2d 457, 462, 65 P.2d 1316 ; Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal.Rptr. 706 ; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when actual intent to defraud creditors is an issue and as a supplement to CACI No. 4201. It explains that malicious intent is not required. The instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 4200A.20.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.21[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Economy Refining and Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act

In Economy Refining & Service Co. v. Royal National Bank of New York [Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal.Rptr. 706] , the court of appeal held that it is not necessary to show that the debtor acted maliciously to prove that he or she intended to defraud creditors. It is sufficient to prove an intent to remove assets and thus make impossible the collection or satisfaction of a creditor's judgment [Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal.Rptr. 706].

Although Economy Refining was decided before the adoption of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12], that court's rejection of a malicious intent requirement is supported by the failure of both Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) and the Legislative Committee Comment to mention any such requirement.

Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) does not explain what constitutes actual intent to hinder, defraud, or delay a creditor, but the Legislative Committee Comment explains that the courts, in making this determination, consider those factors called "badges of fraud" [see Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04, Paragraphs (5) listing "badges of fraud" and (8) describing fraudulent activities similar to those found in Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal.Rptr. 706] . In all instances, the badges of fraud are objective and verifiable circumstances, for example, the debtor's transfer to an insider or the debtor's insolvency at the time of the transfer. Proof of the debtor's "real" intent is not required, as the debtor's real intent and the facts of the transaction are peculiarly within the knowledge of the person being charged with fraud. Intent to defraud may be proved instead by inference from the circumstances [Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal.2d 457, 462, 65 P.2d 1316].

For further discussion of intent to defraud, see MB 4200A.20[3][a]. For an instruction on and discussion of the badges of fraud, see MB 4200A.22.

PART B. ACTUAL FRAUD

3-42A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4200A.22

MB 4200A.22 Badges of Fraud

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The real intent of a person and the facts of a fraudulent transaction are peculiarly within the knowledge of the one being charged with fraud. Direct proof of fraudulent intent is often difficult and sometimes impossible. Proof of fraud may then come from circumstances surrounding the transaction.

In determining whether _____ [name of debtor] intended to hinder, delay, or defraud Plaintiff, there are certain circumstances that you may consider. These circumstances suggest that there may be fraud, but they do not prove fraud. The presence of one or more of these circumstances is merely evidence from which you may infer an intent to defraud.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.04(b); Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal.2d 457, 462, 65 P.2d 1316 ; Fross v. Wotton (1935) 3 Cal.2d 384, 393, 44 P.2d 350 ; Johnson v. Drew (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 614, 621, 32 Cal.Rptr. 540 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 227, 231, 2 Cal.Rptr. 917 ; Menick v. Goldy (1955) 131 Cal.App.2d 542, 548, 280 P.2d 844 ; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04, Paragraphs (5) and (6); see Heath v. Helmick (9th Cir. 1949) 173 F.2d 157, 161 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as a general introduction to CACI No. 4201, which describes the specific factors that must be considered in determining actual intent to defraud. This instruction may also be used with CACI No. 4200, which provides the essential factual elements of actual intent to defraud.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.22[3][b].

[3] Comment[a] Proving Intent to Defraud

From the very nature of the action, direct proof of fraudulent intent is difficult and sometimes an impossibility, as the debtor's real intent and the facts of the transaction are peculiarly within the knowledge of the person being charged with fraud [Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal.2d 457, 462, 65 P.2d 1316]. For this reason, proof of fraudulent intent must usually come by inference from circumstances surrounding the transfer [Fross v. Wotton (1935) 3 Cal.2d 384, 393, 44 P.2d 350 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 227, 231, 2 Cal.Rptr. 917]. Sometimes, though, there may be a document, letter, memo, or some other written proof of fraudulent intent. The courts and the Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04, codified in Civ. Code § 3439.04(b), have recognized certain factors, known as "badges of fraud," as significant in determining the existence of actual intent to hinder, defraud, or delay [see Civ. Code § 3439.04(b); Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04, Paragraphs (5) and (6); Heath v. Helmick (9th Cir. 1949) 173 F.2d 157, 161 ; Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 834, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884].

The existence of one or more badges of fraud does not prove intent to defraud, nor does it create a presumption of fraud. The presence of one or more of these factors is merely evidence from which the trier of fact may infer an intent to defraud [United States v. Real Prop. Located at 5208 Los Franciscos Way (E.D. Cal. 2003) 252 F.Supp.2d 1060, 1064 ; Johnson v. Drew (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 614, 621, 32 Cal.Rptr. 540 ; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04, Paragraphs (5) and (6)]. These factors are meant to provide guidance to the trial court, not compel a finding one way or the other [Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 829, 834, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884].

MB 4200A.23 Transfer With Secret Reservation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that there was an agreement between the debtor and _____ [name of transferee] when the property was transferred that the debtor would retain a secret interest in the property transferred, then this agreement would be a circumstance tending to show that the transfer was made with the intent to defraud creditors.

Authorities: Heath v. Helmick (9th Cir. 1949) 173 F.2d 157, 161 ; Bank of Cal. v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 1026, 1038, 190 Cal.Rptr. 54 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue concerning whether the debtor secretly retained rights in the transferred property. This instruction should be used with CACI No. 4200, which provides the essential factual elements of actual intent to defraud, CACI No. 4201, which describes the specific factors that must be considered in determining actual intent to defraud, and CACI No. 4202, which provides the essential factual elements of constructive intent to defraud.

[3] Comment

[a] Retention of Rights

When a debtor transfers property in deed absolute but retains rights, such as the rights to profits and income or the right to manage or repurchase the property, then there is an inference that the property was transferred with intent to defraud creditors [Heath v. Helmick (9th Cir. 1949) 173 F.2d 157, 161 ; Bank of Cal. v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 1026, 1038, 190 Cal.Rptr. 54].

PART B. ACTUAL FRAUD

3-42A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4200A.24

MB 4200A.24 Transfer Pursuant to Marital Dissolution Settlement or to Family Trust

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A transfer pursuant to a marital dissolution settlement or a transfer to a family trust may be set aside as a fraudulent transfer and is subject to scrutiny under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act.

Authorities: Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 838, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used if the case involves a marital dissolution and distribution of property that may be considered to be fraudulent.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.24[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Application of Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act to Dissolutions

The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act can be applied to a property settlement agreement. [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal.4th 657, 669, 3 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 74 P.3d 166]. A transfer before dissolution can be set aside as a fraudulent conveyance, as can a transfer after dissolution. If a court divides the marital property in the absence of an agreement by the parties, it must divide the property equally [Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 838, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884], which provides some protection for a creditor of one spouse only. In view of the overall policy of protecting creditors, it is unlikely that the legislature intended to grant married couples a one-time-only opportunity to defraud creditors by including the fraudulent transfer in a property settlement agreement [Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 839, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884].

MB 4200A.40 Definition of Value

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Value is given for a transfer or an obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or a pre-existing debt is secured or satisfied.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Value does not include an unperformed promise to furnish support to the debtor or another person [OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction) unless that promise was made in the ordinary course of the promisor's business].

Authorities: In re United Energy Corp. (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 589, 595-596 ; Mayors v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1986) 785 F.2d 757, 761 ; Civ. Code § 3439.03; Bank of Cal. v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 1026, 1040-1041, 190 Cal.Rptr. 54 ; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (4).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "value" when there is an issue concerning whether the debtor received reasonably equivalent value for the transferred property or the obligation incurred. The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act does not define "reasonably equivalent value" [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03; see MB 4200A.40[3][a]]. The second paragraph of the instruction is optional and should be used when there is evidence that an unperformed promise to support was given in exchange for the property transferred or the obligation incurred. The optional phrase in the second paragraph should be used if there is evidence that this unperformed promise to support was given in the regular course of the promisor's business. This instruction should be used with CACI No. 4202 and CACI No. 4203, and with the instruction in MB 4200A.41 on fair consideration.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.40[3][b].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: --Property Transferred for Amount of Liens

Only: This instruction (perhaps with appropriate modifications) can be used if the property is transferred for the amount of liens only and the argument is that the property is worth only that amount [see Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 825, 835, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 884 (property transferred for new note in amount of pre-existing lien, but court found that property had value over and above lien)]. By Susan Vaage

[3] Comment

[a] Definitions and Exceptions

Proof of a constructively fraudulent transfer under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act requires proof of a transfer made or obligation incurred without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(b), 3439.05; see also CACI No. 4200]. Unfortunately, the Act does not define "reasonably equivalent value" [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (3)]. However, the Act does provide that "value" is given for a transfer or obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or an antecedent debt is secured or satisfied [Civ. Code § 3439.03]. Value includes the satisfaction of a right that the parties believe in good faith to be binding, whether or not the right is legally enforceable [Mayors v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1986) 785 F.2d 757, 761 ; Bank of Cal. v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 1026, 1040-1041, 190 Cal.Rptr. 54]. Value also includes payments to reduce a restitution claim against the debtor because the claim is an antecedent debt (a liability on a "right to payment") [Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (d)] of the debtor [In re United Energy Corp. (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 589, 595-596 (applying California as well as federal fraudulent transfer law)].

In some circumstances, a promise that has not been performed may constitute value [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (4); see, e.g., Harper v. Lloyd's Factors (2d Cir. 1954) 214 F.2d 662, 663 (transfer of money for promise of factor to discount transferor's purchase-money notes given to fur dealer); Schlecht v. Schlecht (1926) 168 Minn. 168, 176-177, 209 N.W. 883 (transfer for promise to make repairs and improvements on transferor's home)]. A transfer in consideration of a negotiable note discountable at a commercial bank, or the purchase from an established, solvent institution of an insurance policy, annuity, or contract to provide care is also for value [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (4)]. However, value does not include a promise that has not been performed (made otherwise than in the ordinary course of the promisor's business) to furnish support to the debtor or another person [Civ. Code § 3439.03; see Springfield Ins. Co. v. Fry (N.D. Okla. 1967) 267 F.Supp. 693, 696 (transfer of property from husband to wife in return for promise of future support held invalid as to existing creditors); Warwick Mun. Employees Credit Union v. Higham (1969) 106 R.I. 363, 259 A.2d 852, 854 (transfer of property from parents to son in return for promise of future support not consideration); Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (4)].

For discussion of "fair consideration" and further discussion of "reasonably equivalent value," see MB 4200A.41[3][a].
