This instruction is based on Com. Code §§ 1201(a)(25), (27), 1202(a), (f). "Person" means an individual, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, limited liability company, association, joint venture, government, governmental subdivision, agency, or instrumentality, public corporation, or any other legal or commercial entity [*Com. MB 300H.17 Giving Notice or Notification

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A person "notifies" or "gives" a notice to another person by taking those steps that are reasonably necessary in the ordinary course of events to inform the other person, whether or not the other person actually does receive the notice.

Authority: Com. Code § 1202(d).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with those substantive instructions incorporating the concept of "giving notice" and "notification" under Commercial Code provisions.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Notice

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 1202(d). Certain Commercial Code sections only require that notice be given. Others, such as Com. Code § 2616, require that notice actually be received. Care should be taken to use the proper notice instruction and to distinguish giving and receiving notice from situations in which one party may be charged with constructive notice, as in MB 300H.18.

_____ [A person or An organization] "receives" a notice when:

(1) It comes to [his/her/its] attention; or

(2) It is duly delivered in a form reasonable under the circumstances at the place of business through which the contract was made, or at any other place held out by the receiving party as a place for receipt of notices.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

An organization exercises due diligence if it maintains reasonable routines for communicating significant information to the person conducting the transaction and the organization reasonably complies with these routines. Due diligence does not require a particular individual working for the organization to communicate the notice, unless it is part of that individual's regular duties, or the individual has reason to know of the transaction and that the transaction would be significantly affected by the information.

Authority: Com. Code §§ 1201(a)(25), (27), 1202(e), (f).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used only when receipt of notice or notification is at issue. The optional paragraph should be included when the party allegedly receiving notice is not a natural person.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code §§ 1201(a)(25), (27), 1202(e), (f). When only the giving of notice is required, the Commercial Code does not require that it be actually received so long as reasonable steps to inform are taken [Com. Code § 1202(d)].

"Send" means to deposit a properly addressed writing in the mail, or to deliver it for transmission by any other usual means of communication, with postage or other cost of transmission paid. The proper address is _____ [the address agreed to by Plaintiff and Defendant or any address reasonable under the circumstances].

Authority: Com. Code § 1201(a)(36).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "send" only in the context of the transmission of communications, not of goods. The choice in the second sentence depends on whether or not there has been an agreement as to the proper address.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 1201(a)(36). A communication is also deemed to be properly sent if it arrives within the time it would have arrived if properly sent [Com. Code § 1201(a)(36)].

"Signed" includes using any symbol executed or adopted with intention at that time to have the legal effect of a signature.

Authority: Com. Code § 1201(a)(37).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with instructions on the statute of frauds, contract modification, and related provisions in Parts B and C requiring signed writings.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Signature May Need Further Explanation: Most jurors are only accustomed to a person's signature (or initials). If that is not the situation in your case, you may need to carefully explain this. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Signatures and E-Mails: More and more commerce is conducted through the use of e-mails without the traditional signing of a contract. This instruction is broad enough to cover these situations. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 1201(a)(37). It is unclear how this definition applies in the age of electronic mail, computer-generated documentation, and similar "writings" that are not signed in the ordinary sense. However, it may be argued that adoption of a specific user code, as in a telex number, may comply with the broad definition of signed [see U.C.C. Comment No. 39 to Com. Code § 1201].

The California Supreme Court has held that a car dealership's name in a printed newspaper advertisement was a "signature" sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds. The Court stated that when an advertisement reasonably justifies the recipient's understanding that the communication was intended as an offer, the offeror's intent to authenticate his or her name as a signature can be established from the face of the advertisement [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 261, 276-278, 109 Cal.Rptr.2d 807, 27 P.3d 702].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The terms "writing" and "written" include printing, typewriting, or any other intentional reduction of information to tangible form.

Authority: Com. Code § 1201(a)(43).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "writing" with instructions involving the statute of frauds, parol evidence, and contract modification.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms: The phrase "or any other intentional reduction of information to tangible form" should be explained. The basic requirement is to provide some physical record of what took place. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 1201(a)(43). This definition of a writing suggests that electronic messages may not be considered written because they are not necessarily in tangible form. It could be argued, for example, that a telex or telegram is not a writing if it is reduced to tangible form by the receiving party and not the sending party. Similarly, computer-generated communications may be recorded internally in the machine or in storage, but it is difficult to consider this recording tangible. The Code appears to require some physical evidence of the parties' intent, even though it is no more than a match book with penciled notes [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2201]. On this basis, an electronic communication, such as an e-mail, may nevertheless qualify if it is recorded by the sender in a medium that permits reliable reproduction.

PART A. DEFINITIONS FOR SALE OF GOODS CONTRACTS

MB 300H.22 Definition of Bill of Lading

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A "bill of lading" is a document that is issued by a person who is in the business of transporting or forwarding goods. It shows that the goods were received for shipment.

Authority: Com. Code § 1201(a)(6).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the term "bill of lading" is used.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 1201(a)(6).

In one case, the court found that no implied agreement by a buyer to pay freight for ocean transport arose when the cargo was purchased "C+F, freight prepaid for delivery to Los Angeles," and the seller's check for freight was accepted by the shipper, although eventually it was dishonored. Terms in the shipper's bill of lading purporting to impose liability for freight on a broadly defined "Merchant" did not bind the C+F buyer in the absence of that buyer's signature or other evidence of acceptance of the terms [Mitsui O.S.K. Lines, Ltd. v. Dynasea Corp. (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 208, 210-213, 85 Cal.Rptr.2d 1]. For an instruction and discussion relating to the definition of "agreement," see MB 300H.07. For an instruction and discussion on the definition of "C. & F.," see MB 300H.174.

In another bill of lading case, 49 U.S.C. § 14706, which requires a carrier to issue a bill of lading that can limit its liability for loss or damage to goods, was found to preempt state shipping statutes [see Dictor v. David & Simon, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 238, 249-250, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 588 (in case arising out of interstate shipment of computer equipment by common carrier, plaintiff's conversion claim seeking monetary damages beyond limitation on liability in bill of lading was preempted)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART B. STATUTE OF FRAUDS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.30

MB 300H.30 Statute of Frauds Generally

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The law requires that Plaintiff demonstrate the existence of the alleged contract with certain written evidence or by unambiguous evidence of whole or partial performance. This requirement is called the statute of frauds. In this case, Plaintiff contends the parties' agreement satisfies the statute of frauds because _____ [state basis alleged for compliance].

As is set forth in the following instruction, it is your duty to determine whether there is sufficient evidence of the contract claimed by Plaintiff.

Authority: Com. Code § 2201.

[2] Use of Instruction

This introductory instruction should be used whenever one party has raised the statute of frauds as a bar to enforcing an agreement the other party asserts by way of claim or defense. This instruction should be followed by one or more of the following instructions on specific ways of satisfying the statute of frauds. Consult Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions, for additional instructions on the statute of frauds. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

To claim that the statute of frauds instruction is overcome by the doctrine of equitable estoppel (detrimental reliance), use the instruction in Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions, MB 300F.42.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plan Closing Accordingly: Attorneys often have difficulty with the statute of frauds. Thus, consider how a jury will react and plan your closing accordingly. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The statute of frauds writing requirement is set forth in Com. Code § 2201. Generally, the party asserting the validity of the contract by way of affirmative claim or defense has the burden of proving that the contract satisfies the statute of frauds [E. K. Wood Lumber Co. v. Moore Mill & Lumber Co. (9th Cir. 1938) 97 F.2d 402, 408].

The general requirement set forth in Com. Code § 2201(1) does not apply to certain "qualified financial contracts" [see Civ. Code § 1624(b)(2)] if either of the following is true:

- There is sufficient evidence to indicate that a contract has been made [see Civ. Code § 1624(b)(3)];
- or
- The parties have agreed, by means of a prior or subsequent written contract, to be bound by the terms of the qualified financial contract from the time they reach agreement (by telephone, by exchange of electronic messages, or otherwise) on those terms [Com. Code § 2201(4)].

For discussion of qualified financial contracts, see Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions, MB 300F.40[3].

The doctrine of equitable estoppel can be used to overcome the statute of frauds requirement if the party can show that he or she would suffer an unconscionable injury if the statute of frauds would prevent enforcement of an oral contract [Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 432, 444, 249 Cal.Rptr. 872 ; Irving Tier Co. v. Griffin (1966) 244 Cal.App.2d 852, 863-864, 53 Cal.Rptr. 469]. Unconscionable injury results from denying enforcement of a contract after one party is induced by another party to seriously change position relying on the oral agreement [Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 432, 444, 249 Cal.Rptr. 872 ; see Monarco v. Lo Greco (1950) 35 Cal.2d 621, 623-624, 220 P.2d 737 (estoppel to assert statute of frauds when necessary to prevent unconscionable injury or unjust enrichment)].

For instructions on exceptions to the writing requirement, see MB 300H.33 -MB 300H.35.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART B. STATUTE OF FRAUDS

MB 300H.31 Agreement in Signed Writing

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff alleges that there is a written agreement signed by Defendant sufficient to indicate that a contract for sale of a specific quantity of goods has been made between the parties. A writing is not insufficient merely because it omits or incorrectly states a term agreed on by the parties, such as the price term.

To prevail, Plaintiff must prove that the writing admitted in evidence:

- 1. Is sufficient to indicate a contract of sale was made between the parties;
- 2. Specifies an identifiable quantity of goods; and
- 3. Was signed by Defendant.

If you find the writing satisfies all of these requirements, the contract is enforceable to the extent of the quantity of goods specified in the writing.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

It is not necessary that there be only one writing or that each writing be signed or include all contract terms.

Authority: Com. Code § 2201(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the basis for satisfying the statute of frauds is alleged to be a writing signed by the party against whom it is to be enforced. The optional sentence is for use when more than one writing has been admitted and claimed to be the contract. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Underlying Reasons for Law: Some jurors will be surprised to learn that a written agreement can still be valid even if it omits terms such as price. Counsel should explain the reasons for the rule and the protections the law provides in these situations (e.g., the price must be reasonable, based on market quotations, etc.). By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A notation on a slip of paper indicating the sale of a certain quantity of goods and authenticated (as by a letterhead or initialing) by the person against whom enforcement is sought suffices to satisfy the statute [Com. Code § 2201(1); see U.C.C. Comment No. 1. to Com. Code § 2201]. A sufficient writing may be assembled from several documents, each containing portions of the agreement [Goodman v. Community S. & L. Ass'n. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 13, 22, 54 Cal.Rptr. 456].

The writing must be signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought, unless both parties are merchants [Com. Code § 2201(1), (2)]. In that instance, use MB 300H.32 on confirming a writing between merchants. The California Supreme Court has held that a car dealership's name in a printed newspaper advertisement was a "signature" sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 261, 276-278, 109 Cal.Rptr.2d 807, 27 P.3d 702 ; see MB 300H.20].

The required writing need not state all the material terms of the agreement, nor need it be precise as to the terms it does state. However, there must be some quantity stated, and recovery is limited to the quantity stated. The writing must afford a basis for believing that the testimony as to an oral agreement rests on a real transaction [U.C.C. Comment No. 1. to Com. Code § 2201].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART B. STATUTE OF FRAUDS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.32

MB 300H.32 Confirming Writing Between Merchants

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that the parties' agreement is an enforceable contract because it was confirmed in a writing that was received by Defendant. To establish an effective confirmation, Plaintiff must prove that each of the following elements have been established:

- 1. Plaintiff and Defendant were both merchants;
- 2. Plaintiff sent a signed writing sufficient to indicate a contract of sale was made between the parties, specifying an identifiable quantity of goods;
- 3. Defendant in fact received the confirming writing from Plaintiff within a reasonable time of the making of the alleged agreement;
- 4. Defendant had reason to know the contents of the confirming writing; and
- 5. Defendant failed to object in writing to the contents of the confirmation within 10 days of receiving the confirmation.

If you find that each of these elements has been established, the contract is enforceable against Defendant.

Authority: Com. Code § 2201(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the party asserting the contract by way of claim or defense is a merchant and contends that the statute of frauds is satisfied by a confirming writing received by a merchant. "Merchant" is defined in MB 300H.06.

Instructions should only be given on the elements that are at issue. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Silence Implies Consent: This is another situation where "silence implies consent." A merchant has 10 days to object to a confirmation or the merchant will be bound. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

If one merchant sends a writing in confirmation of the contract to another merchant, the writing satisfies the statute of frauds as to the recipient if (1) the writing satisfies the statute of frauds as to the sender, (2) the recipient has reason to know of the contents, and (3) the recipient fails to object to the contents in writing within 10 days of receipt [Com. Code § 2201(2)].

There is disagreement as to whether anyone in a trade or business should be considered a merchant for purposes of this instruction [see MB 300H.06 on the definition of "merchant"].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff contends that an enforceable oral agreement with Defendant was confirmed by partial performance by Plaintiff. For the agreement to be an enforceable contract, Plaintiff must prove each of the following:

- 1. That the goods were to be specially manufactured for Defendant;
- 2. That the goods were not suitable for sale to others in the ordinary course of Plaintiff's business;
- 3. That, before receiving notice of Defendant's repudiation, Plaintiff made _____ [a substantial beginning on the manufacture of the goods or commitments to procure the goods]; and
- 4. That Plaintiff's _____ [substantial beginning or commitment for procurement] was taken under circumstances that reasonably indicated that the goods were for Defendant.

Authority: Com. Code § 2201(3)(a).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the statute of frauds has been raised in defense and the seller asserts the partial performance exception for specially manufactured goods [see [3], below]. The optional language in the last two enumerations reflects the language of the Code and the appropriate choice should be made depending on the circumstances of a particular case. A preponderance of evidence instruction as the applicable standard of proof must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Conveying Meaning May Be Difficult:

Sometimes, it may be difficult to convey to jurors what is meant by this instruction. For example, in the second element how should you explain the meaning of "not suitable for sale to others"? By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

An oral contract is enforceable if goods are to be specially manufactured for the buyer and are not suitable for sale to others in the ordinary course of the seller's business. For the contract to be enforceable the seller, before repudiation and under circumstances that reasonably indicate that the goods are for the buyer, must have made either a substantial beginning on the manufacture of the goods or commitments for their procurement [Com. Code § 2201(3)(a)]. The rule of apportionment that applies in cases of partial payment or delivery [see MB 300H.34] may not apply here. One court enforced an entire oral contract although only a part was for specially manufactured goods [Distribu-Dor Inc. v. Karadanis (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 463, 468, 90 Cal.Rptr. 231].

MB 300H.34 Confirmation of Contract by Acceptance of Payment or Delivery

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Plaintiff contends that an enforceable oral agreement with Defendant was confirmed by Defendant's acceptance of payment. For the agreement to be enforceable, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] made payment for the goods and that the payment was accepted by Defendant. If payment was made and accepted for only a portion of the goods, the contract is enforceable against Defendant only to the extent of the goods for which payment was made and accepted.

[OR]

Plaintiff contends that an enforceable oral agreement with Defendant was confirmed by Defendant's acceptance of the goods. For the agreement to be enforceable, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant received and accepted the goods. If the amount of any goods that Plaintiff proves were received and accepted by Defendant was less than the total amount agreed on, the agreement is enforceable only to the extent of the goods received and accepted.

Authority: Com. Code § 2201(3)(c).

[2] Use of Instruction

The first paragraph of this instruction should be used when the buyer contends that the statute of frauds was satisfied by the seller's acceptance of payment. The second paragraph should be used when the seller contends that the goods were received and accepted by the buyer thereby satisfying the statute of frauds. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

A contract that does not satisfy the statute of frauds is enforceable with regard to goods for which payment has been made and accepted, or that have been received and accepted [Com. Code § 2201(3)(c)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART B. STATUTE OF FRAUDS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.35

MB 300H.35 Admission That Contract Was Made[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Plaintiff contends that Defendant has confirmed the existence of an enforceable oral agreement for the sale of _____ [specify quantity and type of goods] by admitting _____ [in (his/her/its) _____ (testimony/pleadings/ or specify other source of in-court admission)] that this agreement exists. For the agreement to be an enforceable contract, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant admitted both of the following:

1. That Defendant agreed to [buy/sell] _____ [specify type of goods] [from/to] Plaintiff; and

2. That this agreement was for the [purchase/sale] of _____ [specify quantity and type of goods].

[OR]

Defendant has admitted that [he/she/it] and Plaintiff entered into a contract for the sale of _____ [specify quantity and type of goods]. You are therefore to regard the existence of the contract and the quantity of _____ [specify type of goods] to be sold as established facts. There is a conflict between Plaintiff and Defendant as to the terms of that contract. Plaintiff claims _____ [specify contract terms alleged by Plaintiff]. Defendant claims _____ [specify contract terms alleged by Defendant]. It is your duty to weigh the evidence offered by both sides and decide what the terms of that contract are.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2201(3)(b); U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2201.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when it is alleged that the party against whom enforcement is sought has admitted the existence of an oral contract for the sale of goods [Com. Code § 2201(3)(b); see [3][c], below]. The first alternative should be used when the existence of the contract is a question for determination by the jury. The second alternative should be used when the facts admitted establish the existence of the contract as a matter of law [see [3][f], below (effect of admission)]. A preponderance of evidence instruction as the applicable standard of proof must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Must Still Prove Terms: There are many situations where parties agree that they entered into an oral contract, but disagree on the terms of the oral contract. The admission takes the oral contract out of the statute of frauds. However, the terms of the contract still have to be proved. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Exception to Writing Requirement

An otherwise valid contract that is not evidenced by a writing sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Com. Code § 2201(1) (statute of frauds) [see MB 300H.30 (requirements of Com. Code § 2201(1))] is nonetheless enforceable if the party against whom enforcement is sought admits in his or her pleading, in testimony, or otherwise in court that a contract for sale was made. However, the contract is not enforceable beyond the quantity of goods admitted [Com. Code § 2201(3)(b)]. The adoption of Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) in California [Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) was adopted in 1988, but did not become effective until January 1, 1990. Stats. 1988, ch. 1368, § 18; Stats. 1988, ch. 1359, § 11] means that it is no longer possible to admit the contract in court and still treat the statute of frauds as a defense [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2201]. What constitutes an admission sufficient to overcome the statute of frauds, and the effect of such an admission once made, are discussed in [b] through [f], below. For further discussion, see Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3].

[b] In-Court Admission by Party Against Whom Enforcement Is Sought

Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) provides that the admission of a contract must be made by "the party against whom enforcement was sought ... in his or her pleading, testimony, or otherwise in court." The admission must be an in-court admission, sometimes referred to as a "judicial admission" [see, e.g., Roth Steel Products v. Sharon Steel Corp. (6th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 134, 142]. This means that, for example, an admission concerning the same contract in a different action involving a different party does not meet the requirements of Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) because it is not an in-court admission [International Commodities Export Co. v. Wolfkill Feed & Fertilizer Corp. (9th Cir. 1981) 32 U.C.C. Rptg. Serv. 687, 691]. The courts have recognized admissions in depositions [Roth Steel Products v. Sharon Steel Corp. (6th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 134, 142 ; Oskey Gasoline & Oil Co., Inc. v. Continental Oil (8th Cir. 1976) 534 F.2d 1281, 1284 ; Ursa Farmers Cooperative Co. v. Trent (1978) 58 Ill. App. 3d 930, 374 N.E.2d 1123, 1125], on cross-examination [Farmers Elevator Co. of Reserve v. Anderson (Mont. 1976) 552 P.2d 63, 65], and even in affidavits as in-court admissions [Davis v. Aandewiel (Ariz. App. 1972) 492 P.2d 758, 759]. A deposition is not "in court" when it is not properly before the trial court [Lippold v. Beanblossom (1974) 23 Ill. App. 3d 595, 319 N.E. 2d

Obviously a party is bound by its own admissions. When a party will be bound by an admission by another person is a question of agency law [Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]]. If an agent or officer who is authorized to contract on behalf of a party admits the existence of an oral contract, the agent's or officer's admission is effective against the party under Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) [Roth Steel Products v. Sharon Steel Corp. (6th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 134, 142-143 (agent); Providence Granite Co., Inc. v. Joseph Rugo, Inc. (Mass. 1972) 291 N.E. 2d 159, 160 (officer)]. The deposition of a former employee is not binding on the former employer [Miller v. Sirloin Stockade (Kan. 1978) 578 P.2d 247, 249].

[c] What Constitutes an Admission

For an oral contract to be enforceable under Com. Code § 2201(3)(b), the in-court statement [see [b], above] must be an admission. A hypothetical or conditional statement is not an admission [Lish v. Compton (Utah 1976) 547 P.2d 223, 226 ; Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]], but it is not necessary that the party expressly declare that a contract was made. It is enough if the words or admitted conduct of the party reasonably lead to that conclusion [Quaney v. Tobyne (1984) 236 Kan. 201, 689 P.2d 844, 850-851]. Even when the party expressly denies the existence of a contract, there may be an admission if the party testifies to facts that establish a contract [Quaney v. Tobyne (1984) 236 Kan. 201, 689 P.2d 844, 850-851 ; Lewis v. Hughes (Md. App. 1975) 276 Md. 247, 346 A.2d 231, 234-235 ; see Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]].

A merely technical and procedural admission, as when a mere technical admission is made solely in connection with a motion to dismiss [Anthony v. Tidwell (Tenn. 1977) 560 S.W. 2d 908, 910, 23 U.C.C. Rptg. Serv. 561], is not considered an actual admission for the purposes of Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) [Hawkland UCC Series § 2-201:06; White & Summers, Uniform Commercial Code, Ch. 2, § 2-5 (2d ed. 1980)].

The only term that the admission must contain is a quantity term, because Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) provides that the contract admitted may not be enforced beyond the quantity of goods admitted. Even the quantity term need be only definite enough to permit the court to enforce it. For example, a promise "to pay for those cans necessary for the canning season then underway" has been enforced under Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) as a sufficient admission of a requirements contract [Continental Can Co. v. Poultry Processing, Inc. (D. Me. 1986) 649 F.Supp. 570, 575]. The determination of the disputed terms of the contract is an issue of fact to be resolved consistently with the admitted terms [Dangerfield v. Markel (N.D. 1974) 222 N.W. 2d 373]. The admission does not require "a contract complete in all its terms, but ... a transaction sufficient to stand as proof that the parties did in fact enter into a contractual relationship" [Jackson v. Meadows (1980) 153 Ga. App. 1, 264 S.E. 2d 503, 505].

[e] Voluntary and Involuntary Admissions

Although there has been some controversy on this point, especially in pre-Code cases [see discussion in Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]], most courts [see, e.g., Lewis v. Hughes (Md. App. 1975) 276 Md. 247, 346 A.2d 231, 235-236 ; Cohn v. Fisher (1972) 118 N.J. Super. 286, 287 A.2d 222, 227], and most scholars [see, e.g., Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]; Duesenberg, The Statue of Frauds in its 300th Year: The Challenge of Admissions in Court and Estoppel, 33 Bus. Law. 1859, 1861-1864 (1978); Comment, The Use of Oral Admissions To Lift the Bar of the Statute of Frauds: UCC Section 2-201(3)(b), 65 Cal. L. Rev. 150, 160 (1977)], now agree that the admission required by Com. Code § 2201(3)(b) need not be voluntary. "The other party to the purported agreement may be compelled to admit or deny the oral agreement" [Dangerfield v. Markel (N.D. 1974) 222 N.W. 2d 373, 378 ; see, e.g., Oskey Gasoline & Oil Co., Inc. v. Continental Oil (8th Cir. 1976) 534 F.2d 1281, 1283-1285 (admission elicited during deposition)].

[f] Effect of Admission

The in-court admission does not conclusively establish the contract. The admission is merely evidence against the party making it of the truth of the facts so admitted. As against the other party, it is not even evidence [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2201]. This is to prevent the defendant from binding the plaintiff by an admission that misrepresents the terms of the contract [Comment, The Use of Oral Admissions To Lift the Bar of the Statute of Frauds: UCC Section 2-201(3)(b), 65 Cal. L. Rev. 150, 153 (1977)]. Although the in-court admission is merely evidence of the contract, the facts admitted may establish the existence of the contract as a matter of law [Lewis v. Hughes (Md. App. 1975) 276 Md. 247, 346 A.2d 231, 235-236 ; Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]], or the question may be one for jury determination [Bender's U.C.C. Service, Duesenberg & King, Sales and Bulk Transfers, § 2.04[3]]. Once the contract is admitted, the bar of the statute of frauds is removed [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2201; Continental Can Co. v. Poultry Processing, Inc. (D. Me. 1986) 649 F.Supp. 570, 575] , and the other terms of the contract may be established by parol evidence [Continental Can Co. v. Poultry Processing, Inc. (D. Me. 1986) 649 F.Supp. 570, 575 ; Dangerfield v. Markel (N.D. 1974) 222 N.W. 2d 373 ; Giant Peanut Company v. Carolina Chemicals, Inc. (1973) 129 Ga. App. 718, 200 S.E. 2d 918, 920 ; but see Allen v. Harris Truck and Trailer Sales, Inc. (E.D. Mo. 1980) 490 F.Supp. 488, 489-490 (holding that there is no admission when both parties agree contract was made but disagree as to its terms, because defendant has not then admitted to contract on terms alleged by plaintiff), which was criticized as incorrect in Benfield, General Provisions, Sales, Bulk Sales, 36 Bus. Law. 1267, 1270 (1981) and in Hawkland UCC Series § 2-201:06]. A quantity term must be admitted, because "the contract is not enforceable ... beyond the quantity of goods admitted" [Com. Code § 2201(3)(b)].

PART C. FORMATION OF CONTRACTS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.40

MB 300H.40 Formation of Contracts for the Sale of Goods

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A contract for the sale of goods may be made in any manner sufficient to show an agreement between the parties, including conduct by both parties that recognizes the existence of such an agreement.

It is not necessary to establish the moment that the contract was made to find that an agreement existed that was sufficient to constitute a contract for the sale of goods.

Authority: Com. Code § 2204.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introduction to one or more of the following instructions on offer and acceptance. The instruction in MB 300H.07 defining "agreement" should also be used with this instruction.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Careful Planning Is Advisable: Usually, proving the existence of an agreement is not challenging. Yet, particularly if the proof relates to the "conduct by both parties," careful planning is advisable. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using Instruction: The last portion of this instruction applies to situations when a contract consists of several exchanges of writings, or a combination of writings and conduct. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment[a] Formation of Contracts

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2204. The instruction reflects the Commercial Code's liberal approach toward contract formation. However, the contract may still fail for indefiniteness if the court determines there is no reasonably certain basis for giving an appropriate remedy [Com. Code § 2204]. When the parties merely leave out one of the terms that can be supplied by the Commercial Code's term filling provisions [Com. Code §§ 2304-2311], there is no difficulty in enforcing the agreement. Oral contracts or those based on the conduct of the parties carry a much greater risk that an indispensable term will not be sufficiently articulated, causing the contract to fail for indefiniteness.

MB 300H.41 Offer and Acceptance Generally

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To establish a contract for the sale of goods, Plaintiff must prove both of the following:

- 1. That one of the parties made an unmistakable offer to sell or buy the goods in question; and
- 2. That the other party accepted the offer by a definite and timely expression of acceptance.

It is for you to decide, based on all of the circumstances of the transaction, including the written and oral statements of the parties, their conduct, and the surrounding circumstances, whether a contract for the sale of goods was made by the parties in this case.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2204; Lonergan v. Scolnick (1954) 129 Cal.App.2d 179, 182, 276 P.2d 8 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as the basic instruction on offer and acceptance. Appropriate instructions defining offer and acceptance should be selected from the following instructions or from the instructions in Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions. When a contract by conduct is alleged, the instruction in MB 300H.48 should be used. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Alternate Phrase: The phrase "unmistakable offer" in the first element seems awkward. An alternate term is "definite offer." By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Offer and Acceptance Generally

Com. Code § 2204 states generally the manner of contract formation, broadly providing that a contract for the sale of goods may be made "in any manner sufficient to show agreement." However, this instruction focuses on the traditional exchange of offer and acceptance [Loneragan v. Scolnick (1954) 129 Cal.App.2d 179, 182, 276 P.2d 8 ; see Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 22].

[a] Offer Defined

Although the term "offer" is not explicitly defined in the Commercial Code, it is clear that an offer is a proposal inviting acceptance [Com. Code § 2206(1)(a)]. The Commercial Code recognizes that offers may be communicated in any of several ways, written, oral, or by conduct [Com. Code § 2204; U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2204]. Instructions in Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions, address some of the special issues that may arise regarding communication and definiteness of the offer.

MB 300H.43 Revocable and Irrevocable Offers

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

If Defendant proves that the offer was revoked at any time before it was accepted, there was no contact between the parties.

[OR]

Defendant's attempted revocation of the offer was not effective if Plaintiff proves all of the following:

- 1. That the offer was written and signed;
- 2. That the offer stated that it _____ [will be "held open" or is "firm" or is "guaranteed"] _____ [for a stated time or until the happening of a stated event]; and
- 3. That the offer was accepted before the time set in it.

[OR]

Defendant's attempted revocation of the offer was not effective if Plaintiff proves all of the following:

1. That the offer was written and signed;

2. That the offer stated that it _____ [will be "held open" or is "firm" or is "guaranteed"] _____ until a reasonable period of time has passed; and

3. That the offer was accepted before a reasonable period of time had passed.

It is for you to determine what a reasonable period of time was under the circumstances.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1586; Com. Code § 2205(a).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when revocation is an issue. The first option should be used when one party contends that the offer was revoked before acceptance. When necessary, general instructions defining consideration or revocation should be included [see Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions]. If the offer is a firm offer for a stated time by a merchant, the second optional instruction should be given. The third option is used when the merchant's firm offer does not state a time for acceptance. The definition of "merchant" in MB 300H.06, and "signed" in MB 300H.20, should be given as well. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Closing Requires Care: The term "revoke" will not be familiar to some jurors. Especially when there is a "checklist" of points to prove, your closing must follow the related evidence with care. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Revocable and Irrevocable Offers

Ordinarily, an offer can be revoked any time before acceptance [Civ. Code § 1586]. The Commercial Code is unique in limiting revocation of offers unsupported by consideration. However, this limitation applies only when a "firm" offer is made in a signed writing by a merchant [Com. Code § 2205(a)]. The writing need be no more than a hand written memorandum signed by the merchant or on the merchant's letterhead. A telegram with a typewritten signature also satisfies the requirement of a signed writing [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2205].

PART C. FORMATION OF CONTRACTS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.44

MB 300H.44 Firm Offer by Merchant to Construction Contractor[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant's attempt to revoke the offer to supply goods to Plaintiff was not effective if Plaintiff proves all of the following:

- 1. That the offer was made during a period of 10 days after award of the construction contract to the prime contractor;
- 2. That Defendant knew or should have known that Plaintiff was licensed; and
- 3. That Defendant knew or should have known that Plaintiff would rely on the offer in making its bid on a construction contract with a third party.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, if you find that Defendant's offer was made orally or by telephone for a price of $2,500 or more, _____ [Plaintiff or Plaintiff's agent] must have confirmed it by a writing _____ [sent or mailed] within 48 hours after the offer was made, or Defendant was not bound by the offer and Plaintiff may not recover from Defendant.

Authority: Com. Code § 2205(b).

[2] Use of Instruction

The instruction should be used in suits by contractors when the merchant failed to honor a bid and the contractor was forced to buy the goods elsewhere at greater expense or effort or loss of time. For a burden of proof instruction on the same subject, see Ch. 3I, Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions, MB 300I.05. The optional instruction must be used when there is a fact issue as to whether the offer was oral or for more than $2,500 or as to whether a confirmation was sent within 48 hours. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

When a merchant renders an offer, oral or written, to a licensed contractor and the merchant knows or should know that the contractor is licensed and that the contractor will rely on the offer in submitting a bid on a construction contract, the offer is irrevocable for 10 days after the award of the contract to the prime contractor. However, the offer is only irrevocable for 90 days after the date the offer was made. An oral offer for a price of $2,500 or more must be confirmed in writing by the contractor within 48 hours after it is rendered or the merchant is released from the offer [Com. Code § 2205(b)].

Before the enactment of Com. Code § 2205(b), reliance on an offer unsupported by consideration gave rise to a promissory estoppel, allowing the offeree who detrimentally relied to enforce the contract [see Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal.2d 409, 414-415, 333 P.2d 757].

MB 300H.45 Acceptance Generally

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An offer to make a contract can be accepted by any means and in any manner that is reasonable under the circumstances.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

An offer to make a contract that expressly states a particular manner or means of acceptance can be accepted only by the means or manner stated.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

An offer to make a contract under circumstances that require the offer to be accepted only by a particular manner or means, can be accepted only by that manner or means.

Authority: Com. Code § 2206(1)(a).

[2] Use of Instruction

This basic acceptance instruction should be used with the general offer and acceptance instructions [see MB 300H.40, MB 300H.41]. The optional instructions should be included when one party contends the offer expressly or impliedly required a particular method of acceptance. Instructions in Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions, may apply when the adequacy or definiteness of the acceptance is an issue.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Acceptance

The Commercial Code gives wide latitude in the method or manner in which an offer may be accepted. An offer is to be construed as inviting acceptance in any manner and by any medium reasonable under the circumstances. However, a specific manner of acceptance may be required by the offer itself or the circumstances [Com. Code § 2206(1)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART C. FORMATION OF CONTRACTS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.46

MB 300H.46 Acceptance by Shipment

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff's order for prompt or current shipment was accepted if Plaintiff proves that Defendant _____ [made a prompt promise to ship the goods or promptly shipped by third party carrier conforming or nonconforming goods].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, shipment of nonconforming goods does not constitute an acceptance if Defendant notified Plaintiff within a reasonable time that the shipment was offered only as an accommodation to Defendant.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2206(1)(b), 2504; U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2206.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when it is contended that an order for prompt shipment of goods was accepted by shipment of goods or a promise to do so. The optional paragraph may be given if nonconforming goods were shipped merely to accommodate the defendant. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2206 expressly permits acceptance of an order by prompt shipment of the ordered goods. Shipment means by common carrier, not by the seller's truck [Com. Code § 2504; U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2206]. However, unless this beginning of performance is promptly followed by notice of acceptance, the offeror is not bound [Com. Code § 2206(2)].

Another variation is when the offer, by its terms or circumstances, specifically invites acceptance by conduct without notice to the offeror, taking it out of the above general rule. In such an instance, acceptance by shipment alone is arguably in accordance with the manner specified and is binding on the offeror [Davis v. Jacoby (1934) 1 Cal.2d 370, 378, 34 P.2d 1026].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART C. FORMATION OF CONTRACTS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.47

MB 300H.47 Acceptance or Confirmation Stating Additional Terms

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A definite and timely expression of acceptance by Plaintiff stating terms additional to or different from those offered by Defendant is effective to form a contract, unless Defendant proves that the acceptance expressly required that Defendant agree to the additional or different terms.

If you determine that the acceptance expressly required Defendant to agree to _____ [additional or different terms] in the acceptance, you must also find that Defendant accepted these terms to find that the offer and acceptance of the parties created a contract.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2207(1); Textile Unlimited, Inc. v. A.B.M.H. & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 240 F.3d 781, 787-788 ; Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 Cal.3d 90, 93-94, 141 Cal.Rptr. 157, 569 P.2d 751 ; PMC Inc. v. Porthole Yachts Ltd. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 882, 887-889, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 832 .

This instruction should be used only when it is contended that additional or different terms in an acceptance rendered the acceptance ineffective. The optional paragraph is for use when there has been an express conditional acceptance. Sections MB 300H.63 and MB 300H.64 address the question of what the terms of the contract are when the acceptance contains additional or different terms. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Contract Formation: This instruction deals with the common situation when the buyer and seller use their own standard forms that do not match. A contract can still be formed even though the terms of the contract will have to be decided by the court or the jury [see MB 300H.63 for additional terms in non-merchant acceptances, and MB 300H.64 for additional terms in merchant acceptances]. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

The Commercial Code recognizes that in many commercial transactions the parties intend to make a contract, and may even complete performance, before it is realized that the terms of their offer and acceptance do not match [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 Cal.3d 90, 141 Cal.Rptr. 157, 569 P.2d 751]. Com. Code § 2207 attempts to preserve the parties' basic intent by permitting acceptances stating different terms to operate as effective acceptances unless they clearly require the other party to agree to the added or different terms [see National Controls, Inc. v. Commodore Bus. Machines, Inc. (1985) 163 Cal.App.3d 688, 693, 209 Cal.Rptr. 636]. Thus, conditional acceptances must expressly state that they are conditional to prevent a contract's formation without acquiescence in the additional terms [see Textile Unlimited, Inc. v. A.B.M.H. & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 240 F.3d 781, 787-788 (contract containing new terms including arbitration clause was not formed under Com. Code § 2207(1) when acceptance was expressly made conditional on assent to new terms and no specific and unequivocal assent was given); PMC Inc. v. Porthole Yachts Ltd. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 882, 887-889, 76 Cal.Rptr.2d 832 (no acceptance found under Com. Code § 2207(1) due to timing of addendum to agreement sent on last day to accept, contents of addendum that contained new term, and cover letter emphasizing conditional nature of acceptance)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART C. FORMATION OF CONTRACTS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.48

MB 300H.48 Agreement Evidenced by Conduct

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. ____

To establish that a contract existed between the parties, Plaintiff must prove that there was conduct by the parties that recognizes the existence of a contract for the sale of goods even though the parties' written documents were not sufficient to show agreement.

In determining whether the conduct of the parties establishes a contract, you should consider all of the evidence before you, including the statements of the parties, their conduct, and the surrounding circumstances.

If you find that the conduct of the parties establishes a contract, the terms of the contract are those on which the writings of both parties agree and any additional terms supplied by law.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2207(3); Textile Unlimited, Inc. v. A.B.M.H. & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 240 F.3d 781, 788 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used alone or in conjunction with the general offer and acceptance instructions when it is contended that the conduct of the parties is sufficient to establish a contract. The court will instruct the jury as to what terms are supplied by operation of law [see MB 300H.110 -MB 300H.126 (open terms), MB 300H.140-MB 300H.157 (warranties)]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Closing Must Be Clear: Some jurors will be reluctant to "find" a contract when there is nothing in writing that specific. Thus, if your closing relies in effect on circumstantial evidence, you need to be particularly clear in your statements. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2207(3) is a catch-all provision intended to operate when the parties conduct themselves as if there is an agreement such as by delivering goods and making payment, without ever agreeing on contract terms. This situation can arise when the acceptance is expressly conditional on different terms and these terms are never agreed to, but the parties proceed as if they have a contract. Com. Code § 2207(3) recognizes that a contract is in existence in this type of situation [see, e.g., Textile Unlimited, Inc. v. A.BMH & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 240 F.3d 781, 788 (although contract was not formed under Com. Code § 2207(1), parties did not dispute that through their actions they formed contract under Com. Code § 2207(3))]. The terms are those on which the party's writings agreed, plus any other terms implied by law. One court has held that when conduct by a subcontractor and seller showed that a contract had been formed despite materially differing terms of the purchase order and invoice, the trial court's failure to instruct the jury on Com. Code § 2207 was prejudicial error [Steiny and Company, Inc. v. California Electric Supply Co., Inc. (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 285, 294-296, 93 Cal.Rptr.2d 920].

MB 300H.60 General Instruction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The terms of the parties' contract are those on which their confirming writings agree or those terms set forth in a writing intended to be the written expression of their agreement.

However, the terms of the parties' basic agreement may be supplemented, explained, or modified as described in the following instructions.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2202, 2207.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used, as appropriate, to introduce one or more of the instructions in this Part on contract terms.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Contract Terms

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2202. It restates the general proposition that in determining what terms are part of the contract, the Code starts with the parties' confirming memoranda or written expression of their agreement. Additional terms may be provided by several sources, including different terms in the acceptance [see MB 300H.63], evidence of trade custom or usage [see MB 300H.61], or consistent additional terms from other sources [see MB

300H.62]. Before any of these additional terms may be considered for inclusion in the contract, the Code's parol evidence requirements must be met [see MB 300H.61].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART D. CONTRACT TERMS

MB 300H.61 Evidence Supplementing and Explaining Terms

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The parties' agreement may be supplemented or explained by any of the following:

- 1. A course of dealing between the parties;
- 2. A practice or custom of trade; or
- 3. A course of performance.

Plaintiff contends that the parties' agreement may be supplemented or explained in the following way[s]:
_____ [list supplemental or explanatory material].

To sustain this contention, Plaintiff must prove that there was such a course of dealing, practice or custom of trade, or course of performance and how it supplemented or explained the contract between the parties.

Authority: Com. Code § 2202(a).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when evidence is offered to explain or supplement contract terms. Instructions defining course of dealing [see MB 300H.11], course of performance [see MB 300H.13], and trade usage [see MB 300H.12] should be included as appropriate. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

The Commercial Code's parol evidence rule [Com. Code § 2202] does not bar evidence that explains or supplements agreed-on terms. Even an integrated agreement can be explained or supplemented by evidence of a course of dealing, course of performance, or trade usage [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2202]. If this evidence is sufficient to show the bargain of the parties, the supplemental terms become part of the parties' agreement [Com. Code § 1201(a)(3)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART D. CONTRACT TERMS

MB 300H.62 Evidence of Consistent Additional Terms

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In addition to those terms that appear in the parties' _____ [confirming writings or final written expression of agreement], you may find that the parties agreed to additional terms.

In this case Plaintiff contends that the following additional terms were agreed on by the parties:
_____ [list additional terms].

For these terms to be considered part of the contract, Plaintiff must prove that they were offered and accepted by the parties.

Authority: Com. Code § 2202(b).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue as to the parties' agreement on supplemental terms. This instruction should be used only after the court has ruled that the parties' written agreement is not a final integration under Com. Code § 2202(b) and that the additional terms are not contradictory. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: Providing proof of "additional terms" may often be difficult. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

In general, the written terms of the contract may be supplemented by evidence of consistent, additional terms [Com. Code § 2202(b)]. However, before evidence of consistent additional terms can go to the jury, Com. Code § 2202(b) explicitly requires the court to determine that the parties did not intend their written agreement to be the complete and exclusive statement of the contract's terms. There is no similar statement of the court's role regarding evidence of contradictory terms. However, it appears the court must also find that the additional terms are consistent with the other terms that the parties have agreed on before it can admit evidence of agreement on those terms. Therefore, the instruction does not require the jury to determine whether the terms are consistent.

PART D. CONTRACT TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.63

MB 300H.63 Added Terms in Non-Merchant's Acceptance or Confirmation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An acceptance may contain terms in addition to or different from the terms of the offer. These additional or different terms do not become part of the contract, unless they are accepted by the other party.

In this case Plaintiff contends that the following _____ [additional or different] terms were offered to and subsequently accepted by Defendant: _____ [list additional or different terms in acceptance].

To find that these terms became part of the parties' agreement, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant indicated acceptance of these terms within a reasonable time.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2206(1)(a), 2207(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction on acceptance in MB 300H.47 when the parties dispute the acceptance of different or additional terms included in the initial acceptance. It applies when both parties to the transaction are not merchants. The instruction in MB 300H.64 should be used when both parties are merchants. If merchant status is an issue, the instruction in MB 300H.06 should be given first. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Showing Acceptance Can Be Difficult: It often will be difficult to demonstrate that terms "in addition to or different" were "accepted" by the other side.

Particularly "different" terms will not resonate with some jurors. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Contract Formation on Original Offer: This instruction sets forth the rule for non-merchant acceptances that include additional terms. The rule is that a contract is still formed based on the original offer. The additional terms are merely a proposal that must be accepted by the other party to become part of the contract. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Under Com. Code § 2207, the common law mirror image rule for offer and acceptance has been abandoned. An acceptance may now state different or added terms and still operate as an effective acceptance, unless acceptance is expressly conditioned on agreement to such added or different terms. As between non-merchants or a merchant and a non-merchant, the offeree's added terms are merely proposed for acceptance by the offeror. They do not become part of the contract unless agreed to by the offeree. The additional terms must be accepted in a reasonable time [Com. Code § 2206(1)(a)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART D. CONTRACT TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.64

MB 300H.64 Added Terms in Merchants' Acceptance or Confirmation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An acceptance may contain terms in addition to or different from the terms of the offer. Any such additional or different terms become part of the contract unless:

- 1. The additional or different terms were previously objected to by the receiving party; or
- 2. Notice of objection to the additional or different terms was given within a reasonable time after the terms were received.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2207(2); Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 Cal.3d. 90, 141 Cal.Rptr. 157, 569 P.2d 751 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when both parties are merchants and the acceptance contained terms in addition to or different from the offer. However, it should only be given when there is some disputed issue of fact to be considered by the jury, such as whether the additional or different terms were previously objected to, and only the issues in dispute should be contained in the instruction.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Silence Implies Consent: In transactions between merchants, additional terms in the acceptance automatically become part of the contract absent a prior objection, or a later objection within a reasonable time. This is another situation where "silence implies consent." By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

When between merchants an acceptance contains additional terms, the terms become part of the contract unless the offer expressly limits acceptance to the terms, the terms materially alter the contract, or the terms have already been, or are within a reasonable time objected to [Com. Code § 2207(2); see Southwest Concrete Products v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 701, 708-709, 274 Cal.Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 (provision in delivery tickets and invoices for late charges became part of contract under Com. Code § 2207)]. This instruction only contains the notification issues since the other issues are most likely not factual issues for the jury [Windsor Mills, Inc. v. Collins & Aikman Corp. (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 987, 101 Cal.Rptr. 347].

When clauses in confirming forms sent by both parties conflict, each party is assumed to object to the conflicting clauses in the other party's confirmation [U.C.C. Comment No. 6 to Com. Code § 2207].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART E. MODIFICATION AND WAIVER OF CONTRACT OF TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.70

MB 300H.70 Requirement of Written Modification or Rescission

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you decide that the parties signed an agreement that precludes _____ [modification or rescission] except by a signed writing, any _____ [modification or rescission] is not binding unless Defendant proves that Plaintiff signed a writing containing the _____ [modification or rescission].

Authority: Com. Code § 2209(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there are questions of fact regarding the parties' intentions as they relate to written modification or rescission. The court should normally decide whether the parties' agreement requires written modification or rescission. The definition of "signed" in MB 300H.20 and "writing" in MB 300H.21 may be used with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Modification or Rescission

Merchants and non-merchants can expressly agree to require written contract modification or rescission [Com. Code §

2209(2)]. However, the requirement of a writing has the potential of surprising the non-merchant; therefore, there is a requirement that non-merchants separately sign these provisions in forms prepared by merchants [Com. Code § 2209(2)]. This requirement is not included in the instruction because it probably does not present a jury issue.

Consideration is not required for an agreement modifying a contract [Com. Code § 2209(5)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART E. MODIFICATION AND WAIVER OF CONTRACT OF TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.71

MB 300H.71 Waiver

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Acquiescence in a course of performance that is inconsistent with the terms or conditions of the contract may waive the right to performance in accordance with those terms or conditions.

[OR]

An attempted modification or rescission that is not in writing and therefore is not effective may nevertheless waive rights under the contract.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

In this case, Plaintiff contends and must prove that Defendant waived the following contract term(s): _____ [list contract term(s) allegedly waived]. In determining whether a waiver occurred, you should consider all of the evidence before you, including the oral and written statements of the parties, their conduct, and the surrounding circumstances.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 1303(f), 2209(4).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one of the parties contends that the other waived one or more contract requirements by either a course of performance or an oral modification or rescission. A general definition of waiver and elements of a waiver defense are included in Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions. As set forth in MB 300H.72, waivers may be retracted with proper notice. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Waiver, Generally: The standards in this instruction may not seem challenging. But recall that a waiver is "an intentional relinquishment of a known right." In that context, these standards will often be hard to satisfy. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Inconsistent Behavior Can Result in Waiver: "Course of performance" evidence can be useful in demonstrating that boilerplate language included in a contract was not followed by the parties before the dispute in question. This instruction provides that such inconsistent behavior can result in a waiver that does not require a written modification of the contract. The instruction can be especially important in construction cases when performance extends over a period of time and the contract contains many technical requirements that are not strictly followed by the parties. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Waiver

Conduct of the parties that does not amount to an agreement to modify or rescind the contract or that fails to satisfy a written modification or rescission provision may be considered a waiver under Com. Code § 2209(4). Com. Code § 1303(f) also provides that a course of performance may be relevant to show a waiver or modification of any term inconsistent with the course of performance. For a discussion of types of conduct that may demonstrate a waiver, see J.T. Jenkins Co. v. Kennedy [J.T. Jenkins Co. v. Kennedy (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 474, 483, 119 Cal.Rptr. 578].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART E. MODIFICATION AND WAIVER OF CONTRACT OF TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.72

MB 300H.72 Retraction of Waiver

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. ____

A party who waives a portion of a contract that has not yet been performed may retract the waiver if the other party receives reasonable notice that strict performance will be required of any term waived. The notice must be received before the other party has materially changed [his/her/its] position in reliance on the waiver.

In this case Plaintiff contends that any waiver of _____ [list relevant contract terms] was retracted. To sustain this contention, Plaintiff must prove that, before _____ [date], when the court has determined that Defendant materially changed [his/her/its] position in reliance on the waiver, Defendant received reasonable notification that strict performance of _____ [list contract terms] would be required.

Authority: Com. Code § 2209(5).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is a question of fact as to whether reasonable notice of retraction was received before the other party materially changed position in reliance on the waiver. The instruction in MB 300H.18, on receiving notification, should also be given. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment[a] Retraction of Waiver

A waiver may be retracted as to any future performance by reasonable notification received by the other party that strict performance will be required. The notification must be received before the other party materially changed position in reliance on the waiver [Com. Code § 2209(3)]. Generally, it is for the court to decide whether retraction would be unjust in view of the other parties' change of position.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART E. MODIFICATION AND WAIVER OF CONTRACT OF TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.73

MB 300H.73 Delegation of Performance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff's delegation to _____ [name of assignee] of Plaintiff's duty to perform under the contract did not constitute a breach of contract unless Defendant proves that _____ [the contract prohibited delegation or Defendant had a substantial interest in having Plaintiff perform or control performance under the contract].

The party delegating its obligations under the contract remains obligated to see that the contract is performed and remains responsible in case of any breach of contract.

Authority: Com. Code § 2210(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the jury requires instruction on the rights and effects of delegation. Whether the parties have in fact agreed not to allow delegation or whether the other party has a substantial interest in the other party's performance are generally questions for the jury. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain "Delegation" to Jury: The term "delegation" will have to be explained to the jury. As used in this instruction, the term means something more than merely obtaining help from others to perform a contract. The term "delegation" implies a formal turning over of control to a third party, usually by way of a separate contract. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A party may perform a duty through a delegate unless otherwise agreed or unless the other party has a substantial interest in having the original promisor perform or control the acts required by the contract. A delegation does not relieve the original party of any duty or liability for breach [Com. Code § 2210(1)].

The other party may treat a delegation of performance as creating reasonable grounds for insecurity and may without prejudice to rights against the assignor demand assurances from the assignee under Com. Code § 2609 [Com. Code § 2210(5)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART E. MODIFICATION AND WAIVER OF CONTRACT OF TERMS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.74

MB 300H.74 Assignment of Rights[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff's assignment of rights under the contract to _____ [name of third party] was not a breach of contract unless Defendant proves that _____ [CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction) the assignment materially changed the Defendant's duty or the assignment materially increased the burden of the contract on Defendant or the assignment materially increased the risk undertaken by Defendant in making the contract or the assignment materially impaired Defendant's chance of obtaining return performance or the parties agreed not to allow assignments].

Authority: Com. Code § 2210(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one party contends that assignment was prohibited by the provisions of Com. Code § 2210(2) [see [3], below]. It should be noted that Com. Code § 2210(2) contains no prohibition on the assignment of a right to damages for breach or for moneys due following full performance. One or more of the alternative clauses should be selected based on the facts of the case. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Keep Closing Simple and Clear: Many jurors will not be familiar with the term "assignment." That, coupled with the apparent complexity of this instruction, means your closing should be simple but clear. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Unless otherwise agreed, all rights of either buyer or seller can be assigned except when the assignment would materially change the duty of the other party, increase materially the burden or risk imposed on the other party, or impair materially the other party's chance of obtaining return performance. A right to damages for breach of the whole contract or a right arising out of the assignor's due performance of the entire contract can be assigned despite an agreement to the contrary [Com. Code § 2210(2); but see Com. Code § 9406 (exceptions applicable in secured transactions)].

Contract language barring assignment of "the contract" bars only delegation of performance, not assignment of a party's rights, unless the circumstances of the contract indicate otherwise [Com. Code § 2210(3)]. If this contract language is an issue in the case and persons might reasonably differ over whether or not the assignment of rights was also banned, an instruction stating the above rule would be appropriate.

Conversely, however, an assignment of "the contract" is considered a delegation of performance and assignment of rights, unless the language of the assignment or the circumstances of its making indicate that only an assignment of rights is intended. Similarly, such an assignment of rights obligates the assignee to perform the contract unless the contrary is indicated by the language or circumstances of the assignment. The obligation is enforceable by both the assignor and by the other party to the contract being assigned [Com. Code § 2210(4)]. The most common circumstance that would indicate an assignment of rights, only without delegation of performance, is when the contract is assigned for security.

PART F. INTERPRETATION OF CONTRACT TERMS

MB 300H.90 Interpretation of Contract Terms

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Insofar as is possible, the contract's terms are to be interpreted to give effect to the expressed intentions of the parties. In determining the intention of the parties, you should consider the contract's express terms, any course of performance, any course of dealing, and any usage of trade.

Whenever reasonable, the express terms, course of performance, course of dealing, and usage of trade must be construed in a manner consistent with each other. However, when consistent construction is not unreasonable, express terms prevail over a course of performance, course of dealing, and usage of trade. A course of performance prevails over both a course of dealing and usage of trade. Course of dealing prevails over usage of trade.

Authorities: Com. Code § 1303(e).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with one or more of the contract interpretation instructions in Ch. 3B, Interpretation of Written Agreements. The instruction should be given together with the instruction on use of extrinsic evidence to explain agreements [see MB 300H.61], and with instructions defining course of performance [see MB 300H.13], course of dealing [see MB 300H.11], and trade usage [see MB 300H.12].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Interpretation Is Usually for the Court: In most cases, contract interpretation is a question for the judge. However, if the jury is involved marshal your evidence carefully. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Simplify This Instruction: This instruction could be confusing because it uses several terms of art and establishes a series of priorities among them (e.g., course of dealing prevails over usage of trade). Thus, counsel should try to streamline the instruction by eliminating those terms that do not apply to the case at hand, and carefully explaining with examples the terms that do apply. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Interpretation of Contract Terms

Under Com. Code § 2202, certain extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain or supplement contract terms, including, in particular, evidence of a course of dealing, usage of trade, or course of performance. However, terms with regard to which the confirming memoranda of the parties agree or which are otherwise set forth in a writing intended by the parties as a final expression of their agreement with regard to such terms may not be contradicted by evidence of a prior agreement or of a contemporaneous oral agreement, although they may be explained or supplemented [Com. Code § 2202; see Com. Code § 1303 (definitions); see also Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions, on other rules of contract interpretation].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

1. General Obligations of Parties

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.100

MB 300H.100 General Obligations of Parties

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Under a contract for the sale of goods, the fundamental obligation of the seller is to transfer and deliver goods in accordance with the contract, and the fundamental obligation of the buyer is to accept and pay for the goods in accordance with the contract. The parties' agreement may include all or most of the terms needed to define the specific manner in which buyer and seller meet these obligations. When the parties have failed to agree on specific terms, the law provides certain standard terms and obligations for inclusion in a contract for the sale of goods.

In this case, it is contended that the following additional terms are supplied by law: _____ [list open terms, warranties, or code definitions alleged]. As set forth in the following instructions, you must decide whether to apply these provisions in this case.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2204, 2301.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introduction to instructions on open price terms, implied warranties, and code definitions found in Chapter 3 of the Commercial Code. This instruction should be given only if the court finds that reasonable people might differ as to whether the parties expressly or impliedly reached their own agreement on terms supplied by code provisions in the absence of this type of agreement.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: Many jurors will balk at having to figure out the contract when the parties "have failed to agree on specific terms." By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment[a] Fundamental Obligations of Parties

Under a contract for the sale of goods, the obligation of the seller is to transfer and deliver in accordance with the contract, and the obligation of the buyer is to accept and pay in accordance with the contract [Com. Code § 2301]. To determine what is "in accordance with the contract," usage of trade, course of dealing and performance, and the general circumstances must be considered in conjunction with the lay meaning of the words in the contract [U.C.C. Comment to Com. Code § 2301].

[b] Incomplete Agreements

An agreement need not be complete in all aspects to be enforceable. As long as the alleged agreement provides a reasonably certain basis for giving an appropriate remedy, the agreement can be enforced by way of claim or defense [Com. Code § 2204]. The Code specifically permits the parties to reach an enforceable agreement while failing to specify certain key terms, including price [Com. Code § 2305], time and manner of performance [Com. Code §§ 2307-2311], and even quantity, if output and requirements contracts are involved [Com. Code § 2306]. When the parties leave agreement on a term to a later time and fail to agree, or inadvertently omit a term of the contract, the Code's "gap filling" provisions take over, supplying the missing terms when appropriate. Similarly, unless the parties effectively disclaimed all warranties, code provisions will imply at least warranties of title and merchantability [Com. Code §§ 2312, 2314].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

2. Open Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.110

MB 300H.110 Open Price Term: Reasonable Price

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] and Defendant have a contract for the sale of _____ [goods], and asks that this contract be enforced, even though the written agreement signed by Plaintiff and Defendant does not set a specific price for the goods to be sold. In this contract,

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. Nothing was said by the parties as to price.

[OR]

2. The price was left for later agreement, but the parties failed to agree.

[OR]

3. The price was to be fixed according to an _____ [agreed standard or established market] as _____ [set or recorded] by a third person, but the price was not so _____ [set or recorded].

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

To enforce this contract, Plaintiff has the burden of proving that the parties did intend to conclude a contract even though they failed to set a specific price for the goods.

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that the parties did nevertheless intend to conclude a contract, then you must decide, based on the evidence before you, what was a reasonable price for the goods at the time they _____ [were or were supposed to be] delivered.

If you find that the parties did not intend to be bound unless _____ [they reached agreement on the price or the price was fixed according to an agreed standard or established market] and that the price was not so _____ [agreed on or fixed] then you must find in favor of _____ [party denying existence of a contract], and any _____ [goods delivered or money paid] must be returned.

Authority: Com. Code § 2305(1), (4).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the jury is asked to decide whether there was a contract despite the failure to fix a price term. This instruction assumes that the contract did not fix a price term. If there is a preliminary issue of fact as to whether the contract, including terms to be implied from course of dealing and trade usage, was silent on price, the instructions in MB 300H.40 et seq. on contract formation and MB 300H.60 et seq. on contract terms must be consulted, as well as the instruction in MB 300H.11 on course of dealing and MB 300H.12 on trade usage.

This instruction should be followed by an instruction setting forth the appropriate remedy or measure of damages if the jury finds that there was a contract, and if goods were identified to the contract.

A preponderance of evidence instruction should be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--No Agreement on Price: Some jurors will find it difficult to believe that the parties did not agree on a "specific price." Thus, if you are the plaintiff's attorney be careful in putting together the case; if you are representing the defense, exploit this reluctance. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Market Quotation Distinguished; Course of Dealing, Usage of Trade, or Course of Performance Controls Over Open Price Term

An open price term is not the same as a market quotation with regard to which the price will be set. The open price term is applied if the parties intended to conclude a contract but no agreement on price was reached at the time of contracting, because [Com. Code § 2305(1)]:

- The parties decided to postpone the agreement at the time of contracting;
- Price was not discussed; or

- Price was to be set on the occurrence of some outside event, but, due to the fault of neither party, it was not so set.

Under the Commercial Code, a course of dealing, usage of trade, or course of performance sufficient to show agreement on price will control over the Code's open price provisions [Com. Code §§ 1303, 2202(a)].

[b] Intent of Parties; Question of Fact

Whether the parties intended to conclude a contract is in most cases a question for the trier of fact [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2305]. If it is determined that the parties intended to have a binding agreement, the Code will give effect to that intention, even though a price will have to be supplied.

The only situation in which the contract will not be enforced is if the trier of fact determines that the parties intended not to have a contract unless they mutually agreed on a price. If, on the other hand, the contract provides that they will agree on a price at a later time and they fail to agree, Com. Code § 2305 provides that the price will be a reasonable price at the time of delivery, unless it was further agreed that there would be no contract if a price was not established [Com. Code § 2305(1), (4); U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2305].

[c] Open Price Term No Bar to Remedy for Breach

The Commercial Code specifically rejects the notion that an open price term defeats the agreement on the ground of indefiniteness [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2305]. Generally, a reasonable price at the time of delivery can be determined from market sources or other objective standards. A "reasonably certain basis for giving an appropriate remedy" [see Com. Code § 2204(3)] usually exists in case of breach even though there is no contract price since remedies such as cover [see Com. Code § 2712], resale [see Com. Code § 2706], and specific performance [see Com. Code § 2716] are available under the Commercial Code [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2305].

[d] Wrongful Interference

Wrongful interference by one side with an agreed on price setting mechanism can be treated by the other party either as a repudiation of the contract [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2305; see MB 300H.190] or as a failure to cooperate that permits the wronged party to fix a reasonable price [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2305; see Com. Code § 2311; MB 300H.112].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.111

MB 300H.111 One Party to Set Price

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] and Defendant intended to conclude a contract for the sale of goods. Plaintiff bears the burden of proving this claim. If you find that Plaintiff has proved that the parties did intend to conclude a contract for the sale of goods, then that contract is binding on the parties and is enforceable even though the price of the goods was not settled.

The parties may provide that the price of the goods under the contract is to be fixed by _____ [buyer or seller]. If you find that the parties did provide that the price was to be set by _____ [buyer or seller], then _____ [buyer or seller] must set the price in good faith.

Authority: Com. Code § 2305.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used together with the instruction in MB 300H.10[1] defining good faith and good faith for merchants. A preponderance of evidence instruction must also be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. If a failure to set the price in good faith is alleged, this instruction may be used with the instruction in MB 300H.124[1] on specification by a party.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain These Contracts to Jury: Some jurors will find it strange that one party to the contract gets to set the price after the agreement is made. In addition to explaining the "good faith" requirement included in this instruction, counsel should also explain why such contracts are typical in the particular business involved in the transaction. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A contract for the sale of goods with an open price term may nonetheless be binding, if the parties intended to conclude a contract [Com. Code §§ 2204, 2305(1)]. If the parties agreed that the price was to be set by one of them, then that party must set the price in good faith [Com. Code § 2305(2); see Lazar v. Hertz Corp. (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 128, 141, 191 Cal.Rptr. 849]. Use of a market price or other prevailing price generally satisfies the good faith requirement [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2305].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff and Defendant have a contract for the sale of _____ [describe goods] that provided that the price of _____ [goods] would be set by _____ [state means other than mutual agreement]. Plaintiff _____ [claims a breach of this contract or wishes to set a reasonable price for the goods to be sold]. To _____ [prove the breach or prove the right to set the contract price], Plaintiff must prove both of the following:

- (1) That Defendant wrongfully interfered with the setting of the contract price; and
- (2) That because of Defendant's wrongful interference, no price for the goods was set.

You must decide whether Plaintiff has proved these two things.

Authority: Com. Code § 2305(3).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if it is alleged that the defendant has interfered with the fixing of a price left to be fixed by some means other than the agreement of the parties. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The instruction in MB 300H.10[1] on good faith should also be included with this instruction. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2305(3) provides that if the parties to a contract for the sale of goods leave the price of the goods to be fixed by any means other than the agreement of the parties, and if by the fault of one party the price fails to be fixed, then the other party has the right to fix a reasonable price, or in the alternative, to treat the contract as canceled and seek remedies provided for breach [see Com. Code §§ 2106(4), 2720; U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2305]. Com. Code § 1201(a)(17) defines "fault" as a default, breach, or wrongful act or omission.

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.113MB 300H.113 Quantity Under Output Contract[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff and Defendant agreed on a contract for the sale of _____ [goods]. The amount of goods that Defendant agreed to sell and Plaintiff agreed to buy was Defendant's entire good faith output from _____ to _____ [give dates].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, Defendant, the seller, may not offer for delivery an amount of goods that is unreasonably out of proportion to _____ [the estimate of output stated in the agreement or Defendant's comparable prior output], regardless of Defendant's actual output.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

Plaintiff claims that Defendant has breached this contract for the sale of Defendant's output to Plaintiff. To prove this breach, Plaintiff must prove _____ [CHOOSE ONE OR MORE (See Use of Instruction) that Defendant did not produce [his/her/its] output in good faith and/or that Defendant offered for delivery an amount of goods that was unreasonably out of proportion to the estimate of output stated in the agreement, which was _____ and/or that Defendant offered for delivery an amount of goods that was unreasonably out of proportion to Defendant's comparable prior output].

Authorities: Com. Code § 2306(1); Shea-Kaiser-Lockheed-Healy v. Department of Water & Power (1977) 73 Cal.App.3d 679, 686-688, 140 Cal.Rptr. 884 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff, a buyer, claims a breach of the quantity term of an output contract. The instruction assumes that the provision setting the seller's output as the measure of quantity is not itself in dispute. Omit the optional paragraph if the plaintiff's claim of a breach is based solely on the defendant's alleged bad faith. Include the optional paragraph if the claim of breach is based wholly or in part on a tender of delivery unreasonably disproportionate to a stated estimate or to prior comparable output. In the last paragraph, use as many of the three alternative sentences as fit the allegations of the case. This instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 300H.10[1] on good faith. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Include Estimates in Contract: This instruction illustrates why it is important to include estimates, or statements of prior output, in output contracts. Without these benchmarks, it can be difficult to prove that the actual output was unreasonably "out of proportion" to the expectations of the parties. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A contract term that measures the quantity to be sold under the contract by the output of the seller means the actual good faith output of the seller. However, the seller may not tender for delivery a quantity of goods that is unreasonably disproportionate to (1) any stated estimate of output, or (2) any normal or otherwise comparable prior output, regardless of the seller's actual output [see Com. Code § 2306(1); see also Shea-Kaiser-Lockheed-Healy v. Department of Water & Power (1977) 73 Cal.App.3d 679, 686-688, 140 Cal.Rptr. 884 (successful breach of contract action under Com. Code § 2306(1) based on a requirements contract)]. Com. Code § 2306 applies to nonproducing establishments, such as dealers and distributors, as well as to manufacturers [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2306].

U.C.C. Comments 2 and 4 to Com. Code § 2306 address special circumstances such as the expansion, closing, or sale of businesses as they affect output and requirements contracts.

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE (See Use of Instruction)]

(1) That Defendant did not act in good faith in [his/her/its] demands for delivery of goods.

[OR]

(2) That Defendant demanded the delivery of an amount of goods that was unreasonably out of proportion to the estimate of requirements stated in the agreement, which was _____.

[OR]

(3) That Defendant demanded the delivery of an amount of goods that was unreasonably out of proportion to Defendant's comparable prior requirements.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff, a seller, claims a breach of the quantity term of a requirements contract. The instruction assumes that the provision setting the buyer's requirements as the measure of quantity is not itself in dispute. Omit the optional paragraph if the plaintiff's claim of a breach is based solely on the defendant's alleged bad faith. Include the optional paragraph if the claim of breach is based wholly or in part on a tender of delivery unreasonably disproportionate to a stated estimate or to prior comparable requirements. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With This Issue: The concept of a "requirements contract" will be alien to many jurors. So, exercise care in making your points on this issue. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Include Estimates in Contract: This instruction highlights the importance of including estimates, or statements of prior requirements, in a requirements contract. Without these benchmarks, it can be difficult to prove that the actual requirements were unreasonably "out of proportion" to the expectations of the parties. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

The rules for requirements contracts are essentially the same as the requirements for output contracts, and both are governed by Com. Code § 2306(1) [see MB 300H.113[3]]. This section of the Commercial Code has been applied to a requirements contract for the sale of construction material. In that case, a seller under a requirements contract recovered against the buyer for deliveries made under protest. The court found that the deliveries demanded were unreasonably disproportionate to a stated estimate of the buyer's requirements [Shea-Kaiser-Lockheed-Healy v. Department of Water & Power (1977) 73 Cal.App.3d 679, 686-688, 140 Cal.Rptr. 884].

Com. Code § 2306(1) expressly intends that there be reasonable elasticity in the quantity of goods under a requirements contract. The key in permitting variations from a stated estimate or from prior comparable requirements is that the party must be acting in good faith [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2306].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff and Defendant have an exclusive dealing contract for the sale of _____ [goods]. An exclusive dealing contract means that the seller agrees to sell goods of a certain kind exclusively to the buyer within the market served by the buyer, and that the buyer agrees to buy goods of a certain kind exclusively from the seller.

Under an exclusive dealing contract, a seller must use best efforts to supply the goods, and the buyer must use best efforts to promote and market the goods.

This obligation to use best efforts applies even though it is not stated in the contract, unless you find that the parties have agreed otherwise.

Plaintiff, the _____ [seller or buyer], claims that Defendant, the _____ [buyer or seller], breached this contract by failing to use best efforts to _____ [promote and market the goods or supply the goods].

Defendant, the _____ [buyer or seller], claims that [he/she/it] and Plaintiff agreed that best efforts were not required. Defendant also denies that [he/she/it] failed to use best efforts to _____ [promote and market the goods or supply the goods].

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant did not use best efforts, then you must find that there was a breach, unless you find that Defendant and Plaintiff agreed that best efforts were not required. The burden is on Plaintiff to prove both that best efforts were required and that Defendant did not use best efforts.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2306(2) and U.C.C. Comment No. 5.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the general obligations of an exclusive dealing contract. It assumes that the existence of an exclusive dealing contract is not in dispute to focus on issues of fact more likely to be presented to the jury. Use this instruction with the instruction in MB 300H.126[1] on agreement to do otherwise. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Exclusive Contracts: The idea of an "exclusive" may strike some jurors as an unusual practice. Further, the term "best efforts," set out throughout this instruction, is inherently subjective and gives wide latitude to the party marketing the goods. In closing argument, counsel may also wish to stress the "good faith" requirement that is included in every contract [see MB 300H.10]. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2306(2) provides that a contract for exclusive dealing in goods imposes, unless otherwise agreed, an obligation of the seller to use best efforts to sell the goods and of the buyer to use best efforts to promote the sale of those goods. This section gives substance to the obligations imposed on both parties to an exclusive dealing contract to act with reasonable diligence and in good faith [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2306]. Com. Code § 2306(2) is consistent with prior California law which stated that no party should do that which deprives the other of the fruits of his or her contract [California Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2306].

The contract may specify further things that each side must do pursuant to the exclusive dealing arrangement. These further requirements should be interpreted in light of the requirement of good faith [see Com. Code § 1304].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS
2. Open Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.116

MB 300H.116 Number of Deliveries and Payments

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff and Defendant have a contract for the sale of _____ [goods]. This contract does not say anything about the number of deliveries for the goods. Unless the parties agree otherwise, delivery of all goods called for by the contract must be offered in a single lot. Payment of the contract price in full is due at the time of that offer of delivery.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, the law does not require the [seller to deliver or buyer to take delivery of] all the goods in a single lot, if it was not commercially feasible to do so under the circumstances. If you find that the circumstances gave _____ [buyer or seller] the right to _____ [make or demand] delivery in lots, the price, if it was reasonably apportionable, could be demanded for each lot at the time it was offered for delivery.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

Plaintiff, the _____ [buyer or seller], claims that Defendant, the _____ [seller or buyer], breached the single delivery requirement. To prove this, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant did not _____ [offer the goods in a single delivery or accept the offer of the goods in a single delivery or pay for the goods on delivery]. If you find that Plaintiff has proved this, then Defendant has breached the contract, unless you also find that _____ [(delivery or acceptance of delivery) of a single lot was not commercially reasonable].

Authority: Com. Code § 2307.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the contract does not contain an express delivery term. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The instruction twice offers the user an option. The options may be used if the jury might reasonably find that delivery in one lot was not commercially feasible, as when the buyer could not receive the entire delivery at one time for lack of storage space or the seller could not ship all at once for lack of sufficient shipping capacity [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2306].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: The contrast between a "single lot" and "delivery in lots" will be confusing to many jurors. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The Commercial Code takes the position that a single delivery is necessary when the contract is silent on delivery, unless a single delivery is not commercially practicable and thus delivery in lots is justified [Com. Code § 2307; U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2307]. Further, any time an agreement makes no provision on a point, including delivery, that point may be controlled by an implicit agreement based on trade usage, course of dealing [See MB 300H.11 ("course of dealing" defined), MB 300H.12 ("trade usage" defined)], or course of performance [Com. Code §§ 1201(a)(3), 1303; see MB 300H.13 ("course of performance" defined)]. For an instruction on and discussion of these implicit agreements, see MB 300H.60 and MB 300H.61.

A justified partial delivery must be followed by delivery of the remaining lots seasonably [Com. Code § 2608] and in a reasonable manner [Com. Code § 2503]. Partial delivery may nevertheless be rejected if the circumstances indicate that the seller will default or repudiate as to the remainder [see MB 300H.190] or otherwise give the buyer grounds to demand assurance of due performance [Com. Code § 2609; see MB 300H.193].

Even if partial delivery is not justified by impracticability, the seller may be entitled to cure [Com. Code § 2508], or circumstances beyond the parties' control may entitle the seller, on notice, to allocate deliveries [Com. Code § 2615(b)].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

2. Open Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.117

MB 300H.117 Place for Delivery of Goods

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Unless Plaintiff, the buyer, and Defendant, the seller, have agreed otherwise, the place for delivery of goods is Defendant/seller's place of business or, if Defendant has no place of business, Defendant's residence.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If the contract is for the sale of identified goods, and if both Plaintiff and Defendant know when the contract is made that the goods are not at the Defendant's _____ [place of business or residence], then the place for delivery is the location of the goods when the contract is made, unless Plaintiff and Defendant agree otherwise.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

Plaintiff claims that Defendant/Seller has breached their contract for the sale of goods, because Defendant did not deliver the goods to Plaintiff at the Defendant's _____ [place of business or residence]. Defendant claims that the goods were properly delivered to _____, because that is where the goods were when the contract was made.

The burden is on Plaintiff to prove what the contract terms regarding delivery were, and also to prove that those terms were breached.

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that the goods were not delivered to [him/her/it] at the Defendant's _____ [place of business or residence], then Defendant has breached the contract, unless you next find all of the following:

1. That the contract was for the sale of identified goods;
2. That both Plaintiff and Defendant knew when the contract was made that the goods were not at the Defendant's _____ [place of business or residence]; and
3. That the goods were delivered to Plaintiff at the place where they were located when the contract was made.

Authority: Com. Code § 2308(a), (b).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the rules that apply if the contract and the parties' conduct does not indicate agreement on place of delivery. It should be noted that shipping terms such as F.O.B., F.A.S., C.I.F., and C. & F. also convey meaning as to place of delivery. See instructions in MB 300H.170-MB 300H.176 regarding shipping terms.

The optional instruction applies when the seller does not have physical possession of the goods, as when they are in the possession of a bailee. The instruction in MB 300H.02[1] defining identification of goods to the contract may be given with this instruction.

If the plaintiff claims that the defendant breached the agreement by failing to deliver the goods to the locations required by Com. Code § 2308, and the defendant claims that he or she is not in breach because the parties had agreed on a different place of delivery, then use this instruction with the instruction in MB 300H.126[1].

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

[3] Comment

Unless the parties have agreed otherwise, the place for delivery of goods is the seller's place of business or, if the seller has no place of business, the seller's residence [Com. Code § 2308(a)]. However, if the contract is for the sale of identified goods, and if both parties know when the contract is made that the goods are not at the seller's place of business or residence, then the place for delivery is the location of the goods when the contract is made, unless the parties agree otherwise [Com. Code § 2308(b)].

Surrounding circumstances, usage of trade, or a course of dealing or performance may constitute implied agreement on a place of delivery [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2308; see MB 300H.126].

When the goods are in the possession of a bailee, the seller must also obtain the bailee's acknowledgment that the buyer has the right to have the goods [see U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2308; see also Com. Code § 2503(4) (tendering goods in possession of bailee)].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS
2. Open Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.118

MB 300H.118 Time for Shipment or Delivery

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff, the buyer, and Defendant, the seller, made a contract for the sale of goods. The contract does not specifically say when the goods were to be delivered. When the parties have not agreed otherwise, the time for shipment or delivery under a contract for the sale of goods must be at a reasonable time.

Plaintiff claims that Defendant has breached this contract by failing to deliver the goods within a reasonable time. To prove this, Plaintiff must prove both of the following:

- 1. That Defendant did not deliver the goods within a reasonable time; and
- 2. That [he/she/it] gave Defendant a reasonable notice of this failure.

Defendant claims that:

[CHOOSE ONE OR BOTH (See Use of Instruction)]

[He/She/It] made the delivery within a reasonable time.

[OR]

[He/She/It] and Plaintiff had agreed to another time for delivery by an implied agreement through _____ [custom of trade or course of dealing or course of performance or surrounding circumstances].

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant did not deliver the goods within a reasonable time after a reasonable notice, then Defendant has breached the contract.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, Defendant has not committed a breach of contract if you find that Defendant and Plaintiff had agreed to a different delivery time.

Authority: Com. Code § 2309(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used together with the instruction in MB 300H.14[1] defining reasonable time and the instruction in MB 300H.10[1] on good faith obligation. When the instruction asks the user to choose one or both of the following paragraphs, the user should choose whatever fits the facts of his or her case. If the user chooses the second of these two paragraphs, then the user will also want to use the optional final paragraph and the instruction in MB 300H.126[1].

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Reasonable Time" Is Subjective: The concept of "reasonable time," set out throughout this instruction, is subjective. Thus, different jurors may consider this term differently. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

When the parties have not agreed otherwise, the time for shipment or delivery under the contract is at a reasonable time [Com. Code § 2309; see Com. Code § 1205(a) ("reasonable time" defined); see also MB 300H.14[1]]. As with the other open term instructions, the jury can find an implied agreement on the time for shipment or delivery in the surrounding circumstances, a trade usage, prior dealings, or the parties' course of performance [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2309; see MB 300H.126].

Unreasonably early demands or requests for delivery, when time is not specified, do not, without more, constitute a breach [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2309].

Unreasonable delay in offering or demanding delivery requires notice before failure to perform may be treated as a breach. Unreasonable delay by both parties may terminate the contract by abandonment [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2309].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS
2. Open Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.119

MB 300H.119 Contracts of Indefinite Duration

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff and Defendant have a contract for the sale of goods that calls for successive performances and that does not say how long the contract is going to last. A contract with these provisions is valid for a reasonable time.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Unless the parties to a contract agree on a different rule for termination, a contract of indefinite duration that provides for successive performances may be terminated by either party at any time.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

Plaintiff claims that Defendant has breached this contract by _____ [state what defendant did or failed to do that allegedly breached the contract].

[CHOOSE ONE OR BOTH (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant claims that [he/she/it] did not breach the contract because the contract was no longer in effect due to the fact that more than a reasonable period of time had passed by the time Defendant _____ [ describe alleged breach].

[OR]

Defendant _____ [claims or also claims] that [he/she/it] did not breach the contract because the contract was no longer in effect due to the fact that Defendant terminated the contract before [he/she/it] _____ [describe alleged breach].

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

The burden is on Plaintiff to prove what the provisions of the contract were and to prove that the contract was breached. If you find that Plaintiff has proved that _____ [state what defendant did or failed to do that allegedly breached the contract] before a reasonable time had passed after the contract was made, then Defendant did breach the contract.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, if you find that the contract could be terminated at will by either party, and that Defendant terminated the contract, then Defendant did not breach the contract.

Authority: Com. Code § 2309(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the right to terminate at one party's option. It does not apply to cancellation for breach. The instruction should be used with MB 300H.14[1], which defines reasonable time. The first optional paragraph should be used when the parties dispute the right to terminate a contract calling for successive performances, such as a requirements contract. If this option is chosen, then the user should use the second paragraph under "Choose One or Both" and also the last optional paragraph. The instruction in MB 300H.120[1] on notice of contract termination must be given with the optional instruction.

If it is alleged that the contract was not valid for "a reasonable time" [Com. Code § 2309(2)] because the parties came to an implied agreement as to duration by the circumstances, a custom of trade, a course of performance, or by a course of dealing, then this instruction must be used with MB 300H.126[1] regarding whether the parties "otherwise agreed."

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Reasonable Notice of Termination Is Required:

Even if a contract is terminable at will, the terminating party still has to provide "reasonable notice" so that the other party can make substitute arrangements [see MB 300H.120 (notice of contract termination)]. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Normally the court will seek to find the parties' intent regarding duration by examining the contract. If this examination is unavailing and the contract's duration is an issue of fact, the jury may be instructed to make a finding in accordance with this instruction. The rules on contracts of indefinite duration stated in this instruction are based on Com. Code § 2309(2).

MB 300H.120 Notice of Contract Termination

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If either party has the right to terminate a contract, then reasonable notice of the termination must be received by the other party. The notice received is reasonable if it allows the other party a reasonable time to look for a substitute arrangement for the _____ [sale of [his/her/its] goods or purchase of the goods that [he/she/it] needs].

Authorities: Com. Code § 2309(3); U.C.C. Comment No. 8 to Com. Code § 2309.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the contract or a Commercial Code provision gives either party the right to terminate the contract for a reason other than the breach of that contract. The instruction in MB 300H.18[1] on receipt of notice should be given with this instruction, as should the instruction in MB 300H.14[1] defining "reasonable time."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain "Reasonable": This instruction utilizes the word "reasonable" three times. Your closing argument should explain the differences in their usage.

By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

If either party has the right to terminate a contract, except on an agreed event [Com. Code § 2309(3)] or on termination for breach of contract, then reasonable notice of the termination must be received by the other party. The purpose of requiring notice is to give the non-terminating party the opportunity to make alternate arrangements, and a notice that accomplishes this purpose is "reasonable" within the meaning of the statute [U.C.C. Comment No. 8 to Com. Code § 2309]. Although notice may generally be dispensed with by agreement of the parties, such an agreement is invalid if its operation would be unconscionable [Com. Code § 2309(3)]. Cancellation is a remedy for breach of contract, and is not the kind of termination covered by Com. Code § 2309(3) [U.C.C. Comment No. 9 to Com. Code § 2309].

If you find that the parties did not specify a time for payment of the contract price, then payment is due at the time and place at which the buyer is to receive the goods [, after a reasonable opportunity for the buyer to inspect the goods].

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2310, 2513.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the parties failed to specify a time for payment. It should be used in all situations except when delivery is by tender of documents. The bracketed clause should be included unless the contract is C.O.D [Com. Code § 2513(3)(a)]. If delivery is by tender of documents, then use the instruction in MB 300H.122[1].

[3] Comment

Unless otherwise agreed, payment is due at the time and place at which the buyer is to receive the goods [Com. Code § 2310(a)]. The buyer must be allowed a reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods before payment, unless the parties agree otherwise or delivery is C.O.D [Com. [1] Instruction

[For documents of title issued on or after January 1, 2007 (see Stats. 2006, ch. 254, § 81)]:

If delivery is authorized and made by delivery of documents of title, payment is due regardless of where the goods are to be received either at the time and place at which the buyer is to receive delivery of the tangible documents, or at the time the buyer is to receive delivery of the electronic documents and at the seller's place of business or, if none, the seller's residence.

If delivery is authorized and made by delivery of documents of title, payment is due at the time and place at which the buyer is to receive the documents, regardless of the time and place at which the goods are to be received.

Authority: Com. Code § 2310(c).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when delivery was to be made by way of documents of title, such as a bill of lading, warehouse receipt, or other bailee receipt. The code definition of "documents of title" [see Com. Code § 1201(a)(16)] (as amended by Stats. 2006, ch. 254, § 16)] should be included with this instruction. This instruction does not deal with delivery by document of title when the goods are shipped with a security interest reserved in the seller [see Com. Code §§ 2310(b), 2505].

[3] Comment

Contracts for the sale of goods in the hands of a bailee, such as a warehouse or common storage facility, frequently provide for delivery by tender of documents of title issued by the bailee to cover goods in the bailee's possession. Unless the parties agree otherwise, payment is to be made against the documents of title. For documents of title issued before January 1, 2007, payment is due at the time and place at which the buyer is to receive the documents, regardless of the time and place at which the goods are to be received [Com. Code § 2310(c) (prior to amendment by Stats. 2006, ch. 254)]. For documents of title issued on or after January 1, 2007, Com. Code § 2310(c), as amended by Stats. 2006, ch. 254, § 35, differentiates between tangible documents and electronic documents. For documents of title issued on or after January 1, 2007, regardless of where the goods are to be received, payment is due either at the time and place where the buyer is to receive delivery of tangible documents, or at the time the buyer is to receive delivery of electronic documents and at the seller's place of business, or if none, the seller's residence [*Com. 2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.123

MB 300H.123 Time for Running of Credit Period

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If the seller is authorized or required to ship the goods on credit, the credit period begins to run at the time of shipment.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If the invoice is postdated by the seller, then the credit period begins to run at the date stated on the invoice.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If the invoice is delayed by the seller, then the credit period begins to run at the time the invoice is sent.

Authority: Com. Code § 2310(d).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the jury is required to make some calculation—for example, to determine the amount of damages—for which it must know when the credit period began and the contract does not specify when the credit period began. The optional paragraphs should be given when appropriate to the facts in the case, that is, when the seller postdated the invoice or delayed sending it. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

If the seller is required or authorized to ship the goods on credit, the credit period runs from the time of shipment, but if the seller postdates the invoice or delays sending the invoice, then the start of the credit period is correspondingly delayed [Com. Code § 2310(d)]. The Commercial Code embodies the general commercial practice of invoicing on shipment of goods. Any delay in invoicing does not prejudice the buyer under Com. Code § 2310 [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2310].

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.124

MB 300H.124 Performance to Be Specified by a Party

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The contract in this case between Plaintiff, the _____ [seller or buyer], and Defendant, the _____ [buyer or seller], provided that Defendant should specify _____ [state aspect of performance that party named was required to specify; see Use of Instruction for examples]. Plaintiff claims that Defendant breached this requirement. To prove this breach of contract, Plaintiff bears the burden of proving that Defendant did not specify _____ [state aspect of performance that party named was required to specify]

in the manner required by the contract.

[OR]

in good faith.

[OR]

in a commercially reasonable manner.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

In making this determination you should consider evidence of the prior dealings of the parties, customs in the trade, and the course of performance of this contract.

If you find that Plaintiff has proved that Defendant did not:

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

specify in the manner required by the contract,

[OR]

specify in good faith,

[OR]

specify in a commercially reasonable manner,

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

then you must find in favor of Plaintiff on [his/her/its] _____ [claim or counterclaim] for _____ [state relief sought or describe particular claim on which jury is finding for that party; see Use of Instruction for example].

Authorities: Com. Code § 2311(1); Cal. Lettuce Growers v. Union Sugar Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 474, 484, 289 P.2d 785

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when it is not disputed that one party was required to specify certain particulars of performance, but it is contended that the party did not specify these in accordance with what the contract required, or did so unreasonably or in bad faith. When the failure to specify in a timely way is specifically at issue, the instruction in MB 300H.125[1] on duty of cooperation should also be given.

A preponderance of evidence instruction should be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. Instructions defining good faith [see MB 300H.10[1]], course of dealings, trade customs [see MB 300H.12[1]], and course of performance [see MB 300H.13[1]] are available, and should also be used. "Course of dealings" is here referred to as "prior dealings of the parties" [see MB 300H.11[1]].

Aspects of performance that a party may typically be required to specify include (1) frequency of deliveries, (2) assortment of goods [see Com. Code § 2311(2)], (3) mode of shipping [see Com. Code § 2311(2)], (4) the exercise of an option as to place of delivery, (5) selection of a ship by the buyer when delivery is F.O.B. vessel [see Com. Code § 2319(1)], (6) selection of a port or berth when delivery is F.O.B. or F.A.S. vessel [see Com. Code § 2319(3)], and (7) exercise of the option to accept goods "as is" or reject them [see Com. Code § 2613(b); U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2613; MB 300H.175]. Selection among the remaining two sets of three options depends on the nature of the failure alleged in the case. When good faith and commercial reasonableness are not specifically raised, the first paragraph, completed with the statement of what the party was required by the contract to specify, should be used.

The last paragraph of the instruction on what finding the jury must make will name either the plaintiff or defendant (or cross-claimant, cross-defendant, etc.) and instruct the jury to find for the appropriate party. For a simple example, it might be undisputed that it was the practice of the parties that the buyer specify each month which of its three plants is to receive a standard shipment from the seller. After failing to specify any delivery in August, the buyer demands two deliveries in September and the seller refuses to make more than one. In its subsequent action against the seller, the buyer claims that it is entitled to recover its costs flowing from the seller's alleged repudiation, and the seller claims that the buyer's specification was unreasonable. The jury would be instructed that, if it concludes from the evidence that the buyer's specification was commercially unreasonable, it must "find in favor of the defendant on the plaintiff's claim for damages arising from the defendant's refusal to make an extra delivery during the month of September." In this example, it might be instructed further that if, on the other hand, it finds the buyer's specification to have been reasonable, the jury should go on to consider what the buyer's damages were.

[3] Comment

Particulars of performance may be left for later specification so long as the contract is sufficiently definite under Com. Code § 2204, but the specification must be made in good faith and must be commercially reasonable [see Com. Code § 2311(1)]. Because the power to specify is limited by the requirements of good faith and commercial reasonableness, there is no surprise [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2311].

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.125MB 300H.125 Duty of Cooperation[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Defendant failed to _____ [either make such timely specification as would allow Plaintiff to proceed with performance or cooperate in a timely way as was necessary to Plaintiff's performance], and you find that Plaintiff proceeded with [his/her/its] own performance in any reasonable way, then you must find that Plaintiff was _____ [excused or not liable in damages] for any delay in [his/her/its] performance caused by Defendant's failure or delay in _____ [specifying or cooperating].

[OR]

and you find that the time for a significant part of Plaintiff's own performance had passed, then you must find that [he/she/it] did not breach the contract by _____ [describe action taken by plaintiff, such as canceling contract, or refusing further performance, that he or she was entitled to take].

Authority: Com. Code § 2311(3).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the contract required timely cooperation and one party fails to cooperate, thereby impeding the other party's performance. If the delay was such that the other party's time for performance had passed, the second alternative paragraph should be used. If the issue is the delay of the other party in performing, the first alternative paragraph should be used. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain "Cooperation": Whether the defendant "cooperated" or not is a difficult issue. Hence, your closing must explain that issue in an understandable manner. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2311(3) restates the common sense rule that a party is excused from any delay resulting from the other party's failure to act reasonably or in good faith in specifying the particulars of performance required by the contract. If the failure to specify or otherwise cooperate materially prejudices the contract-keeping party, that party may treat the failure as a breach.

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

2. Open Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.126MB 300H.126 Did Parties "Otherwise Agree"?[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Plaintiff and Defendant did not agree to do otherwise, then _____ [state rule that applies if parties did not otherwise agree; see Use of Instruction for example]. This is the general rule that the Commercial Code applies to agreements that are silent about _____ [state subject of agreement, e.g., the number of deliveries or the time that the contract was to remain in effect].

Plaintiff claims that the parties did not agree to do otherwise and that Defendant is in breach of their contract for the sale of _____ [specify type of goods], because Defendant _____ [state what defendant did or failed to do that violated rule that applies if parties did not otherwise agree; see Use of Instruction for example].

_____ [The surrounding circumstances or A custom of trade or A course of dealing or A course of performance] may be an agreement to do otherwise. Words or written agreements are not necessary.

Defendant claims that [he/she/it] and Plaintiff did agree to do otherwise, and that this agreement may be seen in _____ [the surrounding circumstances or a custom of trade or a course of dealing or a course of performance].

The burden is on Plaintiff to prove what the provisions of the contract were, and also to prove that those provisions were breached by Defendant.

If you find that there was an agreement between Plaintiff and Defendant on _____ [state subject of agreement, e.g., the number of deliveries or the time that the contract was to remain in effect] based on _____ [the surrounding circumstances or a custom of trade or a course of dealing or a course of performance], then that is the rule by which you must judge Defendant's performance, because any specific agreement, even an agreement based on conduct, controls over the general rule that the Commercial Code applies to agreements that are silent about _____ [state subject of agreement, e.g., the number of deliveries or the time that the contract was to remain in effect].

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 1201(a)(3), 2202; U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 1201.

[2] Use of Instruction

[a] When to Use This Instruction

In some cases when a term of a contract for the sale of goods is left open or indefinite, the Commercial Code provides the missing term or gives a more definite meaning to the term [see, e.g., Com. Code §§ 2306-2311]. This rule imposed by the Commercial Code usually applies only "unless otherwise agreed" [see, e.g., Com. Code §§ 2306-2311]. Thus, this instruction should be used when it is alleged that the parties otherwise agreed. This instruction does not attempt to address the situation when it is alleged that the parties expressly agreed to do otherwise. In most cases, the meaning of an express agreement will be a question of law for the court. This instruction is intended for those cases when it is alleged that an implied agreement to do otherwise exists because of the circumstances or the conduct of the parties. These issues are much more likely to present questions of fact for a jury. If there is or may be more than one implied agreement to do otherwise, then this instruction must be used with the instruction in MB 300H.90 on interpretation, which explains the priority rules for these implied contract terms. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Simplify This Instruction: This complex instruction should be streamlined whenever possible by eliminating portions that do not apply to the case at hand (e.g., custom of trade, etc.). And, the idea of "otherwise agree" will seem strange (or even incorrect) to some jurors. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[b] How to Use This Instruction; Examples

If, for example, a buyer and a seller agree to exclusive dealing in a certain type of goods, then that agreement by law imposes, unless otherwise agreed, an obligation for the seller to use best efforts to supply the goods, and for the buyer to use best efforts to promote and market the goods [see Com. Code § 2306(2); see also MB 300H.115]. This means that in such a case, the rule that applies unless the parties agree otherwise might be that the buyer must use best efforts to promote and market the goods. What the plaintiff claims that the buyer failed to do would obviously be that the buyer did not use best efforts to promote and market the goods.

If, as a second example, the contract is silent on the number of deliveries, the Commercial Code provides that a single delivery is required, unless a single delivery is not commercially practicable [Com. Code § 2307; U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2307]. However, any time an agreement makes no provision on a point, including delivery, that point may be controlled by an implicit agreement based on trade usage, course of dealing, or course of performance [Com. Code §§ 1201(a)(3), 1303]. This means that the rule that applies unless the parties agree otherwise would be that the seller must deliver all the goods due under the contract in a single delivery. What the plaintiff claims that the seller failed to do would be that the seller did not deliver all the goods due under the contract in a single delivery. For further discussion of the single delivery requirement, see MB 300H.116.

[3] Comment

[a] Implied Agreements

The court may find an agreement by the parties to do something other than the Commercial Code provides by looking to the surrounding circumstances, a custom of trade, a course of dealing, or a course of performance, as well as in their express language. First, note that Com. Code § 2202 provides that although a final written agreement may not be contradicted by prior writings or by contemporaneous oral agreements, it may be explained or supplemented by course of dealing, custom of trade, or course of performance. Second, under the Commercial Code "agreement" is defined as the bargain of the parties in fact as found in their language or inferred from other circumstances, including course of dealing, usage of trade, or course of performance [Com. Code § 1201(a)(3)]. This includes agreements permitted under the Code to displace stated rules of law [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 1201].

[b] Definitions

For definition of course of dealing, see MB 300H.11. For definition of usage of trade, see MB 300H.12. For definition of course of performance, see MB 300H.13.

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Contracts for the sale of goods may contain warranties regarding the character or fitness of the goods sold. A warranty is a promise by the seller that the goods will conform to the description or standard contained in the warranty.

An express warranty is a statement or affirmation of fact about the goods made by the seller to the buyer. An implied warranty is one that arises from the circumstances of the sale and does not require a statement or affirmation by the seller.

In this case, Plaintiff contends that the following warranties apply to the parties' transaction:

_____ [list express and/or implied warranties claimed]. Plaintiff claims that Defendant has breached these warranties.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2313, 2314, 2315.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to introduce the concepts of express and implied warranties and to introduce further breach of warranty instructions. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Warranties, Generally: Warranties will be unique to some jurors and commonplace to other jurors. That "balancing" should be kept in mind in your closing. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Express and Implied Warranties

Express warranties are created by promises, descriptions, or samples by or from the seller [Com. Code § 2313]. Implied warranties are implied by law under certain circumstances [Com. Code §§ 2314, 2315]. Actions for breach of warranty normally include claims for breach of both express and implied warranties. Care should be taken to separate the instructions for each claim of breach to avoid confusing the jury.

MB 300H.141 Terms of Warranty of Title

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A contract for the sale of goods includes a warranty by Defendant that:

- 1. Title to the goods conveyed by Defendant is good; and
- 2. Transfer of title by Defendant is [proper or rightful]; and
- 3. The goods are not security for money owed to a third party unless Plaintiff knew of the security interest at the time of contracting.

In this case, Plaintiff contends and must prove that Defendant breached the implied warranty of title by _____ [description of alleged breach]. You are to determine from the evidence presented whether the breach occurred.

Authority: Com. Code § 2312(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the buyer contends the seller failed to transfer title to the goods free of undisclosed liens. The instruction in MB 300H.155, on notice of breach, should be given with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms to Jury: The term "title" will have to be explained to the jury in the context of the case. Title to real property (e.g., a deed) or an automobile (e.g., a pink slip) will be easy to understand, but other situations will require greater explanation. The term "security" will also have to be explained. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

The terms of the warranty of title are set forth in Com. Code § 2312(1). A common dispute under Com. Code § 2312 involves the sale of motor vehicles by private parties. The seller fails to disclose a lender's security interest in the vehicle or the fact that title is claimed by another party. Sale of the vehicle to the buyer would breach the implied warranty of title. To avoid application of the warranty, the seller must clearly convey to the buyer that the buyer is acquiring only those rights as the seller may have. For an instruction on the exclusion or modification of the warranty of title, see MB 300H.142.

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant did not warrant [his/her/its] title and thus is not liable for breach of the implied warranty of title if Defendant proves that:

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Specific language in the contract stated that there was no warranty of title.

[OR]

There were circumstances that gave Plaintiff reason to know that the Defendant did not claim to own title to the goods or that the Defendant was selling only limited rights or title to the goods.

Authority: Com. Code § 2312(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller defends a breach claim on the ground that the implied warranty of title was modified or excluded. The first optional paragraph should be used if the claim of exclusion or modification is based on specific language in the contract. The second optional paragraph should be used if the claim of exclusion or modification is based on the circumstances of the transaction.

The instruction in MB 300H.16, on notice of a fact, should be included. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Warranty of Title to Jury: "Warranty of title" will be alien to most jurors. Thus, your closing should explain the concept and related evidence in an understandable manner. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

A warranty of title can be excluded or modified by specific language in the contract or circumstances that give the buyer reason to know that the seller does not claim title itself or that the seller is purporting to sell only that title as the seller or a third person may have [Com. Code § 2312(2)]. The warranty of title is not an implied warranty and thus is not subject to Com. Code § 2316(3) on disclaimer of implied warranties [U.C.C. Comment No. 6 to Com. Code § 2312(2)].

It is, by comparison, easier to modify or exclude the warranty of title than to exclude or modify other implied warranties under the Commercial Code. In theory, the circumstances of the transaction, including, for example, the price paid together with knowledge that the seller was having business difficulties, may be adequate reason for the buyer to know that the seller is only transferring the title as the seller may have. Clearly, the buyer at a sheriff's auction has reason to know that the seller's title may not be good or free from encumbrances [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2312]. On the other hand, negation of the implied warranty of title arising from the purchase of a merchant's goods in the ordinary course of business may require an express written disclaimer signed by the buyer to overcome the strong circumstantial inference that the buyer will receive good title.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS
3. Warranties

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.143

MB 300H.143 Warranty Against Infringement

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

There is a warranty that the goods would not infringe on patent or similar rights held by a third party if Plaintiff proves that:

- 1. Defendant dealt regularly in the type of goods in the contract;
- 2. The agreement did not specifically exclude the noninfringement warranty; and
- 3. Defendant breached that warranty if Plaintiff proves that the goods were subject to valid infringement claims by a third party.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant is not liable for breach of that warranty if Defendant proves that Plaintiff furnished specifications to Defendant for use in manufacturing the goods and the claim of infringement arose out of the Defendant's compliance with the buyer's specifications.

Authority: Com. Code § 2312(3).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the buyer is seeking damages for having been forced to defend a third party claim of infringement involving goods purchased from a merchant. The optional instruction should be used when the seller claims the infringement was caused by the buyer's specifications. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

Unless otherwise agreed, a seller who is a merchant regularly dealing in the goods of the kind warrants that the goods will be delivered free of the rightful claim of any third person by way of infringement or the like, but a buyer who furnishes specifications to the seller must hold the seller harmless against any such claim that arises out of compliance with the specifications [Com. Code § 2312(3)].

The California Commercial Code Comment indicates that the warranty of Com. Code § 2312(3) applies only to claims of patent and trademark infringement [Cal. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2312]. However, it might be argued that a buyer who requires a seller to follow the buyer's specifications on the manufacture of a product should hold the seller harmless against third party suits based on defects in the buyer's specifications [see Carpenter Steel Co. v. Pellegrin (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 35, 43, 46 Cal.Rptr. 502 ; U.C.C. Comment No. 9 to Com. Code § 2316].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

3. Warranties

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.144MB 300H.144 Breach of Warranty of Title--Burden of Proof[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

For Plaintiff to recover from Defendant on Plaintiff's claim of breach of warranty of title, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

1. Defendant sold the _____ [description of goods in issue] to Plaintiff;

2. Defendant warranted Plaintiff's title to _____ [description of goods in issue];

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

3. The title to _____ [description of goods in issue] was not good;

[OR]

3. The _____ [description of goods in issue] infringed the patent of _____ [name of third party];

4. Plaintiff notified Defendant of the breach _____ [within a reasonable time or within a reasonable time after having been sued for infringement]; and

5. Plaintiff's damage was caused by the breach.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2312, 2607(3)(A), (B), (4), 2714.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the elements of a cause of action for breach of warranty of title. It should be used together with the preceding instructions on the creation of warranties of title. The optional paragraphs are for an action for failure to deliver good title and an action for damages for infringement on the title. The notice of breach of warranty instruction in MB 300H.155 should be given with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining the term "cause" set forth in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction.

[3] Comment

A seller warrants the title of goods sold, unless the warranty is excluded by specific language or the buyer had reason to know the title was not warranted [Com. Code § 2312]. The warranty is defined in MB 300H.141 and MB 300H.143. When the buyer has accepted the goods and the warranty is breached, the buyer can recover damages [Com. Code § 2714]. The measure of damages is discussed in MB 300H.258. The buyer must notify the seller of the breach within a reasonable time after he or she discovered or should have discovered the breach [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)]. If the breach of warranty is based on infringement of a third party's patent, notice must be given within a reasonable time after the buyer is sued for the infringement [Com. Code § 2607(3)(B)]. The burden of proof is on the buyer to establish any breach with regard to the goods accepted [Com. Code § 2607(4)].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

3. Warranties

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.145

MB 300H.145 Express Warranties Defined

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

It is not necessary for the seller to use formal words such as "warranty" or "guarantee" to create an express warranty, nor is it necessary for the seller to specifically intend to make a warranty. An express warranty may be found in the written or oral statements of the seller or in the conduct of the parties, including their course of dealing. Whether the seller gave an express warranty is for you to decide considering the facts of this case in light of the following instructions.

[CHOOSE ONE OR BOTH (See Use of Instruction)]

A [description or sample or model] of the goods that is made a part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty.

[OR]

A seller's statement of fact or promise to the buyer that relates to the goods and becomes part of the basis of the parties' bargain creates an express warranty that the goods will conform to the seller's statement or promise.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2313; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 19, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to introduce the basis for the plaintiff's claim of breach of express warranty. The paragraph relating to descriptions, samples, and models should be used only if the plaintiff is asserting a breach of a warranty arising from a description, sample, or model. Similarly, the paragraph relating to statements of facts and promises should be used only if the plaintiff is asserting a breach of a warranty arising from a statement of fact or promise. Further instructions on breach of express warranty must be given with this instruction as appropriate.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Creation of Express Warranty

The Commercial Code recognizes that an express warranty may be created by (1) specific representations of the seller; (2) descriptions, samples, or models; or (3) conduct of the parties, including a course of dealing or trade usage, which may establish a standard to which the goods must conform [Com. Code § 2313(1); Cal. Comment Nos. 1, 4 to Com. Code § 2313].

The Commercial Code contemplates that sellers will frequently make these affirmations of fact, or provide descriptions or samples in the ordinary course of negotiating an agreement. It is further assumed that any such affirmations, descriptions, or samples become part of the basis for the parties' bargain unless there is clear affirmative evidence to the contrary [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2313; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 23, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392]. There is a general presumption that affirmations, descriptions, and samples are intended to become part of the parties' bargain [U.C.C. Comment No. 6 to Com. Code § 2313]. The buyer is not required to show reliance on the seller's affirmation, description, or model to incorporate the warranty into the parties' agreement [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2313; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 22-23, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392].

Under prior case law and the Uniform Sales Act, warranties by sample, warranties of description, and warranties implied from conduct were generally considered implied warranties [Cal. Comment Nos. 4, 5 to Com. Code § 2313]. Under Com. Code § 2313 these warranties are express, making them more difficult to disclaim under Com. Code § 2316 [Cal. Comment No. 6 to Com. Code § 2313].

It should also be noted that the seller's warranty need not be made at the time of the original agreement. Subsequent affirmations, descriptions, or samples may become part of the parties' agreement as a result of express or implied modifications, such as when additional assurances are given to a buyer about to take delivery of the goods [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2316].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.146

MB 300H.146 Statement of Fact Distinguished From Expression of Opinion

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have explained, a statement of fact relating to the goods sold may create an express warranty. However, a statement that merely expresses the seller's opinion about the goods is not considered in law to be a statement of fact and cannot create an express warranty. One of the things you must decide in this case is whether Defendant's statement that _____ [quote, paraphrase, or describe statement] was a statement of fact or a statement of Defendant's opinion.

The term "statement of fact," as used in these instructions, refers to any positive statement of fact made by the seller concerning the goods sold. A statement that a seller makes about the goods sold must be considered to be a statement of fact unless it is shown that the buyer could only have reasonably understood the statement as a statement of the seller's opinion.

The term "statement of opinion," as used in these instructions, refers to a statement that is merely an expression of the seller's subjective impression, belief, conclusion, or judgment and that does not claim to be based on any special knowledge. In determining whether a particular statement was a statement of fact or merely the expression of opinion, you may consider the circumstances under which it was made, the manner in which it was made, and the ordinary meaning of the words used. You may also consider the relationship of the parties and the subject matter of the statement.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2313(2); Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 20-23, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 300H.145 defining express warranties when there is an issue of whether a statement was an opinion or a representation.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Fact" vs. "Opinion": The line between "fact" and "opinion" has become blurred in the case law so it is no surprise that juries will struggle with these concepts. Many defense counsel will want to pursue an "opinion" defense by way of motion before trial.
By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

An affirmation merely of the value of the good or a statement purporting to be merely the seller's opinion or commendation of the goods does not create a warranty [Com. Code § 2313(2)]. Despite the fact that the Commercial Code presumes that all statements of the seller relating to the goods become a basis for and are incorporated in the parties' bargain [U.C.C. Comment No. 8 to Com. Code § 2313; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 21, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392], it is clear that some seller statements cannot be reasonably viewed as conveying more than unsupported opinion as to the value or general quality of the goods. Com. Code § 2313(2) allows the trier of fact to conclude that these statements by the seller may not be viewed as entering into the bargain [U.C.C. Comment No. 8 to Com. Code § 2313; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 21, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392].

MB 300H.147 Express Warranties Arising From a Course of Dealing or Usage of Trade

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An express warranty that the goods conform to a particular standard or quality arises when:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

A course of dealing between the buyer and seller can be fairly regarded as establishing a common basis of understanding that the goods will conform to that standard or quality.

[OR]

A usage of trade, practice, or method of dealing is so regularly observed in a place, business, or trade that it is reasonable to expect that the goods will conform to that usual standard or quality.

[OR]

A course of performance between the buyer and seller fairly indicates that the parties have modified their agreement to include an understanding that the goods will conform to that standard or quality.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2313; U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2313; Cal. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2313.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when it is alleged that an express warranty arose from the conduct of the parties or usage of trade. The appropriate definitions on course of dealing (MB 300H.11), performance (MB 300H.13), and usage of trade (MB 300H.12) should also be included.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Closing Should Address Uncertainty: It may be uncertain what is an "express warranty" or the "usual standard or quality." Hence, your closing should address these points. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The California Commercial Code Comments specifically recognize that a course of prior dealing or usage of trade may form the basis for an express warranty [Cal. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2313]. Further, nothing in Com. Code § 2313 defining express warranties precludes subsequent modification of the parties' agreement, such as by a course of dealing, so as to include express warranties not found in the original agreement [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2313].

Com. Code § 2314(3) also recognizes that implied warranties other than merchantability or fitness for purpose may arise from a course of dealing or trade usage [U.C.C. Comment No. 12 to Com. Code § 2314].

Further, the instruction defining the term "cause" set forth in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Breach of Express Warranty; Burden of Proof

Affirmations of fact or promises, descriptions of goods, and samples or models made by the part of the parties' bargain are express warranties [Com. Code § 2313; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 19-24, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392]. These warranties are defined in MB 300H.145 and MB 300H.147. When the buyer has accepted the goods and the warranty is breached, the buyer can recover damages [Com. Code § 2714]. The measure of damages is discussed in MB 300H.258. The buyer must notify the seller of the breach within a reasonable time after he or she discovered or should have discovered the breach [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)]. The burden of proof is on the buyer to establish any breach with regard to the goods accepted [Com. Code § 2607(4)].

Unlike implied warranties, privity is not required to recover for breach of express warranty, and therefore a person who did not buy the goods from the plaintiff may recover damages for the breach of the express warranty [Rodrigues v. Campbell Industries (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 494, 500, 151 Cal.Rptr. 90]. However, at least one case suggests that if privity is absent some form of reliance should be shown [Smith v. Gates Rubber Co. (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 766, 769, 47 Cal.Rptr. 307].

MB 300H.149 Implied Warranties of Fitness for Purpose Defined

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A warranty that goods are fit for a particular purpose is implied by law in a contract for their sale, if the seller, at the time the contract is made, has reason to know both of the following:

- 1. The buyer requires the goods for a particular purpose; and
- 2. The buyer is relying on the seller's skill and judgment to select or furnish goods suitable for that purpose.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 24-25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the warranty when breach of the implied warranty of fitness for purpose is claimed. Instructions on reliance on the seller's knowledge of the buyer's particular purpose (MB 300H.150) and the buyer's reliance on the seller's skill and judgment (MB 300H.151) should be included as necessary. The appropriate breach (MB 300H.152) and notice of breach (MB 300H.155) instructions must also be given.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Implied Warranty--Reliance

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2315. The Commercial Code does not require the buyer to communicate, expressly or implicitly, a particular purpose for the goods or the buyer's reliance on the seller's skill and judgment. It is sufficient that the seller has reason to know of the buyer's purpose and reliance [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392] .

It is necessary to establish that the buyer actually relied on the seller's skill and judgment in selecting goods suitable for the buyer's particular purpose [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392] . The seller's reason to know of the buyer's purpose and reliance, and the buyer's actual reliance are, of course, the essential issues for the jury.

MB 300H.150 Seller's Knowledge of Buyer's Particular Purpose

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As used in these instructions, the buyer's "particular purpose" refers to the buyer's intended use and specific requirements for the goods in question. For example, shoes may be purchased by the buyer for the particular purpose of mountain climbing, rather than the ordinary purpose of walking.

Plaintiff must prove that Defendant had reason to know of the particular purpose for which the Plaintiff intended the goods. Plaintiff need not show actual knowledge on Defendant's part, if, from all the facts and circumstances known to the Defendant at the time of contracting, you conclude that Defendant had sufficient reason to know of Plaintiff's particular purpose.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2315; U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 24-25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction, defining particular purpose, should be given with the instruction in MB 300H.149, defining the implied warranty of fitness for particular purpose. This instruction obviously assumes that the plaintiff is the buyer, and that the defendant seller has breached the warranty of fitness for a particular purpose. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Contacts Can Help Establish Seller's

Knowledge: It may be challenging to demonstrate how "particular purpose" is proved. All contacts with the seller, especially by sales representatives, can be helpful in establishing that the seller knew or should have known that the buyer had a particular use in mind for the goods in question. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment[a] Implied Warranty--Seller's Knowledge

For an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose to arise, the seller must have reason to know of the particular purpose [Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 24-25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392]. A particular purpose differs from the ordinary purpose for which the goods are used in that it envisages a specific use by the buyer that is peculiar to the nature of the buyer's business, whereas the ordinary purposes for which goods are used are those involved in the concept of merchantability [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2315]. The implied warranty of merchantability is discussed in MB 300H.153.

The Commercial Code's emphasis on the seller's reason to know the buyer's particular purpose is intended to extend the warranty of fitness of purpose beyond those cases in which the buyer expressly informs the seller of the intended use for the goods to cases in which the seller should have known of the buyer's particular purpose [Cal. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2315].

MB 300H.151 Buyer's Reliance on Seller's Skill

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As used in these instructions, "buyer's reliance on the seller's skill and judgment" refers to the Defendant's recommendation of the goods as suitable for Plaintiff's particular purpose and Plaintiff's reliance on the recommendation.

Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] relied on Defendant's skill or judgment in selecting or furnishing suitable goods. Whether Plaintiff relied on Defendant's skill and judgment is a question of fact for you to decide based on the facts of this case. However, it is not necessary for Plaintiff to prove that Defendant had actual knowledge of Plaintiff's reliance, if the circumstances were such that Defendant had reason to realize that Plaintiff was relying on Defendant's skill and judgment.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2315; U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 24-25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the general instruction in MB 300H.149, defining the implied warranty of fitness to define the necessary reliance. See MB 300H.150[2] for further comments relevant to using this instruction.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment[a] Buyer's Reliance

It is necessary that the buyer establish that he or she relied on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods [Com. Code § 2315; U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392]. The buyer's reliance is a question for the trier of fact. For example, if the buyer merely refers to particular goods by a brand name, but relies on the seller to recommend the goods for a particular purpose, the buyer should be entitled to invoke the warranty of fitness for purpose [Lindberg v. Coutches (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d Supp. 828, 831, 334 P.2d 701]. If the buyer insists on a particular brand name or provides specifications for the seller to follow, reliance is cast in doubt [U.C.C. Comment Nos. 2, 5 to Com. Code § 2315]. However, it is clear that the buyer does not rely on the seller's skill and judgment when the buyer provides detailed specifications and requires the seller to manufacture goods to meet those specifications [U.C.C. Comment Nos. 2, 5 to Com. Code § 2315].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: The terms "implied warranty" and "fitness" will be difficult to prove (or rebut) in some lawsuits. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Breach of Implied Warranty

When the seller has reason to know of the buyer's particular purpose for acquiring the goods and that the buyer is relying on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods, there is an implied warranty that the goods will be fit for the particular purpose [Com. Code § 2315; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 24-25, 220 Cal.Rptr. 392]. The elements of the warranty are discussed in MB 300H.149. When the buyer has accepted the goods and the warranty is breached, the buyer can recover damages [Com. Code § 2714]. The measure of damages is discussed in MB 300H.258. The buyer must notify the seller of the breach within a reasonable time after he or she discovered or should have discovered the breach [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)]. The burden of proof is on the buyer to establish any breach with regard to the goods accepted [Com. Code § 2607(4)].

It is important to note that privity still remains an issue in breach of implied warranty cases [see, e.g., All West Electronics, Inc. v. M-B-W, Inc. (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 717, 725-727, 75 Cal.Rptr.2d 509 (privity of contract required for implied warranty liability under Burr v. Sherwin Williams)]. For example, Burr v. Sherwin Williams [Burr v. Sherwin Williams (1954) 42 Cal.2d 682, 695, 268 P.2d 1041] is often cited for the proposition that privity is required to recover economic damage under implied warranties. However, that decision is a pre-Commercial Code case. Subsequently, California failed to adopt U.C.C. § 2318 spelling out privity requirements similar to Burr, in part because § 2318 was considered a step backwards [see Cal. Comments to U.C.C. § 2318]. It seems clear in California that in personal injury cases a member of the buyer's family can recover for breach of an implied warranty [Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 114 n. 8, 120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377], as can the buyer's employees [Peterson v. Lamb Rubber Co. (1960) 54 Cal.2d 339, 347, 353 P.2d 575]. However, California appears to still have a privity requirement in implied warranty cases involving economic damages only [Rodrigues v. Campbell Industries (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 494, 500, 151 Cal.Rptr. 90 ; Anthony v. Kelsey-Hayes Co. (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 442, 448, 102 Cal.Rptr. 113].

The privity requirement is not always strictly applied, however. If the manufacturer or supplier of goods affirmatively engages in conduct directly with the ultimate buyer, so that functionally the manufacturer or supplier is in the position of the direct seller, then it is fair and appropriate to hold that manufacturer or supplier to an implied warranty that the goods will be fit for the buyer's purposes, if all other elements of the buyer's claim have been established [Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 Cal.App.4th 116, 144, 87 Cal.Rptr. 3d 5 ; e.g., U.S. Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 1431, 1441-1442, 1445, 279 Cal.Rptr. 533 (roofing contractor negotiated with equipment supplier for specific item at agreed price; unrelated finance lessor then bought that item from supplier and leased it to contractor, because lease was financially advantageous for contractor; court held that implied warranty of fitness ran from supplier to contractor, in spite of lack of actual privity between them, because of their direct dealings; participation of finance lessor as accommodation party was disregarded)].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A warranty that goods are merchantable is implied in a contract for the sale of the goods if the seller is a merchant dealing in goods that are of the same kind as those sold to the buyer.

To be merchantable, goods must meet all of the following standards:

- 1. Be fit for the ordinary purposes for which the goods are used;
- 2. Pass without objection in the trade under the description in the contract;

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

- 3. If the goods are interchangeable, be of average quality within the description in the contract;
- 4. Within the limits permitted by the contract, be of even kind, quality, and quantity within each unit and among all units;
- 5. Be adequately contained, packaged, and labeled in the manner required in the contract; and
- 6. Conform to the promises or affirmations of fact made on the container or label.

In this case, Plaintiff contends and must prove that the goods were not merchantable because _____ [list deviations from merchantability].

Authority: Com. Code § 2314.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given as a general introduction to breach of implied warranty of merchantability claims, together with the instruction in MB 300H.06 defining "merchant."

Those optional instructions numbered 3 through 6 that apply to the type of goods involved should also be given when applicable. That is, if the goods are fungible, 3 should be given; if they come in lots or units, 4 should be given; if they are packaged or labeled, or if the contract so requires, 5 should be given; if any information is written on the container or label, 6 should be given.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

[3] Comment

[a] Implied Warranty of Merchantability

Under the implied warranty of merchantability, the Commercial Code establishes certain minimum standards for goods sold by merchants, unless this implied warranty is excluded or modified in accordance with Com. Code § 2316. Generally, the goods must be of a quality comparable to that usually accepted in the relevant trade under their description. The most significant of these listed qualities is the requirement that the goods be fit for ordinary purposes for which goods of that type are used [Com. Code § 2314].

In addition to the implied warranty of merchantability, Com. Code § 2314(3) recognizes that other implied warranties may arise from a course of dealing or usage of trade.

[a] Implied Warranty of Merchantability

An implied warranty of merchantability is implied when a merchant of that kind of goods sells them [Com. Code § 2314]. The warranty is defined in MB 300H.153[1]. When the buyer has accepted the goods and the warranty is breached, the buyer can recover damages [Com. Code § 2714]. The measure of damages is discussed in MB 300H.258. The buyer must notify the seller of the breach within a reasonable time after he or she discovered or should have discovered it [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)]. A reasonable notice instruction is set forth in MB 300H.155[1]. The burden of proof is on the buyer to establish any breach with regard to the goods accepted [Com. Code § 2607(4)].

The issue of when privity of contract is required to recover on an implied warranty is discussed in MB 300H.152.

MB 300H.155 Notice of Breach of Warranty

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A buyer must notify the seller of a breach of warranty within a reasonable time after the buyer discovers, or should have discovered, a breach of warranty. The notice need not be specific as to the nature of the breach or type of damage. However, the notice must be adequate to warn the seller that there is a problem with the goods. The notice may be in writing or oral; no particular form of notice is required.

Whether the notice is within a reasonable time depends on the circumstances of the transaction, the type of goods, and the nature of the buyer. Whether the buyer's notice was adequate and within a reasonable time is for you to decide based on the evidence in this case.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2607(3)(A); U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2607.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction must be used when there is an issue as to the adequacy or timeliness of notice of breach of warranty.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Notice of Breach

A prerequisite to recovery for breach of warranty is notice of the breach within a reasonable time after the buyer discovered or should have discovered the breach [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)]. The notice must be adequate to warn the seller that there is a problem, but no particular type of notice is required. Since the reason for requiring notification is to defeat commercial bad faith, not to deprive a retail consumer of a remedy, what a reasonable time is may depend on whether the buyer is in a commercial situation or is a retail consumer [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2607].

The buyer has the burden of proving reasonable notice. The question whether notice was properly given must be determined from the particular circumstances, and when only one inference can be drawn from undisputed facts, the issue may be determined as a matter of law [Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 116, 135-136, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"As Is" Sales: Most jurors will understand an "as is" sale. Consequently, if you are counsel for the plaintiff, exploit that understanding. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Optional Paragraphs: Several of the optional paragraphs will be difficult to sell to the jury. The idea that an inspection would have revealed the defect, but that the buyer failed to inspect or performed an inadequate inspection, might strike some jurors as unfair (e.g., how many people thoroughly inspect items that they buy in a store). These optional paragraphs therefore apply to specialized situations when inspections are almost mandatory. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Disclaimer of Implied Warranties

The Commercial Code recognizes certain relatively informal ways to disclaim all implied warranties. Use of the term "as is" or similar language is commonly understood to call the buyer's attention to the fact that the seller makes no representations as to the quality of the goods. Similarly, when the buyer inspects the goods thoroughly or refuses to inspect them, it is reasonable to assume that the buyer has knowingly assumed the risk of obvious defects. Finally, implied warranties may be excluded by a course of dealing, course of performance, or usage of trade inconsistent with such warranties [Com. Code § 2316(3)].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In determining the effect of words or conduct by the parties that would limit or negate express warranties, the following rules apply:

- 1. Wherever it is reasonable to do so, words or conduct that create express warranties must be understood to be consistent with words or conduct that limit or negate warranties; but
- 2. If the words or conduct are not reasonably consistent, the limitations or negation of the express warranties are of no effect and the express warranties are a part of the contract.

Authority: Com. Code § 2316(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue as to the disclaimer of express warranties. Generally, the court will interpret the terms of any written agreement and limit the effect of disclaimers as required by Com. Code § 2316(1). However, when the intentions of the parties must be determined by the jury from the conduct of the parties, it may be necessary to give the above instructions.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Disclaimer of Express Warranties

Words or conduct relevant to the creation of an express warranty and words or conduct tending to negate or limit warranty must be construed whenever reasonable as consistent with each other. However, negation or limitation is inoperative to the extent that the construction is unreasonable. The parole evidence rule may prevent the introduction of any parole evidence on express warranties by an integration clause in the agreement [Com. Code § 2316(2)].

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

4. Shipping and Credit Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.170

MB 300H.170 General Shipping Terms Definition

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The contract in this case uses shipping terms that are common to contracts for the sale and delivery of goods. These terms are understood in the trade, but they may not be familiar to you. I will now instruct you on what those terms are and what they required each of the parties to this contract to do.

Occasionally I will refer to one party having the risk of loss. The party with the risk of loss is responsible for paying for or making good any loss or damage to the goods while in transit, until the goods reach the point at which the risk passes to another party.

You will later be required to decide whether each party to the contract fulfilled [his/her/its] obligations as I will now describe them to you.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2509, 2510.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to introduce the other shipping terms instructions in MB 300H.171-MB 300H.176 and to define risk of loss, which is used in those instructions.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Evidence Must Address Shipping Terms: Many jurors will only be vaguely aware of "shipping terms." Make sure the evidence addresses that concept. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Although risk of loss is not actually defined in the Commercial Code, the definition in this instruction is consistent with its use in Com. Code §§ 2509 and 2510. If the allocation of risk of loss or damage is specifically an issue in the case, this paragraph should be omitted, and a specific instruction on risk of loss based on Com. Code §§ 2509, 2510, and 2516 should be drafted to instruct the jury as to who must bear the loss.

MB 300H.171 F.O.B. Definition

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

F.O.B. means "free on board."

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

This contract specified that delivery of the goods by the seller be F.O.B. _____ [place of shipment]. This required the seller to pay the cost of bringing the goods to _____ [place of shipment] and there putting them in the hands of a carrier, and to bear the risk of loss or damage until the goods were in the hands of the carrier. This also required the buyer to pay the seller for the goods when the bill of lading was tendered to [him/her/it].

[OR]

This contract specified that delivery of goods by the seller be F.O.B. _____ [place of shipment and manner of conveyance as specified in contract]. This required the seller to pay the cost of bringing the goods to _____ [place of shipment] and of then loading them on _____ [conveyance specified in contract] and to bear the risk of loss or damage until the goods were loaded.

This required the seller to give timely instructions as to _____ [state specification that contract required buyer to provide regarding name, location, and departure date of ship or other conveyance]. This also required the buyer to pay the seller for the goods when the bill of lading was tendered to [him/her/it].

[OR]

This contract specified that delivery of goods by the seller be F.O.B. _____ [place of destination]. This required the seller to pay the cost of transporting the goods to _____ [place of destination] and to bear the risk of loss or damage until the goods were tendered to the buyer at _____ [place of destination].

Authority: Com. Code § 2319(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

The first alternative should be used when the contract is F.O.B. place of shipment. The place of shipment and names of the parties in the roles of seller and buyer should be supplied as required.

The second alternative should be used when the contract is F.O.B. a particular vessel or other mode of conveyance departing from a particular location. If the contract required that the seller await instruction regarding the conveyance from the buyer and there is no issue that the buyer properly did so, that conveyance specified should be stated when the instruction refers to "conveyance specified in contract." If there is an issue as to whether the buyer reasonably or properly specified, the next paragraph should be given and the relevant part of the first paragraph should state "and of then loading them according to the buyer's instructions." In cases involving the failure to specify or failure of the specified conveyance, the instruction in MB 300H.125, on duty to cooperate (Com. Code § 2311) and the instruction in MB 300H.244, on substituted performance (Com. Code § 2614) should also be consulted.

If there is an issue regarding time of payment or proper tender of documents, the last paragraph should be given together with the appropriate instruction.

The third alternative should be used when the contract is F.O.B. Destination.

The definition of "bill of lading" in MB 300H.22[1] should be used with this instruction.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2319(1).

The seller had the risk of loss or damage to the goods until they were delivered _____ [either alongside the vessel (name of vessel) or to dock (number or name of dock)].

The buyer was required to give the seller timely instructions as to _____ [either the name, location, and sailing date of the vessel or the location of the dock] to which the goods were to be delivered.

Authority: Com. Code § 2319(2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with F.A.S. contracts requiring delivery either to the dock alongside a particular shipping vessel or, as is more common, to a particular dock at a named port. The vessel or dock, and the port and names of the parties in their roles as either buyer or seller should be supplied as indicated. The "bill of lading" definition instruction in MB 300H.22 should be given with this instruction. The instruction in MB 300H.125 on the duty of cooperation should also be given if timeliness of instructions is an issue. This instruction should only include the provisions relevant to the issues in dispute.

PART G. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

4. Shipping and Credit Terms

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.173

MB 300H.173 C.I.F. Definition

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

This contract specified that delivery of goods by the seller be C.I.F. _____ [name of place of destination]. C.I.F. means cost, insurance, freight. This required the seller to pay the cost of all of the following:

- 1. Delivering the goods to the carrier at the port of shipment and obtaining a bill or bills of lading covering the entire transportation to _____ [place of destination];
- 2. Loading the goods and obtaining a receipt from the carrier showing that the freight charges had been paid or provided for;
- 3. Obtaining a policy or certificate of insurance of the kind and on terms then usual in that port, in the currency of the contract, shown to cover the same goods covered by the bills of lading, in the usual amount, providing for payment to the _____ [buyer or "to whom it may concern"] in case of loss;
- 4. Preparing an invoice and obtaining any other documents required [to make the shipment or by the contract]; and
- 5. Forwarding and tendering these documents with commercial promptness with all necessary endorsements so that the buyer will be entitled to possession of the goods when they arrive at _____ [place of destination].

This also required the buyer to pay the seller for the goods when these documents were tendered to [him/her/it].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instructions)]

The [C.I.F. or C. & F.] contract in this case contained the term _____ [either net landed weight or delivered weight or outturn quantity or outturn quality or statement of any warranty of quality or condition of goods on arrival], meaning that the seller took the risk of the ordinary _____ [deterioration or shrinkage] in the goods during transport.

Payment of the seller's price was required on tender of documents. The seller was required to make a settlement with the buyer with commercial promptness after arrival of the goods, as reimbursement for any ordinary [deterioration or shrinkage] during transport.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2320(3), 2321(1), (2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define C.I.F. contracts, requiring the seller to pay the freight and to take out insurance in favor of the buyer, thereby shifting the risk of loss or damage to the buyer for the entire transport. The "bill of lading" definition instruction in MB 300H.22 should be given with this instruction.

The optional instruction should be used when the seller has, under a C.I.F. or C. & F. contract, guaranteed the quality or quantity of goods on arrival against ordinary deterioration during transit.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code §§ 2320(3), 2321(1), (2). An outturn quantity or similar contract term shifts to the seller only the risk of ordinary shrinkage and deterioration, not other loss or damage [Com. Code § 2321(2)].

This also required the buyer to pay the seller for the goods on tender of these documents to [him/her/it].

Authority: Com. Code § 2320(3).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with C. & F. contracts, when the seller pays the freight and the buyer must seek recovery from the carrier in case of loss or damage. The optional paragraph in MB 300H.173 regarding shrinkage or deterioration during transit can be used with this instruction. The "bill of lading" definition instruction in MB 300H.22 should be given with this instruction.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2320(3).

In Mitsui O.S.K. Lines, Ltd. v. Dynasea Corp., the court found that no implied agreement by a buyer to pay freight for ocean transport arose when the cargo was purchased "C+F, freight prepaid for delivery to Los Angeles," and the seller's check for freight was accepted by the shipper, although eventually it was dishonored. Terms in the shipper's bill of lading purporting to impose liability for freight on a broadly defined "Merchant" did not bind the C+F buyer in the absence of that buyer's signature or other evidence of acceptance of the terms [Mitsui O.S.K. Lines, Ltd. V. Dynasea Corp. (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 208, 210-213, 85 Cal.Rptr.2d 1]. For an instruction and discussion relating to the definition of "agreement," see MB 300H.07. MB 300H.175 No Arrival; No Sale

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

This contract provided for delivery of goods on the basis of "no arrival, no sale." This required the seller to offer the goods to the buyer if they did arrive, but relieved the seller of liability if the goods did not arrive, provided [he/she/it] in no way caused their nonarrival.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Under the "no arrival, no sale" clause, if, without fault of the seller, _____ [the goods arrived damaged or not all the goods contracted for arrived or the goods delivered had deteriorated so as not to conform to the contract or the goods arrived after the contract time], the buyer had the choice of either voiding the contract or accepting the goods "as is" with a reduction in the contract price, but the buyer is entitled to no other remedy.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2324, 2613.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is a "no arrival, no sale" contract term. The optional paragraph should be given when the goods arrived late or damaged, or only part of the goods arrived, with the clause appropriate to the facts selected. The names of the parties should be substituted for the terms "buyer" and "seller."

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code §§ 2320(3), 2613. Under a "no arrival, no sale" provision, if the loss is total the contract is avoided. If the loss is partial, the buyer can take the goods with an allowance for the deterioration or avoid the contract [Com. Code § 2613].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART H. CONTRACT REPUDIATION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.190

MB 300H.190 Repudiation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A party may _____ [sue for breach of contract or stop its own performance of a contract] if the other party has repudiated either all of the contract, or so much of it as to impair substantially the value of the contract to the non-repudiating party.

A repudiation is a statement or action showing a clear and absolute intention not to perform one's obligations under the contract.

In this case, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant repudiated the contract by:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. Expressing an unequivocal intent not to perform the contract at any time.
2. Taking such action as to make [his/her/its] performance of the contract impossible.
3. Taking action that shows an irrevocable decision not to perform the contract.
4. Failing to provide adequate assurance of due performance within [30 days or a reasonable time] of receiving a justified demand to do so.

If you find that Defendant repudiated the contract, _____ [Defendant breached the contract or Plaintiff did not breach the contract by stopping [his/her/its] own performance].

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2609, 2610; U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2610.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when repudiation is alleged in support of a claim of breach or in defense of a claim for nonperformance [see Ch. 3D, Matthew Bender Performance and Breach of Contract]. The alternatives are for use to describe the acts alleged to constitute repudiation. The instruction in MB 300H.195 on adequate assurance should be given if alternative 4 is used. When repudiation of less than the whole contract is alleged, the instruction in MB 300H.191 on substantial impairment must be given. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Repudiation" May Seem Unusual to Jury: The act of "repudiation" may seem unusual to some jurors. So, be sure to go over the four elements in this instruction thoroughly. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Adequate Assurance": In the commercial context, demands for "adequate assurance" (see alternative 4 in instruction) are common but may be unfamiliar to most jurors. If a party fails to respond to such a demand, or provides an inadequate response, this will be treated the same as an outright repudiation of the contract. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Anticipatory repudiation requires an overt communication of intention or an action that renders performance impossible or demonstrates a clear determination not to continue with performance [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2610]. A demand for more than a party is entitled to under the contract is not alone sufficient unless it includes a statement not to perform except on conditions that go beyond the contract [see U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2610; see also National Farmers Org'n v. Bartlett & Co. Grain (8th Cir. 1977) 560 F.2d 1350]. When there is no overt repudiation, a demand for adequate assurance that is not responded to makes it possible for the nonrepudiating party to suspend its own performance in the face of a possible repudiation [Com. Code § 2609; see MB 300H.193].

After a repudiation, the other party may resort to any remedy for breach even though the other party has notified the repudiating party that the other party will await performance and has urged retraction [Com. Code § 2610(b)]. The Commercial Code also sets forth other actions that a party may take in response to a repudiation, including identifying goods to the contract and salvaging goods that were in the process of fabrication at the time of repudiation [Com. Code § 2610(c)].

The nonrepudiating party may await performance for a reasonable time, at least until the time for performance stated in the contract, without having waived the repudiation [Com. Code § 2610(a)]. However, this may give the repudiating party the opportunity to retract [see Com. Code § 2611; see also MB 300H.192].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART H. CONTRACT REPUDIATION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.191

MB 300H.191 Substantial Impairment

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In this case you must decide whether Defendant's partial repudiation substantially impaired the value of the whole contract to Plaintiff.

The test of whether the value of a contract is substantially impaired is whether material inconvenience or injustice will result if the Plaintiff is forced to wait and receive Defendant's performance minus the part or aspect of the contract that was repudiated.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2610; U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2610.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with MB 300H.190 when the jury must apply the standard of substantial impairment to determine whether partial repudiation is ground for stopping performance or a breach. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

This test is based on U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2610.

Substantial impairment is an issue of fact for the jury [Gantry Constr. Co. v. American Pipe & Constr. Co. (1975) 49 Cal.App.3d 186, 193, 122 Cal.Rptr. 834 (decided under Com. Code § 2612)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART H. CONTRACT REPUDIATION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.192

MB 300H.192 Retraction of Repudiation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant contends that even if it repudiated the contract, it retracted that repudiation on _____ [date] by _____ [acts alleged to have retracted repudiation]. These acts are a retraction if they clearly indicated to Plaintiff that Defendant intended to perform according to the contract. No specific words or acts are required.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The retraction contained adequate assurance of performance.

Defendant had the right to retract [his/her/its] repudiation and reinstate the contract if at the time of the retraction all of the following existed:

- 1. Defendant's next performance under the contract was not yet due;
- 2. Plaintiff had not canceled the contract; and
- 3. Plaintiff had not materially changed [his/her/its] position or otherwise indicated that [he/she/it] considered the repudiation final.

Defendant must prove that [he/she/it] retracted the repudiation and that the retraction was effective because the three conditions described above were met. If you find that the retraction was effective, the contract was reinstated and Plaintiff may not recover based on the repudiation.

Authority: Com. Code § 2611.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue of fact as to whether a retraction was made and was effective. The optional sentence is for use when the repudiation was based on failure to provide adequate assurance of performance. Adequate assurances are defined in MB 300H.195. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proving Retraction May Be Difficult: A party that repudiates a contract will have a difficult time proving that the repudiation was later "retracted." Among other things, the "retraction" will be ineffective if the other party changed its position, or otherwise considered the repudiation "final," a relatively low threshold for the other party to cross. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Until the repudiating party's next performance is due, he or she can retract the repudiation unless the other party has since the repudiation canceled or materially changed position or otherwise indicated that the repudiation is final. A retraction may be by any method that clearly indicates that the repudiating party intends to perform. However, if the repudiation was based on failure to provide assurance of performance [see MB 300H.193], the retraction must include the justifiably demanded assurance [Com. Code §§ 2611(1), (2)]. An effective retraction reinstates the repudiating party's rights under the contract. However, the other party must be allowed more time if the repudiation caused a delay [Com. Code § 2611(3)].

Although "the repudiating party's right to reinstate the contract is entirely dependent on the action taken by the aggrieved party" [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2611], it seems clear conversely that the repudiating party has the right to retract if the aggrieved party takes no action, unless sufficient time has elapsed that it would be commercially unreasonable.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART H. CONTRACT REPUDIATION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.193

MB 300H.193 Demand for Adequate Assurance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that Defendant repudiated the contract because Defendant did not provide Plaintiff with adequate assurance of performance after Plaintiff asked for that assurance. To establish a repudiation for this reason, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff had reasonable grounds for insecurity about Defendant's performance of the contract;
- 2. That Plaintiff demanded in writing that Defendant provide adequate assurance of performance; and
- 3. That Defendant failed to provide adequate assurance of performance within a reasonable time after receipt of the demand.

Authority: Com. Code § 2609.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one party claims that the other party repudiated the contract by failure to provide adequate assurances of performance. The instruction in MB 300H.14 defining reasonable time must be used with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must also be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Choose Terms Carefully: In this context, the word "insecurity" [see Com. Code § 2609(1)] in the first element seems strange. Some jurors will connect that word with "feeling," not a view about the other party's performance of a contract. An alternative term for "insecurity" would be "doubt." By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A contract for sale imposes an obligation on each party that the others' expectation of receiving due performance will not be impaired. When reasonable grounds for insecurity arise with regard to the performance of either party, the other party may demand in writing adequate assurance of due performance. Until this assurance is received, the demanding party may suspend any performance for which he or she has not already received the agreed return, if the suspension would be commercially reasonable [Com. Code § 2609].

The right to assurance of performance is an extension of the doctrine of anticipatory breach, giving a party who has reason to doubt the other party's future performance a remedy that minimizes his or her own damages if the other cannot or does not intend to carry out the contract [see Witkin, Summary of California Law, Ch. V, Sales, § 175 (10th ed., 2005)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART H. CONTRACT REPUDIATION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.194

MB 300H.194 Grounds for Insecurity

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Each party to this contract had the right to continue to expect the other party to perform the contract. Knowledge of any event or circumstance that would reasonably cause doubt as to the other party's willingness or ability to carry out the contract fully is grounds for insecurity.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The grounds for insecurity are based on commercial standards.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2609; U.C.C. Comment Nos. 1, 3 to Com. Code § 2609.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300H.193 on demand for adequate assurance to define grounds for insecurity. The optional paragraph is for use when the contract is between merchants.

[3] Comment

Whether there are reasonable grounds for insecurity is a question of fact [American Bronze Corp. v. Streamway Products (Ohio 1982) 456 N.E. 2d 1295, 1303]. The basis for the right to demand adequate assurances because of reasonable grounds for insecurity is the fact that parties bargain for performance, not for a promise plus the right to win a lawsuit [Com. Code § 2609; U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2609]. Grounds for insecurity in a contract between merchants are measured by commercial standards and can arise in the contract's performance, in the other party's performance of other contracts, or without relation to contract performance [see U.C.C. Comment Nos. 3 and 4 to Com. Code § 2609].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART H. CONTRACT REPUDIATION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.195

MB 300H.195 Adequate Assurance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Adequate assurance is what is reasonable under the circumstances to assure Plaintiff that Defendant will perform under the contract. Adequate assurance may require Defendant to do more than promise to perform if a promise is not adequate assurance. The adequacy of the assurance is not measured by the Plaintiff's personal satisfaction but by Plaintiff's good faith satisfaction.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The adequacy of assurance is based on commercial standards.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2609; U.C.C. Comment Nos. 3, 4 to Com. Code § 2609.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300H.193 on demand for adequate assurance to define grounds for insecurity. The optional paragraph should be used when the contract is between merchants. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Adequacy of Assurance: The last sentence in this instruction could be confusing. The key point is that the adequacy of the assurance is measured by an objective standard (i.e., good faith satisfaction) as opposed to a subjective standard (i.e., personal satisfaction). By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

The assurance must be adequate, which may include more than a promise to perform if a promise is not sufficient to reasonably assure the demanding party [Com. Code § 2609; U.C.C. Comment Nos. 3, 4 to Com. Code § 2609]. The adequacy of the assurance is measured not by the demanding party's personal satisfaction but by good faith, and between merchants, by accepted commercial standards [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2609].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART I. TENDER

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.210

MB 300H.210 Tender of Goods Generally

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is not liable to pay for the goods unless Plaintiff properly tendered delivery of the goods to Defendant.

To establish a proper tender of delivery, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [he/she/it] put goods that conformed to the contract at Defendant's disposition in the manner required by the contract, which was _____ [describe manner required in contract];
- 2. That [he/she/it] gave Defendant such notice as was reasonably necessary to allow Defendant to take delivery of the goods; and
- 3. That [he/she/it] held the goods at Defendant's disposition at a reasonable hour and for a period of time that was reasonably necessary to allow the buyer to take delivery of the goods.

Reasonableness must be considered in light of custom and usage of the trade and of the circumstances in this case.

Authority: Com. Code § 2503(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a general tender of goods instruction that should be used when the contract does not require tender of documents and when the seller does not ship the goods. If usage of trade is at issue, the definition instruction in MB 300H.12 must be given.

When the buyer's failure to provide suitable facilities to receive the goods, as required by Com. Code § 2503(1)(b), is an issue, the instruction in MB 300H.125 on duty to cooperate may be used with this instruction. When the manner of notifying the buyer is an issue, the instruction in MB 300H.17 on giving notice may be used with this instruction. The instruction in MB 300H.01 on conforming goods may also be given with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

Tender of delivery requires that the seller put and hold conforming goods at the buyer's disposition and give the buyer any notification reasonably necessary to enable him or her to take delivery. The manner, time, and place for tender are determined by the agreement and by relevant provisions of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 2503(1)]. Com. Code § 2503(1) requires that tender be at a reasonable hour, and goods must be held available for the period reasonably necessary to enable the buyer to take possession, but unless otherwise agreed, the buyer must furnish facilities reasonably suited to the receipt of the goods.

It is important to consider usage of trade and other circumstances of the case in determining what is a reasonable time and holding period before the buyer must take delivery [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2503].

PART I. TENDER

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.211

MB 300H.211 Tender by Seller Under Shipment and Destination Contracts

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is not liable to pay for the goods unless Plaintiff properly tendered delivery of the goods to Defendant.

To establish a proper tender of delivery, Plaintiff must prove all of the of following:

- 1. That [he/she/it] put the goods in the possession of a carrier that was reasonable considering the kind of goods and the circumstances of the transaction;
- 2. That [he/she/it] made a shipping contract with the carrier that was reasonable given the nature of the goods and the circumstances of the transaction;
- 3. That [he/she/it] obtained and promptly delivered or tendered to Defendant any documents necessary for Defendant to take possession of the goods; and
- 4. That [he/she/it] promptly notified Defendant of the shipment.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Even if you find that Plaintiff did not promptly notify Defendant or that the shipping terms were unreasonable, Defendant was not justified in rejecting the goods unless a material delay or loss was caused by the failure to notify or unreasonable shipping terms.

Authority: Com. Code § 2504.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller is authorized to send the goods to the seller and the contract does not require that the goods be delivered at a particular destination, such as an F.O.B. point of shipment contract or a C.I.F. or C. & F. contract [see U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2504]. Additional obligations of these contracts are contained in MB 300H.171, MB 300H.173, and MB 300H.174 on obligations under shipping terms.

When the manner of notifying the buyer is an issue, the instruction in MB 300H.17 on giving notice may be used with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2504. The seller has the choice of any reasonable carrier, routing, and other arrangements. Reasonable arrangements may require refrigeration, watering of livestock, protection against cold, or similar arrangements [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2504]. The buyer may not reject the goods for failure by the seller to notify the buyer of the shipment or to enter into proper shipment contract unless the failure results in loss or material delay [Com. Code § 2504].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART J. ACCEPTANCE AND REJECTION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.220

MB 300H.220 Acceptance and Rejection Generally

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

When Plaintiff tendered the goods to Defendant, Defendant either accepted or rejected the goods. You must determine whether acceptance or rejection of the goods occurred based on the following instructions.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2601, 2602, 2606(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introduction to the more specific instructions on acceptance and rejection that follow. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2601 gives the buyer the right to reject or accept goods when a tender fails in any regard to conform to the contract. Goods are accepted if they are not properly rejected [Com. Code § 2606]. Therefore, on tender of the goods, either rejection or acceptance occurs.

Under the Commercial Code, the buyer's obligation to accept or reject is an important milestone. Com. Code § 2601 embodies the Code's perfect tender rule, allowing the buyer to reject goods that are in any regard nonconforming. Although the perfect tender rule is moderated somewhat by provisions allowing the seller to cure certain nonconforming tenders [Com. Code § 2508], the buyer basically has the right to insist on the contract's strict performance before acceptance.

Once the goods have been accepted, whether conforming or nonconforming, the position of the parties changes dramatically. The buyer must pay for the goods [Com. Code § 2607(1)] and is entitled to only revoke acceptance in limited circumstances [Com. Code § 2608]. The buyer's major remaining remedy for defective or nonconforming goods is a claim for breach, with the burden of proving defective goods on the buyer [Com. Code § 2607(4)].

PART J. ACCEPTANCE AND REJECTION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.221

MB 300H.221 Acceptance by Buyer

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff contends that Defendant accepted the goods tendered by Plaintiff. To establish that the goods were accepted, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant accepted the goods by:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

Indicating to Plaintiff, after a reasonable opportunity to inspect, that the goods conformed to the contract.

[OR]

Indicating to Plaintiff, after a reasonable opportunity to inspect, that the goods would be taken or retained despite their nonconformity to the contract.

[OR]

Failing to make a proper rejection as described in the following instruction after Defendant has had reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods.

[OR]

Performing any act inconsistent with Plaintiff's ownership.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Acceptance of any part of a commercial unit is acceptance of the whole unit.

If you find that Defendant accepted the goods, Defendant is obligated to pay for them at the contract price.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2606, 2607(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller contends the buyer expressly or impliedly accepted the goods tendered by the buyer. The alternative relevant to the facts at issue should be used. The final option should be used when part of a commercial unit has been accepted by any of the preceding methods. The definition of "conforming goods" in MB 300H.01 and "commercial unit" in MB 300H.03 should be given with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms: Words such as "tendered" and, in this context, "accepted," will need to be explained in your closing argument. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The methods of acceptance are based on Com. Code § 2606. Once the goods are accepted, the buyer must pay for them at the contract rate [Com. Code § 2607(1)]. The seller may seek to establish the buyer's acceptance of the goods to move the burden of proving breach to the buyer [Com. Code § 2607(4)]. Unless acceptance occurs, the seller generally has the burden of proving a breach by wrongful rejection of the goods.

The Commercial Code does not specify the actions by which the buyer indicates acceptance. It is not necessary that the buyer verbally communicate acceptance. The intent to accept may be inferred from payment, for example, but payment alone is not necessarily conclusive [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 § 2606].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff is claiming that the goods [he/she/it] accepted breached the contract. To recover for this breach, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] gave Defendant notice of the breach within a reasonable time after Plaintiff discovered or should have discovered the breach.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The notice must have been sufficient to put Defendant on notice that there was a problem with the goods.

Authority: Com. Code § 2607(3)(A).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue as to whether or not the buyer gave notice of breach of contract of accepted goods. The optional sentence is for use when there is an issue as to the adequacy of the notice. This instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 300H.258 on damages for defective accepted goods. The definition of reasonable time in MB 300H.14 should also be given with this instruction.

[3] Comment

After goods have been accepted, the buyer must notify the seller of any breach within a reasonable time after he or she discovered or should have discovered the breach [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)]. The notice must merely be sufficient to let the seller know that the transaction is still troublesome and must be watched. All of the objections need not be stated nor does the notice have to be a claim for damages or threat of litigation [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2607]. However when performance spanned several years and numerous communications were made between the parties, it has been held that the buyer must inform the seller that the buyer regards the seller to be in breach [Eastern Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (5th Cir. 1967) 532 F.2d 957, 972-980]. A consumer buyer may have more time to give notice of breach than a merchant [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2607].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART J. ACCEPTANCE AND REJECTION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.223

MB 300H.223 Grounds for Revocation of Acceptance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant contends that [his/her/its] acceptance of the goods was revoked. To establish an effective revocation, Defendant must prove all of the following:

1. There was a breach that substantially impaired the value of the goods to Defendant;

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

2. Defendant accepted the goods on the reasonable assumption that the breach would be cured but the breach was not cured within a reasonable time;

[OR]

2. Defendant had not discovered the breach before acceptance and Defendant's acceptance of the goods was reasonably induced by the difficulty of discovering the breach before acceptance or by Plaintiff's assurances that the goods conformed;

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

3. The revocation was made within a reasonable time after Defendant discovered or could have discovered the ground for it;

4. The revocation was made before any substantial change in the condition of the goods not caused by their own defects; and

5. Defendant notified Plaintiff of the revocation.

Authority: Com. Code § 2608(1), (2).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the parties dispute the propriety of the buyer's attempted revocation of an acceptance. The instructions in MB 300H.14 on reasonable time and in MB 300H.17 on notice should be given with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Establishing Revocation: "Revocation" and "revoked" are not everyday words or acts. Hence, consider the use of a multifaceted argument in proving (or disproving) these standards. The easiest method of establishing revocation of an acceptance is to prove that the seller claimed that the goods conformed, or that any problems would be corrected. A buyer can also base a revocation on a "reasonable assumption" that the breach would be cured, but this will be more difficult. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

The Commercial Code treats acceptance as final, precluding the buyer from subsequently rejecting the goods under the Code's perfect tender rule except in those limited circumstances when acceptance can be revoked [Com. Code § 2607(2)]. The Commercial Code limits revocation of acceptance to cases of non-trivial defects, when the buyer reasonably failed to discover the defect or assumed it would be cured, based on the seller's representations, conduct, and presumably the circumstance of the transaction [Com. Code §§ 2607(2), 2608(1)]. The harder the defect is to locate, the stronger the case for revocation.

The revocation must occur within a reasonable time after the buyer discovers or should have discovered the ground for it and before a substantial change in the condition of the goods not caused by their own defects. The revocation is not effective until the buyer notifies the seller of the revocation [Com. Code § 2608(2)]. The reasonable time period should extend in most cases beyond the time for notification of breach, beyond the time for discovery of nonconformity after acceptance, and beyond the time for rejection after tender [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2608(2)].

PART J. ACCEPTANCE AND REJECTION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.224

MB 300H.224 Requirements of an Effective Rejection

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff contends that Defendant improperly rejected the goods tendered by Plaintiff. To establish that the goods were improperly rejected, Plaintiff must prove that:

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

The goods conformed to the contract.

[OR]

Defendant did not reject the goods within a reasonable time after tender or delivery.

[OR]

Defendant did not notify the seller of the rejection within a reasonable time.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find from the evidence in this case that Defendant's rejection was improper, the goods are considered accepted.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2601, 2602, 2606(1)(b).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller disputes the effectiveness of the buyer's rejection. Proof of any one of the choices offered is sufficient to show that the rejection was improper. The parties may agree to limit the time in which the buyer can reject provided the limitation conforms to Com. Code § 2719. When a limitation is proper, the instruction must be modified to conform to the party's agreement. The instructions on conforming goods in MB 300H.01 and reasonable time in MB 300H.14 should also be given. In addition, a preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

A buyer can only reject goods that do not conform to the contract [Com. Code § 2601]. The buyer's rejection must come within a reasonable time and notice must be given to the seller within a reasonable time to be effective [Com. Code § 2602]. A reasonable time is determined by the circumstances in each case [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2602]. Holding the goods for several weeks may be sufficient to cut off the right of rejection [see Stockton Lumber Co. v. Mulcahy (1927) 86 Cal.App. 505, 260 P. 897]. If customs exist concerning the extent of inspection at the time of sale, then these customs are relevant to a determination of whether later inspection and rejection are reasonable [Miron v. Yonkers Raceway, Inc. (2d Cir. 1968) 400 F.2d 112, 118-119 (noting that, in the case of live animals such as race horses, immediate inspection is generally the custom)].

Failure to make an effective rejection constitutes an acceptance [Com. Code § 2606(1)(b)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART J. ACCEPTANCE AND REJECTION

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.225

MB 300H.225 Buyer's Failure to Specify Defects

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Even if you find that Defendant's rejection is otherwise proper, Defendant may not rely on unstated defects as a basis for rejection of nonconforming goods if Plaintiff proves that:

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant failed to specify defects discoverable by reasonable inspection when Plaintiff could have cured the defects if Defendant specified the defect within a reasonable time.

[OR]

Defendant failed to specify defects discoverable by reasonable inspection when both parties were merchants and Plaintiff made a written request for a full and final statement of all defects on which Defendant proposed to rely as a basis for rejection.

Authority: Com. Code § 2605(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller contends the buyer is relying on defects to show breach, but the buyer failed to particularize the defects when required to do so. The definition of reasonable time in MB 300H.14 and the definition of merchant in MB 300H.06 should be given with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. The designation of the parties is for illustrative purposes only and should be changed if necessary.

[3] Comment

It is usually clear when the time for performance has not run, and the seller is still entitled to cure defects in tender. In these cases the buyer must specify known or discoverable defects or lose the right to reject on the basis of the defects. Likewise, the buyer loses the right to rely on defects when, after rejection, the seller has made a demand for a final written statement of all defects on which the buyer will rely and the buyer fails to specify the defects [Com. Code § 2605(1)]. These rights rest on a policy of permitting the buyer to give a quick and informal notice of defects in a tender without penalizing him or her for omissions in the statement, while at the same time protecting a seller who is reasonably misled by the buyer's failure to state curable defects [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2605].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART K. EXCUSE

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.240

MB 300H.240 Excuse of Performance--Special Findings

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is in breach for _____ [specify, e.g., delayed delivery or non-delivery or failure to perform the contract] unless you find that [he/she/it] was excused from performing that part of the contract.

The burden of proving that [he/she/it] was excused is on Defendant.

Unless you find that the contract by its terms imposed on Defendant an absolute duty to perform, you must find that Defendant was excused if you find all of the following:

1. That performance of the contract as agreed was made commercially impracticable by _____ [describe intervening contingency], which happened between the time of agreement and the time for performance;

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

2. That _____ [contingency] was not an event that the parties can reasonably be thought to have foreseen, and the risk of its occurring was not explicitly or implicitly assumed by either Plaintiff or Defendant;

[OR]

2. That Plaintiff and Defendant made their contract on the assumption that _____ [contingency]

] would not happen;

[OR]

2. That what happened to make performance impracticable was Defendant's good faith compliance with a government _____ [order or regulation or act] that Defendant did not encourage, solicit, or induce;

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

3. That Defendant gave reasonable notice to Plaintiff that there would be _____ [delay or allocation or describe non-performance or deviation from contract]; and

4. That Defendant performed the contract to the extent that the circumstances would permit.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2615; U.C.C. Comment No. 11 to Com. Code § 2615.

[2] Use of Instruction

[a] In General

This instruction should be used when excuse is alleged in defense of a claim of breach by the seller for late delivery, non-delivery, partial delivery, or some other failure to perform. This instruction should not be given in the case of impossibility due to destruction of identified goods [see Com. Code § 2613] or due to the impracticability of the agreed manner of delivery [see Com. Code § 2614(1); see also MB 300H.244]. A preponderance of evidence instruction should be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

Whether or not either party has assumed an absolute obligation to perform is generally an issue of contract interpretation for the court, unless the assumption is alleged to arise from course of dealing or trade usage and the evidence raises an issue of fact [see U.C.C. Comment No. 8 to Com. Code § 2615].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plan Case Accordingly: Almost all jurors will understand the idea of an "excuse" and some jurors will be sympathetic to that claim. Consequently, depending on your party's case, plan how to address this and the related findings. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Excuse Defense Is Limited: Almost every contract contains an element of risk (e.g., the market for that product will go up or down). The key elements in the "excuse" defense are that the event could not have been reasonably foreseen and that the risk of the unforeseen event was not assumed by one of the parties. These conditions limit the "excuse" defense to a narrow category of extraordinary events. By Ronald Oster

[b] Question of Law or Fact

Counsel should take careful note that this instruction asks the jury to decide whether performance is impracticable, even though California courts [see Mitchell v. Ceazan Tires, Ltd. (1944) 25 Cal.2d 45, 48, 153 P.2d 53 ; Glens Falls Indem. Co. v. Perscallo (1950) 96 Cal.App.2d 799, 802, 216 P.2d 567], federal courts [see Waegemann v. Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 713 F.2d 452, 453], and the American Law Institute [see Restatement (Second) of Contracts Introductory Notes to Chapter 11; § 212, Comment d] are unanimous in declaring that excuse of performance because of impossibility or frustration, on which the Commercial Code's doctrine of "commercial impracticability" is based, is a question of law for the court.

This instruction gives that apparent question of law to the jury for two reasons. First, there is the desire to avoid the possibly disastrous consequences of not letting the jury have a say. Second, there is the paucity of decisions under the California Commercial Code or the Uniform Commercial Code directly on this point.

Specifically, counsel should consider using this instruction as written to avoid a possible retrial. If the question of impracticability is left only to the judge in a jury trial, an appellate court that disagrees with this procedure will not merely reverse, it will of necessity order a new trial. However, if the judge asks the jury for special findings on each point necessary to the defense of excuse by commercial impracticability, then either agrees or disagrees with that verdict as he or she believes the law requires, an appellate court can simply uphold either the judge or the jury, and no new trial is necessary.

If counsel feels entirely confident that this question of impracticability is indeed one of law, as it appears to be, then counsel may wish to modify this instruction by removing that question alone from the jury. The remainder of this instruction could still be used to ask the jury for special findings on the other points of fact that must be found to exist before commercial impracticability may be applied under the Commercial Code.

[3] Comment

Under Com. Code § 2615, it is essential that there be an intervening occurrence not foreseen by the parties, the risk of which was not expressly or implicitly assumed by either party. Moreover, that occurrence must be the cause of the impracticability of performance. Although Com. Code § 2615 is worded in terms of non-performance by the seller, U.C.C. Comment No. 9 to Com. Code § 2615 specifically refers to excuse of the buyer, and Com. Code § 2615 has been held to apply to buyers [see Nora Springs Co-op Co. v. Brandau (1976 Iowa) 247 N.W.2d 744, 748].

This section applies specifically to the failure of an assumed condition [U.C.C. Comment No. 9 to Com. Code § 2615], or a specific condition stated in the contract [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2615]. Conversely, excuse may not be available when the alleged condition is not stated in the contract [see Nora Springs Co-op Co. v. Brandau (1976 Iowa) 247 N.W.2d 744, 748].

The burden of proving this excuse is on the one who claims it as a defense [see Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 83, 268 P.2d 12].

When there is a particular source of supply whose continued existence is assumed by the parties as a condition of the contract, its failure will excuse performance if the seller has taken all possible measures to assure its continued existence [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2615]. Also, the seller must turn over any rights against the defaulting supplier to the buyer, up to the extent of the contract [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2615].

When a failure of condition renders performance burdensome, but not commercially impracticable, good faith may require that the other party adjust the contract or permit time to determine whether the contract should be adjusted [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2615]. The adjustments have, in effect, been made by the courts [Aluminum Co. of America v. Essex Group, Inc. (W.D. Pa. 1980) 499 F.Supp. 53].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART K. EXCUSE

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.241

MB 300H.241 Excuse of Performance for Increased Cost

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An increase in the cost to the seller of performing is not an excuse for the seller's failure to perform unless the cost increase is itself caused by an unforeseen intervening event that changes the essential nature of the performance.

Authority: U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2615.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when excuse of non-performance is sought on the ground that the cost of performing increased after the contract was made.

[3] Comment

Increases in the seller's cost of performing do not excuse the seller's failure to perform, unless the cost increase is itself due to an unforeseen intervening event that changes the essential nature of the performance [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2615]. The rationale of this rule is that the parties could have protected themselves against foreseeable contingencies, and indeed may have implicitly allocated the foreseeable risks by not protecting against them in the contract [Eastern Air Lines, Inc. v. Gulf Oil Corp. (S.D. Fla. 1975) 415 F.Supp. 429].

However, at least one court has taken the view that unforeseeability is not required, especially when the loss incurred is very large [see Aluminum Co. of America v. Essex Group, Inc. (W.D. Pa. 1980) 499 F.Supp. 53]. California courts have recognized that a change in assumed circumstances, coupled with a major increase in the cost of performance, can excuse non-performance [see Mineral Park Land Co. v. Howard (1916) 172 Cal. 289, 292-293, 156 P. 458].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART K. EXCUSE

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.242

MB 300H.242 Seller's Duty to Allocate Supply

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant, the seller, is excused for partial delivery under the contract in this case, and is not in breach of that contract if you find that all of the following are true:

1. That complete delivery by the seller under the contract was made commercially impracticable by _____ [describe intervening contingency];

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

2. That _____ [contingency] was not an event that the parties can reasonably be thought to have foreseen, and the risk of its occurring was not explicitly or implicitly assumed by either Plaintiff or Defendant;

[OR]

2. That Plaintiff and Defendant made their contract on the assumption that _____ [contingency] would not happen;

[OR]

2. That what happened to make performance impracticable was Defendant's good faith compliance with a government _____ [order or regulation or act] that Defendant did not encourage, solicit, or induce;

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

3. That Defendant, the seller, seasonably notified Plaintiff/Buyer of the allocation and of what the buyer's estimated quota would be; and

4. That Defendant allocated production and deliveries among its customers in a way that was fair and reasonable. You are instructed that Defendant/Seller may as a matter of law include its own manufacturing requirements, and regular customers who are not under contract, in its allocation plan.

The burden of proving that [he/she/it] was excused is on Defendant.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2615(b); U.C.C. Comment No. 11 to Com. Code § 2615; Terry v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 962, 965-967, 971, 140 Cal.Rptr. 510 ; Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 83, 268 P.2d 12 .

[2] Use of Instruction

[a] In General

This instruction should be used to describe the seller's rights and obligations when a failure of supply requires that the seller allocate among its customers. A preponderance of evidence instruction should be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")]. Choice among the three alternative paragraphs is governed by the nature of the intervening contingency [see MB 300H.240[3] on excuse generally].

[b] Question of Law or Fact

Counsel should take careful note that this instruction asks the jury to decide whether performance is impracticable, even though California courts [see Mitchell v. Ceazan Tires, Ltd. (1944) 25 Cal.2d 45, 48, 153 P.2d 53 ; Glens Falls Indem. Co. v. Perscallo (1950) 96 Cal.App.2d 799, 802, 216 P.2d 567], federal courts [see Waegemann v. Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 713 F.2d 452, 453], and the American Law Institute [see Restatement (Second) of Contracts Introductory Notes to Chapter 11, § 212, Comment d] are unanimous in declaring that excuse of performance because of impossibility or frustration, on which the Commercial Code's doctrine of "commercial impracticability" is based, is a question of law for the court.

This instruction gives that apparent question of law to the jury for two reasons. First, there is the desire to avoid the possibly disastrous consequences of not letting the jury have a say. Second, there is the paucity of decisions under the California Commercial Code or the Uniform Commercial Code directly on this point.

Specifically, counsel should consider using this instruction as written to avoid a possible retrial. However, if the judge asks the jury for special findings on each point necessary to the defense of excuse by commercial impracticability, then either agrees or disagrees with that verdict as he or she believes the law requires, an appellate court can simply uphold either the judge or the jury, and no new trial is necessary.

If counsel feels entirely confident that this question of impracticability is indeed one of law, as it appears to be, then counsel may wish to modify this instruction by removing that question alone from the jury. The remainder of this instruction could still be used to ask the jury for special findings on the other points of fact that must be found to exist before commercial impracticability may be applied under the Commercial Code.

Whether the seller's allocation is fair and reasonable is, however, definitely a question of fact to be decided by the jury [Terry v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 962, 966-967, 140 Cal.Rptr. 510].

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2616 both excuses the seller from full performance when it is rendered impracticable and imposes the obligation of allocating in a fair and reasonable way when partial performance is practical [Terry v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 962, 965-967, 971, 140 Cal.Rptr. 510]. The burden of proving this excuse is on the one who claims it as a defense [see Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 83, 268 P.2d 12]. The jury must find that the circumstances for excuse exist and that the seller complied with its obligations to give notice and to allocate fairly. An excused seller must fulfill his or her contract to the extent that the intervening contingency permits. If the seller's customers are generally affected, then he or she must take account of all in supplying one [U.C.C. Comment No. 11 to Com. Code § 2615].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART K. EXCUSE

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.243

MB 300H.243 Buyer's Option to Terminate or Modify on Notice of Allocation or Delay

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

A buyer who has been notified by its seller that there will be _____ [an (indefinite/material) delay in delivering contract goods or delivery of less than the contract amount under an allocation by the seller] may terminate the contract by written notice to the seller if the [delay/allocation] substantially impairs the value to the buyer of the entire contract.

[OR]

A buyer who has been notified by its seller that there will be _____ [an (indefinite/material) delay in delivering contract goods or delivery of less than the contract amount under an allocation by the seller] may modify the contract by agreeing within 30 days of receiving this notification to take the available allocation in substitution. In the absence of an agreement to [modify or accept the allocated amount], the contract lapses as to the deliveries affected.

Authority: Com. Code § 2616.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when it is alleged that a contract was terminated, modified, or lapsed as a result of a delay or allocation caused by an unforeseen intervening occurrence. If it is alleged that the buyer terminated the contract, then the first alternative should be used. If it is alleged that the contract was modified or that it lapsed, then the second alternative should be used.

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300H.240 on excuse and the instruction in MB 300H.18 on receiving notice.

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2616 sets out what responses the buyer may make to a notice of claim of excuse. The buyer may (1) terminate any executory portion of the agreement, (2) modify the contract by agreeing to accept partial performance, or (3) by failing to take any action, may be deemed to have terminated the agreement [U.C.C. Comment to Com. Code § 2616]. Com. Code § 2616(3) makes ineffective any express contract term that requires the buyer to stand ready to accept delivery, even though the seller claims to be excused from delivery.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART K. EXCUSE

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.244

MB 300H.244 Substitution of Delivery Arrangements[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff, the _____ [seller or buyer] claims that Defendant, the _____ [buyer or seller], breached their contract for the sale of _____ [specify goods] by failing to _____ [accept or make] substitute arrangements for their delivery.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

To prove this breach, Plaintiff/Seller must bear the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That the agreed _____ [type of carrier or other means of delivery] became _____ [unavailable or otherwise commercially impracticable];
2. That the agreed _____ [means of delivery] became _____ [commercially impracticable] without either Plaintiff or Defendant being at fault;
3. That Plaintiff made substitute arrangements to deliver the goods;
4. That these substitute arrangements were commercially reasonable; and
5. That Defendant/Buyer refused to accept this substitute delivery.

[OR]

To prove this breach, Plaintiff/Buyer must bear the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That the agreed _____ [type of carrier or other means of delivery] became _____ [unavailable or otherwise commercially impracticable];
2. That the agreed _____ [means of delivery] became _____ [commercially impracticable] without either Plaintiff or Defendant being at fault; and
3. That Defendant/Seller did not make _____ [substitute arrangements to deliver the goods or commercially reasonable substitute arrangements to deliver the goods].

Authority: Com. Code § 2614(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when either seller or buyer contends the other party failed to make or accept commercially reasonable substitute delivery or shipping arrangements. The instruction in MB 300H.245[1] defining commercial impracticability can be used with this instruction. A preponderance of evidence instruction should be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2614(1) in effect limits excuse for non-performance to those obligations that go to the heart of the parties' agreement. As this instruction indicates, commercial impracticability may preclude use of the agreed-on means of delivery. Instead of excusing performance, Com. Code § 2614(1) requires the seller to use any reasonable substitute and likewise requires the buyer to accept the substitute.

Com. Code § 2614(2) provides a different result if the buyer's obligation to pay is affected by a change in foreign currency regulations. In these cases, the seller is entitled to withhold delivery until the buyer provides a commercially acceptable substitute means of payment [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2614].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions PART K. EXCUSE

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.245

MB 300H.245 Commercial Impracticability Defined

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Performance of a contractual obligation is "commercially impracticable" if performance is something worse than just not practical and something less than impossible. It is not enough that performance would be expensive, burdensome, or unprofitable. Performance is "commercially impracticable" only if it would be positively unjust to hold Defendant bound to perform as required by the contract.

Authority: Eastern Air Lines, Inc. v. Gulf Oil Corp. (S.D. Fla. 1975) 415 F.Supp. 429, 438-439 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever the term "commercially impracticable" is used. It must, for example, be used with the instructions in MB 300H.240[1] and MB 300H.242[1], and may be required with the instruction in MB 300H.244[1].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Add Specifics: This instruction contains general language with few specifics to guide the jury. Essentially, the instruction tells the jury that a contract is commercially impractical if it would be "positively unjust" to hold the defendant to it. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2615 on excuse of non-performance by failure of presupposed conditions uses the term "impracticable," and more precisely identifies it in U.C.C. Comment 3 to that section as the "test of commercial impracticability," but does not define it. The courts have said that performance may be excused for impracticability only if to hold the parties bound by the contract would be positively unjust [Eastern Air Lines, Inc. v. Gulf Oil Corp. (S.D. Fla. 1975) 415

F.Supp. 429, 438-439]. The meaning of "impracticable" has been said to lie between "impractical" and "impossible" [see Aluminum Co. of America v. Essex Group, Inc. (W.D. Pa. 1980) 499 F.Supp. 53, 72 ; see also Restatement (Second) Contracts § 261, Comment d].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.250

MB 300H.250 Seller's Action for Contract Price

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

If you find that the goods were delivered and accepted [OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction), and acceptance was not justifiably revoked], but that Defendant failed to pay the contract price when it was due, you should award Plaintiff, as damages from Defendant, the contract price plus incidental damages.

[OR]

If you _____ [find or are instructed] that (1) the goods were _____ [lost or damaged] within a commercially reasonable time after the risk of loss had passed to Defendant, (2) the goods had been identified to the contract, and (3) Plaintiff has proved that the goods conformed to the contract at the time risk of loss passed to Defendant, then you should award Plaintiff, as damages from Defendant, the contract price plus incidental damages.

[OR]

If you find that Defendant breached the contract by failing to accept the goods, and that _____ [Plaintiff could not resell goods identified to the contract at a reasonable price after making reasonable efforts to do so or the circumstances reasonably indicate that Plaintiff could not have resold goods identified to the contract at a reasonable price], then you should award Plaintiff, as damages from Defendant, the contract price plus incidental damages.

Authority: Com. Code § 2709.

[2] Use of Instruction

One or more of the alternative instructions should be used, depending on what finding or findings the jury may make based on the evidence. In each case, the instruction in MB 300H.253, on the seller's incidental damages, should also be given.

The first alternative should be given with the instructions in MB 300H.221 on acceptance of goods and MB 300H.223 on revocation of acceptance.

The second alternative should be given when the goods are damaged or lost before acceptance, but after the risk of loss passed to the buyer. The remaining findings in the second alternative are legal conclusions on which the court will instruct the jury. Passing of the risk of loss is governed by Com. Code § 2509 as modified by Com. Code § 2510 when there has been a breach. The seller's right to identify goods to the contract in the event of repudiation by the buyer is stated in Com. Code § 2704 [see MB 300H.02].

The third alternative should be given when the seller either attempted to resell the goods (first clause in brackets) or when the goods were such, as in the case of specially manufactured goods, that they clearly could not have been resold at a reasonable price (second clause in brackets).

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With Terms: "Incidental damages" is a term not understood by many attorneys--just think about a juror! By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The situations covered by this instruction are the only circumstances in which the seller can recover the contract price as damages [U.C.C. Comment No. 6 to Com. Code § 2709]. The usual remedy envisioned by the Commercial Code for nonacceptance is resale by the seller under Com. Code § 2706 and an action for damages under Com. Code § 2708. Under Com. Code § 2709(3), these damages can be awarded in the action for the contract price when the requirements of Com. Code § 2709 are not met.

Com. Code § 2709(2) also requires the seller who sues for the contract price to hold the identified goods for the buyer. If the seller recovers the contract price as damages, the buyer is entitled to the goods. If the seller resells any of these goods before judgment, the buyer must be credited with the proceeds against any damages assessed.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.251

MB 300H.251 Seller's Damages Recoverable After Resale[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

_____ [If you find for Plaintiff on (his/her/its) claim for damages for Defendant's breach or If you _____ (find or are instructed) that Plaintiff resold the contract goods in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner], you should award damages to Plaintiff calculated as follows:

1. The difference between the resale price and the contract price;
2. Plus incidental damages;
3. Minus any expenses that Plaintiff saved in consequence of Defendant's breach.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2706; see Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 432, 445, 249 Cal.Rptr. 872.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to state the measure of the seller's damages when the buyer has repudiated or wrongfully rejected goods and the seller has complied with the resale requirements of Com. Code § 2706(3) and (4). It must be given with the instruction in MB 300H.253 on the seller's incidental damages.

Generally, the first phrase in brackets should be used since the determination as to whether the seller's resale was commercially reasonable will be made by the court.

If the jury is to make findings of fact bearing on whether resale was commercially reasonable, the factors stated at Com. Code § 2706(4) must be considered as well as any other circumstances of the case bearing on the price obtained [see U.C.C. Comments 5-9 to Com. Code § 2706; Hawkland, U.C.C. Series, vol. 3, §§ 2-706:02, 2-706:03].

If the sale was private and the only issue of fact is notice to the buyer under Com. Code § 2706(3), the jury may be instructed in the preliminary paragraph to find that "the seller reasonably notified the buyer of the intention to resell."

[3] Comment

Under the conditions stated in Com. Code § 2703 dealing with the seller's remedies in general, the seller may resell the goods concerned or the undelivered balance on the goods. When the resale is made in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner [see Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 432, 445, 249 Cal.Rptr. 872], the seller may recover the difference between the resale price and the contract price together with any incidental damages [see MB 300H.253], but less expenses saved in consequence of the buyer's breach [Com. Code § 2706(1)]. If the seller makes a profit on the resale net of the expenses of reselling, the seller need not account for them to the buyer [Com. Code § 2706(6)].

Identification of the goods is required for a commercially reasonable sale [U.C.C. Comment No. 7 to Com. Code § 2706]. Failure to do so relegates the seller to damages under Com. Code § 2708 [see MB 300H.252].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.252

MB 300H.252 Seller's Damages for Buyer's Nonacceptance or Repudiation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find for Plaintiff on [his/her/its] claim of damages for _____ [nonacceptance of the goods or repudiation of the contract], you should award damages to Plaintiff calculated as follows:

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

1. The unpaid contract price;

2. Minus the market price _____ [at the time and place for tender or at the time Plaintiff learned of Defendant's repudiation];

3. Plus the incidental damages incurred by Plaintiff;

4. Minus the expenses saved by Plaintiff as a result of Defendant's breach.

[OR]

1. Plaintiff's anticipated profit, including reasonable overhead, from full performance of the contract;

2. Plus incidental damages incurred by Plaintiff;

3. Plus allowances for costs reasonably incurred;4. Minus the proceeds of resale.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2708, 2723(1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to give the measure of the seller's nonacceptance damages when they have not been determined by resale under Com. Code § 2706 [see MB 300H.251]. It also applies when the seller has not complied with the requirements of Com. Code § 2706 on commercially reasonable resale. It must be given with the instruction in MB 300H.253 on the seller's incidental damages.

This instruction may also be used as the measure of the seller's damages when the buyer's salvage resale is found to be not commercially reasonable or not in good faith [Com. Code § 2603].

In the first alternative, the phrase "at the time [the seller] learned of [the buyer's] repudiation" incorporates Com. Code § 2723(1) into Com. Code § 2708 and must be used when the buyer has repudiated and the seller's suit for damages comes to trial before the time for performance under the contract [see Hawkland, U.C.C. Series, vol. 3, § 2-708:03].

The second alternative is intended to be applied principally in the case of fixed price articles, when profit can be determined by the list price less cost to the dealer, or list price less manufacturing cost to the manufacturer [U.C.C. Comment No. 2 to Com. Code § 2708]. However, to apply this measure, the court must first determine that the measure of damages provided in Com. Code § 2708(1) is inadequate to put the seller in as good a position as performance would have done [Com. Code § 2708(2)]. In cases when there is evidence that the seller is a "lost volume seller," the seller may be entitled to avoid any setoff for proceeds of resale, in which case Item 4 of the second alternative ("Minus the proceeds of resale") may not be appropriate [see [3][a], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With Terms: Terms such as "nonacceptance" and "repudiation" are beyond the life experiences of many jurors. Thus, plan your closing accordingly. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment[a] Measure of Damages

If adequate to put the seller in as good a position as performance would have done, the measure of damages for nonacceptance or repudiation by the buyer is the difference between the market price at the time and place for tender and the unpaid contract price together with any incidental damages [see MB 300H.253], but less expenses saved in consequence of the buyer's breach [Com. Code § 2708(1)].

If the above measure of damages is determined to be inadequate, then the measure of damages is the profit (including reasonable overhead) that the seller would have made from full performance by the buyer, together with any incidental damages [see MB 300H.253], due allowance for costs reasonably incurred, and due credit for payments or proceeds of resale [Com. Code § 2708(2)]. The seller may be entitled to keep any proceeds of resale if the seller qualifies as a "lost volume seller," that is, one who proves that even though the contract goods were resold, that sale to a third party would have been made regardless of the buyer's breach. A lost volume seller must establish that had the breaching buyer performed, the seller would have realized profits from two sales [National Controls, Inc. v. Commodore Bus. Machines, Inc. (1985) 163 Cal.App.3d 688, 697-699, 209 Cal.Rptr. 636].

If an action based on anticipatory repudiation comes to trial before the time for performance with regard to some or all of the goods, any damages based on market price are to be determined according to the price of the goods prevailing at the time when the aggrieved party learned of the repudiation [Com. Code § 2723(1)].

If evidence of a price prevailing at that time or at the place specified is not readily available, the price prevailing within any reasonable time before or after that time or at any other place that, in commercial judgment or under usage of trade, would serve as a reasonable substitute may be used, making any proper allowance for the cost of transporting the goods to or from such other place [Com. Code § 2723(2)].

Evidence of a relevant price prevailing at another time or place offered by one party is not admissible unless and until he or she has given the other party that notice as the court finds sufficient to prevent unfair surprise [Com. Code § 2723(3)].

PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.253

MB 300H.253 Seller's Incidental Damages[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find for Plaintiff, [he/she/it] is entitled to recover any incidental damages suffered in connection with any breach by Defendant. Incidental damages are all expenses reasonably incurred by Plaintiff as a direct consequence of Defendant's breach.

Plaintiff in this case has introduced evidence of the following items of incidental expense:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. $ _____ for stopping delivery to Defendant;
2. $ _____ for reselling goods;
3. $ _____ for transporting the goods;
4. $ _____ for caring for the goods;
5. $ _____ for storing the goods;
6. $ _____ commissions to _____ [broker paid to sell goods] for reselling the goods;

7. $_____ [other reasonable expenses of resale and maintenance of goods].

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

You should award as an item of incidental damage each expense that you find that Plaintiff has proven was:

- 1. Actually incurred;
- 2. Reasonably incurred; and
- 3. Incurred as a direct consequence of Defendant's breach.

Authority: Com. Code § 2710.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given with the instructions in MB 300H.250-MB 300H.252. As many of the items of expense numbered 1 through 7 should be used as apply in the case.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Instruction as Visual Aid: This instruction could be enlarged and would make a good visual aid "checklist" for closing argument. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Incidental damages to an aggrieved seller include any commercially reasonable charges, expenses, or commissions incurred in stopping delivery, in the transportation, care, and custody of goods after the buyers' breach, in connection with return or resale of the goods or otherwise resulting from the breach [Com. Code § 2710]. Com. Code § 2710 intends to reimburse the seller for "all commercially reasonable expenditures made" as a result of the breach [U.C.C. Comment to Com. Code § 2710].

The Commercial Code permits recovery by the seller of incidental but not of consequential damages [see Com. Code § 1106(1)]. Therefore, only those additional expenses directly incident to the breach are recoverable. Generally, this will mean that losses involving third parties are not recoverable by the seller. By contrast, Com. Code § 2714(3) provides for the recovery of consequential as well as incidental damages by the buyer in a proper case [see Com. Code § 2715; see also MB 300H.255].

PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.254

MB 300H.254 Buyer's Incidental Damages[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find for Plaintiff in this case, you should award [him/her/it] incidental damages. Incidental damages are all expenses reasonably incurred by Plaintiff incident to the _____ [delay or breach by Defendant].

Plaintiff in this case has introduced evidence of the following items of incidental expense:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. $ _____ for receiving and inspecting rejected goods;
2. $ _____ for storing rejected goods;
3. $ _____ for transporting rejected goods;
4. $ _____ for caring for rejected goods;
5. $ _____ to obtain substitute goods;
6. $ _____ commissions paid to _____ [broker] to obtain substitute goods;

7. $ _____ for storing goods until Plaintiff revoked acceptance;
8. $ _____ for caring for goods until Plaintiff revoked acceptance;
9. $ _____ for reselling rejected goods;
10. $ _____ for revoking acceptance of non-conforming goods;
11. $ _____ for _____ [other reasonable expenses of rejecting non-conforming goods, obtaining cover, and caring for goods pending revocation].

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

You should award as an item of incidental damage each expense that you find that Plaintiff has proven was:

1. Actually incurred;
2. Reasonably incurred; and
3. Incurred as a direct consequence of Defendant's breach.

Authority: Com. Code § 2715.

[2] Use of Instruction

As many of the items of expense numbered 1 through 11 should be used as apply in the case. This instruction should be given with the instructions in MB 300H.256 and MB 300H.257.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Instruction as Visual Aid: This instruction could be enlarged and would make a good visual aid "checklist" for closing argument. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Incidental damages resulting from the seller's breach include (1) expenses reasonably incurred in the inspection, receipt, transportation, and care and custody of goods rightfully rejected, (2) any commercially reasonable charges, expenses, or commissions in connection with effecting cover, and (3) any other reasonable expense incident to the delay or other breach [Com. Code § 2715(1)]. The types of incidental damage enumerated are illustrative, not exhaustive [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2714].

Although the buyer is permitted by Com. Code §§ 2712, 2713, and 2714 to recover both incidental and consequential damages, distinction between them would be required, for instance, when the contract disclaims the right to recover consequential damages [Hawkland, U.C.C. Series, vol. 3, § 2-715:01]. For an instruction on the measure of the buyer's consequential damages, see MB 300H.255.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.255

MB 300H.255 Buyer's Consequential Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find for Plaintiff, you must also award Plaintiff, as additional damages, the amount necessary to compensate [him/her/it] for any loss that Plaintiff has proven resulted from Defendant's failure to fulfill general or specific requirements and needs of Plaintiff that Defendant had reason to know about at the time of contracting [optional (see Use of Instruction): minus the amount of any (loss/losses) that Defendant has proven could reasonably have been prevented by cover or otherwise].

[OR]

resulted from an injury to person or property that was caused by Defendant's breach of warranty. Under the law, Defendant's breach of warranty caused Plaintiff's loss if that breach was a substantial factor in bringing about the loss. Therefore, in instructing you that Plaintiff must have proven that Defendant's breach caused the loss, I mean that Plaintiff must have proven that the breach was a substantial factor in bringing about the loss.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

These additional damages are called consequential damages.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2715; Carnation Co. v. Olivet Egg Ranch (1986) 189 Cal.App.3d 809, 814-819, 229 Cal.Rptr. 261 ; R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274-276 .

[2] Use of Instruction

In preacceptance cases when the seller breached by repudiation or other nondelivery, or the buyer rightfully rejected nonconforming goods or justifiably revoked acceptance, this instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300H.256 if the buyer obtained substitute goods to cover. If the buyer in such a case did not cover or the cover was found unreasonable, this instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 300H.257.

This instruction contains alternative provisions that set forth the different measures of damages provided for by Com. Code § 2715. The first alternative is used when the buyer's claim is not based on an alleged breach of warranty. The optional provision included in this alternative should be used in cases when the seller claims that the buyer has unreasonably failed to obtain "cover" (substitute goods) or otherwise mitigate damages.

The second alternative is used in breach of warranty cases. To improve juror comprehension, this alternative uses the term "caused" in lieu of the more traditional language based on "proximate cause" [see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explaining Damages: Obviously, it is critical how you explain (or refute) to the jury the awarding of damages. Remember that for some jurors this will be the first time they will be making such an award. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Measures of Consequential Damages; Foreseeability

Com. Code § 2715 provides for recovery of two different types of consequential damages by the buyer. Under Com. Code § 2715(2)(a), the buyer is entitled to recover for any loss that was a foreseeable result of the seller's failure to fulfill general or specific requirements and needs of the buyer that the seller had reason to know about at the time of contracting [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2715; R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274 ; Gerwin v. Southeastern Cal. Assn. of Seventh Day Adventists (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 209, 220-221, 92 Cal.Rptr. 111]. Lost resale profits are one example of this type of consequential damages [Cal. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2715; R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274]. Under Com. Code § 2715(2)(b), the buyer is entitled to recover for any loss occasioned by an injury to person or property that was a proximate and foreseeable result of a breach of warranty by the seller [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2715; De La Hoya v. Slim's Gun Shop (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d Supp. 6, 10-12, 146 Cal.Rptr. 68]. For instructions on proximate causation and foreseeability, see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

[b] Contractual Disclaimer

The parties may contract to limit or exclude consequential damages unless the limitation or exclusion is unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)]. "Unconscionability" involves the absence of meaningful choice for one party together with contract terms unreasonably favorable to the other party [Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co., Inc. (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 1518, 1534, 246 Cal.Rptr. 823]. If the limitation applies to personal injuries from consumer goods, the limitation is invalid unless the party relying on the limitation proves that it is not unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)]. However, if the limitation applies to commercial loss, the burden of proof is reversed, and the limitation is valid unless it is proved to be unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)]. The seller may disclaim warranties as provided in Com. Code § 2316.

[c] Buyer's Obligation to Mitigate Damages

When damages are sought for the seller's failure to fulfill general or specific requirements or needs of the buyer, Com. Code § 2715(2)(a) provides that the buyer may only recover for those losses that could not reasonably have been prevented by cover or otherwise. The intent of this provision is to make the general rules relating to the buyer's obligation to mitigate damages applicable to a claim under Com. Code § 2715(2)(a) [Carnation Co. v. Olivet Egg Ranch (1986) 189 Cal.App.3d 809, 814-819, 229 Cal.Rptr. 261 ; Gerwin v. Southeastern Cal. Assn. of Seventh Day Adventists (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 209, 219-220, 92 Cal.Rptr. 111]. Accordingly, when a claim is made under Com. Code § 2715(2)(a), the seller has the burden of proving that losses claimed by the buyer could reasonably have been prevented by cover or other efforts to mitigate damages [Carnation Co. v. Olivet Egg Ranch (1986) 189 Cal.App.3d 809, 814-819, 229 Cal.Rptr. 261]. For general instructions on mitigation of damages, see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

[d] Breach of Warranty; Proximate Cause

In breach of warranty cases, consequential damages include damages resulting from injury to person or property proximately resulting from any breach of warranty [Com. Code § 2715(2)(b)]. Although Com. Code § 2715(2)(b) does not contain an express provision precluding recovery of losses that could have been prevented by the buyer, general rules relating to the buyer's obligation to mitigate damages may be applicable in some circumstances. Of course, if the buyer's misuse or carelessness caused the injury, the seller's breach may not have proximately caused the injury [U.C.C. Comment No. 5 to Com. Code § 2714; see Kaiser Cement & Gypsum Corp. v. Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 948, 958-962, 111 Cal.Rptr. 210] .

For discussion on proximate cause and mitigation, see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.256

MB 300H.256 Damages to Buyer Who Has "Covered"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find in favor of Plaintiff on [his/her/its] claim for damages resulting from a breach by Defendant, you should award Plaintiff damages calculated as follows:

- 1. The difference between the cost to Plaintiff of substitute goods and the contract price;
- 2. Plus Plaintiff's incidental damages;
- 3. Minus any expenses Plaintiff saved because of Defendant's breach.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

- 4. Plus Plaintiff's consequential damages;
- 5. Plus amounts already paid to Defendant for the goods.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2711(1), (3), 2712(2); KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 376, 389, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 286 ; R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274-276 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given in preacceptance cases when the seller breached by repudiation or other nondelivery or the buyer rightfully rejected nonconforming goods or justifiably revoked acceptance, and the buyer obtained substitute goods to cover.

Item 4 should be omitted if the contract disclaimed the right to recover consequential damages. Item 5 is required only if the buyer prepaid on the contract.

This instruction requires a preliminary determination by the court that cover was effected in good faith and without unreasonable delay, and was a reasonable purchase or contract to purchase substitute goods [Com. Code § 2712(1)].

This instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 300H.254 on the buyer's incidental damages and, when appropriate, with the instruction in MB 300H.255 on consequential damages.

[3] Comment

When the seller fails to make delivery or repudiates or when the buyer rightfully rejects or justifiably revokes acceptance, then with regard to any goods involved (and with regard to the whole if the breach goes to the whole contract), the buyer may cancel and, whether or not he or she has done so, may in addition to recovering as much of the price as he or she has paid, cover and have damages under Com. Code § 2712 as to all the goods affected whether or not they have been identified to the contract [Com. Code § 2711(1)].

If the buyer decides to cover, he or she may recover from the seller as damages the difference between the cost of cover and the contract price together with any incidental or consequential damages, but less any expenses saved in consequence of the seller's breach [Com. Code § 2712(2); KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 376, 389, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 286 ; R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274]. This contract-cover differential is not limited by Com. Code § 1305(a) (requiring aggrieved party to be put in as good a position as if other party had fully performed), even if the aggrieved buyer is ultimately able to pass on its additional costs to the other parties [Com. Code § 2712(2); KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 376, 384, 389, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 286 (holding that "[w]hat the buyer chooses to do with the benefit of its bargain is not relevant to the determination of damages under § 2712")].

As provided in Com. Code § 2711(1), the buyer is not required to cover. The pre-acceptance measure of damages for a buyer who has not covered or whose cover is found unreasonable is Com. Code § 2713 [see MB 300H.257]. However, failure to obtain cover without undue delay, if it was available, will bar recovery of consequential damages [Com. Code § 2715(2)(a); see R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274-276 (award of consequential damages for breach reversed and case remanded to determine whether buyer had opportunity to cover)]. If the buyer cannot obtain cover, he or she may be entitled to specific performance [Com. Code § 2716(1)].

When the seller fails to deliver due to insolvency, the buyer's remedy is under Com. Code § 2502.

A buyer in possession of rejected goods may resell them under the conditions stated in Com. Code § 2706(3) and (4) and set off the proceeds of sale against the price paid and incidental and consequential damages.

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.257

MB 300H.257 Buyer's Damages for Seller's Non-Delivery or Repudiation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find in favor of Plaintiff on [his/her/its] claim for damages due to Defendant's breach, you should award Plaintiff damages calculated as follows:

- 1. The difference between the market price at the place of _____ [tender or arrival] when Plaintiff learned of the breach, and the contract price;
- 2. Plus Plaintiff's incidental damages;
- 3. Minus any expenses saved by Plaintiff because of Defendant's breach.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

- 4. Plus Plaintiff's consequential damages.

Authority: Com. Code § 2713.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given in pre-acceptance cases when the buyer has not covered or the buyer's cover has been found unreasonable. It applies in cases of the seller's breach by repudiation or other non-delivery or when the buyer rightfully rejected nonconforming goods or justifiably revoked acceptance. Item 4 should be omitted if the contract disclaimed the right to recover consequential damages. This instruction may not be appropriate if the buyer had a resale contract and the seller knew of that fact [see [3], below].

This instruction should be given with the instructions in MB 300H.254 and MB 300H.255 on incidental and consequential damages.

Choice of "tender" or "arrival" in the bracket depends on the type of breach. Place of tender is appropriate in nondelivery cases; place of arrival must be used in cases of revocation of acceptance and rejection after arrival of the goods [Com. Code § 2713(2)].

[3] Comment

The measure of damages for nondelivery or repudiation by the seller is the difference between the market price at the time the buyer learned of the breach and the contract price together with any incidental and consequential damages, less expenses saved in consequence of the seller's breach. Market price is to be determined as of the place for tender or, in cases of rejection after arrival or revocation of acceptance, as of the place of arrival [Com. Code § 2713(2)]. The buyer has the burden of proving the market price. For discussion of proof of market price and evidence admissible on the issue, see MB 300H.252[3] [see U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2713]. Com. Code § 2713 does not specifically provide for lost profits as an element of the buyer's damages, as it does for the seller under Com. Code § 2708, but the buyer may recover consequential damages, one item of which may be profits lost on the contemplated resale of the goods [Com. Code § 2713(1); Cal. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2715; R.B. Matthews v. Transamerica Transp. Services (9th Cir. 1991) 945 F.2d 269, 274 ; Gerwin v. Southeastern Cal. Assn. of Seventh Day Adventists (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 209, 219-220, 92 Cal.Rptr. 111].

In some situations when the buyer had a resale contract, its damages may be limited to its expected profits on resale when the difference between market price and contract price grossly exceeds the profit that the buyer would have realized on resale. In a case when (1) the buyer had a resale contract and the seller knew of that fact, (2) the buyer had not shown that it would be liable in damages to the buyer on its forward contract, and (3) there was no showing of bad faith on the part of the seller, the court relied on the policy of former Com. Code § 1106(1) (now see Com. Code § 1305(a)) (that aggrieved party be put in as good a position as if other party had performed) in holding that the award of damages to the buyer be limited to its actual loss, i.e., the amount it expected to make on the forward contract [Allied Cannery & Packers, Inc. v. Victor Packing Co. (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 905, 913-916, 209 Cal.Rptr. 60].

When there is an anticipatory repudiation and the buyer elects to await performance for a commercially reasonable period of time but does not cover, damages will still be based on the market price at the time the buyer learned of the breach [see discussion in First Nat. Bank of Chicago v. Jefferson Mtg. Co. (3d Cir. 1978) 576 F.2d 479, 492-493] .

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.258

MB 300H.258 Buyer's Damages for Accepted Goods and for Breach of Warranty

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find in favor of Plaintiff on [his/her/its] claim for damages on account of Defendant's breach and you find further that Plaintiff gave adequate notice to Defendant of a claim of breach regarding the goods, then you should award to Plaintiff:

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Damages for the loss to Plaintiff that resulted, in the ordinary course of events, from Defendant's breach, including incidental [and consequential] damages.

[OR]

Damages calculated as follows at the time and place of acceptance:

1. The difference between the value the accepted goods would have had if they had been as warranted and minus the value of the goods accepted;

2. Plus incidental damages;

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

3. Plus consequential damages;

4. Minus any amount of the contract price that was withheld as a set-off against damages.

[OR]

Damages that Plaintiff has proven were caused by a loss due to Defendant's breach of warranty.

Under the law, Defendant's breach of warranty caused Plaintiff's loss if that breach was a substantial factor in bringing about the loss. Therefore, in instructing you that Plaintiff must have proven that Defendant's breach caused the loss, I mean that Plaintiff must have proven that the breach was a substantial factor in bringing about the loss.

Authorities: Com. Code §§ 2714, 2717.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given as the measure of damages when the buyer seeks damages for accepted but nonconforming goods and the time for revocation of acceptance has passed [U.C.C. Comment No. 1 to Com. Code § 2714]. It should be used with the instruction in MB 300H.222 on notice of breach.

Choice among the alternate damage calculations is governed by the type of nonconformity and the damage evidence adduced. The first alternative should be used in cases not involving breach of warranty and applies to such breaches as late deliveries and deficient quantity, or other nonconformity.

The second alternative includes the "usual, standard" method of calculating breach of warranty damages but is not exclusive [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2714]. Item 3 should be omitted if the contract disclaims, so far as the law permits, the right to recover consequential damages. Item 4, which refers to the right of set-off provided by Com. Code § 2717, should be omitted if the buyer did not withhold any of the contract price as a set-off.

The third alternative applies if special circumstances have produced proximate damages that are different from those in the second alternative. The reference to incidental and consequential damages is omitted because they will be included among damages proximately resulting from the breach. To improve juror comprehension, this alternative uses the term "caused" in lieu of the more traditional language based on "proximate cause" [see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03].

If incidental and consequential damages are expressly included, the instructions in MB 300H.254 and MB 300H.255 should also be given.

[3] Comment

[a] When Nonconformity Is Not Breach of Warranty

In cases in which the nonconformity is not a breach of warranty, the buyer may recover as damages for any nonconformity of tender the loss resulting in the ordinary course of events from the seller's breach as determined "in any manner which is reasonable" [Com. Code § 2714(1)]. This may include the cost of cover if there was a deficiency in quantity, expenses occasioned by the seller's delay, or the cost of repair of defective goods [see Lidstrand v. Silvercrest

Industries (Wash. 1981) 623 P.2d 710]. In proper cases, any incidental and consequential damages under Com. Code § 2715 may also be recovered [Com. Code § 2714(3); see MB 300H.254, MB 300H.255].

[b] When Non-Conformity Is Breach of Warranty

The measure of damages for breach of warranty is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted, unless special circumstances show proximate damages of a different amount [Com. Code § 2714(2)]. In proper cases, any incidental and consequential damages under Com. Code § 2715 may also be recovered [Com. Code § 2714(3); see MB 300H.254, MB 300H.255].

The value of the goods had they been as warranted may or may not be the contract price. For example, in one case the court awarded damages based on a finding that the computer system sold, had it been as warranted, would have been worth over four times the contract price [Chatlos Systems, Inc. v. National Cash Register Corp. (3d Cir. 1982) 670 F.2d 1304]. However, in another case, the court treated the contract price as the value of the computer system if it had been as warranted [Schatz Distributing Co. Inc. v. Olivetti Corp. of America (Kan. 1982) 647 P.2d 820].

The cost of repairing defective goods is often accepted as the measure of damages in warranty cases [see City of New York v. Pullman Inc. (2d Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 910].

[c] When Value of Goods Is Determined

Value of goods is determined as of the time and place of acceptance [Com. Code § 2714(2)]. However, if the buyer could have revoked acceptance and decided not to do so, value is determined as of the time and place of the buyer's decision not to revoke [U.C.C. Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 2714].

[d] Notice Requirements

In all instances of breach with regard to accepted goods, the buyer must comply with the notice of breach requirements of Com. Code § 2607. These requirements are stated in the instructions in MB 300H.222 on notice of breach and MB 300H.155 on notice of breach of warranty.

[e] Burden of Proving Breach

The buyer has the burden of proving the breach with regard to accepted goods, whether in the position of plaintiff or defendant in the case [Com. Code § 2607(4)].

CHAPTER 3H Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contracts Instructions
PART L. DAMAGES AND OTHER REMEDIES

2-3H California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300H.259

MB 300H.259 Liquidated Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find in favor of Plaintiff [optional (see Use of Instruction): and if you find that the parties agreed on an amount to be paid in the event of Defendant's breach, then] you should find for Plaintiff in the amount agreed on, with interest on that amount at the rate of _____ percent per year [optional (see Use of Instruction): unless Defendant proves that the amount of damages agreed on was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

In deciding whether the amount of damages agreed on was unreasonable, you may consider all of the circumstances that existed when the contract was made. The circumstances that you may consider include the following:

- 1. The relationship of the agreed-on damages to the range of harm that reasonably could have been anticipated;
- 2. The relative equality of the bargaining power of Plaintiff and Defendant;
- 3. Whether or not Plaintiff and Defendant were represented by lawyers when the contract was made;
- 4. The anticipation of Plaintiff and Defendant that proving actual damages would be costly or inconvenient;

5. The difficulty of proving causation and foreseeability of damages; and6. Whether or not the contract is a form contract.

Because you must consider the circumstances at the time the contract was made, you must not consider the amount of damages actually suffered by Plaintiff in determining whether the damages agreed to were unreasonable.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2718; Civ. Code § 1671; Cal. Law Revision Com. Comment to Civ. Code § 1671.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when the contract at issue provides for liquidated damages in the event of the type of breach complained of. The first optional clause should be included if there is an issue of fact as to whether the parties agreed on liquidated damages. The contract interest or statutory rate should be applied.

Com. Code § 2718(1) requires that a liquidated damages provision in a contract for the sale of goods comply with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1671. For liquidated damages provisions subject to Civ. Code § 1671, the second and third options should be used if the defendant challenges the reasonableness of the liquidated damages provision.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Arguing Liquidated Damages:

The concept of "liquidated damages" will be difficult for some attorneys and judges to apply or understand. What about a juror? Each of the numbered paragraphs in this instruction will have to be explained in closing argument, because it is not obvious from the instruction which way each of these factors cuts. The final unnumbered paragraph will be counter-intuitive to some jurors who will not understand why evidence of the actual damage is irrelevant and must not be considered. The key point is that a "liquidated damages" clause can be reasonable at the time the parties entered into the contract, even if the ultimate actual damages turn out to be much less. If the actual damages are very small, or non-existent, plaintiff's counsel will probably want to exclude the evidence altogether by way of a motion in limine. This instruction will support such a motion. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Com. Code § 2718(1) requires a liquidated damages provision in a contract for the sale of goods to comply with Civ. Code § 1671. A liquidated damages provision that does not comply with Civ. Code § 1671 is ineffective, and the aggrieved party is left with the remedies provided in Division 2 of the California Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 2101 et seq.]. For discussion of the requirements of Civ. Code § 1671, see Ch. 75A, Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions, MB 7500A.74[3].

Proposed Revision of California Mechanics' Lien Law

In 1999, the California Law Revision Commission was asked to undertake a study of the law governing mechanics' liens and associated construction remedies in California. The resulting recommendation, which includes proposed legislation, was sent to the governor and the legislature in February, 2008 [see http://www.clrc.ca.gov/pub/PrintedReports/REC_H821.pdf]. The recommendation provided the basis for SB 1691, which was introduced during the 2007-2008 session, passed both the Assembly and Senate but was vetoed by the governor as not being of sufficiently high priority. The legislation has been resurrected in the 2009-2010 session as SB 189, which, as of December 2009, is under consideration by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. In its current form, SB 189 closely tracks the Commission's proposed legislation, and if enacted, would be operative January 1, 2011. Provided the legislation is enacted, it will be fully incorporated into this chapter in a future release.

Significant changes to current mechanics' lien law that would be made by the proposed legislation include the following:

1. Reorganization. The proposed legislation relocates the provisions of the mechanics' lien law relating to private works of improvement to the end of the Civil Code, beginning with Section 8000. This avoids the confusion of using old Civil Code section numbers for new and different provisions, and allows for future expansion without resorting to decimal section numbering.

The proposed legislation also relocates the statutes governing public work construction remedies, such as the stop notice and payment bond. The public work provisions would be moved into the Public Contract Code, beginning with Section 41010. This is intended to solve the problems created by multiple sets of corresponding but dissimilar provisions for public and private works.

2. Terminology. The proposed legislation cleans up and systematizes the statutory definitions to provide more consistent usage throughout the mechanics' lien law.

3. Standardization of notice provisions. The current mechanics' lien law provides for many types of notice, including preliminary notice, stop notice, notice of overdue laborer compensation, notice of non-responsibility, notice to principal and surety, stop work notice, notice of completion, and notice of cessation. Each notice is subject to unique provisions governing content, service, and proof of service. The proposed legislation standardizes these notice provisions to provide consistency throughout the range of remedies [see proposed Civ. Code §§ 8100-8118]. For example, the legislation prescribes standard content applicable to all notices [see proposed Civ. Code § 8102; proposed Pub. Con. Code § 42120]. It replaces the individual variants in existing law applicable to one type of notice or another by establishing a general procedure for giving notice to be applied throughout the mechanics lien law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.20]. It also standardizes the proof of mailing and proof of delivery provisions and adds a provision for proof of electronic notice [see proposed Civ. Code § 8118; proposed Pub. Con. Code § 42190].

4. Preliminary notice. Although the proposed legislation retains most of the substance of the preliminary notice provisions of existing law, the existing provisions are broken into smaller, more comprehensible pieces, streamlines and simplifies their wording, and clarifies the language of the notice [compare Civ. Code §§ 3097, 3098 with proposed Civ. Code §§ 8200-8214].

The proposed legislation eliminates the existing provision that seems to both require a direct contractor to give preliminary notice to the construction lender and exempts the contractor from having to do so [see Civ. Code § 3097(b)]. Under the proposed legislation, the contractor is required to give the lender preliminary notice [see proposed Civ. Code § 8200].

5. Notice of claim of lien. Existing law does not require a lien claimant to notify the owner when a claim of lien is recorded, nor does it require the county recorder to do so except in certain counties, on request. Recognizing that the constitutionality and fairness of the mechanics' lien law would be enhanced if the lien claimant were required to notify the owner on recording a claim of lien, the proposed legislation imposes a recording requirement [see proposed Civ. Code §§ 8418, 8420].

6. Lis pendens requirement. The proposed legislation requires that a claimant who commences an action to enforce a lien claim record a lis pendens disclosing the enforcement action within 110 days of recording the lien claim. Failure to do so results in expiration of the claim, rather than having to wait a year or more [see proposed Civ. Code § 8460(a)].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions that are peculiar to construction industry litigation. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions (CACI) on contracts generally, see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions. Ch. 3 includes Judicial Council instructions on issues surrounding contract formation, performance, interpretation, modification, breach, damages, and defenses. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions on the burden of proof, including instructions on breaches of contract, recovery against payment bonds, and breaches of warranty [see MB 300I.01 -MB 300I.19].
- Part B includes instructions on the specific types of breaches of contract that recur in construction projects [see MB 300I.30 -MB 300I.39].
- Part C includes instructions on common conditions in construction contracts and frequently asserted defenses [see MB 300I.50 -MB 300I.80].
- Part D includes instructions on releases and waivers that may bar recovery [see MB 300I.90 -MB 300I.94].
- Part E includes instructions on the measures of damages that apply in construction disputes [see MB 300I.100 -MB 300I.109].
- Part F includes instructions on a government agency as a party [see MB 300I.120], the definitions of "stop notice" and "bonded stop notice" [see MB 300I.121, MB 300I.122], and contracts containing standard forms and printed provision [see MB 300I.123].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

The instructions in this chapter generally presume the existence of a contract. The instructions in Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions, should be consulted if there are contract formation questions. In addition, the instructions in this chapter on contract interpretation, breaches, damages, and defenses are keyed to the problems typically encountered with construction disputes. When they do not seem to cover the particular situation, the instructions in Chs. 3B through 3F should be examined.

There are some references to the Uniform Commercial Code in these instructions. For more complete coverage, see Ch. 3H, Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contract Instructions.

Finally, these instructions are based on clauses in contract documents that are fairly common in the construction industry. If the contract in the particular case has different terms in it, those terms may produce different legal consequences and, of course, require modification of these instructions.

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.01

MB 300I.01 Contractor's Withdrawal of Bid on Public Works Project

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff made a mistake in the preparation of [his/her/its] bid.
- 2. That Plaintiff gave written notice of the mistake to Defendant within five working days, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and state holidays, after the bids were opened, and this notice specified in detail how the mistake occurred.
- 3. That the mistake made the bid materially different from what Plaintiff had intended it to be.
- 4. That the mistake was made in filling out the bid form.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

- 5. That the mistake was not due to an error in judgment by Plaintiff.
- 6. That the mistake was not due to any carelessness by Plaintiff in inspecting the site of the work.
- 7. That the mistake was not due to Plaintiff's carelessness in reading of the plans or specifications.

Authority: Pub. Contract Code § 5103.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a contractor awarded a public works project made a mistake in the bid. The contractor will seek to avoid doing the work and to prevent its bid bond or other bid security from being forfeited. The statute seems to place on the plaintiff the burden of proving the nonexistence of the facts covered by Paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 of this instruction. No cases have discussed this point. However, no instruction should be given unless there is some factual basis for it. Therefore, Paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 should only be given when the public entity can point to some evidence that raises those particular issues. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Review Applicable Case Law: The literal wording of this instruction and the optional paragraphs seem to preclude relief except in cases where plaintiff has made a clerical error in filling out the bid form. However, the cases discussed in the commentary in [3], below, seem to provide for additional grounds for relief. Plaintiff's counsel should therefore review the cases that may be applicable to the case at hand. And, if this instruction is given, both counsel should use a checklist in proving (or disproving) the listed elements. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Bid Withdrawal Generally

A bid submitted to a public entity is generally considered to be in the nature of an irrevocable option. It is a contract right of which the entity cannot be deprived without its consent, unless the requirements for rescission are met [M. F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal.2d 696, 700, 235 P.2d 7]. If the entity awards the contract, but the contractor refuses to execute the contract documents, the security the contractor posted with the bid can be forfeited [see, e.g., Pub. Contract Code §§ 5106, 10181, 20172].

[b] Relief From Forfeiture

Various statutes permit relief from forfeiture [see Pub. Contract Code §§ 5100-5107], even before the forfeiture actually occurs [Balliet Bros. Constr. Corp. v. Regents of University of California (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 321, 326-327, 145 Cal.Rptr. 498], by prescribing the terms and manner in which bids can be withdrawn. These statutes establish the exclusive procedures under which bidders on public works projects may be relieved of their bids [A & A Electric Inc. v. City of King (1976) 54 Cal.App.3d 457, 463-465, 126 Cal.Rptr. 585].

[c] Grounds for Relief

The present statutory scheme for relief from forfeiture does not alter the grounds for granting such relief that were formulated under prior statutes [Balliet Bros. Constr. Corp. v. Regents of University of California (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 321, 327, 145 Cal.Rptr. 498]. Pub. Contract Code § 5103 allows for relief when the mistake in the bid presented makes the bid materially different from that intended and is in filling out the bid form [Valley Crest Landscape v. City Council (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1432, 1442, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 184 ; see MCM Construction, Inc. v. City & County of San Francisco (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 359, 377, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 44 (failure to state dollar amount of work to be performed by seven of nine subcontractors was similar to error found in Valley Crest)]. Mistakes that qualify for relief include (1) failure to add in a subcontractor's bid on the work sheet on which the prime contractor computed its own bid [Elsinore Union etc. Sch. Dist. v. Kastorff (1960) 54 Cal.2d 380, 388-389, 6 Cal.Rptr. 1, 353 P.2d 713], (2) failure of the prime contractor to carry over the cost of part of the work from one worksheet to another in computing its bid [M. F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal.2d 696, 702-703, 235 P.2d 7], and (3) misstating the correct percentage of the work to be performed by a subcontractor [Ghilotti Const. Co. v. City of Richmond (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 897, 910, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 389]. Relief is available even when there are mistakes of both fact and judgment, such as erroneous excavation computations resulting from failure to give work descriptions on plans precedence over inconsistent soil reports [White v. Berrenda Mesa Water Dist. (1970) 7 Cal.App.3d 894, 902-907, 87 Cal.Rptr. 338]. Relief will also be given to a prime contractor whose subcontractor's mistake causes a material effect on the prime's bid which would qualify for relief [Saliba-Kringlen Corp. v. Allen Engineering Co. (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 95, 105, 92 Cal.Rptr. 799].

For most public entity projects, the procedure for withdrawal of bids in Pub. Contract Code §§ 5100-5107 is applicable.

PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.02

MB 300I.02 Contractor's Reliance on Public Entity Complying With Prescribed Bidding Procedure

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That Defendant was required to award the contract to the bidder who _____ [insert appropriate language from applicable statute, city charter provision, ordinance, or portion of bid invitation, e.g., was the lowest responsible bidder].

2. That Defendant failed to comply with that requirement when it awarded the contract.

3. That Plaintiff suffered losses because [he/she/it] reasonably relied on that bidding requirement by preparing and submitting its bid to Defendant.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

4. That an injustice to Plaintiff can be avoided only if Plaintiff is permitted to recover the damages Plaintiff suffered by preparing and submitting [his/her/its] bid.

5. That Defendant's failure to comply with the bidding requirement caused the damages that Plaintiff complains of.

6. The nature and extent of the damages Plaintiff suffered as a result of preparing and submitting the bid.

Authorities: Swinerton Walberg Co. v. City of Inglewood-L.A. County Civic Center Authority (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 98, 103-105, 114 Cal.Rptr. 834 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90 (1981).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a public entity fails to follow the prescribed procedure in awarding a contract, and the contractor who would have been awarded the work if the procedures had been followed seeks damages.

The instruction presumes that the detriment suffered by the plaintiff was the value of the effort of preparing and submitting the bid. If the detriment was something else, then Paragraph 3 must be modified accordingly.

The Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90 requires that plaintiff prove "injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise." This element is established as a matter of law if the public entity fails to award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder [Swinerton Walberg Co. v. City of Inglewood-L.A. County Civic Center Authority (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 98, 104, 114 Cal.Rptr. 834]. That may not necessarily obtain if the public entity failed to comply with some other requirement of the competitive bidding scheme. In that case optional Paragraph 4 should be used.

Paragraph 5 may be omitted if the causal relationship between the defendant's failure to follow bidding requirements and the plaintiff's damages is not at issue.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Checklist: Use of this instruction indicates the need to use a checklist for the jury. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The competitive bidding scheme described in the applicable statutes, city charter provisions, ordinances, or the invitation for bids may require that a particular bidder be awarded the contract. Nonetheless, that bidder can neither compel the public entity to award the contract to it [Pozar v. Department of Transportation (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 269, 271, 193 Cal.Rptr. 202], nor recover damages in tort if the contract is awarded to another bidder [Rubino v. Lolli (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 1059, 1062-1063, 89 Cal.Rptr. 320]. However, if that bidder can prove it reasonably relied to its detriment on the competitive bidding scheme, then it can recover damages under the doctrine of promissory estoppel for the entity's breach of its promise to award the contract according to that scheme [Swinerton Walberg Co. v. City of Inglewood-L.A. County Civic Center Authority (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 98, 103-105, 114 Cal.Rptr. 834 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90 (1981)]. One case has suggested that the damages recoverable may be limited to expenses incurred in the bidding process but did not rule out the possibility that the damages could include loss of profits [Swinerton Walberg Co. v. City of Inglewood-L.A. County Civic Center Authority (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 98, 105, 114 Cal.Rptr. 834].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Available Damages: Plaintiff's counsel should note that the cases discussed above may allow for the recovery of damages beyond the cost of preparing and submitting plaintiff's bid. By Ronald Oster

PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.02A

MB 300I.02A Contract with Public Entity Later Determined to Be Invalid Because of Defects in Competitive Bidding Process

[1] Instruction Contract with Public Entity Later Determined to Be Invalid Because of Defects in Competitive Bidding Process

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. The contract was determined to be invalid due to a defect or defects in the competitive bidding process caused solely by the public entity;
- 2. The contractor proceeded with construction, alteration, repair, or improvement based on a good faith belief that the contract was valid;
- 3. The public entity has reasonably determined that the work performed is satisfactory;
- 4. The contractor did not commit fraud in the obtaining or performance of the contract; and
- 5. The contract does not otherwise violate statutory or constitutional limitations.

Authority: Pub. Contract Code § 5110.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a contract with a public agency was entered into pending final decision on a challenge in accordance with Pub. Contract Code § 5110 but later was determined to be invalid due to defects in the competitive bidding process caused solely by the public entity. The contractor is entitled to be paid the reasonable cost of the labor, equipment, materials, and services furnished by the contractor before the date of the determination that the contract is invalid if the conditions listed in the instruction are met. It is not entitled to recover any profit [Pub. Contract Code § 5110(a)].

[3] Comment

When a public works project is competitively bid and any intended or actual award of the contract is challenged, the contract may be entered into pending final decision of the challenge. If the contract is later determined to be invalid due to defects in the competitive bidding process caused solely by the public entity, the contractor who entered into the contract with the public entity is entitled to be paid the reasonable cost (specifically excluding profit) of the labor, equipment, materials, and services furnished by the contractor before the date of the determination that the contract is invalid if all of the following conditions are met [Pub. Contract Code § 5110(a)]:

- The contractor proceeded with construction, alteration, repair, or improvement based on a good faith belief that the contract was valid;
- The public entity has reasonably determined that the work performed is satisfactory;
- Contractor fraud did not occur in the obtaining or performance of the contract; and
- The contract does not otherwise violate statutory or constitutional limitations.

Payment to the contractor may not exceed either of the following [Pub. Contract Code § 5110(b)]:

- The contractor's costs as included in its bid plus the cost of any approved change orders; or
- The amount of the contract less profit at the point in time the contract is determined to be invalid.

These provisions do not affect any protest and legal proceedings, whether contractual, administrative, or judicial, to challenge the award of the public works contract and enforce competitive bidding laws, nor do they affect any rights under Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1 or 337.15 (statutes of limitations) [Pub. Contract Code § 5110(c)].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.03

MB 300I.03 Prime Contractor's Failure to Execute Contract With Listed Subcontractor

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff was listed by Defendant in Defendant's bid to _____ [name of public entity] as a subcontractor that would do a portion of the work on _____ [describe project];
- 2. That Plaintiff was ready, willing, and able to do that portion of the work;
- 3. That Defendant did not permit Plaintiff to do that portion of the work;
- 4. That Defendant's refusal to permit Plaintiff to do that portion caused the damages that Plaintiff complains of; and
- 5. The nature and extent of the damages Plaintiff suffered.

Authorities: Southern Cal. Acoustics Co. v. C. V. Holder, Inc. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 719, 726-727, 79 Cal.Rptr. 319, 456 P.2d 975 ; R.J. Land & Assocs. Constr. Co. v. Kiewit-Shea (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 416, 419, 425-428, 81 Cal.Rptr.2d 615 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a listed subcontractor seeks damages because it was not used on the project by the prime contractor. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California

Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True"). In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must also be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

The damages are usually the benefit the subcontractor would have realized from the work [Southern Cal. Acoustics Co. v. C. V. Holder, Inc. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 719, 726-727, 79 Cal.Rptr. 319, 456 P.2d 975 ; R.J. Land & Assocs. Constr. Co. v. Kiewit-Shea (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 416, 421, 81 Cal.Rptr.2d 615] and this point should be covered in a separate damages instruction [see Part E].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using This Instruction: This instruction only applies in cases where the bidder did not comply with the procedures and requirements to substitute subcontractors or do the work itself. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Bidders on public works projects are usually required to submit a list of the subcontractors who are going to perform substantial portions of the work [see Pub. Contract Code § 4104]. That listing alone creates no contract between the bidder and the listed subcontractor [Klose v. Sequoia Union High School Dist. (1953) 118 Cal.App.2d 636, 640-641, 258 P.2d 515]. However, if the listed subcontractor is not awarded the subcontract, it has a statutory right to recover the benefit of the bargain it would have realized from the work, unless it fails to execute the subcontract documents or unless the bidder follows the proper procedure and satisfies the requirements to substitute another subcontractor for the listed one [Southern Cal. Acoustics Co. v. C. V. Holder, Inc. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 719, 726-727, 79 Cal.Rptr. 319, 456 P.2d 975 ; R.J. Land & Assocs. Constr. Co. v. Kiewit-Shea (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 416, 421, 81 Cal.Rptr.2d 615]. The same is true when the bidder does the work itself instead of obtaining another subcontractor [Fred J. Early, Jr., Co. v. County Sanitation Dist. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 505, 507-508, 29 Cal.Rptr. 633]. Any doubt about the bidder's compliance with the procedure and requirements to substitute another subcontractor should have been resolved in the hearing before the public entity or in a writ proceeding to review that hearing [Cal-Air Conditioning, Inc. v. Auburn Union High School District (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 655, 661-662, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 703 ; Interior Systems, Inc. v. Del E. Webb Corp. (1981) 121 Cal.App.3d 312, 317-320, 175 Cal.Rptr. 301].

(1981).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the prime contractor seeks damages from a prospective subcontractor who refused to execute a subcontract based on its bid. Although phrased as a conventional burden of proof instruction, the elements of the plaintiff's case could be recast in the form of special interrogatories to the jury, resulting in special findings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 625]. Because promissory estoppel is an equitable doctrine, there is no right to a jury trial unless there are legal issues being tried as well, in which case the jury's verdict on the estoppel issues is advisory only. It remains the trial court's duty to make independent findings and adopt or reject the jury's findings as it deems proper [C & K Engineering Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal.3d 1, 6-11, 151 Cal.Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136 ; A-C Company, Inc. v. Security Pacific National Bank (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 462, 473-474, 219 Cal.Rptr. 62] .

The jury's finding should be restricted to the facts. It would be improper to ask the jury to decide whether injustice could be avoided only by enforcing the promise or whether plaintiffs acted inequitably or had unclean hands. These are issues that are clearly for the court [A-C Company, Inc. v. Security Pacific National Bank (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 462, 473-474, 219 Cal.Rptr. 62].

This instruction presumes the plaintiff first learned the subcontractor would not perform when the plaintiff tendered the written subcontract. If the subcontractor had earlier tried to revoke its bid, thereby making the tender of the subcontract pointless [Civ. Code §§ 1515, 3532], then Paragraph 5 should be revised accordingly.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must also be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

The damages usually are the difference between the subcontractor's bid and the ultimate cost to do that work [Norcross v. Winters (1962) 209 Cal.App.2d 207, 221-223, 25 Cal.Rptr. 821], and this point should be covered in a separate damages instruction [see Part E].

This instruction does not apply to bids from suppliers. They are governed by Com. Code § 2205 [see MB 300I.05]. However, it would seem to apply when a subcontractor has relied on a bid from a lower tier subcontractor in preparing the bid to submit to the prime contractor.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care Structuring Your Closing: Most attorneys and many judges struggle with the legal concepts of "promissory estoppel." Thus, be careful how to structure the closing. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Rights and Duties of Prime Contractor and Subcontractor

When a subcontractor submits a bid to a prime contractor, the subcontractor may not revoke its bid if it knows, or should know, that the bid is going to be used by the prime contractor to compute the prime contractor's bid to the owner [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal.2d 409, 413-415, 333 P.2d 757 ; see Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90 (1981)].

However, the prime contractor is not free to delay acceptance of the bid, nor can it re-open negotiations with the subcontractor while claiming a continuing right to accept the original offer [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51

Cal.2d 409, 415, 333 P.2d 757].

There is no obligation on the prime contractor to accept the bid of the subcontractor until the contract has been awarded [Saliba-Kringlen Corp. v. Allen Engineering Co. (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 95, 106-108, 92 Cal.Rptr. 799]. On public works projects, the opening of bids and the award of the contract are not necessarily coincidental in time. The interval between them depends on the nature of the awarding authority and the statutory constraints under which it operates.

[b] Reasonable Reliance on Subcontractor's Bid

The prime contractor's reliance on the subcontractor's bid must be reasonable [MacIsaac & Menke Co. v. Freeman (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 327, 335, 15 Cal.Rptr. 48]. Whether that reliance was reasonable is a question of fact [Saliba-Kringlen Corp. v. Allen Engineering Co. (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 95, 102-103, 92 Cal.Rptr. 799 ; Diede Construction, Inc. v. Monterey Mechanical Co. (2004) 125 Cal.App.4th 380, 392, 22 Cal.Rptr.3d 763]. In one case, a general contractor was not required to request relief from its bid on a city contract as a condition of holding responsible a subcontractor who made a clerical error in its bid for the subcontract, because relief for a clerical error is available under Pub. Contract Code §§ 5101 and 5103 only for errors in the general contractor's bid. However, the contractor's right to recover from the subcontractor on the basis of promissory estoppel was dependent on its proving that it reasonably relied on the subcontractor's mistaken bid in calculating the amount of its bid to the city [Diede Construction, Inc. v. Monterey Mechanical Co. (2004) 125 Cal.App.4th 380, 387-388, 22 Cal.Rptr.3d 763].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Reliance Must Be Reasonable: In cases where the subcontractor has submitted an erroneous bid because of obvious clerical or computational errors, the subcontractor can avoid liability by establishing that plaintiff's reliance was not reasonable under the circumstances. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.05

MB 300I.05 Irrevocable Bid of Supplier (Com. Code § 2205(b))

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant submitted a bid to Plaintiff to provide a portion of the materials required for _____ [describe project].
- 2. That Defendant knew, or should have known, that Plaintiff would rely on Defendant's bid.
- 3. That Plaintiff did rely on Defendant's bid when the Plaintiff submitted [his/her/its] bid for the project.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

- 4. That within 48 hours after Defendant gave Plaintiff the bid, Plaintiff gave Defendant a written confirmation of the bid.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

- 5. That Plaintiff accepted Defendant's bid within 10 days after Plaintiff was awarded the contract, and the date of that acceptance was within 90 days of the date that Defendant originally made the bid to sell the materials.

[OR]

5. That Plaintiff accepted Defendant's bid within the time the Defendant specified the bid could be accepted.

6. That at the time Defendant submitted a bid to Plaintiff, Defendant knew or should have known from the circumstances that Plaintiff was a licensed contractor.

7. That Defendant's refusal to supply Plaintiff with materials according to the terms of the accepted bid caused the damages that Plaintiff complains of.

8. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authority: Com. Code § 2205(b).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by a contractor seeking damages from a prospective supplier who reneges on a contract resulting from the acceptance of an irrevocable bid to supply materials.

The instruction includes several elements that may or may not be at issue. For example, if the supplier's bid was oral and was for a price of $2,500 or more, then optional Paragraph 4 should be included if there is a question whether or not the plaintiff actually confirmed the oral bid within the 48-hour time limit. Under the statute, it appears that when the contractor "confirms," the bid then becomes irrevocable for the periods set out as alternatives in Paragraph 5 of the instruction. Those alternatives are based on the statutory requirement that a bid remain irrevocable for 10 days after the contract was awarded (but in no event for more than 90 days after the bid was given), or for so long as the bidder specifies in its bid [Com. Code § 2205(b)].

Although Com. Code § 2205(b) requires plaintiff to have been a licensed contractor at the time of the bid, and requires defendant to have actual or imputed knowledge of that fact, this will rarely be an issue. If it is not an issue, Paragraph 6 of the instruction should be omitted.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must also be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

[3] Comment

This instruction is based on Com. Code § 2205(b), which makes a merchant's bid irrevocable when the merchant knows the bid will be relied on by a licensed contractor to bid on a construction contract. The bid is then irrevocable for 10 days after the contractor's bid is accepted but not for more than 90 days or for the time specified in the merchant's bid. Com. Code § 2205(b) was a legislative reaction to reverse the holding of a federal case [C.R. Frederick, Inc. v. Borg-Warner Corp. (9th Cir. 1977) 552 F.2d 852, 856-857], which held that promissory estoppel could not be used against suppliers, as it is against subcontractors, because of the statute of fraud provisions in the Commercial Code.

Although Com. Code § 2205(b) appears to authorize an action based on the equitable doctrine of promissory estoppel, unlike the Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90, it does not require that the contractor's reliance be reasonable. There are no decisions implying reasonable reliance under Com. Code § 2205(b), so it would seem that if the supplier's contention is that the plaintiff unreasonably relied on, for example, an obvious clerical mistake, then the supplier should raise this as a defense and be required to prove it.

Also, unlike the Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90, Com. Code § 2205(b) does not require a determination that injustice can be avoided only by enforcing the plaintiff's right to recover. Since that aspect of the Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 90 was a primary underpinning of the Supreme Court's holding that no right to a jury trial exists in promissory estoppel actions [C. & K. Engineering Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal.3d 1, 7-8, 151 Cal.Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136], the argument can be made that a right to a jury trial exists independent of whether there are legal issues in the case. The absence of equitable elements in Com. Code § 2205(b) could be used to overcome the contention that no right to a jury exists for actions for which the right did not exist at common law.

MB 300I.06 Breach of Contract

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. Plaintiff entered into a contract with Defendant;
- 2. Defendant breached the contract;
- 3. Before the particular breach occurred, either:
 - a. Plaintiff had performed whatever, if anything, Plaintiff was required to do under the contract as a prerequisite to obtaining the performance from Defendant, which performance Defendant failed to give and thereby breached the contract; or
 - b. Plaintiff was excused from offering that prerequisite performance by Defendant's failure to do something required to do under the contract;
- 4. The breach was the legal [proximate] cause of damages to Plaintiff; and
- 5. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Amelco Electric v. City of Thousand Oaks (2002) 27 Cal.4th 228, 243, 115 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 38 P.3d 1120 ; Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal.2d 822, 830, 69 Cal.Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Careau & Co. v. Security

Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1371, 1388, 272 Cal.Rptr. 387 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This general breach of contract instruction should be used in virtually all construction cases. The instruction should be modified and made specific as the circumstances dictate. For example, in most cases Paragraph 1 of the instruction can be omitted because there will be no issue concerning the existence of a contract. Similarly, Paragraph 3 should be modified if excuse from performance is not an issue, or should be omitted altogether if the plaintiff's performance is not an issue.

This instruction must be followed by one describing in some detail how defendant allegedly breached the contract. Most construction contracts are voluminous and consist of several interrelated documents, e.g., invitation to bids, agreement, plans, special provisions, standard specifications, reference specifications, permits, and even statutes, ordinances, or regulations. As a result, the court frequently will permit only the portions pertaining to the disputed issues to go to the jury. In that case, additional instructions may be necessary to explain to the jury what portions of the contract documents the jury is getting and how those documents must be interpreted.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must also be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

In an unpublished opinion, the court of appeal opined that the basic breach of contract jury instruction was overly broad [Kingston Constructors, Inc. v. Jacobs Constructors, Inc. (1st Appellate Dist., 1997) A074067 & A074701, p. 5]. To avoid such a determination, this instruction should be combined with instructions relative to specific breaches in MB 300I.30-MB 300I.39.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Consider Including Statement of Nature of Breach in Instruction: This instruction is a version of the general breach of contract instruction [see CACI No. 303]. Since many construction contracts are voluminous and complicated, counsel may wish to include in the instruction a specific statement as to the nature of the alleged breach. If the contract is extremely complicated, counsel may also want (1) to submit a special verdict to focus the jury on the specific facts giving rise to the alleged breach, and (2) to use a visual aid to assist the jury's understanding of these elements. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Elements of Cause of Action for Breach of Contract

The essential elements of a cause of action for breach of contract are [Civ. Code § 3300; Amelco Electric v. City of Thousand Oaks (2002) 27 Cal.4th 228, 243, 115 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 38 P.3d 1120 ; Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal.2d 822, 830, 69 Cal.Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1371, 1388, 272 Cal.Rptr. 387 ; Metzenbaum v. R.O.S. Associates (1986) 188 Cal.App.3d 202, 211-212, 232 Cal.Rptr. 741]:

- The contract;
- The plaintiff's performance or excuse for nonperformance;

- The defendant's breach;
- The resulting damages to plaintiff; and
- Proximate causation of those damages.

In the case of a construction contract, full performance is not a prerequisite to a suit on the contract for damages; substantial performance is sufficient [Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 92-93, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; see MB 300I.57].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.07

MB 300I.07 Recovery Against Payment Bond Surety on Private Work Project

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That a payment bond for the project was executed by _____ [name of contractor or subcontractor] and Defendant and was delivered to _____ [owner];
2. That Plaintiff provided labor, services, equipment, or materials for the project that were bestowed on, used in, or consumed in the project;
3. That these materials were requested by _____ [name of subcontractor], who is a subcontractor of _____ [name of principal], the principal on the payment bond;
4. That Plaintiff caused [a preliminary 20-day private work notice or a written notice of its claim] to be given to the appropriate persons. I will instruct you on the service, sufficiency, and timeliness of this notice;
5. That Plaintiff has not been paid for all the labor, services, equipment, or materials [he/she/it] it provided; and
6. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3096, 3097, 3226, 3227, 3235-3237, 3239-3240, 3242, 3267.

[2] Use of Instruction

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.07

This instruction should be used when a party seeks to recover against the surety on a payment bond on a private work project. Since this is a legal action by a third-party beneficiary on the contract, there is a right to a jury [see Civ. Code § 1559; Code Civ. Proc. § 592]. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

The payment bond should be carefully scrutinized. It is a contract that can have a variety of terms creating the need for additional instructions [see Sanders v. American Casualty Co. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 306, 310, 74 Cal.Rptr. 634].

This instruction can be used in conjunction with actions to foreclose a mechanics' lien or a stop notice (private work) when those causes of action are also being pursued.

Paragraph 3 should be modified to reflect the identity of the party who requested the work [Civ. Code § 3267].

In Paragraph 4, choose the first alternative if the plaintiff gave a preliminary 20-day notice (private work) as specified by Civ. Code § 3097. If this alternative is appropriate, the instruction in MB 300I.60 should also be used. The second alternative is for use when the plaintiff did not give a preliminary 20-day notice, but instead gave the written notice to the surety and bond principal after completing the work of improvement as specified by Civ. Code § 3242(b). If this alternative is chosen, the instruction in MB 300I.61 should also be used.

This instruction does not cover liability of the owner when there is a payment bond [Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236]. It also does not cover the situation when two projects have the same owner and use the same contractor, but only one project is bonded [see Phillips Constr. Co. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (1978) 77 Cal.App.3d 575, 580, 143 Cal.Rptr. 671].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Keep Your Closing Basic: Most jurors will be unfamiliar with terms such as "payment bond" and "principal." Thus, make your closing as direct and basic as possible. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Be Prepared to Modify Instruction: This instruction may have to be modified to take into account the specific terms of the payment bond that impose additional conditions and limitations. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Purpose of Payment Bonds

The purpose of the payment bond [Civ. Code § 3096] is to provide additional security for the lien claimant. It is not mandatory for an owner to require a payment bond from the contractor on a private project [R. D. Reeder Lathing Co. v. Allen (1967) 66 Cal.2d 373, 380, 57 Cal.Rptr. 841, 425 P.2d 785 ; see Civ. Code § 3110.5 (security requirements on contract for improvement when contract's value is more than $5,000,000, if owner has fee simple absolute interest in property, or more than $1,000,000, if owner has less than fee simple absolute interest; these requirements are subject to many exceptions (e.g., they do not apply to contracts for improvement of single family residences or when contracting owner is a publicly traded company), and thus Civ. Code § 3110.5 should be carefully reviewed to determine its applicability)].

[b] Statutory Bonds Versus Common Law Bonds

When the owner records the bond and it is in an amount not less than 50 percent of the contract price, the owner's liability is limited to the contract price [Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236]. An unrecorded payment bond, or common law bond, leaves the owner's property liable to mechanics' lien claimants for the full reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, or materials provided, or the price agreed between the claimant and the person the claimant contracted with, whichever is less, even if those claims exceed the original contract price. However, failure to record the bond does not relieve the surety of its obligations under the bond [Culbertson v. Cizek (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 451, 467, 37 Cal.Rptr. 548 ; see Civ. Code § 3123].

[c] Payment Bond Beneficiaries

As with mechanics' liens, the plaintiff must have provided labor, services, equipment, or materials that were bestowed on, used in, or consumed in the project [Civ. Code § 3226]. However, those who may pursue an action on a payment bond (private work) are not identical to those who may foreclose a mechanics' lien. Beneficiaries are limited to those who performed work for the principal on the payment bond or one of his or her subcontractors [Civ. Code § 3267].

To enforce a claim against a payment bond given in connection with a private work, the claimant must give the same preliminary 20-day notice (private work) that is required as a prerequisite to establishing a mechanics' lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3242(a); see Civ. Code § 3097; see also MB 300I.60]. If preliminary notice is not given, a claimant may nonetheless enforce a claim against the bond by giving written notice to the surety and the bond principal, within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If a notice of completion is not recorded, the time for giving written notice to the surety is extended to 75 days after completing the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3242(b); see MB 300I.61].

The action on the statutory payment bond must be commenced within the time specified on the bond, which cannot be less than six months [Civ. Code § 3239; Progress Glass Co. v. American Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal.App.3d 720, 725 n.5, 161 Cal.Rptr. 243 ; see MB 300I.73 (timeliness of action on bond as defense)]. However, if a surety on a payment bond records the bond in the office of the county recorder of the county in which the property is situated before the work of improvement is completed, then any action against the surety or sureties must be commenced no later than six months after the completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3240].

Other defenses of the surety include prior payment of the legitimate claims of others [see MB 300I.74], defenses of the principal other than personal defenses [Civ. Code § 2810; Post Bros. Constr. Co. v. Yoder (1977) 20 Cal.3d 1, 8, 141 Cal.Rptr. 28, 569 P.2d 133], and exoneration [Civ. Code §§ 2819-2825, 2839, 2845; see MB 300I.72].

MB 300I.08 Recovery Against Payment Bond Surety on Public Works Contract

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That a payment bond for the project was executed by _____ [contractor or subcontractor] and _____ [surety] and was delivered to _____ [public entity that awarded contract];

2. That Plaintiff provided labor, services, equipment, materials, provisions, or supplies:

a. For the project;

b. Which were bestowed on, used in, or consumed in the project; and

c. Which were requested by _____ [name of principal or subcontractor], _____ [the principal or one of the subcontractors of the principal] on the payment bond;

3. That Plaintiff caused [a preliminary 20-day public work notice or a written notice of its claim] to be given to the appropriate persons. I will instruct you on the service, sufficiency, and timeliness of this notice;

4. That Plaintiff has not been paid for all of the labor, services, equipment, or materials that [he/she/it] provided; and

5. The nature and extent of the Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3098, 3181, 3247-3252, 3267; Gov. Code §§ 66499-66499.10; Pub. Contract Code §§ 10221-10223, 20457; Sts. & Hy. Code § 30154; *American Buildings Co. v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff seeks to recover against the surety on a payment bond on a public works project. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

In Paragraph 3, choose the first alternative if the plaintiff gave a preliminary 20-day notice (public work) as specified by Civ. Code § 3098. If this alternative is appropriate, the instruction in MB 300I.68 should also be used. The second alternative is for use when the plaintiff did not give a preliminary 20-day notice, but instead gave the written notice to the surety and bond principal after completing the work of improvement as specified by Civ. Code § 3252(b). If this alternative is chosen, the instruction in MB 300I.71 should also be used.

An additional instruction should be included if there is a dispute on the timing of the action. This instruction presumes that the action was commenced within six months after the period in which stop notices must be filed under Civ. Code § 3184 [Civ. Code § 3249; Div. Labor Standards Enforcement v. Seaboard Surety Co. (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1501, 1511, 58 Cal.Rptr.2d 532 (holding that *Civ. [3] Comment

[a] When Payment Bond Must Be Provided

The general requirements for payment bonds on public works projects are embodied in Civ. Code §§ 3247-3252, which among other things, require that every contractor who executes a contract directly with a public agency for a public works project in excess of $25,000 must provide a payment bond [Civ. Code § 3247]. Pursuant to a different statute, a contractor entering into a contract in excess of $25,000 with a "state entity" must provide a payment bond [Pub. Contract Code § 7103(a)(1)]. In this context, "state entity" means every state office department, division, bureau, board, or commission. The term does not include the Legislature, the courts, any agency in the judicial branch, or the University of California, all of which are subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 3247 [Pub. Contract Code § 7103(d)].

A payment bond is specifically required for all of the following:

- The construction of toll bridges and highway crossings [Sts. & Hy. Code § 30154];

- Contracts for construction by state agencies [Pub. Contract Code §§ 10221-10223];
- Improvement Act of 1911 street work [Pub. Contract Code § 20457]; and
- Public improvements projects for subdivisions [Gov. Code §§ 66499-66499.10].

In addition, charter cities and counties may have provisions in charters, ordinances, or resolutions of the awarding authority that require a payment bond.

[b] Execution and Filing of Payment Bond

The bond must be executed by an admitted surety insurer [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.311] and must be filed with the public entity [Civ. Code § 3247]. If it is not properly filed, the prime contractor cannot be paid, and the subcontractors and materialmen must pursue their stop notice remedies [Civ. Code § 3251].

[c] Primary and Direct Obligation of Surety

The bond creates a primary and direct obligation of the surety, not affected by performance of the prime contract [Western Concrete Structures Co. v. James I. Barnes Constr. Co. (1962) 206 Cal.App.2d 1, 10, 23 Cal.Rptr. 506], to compensate those who furnished labor, services, equipment, or materials [California Elec. Supply Co. v. United Pac. Life Ins. Co. (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 138, 149, 38 Cal.Rptr. 479]. The terms of the prime contract and whether the contractor breached it are irrelevant [Cooley v. Freeman (1928) 204 Cal. 59, 61-62, 266 P. 545]. A sub-subcontractor has no personal claim against the prime contractor if he or she is not paid; he or she must proceed against the bond [Powers Regulator Co. v. Seaboard Surety Co. (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 338, 346, 22 Cal.Rptr. 373].

[d] Requirement of Plaintiff's Labor, Services, Equipment, or Materials

As with mechanics' liens, the plaintiff's labor, services, equipment, or materials must have been bestowed on, used in, or consumed in the project [Civ. Code §§ 3110, 3111, 3112, 3181, 3248(b); see A. L. Young Machinery Co. v. Cupps (1931) 213 Cal. 210, 213-217, 2 P.2d 321 ; Consolidated Elec. Distributors, Inc. v. Kirkham, Chaon & Kirkham, Inc. (1971) 18 Cal.App.3d 54, 56-60, 95 Cal.Rptr. 673]. Tires for trucks of truckers on a project do not qualify as labor, services, equipment, materials, provisions, or supplies, bestowed on, used in, or consumed in the project [George F. Kennedy, Inc. v. Miles & Sons Constr. (1970) 5 Cal.App.3d 516, 521, 85 Cal.Rptr. 298]. Similarly, except for the original contractor, the same class of claimants who would be entitled to a mechanics' lien, were it not a public project, are protected by the bond [Civ. Code § 3248; see Civ. Code §§ 3110, 3112, 3181; Contractors Labor Pool, Inc. v. Westway Contractors, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 152, 163, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 715 (corporation furnishing laborers was claimant protected by Mechanics' Lien Law and entitled to recover on payment bond)].

[e] Application to Vendors of Materialmen

It is not clear whether Civ. Code § 3181, by including persons "furnishing provisions, provender, or other supplies," in addition to the customary mechanics' lien claimants, was meant to expand the class of potential bond claimants to embrace those who are vendors of materials to materialmen. "Materialmen's materialmen" have long been considered outside the protection of mechanics' lien and stop notice statutes [Theisen v. County of Los Angeles (1960) 54 Cal.2d 170, 177-178, 5 Cal.Rptr. 161, 352 P.2d 529 (holding, however, that vendor of materials that were custom-made to meet specifications of prime contract was subcontractor, and that its supplier of custom-made doors was entitled to stop notice remedies)].

The reference to furnishing provisions, provender, or other supplies in Civ. Code § 3181 probably adds nothing to the definition of "materialman" [see Civ. Code § 3090]; and, in any event, the class of bond claimants is clearly limited by

Civ. Code § 3267, which provides that nothing in the mechanics' lien law gives any person any right of action on an original contractor's work payment bond unless the work forming the basis for the claim was performed by the person for the principal on the bond, or for one of its subcontractors, pursuant to the contract between the original contractor and the owner [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 450, Introduction to the Mechanics' Lien Law (Matthew Bender), for discussion of who may be a mechanic's lien, stop notice, or payment bond claimant]. However, as long as the claimant performed work for the principal and the other basic requirements for filing a claim against a payment bond are satisfied, it makes no difference how far down the ladder a potential claimant finds him or herself. For example, in the face of an argument that claims should be limited to first-tier material suppliers and second-tier subcontractors, a court of appeal held that such an interpretation was in conflict with the mechanics' lien statutes, which give lien rights to all subcontractors, and that there is no basis in the statutes themselves, or in the legislative history, to deny third-tier subcontractors the right to file a claim against a payment bond [Union Asphalt, Inc. v. Planet Ins. Co. (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 1762, 1765-1767, 27 Cal.Rptr.2d 371].

[f] Attorney's Fees

Attorney's fees can be recovered by persons who successfully bring an action to recover on the bond [Civ. Code § 3248(b)].

[g] Enforcing Claim on Public Work Payment Bond; Required Notice

To enforce a claim on a public work payment bond, a claimant must have given both the surety and bond principal a prescribed 20-day public works preliminary bond notice [Civ. Code § 3252(a); see Civ. Code § 3098; American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1197, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 ; see also MB 300I.68]. If the preliminary 20-day notice is not given, a claimant may nonetheless enforce a claim by giving written notice to the surety and bond principal within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If no notice of completion is recorded, the time to give written notice to the surety and bond principal is extended to 75 days after the work of improvement is completed [Civ. Code § 3252(b); see Civ. Code § 3227; American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1200, 1202, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 ; see also MB 300I.71]. The notice must be sufficient; however, the dollar amount does not have to be identical to that claimed in subsequent litigation [Blair Excavators, Inc. v. Paschen Contractors, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1815, 1817, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 420].

PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.09

MB 300I.09 Recovery Against Offsite Improvement Payment Bond Surety or Other Security for Public Improvements in Subdivision Development

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following four facts:

1. A payment bond for the project was executed by _____ [name of developer] and _____ [name of surety] and was delivered to _____ [name of public entity];

2. Plaintiff provided labor, services, equipment, or materials for the project to _____ [name of prime contractor on project or name of its subcontractor], _____ [the prime contractor or a subcontractor of the prime contractor];

3. Plaintiff has not been paid for all of the labor, services, equipment, or materials that [he/she/it] provided; and

4. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Gov. Code § 66499 et seq.; Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal.App.3d 648, 653-655, 149 Cal.Rptr. 711 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party seeks to recover against the surety on an offsite improvement bond. However, it can be adapted for suits against the holders of other forms of security for offsite improvements. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council

Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

This instruction does not cover the other claimants under the mechanics' lien law who might be included by the language of the bond, for example, a trust fund. It also does not cover any other additional rights or remedies that may be provided by the language of the bond.

If the plaintiff is the prime contractor, the phrase in brackets in Paragraph 2 should be omitted.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Keep Your Closing Basic: As with the instructions in MB 300I.07 and MB 300I.08, this instruction deals with matters beyond most jurors' experiences. Thus, keep your closing as direct and basic as possible. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Be Prepared to Modify Instruction: This instruction may have to be modified to take into account the specific terms of the payment bond that impose additional conditions and limitations. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Under the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.], developers are sometimes required to construct public improvements such as streets, sewers, storm drains, curbs, and gutters. Since the mechanics' lien laws generally do not apply to public improvements, and since the lack of government funds means no public work stop notice remedy is available to the contractors and materialmen in these situations, the developer is required to provide other security [Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal.App.3d 648, 653-654, 149 Cal.Rptr. 711]. The various types of security are enumerated in Gov. Code § 66499. Those most often used are corporate surety bonds, cash deposits, and instruments of credit, and the "contractor, his subcontractors, and ... persons furnishing labor, materials or equipment to them for the improvement ..." who are not paid can recover against that security [Gov. Code § 66499.10]. The liability of the security is a primary and direct obligation, without reference either to the liability of the developer or prime contractor to the claimant, or to the existence of other remedies for the claimant [Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal.App.3d 648, 654, 149 Cal.Rptr. 711].

When a corporate surety bond is used, it must comply with Gov. Code § 66499.2, even though that section extends the coverage of the bond beyond the scope of Gov. Code § 66499.10 and to all persons or entities covered by the mechanics' lien laws [Civ. Code §§ 3082-3267]. Furthermore, if the particular bond form grants additional rights or remedies to the claimant (e.g., attorney fees), they may also be enforced [Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal.App.3d 648, 655, 149 Cal.Rptr. 711]. Unless a corporate surety bond provided as security specifically provides for an award of attorney fees, such an award can only be made when the public entity sues the security on behalf of the contractors and materialmen, not when the claimants themselves sue directly [Gov. Code § 66499.4].

The Subdivision Map Act contains no express restrictions on the surety comparable to Civ. Code § 3239, pertaining to private work payment bonds, which prevent attempts to shorten the four-year statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337]. Nor does it contain the statutory limitations on the defense of exoneration that govern other statutorily mandated payment bonds [see Civ. Code §§ 3225, 3226, 3263]. For a full discussion of exoneration and an exoneration instruction, see MB 300I.72.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the owner (or the lender) brings an action against the contractor's performance bond surety. Paragraphs 2 and 3 should quote or paraphrase from the bond or contract the appropriate language that covers the facts of the case. Paragraph 4 need only be given when notice is required to be given as discussed in [3][c], below.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Be Prepared to Modify Instruction: This instruction may have to be modified to take into account the specific terms of the performance bond that impose additional conditions and limitations. And, the jury needs to understand what is a "performance bond." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Governing Law; Form of Performance Bond

Performance bonds are governed by the general laws of suretyship [Civ. Code § 2787 et seq.]. Private work performance bonds can vary widely, depending on the form of the bond executed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1933] by the principal (the contractor) and the obligor (the surety) for the benefit of the obligee (the owner and sometimes the lender). The form of public works performance bonds is generally governed by the statutes, city charters, and ordinances that mandate their use [see Pub. Contract Code §§ 10221, 20129, 20426, 20473, 20483, 20501, 20537, 20569, 20589, 20603]. Note that most public works statutes require that the bond be executed by an admitted surety insurer. In these instances, the wording of item 2 of the instruction should be changed accordingly.

[b] Contract Between Principal and Obligor; Conditions of Surety's Obligation

The purpose of a performance bond is to assure (at least to some extent) the principal's performance of its contract with the obligee [see Stephens v. Daugherty (1917) 33 Cal.App. 733, 735, 166 P. 375]. The bond has to be construed in light of the provisions of that contract [City of Sacramento v. Trans Pacific Industries, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 389, 402-403, 159 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; Callan v. Empire State Surety Co. (1912) 20 Cal.App. 483, 486, 129 P. 978]. One typical performance bond is American Institute of Architects, Performance Bond, AIA Document A311. It conditions the obligation of the surety on the prompt and faithful performance of the contract. This normally includes all of the material requirements of the contract [Culbertson v. Cizek (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 451, 467, 37 Cal.Rptr. 548], including warranty work. Other bonds may be more limited: some only condition the surety's obligation on faithful performance of the work contracted to be performed [Crane Co. v. Borwick Trenching Corp., Ltd. (1934) 138 Cal.App. 319, 321-322, 32 P.2d 387]; some merely provide an assurance of indemnity by the principal [Ramey v. Hopkins (1934) 138 Cal.App. 685, 687, 33 P.2d 443]. However, if the contract is incorporated by reference into the bond, all provisions of the contract become provisions of the bond for which the surety is liable, including, but not limited to, completion deadlines [Cates Construction, Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 Cal.4th 28, 40-41, 86 Cal.Rptr.2d 855,

[c] Liability of Surety

Generally, the surety's liability may not exceed that of the principal [Civ. Code § 2809]. However, since these are common law bonds, the surety's liability can be less, if the language of the bond so provides [Rexroth & Rexroth, Inc. v. General Cas. Co. (1966) 242 Cal.App.2d 363, 368-370, 51 Cal.Rptr. 505].

The surety's liability generally occurs on the default of the principal and without any demand or notice by the owner [Civ. Code § 2807]. However, the surety may be entitled to notice, if it was unable to learn of the default in the exercise of due diligence and the owner knew of the default [Civ. Code § 2808], or if the bond requires notice [see Verdugo Highlands, Inc. v. Security Ins. Co. (1966) 240 Cal.App.2d 527, 532-533, 49 Cal.Rptr. 736]. The contractor's default is usually a material breach of the contract. Such a default can include simply failing to prevent subcontractors or materialmen from recording liens, whether or not the owner actually paid the lien claimants [Ceremony v. Drummond (1918) 37 Cal.App. 446, 447-448, 174 P. 696].

A surety may be held liable under contract theory only. The California Supreme Court has held that a construction performance bond is not an insurance policy and tort recovery for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in the bond is not appropriate [Cates Construction Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 Cal.4th 28, 60, 86 Cal.Rptr.2d 855, 980 P.2d 407].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Performance Bond Is Not Insurance Policy: As noted in the above commentary, a performance bond is not deemed to be an insurance policy so that extra-contractual recoveries are not available. By Ronald Oster

Damages are generally the same as would be recoverable against the principal for its breach [Civ. Code § 2808; Bowman v. Maryland Casualty Co. (1928) 88 Cal.App. 481, 487-495, 263 P. 826], including consequential damages [Cates Construction, Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 Cal.4th 28, 40, 86 Cal.Rptr.2d 855, 980 P.2d 407 ; Burnett & Doty Development Co. v. Phillips (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 384, 389, 148 Cal.Rptr. 569 ; see Part E and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions].

When a developer who is contractually responsible for constructing public improvements fails to perform, the public entity's damages are measured by the value of its unfulfilled right, that is, the cost of bringing the subdivision into compliance by installing the bargained-for improvements. These damages are recoverable even if the public entity has not actually completed the improvements [City of Merced v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (2005) 126 Cal.App.4th 1316, 1323, 24 Cal.Rptr.3d 788].

Defenses or limitations on recovery include the offset of any balance due to the contractor under the contract against the plaintiff's claim against the surety [see MB 300I.75], and exoneration [see MB 300I.72]. Failure of a condition precedent can also be a defense [Civ. Code §§ 2806, 1434-1442]. Finally, if the contractor has a defense so that its default was excused [Civ. Code §§ 1511-1515], this defense inures to the surety's benefit [Civ. Code § 2809; Powers Regulator Co. v. Seaboard Surety Co. (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 338, 345, 22 Cal.Rptr. 373].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.11

MB 300I.11 Action by Subcontractor or Materialman Against Prime Contractor's Performance Bond Surety as Beneficiary of That Bond

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That a performance bond for the project was executed by _____ [contractor] and _____ [surety] and was delivered to _____ [owner];
2. That the bond provided _____ [appropriate language from bond];
3. That Plaintiff provided labor, services, equipment, or materials for the project to the contractor;
4. That Plaintiff has not been paid for all of the labor, services, equipment, or materials that [he/she/it] provided; and
5. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Ryan v. Shannahan (1930) 209 Cal. 98, 102-104, 285 P. 1045 ; C.O. Sparks, Inc. v. Pac. Coast Paving Co. (1958) 159 Cal.App.2d 513, 516-518, 324 P.2d 293 ; Crane Co. v. Borwick Trenching Corp. Ltd. (1934) 138 Cal.App. 319, 322-324, 32 P.2d 387 ; Pacific States Co. v. U.S. Fidelity & G. Co. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 691, 694-695, 293 P. 812 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a subcontractor or materialman seeks to recover from the prime contractor's performance bond surety on the theory that the subcontractor or materialman is a beneficiary of that bond. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

Paragraph 2 should quote or paraphrase the language from the bond or contract that covers the facts of the case.

Additional instructions will be required if there are issues concerning construction of the language of the bond or the contract or both together. This is especially so if there is an apparent conflict between the documents, or if the liability on the bond requires the court to imply some language.

This instruction can be used by a sub-subcontractor or materialman against a subcontractor's performance bond. However, for a complaint by an owner, prime contractor, or surety claimant, Paragraphs 3 and 4 will have to be modified to set forth their particular relationships to the bond in question.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Review Both Bond and Case Law: The specific terms of the performance bond, and the cases discussed below, will have to be carefully reviewed to determine whether this remedy is even available to a subcontractor. Presumably, though, this legal topic will have already been addressed by the judge. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Interpretation of Bond: Who Benefits?

A performance bond is usually required by the obligee (i.e., the one protected by the bond, usually the owner) to protect its own interests, but sometimes that bond is construed as a payment bond for the benefit of unpaid subcontractors and materialmen [Ryan v. Shannahan (1930) 209 Cal. 98, 102-104, 285 P. 1045]. The construction of the bond depends on the intention of the parties as expressed in the language of the bond and the related contract [French v. Farmer (1918) 178 Cal. 218, 221-222, 172 P. 1102 ; Crane Co. v. Borwick Trenching Corp., Ltd. (1934) 138 Cal.App. 319, 322-324, 32 P.2d 387].

To prevent courts from construing the bond as a payment bond, the surety may insert language that specifically limits any rights or causes of action on the bond to the obligee [Hopper Bros. Quarries v. Merchants Mutual Bond. Co. (8th Cir. 1958) 255 F.2d 147, 148 ; C.O. Sparks, Inc. v. Pac. Coast Paving Co. (1958) 159 Cal.App.2d 513, 518, 324 P.2d 293 ; Luke v. Southern Surety Co. (1930) 104 Cal.App. 727, 729, 286 P. 490].

If both a performance and a payment bond were provided, then the courts have construed the performance bond as being solely for the benefit of the named obligee, with the subcontractors and materialmen being allowed only their remedy on the payment bond [Summerbell v. Weller (1930) 110 Cal.App. 406, 407-408, 294 P. 414]. However, when the payment bond was provided by a different principal than the one that provided the performance bond, some courts have construed that performance bond as an additional payment bond [Pacific States Co. v. U.S. Fidelity & G. Co. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 691, 694-695, 293 P. 812 ; contra, Glens Falls Indemnity Co. v. American Seating Co. (9th Cir. 1957) 248 F.2d 846, 850].

[b] Interpretation of Bond: Who Is Liable?

The surety has been held liable when the language of the bond released the obligation of the surety only "if the Principal shall pay and fully satisfy all obligations for material, equipment, labor, taxes, insurance, and all other things required ..." [Gordy v. United Pacific Ins. Group (1966) 243 Cal.App.2d 445, 447, 52 Cal.Rptr. 438]. As a result of the bond being construed in light of the contract provision that it assures performance of [City of Sacramento v. Trans Pacific Industries, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 389, 402-403, 159 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; Callan v. Empire State Surety Co. (1912) 20

Cal.App. 483, 486, 129 P. 978], the surety also has been held liable when that contract expressly required payment of subcontractors and material suppliers [Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal.App.2d 565, 568, 52 Cal.Rptr. 533], and even when it required this payment only by implication [C. O. Sparks, Inc. v. Pac. Coast Paving Co. (1958) 159 Cal.App.2d 513, 517-518, 324 P.2d 293].

Liability has been found on a subcontractor's performance bond given to the prime contractor [Pacific States Co. v. U.S. Fidelity & G. Co. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 691, 692-695, 293 P. 812]. Liability has extended to sub-subcontractors [C.O. Sparks, Inc. v. Pac. Coast Paving Co. (1958) 159 Cal.App.2d 513, 516-518, 324 P.2d 293], to the owner who has paid off lien claimants [Callan v. Empire State Surety Co. (1912) 20 Cal.App. 483, 485, 129 P. 978], and to the prime contractor's payment bond surety that had paid off the subcontractor's materialmen [Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal.App.2d 565, 566-567, 52 Cal.Rptr. 533].

[c] Exoneration as Defense

Exoneration is a defense [Civ. Code §§ 2819-2825, 2839, 2845]. For an instruction and a comment on this defense and its limitations, see MB 300I.72.

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.12

MB 300I.12 Recovery Against Contractor's State License Bond Surety

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

1. That a contractor's bond was executed by _____ [surety] and filed with the registrar of contractors in connection with the issuance of the contractor's license to _____ [contractor].

[OR]

1. That _____ [contractor] deposited cash or securities with Defendant Registrar of Contracts in connection with the issuance of the contractor's license to _____ [contractor].

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

2. That while _____ [contractor] was acting in the capacity of a contractor, [he/she/it] willfully and deliberately _____ [violated the Contractors License Law or committed fraud in the execution or performance of a construction contract].

[OR]

2. That while _____ [contractor] was acting in the capacity of a contractor, [he/she/it] failed to pay Plaintiff wages Plaintiff had earned as an employee of _____ [contractor].

[OR]

2. That while _____ [contractor] was acting in the capacity of a contractor, [he/she/it] failed to make all or part of any employer payments to _____ [express trust fund] for employees of _____ [contractor] covered by the collective bargaining agreement or other employment agreement that established _____ [express trust fund].

3. That this conduct by _____ [contractor] caused damages to Plaintiff.

4. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5-7071.12, 7140; Denver D. Darling, Inc. v. Controlled Environments Construction, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1221, 1243, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213 ; Brown v. Surety Co. of Pacific (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 614, 619-622, 176 Cal.Rptr. 143 ; Boliver v. Surety Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d Supp. 22, 30-33, 140 Cal.Rptr. 259 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party seeks to recover against a contractor's state license bond surety. If the suit is against the Registrar of Contractors to recover against the deposit of cash or securities, the second Paragraph 1 should be used. If the suit is by an employee for wages [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(c), 7071.10(d)], the second Paragraph 2 should be used. If the suit is by an express trust fund for employer payments [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(d), 7071.10(e)], the third Paragraph 2 should be used. If suit is brought against both the firm's bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6] and the bond of the responsible managing officer or employee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9], this instruction should be used twice, once for each bond.

If the plaintiff is a homeowner who contracted for a home improvement on his or her own personal family residence, then the phrase "willfully and deliberately" should be omitted from Paragraph 2.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must also be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

This instruction must be supplemented with quotations of the provisions of the Contractors' State License Law that plaintiff claims were violated. The provisions most often involved are Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7107, 7108, 7108.5, 7109, 7109.5, 7110, 7110.1, 7113, 7114, 7115, 7116, 7119, 7120, 7159, 7160, and 7161.

There is an issue as to whether state remedies for the collection of benefits under plans covered by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.] are preempted by that Act. The California Supreme Court held that any state law remedy for enforcing an employer's contribution to an ERISA plan, including mechanics lien rights given by Civ. Code § 3111, was preempted by ERISA [Carpenters So. Cal. Admin. Corp. v. El Capitan Development Co. (1991) 53 Cal.3d 1041, 1049-1054, 282 Cal.Rptr. 277, 811 P.2d 296]. A subsequent California appeals court applied preemption specifically to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5(d) [see Carpenters Health & Welfare Trust Fund v. Surety Co. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 1406, 1409, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 661]. The California Legislature amended Civ. Code § 3111 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5 in 1999 to attempt to avoid preemption, based on principles set forth in various United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit cases [see Cal. Div. of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Dillingham Construction (1997) 519 U.S. 316, 117 S.Ct. 832, 136 L.Ed.2d 791 ; New York State Conference of Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans et al. v. Travelers (1995) 514 U.S. 645, 115 S.Ct. 1671, 131 L.Ed.2d 695 ; WSB Electric, Inc. v. Curry (9th Cir. 1996) 88 F.3d 788 ; Operating Engineers Health & Welfare v. JWJ Contracting Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 671].

[3] Comment

[a] Bond as License Requirement; Acting in Capacity of Contractor

The Contractor's State License Board requires as a condition precedent to the issuance, reinstatement, reactivation, renewal, or continued maintenance of a license that the applicant or licensee file or have on file a contractor's bond in the sum of $12,500 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6(a)]. The bond requirement does not apply to a the holder of a license that has been inactivated on the board's official records during the period the license is inactive [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6(c)].

In general, the aggregate liability of a surety on claims brought against the contractor's bond is limited to $7,500. The bond proceeds in excess of that amount must be reserved exclusively for the claims of a homeowner contracting for home improvement on his or her personal family residence damaged as a result of a violation of the Licensing Law. In fact, such a claimant is entitled to claim and recover the full measure of the bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5(a)].

The amount of the bond may be substantially higher if the contractor has been disciplined previously [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.6(d), 7071.8(b)]. Instead of posting a bond, the licensee or applicant may give a deposit of cash or securities in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.12(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.710-995.770].

The bond remains in force for the entire term of the license for which it was given and any renewal terms, or until canceled by the surety [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.440]. A contractor's license expires two years from the last day of the month it is issued or two years from the date the renewed license last expired [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7140].

The licensee must have been acting in the capacity of a contractor before the license bond can be subjected to liability [Brown v. Surety Co. of Pacific (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 614, 619-622, 176 Cal.Rptr. 143].

[b] Beneficiaries of Bond

The bond is for the benefit of all of the following:

- Any homeowner contracting for a home improvement on his or her own personal family residence damaged as the result of a violation of the Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(a), 7071.10(a)];
- Any property owner contracting for construction of a single-family dwelling damaged as a result of a licensee's violation of the Contractors' State License Law; provided the dwelling was not intended for sale or offered for sale at the time the damages were incurred [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(b), 7071.10(b)];

- Any person damaged as the result of a willful and deliberate violation of the Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(c), 7071.10(c) ("willful and deliberate" language added in 1979, apparently to overturn Bailey-Sperber, Inc. v. Yosemite Ins. Co. (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 725, 729, 134 Cal.Rptr. 740)];
- Any person damaged by the licensee's fraud in the execution or performance of a construction contract [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(c), 7071.10(c)];
- An employee of the licensee not paid his or her wage [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(d), 7071.10(d)]; and
- Certain persons or entities, including express trust funds, to whom a portion of the compensation of an employee of a licensee is paid by agreement with that employee or agent of that employee [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5(e), 7071.10(e)].

Any of these people or entities may file suit against the surety on the bond [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.850].

[c] Distribution of Bond to Cover Claims

If the aggregate of all known claims exceeds the bond's penal sum, then it must be distributed pro rata [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(a)]. If there are two bonds, one for the firm [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6] and another for the responsible managing officer or employee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9], and liability exists under both, then the penal sums of both can be used to satisfy claims [Boliver v. Surety Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d Supp. 22, 34, 140 Cal.Rptr. 259].

[d] Attorneys' Fees

If the underlying construction contract had an attorneys' fees clause, plaintiff may be able to recover them in the suit on the contractor's license bond [Boliver v. Surety Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d Supp. 22, 30-33, 140 Cal.Rptr. 259].

[e] Exoneration

Exoneration is a defense [Civ. Code §§ 2819-2825, 2839, 2845; see MB 300I.72].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.13

MB 300I.13 Recovery by Contractor as Third Party Beneficiary of Owner's Other Contracts

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. That _____ [owner] and _____ [other party] entered into a contract, the full performance of which would have satisfied a duty owed by _____ [defendant, owner, or other party] to Plaintiff;
2. That Defendant breached the contract;
3. That this breach caused damages to Plaintiff; and
4. The nature and extent of the Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1559; COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 916, 919-920, 136 Cal.Rptr. 890 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff seeks to recover as a third party beneficiary of a contract to which he or she is not a party. Additional instructions may be required to define the "duty" owed by the defendant to the plaintiff in the particular case [see COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 916, 920-923, 136 Cal.Rptr. 890 (court reversed dismissal of contractor's complaint alleging that it was third party beneficiary of contract between public agency and engineering firm to provide plans and environmental impact report (EIR) for project on which plaintiff was general contractor; court held that since agency owed contractor duty not to hinder or delay latter's performance by failing to obtain necessary clearances for project, contract for engineering services and EIR was in part to discharge that duty to contractor, making contractor creditor beneficiary of contract for engineering services)]. Since the exclusive remedy for claims on construction loan funds are the mechanics' lien and stop notice statutes [Civ. Code § 3264], no third party beneficiary recovery is available to reach the funds [Sofias v. Bank of America (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 583, 586, 218 Cal.Rptr. 388].

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. In addition, the instruction defining "proximate cause" in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, must also be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, an instruction on this issue must also be given [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 350 ("Introduction to Contract Damages")].

This instruction can be adapted to other third party beneficiary situations, e.g., when a subcontractor is a beneficiary of the prime contract or when the owner contracted separately with the supplier of equipment or materials that the prime contractor was to install.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Expanding Sources of Recovery: Third party beneficiary principles may provide a creative means of expanding the sources of potential recovery, especially on troubled construction projects where payment and performance bonds are exhausted or otherwise unavailable. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Third Party Rights: Some jurors may question whether a "third party" has, or should have, any rights under this contract. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Contractor as Third-Party Beneficiary

Frequently, the owner will enter into separate contracts with an architect, engineer, or other consultant, and sometimes there will be several prime contracts. When performance of those other contracts will satisfy an actual, supposed, or asserted duty of the owner to the plaintiff, then the plaintiff can enforce that contract as a third party beneficiary [Civ. Code § 1559; COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 916, 919-920, 136 Cal.Rptr. 890].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.14

MB 300I.14 Breach of Express Warranty

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff alleges that Defendant made an express warranty that _____ [describe warranty, e.g., material and workmanship will meet certain performance standards or a particular component will be fit for a particular use or a particular component will be free of defects for a specified period of time].

For you to find Defendant liable for breach of an express warranty, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following facts:

- 1. Defendant made an affirmation of fact or a promise about the quality or characteristics of the _____ [describe construction project or particular component or portion of project];
- 2. Plaintiff relied on Defendant's affirmation of fact or promise;
- 3. The finished construction [does not/did not] conform to Defendant's affirmation of fact or promise;
- 4. Plaintiff suffered damages; and
- 5. The damage to Plaintiff was caused by Defendant's failure to construct the _____ [describe construction project] to conform to Defendant's affirmation of fact or promise.

In determining whether a statement or promise by Defendant was a warranty, you must consider that a statement that merely expresses an opinion, belief, judgment, or estimate is not a warranty.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The written contract contains the following guarantee: _____ [insert language from contract].

Authorities: Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 573, 580-582, 12 Cal.Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897 ; Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 492, 504-506, 512, 32 Cal.Rptr. 144 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the construction contract contains an express warranty or when it is alleged that the construction contract as supplemented by additional documents or parole evidence creates an express warranty. The admissibility of the parole evidence will be a question for the court. If there are contract formation questions, the instructions in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions, should be consulted. The optional language at the end of the instruction may be used when there is a guarantee written into the contract.

This instruction may be given concurrently with instructions on breach of implied warranty [see MB 300I.15], breach of contract [see MB 300I.06], failure to follow plans and specifications [see MB 300I.18], and indemnity.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Consider Motion for Summary Judgment: The dividing line between an "opinion, belief, judgment, or estimate" and an "affirmation of fact" can be blurry. Counsel may want to seek a legal ruling before trial by way of a motion for summary judgment. But nowadays at least some jurors will understand the concept of a "warranty." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Warranty Liability

In construction litigation, the essence of a warranty is a material promise or a material affirmation of fact by the builder from which a contractual or quasi-contractual obligation may be implied [Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 492, 504, 32 Cal.Rptr. 144]. Representations that merely express an opinion, belief, judgment, or estimate do not constitute a warranty [Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 492, 504, 32 Cal.Rptr. 144]. When the work is done according to plans and specifications drawn up by the owner's architect, a query by the owner as to the merits of specified materials is merely a request for an opinion, and the builder's reply does not constitute a warranty [Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 492, 504-505, 32 Cal.Rptr. 144].

In limited circumstances, the Commercial Code provisions on express warranty will apply to the construction of real property [see Com. Code § 2313 (affirmation of fact or promise made by seller to buyer, which relates to goods sold, creates express undertaking that goods will conform to affirmation or promise, and any description of goods that is part of basis of bargain creates express warranty that goods will conform to description); see also Ch. 3H, Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contract Instructions, MB 300H.145]. When the manufacturer of a one-ply roofing product sold that product as a roofing system to be installed under the supervision of the manufacturer's representative, the Nebraska Supreme Court held that the transaction was a sale of goods and was covered by the Uniform Commercial Code. The promises made in the roofing manufacturer's brochures and advertisements were therefore held to be express contractual warranties governed by Uniform Commercial Code § 2-313 (Com. Code § 2313) [Mennonite Deaconess

Home & Hospital, Inc. v. Gates Engineering Company (1985) 219 Neb. 303, 363 N.W.2d 155].

[b] Scope of Warranty and Proper Plaintiffs

A property owner is usually in privity of contract with the general contractor and will therefore generally proceed directly against the general contractor for breach of express warranty. The exact scope and duration of a contractor's warranty will be determined by reference to the individual contract documents. For example, the common standard form of the American Institute of Architects governing General Conditions of the Contract for Construction provides broadly that labor, materials, and equipment are all included within the terms of the general contractor's warranty [American Institute of Architects General Conditions of the Contract for Construction, Document A201 (1987 ed.), §§ 3.5.1, 1.1.3]. Under this warranty, the contractor warrants the quality of his work for one year following substantial completion of the work of improvement [American Institute of Architects General Conditions of the Contract for Construction, Document A201 (1987 ed.), § 12.2.2].

Under certain circumstances, the lack of privity between the property owner and the defendant will not defeat an action for breach of warranty. For example, a manufacturer of polyethylene pipe for use in radiant heating systems was held responsible for breach of warranty to a property owner by virtue of brochures and pamphlets distributed to the consuming public, even though the brochures were distributed to the property owner's engineer. The court held that a realistic view of the manufacturer's purpose in making its representations to those engaged in designing and installing radiant heating systems showed that its purpose was to influence engineers and general contractors to use and install its product, and that "[t]he person whose ultimate action was sought to be induced was the one for whom the construction would be done. In this case that person was the plaintiff" [Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 492, 513-514, 32 Cal.Rptr. 144].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.15

MB 300I.15 Breach of Implied Warranty in Sale of New Construction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that Defendant breached an implied warranty that _____ [describe work of improvement] was designed and constructed in a reasonably workmanlike manner. To prove this claim, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following facts:

- 1. Defendant is a [builder/seller/builder and seller] of new _____ [describe type of construction at issue];
- 2. Defendant sold _____ [describe work of improvement] to Plaintiff;
- 3. The _____ [describe work of improvement] was not designed and constructed in a reasonably workmanlike manner;
- 4. Plaintiff suffered damage; and
- 5. The damage to Plaintiff was caused by Defendant's failure to design and construct _____ [describe work of improvement] in a reasonably workmanlike manner.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The builder of new construction is generally held to have impliedly warranted that the completed structure was designed and constructed in a reasonably workmanlike manner. Under this implied warranty, the builder warrants that the finished construction, both in its workmanship and its materials, will be reasonably fit for its intended use. However, a builder of new construction who faithfully complies with plans and specifications supplied by the owner or developer is only held to an implied warranty of good workmanship. The builder does not impliedly warrant the adequacy of the plans and specifications to achieve a desired result.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when construction defects are discovered in new residential construction and the plaintiff is the original buyer. However, if the builder is in direct privity with the plaintiff, the specificity of any plans and specifications supplied by the owner must be evaluated to determine whether and to what extent an implied warranty exists. This instruction may be given concurrently with instructions on breach of express warranty [see MB 300I.14], breach of contract [see MB 300I.06], implied warranty of workmanship, failure to follow plans and specifications [see MB 300I.18], and failure to give reasonable notice of breach of warranty [see MB 300I.80]. This instruction presumes the existence of a contract.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

[3] Comment

Builders and sellers of new construction are held to an implied warranty that the completed structure is designed and constructed in a reasonably workmanlike manner [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88]. The builder or seller warrants that the finished product is fit for its intended use, both as to workmanship and materials [Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 573, 582, 360 P.2d 897]. Because the breach of implied warranty theory is derived from the California Commercial Code, the buyer must give notice to the builder or seller within a reasonable time after he or she discovers or should have discovered the breach of warranty [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88]. For discussion of this requirement and an instruction raising this requirement as a defense to a breach of warranty claim, see MB 300I.80.

Unlike actions for breach of an express warranty, actions for breach of an implied warranty are restricted to parties in privity with the seller or builder [Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 404, 419, 203 Cal.Rptr. 800 (nonsuit properly granted on remote buyer's implied warranty claim against original owner/builder due to lack of privity)]. In addition, a condominium association may maintain a cause of action based on an alleged breach of implied warranty for damage to common areas [Code Civ. Proc. § 383(a); Windham at Carmel Mountain Ranch Assn. v. Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1162, 1173, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 834]. However, a property owner may sue a subcontractor for breach of the implied warranty of fitness despite the apparent lack of privity because the owner is a third party beneficiary of the contract [Gilbert Financial Corp. v. Steelform Contracting Co. (1978) 82 Cal.App.3d 65, 69-71, 145 Cal.Rptr. 448]. For more on third party beneficiaries, see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 301 "Third Party Beneficiary," and Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, MB 300C.90.

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.16

MB 300I.16 Representation or Warranty of Subsurface Conditions by Public Agency

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff seeks to recover damages from _____ [public agency] for the breach of a warranty of subsurface conditions. Plaintiff alleges that during construction it found _____ [describe subsurface site condition], which was different from the description of conditions given to Plaintiff in the _____ [describe soils report or other representation of subsurface site condition]. Plaintiff alleges that because of this difference in subsurface conditions at the job site, [he/she/it] incurred extra costs in having to _____ [describe extra work].

For Plaintiff to recover for breach of warranty of subsurface conditions, Plaintiff must prove all of the following facts:

1. That _____ [public agency] made a representation of fact to Plaintiff about the _____ [describe subsurface condition at issue]. Plaintiff alleges that _____ [public agency] made the following representation about the site conditions: _____ [quote particular contract language from contract soils report or other document made available as basis for bids];
2. That Plaintiff relied on the representation of subsurface conditions;
3. That Plaintiff's reliance on _____ [public agency]'s representation was reasonable;
4. That _____ [public agency]'s misrepresentation of the subsurface condition caused Plaintiff damages; and

5. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The contract documents contain a disclaimer, which reads as follows: _____ [quote contract language that allegedly disclaims any representations of site condition].

In considering the above disclaimer, I will instruct you that if a public agency makes a positive and material representation about a subsurface condition presumably within the agency's knowledge and on which the plaintiff had a right to rely, then the agency has warranted that the condition is as represented despite a general provision in the contract requiring an onsite inspection by the contractor.

Authorities: Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 292, n.2, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; E. H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 792-793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in litigation between public works contractors and public agencies when the contract does not contain a differing site condition clause and the contractor claims that it has relied on incorrect information about site conditions provided by the public agency, causing the contractor to incur extra costs. Most public works contracts contain a contract clause or bid requirement that mandates job site investigation, a disclaimer of representations and warranties with regard to site inspections by the builder, or both. When the contract includes a general disclaimer, the optional clause should be used. If the contract contains a specific disclaimer, then this instruction should be supplemented or revised.

This instruction should generally be accompanied by contract interpretation instructions [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314- 320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions]. The instruction may also require accompanying instructions on implied warranty of accuracy of plans and specifications [see MB 300I.35] and nondisclosure of material facts [see MB 300I.34].

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Visual Aid: Some jurors may struggle with the meaning of "subsurface conditions." Thus, a visual aid seems advisable. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Common Disputes: Whenever there is a major problem on a substantial construction project, there is almost always a dispute over who had the obligation to inspect, or what standards were used, or where the standards came from. Notwithstanding contract disclaimers, these issues frequently end up in front of the jury as the optional paragraph of this instruction indicates. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment[a] Warranty Liability

When a public agency furnishes inaccurate project information, such as soils reports, as a basis for bids on a public works contract, it may generally be held liable for a breach of warranty [Souza & McCue Const. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal.2d 508, 510-511, 20 Cal.Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338 ; A. Teichert & Son, Inc. v. State of Cal. (1965) 238

Cal.App.2d 736, 755, 48 Cal.Rptr. 225, disapproved on other grounds, E.H. Morrill v. State of Cal. (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551], and a successful plaintiff may recover for the extra costs it incurred due to the misrepresented site conditions and, when applicable, for lost profits [Warner v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 301, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996]. The public agency may be held responsible only when its data is inaccurate. When the public agency submits accurate test data and the builder makes inaccurate deductions from that data, the builder bears the risk of loss [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 292, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996].

Disputed questions of fact as to whether the misrepresentation of site conditions was material, whether the plaintiff relied on it, and whether that reliance was reasonable, all are proper questions for submission to the jury [Warner v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 292-293, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996].

An alleged warranty or representation can be disclaimed [Wunderlich v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 777, 786, 56 Cal.Rptr. 473, 423 P.2d 545], and it is possible by express disclaimer to negate an erroneous statement about the subject matter of a contract [Fredrickson & Watson Constr. Co. v. Dept. Pub. Wks. (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 514, 518, 104 Cal.Rptr. 421 ; Roberts Distrib. Co. v. Kaye-Halbert Corp. (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 664, 669, 272 P.2d 886]. The facts of each case will determine whether or not a disclaimer is effective. Factors to consider include (1) the language of the representation, (2) the disclaimer's language, and (3) the location of the disclaimer in the contract in relation to the representation. For example, it is very easy to disclaim an alleged warranty or representation when the statements alleged to constitute the warranty are neither positive nor specific, and the builder's reliance on those statements is therefore unjustified [MacArthur Bros. Co. v. United States (1919) 258 U.S. 6, 9-13, 42 S.Ct. 225, 66 L.Ed. 433 ; Wunderlich v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 777, 786, 56 Cal.Rptr. 473, 423 P.2d 545].

Conversely, the responsibility of a governmental agency for positive representations it is deemed to have made through defective plans, specifications, or soils reports is not overcome by general clauses requiring the contractor to examine the site, to check up on the plans, and to assume responsibility for the work [United States v. Spearin (1918) 248 U.S. 132, 137, 39 S.Ct. 59, 63 L.Ed. 166 ; E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 792-793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551]. Accordingly, standard clauses in government contracts that require the bidder to "satisfy himself as to the character of surface and subsurface materials or obstacles to be encountered" cannot be relied on to overcome positive representations in the construction documents that those materials and obstacles do not exist [United States v. Spearin (1918) 248 U.S. 132, 137, 39 S.Ct. 59, 63 L.Ed. 166 ; Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 292, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 792-793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551].

Finally, one court found the absence of a cross-reference to "be of significance" in concluding that a warranty in the special conditions was not negated by a purported disclaimer located far away in the general conditions of the contract [E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 792-793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.17

MB 300I.17 Strict Liability for Construction Defects

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff alleges that [he/she/it] has suffered damage as a result of a defect in _____ [describe work of improvement]. Plaintiff seeks to recover these damages by using a legal theory known as strict liability.

To recover on [his/her/its] strict liability claim, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. Plaintiff took possession of Defendant's finished construction without making a substantial change in its finished condition;
- 2. Defendant knew that _____ [Plaintiff or the original buyer] would take possession of the finished construction without substantial inspection for defects in its design and construction;
- 3. Plaintiff used the finished construction in the manner that it was intended to be used;
- 4. Plaintiff was injured or suffered property damage, or the construction has suffered damage, as a result of a defect in Defendant's design or construction of the _____ [describe work of improvement]; and
- 5. Plaintiff was unaware that the defect made the finished construction unsafe or inappropriate for its intended use.

In determining whether _____ [describe work of improvement] is defective, the test is one of reasonableness and not perfection.

Authorities: Oliver v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 86, 259 Cal.Rptr. 160 ; Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 607, 614-615, 77 Cal.Rptr. 633 ; *Kriegler v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used only when the court makes a preliminary finding that the defendant is a mass producer of the defective real property and the plaintiff is a consumer who bought the mass-produced real property without inspection for defects. The instruction will therefore be used mostly in cases involving tract homes, planned unit developments, condominiums, and other common area or planned developments. This instruction is also limited to claims for personal injury, death, or property damage [see [3][c], below]. A negligence instruction will be necessary if the plaintiff seeks to recover economic damages.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][d], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Cases Brought By Consumers: This instruction will be useful in construction defect cases brought by consumers when there is no privity with the original builder or developer. But keep in mind that the idea of "strict liability" may seem "unfair" to some jurors. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Strict Liability; Other Theories of Recovery Distinguished

The doctrine of strict liability in tort is sometimes referred to as "enterprise liability," and it is defined in the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A as follows: "A person engaged in the business of selling or manufacturing a product is liable, notwithstanding the exercise of due care, for harm or damage caused by a defective condition present in the product when it leaves the hands of the seller or manufacturer, if the defective condition renders the product unreasonably dangerous or unsafe to the user or consumer."

Strict liability in tort is very different from liability based on warranties or negligence. Strict liability in tort attaches even if the seller of the real property has exercised all possible care in the manufacture and sale of the real property [Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 57, 63-64, 27 Cal.Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 ; Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 607, 610-611, 77 Cal.Rptr. 633 ; Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 224, 227, 74 Cal.Rptr. 749 ; Gutierrez v. Superior Court (1966) 243 Cal.App.2d 710, 726-727, 52 Cal.Rptr. 592]. The defendant therefore may not use contract or warranty defenses that might be available in an action for breach of warranty, such as a lack of privity of contract [Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 404, 423, 203 Cal.Rptr. 800], lack of notice of breach of warranty [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88], or lack of reliance [Southern California Edison v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1981) 120 Cal.App.3d 842, 855, 175 Cal.Rptr. 67].

[b] Strict Liability for Construction Defects

Buyers of real property may recover against the builders, sellers, and developers of that property for damages resulting from defects in structures [Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 224, 227-229, 74 Cal.Rptr. 749] or defects in the way the land itself was developed into lots [Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 607, 615, 77 Cal.Rptr. 633]. However, strict liability in tort for construction defects is limited to recovery by consumers [Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal.App.3d 211, 226-227, 229 Cal.Rptr. 719] against "mass producers" [Oliver v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 86, 259 Cal.Rptr. 160]. California law on strict liability in tort for construction defects stems from four principal decisions.

In Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. [Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 224, 74 Cal.Rptr. 749], the court of appeal held the theory of strict products liability applicable to a builder of mass-produced tract homes. The builder of the tract homes was held liable to a second purchaser of a tract home on the theory of strict liability, because the builder was a mass producer of housing, and therefore the doctrine of strict liability should apply just as it would apply to a mass producer of personal property [Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal.App.2d 224, 227, 74 Cal.Rptr. 749] .

In Avner v. Longridge Estates [Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 607, 77 Cal.Rptr. 633], the doctrine of strict liability was extended to a "manufacturer" of residential lots for sale to the public. The plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest bought the lot in question in 1960 and built a house on it. When part of the rear slope of the lot later subsided, the corporate landowner that manufactured the residential lots for sale to the public was held strictly liable in tort, even though the plaintiff was a remote purchaser from the original buyer [Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 607, 615, 77 Cal.Rptr. 633] .

In Del Mar Beach Club Owners Association v. Imperial Contracting Co. [Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting Co. (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 898, 176 Cal.Rptr. 886], the doctrine of strict liability in tort was extended to a defective condominium development, even though the complaint did not allege that the defendant was engaged in a continuous course of business in land development. The court found that the building and marketing of a condominium project with 192 units was a sufficient showing that the defendant was engaged in the business of developing and selling residential units and therefore subject to the doctrine of strict liability [Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting Co. (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 898, 911-912, 176 Cal.Rptr. 886] .

In Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. [Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal.App.3d 211, 229 Cal.Rptr. 719], the court held that strict liability is intended primarily for the benefit of consumers and that a construction lender for a condominium project is not entitled to invoke the strict liability theory of recovery [Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal.App.3d 211, 226-227, 229 Cal.Rptr. 719] .

Because the remedy of strict liability for construction defects is only available to protect the consumer against a builder or manufacturer that is a mass producer, recovery is not available against a builder who builds two homes [Oliver v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 86, 89, 259 Cal.Rptr. 160], or against a subcontractor hired by a developer. In the latter case, the consumer is already protected by the developer's strict liability for the negligence of its subcontractors [La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1131, 1144, 261 Cal.Rptr. 146] .

[c] Damages

In a strict liability claim for construction defects, a plaintiff is entitled to recover the damages for actual physical damage to the property and for personal injury and death [Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 404, 423, 203 Cal.Rptr. 800]. The courts have refrained from expanding strict tort liability in the construction context to encompass recovery for economic damages [see Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 404, 423, 203 Cal.Rptr. 800] .

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.18

MB 300I.18 Breach of Construction Contract for Failure to Follow Plans and Specifications

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that Defendant breached the contract between them by [his/her/its] failure to build _____ [describe project] in conformity with the _____ [describe plan, diagram, specifications, or other graphic representations incorporated into construction contract]. For you to find that Defendant did breach the contract in this manner, plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. Defendant agreed to build _____ [describe project] for Plaintiff in accordance with the _____ [plans/specifications/diagrams or specify other graphic representation] prepared by _____ [name of preparer];

2. The _____ [plans/specifications/diagrams or specify other graphic representation] required Defendant to _____ [describe disputed work];

3. Defendant failed to build _____ [describe project] in conformity with the _____ [plans/specifications/diagrams or specify other graphic representation];

4. Defendant's failure to follow the _____ [plans/specifications/diagrams or specify other graphic representation] caused the damages that Plaintiff complains of; and

5. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Kossler v. Palm Springs Developments, Ltd. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 88, 101, 161 Cal.Rptr. 423 ; Greenwald v. Royal Indemnity Co. (1952) 112 Cal.App.2d 183, 185, 245 P.2d 1115 .

[2] Use of Instructions

This instruction should be used when there is a disputed issue of fact over whether a builder has completed all of the work described in the plans and specifications incorporated in a construction contract. This issue will generally arise when a builder has a direct contract with a property owner or a developer has a contract to build and sell a completed work of improvement to conform to a particular plan. The instruction will generally be offered by the owner. In response, the builder will generally ask that it be accompanied by an instruction on substantial performance [see MB 300I.57; see also Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 312, "Substantial Performance," and Ch. 3D, Matthew Bender Performance and Breach of Contract Instructions, MB 300D.02].

If the failure to comply with plans and specifications results in damaged or defective work, the owner may also wish to use one (or more) of the instructions governing claims for deficiencies in design or construction [see MB 300I.17 (strict liability for construction defects)]. The instruction in MB 300I.101 on damages for failure to follow plans and specifications should be given with this instruction.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Be Clear in Closing: Some jurors will understand "plans and specifications," but some jurors will not. Be clear then in the closing. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Builder's Obligation

Most construction contracts obligate the builder to construct the work of improvement according to plans and specifications that are part of the construction documents [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)]. A builder satisfies its obligation if it builds the work of improvement substantially in accordance with the contract documents without any willful or material deviations or omissions [Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; U.S. Industries v. Vadnais (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 520, 526, 76 Cal.Rptr. 44]. Thus, if there are minor deviations from the plans or specifications or minor defects in the work that has been performed, the contractor is still deemed entitled to payment for the contract price, less an amount necessary to compensate the owner for imperfections in performance [Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; U.S. Industries v. Vadnais (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 520, 526, 76 Cal.Rptr. 44]. However, a builder may not demand full performance from an owner based on a contention that the builder has substantially performed [Kossler v. Palm Springs Developments, Ltd. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 88, 101-102, 161 Cal.Rptr. 423 (build-to-suit developer could not demand entire purchase price from buyer when work of improvement, although substantially completed, did not conform to the original plans and specifications)].

Whether or not a contractor has substantially performed its contract, however, an owner is entitled to recover damages from the contractor for failure to follow plans and specifications and can deduct these damages from the sums due the contractor [Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; U.S. Industries v. Vadnais (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 520, 526, 76 Cal.Rptr. 44]. The owner has the burden of proving that the contractor failed to follow the plans and specifications and there are defects in the work [Mitchell v. Preston (1950) 101 Cal.App.2d 205, 207, 225 P.2d 229]. On the other hand, the contractor has the burden of proving that its work constituted substantial performance notwithstanding deficiencies in the construction [Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co.

(1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 (contract 90 percent complete); Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 197 P. 105 (contract 90 percent complete)].

Generally, when the contractor has substantially performed its contract obligations but there are deviations, omissions, and defects in the completed construction, the owner is entitled to costs of correction [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 197 P. 105 ; Greenwald v. Royal Indemnity Co. (1952) 112 Cal.App.2d 183, 245 P.2d 1115], unless the deviations from the contract plans and specifications cannot be corrected without causing unreasonable economic waste, in which case the owner is entitled to damages for the reduction in the value of the improvements resulting from the deviations [Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 350, 358-362, 366, 330 P.2d 817].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Substantial Performance: Most of the time the factual disputes will focus on whether the builder has "substantially" performed. Even then, the owner will usually be entitled to the costs of correction. By Ronald Oster

PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.19

MB 300I.19 Recovery of Liquidated Damages From Supplier Causing Delay

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant was a supplier of _____ [describe product or material] to Plaintiff. Plaintiff was under a contract with [the owner/the general contractor] requiring the completion of _____ [specify work to be completed] _____ [specify time limits, e.g., by _____, (date) or within _____ weeks of the start of construction]. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant negligently failed to supply _____ [describe product or material] in a timely manner, which caused Plaintiff to fail to complete its contract within the required time, resulting in the assessment of [delay damages/contract damages/liquidated damages] against Plaintiff by [the owner/the general contractor].

To recover on this claim, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- (1) Defendant knew of the contract between Plaintiff and the [owner/general contractor];
- (2) Defendant's conduct was negligent;
- (3) It was foreseeable that Defendant's negligent conduct would cause a delay in the general contract's completion, which would be a breach of the contract between Plaintiff and the [owner/general contractor];
- (4) The contract between Plaintiff and the [owner/general contractor] was actually disrupted by delay;
- (5) The delay resulted from Defendant's conduct; and

(6) Plaintiff was damaged by [delay damages/contract damages/liquidated damages] that were imposed because of this delay.

Air Dynamics, Inc.* (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 418, 423, 161 Cal.Rptr. 463.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a general contractor has been assessed liquidated damages for a delay that was allegedly caused by the negligence of a supplier. A general negligence instruction should be given with this instruction. This instruction may also be given concurrently with instructions on breach of contract [see Ch. 3 California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 303, and MB 300I.06, MB 300I.30-MB 300I.37; see also Ch. 3D, Matthew Bender Performance and Breach of Contract Instructions], comparative negligence, and specific negligence standards applicable to suppliers of products and equipment to a construction project.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With Terms: This is a complicated instruction, involving multiple parties, and will have to be carefully explained in closing. Avoid using the term "liquidated damages," which will mean nothing to the jury. Use the term "delay damages" or "contract damages" or similar terms. Note, however, that such damages are presumably mentioned in the contract--take advantage of that. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Inducing Breach of Contract

The tort of inducing a breach of contract has expanded to permit liability even when the defendant does not induce a breach of contract, but simply makes the plaintiff's performance of the contract more expensive or burdensome [Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 224, 232, 11 Cal.Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465] or interferes with the formation of a prospective economic relationship [Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal.3d 815, 826-827, 122 Cal.Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865, disapproved on other grounds, Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 n.5, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740].

In Chameleon Engineering Corp. v. Air Dynamics, Inc. [Chameleon Engineering Corp. v. Air Dynamics, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 418, 161 Cal.Rptr. 463], a California court of appeal held that a supplier to a subcontractor of a general contractor who has entered into a construction contract requiring the completion of the work of construction within a specified time, may be held liable in tort for liquidated damages assessed against the general contractor when the supplier negligently fails to supply essential components necessary to the timely completion of the contract. The general contractor's cause of action is one for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage [Chameleon Engineering Corp. v. Air Dynamics, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 418, 420, 161 Cal.Rptr. 463].

Recovery for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is available only when a duty of care was reasonably owed and breached [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 808, 157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60]. The existence of a duty of care depends on the foreseeability of the injury and the nexus between the defendant's conduct and the plaintiff's injury [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 808, 157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60]. Determination of whether a duty of care is owed requires an analysis of all of the following six factors [Christensen v.

Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal.3d 868, 891, 2 Cal.Rptr.2d 79, 820 P.2d 181 ; J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 808, 157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 ; Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal.2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 ; Chameleon Engineering Corp. v. Air Dynamics, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 418, 422-423, 161 Cal.Rptr. 463]:

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff;
- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff;
- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury;
- The closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered;
- The moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct; and
- The policy of preventing future harm.

The tort of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is not limited to situations in which the plaintiff and the defendant have contractual privity, and it may be used by a general contractor against a subcontractor's supplier [Chameleon Engineering Corp. v. Air Dynamics, Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 418, 422-423, 161 Cal.Rptr. 463].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART A. BURDEN OF PROOF INSTRUCTIONS

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.20

MB 300I.20 Recovery of Damages From Builder for Damages Resulting From Construction Defects in New Residence Sold on or After January 1, 2003

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff alleges that [he/she] has suffered damage as a result of [a] construction defect[s] in [his/her] residence. To recover on [his/her] claim, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

1. Plaintiff's residence at _____ [address of plaintiff's residence] was sold by Defendant as a new home on or after January 1, 2003.

2. Plaintiff's residence fails to meet the statutory construction standard(s) prescribed by _____ [cite relevant standard (see Civ. Code § 896)] in that _____ [describe specific defect, e.g., the foundation contains significant cracks, which has caused significant vertical displacement of the structure].

3. The failure to meet the statutory construction standard arises out of, pertains to, or is related to, the original construction of Plaintiff's residence by Defendant.

4. Before filing this action for damages, Plaintiff provided Defendant with a written notice of claim that the construction of Plaintiff's residence was in violation of _____ [cite relevant standard (Civ. Code § 896)], and the parties attempted, without success, to resolve the problem in accordance with Business and Professions Code Sections 910 through 938 .

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 910, 938, 941(e).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a new residence, sold on or after January 1, 2003, does not meet one or more of the construction standards prescribed by Civ. Code §§ 896, 897.

A damages instruction must be given with this instruction [see MB 300I.110]. If relevant, an instruction on available statutory affirmative defenses may also be required [see MB 300I.82].

[3] Comment

[a] Actions for Defective Construction in New Residences Sold on or After January 1, 2003--Overview and Applicability

In accordance with Division 2, Part 2, Title 7 of the Civil Code, "Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects" [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.], any action against a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938]. The action must be preceded by a mandatory pre-litigation procedure, which provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all pursuant to statutory time frames [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938].

At least in the case of construction defect situations involving new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, the Legislature effectively rendered inapplicable the effects of a decision in which the Supreme Court held, among other things, that construction defects must cause actual damage before they can be actionable in tort [see Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 24 Cal.4th 627, 636-647, 101 Cal.Rptr.2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125].

The provisions, standards, rights, and obligations set forth in Title 7 are binding on all original purchasers and their successors-in-interest. Associations are considered to be original purchasers and have standing to enforce these provisions, standards, rights, and obligations [Civ. Code § 945].

Title 7 does not apply to any action by a claimant to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of a statute (other than Title 7) [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

Title 7 does not eliminate or abrogate the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, which requires plaintiff's counsel to furnish an Attorney's Certificate in an action against a design professional, for claims and damages that are not covered by the statutory scheme governing construction defect litigation [Civ. Code § 937].

[b] Mandatory Pre-Litigation Procedure

Before a homeowner can file an action seeking damages for alleged construction defects based on the statutory construction standards, he or she must initiate a process the main component of which is the builder's right to attempt to repair any alleged defects before the homeowner can initiate litigation [Civ. Code § 910]. The goal of the pre-litigation process is to afford the parties the opportunity for quick and fair resolution of construction defect claims without having to resort to lengthy and expensive litigation [see 2002 Stats., ch. 722, § 1(c)].

In lieu of this statutory process, a builder may provide, by contract, for its own non-adversarial procedure. If the builder does so, however, and the contractual procedure either fails to resolve the construction defects or is subsequently found to be unenforceable, the builder may not then require adherence with the statutory procedure [Civ. Code § 914(a)].

If the builder fails to comply with the requirements of a non-adversarial procedure or elects not to go through with such a procedure, the homeowner is released from the obligation to participate in the procedure and may proceed to file an action to resolve the alleged construction defects [Civ. Code § 915].

[c] Claimant's Cause of Action; Burden of Proof

To state a cause of action for damages resulting from a violation of the statutory construction standards, a homeowner need only demonstrate, in accordance with the applicable evidentiary standard, that the home does not meet the applicable standard, subject to specified statutory affirmative defenses [see Civ. Code § 945.5; see also [e], below]. No further showing of causation or damages is required to meet the burden of proof regarding a violation of the statutory construction standards, provided that the violation arises out of, pertains to, or is related to, the original construction [Civ. Code § 942].

No other cause of action for a claim for construction defects covered by Title 7 is allowed. Title 7 does not apply to any action by a claimant to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of a statute other than Title 7 [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

[d] Damages

The homeowner is entitled to recover all of the following as damages in an action on a claim based on violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 944; see MB 300I.110]:

- The reasonable cost of repairing any violation of the statutory construction standards.
- The reasonable cost of repairing any damages caused by the repair efforts.
- The reasonable cost of repairing and rectifying any damages resulting from the home's failure to meet the standards.
- The reasonable cost of removing and replacing any improper repair by the builder.
- Reasonable relocation and storage expenses.
- Lost business income if the home was used as a principal place of business licensed to be operated from the home.
- Reasonable investigative costs for each established violation.
- All other costs or fees recoverable by contract or statute.

As to any claims involving a detached single-family home, the homeowner's right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the common law personal use exception [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

Damages awarded in an action by the claimant that was not brought under Title 7--for example, an action to enforce a contract or express contractual provision, or an action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of another statute--must be reduced by any amounts recovered for the same items in an action under Title 7 [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

[e] Affirmative Defenses

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if he or she can demonstrate that the claimed violation of the statutory construction standards was caused by any of the following [Civ. Code § 945.5(a)-(d); see MB 300I.81]:

- An unforeseen act of nature, defined as a weather condition, earthquake, or manmade event such as war, terrorism, or vandalism, in excess of the design criteria expressed by the applicable building codes, regulations, and ordinances in effect at the time of the original construction.
- A homeowner's unreasonable failure to minimize or prevent the claimed damages in a timely manner, including (1) the homeowner's failure to allow reasonable and timely access for inspections and repairs, and (2) the homeowner's failure to give timely notice to the builder after discovering a violation; but excluding damages due to the builder's untimely or inadequate response to the homeowner's claim.
- The failure of the homeowner or his or her agent, employee, subcontractor, independent contractor, or consultant to follow the builder's or manufacturer's recommendations, or commonly accepted homeowner maintenance obligations; provided the builder can show that the homeowner had written notice of these recommendations and that the recommendations were reasonable at the time they were issued.
- The homeowner's, his or her agent's, or an independent third party's alterations, ordinary wear and tear, misuse, abuse, or neglect, or by the structure's use for something other than its intended purpose.

Other affirmative defenses include establishing that [Civ. Code § 945.5(e)-(g)]:

- The applicable statute of limitations has expired.
- The builder has obtained a valid release for the particular violation claimed.
- The builder has successfully repaired the particular violation claimed.

All affirmative defenses are preserved as to any causes of action to which Title 7 does not apply [Civ. Code § 945.5(h)].

MB 300I.30 Extra Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

1. That Defendant required Plaintiff to provide labor, services, equipment, or materials of a character not required for the performance of the contract; and

a. That the labor, services, equipment, or materials were not contemplated by the parties at the time of contracting; or

b. That the labor, services, equipment, or materials was more work than was required by the contract;

2. That Plaintiff provided the labor, services, equipment, or materials;

3. That the provision of the labor, services, equipment, or materials was a legal cause of damages to Plaintiff; and

4. The nature and extent of those damages.

Authorities: C. F. Bolster Co. v. J. C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 151, 334 P.2d 247 ; Byson v. Los Angeles (1957) 149 Cal.App.2d 469, 473, 308 P.2d 765 ; Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A. J.C. Council (1954) 128

Cal.App.2d 676, 683, 276 P.2d 52 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a suit for breach of an express construction contract by requiring but not paying for extra work not required by the contract. If the action is on an implied contract for the extra work, instructions defining implied contracts will be required [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 305, and Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions].

Most construction contracts contain provisions for the issuance of change orders to cover extra work [see Pub. Contract Code § 10227; California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), § 4-1.03D]. Those provisions may attempt to restrict recovery for extra work [see MB 300I.53]. This instruction may have to be modified or supplemented to reflect the provisions of these contracts.

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300I.109 on damages for extra work.

The instruction may have to be supplemented with others explaining what work was required under the contract's terms.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Choose Terms Carefully: The wording of Paragraph 1 may be confusing. Instead of instructing the jury that the additional labor or materials were "of a character not required for the performance of the contract," it may be better to describe them as labor or materials that were "in addition to those required for performance of the contract." Or simply describe them as "extra" labor or materials. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

"Extra work" arises outside of the contract's terms. It is labor, services, equipment, or materials that were not required by the contract and that were not contemplated by the parties when the contract was executed [C. F. Bolster Co. v. J. C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 151, 334 P.2d 247 ; Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A. J.C. Council (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 676, 683, 276 P.2d 52].

A contractor or subcontractor can comply with demands that it do extra work and then sue either for (1) breach of the express contract [Byson v. Los Angeles (1957) 149 Cal.App.2d 469, 473, 308 P.2d 765], or (2) an implied contract for the extra work only [Benson Electric Co. v. Hale Bros. Associates, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 686, 697-698, 55 Cal.Rptr. 73].

[2] Use of Instruction

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.31

This instruction should be used when a contractor seeks to recover for breach of an express contract caused by the impact of such significant additions to, or deletions from, the contracted work that the nature of the agreement was changed. If the action is on an implied contract, instructions defining implied contracts will be required [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 305, and Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions].

Many construction contracts attempt to address change in the scope of the work situations. For example, Southern California Chapter of American Public Works Association and Southern California District Association of General Contractors of California Joint Cooperative Commission Standard Specifications for Public Works Construction (1982 edition), § 3-2.1, only permits change orders up to a limit, additive and deductive, of 25 percent of the contract price. Anything over that requires a separately negotiated supplemental agreement. These contract provisions are quite mechanical in their application, so they may or may not cover the particular situation, but if they do, this instruction may have to be modified to incorporate their provisions.

This instruction does not cover the issues that may arise from ordinary claims for extra work [see MB 300I.30], which may be pursued as an alternative theory of recovery.

The instruction may have to be supplemented with others explaining what work was required under the contract's terms.

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300I.108 on damages for changes in the scope of the work.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Changes to Contract: It may be easier for a jury to understand why "additions" to a contract justify payment of damages as opposed to "deletions" from the contract. If the fundamental nature of the contract has been altered by deletions (e.g., less profit, less opportunity, damage to reputation), this will have to be carefully explained in closing argument. However, any "change" may bother some jurors; so, depending on your perspective, exploit, or explain, that point carefully. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Although most construction contracts contain provisions that allow the owner to modify the work by issuing change orders [see MB 300I.30], that authority has limits [Freund v. United States (1922) 260 U.S. 60, 64-67, 43 S.Ct. 70, 67 L.Ed. 131]. That power does not permit the owner to (1) unduly increase the contract's cost [Valley Constr. Co. v. Calistoga (1946) 72 Cal.App.2d 839, 842, 165 P.2d 521], (2) abrogate or change the nature of the contract that the parties executed, or (3) defeat the object of the contract that is reasonably deducible from its terms [Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 79-80, 268 P.2d 12]. Such a significant deviation from the contract's original object is considered to be a change in the scope of the work. In the federal courts, the term "cardinal change" is frequently used to describe this phenomenon [Edward R. Marden Corporation v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1971) 442 F.2d 364, 370]. A change in the scope of the work occurs when the modifications, viewed against the background of the work described in the contract, either fail to be clearly directed to the achievement of a more satisfactory project or eliminate work that was integrally necessary to the project as a whole [Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 80, 268 P.2d 12].

A change in the scope of the work can consist of different or additional work [Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 396, 405-407, 55 Cal.Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 628, 640-641, 218 Cal.Rptr. 592 ; Daugherty Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 151, 156-158, 92 Cal.Rptr. 120] or deletions from the work [Hensler v.

The plaintiff can comply with the defendant's demands and then sue on the contract for the breach [Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 79-80, 268 P.2d 12]. The contractor can also treat the contract as abandoned, complete the project as requested by the owner, and recover on an implied contract for the extra work [C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 628, 640-641, 645-646, 218 Cal.Rptr. 592 (recovery allowed for reasonable value of services on quantum meruit basis); Daugherty Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 151, 158, 92 Cal.Rptr. 120]. Alternatively, the plaintiff can treat the contract as abandoned, cease work altogether, and sue for the work done to date [Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 396, 401-407, 55 Cal.Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713].

PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.32

MB 300I.32 Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

- 1. That in every contract there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; and
 - a. That Defendant had a duty to refrain from doing anything that would interfere with the rights of Plaintiff to receive the benefits of the contract; or
 - b. That Defendant had a duty to refrain from doing anything that would render the performance by Plaintiff impossible;
- 2. That Defendant had a duty to do everything that the contract presupposes that it would do to accomplish the contract's purpose;
- 3. That the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing was the legal cause of the damages to Plaintiff; and
- 4. The nature and extent of those damages.

Authorities: Zurn Engineers v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 798, 833, 138 Cal.Rptr. 478, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 985 ; Berkeley Lawn Bowling Club v. City of Berkeley (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 280, 286-287, 116 Cal.Rptr. 762 ; Steinmeyer v. Warner Cons. Corp. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 515, 519, 116 Cal.Rptr. 57 ; Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal.App.2d 405, 417, 5 Cal.Rptr. 367 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one party to a contract contends that conduct of another party to that contract amounted to a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the contract and therefore was a breach of the contract. It may have to be supplemented with other instructions explaining what rights the contract gave or what it presupposed the parties would do.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care Explaining Implied Covenant: The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is a legal concept that is not understood by many lawyers and judges. Hence, be careful and "slow" in explaining this concept. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plaintiff's Burden of Proof: The first two paragraphs of this instruction are a statement of existing law. Accordingly, plaintiff should not be required to "prove" these elements as part of its burden of proof. The third paragraph should probably be divided into two separate elements--breach and causation--as independent elements of plaintiff's burden of proof. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Every contract contains an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. This means that neither party will do anything that would have the effect of destroying or injuring the right of the other to receive the fruits of the contract [Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1371, 1393, 272 Cal.Rptr. 387 ; Berkeley Lawn Bowling Club v. City of Berkeley (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 280, 286-287, 116 Cal.Rptr. 762]. That covenant not only imposes on each contracting party the duty to refrain from doing anything that would render the contract's performance impossible by any act of each party, but also the duty to do everything that the contract presupposes that the party will do to accomplish its purpose [Berkeley Lawn Bowling Club v. City of Berkeley (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 280, 286-287, 116 Cal.Rptr. 762 ; Steinmeyer v. Warner Cons. Corp. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 515, 519, 116 Cal.Rptr. 57 ; Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal.App.2d 405, 417, 5 Cal.Rptr. 367]. The covenant can be breached when the contract confers on one party a discretionary power affecting the rights of the other party, and that power is not exercised in good faith and in accordance with fair dealing [Kendall v. Ernest Pestana, Inc. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 488, 500, 220 Cal.Rptr. 818 ; Cal. Lettuce Growers v. Union Sugar Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 474, 484, 289 P.2d 785].

The covenant is also implied into public works construction contracts [Zurn Engineers v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 798, 833, 138 Cal.Rptr. 478].

The covenant is implied to the extent that there are no express covenants to the contrary [Kenworthy v. State of California (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 378, 401, 46 Cal.Rptr. 396]. Further, the covenant supplements the express covenants of the contract to prevent one party from acts or omissions which, while not a breach of the express covenants, frustrate the other party from obtaining the benefits that it should under the contract, thereby giving rise to a breach of contract [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 654, 683-684, 689-690, 254 Cal.Rptr. 211 ; Racine & Laramie, Ltd., Inc. v. Cal. Dept. of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 1026, 1031-1032, 14 Cal.Rptr.2d 335].

Enforcement of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing depends on the contractual purposes [Love v. Fire Ins. Exchange (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1136, 1147, 1153, 271 Cal.Rptr. 246].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.33

MB 300I.33 Prevention of Performance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant prevented or hindered Plaintiff's performance of the contract;
- 2. That the prevention of performance or hindering of performance was the legal cause of damages to Plaintiff; and
- 3. The nature and extent of those damages.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Every building contract includes an implied promise that the contractor will be allowed to construct the building in accordance with the contract's terms without interference by the owner and that [he/she/it] will be given sufficient possession of the premises to enable [him/her/it] to carry on the construction and complete the work that [he/she/it] contracted to do. If the owner refuses to allow the contractor to have the necessary possession of the premises, then this is a breach of the contract by the owner, and the contractor has the right to cease performance of the contract.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1511, 1512, 1655, 1656; Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 613, 220 P.2d 729 ;

Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 394-395, 199 P. 767 ; Kenworthy v. State of California (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 378, 383-384, 46 Cal.Rptr. 396 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party seeks to recover for the acts and omissions of the other party that prevented or hindered the contract's performance and therefore breached the contract. If the action is on an implied contract, instructions defining implied contracts will be required [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 305, and Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions].

The optional paragraph may be used when the contractor claims that the owner has physically impeded the contractor's access to the job site. This option may, for example, be offered by the contractor as a defense to claims of wrongful abandonment of construction or as a defense to claims for damages resulting from a delay in the project's completion [see MB 300I.107 (damages for completion of abandoned project)].

Owners frequently try to avoid the application of this rule through specific contract language [see Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 678-682, 321 P.2d 753 ; Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 82-83, 268 P.2d 12]. If these situations arise, additional instructions will be required, and the optional paragraph will have to be revised, as it assumes that there are no express covenants to the contrary [see [3], below, for discussion of the effect of express covenant to the contrary].

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

[3] Comment

In every construction contract that contains no express covenant to the contrary, there is an implied covenant to the effect that the contractor will be permitted to proceed with the work without interference by the owner and will be given such possession of the premises as is necessary to do the work [Civ. Code §§ 1655, 1656; Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 613, 220 P.2d 729 ; Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 395, 199 P. 767]. This covenant also is implied in subcontracts [Johnson v. de Waard (1931) 113 Cal.App. 417, 420-421, 298 P. 92]. It is an aspect of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in all contracts [Kenworthy v. State of California (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 378, 383-384, 46 Cal.Rptr. 396 ; see MB 300I.32].

A breach of this covenant can either excuse further performance by plaintiff [Civ. Code § 1511] or allow the plaintiff to proceed and recover for the extra work on a theory of breach of contract [Civ. Code § 1512; Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 30, 134 P. 989]. Alternatively, the plaintiff can recover for what was done before work was stopped, or for extra work done to complete its performance, on an implied contract theory [Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 394-395, 199 P. 767]. If a property owner forbids a contractor to enter the premises, this denial of access is a sufficient breach of the covenant to excuse performance of the construction contract and also to constitute a breach or anticipatory breach of the contract [Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 613, 220 P.2d 729].

A variation on the theme of this doctrine is the implied covenant that the owner will provide all easements, permits, environmental impact reports, and other documentation that is reasonably required for the project and that the contract does not expressly require the contractor to provide [COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 916, 920-922, 136 Cal.Rptr. 890].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.34

MB 300I.34 Nondisclosure of Material Facts

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant made representations to Plaintiff concerning the project; and
 - a. Defendant failed to disclose facts that materially qualified the facts that were disclosed;
 - b. Defendant failed to disclose other material facts, the absence of which made the facts disclosed likely to mislead plaintiff;
 - c. Defendant failed to disclose other material facts that were known or accessible only to Defendant, and that Defendant knew were not known by Plaintiff, nor reasonably discoverable by Plaintiff; or
 - d. Defendant failed to disclose other material facts and actively concealed those facts from Plaintiff;
- 2. That Plaintiff relied on the representations made by Defendant;
- 3. That the lack of the other facts was a proximate cause of the damages to Plaintiff; and
- 4. The nature and extent of those damages.

Authorities: Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 294, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1131, 1150, 261 Cal.Rptr. 146 ; Welch v. State of California (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 546, 555-557, 188 Cal.Rptr. 726 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a contractor claims that the contract was breached by the other party's failure to disclose material facts about the project.

Owners frequently try to avoid the application of this theory by disclaimers concerning the information given. Sometimes those disclaimers work [Wunderlich v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 777, 785-787, 56 Cal.Rptr. 473, 423 P.2d 545], but more often they do not [E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 791-793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551 ; Welch v. State of California (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 546, 551, 188 Cal.Rptr. 726]. In any event, if there is a disclaimer, it may have to be covered in another instruction.

This instruction may have to be supplemented with others that explain what kinds of facts may be considered material in the context of the particular case [see Welch v. State of California (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 546, 558, 188 Cal.Rptr. 726]. In many circumstances that will also require other instructions explaining what work was within the terms of the contract or how to interpret those terms; these can be fact questions [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 293, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996].

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With Terms: This instruction sets forth the general requirements to establish fraud, but the same facts can establish breach of contract. Many jurors will need to be "educated" about what is a "material" fact. In addition, in other instructions the term "material facts" is frequently replaced with "important facts" and the term "proximate cause" is replaced with "legal cause" or "substantial factor." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

This instruction comes from the statement of what constitutes a nondisclosure of material facts in Warner Construction Corp. v. City of Los Angeles [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 294, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; see also La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1131, 1150, 261 Cal.Rptr. 146]. The plaintiff does not need to prove active and intentional concealment. Mere failure to disclose a fact by a defendant who gives other facts that are likely to mislead for want of communication of the nondisclosed fact is actionable as a breach of contract [Welch v. State of California (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 546, 555-557, 188 Cal.Rptr. 726 ; Gogo v. L.A. etc. Flood Control Dist. (1941) 45 Cal.App.2d 334, 341-342, 114 P.2d 65].

Even if the nondisclosure is fraudulent, it can still be pursued as a breach of contract, rather than a tort [Souza & McCue Const. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal.2d 508, 510-511, 20 Cal.Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338].

Although this theory is most frequently applied on public works projects because public entities cannot be sued for fraud, it is equally applicable to private works [Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 396, 404, 55 Cal.Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713] and by subcontractors against prime contractors [Healy v. Brewster (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 541, 550-551, 59 Cal.Rptr. 752].

PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.35

MB 300I.35 Implied Warranty of Accuracy of Plans and Specifications

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant provided Plaintiff with plans and specifications for the project;
- 2. That the plans and specifications were not full, complete, and/or accurate;
- 3. That Plaintiff relied on the plans and specifications;
- 4. That the lack of full, complete, and/or accurate plans and specifications was the legal cause of damages to Plaintiff; and
- 5. The nature and extent of those damages.

Authorities: Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 294, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 791, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551 ; Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 396, 404, 55 Cal.Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; Souza & McCue Const. Co. v. Cardox Corp. (1961) 193 Cal.App.2d 661, 669, 14 Cal.Rptr. 523 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a contractor claims the contract was breached because the plans and specifications were not full, complete, or accurate enough for the contractor to use to do the work.

Owners frequently try to avoid the application of this theory by disclaimers concerning the information given, as discussed in MB 300I.34.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Avoid Using "Preponderance of the Evidence":

Many other instructions no longer use the term "preponderance of the evidence" because it is confusing to the jury. The alternate formulation is simply that plaintiff "has the burden of proving" the following facts. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

This implied warranty comes from several sources. Pub. Contract Code § 10120 requires state agencies to prepare full, complete, and accurate plans and specifications and estimates of cost, including such directions as will enable any competent mechanic or other builder to carry them out. Even without any specific statutory basis, the courts have had no difficulty implying this warranty just from the nature of the relationship. As early as 1918, it was well settled that the owner is responsible for the consequences of defects in the plans and specifications provided by it, even though the contract contains the usual clauses requiring builders to visit the site, to check the plans, and to inform themselves of the requirements of the work [United States v. Spearin (1918) 248 U.S. 132, 136, 39 S.Ct. 59, 63 L.Ed. 166].

The implied warranty is well established in California, both in public works contracts [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 294, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 791, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551 ; Souza & McCue Const. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal.2d 508, 510-511, 20 Cal.Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338] and in private works contracts [*Coleman Engineering Co. v. CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.36

MB 300I.36 Implied Covenant to Control Third Parties

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

- 1. That the contract could not be performed without the consent or cooperation of _____ [third party];
- 2. That Defendant agreed to obtain the consent or cooperation of _____ [third party]; and
- 3. That _____ [third party] failed to give its consent or cooperation even though that failure resulted from causes beyond the Defendant's control.

Authorities: Klauber v. San Diego St. Car Co. (1892) 95 Cal. 353, 357-358, 30 P. 555 ; Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 82-83, 268 P.2d 12 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a contractor contends that its contract was breached by the other party's failure to obtain the cooperation or consent of third parties necessary to proceed with the work.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Avoid Using "Preponderance of the Evidence":

Many other instructions no longer use the term "preponderance of the evidence" because it is confusing to the jury. The alternate formulation is simply that plaintiff "has the burden of proving" the following facts. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Analogy: Several jurors will think it unusual that a third party was involved with a contract's performance. Perhaps the use of an analogy is therefore advisable. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

A party that agrees to obtain the consent of a third party and is unable to do so is not relieved of liability because of its inability to obtain the required consent or cooperation; this is merely a subjective impossibility and does not excuse a failure to perform [see Klauber v. San Diego St. Car Co. (1892) 95 Cal. 353, 357-358, 30 P. 555 ; Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 83, 268 P.2d 12].

This doctrine applies to both private works and public works [Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 83-83, 268 P.2d 12]. It finds particular application when the owner has entered into multiple prime contracts and thereby has a duty to coordinate the work [Paccon, Inc. v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1968) 399 F.2d 162, 169-170], but the owner may successfully disclaim or shift this responsibility [Broadway Maintenance Corp. v. Rutgers (1982) 90 N.J. 253, 447 A.2d 906, 912]. It can also be employed against an owner who fails to obtain the easements [D.A. Parrish & Sons v. County Sanitation Dist. (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 406, 410-413, 344 P.2d 883 ; McGuire & Hester v. San Francisco (1952) 113 Cal.App.2d 186, 187-192, 247 P.2d 934], permits, environmental impact reports, or other documents reasonably required for the project to proceed in an orderly manner [see COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 916, 920-922, 136 Cal.Rptr. 890].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.37

MB 300I.37 Refusing to Approve "Or Equal" Item--Public Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all the facts necessary to establish all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff submitted a proper and timely request to substitute another material, product, thing, or service for one that was specified in the plans and specifications;
- 2. That the proposed substitute met the standards of construction and quality required by the plans and specifications;
- 3. That Defendant refused to approve that substitution;
- 4. That the refusal to approve the substitution was the legal cause of the damages to Plaintiff; and
- 5. The nature and extent of those damages.

Authorities: Pub. Contract Code § 3400(b); Argo Constr. Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1969) 271 Cal. App.2d 54, 57-59, 76 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a contractor contends that the public entity breached the contract by refusing to accept a proposed substitution item that was equal to the one specified.

It may be necessary to augment this instruction with others either quoting or paraphrasing the appropriate provisions in the contract governing the time and manner in which requests were to be made. However, it should be noted that such contract requirements can be waived by the public entity [Argo Constr. Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1969) 271 Cal.App.2d 54, 59, 76 Cal.Rptr. 361] and, if the contractor makes that contention, then any additional instructions should also cover waiver.

This instruction also may have to be supplemented with others explaining what standards of construction and quality are required by the plans and specifications. This is particularly so if the dispute is characterized by one side as involving aesthetics.

If the subcontract incorporated the plans and specifications from the prime contract, the subcontractor should be able to sue the prime contractor (who should then sue the public entity) when the subcontractor's proposed substitutions were improperly rejected. In that case, the reference in the instruction to the contract should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Avoid Using "Preponderance of the Evidence":

Many instructions no longer use the term "preponderance of the evidence" because it is confusing to the jury. The alternate formulation is simply that plaintiff "has the burden of proving" the following facts. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Address Substitution Issue: The "substitution" of something will strike some jurors as unfair. Address, or exploit, that concern. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

When a public works construction contract calls for a designated material, product, thing, or service by a specific brand or trade name, it must list at least two brand or trade names of comparable quality or utility followed by the words "or equal," so that the contractor can furnish any equal material, product, thing, or service [Pub. Contract Code § 3400(b); see Pub. Contract Code § 3400(a) (statutory intent)]. However, Pub. Contract Code § 3400(c) makes the following exceptions to this rule:

- To allow a field test or experiment to be made to determine the product's suitability for future use;
- To match other products in use on a particular public improvement either completed or in the course of completion;
- To obtain a necessary item that is available only from one source;
- To respond to an emergency declared by a local agency if the declaration is approved by a four fifths vote of the governing board of the local agency issuing the invitation for bid or request for proposals; or
- To respond to an emergency declared by the state, a state agency, or political subdivision of the state if the facts setting forth the reasons for the finding of the emergency are contained in the public records of the authority issuing the invitation for bid or request for proposals.

One example of contract language complying with the provision requiring that at least two brand or trade names be listed is in California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), § 6-1.05. This clause also sets forth typical requirements governing the time and manner in which requests for substitutions must be made.

The substitution need meet only the standards of construction and quality required by the plans and specifications; it cannot be rejected merely because it does not satisfy aesthetic requirements [see Argo Constr. Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1969) 271 Cal.App.2d 54, 57-59, 76 Cal.Rptr. 361].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.38

MB 300I.38 Failure to Make Timely Progress Payments

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

_____ [The builder] claims that _____ [the owner] breached the contract by failing to make progress payment[s] to _____ [the builder] in a timely manner after the progress payment[s] became due under the terms of the construction contract. The contract provides as follows:
_____ [insert progress payment provision(s)].

For you to find that _____ [the owner] breached the construction contract by failing to make [a] progress payment[s], _____ [the builder] must prove both of the following:

1.

_____ [describe contested progress payment(s)] to become due; and

2.

_____ [Owner] failed to make the progress payment[s] within a reasonable time after:

(a) The payment[s] became due under the contract's terms; and

(b)

_____ [Builder] made demand for the progress payment[s].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

A builder's obligation to construct a work of improvement and an owner's obligation to make progress payments are independent obligations, unless the contract provides otherwise. Because these are independent obligations, a slight deviation in the time or the amount of a progress payment does not give a builder the right to cease work under a construction contract. Instead, a builder has the right to cease work under a construction contract only when there has been a total or a material breach of the contract by the owner.

A failure to make timely progress payments is a material breach of contract only if there has been a substantial failure on the owner's part to comply with [his/her/its] payment obligation. A "substantial failure" would involve an unreasonable delay in payment, an absolute refusal to pay, or an imposition of new and burdensome conditions to the payment.

If you find that _____ [owner]'s failure to pay was a substantial breach, then you must also determine whether _____ [builder] was [himself/herself/itself] in default in any material regard. If _____ [builder] is also in default, then _____ [builder] may not cease performance unless [his/her/its] default had no relation to _____ [owner]'s obligation to make the progress payment[s].

Authorities: Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 295-298, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503 ; Kenworthy v. State of California (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 378, 383, 46 Cal.Rptr. 396 ; Asso. Lathing etc. Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 Cal.App.2d 40, 49, 286 P.2d 825 ; Smith v. Empire Sanitary Dist. (1954) 127 Cal.App.2d 63, 73, 273 P.2d 37 ; Karz v. Dept. of Professional & Vocational Standards (1936) 11 Cal.App.2d 554, 557, 54 P.2d 35 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by an owner or a builder when the builder alleges that the owner has breached the construction contract by failing to make timely payment of progress payments specified in the contract. This issue usually arises when the builder has abandoned the project or claims damages from late or unpaid progress payments, or when the failure to pay otherwise serves as an excuse for the builder's nonperformance or late performance of its own contract obligations. The instruction will generally be accompanied by instructions on contract interpretation [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314- 320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions], extra work [see MB 300I.30, MB 300I.53], excuse of performance [see Part C; see also Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 330- 337 (affirmative defenses), and Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions], owner's breach of contract [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 303], and waiver [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 336, and Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions, MB 300F.20-MB 300F.26]. This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300I.103 on damages for failure to make progress payments. In addition, a preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

The optional part of the instruction may be used when the builder has abandoned the construction project for nonpayment of progress payments or extras.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms to Jurors: The idea of a "progress payment" will seem unusual to some jurors. Further, the optional paragraph describes the obligation to continue working and the obligation to make progress payments as "independent obligations." This should be explained more fully in closing argument together with the rationale for the legal rule. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

When a contractor performs work under a written construction contract entitling the contractor to receive a progress payment or a voucher payment, the owner is obligated to make payment within a reasonable time of the contractor's demand, and the contractor is entitled to interest on the sums due from the date of the request for payment [Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 295, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503]. If the contract specifies a particular type of request for payment as a condition precedent to payment, then the contractor is not entitled to the progress payment until it complies with the contract by making a request in the required manner [Sinnott v. Schumacher (1919) 45 Cal.App. 46, 49-51, 187 P. 105]. When the construction contract calls for periodic payments such as progress payments, the owner or general contractor will have a reasonable time after receiving a proper request for progress payment to tender the progress payment [see S.F. Bridge Co. v. Dumbarton L. & I. Co. (1897) 119 Cal. 272, 275, 51 P. 335 ; Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 295, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503].

The payment of progress payments during construction is generally not a condition precedent to the continued performance of the work by the contractor. The contractor's obligation to build the improvements and the owner's obligation to pay for the improvements during the course of the construction are generally treated as independent covenants. Therefore, if the owner fails to make a progress payment when due, the contractor's recourse depends on whether the owner's default is "substantial" or "material." In each case whether the owner's default in payment is substantial or material is a question of fact [Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 297-298, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503 ; Asso. Lathing etc. Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 Cal.App.2d 40, 49, 286 P.2d 825 ; Smith v. Empire Sanitary Dist. (1954) 127 Cal.App.2d 63, 73, 273 P.2d 37].

The facts of each case must be evaluated individually to first determine what contract term was breached, and whether the breach was so substantial or material to justify rescission and recovery of the reasonable value of labor and materials furnished as opposed to authorizing a contractor to abandon work and sue for damages [American-Hawaiian Engineering & Constr. Co. v. Butler (1913) 165 Cal. 497, 516, 133 P. 280 ; Fairchild etc. Co. v. Southern etc. Co. (1910) 158 Cal. 264, 273-274, 110 P. 951 ; San Francisco Bridge Co. v. Dumbarton L. & I. Co. (1897) 119 Cal. 272, 275, 51 P. 335 ; Golden Gate Lumber Co. v. Sahrbacher (1894) 105 Cal. 114, 117-118, 38 P. 635 ; Porter v. Arrowhead Reservoir Co. (1893) 100 Cal. 500, 502, 35 P. 146 ; Cox v. McLaughlin (1888) 76 Cal. 60, 66, 67, 18 P. 100 ; Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 296, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503 ; see Smoll v. Webb (1942) 55 Cal.App.2d 456, 458, 130 P.2d 773 ; Big Boy D. Corp. Ltd. v. Etheridge (1941) 44 Cal.App.2d 114, 119, 111 P.2d 953]. The finder of fact must evaluate the facts of each case to determine whether the failure to make the progress payment was a substantial or material breach [Golden Gate Lumber Co. v. Sahrbacher (1894) 105 Cal. 114, 117-118, 38 P. 635 ; Porter v. Arrowhead Reservoir Co. (1893) 100 Cal. 500, 502, 35 P. 146 ; Barris v. Atlas Rock Co. (1931) 118 Cal.App. 606, 610, 5 P.2d 670]. If a nonpayment is of a minor nature and is not a substantial breach of the owner's duty to pay for the work of improvement, and not material in comparison to the nature of the contract and the contractor's obligations, the contractor must continue to perform its obligations under the contract and may not stop construction [Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 296-297, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503].

If the finder of fact determines the nonpayment was substantial or material, then the contractor has a right to rescind and sue for the reasonable value of services rendered. If the breach was not material, or the withholding of payment was justified because the contractor breached, then the owner may sue the contractor for breach of contract [Golden Gate Lumber Co. v. Sahrbacher (1894) 105 Cal. 114, 116, 38 P. 635]. The payment for extra work ordered by the owner is deemed an independent covenant. Therefore, the nonpayment by the owner for extra work ordered by the owner is not a sufficient cause for the contractor to stop work or rescind the contract. Instead, the contractor must continue the construction and seek the money due for the extras after the job is completed [Karz v. Dept. of Professional & Vocational Standards (1936) 11 Cal.App.2d 554, 557, 54 P.2d 35]. However, if the extra changes are extensive resulting from the conditions for the project being significantly different than anticipated, then nonpayment of extra charges may form the basis of a defense of mistake [Healy v. Brewster (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 541, 551, 59 Cal.Rptr. 752].

When there is a material breach by nonpayment or late payment of an installment, the builder must choose one of the following three courses of action [Oliver v. Campbell (1954) 43 Cal.2d 298, 302, 273 P.2d 15 ; Alder v. Drudis (1947) 30 Cal.2d 372, 381, 182 P.2d 195 ; B.C. Richter Contracting Co. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1964) 230 Cal.App.2d 491, 499, 41 Cal.Rptr. 98]:

- Treat the contract as rescinded and sue in quantum meruit;
- Keep the contract alive for the benefit of both parties; or
- Treat the repudiation as ending the contract and sue for the profits.

A builder who elects to rescind may sue in quantum meruit to recover the reasonable value of its services and materials even if the recovery exceeds the contract price [Oliver v. Campbell (1954) 43 Cal.2d 298, 304, 273 P.2d 15 ; Lessing v. Gibbons (1935) 6 Cal.App.2d 598, 607, 45 P.2d 258]. However, a party who elects to affirm the contract and complete performance is limited to contractual damages [House of Piercy (1919) 181 Cal. 247, 251, 183 P. 807 ; Ely v. Bottini (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 287, 296, 3 Cal.Rptr. 756]. Damages for breach by nonpayment include the unpaid contract price plus any additional expenses attributable to the breach [Civ. Code § 3300; Higgins v. Desert Braemar, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal.App.2d 744, 751, 33 Cal.Rptr. 527 ; Standard Iron Works v. Globe Jewelry & Loan, Inc. (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 108, 116, 330 P.2d 271]. Election of one remedy is a bar to invoking the other [Alder v. Drudis (1947) 30 Cal.2d 372, 383, 182 P.2d 195 ; Lenard v. Edmonds (1957) 151 Cal.App.2d 764, 768, 312 P.2d 308].

Construction contracts may contain clauses that either obligate a contractor to continue working despite a dispute over payment or disclaim such an obligation. Thus, a provision that required a subcontractor to finish its work despite any dispute or controversy on any matter with the contractor or with any other subcontractor, served as an advance waiver of any right to rescind after partial performance. This clause made a breach of contract action the subcontractor's exclusive remedy [B.C. Richter Contracting Co. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1964) 230 Cal.App.2d 491, 501, 41 Cal.Rptr. 98 ; Nelson v. Spence (1960) 182 Cal.App.2d 493, 497, 6 Cal.Rptr. 312]. The contractor was compelled to complete his contract and sue for damages [B.C. Richter Contracting Co. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1964) 230 Cal.App.2d 491, 501, 41 Cal.Rptr. 98 ; Canepa v. Sun Pacific, Inc. (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 706, 712-713, 272 P.2d 860].

Note that a contractor's abandonment of work may be excused by failure to make progress payments [S. F. Bridge Co. v. Dumbarton L. & I. Co. (1897) 119 Cal. 272, 274, 51 P. 335].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART B. TYPICAL SPECIFIC BREACHES OF THE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.39

MB 300I.39 Abandonment by Contractor of Construction Contract

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all facts necessary to establish that Defendant stopped work before the contract was substantially completed [Optional (See Use of Instruction) , unless Defendant proves that Plaintiff prevented the Defendant from completing (his/her/its) performance of the contract].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

In determining whether Defendant stopped work and breached the contract, you may not consider whether the cessation of work was willful and intentional, or due to physical or financial disabilities.

Authorities: Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 92, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; Benson v. Andrews (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 123, 134-135, 292 P.2d 39 ; Bacigalupi v. Phoenix Bldg. etc. Co. (1910) 14 Cal.App. 632, 637, 112 P. 892 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims that the builder abandoned the contract by ceasing to perform before the contract was substantially completed. The builder may defend against this claim by alleging substantial completion or a prior breach by the plaintiff, such as a change in the scope of the work [see MB 300I.31 for instruction on change in scope of work] or the failure to make timely progress payments [see MB 300I.38 for instruction on failure to make timely progress payments].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.39

The optional phrase at the end of the first paragraph should be used if the defendant claims that its performance of the contract was prevented by the plaintiff [see MB 300I.33 for instruction on prevention of performance as breach of contract]. The optional second paragraph may be used to explain to the jury that the failure to complete need not be willful to be a breach of the contract [see [3], below].

This instruction should be used with the burden of proof instruction on breach of contract in MB 300I.06. If substantial completion is an issue, the instruction on substantial completion in MB 300I.57 should also be given. This instruction will generally be accompanied by instructions on contract interpretation [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314- 320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions], excuse of performance [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 330- 337 (affirmative defenses), and MB 300I.50-MB 300I.80; see also Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions], alleged breaches of contract by the owner [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 303, and MB 300I.30-MB 300I.38], and damages [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 354, and MB 300I.100, MB 300I.107].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Focus on Reasons for Stopping Work: The explanations for (or the attack with regard to) the reason or reasons for "stopping" is often the crux of this instruction. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With Optional Portion of Instruction; Willfulness Is Not Required: The optional paragraph could be confusing to the jury as worded. The point to be made is that abandonment by the contractor constitutes a breach whether or not the cessation of work was willful, and whether or not it was caused by financial difficulties. In other words: (1) it is not necessary to prove "willfulness" to establish a breach of contract, and (2) financial difficulties will not excuse a breach of contract. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A contractor who abandons a construction contract by ceasing performance of the contract before the contract is substantially completed has breached the contract [Benson v. Andrews (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 123, 134-135, 292 P.2d 39 ; Bacigalupi v. Phoenix Bldg. etc. Co. (1910) 14 Cal.App. 632, 637, 112 P. 892], unless the contractor's performance of the remainder of the contract is prevented by the owner or legally excused [Lowy v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 87, 92, 60 Cal.Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; see MB 300I.33 for instruction on prevention of performance as breach of contract]. A building contractor will be held to have abandoned a construction contract whenever the contractor ceases performance without legal justification, whether the cessation of work is willful and intentional, or due to physical or financial disabilities that prevent performance [Benson v. Andrews (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 123, 134-135, 292 P.2d 39 ; Tremble v. Tuman (1919) 41 Cal.App. 8, 10-11, 181 P. 800].

"Abandonment," in the context of construction contracts, also refers to a situation in which an owner imposes on the contractor an excessive number of changes such that the final project has become materially different from the project contracted for. In these cases, the contractor may recover the reasonable value of all its work [Amelco Electric v. City of Thousand Oaks (2002) 27 Cal.4th 228, 239, 115 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 38 P.3d 1120 ; see MB 300I.31[3]]. The theory of abandonment does not apply to public works contracts because applying it would render the notion of competitive bidding "meaningless" [Amelco Electric v. City of Thousand Oaks (2002) 27 Cal.4th 228, 239, 115 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 38 P.3d 1120].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.50

MB 300I.50 Notice of Claim Under Contract

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The _____ [contract or subcontract] provides _____ [quote or paraphrase contract provisions that require notice of claims].

If you find that the parties to this contract intended no recovery could be had on a claim unless a notice of claim was given and that the notice was not given, then you must find for Defendant on that breach of contract claim.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, if Defendant waived compliance with the claim requirement by Plaintiff, then the notice of claim requirement is not a bar to Plaintiff's claim for breach of contract.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1436, 1439-1442, 1511, 1512, 1515, 1670.5, 3513, 3515.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one of the parties is asserting a notice of claim requirement in the contract as a condition precedent to the recovery sought by the other party for a breach of the contract. The initial question of whether the parties intended the notice provisions to be a condition precedent will only be a jury question if it turns on the credibility of extrinsic evidence [see Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 293, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; Yamanishi v. Bleily & Collishaw, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 457, 461-462, 105 Cal.Rptr. 580]. If it is a jury question, additional instructions to guide the jury in interpreting the contract will probably be needed [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314- 320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions]. If not, and if the court finds the notice requirement to be a condition precedent, then the second paragraph of this instruction should be omitted.

Use the optional paragraph on defendant's waiver when waiver is raised to claim relief from the contract's notice of claim requirement.

Additional instructions may also be required to explain excuse and waiver [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 336, and Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions] concepts to the jury.

This instruction does not cover other theories on which plaintiff may claim relief from the effect of these requirements, such as estoppel or executed oral modifications of the contract [see MB 300I.53[2], [3]].

The instruction also does not cover any notice of claim requirements that may have been inserted into a public works construction contract under Gov. Code §§ 930-930.6 [but see Pub. Contract Code § 19100, which seems to prevent resort to Gov. Code §§ 930-930.6 in contracts with the state].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Address Notice Issues in Closing: This is a brief instruction that potentially covers a lot of issues. As discussed in the comment in [3], below, there are multiple issues involved in a notice defense that can be addressed in closing argument. For example, some jurors may think it is "unfair" that a notice of claim under the contract must be given. Explain that it is a condition (or part) of the contract. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Construction contracts routinely have provisions requiring the contractor to give the owner notice of changed conditions, extra work, or other claims, and frequently the contract further provides that failure to give this notice is deemed to be a waiver of claims for additional time or compensation [see California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), §§ 4-1.03A, 8-1.06, 8-1.07, 9-1.04, 9-1.07B].

When the owner raises failure to strictly comply with these requirements as a defense, the first question is whether the parties intended the requirements to be a condition precedent to recovery or merely a covenant [Civ. Code §§ 1436, 1636; Code Civ. Proc. § 1859; see Schwab v. Bridge (1915) 27 Cal.App. 204, 206, 149 P. 603 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts, § 226 (1981)]. The courts will usually try to avoid construing these requirements as a condition precedent when to do so would cause a forfeiture [Civ. Code §§ 1442, 1670.5; see Ballard v. MacCallum (1940) 15 Cal.2d 439, 444, 101 P.2d 692 ; Hawley v. Orange County Flood etc. Dist. (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 708, 713, 27 Cal.Rptr. 478 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 227 (1981)].

The court can exercise its inherent equitable power to excuse, or give relief from, a condition precedent that results in a forfeiture [Civ. Code §§ 3275, 3369; O'Morrow v. Borad (1946) 27 Cal.2d 794, 800-801, 167 P.2d 483 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 229 (1981)]. In the case of these notice requirements in construction contracts, the courts frequently refuse to enforce them when the conduct of the parties has made it clear that formal adherence would serve no useful purpose, usually because either the owner is the source of the problem or the owner got adequate notice through some other means [see Hoel-Steffen Construction Co. v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1972) 456 F.2d 760, 766-768 ; Copco Steel & Engineering Co. v. U.S. (Ct. Cl. 1965) 341 F.2d 590, 598].

If the requirement is going to be enforced as a condition precedent, the next question is whether the owner has itself fully complied with all related conditions precedent and concurrent imposed on the owner [Civ. Code § 1439; see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 887, 909-913, 92 Cal.Rptr. 723].

If the owner has fully complied, the next question is whether performance of the condition by the contractor was excused [Civ. Code §§ 1440, 1441, 1511, 1512, 1515; Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. v. Pasadena City Junior College Dist. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 241, 243-245, 28 Cal.Rptr. 714, 379 P.2d 18 ; see General Insurance Co. v. Commerce Hyatt House (1970) 5 Cal.App.3d 460, 469-471, 85 Cal.Rptr. 317 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts §§ 246, 247 (1981)].

If performance was not excused, the next question is whether performance of the condition was waived by the owner [Civ. Code §§ 3513, 3515; Weeshoff Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 579, 589-592, 152 Cal.Rptr. 19].

When the claim arose from misrepresentation or nondisclosure, willful acts or omissions by the owner, or a violation of law by the owner, the notice requirement may be unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1668; Klein v. Asgrow Seed Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 87, 100-101, 54 Cal.Rptr. 609].

PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.51

MB 300I.51 Notice of Claim Under Government Code on Public Work Project

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff was required to file a claim with Defendant within one year after the date on which Plaintiff was entitled to sue for breach of contract.

Plaintiff filed a claim on _____ [date]. Therefore, you must find for Defendant unless Plaintiff was not entitled to sue on the contract until after _____ [date one year before claim was filed]. Plaintiff was entitled to sue for breach of contract after the breach when Plaintiff either completed [his/her/its] performance under the contract or when Plaintiff elected to stop performing.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, if Defendant is estopped to rely on this requirement, then the failure to file a timely claim is not a bar to Plaintiff's cause of action.

Authorities: Gov. Code §§ 901, 905, 905.2, 911.2, 945.4; Pub. Contract Code § 19100; Union Sugar Co. v. Hollister Estate Co. (1935) 3 Cal.2d 740, 745-746, 47 P.2d 273 ; Richter v. Union Land, etc. Co. (1900) 129 Cal. 367, 375, 62 P. 39 ; Worthington v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 435, 441-442, 87 Cal.Rptr. 272 ; Lubin v. Lubin (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 781, 789-791, 302 P.2d 49 ; McMillan Process Co. v. Brown (1939) 33 Cal.App.2d 279, 284-285, 91 P.2d 613 ; Ross v. Tabor (1921) 53 Cal.App. 605, 614-615, 200 P. 971 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when compliance with the claim filing requirements of the Government Code is an issue. If plaintiff claims that defendant is estopped to assert these requirements, then use the optional paragraph and add an instruction defining "estoppel" in the context of the case. In addition, if the breach of contract at issue is fraudulent, then a new instruction will be needed to point out that a cause of action for a fraudulent breach does not accrue until the fraud is discovered [see [3][c], below].

This instruction does not address notice of claim requirements that may have been inserted in the contract under Gov. Code §§ 930-930.6.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Note Exceptions to One Year Rule; Explain "Estopped": Counsel should note the exceptions to the one year rule discussed in [3][c], below. In addition, the term "estopped" in the optional paragraph will have to be explained to the jury in closing argument. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Special Considerations for Public Contracts: Public contracts often have more restrictive terms and/or the public entity is given "advantages" (e.g., shorter time period to make claim). By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Presentation of Claim as Prerequisite for Suit

Although the Government Code still makes presentation of a claim to the state a prerequisite to a suit by a contractor for money or damages on an express contract [Gov. Code §§ 905.2, 945.4], this requirement no longer applies to state construction projects [Pub. Contract Code § 19100]. However, it does still apply to local public entity contracts, except in connection with stop notice claims [Gov. Code § 905], unless there is a different requirement set forth in the contract itself [Gov. Code § 930.2].

[b] Time for Presenting Claim

The claim must be presented not later than one year after the cause of action accrues [Gov. Code § 911.2]. The date of the cause of action's accrual for this purpose is the date on which the cause of action would have been deemed to accrue within the meaning of the statute of limitations applicable to breaches of contract [Gov. Code § 901]. So long as the contractor continues to perform despite the owner's breaches of contract, the cause of action has not accrued; it accrues when the contractor either completes its performance or elects to cease further performance [Union Sugar Co. v. Hollister Estate Co. (1935) 3 Cal.2d 740, 745-746, 47 P.2d 273 ; Richter v. Union Land, etc. Co. (1900) 129 Cal. 367, 375, 62 P. 39 ; Worthington v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 435, 441-442, 87 Cal.Rptr. 272 ; Lubin v. Lubin (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 781, 789-791, 302 P.2d 49 ; McMillan Process Co. v. Brown (1939) 33 Cal.App.2d 279, 284-285, 91 P.2d 613 ; Ross v. Tabor (1921) 53 Cal.App. 605, 614-615, 200 P. 971].

[c] Fraudulent Breaches of Contract: Extension of Time for Presenting Claim

The rules in [b], above, govern all of the various breach of contract theories that may be asserted by the contractor [see Part B], even an alleged fraudulent breach of the contract [A. Teichert & Son, Inc. v. State of Cal. (1965) 238 Cal.App.2d 736, 752-753, 48 Cal.Rptr. 225 , disapproved on other grounds, E.H. Morrill Co. v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 792, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551]. However, the normal statute of limitations can be extended because of a fraudulent breach of contract to the date the fraud was discovered [San Filippo v. Griffiths (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 640, 645-646, 124 Cal.Rptr. 399]. Thus, a claim filed two years after the project was completed can still be timely when based on a fraudulent breach of contract that was not discovered until a few months before the date the claim was filed [Souza & McCue Const. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal.2d 508, 509-511, 20 Cal.Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338].

[d] Estoppel

The government entity can be estopped to assert the claim filing requirement [Fredrichsen v. City of Lakewood (1971) 6 Cal.3d 353, 357, 99 Cal.Rptr. 13, 491 P.2d 805].

PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.52

MB 300I.52 Architect/Engineer Decision Requirement[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The _____ [contract or subcontract] provides that _____ [quote or paraphrase contract provisions that authorize architect or engineer to make binding decisions, as arbitrator, on disputes between owner and contractor]. The decision of the _____ [architect or engineer] is binding on the parties unless:

1. The evidence to support the decision of the _____ [architect or engineer] is not substantial; or
2. The decision of the _____ [architect or engineer] was fraudulent, capricious, arbitrary, or so grossly erroneous as necessarily to imply bad faith.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1670; Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 Cal.3d 807, 826-828, 171 Cal.Rptr. 604, 623 P.2d 165 ; Zurn Engineers v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 798, 823, 830, 138 Cal.Rptr. 478 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party contests the conclusiveness of a decision on the claims made by the architect or engineer according to contractual procedures. The instruction must be augmented with others defining substantial evidence, fraud, caprice, arbitrary, and gross error.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Terms Must Be Explained: This instruction contains numerous terms of art that will have to be explained to the jury (e.g., "binding," "substantial" evidence, "bad faith," etc.). The key in many cases will be: what is the meaning of "substantial" in this context? By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Construction contracts frequently have a clause that requires submission of disputes to the architect or engineer for a quasi-judicial decision, which is then binding on the parties [see Zurn Engineers v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 798, 808 n. 8, 138 Cal.Rptr. 478]. These clauses must be clearly expressed, without ambiguity, to be enforceable [Walnut Creek Electric v. Reynolds Constr. Co. (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 511, 514-516, 69 Cal.Rptr. 667]. Additionally, these clauses only apply to disputes arising under the contract, not disputes over a breach of the contract [Boomer v. Abbett (1953) 121 Cal.App.2d 449, 462-463, 263 P.2d 476]. If the requirement is enforceable, the procedures detailed in the relevant contract clauses must be followed and exhausted as a condition precedent to the cause of action's accrual [A. Teichert & Son, Inc. v. State of Cal. (1965) 238 Cal.App.2d 736, 48 Cal.Rptr. 225 , disapproved on other grounds, E.H. Morrill v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal.2d 787, 793, 56 Cal.Rptr. 479, 423 P.2d 551].

This type of clause in a state construction contract was construed to permit the state's own engineer to conclusively decide disputes between the state and the contractor, so long as there was substantial evidence to support the decision and the decision was not fraudulent, capricious, arbitrary, or so grossly erroneous as necessarily to imply bad faith [Zurn Engineers v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 798, 822-830, 138 Cal.Rptr. 478]. The Legislature immediately responded with Civ. Code § 1670, which overturned Zurn by requiring an independent arbitration or court trial in all cases involving public works projects.

Zurn still applies to private works contracts. However, the California Supreme Court held that any contract that purports to designate one of the parties, or a third party with identical interest in the outcome, as the arbitrator of disputes arising from the contract, is an illusory contract to that extent, and, therefore, is unenforceable as being unconscionable [Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 Cal.3d 807, 826-828, 171 Cal.Rptr. 604, 623 P.2d 165].

Thus, any determination by the architect or engineer that the contract requires to be conclusive on the parties will only be enforceable if the architect or engineer is in fact an independent party and is not so closely identified with the owner or contractor as to make the architect's or engineer's decision that of his or her employer or client. If the decision of the architect or engineer is enforceable, then a finding that the decision is not binding for either reason (1) or (2) in this instruction should result in remanding the case back to the architect or engineer for a new, proper determination [Zurn Engineers v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 798, 838-839, 138 Cal.Rptr. 478 ; but see Pascal & Ludwig, Inc. v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Water Resources (1981) 127 Cal.App.3d 178, 190-191, 179 Cal.Rptr. 403].

Another issue presented by the requirement of the architect or engineer decision is whether the decision is binding on the parties, absent a timely or otherwise contractually mandated protest. In that case, the issue at trial will be whether a protest was made consistent with the contract requirements [Boomer v. Abbett (1953) 121 Cal.App.2d 449, 460, 263 P.2d 476].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.53

MB 300I.53 Written Change Order Requirement

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The _____ [contract or subcontract] provides that _____ [quote or paraphrase contract provisions that require written change orders before contractor will be paid for extra work]. Therefore, you must find for Defendant on any claims for extra work that were not authorized by a written change order unless the parties entered into an oral agreement authorizing Plaintiff to do the extra work that Plaintiff did or unless Defendant waived the change order requirement.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1436, 1498, 1698; Weeshoff Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 579, 590, 152 Cal.Rptr. 19 ; Bailey v. Varian Associates (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 348, 353-355, 2 Cal.Rptr. 871 ; C. F. Bolster Co. v. J. C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 152-153, 334 P.2d 247 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if a party contends that the failure to obtain a written change order as required by the contract is a bar to recovery for extra work. If the oral agreement or the waiver phrases are not applicable, they should be omitted.

The instruction should be supplemented with one defining "extra work" [see MB 300I.30].

It also might be appropriate to define "waiver" [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 336, and Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions] in a separate instruction.

This instruction does not cover those occasional situations in which the conduct of the parties has been construed as an abandonment of the written contract [see Opdyke & Butler v. Silver (1952) 111 Cal.App.2d 912, 915-919, 245 P.2d 306], nor does it cover a rescission of the requirement for written change orders [Bavin & Burch Co. v. Bard (1927) 81 Cal.App. 722, 730-731, 255 P. 200], with a resulting enforcement of oral change orders.

This instruction also does not cover those situations in which the conduct of the parties might estop the owner from enforcing the requirement that change orders be in writing, even if the owner is a public entity [Berkeley Lawn Bowling Club v. City of Berkeley (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 280, 288-289, 116 Cal.Rptr. 762 ; Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 678-680, 321 P.2d 753].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Note Exceptions Before Trial: There are numerous exceptions to the written change order requirement that many counsel will want to address by way of motion in advance of trial. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Simple Existence of Order May Be Issue: There may be a dispute as to the existence or not of such a "written change order." If so, be careful in explaining that in the closing. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Written Change Order as Contractual Prerequisite to Payment for Extra Work

Most construction contracts require, as a condition precedent [Civ. Code §§ 1436, 1498] to payment for extra work [see MB 300I.30], that the contractor obtain a written change order, and provide that failure to comply with this condition can result in releasing the owner from liability [see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 887, 912, 92 Cal.Rptr. 723]. However, that condition is routinely circumvented [see [b]-[d], below].

[b] Oral Modifications

The written contract can be modified by an executed oral agreement to the extent that the oral agreement has been performed [Civ. Code § 1698(b)]. In other words, an oral change order can be enforced to the extent plaintiff actually did the extra work called for by that order [Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1982) 136 Cal.App.3d 387, 397 n.2, 186 Cal.Rptr. 218 ; Healy v. Brewster (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 541, 551-552, 59 Cal.Rptr. 752 ; MacIsaac & Menke Co. v. Cardox Corp. (1961) 193 Cal.App.2d 661, 670, 14 Cal.Rptr. 523]. This is true even if the contract expressly provides otherwise [Civ. Code § 1698(c)], because, as the Law Revision Commission Comment points out, "[S]uch a provision would not apply to an oral modification [which was executed and is therefore] valid under [Civ. Code § 1698(b)]." The penultimate paragraph of this instruction covers the point: it requires (1) an oral modification, (2) new consideration in the form of extra work [see Bailey v. Breetwor (1962) 206 Cal.App.2d 287, 291-292, 23 Cal.Rptr. 740], and (3) execution by the performance of that extra work.

As the court observed in Girard v. Ball, there is a "commonly known custom and practice in the construction industry where oral agreements frequently modify or extend written agreements" [Girard v. Ball (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 772, 785, 178 Cal.Rptr. 406].

[c] Waiver

Defendant can also waive the requirement of a written change order [Howard J. White, Inc. v. Varian Associates (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 348, 353-355, 2 Cal.Rptr. 871 ; C. F. Bolster Co. v. J. C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 152-153, 334 P.2d 247]. Notwithstanding the general rule that subordinate field personnel may not waive requirements of a government contract [Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 887, 912, 92 Cal.Rptr. 723], public entities can waive the written change order requirement by their conduct [Weeshoff Constr. Co.

v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 579, 590, 152 Cal.Rptr. 19].

[d] Fraud

If the claim arose from fraud, misrepresentation, or nondisclosure, or the willful act or omission of the owner, or a violation of law, reliance on the written change order requirement by the owner may be defeated [Civ. Code § 1668; Klein v. Asgrow Seed Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 87, 100-101, 54 Cal.Rptr. 609].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.54

MB 300I.54 No Damage for Delay

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The _____ [contract or subcontract] provides that _____ [quote or paraphrase language that could be interpreted to say that contractor assumes all risks connected with work and/or that contractor must have no claim for any compensation or damage for delay in performance of work].

However, these provisions may not be enforced against Plaintiff:

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE (See Use of Instruction)]

1. If the delay was the result of a breach of the _____ [contract or subcontract] by Defendant;
2. If Defendant, by its conduct, gave up its right to enforce that provision; [and/or]
3. If Defendant represented to Plaintiff that [he/she/it] would compensate Plaintiff for the delay to induce Plaintiff to proceed with the work, and Plaintiff relied on that representation.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The delay provision is likewise not enforceable against the Plaintiff if the contract is a _____ [construction contract with a public agency or subcontract under a construction contract with a public agency], and if Plaintiff can prove all of the following:

- 1. That the contract limited Defendant's liability for delay to an extension of time;
- 2. That this limitation applied to a delay that the Defendant was responsible for;
- 3. That this limitation applied to a delay that was unreasonable under the circumstances; and
- 4. That this limitation applied to a delay that Plaintiff and Defendant did not have in mind when they agreed to the contract.

Authorities: Pub. Contract Code § 7102; Hawley v. Orange County Flood etc. Dist. (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 708, 714-717, 27 Cal.Rptr. 478 ; Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 681-682, 321 P.2d 753 ; McGuire & Hester v. San Francisco (1952) 113 Cal.App.2d 186, 188-192, 247 P.2d 934 ; Milovich v. City of Los Angeles (1941) 42 Cal.App.2d 364, 377-378, 108 P.2d 960 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party contends that a clause in the contract limits or prevents any recovery of damages for delay. The language of the no-damage-for-delay clause in the contract may require modifications of this instruction. Use only those optional paragraphs that apply to the facts in the case.

Paragraph 1 of the first option in the instruction covers all breaches of contract by the owner. Especially significant may be nondisclosure of material facts [see MB 300I.34], and breach of the implied covenant to control third parties [see MB 300I.36]. Paragraph 3 of the first option in the instruction is adapted from the discussion of estoppel in Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority [Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 678-682, 321 P.2d 753].

If a subcontract is involved, the prime contractor is in the position of the owner, and the subcontractor is in the position of the prime contractor.

Use the second option of the instruction when the defendant is a public agency that raises as a defense a no-damages-for-delay clause like that described in Pub. Contract Code § 7102 [see [3], below].

It may be possible to resolve this issue as a matter of law [Civ. Code § 1670.5], in which case, an instruction should be given that explains the court's decision to the jury so the jury does not inadvertently apply this clause during its deliberation.

[3] Comment

Unless the contract provides otherwise, the owner is liable to the contractor for all damages caused by delays not attributable to the contractor [Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A. J.C. Council (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 676, 685, 276 P.2d 52]. As a result, most construction contracts try to place all of the risk for delay on the contractor, sometimes even for delays caused by the owner [see, e.g., California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), § 8-1.07]. However, these clauses will not be enforced unless the language of the contract evidences a plain, unequivocal intention by the parties to so restrict the remedy of the contractor [K & F Construction v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 1063, 1064-1065, 176 Cal.Rptr. 842 ; Milovich v. City of Los Angeles (1941) 42 Cal.App.2d 364, 377-378, 108 P.2d 960]. Even then the clauses will not be enforced if the delay was caused by the owner [Hawley v. Orange County Flood etc. Dist. (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 708, 714-717, 27 Cal.Rptr. 478 ; McGuire & Hester v. San Francisco (1952) 113 Cal.App.2d 186, 189-192, 247 P.2d 934].

Pub. Contract Code § 7102 precludes the application of no-damages-for-delay provisions under certain circumstances. It provides that if the contract is a construction contract with a public agency, or a subcontract under such a contract, then the no-damages-for-delay provision may not be interpreted to prevent the contractor or subcontractor from recovering damages for delay, if all of the following are true [Pub. Contract Code § 7102; see Howard Contracting, Inc. v. G.A. MacDonald Construction Co., Inc. (1998) 71 Cal.App.4th 38, 49-51, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 590]:

- Contract provisions limit the contractee's liability to an extension of time for a delay for which the contractee is responsible;
- The delay is unreasonable under the circumstances involved; and
- The delay was not within the contemplation of the parties to the contract or subcontract.

Pub. Contract Code § 7102 also provides that any contractual provision that purports to waive, alter, or limit its applicability is void. However, it does not void any provision in a construction contract that requires notice of delays, provides for arbitration or settlement procedures, or provides for liquidated damages [Pub. Contract Code § 7102].

As with any other condition, the no-damage-for-delay clause can be waived by the owner [see Weeshoff Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 579, 590, 152 Cal.Rptr. 19], or the owner can be estopped to enforce it [Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 681-682, 321 P.2d 753].

If the claim arose from fraud, misrepresentation, or non-disclosure, or a willful act or omission of the owner, or a violation of law, reliance on the written change order requirement by the owner may be defeated [Civ. Code § 1668; Klein v. Asgrow Seed Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 87, 100-101, 54 Cal.Rptr. 609].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.55

MB 300I.55 Forfeitures

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The _____ [contract or subcontract] provides that _____ [quote or paraphrase language that could be interpreted to make contract unusual, extraordinary, harsh, unjust, or inequitable, or that would result in absurdity or forfeiture or would put one party at mercy of other].

However, _____ [this provision or these provisions] must be strictly interpreted to avoid making the contract unusual, harsh, or unjust, to avoid causing a forfeiture, and to avoid putting one party at the mercy of the other:

1. Unless it was the unmistakable intention of the parties to cause _____ [this result or one of these results]; or

2. Unless no other interpretation of _____ [this provision or these provisions] is reasonably possible.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3520, 3542; Yamanishi v. Bleily & Collishaw, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 457, 462-463, 105 Cal.Rptr. 580 ; Hertzka & Knowles v. Salter (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 325, 335, 86 Cal.Rptr. 23 ; Hawley v. Orange County Flood etc. Dist. (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 708, 713-717, 27 Cal.Rptr. 478 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party contends that a contract clause limits or prevents recovery, and the other party contends that the clause would be unenforceable if it had that meaning, because it would then amount to a forfeiture. The instruction should only be used when interpretation of the clause at issue has become a question of fact for the jury because it depends on extrinsic evidence, instead of a question of law for the court [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 293, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; Yamanishi v. Bleily & Collishaw, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 457, 461-462, 105 Cal.Rptr. 580]. If the interpretation is a question of law [see Civ. Code § 1670.5], an instruction should be given that explains the court's decision to the jury, so that the jury does not inadvertently apply a contrary interpretation of the clause during its deliberations.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Court Will Usually Decide Forfeiture: The issue addressed by this instruction will usually be a matter of law to be decided by the court. Yet, if the jury addresses the presence (or non-presence) of a "delay" and the reason for the presence (or non-presence) of the delay, explain carefully your perspective in the closing. Some jurors may react negatively to a "delay" as just an excuse. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The interpretation of the contract must be reasonable [Civ. Code § 3542]. It should not permit one party to suffer by the acts of the other [Civ. Code § 3520]. An interpretation that will make the contract "unusual, extraordinary, harsh, unjust or inequitable" should be avoided [Hertzka & Knowles v. Salter (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 325, 335, 86 Cal.Rptr. 23]. So should one that places one party at the mercy of the other [Hawley v. Orange County Flood etc. Dist. (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 708, 716, 27 Cal.Rptr. 478]. Any clause that has the ultimate result of imposing a forfeiture should be strictly construed so as to avoid the forfeiture if reasonably possible [Yamanishi v. Bleily & Collishaw, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 457, 462-463, 105 Cal.Rptr. 580 ; Hawley v. Orange County Flood etc. Dist. (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 708, 713, 27 Cal.Rptr. 478]. Forfeiture clauses will not apply to claims arising from a breach of contract caused by the other party [D. A. Parrish & Sons v. County Sanitation Dist. (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 406, 414, 344 P.2d 883].

If the claim arose from fraud, misrepresentation, or nondisclosure, or a willful act or omission of the owner, or a violation of law, reliance on the written change order requirement by the owner may be defeated [Civ. Code § 1668; Klein v. Asgrow Seed Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 87, 100-101, 54 Cal.Rptr. 609].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.56

MB 300I.56 Payment Dependent on Existence of Fund

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The contract provides that _____ [quote or paraphrase language specifying payment of money on contract was to be made from specific fund].

If that fund no longer existed at the time that this lawsuit was commenced, then you must find for Defendant on the breach of contract claims.

Authority: Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 867-869, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party contends that the contract is tied to a specific fund and, since the fund is exhausted, recovery on the contract is barred. The instruction should not be used if the existence of the fund is a defense asserted by the one who had the obligation to secure the fund [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 868-869, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839 ; see MB 300I.33]. In addition, the instruction does not apply when plaintiff is relying on the doctrine of equitable estoppel [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 869, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839].

The instruction may need to be modified depending on the language of the contract and whether notice was required [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 869-870, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839].

This instruction cannot be used by an owner against the contractor unless the owner has raised the existence of a special fund as an affirmative defense [Bilardi Constr., Inc. v. Spencer (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 771, 774-779, 86 Cal.Rptr. 406].

On a public work, the instruction may be adapted for use in a subcontractor's suit against an owner on a stop notice. The owner then may assert that there are no monies due or to become due the contractor because the cost of completion exceeded the unpaid balance on the contract, and therefore, there are no funds subject to the stop notice [Harsco Corp. v. Department of Public Works (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 272, 276-278, 98 Cal.Rptr. 337].

[3] Comment

When a contract contains language specifying that payment must be made only from a specific fund, such as construction loan funds, then the lack of funds will defeat plaintiff's right to recovery [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 867-869, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839]. As with any other condition precedent, it will be strictly construed against the party relying on it [Yamanishi v. Bleily & Collishaw, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 457, 462-463, 105 Cal.Rptr. 580].

If the defendant, by the defendant's own action, has prevented performance of the condition, defendant may not rely on nonexistence of the fund [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal.App.2d 488, 504, 8 Cal.Rptr. 379]. For example, a defendant could not rely on a paid-when-paid clause by a prime contractor in refusing to pay a subcontractor [Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 882, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 578, 938 P.2d 372].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.57

MB 300I.57 Substantial Completion and Final Acceptance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

You must determine when the project was substantially complete. A project can be substantially complete, even if some additional work is required to fully comply with the plans and specifications, so long as the owner has taken possession of the project and is enjoying the benefit of its intended use. However, for the project to be substantially complete, the work remaining to be done must meet all of the following requirements:

- 1. The remaining work must not impair the building or structure as a whole;
- 2. The remaining work must not require great expenditure to do or cause damage to other parts of the structure when done;
- 3. The remaining work must not amount to a defect running through the whole project so that the owner's object in having it done in a particular way is defeated; and
- 4. The remaining work must not be so substantial that if the cost of the work remaining to be done is deducted from the contract price, the owner will not have essentially what [he/she/it] contracted to have done.

Authority: Tolstoy Constr. Co. v. Minter (1978) 78 Cal.App.3d 665, 671-672, 143 Cal.Rptr. 570 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when either the occurrence or the date of substantial completion of the project is at issue. Select only those subparagraphs of the instruction that the facts of the case might support as reasons for viewing the project as less than substantially complete. There should also be an instruction that explains to the jury the ramifications of substantial completion in the case [see, e.g., MB 300I.101].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Address Subjective Elements in This

Instruction: There are a lot of subjective elements in this instruction for the jury to consider. The reasons why the contractor did not complete the project may be just as important to the jury as what the contractor did not complete. Moreover, whether there was "substantial completion" may mean many different things to many different jurors. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The doctrine of substantial completion has long been recognized as applicable to construction projects [Thomas Haverly Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 288-289, 197 P. 105]. Once substantial completion has been established, the contractor can sue on the contract for the contract price, less an offset for the cost of the additional work necessary to achieve full performance [Tolstoy Constr. Co. v. Minter (1978) 78 Cal.App.3d 665, 671-672, 143 Cal.Rptr. 570].

Notwithstanding contract provisions calling for a formal acceptance of the project by a public entity owner, substantial completion by the contractor, coupled with beneficial occupancy by the entity terminates the accrual of liquidated damages and triggers the owner's duty to make final payment, less any appropriate offset [Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. County of Los Angeles (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 771, 779, 181 Cal.Rptr. 332 ; see Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. v. Pasadena City Junior College Dist. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 241, 245-246, 28 Cal.Rptr. 714, 379 P.2d 18 ; Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1952) 101 F.Supp. 755, 758]. However, the property's physical occupancy without the benefit of equipment required to be installed under the contract does not stop the running of liquidated damages and would not seem to constitute substantial compliance [Vrgora v. Los Angeles United School Dist. (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 1178, 200 Cal.Rptr. 130].

What constitutes substantial completion of the project is a fact question that focuses first on what was done and then on what remains to be done [Tolstoy Constr. Co. v. Minter (1978) 78 Cal.App.3d 665, 671-672, 143 Cal.Rptr. 570].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may not recover on _____ [describe owner's contract with third party on which plaintiff seeks to recover] if Defendant has met [his/her/its] burden of proving that the contract was [canceled/rescinded] by its parties before Plaintiff sought to enforce it.

To prove that the contract was [canceled/rescinded], Defendant must prove _____ [see Use of Instruction].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that the plaintiff may not recover on the owner's contract as a third-party beneficiary because the contract was rescinded before the plaintiff sought to enforce it. The instruction should be given after the instruction in MB 300I.13[1]. For an instruction on the elements of rescission of a contract, see Ch. 3G, Matthew Bender Rescission of Contract Instructions.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Choose Terms Carefully: Many other jury instructions no longer use the term "rescinded" because it can be confusing to the jury [see generally Ch. 3G, Matthew Bender Rescission of Contract Instructions, MB 300G.01]. The alternate term is "canceled." And, the phrase "by its parties" may be confusing or incorrect in light of the facts in question (e.g., a unilateral act). By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

For instructions and authorities concerning third-party beneficiaries and rescission, see Chs. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, and 3G, Matthew Bender Rescission of Contract Instructions, respectively.

PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.59

MB 300I.59 Proper Contractor's License

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[USE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

If Plaintiff did not have a valid contractor's license at the time that [he/she/it] began to perform under the contract, or if Plaintiff did not maintain that license all through the time that [he/she/it] was performing the contract, then you must find for Defendant on the breach of contract claims.

[OR]

If Defendant did not have a valid contractor's license at the time that [he/she/it] began to perform any _____ [act or contract], or if Defendant did not maintain that license all through the time that [he/she/it] was performing the _____ [act or contract], then you must find that Plaintiff is entitled to recover from Defendant all amounts that [he/she/it] paid to Defendant or other compensation that [he/she/it] gave to Defendant to perform the _____ [act or contract].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the contractor's possession of the required license is at issue. The first alternative should be used when the lack of a contractor's license is a defense to a breach of contract claim brought by the contractor. The second alternative should be used when a person who uses the services of an unlicensed contractor brings an action to recover compensation paid for the performance of any act or contract.

When a party claims that its activity was covered by an exemption from the licensing requirements, an additional instruction will be required that quotes the exemption.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Unlicensed Contractors Face Severe Penalty:

This instruction sets forth the heavy penalty an unlicensed contractor faces--no ability to recover for breach of contract and disgorgement of amounts previously received. Note the exceptions discussed in [3][b], below. In addition, be careful with the facts as to whether the license was "valid" or "not maintained" [see [3][a], below]. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] License Requirement; Substantial Compliance

A contractor is required to possess a valid contractor's license at the time it enters into the contract [MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental & Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal.4th 412, 426, 30 Cal.Rptr.3d 755, 115 P.3d 41 ; Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal.2d 141, 146-154, 308 P.2d 713]. A contractor bidding on a state public works contract must be licensed at the time the contract is awarded [Pub. Contract Code § 10164]. To bring an action for compensation for the performance of any act or contract for which the law requires a contractor's license, a person must allege that he or she was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); Denver D. Darling, Inc. v. Controlled Environments Construction, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1221, 1229 n.1, 108 Cal.Rptr.2d 213]. A contractor who was unlicensed at any time during contractual performance may not recover compensation for individual acts performed while he or she was duly licensed [MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental & Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal.4th 412, 425, 30 Cal.Rptr.3d 755, 115 P.3d 41]. A person who uses the services of an unlicensed contractor may bring an action to recover all compensation paid to the unlicensed contractor for performance of any act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b)].

If licensure or proper licensure is controverted, the contractor must prove licensure by producing a verified certificate of licensure from the Contractors' State License Board that establishes that the contractor was duly licensed in the proper classification at all times during the performance of any act or contract covered by the action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(d); see [c], below, regarding burden of proof].

A general denial is sufficient to controvert a contractor's pleading of licensure so that the contractor must produce a verified certificate [Advantec Group, Inc. v. Edwin's Plumbing Co. (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 621, 627, 63 Cal.Rptr.3d 195]. Strict adherence to the license requirement is required, and the judicial doctrine of substantial compliance does not apply when the person who engaged in the business or acted in the capacity of a contractor has never been a duly licensed contractor in California. The court may determine that there was substantial compliance if it is shown at an evidentiary hearing that the person in question [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(f); see also Slatkin v. White (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 963, 968-969, 126 Cal.Rptr.2d 54 (substantial compliance found); Constr. Financial, LLC v. Perlite Plastering Co., Inc. (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 170, 173, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 574 (substantial compliance not found)]:

- Had been duly licensed before the contract's performance;
- Acted reasonably and in good faith to maintain proper licensure;
- Did not know or reasonably should not have known that he or she was not duly licensed when performance commenced; and

- Acted promptly and in good faith to reinstate his or her license on learning it was invalid.

The meaning of "compensation" in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 is construed broadly [see Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal.3d 988, 997, 277 Cal.Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370]. Thus, an unlicensed contractor is also barred from bringing an action against a landowner for breach of contract when the contract does not call for payment of money by the landowner to the contractor, but instead gives the contractor exclusive rights to use the property [K & K Services, Inc. v. City of Irwindale (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 818, 823-824, 54 Cal.Rptr.2d 836].

For further discussion of the doctrine of substantial compliance, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 430, Licensing of Contractors (Matthew Bender).

[b] Persons Not Subject to License Requirement

The requirement of a contractor's license does not apply to any of the following:

- One who furnishes only materials or supplies without making a substantial on-site contribution to the contractor's work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7052; Walker v. Thornsberry (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 842, 844-848, 158 Cal.Rptr. 862 ; Scientific Cages, Inc. v. Banks (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 885, 887-889, 146 Cal.Rptr. 780];
- One who furnishes finished products [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7045; see Johnson v. Mattox (1968) 257 Cal.App.2d 714, 718, 65 Cal.Rptr. 185];
- Employees for wages [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7053];
- Architects and engineers acting solely in their professional capacity, and licensed structural pest control operators, geologists, and geophysicists acting within the scope of their licenses [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051];
- Real estate licensees acting within the course and scope of their license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044.1];
- Admitted surety insurers engaging contractors to undertake the completion of contracts on which performance or completion bonds were issued by the surety insurers, provided all actual construction work is performed by duly licensed contractors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044.2]; and
- Owner-builders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044; see Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1397, 1415-1416, 57 Cal.Rptr.2d 386 (developers not owner-builders)].

The term "contractor" does not include persons who perform construction management services. The licensing law does not identify construction managers as workers requiring licensure [The Fifth Day LLC v. Bolotin (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 939, 950, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 633].

"Master builders" or "master developers," that is, developers who provide labor and materials through licensed, third-party general contractors, are contractors and required to be licensed [Vallejo Development Co. v. Beck Development Co. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 929, 939-943, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 669]. In an illustration of the strictness of this requirement, a licensed contractor whose unlicensed corporation entered in a subcontract with a general contractor could not sue to recover compensation, even though the contractor's individual license number appeared on all documents relating to the contract. The corporation was the contracting party and because it was unlicensed, recovery was barred [Opp v. State Farm Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2007) 154 Cal.App.4th 71, 76, 64 Cal.Rptr.3d 260].

[c] Burden of Proof

The contractor has the burden of proof to establish that he or she was a duly licensed contractor and thus can maintain suit. In a case in which the trial judge instructed the jury that the burden of proof shifted to the developer on whether the contractor was duly licensed, the court held that the instruction was erroneous and constituted prejudicial error [Buzgheia v. Leasco Sierra Grove (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 374, 393, 398, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 427]. The instruction read: "Plaintiff may establish licensure ... through a certified copy of the license history of [plaintiff's company]. The certificate of licensure establishes a rebuttable presumption that [plaintiff's company] was duly licensed at all times during performance of the contracts with the defendants. The effect of such presumption is to impose on the defendants the burden of proof as to the nonexistence of the presumed fact" [Buzgheia v. Leasco Sierra Grove (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 374, 383, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 427].

[d] When Failure to Comply With License Requirement Is Not a Defense

Causes of action that do not seek "the collection of compensation for the performance of any act or contract for which a license is required" are beyond the scope of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031. Therefore, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 did not prevent an unlicensed subcontractor from pursuing a claim against a general contractor under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 for racial discrimination during the performance of the contract, but barred him from seeking damages for the contractor's failure to pay sums due under the contract [Holland v. Morse Diesel Internat., Inc. (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1443, 1449-1453, 104 Cal.Rptr.2d 239].

An unlicensed contractor may also sue his or her partner for an accounting of the earnings of the unlicensed partnership [Norwood v. Judd (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 276, 277-290, 209 P.2d 24]. Further, he or she may sue third parties for breach of warranty for defective merchandise [Davis Company v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal.App.3d 156, 158-159, 81 Cal.Rptr. 453] and may bring suit against the owner for fraud in the inducement of the contract [Grant v. Weatherholt (1954) 123 Cal.App.2d 34, 42-44, 266 P.2d 185]. Thus, if the unlicensed contractor sues on a cause of action not based on the contract, he or she may still recover. For example, in one case developers/general contractors acted not only as general contractors and thus were required to be licensed to pursue an action for compensation for their work, but also acted as developers who could be held strictly liable in damages to the homeowners in actions for defective construction. Their tort-based claims as developers for indemnity and contribution were not subject to a bar by their lack of contractors' licenses. However, their contract-based theories of recovery were barred by their noncompliance with licensing requirements [Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1397, 1409-1421, 57 Cal.Rptr.2d 386].

[e] Recovery of Compensation Paid to Unlicensed Contractor

The Legislature amended Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 in 2001 to allow a person who uses the services of an unlicensed contractor to bring an action to recover all compensation paid to the unlicensed contractor for performance of any act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b)]. The amended statute supersedes previous cases that held that the license requirement could be used only as a shield by the person being sued by an unlicensed contractor, not as a sword against the contractor [see Vitek, Inc. v. Alvarado Ice Palace, Inc. (1973) 34 Cal.App.3d 586, 593-594, 110 Cal.Rptr. 86], and that an unlicensed contractor does not have to pay back money paid to him or her for work done [see Comet Theatre Enterprises v. Cartwright (9th Cir. 1952) 195 F.2d 80]. It is unclear whether the amended statute supersedes earlier decisions holding that an unlicensed contractor can assert his or her claim as an offset [see S & Q Construction Co. v. Palma Ceia Development Organization (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 364, 367, 3 Cal.Rptr. 690]. The recovery authorized by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b) may not be reduced by an unlicensed contractor's claim of offset for materials and services provided in connection with the unlicensed work or for work performed during a period that it held a license [Alatrisme v. Cesar's Exterior Designs Inc. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 656, 672-673, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277; White v. Cridlebaugh (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 506, 520-521, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.60

MB 300I.60 Preliminary 20-Day Notice (Private Work)

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover on [his/her/its] [mechanics' lien and/or stop notice and/or payment bond] claim, Plaintiff was required to cause a preliminary 20-day notice to be given to the owner or reputed owner, [and] to the prime contractor or reputed prime contractor [and/or to the construction lender or reputed construction lender] within 20 days of the date on which Plaintiff furnished the first labor, services, equipment, or materials for which Plaintiff is now making a claim.

That notice was required by law to contain all of the following:

- 1. A general description of the labor, services, equipment, and materials furnished or to be furnished by Plaintiff, and an estimate of the total price of these items;
- 2. Plaintiff's name and address;
- 3. The name and address of the person with whom Plaintiff had [his/her/its] contract;
- 4. A description of the jobsite that was enough to identify that jobsite; and
- 5. The following statement in boldface type:

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER

If bills are not paid in full for the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or to be furnished, a mechanic's lien leading to the loss, through court foreclosure proceedings, of all or part of your property being so improved may be placed against the property even though you have paid your contractor in full. You may wish to protect yourself against this consequence by (1) requiring your contractor to furnish a signed release by the person or firm giving you this notice before making payment to your contractor, or (2) any other method or device that is appropriate under the circumstances. Other than residential homeowners of dwellings containing fewer than five units, private project owners must notify the original contractor and any lien claimant who has provided the owner with a preliminary 20-day lien notice in accordance with Section 3097 of the Civil Code that a notice of completion or notice of cessation has been recorded within 10 days of its recordation. Notice shall be by registered mail, certified mail, or first-class mail, evidenced by a certificate of mailing. Failure to notify will extend the deadlines to record a lien.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If an invoice for materials furnished by Plaintiff contained all of the above information, and it was served in the manner I will now describe to you, that is a sufficient notice.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

The notice was required to be delivered to the owner or reputed owner, [and] prime contractor or reputed prime contractor [and/or construction lender or reputed construction lender] personally, or by leaving it with some person in charge at their residences or places of business, or by mailing it by first-class registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, to them at their residences or places of business.

If Plaintiff failed to comply with all these requirements, then you must find for Defendant on _____ [the mechanics' lien and/or the stop notice and/or the payment bond] claim.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, Defendant may not use the requirement of a notice to prevent Plaintiff from recovering on [his/her/its] claim if you find that Defendant is estopped from relying on this requirement.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, Defendant may not use this requirement of a notice to prevent Plaintiff from recovering on [his/her/its] claim if you find that Defendant waived this requirement.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3097, 3097.1, 3114, 3160.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the service, timeliness, or sufficiency of the preliminary 20-day notice (private work) is at issue. Use the bracketed references to the construction lender and reputed construction lender when the suit is against the lender or both owner and lender. Only those portions of the instruction that cover disputed issues should be used. For example, the lack of a 20-day notice to the construction lender should not affect the validity of a mechanics' lien--so long as the construction loan has priority--although it will clearly defeat any stop notice to the lender [Romak Iron Works v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 767, 773-777, 163 Cal.Rptr. 869]. In addition, if there is no dispute over the contents of the notice or the sufficiency of the delivery, omit those portions of the instruction.

This instruction does not cover the plaintiffs who are certificated architects, registered engineers, or licensed land surveyors. The timing on their notices is governed by Civ. Code § 3097(c)(6). If they are involved, this instruction must be modified to comply with the requirements of that section.

In addition, this instruction does not cover two of the statutory requirements for the contents of the notice. One is the boldface "NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER" paragraph [Civ. Code § 3097(c)(5)] and the other is the information concerning certain trust funds [Civ. Code § 3097(c)(6)]. If either is involved, this instruction can be augmented accordingly.

The instruction also does not cover service at the address shown on the building permit or the "Construction Trust Deed" [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(1), (j)], nor service on parties who do not reside in California [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(2)]. If either of those factors are involved, this instruction must be modified.

This instruction does not specifically cover the proof of service requirements [Civ. Code § 3097.1]. If there is an unresolved issue on this, an additional instruction will be required.

If the plaintiff claims to have made a sufficient notice by delivery of an invoice as allowed by Civ. Code § 3097(c)(6), use the appropriate optional paragraph.

If there is an estoppel or waiver issue, use the appropriate optional paragraph or paragraphs, and add separate instructions setting forth the elements of estoppel, or waiver, or both [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 336, and Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Instruction as Checklist for Closing: This is a complex instruction that covers many different points. Counsel may wish to use this instruction as a checklist for closing argument, preferably with visual aids. If applicable, the terms "estopped" and "waived" in the last two optional paragraphs will require further instructions. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Preliminary 20-Day Notice as Condition Precedent to Recovery on Lien or Payment Bond

A condition precedent to recovery by a subcontractor or materialman on a mechanics' lien [Civ. Code § 3114], stop notice [Civ. Code § 3160], or payment bond [Civ. Code § 3096], is service of a timely and sufficient preliminary 20-day notice (private work) [Civ. Code §§ 3097.1, 3242(a)]. Civ. Code § 3097(a) also requires the prime contractor to give a preliminary 20-day notice if it does not have a "direct contract with the owner," for example, if it has a contract with a lessee. However, this provision does not often come into play, because, absent a notice of nonresponsibility, the lessee is deemed to be the agent of the owner [Civ. Code § 3129] so that the contract with the lessee amounts to a contract with the owner [see M. Arthur Gensler, Jr., & Associates, Inc. v. Larry Barrett, Inc. (1972) 7 Cal.3d 695, 706-708, 103 Cal.Rptr. 247, 499 P.2d 503]. The courts have also found others to be the owner's agent for this purpose, such as a spouse [Frank Pisano & Associates v. Taggart (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 1, 17-18, 105 Cal.Rptr. 414]. People performing actual labor for wages [Rich-Lee Equipment Rentals, Inc. v. Intermountain Constr. Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 581, 585-590, 145 Cal.Rptr. 106] and certain trust funds are not required to serve preliminary 20-day notices [Civ. Code § 3097(a), (b)].

In the case of a payment bond claim, if plaintiff did not give a preliminary 20-day notice, he or she may nonetheless enforce a claim against the bond by giving written notice to the surety and the bond principal within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If a notice of completion is not recorded, the time for giving written notice to the surety is extended to 75 days after completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3242(b); see Civ. Code § 3227; see also MB 300I.61].

[b] Who Must Receive Notice

The preliminary 20-day notice must be given to the owner or reputed owner, the original contractor or reputed contractor, and the construction lender or reputed construction lender, if any [Civ. Code § 3097(a)]. In the case of a reputed owner, the subcontractor or materialman can rely on information given to it by the prime contractor, so long as that reliance is reasonable and in good faith, even if this reliance results in no notice being given to the actual owner [Brown Co. v. Appellate Department (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 891, 898-903, 196 Cal.Rptr. 258]. However, in the case of a reputed lender, the subcontractor or materialman may be charged with constructive notice of the identity of the persons to be served, if that information was made available in the statutorily prescribed manner [Civ. Code § 3097(m); see Brown Co. v. Appellate Department (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 891, 902-903, 196 Cal.Rptr. 258 ; Romak Iron Works v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 767, 773-775, 163 Cal.Rptr. 869].

[c] Timeliness of Notice

The notice must be served not later than 20 days after the plaintiff first furnished labor, services, equipment, or materials to the jobsite. A claimant who failed to give timely notice is not precluded from giving notice late. However, the claimant will be entitled to record a lien, file a stop notice, and assert a claim against a payment bond only for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished within 20 days before the notice and any time thereafter [Civ. Code § 3097(d)].

[d] Labor, Services, Equipment, and Materials Covered by Notice

The notice will cover all labor, services, equipment, and materials provided within the 20 days preceding the service of the notice, and at any time thereafter, but not for any labor, services, equipment, or materials provided before that 20-day period [Civ. Code § 3097(d)]. The notice may be provided before the 20-day period expires and will not be deemed defective as being premature, even if it is delivered before the claimant has provided any labor, services, equipment, or materials to the project [Brown Co. v. Appellate Department (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 891, 896-898, 196 Cal.Rptr. 258].

[e] Contents of Notice

The requirements for the contents of the notice are set forth in Civ. Code § 3097(c). Only one notice need be given, unless the plaintiff had contracts with more than one subcontractor [Civ. Code § 3097(g)]. An invoice that is transmitted in the manner required by a notice and that contains the information required in a notice is expressly allowed to constitute notice by Civ. Code § 3097(c)(6).

Substantial compliance with the requirements for the contents of the notice is sufficient [Civ. Code § 3097(g); Fidelity Sound Systems, Inc. v. American Bonding Co. (1978) 85 Cal.App.3d Supp. 13, 19-22, 149 Cal.Rptr. 674 ; but see San Joaquin Blocklite, Inc. v. Willden (1986) 184 Cal.App.3d 361, 228 Cal.Rptr. 842 (questioning whether substantial compliance is enough and arguing that strict compliance is necessary)]. However, the notice must be in writing [Windsor Mills v. Richard B. Smith, Inc. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 336, 340-341, 77 Cal.Rptr. 300].

[f] Service of Notice

The requirements for service of the notice are set forth in Civ. Code § 3097(f) and the proof of service requirements are contained in Civ. Code § 3097.1. Compliance with these requirements is strictly enforced [IGA Aluminum Products,

Inc. v. Manufacturers Bank (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 699, 706, 181 Cal.Rptr. 859].

[g] Estoppel and Waiver

The defendant can be estopped to rely on the claimant's failure to give a timely and sufficient preliminary 20-day notice [Scott, Blake & Wynne v. Summit Ridge Estates, Inc. (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 347, 353, 59 Cal.Rptr. 587]. However, estoppel must have been specially pleaded in the complaint [Windsor Mills v. Richard B. Smith, Inc. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 336, 341-342, 77 Cal.Rptr. 300]. The owner may not waive the requirement of a notice [Civ. Code § 3097(e)], although other defendants can. Waiver must also be specially pleaded [Windsor Mills v. Richard B. Smith, Inc. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 336, 342, 77 Cal.Rptr. 300].

MB 300I.61 Written Notice to Surety and Bond Principal--Private Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover on [his/her/its] payment bond claim, Plaintiff was required to cause a written notice to be given to the surety and to the _____ [contractor or subcontractor], who is the principal on the bond, within _____ [15 days after a notice of completion was recorded or, if no notice of completion was recorded 75 days after the work of improvement was completed].

The notice was required by law to contain all of the following:

1. A description of the kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials that the Plaintiff furnished or agreed to furnish;
2. The name of the person to or for whom the labor, services, equipment, or materials were furnished; and
3. The approximate value of any labor, services, equipment, or materials already furnished or to be furnished.

The notice was required to be given to the surety and to the _____ [contractor or subcontractor] by personal delivery, or by properly addressing and mailing it by either certified or registered mail with the postage prepaid.

If Plaintiff failed to comply with all of these requirements, then you must find for Defendant on the payment bond claim.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3096, 3227, 3242.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when service, timeliness, or sufficiency of the written notice from the plaintiff to the surety and bond principal is at issue in a case involving a claim on a payment bond. This written notice is an alternative to a plaintiff who failed to serve a preliminary 20-day notice (private work) in accordance with Civ. Code §§ 3097, 3242(a) [see MB 300I.60]. Only those portions of the instruction that cover disputed issues should be used. For example, if there is no dispute over the contents or sufficiency of the notice, omit those portions of the instruction.

This instruction also does not cover the specific requirements for delivering notice to the bond principal and surety. If these requirements are at issue, the instruction must be modified [see Civ. Code § 3227(a), discussed in [3], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Instruction in Closing: This is a detailed instruction that must be explained to the jury in closing argument, preferably with the use of visual aids. Moreover, make sure that the jury understands words such as "surety" and "principal." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

To enforce a claim against a payment bond given in connection with a private work, the claimant must give the same 20-day preliminary notice that is required as a prerequisite to establishing a mechanics' lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3242(a); see Civ. Code §§ 3096, 3097; see also MB 300I.60]. If preliminary notice is not given as prescribed by Civ. Code § 3242(a), a claimant may nonetheless enforce a claim against the bond by giving written notice to the surety and the bond principal within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If a notice of completion is not recorded, the time for giving written notice to the surety is extended to 75 days after completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3242(b)].

The written notice given to the surety or bond principal when no 20-day preliminary notice was given must include all of the following information [Civ. Code § 3227(b)]:

- A description of the kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or agreed to be furnished by the claimant;
- The name of the person to or for whom the labor, services, equipment, or materials were furnished; and
- The amount in value, as near as may be determined, of any labor, services, equipment, or materials already furnished or to be furnished.

The notice may be personally delivered or deposited in the mail, postage prepaid, certified or registered, and addressed in any of the following ways that apply [Civ. Code § 3227(a)]:

- If the surety is an individual, to the surety's residence or place of business, if known. If the surety's residence address is unknown, the notice should be addressed to the clerk of the county in which the bond has been recorded.
- If the surety is a corporation to (1) the office of or in care of the agent designated on the bond, (2) the office of or in care of any of the surety's officers who are located in California, or (3) the office of or in care of the surety's statutory agent in California.

- To the bond principal at the principal's last known address.
- In the same manner provided for service of summons in civil actions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 et seq.].

MB 300I.64 Defense Against Mechanics' Lien--Notice of Nonresponsibility

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant can prevent Plaintiff from foreclosing [his/her/its] mechanics' lien against _____ [name property subject to lien], if Defendant has met [his/her/its] burden of proving that [he/she/it] timely posted and recorded a sufficient notice of nonresponsibility. To meet [his/her/its] burden, Defendant must prove all of the following:

- 1. That Defendant did not cause Plaintiff to do the work for which the lien is claimed;
- 2. That Defendant owns the property that was improved or claims an interest in that property;
- 3. That Defendant or [his/her/its] agent signed and verified the notice of nonresponsibility;
- 4. That the notice of nonresponsibility was in writing;
- 5. That the notice contained a description of the property sufficient for identification;
- 6. That the notice contained the Defendant's name and the nature of [his/her/its] title or interest;
- 7. That the notice contained the name of the purchaser under contract, if any, or lessee, if known;
- 8. That the notice contained a statement that the Defendant would not be responsible for any claims arising from the work of improvement; and

9. That within 10 days of receiving knowledge of the work of improvement, Defendant posted the notice of nonresponsibility on the property and recorded it in the office of the county recorder of the county where the property or a part of the property is located.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3094, 3129; Baker v. Hubbard (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 226, 231-234, 161 Cal.Rptr. 551 ; Los Banos Gravel Co. v. Freeman (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 785, 797-798, 130 Cal.Rptr. 180 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when Defendant claims that foreclosure of Plaintiff's lien has been barred by the posting of a timely and sufficient notice of nonresponsibility. If the notice was signed and verified by an agent of defendant, an additional instruction on agency may be required.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Instruction as Checklist: This instruction provides a convenient checklist that counsel can use in closing argument with the use of visual aids. Note that there are words (such as "notice of nonresponsibility") that will be unknown to many jurors. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

When the contractor is not hired by the property owner, the owner can protect its interest from any lien by timely posting and recording a notice of nonresponsibility [Civ. Code §§ 3094, 3129; Baker v. Hubbard (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 226, 231-234, 161 Cal.Rptr. 551], unless the owner compelled the tenant to make the improvements [Los Banos Gravel Co. v. Freeman (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 785, 797-798, 130 Cal.Rptr. 180]. The required timing and contents of the notice of nonresponsibility are detailed in Civ. Code § 3094.

MB 300I.66 Defense Against Mechanics' Lien--Claim for Labor, etc., Not Included in the Contract Between the Owner and the Prime Contractor

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant can prevent Plaintiff from foreclosing [his/her/its] mechanics' lien against _____ [name property subject to lien], if Defendant has met [his/her/its] burden of proving both of the following:

1. That Plaintiff's claim of lien was a claim for labor, services, equipment, or materials that were not included in the contract between _____ [owner] and _____ [prime contractor], or in any modifications to that contract; and

2. That Plaintiff had _____ [either actual knowledge or constructive notice] of that contract and any modifications before [he/she/it] furnished that labor, services, equipment, or materials.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If the contract between _____ [owner] and _____ [prime contractor], or a modification of that contract, was filed with the county recorder of _____ [name] county, then Plaintiff is considered to have received actual notice of the contract.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3124.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to bar foreclosure of a mechanics' lien even when defendant claims that the plaintiff made a lien claim that included a claim for labor, services, equipment, or materials not included in the contract between the owner and the original contractor or in any modifications of that contract. Use the optional paragraph if the contract or modification has been filed with the county recorder in the manner required by Civ. Code § 3124.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms in Closing: The term "constructive notice" in the second element of this defense could be confusing to jurors in any case, let alone a construction case. The term will have to be carefully explained in closing argument together with an explanation of the rationale for the rule. The same is true for the term "foreclosing" as well as, perhaps, "modifications to the contract" and "actual notice." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

A lien claimant employed by a contractor or a subcontractor may not make a claim for labor, services, equipment, or materials not included in the contract between the owner and the original contractor and not in any modification of that contract, if the claimant had actual knowledge or constructive notice of the contract provisions before furnishing the labor, services, equipment, or materials [Civ. Code § 3124]. Filing the contract or its modifications with the county recorder of the county in which the property to be improved is located before work begins constitutes actual notice of the contract's provisions and of any modifications [Civ. Code § 3124].

Authority: Civ. Code § 3158.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to bar foreclosure of a mechanics' lien when the defendant claims that plaintiff failed to serve a stop notice after a demand for one.

[3] Comment

Any person who fails to serve the owner with a stop notice after a written demand for it from the owner forfeits his or her right to a mechanics' lien [Civ. Code § 3158]. "Stop notice" is defined in Civ. Code § 3103 and in MB 300I.121. The stop notice must be served within the time in which a mechanics' lien must be recorded [Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3117, 3160].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.68

MB 300I.68 Preliminary 20-Day Notice (Public Work)

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover on [his/her/its] _____ [stop notice and/or payment bond claim], Plaintiff was required to cause a preliminary 20-day notice to be given to _____ [prime contractor] and to _____ [public entity] within 20 days of the date on which Plaintiff furnished the first labor, services, equipment, or materials for which Plaintiff is now making a claim.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

That notice was required to contain a substantially accurate general description of the labor, services, equipment, and materials being furnished by Plaintiff and the name of the party to whom Plaintiff was furnishing the labor, services, equipment, and materials.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

That notice was required to be delivered to _____ [prime contractor] and _____ [public entity] personally or by mailing it to them by first class mail, by registered mail, or by certified mail, postage prepaid. [Service by registered or certified mail is complete at the time of deposit.]

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If Plaintiff failed to comply with this requirement, then you must find for Defendant on the _____ [stop notice and/or payment bond] claim.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3098, 3183, 3252(a); American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1197, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the service, timeliness, or sufficiency of a preliminary 20-day notice (public work) is at issue. Use the optional parts of the instruction if the contents of the notice or the manner of its delivery is at issue.

Except for the Department of Public Works and the Department of General Services, the statute does not explain who at the public entity is to be served [Civ. Code § 3098(a)]. If this is an issue, then an additional instruction may be required. Additional instructions may also be required if there is an issue over whether service by mail was made on the contractor at a place where it maintains an office, conducts business, or resides [Civ. Code § 3098(a)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms in Closing: This instruction contains several terms of art that will have to be explained in closing (e.g., "payment bond," "stop notice," and "preliminary notice"). Note the inconsistencies in the case law discussed in the comment below on the issue of whether estoppel and waiver defenses apply to public works projects. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A condition precedent to recovery on a stop notice or payment bond claim on a public works project [Civ. Code § 3183] by a subcontractor or materialman who has no direct contractual relationship with the prime contractor is service of a timely and sufficient preliminary 20-day notice (public work) on the prime contractor and the public agency concerned [Civ. Code § 3098; American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1197, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539]. Those who have a direct contract with the prime contractor [Civ. Code § 3098(a)], those who perform actual labor for wages [Civ. Code § 3098(a); Rich-Lee Equipment Rentals, Inc. v. Intermountain Constr. Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 581, 585-590, 145 Cal.Rptr. 106], and certain trust funds are not required to serve preliminary 20-day notices [Civ. Code § 3098(a), (c)].

The notice must be in writing [Civ. Code § 3098(a); Windsor Mills v. Richard B. Smith, Inc. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 336, 340-341, 77 Cal.Rptr. 300] and must state with substantial accuracy a general description of the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or to be furnished and the name of the party to whom it is being furnished (i.e., the party with whom the plaintiff had its contract) [Civ. Code § 3098(a)]. The notice must be served within 20 days after the plaintiff first furnished labor, services, equipment, or materials to the jobsite [Civ. Code § 3098(d); American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1197, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539]. A claimant who failed to give timely notice is not precluded from giving notice late. However, the claimant will be entitled to assert a claim against a payment bond and file a stop notice only for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished within 20 days before the notice and any time thereafter [Civ. Code § 3098(d)]. The requirements for service are set forth in Civ. Code § 3098(a).

Although the defendants on private works can waive the requirements or can be estopped to rely on the plaintiff's failure to give a timely and sufficient preliminary 20-day notice [Windsor Mills v. Richard B. Smith, Inc. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 336, 341-342, 77 Cal.Rptr. 300 ; Scott, Blake & Wynne v. Summit Ridge Estates, Inc. (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 347, 353, 59 Cal.Rptr. 587 ; see MB 300I.60], waiver and estoppel may not be applicable on public works projects [see A.J. Setting Co. v. Trustees of Cal. State University & Colleges (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 374, 384-385, 174 Cal.Rptr. 43 (estoppel may not be invoked to extend time limits of Civ. Code § 3210); but see Structural Steel

Fabricators, Inc. v. City of Orange (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1206, 1210-1212, 286 Cal.Rptr. 24 (estoppel may be asserted to extend time for filing action to enforce stop notice on public works project when city lulled claimant into sitting on its rights and city will not be exposed to paying twice for same work); *Structural Steel Fabricators, Inc. v. [1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant can prevent Plaintiff from enforcing [his/her/its] claim on a stop notice on a public work project if Defendant proves that Plaintiff willfully gave Defendant a false stop notice.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3192.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant, a public entity, claims that the plaintiff is barred from any participation in funds withheld pursuant to a stop notice because the plaintiff gave a false stop notice. For the definition of "stop notice," see MB 300I.121.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms and Concepts in Closing: The key term in this instruction is the word "willfully." However, many jurors may be confused by the phrase "willfully gave Defendant a false stop notice." So, explain that concept carefully. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

A public entity receiving a stop notice is required to withhold from the original contractor, or anyone acting under that contractor's authority, money or bonds sufficient to meet the claim stated in the stop notice and sufficient to pay the public entity's reasonable cost of any litigation under the stop notice. The public entity may satisfy this requirement by refusing to release money held in escrow [Civ. Code § 3186; see Pub. Contract Code §§ 10263, 22300]. However, Civ. Code § 3192 provides that any person who willfully gives a false stop notice to a public entity forfeits all right to participate in the distribution of money or bonds withheld pursuant to that stop notice.

Defendant can prevent Plaintiff from enforcing [his/her/its] claim on a stop notice on a public work project if Defendant proves that Plaintiff willfully included in [his/her/its] stop notice a claim for labor, services, equipment, or materials not furnished for the work of improvement for which the notice was given.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3192.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims as a defense to enforcement of a stop notice that the Plaintiff included in a stop notice given to a public entity a claim for labor, services, equipment, or materials not furnished to the public project for which the stop notice was given. For the definition of "stop notice," see MB 300I.121.

MB 300I.71 Written Notice to Surety and Bond Principal--Public Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover on [his/her/its] payment bond claim, Plaintiff was required to cause a written notice to be given to the surety and to the _____ [contractor or subcontractor], who is the principal on the bond, within _____ [15 days after a notice of completion was recorded or, if no notice of completion was recorded, 75 days after the work of improvement was completed].

The notice was required by law to contain all of the following:

1. A description of the kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials that Plaintiff furnished or agreed to furnish;
2. The name of the person to or for whom the labor, services, equipment, or materials were furnished; and
3. The approximate value of any labor, services, equipment, or materials already furnished or to be furnished.

The notice was required to be given to the surety and to the _____ [contractor or subcontractor] by personal delivery, or by properly addressing and mailing it by either certified or registered mail with the postage prepaid.

If Plaintiff failed to comply with all of these requirements, then you must find for Defendant on the payment bond claim.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3096, 3227, 3252; American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1197, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when service, timeliness, or sufficiency of the written notice from the plaintiff to the surety and bond principal is at issue in a case involving a claim on a payment bond. This written notice is an alternative to a plaintiff who failed to serve a preliminary 20-day notice (public work) in accordance with Civ. Code §§ 3098, 3252(a) [see MB 300I.68]. Only those portions of the instruction that cover disputed issues should be used. For example, if there is no dispute over the contents or sufficiency of the notice, omit those portions of the instruction.

This instruction also does not cover the specific requirements for delivering notice to the bond principal and surety. If these requirements are at issue, the instruction must be modified [see Civ. Code §§ 3227, 3252(b), discussed in [3], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Instruction as Checklist: This is a detailed instruction that can be used as a convenient checklist in closing argument with the use of visual aids. Note that the instruction contains a few unfamiliar words or concepts that will need to be explained to the jury. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

To enforce a claim against a payment bond given in connection with a public work, the claimant must give the same 20-day preliminary notice that is required as a prerequisite to establishing a stop notice [Civ. Code § 3252(a); see Civ. Code §§ 3096, 3098; see also MB 300I.68]. If preliminary notice is not given as prescribed by Civ. Code § 3252(a), a claimant may nonetheless enforce a claim against the bond by giving written notice to the surety and the bond principal within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If a notice of completion is not recorded, the time for giving written notice to the surety is extended to 75 days after completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3252(b); American Buildings Co. v. Bay Commercial Construction, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1197, 121 Cal.Rptr.2d 539].

The written notice given to the surety or bond principal when no 20-day preliminary notice was given must include all of the following information [Civ. Code §§ 3227, 3252(b)]:

- A description of the kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or agreed to be furnished by the claimant;
- The name of the person to or for whom the labor, services, equipment, or materials were furnished; and
- The amount in value, as near as may be determined, of any labor, services, equipment, or materials already furnished or to be furnished.

The notice may be personally delivered or deposited in the mail, postage prepaid, certified or registered, and addressed in any of the following ways that apply [Civ. Code §§ 3227, 3252(b)]:

- If the surety is an individual, to the surety's residence or place of business, if known. If the surety's residence address is unknown, the notice should be addressed to the clerk of the county in which the bond has been recorded.
- If the surety is a corporation to (1) the office of or in care of the agent designated on the bond, (2) the office of or in care of any of the surety's officers who are located in California, or (3) the office of or in care of the surety's statutory agent in California.

- To the bond principal at the principal's last known address.

- In the same manner provided for service of summons in civil actions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 et seq.].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.72

MB 300I.72 Exoneration of a Surety

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

"Exoneration of a surety" means that the surety has been released from liability on [his/her/its] promise to answer for _____ [the debt or default or miscarriage] of _____ [name of principal]. Exoneration is a defense to Plaintiff's action for _____ [identify plaintiff's cause of action against surety]. This means that Defendant is not liable to Plaintiff if Defendant has met [his/her/its] burden of proving any of the following:

1. That the obligations of _____ [principal] to Plaintiff were fully performed, or an offer of full performance was properly made by _____ [principal] to Plaintiff;
2. That after Defendant asked Plaintiff to do so, Plaintiff failed to proceed first against _____ [principal] or to pursue another remedy available to Plaintiff and not available to Defendant that would have lightened Defendant's burdens;
3. That the remedies or rights of Plaintiff against _____ [principal] were impaired or suspended as a result of acts or omissions of Plaintiff without the Defendant's consent. However, mere delay by Plaintiff in proceeding against _____ [principal] or in seeking to enforce other remedies available to Plaintiff does not exonerate Defendant; or
4. That the original obligation of _____ [principal] was altered in any regard, as a result of acts or omissions of Plaintiff without the Defendant's consent, other than an agreement by Plaintiff to accept less than the balance owed on the original obligation.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, Defendant may not be exonerated by any of the following:

- 1. Any change, alteration, or modification of any contracts, plans, specifications, or agreements concerning the project or the furnishing of labor, services, equipment, or materials for the project;
- 2. Any change or modification of any terms of payment or any extension of the time for any payment having to do with the project;
- 3. Any rescission or attempted rescission of the contract or agreement for the project or of the bond provided by Defendant;
- 4. Any language in the bond provided by Defendant attempting to limit the right of recovery of claimants like Plaintiff who otherwise would be entitled to recover under that bond or the contract or agreement for the project;
- 5. Any fraud practiced by any person other than Plaintiff;
- 6. Any breach of the contract between _____ [owner] and _____ [prime contractor] by _____ [owner or prime contractor or other obligee of bond]; or
- 7. Any act by _____ [owner] done in good faith and in compliance with any of the following provisions of the Civil Code: _____ [quote or paraphrase provision involved].

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 2787, 2819-2825, 2839, 2845, 3225, 3226, 3263; Wexler v. McLucas (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 14, 121 Cal.Rptr. 453 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define exoneration when that has been asserted by a surety as a defense. This defense is available against the causes of action set out in MB 300I.07-MB 300I.12 and should be given after those instructions. The final paragraph is optional because it is only for use when the bond was given pursuant to one of the requirements of Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.

This instruction does not cover advance waivers in the bond itself of acts that would otherwise constitute an exoneration [City of Sacramento v. Trans Pacific Industries, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 389, 400-401, 159 Cal.Rptr. 514].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Instruction in Closing: This complex instruction could be confusing to the jury because it involves multiple parties (plaintiff, principal, and surety) and numerous terms of art. Counsel should carefully explain the instruction in closing argument, preferably with the use of visual aids. And, by slowly going over each element. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

A surety is one who promises to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, or who hypothecates property for that purpose [Civ. Code § 2787; see Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, MB 900C.94, for an instruction setting forth definition of a surety]. The "exoneration" of a surety means the release of the surety from liability on its promise to answer for another [see Wexler v. McLucas (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 14, 121 Cal.Rptr. 453], which means that exoneration is a defense against actions to enforce that promise.

This instruction follows the general statutory definitions of what amounts to exoneration of a surety. Paragraph 1 comes from Civ. Code § 2839; Paragraph 2 comes from Civ. Code § 2845; Paragraph 3 comes from Civ. Code §§ 2819 and 2823; and Paragraph 4 comes from Civ. Code §§ 2819 and 2822(b). However, this defense is severely restricted in the case of statutory payment bonds provided under Civ. Code § 3082 et seq. for certain private and public works of improvement [Civ. Code §§ 3225, 3226, 3263]. These restrictions are set forth in the final paragraph.

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 422, Insurance and Bonding Practice (Matthew Bender).

Any payments that Defendant has met its burden of proving were properly made to other claimants must be subtracted from this _____ [payment bond or offsite improvement bond] amount of $ _____ to determine how much is available to satisfy Plaintiff's claim.

Authority: Roystone Co. v. Darling (1915) 171 Cal. 526, 543, 154 P. 15 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant surety claims that the plaintiff's recovery on the payment bond, the offsite improvement bond, or the contractor's state license bond is limited by the amount of the penal sum of that bond. The instruction should follow the plaintiff's burden of proof instruction on the particular bond involved.

[3] Comment

Payment bonds [see MB 300I.07, MB 300I.08], offsite improvement bonds [see MB 300I.09], and contractor's state license bonds [see MB 300I.12] are limited in their liability. If the defendant's prior payment of the legitimate claims of others when deducted from the penal sum of the bond leaves an amount inadequate to completely satisfy the plaintiff's claim, then the plaintiff's claim may be satisfied only to the extent the penal sum of the bond has not been exhausted [see Roystone Co. v. Darling (1915) 171 Cal. 526, 543, 154 P. 15].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that there is a balance due to the contractor that must be offset against the damages claimed by the owner in an action against a contractor's payment bond surety. The instruction should follow the owner's burden of proof instruction in MB 300I.10[1].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.76

MB 300I.76 Statute of Repose[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has raised the defense that Plaintiff's action is barred by the statute of repose. Defendant has the burden of proving this defense.

The statute of repose is a special limitation period that applies to lawsuits against a _____ [builder/contractor or specify other defendant protected by statutes of repose] for construction defects. Under the statute of repose, a person must bring the lawsuit within a certain period of time or lose the right to sue. If the defect complained of is discoverable by a reasonable inspection, then the lawsuit must be filed within four years after the substantial completion of the work. If the defect complained of is not discoverable by a reasonable inspection, then the lawsuit must be filed within 10 years after the substantial completion of the work.

In this case, the work on _____ [specify work of improvement] was substantially completed on _____ [date], which is more than four years before _____ [date], the date that this lawsuit was filed. This means that if you find that _____ [specify defect(s) at issue] [was/were] discoverable by a reasonable inspection, then you must find that Plaintiff cannot recover. [Optional (See Use of Instruction) If you find that only some of _____ (specify defect(s) at issue) were discoverable by a reasonable inspection, then the statute of repose bars recovery for those defects only.]

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1, 337.15; Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 366, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517 ; Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 642, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273 ; Winston Square Homeowner's Assn. v. Centex West, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d 282, 290, 261 Cal.Rptr. 605 ; Renown, Inc. v. Hensel Phelps Construction Co. (1984) 154 Cal.App.3d 413, 420, 201 Cal.Rptr. 242 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant alleges that the plaintiff's claim is barred by the statute of repose because the defects complained of are patent defects and the action was filed more than four years after the work was substantially completed. The instruction may be used only if the court decides that whether the defects were patent or latent defects is a question of fact for the jury [see [3][h], below, for discussion of whether this determination is a question of law or fact].

If there is a question of fact about the date of substantial completion of the work of improvement, a further instruction on that point will be necessary.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using Statute of Limitation Defense in Construction Defect Cases: The conventional wisdom is that statute of limitation defenses do not sit well with juries, and that a motion for summary judgment is the best way to present the defense. Of course, issues of fact can defeat a motion for summary judgment and this instruction focuses on the factual issue of whether a construction defect was discoverable by a "reasonable inspection." Unless the defect is plainly visible (e.g., the lack of a fence around a swimming pool), defense counsel faces an uphill battle. Note the comment in [3][h], below, that the California Supreme Court has not yet ruled on whether the latent/patent determination is for the court or the jury. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Statutes of Repose

There are two statutes that establish two different outside time limits for actions against builders or design professionals. In addition to those who actually build the improvement, the protected professionals include any person furnishing or performing the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, or observation of the construction of an improvement to real property [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1(a), 337.15(a)]. In actions for latent defects, developers, sureties, and persons who furnish or perform testing in the construction of an improvement to real property are also protected [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)] for defects in the construction of real property. Which time limit applies depends on whether the defect is considered "patent" or "latent" [see [b], below]. An action for damages for a patent deficiency must be brought within four years after the improvement's substantial completion [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a)]. An action for damages for a latent deficiency must be brought within 10 years after the substantial completion of the development or improvement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)(1); Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 366, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517; Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 643, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273].

[b] Latent and Patent Defects Defined

A "patent" deficiency is a deficiency that is apparent by reasonable inspection [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(e); Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 643, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273]. A "latent" deficiency is a deficiency that is not apparent by reasonable inspection [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(b); Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 643, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273]. The courts have expanded on these definitions, adding that a patent defect is one that can be discovered "by such an inspection as would be made in the exercise of ordinary care and prudence." Conversely, a latent defect is one that is hidden and would not be discovered by a reasonably careful inspection [Geertz v. Ausonio (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1363, 1367, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 318 ; Wagner v. State of California (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 922, 927, 150 Cal.Rptr. 489]. For example, an engineer's allegedly negligent design and posting of an intersection created a patent defect [Wagner v. State of California (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 922, 927, 150 Cal.Rptr. 489 ; see Mattingly v. Anthony Industries, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 506, 511, 167 Cal.Rptr. 292 (absence of swimming pool fence a patent defect)], but a defectively designed and installed heating and air conditioning system was a latent defect when none of the defendants could pinpoint the cause of the malfunctions or fix the system [Baker v. Walker & Walker, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 746, 759, 184 Cal.Rptr. 245].

The latent/patent determination, as applied to residential construction, is an objective test based on the reasonable expectations of the average consumer. The question is whether the defect is open and obvious and within the common experience of the average consumer in the community [Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 644, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273 ; Geertz v. Ausonio (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1363, 1368, 1370, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 318 ; Mattingly v. Anthony Industries, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 506, 511, 167 Cal.Rptr. 292 (absence of swimming pool fence a patent defect even though defect was not readily apparent to plaintiff, an 18 month old child)].

Whether a defect is patent or latent is determined by the defect's nature at the time construction was completed [Eden v. Van Tine (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 879, 887-888, 148 Cal.Rptr. 215].

[c] Exclusions and Exceptions

The limitations prescribed in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1 and 337.15 may not be asserted by any person owning, possessing, or controlling the improvement at the time a deficiency proximately causes injury [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1(d), 337.15(e); Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 373, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517]. Furthermore, the statute of repose for latent defects does not apply as a defense against any of the following:

- Actions based on willful misconduct or fraudulent concealment [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(f); see Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 373, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P. 3d 517 ; Barnhouse v. City of Pinole (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 171, 187, 183 Cal.Rptr. 881 (fraudulent concealment)];
- Actions based on the strict liability or negligence of a manufacturer of products [Baker v. Walker & Walker, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 746, 752-758, 184 Cal.Rptr. 245];
- Actions for personal injuries or wrongful death [Martinez v. Traubner (1982) 32 Cal.3d 755, 759-761, 187 Cal.Rptr. 251, 653 P.2d 1046]; and
- Cross-complaints for indemnity under Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b) [see [d], below].

[d] Cross-Complaints for Indemnity

The statute of repose for latent defects excludes from its 10-year limitation period a cross-complaint for indemnity filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b) in an action that has been brought within the time period set by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a) [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c)]. Thus, if a plaintiff timely begins an action against another party for construction defects, that defendant can cross-complain against other parties for indemnity in accord with Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10, and the action for indemnity will be timely [Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 373, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517 ; Valley Circle Estates v. VTN Consolidated, Inc. (1983) 33 Cal.3d 604, 613, 189 Cal.Rptr. 871, 659 P.2d 1160 ; FNB Mortgage Corp. v. Pacific General Group (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 1116, 1126-1129, 90 Cal.Rptr.2d 841 ; Time for Living, Inc. v. Guy Hatfield Homes/All American Development Co. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 30, 37-38, 280 Cal.Rptr. 904]. A cross-complaint for indemnity qualifies for this exception only when the defendant and the other party were engaged in work on the same development or work of improvement [Time for Living, Inc. v. Guy Hatfield Homes/All American Development Co. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 30, 40-42, 280 Cal.Rptr. 904 ; Sandy v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 1277, 1284, 247 Cal.Rptr. 677].

However, under Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1, even a cross-complaint for indemnity, when filed after the four-year period's expiration, is barred by the statute [Wagner v. State of California (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 922, 928, 930, 150 Cal.Rptr. 489].

[e] Commencement of Limitation Period for Patent Defects

The limitation period for the statute of repose for patent defects begins to run on the improvement's substantial completion [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a); Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 366, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517 ; Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 644, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273]. Neither the statute nor reported decisions define the term "substantial completion."

[f] Commencement of Limitation Period for Latent Defects

The limitation period for the statute of repose for latent defects also begins to run on "the substantial completion of the development or improvement" [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)]. However, the statute further provides that "[t]he date of substantial completion shall relate specifically to the performance or furnishing" of the designated services "by each trade or profession rendering services to the improvement" [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(g)]. The 10-year limitation period therefore begins to run when an individual (or entity) substantially completes his or her (or its) work on the improvement, rather than when the improvement itself is substantially completed [Industrial Risk Insurers v. Rust Engineering Co. (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1038, 1040, 1046, 283 Cal.Rptr. 873].

Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(g) also provides that the 10-year period will commence not later than the earliest of the following:

- The date of final inspection by the applicable public agency;
- The date of a valid notice of completion's recording;
- The date of the improvement's use or occupation; or
- One year after termination or cessation of work on the improvement.

[g] Equitable Tolling of Period of Repose

The statute of repose for latent defects may not be equitably tolled during any period when the contractor, who has breached a warranty, claims that the defect can be repaired and attempts to make repairs [Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 383, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517 ; FNB Mortgage Corp. v. Pacific General Group (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 1116, 1131-1134, 90 Cal.Rptr.2d 841].

An intermediate appellate court held that when certification is denied in a class action, the statute of repose on an individual plaintiff's latent construction defect claim may be tolled while the class action was awaiting certification, if the plaintiff was a potential member of that class [Becker v. McMillin Construction Co. (1991) 226 Cal.App.3d 1493, 1497, 1502, 277 Cal.Rptr. 491]. According to the court, whether the statute of repose for such a claim will be tolled depends on whether the filing of the class action gave the defendant adequate notice of the identity of the plaintiff and the nature of the substantive claims in the individual action [Becker v. McMillin Construction Co. (1991) 226 Cal.App.3d 1493, 1498-1502, 277 Cal.Rptr. 491]. However, the California Supreme Court's reasons in a subsequent case for not tolling the statute of limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 may bring the Becker decision into question [Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 373-383, 2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517].

[h] Question of Law or Fact

It has been said that whether a defect is apparent by a reasonable inspection (and therefore is a patent defect) is a question of fact [Geertz v. Ausonio (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1363, 1368, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 318 ; Winston Square Homeowner's Assn. v. Centex West, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d 282, 290, 261 Cal.Rptr. 605 ; see Anderson v. Brouwer (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 176, 181, 160 Cal.Rptr. 65 (whether inspection would have disclosed extent of defects is normally question of fact)]. However, the question is one of fact only when reasonable minds could differ on whether the defect would be apparent by a reasonable inspection [Geertz v. Ausonio (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1363, 1371, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 318]. At least two courts have held that certain types of construction defects are patent defects as a matter of law [Preston v. Goldman (1986) 42 Cal.3d 108, 123, 227 Cal.Rptr. 817, 720 P.2d 476 ; Mattingly v. Anthony Industries, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 506, 511, 167 Cal.Rptr. 292]. These cases have involved obvious defects such as the absence of a fence around a swimming pool or a bathing pond [Preston v. Goldman (1986) 42 Cal.3d 108, 123, 227 Cal.Rptr. 817, 720 P.2d 476 ; Mattingly v. Anthony Industries, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 506, 511, 167 Cal.Rptr. 292]. Cases that involve defects in actual construction such as roofing, drainage, plastering, gutters, chimneys, trim, or balconies, have viewed the determination of whether the defect is apparent by a reasonable inspection as a question of fact for the trier of fact [Winston Square Homeowner's Assn. v. Centex West, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d 282, 290, 261 Cal.Rptr. 605 ; Renown, Inc. v. Hensel Phelps Construction Co. (1984) 154 Cal.App.3d 413, 420-421, 201 Cal.Rptr. 242]. The practitioner proposing to use this instruction is advised to track the development of the law in this area. The cases deciding this issue as a matter of law did not explain their rationale for doing so, and the California Supreme Court has not yet ruled on whether the latent/patent determination is a question of law for the court or a question of fact for a jury.

PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.77

MB 300I.77 Delayed Discovery of Negligence Cause of Action

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has raised the defense that Plaintiff's action for negligence is barred by the statute of limitations. Defendant has the burden of proving this defense.

The statute of limitations is a law that required Plaintiff to bring [his/her/its] lawsuit for negligent damage to _____ [specify real property at issue] within three years. This three-year period is calculated from the date that Plaintiff either (1) actually discovered [his/her/its] injury and its negligent cause, or (2) could have discovered the injury and its cause through the exercise of reasonable diligence.

In this case, Plaintiff filed [his/her/its] complaint on _____ [date]. Therefore, the question for you to decide is whether, on or before _____ [insert date three years before filing of complaint], Plaintiff knew, or could have known through the exercise of reasonable diligence, not only about _____ [specify construction defects at issue in case], but that Defendant's alleged negligence was the cause of these defects.

Authority: Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 398, 407-409, 163 Cal.Rptr. 711 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in negligence actions based on construction defects discovered more than three years after the completion of the work of improvement. The instruction should only be used when the issue is whether or not the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in discovering the construction defect and the negligent cause of the construction defect. Whether a plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence is a question of fact for the court or jury to decide [Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 398, 409, 163 Cal.Rptr. 711 ; Enfield v. Hunt (1979) 91 Cal.App.3d 417, 419, 154 Cal.Rptr. 146]. This instruction is not to be used in cases involving breach of contract or breach of warranty, because different rules apply to the statute of limitations in those cases.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Concepts Thoroughly: Although perhaps its best argument, defense counsel will need to explain thoroughly the concept of "could have discovered ... through ... reasonable diligence." By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--When Plaintiff Discovers Defect Can Be Critical: The last clause of this instruction can be critical. The three year statute does not begin to run until after plaintiff knew or should have known of the construction defect, and after the plaintiff knew or should have known that it was defendant's negligence that caused the defect. This last element may not occur until after plaintiff consults with another contractor to determine what went wrong and why. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Statute of Limitations for Injuries to Real Property

Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b) provides a three-year statute of limitations for actions for injury to real property [Regents of University of Cal. v. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 624, 641, 147 Cal.Rptr. 486, 581 P.2d 197 (claim against architect for negligent injury to real property); Liptak v. Diane Apartments, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 762, 769, 167 Cal.Rptr. 440 (action against contractors for injuries to real property)].

[b] Commencement of Limitations Period

A cause of action for damages to real property sounding in negligence does not accrue until the plaintiff discovers his or her injury and the negligent cause of the injury, or until the plaintiff could have discovered the injury and its negligent cause through the exercise of reasonable diligence [Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 398, 407-409, 163 Cal.Rptr. 711]. When the defendant is an architect or engineer, the cases generally concern negligent preparation of plans or specifications or negligent supervision, which subsequently results in property damage or construction delay [Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 278, 301-302, 136 Cal.Rptr. 603 (contractor's claims for extras and damages for delay); Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal.App.3d 860, 867-868, 128 Cal.Rptr. 724 (negligent preparation of plans and negligent supervision of construction)].

PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.78

MB 300I.78 Statute of Limitations for Breach of Warranty in Case of Progressively Developing Damage

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has raised the defense that Plaintiff's action for breach of warranty is barred by the statute of limitations. Defendant has the burden of proving this defense.

Under the statute of limitations that applies to warranties, an action for breach of warranty must be commenced within four years from the date that Plaintiff discovered, or should have discovered, the construction defect and the breach of warranty. If you find that Plaintiff did discover, or should have discovered _____ [specify defects at issue] on or before _____ [insert date four years before filing of complaint], then you must return a verdict for Defendant and deny Plaintiff's claim for breach of warranty.

If you find that Plaintiff did discover, or should have discovered, only some of _____ [specify defects at issue] on or before _____ [insert date four years before filing of complaint], then you must decide whether Plaintiff may recover for the defects that appeared after _____ [insert date four years before filing of complaint]. When a property owner discovers construction defects, [he/she/it] has a duty to make a reasonable attempt to determine the extent of the construction deficiency. If you find that a reasonable inspection and investigation of the construction defects appearing before _____ [insert date four years before filing of complaint] would have led to the discovery of the construction defects that appeared later, then the statute of limitations bars recovery for these defects, and you must return a verdict for Defendant and deny Plaintiff's claim for breach of warranty.

Cal.App.2d. 231, 249-250, 254-256, 73 Cal.Rptr. 127 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there are progressively developing construction defects that first appeared more than four years before the complaint was filed. In these cases, the plaintiff will allege that the deficiencies that occurred outside of the limitations period were not sufficient to cause a reasonable person to investigate and to discover the construction deficiencies. The instruction will generally be used in connection with claims for breach of express warranty and breach of implied warranty.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Instruction in Closing; Use Visual Aid:

This could be a confusing instruction that will have to be carefully explained in closing argument.

Therefore, a time line or similar visual aid may be advisable. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1) creates a four-year statute of limitations for an action on a contract, obligation, or liability based on a written instrument. In actions based on progressively developing or continuing wrongs when the nature, extent, or permanence of the harm is difficult to discover, the running of the statute of limitations is postponed until the plaintiff discovers, or has an opportunity to discover, the facts [Anderson v. Brouwer (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 176, 181, 160 Cal.Rptr. 65 ; Bradler v. Craig (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 466, 471, 79 Cal.Rptr. 401 ; Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d. 231, 249-250, 254-256, 73 Cal.Rptr. 127].

A property owner who learns enough to put a reasonable person on inquiry has an obligation to investigate [Mills v. Forestex Co. (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 625, 648, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 273]. On discovering the initial construction defects, an owner must make reasonable efforts to determine the extent of the construction deficiencies [Anderson v. Brouwer (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 176, 181, 160 Cal.Rptr. 65]. Whether a reasonable inspection and further inquiry after discovery of the initial defects would have shown the extent of the construction deficiencies that subsequently appeared is normally a question of fact for the trier of fact [Anderson v. Brouwer (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 176, 181, 160 Cal.Rptr. 65].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.79

MB 300I.79 Statute of Limitations for Breach of Prospective Warranty

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has raised the defense that Plaintiff's action is barred by the statute of limitations. Defendant has the burden of proving this defense.

An action for breach of warranty must be commenced within four years from the date of the contract's completion. However, if a warranty relates to a future event and the defect cannot be discovered before that future event by the exercise of reasonable diligence, the warranty, though accompanied by a representation as to present condition, is a prospective warranty, and the statute of limitations begins to run at the time of the future event.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

For example, an implied warranty that _____ [describe work of improvement] will be fit for its intended use as _____ [specify intended use] includes a prospective warranty that _____ [describe work of improvement] will not _____ [specify how work allegedly failed to be fit for its intended purpose, e.g., leak or corrode or collapse] for a reasonable length of time after _____ [describe work of improvement] is completed. The statute of limitations on this prospective warranty therefore does not begin to run until the future event occurs. That is, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until _____ [describe work of improvement] _____ [specify how work allegedly failed to be fit for its intended purpose, e.g., leaks or corrodes or collapses].

Authorities: Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 573, 584, 12 Cal.Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897 ; Kaiser Cement & Gypsum Corp. v. Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 948, 960, 111 Cal.Rptr. 210 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff has filed suit more than four years after completion of the work of improvement, but less than four years after discovering that the work of improvement failed to comply with an express or implied warranty. However, counsel should first examine pertinent contract documents to determine if a different limitation period has been agreed on by the parties. If this instruction is given in connection with instructions on breach of implied warranty, then the jury may be asked to determine whether the "reasonable time" for the existence of the warranty expired more than four years before the filing of the complaint [see [3], below, for discussion of prospective implied warranties that last for a reasonable time]. In these cases, counsel may use the optional part of the instruction.

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With Terms: The optional paragraph of this instruction helps explain what could be a confusing concept to the jury. Still, there are many words that may puzzle the jury. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

If a warranty relates to a future event before which the defect cannot be discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence, the warranty, though accompanied by a representation as to present condition, is prospective in character and the statute of limitations begins to run at the time of the future event [Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 573, 584, 12 Cal.Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897]. This rule applies to both implied and express warranties [Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 573, 584, 12 Cal.Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897].

An implied warranty that a work of improvement is fit for a particular purpose includes a prospective warranty that the work will continue to be fit for that purpose for a reasonable length of time. Thus, it has been held that an implied warranty that tubing is fit for use in a heating system includes a prospective warranty that the tubing will not corrode and leak for a reasonable period of time. The future event for this prospective warranty was the leaking of the defective tubing, not discovered by the general contractor until several years after the installation was complete. The California Supreme Court held that the action was timely, even though it had been filed more than four years after delivery of the work of improvement [Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 573, 584-585, 12 Cal.Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897]. In these cases, a primary jury question may be: What is the reasonable time that an implied warranty should be deemed to cover?

PART C DEFENSES AND CONDITIONS THAT MAY BAR OR LIMIT RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.80

MB 300I.80 Notice Defenses for Claims of Breach of Implied Warranty

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover damages from Defendant for breach of implied warranty, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] gave Defendant notice of the breach within a reasonable time after Plaintiff discovered or should have discovered the breach.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The notice given must be sufficient to let Defendant know that Plaintiff claims there was a breach.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, if you find that Defendant has entirely abandoned the contract and the project under facts that make it clear that Defendant does not intend to return to the job and finish the construction, you may find that notice of breach of warranty is unnecessary.

Authorities: Com. Code § 2607(3)(A); U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2607; Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 ; Pierce v. Wright (1953) 117 Cal.App.2d 718, 725, 256 P.2d 1049 ; New England Etc. Co. v. Chicago Etc. Co. (1918) 36 Cal.App. 584, 585, 172 P. 1122 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that the plaintiff did not give notice of the alleged breach of warranty or that the notice given was late or insufficient. The first option may be used if there is an issue as to the notice's adequacy. If the plaintiff claims that notice was futile because the defendant had abandoned the project, the second option may be used. However, counsel should note that the authority for the second option is not entirely on point [see [3], below, for discussion of authority for lack of need for notice of breach of warranty when builder has abandoned project].

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")].

[3] Comment

Builders and sellers of new construction are generally held to an implied warranty that a completed structure was designed and constructed in a reasonably workmanlike manner [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 ; see MB 300I.15]. By analogy to the Commercial Code provisions on the sale of goods [see Com. Code §§ 2101-2801; see also Ch. 3H, Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contract Instructions], the California Supreme Court concluded that this common law implied warranty should be subject to the notice requirement of former Com. Code § 2607(3) [now see Com. Code § 2607(3)(A)], which provides that recovery for breach of warranty requires notice of the alleged breach within a reasonable time after the buyer discovers or should have discovered the breach [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88]. This notice requirement is designed to allow the defendant an opportunity to repair the defective item, to reduce damages, to avoid defective products in the future, and to negotiate a settlement. The requirement also protects against stale claims [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380, 115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88].

The notice given must be sufficient to let the defendant know that the plaintiff claims there was a breach [U.C.C. Comment No. 4 to Com. Code § 2607].

Notice to a contractor has been held to be unnecessary when the contractor entirely abandons the contract and the project under facts that make it clear that the contractor does not intend to return to the job and finish the construction [Pierce v. Wright (1953) 117 Cal.App.2d 718, 725, 256 P.2d 1049 ; New England Etc. Co. v. Chicago Etc. Co. (1918) 36 Cal.App. 584, 585, 172 P. 1122 ; Bacigalupi v. Phoenix Bldg. Etc. Co. (1910) 14 Cal.App. 632, 639, 112 P. 892]. However, these cases all dealt with contractual provisions requiring notice to the contractor in certain contingencies, and none of them is very recent. Whether and how these holdings would be applied to the court-imposed requirement of notice of breach of warranty is not at all clear.

MB 300I.81 Affirmative Defenses to Claim for Violation of Statutory Construction Standards for New Residence Sold on or After January 1, 2003

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has raised the defense that

[Choose among the following (see Civ. Code § 945.5)]

Plaintiff's residence failed to meet construction standard _____ [specify standard] due to _____ [describe unforeseen act of nature], which I have determined to be an unforeseen act of nature.

[OR]

Plaintiff's residence failed to meet construction standard _____ [specify standard] because Plaintiff unreasonably failed to minimize or prevent any resulting damage in a timely manner. [Add if alleged by defendant: This includes Plaintiff's failure to allow Defendant reasonable and timely access for inspections and repairs and/or to give Defendant timely notice after Plaintiff discovered the violation of the construction standard.] [Continue] This does not include damages due to Defendant's untimely or inadequate response to Plaintiff's claim that the construction standard had been violated.

[OR]

Plaintiff's residence failed to meet construction standard _____ [specify standard] because Plaintiff [OR] _____ [insert name of plaintiff's agent, employee, subcontractor, independent contractor, or consultant] who is Plaintiff's [agent/employee/subcontractor, independent contractor/consultant], failed to follow Defendant's recommendations. For this defense to be successful, you must find that Defendant has shown that Plaintiff had written notice of Defendant's recommended schedules and recommendations and that the recommendations were reasonable at the time they were issued.

[OR]

Plaintiff's residence failed to meet construction standard _____ [specify standard] due to [alterations/ordinary wear and tear/misuse/neglect/use for something other than intended use] by Plaintiff [OR] _____ (insert name of plaintiff's agent or an independent third party) who is _____ (Plaintiff's agent or an independent third party)].

[OR]

The time period for filing an action for failure to meet construction standard _____ [specify standard] had expired when this action was filed. This action is therefore barred. The time period within which an action for failure to meet standard _____ [specify standard] is _____ is _____ [specify applicable time period (see Civ. Code § 896(f), (g)(6), (9), (10), (12), (14), 941(d))].

[OR]

He/She has obtained a valid release from liability for any violation of construction standard _____ [specify standard].

[OR]

He/She has successfully corrected the violation of construction standard _____ [specify standard], which is the subject of Plaintiff's claim.

[Continue]

If you find that Defendant has proved this defense, Plaintiff's damages must be reduced by your determination of any percentage of Plaintiff's responsibility. I will calculate any actual reduction.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 945.5.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant has alleged and presented evidence supporting any of the statutory affirmative defenses to the plaintiff's claim of a construction defect based on a violation of the construction standards. In the first option in this instruction, it is assumed that what constitutes an "unforeseen act of nature" is a question of law and not a question of fact that the jury will be asked to decide.

[3] Comment

[a] Actions for Defective Construction in New Residences Sold on or After January 1, 2003--Overview and Applicability

In accordance with Division 2, Part 2, Title 7 of the Civil Code, "Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects" [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.], any action against a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938]. The action must be preceded by a mandatory pre-litigation procedure, which provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all pursuant to statutory time frames [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938].

At least in the case of construction defect situations involving new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, the Legislature effectively rendered inapplicable the effects of a decision in which the Supreme Court held, among other things, that construction defects must cause actual damage before they can be actionable in tort [see Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 24 Cal.4th 627, 636-647, 101 Cal.Rptr.2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125].

The provisions, standards, rights, and obligations set forth in Title 7 are binding on all original purchasers and their successors-in-interest. Associations are considered to be original purchasers and have standing to enforce these provisions, standards, rights, and obligations [Civ. Code § 945].

Title 7 does not apply to any action by a claimant to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of a statute (other than Title 7) [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

Title 7 does not eliminate or abrogate the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, which requires plaintiff's counsel to furnish an Attorney's Certificate in an action against a design professional, for claims and damages that are not covered by the statutory scheme governing construction defect litigation [Civ. Code § 937].

[b] Affirmative Defenses

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if he or she can demonstrate that the claimed violation of the statutory construction standards was caused by any of the following [Civ. Code § 945.5(a)-(d)]:

- An unforeseen act of nature, defined as a weather condition, earthquake, or manmade event such as war, terrorism, or vandalism, in excess of the design criteria expressed by the applicable building codes, regulations, and ordinances in effect at the time of the original construction.
- A homeowner's unreasonable failure to minimize or prevent the claimed damages in a timely manner, including (1) the homeowner's failure to allow reasonable and timely access for inspections and repairs, and (2) the homeowner's failure to give timely notice to the builder after discovering a violation;

but excluding damages due to the builder's untimely or inadequate response to the homeowner's claim.

- The failure of the homeowner or his or her agent, employee, subcontractor, independent contractor, or consultant to follow the builder's or manufacturer's recommendations, or commonly accepted homeowner maintenance obligations; provided the builder can show that the homeowner had written notice of these recommendations and that the recommendations were reasonable at the time they were issued.
- The homeowner's, his or her agent's, or an independent third party's alterations, ordinary wear and tear, misuse, abuse, or neglect, or by the structure's use for something other than its intended purpose.

Other affirmative defenses include establishing that [Civ. Code § 945.5(e)-(g)]:

- The applicable statute of limitations has expired [see [c], below].
- The builder has obtained a valid release for the particular violation claimed.
- The builder has successfully repaired the particular violation claimed.

All affirmative defenses are preserved as to any causes of action to which Title 7 does not apply [Civ. Code § 945.5(h)].

[c] Applicable Time Periods for Filing Action

With certain limited exceptions listed below, any action brought under Title 7 must be filed within 10 years after substantial completion of the residence, but not later than 10 years after the date a valid notice of completion was recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 938, 941]. The four-year statute of limitations specified for patent defects and the 10-year statute of limitations for latent defects, specified by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1 and 337.15, respectively, do not apply to these actions [Civ. Code § 941(d)].

Exceptions to the 10-year limitation period include all of the following:

- Four years for actions alleging improper operation of electrical systems [Civ. Code § 896(f)].
- One year from original occupancy of adjacent unit for actions alleging noncompliance with governmental inter-unit noise transmission standards [Civ. Code § 896(g)(6)].
- Four years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of untreated steel fences and adjacent components [Civ. Code § 896(g)(9)].
- Five years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper application of paint and stains [Civ. Code § 896(g)(10)].
- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of landscaping systems [Civ. Code § 896(g)(12)].
- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of dryer ducts [Civ. Code § 896(g)(14)].

"Close of escrow" means the date of the close of escrow between the builder and the original homeowner. If the claimant is an association, "close of escrow" means the date of substantial completion [see Civ. Code § 1351(a)], or the date the builder relinquishes control over the association's ability to decide whether to initiate a claim, whichever is later [Civ. Code § 895(c)].

The applicable statute of limitations may be tolled pending the outcome of the mandatory pre-litigation process [see Civ. Code § 928].

The statute of limitations cannot be asserted by way of defense by any person in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of the subject residential property, at the time any deficiency in the residence constitutes the proximate cause for which it is proposed to make a claim or bring an action [Civ. Code § 941(c)].

Existing statutory and decisional law governing the tolling of statutes of limitations applies to the time periods for filing an action or making a claim for violation of the statutory construction standards, except for the special tolling provisions related to the pre-litigation procedure [Civ. Code § 941(e); see Civ. Code § 927].

PART D TYPICAL RELEASES AND WAIVERS THAT MAY BAR RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.90

MB 300I.90 Change Order as Accord and Satisfaction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has the burden of proving that when Plaintiff signed change order numbers _____ [numbers], Plaintiff was agreeing to accept the particular change order as full compensation not only for the work specifically described in the change order, but also for all of the effects of that change order on any other work and on the time allowed to complete the project. If Defendant meets the burden of proving this fact, then no damages can be awarded to Plaintiff for any of the effects caused by the particular change order.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1521-1523; Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 278, 302, 136 Cal.Rptr. 603 ; Rabinowitz v. Kandel (1969) 1 Cal.App.3d 961, 965, 81 Cal.Rptr. 897 ; Higson v. Montgomery Ward & Co. (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 333, 343-344, 69 Cal.Rptr. 497 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant contends that executed change orders amounted to accords and satisfactions, thus barring recovery.

Frequently there are several change orders and only some of them are actually signed by the plaintiff; this instruction is designed to be adjusted accordingly by inserting the numbers of those change orders actually at issue. This instruction should follow the plaintiff's burden of proof instructions on the particular cause of action involved [see MB 300I.01 -MB 300I.19].

[3] Comment

When it is clear from the express language of a fully executed, written change order, that the parties intended the change order to be an accord and satisfaction on all issues related to the change, i.e., both as to the specific work described and as to any impact on the balance of the project, then that change order may amount to a waiver of any claim the contractor has for delay or for any other impact caused by the change order [see Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 278, 302, 136 Cal.Rptr. 603 ; but see General Constr. Co. v. Oregon State Fish Com. (1976) 26 Or. App. 577, 554 P.2d 185, 188-189 ; J. A. Ross & Co. v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1953) 115 F.Supp. 187, 192].

As an accord and satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1523], a change order is governed by the same principles as apply to any contract; [Rabinowitz v. Kandel (1969) 1 Cal.App.3d 961, 965, 81 Cal.Rptr. 897] its language must be so interpreted as to give effect to the mutual intention of the parties as it existed at the time the change order was executed [Civ. Code § 1636; Salinas v. Souza & McCue Const. Co. (1967) 66 Cal.2d 217, 223-224, 57 Cal.Rptr. 337, 424 P.2d 921 , overruled on other grounds, Helfend v. So. Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1, 84 Cal.Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61]. That may require an analysis of the circumstances under which the change order was made [Code Civ. Proc. § 1860], including the conduct of the parties [California Metal Enameling Co. v. Waddington (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 391, 395-396, 141 Cal.Rptr. 443].

The defendant has the burden of proving that a change order was an accord and satisfaction [Rabinowitz v. Kandel (1969) 1 Cal.App.3d 961, 965, 81 Cal.Rptr. 897 ; Higson v. Montgomery Ward & Co. (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 333, 343-344, 69 Cal.Rptr. 497].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Overcoming Boilerplate Language: The terms of the change order will be important but not dispositive on this issue. Boilerplate language can be overcome by course of conduct, oral modifications, or waivers. By Ronald Oster

PART D TYPICAL RELEASES AND WAIVERS THAT MAY BAR RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.91

MB 300I.91 Lien Claim Waivers

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has the burden of proving that Plaintiff or Plaintiff's authorized agent signed a waiver of the lien claim.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant also has the burden of proving that Plaintiff was actually paid the amount set forth in the conditional waiver.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

If Defendant meets the burden of proving _____ [this fact or these facts], then Plaintiff may not recover payment from Defendant for the work described in the lien claim waiver.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3262.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one of the parties contends that a lien claim waiver by a subcontractor or materialman bars recovery. The instruction should follow the plaintiff's burden of proof instructions on the particular cause of action involved [see MB 300I.01 -MB 300I.19]. The instruction assumes that the court has made a legal determination that the waiver involved is substantially in the form required by the statute [Civ. Code § 3262; see J. A. Jones Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1568, 1579-1584, 33 Cal.Rptr.2d 206].

The optional sentence is for use when a conditional waiver is at issue. Conditional waivers are not effective unless there is evidence of payment of the amount set forth in the waiver to the claimant [Civ. Code § 3262(a), (d)].

[3] Comment

Owners and prime contractors often require subcontractors and materialmen to waive their lien claim rights as a condition to receiving progress payments. This practice led to abuses when a contractor or subcontractor was required to sign a waiver but was not actually paid, and the waiver was later used as a defense to the unpaid claim by the owner [see Bentz Plumbing & Heating v. Favaloro (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 145, 151-152, 180 Cal.Rptr. 223 ; see also Western Landscape Const. v. Bank of America (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 57, 59, 67 Cal.Rptr.2d 868 (lien and stop notice waiver form did not extinguish subcontractors' rights to recover retention)]. The purpose of Civ. Code § 3262 is to regulate lien claim waivers.

Neither the owner nor the original contractor may waive the claims and liens of other persons without their written consent. The written consent is not effective unless the claimant executes a written waiver. The waiver is only binding to release the owner, construction lender, or surety if it is substantially in one of the forms set forth in Civ. Code § 3262. Further, if the waiver is a conditional waiver, it is not effective unless the condition has been met by the actual payment of the amount set forth in the waiver. Evidence of payment may be by the claimant's endorsement on a single or joint payee check that has been paid by the bank on which it has been drawn or by written acknowledgment of payment given by the claimant [Civ. Code § 3262].

The California Supreme Court delineated the circumstances when lien rights are waived as follows [Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 882, 889, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 578, 938 P.2d 372]:

- A conditional waiver and release on progress payment;
- An unconditional waiver and release on progress payment;
- A conditional waiver and release on final payment; and
- An unconditional waiver and release on final payment.

A waiver and release of mechanic's lien rights is permitted only in conjunction with payment, or a promise of payment, and a conditional release is effective only if the claimant is actually paid [Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 882, 889, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 578, 938 P.2d 372]. The Supreme Court rejected the argument that because a pay-if-paid clause was not "precisely" a waiver, it was not subject to Civ. Code § 3262 [Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 882, 890, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 578, 938 P.2d 372 (pay-if-paid clause in private work void); see also Capitol Steel Fabricators, Inc. v. Mega Construction Co. (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 1049, 1061-1062, 68 Cal.Rptr.2d 672 (pay-if-paid clause in public work void)].

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.92

MB 300I.92 Joint Payee Checks

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant has the burden of proving that Defendant issued a check that met all of the following requirements:

- 1. The check was intended to be a payment for labor, services, equipment, or materials provided to the project;
- 2. The check was made payable jointly to Plaintiff and _____ [other payees];
- 3. The check was endorsed by Plaintiff; and
- 4. The check was not governed by instructions given by Defendant concerning how the proceeds of the check should be divided between Plaintiff and _____ [other payees].

If Defendant meets the burden of proving these facts, then the full amount of the check is assumed to have been paid to Plaintiff, regardless of the amount actually received by Plaintiff, and Plaintiff may not recover damages from Defendant in this action for labor, services, equipment, or materials intended to be paid for by the check.

Authority: Post Bros. Constr. Co. v. Yoder (1977) 20 Cal.3d 1, 5-8, 141 Cal.Rptr. 28, 569 P.2d 133 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one of the parties contends that endorsement of a joint check bars recovery. If there were several joint checks, this instruction must be modified accordingly. The instruction should follow the plaintiff's burden of proof instructions on the particular cause of action involved [see MB 300I.01 -MB 300I.19].

[3] Comment

Since the use of joint checks is well established by custom and practice in the construction industry, courts have held that, absent an agreement as to allocation of proceeds, the subcontractor or materialman who endorses the joint check is deemed to have received the money due and, to that extent, has given up any claim against the check's maker [Post Bros. Constr. Co. v. Yoder (1977) 20 Cal.3d 1, 5-8, 141 Cal.Rptr. 28, 569 P.2d 133].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Legal Effect of Acceptance: Many jurors may reject this argument by the plaintiff as an "excuse" to avoid accountability. Further, if plaintiff reserved its rights at the time it accepted the final payment, or otherwise indicated that plaintiff intended to preserve its claims, it is difficult to see how a court would view this as a release. The place to raise this issue is the second paragraph of this instruction that sets forth the legal conclusion regarding the legal effect of the acceptance. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Ramos v. City of Santa Clara [Ramos v. City of Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 93, 96-97, 110 Cal.Rptr. 485] upheld the enforcement of a contract clause providing that acceptance of final payment operated as a release of all claims. In Ramos, although the language of the provision was that of a release [see Civ. Code §§ 1541-1542], the court based its decision on its characterization of the clause as an accord and satisfaction [see Civ. Code §§ 1521-1525]. Although it is unlikely that any clause in a contract executed before a dispute arose could satisfy the elements of an accord and satisfaction [see Rabinowitz v. Kandel (1969) 1 Cal.App.3d 961, 965, 81 Cal.Rptr. 897 (accord is agreement to accept in extinction of obligation, something different from or less than that to which person agreeing to accept is entitled); B & W Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal.App. 164, 170, 137 P. 624 ("accord and satisfaction" means substitution of new agreement for and in satisfaction of preexisting agreement between same parties)], it is very likely to be enforceable as a release [see Civ. Code §§ 1541-1542; Cohn v. Bugas (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 381, 390-391, 116 Cal.Rptr. 810 (new consideration not necessary for release)]. Sometimes waiver language is used in the contract for this purpose. The release cannot extend to claims that the plaintiff does not know or suspect to exist at the time the release is executed, which if known to the plaintiff would have materially affected the settlement with the defendant [Civ. Code § 1542; Cohn v. Bugas (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 381, 390-391, 116 Cal.Rptr. 810]. When enforceable, these release clauses are valid only in private works contracts, as they have been deemed against public policy in public works contracts [Pub. Contract Code § 7100].

Although Civ. Code § 1526 limits the circumstances under which the acceptance of a check or a draft will operate as an accord and satisfaction, the acceptance of a check or draft by a creditor nonetheless constitutes an accord and satisfaction if the check or draft is issued pursuant to or in conjunction with the release of a claim [Civ. Code § 1526(c); see Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions, MB 300F.01, Ch. 24A, Matthew Bender Employment Contract Instructions, MB 2400A.46 (instructions on accord and satisfaction)].

PART D TYPICAL RELEASES AND WAIVERS THAT MAY BAR RECOVERY

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.94

MB 300I.94 Payment and Acceptance by Owner as Waiver of Defects

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant claims that Plaintiff has waived any claim to damages for construction defects because Plaintiff paid Defendant $ _____, the [full contract price/adjusted contract price/total progress payment], and accepted _____ [describe work of improvement]. For you to find that Plaintiff has waived [his/her/its] right to damages for deficiencies in _____ [describe work of improvement], Defendant has the burden of proving all of the following facts:

1. On completion of _____ [describe work of improvement or state: the work required for the progress payment to become due], the defects or inadequacies in the construction were obvious, apparent, and known to Plaintiff;
2. Plaintiff, with knowledge of the defects or inadequacies in the construction, made no objection to Defendant with regard to the defects or inadequacies in the construction;
3. Plaintiff made no effort to reserve its claims against Defendant; and
4. Plaintiff knowingly accepted _____ [describe work of improvement] and paid the [contract price/progress payment].

Authorities: Atowich v. Zimmer (1933) 218 Cal. 763, 768, 25 P.2d 6 ; Leonard v. Home Builders (1916) 174 Cal. 65, 69, 161 P. 1151 ; American-Hawaiian Eng. etc. Co. v. Butler (1913) 165 Cal. 497, 519, 133 P. 280 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant in a construction defect action claims, as a defense, that the construction defects were known to both parties when the plaintiff accepted and paid for the work in question. If the contract provides that payment of the contract price does not constitute a waiver of deficiencies, or if there are contractual procedures for construction deficiency claims, this instruction will not apply. If the plaintiff claims that his or her acceptance was induced by fraud or resulted from a mistake, then additional instructions will be necessary. Additional instructions on waivers and releases may be appropriate with this instruction [see Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions].

A preponderance of evidence instruction must be given with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--These Cases Are Rare: It will be an unusual case where defendant can prove that the owner had full knowledge of contract defects and knowingly waived any right to recovery. If nothing else, the owner can argue that it did not know the full extent of the defects or the cost of correction. And, a jury may consider this argument as an "unfair" way to avoid responsibility. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Payment of the contract price and acceptance of the work does not waive an owner's right to damages for defects unless the circumstances show an intent to waive that right [Leonard v. Home Builders (1916) 174 Cal. 65, 69, 161 P. 1151 ; Kavalakis v. Anthony Brothers, Inc. (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 737, 742, 32 Cal.Rptr. 205 ; Machinery & Electrical Co. v. Y.M.C.A. (1913) 22 Cal.App. 416, 419, 134 P. 724]. Whether the owner's acts constitute a waiver of construction defects is a question of fact to be determined from all the circumstances of the case [Leonard v. Home Builders (1916) 174 Cal. 65, 68-69, 161 P. 1151 ; Banducci v. Frank T. Hickey, Inc. (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 658, 662-663, 209 P.2d 398 ; Sirch E. & T. Laboratories v. Garbutt (1910) 13 Cal.App. 435, 438-439, 110 P. 140].

When the construction defects are known to the property owner and there is no fraud or mistake, payment and acceptance with no reservation of claims is generally held to waive the owner's claims against the builder for construction defects [Atowich v. Zimmer (1933) 218 Cal. 763, 768, 25 P.2d 6 ; Smith v. Mathews Constr. Co. (1919) 179 Cal. 797, 179 P. 205 ; Mannix v. Wilson (1912) 18 Cal.App. 595, 601, 123 P. 981 ; Sirch E. & T. Laboratories v. Garbutt (1910) 13 Cal.App. 435, 438-439, 110 P. 140 ; see American-Hawaiian Eng. etc. Co. v. Butler (1913) 165 Cal. 497, 133 P. 280 (waiver of delay damage claim by payment of progress payments when contractor behind schedule)]. Acceptance does not waive claims against the builder for defects that are unknown to the owner at the time the work of improvement is accepted and the contract price is paid [Balfour, Guthrie & Co. v. Hansen (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 173, 184, 38 Cal.Rptr. 525 ; Summers v. L.F.S. Syndicate (1920) 46 Cal.App. 250, 255, 189 P. 286].

Most construction contracts include a provision that governs the effect of payment and acceptance on the owner's claims against the contractor [see California Legal Forms, Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts (Matthew Bender)]. These contract clauses have been enforced by the courts [Monson v. Fischer (1931) 118 Cal.App. 503, 518-519, 5 P.2d 628].

MB 300I.100 Measure of Damages for Breach of Construction Contract--Failure to Construct Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant for breach of contract for failure to construct the work, you must award Plaintiff the difference between the contract price of $_____ and the reasonable cost of doing the work according to the plans and specifications.

Authority: Fairlane Estates v. Carrico Constr. Co. (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 65, 72, 39 Cal.Rptr. 35 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the contractor has breached the contract by a complete failure to construct the improvements. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Damages for Failure to Construct Improvements

When a plaintiff contracts for improvements on real property owned by the plaintiff, and defendant breaches by failing to construct the improvements, the measure of damages is the excess of the cost of construction over the original contract price [Fairlane Estates v. Carrico Constr. Co. (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 65, 72, 39 Cal.Rptr. 35].

MB 300I.101 Measure of Damages for Breach of Construction Contract--Work Does Not Conform to Plans and Specifications

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant for breach of contract for failure to construct the _____ [describe constructed work] according to the plans and specifications, you must award Plaintiff the reasonable cost of _____ [conforming it to the plans and specifications or completing the work according to the plans and specifications].

Authority: Authorities: Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal.2d 587, 600, 262 P.2d 305 ; Kossler v. Palm Springs Developments, Ltd. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 88, 100-102 ; Jones v. Kvistad (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 836, 843, 97 Cal.Rptr. 100 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 350, 352, 360, 366, 330 P.2d 817 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the contractor has breached the contract by construction that does not conform to the plans and specifications but can be conformed to the plans and specifications by further work. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

Although this instruction is designed for use by the owner against the prime contractor, it can be adapted for use by an owner against the performance bond surety [Callan v. Empire State Surety Co. (1912) 20 Cal.App. 483, 486-490, 129 P. 978] or by any contractor against a lower tier contractor or supplier.

The alternative measures of damages stated in the final sentence of the instruction are simply different ways of stating essentially the same measure of damages, and both have been used by the courts, as explained in [3][a], below. Counsel may use whichever seems most useful in the case at hand.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Damages for Failure to Comply With Plans and Specifications

When a building contractor breaches its contract by failing to comply with the plans and specifications, the measure of damages for this breach is the reasonable cost of making the building conform to the contract plans and specifications [Jones v. Kvistad (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 836, 843, 97 Cal.Rptr. 100 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 350, 352, 360, 366, 330 P.2d 817]. This measure of damages has also been phrased as the reasonable cost of completing the work in accordance with the plans and specifications in the contract [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal.2d 587, 600, 262 P.2d 305 ; Kossler v. Palm Springs Developments, Ltd. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 88, 101, 161 Cal.Rptr. 423]. However, if making the building conform to the contract would result in substantial economic waste, such as when the building would have to be torn down and reconstructed, the measure of damages is the difference in value between the building as it should have been and the value as it is [Bayuk v. Edson (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 309, 316, 46 Cal.Rptr. 49 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 350, 358-366, 330 P.2d 817]. This measure of damages is also used when the plaintiff does not own the real property on which the improvement was made [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal.2d 587, 600, 262 P.2d 305 ; Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 124, 135 Cal.Rptr. 802].

An alternate measure of damages when a contractor breaches its contract for services on a rental project may be lost rents. The United States District Court for the Northern District of California, applying California law, held that apartment complex owners were entitled to recover lost rent from a video and audio service provider for their breach of contract if the lost rent was reasonably foreseeable at the time of contracting [Civic Center Drive Apartments Ltd. v. Southwestern Bell Video Services (2003) 295 F.Supp.2d 1091, 1108-1109].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.102MB 300I.102 Measure of Liquidated Damages for Delay by Contractor[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant because the project was not substantially complete by the contract completion date, you must award Plaintiff liquidated damages in the amount of $ _____ for each working day between the contract completion date and the date on which the project was substantially complete.

The contract provides that the project was supposed to have been completed by _____ [date].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

You must add to that date all of the time extensions that were, or should have been granted to _____ [contractor] to determine the contract completion date.

The liquidated damages are the only damages you may award to _____ [owner] for any delay in completion of the project.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1671; Gov. Code § 53069.35; Pub. Contract Code § 10226; Better Food Mkts. v. Amer. Dist. Teleg. Co. (1953) 40 Cal.2d 179, 186-188, 253 P.2d 10 ; Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. County of Los Angeles (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 771, 780-783, 181 Cal.Rptr. 332 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the owner seeks to recover liquidated damages for delay in completing the project. The third paragraph is only necessary if there is a dispute over whether the contractor is entitled to more time than the owner gave it. When part of the delay was caused by the owner, part by the contractor, and part by both, only that portion caused solely by the contractor can be used to assess liquidated damages against the contractor [Nomellini Constr. Co. v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Wat. Resources (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 240, 244-247, 96 Cal.Rptr. 682]. It may be necessary to give other instructions that quote or paraphrase the contract provisions governing time extensions to explain to the jury how it is to determine whether the contractor is entitled to more time. Instructions in MB 300I.55[1] (forfeitures), MB 300I.57[1] (substantial completion), and MB 300I.90[1] (change orders) should also be considered. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of Term "Liquidated Damages": The term "liquidated damages" will be unfamiliar to many jurors. An alternate term is "delay damages" or "contract damages." But if "liquidated damages" is a term in the contract, stress that the parties agree to this remedy. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Construction contracts frequently impose liquidated damages on the contractor for delays in completion [see California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), § 8-1.07]. Those provisions are required in public works contracts and are generally unassailable [Gov. Code § 53069.85; Pub. Contract Code § 10226; Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. County of Los Angeles (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 771, 780-783, 181 Cal.Rptr. 332]. By statute, a liquidated damages provision is deemed valid in private works contracts, unless the contractor establishes that it was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671].

When the liquidated damages provision is enforceable, the amount set forth in it is the exclusive remedy for the type of loss covered by the clause (usually damages for delay in completion), regardless of whether the actual loss is a greater or lesser amount [Better Food Mkts. v. Amer. Dist. Teleg. Co. (1953) 40 Cal.2d 179, 186-188, 253 P.2d 10].

MB 300I.103 Measure--Failure to Make Timely or Complete Progress Payments

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

With regard to progress payments, the contract provides _____ [progress payment provision].

[OR]

The contract required Defendant to pay to Plaintiff any amount that the Defendant received from _____ [person or entity making progress payments to defendant] on account of work performed by Plaintiff, as a progress payment, within 10 days after it was received from _____ [person or entity making progress payments to defendant].

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant because _____ [owner or prime contractor] breached the contract by failing to make complete or timely progress payments, you must award Plaintiff simple interest, at _____ [lawful rate] percent, on the unpaid portion of progress payments from the dates on which those payments should have been made to the dates they were made.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3302; Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 399, 199 P. 767 ; Central Industrial Engineering Co. v. Strauss Construction Co. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 460, 466, 159 Cal.Rptr. 564 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a party contends that it was not fully or timely paid progress payments during its work on the project. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

Two alternatives are provided for the initial sentence, which instructs the jury on the amounts and due dates of progress payments the defendant was obligated to make. The first alternative should be used when the contract expressly provides for progress payments. The second alternative should be used when a subcontractor is claiming entitlement to progress payments under the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 or Pub. Contract Code § 10262.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Help Jurors Understand Difficult Issues: Some jurors may need assistance in understanding the meaning of a "progress payment." Further, interest calculations (even simple ones) can be complicated and should be presented as part of the evidence of plaintiff's case-in-chief, or failing that, carefully explained in closing argument. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Progress Payments

Most construction contracts and subcontracts call for progress payments at specific intervals during construction [see California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), § 9 1.06]. In the absence of provisions to the contrary, a contractor who receives a progress payment is obligated to pay subcontractors within 10 days the respective portions of the payment made on account of their work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5(b); Pub. Contract Code § 10262]. If there is a good faith dispute as to the amount due on a progress payment, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 allows the contractor receiving the progress payment to withhold up to 150 percent of the disputed amount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5(c)]. A violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 subjects the licensee, in addition to disciplinary action, to a penalty payable to the subcontractor of 2 percent of the amount due per month for every month that payment is not made [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5(b), (d)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 is applicable to all private works of improvement and to all public works of improvement except those governed by Pub. Contract Code § 10262 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5(a)].

The failure to make timely or complete progress payments normally is not a sufficient breach to allow the contractor to abandon the work and sue for damages [Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 295-297, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503]. However, the contractor is entitled to interest on the amount unpaid from the date it should have been paid [Civ. Code §§ 3289, 3302; Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 399, 199 P. 767 ; Central Industrial Engineering Co. v. Strauss Construction Co. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 460, 466, 159 Cal.Rptr. 564 ; accord, Civ. Code § 3287; Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 685-687, 321 P.2d 753].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant for breach of contract, then you must determine those damages that are legally caused by the breach of contract if:

1. The breach was a substantial factor in bringing about the damages; and

2. Either:

a. This type of damage _____ [for delays in the work or inefficiencies in the work or acceleration of the work] could have been reasonably contemplated or foreseen by the parties, at the time they made the contract, as being the probable result of such a breach; or

b. The party who breached the contract knew or should have known, at the time of entering into the contract, that this type of damage _____ [for delays in the work or inefficiencies in the work or acceleration of the work] could probably be suffered by the other party if [he/she/it] breached the contract.

Then you must award damages to plaintiff in an amount that will compensate plaintiff for all the detriment legally caused by the breach of contract including all of the following:

1. Expenditures Plaintiff made for labor, services, equipment, or materials, which Plaintiff would not otherwise have made but for _____ [delays in the work or inefficiencies in the work or acceleration of the work] caused by Defendant's breach of the contract;

2. Overhead and profit Plaintiff could otherwise have earned from its expenditures for additional labor, services, equipment, and materials; and

3. Increases in the cost of those items already required under the contract.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one of the parties is claiming damages due to delays or acceleration in the performance of the work on the project by the defendant. The instruction can also be used in suits by subcontractors. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

The overhead and profit part of the instruction can also be used when the plaintiff is seeking recovery for "extra work" as discussed in MB 300I.30.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--May Need Expert: This is a lengthy and complicated instruction. Therefore, the closing should be planned, including the use of a checklist. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Damages for Delay or Acceleration

When the contractor has continued to perform, despite breaches of the contract by the owner, the measure of its damages for the breaches is the unpaid contract price plus any additional expense attributable to the breach [B.C. Richter Contracting Co. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1964) 230 Cal.App.2d 491, 500, 502-503, 41 Cal.Rptr. 98].

These additional expenses can include both additional labor, services, equipment, or materials required to be provided and escalations in the prices on those items already required under the contract [Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 689, 321 P.2d 753]. Those expenditures can be the product of (1) delays resulting from the defendant's breach of contract [Israel v. Campbell (1958) 163 Cal.App.2d 806, 817-818, 330 P.2d 83], (2) inefficiencies in the work resulting from the defendant's breach of contract [Israel v. Campbell (1958) 163 Cal.App.2d 806, 818-819, 330 P.2d 83; Maurice L. Bein, Inc. v. Housing Authority (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 670, 677-678, 688-689, 321 P.2d 753; see C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 628, 644-647, 218 Cal.Rptr. 592 (delays due to redesign because of poor engineering and excessive number of required changes not originally contemplated by parties)], or (3) acceleration of the work resulting from the defendant's breach [Tombigbee Constructors v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1970) 420 F.2d 1037, 1046-1048; see Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 278, 307, 136 Cal.Rptr. 603].

[b] Overhead and Profit

To the fair and reasonable value of the additional labor, services, equipment, and materials the plaintiff had to provide on account of the defendant's breaches of the contract, appropriate amounts should be added to cover overhead expenses and the profit the plaintiff could have earned on these expenditures [Salinas v. Souza & McCue Const. Co. (1967) 66 Cal.2d 217, 225, 57 Cal.Rptr. 337, 424 P.2d 921 , overruled on other grounds, Helfend v. So. Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1, 84 Cal.Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 ; see C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 628, 644-647, 649-650, 218 Cal.Rptr. 592 (trial court award of unreimbursed costs, plus 6.68 percent to cover overhead and profit, was affirmed)]. The plaintiff must introduce evidence to support its claim of overhead expense [Allen v. Gardner (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 335, 343-345, 272 P.2d 99] and to support its claim of the profit it would otherwise have earned [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 301-302, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996]. If the contract contains provisions for mark-ups on extra work [see California Department of Transportation, Standard Specifications (1999 ed.), § 9-1.103] which are fair and adequate, they are generally accepted for this purpose.

This instruction does not apply to lost profits for work the contractor was not permitted to do [see De Flavio v. Estell (1959) 173 Cal.App.2d 226, 231-233, 343 P.2d 150 ; Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 171, 180-181, 317 P.2d 182 ; Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal.App.2d 71, 87-88, 268 P.2d 12] nor to overhead in that situation [Dallman Co. v. Southern Heater Co. (1968) 68 Cal.Rptr. 873].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--May Need Expert: Calculations of overhead and profit may require expert testimony. By Ronald Oster

[c] Recovery of Effects of Inflation or Costs of Borrowing Money

In California, a contractor is not permitted to recover damages to compensate for the effects of inflation or the costs of borrowing money resulting from the defendant's wrongful withholding of money due in the absence of an express agreement between the parties that these items may be included as an element of damage [C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 628, 649-651, 218 Cal.Rptr. 592].

To the extent that recognition has been given to these factors, the issue has arisen in the context of tort cases wherein the purposes and calculation of damages differ from those in contract disputes [see Rovetti v. City and County of San Francisco (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 973, 183 Cal.Rptr. 1 (leak in sewage line); Camrosa County Water Dist. v. Southwest Welding & Mfg. Co. (1975) 49 Cal.App.3d 951, 123 Cal.Rptr. 93 (breach of warranty)]. At the federal level, the Contract Disputes Act of 1978 [41 U.S.C. § 611 et seq.] permits federal contractors to recover interest on their contract claims and Congress has indicated that the cost of money to finance a contractor's additional work while pursuing its legal remedy is a legitimate cost of performing the additional work, and is recoverable under that Act. California does not have a similar statute.

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.105

MB 300I.105 Measure of Damages on Mechanics' Lien

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant on Plaintiff's mechanics' lien, you must award Plaintiff the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, and materials provided by Plaintiff, or the agreed on price in Plaintiff's contract with _____ [person with whom plaintiff contracted], whichever is less.

Authorities: Gayle Mfg. Co. v. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 910 F.2d 574, 583 ; Civ. Code § 3123; Neptune Gunit Co. v. Monroe Enterprises (1964) 229 Cal.App.2d 439, 446-447, 40 Cal.Rptr. 367 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in mechanics' lien foreclosure actions to set forth the amount that can be recovered. If the preliminary 20-day notice was given late, so the plaintiff only seeks recovery for labor and materials provided after the 20th day before that notice was given [Civ. Code § 3097(d)], then this instruction must be modified accordingly. In addition, if there is a dispute over whether the agreed on price in plaintiff's contract was increased by extra work for which change orders should have been executed, then this instruction must be modified or augmented accordingly. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

[3] Comment

The maximum recovery on a mechanics' lien is the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment and materials furnished by the plaintiff or the contract price of the plaintiff's contract, whichever is less [Civ. Code § 3123(a); see

Gayle Mfg. Co. v. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 910 F.2d 574, 583 ; Neptune Gunit Co. v. Monroe Enterprises (1964) 229 Cal.App.2d 439, 446-447, 40 Cal.Rptr. 367]. The claimant may include in the lien any amount due for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished based on a written modification of the contract or as a result of the contract's rescission, abandonment, or breach. If the contract is rescinded, abandoned, or breached, the amount of the lien may not exceed the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, and materials furnished by the claimant [Civ. Code § 3123(b); see Basic Modular Facilities, Inc. v. Ehsanipour (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 1480, 1484-1485, 83 Cal.Rptr.2d 462 (in case of excessive mechanics' lien, trial court need not strike lien in its entirety but instead may reduce lien to its proper amount)].

This instruction does not cover the situation in which the plaintiff only completed a portion of the contract and therefore the maximum amount the plaintiff can recover on the lien is a pro rata portion of the contract price [University Casework Systems, Inc. v. Superior Court (1974) 41 Cal.App.3d 263, 266-267, 115 Cal.Rptr. 836]. Nor does this instruction cover offsets to which the owner may be entitled against the claim of a prime contractor plaintiff for the amount of liens recorded by subcontractors and for the costs of defending foreclosure suits on them [Civ. Code §§ 3140, 3153; see Ferelli v. Weaver (1962) 210 Cal.App.2d 108, 114, 26 Cal.Rptr. 439]. This instruction also does not cover priority problems that may arise among lien claimants and others [see Civ. Code §§ 3130, 3134-3140; Lambert Steel Co. v. Heller Financial, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1034, 1038-1039, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 453].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.106

MB 300I.106 Measure of Damages on Payment Bond

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant _____ [surety] on the payment bond, you must award Plaintiff the entire amount that is owed to Plaintiff by _____ [party with whom plaintiff contracted]. However, Plaintiff's recovery may not exceed the amount of the bond, which is $_____.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 2787, 2809, 3096, 3226, 3235, 3248; Gov. Code § 66499.2; Amerson v. Christman (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 811, 825, 68 Cal.Rptr. 378 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action against a surety to define the amount of damages that can be awarded against the surety on a payment bond on private work [see MB 300I.07], on public work [see MB 300I.08], or on an off-site improvement [see MB 300I.09]. There may be conditions in a private work payment bond, especially a bond not covered by the statutes [Civ. Code §§ 3226, 3235] that may limit the extent of the damages recoverable from the surety. If additional damages are sought, the appropriate instructions in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, should also be used.

This instruction could also apply to a suit by subcontractors on the prime contractor's performance bond [see MB 300I.11].

[3] Comment

As a general rule, the surety stands in the shoes of its principal and has all the liability of its principal up to the bond's penal sum [Civ. Code §§ 2787, 2808, 2809, 3096; see T&R Painting Construction, Inc. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 738, 746, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 199 ; Amerson v. Christman (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 811, 825, 68 Cal.Rptr. 378]. In the case of the public works payment bond, the surety is also liable for all legitimate claims of subcontractors and materialmen down the line, to the extent of the statutory coverage [Civ. Code §§ 3226, 3248; Powers Regulator Co. v. Seaboard Surety Co. (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 338, 341-342, 350, 22 Cal.Rptr. 373]. That means the claimant can recover the balance of the contract price, and even interest pursuant to the contract, against the payment bond surety [General Elec. Co. v. Central Surety & Ins. Corp. (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 590, 602-603, 43 Cal.Rptr. 48 ; Hollywood Elec. Co. v. Jack Baskin, Inc. (1956) 146 Cal.App.2d 399, 403-405, 303 P.2d 1049]. The same rule arguably applies to private work payment bonds [see Civ. Code §§ 3096, 3226, 3235], and off-site improvement payment bonds [see Gov. Code § 66499.2].

The surety's liability on the bond is determined by the contract price between the claimant and the person with whom the claimant contracted; it is not limited to the reasonable value as is the recovery on a mechanics' lien [John A. Artukovich Sons, Inc. v. American Fidelity Fire Ins. Co. (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 940, 946-947, 140 Cal.Rptr. 434 (private work payment bond); see Washington Int'l Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (Backlund) (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 981, 988-989, 73 Cal.Rptr.2d 282 (surety's liability on public work payment bond included statutory interest penalty)].

If the underlying contract for which the plaintiff is seeking recovery under the payment bond includes an attorneys' fee provision, the plaintiff should be able to recover those fees from the surety despite the fact that the bond itself does not include a provision for attorneys' fees. However, any recovery is subject to the overall limitation on the amount of the surety's liability, i.e., the penal sum of the bond [see T&R Painting Construction, Inc. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 738, 746, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 199 (subcontractor allowed to recover its attorneys' fees from contractor's surety based on provision in subcontract)].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.107

MB 300I.107 Measure of Damages for Completion of Construction Contract Abandoned by Builder (Work Performed on Property Owned by Plaintiff)

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that _____ [builder] breached its contract with _____ [owner] by ceasing performance of the building contract before the contract was substantially completed, you are to award _____ [owner] damages for breach of contract measured by the reasonable cost to _____ [owner] of completing the construction contract. You may also award damages resulting from the delayed completion of _____ [describe project].

_____ [Owner]'s damages are to be computed by subtracting the amount of the original contract price from the total amount expended by the plaintiff to complete the original contract. The costs to complete the original contract include all of the following costs:

1. The cost of discharging any mechanics' liens recorded against the building project by any unpaid subcontractors to _____ [builder];
2. The costs of engaging another contractor to finish the original contract work;
3. All payments by _____ [owner] to subcontractors and suppliers engaged by _____ [builder] who either:
 - (a) [Filed/Threatened to file] mechanic's liens; or

(b) Refused to work any further on the building project or to furnish any more materials or supplies to the project until any unpaid balances on their subcontracts were paid; and

4. The cost of fixing _____ [builder]'s work if any of _____ [builder]'s work was found to be defective.

Although the reasonable cost of completing the work is the measure of _____ [owner]'s right of recovery, _____ [owner]'s actual cost of completing the construction contract is evidence of the reasonable cost of completion.

Finally, _____ [owner] is entitled to recover any losses that [he/she/it] suffered because the job's completion was delayed beyond the date provided in the contract. [Unless you find that the contract provided its own measure of damages for delay,] [The/the] measure of damages for the delayed completion of the construction is the property's rental value during the time that _____ [owner] has lost the use of the property. [OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction) _____ (The owner) may also recover any other damages caused by the delay if Defendant could have been expected to realize, at the time the contract was made, that a breach of the contract was likely to cause those types of loss or harm.]

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction, or applicable portions of this instruction, should be used when a building contractor breaches the contract and abandons construction of the building project and the property owner completes construction himself or herself or by using another contractor. The instruction is only to be used when the plaintiff is the property owner seeking damages for completion of construction [see [3][a], below, for discussion of how measure of damages depends on injured party's ownership of property to be improved].

When this instruction is given, the contractor may request an instruction on the right to stop work for failure to make progress payments [see MB 300I.38] or on other types of breach of contract or legal excuse [see MB 300I.30 -MB 300I.39 (typical breaches), MB 300I.50-MB 300I.80 (defenses); see also Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 330- 337 (defenses), and Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions]. If the project was abandoned because of a dispute over the terms of the construction contract, this instruction should be given with instructions on contract interpretation [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instruction, CACI Nos. 314- 320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions].

If the plaintiff claims additional damages beyond the reasonable cost of completion plus reasonable rental value as damages for delay, the optional final sentence may be used.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Checklist: This complex damages instruction could easily be converted into a checklist for closing argument with the use of visual aids. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Damages for Breach of Construction Contract

The proper measure of damages for breach of a contract to construct improvements on the plaintiff's property is ordinarily the reasonable cost to the plaintiff of completing the work and not the difference between the value of the property and its value had the improvements been constructed [Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 123, 135 Cal.Rptr. 802 ; Jones v. Kvistad (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 836, 843, 97 Cal.Rptr. 100 ; Kitchel v. Acree (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 119, 123, 30 Cal.Rptr. 714 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 350, 357-366, 330 P.2d 817]. If the improvements are to be made on property not owned by the plaintiff or the injured party is otherwise unable to complete the work itself, the proper measure of damages is the difference in value of the property with and without the promised performance, because that is the contractual benefit of which the injured party is deprived [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal.2d 587, 600, 262 P.2d 305 ; Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 124, 135 Cal.Rptr. 802 ; Scott v. Travelodge Corp. (1968) 265 Cal.App.2d 881, 883, 71 Cal.Rptr. 547 ; Rakish v. Valerga (1954) 125 Cal.App.2d 274, 277-278, 270 P.2d 50].

When a building contractor abandons a building contract and the owner elects to complete the construction, the owner's damages are computed by subtracting the amount of the original contract price from the total amounts expended by the owner to complete the original contract [Amerson v. Christman (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 811, 823-824, 68 Cal.Rptr. 378 ; Bacigalupi v. Phoenix Bldg. etc. Co. (1910) 14 Cal.App. 632, 637, 112 P. 892]. The costs of completion include the costs of discharging any mechanics' liens recorded against the building project by unpaid subcontractors to the contractor, and the costs of engaging another contractor to finish the original contract work [Benson v. Andrews (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 123, 135, 292 P.2d 39]. The costs of completion also include the sums paid by the owner to subcontractors and materialmen engaged by the departed contractor who file mechanics' liens or refuse to work any further on the project until the unpaid balances on their subcontracts are paid [Tally v. Ganahl (1907) 151 Cal. 418, 423-424, 90 P. 1049 ; O'Brien v. Garibaldi (1911) 15 Cal.App. 518, 523, 115 P. 249]. If the contractor's work is found to have been defective, the cost of correcting these defects is part of the cost of completing the original contract [Long Beach Etc. Dist. v. Dodge (1902) 135 Cal. 401, 405-406, 67 P. 499].

Although the reasonable cost of completing the work called for by the contract is the measure of the project owner's right of recovery, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the actual cost of completion is evidence of the reasonable cost of completion [Bacigalupi v. Phoenix Bldg. etc. Co. (1910) 14 Cal.App. 632, 637, 112 P. 892 ; see Gerwin v. Southeastern Cal. Assn. of Seventh Day Adventists (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 209, 218, 219, 92 Cal.Rptr. 111 (evidence of cost, uncontradicted by other evidence, is sufficient evidence of value)]. The project owner may also be able to recover consequential or special damages proximately caused by the contractor's abandonment [Civ. Code § 3300 (measure of damages for breach of contract is amount that will compensate injured party for all detriment proximately caused by breach); Amerson v. Christman (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 811, 822-825, 68 Cal.Rptr. 378].

Finally, when a building contractor fails to complete the building contract, the project owner can recover from the building contractor any losses the project owner suffers because the completion of the job was delayed beyond the date provided in the contract [Sabraw v. Kaplan (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 224, 225-226, 27 Cal.Rptr. 81 ; Mahone v. Thompson (1927) 83 Cal.App. 561, 565, 257 P. 127]. The measure of damages for the delayed completion of the construction is generally the property's rental value during the period that the owner has lost the property's use [Sabraw v. Kaplan (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 224, 227, 27 Cal.Rptr. 81 ; Mahone v. Thompson (1927) 83 Cal.App. 561, 565-566, 257 P. 127].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.108

MB 300I.108 Measure of Damages for Lost Profits on Deleted Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant for requiring Plaintiff to eliminate work of such a scope that the contract's object or purpose was altered, then you must award Plaintiff the profits that [he/she/it] would have made if Defendant had not eliminated this work.

Authority: Boomer v. Abbett (1957) 154 Cal.App.2d 218, 228-229, 315 P.2d 924 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the measure of damages in a suit for the breach of a construction contract when it is alleged that the defendant breached the contract by requiring such significant deletions from the contracted work that the agreement's nature was changed. This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300I.31 on changes in the scope of the work as a breach of the construction contract.

If it is alleged that the claim for loss of profits is uncertain, speculative, or hypothetical, one or both parties may wish to offer an instruction on the requirement of reasonable certainty in contract damages under Civ. Code § 3301. For an instruction on this point, see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.06.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

[3] Comment

When a property owner or a contractor breaches a construction contract by deleting part of the work that the contractor or subcontractor was to perform under the contract, the contractor or subcontractor may recover as damages the profits lost because of this breach [Boomer v. Abbett (1957) 154 Cal.App.2d 218, 228-229, 315 P.2d 924]. The deletion of work called for by a construction contract is a breach of the contract only if the deletion materially alters the contract's fundamental object [Boomer v. Abbett (1957) 154 Cal.App.2d 218, 226, 315 P.2d 924 ; see MB 300I.31[3] for discussion of when change in scope of work amounts to breach of construction contract].

CHAPTER 3I Matthew Bender Construction Contract Instructions
PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.109

MB 300I.109 Measure of Damages for Extra Work

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant because Defendant breached the contract, then you must determine those damages that are legally caused by the breach of contract if:

1. The breach was a substantial factor in bringing about the damages; and

2. Either:

a. This type of damage

_____ [for labor, services, equipment, or materials that Plaintiff was not required to furnish under the contract] could have been reasonably contemplated or foreseen by the parties, at the time they made the contract, as being the probable result of such a breach; or

b. The party who breached the contract knew or should have known, at the time the party entered into the contract, that this type of damage

_____ [for labor, services, equipment, or materials that Plaintiff was not required to furnish under the contract] could probably be suffered by the other party if the party breached the contract.

Then you must award damages to plaintiff in an amount that will compensate plaintiff for all the detriment legally caused by the breach of contract including the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, or materials not required to be furnished under the contract.

Authorities: City Street Imp. Co. v. Kroh (1910) 158 Cal. 308, 323, 110 P. 933 ; Bolster Co. v. J.C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 151, 334 P.2d 247 ; Parkford v. Union Drilling Co. (1931) 118 Cal.App. 538, 544, 5 P.2d 440 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the measure of damages in a suit for the breach of a construction contract when it is alleged that the defendant required the plaintiff to do extra work, then failed to compensate the plaintiff for that extra work. The instruction should be used only when the extras are of a different character from the work called for in the contract and no price has been agreed on for the extra work [see Bolster Co. v. J.C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 151, 334 P.2d 247 ; see also [3], below]. This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 300I.30 on extra work as a breach of the construction contract.

If the action is by a subcontractor against the prime contractor, the references to the contract in the instruction should be changed to subcontract.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Consider Using Alternative Language: The last sentence of this instruction could be confusing to the jury. The instruction could be re-phrased to say that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the reasonable value of the labor and services that were "in addition to those required to be furnished under the contract." By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Foreseeability Will Require Some Explanation: The idea of "foreseeability" will be alien to some jurors. So, plan the closing accordingly. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

When a property owner or a contractor breaches a construction contract by requiring a contractor or subcontractor to perform extra work [see MB 300I.30[3] for discussion of what constitutes extra work], the contractor or subcontractor is entitled to recover damages for that breach. When the extras are of a different character from the work called for in the contract and no price is agreed on for the extra work, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the reasonable value of the work performed [City Street Imp. Co. v. Kroh (1910) 158 Cal. 308, 323, 110 P. 933 ; Bolster Co. v. J.C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 143, 151, 334 P.2d 247 ; Parkford v. Union Drilling Co. (1931) 118 Cal.App. 538, 544, 5 P.2d 440]. However, if the extra work is of the same character as work already provided for in the original contract, then the additional work is to be paid for according to the schedule of prices set in that original contract [see Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A. J.C. Council (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 676, 684, 276 P.2d 52 (when contract was for fixed amount of excavation work at so much per cubic yard, additional excavation was to be compensated at same price per cubic yard)].

PART E DAMAGES

2-3I California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 300I.110

MB 300I.110 Measure of Damages for Violation of Statutory Construction Standards for New Residence Sold on or After January 1, 2003

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instruction, you find that Plaintiff is entitled to a verdict against Defendant because Plaintiff's residence does not meet construction standard _____ [specify standard], then you must determine [include if appropriate: , subject to your finding on the defense that _____ (specify affirmative defense) ,] those damages that are legally permitted for a violation of that standard.

For a violation of construction standard _____ [specify standard], Plaintiff is entitled to damages for the following:

[Choose as appropriate to evidence presented]

The reasonable cost of repairing the violation.

[and/or]

The reasonable cost of repairing any damages caused by Defendant's repair efforts.

[and/or]

The reasonable cost of repairing and rectifying any damages resulting from the failure of Plaintiff's residence to meet the standard.

[and/or]

The reasonable cost of removing and replacing any improper repair by Defendant.

[and/or]

Plaintiff's reasonable relocation and storage expenses.

[and/or]

Any lost business income resulting from Plaintiff's loss of his/her principal place of business licensed to be operated from the residence.

[and/or]

Plaintiff's reasonable costs incurred in investigating the violation.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 944.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on the statutorily-prescribed damages that may be awarded on the jury's finding that one or more of the statutory construction standards were violated. Modification of the instruction may be required if the plaintiff's residence is a detached single-family home. In such a case, the right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the common law personal use exception [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

[3] Comment

[a] Actions for Defective Construction in New Residences Sold on or After January 1, 2003--Overview and Applicability

In accordance with Division 2, Part 2, Title 7 of the Civil Code, "Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects" [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.], any action against a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938]. The action must be preceded by a mandatory pre-litigation procedure, which provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all pursuant to statutory time frames [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938].

At least in the case of construction defect situations involving new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, the Legislature effectively rendered inapplicable the effects of a decision in which the Supreme Court held, among other things, that construction defects must cause actual damage before they can be actionable in tort [see Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 24 Cal.4th 627, 636-647, 101 Cal.Rptr.2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125].

The provisions, standards, rights, and obligations set forth in Title 7 are binding on all original purchasers and their successors-in-interest. Associations are considered to be original purchasers and have standing to enforce these provisions, standards, rights, and obligations [Civ. Code § 945].

Title 7 does not apply to any action by a claimant to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of a statute (other than Title 7) [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

Title 7 does not eliminate or abrogate the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, which requires plaintiff's counsel to furnish an Attorney's Certificate in an action against a design professional, for claims and damages that are not covered by the statutory scheme governing construction defect litigation [Civ. Code § 937].

[b] Damages

The homeowner is entitled to recover all of the following as damages in an action on a claim based on violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 944]:

- The reasonable cost of repairing any violation of the statutory construction standards.
- The reasonable cost of repairing any damages caused by the repair efforts.
- The reasonable cost of repairing and rectifying any damages resulting from the home's failure to meet the standards.
- The reasonable cost of removing and replacing any improper repair by the builder.
- Reasonable relocation and storage expenses.
- Lost business income if the home was used as a principal place of business licensed to be operated from the home.
- Reasonable investigative costs for each established violation.
- All other costs or fees recoverable by contract or statute.

As to any claims involving a detached single-family home, the homeowner's right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the common law personal use exception [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

Damages awarded in an action by the claimant that was not brought under Title 7--for example, an action to enforce a contract or express contractual provision, or an action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of another statute--must be reduced by any amounts recovered for the same items in an action under Title 7 [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when one of the parties is a governmental entity.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Special Concerns Exist When Dealing With

Governmental Entities: There is always a concern that a government party will be given special treatment by some jurors who are concerned about taxpayer dollars. This instruction helps address that concern. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

A contract entered into by a governmental entity and a private party is governed by the same rules that apply to contracts between private parties [Souza & McCue Const. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal.2d 508, 510, 20 Cal.Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338 ; M. F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal.2d 696, 704, 235 P.2d 7 ; *Chapman v. MB 300I.121 "Stop Notice" Defined

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A "stop notice" is a written notice, signed and verified by the lien claimant or [his/her/its] agent, stating all of the following:

- (1) The kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or agreed to be furnished by the claimant;
- (2) The name of the person to or for whom these things were done or furnished;
- (3) The amount in value of that already done or furnished and of all that was agreed to be done or furnished; and
- (4) The claimant's name and address.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3103.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions in MB 300I.62, MB 300I.63, MB 300I.69, and MB 300I.70 to define "stop notice."

[3] Comment

This definition of "stop notice" is taken from Civ. Code § 3103. Stop notices may not be applied to construction funds held and administered in California for private works of improvement on sites located outside of California. Because a stop notice may only be served and enforced by a party entitled to record a mechanic's lien, a stop notice is not an available remedy to enforce payment for labor or materials furnished to a private work of improvement outside of California when a mechanics' lien obviously could not be recorded under California law [Mechanical Wholesale Corp. v. Fuji Bank, Ltd. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1647, 1651, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 466].

MB 300I.122 "Bonded Stop Notice" Defined

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A "bonded stop notice" is a stop notice given to a construction lender and accompanied by a bond with good and sufficient sureties for 11/4 times the amount claimed. This bond must be conditioned for payment so that if Defendant gets the judgment in the action on _____ [the stop notice claim or the lien filed by the claimant], then the claimant will pay all costs that are awarded against the owner, the original contractor, the construction lender, or any of them, and also all the damages that the owner, the original contractor, or the construction lender suffer because of the equitable garnishment resulting from _____ [the stop notice claim or the lien]. However, the claimant will not pay more than the bond's amount.

The bonded stop notice must be delivered to a responsible officer or person at the construction lender's office or sent to that office by registered mail. If the lender has branch offices, the notice is not effective unless delivered or sent to the branch office that administers or holds the construction funds.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3083.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions in MB 300I.62, MB 300I.63, MB 300I.69, and MB 300I.70 to define "bonded stop notice."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms of Art to Jury: This complicated instruction contains numerous terms of art that will have to be explained to the jury. [3] Comment

Civ. Code § 3083 defines "bonded stop notice" as that phrase is defined in [1], above. Stop notices may not be applied to construction funds held and administered in California for private works of improvement on sites located outside of California. Because a stop notice may only be served and enforced by a party entitled to record a mechanic's lien, a stop notice is not an available remedy to enforce payment for labor or materials furnished to a private work of improvement outside of California when a mechanics' lien obviously could not be recorded under California law [*Mechanical Wholesale Corp. v. MB 300I.123 Contract Consisting of Standard Form and Printed Provisions

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The construction contract between _____ [party] and _____ [party] is a standard form published by _____ [e.g., the American Institute of Architects or specify other source of form]. The contract refers to [and incorporates] additional documents, [specifically or including _____ (describe additional documents, e.g., plans, specifications, drawings, general conditions, special conditions, and manuscript agreements), which describe in detail _____ [describe content of additional documents, e.g., the specifics of the construction, the method of the construction, and the materials to be used].

All of the referenced [and incorporated] documents are part of the contract and all of the contract documents must be interpreted together in determining the obligations of _____ [party] and _____ [party]. If there is any ambiguity or inconsistency between the printed form and any typewritten or handwritten provisions, the typewritten or handwritten provisions control. If there are both general and specific provisions covering the same subject matter, the specific provision takes precedence over the general provision.

If any printed form provisions are absolutely repugnant to written provisions, the printed form provision must be disregarded.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there are factual issues as to the specific work that the contractor is obligated to perform by the terms of a contract that is partly printed and partly written. If there is a dispute regarding which documents, plans, or specifications were intended by the parties to be incorporated into the contract, an additional instruction on that particular issue will have to be formulated. For additional instructions on the interpretation of written agreements, see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314- 320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms of Art to Jury and Provide

Examples: This is a complicated instruction that contains numerous terms of art that will be unfamiliar to many jurors. The instruction will have to be broken down and explained, with examples, in closing argument. Furthermore, some jurors will be suspicious about a standard form contract being "changed" by more paragraphs or documents. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The contract documents for most construction contracts are usually incorporated into the contract by reference, and include plans or drawings, specifications, and general and special conditions [see Bird v. American Surety Co. (1917) 175 Cal. 625, 629, 166 P. 1009 ; Meyers v. Housing Authority of Stanislaus County (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 721, 723 ; Wilson v. Keefe (1957) 150 Cal.App.2d 178, 309 P.2d 516 ; see also California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender); California Legal Forms, Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts (Matthew Bender)]. Even when the contract does not specify that drawings and specifications are made part of the agreement, they are nonetheless part of the contract when the details of the work to be done cannot be determined without reference to these documents [Bird v. American Surety Co. (1917) 175 Cal. 625, 629, 166 P. 1009].

If a printed form contract is used as the basis of an agreement that also contains written or typewritten provisions, the written provisions will prevail over the printed terms if there is an inconsistency [Civ. Code § 1651; Code Civ. Proc. § 1863; Burns v. Peters (1936) 5 Cal.2d 619, 623, 55 P.2d 1182 ; Gollaher v. Midwood Constr. Co. (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 640, 648, 15 Cal.Rptr. 292]. The printed terms must be disregarded to the extent that they are absolutely repugnant to the written provisions [Civ. Code § 1651]. It is presumed that, unlike the written provisions, the printed terms were composed without reference to particular parties or their intentions [Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 287, 294, 58 Cal.Rptr. 503].

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Negligence Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 400 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Negligence causes of action in general [CACI Nos. 400-424], including instructions on essential factual elements [CACI No. 400], applicable standards of care [CACI Nos. 401-403], contributory negligence [CACI No. 405, CACI No. 406], negligence per se [CACI Nos. 418-421], sale of alcohol to minors [CACI No. 422], public entity liability [CACI No. 423], the essential elements if negligence is not contested [CACI No. 424], the definition of "gross negligence" [CACI No. 425], and negligent hiring [CACI No. 426].
- Causation issues in general negligence cases [CACI Nos. 430-435].
- Assumption of risk [CACI No. 451], sudden emergencies [CACI No. 452], and rescue [CACI No. 453].
- Statute of limitations defenses [CACI Nos. 454-457].
- Strict liability [CACI Nos. 460-462] and the dog bite statute [CACI No. 463].

The negligence series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-400-VF-410].

CACI 400 Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s negligence. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was negligent;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, December 2007

Directions for Use

In medical malpractice or professional negligence cases, the word "medical" or "professional" should be added before the word "negligence" in the first paragraph.

The word "harm" is used throughout these instructions, instead of terms like "loss," "injury," and "damage," because "harm" is all-purpose and suffices in their place.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1714(a) provides, in part: "Everyone is responsible, not only for the result of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury upon himself or herself." This statute is the foundation of negligence law in California. (Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108, 111-112 [70 Cal.Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .)

■ The basic elements of a negligence action are: (1) The defendant had a legal duty to conform to a standard of conduct to protect the plaintiff, (2) the defendant failed to meet this standard of conduct, (3) the defendant's failure was the proximate or legal cause of the resulting injury, and (4) the plaintiff was damaged. (Ladd v. County of San Mateo (1996) 12 Cal.4th 913, 917 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 309, 911 P.2d 496] .)

■ The issue of whether a legal duty exists is an issue of law, not an issue of fact for the jury. (Ky. Fried Chicken of Cal. v. Superior Court (1997) 14 Cal.4th 814, 819 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 756, 927 P.2d 1260] .)

■ "[T]he concept of foreseeability of risk of harm in determining whether a duty should be imposed is to be distinguished from the concept of P foreseeability" in two more focused, fact-specific settings' to be resolved by a trier of fact. 'First, the [trier of fact] may consider the likelihood or foreseeability of injury in determining whether, in fact, the particular defendant's conduct was negligent in the first place. Second, foreseeability may be relevant to the [trier of fact's] determination of whether the defendant's negligence was a proximate or legal cause of the plaintiff's injury.' " (Burns v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal.App.4th 479, 488, fn. 8 [93 Cal.Rptr.3d 130] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]hile foreseeability with respect to duty is determined by focusing on the general character of the event and inquiring whether such event is 'likely enough in the setting of modern life that a reasonably thoughtful [person] would take account of it in guiding practical conduct', foreseeability in evaluating negligence and causation requires a 'more focused, fact-specific' inquiry that takes into account a particular plaintiff's injuries and the particular defendant's conduct." (Laabs v. Southern California Edison Company (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 1260, 1273 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 241] , internal citation omitted.)

Publisher's Notes

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 3.00.

"In determining whether there is a duty owed to a particular individual there are numerous matters that need to be balanced: (1) the foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff, (2) the degree of certainty plaintiff suffered injury, (3) the closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered, (4) the moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct, (5) the policy of preventing future harm, (6) the extent of the burden to the defendant and consequences to the community of imposing a duty to exercise care with resulting liability for the breach, and (8) [sic] the availability, cost, and prevalence of insurance for the risk involved." (Bragg v. Valdez (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 421, 431 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 804] , citing Rowland, supra .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Address Each Element Early on in Case:

Although CACI No. 400 would seem very basic to attorneys, it is important that a litigator address each element early on in the case. Since it is the plaintiff's burden of proof, you can be assured that the defendant will be attacking some if not all of these elements. Frame the elements with your facts and evidence presented during opening and closing arguments so that when the jury goes back to deliberate they will recognize the instruction and the facts that you wish to apply. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 401

CACI 401 Basic Standard of Care

Negligence is the failure to use reasonable care to prevent harm to oneself or to others.

A person can be negligent by acting or by failing to act. A person is negligent if he or she does something that a reasonably careful person would not do in the same situation or fails to do something that a reasonably careful person would do in the same situation.

You must decide how a reasonably careful person would have acted in [name of plaintiff/defendant]'s situation.

New September 2003

- "The formulation of the standard of care is a question of law for the court. Once the court has formulated the standard, its application to the facts of the case is a task for the trier of fact if reasonable minds might differ as to whether a party's conduct has conformed to the standard." (Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 539, 546 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 97, 863 P.2d 167] , internal citations omitted.)

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 282, defines negligence as "conduct which falls below the standard established by law for the protection of others against unreasonable risk of harm."

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 283, provides: "Unless the actor is a child, the standard of conduct to which he must conform to avoid being negligent is that of a reasonable man under like circumstances."

- The California Supreme Court has stated: "Because application of [due care] is inherently situational, the amount of care deemed reasonable in any particular case will vary, while at the same time the standard of conduct itself remains constant, i.e., due care commensurate with the risk posed by the conduct taking into consideration all relevant circumstances. [Citations]." (Flowers v. Torrance Memorial Hospital Medical Center (1994) 8 Cal.4th 992, 997 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 685, 884 P.2d 142] ; see also Tucker v. Lombardo (1956) 47 Cal.2d 457, 464 [303 P.2d 1041] .)

■ The proper conduct of a reasonable person in a particular situation may become settled by judicial decision or may be established by statute or administrative regulation. (Ramirez, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 547 .) (See CACI Nos. 418 to 421 on negligence per se.)

■ Negligence can be found in the doing of an act, as well as in the failure to do an act. (Rest.2d Torts, § 284.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Avoiding a Mistrial: Remember to avoid saying in your argument to the jury "what would you do in like circumstances" because that will possibly cause a mistrial. Although this "reasonable man" standard obviously suggests that question to the jury, an attorney is not allowed to so state. Instead you must argue what a reasonable person would do in similar circumstances and argue your case accordingly. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 402

CACI 402 Standard of Care for Minors

[Name of plaintiff/defendant] is a child who was _____ years old at the time of the incident. Children are not held to the same standards of behavior as adults. A child is required to use the amount of care that a reasonably careful child of the same age, intelligence, knowledge, and experience would use in that same situation.

New September 2003

- "Children are judged by a special subjective standard. ... They are only required to exercise that degree of care expected of children of like age, experience and intelligence." (Daun v. Truax (1961) 56 Cal.2d 647, 654 [16 Cal.Rptr. 351, 365 P.2d 407] .)
- If the negligence is negligence per se, violation of a statute will create a presumption of negligence that "may be rebutted by a showing that the child, in spite of the violation of the statute, exercised the care that children of his maturity, intelligence and capacity ordinarily exercise under similar circumstances." (Daun, supra, 56 Cal.2d at p. 655 .)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 283A, provides: "If the actor is a child, the standard of conduct to which he must conform to avoid being negligent is that of a reasonable person of like age, intelligence, and experience under like circumstances."
- The standard of care for minors is not the standard of an "average" child of the same age; the standard is subjective, based on the conduct of a child of the same age, intelligence, and experience as the minor plaintiff or defendant. (Cummings v. County of Los Angeles (1961) 56 Cal.2d 258, 263 [14 Cal.Rptr. 668, 363 P.2d 900] .)

■ An exception to this reduced standard of care may be found if the minor was engaging in an adult activity, such as driving. (Prichard v. Veterans Cab Co. (1965) 63 Cal.2d 727, 732 [47 Cal.Rptr. 904, 408 P.2d 360] ; Neudeck v. Bransten (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 17, 21 [43 Cal.Rptr. 250] ; see also Rest.2d Torts, § 283A, com. c.)

■ Children under the age of five are incapable of contributory negligence as a matter of law. (Christian v. Goodwin (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 650, 655 [10 Cal.Rptr. 507] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Children as Parties: It is very important that if you have a child as a plaintiff or defendant and negligence is an issue for that child's actions that you try to get jurors that also have children close in age so that they can appreciate the reasonable child standard accordingly to age, intellect, etc. Further, if you have a child that has limited experience, you must bring that out in your case so that the jury can take that into consideration. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CACI 403 Standard of Care for Physically Disabled Person

A person with a physical disability is required to use the amount of care that a reasonably careful person who has the same physical disability would use in the same situation.

New September 2003

By "same" disability, this instruction is referring to the effect of the disability, not the cause.

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 283C, provides: "If the actor is ill or otherwise physically disabled, the standard of conduct to which he must conform to avoid being negligent is that of a reasonable man under like disability." (See also Conjorsky v. Murray (1955) 135 Cal.App.2d 478, 482 [287 P.2d 505] ; Jones v. Bayley (1942) 49 Cal.App.2d 647, 654 [122 P.2d 293] .)

- Persons with mental illnesses are not covered by the same standard as persons with physical illnesses. (See Bashi v. Wodarz (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 1314, 1323 [53 Cal.Rptr.2d 635] .)

- Civil Code section 41 provides: "A person of unsound mind, of whatever degree, is civilly liable for a wrong done by the person, but is not liable in exemplary damages unless at the time of the act the person was capable of knowing that the act was wrongful." This section applies to negligence. (Bashi, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1321 .)

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 283B, provides: "Unless the actor is a child, his insanity or other mental deficiency does not relieve the actor from liability for conduct which does not conform to the standard of a reasonable man under like circumstances."

■ As to contributory negligence, the courts agree with the Restatement's position that mental deficiency that falls short of insanity does not excuse conduct that is otherwise contributory negligence. (Fox v. City and County of San Francisco (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 164, 169 [120 Cal.Rptr. 779] ; Rest.2d Torts, § 464, com. g.)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

*2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 404CACI 404 Intoxication

A person is not necessarily negligent just because he or she used alcohol [or drugs]. However, people who drink alcohol [or take drugs] must act just as carefully as those who do not.

New September 2003

This instruction should be given only if there is evidence of alcohol or drug consumption. This instruction is not intended for situations in which intoxication is grounds for a negligence per se instruction (e.g., driving under the influence).

- Mere consumption of alcohol is not negligence in and of itself: "The fact that a person when injured was intoxicated is not in itself evidence of contributory negligence, but it is a circumstance to be considered in determining whether his intoxication contributed to his injury." (Coakley v. Ajuria (1930) 209 Cal. 745, 752 [290 P. 33] .)

- Intoxication is not generally an excuse for failure to comply with the reasonable-person standard. (Cloud v. Market Street Railway Co. (1946) 74 Cal.App.2d 92, 97 [168 P.2d 191] .)

- Intoxication is not negligence as a matter of law, but it is a circumstance for the jury to consider in determining whether such intoxication was a contributing cause of an injury and is also a question of fact for the jury. (Pittman v. Boiven (1967) 249 Cal.App.2d 207, 217 [57 Cal.Rptr. 319] ; Barr v. Scott (1955) 134 Cal.App.2d 823, 827-828 [286 P.2d 552] ; see also *Emery v. Los Angeles Ry. Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Evidence of "Use" of Alcohol/Drugs Without Evidence of Impairment Is Prejudicial: This entirely new instruction was not found in BAJI with good reason. Cases referenced in the "Sources and Authority" describe situations involving "intoxication." CACI No. 404 states: "A person is not necessarily negligent just because he or she used alcohol [or drugs]" (emphasis added). Obviously, if there is some evidence that use of alcohol or drugs caused impairment or intoxication, this would be an appropriate instruction. However, mere "use" without any evidence of impairment would be a very prejudicial issue on which to instruct the jury. Thus, consider a Motion in Limine to exclude any reference, suggestion, or evidence that alcohol or drugs have been "used" if there is no evidence that a party was impaired or intoxicated at the time of the incident. If there is no such evidence, the motion should be granted under Evid. Code § 352. By Joseph Devine

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explore Evidence of Intoxication Before Trial: CACI No. 404 is important when you have a plaintiff who was intoxicated at the time of his or her injury. Should the defense wish to introduce the plaintiff's intoxication at trial, make sure you fully explore in pre-trial discovery if they have evidence that the intoxication contributed to the occurrence or the injury. If not, then a Motion in Limine may be in order. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 405

CACI 405 Comparative Fault of Plaintiff

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff]'s own negligence contributed to [his/her] harm. To succeed on this claim, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] was negligent; and
- 2. That [name of plaintiff]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [his/her] harm.

If [name of defendant] proves the above, [name of plaintiff]'s damages are reduced by your determination of the percentage of [name of plaintiff]'s responsibility. I will calculate the actual reduction.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

This instruction should not be given absent substantial evidence that plaintiff was negligent. (Drust v. Drust (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 1, 6 [169 Cal.Rptr. 750] .)

If there are multiple defendants or alleged nondefendant tortfeasors, also give CACI No. 406, Apportionment of Responsibility.

- In Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal.3d 804, 810 [119 Cal.Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , the court concluded that the "all-or-nothing" rule of contributory negligence should be abandoned in favor of a rule that assesses liability in proportion to fault.

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 463, defines "contributory negligence" as "conduct on the part of the plaintiff which falls below the standard to which he should conform for his own protection, and which is a legally contributing cause cooperating with the negligence of the defendant in bringing about the plaintiff's harm."

■ It is settled that the issue of contributory negligence must be presented to the jury whenever it is asserted as a defense and there is "some evidence of a substantial character" to support it. (Hasson v. Ford Motor Co. (1977) 19 Cal.3d 530, 548 [138 Cal.Rptr. 705, 564 P.2d 857] ; Scott v. Alpha Beta Co. (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 305, 310 [163 Cal.Rptr. 544] .)

■ Courts have found that it is not error to use the phrase "contributory negligence" in a jury instruction on comparative negligence: "The use by the trial court of the phrase 'contributory negligence' in instructing on the concept of comparative negligence is innocuous. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. [citation] abolished the legal doctrine, but not the phrase or the concept of 'contributory negligence.' A claimant's negligence contributing causally to his own injury may be considered now not as a bar to his recovery, but merely as a factor to be considered in measuring the amount thereof." (Bradfield v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 681, 686 [152 Cal.Rptr. 172] .)

■ The defendant has the burden of proving contributory negligence. (Drust, supra, 113 Cal.App.3d at p. 6 .)

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 3.50.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Discovery Devices: Invariably, the defense will try to place some fault on the plaintiff to reduce the damages awarded. During the discovery process, use Request for Admissions regarding contributory negligence issues along with other discovery requests. Should the defense deny liability in the Request for Admissions and the jury finds the defendant 100 percent at fault, plaintiff's counsel may be entitled to attorney's fees for having to prove that portion of the case that should have been admitted. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using CACI No. 405: The Directions for Use for the "Plaintiff's Contributory Negligence" instruction advises that the instruction "should be used only where the defendant claims that plaintiff was negligent, there is only one defendant, and the defendant does not claim that any other factor caused the harm" (emphasis added). These limitations on use of CACI No. 405 do not appear appropriate. Proposition 51 led to the enactment of Civ. Code § 1431.2, which provides in part "[e]ach defendant shall be liable only for the amount of non-economic damages allocated to that defendant ..." [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. In addition, damages must be apportioned among the "universe of tortfeasors," including non-joined defendants [Roslan v. Permea, Inc. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 110, 113, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 66] . Thus, if there is substantial evidence that the plaintiff was negligent, argue that this instruction should be given in all such cases, even if there are multiple defendants, or other factors may have caused the harm. By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 406

CACI 406 Apportionment of Responsibility

[[Name of defendant] claims that the [negligence/fault] of [insert name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)] [also] contributed to [name of plaintiff]'s harm. To succeed on this claim, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [insert name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)] [was/were] [negligent/at fault]; and
- 2. That the [negligence/fault] of [insert name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.]

If you find that the [negligence/fault] of more than one person including [name of defendant] [and] [[name of plaintiff]/ [and] [name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)]] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm, you must then decide how much responsibility each has by assigning percentages of responsibility to each person listed on the verdict form. The percentages must total 100 percent.

You will make a separate finding of [name of plaintiff]'s total damages, if any. In determining an amount of damages, you should not consider any person's assigned percentage of responsibility.

["Person" can mean an individual or a business entity.]

Directions for Use

This instruction is designed to assist the jury in completing CACI No. VF-402, Negligence--Fault of Plaintiff and Others at Issue, which must be given in a multiple-tortfeasor case to determine comparative fault. VF-402 is designed to compare the conduct of all defendants, the conduct of the plaintiff, and the conduct of any nonparty tortfeasors.

Throughout, select "fault" if there is a need to allocate responsibility between tortfeasors whose alleged liability is based on conduct other than negligence, e.g., strict products liability.

Include the first paragraph if the defendant has presented evidence that the conduct of one or more nonparties contributed to the plaintiff's harm. "Nonparties" include the universe of tortfeasors who are not present at trial, including defendants who settled before trial and nonjoined alleged tortfeasors. (Dafonte v. Up-Right (1992) 2 Cal.4th 593, 603 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 238, 828 P.2d 140] .) Include "also" if the defendant concedes some degree of liability.

If the plaintiff's comparative fault is also at issue, give CACI No. 405, Comparative Fault of Plaintiff, in addition to this instruction.

Include the last paragraph if any of the defendants or others alleged to have contributed to the plaintiff's harm is not an individual.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1431.2(a) (Proposition 51) provides: "In any action for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death, based upon principles of comparative fault, the liability of each defendant for non-economic damages shall be several only and shall not be joint. Each defendant shall be liable only for the amount of non-economic damages allocated to that defendant in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault, and a separate judgment shall be rendered against that defendant for that amount."

- The Supreme Court has held that the doctrine of joint and several liability survived the adoption of comparative negligence: "[W]e hold that after Li, a concurrent tortfeasor whose negligence is a proximate cause of an indivisible injury remains liable for the total amount of damages, diminished only 'in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering.' " (American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal.3d 578, 590 [146 Cal.Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] , citing Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal.3d 804, 829 [119 Cal.Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .)

- The Supreme Court in American Motorcycle Assn. also modified the equitable indemnity rule "to permit a concurrent tortfeasor to obtain partial indemnity from other concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis." (American Motorcycle Assn., supra, 20 Cal.3d at p. 591 .)

- "[A] 'defendant[s]' liability for noneconomic damages cannot exceed his or her proportionate share of fault as compared with all fault responsible for the plaintiff's injuries, not merely that of 'defendant[s]' present in the lawsuit." (Dafonte, supra, 2 Cal.4th at p. 603 , original italics.)

- "[U]nder Proposition 51, fault will be allocated to an entity that is immune from paying for its tortious acts, but will not be allocated to an entity that is not a tortfeasor, that is, one whose actions have been declared not to be tortious." (Taylor v. John Crane, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 1063, 1071 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 695] , original italics.)

- "A defendant bears the burden of proving affirmative defenses and indemnity cross-claims.

Apportionment of noneconomic damages is a form of equitable indemnity in which a defendant may reduce his or her damages by establishing others are also at fault for the plaintiff's injuries. Placing the burden on defendant to prove fault as to nonparty tortfeasors is not unjustified or unduly onerous." (Wilson v. Ritto (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 361, 369 [129 Cal.Rptr.2d 336] .)

■ "When a defendant is liable only by reason of a derivative nondelegable duty arising from his status as employer or landlord or vehicle owner or conspirator, or from his role in the chain of distribution of a single product in a products liability action, his liability is secondary (vicarious) to that of the actor and he is not entitled to the benefits of Proposition 51." (Bayer-Bel v. Litovsky (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 396, 400 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 518] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Third of Torts, Apportionment Liability, section 7, comment (g), provides, in part: "Percentages of responsibility are assigned by special verdict to any plaintiff, defendant, settlor, immune person, or other relevant person ... whose negligence or other legally culpable conduct was a legal cause of the plaintiff's injury. The percentages of responsibility must total 100 percent. The factfinder makes a separate finding of the plaintiff's total damages. Those damages are reduced by the percentage of responsibility the factfinder assigns to the plaintiff. The resulting amount constitutes the plaintiff's 'recoverable damages.' "

■ Restatement Third of Torts, Apportionment Liability, section 26, comment (h), provides, in part: "A more attractive solution is to place the burden of proof on the party seeking to avoid responsibility for the entire injury, along with relaxing the burden of production. This allows the factfinder to divide damages based on the available evidence. Ultimately, however, the sufficiency of the evidence is determined by applicable procedural rules."

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 408

CACI 408 Primary Assumption of Risk

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she] was harmed while participating in [specify sport or other activity, e.g., touch football] and that [name of defendant] is responsible for that harm. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] either intentionally injured [name of plaintiff] or acted so recklessly that [his/her] conduct was entirely outside the range of ordinary activity involved in [sport or other activity];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Conduct is entirely outside the range of ordinary activity involved in [sport or other activity] if that conduct can be prohibited without discouraging vigorous participation or otherwise fundamentally changing the [sport/activity].

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for an injury resulting from conduct that was merely accidental, careless, or negligent.

■ "[W]e conclude that a participant in an active sport breaches a legal duty of care to other participants--i.e., engages in conduct that properly may subject him or her to financial liability--only if the participant intentionally injures another player or engages in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport." (Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal.4th 296, 320 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .)

■ "The Knight rule, however, 'does not grant unbridled legal immunity to all defendants participating in sporting activity. The Supreme Court has stated that "it is well established that defendants generally do have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport." Thus, even though "defendants generally have no legal duty to eliminate (or protect a plaintiff against) risks inherent in the sport itself," they may not increase the likelihood of injury above that which is inherent.' ■ "[W]hether defendant breached the limited duty of care he owed other golfers by engaging in conduct that was 'so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in [golf]' depends on resolution of disputed material facts. Thus, defendant's summary judgment motion was properly denied." (Shin, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 486 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Although we recognize the Court of Appeal decisions specifically addressing the point are in conflict, we believe resolving this issue is not a matter of further defining [defendant]'s duty, which would be a question of law for the court. Rather, it requires application of the governing standard of care (the duty not to increase the risks inherent in the sport) to the facts of this particular case--the traditional role of the trier of fact. (See, e.g., Vine v. Bear Valley Ski Co., supra, 118 Cal.App.4th at pp. 591-592 [whether defendant's design of snowboard jump increased inherent risks of snowboarding is question for jury]; *Solis v. ■ "Primary assumption of the risk is an objective test. It does not depend on a particular plaintiff's subjective knowledge or appreciation of the potential for risk." (Saville, supra, 133 Cal.App.4th at p 866.)

■ "A jury could find that, by using a snowboard without the retention strap, in violation of the rules of the ski resort and a county ordinance, defendant unnecessarily increased the danger that his snowboard might escape his control and injure other participants such as plaintiff. The absence of a retention strap could therefore constitute conduct not inherent to the sport which increased the risk of injury." (*Campbell v. ■ "The existence and scope of a defendant's duty depends on the role that defendant played in the activity. Defendants were merely the hosts of a social gathering at their cattle ranch, where [plaintiff] asked to ride one of their horses; they were not instructors and did not assume any of the responsibilities of an instructor." (Levinson v. Owens (2009) 176 Cal.App.4th 1534, 1550-1551 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 779] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he doctrine [of primary assumption of risk] applies not only to sports, but to other activities involving an inherent risk of injury to voluntary participants ... , where the risk cannot be eliminated without altering the fundamental nature of the activity." (Beninati v. Black Rock City, LLC (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 650, 658 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 105] .)

■ "Whether a duty exists 'does not turn on the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the plaintiff's conduct, but rather on [(1)] the nature of the activity or sport in which the defendant is engaged and [(2)] the relationship of the defendant and the plaintiff to that activity or sport.' It is the 'nature of the activity' and the parties' relationship to it that determines whether the doctrine applies--not its characterization as a sporting event." (McGarry, supra, 158 Cal.App.4th at p. 999 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]o the extent that ' ' a plaintiff unreasonably undertakes to encounter a specific known risk imposed by a defendant's negligence, ' ' he or she is subject to the defense of comparative negligence but not to an absolute defense. This type of comparative negligence has been referred to as ' "secondary assumption of risk." ' Assumption of risk that is based upon the absence of a defendant's duty of care is called ' "primary assumption of risk." ' First, in "primary assumption of risk" cases--where the defendant owes no duty to protect the plaintiff from a particular risk of harm--a plaintiff who has suffered such harm is not entitled to recover from the defendant, whether the plaintiff's conduct in undertaking the activity was reasonable or unreasonable. Second, in "secondary assumption of risk" cases--involving instances in which the defendant has breached the duty of care owed to the plaintiff--the defendant is not entitled to be entirely relieved of liability for an injury proximately caused by such breach, simply because the plaintiff's conduct in encountering the risk of such an injury was reasonable rather than unreasonable.' " (Kindrich v. Long Beach Yacht Club (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 1252, 1259 [84 Cal.Rptr.3d 824] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "Even were we to conclude that [plaintiff]'s decision to jump off the boat was a voluntary one, and that therefore he assumed a risk inherent in doing so, this is not enough to provide a complete defense. Because voluntary assumption of risk as a complete defense in a negligence action was abandoned in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal.3d 804, 829 [119 Cal.Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , only the absence of duty owed a plaintiff under the doctrine of primary assumption of risk would provide such a defense. But that doctrine does not come into play except when a plaintiff and a defendant are engaged in certain types of activities, such as an 'active sport.' That was not the case here; plaintiff was merely the passenger on a boat. Under Li, he may have been contributorily negligent but this would only go to reduce the amount of damages to which he is entitled." (Kindrich, supra, 167 Cal.App.4th at p. 1258 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of CACI No. 408: There are numerous times when we watch a sporting event and see examples of conduct so intentional or reckless that they are "outside the range of ordinary activity." For instance, when Mike Tyson bit the ear off of Evander Holyfield during a boxing match in 1997. Although that example is an extreme, there are many times when participants in amateur sports are subjected to intentional or reckless conduct by teammates or opponents that would not be considered "part of the game." By Dona Cohn-Payne

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 409

CACI 409 Liability of Instructors, Trainers, or Coaches

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s [coaching/training/instruction]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was [name of plaintiff]'s [coach/trainer/instructor];
- 2. That [name of defendant] intended to cause [name of plaintiff] injury or acted recklessly in that [his/her] conduct was entirely outside the range of ordinary activity involved in teaching or coaching the sport in which [name of plaintiff] was participating;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004

■ "In order to support a cause of action in cases in which it is alleged that a sports instructor has required a student to perform beyond the student's capacity or without providing adequate instruction, it must be alleged and proved that the instructor acted with intent to cause a student's injury or that the instructor acted recklessly in the sense that the instructor's conduct was 'totally outside the range of the ordinary activity' involved in teaching or coaching the sport." (Kahn v. East Side Union High School District (2003) 31 Cal.4th 990, 1011 [4 Cal.Rptr.3d 103, 75 P.3d 30] , internal citation omitted.)

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 409

■ "[D]ecisions have clarified that the risks associated with learning a sport may themselves be inherent risks of the sport, and that an instructor or coach generally does not increase the risk of harm inherent in learning the sport simply by urging the student to strive to excel or to reach a new level of competence." (Kahn, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1006 .)

■ "Primary assumption of risk arises where a plaintiff voluntarily participates in an activity or sport involving certain inherent risks; primary assumption of risk ... bar[s] recovery because no duty of care is owed as to such risks." (Connolly v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 8, 11 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 855] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A coparticipant in an active sport ordinarily bears no liability for an injury resulting from conduct in the course of the sport that is merely careless or negligent." (Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal.4th 339, 342 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 30, 834 P.2d 724] .)

■ "[W]e conclude that a participant in an active sport breaches a legal duty of care to other participants--i.e., engages in conduct that properly may subject him or her to financial liability--only if the participant intentionally injures another player or engages in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport." (Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal.4th 296, 320 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .)

■ "[T]he mere existence of an instructor/pupil relationship does not necessarily preclude application of 'primary assumption of the risk.' Learning any sport inevitably involves attempting new skills. A coach or instructor will often urge the student to go beyond what the student has already mastered; that is the nature of (inherent in) sports instruction." (Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 1358, 1368-1369 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 813] .)

■ "Instructors, like commercial operators of recreational activities, 'have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport. Thus, although a ski resort has no duty to remove moguls from a ski run, it clearly does have a duty to use due care to maintain its towropes in a safe, working condition so as not to expose skiers to an increased risk of harm. The cases establish that the latter type of risk, posed by a ski resort's negligence, clearly is not a risk (inherent in the sport) that is assumed by a participant.'" (Fortier v. Los Rios Community College Dist. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 430, 435 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 812] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'Primary assumption of the risk' applies to injuries from risks 'inherent in the sport'; the risks are not any the less 'inherent' simply because an instructor encourages a student to keep trying when attempting a new skill." (Allan, supra, 51 Cal.App.4th at p. 1369 .)

■ Coaches and sports instructors "owe students a duty 'not to increase the risks inherent in the learning process undertaken by the student.' But this does not require them to 'fundamentally alter the nature of the sport and, in some instances, effectively preclude participation altogether' Instead, '[b]y choosing to participate in a sport that poses the obvious possibility of injury, the student athlete must learn to accept an adverse result of the risks inherent in the sport.' " (Lupash v. City of Seal Beach (1999) 75 Cal.App.4th 1428, 1436-1437 [89 Cal.Rptr.2d 920] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[T]he existence and scope of a defendant's duty of care is a legal question which depends on the nature of the sport or activity in question and on the parties' general relationship to the activity, and is an issue to be decided by the court, rather than the jury.' Thus, when the injury occurs in a sports setting the court must decide whether the nature of the sport and the relationship of the defendant and the plaintiff to the sport as coparticipant, coach, premises owner or spectator support the legal conclusion of duty." (

Mastro v. Petrick (2001) 93 Cal.App.4th 83, 88 [112 Cal.Rptr.2d 185] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The existence of a duty of care is a separate issue from the question whether (on the basis of foreseeability among other factors) a particular defendant breached that duty of care, which is an essentially factual matter." (Kockelman v. Segal (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 491, 498 [71 Cal.Rptr.2d 552] .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 410

CACI 410 Parental Liability (Nonstatutory)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because of [name of defendant]'s negligent supervision of [name of minor]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [insert one or both of the following:]

[observed [name of minor]'s dangerous behavior that led to [name of plaintiff]'s injury;] [or]

[was aware of [name of minor]'s habits or tendencies that created an unreasonable risk of harm to other persons;]

2. That [name of defendant] had the opportunity and ability to control the conduct of [name of minor];

3. That [name of defendant] was negligent because [he/she] failed to [insert one or both of the following:]

[exercise reasonable care to prevent [name of minor]'s conduct;] [or]

[take reasonable precautions to prevent harm to others;]

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

This instruction is not intended for use for claims of statutory liability against parents or guardians based on a minor's willful conduct, e.g., Civil Code section 1714.1 (willful misconduct), section 1714.3 (discharging firearm), or Education Code section 48904(a)(1) (willful misconduct).

■ "While it is the rule in California ... that there is no vicarious liability on a parent for the torts of a child there is 'another rule of the law relating to the torts of minors, which is somewhat in the nature of an exception, and that is that a parent may become liable for an injury caused by the child where the parent's negligence made it possible for the child to cause the injury complained of, and probable that it would do so.' " (Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal.App.2d 310, 317 [253 P.2d 675] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Parents are responsible for harm caused by their children only when it has been shown that 'the parents as reasonable persons previously became aware of habits or tendencies of the infant which made it likely that the child would misbehave so that they should have restrained him in apposite conduct and actions.' " (Reida v. Lund (1971) 18 Cal.App.3d 698, 702 [96 Cal.Rptr. 102] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In cases where the parent did not observe the child's conduct which led to the injury, the parent has been held liable where he had been aware of the child's dangerous propensity or habit and negligently failed to exercise proper control or negligently failed to give appropriate warning. In other cases, where the parent did not observe and was not in a position to control the conduct which endangered the plaintiff, recovery was denied on the ground that there was no showing that the parent knew of any dangerous tendency. What is said about 'propensity' or 'habit' in those cases has no applicability where the parent is present and observes the dangerous behavior and has an opportunity to exercise control but neglects to do so." (Costello v. Hart (1972) 23 Cal.App.3d 898, 900-901 [100 Cal.Rptr. 554] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The ability to control the child, rather than the relationship as such, is the basis for a finding of liability on the part of a parent. ... [The] absence of such ability is fatal to a claim of legal responsibility.' The ability to control is inferred from the relationship of parent to minor child, as it is from the relationship of custodian to charge; yet it may be disproved by the circumstances surrounding the particular situation." (Robertson v. Wentz (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1281, 1290 [232 Cal.Rptr. 634] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of CACI No. 410: CACI No. 410 is useful when a minor drives a car and has a history of poor and/or reckless driving. If the minor has had moving violations or a history of drug or alcohol consumption and the parent still allows the minor to drive a car, then the parent can be held liable. This instruction has also been used when a minor has had a party at the parent's home where alcohol and/or drugs were consumed by other minor children and an injury has occurred. By Dona Cohn-Payne

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 411

CACI 411 Reliance on Good Conduct of Others

Every person has a right to expect that every other person will use reasonable care [and will not violate the law], unless he or she knows, or should know, that the other person will not use reasonable care [or will violate the law].

New September 2003

This instruction should not be used if the only other actor is the plaintiff and there is no evidence that the plaintiff acted unreasonably. (Springer v. Reimers (1970) 4 Cal.App.3d 325, 336 [84 Cal.Rptr. 486] .)

- The general rule is that "every person has a right to presume that every other person will perform his duty and obey the law and in the absence of reasonable grounds to think otherwise, it is not negligence to assume that he is not exposed to danger which could come to him only from violation of law or duty by such other person." (Celli v. Sports Car Club of America, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 511, 523 [105 Cal.Rptr. 904] .) "However, this rule does not extend to a person who is not exercising ordinary care, nor to one who knows or, by the exercise of such care, would know that the law is not being observed." (Malone v. Perryman (1964) 226 Cal.App.2d 227, 234 [37 Cal.Rptr. 864] .)

- Defendants are entitled to rely on the reasonable conduct of third parties who owe a duty of care to the plaintiff. (Tucker v. Lombardo (1956) 47 Cal.2d 457, 467 [303 P.2d 1041] .) The central issue addressed by the instruction is whether or not the bad act of the third person was foreseeable by the defendant. (Whitton v. State of California (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 235, 244-246 [159 Cal.Rptr. 405] .) "If the likelihood that a third person may act in a particular manner is the hazard or one of the hazards which makes the actor negligent, such an act whether innocent, negligent, intentionally tortious, or criminal does not prevent the actor from being liable for harm caused thereby." (Rest.2d Torts, § 449; Bigbee v. Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. (1983) 34 Cal.3d 49, 58 [192 Cal.Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947] .)

■ Many cases involving issues of third-party criminal conduct are analyzed as questions of law--i.e., existence of a duty, which may require analysis of foreseeability. (See Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center (1993) 6 Cal.4th 666, 678 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] ; Ky. Fried Chicken of Cal. v. Superior Court (1997) 14 Cal.4th 814, 819 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 756, 927 P.2d 1260].)

■ In cases where a third party commits a criminal act, the defendant is generally not liable for failure to protect the plaintiff from the resulting harm. The exceptions are (1) where the defendant has a special relationship to the plaintiff, (2) where the defendant has undertaken an obligation to protect the plaintiff, or (3) where the defendant's conduct created or increased the risk of harm through the misconduct. (Rest.2d Torts, § 302B, com. e.)

An adult must anticipate the ordinary behavior of children. An adult must be more careful when dealing with children than with other adults.

New September 2003

This instruction is to be used where the plaintiff seeks damages for injury to a minor.

For standard of care for minors, see CACI No. 402, Standard of Care for Minors.

■ "'A child of immature years is expected to exercise only such care as pertains to childhood, and all persons dealing with such a child are chargeable with such knowledge. Because of the special relationship between District and its students, District had a heightened duty to make the school safe. If it is reasonably foreseeable that persons to whom a lower standard of care applies, such as children, may be exposed to a substantial risk of injury from the property, the public entity should be required to take reasonable precautions to protect such persons from that risk. CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 413

CACI 413 Custom or Practice

You may consider customs or practices in the community in deciding whether [name of plaintiff/defendant] acted reasonably. Customs and practices do not necessarily determine what a reasonable person would have done in [name of plaintiff/defendant]'s situation. They are only factors for you to consider.

Following a custom or practice does not excuse conduct that is unreasonable. You should consider whether the custom or practice itself is reasonable.

New September 2003

An instruction stating that evidence of custom is not controlling on the issue of standard of care should not be given in professional malpractice cases in which expert testimony is used to set the standard of care. (See Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 234, 277 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 101] .) The instruction may be used if the standard of care is within common knowledge. (See Leonard v. Watsonville Community Hospital (1956) 47 Cal.2d 509, 519 [305 P.2d 36] .)

This instruction is also inappropriate in cases involving strict liability (Titus v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1979) 91 Cal.App.3d 372, 378 [154 Cal.Rptr. 122]) or cases involving negligence in the use of public roads (Shuff v. Irwindale Trucking Co. (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 180, 187 [132 Cal.Rptr. 897]).

■ Evidence of custom and practice is relevant, but not conclusive, on the issue of the standard of care in cases of ordinary negligence. (Holt v. Department of Food and Agriculture (1985) 171 Cal.App.3d 427, 435 [218 Cal.Rptr. 1] .)

● Restatement Second of Torts, section 295A, provides: "In determining whether conduct is negligent, the customs of the community, or of others under like circumstances, are factors to be taken into account, but are not controlling where a reasonable man would not follow them."

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 414

CACI 414 Amount of Caution Required In Dangerous Situations

People must be extremely careful when they deal with dangerous items or participate in dangerous activities. [Insert type of dangerous item or activity] is dangerous in and of itself. The risk of harm is so great that the failure to use extreme caution is negligence.

New September 2003

An instruction on the standard of care for extremely dangerous activities is proper only "in situations where the nature of the activity or substance is so inherently dangerous or complex, as such, that the hazard persists despite the exercise of ordinary care." (Benwell v. Dean (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 226, 233 [38 Cal.Rptr. 542] ; see also Menchaca v. Helms Bakeries, Inc. (1968) 68 Cal.2d 535, 544 [67 Cal.Rptr. 775, 439 P.2d 903] .)

This instruction should not be given at the same time as an instruction pertaining to standard of care for employees who have to work in dangerous situations. In appropriate cases, juries may be instructed that a person of ordinary prudence is required to exercise extreme caution when engaged in a dangerous activity. (Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 Cal.2d 538, 544-546 [15 Cal.Rptr. 635, 364 P.2d 467] .) However, this rule does not apply when a person's lawful employment requires that he or she must work in a dangerous situation. (McDonald v. City of Oakland (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 816, 827 [63 Cal.Rptr. 593] .) This is because "reasonable men who are paid to give at least part of their attention to their job" may not be as able to maintain the same standards for personal safety as nonemployees. (Young v. Aro Corp. (1974) 36 Cal.App.3d 240, 245 [111 Cal.Rptr. 535] .) (See CACI No. 415, Employee Required to Work in Dangerous Situations.)

■ Even a slight deviation from the standards of care will constitute negligence in cases involving dangerous instrumentalities. (Borenkraut, supra, 56 Cal.2d at p. 545 .)

■ Dangerous instrumentalities include fire, firearms, explosive or highly inflammable materials, and corrosive or otherwise dangerous or noxious fluids. (Warner v. Santa Catalina Island Co. (1955) 44 Cal.2d 310, 317 [282 P.2d 12] .)

■ In Menchaca, the Court held that "[d]riving a motor vehicle may be sufficiently dangerous to warrant special instructions, but it is not so hazardous that it always requires 'extreme caution.' " (Menchaca, supra, 68 Cal.2d at p. 544 .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 415

CACI 415 Employee Required to Work in Dangerous Situations

An employee required to work under dangerous conditions must use the amount of care for [his/her] own safety that a reasonably careful employee would use under the same conditions.

In deciding whether [name of plaintiff] was negligent, you should consider how much attention [his/her] work demanded. You should also consider whether [name of plaintiff]'s job required [him/her] to take risks that a reasonably careful person would not normally take under ordinary circumstances.

New September 2003

This type of instruction should not be given in cases involving freeway collisions between private and commercial vehicles. (Shuff v. Irwindale Trucking Co. (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 180, 187 [132 Cal.Rptr. 897] .)

An instruction on this principle is "aimed at situations where the employment conditions lessen the plaintiff's ability to take precautions." (Von Beltz v. Stuntman, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal.App.3d 1467, 1485 [255 Cal.Rptr. 755] .) It does not apply where the plaintiff has ample opportunity to consider various precautions (ibid.) or when employees act pursuant to choice rather than necessity. (Roberts v. Guillory (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 859, 861-862] .)

■ This type of instruction "soften[ed] the impact of instructing on the issue of contributory negligence" (Young v. Aro Corp. (1974) 36 Cal.App.3d 240, 244 [111 Cal.Rptr. 535]) at a time when contributory negligence was a complete bar to a plaintiff's recovery. The instruction may be given in cases involving comparative fault. (See, e.g., Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 123, 136-137 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d

■ "It has long been recognized that 'where a person must work in a position of possible danger the amount of care which he is bound to exercise for his own safety may well be less by reason of the necessity of his giving attention to his work than would otherwise be the case.' [Citations]." (Austin v. Riverside Portland Cement Co. (1955) 44 Cal.2d 225, 239 [282 P.2d 69] .)

■ "Considered in the light of the realities of his working life, the laborer's duty may become considerably restricted in scope. In some instances he may find himself powerless to abandon the task at hand with impunity whenever he senses a possible danger; in others, he may be uncertain as to which person has supervision of the job or control of the place of employment, and therefore unsure as to whom he should direct his complaint; in still others, having been encouraged to continue working under conditions where danger lurks but has not materialized, he may be baffled in making an on-the-spot decision as to the imminence of harm. All of these factors enter into a determination whether his conduct falls below a standard of due care." (Gyerman v. United States Lines Co. (1972) 7 Cal.3d 488, 501 [102 Cal.Rptr. 795, 498 P.2d 1043] , citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 416

CACI 416 Amount of Caution Required in Transmitting Electric Power

People and companies must be very careful in constructing, insulating, inspecting, maintaining, and repairing power lines and transmission equipment at all places where it is reasonably probable that they will cause harm to persons or property.

New September 2003

The cases have crafted a specific standard of care for the construction and maintenance of power lines, and juries must be instructed on this standard upon request. (Sally v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1972) 23 Cal.App.3d 806, 816 [100 Cal.Rptr. 501] .)

- Electric power lines are considered dangerous instrumentalities. (Polk v. City of Los Angeles (1945) 26 Cal.2d 519, 525 [159 P.2d 931] .)

- The requirement to insulate wires applies to only those wires that may come into contact with people or property: "While an electric company is not under an absolute duty to insulate or make the wires safe in any particular manner, it does have a duty to make the wires safe under all the exigencies created by the surrounding circumstances. The duty of an electric company is alternative, i.e., either to insulate the wires or to so locate them to make them comparatively harmless." (Sally, supra, 23 Cal.App.3d at pp. 815-816 .)

Publisher's Notes

This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI No. 3.42.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip-- CACI No. 416 vs. BAJI No. 3.42: At first glance, it appears that CACI No. 416 regarding the "Amount of Caution Required in Transmitting Electric Power" is simpler and more easily understood than BAJI No. 3.42. However, it also appears that the standard of care required may have increased. BAJI No. 3.42 states: "The exercise of ordinary care ..." is required. "In installing, maintaining and supervising electric transmission lines and facilities, caution commensurate with the existing danger is required" (emphasis added). CACI No. 416 states: "People and companies must be very careful in constructing ... power lines and transmission equipment" "Very careful" seems to be a higher standard than "ordinary care" or "commensurate with the existing danger." Both instructions relied on the same authority [Sally v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 816, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501] . In addition, there is no instruction defining the phrase "very careful." Thus, if you represent a defendant against a claim of negligence in an electric power case, consider asking that the old BAJI No. 3.42 instruction be given. This instruction "properly state[s] the existing law, and failure to instruct the jury thereon constitute[s] error" [Sally v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 816, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501] . By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 417

CACI 417 Special Doctrines: Res ipsa loquitur

In this case, [name of plaintiff] may prove that [name of defendant]'s negligence caused [his/her] harm if [he/she] proves all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff]'s harm ordinarily would not have happened unless someone was negligent;
- 2. That the harm was caused by something that only [name of defendant] controlled; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff]'s voluntary actions did not cause or contribute to the event[s] that harmed [him/her].

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] did not prove one or more of these three things, then [insert one of the following:]

[your verdict must be for [name of defendant].]

[or]

[you must decide whether [name of defendant] was negligent in light of the other instructions I have read.]

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] proved all of these three things, you may, but are not required to, find that [name of defendant] was negligent or that [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm, or both.

You must carefully consider the evidence presented by both [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] before you make your decision. You should not decide in favor of [name of plaintiff] unless you believe, after weighing all of the evidence, that it is more probable than not that [name of defendant] was negligent and that [his/her] negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

In the second paragraph, the first bracketed option is to be used when plaintiff is relying solely on a res ipsa loquitur theory and has introduced no other evidence of defendant's negligence. The second option is to be used when plaintiff has introduced other evidence of defendant's negligence.

"It follows that where part of the facts basic to the application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is established as a matter of law but that others are not, the court should instruct that application of the doctrine by the jury depends only upon the existence of the basic facts not conclusively established." (Rimmele v. Northridge Hospital Foundation (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 123, 130 [120 Cal.Rptr. 39] .)

■ "In California, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is defined by statute as 'a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence.' The presumption arises when the evidence satisfies three conditions: '(1) the accident must be of a kind which ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence; (2) it must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of the defendant; (3) it must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff.' A presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence 'require[s] the trier of fact to assume the existence of the presumed fact' unless the defendant introduces evidence to the contrary. The presumed fact, in this context, is that 'a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant' If the defendant introduces 'evidence which would support a finding that he was not negligent or that any negligence on his part was not a proximate cause of the occurrence,' the trier of fact determines whether defendant was negligent without regard to the presumption, simply by weighing the evidence." (Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 Cal.4th 820, 825-826 [15 Cal.Rptr.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Stated less mechanically, a plaintiff suing in a personal injury action is entitled to the benefit of res ipsa loquitur when: 'the accident is of such a nature that it can be said, in the light of past experience, that it probably was the result of negligence by someone and that the defendant is probably the person who is responsible.' " (Rimmele, supra, 46 Cal.App.3d at p. 129 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Evidence Code section 646(c) provides:

If the evidence, or facts otherwise established, would support a res ipsa loquitur presumption and the defendant has introduced evidence which would support a finding that he was not negligent or that any negligence on his part was not a proximate cause of the occurrence, the court may, and upon request shall, instruct the jury to the effect that:

(1) If the facts which would give rise to a res ipsa loquitur presumption are found or otherwise established, the jury may draw the inference from such facts that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant; and

(2) The jury shall not find that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant unless the jury believes, after weighing all the evidence in the case and drawing such inferences therefrom as the jury believes are warranted, that it is more probable than not that the occurrence was caused by some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant.

■ Under Evidence Code section 604, a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence "require[s] the trier of fact to assume the existence of the presumed fact" unless the defendant introduces evidence to the contrary. Here, the presumed fact is that "a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant." (Evid. Code, § 646(c)(1); Brown, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 826 .)

■ "The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is fundamentally a doctrine predicated upon inference deducible from circumstantial evidence." (Hale v. Venuto (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 910, 918 [187 Cal.Rptr. 357] .)

■ The doctrine "is based on a theory of 'probability' where there is no direct evidence of defendant's conduct, permitting a common sense inference of negligence from the happening of the accident." (Gicking v. Kimberlin (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 73, 75 [215 Cal.Rptr. 834] .)

■ "All of the cases hold, in effect, that it must appear, either as a matter of common experience or from evidence in the case, that the accident is of a type which probably would not happen unless someone was negligent." (Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 Cal.2d 436, 442-443 [247 P.2d 344] .)

■ The purpose of the second "control" requirement is to "link the defendant with the probability, already established, that the accident was negligently caused." (Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal.3d 351, 362 [124 Cal.Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] .) The control requirement is not absolute. (Zentz, supra, 39 Cal.2d at p. 443 .)

■ "The purpose of [the third] requirement, like that of control by the defendant is to establish that the defendant is the one probably responsible for the accident. The plaintiff need not show that he was entirely inactive at the time of the accident in order to satisfy this requirement, so long as the evidence is such as to eliminate his conduct as a factor contributing to the occurrence." (Newing, supra, 15 Cal.3d at p. 363 , internal citations omitted.)

■ The third condition "should not be confused with the problem of contributory negligence, as to which defendant has the burden of proof. ... [I]ts purpose, like that of control by the defendant, is merely to assist the court in determining whether it is more probable than not that the defendant was responsible for the accident." (Zentz, supra, 39 Cal.2d at p. 444 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Res Ipsa Loquitur Cases: CACI No. 417 should be viewed by the plaintiff's litigator early on if it appears that there may be facts to support the res ipsa loquitur scenario. An airplane crash where the plaintiff is merely a passenger is an example of when the theory of res ipsa loquitur may come into play. It is an advantage to have the burden shifted to the defendant in these types of cases. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--CACI vs. BAJI: CACI No. 417 replaces four previous BAJI instructions--BAJI Nos. 4.00, 4.01, 4.02, and 4.03. In my opinion, CACI No. 417 is more confusing than the BAJI instructions it replaced (and it is no improvement to repeatedly refer to the plaintiff and defendant by name). The four BAJI instructions regarding "Res Ipsa Loquitur" were a flexible combination that allowed a difficult legal concept to be reasonably easy to understand. As such, consider requesting that the court instruct the jury on the theory of Res Ipsa Loquitur by using an appropriate combination of BAJI Nos. 4.00, 4.01, 4.02, and 4.03, rather than CACI No. 417 because it will be less likely the jury may be confused by the issue. By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 418

CACI 418 Presumption of Negligence per se

[Insert citation to statute, regulation, or ordinance] states:

If you decide

1. That [name of plaintiff/defendant] violated this law and
2. That the violation was a substantial factor in bringing about the harm, then you must find that [name of plaintiff/defendant] was negligent [unless you also find that the violation was excused].

If you find that [name of plaintiff/defendant] did not violate this law or that the violation was not a substantial factor in bringing about the harm [or if you find the violation was excused], then you must still decide whether [name of plaintiff/defendant] was negligent in light of the other instructions.

New September 2003; Revised December 2005

If a rebuttal is offered on the ground that the violation was excused, then the bracketed portion in the second and last paragraphs should be read. For an instruction on excuse, see CACI No. 420, Negligence per se: Rebuttal of the Presumption of Negligence (Violation Excused).

If the statute is lengthy, the judge may want to read it at the end of this instruction instead of at the beginning. The instruction would then need to be revised, to tell the jury that they will be hearing the statute at the end.

Rebuttal of the presumption of negligence is addressed in the instructions that follow (see CACI Nos. 420 and 421).

■ Evidence Code section 669 codifies the common law presumption of negligence per se and the grounds for rebutting the presumption. Subdivision (a) sets forth the conditions that cause the presumption to arise:

The failure of a person to exercise due care is presumed if:

- (1) He violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity;
- (2) The violation proximately caused death or injury to person or property;
- (3) The death or injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature which the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent; and
- (4) The person suffering the death or the injury to his person or property was one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted.

■ In general, the first two elements of Evidence Code section 669(a) are questions to be decided by the trier of fact, while the last two are always questions of law. (Cade v. Mid-City Hospital Corp. (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 589, 597 [119 Cal.Rptr. 571] ; see also Law Revision Cal. Com., Evid. Code, § 669.) However, in some circumstances violation of the law and/or causation can be decided as questions of law. In those cases, it is unnecessary to instruct the jury on the elements decided by the court.

■ This jury instruction addresses the establishment of the two factual elements underlying the presumption of negligence. If they are not established, then a finding of negligence cannot be based on the alleged statutory violation. However, negligence can still be proven by other means. (Nunneley v. Edgar Hotel (1950) 36 Cal.2d 493, 500-501 [225 P.2d 497] .)

■ Statutory negligence, or negligence per se, sets the conduct prescribed by the statute as the standard of care. (Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d 379, 383 [188 Cal.Rptr. 18] .) Criminal statutes may be used to set the applicable standard of care. (See Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 539, 547 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 97, 863 P.2d 167] .) Federal statutes and regulations may be adopted as the standard of care in a negligence action. (DiRosa v. Showa Denko K. K. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 799, 808 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 128] .)

■ Safety orders and regulations of administrative agencies may be used to set the standard of care. However, an administrative agency cannot independently impose a duty of care unless the Legislature has properly delegated that authority to the agency. (California Service Station & Auto. Repair Assn. v. American Home Assurance Co. (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 1166, 1175 [73 Cal.Rptr.2d 182] .)

■ OSHA regulations, where applicable, may be used as a basis for negligence per se instructions. (Lab. Code, § 6304.5; Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal.4th 915, 935-936 [22 Cal.Rptr.3d 530, 102 P.3d 915] .)

This instruction covers issues presented in BAJI No. 3.45.

"A regulatory violation is presumed to constitute negligence and that presumption will be conclusive unless the defendant rebuts it." Absent an express instruction on negligence per se, the jury was allowed to either consider or disregard any regulatory violation. Without an instruction on negligence per se, it is "reasonably probable the significance and weight attributed by the jury to the evidence showing" a violation of the regulations in question was "substantially and unduly diminished." (Norman v. Life Care Centers of America, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 1233, 1251 [132 Cal.Rptr.2d 765] .)

CACI 419 Presumption of Negligence per se (Causation Only at Issue)

[Insert citation to statute, regulation, or ordinance] states:

_____.

A violation of this law has been established and is not an issue for you to decide.

[However, you must decide whether the violation was excused. If it was not excused, then you] [You] must decide whether the violation was a substantial factor in harming [name of plaintiff].

If you decide that the violation was a substantial factor, then you must find that [name of plaintiff/defendant] was negligent.

New September 2003

The California Law Revision Commission comment on Evidence Code section 669 states that the trier of fact usually decides the question of whether the violation occurred. However, "if a party admits the violation or if the evidence of the violation is undisputed, it is appropriate for the judge to instruct the jury that a violation of the statute, ordinance, or regulation has been established as a matter of law." In such cases, the jury would decide causation and, if applicable, the existence of any justification or excuse. For an instruction on excuse, see CACI No. 420, Negligence per se: Rebuttal of the Presumption of Negligence (Violation Excused).

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 420

CACI 420 Negligence per se: Rebuttal of the Presumption of Negligence (Violation Excused)

A violation of a law is excused if one of the following is true:

- (a) The violation was reasonable because of [name of plaintiff/defendant]'s [specify type of "incapacity"]; [or]
- (b) Despite using reasonable care, [name of plaintiff/defendant] was not able to obey the law; [or]
- (c) [Name of plaintiff/defendant] faced an emergency that was not caused by [his/her] own misconduct; [or]
- (d) Obeying the law would have involved a greater risk of harm to [name of plaintiff/defendant] or to others; [or]
- (e) [Other reason excusing or justifying noncompliance.]

New September 2003

Subparagraph (b), regarding an attempt to comply with the applicable statute or regulation, should not be given where the evidence does not show such an attempt. (Atkins v. Bisigier (1971) 16 Cal.App.3d 414, 423 [94 Cal.Rptr. 49] .) Subparagraph (b) should be used only in special cases because it relies on the concept of due care to avoid a charge of negligence per se.

■ Evidence Code section 669(b)(1) provides: "This presumption may be rebutted by proof that [t]he person violating the statute, ordinance, or regulation did what might reasonably be expected of a person of ordinary prudence, acting under similar circumstances, who desired to comply with the law."

■ The language of section 669(b)(1) appears to be based on the following Supreme Court holding: "In our opinion the correct test is whether the person who has violated a statute has sustained the burden of showing that he did what might reasonably be expected of a person of ordinary prudence, acting under similar circumstances, who desired to comply with the law." (Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal.2d 617, 624 [327 P.2d 897] .)

■ In Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d 379 [188 Cal.Rptr. 18] , the court held that an instruction that tracked the language of section 669(b)(1) was erroneous because it "[did] not adequately convey that there must be some special circumstances which justify violating the statute." (Id. at p. 385 .) The court's opinion cited section 288A of the Restatement Second of Torts for a list of the types of emergencies or unusual circumstances that may justify or excuse a violation of the statute:

- (a) The violation is reasonable because of the actor's incapacity;
- (b) He neither knows nor should know of the occasion for compliance;
- (c) He is unable after reasonable diligence or care to comply;
- (d) He is confronted by an emergency not due to his own misconduct;
- (e) Compliance would involve a greater risk of harm to the actor or to others.

According to the Restatement comment, this list of circumstances is not meant to be exclusive.

CACI 421 Negligence per se: Rebuttal of the Presumption of Negligence (Violation of Minor Excused)

[Name of plaintiff/defendant] claims that even if [he/she] violated the law, [he/she] is not negligent because [he/she] was ____ years old at the time of the incident. If you find that [name of plaintiff/defendant] was as careful as a reasonably careful child of the same age, intelligence, knowledge, and experience would have been in the same situation, then [name of plaintiff/defendant] was not negligent.

New September 2003

This instruction does not apply if the minor is engaging in an adult activity. (Evid. Code, § 669(b)(2).)

- Evidence Code section 669(b)(2) provides: "The presumption may be rebutted by proof that [t]he person violating the statute, ordinance, or regulation was a child and exercised the degree of care ordinarily exercised by persons of his maturity, intelligence, and capacity under similar circumstances, but the presumption may not be rebutted by such proof if the violation occurred in the course of an activity normally engaged in only by adults and requiring adult qualifications."

- "The per se negligence instruction is predicated on the theory that the Legislature has adopted a statutory standard of conduct that no reasonable man would violate, and that all reasonable adults would or should know such standard. But this concept does not apply to children." (Daun v. Truax (1961) 56 Cal.2d 647, 654 [16 Cal.Rptr. 351, 365 P.2d 407] .)

- An exception to this reduced standard of care may be found if the minor was engaging in an adult activity, such as driving. (*Prichard v. CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 422

CACI 422 Sale of Alcoholic Beverages to Obviously Intoxicated Minors (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 25602.1)

[Name of plaintiff] claims [name of defendant] is responsible for [his/her] harm because [name of defendant] sold or gave alcoholic beverages to [name of alleged minor], a minor who was already obviously intoxicated.

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was [licensed/authorized/required to be licensed or authorized] to sell alcoholic beverages;
- 2. That [name of defendant] sold or gave alcoholic beverages to [name of alleged minor];
- 3. That [name of alleged minor] was less than 21 years old at the time;
- 4. That when [name of defendant] provided the alcoholic beverages, [name of alleged minor] displayed symptoms that would lead a reasonable person to conclude that [he/she] was obviously intoxicated;
- 5. That [name of alleged minor] harmed [name of plaintiff]; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s selling or giving alcoholic beverages to [name of alleged minor] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In deciding whether [name of alleged minor] was obviously intoxicated, you may consider whether [he/she] displayed one or more of the following symptoms to [name of defendant] before the alcoholic beverages were provided: impaired judgment; alcoholic breath; incoherent or slurred speech; poor muscular coordination; staggering or unsteady walk or loss of balance; loud, boisterous, or argumentative conduct; flushed face; or other symptoms of intoxication. The mere fact that [name of alleged minor] had been drinking is not enough.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

If the plaintiff is the minor who is suing for his or her own injuries (see Chalup v. Aspen Mine Co. (1985) 175 Cal.App.3d 973, 974 [221 Cal.Rptr. 97]), modify the instruction by substituting the appropriate pronoun for "[name of alleged minor]" throughout.

For purposes of this instruction, a "minor" is someone under the age of 21. (Rogers v. Alvas (1984) 160 Cal.App.3d 997, 1004 [207 Cal.Rptr. 60] .)

- Business and Professions Code section 25602.1 provides, in relevant part: "[A] cause of action may be brought by or on behalf of any person who has suffered injury or death against any person licensed, or required to be licensed ... or any person authorized by the federal government to sell alcoholic beverages on a military base or other federal enclave, who sells, furnishes, gives or causes to be sold, furnished or sold, any alcoholic beverage, to any obviously intoxicated minor where the furnishing, sale or giving of that beverage to the minor is the proximate cause of the personal injury or death sustained by that person."

- In Schaffield v. Abboud (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 1133, 1140 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 205] , the court cited the following as the proper test for determining whether a patron is obviously intoxicated: " 'The use of intoxicating liquor by the average person in such quantity as to produce intoxication causes many commonly known outward manifestations which are "plain" and "easily seen or discovered." If such outward manifestations exist and the seller still serves the customer so affected, he has violated the law, whether this was because he failed to observe what was plain and easily seen or discovered, or because, having observed, he ignored that which was apparent.' "

- "[T]he standard for determining 'obvious intoxication' is measured by that of a reasonable person." (Schaffield, supra, 15 Cal.App.4th at p. 1140.)

- The description of symptoms is derived from an instruction approved in Jones v. Toyota Motor Co. (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 364, 370 [243 Cal.Rptr. 611] .

- In Hernandez v. Modesto Portuguese Pentecost Assn. (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1274, 1276 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 229] , the court held that the phrase "causes to be sold" "requires an affirmative act directly related to the sale of alcohol which necessarily brings about the resultant action to which the statute is directed, i.e., the furnishing of alcohol to an obviously intoxicated minor."

- "It is our conclusion that the terms of section 25602.1 should be construed strictly, so as to require that the negligence resulting in liability of the alcohol purveyor be that of the very person who purchased the beverage." (Salem v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 595, 600 [259 Cal.Rptr. 447] .)

- "[O]bviously intoxicated minors who are served alcohol by a licensed purveyor of liquor, may bring a cause of action for negligence against the purveyor for [their own] subsequent injuries." (Chalup, supra, 175 Cal.App.3d at p. 979 .)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because [name of defendant] violated [insert reference to statute, regulation, or ordinance] which states: _____ [insert relevant language]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] violated [insert reference to statute, regulation, or ordinance];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
3. That [name of defendant]'s failure to perform its duty was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[Name of defendant], however, is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm if [name of defendant] proves that it made reasonable efforts to perform its duties under the [statute/regulation/ordinance].

New September 2003

The judge decides the issues of whether the statute imposes a mandatory duty and whether it was designed to protect against the type of harm suffered. (Haggis v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal.4th 490, 499 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 327, 993 P.2d 983] .)

■ Government Code section 815.6 provides: "Where a public entity is under a mandatory duty imposed by an enactment that is designed to protect against the risk of a particular kind of injury, the public entity is liable for an injury of that kind proximately caused by its failure to discharge the duty unless the public entity establishes that it exercised reasonable diligence to discharge the duty."

■ "Before the state will be required to confront a rebuttable presumption of negligence, plaintiff must demonstrate that: (1) the statute which was violated imposes a mandatory duty, (2) the statute was intended to protect against the type of harm suffered, and (3) breach of the statute's mandatory duty was a proximate cause of the injury suffered." ■ "'Government Code section 815.6 contains a three-pronged test for determining whether liability may be imposed on a public entity: (1) an enactment must impose a mandatory, not discretionary, duty ... ; (2) the enactment must intend to protect against the kind of risk of injury suffered by the party asserting section 815.6 as a basis for liability ... ; and (3) breach of the mandatory duty must be a proximate cause of the injury suffered.' All three elements must be met before a government entity is required to confront the rebuttable presumption of negligence." (*Walt Rankin & Associates, Inc. v. CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 425

CACI 425 "Gross Negligence" Explained

Gross negligence is the lack of any care or an extreme departure from what a reasonably careful person would do in the same situation to prevent harm to oneself or to others.

A person can be grossly negligent by acting or by failing to act.

New April 2008

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if a particular statute that is at issue in the case creates a distinction based on a standard of gross negligence. (See, e.g., Gov. Code, § 831.7(c)(5) [immunity for public entity or employee to liability to participant in or spectator to hazardous recreational activity does not apply if act of gross negligence is proximate cause of injury].) Courts generally resort to this definition if gross negligence is at issue under a statute. (See, e.g., Wood v. County of San Joaquin (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 960, 971 [4 Cal.Rptr.3d 340] .)

Give this instruction with CACI No 400, Essential Factual Elements, but modify that instruction to refer to gross negligence.

This instruction may also be given if case law has created a distinction between gross and ordinary negligence. For example, under the doctrine of express assumption of risk, a signed waiver of liability may release liability for ordinary negligence only, not for gross negligence. (See City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal.4th 747, 777 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] ; see also CACI No. 451, Express Assumption of Risk.)

Sources and Authority

■ "'Gross negligence' long has been defined in California and other jurisdictions as either a 'want of even scant care' or 'an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct.'" (City of Santa Barbara, supra, 41 Cal.4th at p. 754 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "By contrast, 'wanton' or 'reckless' misconduct (or 'willful and wanton negligence') describes conduct by a person who may have no intent to cause harm, but who intentionally performs an act so unreasonable and dangerous that he or she knows or should know it is highly probable that harm will result." (City of Santa Barbara, supra, 41 Cal.4th at p. 754, fn. 4 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The theory that there are degrees of negligence has been generally criticized by legal writers, but a distinction has been made in this state between ordinary and gross negligence. Gross negligence has been said to mean the want of even scant care or an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct." (Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal.2d 588, 594 [297 P.2d 644] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Numerous California cases have discussed the doctrine of gross negligence. Invariably these cases have turned upon an interpretation of a statute which has used the words 'gross negligence' in the text." (Cont'l Ins. Co. v. Am. Prot. Indus. (1987) 197 Cal.App.3d 322, 329 [242 Cal.Rptr. 784] .)

■ "[P]ublic policy generally precludes enforcement of an agreement that would remove an obligation to adhere to even a minimal standard of care. Applying that general rule here, we hold that an agreement purporting to release liability for future gross negligence committed against a developmentally disabled child who participates in a recreational camp designed for the needs of such children violates public policy and is unenforceable." ■ "'Prosser on Torts (1941) page 260, also cited by the Van Meter court for its definition of gross negligence, reads as follows: 'Gross Negligence. This is very great negligence, or the want of even scant care. It has been described as a failure to exercise even that care which a careless person would use. Many courts, dissatisfied with a term so devoid of all real content, have interpreted it as requiring wilful misconduct, or recklessness, or such utter lack of all care as will be evidence of either--sometimes on the ground that this must have been the purpose of the legislature. But most courts have considered that 'gross negligence' falls short of a reckless disregard of consequences, and differs from ordinary negligence only in degree, and not in kind. So far as it has any accepted meaning, it is merely an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of care.'" (*Decker v. 2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 426

CACI 426 Negligent Hiring, Supervision, or Retention of Employee

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of employee] and that [name of employer defendant] is responsible for that harm because [name of employer defendant] negligently [hired/ supervised/ [or] retained] [name of employee]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of employee] was [unfit/ [or] incompetent] to perform the work for which [he/she] was hired;
- 2. That [name of employer defendant] knew or should have known that [name of employee] was [unfit/ [or] incompetent] and that this [unfitness/ [or] incompetence] created a particular risk to others;
- 3. That [name of employee]'s [unfitness/ [or] incompetence] harmed [name of plaintiff]; and
- 4. That [name of employer defendant]'s negligence in [hiring/ supervising/ [or] retaining] [name of employee] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff alleges that the employer of an employee who caused harm was negligent in the hiring, supervision, or retention of the employee after actual or constructive notice of the employee's unfitness. For instructions holding the employer vicariously liable (without fault) for the acts of the employee, see the Vicarious Responsibility series, CACI No. 3700 et seq.

It appears that liability may also be imposed on the hirer of an independent contractor for the negligent selection of the contractor. (See Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 654, 662-663 [109 Cal.Rptr. 269] .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 430

CACI 430 Causation: Substantial Factor

A substantial factor in causing harm is a factor that a reasonable person would consider to have contributed to the harm. It must be more than a remote or trivial factor. It does not have to be the only cause of the harm.

[Conduct is not a substantial factor in causing harm if the same harm would have occurred without that conduct.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, June 2005, December 2005, December 2007

Directions for Use

As phrased, this definition of "substantial factor" subsumes the "but for" test of causation, that is, "but for" the defendant's conduct, the plaintiff's harm would not have occurred. (Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1041, 1052 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 913, 819 P.2d 872] ; see Rest.2d Torts, § 431.) The optional last sentence makes this explicit, and in some cases it may be error not to give this sentence. (See Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 572-573 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] ; Rest.2d Torts, § 432(1).)

"Conduct," in this context, refers to the culpable acts or omissions on which a claim of legal fault is based, e.g., negligence, product defect, breach of contract, or dangerous condition of public property. This is in contrast to an event that is not a culpable act but that happens to occur in the chain of causation, e.g., that the plaintiff's alarm clock failed to go off, causing her to be at the location of the accident at a time when she otherwise would not have been there. The reference to "conduct" may be changed as appropriate to the facts of the case.

The "but for" test of the last optional sentence does not apply to concurrent independent causes, which are multiple forces operating at the same time and independently, each of which would have been sufficient by itself to bring about the same harm. (Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal.4th 1232, 1240 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046] ; Barton v. Owen (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 484, 503-504 [139 Cal.Rptr. 494] ; see Rest.2d Torts, § 432(2).) Accordingly, do not include the last sentence in a case involving concurrent independent causes.

In cases of multiple (concurrent dependent) causes, CACI No. 431, Causation: Multiple Causes, should also be given.

In asbestos-related cancer cases, Rutherford v. Owens-Illinois, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 953, 977 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 16, 941 P.2d 1203] requires a different instruction regarding exposure to a particular product. Give CACI No. 435, Causation for Asbestos-Related Cancer Claims, and do not give this instruction.

Sources and Authority

- This instruction incorporates Restatement Second of Torts, section 431, comment a, which provides, in part: "The word 'substantial' is used to denote the fact that the defendant's conduct has such an effect in producing the harm as to lead reasonable men to regard it as a cause, using that word in the popular sense, in which there always lurks the idea of responsibility, rather than in the so-called 'philosophic sense' which includes every one of the great number of events without which any happening would not have occurred."

- "California has definitively adopted the substantial factor test of the Restatement Second of Torts for cause-in-fact determinations. Under that standard, a cause in fact is something that is a substantial factor in bringing about the injury. The substantial factor standard generally produces the same results as does the 'but for' rule of causation which states that a defendant's conduct is a cause of the injury if the injury would not have occurred 'but for' that conduct. The substantial factor standard, however, has been embraced as a clearer rule of causation--one which subsumes the 'but for' test while reaching beyond it to satisfactorily address other situations, such as those involving independent or concurrent causes in fact." (Rutherford, supra, 16 Cal.4th at pp. 968-969 , internal citations omitted.)

- "The term 'substantial factor' has not been judicially defined with specificity, and indeed it has been observed that it is 'neither possible nor desirable to reduce it to any lower terms.' This court has suggested that a force which plays only an 'infinitesimal' or 'theoretical' part in bringing about injury, damage, or loss is not a substantial factor. Undue emphasis should not be placed on the term 'substantial.' For example, the substantial factor standard, formulated to aid plaintiffs as a broader rule of causality than the 'but for' test, has been invoked by defendants whose conduct is clearly a 'but for' cause of plaintiff's injury but is nevertheless urged as an insubstantial contribution to the injury. Misused in this way, the substantial factor test 'undermines the principles of comparative negligence, under which a party is responsible for his or her share of negligence and the harm caused thereby.' " (Rutherford, supra, 16 Cal.4th at pp. 968-969 , internal citations omitted.)

- "The substantial factor standard is a relatively broad one, requiring only that the contribution of the individual cause be more than negligible or theoretical. Thus, 'a force which plays only an "infinitesimal" or "theoretical" part in bringing about injury, damage, or loss is not a substantial factor', but a very minor force that does cause harm is a substantial factor. This rule honors the principle of comparative fault." (Bockrath v. Aldrich Chemical Co. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 71, 79 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 846, 980 P.2d 398] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The text of Restatement Torts second section 432 demonstrates how the 'substantial factor' test subsumes the traditional 'but for' test of causation. Subsection (1) of section 432 provides: 'Except as stated in Subsection (2), the actor's negligent conduct is not a substantial factor in bringing about harm to another if the harm would have been sustained even if the actor had not been negligent.' ... Subsection (2) states that if 'two forces are actively operating ... and each of itself is sufficient to bring about harm to another, the actor's negligence may be found to be a substantial factor in bringing it about.' " (Viner, supra, 30 Cal. 4th at p. 1240 , original italics.)

■ "A tort is a legal cause of injury only when it is a substantial factor in producing the injury. If the external force of a vehicle accident was so severe that it would have caused identical injuries notwithstanding an abstract 'defect' in the vehicle's collision safety, the defect cannot be considered a substantial factor in bringing them about. [P] The general causation instruction given by the trial court correctly advised that plaintiff could not recover for a design defect unless it was a 'substantial factor' in producing plaintiff's 'enhanced' injuries. However, this instruction dealt only by 'negative implication' with [defendant]'s theory that any such defect was not a 'substantial factor' in this case because this particular accident would have broken plaintiff's ankles in any event. As we have seen, [defendant] presented substantial evidence to that effect. [Defendant] was therefore entitled to its special instruction, and the trial court's refusal to give it was error." (Soule, supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 572-573, original italics, footnote and internal citations omitted.)

■ "The first element of legal cause is cause in fact The 'but for' rule has traditionally been applied to determine cause in fact. The Restatement formula uses the term substantial factor 'to denote the fact that the defendant's conduct has such an effect in producing the harm as to lead reasonable men to regard it as a cause.' " (Mayes v. Bryan (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 1075, 1095 [44 Cal.Rptr.3d 14] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'Whether a defendant's conduct actually caused an injury is a question of fact ... that is ordinarily for the jury ... ' '[C]ausation in fact is ultimately a matter of probability and common sense: "[A plaintiff] is not required to eliminate entirely all possibility that the defendant's conduct was not a cause. It is enough that he introduces evidence from which reasonable [persons] may conclude that it is more probable that the event was caused by the defendant than that it was not. The fact of causation is incapable of mathematical proof, since no [person] can say with absolute certainty what would have occurred if the defendant had acted otherwise. If, as a matter of ordinary experience, a particular act or omission might be expected to produce a particular result, and if that result has in fact followed, the conclusion may be justified that the causal relation exists. In drawing that conclusion, the triers of fact are permitted to draw upon ordinary human experience as to the probabilities of the case." ' ... ' "A mere possibility of ... causation is not enough; and when the matter remains one of pure speculation or conjecture, or the probabilities are at best evenly balanced, it becomes the duty of the court to direct a verdict for the defendant." ' " (Raven H. v. Gamette (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 1017, 1029-1030 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 897] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "However the test is phrased, causation in fact is ultimately a matter of probability and common sense." (Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 234, 253 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 101] , relying on Rest.2d Torts, § 433B, com. b.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 431, provides: "The actor's negligent conduct is a legal cause of harm to another if (a) his conduct is a substantial factor in bringing about the harm, and, (b) there is no rule of law relieving the actor from liability because of the manner in which his negligence has resulted in the harm." This section "correctly states California law as to the issue of causation in tort cases." (Wilson v. Blue Cross of Southern California (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 660, 673 [271 Cal.Rptr. 876] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Meaning of Substantial Factor: Substantial factor has also meant "more likely than not." There is no rule of law that puts a percentage on the "substantial" portion of CACI No. 430. By Dona Cohn-Payne

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Substantial Factor Test of Causation: Perhaps the most controversial new Judicial Council jury instruction is CACI No. 430, "Causation: Substantial Factor." This instruction replaces BAJI No. 3.76, "Cause--Substantial Factor Test," which defined "cause." BAJI No. 3.76 states as follows: "The law defines cause in its own particular way. A cause of [injury] [damage] [loss] [or] [harm] is something that is a substantial factor in bringing about an [injury] [damage] [loss] [or] [harm]." This instruction was an attempt to define for the jury the word "cause." It defined the word "cause" to mean that which is a "substantial factor."

CACI No. 430 does not define the word "cause." Instead, it defines the phrase "substantial factor" and states: "A substantial factor in causing harm is a factor that a reasonable person would consider to have contributed to the harm. It must be more than a remote or trivial factor. It does not have to be the only cause of the harm" (emphasis added).

Both BAJI and CACI make reference to the Restatement Second of Torts, § 431, comment a: "The word 'substantial' is used to denote the fact that the defendant's conduct has such an effect in producing the harm as to lead reasonable men to regard it as a cause, using that word in the popular sense" It stretches the imagination to believe that reasonable people, using the word in the popular sense, would conclude that a "substantial" factor caused harm if it merely "contributed" to the harm.

In light of the above, the "Tip" here is that anyone who could possibly be considered to be within the "Universe of Tortfeasors" likely would meet this "substantial factor" test of causation. If evidence against a defendant is not "substantial," consider argument in pretrial motions that any evidence of negligence should be allowed to show any other factor "contributed" to the harm as long as it was not "remote" or "trivial." Such evidence and argument to the jury should be allowed under Civ. Code § 1431.2 (regarding several liability for non-economic damages). By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 431

CACI 431 Causation: Multiple Causes

A person's negligence may combine with another factor to cause harm. If you find that [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm, then [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm. [Name of defendant] cannot avoid responsibility just because some other person, condition, or event was also a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

This instruction will apply only when negligence is the theory asserted against the defendant. This instruction should be modified if the defendant is sued on a theory of product liability or intentional tort.

- Multiple causation, or "concurrent cause," is the basis for the doctrine of comparative fault: "For there to be comparative fault there must be more than one contributory or concurrent legal cause of the injury for which recompense is sought." (Douplik v. General Motors Corp. (1991) 225 Cal.App.3d 849, 866 [275 Cal.Rptr. 715] .)

- In Logacz v. Limansky (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 1149, 1152 [84 Cal.Rptr.2d 257] , the appellate court held that the trial court's error in refusing a concurrent cause instruction was prejudicial.

- In Espinosa v. Little Company of Mary Hospital (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1304 [37 Cal.Rptr.2d 541] , the Court of Appeal reversed the trial court's grant of nonsuit in a medical malpractice case. The plaintiff produced evidence indicating that three causes were responsible for his brain damage, including two that were attributable to the defendants. The trial court ruled in favor of the nonsuit, finding that the plaintiff had not shown causation. The reviewing court disagreed: "Clearly, where a defendant's negligence is a concurring cause of an injury, the law regards it as a legal cause of the injury, regardless of the extent to which it contributes to the injury." (Id. at pp. 1317-1318 .)

■ A concurrent cause can be either another party's negligence or a natural cause. In Hughey v. Candoli (1958) 159 Cal.App.2d 231 [323 P.2d 779] , the court held that the defendant's negligence in an automobile accident was a proximate cause of the death of a fetus, even though the fetus also had a heart defect: "In this situation the concurrence of the nontortious cause does not absolve defendant from liability for the tortious one." (Id. at p. 240 .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 432

CACI 432 Causation: Third-Party Conduct as Superseding Cause

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/it] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm because of the later misconduct of [insert name of third party]. To avoid legal responsibility for the harm, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of third party]'s conduct occurred after the conduct of [name of defendant];
- 2. That a reasonable person would consider [name of third party]'s conduct as a highly unusual or an extraordinary response to the situation;
- 3. That [name of defendant] did not know and had no reason to expect that [name of third party] would act in a [negligent/wrongful] manner; and
- 4. That the kind of harm resulting from [name of third party]'s conduct was different from the kind of harm that could have been reasonably expected from [name of defendant]'s conduct.

New September 2003

California courts have held that a superseding cause instruction must be given where the issue is raised by the evidence. (Paverud v. Niagara Machine and Tool Works (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 858, 863 [234 Cal.Rptr. 585] .) The issue of superseding cause should be addressed directly in a specific instruction. (Self v. General Motors Corp. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 1, 10 [116 Cal.Rptr. 575].)

Defendants, not plaintiffs, would normally request this type of instruction. In Fish v. Los Angeles Dodgers Baseball Club (1976) 56 Cal.App.3d 620 [128 Cal.Rptr. 807] , plaintiff requested the superseding cause instruction in response to defendant's closing argument. However, the court found that the doctrine of superseding causation was inapplicable to the facts of that case. (Id. at p. 639 .) Instead, the court held that failure to give the concurrent cause instruction on behalf of plaintiff was error. (Id. at p. 641 .)

Where, as a matter of law, a party is liable for subsequent negligence, as in subsequent medical negligence, this instruction should not be given.

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 440, provides: "A superseding cause is an act of a third person or other force which by its intervention prevents the actor from being liable for harm to another which his antecedent negligence is a substantial factor in bringing about."

- The California courts have adopted the Restatement sections on superseding causation. (Stewart v. Cox (1961) 55 Cal.2d 857, 864 [13 Cal.Rptr. 521, 362 P.2d 345] ; Brewer v. Teano (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1024 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 348] .)

- "Under the theory of supervening cause, the chain of causation that would otherwise flow from an initial negligent act is broken when an independent act intervenes and supersedes the initial act." (Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 22, 26 [22 Cal.Rptr.2d 106] .)

- Superseding cause is an affirmative defense that must be proved by the defendant. (Maupin v. Widling (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 568, 578 [237 Cal.Rptr. 521] .) If a third party's negligence is asserted as a superseding cause, "[t]he elements of the defense include either foreseeability of the third party's negligence or of the harm, or the highly extraordinary nature or manner of the third party's acts." (Paverud, supra, 189 Cal.App.3d at p. 863 .)

- The issue of superseding cause turns on foreseeability as it relates to both (1) the defendant's conduct, and (2) the nature of the resulting injury. (Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal.2d 185, 199-200 [60 Cal.Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57] ; Paverud, supra, 189 Cal.App.3d at pp. 862-863 ; Martinez v. Vintage Petroleum (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 695, 700-701 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 449] .)

- Courts have emphasized that "even if the intervening negligent conduct is not foreseeable, [defendant] is not relieved of liability unless the risk of harm suffered also was unforeseeable. [Citations.]." (Pappert v. San Diego Gas and Electric Co. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 205, 210-211 [186 Cal.Rptr. 847] .) In Pappert, the court found that the trial court erred in submitting to the jury the issue of whether decedent's negligence was a superseding cause: "Here, the injury sustained, death by electrocution ... is precisely and directly the result to be expected when a person trimming a tree on his residential property is exposed to the charge from an uninsulated 12,000 volt power line passing through its foliage." (Id. at 211 .)

- California courts approach the issue of superseding cause by addressing it after affirmative findings have been made on both negligence and causation. Some opinions have noted that this approach may be analytically incorrect because, if a superseding cause is found, then it negates any causation involving the defendant. (Ewart v. Southern California Gas Co. (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 163, 169 [46 Cal.Rptr. 631] .)

- Much of this instruction is based on section 447 of the Restatement Second of Torts:

The fact that an intervening act of a third person is negligent in itself or is done in a negligent manner does not make it a superseding cause of harm to another which the actor's negligent conduct is a substantial factor in bringing about, if

(a) the actor at the time of his negligent conduct should have realized that a third person might so act, or

(b) a reasonable man knowing the situation existing when the act of the third person was done would not regard it as highly extraordinary that the third person had so acted, or

(c) the intervening act is a normal consequence of a situation created by the actor's conduct and the manner in which it is done is not extraordinarily negligent.

■ Note that section 447 is phrased in the negative. It sets forth the three circumstances in which a third party's negligence is not a superseding cause. Section 447 does not state when an intervening force is a superseding cause, except by negative implication. However, if all three factors are absent, the independent cause must be superseding. To make this point clearer, this instruction is phrased in the affirmative at the outset and requires the defendant to prove that all the factors are absent. (See Martinez, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at p. 702 .)

■ In this instruction, the term "extraordinary" means "unforeseeable," as in "statistically extremely improbable" or "unpredictable." (Campodonico v. State Auto Parks, Inc. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 803, 807 [89 Cal.Rptr. 270] .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 433

CACI 433 Causation: Intentional Tort/Criminal Act as Superseding Cause

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/it] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm because of the later [criminal/intentional] conduct of [insert name of third party]. [Name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm if [name of defendant] proves both of the following:

- 1. That the [intentional/criminal] conduct of [name of third party] happened after the conduct of [name of defendant]; and
- 2. That [name of defendant] did not know and could not have reasonably foreseen that another person would be likely to take advantage of the situation created by [name of defendant]'s conduct to commit this type of act.

New September 2003

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 448, provides: "The act of a third person in committing an intentional tort or crime is a superseding cause of harm to another resulting therefrom, although the actor's negligent conduct created a situation which afforded an opportunity to the third person to commit such a tort or crime, unless the actor at the time of his negligent conduct realized or should have realized the likelihood that such a situation might be created, and that a third person might avail himself of the opportunity to commit such a tort or crime."

■ The California courts have adopted section 448. (Kane v. Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 350, 360 [159 Cal.Rptr. 446] .)

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 433

■ Section 449 provides: "If the likelihood that a third person may act in a particular manner is the hazard or one of the hazards which makes the actor negligent, such an act whether innocent, negligent, intentionally tortious, or criminal does not prevent the actor from being liable for harm caused thereby." The Court in Landeros v. Flood (1976) 17 Cal.3d 399, 411 [131 Cal.Rptr. 69, 551 P.2d 389] , relied on section 449.

■ If the criminal or tortious conduct encountered by the plaintiff was not foreseeable at the time of defendant's negligence, then the defendant will not be liable. (Kane, supra, 98 Cal.App.3d at p. 360 [rape not a result of failure to uncover bonded employee's prior theft-related offenses].)

■ Courts have observed that "[c]riminal conduct which causes injury will ordinarily be deemed the proximate cause of an injury, superseding any prior negligence which might otherwise be deemed a contributing cause. [Citation.]" (Koepke v. Loo (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 1444, 1449 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 34] .) However, "[t]he common law rule that an intervening criminal act is, by its very nature, a superseding cause has lost its universal application and its dogmatic rigidity." (Kane, supra, 98 Cal.App.3d at p. 360 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Prior Similar Acts Provide Reasonable Foreseeability of Crime: CACI No. 433 has been used in cases when a defendant property owner has negligently maintained his or her premises (e.g., improper lighting, absence of security when there is a contract for same) and a person on the premises is a victim of a crime. Facts supporting prior similar criminal acts on the property or in the immediate surrounding area would probably give the defendant property owner reasonable foreseeability of a crime as required by the jury instruction. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 434

CACI 434 Alternative Causation

You may decide that more than one of the defendants was negligent, but that the negligence of only one of them could have actually caused [name of plaintiff]'s harm. If you cannot decide which defendant caused [name of plaintiff]'s harm, you must decide that each defendant is responsible for the harm.

However, if a defendant proves that [he/she/it] did not cause [name of plaintiff]'s harm, then you must conclude that defendant is not responsible.

New September 2003

- This instruction is based on the rule stated in the case of Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal.2d 80, 86 [199 P.2d 1] , in which the Court held that the burden of proof on causation shifted to the two defendants to prove that each was not the cause of plaintiff's harm: "They brought about a situation where the negligence of one of them injured the plaintiff, hence it should rest with them each to absolve himself if he can. The injured party has been placed by defendants in the unfair position of pointing to which defendant caused the harm. If one can escape the other may also and plaintiff is remediless."

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 433B(3), provides: "Where the conduct of two or more actors is tortious, and it is proved that harm has been caused to the plaintiff by only one of them, but there is uncertainty as to which one has caused it, the burden is upon each such actor to prove that he has not caused the harm."

- The Summers rule applies to multiple causes, at least one of which is tortious. (Vahey v. Sacia (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 171, 177, fn. 2 [178 Cal.Rptr. 559] .) Thus, it can apply where there is only one defendant. (Id. at p. 177 .) However, California courts apply the alternative liability theory only when all potential tortfeasors have been joined as defendants. (Setliff v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 1525, 1534-1535 [38 Cal.Rptr.2d 763] .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 435

CACI 435 Causation for Asbestos-Related Cancer Claims

A substantial factor in causing harm is a factor that a reasonable person would consider to have contributed to the harm. It does not have to be the only cause of the harm.

[Name of plaintiff] may prove that exposure to asbestos from [name of defendant]'s product was a substantial factor causing [his/her/[name of decedent]'s] illness by showing, through expert testimony, that there is a reasonable medical probability that the exposure was a substantial factor contributing to [his/her] risk of developing cancer.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

If the issue of medical causation is tried separately, revise this instruction to focus on that issue.

If necessary, CACI No. 431, Causation: Multiple Causes may also be given. Unless there are other defendants who are not asbestos manufacturers or suppliers, do not give CACI No. 430, Causation: Substantial Factor.

Sources and Authority

- "In the context of a cause of action for asbestos-related latent injuries, the plaintiff must first establish some threshold exposure to the defendant's defective asbestos-containing products, and must further establish in reasonable medical probability that a particular exposure or series of exposures was a 'legal cause' of his injury, i.e., a substantial factor in bringing about the injury. In an asbestos-related cancer case, the plaintiff need not prove that fibers from the defendant's product were the ones, or among the ones, that actually began the process of malignant cellular growth. Instead, the plaintiff may meet the burden of proving that exposure to defendant's product was a substantial factor causing the illness by showing that in reasonable medical probability it was a substantial factor contributing to the plaintiff's or decedent's risk of developing cancer. The jury should be so instructed. The standard instructions on substantial factor and concurrent causation remain correct in this context and should also be given." (Rutherford v. Owens-Illinois, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 953, 982-983 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 16, 941 P.2d 1203] , original italics, internal citation and footnotes omitted.)

- "The term 'substantial factor' has not been judicially defined with specificity, and indeed it has been observed that it is 'neither possible nor desirable to reduce it to any lower terms.' This court has suggested that a force which plays only an 'infinitesimal' or 'theoretical' part in bringing about injury, damage, or loss is not a substantial factor. Undue emphasis should not be placed on the term 'substantial.' For example, the substantial factor standard, formulated to aid plaintiffs as a broader rule of causality than the 'but for' test, has been invoked by defendants whose conduct is clearly a 'but for' cause of plaintiff's injury but is nevertheless urged as an insubstantial contribution to the injury. Misused in this way, the substantial factor test 'undermines the principles of comparative negligence, under which a party is responsible for his or her share of negligence and the harm caused thereby.' " (Rutherford, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 969 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] very minor force that does cause harm is a substantial factor. This rule honors the principle of comparative fault." (Bockrath v. Aldrich Chem. Co. (1999), 21 Cal.4th 71, 79 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 846, 980 P.2d 398] , internal citation omitted.)

- "Contrary to defendant's assertion, the California Supreme Court's decision in Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal.4th 1232 [135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046] (Viner) did not alter the causation requirement in asbestos-related cases. In Viner, the court noted that subsection (1) of section 432 of the Restatement Second of Torts, which provides that 'the actor's negligent conduct is not a substantial factor in bringing about harm to another if the harm would have been sustained even if the actor had not been negligent,' 'demonstrates how the "substantial factor" test subsumes the traditional "but for" test of causation.' (Viner, supra, at p. 1240.) Defendant argues that Viner required plaintiffs to show that defendant's product 'independently caused [plaintiff's] injury or that, but for that exposure, [plaintiff] would not have contracted lung cancer.' Viner, however, is a legal malpractice case. It does not address the explicit holding in Rutherford that "plaintiffs may prove causation in asbestos-related cancer cases by demonstrating that the plaintiff's exposure to defendant's asbestos-containing product in reasonable medical probability was a substantial factor in contributing to the aggregate dose of asbestos the plaintiff or decedent inhaled or ingested, and hence to the risk of developing asbestos-related cancer, without the need to demonstrate that fibers from the defendant's particular product were the ones, or among the ones, that actually produced the malignant growth." (Rutherford, supra, 16 Cal.4th at pp. 976-977 , fn. omitted.) Viner is consistent with Rutherford insofar as Rutherford requires proof that an individual asbestos-containing product is a substantial factor contributing to the plaintiff's risk or probability of developing cancer. (Id. at p. 977 .) " (Jones v. John Crane, Inc. (2005) 132 Cal.App.4th 990, 998, fn. 3 [35 Cal.Rptr.3d 144] .)

- "A threshold issue in asbestos litigation is exposure to the defendant's product. The plaintiff bears the burden of proof on this issue. If there has been no exposure, there is no causation. Plaintiffs may prove causation in an asbestos case by demonstrating that the plaintiff's or decedent's exposure to defendant's asbestos-containing product in reasonable medical probability was a substantial factor in contributing to the aggregate dose of asbestos the plaintiff or decedent inhaled or ingested, and hence to the risk of developing asbestos-related cancer." (McGonnell v. Kaiser Gypsum Co., Inc. (2002) 98 Cal.App.4th 1098, 1103 [120 Cal.Rptr.2d 23] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Many factors are relevant in assessing the medical probability that an exposure contributed to plaintiff's asbestos disease. Frequency of exposure, regularity of exposure, and proximity of the asbestos product to plaintiff are certainly relevant, although these considerations should not be determinative in every case. Additional factors may also be significant in individual cases, such as the type of asbestos product to which plaintiff was exposed, the type of injury suffered by plaintiff, and other possible sources of plaintiff's injury. 'Ultimately, the sufficiency of the evidence of causation will depend on the unique circumstances of each case.' " (Lineaweaver v. Plant Insulation Co. (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1409, 1416-1417 [37 Cal.Rptr.2d 902] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 451 Express Assumption of Risk

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] may not recover any damages because [he/she] agreed before the incident that [he/she] would not hold [name of defendant] responsible for any damages.

If [name of defendant] proves that there was such an agreement and that it applies to [name of plaintiff]'s claim, then you must find that [name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction will be given in very limited circumstances. In reviewing the case law in this area, it appears that both the interpretation of a waiver agreement and application of its legal effect are generally resolved by the judge before trial. This is probably because "[t]he existence of a duty is a question of law for the court" [citation]. So is the interpretation of a written instrument where the interpretation does not turn on the credibility of extrinsic evidence." (Allabach v. Santa Clara County Fair Assn., Inc. (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1007, 1011 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 330] .)

There may be contract law defenses (such as fraud, lack of consideration, duress, unconscionability) that could be asserted by the plaintiff to contest the validity of a waiver. If these defenses were to be considered by a jury, then an instruction on express assumption of the risk would probably be necessary.

Sources and Authority

- "Express assumption occurs when the plaintiff, in advance, expressly consents ... to relieve the defendant of an obligation of conduct toward him, and to take his chances of injury from a known risk arising from what the defendant is to do or leave undone. ... The result is that ... being under no duty, [the defendant] cannot be charged with negligence." (Saenz v. Whitewater Voyages, Inc. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 758, 764 [276 Cal.Rptr. 672] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[C]ases involving express assumption of risk are concerned with instances in which, as the result of an express agreement, the defendant owes no duty to protect the plaintiff from an injury-causing risk. Thus in this respect express assumption of risk properly can be viewed as analogous to primary assumption of risk." (Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal.4th 296, 308-309, fn. 4 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .)

- A release may also bar a wrongful death action, depending on the circumstances and terms of an agreement. (See Coates v. Newhall Land and Farming, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal.App.3d 1, 7-8 [236 Cal.Rptr. 181] .)

- Valid waivers will be upheld provided that they are not contrary to the "public interest." (Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of California (1963) 60 Cal.2d 92, 101 [32 Cal.Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441] .)

- "The issue [of whether something is in the public interest] is tested objectively, by the activity's importance to the general public, not by its subjective importance to the particular plaintiff." - "[P]ublic policy generally precludes enforcement of an agreement that would remove an obligation to adhere to even a minimal standard of care. Applying that general rule here, we hold that an agreement purporting to release liability for future gross negligence committed against a developmentally disabled child who participates in a recreational camp designed for the needs of such children violates public policy and is unenforceable." (City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007), 41 Cal.4th 747, 777 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] , original italics.)

- "To be valid and enforceable, a written release exculpating a tortfeasor from liability for future negligence or misconduct must be clear, unambiguous and explicit in expressing the intent of the parties. ... Whether a contract provision is clear and unambiguous is a question of law, not of fact." (Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 589, 598 [250 Cal.Rptr. 299] .)

- Restatement Second of Torts section 496B provides: "A plaintiff who by contract or otherwise expressly agrees to accept a risk of harm arising from the defendant's negligent ... conduct cannot recover for such harm, unless the agreement is invalid as contrary to public policy."

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Written Waiver and Assumption of Risk Cases:

Just because you have a signed waiver of liability does not necessarily mean that there is an express assumption of the risk. Look at the activity involved as well as the language in the waiver. A review of case law for similar facts is required before a decision regarding assumption of the risk can be made. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 452

CACI 452 Sudden Emergency

[Name of plaintiff/defendant] claims that [he/she] was not negligent because [he/she] acted with reasonable care in an emergency situation. [Name of plaintiff/defendant] was not negligent if [he/she] proves all of the following:

- 1. That there was a sudden and unexpected emergency situation in which someone was in actual or apparent danger of immediate injury;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff/defendant] did not cause the emergency; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff/defendant] acted as a reasonably careful person would have acted in similar circumstances, even if it appears later that a different course of action would have been safer.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instruction should not be given unless at least two courses of action are available to the party after the danger is perceived. (Anderson v. Latimer (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 667, 675 [212 Cal.Rptr. 544] .)

Additional instructions should be given if there are alternate theories of negligence.

Sources and Authority

- The doctrine of imminent peril may be used by either the plaintiff or the defendant, or, in a proper case, both. (Smith v. Johe (1957) 154 Cal.App.2d 508, 511-512 [316 P.2d 688] .)

- "Whether the conditions for application of the imminent peril doctrine exist is itself a question of fact to be submitted to the jury." (Damele v. Mack Trucks, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 29, 37 [267 Cal.Rptr. 197] ; see also Leo v. Dunham (1953) 41 Cal.2d 712, 715 [264 P.2d 1] .)

- "[A] person who, without negligence on his part, is suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with peril, arising from either the actual presence, or the appearance, of imminent danger to himself or to others, is not expected nor required to use the same judgment and prudence that is required of him in the exercise of ordinary care in calmer and more deliberate moments." (Leo, supra, 41 Cal.2d at p. 714 .)

- The "doctrine is properly applied only in cases where an unexpected physical danger is so suddenly presented as to deprive the injured party [or the defendant] of his power of using reasonable judgment." (Sadoian v. Modesto Refrigerating Co. (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 266, 274 [320 P.2d 583] .) The exigent nature of the circumstances effectively lowers the standard of care: "The test is whether the actor took one of the courses of action which a standard man in that emergency might have taken, and such a course is not negligent even though it led to an injury which might have been prevented by adopting an alternative course of action." [Citation.]" (Schultz v. Mathias (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 904, 912-913 [83 Cal.Rptr. 888] .)

- The doctrine of imminent peril does not apply to a person whose conduct causes or contributes to the imminent peril. (Pittman v. Boiven (1967) 249 Cal.App.2d 207, 216 [57 Cal.Rptr. 319] .)

- The doctrine applies when a person perceives danger to himself or herself as well as when he or she perceives a danger to others. (Damele, supra, 219 Cal.App.3d at p. 36 .)

- "[T]he mere appearance of an imminent peril to others--not an actual imminent peril--is all that is required." (Damele, supra, 219 Cal.App.3d at p. 37 .)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was not responsible for [his/her] own injury because [he/she] was attempting to rescue a person who was placed in danger as a result of [name of defendant]'s negligence.

[Name of plaintiff] is not responsible for [his/her] own injuries if [he/she] proves all of the following:

- 1. That there was an emergency situation in which someone was in actual or apparent danger of immediate injury;
- 2. That the emergency was created by [name of defendant]'s negligence; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] did not act rashly or recklessly when [he/she] attempted to rescue the victim.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

■ In Solgaard v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1971) 6 Cal.3d 361 [99 Cal.Rptr. 29, 491 P.2d 821], the Court stated the rescue doctrine as follows: "The cases have developed the rule that persons injured in the course of undertaking a necessary rescue may, absent rash or reckless conduct on their part, recover from the person whose negligence created the peril which necessitated the rescue." (Id. at p. 368.) The Court found that a doctor, who was injured while attempting to rescue two injured workers, was "entitled to the benefits of the rescue doctrine, including an instruction to the jury that as a rescuer, plaintiff could recover on the basis of defendant's negligence to [the victims], if plaintiff's injury was a proximate result thereof, and if plaintiff acted neither rashly nor recklessly under the circumstances." (Id. at p. 369 .)

■ Before Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal.3d 804 [119 Cal.Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , the rescue doctrine helped plaintiffs establish duty and was also a defense to the former bar of contributory negligence. (Solgaard, supra, 6 Cal.3d at p. 368 .) The rescue doctrine may still be a viable counter to a charge of contributory negligence.

■ In Neighbarger v. Irwin Industries, Inc. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 532 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] , the Court observed that "a person is not contributorily negligent who, with due care, encounters the risk created by the defendant's negligence in order to perform a rescue necessitated by that negligence." (Id. at p. 537 .) This observation was not essential to the holding of the case, which focused on the issue of duty. Nevertheless, it suggests that the rescue doctrine may still play a role in determining whether or not the plaintiff was at fault.

■ "There is some disagreement among the authorities where the danger is only to property. In Henshaw v. Belyea (1934) 220 C. 458, 31 P.2d 348 , plaintiff ran from a safe place on the sidewalk in an attempt to save his employer's truck from slipping downhill by placing a block under a wheel, and his foot was crushed. The court approved the extension of the rescue doctrine to such a case. (220 C. 463 .) (See 23 Cal. L. Rev. 110; 8 So. Cal. L. Rev. 159.)" CACI 454 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date from applicable statute of limitation].

New April 2007; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

This instruction states the common-law rule that an action accrues on the date of injury. (Jolly v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1103, 1109 [245 Cal.Rptr. 658, 751 P.2d 923] .) The date to be inserted is the applicable limitation period before the filing date. For example, if the limitation period is two years and the filing date is August 31, 2007, the date is August 31, 2005.

For an instruction on the delayed-discovery rule, see CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery. See also verdict form CACI No. VF-410, Statute of Limitations --Delayed Discovery--Reasonable Investigation Would Not Have Disclosed Pertinent Facts.

Do not use this instruction for attorney malpractice. (See CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit, and CACI No. 611, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--Four-Year Limit.)

"Claimed harm" refers to all of the elements of the cause of action, which must have occurred before the cause of action accrues and the limitation period begins. (Glue-Fold, Inc. v. Slautterback Corp. (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 1018, 1029 [98 Cal.Rptr.2d 661] .) In some cases, it may be necessary to modify this term to refer to specific facts that give rise to the cause of action.

Sources and Authority

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 335.1 provides a two-year limitation period for an action for assault, battery, or injury to, or for the death of, an individual caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 338(c) provides a three-year limitation period for an action for taking, detaining, or injuring any goods or chattels, including an action for the specific recovery of personal property.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 340.2(c) provides a one-year limitation period for an action for the wrongful death of any plaintiff's decedent, based on exposure to asbestos, measured by the later of the date of death or the date the plaintiff first knew, or through the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known, that the death was caused or contributed to by exposure to asbestos.

■ "A limitation period does not begin until a cause of action accrues, i.e., all essential elements are present and a claim becomes legally actionable." (Glue-Fold, Inc., supra, 82 Cal.App.4th at p. 1029 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In tort actions, the statute of limitations commences when the last element essential to a cause of action occurs. The statute of limitations does not begin to run and no cause of action accrues in a tort action until damage has occurred. If the last element of the cause of action to occur is damage, the statute of limitations begins to run on the occurrence of 'appreciable and actual harm, however uncertain in amount,' that consists of more than nominal damages. '... [O]nce plaintiff has suffered actual and appreciable harm, neither the speculative nor uncertain character of damages nor the difficulty of proof will toll the period of limitation.' Cases contrast actual and appreciable harm with nominal damages, speculative harm or the threat of future harm. The mere breach of duty--causing only nominal damages, speculative harm or the threat of future harm not yet realized--normally does not suffice to create a cause of action." (San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. W. R. Grace & Co. (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1318, 1326 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 305] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 455

CACI 455 Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery

If [name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date from applicable statute of limitations], [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was still filed on time if [name of plaintiff] proves that before that date,

[[name of plaintiff] did not discover, and did not know of facts that would have caused a reasonable person to suspect, that [he/she/it] had suffered harm that was caused by someone's wrongful conduct.]

[or]

[[name of plaintiff] did not discover, and a reasonable and diligent investigation would not have disclosed, that [specify factual basis for cause of action, e.g., "a medical device" or "inadequate medical treatment"] contributed to [name of plaintiff]'s harm.]

New April 2007; Revised December 2007, April 2009, December 2009

Directions for Use

Read this instruction with the first option after CACI No. 454, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations, if the plaintiff seeks to overcome the statute-of-limitations defense by asserting the "delayed-discovery rule" or "discovery rule." The discovery rule provides that the accrual date of a cause of action is delayed until the plaintiff is aware of his or her injury and its negligent cause. (Jolly v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1103, 1109 [245 Cal.Rptr. 658, 751 P.2d 923] .) The date to be inserted is the applicable limitation period before the filing date. For example, if the limitation period is two years and the filing date is August 31, 2009, the date is August 31, 2007.

If the facts suggest that even if the plaintiff had conducted a timely and reasonable investigation, it would not have disclosed the limitation-triggering information, read the second option. (See Fox v. Ethicon Endo-Surgery (2005) 35 Cal.4th 797 [27 Cal.Rptr.3d 661, 110 P.3d 914] [fact that plaintiff suspected her injury was caused by surgeon's negligence and timely filed action for medical negligence against health care provider did not preclude "discovery rule" from delaying accrual of limitations period on products liability cause of action against medical staple manufacturer whose role in causing injury was not known and could not have been reasonably discovered within the applicable limitations period commencing from date of injury].)

See also verdict form CACI No. VF-410, Statute of Limitations --Delayed Discovery-- Reasonable Investigation Would Not Have Disclosed Pertinent Facts.

Do not use this instruction for medical malpractice (see CACI No. 555, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--One-Year Limit, and CACI No. 556, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--Three-Year Limit) or attorney malpractice (see CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit, and CACI No. 611, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--Four-Year Limit). Also, do not use this instruction if the case was timely but a fictitiously named defendant was identified and substituted in after the limitation period expired. (See McOwen v. Grossman (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 937, 942 [63 Cal.Rptr.3d 615] [if lawsuit is initiated within the applicable period of limitations against one party and the plaintiff has complied with Code Civ. Proc., § 474 by alleging the existence of unknown additional defendants, the relevant inquiry when the plaintiff seeks to substitute a real defendant for one sued fictitiously is what facts the plaintiff actually knew at the time the original complaint was filed].)

"Claimed harm" refers to all of the elements of the cause of action, which must have occurred before the cause of action accrues and the limitation period begins. (Glue-Fold, Inc. v. Slautterback Corp. (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 1018, 1029 [98 Cal.Rptr.2d 661] .) In some cases, it may be necessary to modify this term to refer to specific facts that give rise to the cause of action.

Sources and Authority

- "An exception to the general rule for defining the accrual of a cause of action--indeed, the 'most important' one--is the discovery rule. ... It postpones accrual of a cause of action until the plaintiff discovers, or has reason to discover, the cause of action. [P] ... [T]he plaintiff discovers the cause of action when he at least suspects a factual basis, as opposed to a legal theory, for its elements, even if he lacks knowledge thereof--when, simply put, he at least 'suspects ... that someone has done something wrong' to him, 'wrong' being used, not in any technical sense, but rather in accordance with its 'lay understanding.' He has reason to discover the cause of action when he has reason at least to suspect a factual basis for its elements. He has reason to suspect when he has 'notice or information of circumstances to put a reasonable person on inquiry'; he need not know the 'specific "facts" necessary to establish' the cause of action; rather, he may seek to learn such facts through the 'process contemplated by pretrial discovery'; but, within the applicable limitations period, he must indeed seek to learn the facts necessary to bring the cause of action in the first place--he 'cannot wait for' them to 'find him' and 'sit on' his 'rights'; he 'must go find' them himself if he can and 'file suit' if he does." (Norgart v. Upjohn Co. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 383, 397-398 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 453, 981 P.2d 79] , original italics, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "[I]t is the discovery of facts, not their legal significance, that starts the statute." (Jolly, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 1113 .)

■ "While ignorance of the existence of an injury or cause of action may delay the running of the statute of limitations until the date of discovery, the general rule in California has been that ignorance of the identity of the defendant is not essential to a claim and therefore will not toll the statute." (Bernson v. Browning-Ferris Industries (1994) 7 Cal.4th 926, 932 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 440, 873 P.2d 613] .)

■ "[U]nder the delayed discovery rule, a cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run when the plaintiff has reason to suspect an injury and some wrongful cause, unless the plaintiff pleads and proves that a reasonable investigation at that time would not have revealed a factual basis for that particular cause of action. In that case, the statute of limitations for that cause of action will be tolled until such time as a reasonable investigation would have revealed its factual basis." (Fox, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 803 .)

■ "[A]s Fox teaches, claims based on two independent legal theories against two separate defendants can accrue at different times." (E-Fab, Inc. v. Accountants, Inc. Services (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 1308, 1323 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 9] .)

■ "A limitation period does not begin until a cause of action accrues, i.e., all essential elements are present and a claim becomes legally actionable. Developed to mitigate the harsh results produced by strict definitions of accrual, the common law discovery rule postpones accrual until a plaintiff discovers or has reason to discover the cause of action." (Glue-Fold, Inc, supra, 82 Cal.App.4th at p. 1029 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he plaintiff may discover, or have reason to discover, the cause of action even if he does not suspect, or have reason to suspect, the identity of the defendant. That is because the identity of the defendant is not an element of any cause of action. It follows that failure to discover, or have reason to discover, the identity of the defendant does not postpone the accrual of a cause of action, whereas a like failure concerning the cause of action itself does. 'Although never fully articulated, the rationale for distinguishing between ignorance' of the defendant and 'ignorance' of the cause of action itself 'appears to be premised on the commonsense assumption that once the plaintiff is aware of' the latter, he 'normally' has 'sufficient opportunity,' within the 'applicable limitations period,' 'to discover the identity' of the former. He may 'often effectively extend[]' the limitations period in question 'by the filing' and amendment 'of a Doe complaint' and invocation of the relation-back doctrine. 'Where' he knows the 'identity of at least one defendant ... , [he] must' proceed thus." (Norgart, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p. 399 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "The discovery rule only delays accrual until the plaintiff has, or should have, inquiry notice of the cause of action. The discovery rule does not encourage dilatory tactics because plaintiffs are charged with presumptive knowledge of an injury if they have ' ' 'information of circumstances to put [them] on inquiry' ' ' or if they have ' ' 'the opportunity to obtain knowledge from sources open to [their] investigation.' ' ' In other words, plaintiffs are required to conduct a reasonable investigation after becoming aware of an injury, and are charged with knowledge of the information that would have been revealed by such an investigation." (Fox, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 807-808 , internal citations omitted.)

■ There is no doctrine of constructive or imputed suspicion arising from media coverage. "[Defendant]'s argument amounts to a contention that, having taken a prescription drug, [plaintiff] had an obligation to read newspapers and watch television news and otherwise seek out news of dangerous side effects not disclosed by the prescribing doctor, or indeed by the drug manufacturer, and that if she failed in this obligation, she could lose her right to sue. We see no such obligation." (Nelson v. Indevus Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal.App.4th 1202, 1206 [48 Cal.Rptr.3d 668] .)

■ "The statute of limitations does not begin to run when some members of the public have a suspicion of wrongdoing, but only '[o]nce the plaintiff has a suspicion of wrongdoing.' CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

CACI 456 Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery

[Name of plaintiff] claims that even if [his/her/its] lawsuit was not filed on time, [he/she/it] may still proceed because [name of defendant] did or said something that caused [name of plaintiff] to delay filing the lawsuit. In order to establish the right to proceed, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] said or did something that caused [name of plaintiff] to believe that it would not be necessary to file a lawsuit;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] relied on [name of defendant]'s conduct and therefore did not file the lawsuit within the time otherwise required;
- 3. That a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have relied on [name of defendant]'s conduct;
- 4. That after the limitation period had expired, [name of defendant]'s representations by words or conduct proved to not be true; and
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] proceeded diligently to file suit once [he/she/it] discovered the actual facts.

It is not necessary that [name of defendant] have acted in bad faith or intended to mislead [name of plaintiff].

Directions for Use

There is perhaps a question as to whether all the elements of equitable estoppel must be proved in order to establish an estoppel to rely on a statute of limitations. These elements are (1) the party to be estopped must know the facts; (2) the party must intend that his or her conduct will be acted on, or must act in such a way that the party asserting the estoppel had the right to believe that the conduct was so intended; (3) the party asserting the estoppel must be ignorant of the true state of facts; and, (4) that party must rely upon the conduct to his or her detriment. (See Ashou v. Liberty Mutual Fire Ins. Co. (2006) 138 Cal.App.4th 748, 766-767 [41 Cal.Rptr.3d 819] .)

Most cases do not frame the issue as one of equitable estoppel and its four elements. All that is required is that the defendant's conduct actually have misled the plaintiff, and that plaintiff reasonably have relied on that conduct. Bad faith or an intent to mislead is not required. (Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 384 [2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517] ; Shaffer v. Debbas (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 33, 43 [21 Cal.Rptr.2d 110] .) Nor does it appear that there is a requirement that the defendant specifically intended to induce the plaintiff to defer filing suit. Therefore, no specific intent element has been included.

Sources and Authority

■ "Equitable tolling and equitable estoppel are distinct doctrines. 'Tolling, strictly speaking, is concerned with the point at which the limitations period begins to run and with the circumstances in which the running of the limitations period may be suspended. ... Equitable estoppel, however, ... comes into play only after the limitations period has run and addresses ... the circumstances in which a party will be estopped from asserting the statute of limitations as a defense to an admittedly untimely action because his conduct has induced another into forbearing suit within the applicable limitations period. [Equitable estoppel] is wholly independent of the limitations period itself and takes its life ... from the equitable principle that no man [may] profit from his own wrongdoing in a court of justice.' ' Thus, equitable estoppel is available even where the limitations statute at issue expressly precludes equitable tolling." (Lantzy, supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 383-384 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Accordingly, (1) if one potentially liable for a construction defect represents, while the limitations period is still running, that all actionable damage has been or will be repaired, thus making it unnecessary to sue, (2) the plaintiff reasonably relies on this representation to refrain from bringing a timely action, (3) the representation proves false after the limitations period has expired, and (4) the plaintiff proceeds diligently once the truth is discovered, the defendant may be equitably estopped to assert the statute of limitations as a defense to the action." (Lantzy, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 384 , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'An estoppel may arise although there was no designed fraud on the part of the person sought to be estopped. ... To create an equitable estoppel, "it is enough if the party has been induced to refrain from using such means or taking such action as lay in his power, by which he might have retrieved his position and saved himself from loss. ... Where the delay in commencing action is induced by the conduct of the defendant it cannot be availed of by him as a defense." ' " (Vu v. Prudential Property & Casualty Ins. Co. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 1142, 1152-1153 [113 Cal.Rptr.2d 70, 33 P.3d 487] .)

■ " 'A defendant will be estopped to invoke the statute of limitations where there has been "some conduct by the defendant, relied on by the plaintiff, which induces the belated filing of the action." It is not necessary that the defendant acted in bad faith or intended to mislead the plaintiff. [Citations.] It is sufficient that the defendant's conduct in fact induced the plaintiff to refrain from instituting legal proceedings. [Citation.] "[W]hether an estoppel exists--whether the acts, representations or conduct lulled a party into a sense of security preventing him from instituting proceedings before the running of the statute, and whether the party relied thereon to his prejudice--is a question of fact and not of law." [Citations.] " (Holdgrafer v. Unocal Corp. (2008) 160 Cal.App.4th 907, 925-926 [73 Cal.Rptr.3d 216] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is well settled that a public entity may be estopped from asserting the limitations of the claims statute where its agents or employees have prevented or deterred the filing of a timely claim by some affirmative act. Estoppel most commonly results from misleading statements about the need for or advisability of a claim; actual fraud or the intent to mislead is not essential. A fortiori, estoppel may certainly be invoked when there are acts of violence or intimidation that are intended to prevent the filing of a claim." (John R. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 438, 445 [256 Cal.Rptr. 766, 769 P.2d 948] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is well settled that the doctrine of estoppel in pais is applicable in a proper case to prevent a fraudulent or inequitable resort to the statute of limitations. Apropos to this rule are the following established principles: A person, by his conduct, may be estopped to rely on the statute; where the delay in commencing an action is induced by the conduct of the defendant, it cannot be availed of by him as a defense; one cannot justly or equitably lull his adversary into a false sense of security and thereby cause him to subject his claim to the bar of the statute of limitations, and then be permitted to plead the very delay caused by his conduct as a defense to the action when brought; actual fraud in the technical sense, bad faith or intent to mislead are not essential to the creation of an estoppel, but it is sufficient that the defendant made misrepresentations or so conducted himself that he misled a party, who acted thereon in good faith, to the extent that such party failed to commence the action within the statutory period; a party has a reasonable time in which to bring his action after the estoppel has expired, not exceeding the period of limitation imposed by the statute for commencing the action; and that whether an estoppel exists--whether the acts, representations or conduct lulled a party into a sense of security preventing him from instituting proceedings before the running of the statute, and whether the party relied thereon to his prejudice--is a question of fact and not of law. It is also an established principle that in cases of estoppel to plead the statute of limitations, the same rules are applicable, as in cases falling within subdivision 4 of section 338, in determining when the plaintiff discovered or should have discovered the facts giving rise to his cause of action." (Estate of Pieper (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 670, 690-691 [37 Cal.Rptr. 46] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Settlement negotiations are relevant and admissible to prove an estoppel to assert the statute of limitations." (Holdgrafer, supra, 160 Cal.App.4th at p. 927 .)

■ "The estoppel issue in this case arises in a unique context. Defendants' wrongful conduct has given rise to separate causes of action for property damage and personal injury with separate statutes of limitation. Where the plaintiffs reasonably rely on defendants' promise to repair the property damage without a lawsuit, is a jury permitted to find that plaintiffs' decision to delay filing a personal injury lawsuit was also reasonable? We conclude such a finding is permissible on the facts of this case." (Shaffer, supra, 17 Cal.App.4th at p. 43 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "At the very least, [plaintiff] cannot establish the second element necessary for equitable estoppel. [Plaintiff] argues that [defendant] was estopped to rely on the time bar of section 340.9 by its continued reconsideration of her claim after December 31, 2001, had passed. But she cannot prove [defendant] intended its reconsideration of the claim to be relied upon, or acted in such a way that [plaintiff] had a right to believe it so intended." (Ashou, supra, 138 Cal.App.4th at p. 767 .)

■ " 'It is well settled that a public entity may be estopped from asserting the limitations of the claims statute where its agents or employees have prevented or deterred the filing of a timely claim by some affirmative act.' Estoppel as a bar to a public entity's assertion of the defense of noncompliance arises when a plaintiff establishes by a preponderance of the evidence (1) the public entity was apprised of the facts, (2) it intended its conduct to be acted upon, (3) the plaintiff was ignorant of the true state of facts, and (4) relied upon the conduct to his detriment." (K.J. v. Arcadia Unified School Dist. (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 1229, 1239-1240 [92 Cal.Rptr.3d 1] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A nondisclosure is a cause of injury if the plaintiff would have acted so as to avoid injury had the plaintiff known the concealed fact. The plaintiff's reliance on a nondisclosure was reasonable if the plaintiff's failure to discover the concealed fact was reasonable in light of the plaintiff's knowledge and experience. Whether the plaintiff's reliance was reasonable is a question of fact for the trier of fact unless reasonable minds could reach only one conclusion based on the evidence. The fact that a plaintiff was represented by counsel and the scope and timing of the representation are relevant to the question of the reasonableness of the plaintiff's reliance." (Superior Dispatch, Inc. v. Insurance Corp. of New York (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 175, 187-188 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 508] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 457

CACI 457 Statute of Limitations--Equitable Tolling--Other Prior Proceeding

[Name of plaintiff] claims that even if [his/her/its] lawsuit was not filed by [insert date from applicable statute of limitations], [he/she/it] may still proceed because the deadline for filing the lawsuit was extended by the time during which [specify prior proceeding that qualifies as the tolling event, e.g., she was seeking workers' compensation benefits]. In order to establish the right to proceed, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] received timely notice that [name of plaintiff] was [e.g., seeking workers' compensation] instead of filing a lawsuit;
- 2. That the facts of the two claims were so similar that an investigation of the [e.g., workers' compensation claim] gave or would have given [name of defendant] the information needed to defend the lawsuit; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was acting reasonably and in good faith by [e.g., seeking workers' compensation].

For [name of defendant] to have received timely notice, [name of plaintiff] must have filed the [e.g., workers' compensation claim] by [insert date from applicable statute of limitations] and the [e.g., claim] notified [name of defendant] of the need to begin investigating the facts that form the basis for the lawsuit.

In considering whether [name of plaintiff] acted reasonably and in good faith, you may consider the amount of time after the [e.g., workers' compensation claim] was [resolved/abandoned] before [he/she/it] filed the lawsuit.

New December 2009

Directions for Use

The verdict form should ask the jury to find the period of time that the limitation period was tolled on account of the other proceeding. The court can then add the additional time to the limitation period and determine whether the action is timely.

Equitable tolling is not available for legal malpractice (see Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal.4th 606, 618 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 828 P.2d 691] [statutory tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc., § 340.6 are exclusive for both one-year and four-year limitation periods]; see also CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit, and CACI No. 611, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--Four-Year Limit) nor for medical malpractice with regard to the three-year limitation period of Code of Civil Procedure section 340.5. (See Belton v. Bowers Ambulance Serv. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 928, 934 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 107, 978 P.2d 591] [statutory tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc., § 340.5 are exclusive only for three-year period; one-year period may be tolled on other grounds]; see also CACI No. 555, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--One-Year Limit, and CACI No. 556, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--Three-Year Limit.)

Sources and Authority

- "The equitable tolling of statutes of limitations is a judicially created, nonstatutory doctrine. It is 'designed to prevent unjust and technical forfeitures of the right to a trial on the merits when the purpose of the statute of limitations--timely notice to the defendant of the plaintiff's claims--has been satisfied.' Where applicable, the doctrine will 'suspend or extend a statute of limitations as necessary to ensure fundamental practicality and fairness.' " (McDonald v. Antelope Valley Community College Dist. (2008) 45 Cal.4th 88, 99 [84 Cal.Rptr.3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The equitable tolling doctrine rests on the concept that a plaintiff should not be barred by a statute of limitations unless the defendant would be unfairly prejudiced if the plaintiff were allowed to proceed. '[T]he primary purpose of the statute of limitations is normally satisfied when the defendant receives timely notification of the first of two proceedings.' The doctrine has been applied 'where one action stands to lessen the harm that is the subject of the second action; where administrative remedies must be exhausted before a second action can proceed; or where a first action, embarked upon in good faith, is found to be defective for some reason.' " (Aguilera v. Heiman (2009) 174 Cal.App.4th 590, 598 [95 Cal.Rptr.3d 18] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he effect of equitable tolling is that the limitations period stops running during the tolling event, and begins to run again only when the tolling event has concluded. As a consequence, the tolled interval, no matter when it took place, is tacked onto the end of the limitations period, thus extending the deadline for suit by the entire length of time during which the tolling event previously occurred." (Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal.4th 363, 370-371 [2 Cal.Rptr.3d 655, 73 P.3d 517] .)

- "A major reason for applying the doctrine is to avoid 'the hardship of compelling plaintiffs to pursue several duplicative actions simultaneously on the same set of facts.' '[D]isposition of a case filed in one forum may render proceedings in the second unnecessary or easier and less expensive to resolve.' " (Guevara v. Ventura County Community College Dist. (2008) 169 Cal.App.4th 167, 174 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 50] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]pplication of the doctrine of equitable tolling requires timely notice, and lack of prejudice, to the defendant, and reasonable and good faith conduct on the part of the plaintiff. These elements seemingly are present here. As noted, the federal court, without prejudice, declined to assert jurisdiction over a timely filed state law cause of action and plaintiffs thereafter promptly asserted that cause in the proper state court. Unquestionably, the same set of facts may be the basis for claims under both federal and state law. We discern no reason of policy which would require plaintiffs to file simultaneously two separate actions based upon the same facts in both state and federal courts since 'duplicative proceedings are surely inefficient, awkward and laborious.' " (Addison v. State (1978) 21 Cal.3d 313, 319 [146 Cal.Rptr. 224, 578 P.2d 941] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " "The timely notice requirement essentially means that the first claim must have been filed within the statutory period. Furthermore[,] the filing of the first claim must alert the defendant in the second claim of the need to begin investigating the facts which form the basis for the second claim. Generally this means that the defendant in the first claim is the same one being sued in the second." "The second prerequisite essentially translates to a requirement that the facts of the two claims be identical or at least so similar that the defendant's investigation of the first claim will put him in a position to fairly defend the second." "The third prerequisite of good faith and reasonable conduct on the part of the plaintiff is less clearly defined in the cases. But in Addison v. State of California, supra, 21 Cal.3d 313 [,] the Supreme Court did stress that the plaintiff filed his second claim a short time after tolling ended." " " (McDonald, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 102, fn. 2 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The third requirement of good faith and reasonable conduct may turn on whether 'a plaintiff delayed filing the second claim until the statute on that claim had nearly run ...' or 'whether the plaintiff [took] affirmative actions which ... misle[d] the defendant into believing the plaintiff was foregoing his second claim.' " (Tarkington v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 1494, 1505 [92 Cal.Rptr.3d 131] .)

■ "Where exhaustion of an administrative remedy is mandatory prior to filing suit, equitable tolling is automatic: 'It has long been settled in this and other jurisdictions that whenever the exhaustion of administrative remedies is a prerequisite to the initiation of a civil action, the running of the limitations period is tolled during the time consumed by the administrative proceeding.' This rule prevents administrative exhaustion requirements from rendering illusory nonadministrative remedies contingent on exhaustion." (McDonald, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 101 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The trial court rejected equitable tolling on the apparent ground that tolling was unavailable where, as here, the plaintiff was advised the alternate administrative procedure he or she was pursuing was voluntary and need not be exhausted. In reversing summary judgment, the Court of Appeal implicitly concluded equitable tolling is in fact available in such circumstances and explicitly concluded equitable tolling is not foreclosed as a matter of law under the FEHA. The Court of Appeal was correct on each count." (McDonald, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 114 .)

■ "Equitable tolling and equitable estoppel [see CACI No. 456] are distinct doctrines. ' "Tolling, strictly speaking, is concerned with the point at which the limitations period begins to run and with the circumstances in which the running of the limitations period may be suspended. ... Equitable estoppel, however, ... comes into play only after the limitations period has run and addresses ... the circumstances in which a party will be estopped from asserting the statute of limitations as a defense to an admittedly untimely action because his conduct has induced another into forbearing suit within the applicable limitations period. [Equitable estoppel] is wholly independent of the limitations period itself and takes its life ... from the equitable principle that no man [may] profit from his own wrongdoing in a court of justice." " " (Lantzy, supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 383-384 .)

■ "[V]oluntary abandonment [of the first proceeding] does not categorically bar application of equitable tolling, but it may be relevant to whether a plaintiff can satisfy the three criteria for equitable tolling." (McDonald, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 111 .)

■ "Section 340.6, subdivision (a), states that 'in no event' shall the prescriptive period be tolled except under those circumstances specified in the statute. Thus, the Legislature expressly intended to disallow tolling under any circumstances not enumerated in the statute." (Laird, supra, 2 Cal.4th at p. 618 [applying rule to one-year limitation period].)

■ "We see no reason to apply the second sentence of section 340.5 to the one-year period it does not mention, in addition to the three-year period it does mention. The general purpose of MICRA does not require us to expand that sentence beyond its language." (Belton, supra, 20 Cal.4th at p. 934 [rejecting application of rule to one-year limitation period].)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

*2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 460CACI 460 Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activities--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was engaged in an ultrahazardous activity that caused [him/her/it] to be harmed and that [name of defendant] is responsible for that harm.

People who engage in ultrahazardous activities are responsible for the harm these activities cause others, regardless of how carefully they carry out these activities. [Insert ultrahazardous activity] is an ultrahazardous activity.

To establish [his/her/its] claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was engaged in [insert ultrahazardous activity];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff]'s harm was the kind of harm that would be anticipated as a result of the risk created by [insert ultrahazardous activity]; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s [insert ultrahazardous activity] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "The doctrine of ultrahazardous activity provides that one who undertakes an ultrahazardous activity is liable to every person who is injured as a proximate result of that activity, regardless of the amount of care he uses." (Pierce v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 68, 85 [212 Cal.Rptr. 283] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Whether an activity is ultrahazardous is a question of law to be determined by the court. (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal.2d 489, 496 [190 P.2d 1] .)

■ Restatement of Torts Second, section 519, provides:

(1) One who carries on an abnormally dangerous activity is subject to liability for harm to the person, land or chattels of another resulting from the activity, although he has exercised the utmost care to prevent the harm.

(2) This strict liability is limited to the kind of harm, the possibility of which makes the activity abnormally dangerous.

■ Restatement of Torts Second, section 520, provides:

In determining whether an activity is abnormally dangerous, the following factors are to be considered:

(a) existence of a high degree of risk of some harm to the person, land or chattels of others;

(b) likelihood that the harm that results from it will be great;

(c) inability to eliminate the risk by the exercise of reasonable care;

(d) extent to which the activity is not a matter of common usage;

(e) inappropriateness of the activity to the place where it is carried on; and

(f) extent to which its value to the community is outweighed by its dangerous attributes.

■ Section 519 formerly provided, in part, that "one who carries on an ultrahazardous activity is liable to another whose person, land or chattels the actor should recognize is likely to be harmed by the unpreventable miscarriage of the activity for harm resulting thereto from that which makes the activity ultrahazardous, although the utmost care is exercised to prevent the harm." This section was followed by the court in Luthringer, supra , and by other courts in subsequent cases. (See Garcia v. Estate of Norton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 413, 418 [228 Cal.Rptr. 108] .) This statement regarding foreseeability is evidently still good law in California, even though the wording of section 519 does not presently contain the limitation.

■ Strict liability in this context has been confined to "consequences which lie within the extraordinary risk posed by the abnormally dangerous activity and is limited to the 'class of persons who are threatened by the abnormal danger, and the kind of damage they may be expected to incur.' " (Goodwin v. Reilley (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 86, 92 [221 Cal.Rptr. 374] , citing Prosser & Keeton, The Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984) § 75, p. 562.)

■ "The important factor is that certain activities under certain conditions may be so hazardous to the public generally, and of such relative infrequent occurrence, that it may well call for strict liability as the best public policy." (

Luthringer, supra, 31 Cal.2d at p. 500 .)

■ "It is axiomatic that an essential element of a plaintiff's cause of action, whether based on negligence or strict liability, is the existence of a causal connection between defendant's act and the injury which plaintiff suffered." (Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal.App.2d 774, 780 [56 Cal.Rptr. 128] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Defendant contended that the strict liability doctrine "cannot be applied unless the defendant is aware of the abnormally dangerous condition or activity." This is unsound: One who carried on such an "activity is liable for injuries to a person whom the actor reasonably should recognize as likely to be harmed ... , even though 'the utmost care is exercised to prevent the harm.' " (Garcia, supra, 183 Cal.App.3d at p. 420 , internal citation omitted.)

CACI 461 Strict Liability for Injury Caused by Wild Animal--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s [insert type of animal] harmed [him/her] and that [name of defendant] is responsible for that harm.

People who own wild animals are responsible for the harm that these animals cause to others, no matter how carefully they guard or restrain their animals.

To establish [his/her] claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] owned a [insert type of animal];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s [insert type of animal] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

- Lions, tigers, bears, elephants, wolves, monkeys, and sharks have been characterized as wild animals. (Rosenbloom v. Hanour Corp. (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1477, 1479, fn. 1 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 686] .)

- An owner of a wild animal is strictly liable to persons who are injured by the animal: "In such instances the owner is an insurer against the acts of the animal, to one who is injured without fault, and the question of the owner's negligence is not in the case." (Opelt v. Al G. Barnes Co. (1919) 41 Cal.App.

776, 779 [183 P. 241] .)

■ "[I]f the animal which inflicted the injury is vicious and dangerous, known to the defendant to be such, an allegation of negligence on the part of defendant is unnecessary and the averment, if made, may be treated as surplusage." (Baugh v. Beatty (1949) 91 Cal.App.2d 786, 791 [205 P.2d 671] .)

■ A wild animal, of a type to be known to have a vicious nature, is presumed to be vicious. (Baugh, supra, 91 Cal.App.2d at p. 791 .) Accordingly, an instruction on the owner's knowledge of its ferocity is unnecessary. (Id. at pp. 791-792 .)

■ "It is commonly said that scienter, or knowledge of such propensities, must be proved in the case of domestic animals, but is presumed in the case of wild animals." (6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Torts, § 1403.)

■ "The owner of a naturally dangerous animal may be excused from the usual duty of care: 'In cases involving "primary assumption of risk"--where, by virtue of the nature of the activity and the parties' relationship to the activity, the defendant owes no legal duty to protect the plaintiff from the particular risk of harm that caused the injury--the doctrine ... operates as a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery.' " (Rosenbloom, supra, 66 Cal.App.4th at p. 1479 , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 462

CACI 462 Strict Liability for Injury Caused by Domestic Animal With Dangerous Propensities--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s [insert type of animal] harmed [him/her] and that [name of defendant] is responsible for that harm.

People who own, keep, or control animals with unusually dangerous natures or tendencies can be held responsible for the harm that their animals cause to others, no matter how carefully they guard or restrain their animals.

To establish [his/her] claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] owned, kept, or controlled a [insert type of animal];
- 2. That the [insert type of animal] had an unusually dangerous nature or tendency;
- 3. That before [name of plaintiff] was injured, [name of defendant] knew or should have known that the [insert type of animal] had this nature or tendency;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That the [insert type of animal]'s unusually dangerous nature or tendency was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

For an instruction on statutory strict liability under the dog-bite statute, see CACI No. 463, Dog Bite Statute (Civ. Code, § 3342)--Essential Factual Elements.

■ "A common law strict liability cause of action may also be maintained if the owner of a domestic animal that bites or injures another person knew or had reason to know of the animal's vicious propensities. If [defendant] knew or should have known of his dog's vicious propensities and failed to inform [plaintiff] of such facts, he could be found to have exposed [plaintiff] to an unknown risk and thereby be held strictly liable at common law for her injuries. Under such circumstances, the defense of primary assumption of risk would not bar [plaintiff]'s claim since she could not be found to have assumed a risk of which she was unaware." (Priebe v. Nelson (2006) 39 Cal.4th 1112, 1115-1116 [47 Cal.Rptr.3d 553, 140 P.3d 848] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "California has long followed the common law rule of strict liability for harm done by a domestic animal with known vicious or dangerous propensities abnormal to its class." (Drake v. Dean (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 915, 921 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 325] .)

■ Any propensity that is likely to cause injury under the circumstances is a dangerous or vicious propensity within the meaning of the law. (Talizin v. Oak Creek Riding Club (1959) 176 Cal.App.2d 429, 437 [1 Cal.Rptr. 514] .)

■ The question of whether a domestic animal is vicious or dangerous is ordinarily a factual one for the jury. (Heath v. Fruzia (1942) 50 Cal.App.2d 598, 601 [123 P.2d 560] .)

■ Section 509 of the Restatement Second of Torts provides:

(1) A possessor of a domestic animal that he knows or has reason to know has dangerous propensities abnormal to its class, is subject to liability for harm done by the animal to another, although he has exercised the utmost care to prevent it from doing the harm.

(2) This liability is limited to harm that results from the abnormally dangerous propensity of which the possessor knows or has reason to know.

■ "The gist of the action is not the manner of keeping the vicious animal, but the keeping him at all with knowledge of the vicious propensities. In such instances the owner is an insurer against the acts of the animal, to one who is injured without fault, and the question of the owner's negligence is not in the case." (Hillman v. Garcia-Ruby (1955) 44 Cal.2d 625, 626 [283 P.2d 1033] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The absolute duty to restrain the dog could not be invoked unless the jury found, not only that the dog had the alleged dangerous propensity, but that defendants knew or should have known that it had." (Hillman, supra, 44 Cal.2d at p. 628 .)

■ "[N]egligence may be predicated on the characteristics of the animal which, although not abnormal to its class, create a foreseeable risk of harm. As to those characteristics, the owner has a duty to anticipate the harm and to exercise ordinary care to prevent the harm." (Drake, supra, 15 Cal.App.4th at p. 929 .)

CHAPTER 4 California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions

2-4 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 463

CACI 463 Dog Bite Statute (Civ. Code, § 3342)--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s dog bit [him/her] and that [name of defendant] is responsible for that harm.

People who own dogs can be held responsible for the harm from a dog bite, no matter how carefully they guard or restrain their dogs.

To establish [his/her] claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] owned a dog;
- 2. That the dog bit [name of plaintiff] while [he/she] was in a public place or lawfully on private property;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s dog was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[[Name of plaintiff] was lawfully on private property of the owner if [he/she] was performing any duty required by law or was on the property at the invitation, express or implied, of the owner.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2007

Read the last optional paragraph if there is an issue regarding whether the plaintiff was lawfully on private property when he or she was bitten.

For an instruction on common-law liability based on the defendant's knowledge of his or her pet's dangerous propensities, see CACI No. 462, Strict Liability for Injury Caused by Domestic Animal With Dangerous Propensities--Essential Factual Elements.

- Civil Code section 3342(a) provides: "The owner of any dog is liable for the damages suffered by any person who is bitten by the dog while in a public place or lawfully in a private place, including the property of the owner of the dog, regardless of the former viciousness of the dog or the owner's knowledge of such viciousness. A person is lawfully upon the private property of such owner within the meaning of this section when he is on such property in the performance of any duty imposed upon him by the laws of this state or by the laws or postal regulations of the United States, or when he is on such property upon the invitation, express or implied, of the owner."

- This statute creates an exception to the general rule that an owner is not strictly liable for harm caused by a domestic animal absent knowledge of the animal's vicious propensity. (Hicks v. Sullivan (1932) 122 Cal.App. 635, 639 [10 P.2d 516] .)

- It is not necessary that the skin be broken in order for the statute to apply. (Johnson v. McMahan (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 173, 176 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 173] .)

- "The defenses of assumption of the risk and contributory negligence may still be asserted" in an action brought under section 3342. (Johnson, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at p. 176 .)

- "A veterinarian or a veterinary assistant who accepts employment for the medical treatment of a dog, aware of the risk that any dog, regardless of its previous nature, might bite while being treated, has assumed this risk as part of his or her occupation." (Nelson v. Hall (1985) 165 Cal.App.3d 709, 715 [211 Cal.Rptr. 668] , original italics.)

- "[Plaintiff], by virtue of the nature of her occupation as a kennel worker, assumed the risk of being bitten or otherwise injured by the dogs under her care and control while in the custody of the commercial kennel where she worked pursuant to a contractual boarding agreement. The Court of Appeal correctly concluded a strict liability cause of action under the dog bite statute (§ 3342) was therefore unavailable to [plaintiff]." (Priebe v. Nelson (2006) 39 Cal.4th 1112, 1132 [47 Cal.Rptr.3d 553, 140 P.3d 848] .)

- The definition of "lawfully upon the private property of such owner" effectively prevents trespassers from obtaining recovery under the Dog Bite Statute. (Fullerton v. Conan (1948) 87 Cal.App.2d 354, 358 [197 P.2d 59] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Have Judge Use Your Verdict Form: You should always try to get the judge to use your verdict form and if you are the plaintiff, make sure the lines where money damages are placed are as long as possible. It is always important to go over the verdict form in closing argument with the jury. I sometimes blow up the verdict form and then fill it out during my closing argument. By Dona Cohn-Payne

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2009

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 400, Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 405, Comparative Fault of Plaintiff, and CACI No. 406, Apportionment of Responsibility.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 3. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

Users may wish to have the jury specify the liability and causation of each nonparty actor.

If a second plaintiff is also alleged to have been negligent, add his or her name to the list of possible contributing persons, notwithstanding the fact that the bracket is currently designated as "nonparty."

If superseding cause is an issue, insert a question on that issue after question 5.

This form may be modified if a nonparty is a product manufacturer.

Publisher's Notes

This verdict form covers issues presented in BAJI Nos. 16.00, 16.72, 16.73, and 16.91.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 454, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations, and CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery. If the only issue is whether the plaintiff's harm occurred before or after the limitation date, omit question 2. If the plaintiff claims that the delayed-discovery rule applies to save the action, use the first option for question 2. If the plaintiff claims that a reasonable investigation would not have disclosed the pertinent information before the limitation date, use the second option for question 2.

The date to be inserted throughout is the applicable limitation period before the filing date. For example, if the limitation period is two years and the filing date is August 31, 2007, the date is August 31, 2005.

In question 1, "claimed harm" refers to all of the elements of the cause of action, which must have occurred before the cause of action accrues and the limitation period begins. (Glue-Fold, Inc. v. Slautterback Corp. (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 1018, 1029 [98 Cal.Rptr.2d 661] .) In some cases, it may be necessary to modify this term to refer to specific facts that give rise to the cause of action.

The first option for question 2 may be modified to refer to specific facts that the plaintiff may have known.

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Medical Negligence Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 500 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Medical negligence causes of action in general [CACI Nos. 500-518], including instructions on essential factual elements [CACI No. 500], applicable standards of care [CACI Nos. 501, 502, 504], the duty to protect and warn [CACI Nos. 503A, 503B, 507], wrongful birth and life [CACI Nos. 511-513], duties of a hospital [CACI Nos. 514-516], and res ipsa loquitur [CACI No. 518].
- Medical battery and consent issues [CACI Nos. 530A-534], including essential factual elements regarding the risks of nontreatment [CACI No. 535].
- Affirmative defenses [CACI Nos. 517, 550-556].

The medical negligence series also includes verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-500-VF-502].

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 500

CACI 500 Essential Factual Elements

Please see CACI No. 400, Essential Factual Elements (Negligence)

New September 2003

In medical malpractice or professional negligence cases, the word "medical" or "professional" should be added before the word "negligence" in the first paragraph of CACI No. 400.

- From a theoretical standpoint, "medical negligence" is still considered "negligence": "With respect to professionals, their specialized education and training do not serve to impose an increased duty of care but rather are considered additional 'circumstances' relevant to an overall assessment of what constitutes 'ordinary prudence' in a particular situation." (Flowers v. Torrance Memorial Hospital Medical Center (1994) 8 Cal.4th 992, 997-998, [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 685, 884 P.2d 142] .)

Accordingly, "[s]ince the standard of care remains constant in terms of 'ordinary prudence,' it is clear that denominating a cause of action as one for 'professional negligence' does not transmute its underlying character. For substantive purposes, it merely serves to establish the basis by which 'ordinary prudence' will be calculated and the defendant's conduct evaluated." (Flowers, supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 998 .)

- The distinction between "professional" as opposed to "ordinary" negligence is relevant in relation to certain statutory provisions such as the statute of limitations and Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act (MICRA). (Flowers, supra, at pp. 998-999 .)

- Code of Civil Procedure section 340.5, which sets the statute of limitations for medical malpractice cases based on professional negligence, and Civil Code sections 3333.1 and 3333.2 (MICRA) define "professional negligence" as "a negligent act or omission to act by a health care provider in the rendering of professional services, which act or omission is the proximate cause of a personal injury or wrongful death, provided that such services are within the scope of services for which the provider is licensed and which are not within any restriction imposed by the licensing agency or licensed hospital."

■ The statutory definition of "professional negligence" "focuses on whether the negligence occurs in the rendering of professional services, rather than whether a high or low level of skill is required. [Citation.]" (Bellamy v. Appellate Dep't of the Superior Court (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 797, 807] .)

■ A formal physician-patient relationship is not always a prerequisite to bringing a malpractice action: "[E]ven in the absence of a physician-patient relationship, a physician has liability to an examinee for negligence or professional malpractice for injuries incurred during the examination itself." (Mero v. Sadoff (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1466, 1478 [37 Cal.Rptr.2d 769] .)

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 501

CACI 501 Standard of Care for Health Care Professionals

[A/An] [insert type of medical practitioner] is negligent if [he/she] fails to use the level of skill, knowledge, and care in diagnosis and treatment that other reasonably careful [insert type of medical practitioners] would use in the same or similar circumstances. This level of skill, knowledge, and care is sometimes referred to as "the standard of care."

[You must determine the level of skill, knowledge, and care that other reasonably careful [insert type of medical practitioners] would use in the same or similar circumstances, based only on the testimony of the expert witnesses [including [name of defendant]] who have testified in this case.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, December 2005

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to apply to nonspecialist physicians, surgeons, and dentists. The standards of care for nurses, specialists, and hospitals are addressed in separate instructions.

The second paragraph should be used only in cases where the court determines that expert testimony is necessary to establish the standard of care.

In appropriate cases where the standard of care is set by statute or regulation, refer to instructions on negligence per se (CACI Nos. 418 -421). (See Galvez v. Frields (2001) 88 Cal.App.4th 1410 [107 Cal.Rptr.2d 50] .)

See CACI Nos. 219 -221 on evaluating the credibility of expert witnesses.

Sources and Authority

■ "With unimportant variations in phrasing, we have consistently held that a physician is required to possess and exercise, in both diagnosis and treatment, that reasonable degree of knowledge and skill which is ordinarily possessed and exercised by other members of his profession in similar circumstances." (Landeros v. Flood (1976) 17 Cal.3d 399, 408 [131 Cal.Rptr. 69, 551 P.2d 389] ; see also Brown v. Colm (1974) 11 Cal.3d 639, 642-643 [114 Cal.Rptr. 128, 522 P.2d 688] .)

■ "The courts require only that physicians and surgeons exercise in diagnosis and treatment that reasonable degree of skill, knowledge, and care ordinarily possessed and exercised by members of the medical profession under similar circumstances." (Mann v. Cracchiolo (1985) 38 Cal.3d 18, 36 [210 Cal.Rptr. 762, 694 P.2d 1134] .)

■ In Hinson v. Clairemont Community Hospital (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 1110, 1119-1120 [267 Cal.Rptr. 503] (disapproved on other grounds in Alexander v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1218, 1228 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 397, 859 P.2d 96]), the court observed that failure to possess the requisite level of knowledge and skill is negligence, although a breach of this portion of the standard of care does not, by itself, establish actionable malpractice.

■ "[T]he standard of care for physicians is the reasonable degree of skill, knowledge and care ordinarily possessed and exercised by members of the medical profession under similar circumstances. The test for determining familiarity with the standard of care is knowledge of similar conditions. Geographical location may be a factor considered in making that determination, but, by itself, does not provide a practical basis for measuring similar circumstances. Over 30 years ago, our Supreme Court observed that '[t]he unmistakable general trend ... has been toward liberalizing the rules relating to the testimonial qualifications of medical experts.' " (Avivi v. Centro Medico Urgente Medical Center (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 463, 470-471 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 707] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "The standard of care against which the acts of a medical practitioner are to be measured is a matter peculiarly within the knowledge of experts; it presents the basic issue in a malpractice action and can only be proved by their testimony, unless the conduct required by the particular circumstances is within the common knowledge of laymen." (Alef v. Alta Bates Hospital (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 208, 215 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 900] .)

■ "'Ordinarily, the standard of care required of a doctor, and whether he exercised such care, can be established only by the testimony of experts in the field.' 'But to that rule there is an exception that is as well settled as the rule itself, and that is where "negligence on the part of a doctor is demonstrated by facts which can be evaluated by resort to common knowledge, expert testimony is not required since scientific enlightenment is not essential for the determination of an obvious fact." ' " (Gannon v. Elliot (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 1, 6 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 86] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We have already held upon authority that the failure to remove a sponge from the abdomen of a patient is negligence of the ordinary type and that it does not involve knowledge of materia medica or surgery but that it belongs to that class of mental lapses which frequently occur in the usual routine of business and commerce, and in the multitude of commonplace affairs which come within the group of ordinary actionable negligence. The layman needs no scientific enlightenment to see at once that the omission can be accounted for on no other theory than that someone has committed actionable negligence." (Ales v. Ryan (1936) 8 Cal.2d 82, 93 [64 P.2d 409] .)

■ The medical malpractice standard of care applies to veterinarians. (Williamson v. Prida (1999) 75 Cal.App.4th 1417, 1425 [89 Cal.Rptr.2d 868] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Obtaining Expert Witnesses: In a medical negligence case, it is imperative that you seek competent, qualified medical experts who can testify well and relate to a jury. The earlier a litigator can find and retain an expert, the better framed your case will be. Further, your expert should be consulted early on so that information/evidence is developed during the discovery phase. By Dona Cohn-Payne

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to apply to physicians, surgeons, and dentists who are specialists in a particular practice area.

- Specialists, such as anesthesiologists and ophthalmologists, are "held to that standard of learning and skill normally possessed by such specialists in the same or similar locality under the same or similar circumstances." (Quintal v. Laurel Grove Hospital (1964) 62 Cal.2d 154, 159-160 [41 Cal.Rptr. 577, 397 P.2d 161] .) This standard adds a further level to the general standard of care for medical professionals: "In the first place, the special obligation of the professional is exemplified by his duty not merely to perform his work with ordinary care but to use the skill, prudence, and diligence commonly exercised by practitioners of his profession. If he further specializes within the profession, he must meet the standards of knowledge and skill of such specialists." (Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal.3d 176, 188 [98 Cal.Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] .)

- California imposes a "higher standard of care upon physicians with a specialized practice." (Neel, supra, 6 Cal.3d 176 at p. 188, fn. 22 .) This higher standard refers to the level of skill that must be exercised, not to the standard of care. (*Valentine v. CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 503A

CACI 503A Psychotherapist's Duty to Protect Intended Victim From Patient's Threat

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s failure to protect [name of plaintiff/decedent] was a substantial factor in causing [injury to [name of plaintiff]/the death of [name of decedent]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was a psychotherapist;
- 2. That [name of patient] was [name of defendant]'s patient;
- 3. That [name of patient] communicated to [name of defendant] a serious threat of physical violence;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was a reasonably identifiable victim of [name of patient]'s threat;
- 5. That [name of patient] [injured [name of plaintiff]/killed [name of decedent]];
- 6. That [name of defendant] failed to make reasonable efforts to protect [name of plaintiff/decedent]; and
- 7. That [name of defendant]'s failure was a substantial factor in causing [[name of plaintiff]'s injury/the death of [name of decedent]].

Derived from former CACI No. 503 April 2007

Directions for Use

Read this instruction for a Tarasoff cause of action for professional negligence against a psychotherapist for failure to protect a victim from a patient's act of violence after the patient made a threat to the therapist against the victim. (See Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal.3d 425 [131 Cal.Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] .) The liability imposed by Tarasoff is modified by the provisions of Civil Code section 43.92(a). First read CACI No. 503B, Affirmative Defense--Psychotherapist's Warning to Victim and Law Enforcement, if the therapist asserts that he or she is immune from liability under Civil Code section 43.92(b) by having made reasonable efforts to warn the victim and a law enforcement agency of the threat.

In a wrongful death case, insert the name of the decedent victim where applicable.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 43.92(a) provides:

"There shall be no monetary liability on the part of, and no cause of action shall arise against, any person who is a psychotherapist as defined in Section 1010 of the Evidence Code in failing to warn of and protect from a patient's threatened violent behavior or failing to predict and warn of and protect from a patient's violent behavior except where the patient has communicated to the psychotherapist a serious threat of physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim or victims."

- "[T]herapists cannot escape liability merely because [the victim] was not their patient. When a therapist determines, or pursuant to the standards of his profession should determine, that his patient presents a serious danger of violence to another, he incurs an obligation to use reasonable care to protect the intended victim against such danger. The discharge of this duty may require the therapist to take one or more of various steps, depending upon the nature of the case. Thus it may call for him to warn the intended victim or others likely to apprise the victim of the danger, to notify the police, or to take whatever other steps are reasonably necessary under the circumstances." (Tarasoff, supra, 17 Cal.3d at p. 431 .)

- Civil Code section 43.92 was enacted to limit the liability of psychotherapists under Tarasoff regarding a therapist's duty to warn an intended victim. (Barry v. Turek (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 1241, 1244-1245 [267 Cal.Rptr. 553] .) Under this provision, "[p]sychotherapists thus have immunity from Tarasoff claims except where the plaintiff proves that the patient has communicated to his or her psychotherapist a serious threat of physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim or victims." (Barry, supra, 218 Cal.App.3d at p. 1245 .)

- "When the communication of the serious threat of physical violence is received by the therapist from a member of the patient's immediate family and is shared for the purpose of facilitating and furthering the patient's treatment, the fact that the family member is not technically a 'patient' is not crucial to the statute's purpose." (Ewing v. Goldstein (2004) 120 Cal.App.4th 807, 817 [15 Cal.Rptr.3d 864] .)

- "Section 43.92 strikes a reasonable balance in that it does not compel the therapist to predict the dangerousness of a patient. Instead, it requires the therapist to attempt to protect a victim under limited circumstances, even though the therapist's disclosure of a patient confidence will potentially disrupt or destroy the patient's trust in the therapist. However, the requirement is imposed upon the therapist only after he or she determines that the patient has made a credible threat of serious physical violence against a person." (Calderon v. Glick (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 224, 231 [31 Cal.Rptr.3d 707] .)

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 503B

CACI 503B Affirmative Defense--Psychotherapist's Warning to Victim and Law Enforcement

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for [[name of plaintiff]'s injury/the death of [name of decedent]] if [name of defendant] proves that [he/she] made reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to [name of plaintiff/decedent] and to a law enforcement agency.

Derived from former CACI No. 503 April 2007

Directions for Use

Read this instruction for a Tarasoff cause of action for professional negligence against a psychotherapist (Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal.3d 425 [131 Cal.Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334]) if there is a dispute of fact regarding whether the defendant made reasonable efforts to warn the victim and a law enforcement agency of a threat made by the defendant's patient. The therapist is immune from liability under Tarasoff if he or she makes reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to the victim and to a law enforcement agency. (Civ. Code, § 43.92(b).) CACI No. 503A, Psychotherapist's Duty to Warn and Protect Intended Victim From Patient's Threat, sets forth the elements of a Tarasoff cause of action if the defendant is not immune.

In a wrongful death case, insert the name of the decedent victim where applicable.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 43.92(b) provides:

"There shall be no monetary liability on the part of, and no cause of action shall arise against, a psychotherapist who, under the limited circumstances specified above, discharges his or her duty to warn and protect by making reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to the victim or victims and to a law enforcement agency."

■ Failure to inform a law enforcement agency concerning a homicidal threat made by a patient against his work supervisor did not abrogate the "firefighter's rule" and, therefore, did not render the psychiatrist liable to a police officer who was subsequently shot by the patient. (Tilley v. Schulte (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 79, 85-86 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 497] .)

■ "When the communication of the serious threat of physical violence is received by the therapist from a member of the patient's immediate family and is shared for the purpose of facilitating and furthering the patient's treatment, the fact that the family member is not technically a 'patient' is not crucial to the statute's purpose." (Ewing v. Goldstein (2004) 120 Cal.App.4th 807, 817 [15 Cal.Rptr.3d 864] .)

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 504

CACI 504 Standard of Care for Nurses

[A/An] [insert type of nurse] is negligent if [he/she] fails to use the level of skill, knowledge, and care in diagnosis and treatment that other reasonably careful [insert type of nurses] would use in similar circumstances. This level of skill, knowledge, and care is sometimes referred to as "the standard of care."

[You must determine the level of skill, knowledge, and care that other reasonably careful [insert type of nurses] would use in similar circumstances based only on the testimony of the expert witnesses [including [name of defendant]] who have testified in this case.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, June 2010

Directions for Use

The appropriate level of nurse should be inserted where indicated--i.e., registered nurse, licensed vocational nurse, nurse practitioner.

The second paragraph should be included unless the court determines that expert testimony is not necessary to establish the standard of care.

Sources and Authority

■ "[A] nurse is negligent if he or she fails to meet the standard of care--that is, fails to use the level of skill, knowledge, and care that a reasonably careful nurse would use in similar circumstances." (Massey v. Mercy Med. Ctr. Redding (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 690, 694 [103 Cal.Rptr.3d 209 [citing this instruction]]).)

■ "[T]oday's nurses are held to strict professional standards of knowledge and performance.' But '[s]ome difficulties are presented [in the nursing malpractice context] by the fact that a nurse's traditional role has involved "both routine, nontechnical tasks as well as specialized nursing tasks. If, in considering the case law in this area, the dispute is analyzed in terms of what action by the nurse is being complained about, it is possible to make some sense out of the relevant decisions." ' ' (Massey, supra, 180 Cal.App.4th at p. 697 , internal citation omitted.)

■ Courts have held that "a nurse's conduct must not be measured by the standard of care required of a physician or surgeon, but by that of other nurses in the same or similar locality and under similar circumstances." (Alef v. Alta Bates Hospital (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 208, 215 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 900] .)

■ The jury should not be instructed that the standard of care for a nurse practitioner must be measured by the standard of care for a physician or surgeon when the nurse is examining a patient or making a diagnosis. (Fein v. Permanente Medical Group (1985) 38 Cal.3d 137, 150 [211 Cal.Rptr. 368, 695 P.2d 665] .) Courts have observed that nurses are trained, "but to a lesser degree than a physician, in the recognition of the symptoms of diseases and injuries." (Cooper v. National Motor Bearing Co. (1955) 136 Cal.App.2d 229, 238 [288 P.2d 581] .)

■ "[E]xpert opinion testimony is required to prove that a defendant nurse did not meet the standard of care and therefore was negligent, 'except in cases where the negligence is obvious to laymen.' " (Massey, supra, 180 Cal.App.4th at pp. 694-695 .)

Directions for Use

Plaintiffs have argued that this type of instruction "provides too easy an 'out' for malpractice defendants." (Fraijo v. Hartland Hospital (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 331, 343 [160 Cal.Rptr. 246] .) Nevertheless, in California, instructions on this point have been sustained when challenged. (Rainer v. Community Memorial Hospital (1971) 18 Cal.App.3d 240, 260 [95 Cal.Rptr. 901] .)

Sources and Authority

- "While a physician cannot be held liable for mere errors of judgment or for erroneous conclusions on matters of opinion, he must use the judgment and form the opinions of one possessed of knowledge and skill common to medical men practicing, in the same or like community and that he may have done his best is no answer to an action of this sort." (Sim v. Weeks (1935) 7 Cal.App.2d 28, 36 [45 P.2d 350] .)
- "The 'law has never held a physician or surgeon liable for every untoward result which may occur in medical practice' but it 'demands only that a physician or surgeon have the degree of learning and skill ordinarily possessed by practitioners of the medical profession in the same locality and that he exercise ordinary care in applying such learning and skill to the treatment of his patient.' " (Huffman v. Lindquist (1951) 37 Cal.2d 465, 473 [234 P.2d 34] , internal citations omitted.)

■ It is appropriate to instruct a jury that "they do not necessarily adjudge whether there was negligence in terms of the result achieved" (Dincau v. Tamayose (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 780, 800 [182 Cal.Rptr. 855] .)

■ "[A] physician and surgeon is not required to make a perfect diagnosis but is only required to have that degree of skill and learning ordinarily possessed by physicians of good standing practicing in the same locality and to use ordinary care and diligence in applying that learning to the treatment of his patient." (Ries v. Reinard (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 116, 119 [117 P.2d 386] .)

■ "A doctor is not a warrantor of cures nor is he required to guarantee results and in the absence of a want of reasonable care and skill will not be held responsible for untoward results." (Sanchez v. Rodriguez (1964) 226 Cal.App.2d 439, 449 [38 Cal.Rptr. 110] .)

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 507

CACI 507 Duty to Warn Patient

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was negligent because [he/she] did not warn [name of patient] that [his/her] condition presented a danger to others.

[Name of defendant] was negligent if [name of plaintiff] proves that [he/she] did not take reasonable steps to warn [name of patient] that [his/her] condition presented a danger to others.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended to cover situations where a patient's condition foreseeably causes harm to a third party.

- "To avoid liability in this case, [defendants] should have taken whatever steps were reasonable under the circumstances to protect [plaintiff] and other foreseeable victims of [patient]'s dangerous conduct. What is a reasonable step to take will vary from case to case." (Myers v. Quesenberry (1983) 144 Cal.App.3d 888, 894 [193 Cal.Rptr. 733] , internal citations omitted.) "Our holding does not require the physician to do anything other than what he was already obligated to do for the protection of the patient. Thus, even though it may appear that the scope of liability has been expanded to include injuries to foreseeable victims other than the patient, the standard of medical care to the patient remains the same." (Ibid.)

- "When the avoidance of foreseeable harm to a third person requires a defendant to control the conduct of a person with whom the defendant has a special relationship (such as physician and patient) or to warn the person of the risks involved in certain conduct, the defendant's duty extends to a third person with whom the defendant does not have a special relationship." (Reisner v. Regents of Univ. of California (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1195, 1198-1199 [37 Cal.Rptr.2d 518] [infected sex partner could maintain action against his partner's physicians for failing to tell the young woman that she had received HIV-tainted blood].)

- Proof of causation is still required: "[Defendants] will be liable only if [plaintiff] is able to prove their failure to warn [patient] not to drive in an irrational and uncontrolled diabetic condition was a substantial factor in causing his injuries." (Myers, supra, 144 Cal.App.3d at p. 895 .)

- This obligation to third parties appears to be limited to healthcare professionals and does not apply to ordinary citizens. (Koepke v. Loo (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 1444, 1456-1457 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 34] .)

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 510

CACI 510 Derivative Liability of Surgeon

A surgeon is responsible for the negligence of other medical practitioners or nurses who are under his or her supervision and control and actively participating during an operation.

New September 2003; Revised April 2007

Give this instruction in a case in which the plaintiff seeks to hold a surgeon vicariously responsible under the "captain-of-the-ship" doctrine for the negligence of nurses or other hospital employees that occurs during the course of an operation. There is some disagreement in the courts regarding whether the captain-of-the-ship doctrine remains a viable rule of law. (Compare Truhitte v. French Hospital (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 332, 348 [180 Cal.Rptr. 152] (doctrine has been eroded) with Baumgardner v. Yusuf (2006) 144 Cal.App.4th 1381, 1397-1398 [51 Cal.Rptr.3d 277] (doctrine remains viable).)

- The "captain of the ship" doctrine imposes liability on a surgeon under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the acts of those under the surgeon's special supervision and control during the operation. (Thomas v. Intermedics Orthopedics, Inc. (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 957, 967 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 197] .)

- "The doctrine has been explained as follows: 'A physician generally is not liable for the negligence of hospital or other nurses, attendants, or internes, who are not his employees, particularly where he has no knowledge thereof or no connection therewith. On the other hand, a physician is liable for the negligence of hospital or other nurses, attendants, or internes, who are not his employees, where such negligence is discoverable by him in the exercise of ordinary care, he is negligent in permitting them to attend the patient, or the negligent acts were performed under conditions where, in the exercise of ordinary care, he could have or should have been able to prevent their injurious effects and did not. [P]

The mere fact that a physician or surgeon gives instructions to a hospital employee does not render the physician or surgeon liable for negligence of the hospital employee in carrying out the instructions. Similarly, the mere right of a physician to supervise a hospital employee is not sufficient to render the physician liable for the negligence of such employee. On the other hand, if the physician has the right to exercise control over the work to be done by the hospital employee and the manner of its performance, or an employee of a hospital is temporarily detached in whole or in part from the hospital's general control so as to become the temporary servant of the physician he assists, the physician will be subject to liability for the employee's negligence. [P] Thus, where a hospital employee, although not in the regular employ of an operating surgeon, is under his special supervision and control during the operation, the relationship of master and servant exists, and the surgeon is liable, under the doctrine of respondeat superior, for the employee's negligence.' " (Thomas, supra, 47 Cal.App.4th at pp. 966-967 , original italics.)

- This doctrine applies only to medical personnel who are actively participating in the surgical procedure. (Thomas, supra, 47 Cal.App.4th at pp. 966-967 .)

- While the "captain of the ship" doctrine has never been expressly rejected, it has been eroded by modern courts. "A theory that the surgeon directly controls all activities of whatever nature in the operating room certainly is not realistic in present day medical care." (Truhitte, supra, 128 Cal.App.3d at p. 348 , original italics.)

- "[T]he Truhitte court ignores what we have already recognized as the special relationship between a vulnerable hospital patient and the surgeon operating on the patient. A helpless patient on the operating table who cannot understand or control what is happening reasonably expects a surgeon to oversee her care and to look out for her interests. We find this special relationship sufficient justification for the continued application of captain of the ship doctrine. Moreover, in light of the Supreme Court's expressions of approval of the doctrine ... , we feel compelled to adhere to the doctrine." (Baumgardner, supra, 144 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1397-1398, internal citations omitted.)

- Absent evidence of right to control, an operating surgeon is generally not responsible for the conduct of anesthesiologists or others who independently carry out their duties. (Seneris v. Haas (1955) 45 Cal.2d 811, 828 [291 P.2d 915] ; Marvulli v. Elshire (1972) 27 Cal.App.3d 180, 187 [103 Cal.Rptr. 461] .)

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 511

CACI 511 Wrongful Birth--Sterilization/Abortion--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] negligently failed to prevent the birth of her child. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] performed a negligent [sterilization/abortion] procedure; and
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] gave birth to an unplanned child after this procedure was performed.

New September 2003

The general medical negligence instructions--instructions on the standard of care and causation--could be used in conjunction with this one.

- "California law now permits a mother to hold medical personnel liable for their negligent failure to prevent or to terminate a pregnancy." (Foy v. Greenblott (1983) 141 Cal.App.3d 1, 8 [190 Cal.Rptr. 84] .)
- Negligent sterilization procedure that leads to the birth of a child, either normal or disabled, can form the basis of a wrongful birth action. (Custodio v. Bauer (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 303, 323-325 [59 Cal.Rptr. 463] ; Morris v. Frudenberg (1982) 135 Cal.App.3d 23, 37 [185 Cal.Rptr. 76] .) The same is true of an unsuccessful abortion procedure. (Stills v. Gratton (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 698, 707-709 [127 Cal.Rptr. 652] .)
- A wrongful birth claim based on a negligently performed sterilization or abortion procedure does not support an action for wrongful life: "California courts do recognize a wrongful life claim by an 'impaired' child for special damages (but not for general damages), when the physician's negligence is the proximate cause of the child's need for extraordinary medical care and training. No court, however, has expanded tort liability to include wrongful life claims by children born without any mental or physical impairment." (Alexandria S. v. Pac. Fertility Medical Ctr. (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 110, 122 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 23].)

■ Civil Code section 43.6(b) provides: "The failure or refusal of a parent to prevent the live birth of his or her child shall not be a defense in any action against a third party, nor shall the failure or refusal be considered in awarding damages in any such action."

New September 2003; Revised April 2007

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 512

The general medical negligence instructions on the standard of care and causation (see CACI Nos. 500-502) may be used in conjunction with this instruction. Read also CACI No. 513, Wrongful Life--Essential Factual Elements, if the parents' cause of action for wrongful birth is joined with the child's cause of action for wrongful life.

In element 1, select the first option if the claim is that the defendant failed to diagnose or warn the plaintiff of a possible genetic impairment. Select the second option if the claim is that the defendant failed to order or advise of available genetic testing. In a testing case, there is no causation unless the chances that the test would disclose the impairment were at least 50 percent. (See Simmons v. West Covina Medical Clinic (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 696, 702-703 [260 Cal.Rptr. 772] .)

■ "Claims for 'wrongful life' are essentially actions for malpractice based on negligent genetic counseling and testing." (Gami v. Mullikin Medical Center (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 870, 883 [22 Cal.Rptr.2d 819] .) Since the wrongful life action corresponds to the wrongful birth action, it is reasonable to conclude that this principle applies to wrongful birth actions.

■ Regarding wrongful-life actions, courts have observed: "[A]s in any medical malpractice action, the plaintiff must establish: '(1) the duty of the professional to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of his profession commonly possess and exercise; (2) a breach of that duty; (3) a proximate causal connection between the negligent conduct and the resulting injury; and (4) actual loss or damage resulting from the professional's negligence.'" (Gami, supra, 18 Cal.App.4th at p. 877 .)

■ The negligent failure to administer a test that had only a 20 percent chance of detecting Down syndrome did not establish a reasonably probable causal connection to the birth of a child with this genetic abnormality. (Simmons, supra .)

■ Both parent and child may recover damages to compensate for "the extraordinary expenses necessary to treat the hereditary ailment." (Turpin v. Sortini (1982) 31 Cal.3d 220, 239 [182 Cal.Rptr. 337, 643 P.2d 954] .)

■ In wrongful-birth actions, parents are permitted to recover the medical expenses incurred on behalf of a disabled child. The child may also recover medical expenses in a wrongful-life action, though both parent and child may not recover the same expenses. (Turpin, supra, 31 Cal.3d at pp. 238-239 .)

Directions for Use

The general medical negligence instructions on the standard of care and causation (see CACI Nos. 500-502) may be used in conjunction with this instruction. Read also CACI No. 512, Wrongful Birth--Essential Factual Elements, if the parents' cause of action for wrongful birth is joined with the child's cause of action for wrongful life.

In element 1, select the first option if the claim is that the defendant failed to diagnose or warn the plaintiff of a possible genetic impairment. Select the second option if the claim is that the defendant failed to order or advise of available genetic testing. In a testing case, there is no causation unless the chances that the test would disclose the impairment were at least 50 percent. (See Simmons v. West Covina Medical Clinic (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 696, 702-703 [260 Cal.Rptr. 772] .)

In order for this instruction to apply, the genetic impairment must result in a physical or mental disability. This is implied by the fourth element in the instruction.

Sources and Authority

- "[I]t may be helpful to recognize that although the cause of action at issue has attracted a special name--'wrongful life'--plaintiff's basic contention is that her action is simply one form of the familiar medical or professional malpractice action. The gist of plaintiff's claim is that she has suffered harm or damage as a result of defendants' negligent performance of their professional tasks, and that, as a consequence, she is entitled to recover under generally applicable common law tort principles." (Turpin v. Sortini (1982) 31 Cal.3d 220, 229 [182 Cal.Rptr. 337, 643 P.2d 954] .)
- "Claims for 'wrongful life' are essentially actions for malpractice based on negligent genetic counseling and testing." (Gami v. Mullikin Medical Center (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 870, 883 [22 Cal.Rptr.2d 819] .)
- General damages are not available: "[W]e conclude that while a plaintiff-child in a wrongful life action may not recover general damages for being born impaired as opposed to not being born at all, the child--like his or her parents--may recover special damages for the extraordinary expenses necessary to treat the hereditary ailment." (Turpin, supra, 31 Cal.3d at p. 239 .)
- A child may not recover for loss of earning capacity in a wrongful-life action. (Andalon v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 600, 614 [208 Cal.Rptr. 899] .)
- The negligent failure to administer a test that had only a 20 percent chance of detecting Down syndrome did not establish a reasonably probable causal connection to the birth of a child with this genetic abnormality. (Simmons, supra .)
- Wrongful life does not apply to normal children. (Alexandria S. v. Pac. Fertility Medical Ctr. (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 110, 122 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 23] .)
- Civil Code section 43.6(a) provides: "No cause of action arises against a parent of a child based upon the claim that the child should not have been conceived or, if conceived, should not have been allowed to have been born alive."

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 514

CACI 514 Duty of Hospital

A hospital is negligent if it does not use reasonable care toward its patients. A hospital must provide procedures, policies, facilities, supplies, and qualified personnel reasonably necessary for the treatment of its patients.

[When you are deciding whether [name of defendant] was negligent, you must base your decision only on the testimony of the expert witnesses who have testified in this case.]

New September 2003

This instruction may be augmented by CACI Nos. 515, Duty of Hospital to Provide Safe Environment, and/or 516, Duty of Hospital to Screen Medical Staff.

The second paragraph should be used except in cases where the court determines that expert testimony is not necessary to establish the standard of care.

See CACI Nos. 219-221 on evaluating the credibility of expert witnesses.

This instruction is not intended for cases where the hospital is being sued based on the negligence of an agent or employee. See instructions in the Vicarious Responsibility series and adapt accordingly.

■ The amount of care that a hospital must exercise toward a patient varies depending on the patient's condition: "[T]he duty imposed by law on the hospital is that it must exercise such reasonable care toward a patient as his mental and physical condition, if known, require" (Vistica v. Presbyterian Hospital & Medical Center, Inc. (1967) 67 Cal.2d 465, 469 [62 Cal.Rptr. 577, 432 P.2d 193] .)

■ A hospital has a duty "to use reasonable care and diligence in safeguarding a patient committed to its charge [citations] and such care and diligence are measured by the capacity of the patient to care for himself." (Thomas v. Seaside Memorial Hospital (1947) 80 Cal.App.2d 841, 847 [183 P.2d 288] .)

■ A hospital's duty extends to both treatment and care: "It is the duty of any hospital that undertakes the treatment of an ill or wounded person to use reasonable care and diligence not only in operating upon and treating but also in safeguarding him, and such care and diligence is measured by the capacity of the patient to care for himself." (Valentin v. La Societe Francaise de Bienfaisance Mutuelle (1946) 76 Cal.App.2d 1, 4 [172 P.2d 359] .)

■ Hospitals must maintain safe conditions on their premises: "[T]he professional duty of a hospital ... is primarily to provide a safe environment within which diagnosis, treatment, and recovery can be carried out. Thus if an unsafe condition of the hospital's premises causes injury to a patient ... there is a breach of the hospital's duty qua hospital." (Murillo v. Good Samaritan Hospital (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 50, 56-57 [160 Cal.Rptr. 33] .)

■ Hospitals must monitor a patient's condition: "Defendant ... was under a duty to observe and know the condition of a patient. Its business is caring for ill persons, and its conduct must be in accordance with that of a person of ordinary prudence under the circumstances, a vital part of those circumstances being the illness of the patient and incidents thereof." (Rice v. California Lutheran Hospital (1945) 27 Cal.2d 296, 302 [163 P.2d 860] .)

■ "If a hospital is obliged to maintain its premises and its instrumentalities for the comfort of its patients with such care and diligence as will reasonably assure their safety, it should be equally bound to observe the progress of a patient in his recovery from a major operation with such care and diligence as his condition reasonably requires for his comfort and safety and promptly to employ such agencies as may reasonably appear necessary for the patient's safety." (Valentin, supra, 76 Cal.App.2d at p. 5 .)

■ A hospital has a duty to provide sufficient staff: "No expert opinion is required to prove the hospital's failure to provide an adequate number of trained, qualified personnel at the most critical time in postoperative care was negligent." (Czubinsky v. Doctors Hospital (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 361, 367 [188 Cal.Rptr. 685] .)

CACI 515 Duty of Hospital to Provide Safe Environment

If [name of defendant hospital] knew or reasonably should have known it was likely that [name of patient] would harm [himself/herself/another], then [name of defendant hospital] had to use reasonable care to prevent such harm.

New September 2003

Always read CACI No. 514, Duty of Hospital, in conjunction with this instruction.

■ "[T]he duty extends to safeguarding the patient from dangers due to mental incapacity; and where the hospital has notice or knowledge of facts from which it might reasonably be concluded that a patient would be likely to harm himself or others unless preclusive measures were taken, then the hospital must use reasonable care in the circumstances to prevent such harm." ■ In Meier v. Ross General Hospital (1968) 69 Cal.2d 420, 423-424 [71 Cal.Rptr. 903, 445 P.2d 519], the Court held that absent reasonable care, the treating doctor and the hospital can be liable even though a suicidal patient's acts are "voluntary." That is, the doctor and the hospital must use reasonable care to prevent the patient from harming herself by her own acts, be they voluntary or involuntary.

■ For duty of a hospital that cares for alcoholics, see Wood v. Samaritan Inst. (1945) 26 Cal.2d 847, 853 [161 P.2d 556] , and Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hospital (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 575, 581 [184 Cal.Rptr. 92] .

A hospital is negligent if it does not use reasonable care to select and periodically evaluate its medical staff so that its patients are provided adequate medical care.

New September 2003

Always read CACI No. 514, Duty of Hospital, in conjunction with this instruction.

- "[W]e hold a hospital is accountable for negligently screening the competency of its medical staff to insure the adequacy of medical care rendered to patients at its facility." (Elam v. College Park Hospital (1982) 132 Cal.App.3d 332, 346 [183 Cal.Rptr. 156] .)

- "The hospital has 'a direct and independent responsibility to its patients of insuring the competency of its medical staff and the quality of medical care provided' [Citation.] Hospitals must be able to establish high standards of professional work and to maintain those standards through careful selection and review of staff. And they are required to do so by both state and federal law. [Citations.]" (Rhee v. El Camino Hospital Dist. (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 477, 489 [247 Cal.Rptr. 244] .)

CACI 517 Affirmative Defense--Patient's Duty to Provide for His or Her Own Well-Being

A patient must use reasonable care to provide for his or her own well-being. This includes a responsibility to [follow [a/an] [insert type of medical practitioner]'s instructions] [seek medical assistance] when a reasonable person in the same situation would do so.

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff]'s harm was caused, in whole or in part, by [name of plaintiff]'s negligence in failing to [follow [name of defendant]'s instructions] [seek medical assistance]. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] did not use reasonable care in [following [name of defendant]'s instructions] [seeking medical assistance]; and
- 2. That [name of plaintiff]'s failure to [follow [name of defendant]'s instructions] [seek medical assistance] was a substantial factor in causing [his/her] harm.

New September 2003

It is error to give this type of instruction absent evidence that the patient was contributorily negligent. (LeMons v. Regents of University of California (1978) 21 Cal.3d 869, 874 [148 Cal.Rptr. 355, 582 P.2d 946].) At least one court has held that it is error to give this kind of instruction absent expert testimony that the plaintiff was negligent. (Bolen v. Woo (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 944, 952 [158 Cal.Rptr. 454] .)

Read this instruction in conjunction with basic comparative fault and damages instructions (CACI Nos. 405, 406, and 407).

■ The defendant has the burden of proving that the plaintiff was contributorily negligent and that this negligence was a cause of the harm. (Maertins v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1958) 162 Cal.App.2d 661, 666-667 [328 P.2d 494] .)

■ Mere refusal to follow instructions is not sufficient to show contributory negligence or failure to mitigate damages. The failure must be unreasonable. (Dodds v. Stellar (1946) 77 Cal.App.2d 411, 422-423 [175 P.2d 607] .)

■ The issues of contributory negligence and mitigation of damages can become confused in cases involving a patient's failure to follow instructions. (LeMons, supra, 21 Cal.3d at pp. 874 -875.) However, because contributory negligence is no longer a complete bar to recovery, the distinction may be less critical today.

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 518

CACI 518 Medical Malpractice: Res ipsa loquitur

In this case, [name of plaintiff] may prove that [name of defendant]'s negligence caused [his/her] harm if [he/she] proves all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff]'s harm ordinarily would not have occurred unless someone was negligent [In deciding this issue, you must consider [only] the testimony of the expert witnesses];
- 2. That the harm occurred while [name of plaintiff] was under the care and control of [name of defendant]; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff]'s voluntary actions did not cause or contribute to the event[s] that harmed [him/her].

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] did not prove one or more of these three things, then [insert one of the following]

[your verdict must be for [name of defendant].]

[you must decide whether [name of defendant] was negligent in light of the other instructions I have read.]

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] proved all of these three things, you may, but are not required to, find that [name of defendant] was negligent or that [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm, or both.

You must carefully consider the evidence presented by both [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] before you make your decision. You should not decide in favor of [name of plaintiff] unless you believe, after weighing all of the evidence, that it is more likely than not that [name of defendant] was negligent and that [his/her] negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm

New September 2003

The bracketed sentence in element 1 should be read only if expert testimony is introduced. The word "only" within that sentence is to be used only in those cases where the court has determined that the issue of the defendant's negligence involves matters beyond common knowledge.

In the second paragraph, the first bracketed option is to be used when plaintiff is relying solely on a res ipsa loquitur theory and has introduced no other evidence of defendant's negligence. The second option is to be used when plaintiff has introduced other evidence of defendant's negligence.

"It follows that where part of the facts basic to the application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is established as a matter of law but that others are not, the court should instruct that application of the doctrine by the jury depends only upon the existence of the basic facts not conclusively established." (Rimmele v. Northridge Hospital Foundation (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 123, 130 [120 Cal.Rptr. 39] .)

■ "In California, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is defined by statute as 'a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence.' The presumption arises when the evidence satisfies three conditions: '(1) the accident must be of a kind which ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence; (2) it must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of the defendant; (3) it must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff.'" ' A presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence 'require[s] the trier of fact to assume the existence of the presumed fact' unless the defendant introduces evidence to the contrary. The presumed fact, in this context, is that 'a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant. ...' If the defendant introduces 'evidence which would support a finding that he was not negligent or that any negligence on his part was not a proximate cause of the occurrence,' the trier of fact determines whether defendant was negligent without regard to the presumption, simply by weighing the evidence." (Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 Cal.4th 820, 825-826 [15 Cal.Rptr.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Stated less mechanically, a plaintiff suing in a personal injury action is entitled to the benefit of res ipsa loquitur when: 'the accident is of such a nature that it can be said, in the light of past experience, that it probably was the result of negligence by someone and that the defendant is probably the person who is responsible.'" (Rimmele, supra, 46 Cal.App.3d at p. 129 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Evidence Code section 646(c) provides:

If the evidence, or facts otherwise established, would support a res ipsa loquitur presumption and the defendant has introduced evidence which would support a finding that he was not negligent or that any negligence on his part was not a proximate cause of the occurrence, the court may, and upon request shall, instruct the jury to the effect that:

(1) If the facts which would give rise to a res ipsa loquitur presumption are found or otherwise established, the jury may draw the inference from such facts that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant; and

(2) The jury shall not find that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant unless the jury believes, after weighing all the evidence in the case and drawing such inferences therefrom as the jury believes are warranted, that it is more probable than not that the occurrence was caused by some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant.

■ Under Evidence Code section 604, a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence "require[s] the trier of fact to assume the existence of the presumed fact" unless the defendant introduces evidence to the contrary. Here, the presumed fact is that "a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant." (Evid. Code, § 646(c)(1); Brown, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 826 .)

■ "The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is fundamentally a doctrine predicated upon inference deducible from circumstantial evidence." (Hale v. Venuto (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 910, 918 [187 Cal.Rptr. 357] .)

■ The doctrine "is based on a theory of 'probability' where there is no direct evidence of defendant's conduct, permitting a common sense inference of negligence from the happening of the accident." (Gicking v. Kimberlin (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 73, 75 [215 Cal.Rptr. 834] .)

■ "All of the cases hold, in effect, that it must appear, either as a matter of common experience or from evidence in the case, that the accident is of a type which probably would not happen unless someone was negligent." (Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 Cal.2d 436, 442-443 [247 P.2d 344] .)

■ "In determining the applicability of res ipsa loquitur, courts have relied on both expert testimony and common knowledge. The standard of care in a professional negligence case can be proved only by expert testimony unless the conduct required by the particular circumstances is within the common knowledge of the layperson." (Blackwell v. Hurst (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 939, 943 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 209] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur and this common knowledge exception, it is proper to instruct the jury that it can infer negligence from the happening of the accident itself, if it finds based on common knowledge, the testimony of physicians called as expert witnesses, and all the circumstances, that the injury was more likely than not the result of negligence." (Gannon v. Elliot (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 1, 6 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 86] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The fact that a particular injury rarely occurs does not in itself justify an inference of negligence unless some other evidence indicates negligence. To justify res ipsa loquitur instructions, appellant must have produced sufficient evidence to permit the jury to make the necessary decision. He must have presented 'some substantial evidence which, if believed by the jury, would entitle it to draw an inference of negligence from the happening of the accident itself.' " (Blackwell, supra, 46 Cal.App.4th at p. 944 , internal citations omitted.)

■ The purpose of the second "control" requirement is to "link the defendant with the probability, already established, that the accident was negligently caused." (Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal.3d 351, 362 [124 Cal.Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] .) The control requirement is not absolute. (Zentz, supra, 39 Cal.2d at p. 443 .)

■ "The purpose of [the third] requirement, like that of control by the defendant is to establish that the defendant is the one probably responsible for the accident. The plaintiff need not show that he was entirely inactive at the time of the accident in order to satisfy this requirement, so long as the evidence is such as to eliminate his conduct as a factor contributing to the occurrence. (Newing, supra, 15 Cal.3d at p. 363 , internal citations omitted.)

■ The third condition "should not be confused with the problem of contributory negligence, as to which defendant has the burden of proof. ... [I]ts purpose, like that of control by the defendant, is merely to assist the court in determining whether it is more probable than not that the defendant was responsible for the accident." (Zentz, supra, 39 Cal.2d at p.

444 .)

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 530A

CACI 530A Medical Battery

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] committed a medical battery. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. [That [name of defendant] performed a medical procedure without [name of plaintiff]'s consent; [or]]

[That [name of plaintiff] consented to one medical procedure, but [name of defendant] performed a substantially different medical procedure;]

2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

A patient can consent to a medical procedure by words or conduct.

Derived from former CACI No. 530, April 2007; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

Select either or both of the two bracketed options in the first element depending on the nature of the case. In a case of a conditional consent in which it is alleged that the defendant proceeded without the condition having occurred, give CACI No. 530B, Medical Battery--Conditional Consent.

Sources and Authority

■ Battery may also be found if a substantially different procedure is performed: "Where a doctor obtains consent of the patient to perform one type of treatment and subsequently performs a substantially different treatment for which consent was not obtained, there is a clear case of battery." (Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229, 239 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .)

■ "The battery theory should be reserved for those circumstances when a doctor performs an operation to which the patient has not consented. When the patient gives permission to perform one type of treatment and the doctor performs another, the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent given is present. However, when the patient consents to certain treatment and the doctor performs that treatment but an undisclosed inherent complication with a low probability occurs, no intentional deviation from the consent given appears; rather, the doctor in obtaining consent may have failed to meet his due care duty to disclose pertinent information. In that situation the action should be pleaded in negligence." (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 240 .)

■ "Our high court has made it clear that battery and lack of informed consent are separate causes of action. A claim based on lack of informed consent--which sounds in negligence--arises when the doctor performs a procedure without first adequately disclosing the risks and alternatives. In contrast, a battery is an intentional tort that occurs when a doctor performs a procedure without obtaining any consent." (Saxena v. Goffney (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 316, 324 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 469] .)

■ "Confusion may arise in the area of 'exceeding a patient's consent.' In cases where a doctor exceeds the consent and such excess surgery is found necessary due to conditions arising during an operation which endanger the patient's health or life, the consent is presumed. The surgery necessitated is proper (though exceeding specific consent) on the theory of assumed consent, were the patient made aware of the additional need." (Peddesky v. Bleiberg (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 119, 123 [59 Cal.Rptr. 294] .)

■ "Consent to medical care, including surgery, may be express or may be implied from the circumstances." (Bradford v. Winter (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 448, 454 [30 Cal.Rptr. 243] .)

■ "It is elemental that consent may be manifested by acts or conduct and need not necessarily be shown by a writing or by express words." (Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal.App.2d 33, 38-39 [224 P.2d 808] .)

■ "[T]he reason why CACI No. 530B has an explicit intent and knowledge requirement and CACI No. 530A does not is clear. The law presumes that '[w]hen the patient gives permission to perform one type of treatment and the doctor performs another, the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent given is present.' That situation is covered by CACI No. 530A." (Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal.App.4th 540, 544 [94 Cal.Rptr.3d 559] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In the absence of any definitive case law establishing whether operating on the wrong disk within inches of the correct disk is a 'substantially different procedure,' we conclude the matter is a factual question for a finder of fact to decide and at least in this instance, not one capable of being decided on demurrer." (Kaplan v. Mamelak (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 637, 647 [75 Cal.Rptr.3d 861] .)

CACI 530B Medical Battery--Conditional Consent

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] committed a medical battery. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] consented to a medical procedure, but only on the condition that [describe what had to occur before consent would be given];
2. That [name of defendant] proceeded without this condition having occurred;
3. That [name of defendant] intended to perform the procedure with knowledge that the condition had not occurred;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

A patient can consent to a medical procedure by words or conduct.

Derived from former CACI No. 530, April 2007; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a case of a conditional consent in which it is alleged that the defendant proceeded without the condition having occurred. If the claim is that the defendant proceeded without any consent or deviated from the consent given, give CACI No. 530A, Medical Battery.

Sources and Authority

■ Battery may also be found if a conditional consent is violated: "[I]t is well recognized a person may place conditions on [his or her] consent. If the actor exceeds the terms or conditions of the consent, the consent does not protect the actor from liability for the excessive act." (Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 604, 610 [278 Cal.Rptr. 900] .)

■ Battery is an intentional tort. Therefore, a claim for battery against a doctor as a violation of conditional consent requires proof that the doctor intentionally violated the condition placed on the patient's consent. (Piedra v. Dugan (2004) 123 Cal.App.4th 1483, 1498 [21 Cal.Rptr.3d 36] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he reason why CACI No. 530B has an explicit intent and knowledge requirement and CACI No. 530A does not is clear. The law presumes that '[w]hen the patient gives permission to perform one type of treatment and the doctor performs another, the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent given is present.' That situation is covered by CACI No. 530A. On the other hand, in a case involving conditional consent, the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent given cannot be presumed simply from the act itself. This is because if the intent element is not explicitly stated in the instruction, it would be possible for a jury (incorrectly) to find a doctor liable for medical battery even if it believed the doctor negligently forgot about the condition precedent." (Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal.App.4th 540, 544 [94 Cal.Rptr.3d 559] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Our high court has made it clear that battery and lack of informed consent are separate causes of action. CACI 531 Consent on Behalf of Another

In this case [name of patient] could not consent to the [insert medical procedure] because [he/she] was [insert reason--e.g., a minor/incompetent/unconscious]. In this situation, the law allows [name of authorized person] to give consent on behalf of [name of patient].

■ "If the patient is a minor or incompetent, the authority to consent is transferred to the patient's legal guardian or closest available relative." (Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229, 244 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] ; Farber v. Olkon (1953) 40 Cal.2d 503, 509 [254 P.2d 520] .)

■ Family Code section 6910 provides: "The parent, guardian, or caregiver of a minor who is a relative of the minor and who may authorize medical care and dental care under Section 6550, may authorize in writing an adult into whose care a minor has been entrusted to consent to medical care or dental care, or both, for the minor."

CHAPTER 5 California Judicial Council Medical Negligence Instructions

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 532

CACI 532 Informed Consent--Definition

A patient's consent to a medical procedure must be "informed." A patient gives an "informed consent" only after the [insert type of medical practitioner] has fully explained the proposed treatment or procedure.

[A/An] [insert type of medical practitioner] must explain the likelihood of success and the risks of agreeing to a medical procedure in language that the patient can understand. [A/An] [insert type of medical practitioner] must give the patient as much information as [he/she] needs to make an informed decision, including any risk that a reasonable person would consider important in deciding to have the proposed treatment or procedure, and any other information skilled practitioners would disclose to the patient under the same or similar circumstances. The patient must be told about any risk of death or serious injury or significant potential complications that may occur if the procedure is performed. [A/An] [insert type of medical practitioner] is not required to explain minor risks that are not likely to occur.

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, October 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction should be read in conjunction with CACI No. 533, Failure to Obtain Informed Consent--Essential Factual Elements. Do not give this instruction with CACI No. 530A, Medical Battery, or 530B, Medical Battery--Conditional Consent. (See Saxena v. Goffney (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 316, 324 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 469] .)

If the patient is a minor or is incapacitated, tailor the instruction accordingly.

Also, see CACI No. 531, Consent on Behalf of Another.

Sources and Authority

■ A physician is required to disclose "all information relevant to a meaningful decisional process." (Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229, 242 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .)

■ "When a doctor recommends a particular procedure then he or she must disclose to the patient all material information necessary to the decision to undergo the procedure, including a reasonable explanation of the procedure, its likelihood of success, the risks involved in accepting or rejecting the proposed procedure, and any other information a skilled practitioner in good standing would disclose to the patient under the same or similar circumstances." (Mathis v. Morrissey (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 332, 343 [13 Cal.Rptr.2d 819] .)

■ "A physician has a duty to inform a patient in lay terms of the dangers inherently and potentially involved in a proposed treatment." (McKinney v. Nash (1981) 120 Cal.App.3d 428, 440 [174 Cal.Rptr. 642] .)

■ Courts have observed that Cobbs created a two-part test for disclosure. "First, a physician must disclose to the patient the potential of death, serious harm, and other complications associated with a proposed procedure." (Daum v. SpineCare Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 1285, 1301 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 260] .) "Second, '[b]eyond the foregoing minimal disclosure, a doctor must also reveal to his patient such additional information as a skilled practitioner of good standing would provide under similar circumstances.' " (Id. at p. 1302, citation omitted.) The doctor has no duty to discuss minor risks inherent in common procedures when it is common knowledge that such risks are of very low incidence. (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 244 .)

■ The courts have defined "material information" as follows: "Material information is that which the physician knows or should know would be regarded as significant by a reasonable person in the patient's position when deciding to accept or reject the recommended medical procedure. To be material, a fact must also be one which is not commonly appreciated. If the physician knows or should know of a patient's unique concerns or lack of familiarity with medical procedures, this may expand the scope of required disclosure." (Truman v. Thomas (1980) 27 Cal.3d 285, 291 [165 Cal.Rptr. 308, 611 P.2d 902] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Obviously involved in the equation of materiality are countervailing factors of the seriousness and remoteness of the dangers involved in the medical procedure as well as the risks of a decision not to undergo the procedure." (McKinney, supra, 120 Cal.App.3d at p. 441 .)

■ Expert testimony is not required to establish the duty to disclose the potential of death, serious harm, and other complications. (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 244 .) Expert testimony is admissible to show what other information a skilled practitioner would have given under the circumstances. (Arato v. Avedon (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1172, 1191-1192 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 131, 858 P.2d 598] .)

■ A physician must also disclose personal interests unrelated to the patient's health, whether research or economic, that may affect his or her medical judgment. (Moore v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 120, 129-132 [271 Cal.Rptr. 146, 793 P.2d 479] , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 936 (1991) .)

■ Appellate courts have rejected a general duty of disclosure concerning a treatment or procedure a physician does not recommend. However, in some cases, "there may be evidence that would support the conclusion that a doctor should have disclosed information concerning a nonrecommended procedure." (

Vandi v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 7 Cal.App.4th 1064, 1071 [9 Cal.Rptr.2d 463] .)

■ "Our high court has made it clear that battery and lack of informed consent are separate causes of action. A claim based on lack of informed consent--which sounds in negligence--arises when the doctor performs a procedure without first adequately disclosing the risks and alternatives. In contrast, a battery is an intentional tort that occurs when a doctor performs a procedure without obtaining any consent." (Saxena, supra, 159 Cal.App.4th at p. 324 .)

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 533

CACI 533 Failure to Obtain Informed Consent--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was negligent because [he/she] performed [a/an] [insert medical procedure] on [name of plaintiff] without first obtaining [his/her] informed consent. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] performed [a/an] [insert medical procedure] on [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] did not give [his/her] informed consent for the [insert medical procedure];
- 3. That a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would not have agreed to the [insert medical procedure] if he or she had been fully informed of the results and risks of [and alternatives to] the procedure; and
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed by a result or risk that [name of defendant] should have explained before the [insert medical procedure] was performed.

New September 2003

This instruction should be read in conjunction with CACI No. 532, Informed Consent--Definition.

If the patient is a minor or is incapacitated, tailor the instruction accordingly.

Also, see CACI No. 531, Consent on Behalf of Another.

■ A physician's duty of reasonable disclosure for purposes of consent to a proposed medical procedure was established in Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .

■ On causation: "There must be a causal relationship between the physician's failure to inform and the injury to the plaintiff. Such causal connection arises only if it is established that had revelation been made consent to treatment would not have been given." (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 245 .)

■ A doctor generally does not have a duty to disclose information concerning non-recommended procedures. (Vandi v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 7 Cal.App.4th 1064, 1071 [9 Cal.Rptr.2d 463] .) However, a doctor must make "such disclosures as are required for competent practice within the medical community." (Ibid.)

■ The objective test is whether a reasonable person in plaintiff's position would have refused consent if he or she had been fully informed. (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 245 .) However, the defendant can seek to prove that this particular plaintiff still would have consented even if properly informed (as an affirmative defense). (Warren v. Schechter (1997) 57 Cal.App.4th 1189, 1206 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 573] .)

■ "[A]n action for failure to obtain informed consent lies where 'an undisclosed inherent complication ... occurs,' not where a disclosed complication occurs." (Warren, supra, 57 Cal.App.4th at p. 1202 (citation omitted).)

[Name of defendant] claims that even if a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position might not have consented to the [insert medical procedure] if he or she had been given enough information about its risks, [name of plaintiff] still would have consented to the procedure.

If you decide [name of defendant] has proved that [name of plaintiff] would have consented, you must conclude that [his/her] failure to inform [name of plaintiff] of the risks was not a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

"Whenever appropriate, the court should instruct the jury on the defenses available to a doctor who has failed to make the disclosure required by law." (Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229, 245 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .)

This instruction could be modified to cover "informed refusal" cases by redrafting it to state, in substance, that even if the plaintiff had known of the risks of refusal, he or she still would have refused the test.

- The objective test is whether a reasonable person in plaintiff's position would have refused consent if he or she had been fully informed. (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 245 .) 2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 553

CACI 553 Affirmative Defense--Emotional State of Patient

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] did not have to inform [name of plaintiff] of the risks of the [insert medical procedure]. [A/An] [insert type of medical practitioner] does not have to provide information about risks if the information will so seriously upset the patient that the patient will not be able to reasonably consider the risks of refusing to have the medical procedure.

If [name of defendant] has proved that [name of plaintiff] would have been so seriously upset by being told of the risks that [he/she] would not have been able to reasonably consider the risks of refusing to have the [insert medical procedure], then [name of defendant] was not required to inform [name of plaintiff] of the risks.

New September 2003

"Whenever appropriate, the court should instruct the jury on the defenses available to a doctor who has failed to make the disclosure required by law." (Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229, 245 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .) This instruction could be modified to cover "informed refusal" cases by redrafting it to state, in substance, that the information regarding the risks of refusing the test would have seriously upset the patient.

- "A disclosure need not be made beyond that required within the medical community when a doctor can prove by a preponderance of the evidence he relied upon facts which would demonstrate to a reasonable man the disclosure would have so seriously upset the patient that the patient would not have been able to dispassionately weigh the risks of refusing to undergo the recommended treatment." (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 246 .)

■ This defense is considered a "justification." Justification for failure to disclose is an affirmative defense on which the defendant has the burden of proof. (Mathis v. Morrissey (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 332, 347, fn. 9 [13 Cal.Rptr.2d 819] .)

CACI 554 Affirmative Defense--Emergency

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] did not have to obtain [name of patient/authorized person]'s informed consent to the [insert medical procedure] because an emergency existed.

To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] reasonably believed the [insert medical procedure] had to be done immediately in order to preserve the life or health of [name of patient]; and

2. That [insert one or more of the following:]

[[name of patient] was unconscious] [or]

[there was not enough time to inform [name of patient]] [or]

[there was not enough time to get consent from an authorized person].

"Whenever appropriate, the court should instruct the jury on the defenses available to a doctor who has failed to make the disclosure required by law." (Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal.3d 229, 245 [104 Cal.Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .) This instruction could be modified to cover "informed refusal" cases by redrafting it to state, in substance, that the emergency situation made it impossible to inform the patient regarding the risks of refusing the test.

■ Consent is implied in an emergency situation. (Cobbs, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 243 .)

■ Business and Professions Code sections 2397(a) and 1627.7(a) provide that a medical practitioner shall not be liable for injury caused in emergency situations by reason of the failure to inform if: (1) the patient was unconscious, (2) there was not enough time to inform the patient, or (3) there was not enough time to get consent from an authorized person.

■ This defense is considered a "justification." Justification for failure to disclose is an affirmative defense on which the defendant has the burden of proof. (Mathis v. Morrissey (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 332, 347, fn. 9 [13 Cal.Rptr.2d 819] .)

2-5 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 555

CACI 555 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--One-Year Limit (Code Civ. Proc., § 340.5)

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that before [insert date one year before date of filing], [name of plaintiff] discovered, or knew of facts that would have caused a reasonable person to suspect, that [he/she] had suffered harm that was caused by someone's wrongful conduct.

[If, however, [name of plaintiff] proves [insert tolling provision(s) of general applicability, e.g., Code Civ. Proc., §§ 351 [absence from California], 352 [insanity], 352.1 [prisoners], 352.5 [restitution orders], 353.1 [court's assumption of attorney's practice], 354 [war], 356 [injunction]], the period within which [name of plaintiff] had to file the lawsuit is extended for the amount of time that [insert tolling provision, e.g., [name of defendant] was absent from California].]

New April 2009

Directions for Use

Use CACI No. 556, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--Three-Year Limit, if the three-year limitation provision is at issue.

If the notice of intent to sue required by Code of Civil Procedure section 364 is served within 90 days of the date on which the statute of limitations will run, the statute of limitations is tolled for 90 days beyond the end of the limitations period. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 364; Woods v. Young (1991) 53 Cal.3d 315, 325-326 [279 Cal.Rptr. 613, 807 P.2d 455] .) Adjust the "date one year before the date of filing" in the instruction accordingly. If there is an issue of fact with regard to compliance with the requirements of section 364, the instruction may need to be modified accordingly.

Give the optional last paragraph if there is a question of fact concerning a tolling provision from the Code of Civil Procedure. If so, the verdict form should ask the jury to find (1) the "discovery" date (the date on which the plaintiff discovered or knew of facts that would have caused a reasonable person to suspect that he or she had suffered harm that was caused by someone's wrongful conduct); (2) whether the tolling provision applies; and (3) if so, for what period of time. The court can then add the additional time to the discovery date and determine whether the action is timely.

Contrary to the otherwise applicable rule (see CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery), the defendant has been given the burden of proving that the plaintiff discovered or should have discovered the facts alleged to constitute the defendant's wrongdoing more than one year before filing the action. (See Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal.4th 1, 8-10 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701] [construing structurally similar Code Civ. Proc., § 340.6, on legal malpractice, to place burden regarding delayed discovery on the defendant and disapproving Burton v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1979) 93 Cal.App.3d 813 [155 Cal.Rptr. 763], which had reached the opposite result under Code Civ. Proc., § 340.5].) See also CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 340.5 provides:

In an action for injury or death against a health care provider based upon such person's alleged professional negligence, the time for the commencement of action shall be three years after the date of injury or one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the injury, whichever occurs first. In no event shall the time for commencement of legal action exceed three years unless tolled for any of the following: (1) upon proof of fraud, (2) intentional concealment, or (3) the presence of a foreign body, which has no therapeutic or diagnostic purpose or effect, in the person of the injured person. Actions by a minor shall be commenced within three years from the date of the alleged wrongful act except that actions by a minor under the full age of six years shall be commenced within three years or prior to his eighth birthday whichever provides a longer period. Such time limitation shall be tolled for minors for any period during which parent or guardian and defendant's insurer or health care provider have committed fraud or collusion in the failure to bring an action on behalf of the injured minor for professional negligence.

For the purposes of this section:

- (1) "Health care provider" means any person licensed or certified pursuant to Division 2 (commencing with Section 500) of the Business and Professions Code, or licensed pursuant to the Osteopathic Initiative Act, or the Chiropractic Initiative Act, or licensed pursuant to Chapter 2.5 (commencing with Section 1440) of Division 2 of the Health and Safety Code and any clinic, health dispensary, or health facility, licensed pursuant to Division 2 (commencing with Section 1200) of the Health and Safety Code. "Health care provider" includes the legal representatives of a health care provider;
- (2) "Professional negligence" means a negligent act or omission to act by a health care provider in the rendering of professional services, which act or omission is the proximate cause of a personal injury or wrongful death, provided that such services are within the scope of services for which the provider is licensed and which are not within any restriction imposed by the licensing agency or licensed hospital.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 364(a) provides:

No action based upon the health care provider's professional negligence may be commenced unless the defendant has been given at least 90 days' prior notice of the intention to commence the action.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 364(d) provides:

If the notice is served within 90 days of the expiration of the applicable statute of limitations, the time for the commencement of the action shall be extended 90 days from the service of the notice.

■ "[T]he Jolly [Jolly v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1103, 1109 [245 Cal.Rptr. 658, 751 P.2d 923]] analysis applies to section 340.5: 'The one-year period [section 340.5] commences when the plaintiff is aware of both the physical manifestation of the injury and its negligent cause.' [P] 'Our Supreme Court has often discussed the one-year rule's requirement of discovery of the negligent cause of injury. When a plaintiff has information which would put a reasonable person on inquiry, when a plaintiff's "reasonably founded suspicions [have been] aroused" and the plaintiff has "become alerted to the necessity for investigation and pursuit of her remedies," the one-year period commences. "Possession of 'presumptive' as well as 'actual' knowledge will commence the running of the statute." ' ' ' (Dolan v. Borelli (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 816, 823 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 714] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We see no reason to apply the second sentence of section 340.5 to the one-year period it does not mention, in addition to the three-year period it does mention. The general purpose of MICRA does not require us to expand that sentence beyond its language." (Belton v. Bowers Ambulance Serv. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 928, 934 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 107, 978 P.2d 591] [Code Civ. Proc., § 352.1, which tolls statutes of limitation for prisoners, applies to extend one-year period of Code Civ. Proc., § 340.5].)

■ "The implications of Belton's analysis for our case here is inescapable. Like tolling the statute of limitations for confined prisoners under section 352.1, tolling under section 351 for a defendant's absence from California is of general applicability [and therefore extends the one-year period of Code of Civil Procedure section 340.5]. (For other general tolling provisions, see § 352 [minors or insanity]; § 352.5 [restitution orders]; § 353.1 [court's assumption of attorney's practice]; § 354 [war]; § 356 [injunction].)" (Kaplan v. Mamelak (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 637, 643 [75 Cal.Rptr.3d 861] .)

■ "[A] plaintiff's minority as such does not toll the limitations period of section 340.5. When the Legislature added the separate statute of limitations for minors to section 340.5 in 1975, it clearly intended that the general provision for tolling of statutes of limitation during a person's minority (§ 352, subd. (a)(1)) should no longer apply to medical malpractice actions." (Steketee v. Lintz (1985) 38 Cal.3d 46, 53 [210 Cal.Rptr 781, 694 P.2d 1153] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Section 340.5 creates two separate statutes of limitations, both of which must be satisfied if a plaintiff is to timely file a medical malpractice action. First, the plaintiff must file within one year after she first 'discovers' the injury and the negligent cause of that injury. Secondly, she must file within three years after she first experiences harm from the injury. This means that if a plaintiff does not 'discover' the negligent cause of her injury until more than three years after she first experiences harm from the injury, she will not be able to bring a malpractice action against the medical practitioner or hospital whose malpractice caused her injury." (Ashworth v. Mem'l Hosp. (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 1046, 1054 [254 Cal.Rptr. 104] , original italics.)

■ "That legislative purpose [re: Code Civ. Proc., § 364] is best effectuated by construing section 364(d) as tolling the one-year statute of limitations when section 364(a)'s ninety-day notice of intent to sue is served during, but not before, the last ninety days of the one-year limitations period. Because the statute of limitations is tolled for 90 days and not merely extended by 90 days from the date of service of the notice, this construction results in a period of 1 year and 90 days in which to file the lawsuit. In providing for a waiting period of at least 90 days before suit can be brought, this construction achieves the legislative objective of encouraging negotiated resolutions of disputes." the period within which [name of plaintiff] had to file the lawsuit is extended for the amount of time that [insert tolling provision, e.g., [name of defendant] intentionally concealed the facts].]

New April 2009

Use CACI No. 555, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Medical Malpractice--One-Year Limit, if the one-year limitation provision is at issue.

If no tolling provision from Code of Civil Procedure section 340.5 is at issue, read only the first paragraph. Read the rest of the instruction if there is a question of fact concerning a tolling provision. If so, the verdict form should ask the jury to find (1) the date on which the alleged injury occurred; (2) whether the tolling provision applies; and (3) if so, for what period of time. The court can then add the additional time to the date of injury and determine whether the action is timely.

If the notice of intent to sue required by Code of Civil Procedure section 364 is served within 90 days of the date on which the statute of limitations will run, the statute of limitations is tolled for 90 days beyond the end of the limitation period. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 364; Russell v. Stanford Univ. Hosp. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 783, 789-790 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 97, 937 P.2d 640] .) If there is an issue of fact with regard to compliance with the requirements of section 364, the instruction may need to be modified accordingly.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 340.5 provides:

In an action for injury or death against a health care provider based upon such person's alleged professional negligence, the time for the commencement of action shall be three years after the date of injury or one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the injury, whichever occurs first. In no event shall the time for commencement of legal action exceed three years unless tolled for any of the following: (1) upon proof of fraud, (2) intentional concealment, or (3) the presence of a foreign body, which has no therapeutic or diagnostic purpose or effect, in the person of the injured person. Actions by a minor shall be commenced within three years from the date of the alleged wrongful act except that actions by a minor under the full age of six years shall be commenced within three years or prior to his eighth birthday whichever provides a longer period. Such time limitation shall be tolled for minors for any period during which parent or guardian and defendant's insurer or health care provider have committed fraud or collusion in the failure to bring an action on behalf of the injured minor for professional negligence.

For the purposes of this section:

(1) "Health care provider" means any person licensed or certified pursuant to Division 2 (commencing with Section 500) of the Business and Professions Code, or licensed pursuant to the Osteopathic Initiative Act, or the Chiropractic Initiative Act, or licensed pursuant to Chapter 2.5 (commencing with Section 1440) of Division 2 of the Health and Safety Code and any clinic, health dispensary, or health facility, licensed pursuant to Division 2 (commencing with Section 1200) of the Health and Safety Code. "Health care provider" includes the legal representatives of a health care provider;

(2) "Professional negligence" means a negligent act or omission to act by a health care provider in the rendering of professional services, which act or omission is the proximate cause of a personal injury or wrongful death, provided that such services are within the scope of services for which the provider is licensed and which are not within any restriction imposed by the licensing agency or licensed hospital.

■ "No tolling provision outside of MICRA can extend the three-year maximum time period that section 340.5 establishes." (Belton v. Bowers Ambulance Serv. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 928, 931 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 107, 978 P.2d 591] ; see also Fogarty v. Superior Court (1981) 117 Cal.App.3d 316, 319-321 [172 Cal.Rptr. 594] [Code Civ. Proc., § 352 does not toll statute for insanity].)

■ "The three-year limitations period of section 340.5 provides an outer limit which terminates all malpractice liability and it commences to run when the patient is aware of the physical manifestation of her injury without regard to awareness of the negligent cause." (Hills v. Aronsohn (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 753, 760 [199 Cal.Rptr. 816] .)

■ "Section 340.5 creates two separate statutes of limitations, both of which must be satisfied if a plaintiff is to timely file a medical malpractice action. First, the plaintiff must file within one year after she first 'discovers' the injury and the negligent cause of that injury. Secondly, she must file within three years after she first experiences harm from the injury. This means that if a plaintiff does not 'discover' the negligent cause of her injury until more than three years after she first experiences harm from the injury, she will not be able to bring a malpractice action against the medical practitioner or hospital whose malpractice caused her injury." (Ashworth v. Mem'l Hosp. (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 1046, 1054 [254 Cal.Rptr. 104] , original italics.)

■ "The same considerations of legislative intent that compelled us, in [Woods v. Young (1991) 53 Cal.3d 315, 325-326 [279 Cal.Rptr. 613, 807 P.2d 455]] , to construe Code of Civil Procedure section 364, subdivision (d), as 'tolling' the one-year limitations period also apply to the three-year limitation. Unless the limitations period is so construed, the legislative purpose of reducing the cost and increasing the efficiency of medical malpractice litigation by, among other things, encouraging negotiated resolution of disputes will be frustrated. Moreover, a plaintiff's attorney who gives notice within the last 90 days of the 3-year limitations period will confront the dilemma we addressed in Woods, i.e., a choice between preserving the plaintiff's cause of action by violating the 90-day notice period under Code of Civil Procedure section 364, subdivision (d)--thereby invoking potential disciplinary proceedings by the State Bar--and forfeiting the client's cause of action. In the absence of tolling, the practical effect of the statute would be to shorten the statutory limitations period from three years to two years and nine months. As in the case of the one-year limitation, we discern no legislative intent to do so." (Russell, supra, 15 Cal.4th at pp. 789-790 .)

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 500, Essential Factual Elements.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 3. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Professional Negligence Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 600 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- The standard of care in professional negligence cases [CACI No. 600].
- Damages available for the negligent handling of a legal matter [CACI No. 601].
- That success is not required [CACI No. 602].
- Alternative legal decisions or strategies [CACI No. 603].
- Referral to a legal specialist [CACI No. 604].
- In a legal malpractice action for a criminal conviction, the requirement to find actual innocence in the underlying action [CACI No. 606].
- Statute of limitations defenses in cases of attorney malpractice [CACI Nos. 610, 611].

CHAPTER 6 California Judicial Council Professional Negligence Instructions

2-6 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 600

CACI 600 Standard of Care

[A/An] [insert type of professional] is negligent if [he/she] fails to use the skill and care that a reasonably careful [insert type of professional] would have used in similar circumstances. This level of skill, knowledge, and care is sometimes referred to as "the standard of care."

[You must determine the level of skill and care that a reasonably careful [insert type of professional] would use in similar circumstances based only on the testimony of the expert witnesses[, including [name of defendant],] who have testified in this case.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, December 2007

Directions for Use

Use this instruction for all professional negligence cases other than professional medical negligence, for which CACI No. 501, Standard of Care for Health Care Professionals, should be used. See CACI No. 400, Essential Factual Elements (Negligence), for an instruction on the plaintiff's burden of proof. The word "legal" or "professional" should be added before the word "negligence" in the first paragraph of CACI No. 400. (See Sources and Authority following CACI No. 500, Essential Factual Elements (Medical Negligence).)

Read the second paragraph if the standard of care must be established by expert testimony.

See CACI Nos. 219 -221 on evaluating the credibility of expert witnesses.

If the defendant is a specialist in his or her field, this instruction should be modified to reflect that the defendant is held to the standard of care of a specialist. (Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 802, 810 [121 Cal.Rptr. 194] .) The standard of care for claims related to a specialist's expertise is determined by expert testimony. (Id. at pp. 810-811 .)

Whether an attorney-client relationship exists is a question of law. (Responsible Citizens v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1717, 1733 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 756] .) If the evidence bearing upon this decision is in conflict, preliminary factual determinations are necessary. (Ibid.) Special instructions may need to be crafted for that purpose.

Sources and Authority

■ The elements of a cause of action in tort for professional negligence are "(1) the duty of the professional to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of his profession commonly possess and exercise; (2) a breach of that duty; (3) a proximate causal connection between the negligent conduct and the resulting injury; and (4) actual loss or damage resulting from the professional's negligence." (Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal.3d 195, 200 [98 Cal.Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] ; Carlton v. Quint (2000) 77 Cal.App.4th 690, 699 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 844] .)

■ " 'In addressing breach of duty, 'the crucial inquiry is whether [the attorney's] advice was so legally deficient when it was given that he [or she] may be found to have failed to use 'such skill, prudence, and diligence as lawyers of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise in the performance of the tasks which they undertake.' ... " ' ' ' (Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 336, 357 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 710] .)

■ "[T]he issue of negligence in a legal malpractice case is ordinarily an issue of fact." (Blanks, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at p. 376 .)

■ "It is well settled that an attorney is liable for malpractice when his negligent investigation, advice, or conduct of the client's affairs results in loss of the client's meritorious claim." (Gutierrez v. Mofid (1985) 39 Cal.3d 892, 900 [218 Cal.Rptr. 313, 705 P.2d 886] .)

■ "The standard is that of members of the profession 'in the same or a similar locality under similar circumstances'... . The duty encompasses both a knowledge of law and an obligation of diligent research and informed judgment." (Wright, supra, 47 Cal.App.3d at p. 802 , internal citations omitted; but see Avivi v. Centro Medico Urgente Medical Center (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 463, 470-471 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 707] [geographical location may be a factor to be considered, but, by itself, does not provide a practical basis for measuring similar circumstances].)

■ Rules of Professional Conduct, rule 3-110 (Failing to Act Competently) provides:

(A) A member shall not intentionally, recklessly, or repeatedly fail to perform legal services with competence.

(B) For purposes of this rule, "competence" in any legal service shall mean to apply the 1) diligence, 2) learning and skill, and 3) mental, emotional, and physical ability reasonably necessary for the performance of such service.

(C) If a member does not have sufficient learning and skill when the legal service is undertaken, the member may nonetheless perform such services competently by 1) associating with or, where appropriate, professionally consulting another lawyer reasonably believed to be competent, or 2) by acquiring sufficient learning and skill before performance is required.

■ Lawyers who hold themselves out as specialists "must exercise the skill, prudence, and diligence exercised by other specialists of ordinary skill and capacity specializing in the same field." (Wright, supra, 47 Cal.App.3d at p. 810 .) The standard of care for claims related to a specialist's expertise is determined by expert testimony. (Id. at pp. 810-811.)

■ If the failure to exercise due care is so clear that a trier of fact may find professional negligence without expert assistance, then expert testimony is not required: " 'In other words, if the attorney's negligence is readily apparent from the facts of the case, then the testimony of an expert may not be necessary.' " (Stanley v. Richmond (1995) 35 Cal.App.4th 1070, 1093 [41 Cal.Rptr.2d 768] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 6 California Judicial Council Professional Negligence Instructions

2-6 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 601

CACI 601 Damages for Negligent Handling of Legal Matter

To recover damages from [name of defendant], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/it] would have obtained a better result if [name of defendant] had acted as a reasonably careful attorney.

New September 2003

In Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 820 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 780], the trial-within-a-trial method was applied to accountants. In cases involving professionals other than attorneys, this instruction would need to be modified by inserting the type of the professional in place of "attorney."

The issue of collectibility does not apply to every legal malpractice action: "It is only where the alleged malpractice consists of mishandling a client's claim that the plaintiff must show proper prosecution of the matter would have resulted in a favorable judgment and collection thereof." (DiPalma v. Seldman (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1499, 1506 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 219] .)

- "If the allegedly negligent conduct does not cause damage, it generates no cause of action in tort. [Citations.] The mere breach of a professional duty, causing only nominal damages, speculative harm, or the threat of future harm--not yet realized--does not suffice to create a cause of action for negligence." (Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal.3d 195, 200 [98 Cal.Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] ; Jordache Enterprises, Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal.4th 739, 749-750 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] .)

- The trial-within-a-trial method "is the most effective safeguard yet devised against speculative and conjectural claims in this era of ever expanding litigation. It is a standard of proof designed to limit damages to those actually caused by a professional's malfeasance." (Mattco Forge, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 834 .)

■ "For the reasons given above, we conclude that, just as in litigation malpractice actions, a plaintiff in a transactional malpractice action must show that but for the alleged malpractice, it is more likely than not that the plaintiff would have obtained a more favorable result." (Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal.4th 1232, 1244 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046] , original italics.)

■ To prove damages in a legal malpractice action, plaintiff must show the probable value of the lawsuit that he or she has lost. Plaintiff must also prove that careful management of his or her claim would have resulted in a favorable judgment and collection of it. (Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 751, 754 [8 Cal.Rptr. 32] .) There is no damage in the absence of these latter elements. (DiPalma, supra, 27 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1506-1507 .)

■ "Because of the legal malpractice, the original target is out of range; thus, the misperforming attorney must stand in and submit to being the target instead of the former target which the attorney negligently permitted to escape. This is the essence of the case-within-a-case doctrine." (Arciniega v. Bank of San Bernardino (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 213, 231 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 495] .)

■ The measure of damages in a case predicated on legal malpractice "is the difference between what was recovered and what would have been recovered but for the attorney's wrongful act or omission. ... [I]f a reasonably competent attorney would have obtained a $3 million recovery for the client but the negligent attorney obtained only a $2 million recovery, the client's damage due to the attorney's negligence would be $1 million--the difference between what a competent attorney would have obtained and what the negligent attorney obtained." (Norton v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 1750, 1758 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 217] .)

■ "The trial-within-a-trial method does not "recreate what a particular judge or fact finder would have done. Rather, the jury's task is to determine what a reasonable judge or fact finder would have done" ... Even though "should" and "would" are used interchangeably by the courts, the standard remains an objective one. The trier of fact determines what should have been, not what the result would have been, or could have been, or might have been, had the matter been before a particular judge or jury. ..." (Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 336, 357 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 710] , original italics.)

■ "If the underlying issue originally was a factual question that would have gone to a tribunal rather than a judge, it is the jury who must decide what a reasonable tribunal would have done. The identity or expertise of the original trier of fact (i.e., a judge or an arbitrator or another type of adjudicator) does not alter the jury's responsibility in the legal malpractice trial-within-a-trial." (Blanks, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at pp. 357-358 .)

CHAPTER 6 California Judicial Council Professional Negligence Instructions

2-6 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 602

CACI 602 Success Not Required

[A/An] [insert type of professional] is not necessarily negligent just because [his/her] efforts are unsuccessful or [he/she] makes an error that was reasonable under the circumstances. [A/An] [insert type of professional] is negligent only if [he/she] was not as skillful, knowledgeable, or careful as other reasonable [insert type of professional] would have been in similar circumstances.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

Use this instruction for all professional negligence cases other than professional medical negligence, for which CACI No. 505, Success Not Required, should be used.

Sources and Authority

■ "The services of experts are sought because of their special skill. They have a duty to exercise the ordinary skill and competence of members of their profession, and a failure to discharge that duty will subject them to liability for negligence. Those who hire such persons are not justified in expecting infallibility, but can expect only reasonable care and competence. They purchase service, not insurance." (Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal.2d 481, 489 [275 P.2d 15] .)

■ "This rule [of Gagne v. Bertran, supra] has been consistently followed in this state with respect to professional services (Roberts v. Karr, 178 Cal.App.2d 535 [3 Cal.Rptr. 98] (surveyor); Gautier v. General Telephone Co., 234 Cal.App.2d 302 [44 Cal.Rptr. 404] (communications services); Bonadiman-McCain, Inc. v. Snow, 183 Cal.App.2d 58 [6 Cal.Rptr. 52] (engineer); Lindner v. Barlow,

■ "The attorney is not liable for every mistake he may make in his practice; he is not, in the absence of an express agreement, an insurer of the soundness of his opinions or of the validity of an instrument that he is engaged to draft; and he is not liable for being in error as to a question of law on which reasonable doubt may be entertained by well-informed lawyers." (Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal.2d 583, 591 [15 Cal.Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] , cert. denied (1962) 368 U.S. 987 [82 S.Ct. 603, 7 L.Ed.2d 525] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Jury instructions stating this principle are proper: "[A]n attorney does not ordinarily guarantee the soundness of his opinions and, accordingly, is not liable for every mistake he may make in his practice. He is expected, however, to possess knowledge of those plain and elementary principles of law which are commonly known by well informed attorneys, and to discover those additional rules of law which, although not commonly known, may readily be found by standard research techniques." (Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal.3d 349, 358 [118 Cal.Rptr. 621, 530 P.2d 589] , overruled in part on other grounds in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal.3d 838, 851 [126 Cal.Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .)

■ "In order to prevail on this theory and escape a negligence finding, an attorney must show that there were unsettled or debatable areas of the law that were the subject of the legal advice rendered and this advice was based upon 'reasonable research in an effort to ascertain relevant legal principles and to make an informed decision as to a course of conduct based upon an intelligent assessment of the problem.' " (Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 336, 378-379 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 710] .)

CACI 606 Legal Malpractice Causing Criminal Conviction--Actual Innocence

[Name of plaintiff] alleges that [name of defendant] was negligent in defending [him/her] in a criminal case, and as a result, [he/she] was wrongly convicted. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must first prove that [he/she] was actually innocent of the charges for which [he/she] was convicted.

New April 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction after CACI No. 400, Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 600, Standard of Care, in a legal malpractice action arising from an underlying criminal case.

To prove actual innocence, the plaintiff must first prove legal exoneration. (See Coscia v. McKenna & Cuneo (2001) 25 Cal.4th 1194, 1201 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 471, 25 P.3d 670] .) Presumably, exoneration will be decided by the court as a matter of law. If there is a question of fact regarding exoneration, this instruction should be modified accordingly.

However, one may be exonerated without actually being innocent of the charges; for example, by the People's decision not to retry the case on remand because of insufficient evidence. (See Coscia, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 1205 [exoneration is prerequisite to proving actual innocence (emphasis added)].) Do not give this instruction if the court determines as a matter of law that the exoneration does establish actual innocence; for example, if later-discovered DNA evidence conclusively proved that the plaintiff could not have committed the offense.

Sources and Authority

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 340.6(a) provides in part: "If the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal charge as an element of his or her claim, the action shall be commenced within two years after the plaintiff achieves postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case."

■ "In a legal malpractice action arising from a civil proceeding, the elements are (1) the duty of the attorney to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as members of his or her profession commonly possess and exercise; (2) a breach of that duty; (3) a proximate causal connection between the breach and the resulting injury; and (4) actual loss or damage resulting from the attorney's negligence. In a legal malpractice case arising out of a criminal proceeding, California, like most jurisdictions, also requires proof of actual innocence." (Wilkinson v. Zelen (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 37, 45 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 779] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the defendant has in fact committed a crime, the remedy of a new trial or other relief is sufficient reparation in light of the countervailing public policies and considering the purpose and function of constitutional guaranties." Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal.4th 532, 543 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 672, 966 P.2d 983] .)

■ "The question of actual innocence is inherently factual. While proof of the government's inability to prove guilt may involve technical defenses and evidentiary rules, proof of actual innocence obliges the malpractice plaintiff 'to convince the civil jurors of his innocence.' Thus, the determination of actual innocence is rooted in the goal of reliable factfinding." (Salisbury v. County of Orange (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 756, 764-765 [31 Cal.Rptr.3d 831] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A]n individual convicted of a criminal offense must obtain reversal of his or her conviction, or other exoneration by postconviction relief, in order to establish actual innocence in a criminal malpractice action. ... [P]ublic policy considerations require that only an innocent person wrongly convicted be deemed to have suffered a legally compensable harm. Unless a person convicted of a criminal offense is successful in obtaining postconviction relief, the policies reviewed in Wiley [supra] preclude recovery in a legal malpractice action." (Coscia, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 1201 .)

■ "[A] plaintiff must obtain postconviction relief in the form of a final disposition of the underlying criminal case--for example, by acquittal after retrial, reversal on appeal with directions to dismiss the charges, reversal followed by the People's refusal to continue the prosecution, or a grant of habeas corpus relief--as a prerequisite to proving actual innocence in a malpractice action against former criminal defense counsel." (Coscia, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 1205 .)

■ "[T]he rationale of Wiley and Coscia requires a plaintiff in a criminal legal malpractice case to show actual innocence and postconviction exoneration on any guilty finding for a lesser included offense, even though the plaintiff alleges he received negligent representation only on the greater offense." (Sangha v. LaBarbera (2006) 146 Cal.App.4th 79, 87 [52 Cal.Rptr.3d 640] .)

■ "[Plaintiff] must be exonerated of all transactionally related offenses in order to satisfy the holding in Coscia. Because the judicially noticed facts unequivocally demonstrate that [plaintiff] plead no contest to two offenses transactionally related to the felony charge of battery on a custodial officer in order to settle the criminal action, and she was placed on probation for those offenses, she cannot in good faith plead exoneration." (Wilkinson, supra, 167 Cal.App.4th at p. 48 .)

CACI 610 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit (Code Civ. Proc., § 340.6)

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that before [insert date one year before date of filing] [name of plaintiff] knew, or with reasonable diligence should have discovered, the facts of [name of defendant]'s alleged wrongful act or omission.

[If, however, [name of plaintiff] proves

[Choose one or more of the following three options:]

[that [he/she/it] did not sustain actual injury until on or after [insert date one year before date of filing];/ or]]

[that on or after [insert date one year before date of filing] [name of defendant] continued to represent [name of plaintiff] regarding the specific subject matter in which the wrongful act or omission occurred[/; or]]

[that on or after [insert date one year before date of filing] [he/she/it] was under a legal or physical disability that restricted [his/her/its] ability to file a lawsuit[/;]

the period within which [name of plaintiff] had to file the lawsuit is extended for the amount of time that [insert tolling provision, e.g., [name of defendant] continued to represent [name of plaintiff]].]

New April 2007; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

Use CACI No. 611, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--Four-Year Limit, if the four-year limitation provision is at issue.

The court may need to define the term "actual injury" depending on the facts and circumstances of the particular case.

If no tolling provision from Code of Civil Procedure section 340.6 is at issue, read only through the end of the first paragraph. Read the rest of the instruction if there is a question of fact concerning a tolling provision. If so, the verdict form should ask the jury to find (1) the "discovery" date (the date on which the plaintiff discovered or knew of facts that would have caused a reasonable person to suspect that he or she had suffered harm that was caused by someone's wrongful conduct); (2) whether the tolling provision applies; and (3) if so, for what period of time. The court can then add the additional time to the discovery date and determine whether the action is timely.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 340.6 provides:

(a) An action against an attorney for a wrongful act or omission, other than for actual fraud, arising in the performance of professional services shall be commenced within one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission, or four years from the date of the wrongful act or omission, whichever occurs first. If the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal charge as an element of his or her claim, the action shall be commenced within two years after the plaintiff achieves postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case. Except for a claim for which the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence, in no event shall the time for commencement of legal action exceed four years except that the period shall be tolled during the time that any of the following exist:

(1) The plaintiff has not sustained actual injury;

(2) The attorney continues to represent the plaintiff regarding the specific subject matter in which the alleged wrongful act or omission occurred;

(3) The attorney willfully conceals the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission when such facts are known to the attorney, except that this subdivision shall toll only the four-year limitation; and

(4) The plaintiff is under a legal or physical disability which restricts the plaintiff's ability to commence legal action.

(b) In an action based upon an instrument in writing, the effective date of which depends upon some act or event of the future, the period of limitations provided for by this section shall commence to run upon the occurrence of that act or event.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 352 provides:

(a) If a person entitled to bring an action, mentioned in Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 335) is, at the time the cause of action accrued either under the age of majority or insane, the time of the disability is not part of the time limited for the commencement of the action.

(b) This section does not apply to an action against a public entity or public employee upon a cause of action for which a claim is required to be presented in accordance with Chapter 1 (commencing with Section 900) or Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 910) of Part 3, or Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 950) of Part 4, of Division 3.6 of Title 1 of the Government Code. This subdivision shall not apply to any claim presented to a public entity prior to January 1, 1971.

■ "Under section 340.6, the one-year limitations period commences when the plaintiff actually or constructively discovers the facts of the wrongful act or omission, but the period is tolled until the plaintiff sustains actual injury. That is to say, the statute of limitations will not run during the time the plaintiff cannot bring a cause of action for damages from professional negligence." (Jordache Enterprises, Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal.4th 739, 751 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] .)

■ "Actual injury refers only to the legally cognizable damage necessary to assert the cause of action. There is no requirement that an adjudication or settlement must first confirm a causal nexus between the attorney's error and the asserted injury. The determination of actual injury requires only a factual analysis of the claimed error and its consequences. The inquiry necessarily is more qualitative than quantitative because the fact of damage, rather than the amount, is the critical factor." (Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal.App.4th 102, 113 [103 Cal.Rptr.3d 811] .)

■ "[P]rior to the enactment of section 340.6 the running of the statute of limitations coincided with accrual of the plaintiff's malpractice cause of action, including damages. By contrast, under the provisions of section 340.6, discovery of the negligent act or omission initiates the statutory period, and the absence of injury or damages serves as a tolling factor." (Adams v. Paul (1995) 11 Cal.4th 583, 589, fn. 2 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 594, 904 P.2d 1205] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] defendant must prove the facts necessary to enjoy the benefit of a statute of limitations." (Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal.4th 1, 10 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[D]efendant, if he is to avail himself of the statute's one-year-from-discovery limitation defense, has the burden of proving, under the 'traditional allocation of the burden of proof' that plaintiff discovered or should have discovered the facts alleged to constitute defendant's wrongdoing more than one year prior to filing this action." (Samuels, supra, 22 Cal.4th at pp. 8-9 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In ordinary tort and contract actions, the statute of limitations, it is true, begins to run upon the occurrence of the last element essential to the cause of action. The plaintiff's ignorance of the cause of action, or of the identity of the wrongdoer, does not toll the statute. In cases of professional malpractice, however, postponement of the period of limitations until discovery finds justification in the special nature of the relationship between the professional man and his client." (Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal.3d 176, 187-188 [98 Cal.Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] , footnote omitted.)

■ "We hold that a cause of action for legal malpractice does not accrue until the client discovers, or should discover, the facts establishing the elements of his cause of action." (Neel, supra, 6 Cal.3d at p. 194 .)

■ "If the allegedly negligent conduct does not cause damage, it generates no cause of action in tort. The mere breach of a professional duty, causing only nominal damages, speculative harm, or the threat of future harm--not yet realized--does not suffice to create a cause of action for negligence. Hence, until the client suffers appreciable harm as a consequence of his attorney's negligence, the client cannot establish a cause of action for malpractice." (Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal.3d 195, 200 [98 Cal.Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]here a client hires a law firm to represent it, the provisions of section 340.6 apply to that firm; the term 'attorney' in section 340.6 may embrace the entire partnership, law corporation, or other legal entity the client retains. [P] That either an attorney or a firm may be the subject of an action does not support a reading under which representation by one attorney or firm might toll the limitations period as to another no longer affiliated attorney or firm. Rather, the text implies an action against a law firm is tolled so long as that firm continues representation, just as an action against an attorney is tolled so long as that attorney continues representation, but representation by one attorney or firm does not toll claims that may exist against a different, unaffiliated attorney or firm." (Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal.4th 503, 509 [66 Cal.Rptr.3d 52, 167 P.3d 666] , original italics.)

■ "'Ordinarily, an attorney's representation is not completed until the agreed tasks or events have occurred, the client consents to termination or a court grants an application by counsel for withdrawal.' 'The rule is that, for purposes of the statute of limitations, the attorney's representation is concluded when the parties so agree, and that result does not depend upon formal termination, such as withdrawing as counsel of record.' 'Continuity of representation ultimately depends, not on the client's subjective beliefs, but rather on evidence of an ongoing mutual relationship and of activities in furtherance of the relationship.' " (Nielsen v. Beck (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1049 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 435] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Section 340.6, subdivision (a), states that 'in no event' shall the prescriptive period be tolled except under those circumstances specified in the statute. Thus, the Legislature expressly intended to disallow tolling under any circumstances not enumerated in the statute." (Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal.4th 606, 618 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 828 P.2d 691] [applying rule to one-year limitation period]; cf. Belton v. Bowers Ambulance Serv. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 928, 934 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 107, 978 P.2d 591] [substantially similar language in Code Civ. Proc., § 340.5, applicable to medical malpractice, construed to apply only to three-year limitation period].)

New April 2007; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

Use CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit, if the one-year limitation provision is at issue.

If no tolling provision from Code of Civil Procedure section 340.6 is at issue, read only through the end of the first paragraph. Read the rest of the instruction if there is a question of fact concerning a tolling provision. If so, the verdict form should ask the jury to find (1) the date on which the alleged wrongful act or omission occurred; (2) whether the tolling provision applies; and (3) if so, for what period of time. The court can then add the additional time to the date on which the alleged wrongful act or omission occurred and determine whether the action is timely.

The court may need to define the term "actual injury" depending on the facts and circumstances of the particular case.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 340.6 provides:

(a) An action against an attorney for a wrongful act or omission, other than for actual fraud, arising in the performance of professional services shall be commenced within one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission, or four years from the date of the wrongful act or omission, whichever occurs first. If the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal charge as an element of his or her claim, the action shall be commenced within two years after the plaintiff achieves postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case. Except for a claim for which the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence, in no event shall the time for commencement of legal action exceed four years except that the period shall be tolled during the time that any of the following exist:

(1) The plaintiff has not sustained actual injury;

(2) The attorney continues to represent the plaintiff regarding the specific subject matter in which the alleged wrongful act or omission occurred;

(3) The attorney willfully conceals the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission when such facts are known to the attorney, except that this subdivision shall toll only the four-year limitation; and

(4) The plaintiff is under a legal or physical disability which restricts the plaintiff's ability to commence legal action.

(b) In an action based upon an instrument in writing, the effective date of which depends upon some act or event of the future, the period of limitations provided for by this section shall commence to run upon the occurrence of that act or event.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 352 provides:

(a) If a person entitled to bring an action, mentioned in Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 335) is, at the time the cause of action accrued either under the age of majority or insane, the time of the disability is not part of the time limited for the commencement of the action.

(b) This section does not apply to an action against a public entity or public employee upon a cause of action for which a claim is required to be presented in accordance with Chapter 1 (commencing with Section 900) or Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 910) of Part 3, or Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 950) of Part 4, of Division 3.6 of Title 1 of the Government Code. This subdivision shall not apply to any claim presented to a public entity prior to January 1, 1971.

■ "Under section 340.6, the one-year limitations period commences when the plaintiff actually or constructively discovers the facts of the wrongful act or omission, but the period is tolled until the plaintiff sustains actual injury. That is to say, the statute of limitations will not run during the time the plaintiff cannot bring a cause of action for damages from professional negligence." (Jordache Enterprises, Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal.4th 739, 751 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] .)

■ "Actual injury refers only to the legally cognizable damage necessary to assert the cause of action. There is no requirement that an adjudication or settlement must first confirm a causal nexus between the attorney's error and the asserted injury. The determination of actual injury requires only a factual analysis of the claimed error and its consequences. The inquiry necessarily is more qualitative than quantitative because the fact of damage, rather than the amount, is the critical factor." (Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal.App.4th 102, 113 [103 Cal.Rptr.3d 811] .)

■ "[P]rior to the enactment of section 340.6 the running of the statute of limitations coincided with accrual of the plaintiff's malpractice cause of action, including damages. By contrast, under the provisions of section 340.6, discovery of the negligent act or omission initiates the statutory period, and the absence of injury or damages serves as a tolling factor." (Adams v. Paul (1995) 11 Cal.4th 583, 598 fn. 2 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 594, 904 P.2d 1205] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] defendant must prove the facts necessary to enjoy the benefit of a statute of limitations." (Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal.4th 1, 10 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In ordinary tort and contract actions, the statute of limitations, it is true, begins to run upon the occurrence of the last element essential to the cause of action. The plaintiff's ignorance of the cause of action, or of the identity of the wrongdoer, does not toll the statute. In cases of professional malpractice, however, postponement of the period of limitations until discovery finds justification in the special nature of the relationship between the professional man and his client." (Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal.3d 176, 187-188 [98 Cal.Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] , footnote omitted.)

■ "If the allegedly negligent conduct does not cause damage, it generates no cause of action in tort. The mere breach of a professional duty, causing only nominal damages, speculative harm, or the threat of future harm--not yet realized--does not suffice to create a cause of action for negligence. Hence, until the client suffers appreciable harm as a consequence of his attorney's negligence, the client cannot establish a cause of action for malpractice." (Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal.3d 195, 200 [98 Cal.Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]here a client hires a law firm to represent it, the provisions of section 340.6 apply to that firm; the term 'attorney' in section 340.6 may embrace the entire partnership, law corporation, or other legal entity the client retains. [P] That either an attorney or a firm may be the subject of an action does not support a reading under which representation by one attorney or firm might toll the limitations period as to another no longer affiliated attorney or firm. Rather, the text implies an action against a law firm is tolled so long as that firm continues representation, just as an action against an attorney is tolled so long as that attorney continues representation, but representation by one attorney or firm does not toll claims that may exist against a different, unaffiliated attorney or firm." (Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal.4th 503, 509 [66 Cal.Rptr.3d 52, 167 P.3d 666] , original italics.)

■ " 'Ordinarily, an attorney's representation is not completed until the agreed tasks or events have occurred, the client consents to termination or a court grants an application by counsel for withdrawal.' 'The rule is that, for purposes of the statute of limitations, the attorney's representation is concluded when the parties so agree, and that result does not depend upon formal termination, such as withdrawing as counsel of record.' 'Continuity of representation ultimately depends, not on the client's subjective beliefs, but rather on evidence of an ongoing mutual relationship and of activities in furtherance of the relationship.' " (Nielsen v. Beck (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1049 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 435] , internal citations omitted.)

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 700 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- The basic standard of care [CACI No. 700] and specific duties of care for pedestrians, drivers, and passengers [CACI Nos. 710, 711].
- The definition and waiver of "right-of-way" [CACI Nos. 701, 702].
- The definition of "immediate hazard" [CACI No. 703].
- Left turns and turning generally [CACI Nos. 704, 705]
- Speeding [CACI Nos. 706- 708].
- Driving under the influence [CACI No. 709].
- Failure to wear a seat belt [CACI No. 712].
- Liability, including an owner's or adult's liability for a vehicle's permissive use [CACI Nos. 720-722], a cosignor's liability of a minor's application for a driver's license [CACI No. 723], and liability for negligent entrustment of a motor vehicle [CACI No. 724].
- Emergencies, including the emergency vehicle exemption from liability [CACI No. 730] and the definition of "emergency" [CACI No. 731].

The motor vehicle and highway safety series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-700-VF-704].

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 700

CACI 700 Basic Standard of Care

A person must use reasonable care in driving a vehicle. Drivers must keep a lookout for pedestrians, obstacles, and other vehicles. They must also control the speed and movement of their vehicles. The failure to use reasonable care in driving a vehicle is negligence.

New September 2003

This instruction states the common-law standard of reasonable care in driving. It applies to negligent conduct that is not covered by provisions of the Vehicle Code: "Aside from the mandate of the statute, the driver of a motor vehicle is bound to use reasonable care to anticipate the presence on the streets of other persons having equal rights with himself to be there." (Zarzana v. Neve Drug Co. (1919) 180 Cal. 32, 37 [179 P. 203] .)

The instructions in this series should be used in conjunction with instructions on the elements of negligence contained in the negligence series.

- The common-law duty supplements statutory driving regulations: "[A driver is] under a duty, both by statute and common law, to operate his vehicle without negligence so as to abstain from injuring any other person or his property." (Bewley v. Riggs (1968) 262 Cal.App.2d 188, 194 [68 Cal.Rptr. 520] .)

- The standard of care is that of a reasonably careful person under the circumstances: "[The driver] was required to act as a reasonably prudent person under the same or similar circumstances" (Watkins v. Ohman (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 501, 502-503 [59 Cal.Rptr. 709] .)

■ "The degree of care required in watching the movements of a particular machine depends upon the facts and circumstances existing at the time and place of the accident' and a driver is required to use that degree of care, only, which would be required of a reasonably prudent driver under similar circumstances." (Whitford v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1955) 136 Cal.App.2d 697, 702 [289 P.2d 278] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The common-law requirement goes to the issues of lookout and control. Regardless of whether a driver was complying with the speed limit, "[he was] still bound to anticipate that he might meet persons at any point of the street and in order to avoid a charge of negligence he was bound to use ordinary care and to keep an ordinarily careful lookout for such persons and keep his machine under such control as would enable him to avoid a collision." (Boccalero v. Wadleigh (1931) 113 Cal.App. 376, 379, [298 P. 526] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The operator of a vehicle must keep a proper lookout for other vehicles or persons on the highway and must keep his car under such control as will enable him to avoid a collision; failure to keep such a lookout constitutes negligence." (Downing v. Barrett Mobile Home Transport, Inc. (1974) 38 Cal.App.3d 519, 524 [113 Cal.Rptr. 277] .)

■ On the lookout requirement, one court observed: "The driver of an automobile is bound to use reasonable care to anticipate the presence on the highway of others who have equal right to be there and the fact that his vision is temporarily interfered with, either by the glaring sun or headlights, does not relieve him from that duty." (Hill v. Peres (1934) 136 Cal.App. 132, 137 [28 P.2d 946] , internal citations omitted.)

■ On the control requirement, one court observed: "Cases in which the problem has been presented adhere to the view that a driver must at all times exercise ordinary care to avoid a collision including swerving or altering his course, in addition to applying his brakes, if that would be a reasonable means of avoiding the collision." (Guyton v. City of Los Angeles (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 354, 362 [344 P.2d 910] .)

■ "The age of a minor who operates a motor vehicle will not excuse him from liability for driving it in a negligent manner, and he will be required to meet the standard established primarily for adults." (Prichard v. Veterans Cab Co. (1965) 63 Cal.2d 727, 732 [47 Cal.Rptr. 904, 408 P.2d 360] .)

■ Drivers with mental disabilities are required to exercise the ordinary care required of an adult without such disability. (Fox v. City and County of San Francisco (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 164, 173 [120 Cal.Rptr. 779] .)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 701

CACI 701 Definition of Right-of-Way

When the law requires a [driver/pedestrian] to "yield the right-of-way" to [another/a] [vehicle/pedestrian], this means that the [driver/pedestrian] must let the [other] [vehicle/pedestrian] go first.

Even if someone has the right-of-way, that person must use reasonable care to avoid an accident.

New September 2003

This instruction should be given following a reading of the appropriate Vehicle Code section.

If the case involves a statutory right-of-way, the jury could also be given instructions on negligence per se, if applicable. Statutes concerning who has the right-of-way include:

Vehicle Code section 21800: Intersection Right of Way; Uncontrolled Intersection; Driver on "Terminating Highway"; Intersection Controlled by Stop Signs; Intersection with Inoperative Signals

Vehicle Code section 21801: Left-Turn Right-of-Way

Vehicle Code section 21802: Approaching Entrance to Intersection

Vehicle Code section 21803: Intersection Controlled by Yield Right-of-Way Sign

Vehicle Code section 21804: Entry onto Highway

Vehicle Code section 21805: Equestrian Crossings

Vehicle Code section 21806: Authorized Emergency Vehicles

■ Vehicle Code section 525 provides: " 'Right-of-way' is the privilege of the immediate use of the highway." Courts have observed that "[r]ight of way rules have been described as simply establishing 'a practical basis for necessary courtesy on the highway.' " (Eagar v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1973) 32 Cal.App.3d 116, 122 [107 Cal.Rptr. 819] , internal citation omitted.)

■ Having the statutory right-of-way does not excuse the failure to use due care: "Of course, even if [defendant] had the right of way, he had a duty to exercise reasonable care to avoid an accident, and the jury was so instructed." (Eagar, supra, 32 Cal.App.3d. at p. 123, fn. 3 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "When, as here, each motorist has acted reasonably and the pedestrian has failed to exercise due care for her own safety, the law of this state does not permit the technical violation of the pedestrian's right of way statute to impose negligence on the motorists as a matter of law. The statute creates a preferential, but not absolute, right in favor of the pedestrian who is still under a duty to exercise ordinary care." (Byrne v. City and County of San Francisco (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 731, 742 [170 Cal.Rptr. 302] .)

■ " 'Even where a right of way is given by statute, if conditions so require it to avoid injury to others, the right of way must be yielded.' " (Bove v. Beckman (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 555, 563 [46 Cal.Rptr. 164] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Although such a driver may have the right-of-way, he is not absolved of the duty to exercise ordinary care; may not proceed blindly in disregard of an obvious danger; and must be watchful of the direction in which danger is most likely to be apprehended." (Malone v. Perryman (1964) 226 Cal.App.2d 227, 234 [37 Cal.Rptr. 864] .)

Publisher's Notes

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 5.10.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Right-of-Way" Issues: Automobile accident instructions CACI Nos. 701 and 702 use the phrase "go first," referring to a driver's "right-of-way." BAJI No. 510 defined the "right-of-way" as the "privilege given by law to one person over another of the immediate use of the same space on a highway." "Go first" is certainly easier to understand. However, the phrase "go first" might be confusing. For example: Assume an intersection with four way stop signs with the first driver (Driver Number 1) reaching the intersection and coming to a complete stop. Driver Number 2 approaches seconds later and also stops. Driver Number 2 waits a reasonable time expecting the first car to proceed. Believing that Driver Number 1 has yielded, Driver Number 2 proceeds and is in the intersection when Driver Number 1 accelerates from the stop sign hitting Driver Number 2's car. I can imagine Driver Number 2 arguing that he/she had the right to "go first" under CACI Nos. 701 and 702. Of course, the injured driver might argue that Driver 1 "gave up" his/her right to go first.

CACI Nos. 701 and 702 are not objectionable, per se. How simplistic does an instruction have to be so the law can be understood? Sometimes I think juries deserve more credit than they are given. By Joseph Devine

CACI 702 Waiver of Right-of-Way

A [driver/pedestrian] who has the right-of-way may give up that right and let [another vehicle/a pedestrian] go first. If a [driver/pedestrian] reasonably believes that [[another/a] driver/a pedestrian] has given up the right-of-way, then he or she may go first.

New September 2003

- "[I]f one who has the right of way 'conducts himself in such a definite manner as to create a reasonable belief in the mind of another person that the right-of-way has been waived, then such other person is entitled to assume that the right of way has been given up to him ...'." (Hopkins v. Tye (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 431, 433 [344 P.2d 640] .)

- "A conscious intentional act of waiver of the right of way by the pedestrian is not required. Whether there is a waiver depends upon the acts of the pedestrian. If they are such that a driver could reasonably believe that the pedestrian did not intend to assert her right of way, a waiver occurs." (Cohen v. Bay Area Pie Company (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 69, 72-73 [31 Cal.Rptr. 426] , internal citation omitted.)

CACI 703 Definition of "Immediate Hazard"

The statute just read to you uses the words "immediate hazard." An immediate hazard exists if the approaching vehicle is so near or is approaching so fast that a reasonably careful person would realize that there is a danger of collision [or accident].

New September 2003

This instruction is designed to be given as a supplement to the several Vehicle Code provisions that contain the term "immediate hazard." (Veh. Code, §§ 21802 [Approaching intersection entrance], 21803 [Yield right of way], 21804 [Public or private property], 21805 [Equestrian crossings], 21950 [Crosswalks], 21953 [Tunnel or overhead crossing], 21954 [Pedestrian outside crosswalk], 22451 [Train signals].)

- "It is to be noted that the legislature has not set a hard and fast rule for the conduct of drivers approaching through highways but has provided the general rule that such drivers must yield the right of way to others traveling on the highway who are approaching so closely as to constitute 'an immediate hazard.' Our complex traffic problems are such that the circumstances of the traffic on a through highway as a driver approaches must govern his conduct in determining whether it is an immediate hazard. Whether a driver acts with due care or negligently in proceeding across a through highway must as a general rule be left to the determination of the jury in view of all the circumstances." (Wilkinson v. Marcellus (1952) 51 Cal.App.2d 630, 633 [125 P.2d 584] .)

- At least one court has held that the term "immediate hazard" should be defined for the jury if a party so requests. (Hickenbottom v. Jeppesen (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 115, 121 [300 P.2d 689] .) However, any error in failing to define the term will be considered harmless if other instructions cover that point:

 "The words 'immediate hazard' seem reasonably clear in the context in which they appear, both in the statute and in the instruction given; the hazard of a collision." (Ibid.)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 704

CACI 704 Left Turns (Veh. Code, § 21801)

The statute just read to you uses the word "hazard." A "hazard" exists if any approaching vehicle is so near or is approaching so fast that a reasonably careful person would realize that there is a danger of a collision [or accident].

[A driver who is attempting to make a left turn must make sure that no oncoming vehicles are close enough to be a hazard before he or she proceeds across each lane.]

New September 2003

The bracketed paragraph should be given in appropriate cases involving multiple lanes of oncoming traffic. (Sesler v. Ghumman (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 218, 227 [268 Cal.Rptr. 70] .)

- Vehicle Code section 21801(a) provides: "The driver of a vehicle intending to turn to the left or to complete a U-turn ... shall yield the right-of-way to all vehicles approaching from the opposite direction which are close enough to constitute a hazard at any time during the turning movement, and shall continue to yield the right-of-way to the approaching vehicles until the left turn or U-turn can be made with reasonable safety."

- "We hold section 21802, subdivision (a), requires that where, as here, some, but not all, of the oncoming vehicles have yielded their right-of-way to a left-turning driver, that driver has a continuing duty during the turning movement to ascertain, before proceeding across the next open lane(s), if any vehicle is approaching from the opposite direction so close as to constitute a hazard." (Sesler, supra, 219 Cal.App.3d at pp. 224-225)

● Noting that in 1957 the Legislature added the phrase "at any time during the turning movement" to this section, the court in In re Kirk (1962) 202 Cal.App.2d 288, 291 [20 Cal.Rptr. 787] , reasoned that "if the oncoming vehicle in the lane closest to the left turning vehicle surrenders its right of way by indicating to the operator of the left turning vehicle that it desires him to proceed, such operator may not proceed beyond that first lane of traffic, now effectively blocked by the waiving vehicle, if in fact other vehicles approaching in any of the other oncoming lanes will constitute a hazard to the left turning vehicle during the turning movement."

CACI 705 Turning (Veh. Code, § 22107)

A driver must use reasonable care when turning [or moving to the right or to the left].

New September 2003

An instruction on this point should be given only if the jury is instructed on Vehicle Code section 22107. It should be read after that section has been given. (Anderson v. Latimer (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 667, 672-673 [212 Cal.Rptr. 544] .)

- Vehicle Code section 22107 provides: "No person shall turn a vehicle from a direct course or move right or left upon a roadway until such movement can be made with reasonable safety and then only after the giving of an appropriate signal in the manner provided in this chapter in the event any other vehicle may be affected by the movement."

- "This provision does not require the driver to know that a turn can be made with safety but only that he must exercise reasonable care, and whether such care has been exercised is normally a question of fact." (Butigan v. Yellow Cab Co. (1958) 49 Cal.2d 652, 656 [320 P.2d 500] .)

- Courts have held that a reading of section 22107 should be followed by an instruction clarifying that the driver is under a duty to exercise only as much care as a reasonably prudent person when making a turn or movement: "An instruction to a jury concerning Vehicle Code, section 544 [now 22107] must make it clear that the driver who is about to turn must exercise such care as would a reasonably prudent man under similar circumstances, no more and no less." (Lewis v. Franklin (1958) 161 Cal.App.2d 177, 184 [326 P.2d 625] .)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 706

CACI 706 Basic Speed Law (Veh. Code, § 22350)

A person must drive at a reasonable speed. Whether a particular speed is reasonable depends on the circumstances such as traffic, weather, visibility, and road conditions. Drivers must not drive so fast that they create a danger to people or property.

If [name of plaintiff/defendant] has proved that [name of defendant/plaintiff] was not driving at a reasonable speed at the time of the accident, then [name of defendant/plaintiff] was negligent.

New September 2003

- Vehicle Code section 22350 provides: "No person shall drive a vehicle upon a highway at a speed greater than is reasonable or prudent having due regard for weather, visibility, the traffic on, and the surface and width of, the highway, and in no event at a speed which endangers the safety of persons or property."

- "The so-called basic speed law is primarily a regulation of the conduct of the operators of vehicles. They are bound to know the conditions which dictate the speeds at which they can drive with a reasonable degree of safety. They know, or should know, their cars and their own ability to handle them, and especially their ability to come to a stop at different speeds and under different conditions of the surface of the highway." (Wilding v. Norton (1957) 156 Cal.App.2d 374, 379 [319 P.2d 440] .)

- "Whether Vehicle Code section 22350 has been violated is a question of fact." (Leighton v. Dodge (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 54, 57 [45 Cal.Rptr. 820] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A number of cases have held that it is proper to give an instruction in the terms of this section and to inform the jury that a violation of the statute is negligence." (Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal.2d 432, 438 [260 P.2d 63] .)

■ The burden of proving negligence in a civil action is on the party charging negligence, and even if such party has established speed in excess of the applicable prima facie limit the party must establish negligence under the circumstances. (Faselli v. Southern Pacific Co. (1957) 150 Cal.App.2d 644, 648 [310 P.2d 698] .)

■ Compliance with the posted speed law does not negate negligence as a matter of law. (Maxwell v. Colburn (1980) 105 Cal.App.3d 180, 186 [163 Cal.Rptr. 912] .)

■ Drivers who are driving at the maximum speed limit on a multi-lane freeway are not under a duty to move their vehicles to the right into the next slower lane when another vehicle approaches them from behind in the same lane at a speed in excess of the posted maximum speed limit. (Monreal v. Tobin (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 1337, 1354-1355 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 168] .)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 707

CACI 707 Speed Limit (Veh. Code, § 22352)

The speed limit where the accident occurred was [insert number] miles per hour.

The speed limit is a factor to consider when you decide whether or not [name of plaintiff/name of defendant] was negligent. A driver is not necessarily negligent just because he or she was driving faster than the speed limit. However, a driver may be negligent even if he or she was driving at or below the speed limit.

New September 2003

- The prima facie speed limits are set by Vehicle Code section 22352.
- Vehicle Code section 40831 provides: "In any civil action proof of speed in excess of any prima facie limit declared in Section 22352 at a particular time and place does not establish negligence as a matter of law but in all such actions it shall be necessary to establish as a fact that the operation of a vehicle at the excess speed constituted negligence."
- A party is entitled to an instruction that the prima facie speed limit is a factor for the jury to consider in making its negligence determination. (Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc.(1953) 41 Cal.2d 432, 439 [260 P.2d 63].)
- "The mere driving of an automobile in excess of the speed limit does not show negligence as a matter of law. The jury was free to find [defendant] not guilty of negligence even if they found that he was exceeding the speed limit." (Williams v. Cole (1960) 181 Cal.App.2d 70, 74 [5 Cal.Rptr. 24] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The burden of proving negligence in a civil action is on the party charging negligence, and even if such party has established speed in excess of the applicable prima facie limit the party must establish negligence under the circumstances. (Faselli v. Southern Pacific Co. (1957) 150 Cal.App.2d 644, 648 [310 P.2d 698] .)

■ "Even though the Texaco truck was traveling at a speed less than the maximum specified in the Vehicle Code, the reasonableness of its speed was a question of fact under all the circumstances, and circumstances may make travel at a speed less than the maximum rate a negligent operation of a motor vehicle." (Scott v. Texaco, Inc. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 431, 436-437 [48 Cal.Rptr. 785] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 708

CACI 708 Maximum Speed Limit (Veh. Code, §§ 22349, 22356)

The maximum speed limit where the accident occurred was [insert number] miles per hour.

New September 2003

An instruction on maximum speed limits could be useful to help frame the issue for the jury. On the other hand, a specific instruction on the maximum speed limits may be unnecessary. In the event that there is sufficient evidence to support an instruction that one of the parties violated the maximum speed limit, the judge could give the negligence per se instructions while reciting the specific code section. In that event, the judge would not give an instruction on the basic speed law. (See Hargrave v. Winkquist (1982) 134 Cal.App.3d 916 [185 Cal.Rptr. 30] .)

- Two statutes set the maximum speed limit. Vehicle Code section 22349(a) sets the general maximum speed at 65 miles per hour, and section 22349(b) sets the basic maximum for two-lane, undivided highways at 55 miles per hour. Vehicle Code section 22356 sets the maximum speed at 70 miles per hour at selected locations.

- Vehicle Code section 22400(a) states the "minimum speed law" and provides as follows: "No person shall drive upon a highway at such a slow speed as to impede or block the normal and reasonable movement of traffic unless the reduced speed is necessary for safe operation, because of a grade, or in compliance with law. No person shall bring a vehicle to a complete stop upon a highway so as to impede or block the normal and reasonable movement of traffic unless the stop is necessary for safe operation or in compliance with law."

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 709

CACI 709 Driving Under the Influence (Veh. Code, §§ 23152, 23153)

The statute just read to you uses the term "under the influence." A driver is not necessarily "under the influence" just because he or she has consumed some alcohol [or drugs]. A driver is "under the influence" when he or she has consumed an amount of alcohol [or drugs] that impairs his or her ability to drive in a reasonably careful manner.

New September 2003

This instruction is designed to supplement a negligence per se instruction on driving under the influence.

The presumption of intoxication based on a 0.08 blood level applies to criminal prosecutions only. There is no statutory or case authority supporting the conclusion that the presumption applies in civil cases. (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 334 [145 Cal.Rptr. 47] .)

For a definition of "drug," see Vehicle Code section 312: "The term 'drug' means any substance or combination of substances, other than alcohol, which could so affect the nervous system, brain, or muscles of a person as to impair, to an appreciable degree, his ability to drive a vehicle in the manner that an ordinarily prudent and cautious man, in full possession of his faculties, using reasonable care, would drive a similar vehicle under like conditions."

■ Vehicle Code section 23152(a) provides: "It is unlawful for any person who is under the influence of any alcoholic beverage or drug, or under the combined influence of any alcoholic beverage and drug, to drive a vehicle."

■ Vehicle Code section 23153(a) provides: "It is unlawful for any person, while under the influence of any alcoholic beverage or drug, or under the combined influence of any alcoholic beverage and drug, to drive a vehicle and concurrently do any act forbidden by law or neglect any duty imposed by law in driving the vehicle, which act or neglect proximately causes bodily injury to any person other than the driver."

■ "All of the decided cases on the subject recognize that it is negligence as a matter of law to drive a vehicle upon a public highway while in an intoxicated condition." (Zamucen v. Crocker (1957) 149 Cal.App.2d 312, 316 [308 P.2d 384] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The term "under the influence" was first defined in People v. Dingle (1922) 56 Cal.App. 445, 449 [205 P. 705] , as follows: "[I]f intoxicating liquor has so far affected the nervous system, brain, or muscles of the driver of an automobile as to impair, to an appreciable degree, his ability to operate his car in the manner that an ordinarily prudent and cautious man, in the full possession of his faculties, using reasonable care, would operate or drive a similar vehicle under like conditions, then such driver is 'under the influence of intoxicating liquor' within the meaning of the statute."

■ "One is not necessarily under the influence of intoxicating liquor as the result of taking one or more drinks. The circumstances and effect must be considered; whether or not a person was under the influence of intoxicating liquor at a certain time is a question of fact for the jury to decide." (Pittman v. Boiven (1967) 249 Cal.App.2d 207, 217 [57 Cal.Rptr. 319] .)

■ Driving while "under the influence" under Vehicle Code sections 23152 and 23153 is not the same as "being under the influence" of a controlled substance under Health and Safety Code section 11550. Under the Vehicle Code provisions, "the defendant's ability to drive must actually be impaired," while the Health and Safety Code provision is violated as soon as the influence is present "in any detectable manner." (People v. Enriquez (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 661, 665 [49 Cal.Rptr.2d 710] .)

■ Courts have also distinguished the "under the influence" standard from the "obvious intoxication" standard used in Business and Professions Code section 25602.1. (Jones v. Toyota Motor Co. (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 364, 368 [243 Cal.Rptr. 611] : " 'Under the influence' is defined by a person's capability to drive safely, whereas 'obvious intoxication' is defined by a person's appearance.")

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 710

CACI 710 Duties of Care for Pedestrians and Drivers

The duty to use reasonable care does not require the same amount of caution from drivers and pedestrians. While both drivers and pedestrians must be aware that motor vehicles can cause serious injuries, drivers must use more care than pedestrians.

New September 2003

- Driving is not considered a highly dangerous activity, though it may require a specific instruction: "Driving a motor vehicle may be sufficiently dangerous to warrant special instructions, but it is not so hazardous that it always requires 'extreme caution.' " (Menchaca v. Helms Bakeries, Inc. (1968) 68 Cal.2d 535, 544 [67 Cal.Rptr. 775, 439 P.2d 903] , internal citations omitted.)

- Failure to give an instruction upon request on the relative duties of the driver and the pedestrian has been held to be error. (Cucinella v. Weston Biscuit Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 71, 81 [265 P.2d 513] [error not prejudicial in this case].)

- In Dawson v. Lallane (1937) 22 Cal.App.2d 314, 315 [70 P.2d 1002] , the court held it was error to refuse to instruct the jury that "the plaintiff and the defendant were both chargeable only with the exercise of ordinary care, but a greater amount of such care was required of the defendant at the time of the accident in question by reason of the fact that he was driving and operating an automobile, which is an instrumentality capable of inflicting serious and often fatal injuries upon others using the highway."

- The purpose of instructions concerning the relative standards of care for pedestrians and drivers is "to inform the jury that the elements of action constituting conduct which qualifies as ordinary care are those commensurable with the responsibility involved and depend upon the character of the instrumentality being used or the nature of the act which is being performed, all as related to the surrounding circumstances." (Cucinella, supra, 42 Cal.2d at p. 80 .)

Publisher's Notes

This instruction replaces BAJI Nos. 5.50 and 5.51.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Drivers vs. Pedestrians: BAJI No. 5.51 was a confusing instruction. CACI No. 710 replaces it by attempting to define the "Duties of Care for Pedestrians and Drivers." Apparently, the conclusion that "drivers must use more care than pedestrians" is based on dicta cited in the Sources and Authority case of Dawson v. Lallane (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 314, 315, 70 P.2d 1002 . Certainly automobiles carry far more potential for harm than pedestrians who challenge highways. It seems that a reasonably careful pedestrian, knowing full well the damage a driver can inflict, should be careful when crossing the street. I do not believe the change in the jury instruction reflects any corresponding change in the duty of care. Thus, if you represent a driver against a claim by a pedestrian, argue against giving CACI No. 710 as it requires a higher standard of care for drivers than for pedestrians without sufficient legal authority. By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 711

CACI 711 The Passenger's Duty of Care for Own Safety

A passenger is not required to be aware of the conditions on the highway and is entitled to expect that a driver will use reasonable care. However, if a passenger becomes aware of [a danger on the highway] [the driver's impairment or failure to use reasonable care], then the passenger must take reasonable steps to protect his or her safety.

New September 2003

■ "In the absence of some fact brought to his attention which would cause a person of ordinary prudence to act otherwise, a passenger in an automobile has no duty to observe traffic conditions on the highway, and his mere failure to do so, without more, will not support a finding of contributory negligence. In other words, an automobile passenger's "duty to look" does not arise until some factor of danger comes to his attention, thus charging him as a person of ordinary prudence to take steps for his own safety. ..." (Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d 379, 386-387 [188 Cal.Rptr. 18] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Even when negligence of a driver may not be imputed to him, the passenger is bound to exercise ordinary care for his own safety. He may not shut his eyes to an obvious danger; he may not blindly rely on the driver in approaching a place of danger. He is normally bound to protest against actual negligence or recklessness of the driver, the extent of his duty in this regard depending upon the particular circumstances of each case and ordinarily being a question of fact for the jury." (Pobor v. Western Pacific Railroad Co. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 314, 324 [11 Cal.Rptr. 106, 359 P.2d 474] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 712

CACI 712 Affirmative Defense--Failure to Wear a Seat Belt

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] was negligent because [he/she] failed to wear a seat belt. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That a working seat belt was available;
- 2. That a reasonably careful person in [name of plaintiff]'s situation would have used the seat belt;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] failed to wear a seat belt; and
- 4. That [name of plaintiff]'s injuries would have been avoided or less severe if [he/she] had used the seat belt.

[In deciding whether a reasonably careful person would have used a seat belt, you may consider Vehicle Code section 27315, which states: [insert pertinent provision].]

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Note that Vehicle Code section 27315 applies only to persons 16 years or older. No case law regarding whether persons under 16 can be found comparatively negligent for failing to wear a seat belt has been found.

- Vehicle Code section 27315, the "Motor Vehicle Safety Act," was adopted in 1985.

■ Defendants must prove two elements to establish the seat belt defense: "Defendants ... are required to prove two issues of fact: (1) the defendant must show whether in the exercise of ordinary care the plaintiff should have used the seat belt which was available to him. ... (2) The defendant must show what the consequence to the plaintiff would have been had seat belts been used." (Franklin v. Gibson (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d 340, 343 [188 Cal.Rptr. 23] .)

■ The second requirement must almost always be established by expert testimony, and it appears to overlap somewhat with the issue of causation: "Upon a retrial the court or jury will determine whether in the exercise of ordinary care [plaintiff] should have used the seat belt; expert testimony will be required to prove whether [plaintiff] would have been injured, and, if so, the extent of the injuries he would have sustained if he had been using the seat belt" (Truman v. Vargas (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 976, 983 [80 Cal.Rptr. 373] .)

■ In Housley v. Godinez (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 737, 747 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 111] , the court approved of the following jury instruction, which was read in addition to section 27315: "The Defendants have raised the seat belt defense in this case. First, you must decide whether in the exercise of ordinary care, the Plaintiff should have used seat belts, if available to him. Second you must determine with expert testimony the nature of injuries and damages Plaintiff would have sustained if he had used seat belts."

■ In Housley, supra, 4 Cal.App.4th at page 747 , the court held that the jury may be instructed "on the existence of the seat belt statute [section 27315] in appropriate cases, while allowing the jury to decide what weight, if any, to give the statute in determining the standard of reasonable care."

■ Subdivision (j) provides that violations of section 27315 "shall not establish negligence as a matter of law or negligence per se for comparative fault purposes, but negligence may be proven as a fact without regard to the violation." The Housley court observed that "nothing in the statute prohibits a jury from knowing and considering its very existence when determining the reasonableness of driving without a seat belt." (Housley, supra, 4 Cal.App.4th at p. 744 .)

■ Failure to wear a seat belt is not considered a supervening cause. (Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 22, 28 [22 Cal.Rptr.2d 106] .)

■ "Expert testimony is not always required to prove that failure to use a seat belt may cause at least some, if not all, of plaintiff's claimed injuries. [P] Depending on the facts of the case, expert testimony may be necessary for the jury to distinguish the injuries that [plaintiff] unavoidably sustained in the collision from the injuries he could have avoided if he had worn a seat belt." (Lara v. Nevitt (2004) 123 Cal.App.4th 454, 458-459 [19 Cal.Rptr.3d 865] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The seat belt defense does not depend on a Vehicle Code violation nor is it eviscerated by a Vehicle Code exemption from the requirement to wear seat belts." (Lara, supra, 123 Cal.App.4th at p. 461 fn. 3 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Expert Testimony Required for Seatbelt Cases:

In any motor vehicle collision when the use of a seatbelt is an issue, expert testimony from a medical expert and/or biomechanical expert is required to prevail. Note that an instruction can be drafted by the defendant for a bicyclist's failure to wear a helmet should the plaintiff bicyclist claim head injuries. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 720

CACI 720 Motor Vehicle Owner Liability--Permissive Use of Vehicle

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed and that [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm because [name of defendant] gave [name of driver] permission to operate the vehicle. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of driver] was negligent in operating the vehicle;
- 2. That [name of defendant] was an owner of the vehicle at the time of the injury to [name of plaintiff]; and
- 3. That [name of defendant], by words or conduct, gave permission to [name of driver] to use the vehicle.

In determining whether permission was given, you may consider the relationship between the owner and the operator. [For example, if the parties are related or the owner and the operator are employer and employee, such a relationship may support a finding that there was implied permission to use the vehicle.]

[If the vehicle owner has given a person permission to use the vehicle, and that person authorizes a third person to operate the vehicle, the third person may be considered to have used the vehicle with the permission of the owner.]

New September 2003

Separate instructions will be necessary regarding the negligence of the driver and that it caused harm to the plaintiff. Read bracketed language if appropriate to the facts. If ownership of the vehicle is uncontested, element 2 may be deleted.

■ Vehicle Code section 17150 provides: "Every owner of a motor vehicle is liable and responsible for death or injury to person or property resulting from a negligent or wrongful act or omission in the operation of the motor vehicle, in the business of the owner or otherwise, by any person using or operating the same with the permission, express or implied, of the owner."

■ Vehicle Code section 17151(a) provides, in part: "The liability of an owner ... is limited to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) for the death of or injury to one person ... and ... to the amount of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) for the death of or injury to more than one person ... and is limited to the amount of five thousand dollars ($5,000) for damage to property."

■ The statutory limitation under section 17151(a) "does not apply ... to a vehicle owner's own common law negligence, as distinguished from the owner's statutory vicarious liability for the operator's negligence." (Fremont Compensation Insurance Co. v. Hartnett (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 669, 675-676 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 567] .)

■ "[U]nless the evidence points to one conclusion only, the question of the existence of the requisite permission under [section 17150] is one to be determined by the trier of fact, 'upon the facts and circumstances in evidence and the inferences reasonably to be drawn therefrom.' " (Peterson v. Grieger, Inc. (1961) 57 Cal.2d 43, 51 [17 Cal.Rptr. 828, 367 P.2d 420] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[P]ermission cannot be left to speculation or conjecture nor be assumed, but must be affirmatively proved, and the fact of permission is just as important to sustain the imposition of liability as is the fact of ownership." (Scheff v. Roberts (1950) 35 Cal.2d 10, 12 [215 P.2d 925] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Where the issue of implied permissive use is involved, the general relationship existing between the owner and the operator, is of paramount importance. Where, for example, the parties are related by blood, or marriage, or where the relationship between the owner and the operator is that of principal and agent, weaker direct evidence will support a finding of such use than where the parties are only acquaintances or strangers." (Elkinton v. California State Automobile Assn., Interstate Insurance Bureau (1959) 173 Cal.App.2d 338, 344 [343 P.2d 396] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "There is no doubt that the word 'owner' as used in [the predecessor to Vehicle Code section 17150] for the purpose of creating a liability thereunder, is not synonymous with that word as used in the ordinary sense of referring to a person or persons whose title is good as against all others. Under the Vehicle Code there may be several such 'owners' at any one time. One or more persons may be an 'owner,' and thus liable for the injuries of a third party, even though no such 'owner' possesses all of the normal incidents of ownership." (Stoddart v. Peirce (1959) 53 Cal.2d 105, 115 [346 P.2d 774] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The question whether the [defendant] was an owner for purposes of imposition of liability for negligence [under Vehicle Code section 17150] was one of fact." (Campbell v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 379, 385 [133 Cal.Rptr. 77] .)

■ "Strict compliance with Vehicle Code section 5602 [regarding the sale or transfer of a vehicle] is required to enable a transferring owner to escape the liability imposed by section 17150 on account of an accident occurring before notice of the transfer is received by the Motor Vehicle Department." (Laureano v. Christensen (1971) 18 Cal.App.3d 515, 520-521 [95 Cal.Rptr. 872] .)

■ "[T]he true and actual owner of an automobile [is not] relieved from liability by the expedient of registration in the name of another. ... It is clear that it was the legislative intent to make the actual owners of automobiles liable for the negligence of those to whom permission is given to drive them. According to the allegations of the complaint defendants ... were in fact the true owners of the car and had control of it, the registration being in the name of defendant [driver] for the purpose of avoiding liability." (McCalla v. Grosse (1941) 42 Cal.App.2d 546, 549-550 [109 P.2d 358] .)

■ "[I]t is a question of fact in cases of co-ownership, as it is in cases of single ownership, whether the operation of an automobile is with or without the consent, express or implied, of an owner who is not personally participating in such operation. The mere fact of co-ownership does not necessarily or conclusively establish that the common owners have consented to any usage or possession among themselves of a type for which permission is essential." (Krum v. Malloy (1943) 22 Cal.2d 132, 136 [137 P.2d 18] .)

■ "The immunity of the negligent operator under the [Workers' Compensation] Act does not insulate a vehicle owner who is neither the plaintiff's employer nor co-employee from liability under section 17150. [P] Since the owner's liability does not arise from the status or liability of the operator, the defenses applicable to the operator are not available to the owner." (Galvis v. Petito (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 551, 554 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 560] .)

■ "The doctrine of 'negligent entrustment' is clearly distinguishable from the theory of 'vicarious liability.' Negligent entrustment is a common law liability doctrine. Conversely, the obligation of a lending owner of an automobile is one of statutory liability. An owner of an automobile may be independently negligent in entrusting it to an incompetent driver. California is one of several states which recognizes the liability of an automobile owner who has entrusted a car to an incompetent, reckless, or inexperienced driver, and has supplemented the common law doctrine of negligent entrustment by enactment of a specific consent statute." (Syah v. Johnson (1966) 247 Cal.App.2d 534, 538 [55 Cal.Rptr. 741] , internal citations omitted.)

■ For purposes of liability under the permissive use statute, "[s]ince defendant [car owner] had the opportunity of making such investigation as he deemed necessary to satisfy himself as to the identity of the [renter] to whom he intrusted his automobile, he should not be permitted to escape liability to a third party because of any fraudulent misrepresentation made by the renter of the car to him." (Tuderios v. Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc. (1945) 70 Cal.App.2d 192, 198 [160 P.2d 554] .)

■ "[T]he provisions of Proposition 51 do not operate to reduce the liability of vehicle owners imposed by Vehicle Code section 17150." (Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1849 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] .)

■ "[I]f the evidence shows that an automobile was being driven by an employee of the owner at the time of an accident, the jury may infer that the employee was operating the automobile with the permission of the owner." (Hicks v. Reis (1943) 21 Cal.2d 654, 659 [134 P.2d 788] , internal quotation marks and citations omitted.)

■ "The mere fact that at the time of an accident one is driving an automobile belonging to another is not, of itself, sufficient to establish that the former was driving the car with the permission of the owner." (Di Rebaylio v. Herndon (1935) 6 Cal.App.2d 567, 569 [44 P.2d 581] .)

■ "[I]mplied permission to use an automobile may be found even where the owner and permittee expressly deny that permission was given." (Anderson v. Wagnon (1952) 110 Cal.App.2d 362, 366 [242 P.2d 915] .)

■ "[I]n determining whether there has been an implied permission, it is not necessary that the owner have prior knowledge that the driver intends to use the car, but it must be 'under circumstances from which consent to use the car is necessarily implied.' " (Mucci v. Winter (1951) 103 Cal.App.2d 627, 631 [230 P.2d 22] , internal citation omitted.)

■ For purposes of statutory vicarious liability, "if the owner entrusts his car to another he invests him with the same authority to select an operator which the owner has in the first instance. ... [P] ... The owner is thus liable for negligent acts by a subpermittee even though the subpermittee operated the owner's vehicle with authorization only from the permittee, since the foundation of the statutory liability is the permission given to another to use an instrumentality which if improperly used is a danger and menace to the public." (Peterson v. Grieger, Inc. (1961) 57 Cal.2d 43, 54 [17 Cal.Rptr. 828, 367 P.2d 420] , internal quotation marks and citations omitted.)

CACI 721 Motor Vehicle Owner Liability--Affirmative Defense--Use Beyond Scope of Permission

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm because [name of driver]'s use of the vehicle exceeded the scope of the permission given. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant], by words or conduct, gave permission to [name of driver] to use the vehicle for a limited time, place, or purpose; and
- 2. That [name of driver]'s use of the vehicle substantially violated the time, place, or purpose specified.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended for use when the vehicle owner contends that the use of the vehicle exceeded the scope of the permission, thereby terminating the permission.

- Vehicle Code section 17150 provides: "Every owner of a motor vehicle is liable and responsible for death or injury to person or property resulting from a negligent or wrongful act or omission in the operation of the motor vehicle, in the business of the owner or otherwise, by any person using or operating the same with the permission, express or implied, of the owner."

- "[W]here the permission is granted for a limited time, any use after the expiration of the period is without consent, and the owner is not liable, unless the circumstances justify an inference of implied consent to further use. [P] ... On principle, there is no fundamental ground of distinction between a limitation of time and one of purpose or place, insofar as permission is concerned; and it would seem clear that a substantial violation of either limitation terminates the original express consent and makes the subsequent use without permission. ... [P] ... [T]he substantial violation of limitations as to locality or purpose of use operate in the same manner as violation of time limitations, absolving the owner from liability." (Henrietta v. Evans (1938) 10 Cal.2d 526, 528-529 [75 P.2d 1051] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]here restrictions by the owner as to time, purpose, or area are involved, the owner's permission is considered terminated only where there has been a substantial violation of such restrictions, and it is a question of fact whether under all the circumstances presented, such restrictions as to time, purpose, or area have been substantially violated prior to the occurrence of the accident so as to vitiate the owner's permission and thus absolve him from the vicarious liability imposed under [the predecessor to section 17150]." (Peterson v. Grieger, Inc. (1961) 57 Cal.2d 43, 52 [17 Cal.Rptr. 828, 367 P.2d 420] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "What is a substantial deviation from a permitted use is a question of fact under the circumstances of each case." (Garmon v. Sebastian (1960) 181 Cal.App.2d 254, 260 [5 Cal.Rptr. 101] .)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 722

CACI 722 Adult's Liability for Minor's Permissive Use of Motor Vehicle

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed and that [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm because [name of defendant] gave [name of minor] permission to operate the vehicle. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of minor] was negligent in operating the vehicle;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed;
- 3. That [name of minor]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing the harm; and
- 4. That [name of defendant], by words or conduct, gave [name of minor] permission to use the vehicle.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, October 2004

Under Vehicle Code section 17708, an element of this cause of action is that the defendant must have "custody" of the minor driver. The instruction omits this element because it will most likely be stipulated to or decided by the judge as a matter of law. If there are contested issues of fact regarding this element, this instruction may be augmented to include the specific factual findings necessary to arrive at a determination of custody.

● Vehicle Code section 17708 provides: "Any civil liability of a minor, whether licensed or not under this code, arising out of his driving a motor vehicle upon a highway with the express or implied permission of the parents or the person or guardian having custody of the minor is hereby imposed upon the parents, person, or guardian and the parents, person, or guardian shall be jointly and severally liable with the minor for any damages proximately resulting from the negligent or wrongful act or omission of the minor in driving a motor vehicle."

■ "[I]t was incumbent upon [plaintiffs], in order to fasten liability upon [the parents] for the minor's negligence, to establish two necessary facts. These facts were, first, that at the time the collision occurred respondents had custody of the minor and, second, that they had given to the minor their permission, either express or implied, to his driving the automobile by the negligent operation of which the injuries were caused." (Sommers v. Van Der Linden (1938) 24 Cal.App.2d 375, 380 [75 P.2d 83] .)

■ "Whether or not a sufficient custody existed, within the meaning of the statute, might well depend upon evidence of specific facts showing the nature, kind and extent of the custody and right of control which the respondent [grandfather] actually had." (Hughes v. Wardwell (1953) 117 Cal.App.2d 406, 409 [255 P.2d 881] .)

■ "In the absence of statute, ordinarily a parent is not liable for the torts of his minor child. A parent, however, becomes liable for the torts of his minor child if that child in committing a tort is his agent and acting within the child's authority." (Van Den Eikhof v. Hocker (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 900, 904-905 [151 Cal.Rptr. 456] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[P]erson * * * having custody of the minor' means person having permanent legal custody, and not a person such as a school teacher whose control over his pupils is limited in time and scope." (Hathaway v. Siskiyou Union High School Dist. (1944) 66 Cal.App.2d 103, 114 [151 P.2d 861] .)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 723

CACI 723 Liability of Cosigner of Minor's Application for Driver's License

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of minor]'s negligence in operating the vehicle and that [name of defendant] is responsible for the harm because [name of defendant] signed [name of minor]'s application for a driver's license. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of minor] was negligent in operating the vehicle;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed;
- 3. That [name of minor]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing the harm;
- 4. That [name of defendant] signed [name of minor]'s application for a driver's license; and
- 5. That at the time of the collision [name of minor]'s driver's license had not been canceled or revoked by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

New September 2003

■ Vehicle Code section 17707 provides, in part: "Any civil liability of a minor arising out of his driving a motor vehicle upon a highway during his minority is hereby imposed upon the person who signed and verified the application of the minor for a license and the person shall be jointly and severally liable with the minor for any damages proximately resulting from the negligent or wrongful act or omission of the minor in driving a motor vehicle, except that an employer signing the application shall be subject to the provisions of this section only if an unrestricted driver's license has been issued to the minor pursuant to the employer's written authorization."

■ Vehicle Code section 17710 provides: "The person signing a minor's application for a license is not liable under this chapter for a negligent or wrongful act or omission of the minor committed when the minor is acting as the agent or servant of any person."

■ Vehicle Code section 17711 provides: "Any person who has signed and verified the application of a minor for a driver's license or any employer who has authorized the issuance of a license to a minor and who desires to be relieved from the joint and several liability imposed by reason of having signed and verified such application, may file a verified application with the department requesting that the license of the minor be canceled. The department shall cancel the license, except as provided in subdivision (e) of Section 17712. Thereafter, the person shall be relieved from the liability imposed under this chapter by reason of having signed and verified the original application on account of any subsequent willful misconduct or negligent operation of a motor vehicle by the minor."

■ "Cancellation accomplishes voluntarily what revocation [of minor's driver's license] accomplishes involuntarily. If termination is accomplished by the latter method, resort to the former becomes superfluous. Once revocation occurs, the driving privilege is at an end. Thereafter there is no reason and no necessity for a voluntary application to terminate that which has already been terminated involuntarily. Both means are equally effective to terminate the driving privilege and to terminate the signer's liability." (Hamilton v. Dick (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 123, 125 [61 Cal.Rptr. 894] .)

■ "[T]he negligence of the minor son of the [parents] is imputed to them ... by virtue of their having signed his application for an operator's license, which was not revoked or cancelled at the time of the accident in question, notwithstanding the fact that the license was then temporarily suspended" and even though the parents specifically forbade the minor from operating the vehicle. (Sleeper v. Woodmansee (1936) 11 Cal.App.2d 595, 598 [54 P.2d 519] .)

■ "It seems quite evident that, in adopting [the predecessors to sections 17150 and 17707] of the Vehicle Code, the legislature intended to create a limited liability for imputed negligence against both the owner of an automobile and the signer of a driver's license. ... We must assume the legislature intended to fix a limited liability ... for imputed negligence against the owner of an automobile and the signer of a driver's license or either of them and that it did not intend to double that limited liability when the same individual was both the owner of the machine and the signer of the license." (Rogers v. Foppiano (1937) 23 Cal.App.2d 87, 92-93 [72 P.2d 239] .)

CACI 724 Negligent Entrustment of Motor Vehicle

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because [name of defendant] negligently permitted [name of driver] to use [name of defendant]'s vehicle. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of driver] was negligent in operating the vehicle;
- 2. That [name of defendant] [owned the vehicle operated by [name of driver]/had possession of the vehicle operated by [name of driver] with the owner's permission];
- 3. That [name of defendant] knew, or should have known, that [name of driver] was incompetent or unfit to drive the vehicle;
- 4. That [name of defendant] permitted [name of driver] to drive the vehicle; and
- 5. That [name of driver]'s incompetence or unfitness to drive was a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff].

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

For a definition of "negligence," see CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care.

● Vehicle Code section 14606(a) provides: "No person shall employ or hire any person to drive a motor vehicle nor shall he knowingly permit or authorize the driving of a motor vehicle, owned by him or her or under his or her control, upon the highways by any person unless the person is then licensed for the appropriate class of vehicle to be driven."

- Vehicle Code section 14607 provides: "No person shall cause or knowingly permit his child, ward, or employee under the age of 18 years to drive a motor vehicle upon the highways unless such child, ward, or employee is then licensed under this code."

- Vehicle Code section 14608(a) provides, in part: "No person shall rent a motor vehicle to another unless: [P] ... [t]he person to whom the vehicle is rented is licensed under this code or is a nonresident who is licensed under the laws of the state or country of his or her residence."

- "A rental car company may be held liable for negligently entrusting one of its cars to a customer. ... In determining whether defendant was negligent in entrusting its car to [the driver], defendant's conduct is to be measured by what an ordinarily prudent person would do in similar circumstances." (Osborn v. Hertz Corp. (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 703, 709 [252 Cal.Rptr. 613] , internal citations omitted.)

- Vehicle Code section 14606(a) and its predecessors "make a motor vehicle owner who knowingly entrusts his vehicle to an unlicensed driver liable for a third party's injuries caused by the driver's negligence. ... The cause of action parallels that at common law for negligent entrustment, resting on a demonstration of knowing entrustment to an incompetent or dangerous driver with actual or constructive knowledge of his incompetence." (Dodge Center v. Superior Court (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 332, 338 [244 Cal.Rptr. 789] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Liability for negligent entrustment is determined by applying general principles of negligence, and ordinarily it is for the jury to determine whether the owner has exercised the required degree of care." (Allen v. Toledo (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d 415, 421 [167 Cal.Rptr. 270] , internal citations omitted.)

- " 'It is generally recognized that one who places or entrusts his motor vehicle in the hands of one whom he knows, or from the circumstances is charged with knowing, is incompetent or unfit to drive, may be held liable for an injury inflicted by the use made thereof by that driver, provided the plaintiff can establish that the injury complained of was proximately caused by the driver's disqualification, incompetency, inexperience or recklessness' [P] ... Under the theory of 'negligent entrustment,' liability is imposed on vehicle owner or permitter because of his own independent negligence and not the negligence of the driver, in the event plaintiff can prove that the injury or death resulting therefrom was proximately caused by the driver's incompetency." (Syah v. Johnson (1966) 247 Cal.App.2d 534, 539 [55 Cal.Rptr. 741] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[O]rdinarily, in the absence of a special relationship between the parties, there is no duty to control the conduct of a third person so as to prevent him from causing harm to another and ... this rule applies even where the third person's conduct is made possible only because the defendant has relinquished control of his property to the third person, unless the defendant has reason to believe that the third person is incompetent to manage it." (Grafton v. Mollica (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 860, 863 [42 Cal.Rptr. 306] .)

- "In its simplest form the question is whether the owner when he permits an incompetent or reckless person, who he knows to be incompetent or reckless, to take and operate his car, acts as an ordinarily prudent person would be expected to act under the circumstances. ... [C]onsideration for the safety of others requires him to withhold his consent and thereby refrain from participating in any accident that is liable to happen from the careless and reckless driving of such a dangerous instrumentality." (Rocca v. Steinmetz (1923) 61 Cal.App. 102, 109 [214 P. 257] .)

■ "[T]he tort requires demonstration of actual knowledge of facts showing or suggesting the driver's incompetence--not merely his lack of a license. ... For liability to exist, knowledge must be shown of the user's incompetence or inability safely to use the [vehicle]." (Dodge Center, supra, 199 Cal.App.3d at p. 341 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Knowledge of possession of a temporary permit allowing a person to drive only if accompanied by a licensed driver is sufficient to put the entrustor 'upon inquiry as to the competency of' the unlicensed driver. ... It is then for the jury to determine under the circumstances whether the entrustor is negligent in permitting the unlicensed driver to operate the vehicle." (Nault v. Smith (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 257, 267-268 [14 Cal.Rptr. 889] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[E]ntrustment of a vehicle to an intoxicated person is not negligence per se. A plaintiff must prove defendant had knowledge of plaintiff's incompetence when entrusting the vehicle." (Blake v. Moore (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 700, 706 [208 Cal.Rptr. 703] .)

■ "[T]he mere sale of an automobile to an unlicensed and inexperienced person does not constitute negligence per se." (Perez v. G & W Chevrolet, Inc. (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 766, 768 [79 Cal.Rptr. 287] .)

■ "One who supplies an automobile for the use of another whom the supplier (1) knows, or (2) from facts known to him should know, to be likely, because of his inexperience (or incompetency), to use it in a manner involving unreasonable risk of bodily harm to others whom the supplier should expect to be in the vicinity of its use is subject to liability for bodily harm caused thereby to them." (Johnson v. Casetta (1961) 197 Cal.App.2d 272, 274 [17 Cal.Rptr. 81] , internal quotation marks omitted.)

■ "It is well-settled that where a company knows that an employee has no operator's license that such knowledge is sufficient to put the employer on inquiry as to his competency; it is for the jury to determine under such circumstances whether the employer was negligent in permitting the employee to drive a vehicle." (Syah, supra, 247 Cal.App.2d at p. 545 .)

■ "[I]t has generally been held that the owner of an automobile is under no duty to persons who may be injured by its use to keep it out of the hands of a third person in the absence of facts putting the owner on notice that the third person is incompetent to handle it." (Richards v. Stanley (1954) 43 Cal.2d 60, 63 [271 P.2d 23] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he mere fact of co-ownership does not prevent one co-owner from controlling use of the vehicle by the other co-owner. Thus, where ... plaintiff alleges that one co-owner had power over the use of the vehicle by the other and that the negligent co-owner drove with the express or implied consent of such controlling co-owner, who knew of the driver's incompetence, the basis for a cause of action for negligent entrustment has been stated." (Mettelka v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 1245, 1250 [219 Cal.Rptr. 697] .)

CHAPTER 7 California Judicial Council Motor Vehicles and Highway Safety Instructions

2-7 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 730

CACI 730 Emergency Vehicle Exemption (Veh. Code, § 21055)

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of public employee] was not required to comply with Vehicle Code section [insert section number] because [he/she] was operating an authorized emergency vehicle and was responding to an emergency at the time of the accident.

To establish that [name of public employee] was not required to comply with section [insert section number], [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of public employee] was operating an authorized emergency vehicle;
- 2. That [name of public employee] was responding to an emergency situation at the time of the accident; and
- 3. That [name of public employee] sounded a siren when reasonably necessary and displayed front red warning lights.

If you decide that [name of defendant] proved all of these things, then you cannot find it negligent for a violation of section [insert section number]. However, even if you decide that [name of defendant] proved all of these things, you may find it negligent if [name of public employee] failed to operate [his/her] vehicle with reasonable care, taking into account the emergency situation.

New September 2003

For a definition of "emergency," see CACI No. 731, Definition of "Emergency".

For a definition of "authorized emergency vehicle," see Vehicle Code section 165.

Note that Vehicle Code section 17004 provides: "A public employee is not liable for civil damages on account of personal injury to or death of any person or damage to property resulting from the operation, in the line of duty, of an authorized emergency vehicle while responding to an emergency call or when in the immediate pursuit of an actual or suspected violator of the law, or when responding to but not upon returning from a fire alarm or other emergency call."

- Vehicle Code section 21055 provides, in part:

The driver of an authorized emergency vehicle is exempt from [specified Vehicle Code sections] under all of the following conditions:

(a) If the vehicle is being driven in response to an emergency call or while engaged in rescue operations or is being used in the immediate pursuit of an actual or suspected violator of the law or is responding to, but not returning from, a fire alarm, except that fire department vehicles are exempt whether directly responding to an emergency call or operated from one place to another as rendered desirable or necessary by reason of an emergency call and operated to the scene of the emergency or operated from one fire station to another or to some other location by reason of the emergency call.

(b) If the driver of the vehicle sounds a siren as may be reasonably necessary and the vehicle displays a lighted red lamp visible from the front as a warning to other drivers and pedestrians.

- "The purpose of the statute is to provide a 'clear and speedy pathway' for these municipal vehicles on their flights to emergencies in which the entire public are necessarily concerned." (Peerless Laundry Services v. City of Los Angeles (1952) 109 Cal.App.2d 703, 707 [241 P.2d 269] .)

- Vehicle Code section 21056 provides: "Section 21055 does not relieve the driver of a vehicle from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons using the highway, nor protect him from the consequences of an arbitrary exercise of the privileges granted in that section."

- "The effect of Vehicle Code sections 21055 and 21056 is: where the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle is engaged in a specified emergency function he may violate certain rules of the road, such as speed and right of way laws, if he activates his red light and where necessary his siren in order to alert other users of the road to the situation. In such circumstances the driver may not be held to be negligent solely upon the violation of specified rules of the road, but may be held to be negligent if he fails to exercise due regard for the safety of others under the circumstances. Where the driver of an emergency vehicle fails to activate his red light, and where necessary his siren, he is not exempt from the rules of the road even though he may be engaged in a proper emergency function, and negligence may be based upon the violation of the rules of the road." (City of Sacramento v. Superior Court (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 395, 402-403 [182 Cal.Rptr. 443] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Notwithstanding [Vehicle Code section 17004], a public entity is liable for injuries proximately caused by negligent acts or omissions in the operation of any motor vehicle by an employee of the public entity, acting within the scope of his or her employment." (City of San Jose v. Superior Court (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 695, 698 [212 Cal.Rptr. 661] , internal citations omitted.)

- "If the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle is responding to an emergency call and gives the prescribed warnings by red light and siren, a charge of negligence against him may not be predicated on his violation of the designated Vehicle Code sections; but if he does not give the warnings, the contrary is true; and in the event the charged negligence is premised on conduct without the scope of the exemption a common-law standard of care is applicable." (Grant v. Petronella (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 281, 286 [123 Cal.Rptr. 399] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Where the driver of an emergency vehicle responding to an emergency call does not give the warnings prescribed by section 21055, the legislative warning policy expressed in that section dictates the conclusion [that] the common-law standard of care governing his conduct does not include a consideration of the emergency circumstances attendant upon his response to an emergency call." (Grant, supra, 50 Cal.App.3d at p. 289 , footnote omitted.)

■ The exemption created by section 21055 is an affirmative defense, and the defendant must prove compliance with the conditions. (Washington v. City and County of San Francisco (1954) 123 Cal.App.2d 235, 242 [266 P.2d 828] .)

■ "In short the statute exempts the employer of such a driver from liability for negligence attributable to his failure to comply with specified statutory provisions, but it does not in any manner purport to exempt the employer from liability due to negligence attributable to the driver's failure to maintain that standard of care imposed by the common law." (Torres v. City of Los Angeles (1962) 58 Cal.2d 35, 47 [22 Cal.Rptr. 866, 372 P.2d 906] .)

CACI 731 Definition of "Emergency" (Veh. Code, § 21055)

An "emergency" exists if the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle is [insert one of the following]

[responding to an emergency call.]

[involved in rescue operations.]

[in the immediate pursuit of an actual or suspected violator of the law.]

[responding to, but not returning from, a fire alarm.]

[operating a fire department vehicle while traveling from one place to another place because of an emergency call.]

New September 2003

This instruction is based on the language of Vehicle Code section 21055(a) and is only intended for cases in which there is a factual issue regarding whether the defendant was acting in response to an emergency at the time of the accident. (Washington v. City and County of San Francisco (1954) 123 Cal.App.2d 235, 241 [266 P.2d 828] .)

■ Vehicle Code section 21055(a) provides: "The driver of an authorized emergency vehicle is exempt from [specified Vehicle Code sections] under all of the following conditions: If the vehicle is being driven in response to an emergency call or while engaged in rescue operations or is being used in the

■ "Whether a vehicle is driven in response to an emergency call depends on the nature of the call received and the situation as presented to the mind of the driver and not upon whether there is an emergency in fact. The driver, of course, should have reasonable grounds to believe that there is an emergency." (Gallup v. Sparks-Mundo Engineering Co. (1954) 43 Cal.2d 1, 5 [271 P.2d 34] , internal citations omitted.)

This is for use in conjunction with the general negligence verdict forms involving motor vehicles. The four questions here should be incorporated into the verdict form regarding the underlying case. The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 720, Motor Vehicle Owner Liability--Permissive Use of Vehicle, and CACI No. 721, Motor Vehicle Owner Liability--Affirmative Defense--Use Beyond Scope of Permission.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

Publisher's Notes

This verdict form covers issues presented in BAJI Nos. 16.60.1 and 16.92.

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Railroad Crossings Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 800 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- The basic standard of care for railroads [CACI No. 800].
- The duty of railroads to comply with safety regulations [CACI No. 801].
- Regulating speed of trains in railroad crossings [CACI No. 803].
- Lookout for crossing traffic [CACI No. 804].
- Installing warning systems [CACI No. 805].
- Contributory negligence and the duty to approach a railroad crossing with care [CACI No. 806].

CHAPTER 8 California Judicial Council Railroad Crossings Instructions

2-8 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 800

CACI 800 Basic Standard of Care for Railroads

Railroad companies must use reasonable care to avoid causing injury to anyone crossing railroad tracks from a street or roadway. [Railroad companies must use reasonable care in the design and maintenance of warning signals and protective devices at railroad crossings.] [Train operators must use reasonable care in operating their trains at railroad crossings.] The failure to use reasonable care is negligence.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series should be used together with one or more of the instructions that follow, which give specific guidance on the nature and scope of a railroad's duties of care regarding grade crossings.

Consideration should be given as to whether any of the asserted theories of liability are preempted by federal law (see CSX Transportation, Inc. v. Easterwood (1993) 507 U.S. 658 [113 S.Ct. 1732, 123 L.Ed.2d 387] and Norfolk Southern Railway Co. v. Shanklin (2000) 529 U.S. 344 [120 S.Ct. 1467, 146 L.Ed.2d 374]). If so, it may be necessary to modify this instruction to avoid indirect reference to these theories.

- The California Supreme Court has stated the duty of railroads at crossings as follows: "Generally speaking, the duty to exercise reasonable or ordinary care is imposed upon the operator of a railroad at public highway crossings with respect to persons traveling upon the highway and over the crossing, both as to the manner of operating the train and the maintenance of the crossing. The standard of care is that of the man of ordinary prudence under the circumstances." (Peri v. Los Angeles Junction Ry. Co. (1943) 22 Cal.2d 111, 120 [137 P.2d 441] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Ordinarily the issue of the negligence in crossing cases, whether the railroad was negligent in the design and maintenance of the crossing or in the operation of the train, is one of fact as in other negligence cases." (Romo v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 909, 916 [139 Cal.Rptr. 787] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The amount of care that is "reasonable" varies in proportion to the circumstances constituting the probable danger. (Romo, supra, 71 Cal.App.3d at p. 916 .)

■ "Where the conditions existing at the crossing create an unusual hazard or danger, the operator of the railroad must exercise care commensurate with those circumstances, and whether he has done so is a question of fact." (Peri, supra, 22 Cal.2d at p. 123 .)

■ "We hold that ... federal regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pre-empt respondent's negligence action only insofar as it asserts that petitioner's train was traveling at an excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc., supra, 507 U.S. at p. 676 .)

■ "When the [Federal Highway Administration] approves a crossing improvement project and the State installs the warning devices using federal funds, [federal regulations] establish a federal standard for the adequacy of those devices that displaces state tort law addressing the same subject." (Norfolk Southern Railway Co., supra, 529 U.S. at p. 357 .)

CHAPTER 8 California Judicial Council Railroad Crossings Instructions

*2-8 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 801CACI 801 Duty to Comply With Safety Regulations

An [ordinance/regulation] of the [insert name of entity] provides as follows: [insert text of ordinance or regulation]

Railroad companies must obey safety regulations. Regulations state only the minimum measure of care required of a railroad company. Particular conditions and situations may require a company to use more care than the regulations require.

New September 2003

Regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pursuant to the Federal Railroad Safety Act preempt state common-law negligence claims based on general allegations of "excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc. v. Easterwood (1993) 507 U.S. 658, 675 [113 S.Ct. 1732, 123 L.Ed.2d 387] .) Also, claims alleging inadequate warning devices are preempted where federally funded grade crossing improvements have been installed. (Norfolk Southern Railway Co. v. Shanklin (2000) 529 U.S. 344, 359 [120 S.Ct. 1467, 146 L.Ed.2d 374] .) This instruction is not intended to apply to situations in which a railroad's compliance with these federal safety regulations would preempt state law negligence claims.

■ " "It is well settled that such statutory regulations constitute only the minimum measure of care required by the railroad, and it is usually a matter for the jury to determine whether something more than the minimum was required under the evidence in the case." " A railroad company is not necessarily free from negligence, even though it may have literally complied with safety statutes or rules. The circumstances may require it to do more." (Hogue v. Southern Pacific Co. (1969) 1 Cal.3d 253, 258 [81 Cal.Rptr. 765, 460 P.2d 965] , internal citations omitted; Peri v. Los Angeles Junction Ry. Co. (1943) 22

■ "If the peculiar characteristics of a crossing call for the installation of automatic protection--or the upgrading of existing automatic protection--the railroad may be guilty of negligence in failing to provide such protection." (Romo v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 909, 916 [139 Cal.Rptr. 787] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We hold that ... federal regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pre-empt respondent's negligence action only insofar as it asserts that petitioner's train was traveling at an excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc., supra, 507 U.S. at p. 676 .)

■ "When the [Federal Highway Administration] approves a crossing improvement project and the State installs the warning devices using federal funds, [federal regulations] establish a federal standard for the adequacy of those devices that displaces state tort law addressing the same subject." CHAPTER 8 California Judicial Council Railroad Crossings Instructions

2-8 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 803

CACI 803 Regulating Speed

[A railroad company] [A train operator] must use reasonable care to control the train's speed as it approaches and passes through a railroad crossing. The [railroad company] [train operator] must control train speed with due regard for the safety of human life and property, taking into consideration the location and conditions of the crossing.

New September 2003

This instruction may not be appropriate in certain cases. Regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pursuant to the Federal Railroad Safety Act preempt state common-law negligence claims based on general allegations of "excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc. v. Easterwood (1993) 507 U.S. 658, 675 [113 S.Ct. 1732, 123 L.Ed.2d 387] .) However, a negligence action based on a duty to slow or stop a train to avoid a specific, individual hazard is not preempted. (CSX Transportation, Inc., supra, 507 U.S. at 676, fn. 15 .)

- "We hold that ... federal regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pre-empt respondent's negligence action only insofar as it asserts that petitioner's train was traveling at an excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc., supra, 507 U.S. at p. 676 .)

- "While it is true that no rate of speed is negligence per se in the absence of a statute or ordinance, it does not follow that a railroad company will be permitted to run its trains under all conditions at any rate of speed it may choose. It must regulate its speed with proper regard for the safety of human life and property, especially when running through towns and cities. ... [T]he question whether or not a rate of speed is excessive is one of fact for the jury." (Young v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1929) 208 Cal. 568,

572-573 [283 P. 61] .)

- "The 'reasonably prudent person' test applies also to the speed at which a train approaches and passes a crossing, and material in the application of that test is 'that no unnecessary risk shall be cast upon the public' considering the 'location and surroundings' of the crossing involved. Specially mentioned is a 'crossing in a thickly populated community and extensively used.' " (Rice v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 247 Cal.App.2d 701, 707 [55 Cal.Rptr. 840] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]t is for the jury to say whether the speed of a train was too high for a particular intersection." (Romo v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 909, 916 [139 Cal.Rptr. 787] .)

- Even when crossing protection is provided and the company speed limit is not exceeded, speeding is still a question of fact. (Herrera v. Southern Pacific Co. (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 781, 787 [318 P.2d 784] .)

CHAPTER 8 California Judicial Council Railroad Crossings Instructions

2-8 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 804

CACI 804 Lookout for Crossing Traffic

A train operator must keep a reasonable lookout for vehicles and people. If an operator discovers, or should have discovered, that a vehicle or a person is on or near the track, the operator must use reasonable care to avoid causing harm.

New September 2003

For an instruction regarding the right to expect that others will use reasonable care, see CACI No. 411, Reliance on Good Conduct of Others.

Regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pursuant to the Federal Railroad Safety Act preempt state common-law negligence claims based on general allegations of "excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc. v. Easterwood (1993) 507 U.S. 658, 675 [113 S.Ct. 1732, 123 L.Ed.2d 387] .) However, a negligence action based on a duty to slow or stop a train to avoid a specific, individual hazard is not preempted. (CSX Transportation, Inc., supra, 507 U.S. at p. 675, fn. 15 .)

- "Obviously, the railroad may not be required to guarantee the safety of those crossing its tracks. It is not required to anticipate that at every crossing, an automobile will be driven in the path of the train. It is only required to exercise ordinary care to discover such automobiles and to thereafter exercise care to avoid a collision." (Essick v. Union Pacific Ry. Co. (1960) 182 Cal.App.2d 456, 463 [6 Cal.Rptr. 208] .)

- The following instruction was approved in Essick, supra, 182 Cal.App.2d at p. 461 : "The duty of [defendant] toward persons using the private crossing we are here concerned with was to exercise ordinary care to discover any such persons on or near the crossing and to exercise ordinary care to avoid injuring such persons after their presence on or near the track was discovered.' "

■ "The train crew cannot assume that a highway crossing in the middle of a city will be clear and they must keep a reasonable lookout for the presence of intersecting traffic. This implies as a corollary the further obligation to have the train under such control as may be reasonably necessary to deal with situations which an ordinarily prudent operator would anticipate." (Herrera v. Southern Pacific Co. (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 781, 785 [318 P.2d 784] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The installation and maintenance of automatic signals does not relieve a railroad company of this duty of keeping a reasonable lookout for other traffic." (Herrera, supra, 155 Cal.App.2d at p. 786 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We hold that ... federal regulations adopted by the Secretary of Transportation pre-empt respondent's negligence action only insofar as it asserts that petitioner's train was traveling at an excessive speed." (CSX Transportation, Inc., supra, 507 U.S. at p. 676 .) However, a negligence action based on a duty to slow or stop a train to avoid a specific, individual hazard is not preempted. (Ibid, fn. 15.)

■ In a thoughtful opinion, the Oklahoma Supreme Court has held the following: "We hold that a specific, individual hazard is a person, vehicle, obstruction, object, or event which is not a fixed condition or feature of the crossing and which is not capable of being taken into account by the Secretary of Transportation in the promulgation of uniform, national speed regulations. In short, a specific, individual hazard refers to a unique occurrence which could lead to a specific and imminent collision and not to allegedly dangerous conditions at a particular crossing." (Myers v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. (Okla. 2002) 52 P.3d 1014, 1027 , footnotes omitted.)

CHAPTER 8 California Judicial Council Railroad Crossings Instructions

2-8 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 805

CACI 805 Installing Warning Systems

Railroad companies must post signs or other devices that give the public reasonable warning of the presence of its tracks. A railroad company must use reasonable care in the design, installation, operation, and maintenance of its warning signals and protective systems. The amount of care that is reasonable depends on the particular characteristics of each crossing.

New September 2003

This instruction may not be appropriate in certain cases. Claims alleging inadequate warning devices are preempted where federally funded grade crossing improvements have been installed. (Norfolk Southern Railway Co. v. Shanklin (2000) 529 U.S. 344, 353 [120 S.Ct. 1467, 146 L.Ed.2d 374] .)

- "[O]nce the [Federal Highway Administration] has funded the crossing improvement and the warning devices are actually installed and operating, the regulation 'displace[s] state and private decision-making authority by establishing a federal-law requirement that certain devices be installed or federal approval obtained.' " (Norfolk Southern Railway Co., supra, 529 U.S. at p. 354 , internal citation omitted.)

- "It should be noted that nothing prevents a State from revisiting the adequacy of devices installed using federal funds. States are free to install more protective devices at such crossings with their own funds or with additional funding from the FHWA. What States cannot do--once they have installed federally funded devices at a particular crossing--is hold the railroad responsible for the adequacy of those devices." (Norfolk Southern Railway Co., supra, 529 U.S. at p. 358 .)

■ "If the peculiar characteristics of a crossing call for the installation of automatic protection--or the upgrading of existing automatic protection--the railroad may be guilty of negligence in failing to provide such protection." (Romo v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 909, 916 [139 Cal.Rptr. 787] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Whether a railroad is negligent in the design and maintenance of the crossing is a question of fact for the jury." (Wilkinson v. Southern Pacific Co. (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 478, 487-488 [36 Cal.Rptr. 689] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The defendant, having undertaken to warn travelers of the approach of its trains by the use of a wigwag, was under a duty to use reasonable care in the construction and maintenance of the signal system lest the appearance of safety created by the presence of the device constitute a trap for persons relying upon it for protection." (Startup v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1947) 29 Cal.2d 866, 869 [180 P.2d 896] .)

■ "Whatever may be the purpose of maintaining an automatic wig-wag signal at a railroad crossing, even though it be intended to merely warn travelers of the approach of trains, common justice demands that it shall be so constructed and maintained that it will not lure travelers on the highway into danger. It follows that a company which does maintain such a defective system will be held liable for injuries sustained as the result of those imperfections, regardless of whether the system was designed to warn travelers of the approach of trains rather than to inform them of the danger from stationary cars which block the crossings." (Mallett v. Southern Pacific Co. (1937) 20 Cal.App.2d 500, 509 [68 P.2d 281] .)

CHAPTER 8 California Judicial Council Railroad Crossings Instructions

2-8 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 806

CACI 806 Comparative Fault--Duty to Approach Crossing With Care

A driver approaching a railroad crossing is required to use reasonable care to discover whether a train is approaching. The amount of care that is reasonable will depend on the circumstances. A railroad track is itself a warning of danger. If the driver's view of approaching trains is blocked, he or she must use greater care than when the view is clear.

If a bell or signal has been placed to warn drivers of danger, a driver is not required to use as much care as when there are no such warnings. However, even if the warning devices are not activated, a driver must use reasonable care in looking and listening for approaching trains.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

For an instruction regarding the prima facie speed limits set by Vehicle Code section 22352, see CACI No. 707, Speed Limit. For an instruction on the duty of care of a passenger, see CACI No. 711, The Passenger's Duty of Care for Own Safety. For instructions on negligence per se, see CACI Nos. 418 to 421.

■ Vehicle Code section 22451 provides:

- (a) The driver of any vehicle or pedestrian approaching a railroad or rail transit grade crossing shall stop not less than 15 feet from the nearest rail and shall not proceed until he or she can do so safely, whenever the following conditions exist:
 - (1) A clearly visible electric or mechanical signal device or a flagman gives warning of the approach or passage of a train or car.

(2) An approaching train or car is plainly visible or is emitting an audible signal and, by reason of its speed or nearness, is an immediate hazard.

(b) No driver or pedestrian shall proceed through, around, or under any railroad or rail transit crossing gate while the gate is closed.

(c) Whenever a railroad or rail transit crossing is equipped with an automated enforcement system, a notice of a violation of this section is subject to the procedures provided in Section 40518.

■ Vehicle Code section 22352(a)(1) provides that the prima facie speed limit is 15 miles per hour under the following circumstances: "(A) When traversing a railway grade crossing, if during the last 100 feet of the approach to the crossing the driver does not have a clear and unobstructed view of the crossing and of any traffic on the railway for a distance of 400 feet in both directions along the railway. This subdivision does not apply in the case of any railway grade crossing where a human flagman is on duty or a clearly visible electrical or mechanical railway crossing signal device is installed but does not then indicate the immediate approach of a railway train or car, and (B) When traversing any intersection of highways if during the last 100 feet of the driver's approach to the intersection the driver does not have a clear and unobstructed view of the intersection and of any traffic upon all of the highways entering the intersection for a distance of 100 feet along all those highways, except at an intersection protected by stop signs or yield right-of-way signs or controlled by official traffic control signals."

■ "[T]hat the driver's view is somewhat obstructed does not make him contributorily negligent as a matter of law; whether his failure to stop, the place from which he looks and the character and extent of the obstruction to his view are such that a reasonably prudent person would not have so conducted himself are questions for the jury in determining whether he was guilty of contributory negligence." (Lucas v. Southern Pacific Co. (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 124, 139 [96 Cal.Rptr. 356] .)

■ "A railroad track is itself a warning of danger and a driver intending to cross must avail himself of every opportunity to look and listen; if there are obstructions to the view, he is required to take greater care." (Wilkinson v. Southern Pacific Co. (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 478, 488 [36 Cal.Rptr. 689] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A railroad company will not be permitted to encourage persons to relax their vigil concerning the dangers that lurk in railroad crossings by assuring them, through the erection of safety devices, that the danger has been removed or minimized, and, at the same time, to hold them to the same degree of care as would be required if those devices had not been provided." (Will v. Southern Pacific Co. (1941) 18 Cal.2d 468, 474 [116 P.2d 44] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[A] driver may not cross tracks in reliance upon the safety appliances installed by the railroad with complete disregard for his own safety and recover damages for injuries sustained by reason of his own failure to use reasonable care." (Will, supra, 18 Cal.2d at p. 475 .)

■ "Violation of the railroad's statutory duty to sound bell and whistle at a highway crossing does not absolve a driver from his failure to look and listen and, if necessitated by circumstances such as obstructed vision, even to stop." (Wilkinson, supra, 224 Cal.App.2d at p. 489 .)

■ "It is settled that a railroad may not encourage persons traveling on highways to rely on safety devices and then hold them to the same degree of care as if the devices were not present." (Startup v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1947) 29 Cal.2d 866, 871 [180 P.2d 896] .)

■ "When a flagman or mechanical warning device has been provided at a railroad crossing, the driver of an automobile is thereby encouraged to relax his vigilance, and, in using other means to discover whether there is danger of approaching trains, he is not required to exercise the same quantum of care as would otherwise be necessary." (Spendlove v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1947) 30 Cal.2d 632, 634 [184 P.2d 873] , internal citations omitted.)

■ An instruction that a driver must stop, look, and listen when his or her view is obstructed was held prejudicially erroneous in Anello v. Southern Pacific Co. (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 317, 322 [344 P.2d 843] .

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Common Carriers Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 900 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- An introductory instruction [CACI No. 900].
- When the defendant's status as a common carrier is disputed [CACI No. 901].
- The various duties of a common carrier, including the general duty [CACI No. 902], the duty to provide and maintain safe equipment [CACI No. 903], the duty to disabled, infirm, and minor passengers [CACI Nos. 904, 905], and the duty to protect passengers from assault [CACI No. 908].
- The duty of a passenger for his or her own safety [CACI No. 906].
- When the status of the plaintiff as a "passenger" is disputed [CACI No. 907].

*2-9 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 900CACI 900 Introductory Instruction

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s negligence while [he/she] was a passenger on [name of defendant]'s [insert type of carrier -- e.g., train].

[In this case, [name of defendant] was a common carrier at the time of the incident. A common carrier provides transportation to the general public.]

[or]

[[Name of plaintiff] also claims that [name of defendant] was a common carrier at the time of the incident.]

New September 2003

Give either one of the bracketed sentences, depending on whether the defendant's status as a common carrier is contested or not.

This instruction is intended as an introductory instruction to frame the issues. CACI No. 400, Essential Factual Elements (Negligence), would still be given to set forth the elements that plaintiff has to prove in order to recover (i.e., negligence, harm, and causation).

■ Civil Code section 2168 provides: "Everyone who offers to the public to carry persons, property, or messages, excepting only telegraphic messages, is a common carrier of whatever he thus offers to carry."

■ Civil Code section 2085 provides: "[C]arriage is a contract for the conveyance of property, persons, or messages, from one place to another."

■ "[A] common carrier within the meaning of Civil Code section 2168 is any entity which holds itself out to the public generally and indifferently to transport goods or persons from place to place for profit." (Squaw Valley Ski Corporation v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 1499, 1508 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 897] .)

CHAPTER 9 California Judicial Council Common Carriers Instructions

2-9 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 901

CACI 901 Status of Common Carrier Disputed

To prove that [name of defendant] was a common carrier, [name of plaintiff] must prove that it was in the business of transporting [the property of] the general public.

In deciding this issue, you may consider whether any of the following factors apply. These factors suggest that a carrier is a common carrier:

- (a) The carrier maintains a regular place of business for the purpose of transporting passengers [or property].
- (b) The carrier advertises its services to the general public.
- (c) The carrier charges standard fees for its services.
- (d) [Insert other applicable factor(s).]

A carrier can be a common carrier even if it does not have a regular schedule of departures, a fixed route, or a transportation license.

If you find that [name of defendant] was not a common carrier, then [name of defendant] did not have the duty of a common carrier, only a duty of ordinary care.

New September 2003

The court should give the ordinary negligence instructions in conjunction with this one. Ordinary negligence is the standard applicable to private carriers.

- Whether a party is a common carrier is a question of fact, but it can be decided as a matter of law where the facts are undisputed. (Squaw Valley Ski Corporation v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 1499, 1506 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 897] .)

- Civil Code section 2168 provides: "Everyone who offers to the public to carry persons, property, or messages, excepting only telegraphic messages, is a common carrier of whatever he thus offers to carry."

- Civil Code section 2085 provides: "The contract of carriage is a contract for the conveyance of property, persons, or messages, from one place to another."

- "[A] common carrier within the meaning of Civil Code section 2168 is any entity which holds itself out to the public generally and indifferently to transport goods or persons from place to place for profit." (Squaw Valley, supra, 2 Cal.App.4th at p. 1508 , internal citations omitted.)

- "A private carrier ... is bound only to accept carriage pursuant to special agreement." (Webster v. Ebright (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 784, 787 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 714] .) Private carriers " 'make no public profession that they will carry for all who apply, but ... occasionally or upon the particular occasion undertake for compensation to carry the goods of others upon such terms as may be agreed upon.' " (Id. at p. 788 , internal citations omitted.)

- Private carriers are not held to the "utmost care" standard of common carriers, but are instead required to exercise only ordinary care. (Webster, supra, 3 Cal.App.4th at p. 787 .)

- " '[T]he law applicable to common carriers is peculiarly rigorous, and it ought not to be extended to persons who have not expressly assumed that character, or by their conduct and from the nature of their business justified the belief on the part of the public that they intended to assume it.' " (Samuelson v. Public Utilities Com. (1951) 36 Cal.2d 722, 730 [227 P.2d 256] , internal citation omitted.)

- It does not matter if the service is specialized in nature and thus of use to only a small number of people: "To be a common carrier, the entity merely must be of the character that members of the general public may, if they choose, avail themselves of it." (Squaw Valley, supra, 2 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1509-1510 , internal citation omitted.)

- In Gradus v. Hanson Aviation, Inc. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 1038 [205 Cal.Rptr. 211] , the court approved of an instruction stating that the plaintiff had the burden of proving that the defendant "undertook either expressly or by course of conduct generally and for all persons indifferently to carry and deliver them for hire, so long as it had room." (Id. at pp. 1047-1048 .) The court also approved of giving the jury the factors of regular place of business, advertising, and standard charges. (Id. at p. 1048 .) Note that these factors may not be applicable in all cases. For example, ski lifts, elevators, and escalators are considered common carriers even though they do not generally advertise as such or charge a fee. The rationale for the higher standard of care is that "[a]lthough a store does not charge for use of its elevators or escalators, it profits from the utilization of these devices to assist customers in shopping at the store." (Squaw Valley, supra, 2 Cal.App.4th at p. 1508 .)

- Carriers that are typically thought of as common carriers can, by special arrangement, temporarily become private carriers: "In the situation at bar, the Yellow Cab Company's motor cars were customarily and daily cruising the streets for patronage or awaiting calls of the public. It was a common carrier in transporting such patrons. But when it agreed to act as carrier of handicapped school children under agreement for its operators to escort the pupils to and from their schools and homes to the cab and to render such service exclusively for them at designated hours, the company ceased to be a common carrier while transporting the specified children during such hours." (Hopkins v. Yellow Cab Co. (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 394, 398 [250 P.2d 330] .)

CHAPTER 9 California Judicial Council Common Carriers Instructions

2-9 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 902

CACI 902 Duty of Common Carrier

Common carriers must carry passengers [or property] safely. Common carriers must use the highest care and the vigilance of a very cautious person. They must do all that human care, vigilance, and foresight reasonably can do under the circumstances to avoid harm to passengers [or property].

While a common carrier does not guarantee the safety of its passengers [or property that it transports], it must use reasonable skill to provide everything necessary for safe transportation, in view of the transportation used and the practical operation of the business.

New September 2003

- Civil Code section 2100 provides: "A carrier of persons for reward must use the utmost care and diligence for their safe carriage, must provide everything necessary for that purpose, and must exercise to that end a reasonable degree of skill."

- "Common carriers bind themselves to carry safely those whom they take into their vehicles, and owe both a duty of utmost care and the vigilance of a very cautious person towards their passengers. Such carriers are responsible for any, even the slightest, negligence and are required to do all that human care, vigilance, and foresight reasonably can do under all the circumstances." (Acosta v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 19, 27 [84 Cal.Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72], internal citations omitted.)

- The elevated standard of care for common carriers is "based on a recognition that the privilege of serving the public as a common carrier necessarily entails great responsibility, requiring common carriers to exercise a high duty of care towards their customers." (Squaw Valley Ski Corporation v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 1499, 1507 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 897] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Common carriers are not insurers of their passengers' safety. "Rather, the degree of care and diligence which they must exercise is only such as can reasonably be exercised consistent with the character and mode of conveyance adopted and the practical operation of the business of the carrier." (Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 780, 785 [221 Cal.Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 9 California Judicial Council Common Carriers Instructions

2-9 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 903

CACI 903 Duty to Provide and Maintain Safe Equipment

Common carriers must use the highest care in constructing, servicing, inspecting, and maintaining their vehicles and equipment for transporting passengers [or property].

A common carrier is responsible for a defect in its vehicles and equipment used for transporting passengers [or property] if the common carrier:

- (a) Created the defect; or
- (b) Knew of the defect; or
- (c) Would have known of the defect if it had used the highest care.

Common carriers must keep up with modern improvements in transportation. While they are not required to seek out and use every new invention, they must adopt commonly accepted safety designs and devices in the vehicles and equipment they use for transporting passengers [or property].

New September 2003

To correct the impression that a carrier is absolutely liable for unsafe equipment, this instruction should be given together with instructions stating that a common carrier does not guarantee the safety of its passengers and that the level of care is the highest that reasonably can be exercised consistent with the mode of transportation used and the practical operation of its business as a carrier (see CACI No. 902, Duty of Common Carrier). (Gradus v. Hanson Aviation, Inc. (1984) 158 Cal.App.3d 1038, 1049-1050 [205 Cal.Rptr. 211] .)

■ Civil Code section 2101 provides: "A carrier of persons for reward is bound to provide vehicles safe and fit for the purposes to which they are put, and is not excused for default in this respect by any degree of care."

■ "The duty of care imposed on a common carrier of passengers includes the duty to furnish safe facilities for their passage." (Cooper v. National Railroad Passenger Corporation (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 389, 395 [119 Cal.Rptr. 541] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Ewing v. Cloverleaf Bowl (1978) 20 Cal.3d 389, 401 [143 Cal.Rptr. 13, 572 P.2d 1155] .)

■ Failure to give an instruction on Civil Code section 2101 may not be error where an instruction on the "utmost care" standard is given. (Powell v. Dell-Air Aviation, Inc. (1968) 268 Cal.App.2d 451, 457-458 [74 Cal.Rptr. 3] .)

■ The Supreme Court found error where an instruction omitted the duty to inspect: "An owner is bound to use the utmost care and diligence in the maintenance of elevators. In the fulfillment of this obligation something more than regular and frequent inspections is required. Perfunctory inspections, although regularly and frequently made, would not meet the obligation appellant owed to respondents. In order to fulfill the duty imposed upon it by law appellant was required to use due care in servicing, inspecting and maintaining the elevator and all the appliances appurtenant thereto. The instruction erroneously failed to include this requirement." (Brown v. George Pepperdine Foundation (1943) 23 Cal.2d 256, 261 [143 P.2d 929] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The [equipment] must, therefore, under the standard of utmost care required of a carrier, be constructed, maintained and operated with the purpose and design to prevent injury" (Vandagriff v. J.C. Penney (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 579, 582 [39 Cal.Rptr. 671] .)

■ Notice of defect is required where the carrier did not create dangerous condition: "In our view, the high degree of care required of a common carrier might impose a greater duty to inspect and thus make notice or knowledge more easily established, but the concept of the carrier's legal responsibility does not exclude the factor of notice or knowledge. The weight of authority supports the proposition that, in cases such as the instant one, actual or constructive notice is a prerequisite to the carrier's liability." (Gray v. City and County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal.App.2d 319, 330-331 [20 Cal.Rptr. 894] .)

■ Common carriers "must keep pace with science and art and modern improvement in their application to the carriage of passengers." (Greyhound Lines, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 356, 359 [83 Cal.Rptr. 343] , citing Treadwell v. Whittier (1889) 80 Cal. 574, 592, 600 [22 P. 266] .)

■ In Treadwell, the court approved of a jury instruction stating that while elevator operators "were not required to seek and apply every new invention, they must adopt such as are found by experience to combine the greater safety with practical use." The court said the instruction "is but a fair deduction from the rule that the defendants must use the utmost care and diligence to carry safely those who ride in their [conveyance]" (Treadwell, supra, 80 Cal. at pp. 599-600 .) The court held that common carriers "are bound for defects in the vehicles which they furnish, which might have been discovered by the most careful examination" (Id. at p. 595 .)

If a common carrier voluntarily accepts a child as a passenger, it must use as much additional care as is reasonably necessary to ensure the child's safety.

New September 2003

■ A common carrier owes a greater duty of care to minor passengers: "It is settled law that a carrier owes a greater quantum of care to a child of tender years accepted by it as a passenger than it would to an adult." (Brizzolari v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1935) 7 Cal.App.2d 246, 248 [46 P.2d 783] .)

CHAPTER 9 California Judicial Council Common Carriers Instructions

2-9 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 906

CACI 906 Duty of Passenger for Own Safety

While a common carrier must use the highest care for its passengers' safety, passengers need only use reasonable care for their own safety.

New September 2003

■ This instruction is intended to clarify that passengers and common carriers have different standards of care. Courts have addressed the potential for confusion in this area when contributory negligence of the passenger is at issue: "As applied to the standard of care imposed upon the common carrier as compared to the standard imposed on the passenger it is both erroneous and misleading to tell the jury, as was done here, that there are no degrees of negligence or contributory negligence in California, since the common carrier is in fact held to a higher degree of care than is the passenger. To follow this erroneous and misleading statement with the instruction, in the identical language used in another instruction concerning the defendant carrier's duty of care, that 'any negligence, however slight,' of the decedent proximately contributing to her death would bar a recovery, was to inform the jury that in determining negligence and contributory negligence they must apply the same standard of care." (Wilson v. City and County of San Francisco (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 273, 276 [344 P.2d 828] .)

CHAPTER 9 California Judicial Council Common Carriers Instructions

2-9 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 907

CACI 907 Status of Passenger Disputed

A common carrier owes the highest care and vigilance to persons only while they are passengers. [Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was [name of defendant]'s passenger at the time of the incident.

To establish that [name of plaintiff] was a passenger, [he/she] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] intended to become a passenger;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was accepted as a passenger by [name of defendant]; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] placed [himself/herself] under the control of [name of defendant].

To be a passenger, it is not necessary for the person to actually enter the carrier's vehicle [or name mode of travel, e.g., bus, train]; however, the carrier must have taken some action indicating acceptance of the person as a passenger. A person continues to be a passenger until he or she safely leaves the carrier's vehicle [or equipment].

A common carrier must use the highest care and vigilance in providing its passengers with a safe place to get on and off its vehicles [or equipment].

New September 2003

■ The heightened degree of care for common carriers is owed only while "passengers are in transitu, and until they have safely departed the carrier's vehicle." (Marshall v. United Airlines (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 84, 86 [110 Cal.Rptr. 416] .)

■ The relationship of carrier and passenger is "created when one offers to become a passenger, and is accepted as a passenger after he has placed himself under the control of the carrier." (Grier v. Ferrant (1944) 62 Cal.App.2d 306, 310 [144 P.2d 631] .)

■ It is not necessary that the passenger have entered the vehicle for the relationship to exist: " 'The relation is in force when one, intending in good faith to become a passenger, goes to the place designated as the site of departure at the appropriate time and the carrier takes some action indicating acceptance of the passenger as a traveler.' " (Orr v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 1467, 1473 [257 Cal.Rptr. 18] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The carrier-passenger relationship terminates once the passenger has disembarked and entered a place of relative safety. (McGettigan v. Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1997) 57 Cal.App.4th 1011, 1018 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 516] .)

■ Carriers must exercise utmost care " '[u]ntil the passenger reaches a place outside the sphere of any activity of the carrier which might reasonably constitute a mobile or animated hazard to the passenger.' " (Brandelius v. City and County of San Francisco (1957) 47 Cal.2d 729, 735 [306 P.2d 432] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 908 Duty to Protect Passengers From Assault

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was negligent in failing to prevent an attack by another. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] knew or, by using the highest care, should have known that a passenger was reasonably likely to attack another passenger; and
- 2. That by using the highest care, [name of defendant] could have prevented or reduced the harm from the attack.

New September 2003

This instruction must be used in conjunction with the instructions in the negligence series.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 315 states:

As a general rule, one owes no duty to control the conduct of another, nor to warn those endangered by such conduct. Such a duty may arise, however, if

(a) a special relation exists between the actor and the third person which imposes a duty upon the actor to control the third person's conduct, or

(b) a special relation exists between the actor and the other which gives the other a right of protection.

- The Supreme Court has held that "[t]he relationship between a common carrier and its passengers is ... a special relationship." (Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 780, 789 [221 Cal.Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907] .)

■ The common carrier standard of "utmost care" applies to the duty of a carrier to protect a passenger from assaults by fellow passengers. (Terrell v. Key System (1945) 69 Cal.App.2d 682, 686 [159 P.2d 704] .) However, the duty can only arise if "in the exercise of the required degree of care the carrier has or should have knowledge of conditions from which it may reasonably be apprehended that an assault on a passenger may occur, and has the ability in the exercise of that degree of care to prevent the injury." (Ibid., internal citations omitted.)

■ The Lopez court stated the standard of care as follows: "[C]arriers are not insurers of their passenger's safety and will not automatically be liable, regardless of the circumstances, for any injury suffered by a passenger at the hands of a fellow passenger. Rather, a carrier is liable for injuries resulting from an assault by one passenger upon another only where, in the exercise of the required degree of care, the carrier has or should have knowledge from which it may reasonably be apprehended that an assault on a passenger may occur, and has the ability in the exercise of that degree of care to prevent the injury." (Lopez, supra, 40 Cal.3d at p. 791 , internal citation omitted.)

■ There is no liability when a sudden assault occurs with no warning. (City and County of San Francisco v. Superior Court (1994) 31 Cal.App.4th 45, 49 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 372] .)

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Premises Liability Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1000 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- The essential factual elements of a premises liability case [CACI No. 1000] and the basic duty of care [CACI No. 1001].
- The extent of the defendant's control over the premises area [CACI No. 1002].
- Unsafe concealed conditions [CACI No. 1003] and obviously unsafe conditions [CACI No. 1004].
- A business proprietor's liability for the negligent, intentional, or criminal conduct of others [CACI No. 1005].
- A landlord's duty for maintaining premises [CACI No. 1006].
- Sidewalk abutting property [CACI No. 1007].
- Liability for an adjacent altered sidewalk [CACI No. 1008] and liability to employees of independent contractors for dangerous conditions [CACI Nos. 1009A-1009D].
- The recreational immunity under Civ. Code § 846 [CACI No. 1010].
- A store owner's constructive notice regarding a dangerous condition on his or her property [CACI

No. 1011].

- Imputation of employee's knowledge to owner [CACI No. 1012].

The premises liability series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1000-VF-1002].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--CACI vs. BAJI: The CACI instructions on Premises Liability are well written and much cleaner and clearer than the replaced BAJI instructions [compare CACI 1000 Series with BAJI Nos. 8.00 et seq.]. By Joseph Devine

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1000

CACI 1000 Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because of the way [name of defendant] managed [his/her/its] property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
- 2. That [name of defendant] was negligent in the use or maintenance of the property;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005

For cases involving public entity defendants, see instructions on dangerous conditions of public property (CACI No. 1100 et seq.).

- As a general rule, "[e]veryone is responsible, not only for the result of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury upon himself or herself." (Civ. Code, § 1714(a), italics added.)

- " Since Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108 [70 Cal.Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] , the liability of landowners for injuries to people on their property has been governed by general negligence principles." (Pineda v. Ennabe (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 1403, 1407 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 206] .)

■ Premises liability is a "form of negligence" in which the owner has a duty to exercise ordinary care in the management of the premises to avoid exposing persons to an unreasonable risk of harm. (Brooks v. Eugene Burger Management Corp. (1989) 215 Cal.App.3d 1611, 1619 [264 Cal.Rptr. 756] .)

■ The general rule of premises liability is set forth in Sprecher v. Adamson Companies (1981) 30 Cal.3d 358, 368 [178 Cal.Rptr. 783, 636 P.2d 1121] , which states that a landowner has a "duty to take affirmative action for the protection of individuals coming upon the land" This duty arises because ownership of land includes the right to control and manage the premises. The landowner's "mere possession with its attendant right to control conditions on the premises is a sufficient basis for the imposition of an affirmative duty to act." (Id. at p. 370 .) The right to control the premises lies at " 'the very heart of the ascription of tortious responsibility' " in premises liability actions. (Id. at p. 369 .)

■ Ordinarily, "[a] defendant cannot be held liable for the defective or dangerous condition of property which it [does] not own, possess, or control." (Isaacs v. Huntington Memorial Hospital (1985) 38 Cal.3d 112, 134 [211 Cal.Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653] .) However, "[a] defendant need not own, possess and control property in order to be held liable; control alone is sufficient." (Alcaraz v. Vece (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1149, 1162 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 448, 929 P.2d 1239] .)

■ Mere maintenance does not establish control. A landowner's duty to warn or prevent injury from known hazards on abutting property derives from ownership, possession, or control, not mere maintenance. (Alcaraz, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1170 .)

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1001

CACI 1001 Basic Duty of Care

A person who [owns/leases/occupies/controls] property is negligent if he or she fails to use reasonable care to keep the property in a reasonably safe condition. A person who [owns/leases/occupies/ controls] property must use reasonable care to discover any unsafe conditions and to repair, replace, or give adequate warning of anything that could be reasonably expected to harm others.

In deciding whether [name of defendant] used reasonable care, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) The location of the property;
- (b) The likelihood that someone would come on to the property in the same manner as [name of plaintiff] did;
- (c) The likelihood of harm;
- (d) The probable seriousness of such harm;
- (e) Whether [name of defendant] knew or should have known of the condition that created the risk of harm;
- (f) The difficulty of protecting against the risk of such harm; [and]
- (g) The extent of [name of defendant]'s control over the condition that created the risk of harm; [and]

(h) [Other relevant factor(s).]

New September 2003; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

Not all of these factors will apply to every case. Select those that are appropriate to the facts of the case.

Under the doctrine of nondelegable duty, a property owner cannot escape liability for failure to maintain property in a safe condition by delegating the duty to an independent contractor. (Brown v. George Pepperdine Foundation (1943) 23 Cal.2d 256, 260 [143 P.2d 929].) For an instruction for use with regard to a landowner's liability for the acts of an independent contractor, see CACI No. 3713, Nondelegable Duty.

Sources and Authority

- "Broadly speaking, premises liability alleges a defendant property owner allowed a dangerous condition on its property or failed to take reasonable steps to secure its property against criminal acts by third parties." (Delgado v. American Multi-Cinema, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1403, 1406, fn. 1 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 838] , internal citation omitted.)

- A landowner owes a duty to exercise reasonable care to maintain his or her property in such a manner as to avoid exposing others to an unreasonable risk of injury. (Alcaraz v. Vece (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1149, 1156 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 448, 929 P.2d 1239] ; Scott v. Chevron U.S.A. (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 510, 515 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 810] .) The failure to fulfill the duty is negligence. (Sprecher v. Adamson Companies (1981) 30 Cal.3d 358, 371-372 [178 Cal.Rptr. 783, 636 P.2d 1121] .) The existence of a duty of care is an issue of law for the court. (Alcaraz, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1162, fn. 4 .)

- "It is now well established that California law requires landowners to maintain land in their possession and control in a reasonably safe condition." (Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center (1993) 6 Cal.4th 666, 674 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The proper test to be applied to the liability of the possessor of land ... is whether in the management of his property he has acted as a reasonable man in view of the probability of injury to others" (Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108, 119 [70 Cal.Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .)

- A visitor's status on the property--as a trespasser, a licensee, or an invitee--no longer establishes the extent of the owner's duties to the visitor, although status may be relevant to the specific nature or scope of those duties or to the foreseeability that the visitor might be harmed. (Ann M., supra, 6 Cal.4th at pp. 674-675 .)

- "As stated in Beauchamp v. Los Gatos Golf Course (1969) 273 Cal.App.2d 20, 25 [77 Cal.Rptr. 914] , '[t]he term "invitee" has not been abandoned, nor have "trespasser" and "licensee." In the minds of the jury, whether a possessor of the premises has acted as a reasonable man toward a plaintiff, in view of the probability of injury to him, will tend to involve the circumstances under which he came upon defendant's land; and the probability of exposure of plaintiff and others of his class to the risk of injury; as well as whether the condition itself presented an unreasonable risk of harm, in view of the foreseeable use of the property.' Thus, the court concluded, and we agree, Rowland 'does not generally abrogate the decisions declaring the substantive duties of the possessor of land to invitees nor those establishing the correlative rights and duties of invitees.' (Id., at p. 27 .)" (Williams v. Carl Karcher Enterprises, Inc. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 479, 486-487 [227 Cal.Rptr. 465] , overruled on other grounds in Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] .)

■ "The distinction between artificial and natural conditions [has been] rejected." (Sprecher, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 371 .)

■ "It must also be emphasized that the liability imposed is for negligence. The question is whether in the management of his property, the possessor of land has acted as a reasonable person under all the circumstances. The likelihood of injury to plaintiff, the probable seriousness of such injury, the burden of reducing or avoiding the risk, the location of the land, and the possessor's degree of control over the risk-creating condition are among the factors to be considered by the trier of fact in evaluating the reasonableness of a defendant's conduct." (Sprecher, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 372 .)

■ "A landowner's duty of care to avoid exposing others to a risk of injury is not limited to injuries that occur on premises owned or controlled by the landowner. Rather, the duty of care encompasses a duty to avoid exposing persons to risks of injury that occur off-site if the landowner's property is maintained in such a manner as to expose persons to an unreasonable risk of injury off-site." (Barnes v. Black (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 1473, 1478-1479 [84 Cal.Rptr.2d 634] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The duty which a possessor of land owes to others to put and maintain it in reasonably safe condition is nondelegable. If an independent contractor, no matter how carefully selected, is employed to perform it, the possessor is answerable for harm caused by the negligent failure of his contractor to put or maintain the buildings and structures in reasonably safe condition, irrespective of whether the contractor's negligence lies in his incompetence, carelessness, inattention or delay." (Brown, supra, 23 Cal.2d at p. 260.)

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1002

CACI 1002 Extent of Control Over Premises Area

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] controlled the property involved in [name of plaintiff]'s harm, even though [name of defendant] did not own or lease it. A person controls property that he or she does not own or lease when he or she uses the property as if it were his or her own. A person is responsible for maintaining, in reasonably safe condition, all areas he or she controls.

Directions for Use

Use this instruction only for property that is not actually owned or leased by the defendant.

■ "[I]t is clear from [Alcaraz v. Vece (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1149, 1167 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 448, 929 P.2d 1239]] that simple maintenance of an adjoining strip of land owned by another does not constitute an exercise of control over that property. Although evidence of maintenance is considered 'relevant on the issue of control,' the court limited its holding by stating that 'the simple act of mowing a lawn on adjacent property (or otherwise performing minimal, neighborly maintenance of property owned by another) generally will [not], standing alone, constitute an exercise of control over [the] property' " (Contreras v. Anderson (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 188, 198-199 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 69] .)

■ "In Alcaraz ... , our Supreme Court held that a landowner who exercises control over an adjoining strip of land has a duty to protect or warn others entering the adjacent land of a known hazard there. This duty arises even if the person does not own or exercise control over the hazard and even if the person does not own the abutting property on which the hazard is located. ... [P] The Alcaraz court concluded that such evidence was 'sufficient to raise a triable issue of fact as to whether defendants exercised control over the strip of land containing the meter box and thus owed a duty of care to protect or warn plaintiff of the allegedly dangerous condition of the property.' " (Contreras, supra, 59 Cal.App.4th at pp. 197-198, footnote and internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1003 Unsafe Conditions

[Name of defendant] was negligent in the use or maintenance of the property if:

- 1. A condition on the property created an unreasonable risk of harm;
- 2. [Name of defendant] knew or, through the exercise of reasonable care, should have known about it; and
- 3. [Name of defendant] failed to repair the condition, protect against harm from the condition, or give adequate warning of the condition.

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, October 2008

Directions for Use

Read this instruction with CACI No. 1000, Essential Factual Elements, in a premises liability case involving an unsafe condition on property. If there is an issue as to the owner's constructive knowledge of the condition (element 2), also give CACI No. 1011, Constructive Notice Regarding Dangerous Conditions on Property.

Sources and Authority

- "Where the occupier of land is aware of a concealed condition involving in the absence of precautions an unreasonable risk of harm to those coming in contact with it and is aware that a person on the premises is about to come in contact with it, the trier of fact can reasonably conclude that a failure to warn or to repair the condition constitutes negligence. Whether or not a guest has a right to expect that his host will remedy dangerous conditions on his account, he should reasonably be entitled to rely upon a warning of the dangerous condition so that he, like the host, will be in a position to take special precautions when he comes in contact with it." (Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108, 119 [70 Cal.Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .)

■ "[T]he proprietor of a store who knows of, or by the exercise of reasonable care could discover, an artificial condition upon his premises which he should foresee exposes his business visitors to an unreasonable risk, and who has no basis for believing that they will discover the condition or realize the risk involved, is under a duty to exercise ordinary care either to make the condition reasonably safe for their use or to give a warning adequate to enable them to avoid the harm. ..." [Plaintiff] was entitled to have the jury so instructed." (Williams v. Carl Karcher Enters., Inc. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 479, 488 [227 Cal.Rptr. 465] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 574, 580 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] .)

■ "Because the owner is not the insurer of the visitor's personal safety, the owner's actual or constructive knowledge of the dangerous condition is a key to establishing its liability. Although the owner's lack of knowledge is not a defense, '[t]o impose liability for injuries suffered by an invitee due to [a] defective condition of the premises, the owner or occupier "must have either actual or constructive knowledge of the dangerous condition or have been able by the exercise of ordinary care to discover the condition, which if known to him, he should realize as involving an unreasonable risk to invitees on his premises. ..."' (Ortega v. Kmart Corp. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 1200, 1206 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 470, 36 P.3d 11] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Where the dangerous or defective condition of the property which causes the injury has been created by reason of the negligence of the owner of the property or his employee acting within the scope of the employment, the owner of the property cannot be permitted to assert that he had no notice or knowledge of the defective or dangerous condition in an action by an invitee for injuries suffered by reason of the dangerous condition. Under such circumstances knowledge thereof is imputed to him. Where the dangerous condition is brought about by natural wear and tear, or third persons, or acts of God or by other causes which are not due to the negligence of the owner, or his employees, then to impose liability the owner must have either actual or constructive knowledge of the dangerous condition or have been able by the exercise of ordinary care to discover the condition, which if known to him, he should realize as involving an unreasonable risk to invitees on his premises. His negligence in such cases is founded upon his failure to exercise ordinary care in remedying the defect after he has discovered it or as a man of ordinary prudence should have discovered it." (Hatfield v. Levy Bros. (1941) 18 Cal.2d 798, 806 [117 P.2d 841] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[U]nder current California law, a store owner's choice of a particular 'mode of operation' does not eliminate a slip-and-fall plaintiff's burden of proving the owner had knowledge of the dangerous condition that caused the accident. Moreover, it would not be prudent to hold otherwise. Without this knowledge requirement, certain store owners would essentially incur strict liability for slip-and-fall injuries, i.e., they would be insurers of the safety of their patrons. For example, whether the french fry was dropped 10 seconds or 10 hours before the accident would be of no consequence to the liability finding. However, this is not to say that a store owner's business choices do not impact the negligence analysis. If the store owner's practices create a higher risk that dangerous conditions will exist, ordinary care will require a corresponding increase in precautions." (Moore v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 472, 479 [3 Cal.Rptr. 3d 813] .)

■ "Although liability might easily be found where the landowner has actual knowledge of the dangerous condition, '[the] landowner's lack of knowledge of the dangerous condition is not a defense. He has an affirmative duty to exercise ordinary care to keep the premises in a reasonably safe condition, and therefore must inspect them or take other proper means to ascertain their condition. And if, by the exercise of reasonable care, he would have discovered the dangerous condition, he is liable.' " (Swanberg v. O'Mectin (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 325, 330 [203 Cal.Rptr. 701] , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1004

CACI 1004 Obviously Unsafe Conditions

If an unsafe condition of the property is so obvious that a person could reasonably be expected to observe it, then the [owner/lessor/occupier/one who controls the property] does not have to warn others about the dangerous condition.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

Defendants may have a duty to take precautions to protect against the risk of harm from an obviously unsafe condition, even if they do not have a duty to warn. (Osborn v. Mission Ready Mix (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 104, 121-122 [273 Cal.Rptr. 457] .)

Sources and Authority

■ Generally, if a danger is so obvious that a person could reasonably be expected to see it, the condition itself serves as a warning, and the landowner is under no further duty to remedy or warn of the condition. (6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Torts, § 1126.) However, this is not true in all cases. "[I]t is foreseeable that even an obvious danger may cause injury, if the practical necessity of encountering the danger, when weighed against the apparent risk involved, is such that under the circumstances, a person might choose to encounter the danger. The foreseeability of injury, in turn, when considered along with various other policy considerations such as the extent of the burden to the defendant and consequences to the community of imposing a duty to remedy such danger may lead to the legal conclusion that the defendant 'owes a duty of due care' [to the person injured.]" (Osborn, supra, 224 Cal.App.3d at p. 121 , internal citations omitted.)

■ It is incorrect to instruct a jury categorically that a business owner cannot be held liable for an injury resulting from an obvious danger. (Osborn, supra, 224 Cal.App.3d at p. 116 .) There may be a duty to remedy a dangerous condition, even though there is no duty to warn thereof, if the condition is foreseeable. (Id. at pp. 121-122 .)

■ In Felmlee v. Falcon Cable TV (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 1032, 1039-1040 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 158] , the court found that an instruction stating that the defendant "owed no duty to warn plaintiff of a danger which was obvious or which should have been observed in the exercise of ordinary care" was proper: "The jury was free to consider whether Falcon was directly negligent in failing to correct any foreseeable, dangerous condition of the cables which may have contributed to the cause of Felmlee's injuries." (Id. at p. 1040 .)

■ One court has observed: "[T]he 'obvious danger' exception to a landowner's ordinary duty of care is in reality a recharacterization of the former assumption of the risk doctrine, i.e., where the condition is so apparent that the plaintiff must have realized the danger involved, he assumes the risk of injury even if the defendant was negligent. ... [T]his type of assumption of the risk has now been merged into comparative negligence." (Donohue v. San Francisco Housing Authority (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 658, 665 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 148] , internal citations omitted.)

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1005

CACI 1005 Business Proprietor's Liability for the Negligent/Intentional/Criminal Conduct of Others

[An owner of a business that is open to the public/A landlord] must use reasonable care to protect [patrons/guests/tenants] from another person's harmful conduct on [his/her/its] property if the [owner/landlord] can reasonably anticipate such conduct.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "[O]nly when 'heightened' foreseeability of third party criminal activity on the premises exists--shown by prior similar incidents or other indications of a reasonably foreseeable risk of violent criminal assaults in that location--does the scope of a business proprietor's special-relationship-based duty include an obligation to provide guards to protect the safety of patrons." (Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal.4th 224, 240 [30 Cal.Rptr.3d 145, 113 P.3d 1159] , internal citations and footnote omitted, original italics.)
- "Even when proprietors ... have no duty ... to provide a security guard or undertake other similarly burdensome preventative measures, the proprietor is not necessarily insulated from liability under the special relationship doctrine. A proprietor that has no duty ... to hire a security guard or to undertake other similarly burdensome preventative measures still owes a duty of due care to a patron or invitee by virtue of the special relationship, and there are circumstances (apart from the failure to provide a security guard or undertake other similarly burdensome preventative measures) that may give rise to liability based upon the proprietor's special relationship." (Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th at pp. 240-241 .)
- A business proprietor is not an insurer of the safety of his invitees, "but he is required to exercise reasonable care for their safety and is liable for injuries resulting from a breach of this duty. The general duty includes not only the duty to inspect the premises in order to uncover dangerous conditions, but, as well, the duty to take affirmative action to control the wrongful acts of third persons which threaten invitees where the occupant has reasonable cause to anticipate such acts and the probability of injury resulting therefrom." (Taylor v. Centennial Bowl, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 114, 121 [52 Cal.Rptr. 561, 416 P.2d 793] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Once a court finds that the defendant was under a duty to protect the plaintiff, it is for the factfinder to decide whether the security measures were reasonable under the circumstances. The jury must decide whether the security was adequate." (Isaacs v. Huntington Memorial Hospital (1985) 38 Cal.3d 112, 131 [211 Cal.Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[A]s frequently recognized, a duty to take affirmative action to control the wrongful acts of a third party will be imposed only where such conduct can be reasonably anticipated." (Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center (1993) 6 Cal.4th 666, 676 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In the case of a landlord, this general duty of maintenance, which is owed to tenants and patrons, has been held to include the duty to take reasonable steps to secure common areas against foreseeable criminal acts of third parties that are likely to occur in the absence of such precautionary measures." (Ann M., supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 674 , internal citation omitted; Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Assn. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 490, 499-501 [229 Cal.Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 344, provides:

A possessor of land who holds it open to the public for entry for his business purposes is subject to liability to members of the public while they are upon the land for such a purpose, for physical harm caused by the accidental, negligent, or intentionally harmful acts of third persons or animals, and by the failure to the possessor to exercise reasonable care to

(a) discover that such acts are being done or are likely to be done, or

(b) give a warning adequate to enable the visitors to avoid the harm, or otherwise to protect them against it.

■ Section 344 has been followed by California courts. (See Peterson v. San Francisco Community College Dist. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 799, 807 [205 Cal.Rptr. 842, 685 P.2d 1193] ; Ky. Fried Chicken of Cal. v. Superior Court (1997) 14 Cal.4th 814, 823 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 756, 927 P.2d 1260] .)

■ Comment (f) to section 344 further explains the section's intent: "Since the possessor is not an insurer of the visitor's safety, he is ordinarily under no duty to exercise any care until he knows or has reason to know that the acts of the third person are occurring, or are about to occur. He may, however, know or have reason to know, from past experience, that there is a likelihood of conduct on the part of third persons in general which is likely to endanger the safety of the visitor, even though he has no reason to expect it on the part of any particular individual. If the place or character of his business, or his past experience, is such that he should reasonably anticipate careless or criminal conduct on the part of third persons, either generally or at some particular time, he may be under a duty to take precautions against it, and to provide a reasonably sufficient number of servants to afford a reasonable protection."

"[A] store owner's choice of a particular 'mode of operation' does not eliminate a slip-and-fall plaintiff's burden of proving the owner had knowledge of the dangerous condition that caused the accident ... However, this is not to say that a store owner's business choices do not impact the negligence analysis. If the store owner's practices create a higher risk that dangerous conditions will exist, ordinary care will require a corresponding increase in precautions." (*Moore v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

CACI 1006 Landlord's Duty

A landlord must conduct reasonable periodic inspections of rental property whenever the landlord has the legal right of possession. Before giving possession of leased property to a tenant [or on renewal of a lease] [or after retaking possession from a tenant], a landlord must conduct a reasonable inspection of the property for unsafe conditions and must take reasonable precautions to prevent injury due to the conditions that were or reasonably should have been discovered in the process. The inspection must include common areas under the landlord's control.

After a tenant has taken possession, a landlord must take reasonable precautions to prevent injury due to any unsafe condition in an area of the premises under the landlord's control if the landlord knows or reasonably should have known about it.

[After a tenant has taken possession, a landlord must take reasonable precautions to prevent injury due to any unsafe condition in an area of the premises under the tenant's control if the landlord has actual knowledge of the condition and the right and ability to correct it.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, April 2009, December 2009, June 2010

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 1000, Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 1001, Basic Duty of Care, and CACI No. 1003, Unsafe Conditions, if the injury occurred on rental property and the landlord is alleged to be liable. Include the last paragraph if the property is not within the landlord's immediate control.

Include "or on renewal of a lease" for commercial tenancies. (See Mora v. Baker Commodities, Inc.

(1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 771, 781 [258 Cal.Rptr. 669] .) While no case appears to have specifically addressed a landlord's duty to inspect on renewal of a residential lease, it would seem impossible to impose such a duty with regard to a month-to-month tenancy. Whether there might be a duty to inspect on renewal of a long-term residential lease appears to be unresolved.

Under the doctrine of nondelegable duty, a landlord cannot escape liability for failure to maintain property in a safe condition by delegating the duty to an independent contractor. (Srithong v. Total Investment Co. (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 721, 726 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 672] .) For an instruction for use with regard to a landlord's liability for the acts of an independent contractor, see CACI No. 3713, Nondelegable Duty.

Sources and Authority

■ "A landlord owes a duty of care to a tenant to provide and maintain safe conditions on the leased premises. This duty of care also extends to the general public. 'A lessor who leases property for a purpose involving the admission of the public is under a duty to see that it is safe for the purposes intended, and to exercise reasonable care to inspect and repair the premises before possession is transferred so as to prevent any unreasonable risk of harm to the public who may enter. An agreement to renew a lease or relet the premises ... cannot relieve the lessor of his duty to see that the premises are reasonably safe at that time.' [P] Where there is a duty to exercise reasonable care in the inspection of premises for dangerous conditions, the lack of awareness of the dangerous condition does not generally preclude liability. 'Although liability might easily be found where the landowner has actual knowledge of the dangerous condition "[t]he landowner's lack of knowledge of the dangerous condition is not a defense. He has an affirmative duty to exercise ordinary care to keep the premises in a reasonably safe condition, and therefore must inspect them or take other proper means to ascertain their condition. And if, by the exercise of reasonable care, he would have discovered the dangerous condition, he is liable." ' " (Portillo v. Aiassa (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1134 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 755] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Historically, the public policy of this state generally has precluded a landlord's liability for injuries to his tenant or his tenant's invitees from a dangerous condition on the premises which comes into existence after the tenant has taken possession. This is true even though by the exercise of reasonable diligence the landlord might have discovered the condition. [P] The rationale for this rule has been that property law regards a lease as equivalent to a sale of the land for the term of the lease. As stated by Prosser: 'In the absence of agreement to the contrary, the lessor surrenders both possession and control of the land to the lessee, retaining only a reversionary interest; and he has no right even to enter without the permission of the lessee. Consequently, it is the general rule that he is under no obligation to anyone to look after the premises or keep them in repair, and is not responsible, either to persons injured on the land or to those outside of it, for conditions which develop or are created by the tenant after possession has been transferred. Neither is he responsible, in general, for the activities which the tenant carries on upon the land after such transfer, even when they create a nuisance.' " (Uccello v. Laudenslayer (1975) 44 Cal.App.3d 504, 510-511 [118 Cal.Rptr. 741] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "To this general rule of nonliability, the law has developed a number of exceptions, such as where the landlord covenants or volunteers to repair a defective condition on the premises, where the landlord has actual knowledge of defects which are unknown and not apparent to the tenant and he fails to disclose them to the tenant, where there is a nuisance existing on the property at the time the lease is made or renewed, when a safety law has been violated, or where the injury occurs on a part of the premises over which the landlord retains control, such as common hallways, stairs, elevators, or roof. [P] A common element in these exceptions is that either at or after the time possession is given to the tenant the landlord retains or acquires a recognizable degree of control over the dangerous condition with a concomitant right and power to obviate the condition and prevent the injury. In these situations, the law imposes on the landlord a duty to use ordinary care to eliminate the condition with resulting liability for injuries caused by his failure so to act." (Uccello, supra, 44 Cal.App.3d at p. 511 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]here a landlord has relinquished control of property to a tenant, a 'bright line' rule has developed to moderate the landlord's duty of care owed to a third party injured on the property as compared with the tenant who enjoys possession and control. ' "Because a landlord has relinquished possessory interest in the land, his or her duty of care to third parties injured on the land is attenuated as compared with the tenant who enjoys possession and control. Thus, before liability may be thrust on a landlord for a third party's injury due to a dangerous condition on the land, the plaintiff must show that the landlord had actual knowledge of the dangerous condition in question, plus the right and ability to cure the condition." [P] Limiting a landlord's obligations releases it from needing to engage in potentially intrusive oversight of the property, thus permitting the tenant to enjoy its tenancy unmolested.' " (Salinas v. Martin (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 404, 412 [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 735] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] commercial landowner cannot totally abrogate its landowner responsibilities merely by signing a lease. As the owner of property, a lessor out of possession must exercise due care and must act reasonably toward the tenant as well as to unknown third persons. At the time the lease is executed and upon renewal a landlord has a right to reenter the property, has control of the property, and must inspect the premises to make the premises reasonably safe from dangerous conditions. Even if the commercial landlord executes a contract which requires the tenant to maintain the property in a certain condition, the landlord is obligated at the time the lease is executed to take reasonable precautions to avoid unnecessary danger." (Mora v. Baker Commodities, Inc. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 771, 781 [258 Cal.Rptr. 669] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he landlord's responsibility to inspect is limited. Like a residential landlord, the duty to inspect charges the lessor 'only with those matters which would have been disclosed by a reasonable inspection.' The burden of reducing or avoiding the risk and the likelihood of injury will affect the determination of what constitutes a reasonable inspection. The landlord's obligation is only to do what is reasonable under the circumstances. The landlord need not take extraordinary measures or make unreasonable expenditures of time and money in trying to discover hazards unless the circumstances so warrant. When there is a potential serious danger, which is foreseeable, a landlord should anticipate the danger and conduct a reasonable inspection before passing possession to the tenant. However, if no such inspection is warranted, the landlord has no such obligation." (Mora, supra, 210 Cal.App.3d at p. 782 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "It is one thing for a landlord to leave a tenant alone who is complying with its lease. It is entirely different, however, for a landlord to ignore a defaulting tenant's possible neglect of property. Neglected property endangers the public, and a landlord's detachment frustrates the public policy of keeping property in good repair and safe. To strike the right balance between safety and disfavored self-help, we hold that [the landlord]'s duty to inspect attached upon entry of the judgment of possession in the unlawful detainer action and included reasonable periodic inspections thereafter." (Stone v. Center Trust Retail Properties, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal.App.4th 608, 613 [77 Cal.Rptr.3d 556] .)

■ "[I]t is established that a landlord owes a duty of care to its tenants to take reasonable steps to secure the common areas under its control." (Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center (1993) 6 Cal.4th 666, 675 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] .)

■ "The reasonableness of a landlord's conduct under all the circumstances is for the jury. A triable issue of fact exists as to whether the defendants' maintenance of a low, open, unguarded window in a common hallway where they knew young children were likely to play constituted a breach of their duty to take reasonable precautions to prevent children falling out of the window." (Amos v. Alpha Prop. Mgmt. (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 895, 904 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 34] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Simply stated, ' "[t]he duty which a possessor of land owes to others to put and maintain it in reasonably safe condition is nondelegable. If an independent contractor, no matter how carefully selected, is employed to perform it, the possessor is answerable for harm caused by the negligent failure of his contractor to put or maintain the buildings and structures in reasonably safe condition[.]" ' " (Srithong, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th at p. 726 .)

[An owner of/A lessee of/An occupier of/One who controls] property must avoid creating an unsafe condition on the surrounding public streets or sidewalks.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Generally, absent statutory authority to the contrary, a landowner is under no duty to maintain in a safe condition a public street or sidewalk abutting his property (Sexton v. Brooks (1952) 39 Cal.2d 153, 157 [245 P.2d 496]). However, "[a]n abutting owner has always had a duty to refrain from affirmative conduct which would render the sidewalk dangerous to the public." (Selger v. Steven Brothers, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1585, 1592 [272 Cal.Rptr. 544] , internal citations omitted.)

- The occupier must maintain his or her land in a manner so as not to injure the users of an abutting street or sidewalk. (Swanberg v. O'Mectin (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 325, 330 [203 Cal.Rptr. 701] ; Lompoc Unified School Dist. v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 1688, 1693 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 122] .)

- "An ordinance requiring the abutting landowner to maintain the sidewalk would be construed to create a duty of care to third persons only if the ordinance clearly and unambiguously so provided." (Selger, supra, 222 Cal.App.3d at p. 1590 , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1008

CACI 1008 Liability for Adjacent Altered Sidewalk--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because [name of defendant] was negligent in constructing and maintaining an altered portion of the sidewalk next to [his/her/its] property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [or a previous owner] altered [or requested the city to alter] the portion of the sidewalk that caused the harm;
- 2. That the alteration provided a benefit solely to [name of defendant]'s property;
- 3. That the alteration served a purpose different from ordinary sidewalk use;
- 4. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care in creating or maintaining the altered portion of the sidewalk;
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

- An abutting landowner who has altered an adjacent sidewalk for the benefit of his property apart from the ordinary use for which it was designed has a duty to employ ordinary care in making such alteration and in maintaining that portion of the sidewalk in a reasonably safe condition. (Peters v. City & County of San Francisco (1953) 41 Cal.2d 419, 423 [260 P.2d 55] ; see Selger v. Steven Brothers, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1585, 1594 [272 Cal.Rptr. 544] .)

■ The duty of care regarding altered sidewalks usually arises in cases "involving traps on sidewalks, including ' 'coal holes, meter boxes, and other devices of similar character located in the sidewalk which benefit the abutting owner and are located where the general public is likely to walk"' (Contreras v. Anderson (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 188, 202 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 69] , internal citation omitted.)

■ Liability depends on findings of (1) special benefit to the owner's property, (2) alteration of sidewalk for a nontypical purpose, and (3) the degree of exclusivity of benefit. (Contreras, supra, 59 Cal.App.4th at p. 202 .)

■ "The significance of the degree of exclusivity is that proportionately, the greater the exclusivity of use, the more an improvement benefits solely the adjoining property and the more reasonable it is to impose upon the landowner a duty to maintain the improvement in a reasonably safe condition." (Seaber v. Hotel Del Coronado (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 481, 491 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 405] .)

■ The requirement of due care in altering a sidewalk applies only to that portion of the sidewalk that is actually altered: "The rule cited by plaintiff requires the owner to keep the altered portion in reasonably safe condition or be liable for injuries resulting therefrom. Plaintiff did not trip on defendant's floral displays, she slipped on the dog dropping, a hazard which defendant did not create." (Selger, supra, 222 Cal.App.3d at p. 1595 .)

■ "The duty to maintain portions of a sidewalk which have been altered for the benefit of the property runs with the land, and a property owner cannot avoid liability on the ground that the condition was created by or at the request of his predecessors in title." (Peters, supra, 41 Cal.2d at p. 423 .)

CACI 1009A Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Concealed Conditions

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by an unsafe concealed condition while employed by [name of plaintiff's employer] and working on [name of defendant]'s property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
- 2. That [name of defendant] knew, or reasonably should have known, of a preexisting unsafe concealed condition on the property;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff's employer] neither knew nor could be reasonably expected to know of the unsafe concealed condition;
- 4. That the condition was not part of the work that [name of plaintiff's employer] was hired to perform;
- 5. That [name of defendant] failed to warn [name of plaintiff's employer] of the condition;
- 6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

An unsafe condition is concealed if either it is not visible or its dangerous nature is not apparent to a reasonable person.

Derived from former CACI No. 1009 April 2007; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if a concealed dangerous condition on property causes injury to an employee of an independent contractor hired to perform work on the property. For an instruction for injuries to others due to a concealed condition, see CACI No. 1003, Unsafe Conditions. For an instruction for injuries based on the owner's retained control, see CACI No. 1009B, Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Conditions--Retained Control. For an instruction for injuries based on a nondelegable duty, see CACI No. 1009C, Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Conditions--Nondelegable Duty. For an instruction for injuries based on the property owner's providing defective equipment, see CACI No. 1009D, Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Conditions--Defective Equipment.

See also the Vicarious Responsibility Series, CACI No. 3700 et seq., for instructions on the liability of a hirer for the acts of an independent contractor.

Sources and Authority

- "[T]he hirer as landowner may be independently liable to the contractor's employee, even if it does not retain control over the work, if: (1) it knows or reasonably should know of a concealed, preexisting hazardous condition on its premises; (2) the contractor does not know and could not reasonably ascertain the condition; and (3) the landowner fails to warn the contractor." (Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal.4th 659, 675 [36 Cal.Rptr.3d 495, 123 P.3d 931] .)

- "[T]here is no reason to distinguish conceptually between premises liability based on a hazardous substance that is concealed because it is invisible to the contractor and known only to the landowner and premises liability based on a hazardous substance that is visible but is known to be hazardous only to the landowner. If the hazard is not reasonably apparent, and is known only to the landowner, it is a concealed hazard, whether or not the substance creating the hazard is visible." (Kinsman, supra, 37 Cal.4th at p. 678 .)

- "A landowner's duty generally includes a duty to inspect for concealed hazards. But the responsibility for job safety delegated to independent contractors may and generally does include explicitly or implicitly a limited duty to inspect the premises as well. Therefore, ... the landowner would not be liable when the contractor has failed to engage in inspections of the premises implicitly or explicitly delegated to it. Thus, for example, an employee of a roofing contractor sent to repair a defective roof would generally not be able to sue the hirer if injured when he fell through the same roof due to a structural defect, inasmuch as inspection for such defects could reasonably be implied to be within the scope of the contractor's employment. On the other hand, if the same employee fell from a ladder because the wall on which the ladder was propped collapsed, assuming that this defect was not related to the roof under repair, the employee may be able to sustain a suit against the hirer. Put in other terms, the contractor was not being paid to inspect the premises generally, and therefore the duty of general inspection could not be said to have been delegated to it. Under those circumstances, the landowner's failure to reasonably inspect the premises, when a hidden hazard leads directly to the employee's injury, may well result in liability." (Kinsman, supra, 37 Cal.4th at pp. 677-678 , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1009B Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Conditions--Retained Control

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by an unsafe condition while employed by [name of plaintiff's employer] and working on [name of defendant]'s property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
- 2. That [name of defendant] retained control over safety conditions at the worksite;
- 3. That [name of defendant] negligently exercised [his/her/its] retained control over safety conditions by [specify alleged negligent acts or omissions];
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s negligent exercise of [his/her/its] retained control over safety conditions was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 1009 April 2007; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if a dangerous condition on property causes injury to an employee of an independent contractor hired to perform work on the property. The basis of liability is that the defendant retained control over the safety conditions at the worksite. For an instruction for injuries to others due to a concealed condition, see CACI No. 1003, Unsafe Conditions. For an instruction for injuries based on unsafe conditions not discoverable by the plaintiff's employer, see CACI No. 1009A, Liability to

Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Concealed Conditions. For an instruction for injuries based on a nondelegable duty, see CACI No. 1009C, Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Conditions--Nondelegable Duty. For an instruction for injuries based on the property owner's providing defective equipment, see CACI No. 1009D, Liability to Employees of Independent Contractors for Unsafe Conditions--Defective Equipment.

See also the Vicarious Responsibility Series, CACI No. 3700 et seq., for instructions on the liability of a hirer for the acts of an independent contractor.

Sources and Authority

■ "We conclude that a hirer of an independent contractor is not liable to an employee of the contractor merely because the hirer retained control over safety conditions at a worksite, but that a hirer is liable to an employee of a contractor insofar as a hirer's exercise of retained control affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries." (Hooker v. Department of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal.4th 198, 202 [115 Cal.Rptr.2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081] , original italics.)

■ "Imposing tort liability on a hirer of an independent contractor when the hirer's conduct has affirmatively contributed to the injuries of the contractor's employee is consistent with the rationale of our decisions in Privette, Toland and Camargo because the liability of the hirer in such a case is not 'in essence 'vicarious' or 'derivative' in the sense that it derives from the 'act or omission' of the hired contractor.' ' To the contrary, the liability of the hirer in such a case is direct in a much stronger sense of that term." (Hooker, supra, 27 Cal.4th at pp. 211-212 , original italics, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "Such affirmative contribution need not always be in the form of actively directing a contractor or contractor's employee. There will be times when a hirer will be liable for its omissions. For example, if the hirer promises to undertake a particular safety measure, then the hirer's negligent failure to do so should result in liability if such negligence leads to an employee injury." (Hooker, supra, 27 Cal.4th at p. 212, fn. 3 .)

■ "[U]nder Government Code section 815.4, a public entity can be held liable under the retained control doctrine, provided a private person would be liable under the same circumstances. This means that the public entity must negligently exercise its retained control so as to affirmatively contribute to the injuries of the employee of the independent contractor." (McCarty v. Department of Transportation (2008), 164 Cal.App.4th 955, 985 [79 Cal.Rptr.3d 777] , original italics.)

■ Section 414 of the Restatement Second of Torts provides: "One who entrusts work to an independent contractor, but who retains the control of any part of the work, is subject to liability for physical harm to others for whose safety the employer owes a duty to exercise reasonable care, which is caused by his failure to exercise his control with reasonable care."

There is a duty that cannot be delegated to another person arising from [insert statute or regulation establishing nondelegable duty] that is as follows: [quote from statute/regulation or paraphrase duty].

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;

- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s breach of this duty was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New April 2008; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if a dangerous condition on property causes injury to an employee of an independent contractor hired to perform work on the property. The basis of liability is that the defendant breached a duty established by a statute or regulation and that this duty was nondelegable as a matter of law. The statute or regulation that creates the duty may be paraphrased rather than quoted verbatim if its language would be confusing to the jury.

See also the Vicarious Responsibility series, CACI No. 3700 et seq., for instructions on the liability of a hirer for the acts of an independent contractor.

Sources and Authority

- "The nondelegable duty doctrine addresses an affirmative duty imposed by reason of a person or entity's relationship with others. Such a duty cannot be avoided by entrusting it to an independent contractor. Nondelegable duties may arise when a statute provides specific safeguards or precautions to insure the safety of others." (Padilla v. Pomona College (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 661, 671-672 [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 869] , internal citations omitted.)

- "One who by statute or by administrative regulation is under a duty to provide specified safeguards or precautions for the safety of others is subject to liability to the others for whose protection the duty is imposed for harm caused by the failure of a contractor employed by him to provide such safeguards or precautions." (Evard v. Southern California Edison (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 137, 146 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 479] .)

- "Imposing tort liability on a hirer of an independent contractor when the hirer's conduct has affirmatively contributed to the injuries of the contractor's employee is consistent with the rationale of our decisions in Privette, Toland and Camargo because the liability of the hirer in such a case is not 'in essence 'vicarious' or 'derivative' in the sense that it derives from the 'act or omission' of the hired contractor.' ' To the contrary, the liability of the hirer in such a case is direct in a much stronger sense of that term." (Hooker v. Dep't of Transp. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 198, 211-212 [115 Cal.Rptr.2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he liability of a hirer for injury to employees of independent contractors caused by breach of a nondelegable duty imposed by statute or regulation remains subject to the Hooker test. Under that test, the hirer will be liable if its breach of regulatory duties affirmatively contributes to the injury of a contractor's employee." (Padilla, supra, 166 Cal.App.4th at p. 673 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]n owner may be liable if its breach of regulatory duties affirmatively contributes to injury of a contractor's employee." (Evard, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 147 .)

- "Liability may be predicated on a property owner's 'breach of its own regulatory duties, regardless of whether or not it voluntarily retained control or actively participated in the project. ... For purposes of imposing liability for affirmatively contributing to a plaintiff's injuries, the affirmative contribution need not be active conduct but may be in the form of an omission to act.' " (Evard, supra, 153 Cal. App. 4th at p. 147 .)

■ "Notwithstanding Evard's conclusion that the regulation at issue imposed a nondelegable duty, we do not agree with plaintiff's inference from that case that in every instance Cal-OSHA regulations impose a nondelegable duty. While a nondelegable duty may arise when a statute or regulation requires specific safeguards or precautions to insure others' safety, it is the nature of the regulation itself that determines whether the duties it creates are nondelegable." (Padilla, supra, 166 Cal.App.4th at pp. 672-673 , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1010 Affirmative Defense--Recreation Immunity (Civ. Code, § 846)

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm if [he/she] proves that [name of plaintiff]'s harm resulted from [his/her] entry on or use of [name of defendant]'s property for a recreational purpose,

[Choose one of the following three options:]

[unless [name of plaintiff] proves all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known of the [condition/use/structure/activity on the property] that created an unreasonable risk of serious injury;
- 2. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that someone would probably be seriously injured by the dangerous [condition/use/structure/activity]; and
- 3. That [name of defendant] knowingly failed to protect others from the dangerous [condition/use/structure/activity].]

[or]

[unless [name of plaintiff] proves that a charge or fee was paid to [name of defendant] to use the property.]

[or]

[unless [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] expressly invited [name of plaintiff] to use the property for the recreational purpose.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Depending on the facts, the court could instruct that the activity involved was a "recreational purpose" as a matter of law. For a comprehensive list of "recreational purposes," refer to Civil Code section 846.

Federal courts interpreting California law have addressed whether the "express invitation" must be personal to the user. The Ninth Circuit has held that invitations to the general public do not qualify as "express invitations" within the meaning of section 846. In Ravell v. United States (9th Cir. 1994) 22 F.3d 960, 963, the Ninth Circuit held that California law requires a personal invitation for a section 846 invitation, citing Johnson v. Unocal Corp. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 310, 317 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 148]. However, the issue has not been definitively resolved by the California Supreme Court.

■ Civil Code section 846 provides:

An owner of any estate or any other interest in real property, whether possessory or nonpossessory, owes no duty of care to keep the premises safe for entry or use by others for any recreational purpose or to give any warning of hazardous conditions, uses of, structures, or activities on such premises to persons entering for such purpose, except as provided in this section.

A "recreational purpose," as used in this section, includes such activities as fishing, hunting, camping, water sports, hiking, spelunking, sport parachuting, riding, including animal riding, snowmobiling, and all other types of vehicular riding, rock collecting, sightseeing, picnicking, nature study, nature contacting, recreational gardening, gleaning, hang gliding, winter sports, and viewing or enjoying historical, archaeological, scenic, natural, or scientific sites.

An owner of any estate or any other interest in real property, whether possessory or nonpossessory, who gives permission to another for entry or use for the above purpose upon the premises does not thereby (a) extend any assurance that the premises are safe for such purpose, or (b) constitute the person to whom permission has been granted the legal status of an invitee or licensee to whom a duty of care is owed, or (c) assume responsibility for or incur liability for any injury to person or property caused by any act of such person to whom permission has been granted except as provided in this section.

This section does not limit the liability which otherwise exists (a) for willful or malicious failure to guard or warn against a dangerous condition, use, structure or activity; or (b) for injury suffered in any case where permission to enter for the above purpose was granted for a consideration other than the consideration, if any, paid to said landowner by the state, or where consideration has been received from others for the same purpose; or (c) to any persons who are expressly invited rather than merely permitted to come upon the premises by the landowner.

Nothing in this section creates a duty of care or ground of liability for injury to person or property.

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1010

■ The California Supreme Court has summarized the effect of Civil Code section 846 on a landowner's duty of care: "[A]n owner of ... real property owes no duty of care to keep the premises safe for entry or use by others for recreational purposes or to give recreational users warning of hazards on the property, unless: (1) the landowner willfully or maliciously fails to guard or warn against a dangerous condition, use, structure or activity; (2) permission to enter for a recreational purpose is granted for a consideration; or (3) the landowner expressly invites rather than merely permits the user to come upon the premises. The landowner's duty to the nonpaying, uninvited recreational user is, in essence, that owed a trespasser under the common law as it existed prior to Rowland v. Christian" (Ornelas v. Randolph (1993) 4 Cal.4th 1095, 1099-1100 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 594, 847 P.2d 560] .)

■ "Generally, whether one has entered property for a recreational purpose within the meaning of the statute is a question of fact, to be determined through a consideration of the 'totality of the facts and circumstances, including ... the prior use of the land. While the plaintiff's subjective intent will not be controlling, it is relevant to show purpose.' " (Ornelas, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 1102 , internal citation omitted.)

■ In Hubbard v. Brown (1990) 50 Cal.3d 189, 196 [266 Cal.Rptr. 491, 785 P.2d 1183] , the Supreme Court stated that the phrase "interest in real property" should not be given a narrow or technical interpretation, holding that a federal grazing permit is an interest in real property sufficient to qualify for the immunity.

■ Business invitees do not fall within this provision: "We hold that defendants' status as business invitees of the landowner does not satisfy the prerequisite that the party seeking to invoke the immunity provisions of section 846 be '[a]n owner of any estate or any other interest in real property, whether possessory or nonpossessory.' Although such invitee may be entitled to be present on the property during such time as the work is being performed, such presence does not convey any estate or interest in the property." (Jenson v. Kenneth I. Mullen, Consulting Engineers, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [259 Cal.Rptr. 552] .)

■ A landowner's conduct becomes willful or malicious only if three elements are present: "(1) actual or constructive knowledge of the peril to be apprehended, (2) actual or constructive knowledge that injury is a probable, as opposed to a possible, result of the danger, and (3) conscious failure to act to avoid the peril." (New v. Consolidated Rock Products Co. (1985) 171 Cal.App.3d 681, 689-690 [217 Cal.Rptr. 522] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The concept of willful misconduct has a well-established, well-defined meaning in California law. 'Willful or wanton misconduct is intentional wrongful conduct, done either with a knowledge that serious injury to another will probably result, or with a wanton and reckless disregard of the possible results.' " (New, supra, 171 Cal.App.3d at p. 689 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Lostritto v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1977) 73 Cal.App.3d 737 [140 Cal.Rptr. 905] , involved a case in which the plaintiff was injured when he dove from the defendant's trestle into the river below. The court held that the defendant's willful and malicious misconduct could potentially be found when the evidence showed that the trestle was near and accessible to a popular swimming area, that diving from the trestle was a longstanding practice of which the defendant was aware, that the defendant was informed that swimmers had been hurt diving from its trestle, and that the defendant posted no warning signs and failed to erect inexpensive barriers to prevent the practice. (Id. at pp. 744-745 .)

■ "Clearly, consideration means some type of entrance fee or charge for permitting a person to use specially constructed facilities. There are many amusement facilities in government-owned parks that charge admission fees and a consideration in this or a similar context was intended." (Moore v. City of Torrance (1979) 101 Cal.App.3d 66, 72 [166 Cal.Rptr. 192] , disapproved of on other grounds in Delta Farms Reclamation Dist. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal.3d 699, 707 [190 Cal.Rptr. 494, 660 P.2d 1168] .)

- "A landowner must gain some immediate and reasonably direct advantage, usually in the form of an entrance fee, before the exception to immunity for consideration under section 846 comes into play." (Johnson, supra, 21 Cal.App.4th at p. 317 .)

- The exceptions for consideration and express invitees should be construed narrowly. (Johnson, supra, 21 Cal.App.4th at pp. 315-316 .)

CHAPTER 10 California Judicial Council Premises Liability Instructions

2-10 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1011

CACI 1011 Constructive Notice Regarding Dangerous Conditions on Property

In determining whether [name of defendant] should have known of the condition that created the risk of harm, you must decide whether, under all the circumstances, the condition was of such a nature and existed long enough that [name of defendant] had sufficient time to discover it and, using reasonable care:

- 1. Repair the condition; or
- 2. Protect against harm from the condition; or
- 3. Adequately warn of the condition.

[[Name of defendant] must make reasonable inspections of the property to discover unsafe conditions. If an inspection was not made within a reasonable time before the accident, this may show that the condition existed long enough so that [a store/[a/an] [insert other commercial enterprise]] owner using reasonable care would have discovered it.]

New September 2003; Revised February 2007, October 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use if there is an issue concerning the owner's constructive knowledge of a dangerous condition. It should be given with CACI No. 1003, Unsafe Conditions.

The bracketed second paragraph of this instruction is based on Ortega v. Kmart (2001) 26 Cal.4th 1200 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 470, 36 P.3d 11]. Ortega involved a store. The court should determine whether the bracketed portion of this instruction applies to other types of property.

Sources and Authority

■ "It is well established in California that although a store owner is not an insurer of the safety of its patrons, the owner does owe them a duty to exercise reasonable care in keeping the premises reasonably safe." (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1205 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "We conclude that a plaintiff may prove a dangerous condition existed for an unreasonable time with circumstantial evidence, and that ... 'evidence that an inspection had not been made within a particular period of time prior to an accident may warrant an inference that the defective condition existed long enough so that a person exercising reasonable care would have discovered it.' " (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1210 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A store owner exercises ordinary care by making reasonable inspections of the portions of the premises open to customers, and the care required is commensurate with the risks involved." (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1205 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Because the owner is not the insurer of the visitor's personal safety, the owner's actual or constructive knowledge of the dangerous condition is a key to establishing its liability." (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1206 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Courts have also held that where the plaintiff relies on the failure to correct a dangerous condition to prove the owner's negligence, the plaintiff has the burden of showing that the owner had notice of the defect in sufficient time to correct it." (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1206 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The plaintiff need not show actual knowledge where evidence suggests that the dangerous condition was present for a sufficient period of time to charge the owner with constructive knowledge of its existence." (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1206 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We emphasize that allowing the inference does not change the rule that if a store owner has taken care in the discharge of its duty, by inspecting its premises in a reasonable manner, then no breach will be found even if a plaintiff does suffer injury." (Ortega, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1211 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We conclude that plaintiffs still have the burden of producing evidence that the dangerous condition existed for at least a sufficient time to support a finding that the defendant had constructive notice of the hazardous condition. We also conclude, however, that plaintiffs may demonstrate the storekeeper had constructive notice of the dangerous condition if they can show that the site had not been inspected within a reasonable period of time so that a person exercising due care would have discovered and corrected the hazard. In other words, if the plaintiffs can show an inspection was not made within a particular period of time prior to an accident, they may raise an inference the condition did exist long enough for the owner to have discovered it. It remains a question of fact for the jury whether, under all the circumstances, the defective condition existed long enough so that it would have been discovered and remedied by an owner in the exercise of reasonable care." (Ortega, supra, at pp. 1212-1213 , internal citations omitted.)

If "there is no direct evidence of the length of time the dangerous condition existed, the plaintiff can demonstrate that the store owner had constructive notice of the dangerous condition by showing that the site had not been inspected within a reasonable period of time," raising an inference that "the condition existed long enough for the owner to have discovered it." A plaintiff must show that the owner had notice of the defect in sufficient time to correct it. (*Moore v. If you find that the condition causing the risk of harm was created by [name of defendant] or [his/her/its] employee acting within the scope of [his/her] employment, then you must conclude that [name of defendant] knew of this condition.

New October 2004

■ "Where the dangerous or defective condition of the property which causes the injury has been created by reason of the negligence of the owner of the property or his employee acting within the scope of the employment, the owner of the property cannot be permitted to assert that he had no notice or knowledge of the defective or dangerous condition in an action by an invitee for injuries suffered by reason of the dangerous condition. CHAPTER 11 California Judicial Council Dangerous Condition of Public Property Instructions

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Dangerous Condition of Public Property Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1100 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for a cause of action under Gov. Code § 835 [CACI No. 1100].
- Control [CACI No. 1101].
- The definition of "dangerous condition" under Gov. Code § 830(a) [CACI No. 1102].
- The notice requirement under Gov. Code § 835.2 [CACI No. 1103].
- The inspection system under Gov. Code § 835.2(b)(1), (2) [CACI No. 1104].
- Affirmative defenses, including the defenses of a natural condition [CACI No. 1110], a condition created by a reasonable act or omission [CACI No. 1111] or a reasonable act or omission to correct [CACI No. 1112], and weather conditions affecting streets and highways [CACI No. 1122].
- The failure to provide traffic control signals [CACI No. 1120] and traffic warning signals, signs, or markings [CACI No. 1121].
- The loss of design immunity [CACI No. 1123].

The dangerous condition of public property series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1100, VF-1101].

CHAPTER 11 California Judicial Council Dangerous Condition of Public Property Instructions

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1100

CACI 1100 Dangerous Condition on Public Property--Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 835)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by a dangerous condition of [name of defendant]'s property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] owned [or controlled] the property;
 - 2. That the property was in a dangerous condition at the time of the incident;
 - 3. That the dangerous condition created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of incident that occurred;
 - 4. [That negligent or wrongful conduct of [name of defendant]'s employee acting within the scope of his or her employment created the dangerous condition;]
- [or]
- [That [name of defendant] had notice of the dangerous condition for a long enough time to have protected against it;]
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
 - 6. That the dangerous condition was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

The concepts of notice, "dangerous condition," "protect against," and "property of a public entity" are addressed in subsequent instructions.

For element 4, choose either or both options depending on whether liability is alleged under Government Code section 835(a), 835(b), or both.

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 835 provides:

Except as provided by statute, a public entity is liable for injury caused by a dangerous condition of its property if the plaintiff establishes that the property was in a dangerous condition at the time of the injury, that the injury was proximately caused by the dangerous condition, that the dangerous condition created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of injury which was incurred, and either:

(a) A negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the public entity within the scope of his employment created the dangerous condition; or

(b) The public entity had actual or constructive notice of the dangerous condition under Section 835.2 a sufficient time prior to the injury to have taken measures to protect against the dangerous condition.

- Government Code section 835.2(a) provides: "A public entity had actual notice of a dangerous condition within the meaning of subdivision (b) of section 835 if it had actual knowledge of the existence of the condition and knew or should have known of its dangerous character."

- Government Code section 835.2(b) provides, in part: "A public entity had constructive notice of a dangerous condition within the meaning of subdivision (b) of Section 835 only if the plaintiff establishes that the condition had existed for such a period of time and was of such an obvious nature that the public entity, in the exercise of due care, should have discovered the condition and its dangerous character."

- Government Code section 830 provides:

As used in this chapter:

(a) "Dangerous condition" means a condition of property that creates a substantial (as distinguished from a minor, trivial or insignificant) risk of injury when such property or adjacent property is used with due care in a manner in which it is reasonably foreseeable that it will be used.

(b) "Protect against" includes repairing, remedying or correcting a dangerous condition, providing safeguards against a dangerous condition, or warning of a dangerous condition.

(c) "Property of a public entity" and "public property" mean real or personal property owned or controlled by the public entity, but do not include easements, encroachments and other property that are located on the property of the public entity but are not owned or controlled by the public entity.

■ "[A] public entity is not liable for injuries except as provided by statute [Gov. Code, § 815] and [Government Code] section 835 sets out the exclusive conditions under which a public entity is liable for injuries caused by a dangerous condition of public property." (Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 Cal.4th 820, 829 [15 Cal.Rptr.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624] .)

■ The Supreme Court has observed: "Subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 835 obviously address two different types of cases. However, what distinguishes the two types of cases is not simply whether the public entity has notice of the dangerous condition. Instead, what distinguishes the two cases in practice is who created the dangerous condition. Because an entity must act through its employees, virtually all suits brought on account of dangerous conditions created by the entity will be brought under subdivision (a). In contrast, subdivision (b) can also support suits based on dangerous conditions not created by the entity or its employees." (Brown, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 836 .)

■ In section 835(a), "the term 'created' must be defined as the sort of involvement by an employee that would justify a presumption of notice on the entity's part." (Brown, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 836 .) The res ipsa loquitur presumption does not satisfy section 835(a). (Ibid.)

■ "Focusing on the language in Pritchard, supra, 178 Cal.App.2d at page 256, stating that where the public entity 'has itself created the dangerous condition it is per se culpable,' plaintiff argues that the negligence that section 835, subdivision (a), refers to is not common law negligence, but something that exists whenever the public entity creates the dangerous condition of property. We disagree. If the Legislature had wanted to impose liability whenever a public entity created a dangerous condition, it would merely have required plaintiff to establish that an act or omission of an employee of the public entity within the scope of his employment created the dangerous condition. Instead, section 835, subdivision (a), requires the plaintiff to establish that a 'negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the public entity within the scope of his employment created the dangerous condition.' (Italics added.) Plaintiff's interpretation would transform the highly meaningful words 'negligent or wrongful' into meaningless surplusage, contrary to the rule of statutory interpretation that courts should avoid a construction that makes any word surplusage." (Metcalf v. County of San Joaquin (2008) 42 Cal.4th 1121, 1135 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 382, 176 P.3d 1121] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ The plaintiff need not prove both that the public entity was negligent in creating the condition and that it had notice of the condition; either negligence or notice is sufficient. (Curtis v. State of California (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 668, 693 [180 Cal.Rptr. 843] .)

■ "For liability to be imposed on a public entity for a dangerous condition of property, the entity must be in a position to protect against or warn of the hazard. Therefore, the crucial element is not ownership, but rather control." (Mamola v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (1979) 94 Cal.App.3d 781, 788 [156 Cal.Rptr. 614] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Liability for injury caused by a dangerous condition of property has been imposed when an unreasonable risk of harm is created by a combination of defect in the property and acts of third parties. However, courts have consistently refused to characterize harmful third party conduct as a dangerous condition--absent some concurrent contributing defect in the property itself." (Hayes v. State of California (1974) 11 Cal.3d 469, 472 [113 Cal.Rptr. 599, 521 P.2d 855] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The existence of a dangerous condition is ordinarily a question of fact but 'can be decided as a matter of law if reasonable minds can come to only one conclusion.' " (Cerna v. City of Oakland (2008) 161 Cal.App.4th 1340, 1347 [75 Cal.Rptr.3d 168] .)

CHAPTER 11 California Judicial Council Dangerous Condition of Public Property Instructions

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1101

CACI 1101 Control

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] controlled the property at the time of the incident. In deciding whether [name of defendant] controlled the property, you should consider whether it had the power to prevent, fix, or guard against the dangerous condition. You should also consider whether [name of defendant] treated the property as if it were its property.

Directions for Use

This instruction will not be necessary in most cases. Ownership of public property is generally established as a matter of law by evidence of holding title or other similar evidence.

The power to regulate privately owned facilities is not enough, in and of itself, to impose liability on a public entity (i.e., it is not "control"). (Aaitui v. Grande Properties (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1369, 1377-1378 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 123] .)

- "Where the public entity's relationship to the dangerous property is not clear, aid may be sought by inquiring whether the particular defendant had control, in the sense of power to prevent, remedy or guard against the dangerous condition; whether his ownership is a naked title or whether it is coupled with control; and whether a private defendant, having a similar relationship to the property, would be responsible for its safe condition." CHAPTER 11 California Judicial Council Dangerous Condition of Public Property Instructions

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1102

CACI 1102 Definition of "Dangerous Condition" (Gov. Code, § 830(a))

A "dangerous condition" is a condition of public property that creates a substantial risk of injury to members of the general public when the property [or adjacent property] is used with reasonable care and in a reasonably foreseeable manner. A condition that creates only a minor risk of injury is not a dangerous condition. [Whether the property is in a dangerous condition is to be determined without regard to whether [[name of plaintiff]/ [or] [name of third party]] exercised or failed to exercise reasonable care in [his/her] use of the property.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

Give the last sentence if comparative fault is at issue. It clarifies that comparative fault does not negate the possible existence of a dangerous condition. (See Fredette v. City of Long Beach (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 122, 131 [231 Cal.Rptr. 598] .)

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 830(a) provides: "'Dangerous condition' means a condition of property that creates a substantial (as distinguished from a minor, trivial or insignificant) risk of injury when such property or adjacent property is used with due care in a manner in which it is reasonably foreseeable that it will be used."

- The Government Code permits the court to decide this issue as a matter of law. Section 830.2 provides: "A condition is not a dangerous condition within the meaning of this chapter if the trial or appellate court, viewing the evidence most favorably to the plaintiff, determines as a matter of law that the risk created by the condition was of such a minor, trivial or insignificant nature in view of the surrounding circumstances that no reasonable person would conclude that the condition created a substantial risk of injury when such property or adjacent property was used with due care in a manner in which it was reasonably foreseeable that it would be used."

- "In general, '[whether] a given set of facts and circumstances creates a dangerous condition is usually a question of fact and may only be resolved as a question of law if reasonable minds can come to but one conclusion.' " (Peterson v. San Francisco Community College Dist. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 799, 810 [205 Cal.Rptr. 842, 685 P.2d 1193] , internal citation omitted.)

- "An initial and essential element of recovery for premises liability under the governing statutes is proof a dangerous condition existed. The law imposes no duty on a landowner--including a public entity--to repair trivial defects, or 'to maintain [its property] in an absolutely perfect condition.' " (Stathoulis v. City of Montebello (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 559, 566 [78 Cal.Rptr.3d 910] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The negligence of a plaintiff-user of public property ... is a defense which may be asserted by a public entity; it has no bearing upon the determination of a 'dangerous condition' in the first instance. So long as a plaintiff-user can establish that a condition of the property creates a substantial risk to any foreseeable user of the public property who uses it with due care, he has successfully alleged the existence of a dangerous condition regardless of his personal lack of due care. If, however, it can be shown that the property is safe when used with due care and that a risk of harm is created only when foreseeable users fail to exercise due care, then such property is not 'dangerous' within the meaning of section 830, subdivision (a)." (Fredette, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 131 , internal citation omitted.)

- "Even though it is foreseeable that persons may use public property without due care, a public entity may not be held liable for failing to take precautions to protect such persons." (Fredette, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 132 , internal citation omitted.)

- "With respect to public streets, courts have observed 'any property can be dangerous if used in a sufficiently improper manner. For this reason, a public entity is only required to provide roads that are safe for reasonably foreseeable careful use. [Citation.] 'If [] it can be shown that the property is safe when used with due care and that a risk of harm is created only when foreseeable users fail to exercise due care, then such property is not 'dangerous' within the meaning of section 830, subdivision (a).' [Citation.]' " (Sun v. City of Oakland (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 1177, 1183 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 372] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Although public entities may be held liable for injuries occurring to reasonably foreseeable users of the property, even when the property is used for a purpose for which it is not designed or which is illegal, liability may ensue only if the property creates a substantial risk of injury when it is used with due care. Whether a condition creates a substantial risk of harm depends on how the general public would use the property exercising due care, including children who are held to a lower standard of care. (§ 830.) The standard is an objective one; a plaintiff's particular condition ..., does not alter the standard." (Schonfeldt v. State of California (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 1462, 1466 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 464] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The majority of cases ... have concluded that third party conduct by itself, unrelated to the condition of the property, does not constitute a 'dangerous condition' for which a public entity may be held liable. ... Nothing in the provisions of section 835, however, specifically precludes a finding that a public entity may be under a duty, given special circumstances, to protect against harmful criminal conduct on its property." (Peterson, supra, 36 Cal.3d at pp. 810-811 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Two points applicable to this case are ... well established: first, that the location of public property, by virtue of which users are subjected to hazards on adjacent property, may constitute a 'dangerous condition' under sections 830 and 835; second, that a physical condition of the public property that increases the risk of injury from third party conduct may be a 'dangerous condition' under the statutes." (Bonanno v. Central Contra Costa Transit Authority (2003) 30 Cal.4th 139, 154 [132 Cal.Rptr.2d 341, 65 P.3d 807] .)

A dangerous condition of public property includes property which, because of its general use and operation, creates a substantial risk of harm to foreseeable users. (Joyce v. Simi Valley Unified School Dist. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 292, 304-305 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 712] .)

CHAPTER 11 California Judicial Council Dangerous Condition of Public Property Instructions

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1103

CACI 1103 Notice (Gov. Code, § 835.2)

[Name of plaintiff] must prove that [name of defendant] had notice of the dangerous condition before the incident occurred. To prove that there was notice, [name of plaintiff] must prove:

[That [name of defendant] knew of the condition and knew or should have known that it was dangerous. A public entity knows of a dangerous condition if an employee knows of the condition and reasonably should have informed the entity about it.]

[or]

[That the condition had existed for enough time before the incident and was so obvious that the [name of defendant] reasonably should have discovered the condition and known that it was dangerous.]

New September 2003

This instruction is intended to be used where the plaintiff relies on Government Code section 835(b). This instruction should be modified if the plaintiff is relying on both section 835(a) and section 835(b) to clarify that proof of notice is not necessary under section 835(a).

For an instruction regarding reasonable inspection systems, see CACI No. 1104, Inspection System.

■ Government Code section 835.2 addresses actual and constructive notice. Section 835.2(a) provides: "A public entity had actual notice of a dangerous condition within the meaning of subdivision (b) of section 835 if it had actual knowledge of the existence of the condition and knew or should have known of its dangerous character."

■ Government Code section 835.2(b) provides, in part: "A public entity had constructive notice of a dangerous condition within the meaning of subdivision (b) of Section 835 only if the plaintiff establishes that the condition had existed for such a period of time and was of such an obvious nature that the public entity, in the exercise of due care, should have discovered the condition and its dangerous character."

■ "'It is well settled that constructive notice can be shown by the long continued existence of the dangerous or defective condition, and it is a question of fact for the jury to determine whether the condition complained of has existed for a sufficient time to give the public agency constructive notice.'" (Erfurt v. State of California (1983) 141 Cal.App.3d 837, 844-845 [190 Cal.Rptr 569] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "'To establish 'actual notice,' it is not enough to show that the state employees had a general knowledge that people do leave hot coals on public beaches. There must be some evidence that the employees had knowledge of the particular dangerous condition in question.'" (State of California v. Superior Court (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 396, 399-400 [69 Cal.Rptr. 683] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Briefly stated, constructive notice may be imputed if it can be shown that an obvious danger existed for an adequate period of time before the accident to have permitted the state employees, in the exercise of due care, to discover and remedy the situation had they been operating under a reasonable plan of inspection. In the instant case, it can be validly argued that there was a triable issue on the question of inspection, but in determining whether there is constructive notice, the method of inspection has been held to be secondary. The primary and indispensable element of constructive notice is a showing that the obvious condition existed a sufficient period of time before the accident." (State of California, supra, at p. 400 , internal citation omitted.)

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1104

CACI 1104 Inspection System (Gov. Code, § 835.2(b)(1) & (2))

In deciding whether [name of defendant] should have discovered the dangerous condition, you may consider whether it had a reasonable inspection system and whether a reasonable system would have revealed the dangerous condition.

[In determining whether an inspection system is reasonable, you may consider the practicality and cost of the system and balance those factors against the likelihood and seriousness of the potential danger if no such system existed.]

[and/or]

[If [name of defendant] had a reasonable inspection system but did not detect the dangerous condition, you may consider whether it used reasonable care in maintaining and operating the system.]

New September 2003

Read the first paragraph and one or both of the bracketed paragraphs as appropriate to the facts.

- Government Code section 835.2(b) provides, in part:

On the issue of due care, admissible evidence includes but is not limited to evidence as to:

(1) Whether the existence of the condition and its dangerous character would have been discovered by an inspection system that was reasonably adequate (considering the practicality and cost of inspection weighed against the likelihood and magnitude of the potential danger to which failure to inspect would give rise) to inform the public entity whether the property was safe for the use or uses for which the public entity used or intended others to use the public property and for uses that the public entity actually knew others were making of the public property or adjacent property.

(2) Whether the public entity maintained and operated such an inspection system with due care and did not discover the condition.

■ "Constructive notice may be found where the dangerous condition would have been discovered by a reasonable inspection." (Straughter v. State of California (1976) 89 Cal.App.3d 102, 109 [152 Cal.Rptr. 147] , citing to Stanford v. City of Ontario (1972) 6 Cal.3d 870, 882 [101 Cal.Rptr. 97, 495 P.2d 425] .)

■ "The questions of whether a dangerous condition could have been discovered by reasonable inspection and whether there was adequate time for preventive measures are properly left to the jury." (Carson v. Facilities Development Co. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 830, 843 [206 Cal.Rptr. 136, 686 P.2d 656] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Although judicial decisions do not always link the issue of constructive notice to the reasonable inspection system ... , the Tort Claims Act indicates that, absent other persuasive evidence, the relationship between constructive notice and inspection may be crucial." (California Government Tort Liability Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 3d ed. 1992), § 3.37.)

CACI 1110 Affirmative Defense--Natural Conditions (Gov. Code, § 831.2)

A public entity is not responsible for harm caused by a natural condition of an unimproved public property. If [name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff]'s injury was caused by such a condition, then it is not responsible for the injury.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 831.2 provides: "Neither a public entity nor a public employee is liable for an injury caused by a natural condition of any unimproved public property, including but not limited to any natural condition of any lake, stream, bay, river or beach."
- Section 831.2 "provides absolute immunity for public entities against claims for injuries caused by natural conditions of unimproved public property. Section 831.2 was enacted to ensure that public entities will not prohibit public access to recreational areas caused by the burden and expense of defending against personal injury suits and of placing such land in a safe condition. Immunity provisions of the tort claims act generally prevail over all sections imposing liability." (Arroyo v. State of California (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 755, 761 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 627] .)
- Section 831.21(a) provides: "Public beaches shall be deemed to be in a natural condition and unimproved notwithstanding the provision or absence of public safety services such as lifeguards, police or sheriff patrols, medical services, fire protection services, beach cleanup services, or signs. The provisions of this section shall apply only to natural conditions of public property and shall not limit any liability or immunity that may otherwise exist pursuant to this division." This section abrogated Gonzales

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1111

CACI 1111 Affirmative Defense--Condition Created by Reasonable Act or Omission (Gov. Code, § 835.4(a))

A public entity is not legally responsible for harm caused by a dangerous condition if the act or omission of its employee that created the dangerous condition was reasonable. If [name of defendant] proves that the act or omission that created the dangerous condition was reasonable, then your verdict must be for [name of defendant].

In determining whether the employee's conduct was reasonable, you must weigh the likelihood and the seriousness of the potential injury against the practicality and cost of either:

- (a) taking alternative action that would not have created the risk of injury; or
- (b) protecting against the risk of injury.

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, April 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction states a defense to the theory that the entity created a dangerous condition of public property. (Gov. Code, §§ 835(a), 835.4(a).)

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 835.4(a) provides: "A public entity is not liable under subdivision (a) of Section 835 for injury caused by a condition of its property if the public entity establishes that the act or omission that created the condition was reasonable. The reasonableness of the act or omission that created the condition shall be determined by weighing the probability and gravity of potential injury to persons and property foreseeably exposed to the risk of injury against the practicability and cost of taking alternative action that would not create the risk of injury or of protecting against the risk of injury."

■ Government Code section 835.4 is an affirmative defense. (Hibbs v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1967) 252 Cal.App.2d 166, 172 [60 Cal.Rptr. 364] .)

■ "[T]he question of the reasonableness of a public entity's action in any particular situation is one of fact for a jury." (Swaner v. City of Santa Monica (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 789, 810 [198 Cal.Rptr. 208] .)

■ "The Court of Appeal found conceptual difficulties in the interplay between section 835, subdivision (a) (plaintiff must establish negligence) and section 835.4, subdivision (a) (providing a defense if the public entity establishes that the act or omission that created the condition was reasonable). As it noted, normally 'negligence is the absence of reasonableness.' That being the case, the court reasoned, one cannot reasonably act negligently. Because of this conundrum, the Court of Appeal found that section 835.4 does not provide an affirmative defense. (P) We disagree. Section 835.4 clearly creates an affirmative defense that the public entity must establish. Moreover, the Legislature created this defense specifically for public entities. The California Law Revision Commission explained, 'Under this section, a public entity may absolve itself from liability for creating or failing to remedy a dangerous condition by showing that it would have been too costly and impractical for the public entity to have done anything else. ... This defense has been provided public entities in recognition that, despite limited manpower and budgets, there is much that they are required to do. Unlike private enterprise, a public entity often cannot weigh the advantage of engaging in an activity against the cost and decide not to engage in it. Government cannot 'go out of the business' of governing. Therefore, a public entity should not be liable for injuries caused by a dangerous condition if it is able to show that under all the circumstances, including the alternative courses of action available to it and the practicability and cost of pursuing such alternatives, its action in creating or failing to remedy the condition was not unreasonable.' " (Metcalf v. County of San Joaquin (2008) 42 Cal.4th 1121, 1137-1138 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 382, 176 P.3d 654] , footnote and internal citation omitted.)

■ "The reasonableness standard referred to in section 835.4 differs from the reasonableness standard that applies under sections 830 and 835 and ordinary tort principles. Under the latter principles, the reasonableness of the defendant's conduct does not depend upon the existence of other, conflicting claims on the defendant's resources or the political barriers to acting in a reasonable manner." (Metcalf, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 1138 .)

■ "In sum, we conclude that negligence under section 835, subdivision (a), is established under ordinary tort principles concerning the reasonableness of a defendant's conduct in light of the foreseeable risk of harm. The plaintiff has the burden to demonstrate that the defendant's conduct was unreasonable under this standard If the plaintiff carries this burden, the public entity may defend under the provisions of section 835.4--a defense that is unique to public entities." (Metcalf, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 1139 .)

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1112

CACI 1112 Affirmative Defense--Reasonable Act or Omission to Correct (Gov. Code, § 835.4(b))

A public entity is not responsible for harm caused by a dangerous condition if its failure to take sufficient steps to protect against the risk of injury was reasonable. If [name of defendant] proves that its conduct was reasonable, then your verdict must be for [name of defendant].

In determining whether [name of defendant]'s conduct was reasonable, you must consider how much time and opportunity it had to take action. You must also weigh the likelihood and the seriousness of the potential injury against the practicality and cost of protecting against the risk of injury.

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, April 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction states a defense to the theory that the entity had notice of a dangerous condition (that it did not create) and failed to take adequate protective measures. (Gov. Code, §§ 835(b), 835.4(b).)

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 835.4(b) provides: "A public entity is not liable under subdivision (b) of Section 835 for injury caused by a dangerous condition of its property if the public entity establishes that the action it took to protect against the risk of injury created by the condition or its failure to take such action was reasonable. The reasonableness of the action or inaction of the public entity shall be determined by taking into consideration the time and opportunity it had to take action and by weighing the probability and gravity of potential injury to persons and property foreseeably exposed to the risk of injury against the practicability and cost of protecting against the risk of such injury."

CHAPTER 11 California Judicial Council Dangerous Condition of Public Property Instructions

2-11 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1120

CACI 1120 Failure to Provide Traffic Control Signals (Gov. Code, § 830.4)

You may not find that [name of defendant]'s property was in a dangerous condition just because it did not provide a [insert device or marking]. However, you may consider the lack of a [insert device or marking], along with other circumstances shown by the evidence, in determining whether [name of defendant]'s property was dangerous.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 830.4 provides: "A condition is not a dangerous condition within the meaning of this chapter merely because of the failure to provide regulatory traffic control signals, stop signs, yield right-of-way signs, or speed restriction signs, as described by the Vehicle Code, or distinctive roadway markings as described in Section 21460 of the Vehicle Code."

- "Cases interpreting this statute have held that it provides a shield against liability only in those situations where the alleged dangerous condition exists solely as a result of the public entity's failure to provide a regulatory traffic device or street marking. If a traffic intersection is dangerous for reasons other than the failure to provide regulatory signals or street markings, the statute provides no immunity." (Washington v. City and County of San Francisco (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1531, 1534-1535 [269 Cal.Rptr. 58] .)

- "A public entity does not create a dangerous condition on its property 'merely because of the failure to provide regulatory traffic control signals, stop signs, yield right-of-way signs, or speed restriction signs' (§ 830.4.) If, on the other hand, the government installs traffic signals and invites the public to justifiably rely on them, liability will attach if the signals malfunction, confusing or misleading motorists, and causing an accident to occur. The reasoning behind this rule is that the government creates a dangerous condition and a trap when it operates traffic signals that, for example, direct motorists to 'go' in all four directions of an intersection simultaneously, with predictable results." (Chowdhury v. City of Los Angeles (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1187, 1194-1195 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 657] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the government turns off traffic signals entirely to avoid confusion, liability does not attach. 'When the [traffic] lights were turned off, their defective condition could no longer mislead or misdirect the injured party.' The same result obtains whether the traffic signals are extinguished by design or by accident." (Chowdhury, supra, 38 Cal.App.4th at p. 1195 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Although section 830.4 ... provides that a condition of public property is not a dangerous one merely because of the failure to provide regulatory traffic control signals, the absence of such signals for the protection of pedestrians must be taken into consideration, together with other factors. ... [T]he lack of crosswalk markings, better illumination and warning signs became important factors in the case when the [pedestrian] subway itself was in a dangerous condition." (Gardner v. City of San Jose (1967) 248 Cal.App.2d 798, 803 [57 Cal.Rptr. 176] .)

■ "In short, a dangerous condition proven to exist, for reasons other than or in addition to the mere failure to provide the controls or markings described in section 830.4, may constitute a proximate cause of injury without regard to whether such condition also constitutes a 'trap,' as described by section 830.8, to one using the public improvement with due care because of the failure to post signs different from those dealt with by section 830.4 warning of that dangerous condition." (Washington, supra, 219 Cal.App.3d at p. 1537 .)

CACI 1121 Failure to Provide Traffic Warning Signals, Signs, or Markings (Gov. Code, § 830.8)

A public entity is not responsible for harm caused by the lack of a [insert relevant warning device] unless a reasonably careful person would not notice or anticipate a dangerous condition of property without the [insert relevant warning device].

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 830.8 provides: "Neither a public entity nor a public employee is liable under this chapter for an injury caused by the failure to provide traffic or warning signals, signs, markings or devices described in the Vehicle Code. Nothing in this section exonerates a public entity or public employee from liability for injury proximately caused by such failure if a signal, sign, marking or device (other than one described in Section 830.4) was necessary to warn of a dangerous condition which endangered the safe movement of traffic and which would not be reasonably apparent to, and would not have been anticipated by, a person exercising due care."

- "Section 830.8 provides a limited immunity for public entities exercising their discretion in the placement of warning signs described in the Vehicle Code. 'The broad discretion allowed a public entity in the placement of road control signs is limited, however, by the requirement that there be adequate warning of dangerous conditions not reasonably apparent to motorists.' Thus where the failure to post a warning sign results in a concealed trap for those exercising due care, section 830.8 immunity does not apply." (Kessler v. State of California (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 317, 321-322 [253 Cal.Rptr. 537] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A public entity may be liable for accidents proximately caused by its failure to provide a signal, sign, marking or device to warn of a dangerous condition which endangers the safe movement of traffic 'and which would not be reasonably apparent to, and would not have been anticipated by, a person exercising due care.' This 'concealed trap' statute applies to accidents proximately caused when, for example, the public entity fails to post signs warning of a sharp or poorly banked curve ahead on its road or of a hidden intersection behind a promontory, or where a design defect in the roadway causes moisture to freeze and create an icy road surface, a fact known to the public entity but not to unsuspecting motorists, or where road work is being performed on a highway." (Chowdhury v. City of Los Angeles (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1187, 1196-1197 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 657] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]arning devices are required under Government Code section 830.8 and 830 (fog) only if a dangerous condition exists." (Callahan v. City and County of San Francisco (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 374, 380 [93 Cal.Rptr. 122] .)

In Joyce v. Simi Valley Unified School Dist. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 292, 301 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 712] , because the plaintiff did not claim that the school district breached a duty to install traffic signs and signals or modify the crosswalk, the trial court did not err in not instructing on several statutory immunities governing traffic signs and signals. The trial court found that the instructions would confuse and mislead the jury.

CACI 1122 Affirmative Defense--Weather Conditions Affecting Streets and Highways (Gov. Code, § 831)

[Name of defendant] claims it cannot be held responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm because the harm was caused by [insert weather condition, e.g., fog, wind, rain, flood, ice, or snow] affecting the use of a public street or highway. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

- 1. That [insert weather condition, e.g., fog, wind, rain, flood, ice, or snow] affecting the use of a public street or highway was the cause of [name of plaintiff]'s harm; and
- 2. That a reasonably careful person using the public streets and highways would have noticed the [insert weather condition, e.g., fog, wind, rain, flood, ice, or snow] and anticipated its effect on the use of the street or highway.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The immunity provided by Government Code section 831 does not apply to: (1) effects that would not be reasonably apparent to and anticipated by a person exercising reasonable care, (2) situations where the weather effect combines with other factors that make the road dangerous, (3) sunlight that blinds drivers, or (4) where the weather conditions resulted in physical damage to or deterioration of the street or highway. (Erfurt v. State of California (1983) 141 Cal.App.3d 837, 845-846 [190 Cal.Rptr. 569] ; see Flournoy v. State of California (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 806, 814 [80 Cal.Rptr. 485] .)

Sources and Authority

■ Government Code section 831 provides: "Neither a public entity nor a public employee is liable for an injury caused by the effect on the use of streets and highways of weather conditions as such. Nothing in this section exonerates a public entity or public employee from liability for injury proximately caused by such effect if it would not be reasonably apparent to, and would not be anticipated by, a person exercising due care. For the purpose of this section, the effect on the use of streets and highways of weather conditions includes the effect of fog, wind, rain, flood, ice or snow but does not include physical damage to or deterioration of streets and highways resulting from weather conditions."

■ Weather immunity is an affirmative defense. (Bossi v. State of California (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 313, 321 [174 Cal.Rptr. 93] [jury properly instructed regarding section 831, but issue was moot because jury did not reach it]; see also Allyson v. Department of Transportation (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 1304, 1319 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 490] .)

■ CalTrans's duty regarding transitory conditions affecting road surface and highway safety is discretionary, not mandatory. (Allyson, supra, 53 Cal.App.4th at p. 1319 .) Accordingly, section 831 immunity is available to CalTrans in appropriate circumstances. (Id. at pp. 1320-1321 .)

CACI 1123 Loss of Design Immunity (Cornette)

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for harm caused to [name of plaintiff] based on the plan or design of the [insert type of property, e.g., "highway"] unless [name of plaintiff] proves the following:

1. That the [insert type of property, e.g., "highway"]'s plan[s] or design[s] had become dangerous because of a change in physical conditions;

2. That [name of defendant] had notice of the dangerous condition created because of the change in physical conditions; and

3. [That [name of defendant] had a reasonable time to obtain the funds and carry out the necessary corrective work to conform the property to a reasonable design or plan;]

[or]

[That [name of defendant] was unable to correct the condition due to practical impossibility or lack of funds but did not reasonably attempt to provide adequate warnings of the dangerous condition.]

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the public entity defendant is entitled to design immunity unless the changed-conditions exception can be established. Read either or both options for element 3 depending on the facts of the case.

A public entity claiming design immunity must establish three elements: (1) a causal relationship between the plan or design and the accident; (2) discretionary approval of the plan or design before construction; and (3) substantial evidence supporting the reasonableness of the plan or design. (Cornette v. Dept. of Transportation (2001) 26 Cal.4th 63, 66 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 1, 26 P.3d 332] .) The third element, substantial evidence of reasonableness, must be tried by the court, not the jury. (Id. at pp. 66-67 ; see Gov. Code, § 830.6.) The first two elements, causation and discretionary approval, are issues of fact for the jury to decide. (Cornette, supra, 26 Cal.4th at pp. 74-75 ; see also Alvis v. County of Ventura (2009) 178 Cal.App.4th 536, 550 [100 Cal.Rptr.3d 494] [elements may only be resolved as issues of law if facts are undisputed].) But, as a practical matter, these elements are usually stipulated to or otherwise established so they seldom become issues for the jury.

Users should include CACI No. 1102, Definition of "Dangerous Condition," and CACI No. 1103, Notice, to define "notice" and "dangerous condition" in connection with this instruction. Additionally, the meaning and legal requirements for a "change of physical condition" have been the subject of numerous decisions involving specific contexts. Appropriate additional instructions to account for these decisions may be necessary.

Sources and Authority

- Government Code section 830.6 provides, in part: "Neither a public entity nor a public employee is liable under this chapter for an injury caused by the plan or design of a construction of, or an improvement to, public property where such plan or design has been approved in advance of the construction or improvement by the legislative body of the public entity or by some other body or employee exercising discretionary authority to give such approval or where such plan or design is prepared in conformity with standards previously so approved, if the trial or appellate court determines that there is any substantial evidence upon the basis of which (a) a reasonable public employee could have adopted the plan or design or the standards therefor or (b) a reasonable legislative body or other body or employee could have approved the plan or design or the standards therefor."

- "Design immunity does not necessarily continue in perpetuity. To demonstrate loss of design immunity a plaintiff must also establish three elements: (1) the plan or design has become dangerous because of a change in physical conditions; (2) the public entity had actual or constructive notice of the dangerous condition thus created; and (3) the public entity had a reasonable time to obtain the funds and carry out the necessary remedial work to bring the property back into conformity with a reasonable design or plan, or the public entity, unable to remedy the condition due to practical impossibility or lack of funds, had not reasonably attempted to provide adequate warnings." (Cornette, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 66 , internal citations omitted.)

- "The rationale for design immunity is to prevent a jury from second-guessing the decision of a public entity by reviewing the identical questions of risk that had previously been considered by the government officers who adopted or approved the plan or design." (Cornette, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 69 , internal citation omitted.)

- "Section 830.6 makes it quite clear that 'the trial or appellate court' is to determine whether 'there is any substantial evidence upon the basis of which (a) a reasonable public employee could have adopted the plan or design or the standards therefor or (b) a reasonable legislative body or other body or employee could have approved the plan or design or the standards therefor.' The question presented by this case is whether the Legislature intended that the three issues involved in determining whether a public entity has lost its design immunity should also be tried by the court. Our examination of the text of section 830.6, the legislative history of that section, and our prior decisions leads us to the conclusion that, where triable issues of material fact are presented, as they were here, a plaintiff has a right to a jury trial as to the issues involved in loss of design immunity." (Cornette, supra, 26 Cal.4th at pp. 66-67 .)
