Fairness of consideration must be determined from the creditor's standpoint.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the fairness of the consideration given or received in the transaction is at issue. It should be used with the instruction in MB 4200A.40 defining "value."

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.41[3][b].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: --Importance of Timing: Timing can be an important consideration in determining value. A creditor wants to be paid now, not after a six month marketing effort. This instruction requires that fairness be determined from the creditor's standpoint. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip: --Increases in Value: This instruction is particularly important if the property has substantially increased in value from the time the debtor acquired it. [3] Comment[a] Determining Whether Consideration Is Fair

The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act does not indicate what is "reasonably equivalent value" for a transfer or obligation [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (3)]. However, California cases decided before the Act's adoption have consistently held that the fairness of consideration is to be determined from the viewpoint of the debtor's creditors and that it is a question of fact [Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal.2d 321, 324, 245 P.2d 1059 ; Kirkland v. Risso (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 971, 977, 159 Cal.Rptr. 798 Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal.App.2d 759, 766, 48 Cal.Rptr. 215]. The Act's definition of "value" [see MB 4200A.40] is in accord with the holding in these cases [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (2)].

In an action to quiet title case, the defendant alleged as an affirmative defense that the property's conveyance to the plaintiff was invalid as a transfer to defraud creditors. The court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment for the plaintiff, holding that he had negated this fraudulent transfer defense by proving that the debtor who transferred the property had received a reasonably equivalent value. The debtor owed the plaintiff $21,000 (as evidenced by a promissory note) when he delivered the quitclaim deed to the plaintiff in lieu of foreclosure on that debt. When the property was sold three and a half years later, the selling price was $30,000. The court of appeal stated that "[t]his showing negates defendant's affirmative defense" [Barisich v. Lewis (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 12, 20, 275 Cal.Rptr. 331].

The Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.03, Paragraph (3), provides that a transfer for security is generally a transfer for a reasonably equivalent value unless (1) the transfer purports to secure more than the debt actually incurred or to be incurred, or (2) the debt to be secured is a fraudulent obligation under the Act.

When the debtor receives no consideration, then, as a matter of law, the transfer was made without fair consideration [United States v. May (S.D. Cal. 1984) 600 F.Supp. 339, 341].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A debtor that is a partnership is insolvent if, at a fair valuation, the sum of the partnership's debts is greater than the sum of both (1) the partnership's assets, and (2) the excess value of each general partner's nonpartnership assets over the partner's nonpartnership debts.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3439.02(b).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant is a partnership and the defendant's solvency is at issue. This instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 4200A.53, which defines "assets" and "debts." It should also be given as a supplemental instruction to CACI No. 4205, which explains insolvency, and CACI No. 4206, which concerns the presumption of insolvency.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.02(e); Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.02, Paragraph (1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the debtor's solvency is at issue and there is a debt secured by a valid lien on the debtor's property that is not included as an asset. The instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 4200A.01 defining "debt." It should be given with CACI No. 4205, which explains insolvency, and with the instructions in MB 4200A.04 and MB 4200A.05, which define "lien" and "valid lien."

[a] Treatment of Secured Debt

A debt, to the extent that it is secured by a valid lien on the debtor's property not included as an asset, is not included as a liability in determining the debtor's solvency [Civ. Code § 3439.02(e)]. Because a claim by an unsecured creditor cannot be collected from the encumbered interest in a debtor's property, both the encumbered interest and the debt secured by that interest are excluded from the determination of insolvency [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.02, Paragraph (1); see In re Curry & Sorensen, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 112 B.R. 324, 327 (debtor's obligations under contracts that were unenforceable for lack of consideration were not counted as liabilities for purposes of determining whether debtor was insolvent)].

In determining the debtor's solvency or insolvency, do not include as a debt any future child support payments of the debtor.

Authority: Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal.4th 657, 671-672, 3 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the debtor's solvency is at issue and the debtor is obligated to pay future child support payments. The instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 4200A.01 defining "debt." It should be given with CACI No. 4205, which explains insolvency.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.52[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Treatment of Future Child Support Payments

Future child support payments should not be viewed as a debt under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (UFTA) [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal.4th 657, 669-672, 3 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 74 P.3d 166]. Treating future child support payments as a debt, while not viewing the earning capacity from which they will probably be paid as an asset, would yield an absurd result. Relatively few parents of young children have current assets sufficient to pay the present discounted value of years and years of future support obligations. Therefore, treating future child support as a current debt would label many persons with child support obligations as insolvent under the UFTA even though they are current on their child support obligations and will be able to pay future obligations as they become due. This insolvency, moreover, is of a wholly artificial character, because the debtor cannot be compelled to convert future child support obligations into a present cash payment, and in fact generally cannot even voluntarily terminate liability for future support by paying the custodial parent the present value of future payments [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal.4th 657, 669-672, 3 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 (applying provisions of UFTA to transfer under marital settlement agreement)].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Whenever there is a confidential relationship between the parties to a transaction, the parties are held to a fuller and stricter proof of the consideration and of the transaction's fairness.

Authorities: Kirkland v. Risso (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 971, 978-979, 159 Cal.Rptr. 798 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 227, 231, 2 Cal.Rptr. 917 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is a familial or other close relationship between the transferor and the transferee. It should be given with CACI No. 4202, which provides the essential factual elements of constructive fraudulent transfer. If the cause of action is based on actual fraud, CACI No. 4200, which provides the essential factual elements of actual intent to defraud, and CACI No. 4201, which describes the specific factors to consider in determining actual intent to defraud, should be used.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.60[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Confidential and Fiduciary Relationships

Confidential and fiduciary relations are synonymous, and exist whenever trust and confidence is reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another. "The very existence of such a relation precludes the party in whom the trust and confidence is reposed from participating in profit or advantage resulting from the dealings of the parties to the relation" [In re Estate of Aaron Cover (1922) 188 Cal. 133, 143, 204 P. 583 ; Eisenbaum v. Western Energy Res., Inc. (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 314, 322, 267 Cal.Rptr. 5].

Transactions between family members or other close confidants are scrutinized very closely for fraud [Kirkland v. Risso (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 971, 978-979, 159 Cal.Rptr. 798 ; Johnson v. Drew (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 614, 621, 32 Cal.Rptr. 540 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 227, 231, 2 Cal.Rptr. 917 ; Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal.App.2d 644, 648, 323 P.2d 150]. When actual fraud is alleged, a transfer to an insider is considered a "badge of fraud," and it is evidence from which an inference of fraudulent intent may be drawn [Johnson v. Drew (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 614, 621, 32 Cal.Rptr. 540 ; Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal.App.2d 644, 648, 323 P.2d 150 ; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.04, Paragraph (5)(a); see MB 4200A.23]. When constructive fraud is alleged and there has been a transfer to a family member or confidant of the debtor, then there must be stricter proof that reasonably equivalent value was received and stricter proof of the overall fairness of the transaction [Kirkland v. Risso (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 971, 978-979, 159 Cal.Rptr. 798 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 227, 231, 2 Cal.Rptr. 917].

The California Constitution guarantees every person the inalienable right to acquire, possess, and protect property [Cal. Const. art. I, § 1]. Because the ability to sell and transfer property is a fundamental aspect of property ownership [United States v. General Motors Corp. (1945) 323 U.S. 373, 378, 65 S.Ct. 357, 89 L.Ed. 311 ; *Gregory v. right to dispose of property [Tennant v. John Tennant Mem'l Home (1914) 167 Cal. 570, 575, 140 P. 242 ; Gregory v. City of San Juan Capistrano (1983) 142 Cal.App.3d 72, 88, 191 Cal.Rptr. 47 , disapproved on other grounds, Fisher v. City of Berkeley (1984) 37 Cal.3d 644, 686 n.43, 209 Cal.Rptr. 682, 693 P.2d 261]. This right of disposition has been confirmed by statute [Civ. Code § 671].

The right of disposition applies only in the absence of fraud [Bank of Cal. v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 1026, 1035, 190 Cal.Rptr. 54 ; *see Gregory v. [a] Preferring Creditor

A debtor, even an insolvent debtor, may prefer one creditor to another in the absence of fraud [Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal.2d 457, 460, 65 P.2d 1316 ; *Bank of Cal. v. When there is fraud, then the transaction between the debtor and creditor may be challenged and found voidable under the Uniform Fraudulent

PART D. DEFENSES

MB 4200A.72 Definition of Good Faith[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

"Good faith" means that _____ [name of transferee] acted without fraudulent intent and that [he/she/it] did not collude with the debtor or otherwise actively participate in the debtor's fraudulent scheme. In other words, "good faith" means that _____ [name of transferee] did not engage in deliberate wrongful conduct.

Authorities: In re SLF News Distributors, Inc. (8th Cir. 1981) 649 F.2d 613, 616 ; Chorost v. Grand Rapids Factory Showrooms (D.N.J. 1948) 77 F.Supp. 276, 281 , aff'd, (3d Cir. 1949) 172 F.2d 327, 329 ; Annod Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1850, 1858-1859, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 63 ; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.08, Paragraph (1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "good faith" for the jury. It should be used when a person who purchased property from the debtor or released the debtor from an obligation alleges that he or she is a good faith purchaser. The instruction should be given with CACI No. 4207.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.72[3][b].

[3] Comment[a] Definition

The term "good faith" is defined in the Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.08 as it is defined in the first sentence of this instruction. The terms "fraudulent intent," "collude," and "actively participate" in the definition are the language of deliberate wrongful conduct. The definition thus belies any notion that a transferee can become a fraudulent transferee by accident or even negligently [Lewis v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1850, 1858-1859, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 63]. Under this definition, the third party transferee is not required to prove that he or she did not know of the debtor's intent to defraud or of the debtor's insolvency [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.08, Paragraph (1)]. However, knowledge of the fraud, or even knowledge of facts that would put a reasonably prudent person on inquiry about possible fraud, would defeat this good faith requirement [In re SLF News Distributors, Inc. (8th Cir. 1981) 649 F.2d 613, 616 ; Chorost v. Grand Rapids Factory Showrooms (D.N.J. 1948) 77 F.Supp. 276, 281 , aff'd, (3d Cir. 1949) 172 F.2d 327, 329].

PART D. DEFENSES

MB 4200A.73 Definition of Reasonably Equivalent Value

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

"Reasonably equivalent value" means an amount that is reasonably equal to the value of the property transferred. Full payment in cash may constitute the "reasonably equivalent value." However, cash payment is not required. Cash plus a legal obligation to pay the balance of the purchase price also may represent the "reasonably equivalent value."

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.08(a); Lewis v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1850, 1874, 1877, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 63.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "reasonably equivalent value" for the jury. It should be used when a person who purchased property from the debtor or released the debtor from an obligation alleged that he or she is a good faith purchaser. The instruction should be given with CACI No. 4207.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.73[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Definition

The term "reasonably equivalent value" is not defined in Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) or the Legislative Committee Comment to that section. However, one case clarified that the concept of value necessarily includes debt as well as cash payment, and that the timing of actual payment is irrelevant [Lewis v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1850, 1874, 1877, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 63].

MB 4200A.74 Transferee's or Obligee's Knowledge

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Evidence of _____ [the (transferee/obligee) or insert name of transferee or obligee]'s knowledge of the debtor's insolvency at the time that the [property was transferred/obligation was incurred] is not relevant on the issue of _____ [the (transferee/obligee) or insert name of transferee or obligee]'s good faith. Therefore, you may not consider any evidence of this knowledge in making your determination on the issue of good faith.

Authority: Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.08, Paragraph (1).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is evidence that the transferee may have known that the debtor was insolvent at the time of the transaction. If the transferee was an insider, then the instruction in MB 4200A.75 should be used. This instruction should be given with CACI No. 4207.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.74[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Knowledge

Whether the transferee or obligee knew of the debtor's insolvency at the time of the transaction is not relevant to the issue of the transferee's or obligee's good faith [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.08, Paragraph (1); but see MB 4200A.76[3] for discussion on transferee/obligee-insider's knowledge of debtor's insolvency]. However, the transferee's or obligee's knowledge of fraud, or even knowledge of facts that would put a reasonably prudent person on inquiry about possible fraud, would defeat the good faith requirement [In re SLF News Distributors, Inc. (8th Cir. 1981) 649 F.2d 613, 616 ; *Chorost v. If you find that _____ [name of transferee or obligee] was an insider who received [property/an obligation] from an insolvent debtor, and that [he/she/it] had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent at the time of the transaction, then _____ [name of transferee or obligee] was not a good faith [transferee/obligee].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.75[3][b].

[3] Comment

The term "insider" should be defined for the jury. Corp. Code § 25402 provides that "[i]t is unlawful for an issuer or any person who is an officer, director or controlling person of an issuer or any other person whose relationship to the issuer gives him access, directly or indirectly, to material information about the issuer not generally available to the public, to purchase or sell any security of the issuer in this state at a time when he knows material information about the issuer gained from such relationship which would significantly affect the market price of that security and which is not generally available to the public, and which he knows is not intended to be so available, unless he has reason to believe that the person selling to or buying from him is also in possession of the information." Damages are available for violation of this provision [see Corp. Code §§ 25502, 25502.5; see also 15 U.S.C.S. § 78a et seq. (Securities Exchange Act of 1934)].

An insider who acquires property or an obligation from a debtor that the insider knows or has reasonable cause to believe was insolvent at the time of the transaction is not a good faith transferee [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.08, Paragraph (4); see Dean v. Davis (1917) 242 U.S. 438, 444-445, 37 S.Ct. 130, 61 L.Ed. 419 ; In re Candor Diamond Corp. (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987) 76 B.R. 342, 351-352] .

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant alleges that this lawsuit was not filed within a reasonable time. To prevail on this defense, Defendant must prove both of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff unreasonably delayed in bringing this lawsuit; and
- 2. That Plaintiff acquiesced in the transaction at issue or Defendant was prejudiced by Plaintiff's delay in bringing this action.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3439.10; Miller v. Eisenhower Med. Ctr. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 614, 624, 166 Cal.Rptr. 826, 614 P.2d 258 ; *Conti v. Board of Civil Serv. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant raises the defense of laches.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see MB 4200A.76[3][b].

[3] Comment

[a] Laches

Laches should be used as a defense to a fraudulent transfer action [Civ. Code § 3439.10; Adams v. Bell (1936) 5 Cal.2d 697, 703, 56 P.2d 208 ; Richardson v. Michel (1941) 45 Cal.App.2d 188, 200, 113 P.2d 916]. It is specifically included in the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act as an appropriate defense to an untimely action under the Act [Civ. Code § 3439.10; Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 3439.10]. To establish this defense, the defendant must prove that the plaintiff unreasonably delayed in bringing the lawsuit and that the plaintiff acquiesced in the transaction at issue or the defendant was prejudiced by plaintiff's delay in bringing the action [Miller v. Eisenhower Med. Ctr. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 614, 624, 166 Cal.Rptr. 826, 614 P.2d 258 ; Conti v. Board of Civil Serv. Comm'rs (1969) 1 Cal.3d 351, 359, 82 Cal.Rptr. 337, 461 P.2d 617]. The defense of laches may be successfully invoked even when the elapsed period is less than the period allowed under the applicable statute of limitations [Holt v. County of Monterey (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 797, 801, 180 Cal.Rptr. 514].

5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4300

CACI 4300 Introductory Instruction

This is an action for what is called unlawful detainer. [Name of plaintiff], the [landlord/tenant], claims that [name of defendant] is [his/her/its] [tenant/subtenant] under a [lease/rental agreement/sublease] and that [name of defendant] no longer has the right to occupy the property [by subleasing to [name of subtenant]]. [Name of plaintiff] seeks to recover possession of the property from [name of defendant]. [Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/it] still has the right to occupy the property because [insert defenses at issue].

The property involved in this case is [describe property: e.g., "an apartment," "a house," "space in a commercial building"] located in [city or area] at [address].

New August 2007

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner and the defendant is the tenant, select "landlord" and "tenant," in the first sentence. If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "tenant" and "subtenant." (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(3).)

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner, select either "lease" or "rental agreement" in the first sentence. Commercial documents are usually called "leases" while residential documents are often called "rental agreements." Select the term that is used on the written document. If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "sublease."

If the defendant is a tenant who has subleased the premises to someone else, add the bracketed language in the first paragraph referring to subleasing.

Sources and Authority

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1171 provides: "Whenever an issue of fact is presented by the pleadings, it must be tried by a jury, unless such jury be waived as in other cases. The jury shall be formed in the same manner as other trial juries in an action of the same jurisdictional classification in the Court in which the action is pending."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1161(3) provides, in part: "A tenant may take proceedings, similar to those prescribed in this chapter, to obtain possession of the premises let to a subtenant or held by a servant, employee, agent, or licensee, in case of his or her unlawful detention of the premises underlet to him or her or held by him or her."

■ "The remedy of unlawful detainer is designed to provide means by which the timely possession of premises which are wrongfully withheld may be secured to the person entitled thereto." (Knowles v. Robinson (1963) 60 Cal.2d 620, 625 [36 Cal.Rptr. 33, 387 P.2d 833] .)

■ "Chapter 4 of title 3 of part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure is commonly known as the Unlawful Detainer Act (hereafter, the Act). The Act is broad in scope and available to both lessors and lessees who have suffered certain wrongs committed by the other. Procedures and proceedings in unlawful detainer were not known at common law and are entirely creatures of statute. As such, they are governed solely by the statutes which created them. Thus, where the Act 'deals with matters of practice, its provisions supersede the rules of practice contained in other portions of the code.' " (Losornio v. Motta (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 110, 113 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 799] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Unlawful Detainer Not Just for Landlords and Tenants: Actions in unlawful detainer may involve other than landlords and tenants. For example, the action may be filed by lenders foreclosing on a former owner, or an owner evicting an employee (such as a property manager). In either case, no true landlord-tenant relationship exists. It may be necessary in such cases to insert the proper titles in place of landlord or tenant in the instruction. By Steven R.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Properly Describe Address of Property: There may be property addresses that are not typical, like a separately-rented room in a house, a garage, or a part of a home (e.g., studio or in-law unit). These must be described in detail (e.g., master bedroom in the house located at [address of house]). If the address is ambiguous or inaccurate, a writ of possession obtained after a judgment for plaintiff may be difficult to execute and enforce. By Steven R. Kellman

- 2. That [name of plaintiff] [leased/subleased] the property to [name of defendant] until [insert end date];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] did not give [name of defendant] permission to continue occupying the property after the [lease/rental agreement/sublease] ended; and
- 4. That [name of defendant] [or subtenant [name of subtenant]] is still occupying the property.

Directions for Use

Uncontested elements may be deleted from this instruction.

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner, select "lease" or "rental agreement" in the first sentence and in element 3 as appropriate, "owns" in element 1, and "leased" in element 2. Commercial documents are usually called "leases" while residential documents are often called "rental agreements." Select the term that is used on the written document.

If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "sublease" in the first paragraph and in element 3, "leases" in element 1, and "subleased" in element 2. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(3).)

If persons other than the tenant-defendant are occupying the premises, include the bracketed language in the first paragraph and in element 4.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1161 provides, in part:

A tenant of real property ... is guilty of unlawful detainer:

1. When he or she continues in possession, in person or by subtenant ... after the expiration of the term for which it is let to him or her; provided the expiration is of a nondefault nature however brought about without the permission of his or her landlord, or the successor in estate of his or her landlord, if applicable; including the case where the person to be removed became the occupant of the premises as a servant, employee, agent, or licensee and the relation of master and servant, or employer and employee, or principal and agent, or licensor and licensee, has been lawfully terminated or the time fixed for occupancy by the agreement between the parties has expired; but nothing in this subdivision shall be construed as preventing the removal of the occupant in any other lawful manner; but in case of a tenancy at will, it must first be terminated by notice, as prescribed in the Civil Code.

3. A tenant may take proceedings, similar to those prescribed in this chapter, to obtain possession of the premises let to a subtenant or held by a servant, employee, agent, or licensee, in case of his or her unlawful detention of the premises underlet to him or her or held by him or her.

- Civil Code section 1952.3(a) provides, in part: "[I]f the lessor brings an unlawful detainer proceeding and possession of the property is no longer in issue because possession of the property has been delivered to the lessor before trial or, if there is no trial, before judgment is entered, the case becomes an ordinary civil action"

- " 'In order that such an action may be maintained the conventional relation of landlord and tenant must be shown to exist. In other words, the action is limited to those cases in which the tenant is estopped to deny the landlord's title.' " (Fredericksen v. McCosker (1956) 143 Cal.App.2d 114, 116 [299 P.2d 908] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The most important difference between a periodic tenancy and a tenancy for a fixed term--such as six months--is that the latter terminates at the end of such term, without any requirement of notice as in the former. In order to create an estate for a definite period, the duration must be capable of exact computation when it becomes possessory, otherwise no such estate is created." (Camp v. Matich (1948) 87 Cal.App.2d 660, 665-666 [197 P.2d 345] , internal citations omitted.)

- "It is well established that it is the duty of the tenant as soon as his tenancy expires by its own limitations, to surrender the possession of the premises and that no notice of termination is necessary, the lease itself terminating the tenancy; and if he continues in possession beyond that period without the permission of the landlord, he is guilty of unlawful detainer, and an action may be commenced against him at once, under the provisions of subdivision 1 of section 1161 of the Code of Civil Procedure, without the service upon him of any notice." (Ryland v. Appelbaum (1924) 70 Cal.App. 268, 270 [233 P. 356] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the tenant gives up possession of the property after the commencement of an unlawful detainer proceeding, the action becomes an ordinary one for damages." (Fish Construction Co. v. Moselle Coach Works, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 654, 658 [196 Cal.Rptr. 174] .)

Directions for Use

Uncontested elements may be deleted from this instruction.

Include the bracketed references to a subtenancy in the opening paragraph and in element 7 if persons other than the tenant-defendant are occupying the premises.

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner, select "owns" in element 1, "rented" in element 2, and either "lease" or "rental agreement" in element 3. Commercial documents are usually called "leases" while residential documents are often called "rental agreements." Select the term that is used on the written document. If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "leases" in element 1, "subleased" in element 2, and "sublease" in element 3. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(3).)

If service of notice may have been defective, but there is evidence that the defendant actually did receive it, include the bracketed language at the end of element 4. Defective service is waived if defendant admits receipt of notice. (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, fn. 3 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] .)

If the lease specifies a time period for notice other than the three-day period, substitute that time period in elements 4, 5, and 6, provided that it is not less than three days.

There is a conflict in the case law with respect to when the three-day period begins if substituted service is used. Compare Davidson v. Quinn (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 14 [188 Cal.Rptr. 421] [tenant must be given three days to pay, so period does not begin until actual notice is received] with Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d Supp. 15, 19-20 [277 Cal.Rptr. 316] [notice is effective when posted and mailed]. This conflict is accounted for in element 6.

See CACI No. 4303, Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination for Failure to Pay Rent, for an instruction regarding proper notice.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1161 provides, in part:

A tenant of real property ... is guilty of unlawful detainer:

2. When he or she continues in possession, in person or by subtenant, without the permission of his or her landlord ... after default in the payment of rent, pursuant to the lease or agreement under which the property is held, and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment ... shall have been served upon him or her and if there is a subtenant in actual occupation of the premises, also upon the subtenant."

- Civil Code section 1952.3(a) provides, in part: "[I]f the lessor brings an unlawful detainer proceeding and possession of the property is no longer in issue because possession of the property has been delivered to the lessor before trial or, if there is no trial, before judgment is entered, the case becomes an ordinary civil action"

- "[M]ere failure of a tenant to quit the premises during the three-day notice period does not necessarily justify an unlawful detainer action. If a tenant vacates the premises and surrenders possession to the landlord prior to the complaint being filed, then no action for unlawful detainer will lie even though the premises were not surrendered during the notice period. This is true because the purpose of an unlawful detainer action is to recover possession of the premises for the landlord. Since an action in unlawful detainer involves a forfeiture of the tenant's right to possession, one of the matters that must be pleaded and proved for unlawful detainer is that the tenant remains in possession of the premises. Obviously this cannot be established where the tenant has surrendered the premises to landlord prior to the filing of the complaint. In such a situation the landlord's remedy is an action for damages and rent." (Briggs v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 53 Cal.App.3d 900, 905-906 [126 Cal.Rptr. 34] , footnote and internal citations omitted.)

■ "Proper service on the lessee of a valid three-day notice to pay rent or quit is an essential prerequisite to a judgment declaring a lessor's right to possession under section 1161, subdivision 2. A lessor must allege and prove proper service of the requisite notice. Absent evidence the requisite notice was properly served pursuant to section 1162, no judgment for possession can be obtained." ■ "Section 1162 does not authorize service of a three-day notice to pay rent or quit by mail delivery alone, certified or otherwise. It provides for service by: personal delivery; leaving a copy with a person of suitable age and discretion at the renter's residence or usual place of business and sending a copy through the mail to the tenant's residence; or posting and delivery of a copy to a person there residing, if one can be found, and sending a copy through the mail. Strict compliance with the statute is required." (Liebovich, supra, 56 Cal.App.4th at p. 516 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plaintiff Must Have Authority to Lease: The plaintiff must be the owner or an agent of the owner acting with authority, unless the plaintiff is a tenant and subleasing to a subtenant. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Lease May Include Extension or Option to Extend: Some leases include extension provisions. For example, a lease may automatically renew unless a specific notice is given. Other leases have an option to extend the lease that a tenant may feel was exercised. Modify this instruction to raise any issues regarding the true termination date of the lease if this is in dispute. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Specify Rent Due Date: Rent is not always due on the first of the month. Modify element 3 if needed to indicate when rent was due as per the lease/rental agreement. Unless the contract provides otherwise, rent is paid at the end of the periodic rental period. This would, for example, be at the end of the month in a lease where rent is paid monthly [Civ. Code § 1947]. Most leases specify that rent is payable in advance, but if it does not, this could be a critical point if it is alleged that rent was not paid timely or a tender was refused. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Three-Day Notice to Pay Rent or Quit Must be Valid and Properly Served: For a three-day notice to pay rent or quit to be valid, it must be properly served as per Code Civ. Proc. § 1162. Service is more completely covered in CACI No. 4303, Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination for Failure to Pay Rent. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Notice to Cure or Quit May Give More Than Three Days: Some leases provide more than three days (10 days is common) to cure a default in the payment of rent. In that case, the defendant is entitled to the full time allowed by the lease to pay the rent due before an unlawful detainer may be filed. Modify this instruction accordingly if the lease provides for a greater time to pay the rent than three days. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Payment or Accepted Tender of Rent: The plaintiff has a duty to return any late or improper payment that the plaintiff does not intend to accept promptly. Failure to do so promptly may constitute an acceptance of the payment even if the negotiable instrument is retained and not cashed [Code Civ. Proc. § 2076; see Sheldon Builders, Inc. v. Trojan Towers (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 781, 788, 63 Cal.Rptr. 425]. By Steven R. Kellman

5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4303

CACI 4303 Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination for Failure to Pay Rent

[Name of plaintiff] contends that [he/she/it] properly gave [name of defendant] three days' notice to pay the rent or vacate the property. To prove that the notice contained the required information and was properly given, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That the notice informed [name of defendant] in writing that [he/she/it] must pay the amount due within three days or vacate the property;

2. That the notice stated [no more than/a reasonable estimate of] the amount due, and the name, telephone number, and address of the person to whom the amount should be paid, and the usual days and hours that the person would be available to receive the payment;]

[or: Use if payment was to be made into a bank account.

the number of an account in a bank located within five miles of the rental property into which the payment could be made, and the name and street address of the bank;]

that payment could be made by electronic funds transfer;]

3. That the notice was given to [name of defendant] at least three days before [insert date on which action was filed].

Notice was properly given if [select one of the following manners of service:]

[the notice was delivered to [name of defendant] personally.]

[name of defendant] was not at home or work, and the notice was left with a responsible person at [name of defendant]'s residence or place of work, and a copy was also mailed to the address of the rented property in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant]. In this case, notice is considered given on the date the second notice was [received by [name of defendant]/placed in the mail].]

a responsible person was not present at [name of defendant]'s residence or work, and the notice was posted on the property in a place where it would easily be noticed, and a copy was also mailed to the address of the rented property in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant]. In this case, notice is considered given on the date the second notice was [received by [name of defendant]/placed in the mail].]

[The three-day notice period begins the day after the notice was given to [name of defendant]. If the last day of the notice period falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday, [name of defendant]'s time to pay the rent or vacate the property is extended to include the first day after the Saturday, Sunday, or holiday that is not also a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.]

[If [name of plaintiff] did not properly give [name of defendant] the required written notice, the notice is still effective if [name of defendant] actually received it at least three days before [insert date on which action was filed].]

[A notice stating a reasonable estimate of the amount of rent due that is within 20 percent of the amount actually due is reasonable unless [name of defendant] proves that it was not reasonable. In determining the reasonableness of the estimate, you may consider whether calculating the amount of rent required information primarily within the knowledge of [name of defendant] and whether [name of defendant] accurately furnished that information to [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

Use the reasonable-estimate option in the first sentence of element 2 and include the final paragraph only in cases involving commercial leases. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.1(a); see also Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.1(e) [presumption that if amount found to be due is within 20 percent of amount stated in notice, then estimate was reasonable].)

In element 2, select the applicable manner in which the notice specifies that payment is to be made; directly to the landlord, into a bank account, or by electronic funds transfer. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(2).)

Select the manner of service used; personal service, substituted service by leaving the notice at the defendant's home or place of work, or substituted service by posting on the property. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1162.) There is a conflict in the case law with respect to when the three-day period begins if substituted service is used. Compare Davidson v. Quinn (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 14 [188 Cal.Rptr. 421] [tenant must be given three days to pay, so period does not begin until actual notice is received] with Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d Supp. 15, 19-20 [277 Cal.Rptr. 316] [notice is effective when posted and mailed]. This conflict is accounted for in the second and third bracketed options for the manner of service.

Read the third-to-last paragraph if the last day of the notice period fell on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.

If a lease specifies a time period for giving notice other than the three-day period, substitute that time period for three days throughout, provided that it is not less than three days.

If service of notice may have been defective, but there is evidence that the defendant actually did receive it, include the next-to-last paragraph. Defective service is waived if defendant admits receipt of notice. (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, fn. 3 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] .)

Local ordinances may impose additional notice requirements for the termination of a rental agreement. This instruction should be modified accordingly.

■ Code Civil Procedure section 1161(2) provides, in part: "When he or she continues in possession ... without the permission of his or her landlord ... after default in the payment of rent ... and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due, the name, telephone number, and address of the person to whom the rent payment shall be made, and, if payment may be made personally, the usual days and hours that person will be available to receive the payment (provided that, if the address does not allow for personal delivery, then it shall be conclusively presumed that upon the mailing of any rent or notice to the owner by the tenant to the name and address provided, the notice or rent is deemed received by the owner on the date posted, if the tenant can show proof of mailing to the name and address provided by the owner), or the number of an account in a financial institution into which the rental payment may be made, and the name and street address of the institution (provided that the institution is located within five miles of the rental property), or if an electronic funds transfer procedure has been previously established, that payment may be made pursuant to that procedure, or possession of the property, shall have been served upon him or her and if there is a subtenant in actual occupation of the premises, also upon the subtenant."

■ Code of Civil Procedure 1161.1 provides, in part:

With respect to application of Section 1161 in cases of possession of commercial real property after default in the payment of rent:

(a) If the amount stated in the notice provided to the tenant pursuant to subdivision (2) of Section 1161 is clearly identified by the notice as an estimate and the amount claimed is not in fact correct, but it is determined upon the trial or other judicial determination that rent was owing, and the amount claimed in the notice was reasonably estimated, the tenant shall be subject to judgment for possession and the actual amount of rent and other sums found to be due. However, if (1) upon receipt of such a notice claiming an amount identified by the notice as an estimate, the tenant tenders to the landlord within the time for payment required by the notice, the amount which the tenant has reasonably estimated to be due and (2) if at trial it is determined that the amount of rent then due was the amount tendered by the tenant or a lesser amount, the tenant shall be deemed the prevailing party for all purposes. If the court determines that the amount so tendered by the tenant was less than the amount due, but was reasonably estimated, the tenant shall retain the right to possession if the tenant pays to the landlord within five days of the effective date of the judgment (1) the amount previously tendered if it had not been previously accepted, (2) the difference between the amount tendered and the amount determined by the court to be due, and (3) any other sums as ordered by the court.

(e) For the purposes of this section, there is a presumption affecting the burden of proof that the amount of rent claimed or tendered is reasonably estimated if, in relation to the amount determined to be due upon the trial or other judicial determination of that issue, the amount claimed or tendered was no more than 20 percent more or less than the amount determined to be due. However, if the rent due is contingent upon information primarily within the knowledge of the one party to the lease and that information has not been furnished to, or has not accurately been furnished to, the other party, the court shall consider that fact in determining the reasonableness of the amount of rent claimed or tendered pursuant to subdivision (a).

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1162 provides:

The notices required by Sections 1161 and 1161a may be served, either:

1. By delivering a copy to the tenant personally; or,
2. If he or she is absent from his or her place of residence, and from his or her usual place of business, by leaving a copy with some person of suitable age and discretion at either place, and sending a copy through the mail addressed to the tenant at his or her place of residence; or,
3. If such place of residence and business can not be ascertained, or a person of suitable age or discretion there can not be found, then by affixing a copy in a conspicuous place on the property, and also delivering a copy to a person there residing, if such person can be found; and also sending a copy through the mail addressed to the tenant at the place where the property is situated. Service upon a subtenant may be made in the same manner.

■ "A valid three-day pay rent or quit notice is a prerequisite to an unlawful detainer action. Because of the summary nature of an unlawful detainer action, a notice is valid only if the lessor strictly complies with the statutorily mandated notice requirements. [P] A three-day notice must contain 'the amount which is due.' A notice which demands rent in excess of the amount due does not satisfy this requirement. This rule ensures that a landlord will not be entitled to regain possession in an unlawful detainer action unless the tenant has had the opportunity to pay the delinquent rent." (Bevill v. Zoura (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 694, 697 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 635] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "[W]e do not agree that a proper notice may not include anything other than technical rent. It is true that subdivision 2 of Code of Civil Procedure section 1161 relates to a default in the payment of rent. However, the subdivision refers to the 'lease or agreement under which the property is held' and requires the notice state 'the amount which is due.' The language is not 'the amount of rent which is due' or 'the rent which is due.' We think the statutory language is sufficiently broad to encompass any sums due under the lease or agreement under which the property is held." (

■ "[T]he service and notice provisions in the unlawful detainer statutes and [Code of Civil Procedure] section 1013 are mutually exclusive, and thus, section 1013 does not extend the notice periods that are a prerequisite to filing an unlawful detainer action." (Losornio v. Motta (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 110, 112 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 799] .)

■ "Section 1162 does not authorize service of a three-day notice to pay rent or quit by mail delivery alone, certified or otherwise. It provides for service by: personal delivery; leaving a copy with a person of suitable age and discretion at the renter's residence or usual place of business and sending a copy through the mail to the tenant's residence; or posting and delivery of a copy to a person there residing, if one can be found, and sending a copy through the mail. Strict compliance with the statute is required." (Liebovich v. Shahrokhkhany (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 511, 516 [65 Cal.Rptr.2d 457] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ "We ... hold that service made in accordance with section 1162, subdivision 3, as applied to section 1161, subdivision 2, must be effected in such a manner as will give a tenant the three days of written notice required by the Legislature in which he may cure his default in the payment of rent." (Davidson, supra, 138 Cal.App.3d Supp. at p. 14 .)

■ "We ... hold that service of the three-day notice by posting and mailing is effective on the date the notice is posted and mailed." (Walters, supra, 226 Cal.App.3d Supp. at p. 20 .)

■ "An unlawful detainer action based on failure to pay rent must be preceded by a three-day notice to the tenant to pay rent or quit the premises. Failure to state the exact amount of rent due in the notice is fatal to the subsequent unlawful detainer action." (Lynch & Freytag v. Cooper (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 603, 606, fn. 2 [267 Cal.Rptr. 189] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Three-Day Notice to Pay Rent or Quit Must Not Overstate Rent Due: In a residential tenancy, no more than the actual amount of rent due may be claimed in a three-day notice to pay rent or quit. In a commercial tenancy, if the three-day notice to pay rent or quit claims an estimated amount of rent [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161.1(e)], it may overestimate the actual rent due by up to 20 percent. An overstatement of rent (residential or commercial) will void the notice. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Only Rent May be Claimed in Three-Day

Notice to Pay Rent or Quit: In a residential tenancy, charges that are not rent (such as late fees and utilities) may not be included in a three-day notice to pay rent or quit. Therefore, modify this instruction to limit the amount due to pure rent if there were other charges included in the notice that are in dispute. In commercial tenancies, other charges such as late fees and utilities may be included as rent as long as the lease provides that they be deemed additional rent. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Make Usual Days and Hours of Payment

Realistic: A plaintiff landlord may attempt to restrict payment to minimal hours on minimal days as the "usual days and hours" for payment. This type of action frustrates the intent of the code in allowing defendants ample opportunity to pay the rent. If this is in dispute, modify the instruction to include a reasonable ability to pay during the provided days and hours to pay. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Service of Notice for Unlawful Detainer Must

Follow Procedural Order: Code Civ. Proc. § 1162 requires personal service of notices for unlawful detainer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(1)] if the defendant is at the property at the time of service. If the defendant is not then at the property, service can be effected by leaving a copy of the notice with a responsible person and mailing defendant a copy. If no one is at the property, and the defendant's place of business/employment is known, a copy can be left there, plus mail a copy to the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(2)]. If no one is available at the property and the defendant's place of business/employment is not known, a copy should be posted at the property and mailed to the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(3)]. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Three-Day Notice to Pay Rent or Quit Must be

Valid and Properly Served: For an unlawful detainer notice (including a three-day notice to pay rent or quit) to be valid, it must be properly served as per Code Civ. Proc. § 1162, as well as contain the appropriate information. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defective Service of Notice Not Necessarily

Cured by Receipt of Notice: Defective service of an unlawful detainer notice may be cured by an express admission of its receipt, but evidence of actual receipt without an admission will not cure the defect. If a defective service of a notice is claimed to be cured by its receipt, modify this instruction to reflect the necessity of an admission [see Valov v. Tank (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 867, 876, 214 Cal.Rptr. 546]. By Steven R. Kellman

5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4304

CACI 4304 Termination for Violation of Terms of Lease/Agreement--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [and [name of subtenant], a subtenant of [name of defendant],] no longer [has/have] the right to occupy the property because [name of defendant] has failed to perform [a] requirement(s) under [his/her/its] [lease/rental agreement/sublease]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] [owns/leases] the property;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] [rented/subleased] the property to [name of defendant];
- 3. That under the [lease/rental agreement/sublease], [name of defendant] agreed [insert required condition(s) that were not performed];
- 4. That [name of defendant] failed to perform [that/those] requirement(s) by [insert description of alleged failure to perform];
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] properly gave [name of defendant] [and [name of subtenant]] three days' written notice to [either [describe action to correct failure to perform] or] vacate the property[, or that [name of defendant] actually received this notice at least three days before [date on which action was filed]]; [and]
- [6. That [name of defendant] did not [describe action to correct failure to perform]]; and]
- 7. That [name of defendant] [or subtenant [name of subtenant]] is still occupying the property.

[[Name of defendant]'s failure to perform the requirement(s) of the [lease/rental agreement/sublease] must not be trivial, but must be a substantial violation of [an] important obligation(s).]

Directions for Use

Uncontested elements may be deleted from this instruction.

Include the bracketed references to a subtenancy in the opening paragraph, in element 5, and in the last element if persons other than the tenant-defendant are in occupancy of the premises.

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner, select either "lease" or "rental agreement" in the opening paragraph and in element 3, "owns" in element 1, and "rented" in element 2. Commercial documents are usually called "leases" while residential documents are often called "rental agreements." Select the term that is used on the written document.

If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "sublease" in the opening paragraph and in element 3, "leases" in element 1, and "subleased" in element 2. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(3).)

If service of notice may have been defective, but there is evidence that the defendant actually did receive it, include the bracketed language at the end of element 5. Defective service is waived if defendant admits timely receipt of notice. (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, fn. 3 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] .)

If the lease specifies a time period for notice other than the three-day period, substitute that time period in element 5.

If the violation of the condition or covenant involves waste, nuisance, or illegal activity and cannot be cured (see Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(4)), omit the bracketed language in element 5 and element 6. If a covenant in a lease has been breached and the breach cannot be cured, a demand for performance is not a condition precedent to an unlawful detainer action. (Salton Community Services Dist. v. Southard (1967) 256 Cal.App.2d 526, 529 [64 Cal.Rptr. 246] , internal citation omitted.)

Include the last paragraph if the tenant alleges that the violation was trivial. It is not settled whether the landlord must prove the violation was substantial or the tenant must prove triviality as an affirmative defense. (See Superior Motels, Inc. v. Rinn Motor Hotels, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 1032, 1051 [241 Cal.Rptr. 487] ; Keating v. Preston (1940) 42 Cal.App.2d 110, 118 [108 P.2d 479] .)

Local or federal law may impose additional requirements for the termination of a rental agreement based on breach of a condition. This instruction should be modified accordingly.

See CACI No. 4305, Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination for Violation of Terms of Agreement, for an instruction on proper written notice.

See also CACI No. 312, Substantial Performance.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1161 provides, in part:

A tenant of real property ... is guilty of unlawful detainer:

3. When he or she continues in possession, in person or by subtenant, after a neglect or failure to perform other conditions or covenants of the lease or agreement under which the property is held, including any covenant not to assign or sublet, than the one for the payment of rent, and three days' notice, in writing, requiring the performance of such conditions or covenants, or the possession of the property, shall have been served upon him or her, and if there is a subtenant in actual occupation of the premises, also, upon the subtenant. Within three days after the service of the notice, the tenant, or any subtenant in actual occupation of the premises, or any mortgagee of the term, or other person interested in its continuance, may perform the conditions or covenants of the lease or pay the stipulated rent, as the case may be, and thereby save the lease from forfeiture; provided, if the conditions and covenants of the lease, violated by the lessee, cannot afterward be performed, then no notice, as last prescribed herein, need be given to the lessee or his or her subtenant, demanding the performance of the violated conditions or covenants of the lease.

- Civil Code section 1952.3(a) provides, in part: "[I]f the lessor brings an unlawful detainer proceeding and possession of the property is no longer in issue because possession of the property has been delivered to the lessor before trial or, if there is no trial, before judgment is entered, the case becomes an ordinary civil action"

- "[Code of Civil Procedure section 1161(3)] provides, that where the conditions or covenants of a lease can be performed, a lessee may within three days after the service of the notice perform them, and so save a forfeiture of his lease. By performing, the tenant may defeat the landlord's claim for possession. Where, however, the covenants cannot be performed, the law recognizes that it would be an idle and useless ceremony to demand their performance, and so dispenses with the demand to do so. And this is all that it does dispense with. It does not dispense with the demand for the possession of the premises. It requires that in any event. If the covenants can be performed, the notice is in the alternative, either to perform them or deliver possession. When the covenants are beyond performance an alternative notice would be useless, and demand for possession alone is necessary. Bearing in mind that the object of this statute is to speedily permit a landlord to obtain possession of his premises where the tenant has violated the covenants of the lease, the only reasonable interpretation of the statute is, that before bringing suit he shall take that means which should be most effectual for the purpose of obtaining possession, which is to demand it. If upon demand the tenant surrenders possession, the necessity for any summary proceeding is at an end, and by the demand is accomplished what the law otherwise would accord him under the proceeding." (Schnittger v. Rose (1903) 139 Cal. 656, 662 [73 P. 449] .)

- "The law sensibly recognizes that although every instance of noncompliance with a contract's terms constitutes a breach, not every breach justifies treating the contract as terminated. Following the lead of the Restatements of Contracts, California courts allow termination only if the breach can be classified as 'material,' 'substantial,' or 'total.' " (Superior Motels, Inc., supra, 195 Cal.App.3d at p. 1051 , internal citations omitted.)

- "California too accepts that '[whether] a breach is so material as to constitute cause for the injured party to terminate a contract is ordinarily a question for the trier of fact.' " (Superior Motels, Inc., supra, 195 Cal.App.3d at pp. 1051-1052 , internal citations omitted.)

- "As to the substantiality of the violation, the evidence shows that the violation was wilful. Therefore, the court will not measure the extent of the violation." (Hignell v. Gebala (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 61, 66 [202 P.2d 378] .)

■ "If the tenant gives up possession of the property after the commencement of an unlawful detainer proceeding, the action becomes an ordinary one for damages." (Fish Construction Co. v. Moselle Coach Works, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 654, 658 [196 Cal.Rptr. 174] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plaintiff Must Have Authority to Lease: The plaintiff must be the owner or an agent of the owner acting with authority, unless the plaintiff is a tenant and subleasing to a subtenant. Modify this instruction to reflect any issues about whether this is the proper plaintiff to sue for the lease termination. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Be Specific as to Conditions to Be Performed: If the specific condition violated is not well defined, it can be difficult to interpret what was expected, as well as to analyze a failure to perform an act. Integrate excerpts from the actual lease to set forth the condition in issue. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Properly Serve Three-Day Notice to Cure Breach or Quit: For a three-day notice to cure breach (perform covenant) or quit to be valid, it must be properly served as per Code of Civ. Proc. § 1162. Service is more completely covered in CACI No. 4305, Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination for Violation of Terms of Agreement. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Notice to Cure or Quit May Give More Than Three Days: Some leases provide more than three days (10 days is common) to cure a default in the payment of rent. In that case, the defendant is entitled to the full time allowed by the lease to pay the rent due before an unlawful detainer may be filed. Modify this instruction accordingly if the lease provides for a greater time to pay the rent than three days. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Substantial Compliance of Act Required by Lease May be Sufficient Performance: Action or inaction to correct the failure to perform a condition within the notice period may be subject to interpretation as to required degrees of action. This is especially true if the lease is unclear as to the specific performance required by the defendant. If that is an issue, modify this instruction to reflect the failure to substantially perform a condition or covenant in the lease. By Steven R. Kellman

5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4305

CACI 4305 Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination for Violation of Terms of Agreement

[Name of plaintiff] contends that [he/she/it] properly gave [name of defendant] three days' notice to [either comply with the requirements of the [lease/rental agreement/sublease] or] vacate the property. To prove that the notice contained the required information and was properly given, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That the notice informed [name of defendant] in writing that [he/she/it] must, within three days, [either comply with the requirements of the [lease/rental agreement/sublease] or] vacate the property;
- 2. That the notice described how [name of defendant] failed to comply with the requirements of the [lease/rental agreement/sublease] [and how to correct the failure];
- 3. That the notice was given to [name of defendant] at least three days before [insert date on which action was filed];

Notice was properly given if [select one of the following manners of service:]

[the notice was delivered to [name of defendant] personally.]

[name of defendant] was not at home or work, and the notice was left with a responsible person at [name of defendant]'s residence or place of work, and a copy was also mailed to the address of the rented property in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant]. In this case, notice is considered given on the date the second notice was [received by [name of defendant]/placed in the mail].]

a responsible person was not present at [name of defendant]'s residence or work, and the notice was posted on the property in a place where it would easily be noticed, and a copy was also mailed to the address of the rented property in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant]. In this case, notice is considered given on the date the second notice was [received by [name of defendant]/placed in the mail].]

[The three-day notice period begins on the day after the notice was given to [name of defendant]. If the last day of the notice period falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday, [name of defendant]'s time to correct the failure or to vacate the property is extended to include the first day after the Saturday, Sunday, or holiday that is not also a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.]

[If [name of plaintiff] did not properly give [name of defendant] the required written notice, the notice is still effective if [name of defendant] actually received it at least three days before [insert date on which action was filed].]

Directions for Use

If the violation of the condition or covenant cannot be cured, omit the bracketed language in the first paragraph and in elements 1 and 2. If a covenant in a lease has been breached and the breach cannot be cured, a demand for performance is not a condition precedent to an unlawful detainer action. (Salton Community Services Dist. v. Southard (1967) 256 Cal.App.2d 526, 529 64 Cal.Rptr. 246] , internal citation omitted.)

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner, select either "lease" or "rental agreement" in the optional language in the opening paragraph and in elements 1 and 2. Commercial documents are usually called "leases" while residential documents are often called "rental agreements." Select the term that is used on the written document. If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "sublease." (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(3).)

Select the manner of service used; personal service, substituted service by leaving the notice at the defendant's home or place of work, or substituted service by posting on the property. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1162.) There is a conflict in the case law with respect to when the three-day period begins if substituted service is used. Compare Davidson v. Quinn (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 14 [188 Cal.Rptr. 421] [tenant must be given three days to pay, so period does not begin until actual notice is received] with Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d Supp. 15, 19-20 [277 Cal.Rptr. 316] [notice is effective when posted and mailed]. This conflict is accounted for in the second and third bracketed options for the manner of service.

Read the next-to-last paragraph if the last day of the notice period fell on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.

If a lease specifies a time period for giving notice other than the three-day period, substitute that time period for three days throughout the instruction, provided that it is not less than three days.

If service of notice may have been defective, but there is evidence that the defendant actually did receive it, include the last paragraph. Defective service is waived if defendant admits timely receipt of notice. (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, fn. 3 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] .)

Local ordinances may impose additional notice requirements for the termination of a rental agreement. This instruction should be modified accordingly.

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1161 provides, in part:

A tenant of real property ... is guilty of unlawful detainer:

3. When he or she continues in possession, in person or by subtenant, after a neglect or failure to perform other conditions or covenants of the lease or agreement under which the property is held, including any covenant not to assign or sublet, than the one for the payment of rent, and three days' notice, in writing, requiring the performance of such conditions or covenants, or the possession of the property, shall have been served upon him or her, and if there is a subtenant in actual occupation of the premises, also, upon the subtenant. Within three days after the service of the notice, the tenant, or any subtenant in actual occupation of the premises, or any mortgagee of the term, or other person interested in its continuance, may perform the conditions or covenants of the lease or pay the stipulated rent, as the case may be, and thereby save the lease from forfeiture; provided, if the conditions and covenants of the lease, violated by the lessee, cannot afterward be performed, then no notice, as last prescribed herein, need be given to the lessee or his or her subtenant, demanding the performance of the violated conditions or covenants of the lease.

2. If he or she is absent from his or her place of residence, and from his or her usual place of business, by leaving a copy with some person of suitable age and discretion at either place, and sending a copy through the mail addressed to the tenant at his or her place of residence; or,
3. If such place of residence and business can not be ascertained, or a person of suitable age or discretion there can not be found, then by affixing a copy in a conspicuous place on the property, and also delivering a copy to a person there residing, if such person can be found; and also sending a copy through the mail addressed to the tenant at the place where the property is situated. Service upon a subtenant may be made in the same manner.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Notice to Cure or Quit May Give More Than Three Days: Some leases provide more than three days (10 days is common) to cure a default in the payment of rent. In that case, the defendant is entitled to the full time allowed by the lease to pay the rent due before an unlawful detainer may be filed. Modify this instruction accordingly if the lease provides for a greater time to pay the rent than three days. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Service of Notice for Unlawful Detainer Must Follow Procedural Order: Code Civ. Proc. § 1162 requires personal service of notices for unlawful detainer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(1)] if the defendant is at the property at the time of service. If the defendant is not then at the property, service can be effected by leaving a copy of the notice with a responsible person and mailing defendant a copy. If no one is at the property, and the defendant's place of business/employment is known, a copy can be left there, plus mail a copy to the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(2)]. If no one is available at the property and the defendant's place of business/employment is not known, a copy should be posted at the property and mailed to the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(3)]. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Three-Day Notice to Pay Rent or Quit Must be Valid and Properly Served: For an unlawful detainer notice (including a three-day notice to pay rent or quit) to be valid, it must be properly served as per Code Civ. Proc. § 1162, as well as contain the appropriate information. By Steven R. Kellman

Cured by Receipt of Notice: Defective service of an unlawful detainer notice may be cured by an express admission of its receipt, but evidence of actual receipt without an admission will not cure the defect. If a defective service of a notice is claimed to be cured by its receipt, modify this instruction to reflect the necessity of an admission [see Valov v. Tank (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 867, 876, 214 Cal.Rptr. 546] . By Steven R. Kellman

CACI 4306 Termination of Month-to-Month Tenancy--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [and [name of subtenant], a subtenant of [name of defendant],] no longer [has/have] the right to occupy the property because the tenancy has ended. To establish this claim, [ name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] [owns/leases] the property;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] [rented/subleased] the property to [name of defendant] under a month-to-month [lease/rental agreement/sublease];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] gave [name of defendant] proper [30/60] days' written notice that the tenancy was ending[, or that [name of defendant] actually received this notice at least [30/60] days before [date on which action was filed]]; and
- 4. That [name of defendant] [or subtenant [name of subtenant]] is still occupying the property.

Directions for Use

Uncontested elements may be deleted from this instruction.

Include the bracketed references to a subtenancy in the opening paragraph and in element 4 if persons other than the tenant-defendant are in occupancy of the premises.

If the plaintiff is the landlord or owner, select "owns" in element 1 and "rented" and either "lease" or

"rental agreement" in element 2. Commercial documents are usually called "leases" while residential documents are often called "rental agreements." Select the term that is used on the written document.

If the plaintiff is a tenant seeking to recover possession from a subtenant, select "leases" in element 1 and "subleased" and "sublease" in element 2. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161(3).)

In element 3, select the applicable number of days' notice required by statute. Thirty days is sufficient for commercial tenancies, residential tenancies of less than a year's duration, and certain transfers of the ownership interest to a bona fide purchaser. For residential tenancies of a year or more's duration, 60 days' notice is generally required. (Civ. Code, §§ 1946, 1946.1(b)-(d).)

If service of notice may have been defective, but there is evidence that the defendant actually did receive it, include the bracketed language at the end of element 3. Defective service is waived if defendant admits timely receipt of notice. (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, fn. 3 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] .)

Do not give this instruction to terminate a tenancy if the tenant is receiving federal financial assistance through the Section 8 program. (See Wasatch Property Management v. Degrate (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1111, 1115 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 262, 112 P.3d 647] ; Civ. Code, § 1954.535 (90 days' notice required).) Specific grounds for terminating a federally subsidized low-income housing tenancy are required and must be set forth in the notice. (See, e.g., 24 C.F.R. § 982.310.)

See CACI No. 4307, Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination of Month-to-Month Tenancy, for an instruction on proper advanced written notice.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1161 provides, in part:

A tenant of real property ... is guilty of unlawful detainer:

1. When he or she continues in possession, in person or by subtenant ... after the expiration of the term for which it is let to him or her; provided the expiration is of a nondefault nature however brought about without the permission of his or her landlord ... including the case where the person to be removed became the occupant of the premises as a servant, employee, agent, or licensee and the relation of master and servant, or employer and employee, or principal and agent, or licensor and licensee, has been lawfully terminated or the time fixed for occupancy by the agreement between the parties has expired; but nothing in this subdivision shall be construed as preventing the removal of the occupant in any other lawful manner; but in case of a tenancy at will, it must first be terminated by notice, as prescribed in the Civil Code.

- Civil Code section 1946 provides: "A hiring of real property, for a term not specified by the parties, is deemed to be renewed as stated in Section 1945, at the end of the term implied by law unless one of the parties gives written notice to the other of his intention to terminate the same, at least as long before the expiration thereof as the term of the hiring itself, not exceeding 30 days; provided, however, that as to tenancies from month to month either of the parties may terminate the same by giving at least 30 days' written notice thereof at any time and the rent shall be due and payable to and including the date of termination. It shall be competent for the parties to provide by an agreement at the time such tenancy is created that a notice of the intention to terminate the same may be given at any time not less than seven days before the expiration of the term thereof. The notice herein required shall be given in the manner prescribed in Section 1162 of the Code of Civil Procedure or by sending a copy by certified or registered mail addressed to the other party. In addition, the lessee may give such notice by sending a copy by certified or registered mail addressed to the agent of the lessor to whom the lessee has paid the rent for the month prior to the date of such notice or by delivering a copy to the agent personally."

■ Civil Code section 1946.1 provides, in part:

(a) Notwithstanding Section 1946, a hiring of residential real property for a term not specified by the parties, is deemed to be renewed as stated in Section 1945, at the end of the term implied by law unless one of the parties gives written notice to the other of his or her intention to terminate the tenancy, as provided in this section.

(b) An owner of a residential dwelling giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice at least 60 days prior to the proposed date of termination. A tenant giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice for a period at least as long as the term of the periodic tenancy prior to the proposed date of termination.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivision (b), an owner of a residential dwelling giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice at least 30 days prior to the proposed date of termination if any tenant or resident has resided in the dwelling for less than one year.

(d) Notwithstanding subdivision (b), an owner of a residential dwelling giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice at least 30 days prior to the proposed date of termination if all of the following apply:

(1) The dwelling or unit is alienable separate from the title to any other dwelling unit.

(2) The owner has contracted to sell the dwelling or unit to a bona fide purchaser for value, and has established an escrow with a licensed escrow agent, as defined in Sections 17004 and 17200 of the Financial Code, or a licensed real estate broker, as defined in Section 10131 of the Business and Professions Code.

(3) The purchaser is a natural person or persons.

(4) The notice is given no more than 120 days after the escrow has been established.

(5) Notice was not previously given to the tenant pursuant to this section.

(6) The purchaser in good faith intends to reside in the property for at least one full year after the termination of the tenancy.

(f) The notices required by this section shall be given in the manner prescribed in Section 1162 of the Code of Civil Procedure or by sending a copy by certified or registered mail.

■ Civil Code section 1944 provides: "A hiring of lodgings or a dwelling-house for an unspecified term is presumed to have been made for such length of time as the parties adopt for the estimation of the rent. Thus a hiring at a monthly rate of rent is presumed to be for one month. In the absence of any agreement respecting the length of time or the rent, the hiring is presumed to be monthly."

■ Civil Code section 1952.3(a) provides, in part: "[I]f the lessor brings an unlawful detainer proceeding and possession of the property is no longer in issue because possession of the property has been delivered to the lessor before trial or, if there is no trial, before judgment is entered, the case becomes an ordinary civil action"

■ " 'In order that such an action may be maintained the conventional relation of landlord and tenant must be shown to exist. In other words, the action is limited to those cases in which the tenant is estopped to deny the landlord's title.' " (Fredericksen v. McCosker (1956) 143 Cal.App.2d 114, 116 [299 P.2d 908] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the tenant gives up possession of the property after the commencement of an unlawful detainer proceeding, the action becomes an ordinary one for damages." (Fish Construction Co. v. Moselle Coach Works, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 654, 658 [196 Cal.Rptr. 174] .)

■ "The Act provides that as a prerequisite to filing an unlawful detainer action based on a terminated month-to-month tenancy, the landlord must serve the tenant with a 30-day written notice of termination." (Losornio v. Motta (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 110, 113 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 799] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plaintiff Must Have Authority to Lease: The plaintiff must be the owner or an agent of the owner acting with authority, unless the plaintiff is a tenant and subleasing to a subtenant. This instruction may be amended to reflect any issues about whether this is the proper plaintiff to sue for lease termination. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Month-to-Month Tenancy May be Express, Implied, or by Operation of Law: A month-to-month tenancy may be created in other ways other than by a written rental agreement. This type of tenancy may be created by an oral agreement (for a term not to exceed one year) or by the mere payment and acceptance of monthly rent. The acceptance of rent after an expired lease for a term may also create a month-to-month tenancy. Modify this instruction accordingly if the type of tenancy is in dispute. By Steven R. Kellman

5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4307

CACI 4307 Sufficiency and Service of Notice of Termination of Month-to-Month Tenancy

[Name of plaintiff] contends that [he/she/it] properly gave [name of defendant] written notice that the tenancy was ending. To prove that the notice contained the required information and was properly given, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That the notice informed [name of defendant] in writing that the tenancy would end on a date at least [30/60] days after notice was given to [him/her/it];
2. That the notice was given to [name of defendant] at least [30/60] days before the date that the tenancy was to end; and
3. That the notice was given to [name of defendant] at least [30/60] days before [insert date on which action was filed];

Notice was properly given if [select one or more of the following manners of service:]

[the notice was delivered to [name of defendant] personally][./; or]

[the notice was sent by certified or registered mail in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant], in which case notice is considered given on the date the notice was placed in the mail][./; or]

[[name of defendant] was not at home or work, and the notice was left with a responsible person at [name of defendant]'s home or place of work, and a copy was also mailed to the address of the rented property in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant]. In this case, notice is considered given on the date the second notice was placed in the mail][./; or]

[a responsible person was not present at [name of defendant]'s home or work, and the notice was posted on the property in a place where it would easily be noticed, and a copy was also mailed to the property in an envelope addressed to [name of defendant]. In this case, notice is considered given on the date the second notice was placed in the mail].

[The [30/60]-day notice period begins on the day after the notice was given to [name of defendant]. If the last day of the notice period falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday, [name of defendant]'s time to vacate the property is extended to include the first day after the Saturday, Sunday, or holiday that is not also a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.]

[If [name of plaintiff] did not properly give [name of defendant] the required written notice, the notice is still effective if [name of defendant] actually received it at least [30/60] days before [insert date on which action was filed].]

Directions for Use

Select the applicable number of days' notice required by statute. Thirty days is sufficient for commercial tenancies, residential tenancies of less than a year's duration, and certain transfers of the ownership interest to a bona fide purchaser. For residential tenancies of a year or more's duration, 60 days is generally required. (Civ. Code, §§ 1946, 1946.1(b)-(d).)

If 30 days' notice is sufficient and the lease provided for a notice period other than the statutory 30-day period (but not less than 7), insert that number instead of "30" or "60" throughout the instruction. (Civ. Code, § 1946.)

Select all manners of service used, including personal service, certified or registered mail, substituted service by leaving the notice at the defendant's home or place of work, and substituted service by posting on the property. (Civ. Code, §§ 1946, 1946.1(f); Code Civ. Proc., § 1162.)

Read the next-to-last paragraph if the last day of the notice period fell on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.

If service of notice may have been defective, but there is evidence that the defendant actually did receive it, include the last paragraph. Defective service is waived if defendant admits timely receipt of notice. (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, fn. 3 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] .)

Local ordinances may impose additional notice requirements for the termination of a rental agreement. This instruction should be modified accordingly.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1946 provides: "A hiring of real property, for a term not specified by the parties, is deemed to be renewed as stated in Section 1945, at the end of the term implied by law unless one of the parties gives written notice to the other of his intention to terminate the same, at least as long before the expiration thereof as the term of the hiring itself, not exceeding 30 days; provided, however, that as to tenancies from month to month either of the parties may terminate the same by giving at least 30 days' written notice thereof at any time and the rent shall be due and payable to and including the date of termination. It shall be competent for the parties to provide by an agreement at the time such tenancy is created that a notice of the intention to terminate the same may be given at any time not less than seven days before the expiration of the term thereof. The notice herein required shall be given in the manner prescribed in Section 1162 of the Code of Civil Procedure or by sending a copy by certified or registered mail addressed to the other party. In addition, the lessee may give such notice by sending a copy by certified or registered mail addressed to the agent of the lessor to whom the lessee has paid the rent for the month prior to the date of such notice or by delivering a copy to the agent personally."

■ Civil Code section 1946.1 provides, in part:

(b) An owner of a residential dwelling giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice at least 60 days prior to the proposed date of termination. A tenant giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice for a period at least as long as the term of the periodic tenancy prior to the proposed date of termination.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivision (b), an owner of a residential dwelling giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice at least 30 days prior to the proposed date of termination if any tenant or resident has resided in the dwelling for less than one year.

(d) Notwithstanding subdivision (b), an owner of a residential dwelling giving notice pursuant to this section shall give notice at least 30 days prior to the proposed date of termination if all of the following apply:

(1) The dwelling or unit is alienable separate from the title to any other dwelling unit.

(2) The owner has contracted to sell the dwelling or unit to a bona fide purchaser for value, and has established an escrow with a licensed escrow agent, as defined in Sections 17004 and 17200 of the Financial Code, or a licensed real estate broker, as defined in Section 10131 of the Business and Professions Code.

(3) The purchaser is a natural person or persons.

(4) The notice is given no more than 120 days after the escrow has been established.

(5) Notice was not previously given to the tenant pursuant to this section.

(6) The purchaser in good faith intends to reside in the property for at least one full year after the termination of the tenancy.

(f) The notices required by this section shall be given in the manner prescribed in Section 1162 of the Code of Civil Procedure or by sending a copy by certified or registered mail.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1162 provides, in part:

The notices required ... may be served, either:

1. By delivering a copy to the tenant personally; or,
2. If he or she is absent from his or her place of residence, and from his or her usual place of business, by leaving a copy with some person of suitable age and discretion at either place, and sending a copy through the mail addressed to the tenant at his or her place of residence; or,
3. If such place of residence and business can not be ascertained, or a person of suitable age or discretion there can not be found, then by affixing a copy in a conspicuous place on the property, and also delivering a copy to a person there residing, if such person can be found; and also sending a copy through the mail addressed to the tenant at the place where the property is situated. Service upon a subtenant may be made in the same manner.

■ "[T]he service and notice provisions in the unlawful detainer statutes and [Code of Civil Procedure] section 1013 are mutually exclusive, and thus, section 1013 does not extend the notice periods that are a prerequisite to filing an unlawful detainer action." i. [Insert other applicable standard relating to habitability .]

[Name of plaintiff]'s failure to meet these requirements does not necessarily mean that the property was not habitable. The failure must be substantial. A condition that occurred only after [name of defendant] failed or refused to pay rent and was served with a notice to pay rent or quit cannot be a defense to the previous nonpayment.

[Even if [name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff] substantially failed to meet any of these requirements, [name of defendant]'s defense fails if [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] has done any of the following that contributed substantially to the condition or interfered substantially with [name of plaintiff]'s ability to make the necessary repairs:

[substantially failed to keep [his/her] living area as clean and sanitary as the condition of the property permitted][./; or]

[substantially failed to dispose of all rubbish, garbage, and other waste in a clean and sanitary manner][./; or]

[substantially failed to properly use and operate all electrical, gas, and plumbing fixtures and keep them as clean and sanitary as their condition permitted][./; or]

[intentionally destroyed, defaced, damaged, impaired, or removed any part of the property, equipment, or accessories, or allowed others to do so][./; or]

[substantially failed to use the property for living, sleeping, cooking, or dining purposes only as appropriate based on the design of the property.]]

The fact that [name of defendant] has continued to occupy the property does not necessarily mean that the property is habitable.

This instruction applies only to residential tenancies. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 1174.2(a).)

The habitability standards included are those set forth in Civil Code section 1941.1. Use only those relevant to the case. Or insert other applicable standards as appropriate, for example, other statutory or regulatory requirements (Knight v. Hallsthammar (1981) 29 Cal.3d 46, 59, fn.10 [171 Cal.Rptr. 707, 623 P.2d 268] ; see Health & Saf. Code, §§ 17920.3, 17920.10) or security measures. (See Secretary of Housing & Urban Dev. v. Layfield (1978) 88 Cal.App.3d Supp. 28, 30 [152 Cal.Rptr. 342] .)

If the landlord alleges that the implied warranty of habitability does not apply because of the tenant's affirmative misconduct, select the applicable reasons. The first two reasons do not apply if the landlord has expressly agreed in writing to perform those acts. (Civ. Code, § 1941.2(b).)

There is no requirement that the tenant give notice of the condition to the landlord (See Knight, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 54). In a case not involving unlawful detainer and the failure to pay rent, the California Supreme Court has stated that the warranty of habitability extends only to conditions of which the landlord knew or should have discovered through reasonable inspections. (See Peterson v. Superior Court (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1185, 1206 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 836, 899 P.2d 905] .)

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 1941 provides: "The lessor of a building intended for the occupation of human beings must, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, put it into a condition fit for such occupation, and repair all subsequent dilapidations thereof, which render it untenable, except such as are mentioned in section nineteen hundred and twenty-nine."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1174.2 provides:

(a) In an unlawful detainer proceeding involving residential premises after default in payment of rent and in which the tenant has raised as an affirmative defense a breach of the landlord's obligations under Section 1941 of the Civil Code or of any warranty of habitability, the court shall determine whether a substantial breach of these obligations has occurred. If the court finds that a substantial breach has occurred, the court (1) shall determine the reasonable rental value of the premises in its untenable state to the date of trial, (2) shall deny possession to the landlord and adjudge the tenant to be the prevailing party, conditioned upon the payment by the tenant of the rent that has accrued to the date of the trial as adjusted pursuant to this subdivision within a reasonable period of time not exceeding five days, from the date of the court's judgment or, if service of the court's judgment is made by mail, the payment shall be made within the time set forth in Section 1013, (3) may order the landlord to make repairs and correct the conditions which constitute a breach of the landlord's obligations, (4) shall order that the monthly rent be limited to the reasonable rental value of the premises as determined pursuant to this subdivision until repairs are completed, and (5) except as otherwise provided in subdivision (b), shall award the tenant costs and attorneys' fees if provided by, and pursuant to, any statute or the contract of the parties. If the court orders repairs or corrections, or both, pursuant to paragraph (3), the court's jurisdiction continues over the matter for the purpose of ensuring compliance. The court shall, however, award possession of the premises to the landlord if the tenant fails to pay all rent accrued to the date of trial, as determined due in the judgment, within the period prescribed by the court pursuant to this subdivision. The tenant shall, however, retain any rights conferred by Section 1174.

(b) If the court determines that there has been no substantial breach of Section 1941 of the Civil Code or of any warranty of habitability by the landlord or if the tenant fails to pay all rent accrued to the date of trial, as required by the court pursuant to subdivision (a), then judgment shall be entered in favor of the landlord, and the landlord shall be the prevailing party for the purposes of awarding costs or attorneys' fees pursuant to any statute or the contract of the parties.

(c) As used in this section, "substantial breach" means the failure of the landlord to comply with applicable building and housing code standards which materially affect health and safety.

(d) Nothing in this section is intended to deny the tenant the right to a trial by jury. Nothing in this section shall limit or supersede any provision of Chapter 12.75 (commencing with Section 7060) of Division 7 of Title 1 of the Government Code.

■ Civil Code section 1941.1 provides:

A dwelling shall be deemed untenantable for purposes of Section 1941 if it substantially lacks any of the following affirmative standard characteristics or is a residential unit described in Section 17920.3 or 17920.10 of the Health and Safety Code:

(a) Effective waterproofing and weather protection of roof and exterior walls, including unbroken windows and doors.

(b) Plumbing or gas facilities that conformed to applicable law in effect at the time of installation, maintained in good working order.

(c) A water supply approved under applicable law that is under the control of the tenant, capable of producing hot and cold running water, or a system that is under the control of the landlord, that produces hot and cold running water, furnished to appropriate fixtures, and connected to a sewage disposal system approved under applicable law.

(d) Heating facilities that conformed with applicable law at the time of installation, maintained in good working order.

(e) Electrical lighting, with wiring and electrical equipment that conformed with applicable law at the time of installation, maintained in good working order.

(f) Building, grounds, and appurtenances at the time of the commencement of the lease or rental agreement, and all areas under control of the landlord, kept in every part clean, sanitary, and free from all accumulations of debris, filth, rubbish, garbage, rodents, and vermin.

(g) An adequate number of appropriate receptacles for garbage and rubbish, in clean condition and good repair at the time of the commencement of the lease or rental agreement, with the landlord providing appropriate serviceable receptacles thereafter and being responsible for the clean condition and good repair of the receptacles under his or her control.

(h) Floors, stairways, and railings maintained in good repair.

■ Civil Code section 1941.2 provides:

(a) No duty on the part of the landlord to repair a dilapidation shall arise under Section 1941 or 1942 if the tenant is in substantial violation of any of the following affirmative obligations, provided the tenant's violation contributes substantially to the existence of the dilapidation or interferes substantially with the landlord's obligation under Section 1941 to effect the necessary repairs:

(1) To keep that part of the premises which he occupies and uses clean and sanitary as the condition of the premises permits.

(2) To dispose from his dwelling unit of all rubbish, garbage and other waste, in a clean and sanitary manner.

(3) To properly use and operate all electrical, gas and plumbing fixtures and keep them as clean and sanitary as their condition permits.

(4) Not to permit any person on the premises, with his permission, to willfully or wantonly destroy, deface, damage, impair or remove any part of the structure or dwelling unit or the facilities, equipment, or appurtenances thereto, nor himself do any such thing.

(5) To occupy the premises as his abode, utilizing portions thereof for living, sleeping, cooking or dining purposes only which were respectively designed or intended to be used for such occupancies.

(b) Paragraphs (1) and (2) of subdivision (a) shall not apply if the landlord has expressly agreed in writing to perform the act or acts mentioned therein.

■ Civil Code section 1942.4(a) provides:

(a) A landlord of a dwelling may not demand rent, collect rent, issue a notice of a rent increase, or issue a three-day notice to pay rent or quit pursuant to subdivision (2) of Section 1161 of the Code of Civil Procedure, if all of the following conditions exist prior to the landlord's demand or notice:

(1) The dwelling substantially lacks any of the affirmative standard characteristics listed in Section 1941.1 or violates Section 17920.10 of the Health and Safety Code, or is deemed and declared substandard as set forth in Section 17920.3 of the Health and Safety Code because conditions listed in that section exist to an extent that endangers the life, limb, health, property, safety, or welfare of the public or the occupants of the dwelling.

(2) A public officer or employee who is responsible for the enforcement of any housing law, after inspecting the premises, has notified the landlord or the landlord's agent in writing of his or her obligations to abate the nuisance or repair the substandard conditions.

(3) The conditions have existed and have not been abated 35 days beyond the date of service of the notice specified in paragraph (2) and the delay is without good cause. For purposes of this subdivision, service shall be complete at the time of deposit in the United States mail.

(4) The conditions were not caused by an act or omission of the tenant or lessee in violation of Section 1929 or 1941.2.

■ "Once we recognize that the tenant's obligation to pay rent and the landlord's warranty of habitability are mutually dependent, it becomes clear that the landlord's breach of such warranty may be directly relevant to the issue of possession. If the tenant can prove such a breach by the landlord, he may demonstrate that his nonpayment of rent was justified and that no rent is in fact 'due and owing' to the landlord. Under such circumstances, of course, the landlord would not be entitled to possession of the premises." (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 635 [111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] .)

■ "We have concluded that a warranty of habitability is implied by law in residential leases in this state and that the breach of such a warranty may be raised as a defense in an unlawful detainer action. Under the implied warranty which we recognize, a residential landlord covenants that premises he leases for living quarters will be maintained in a habitable state for the duration of the lease. This implied warranty of habitability does not require that a landlord ensure that leased premises are in perfect, aesthetically pleasing condition, but it does mean that 'bare living requirements' must be maintained. In most cases substantial compliance with those applicable building and housing code standards which materially affect health and safety will suffice to meet the landlord's obligations under the common law implied warranty of habitability we now recognize." (Green, supra, 10 Cal.3d at p. 637 , footnotes omitted.)

■ "[U]nder Green, a tenant may assert the habitability warranty as a defense in an unlawful detainer action. The plaintiff, of course, is not required to plead negative facts to anticipate a defense." (De La Vara v. Municipal Court (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 638, 641 [159 Cal.Rptr. 648] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he fact that a tenant was or was not aware of specific defects is not determinative of the duty of a landlord to maintain premises which are habitable. The same reasons which imply the existence of the warranty of habitability--the inequality of bargaining power, the shortage of housing, and the impracticability of imposing upon tenants a duty of inspection--also compel the conclusion that a tenant's lack of knowledge of defects is not a prerequisite to the landlord's breach of the warranty." (Knight, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 54 .)

■ "The implied warranty of habitability recognized in Green gives a tenant a reasonable expectation that the landlord has inspected the rental dwelling and corrected any defects disclosed by that inspection that would render the dwelling uninhabitable. The tenant further reasonably can expect that the landlord will maintain the property in a habitable condition by repairing promptly any conditions, of which the landlord has actual or constructive notice, that arise during the tenancy and render the dwelling uninhabitable. A tenant injured by a defect in the premises, therefore, may bring a negligence action if the landlord breached its duty to exercise reasonable care. But a tenant cannot reasonably expect that the landlord will have eliminated defects in a rented dwelling of which the landlord was unaware and which would not have been disclosed by a reasonable inspection." (Peterson, supra, 10 Cal.4th at pp. 1205-1206 , footnotes omitted.)

■ "At least in a situation where, as here, a landlord has notice of alleged uninhabitable conditions not caused by the tenants themselves, a landlord's breach of the implied warranty of habitability exists whether or not he has had a 'reasonable' time to repair. Otherwise, the mutual dependence of a landlord's obligation to maintain habitable premises, and of a tenant's duty to pay rent, would make no sense." (Knight, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 55 , footnote omitted.)

■ "[A] tenant may defend an unlawful detainer action against a current owner, at least with respect to rent currently being claimed due, despite the fact that the uninhabitable conditions first existed under a former owner." (Knight, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 57 .)

■ "Without evaluating the propriety of instructing the jury on each item included in the defendants' requested instruction, it is clear that, where appropriate under the facts of a given case, tenants are entitled to instructions based upon relevant standards set forth in Civil Code section 1941.1 whether or not the 'repair and deduct' remedy has been used." (Knight, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 58 .)

■ "The defense of implied warranty of habitability is not applicable to unlawful detainer actions involving commercial tenancies." (Fish Construction Co. v. Moselle Coach Works, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 654, 658 [196 Cal.Rptr. 174] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In defending against a 30-day notice, the sole purpose of the [breach of the warranty of habitability] defense is to reduce the amount of daily damages for the period of time after the notice expires." (N. 7th St. Assocs. v. Constante (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th Supp. 7, 11, fn. 1 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 815] .)

Any Rent: A jury is generally unlikely to find that a residential rental had no value at all because of habitability defects. 5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4321

CACI 4321 Affirmative Defense--Retaliatory Eviction--Tenant's Complaint (Civ. Code, § 1942.5)

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] is not entitled to evict [him/her/it] because [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit in retaliation for [name of defendant]'s having exercised [his/her/its] rights as a tenant. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was not in default in the payment of [his/her/its] rent;

2. That [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit in retaliation because [name of defendant] had complained about the condition of the property to [[name of plaintiff]/[name of appropriate agency]]; and

3. That [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit within 180 days after

[the date on which [name of defendant], in good faith, gave notice to [name of plaintiff] or made an oral complaint to [name of plaintiff] regarding the conditions of the property][./; or]

[the date on which [name of defendant], in good faith, filed a written complaint, or an oral complaint that was registered or otherwise recorded in writing, with [name of appropriate agency], of which [name of plaintiff] had notice, for the purpose of obtaining correction of a condition of the property][./; or]

[the date of an inspection or a citation, resulting from a complaint to [name of appropriate agency] of which [name of plaintiff] did not have notice][./; or]

[the filing of appropriate documents to begin a judicial or an arbitration proceeding involving the conditions of the property[./; or]

[entry of judgment or the signing of an arbitration award that determined the issue of the conditions of the property against [name of plaintiff].]

[Even if [name of defendant] has proved that [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit with a retaliatory motive, [name of plaintiff] is still entitled to possession of the premises if [he/she/it] proves that [he/she/it] also filed the lawsuit in good faith for a reason stated in the [3/30/60]-day notice.]

New August 2007; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

This instruction is based solely on Civil Code section 1942.5(a), which has the 180-day limitation. The remedies provided by this statute are in addition to any other remedies provided by statutory or decisional law. (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(h).) Thus, there are two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction: the statute and the common law. (Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal.3d 244, 251 [178 Cal.Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582] .) Whether the common law provides additional protection against retaliation beyond the 180-day period has not been decided. (See Glaser v. Meyers (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 770, 776 [187 Cal.Rptr. 242] [statute not a limit in tort action for wrongful eviction; availability of the common law retaliatory eviction defense, unlike that authorized by section 1942.5, is apparently not subject to time limitations].)

Include element 1 only if the landlord's asserted ground for eviction is something other than nonpayment of rent. If nonpayment is the ground, the landlord has the burden to prove that the tenant is in default. (See CACI No. 4302, Termination for Failure to Pay Rent--Essential Factual Elements.)

If element 1 is included, there may be additional issues of fact that the jury must resolve in order to decide whether the tenant is in default in the payment of rent. If necessary, instruct that the tenant is not in default if he or she has exercised any legally protected right not to pay the contractual amount of rent, such as a habitability defense, a "repair and deduct" remedy, or a rent increase that is alleged to be retaliatory.

For element 3, select the appropriate date or event that triggered the 180-day period within which a landlord may not file an unlawful detainer. (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(a).)

Include the last paragraph if the landlord alleges that there was also a lawful cause for the eviction (see Civ. Code, § 1942.5(d) [landlord may proceed "for any lawful cause"]), and that this cause was both asserted in good faith and set forth in the notice terminating the tenancy. (See Civ. Code, § 1942.5(e); Drouet v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 583, 595-596 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 205, 73 P.3d 1185] [landlord asserting lawful cause under 1942.5(d) must also establish good faith under 1942.5(e), but need not establish total absence of retaliatory motive].)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1942.5(a) provides:

If the lessor retaliates against the lessee because of the exercise by the lessee of his rights under this chapter or because of his complaint to an appropriate agency as to tenantability of a dwelling, and if the lessee of a dwelling is not in default as to the payment of his rent, the lessor may not recover possession of a dwelling in any action or proceeding, cause the lessee to quit involuntarily, increase the rent, or decrease any services within 180 days of any of the following:

(1) After the date upon which the lessee, in good faith, has given notice pursuant to Section 1942, or has made an oral complaint to the lessor regarding tenantability.

(2) After the date upon which the lessee, in good faith, has filed a written complaint, or an oral complaint which is registered or otherwise recorded in writing, with an appropriate agency, of which the lessor has notice, for the purpose of obtaining correction of a condition relating to tenantability.

(3) After the date of an inspection or issuance of a citation, resulting from a complaint described in paragraph (2) of which the lessor did not have notice.

(4) After the filing of appropriate documents commencing a judicial or arbitration proceeding involving the issue of tenantability.

(5) After entry of judgment or the signing of an arbitration award, if any, when in the judicial proceeding or arbitration the issue of tenantability is determined adversely to the lessor.

■ Civil Code section 1942.5(d) provides: "Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting in any way the exercise by the lessor of his or her rights under any lease or agreement or any law pertaining to the hiring of property or his or her right to do any of the acts described in subdivision (a) or (c) for any lawful cause. Any waiver by a lessee of his or her rights under this section is void as contrary to public policy."

■ Civil Code section 1942.5(e) provides: "Notwithstanding subdivisions (a) to (d), inclusive, a lessor may recover possession of a dwelling and do any of the other acts described in subdivision (a) within the period or periods prescribed therein, or within subdivision (c), if the notice of termination, rent increase, or other act, and any pleading or statement of issues in an arbitration, if any, states the ground upon which the lessor, in good faith, seeks to recover possession, increase rent, or do any of the other acts described in subdivision (a) or (c). If the statement is controverted, the lessor shall establish its truth at the trial or other hearing."

■ "The defense of 'retaliatory eviction' has been firmly ensconced in this state's statutory law and judicial decisions for many years. 'It is settled that a landlord may be precluded from evicting a tenant in retaliation for certain kinds of lawful activities of the tenant. As a landlord has no right to possession when he seeks it for such an invalid reason, a tenant may raise the defense of retaliatory eviction in an unlawful detainer proceeding.' The retaliatory eviction doctrine is founded on the premise that '[a] landlord may normally evict a tenant for any reason or for no reason at all, but he may not evict for an improper reason ...' " (Barela, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 249 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Thus, California has two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction. This court must decide whether petitioner raised a legally cognizable defense of retaliatory eviction under the statutory scheme and/or the common law doctrine." (Barela, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 251 .)

■ "Retaliatory eviction occurs, as Witkin observes, '[When] a landlord exercises his legal right to terminate a residential tenancy in an authorized manner, but with the motive of retaliating against a tenant who is not in default but has exercised his legal right to obtain compliance with requirements of habitability.' It is recognized as an affirmative defense in California; and as appellant correctly argues, it extends beyond warranties of habitability into the area of First Amendment rights." (Four Seas Inv. Corp. v. International Hotel Tenants' Assn. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 604, 610 [146 Cal.Rptr. 531] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If a tenant factually establishes the retaliatory motive of his landlord in instituting a rent increase and/or eviction action, such proof should bar eviction. Of course, we do not imply that a tenant who proves a retaliatory purpose is entitled to remain in possession in perpetuity. ... 'If this illegal purpose is dissipated, the landlord can, in the absence of legislation or a binding contract, evict his tenants or raise their rents for economic or other legitimate reasons, or even for no reason at all.' " (Schweiger v. Superior Court of Alameda County (1970) 3 Cal.3d 507, 517 [90 Cal.Rptr. 729, 476 P.2d 97] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The existence or nonexistence of a landlord's retaliatory motive is ordinarily a question of fact." (W. Land Office v. Cervantes (1985) 175 Cal.App.3d 724, 731 [220 Cal.Rptr. 784] .)

■ "[T]he proper way to construe the statute when a landlord seeks to evict a tenant under the Ellis Act, and the tenant answers by invoking the retaliatory eviction defense under section 1942.5, is to hold that the landlord may nonetheless prevail by asserting a good faith--i.e., a bona fide--intent to withdraw the property from the rental market. If the tenant controverts the landlord's good faith, the landlord must establish the existence of the bona fide intent at a trial or hearing by a preponderance of the evidence." (Drouet, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 596 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Tenant May Not be in Default of Rent if No Unpaid Rent Was Owed: If the defendant owed a reduced amount of rent due to habitability defects, a partial payment of rent may have been sufficient, and the defendant would not be in default. Modify this instruction to allow a finding of no default in the payment of rent if all rent that was owed, was paid or tendered. By Steven R. Kellman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Complaint May be About Problems Other Than Habitability: Civ. Code § 1942.5(a) provides that the defendant is protected from retaliation for complaints about the "tenantability" of a dwelling. This may include problems with the use of the property beyond traditional habitability issues (such as restricted access to specific areas and interference with quiet enjoyment). Modify this instruction to include complaints about tenantability problems, if any were in issue, that are beyond habitability defective conditions. By Steven R. Kellman

CACI 4322 Affirmative Defense--Retaliatory Eviction--Engaging in Legally Protected Activity (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(c))

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] is not entitled to evict [him/her/it] because [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit in retaliation for [name of defendant]'s having exercised [his/her/its] rights as a tenant. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was not in default in the payment of [his/her/its] rent;]

2. That [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit in retaliation because [name of defendant] had complained about the condition of the property to [[name of plaintiff]/[name of appropriate agency]]; and

3. That [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit within 180 days after

[the date on which [name of defendant], in good faith, gave notice to [name of plaintiff] or made an oral complaint to [name of plaintiff] regarding the conditions of the property][./; or]

[the date on which [name of defendant], in good faith, filed a written complaint, or an oral complaint that was registered or otherwise recorded in writing, with [name of appropriate agency], of which [name of plaintiff] had notice, for the purpose of obtaining correction of a condition of the property][./; or]

[the date of an inspection or a citation, resulting from a complaint to [name of appropriate agency] of which [name of plaintiff] did not have notice][./; or]

[the filing of appropriate documents to begin a judicial or an arbitration proceeding involving the conditions of the property[./; or]

[entry of judgment or the signing of an arbitration award that determined the issue of the conditions of the property against [name of plaintiff].]

[Even if [name of defendant] has proved that [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit with a retaliatory motive, [name of plaintiff] is still entitled to possession of the premises if [he/she/it] proves that [he/she/it] also filed the lawsuit in good faith for a reason stated in the [3/30/60]-day notice.]

New August 2007; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

This instruction is based solely on Civil Code section 1942.5(a), which has the 180-day limitation. The remedies provided by this statute are in addition to any other remedies provided by statutory or decisional law. (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(h).) Thus, there are two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction: the statute and the common law. (Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal.3d 244, 251 [178 Cal.Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582] .) Whether the common law provides additional protection against retaliation beyond the 180-day period has not been decided. (See Glaser v. Meyers (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 770, 776 [187 Cal.Rptr. 242] [statute not a limit in tort action for wrongful eviction; availability of the common law retaliatory eviction defense, unlike that authorized by section 1942.5, is apparently not subject to time limitations].)

Include element 1 only if the landlord's asserted ground for eviction is something other than nonpayment of rent. If nonpayment is the ground, the landlord has the burden to prove that the tenant is in default. (See CACI No. 4302, Termination for Failure to Pay Rent--Essential Factual Elements.)

If element 1 is included, there may be additional issues of fact that the jury must resolve in order to decide whether the tenant is in default in the payment of rent. If necessary, instruct that the tenant is not in default if he or she has exercised any legally protected right not to pay the contractual amount of rent, such as a habitability defense, a "repair and deduct" remedy, or a rent increase that is alleged to be retaliatory.

For element 3, select the appropriate date or event that triggered the 180-day period within which a landlord may not file an unlawful detainer. (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(a).)

Include the last paragraph if the landlord alleges that there was also a lawful cause for the eviction (see Civ. Code, § 1942.5(d) [landlord may proceed "for any lawful cause"]), and that this cause was both asserted in good faith and set forth in the notice terminating the tenancy. (See Civ. Code, § 1942.5(e); Drouet v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 583, 595-596 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 205, 73 P.3d 1185] [landlord asserting lawful cause under 1942.5(d) must also establish good faith under 1942.5(e), but need not establish total absence of retaliatory motive].)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1942.5(a) provides:

If the lessor retaliates against the lessee because of the exercise by the lessee of his rights under this chapter or because of his complaint to an appropriate agency as to tenantability of a dwelling, and if the lessee of a dwelling is not in default as to the payment of his rent, the lessor may not recover possession of a dwelling in any action or proceeding, cause the lessee to quit involuntarily, increase the rent, or decrease any services within 180 days of any of the following:

(1) After the date upon which the lessee, in good faith, has given notice pursuant to Section 1942, or has made an oral complaint to the lessor regarding tenantability.

(2) After the date upon which the lessee, in good faith, has filed a written complaint, or an oral complaint which is registered or otherwise recorded in writing, with an appropriate agency, of which the lessor has notice, for the purpose of obtaining correction of a condition relating to tenantability.

(3) After the date of an inspection or issuance of a citation, resulting from a complaint described in paragraph (2) of which the lessor did not have notice.

(4) After the filing of appropriate documents commencing a judicial or arbitration proceeding involving the issue of tenantability.

(5) After entry of judgment or the signing of an arbitration award, if any, when in the judicial proceeding or arbitration the issue of tenantability is determined adversely to the lessor.

■ Civil Code section 1942.5(d) provides: "Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting in any way the exercise by the lessor of his or her rights under any lease or agreement or any law pertaining to the hiring of property or his or her right to do any of the acts described in subdivision (a) or (c) for any lawful cause. Any waiver by a lessee of his or her rights under this section is void as contrary to public policy."

■ Civil Code section 1942.5(e) provides: "Notwithstanding subdivisions (a) to (d), inclusive, a lessor may recover possession of a dwelling and do any of the other acts described in subdivision (a) within the period or periods prescribed therein, or within subdivision (c), if the notice of termination, rent increase, or other act, and any pleading or statement of issues in an arbitration, if any, states the ground upon which the lessor, in good faith, seeks to recover possession, increase rent, or do any of the other acts described in subdivision (a) or (c). If the statement is controverted, the lessor shall establish its truth at the trial or other hearing."

■ "The defense of 'retaliatory eviction' has been firmly ensconced in this state's statutory law and judicial decisions for many years. 'It is settled that a landlord may be precluded from evicting a tenant in retaliation for certain kinds of lawful activities of the tenant. As a landlord has no right to possession when he seeks it for such an invalid reason, a tenant may raise the defense of retaliatory eviction in an unlawful detainer proceeding.' The retaliatory eviction doctrine is founded on the premise that '[a] landlord may normally evict a tenant for any reason or for no reason at all, but he may not evict for an improper reason' " (Barela, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 249 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Thus, California has two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction. This court must decide whether petitioner raised a legally cognizable defense of retaliatory eviction under the statutory scheme and/or the common law doctrine." (Barela, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 251 .)

■ "Retaliatory eviction occurs, as Witkin observes, '[When] a landlord exercises his legal right to terminate a residential tenancy in an authorized manner, but with the motive of retaliating against a tenant who is not in default but has exercised his legal right to obtain compliance with requirements of habitability.' It is recognized as an affirmative defense in California; and as appellant correctly argues, it extends beyond warranties of habitability into the area of First Amendment rights." (Four Seas Inv. Corp. v. International Hotel Tenants' Assn. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 604, 610 [146 Cal.Rptr. 531] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If a tenant factually establishes the retaliatory motive of his landlord in instituting a rent increase and/or eviction action, such proof should bar eviction. Of course, we do not imply that a tenant who proves a retaliatory purpose is entitled to remain in possession in perpetuity. ... 'If this illegal purpose is dissipated, the landlord can, in the absence of legislation or a binding contract, evict his tenants or raise their rents for economic or other legitimate reasons, or even for no reason at all.' " (Schweiger v. Superior Court of Alameda County (1970) 3 Cal.3d 507, 517 [90 Cal.Rptr. 729, 476 P.2d 97] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The existence or nonexistence of a landlord's retaliatory motive is ordinarily a question of fact." (W. Land Office v. Cervantes (1985) 175 Cal.App.3d 724, 731 [220 Cal.Rptr. 784] .)

■ "[T]he proper way to construe the statute when a landlord seeks to evict a tenant under the Ellis Act, and the tenant answers by invoking the retaliatory eviction defense under section 1942.5, is to hold that the landlord may nonetheless prevail by asserting a good faith--i.e., a bona fide--intent to withdraw the property from the rental market. If the tenant controverts the landlord's good faith, the landlord must establish the existence of the bona fide intent at a trial or hearing by a preponderance of the evidence." (Drouet, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 596 .)

CACI 4323 Affirmative Defense--Discriminatory Eviction (Unruh Act)

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] is not entitled to evict [him/her] because [name of defendant] is discriminating against [him/her] because of [insert protected class, e.g., her national origin, or other characteristic protected from arbitrary discrimination]. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] is [perceived as/associated with someone who is [perceived as]] [insert protected class, e.g., Hispanic, or other characteristic]; and

2. That [name of plaintiff] filed this lawsuit because of [insert one of the following:]

[[his/her/its] perception of] [name of defendant]'s [insert protected class, e.g., national origin, or other characteristic].]

New August 2007

Directions for Use

Throughout the instruction, insert either the defendant's protected status under the Unruh Act (see Civ. Code, § 52(b)) or other characteristic on the basis of which the defendant alleges that he or she has been arbitrarily discriminated against. (See Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal.3d 721, 725-726 [180 Cal.Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115] [excluding all tenants with children is arbitrary illegal discrimination].)

In element 1, select the appropriate language based on whether the defendant (1) is a member of the protected class, (2) is perceived as a member of the protected class, (3) is associated with someone who is a member of the protected class, or (4) is associated with someone who is perceived as a member of the protected class.

In element 2, include the bracketed language regarding perception if the defendant is not actually a member of the protected class, but the allegation is that the plaintiff believes that the defendant is a member.

See also the Sources and Authority section under CACI No. 3020, Unruh Civil Rights Act--Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 51 (Unruh Act) provides, in part: "(b) All persons within the jurisdiction of this state are free and equal, and no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever."

- "In evaluating the legality of the challenged exclusionary policy in this case, we must recognize at the outset that in California, unlike many other jurisdictions, the Legislature has sharply circumscribed an apartment owner's traditional discretion to accept and reject tenants on the basis of the landlord's own likes or dislikes. California has brought such landlords within the embrace of the broad statutory provisions of the Unruh Act, Civil Code section 51. Emanating from and modeled upon traditional 'public accommodations' legislation, the Unruh Act expanded the reach of such statutes from common carriers and places of public accommodation and recreation, e.g., railroads, hotels, restaurants, theaters and the like, to include 'all business establishments of every kind whatsoever.' " (Marina Point, supra, 30 Cal.3d at pp. 730-731 , footnote omitted.)

- "[T]he 'identification of particular bases of discrimination--color, race, religion, ancestry, and national origin-- is illustrative rather than restrictive. Although the legislation has been invoked primarily by persons alleging discrimination on racial grounds, its language and its history compel the conclusion that the Legislature intended to prohibit all arbitrary discrimination by business establishments.' " (Marina Point, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 732 , original italics.)

- "We hold that defendant should have been permitted to produce proof of the allegations of his special defenses of discrimination, which if proven would bar the court from ordering his eviction because such 'state action' would be violative of both federal and state Constitutions." (Abstract Inv. Co. v. Hutchinson (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 242, 255 [22 Cal.Rptr. 309] .)

- Evictions that contravene statutory or constitutional strictures provide a valid defense to unlawful detainer actions. (Marina Point, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 727 .)

[3. That [name of plaintiff] clearly and continuously objected to the violation of the [lease/rental agreement].]

New August 2007; Revised April 2008, June 2010

Directions for Use

The affirmative defense in this instruction applies to an unlawful detainer for nonpayment of rent or breach of another condition of the lease if either the landlord accepts a rent payment after the three-day period to cure or quit has expired or the landlord waived a breach of a condition by accepting rent after the breach and then subsequently served a notice of forfeiture and filed an unlawful detainer. This defense is available for breach of a covenant prohibiting a sublease or assignment only if the landlord received written notice of the sublease or assignment from the tenant and accepted rent thereafter. (See Civ. Code, § 1954.53(d)(4).)

With regard to the tenant-defendant's burden, include the word "partial" in element 1 and read element 2 only in cases involving commercial tenancies and partial payment. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.1(c).)

With regard to the landlord plaintiff's burden, give option 3 if there is evidence that the landlord at all times made it clear that acceptance of rent was not a waiver of the breach. (See Thriftmart, Inc. v. Me & Tex (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 751, 754 [177 Cal.Rptr. 24] [accepting rent for five years was not a waiver].)

Sources and Authority

- Code Civil Procedure section 1161.1(c), applicable only to commercial real property, provides: "If the landlord accepts a partial payment of rent after filing the complaint pursuant to Section 1166, the landlord's acceptance of the partial payment is evidence only of that payment, without waiver of any rights or defenses of any of the parties. The landlord shall be entitled to amend the complaint to reflect the partial payment without creating a necessity for the filing of an additional answer or other responsive pleading by the tenant, and without prior leave of court, and such an amendment shall not delay the matter from proceeding. However, this subdivision shall apply only if the landlord provides actual notice to the tenant that acceptance of the partial rent payment does not constitute a waiver of any rights, including any right the landlord may have to recover possession of the property."

- Civil Code section 1954.53(d)(4) provides: "Acceptance of rent by the owner does not operate as a waiver or otherwise prevent enforcement of a covenant prohibiting sublease or assignment or as a waiver of an owner's rights to establish the initial rental rate, unless the owner has received written notice from the tenant that is party to the agreement and thereafter accepted rent."

- "It is a general rule that the right of a lessor to declare a forfeiture of the lease arising from some breach by the lessee is waived when the lessor, with knowledge of the breach, accepts the rent specified in the lease. While waiver is a question of intent, the cases have required some positive evidence of rejection on the landlord's part or a specific reservation of rights in the lease to overcome the presumption that tender and acceptance of rent creates." (EDC Assocs. v. Gutierrez (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 167, 170 [200 Cal.Rptr. 333], internal citations omitted.)

- "The acceptance of rent by the landlord from the tenant, after the breach of a condition of the lease, with full knowledge of all the facts, is a waiver of the breach and precludes the landlord from declaring a forfeiture of the lease by reason of said breach. This is the general rule and is supported by ample authority. ... 'The most familiar instance of the waiver of the forfeiture of a lease arises from the acceptance of rent by the landlord after condition broken, and it is a universal rule that if the landlord accepts rent from his tenant after full notice or knowledge of a breach of a covenant or condition in his lease for which a forfeiture might have been demanded, this constitutes a waiver of forfeiture which cannot afterward be asserted for that particular breach or any other breach which occurred prior to the acceptance of the rent. In other words, the acceptance by a landlord of the rents, with full knowledge of a breach in the conditions of the lease, and of all of the circumstances, is an affirmation by him that the contract of lease is still in force, and he is thereby estopped from setting up a breach in any of the conditions of the lease, and demanding a forfeiture thereof.' " (Kern Sunset Oil Co. v. Good Roads Oil Co. (1931) 214 Cal. 435, 440-441 [6 P.2d 71] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Here the lessor not only relied upon the express agreement in the contract of the lease against waiver of its right to assert a forfeiture for the acceptance of rent after knowledge of the breach of covenant prohibiting assignment of the lease without its written consent first obtained, but it also gave notice that its acceptance of the rent after the breach of covenant became known was not to be construed as a consent to the assignment of the lease or a waiver of its right to assert a forfeiture." (Karbelnig v. Brothwell (1966) 244 Cal.App.2d 333, 342 [53 Cal.Rptr. 335] .)

■ "The landlord had the obligation of going forward with the evidence in order to prove that the money orders were not negotiated or that it took other action to insure that there was no waiver. 'Although a plaintiff ordinarily has the burden of proving every allegation of the complaint and a defendant of proving any affirmative defense, fairness and policy may sometimes require a different allocation. Where the evidence necessary to establish a fact essential to a claim lies peculiarly within the knowledge and competence of one of the parties, that party has the burden of going forward with the evidence on the issue although it is not the party asserting the claim.' " (EDC Assocs., supra, 153 Cal.App.3d at p. 171 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Waiver is a matter of intent. Here plaintiff, from the start, evidenced, not a willingness to waive--which would have kept the original lease in force at the contractual rent--but a willingness to lease the land encroached upon and, if that extended lease were arrived at, to continue the lease on the original parcel. We cannot impose on plaintiff a penalty for a reasonable effort to achieve an amicable adjustment of the breach." (Thriftmart, Inc., supra, 123 Cal.App.3d at p. 754 .)

CACI 4326 Affirmative Defense--Repair and Deduct

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] does not owe [any/the full amount of] rent because [he/she] was not given credit against the rent for repairs performed during the period for which rent was not paid. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove the following:

- 1. [Name of defendant] gave notice to [name of plaintiff]['s agent] of one or more conditions on the premises in need of repair;
- 2. [Name of plaintiff] did not make the requested repairs within a reasonable time after receiving notice;
- 3. [Name of defendant] spent $_____ to make the repairs and gave [name of plaintiff] notice of this expenditure;
- 4. [Name of plaintiff] did not give [name of defendant] credit for this amount against the rent that was due; and
- 5. [Name of defendant] had not exercised the right to repair and deduct more than once within the 12 months before the month for which the cost of repairs was deducted from the rent.

If [name of defendant] acts to repair and deduct more than 30 days after the notice, [he/she] is presumed to have waited a reasonable time. This presumption may be overcome by evidence showing that a [shorter/ [or] longer] period is more reasonable. [[Name of defendant] may repair and deduct after a shorter notice if all the circumstances require shorter notice.]

[Even if [name of defendant] proves all of the above requirements, [name of defendant] was not entitled to repair and deduct if [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] has done any of the following that contributed substantially to the need for repair or interfered substantially with [name of plaintiff]'s ability to make the necessary repairs:

[Failed to keep [his/her] living area as clean and sanitary as the condition of the property permits][./; or]

[Failed to dispose of all rubbish, garbage, and other waste in a clean and sanitary manner][./; or]

[Failed to properly use and operate all electrical, gas, and plumbing fixtures and keep them as clean and sanitary as their condition permits][./; or]

[Intentionally destroyed, defaced, damaged, impaired, or removed any part of the property, equipment, or accessories, or allowed others to do so][./; or]

[Failed to use the property for living, sleeping, cooking, or dining purposes only as appropriate based on the design of the property][./;or]

[Otherwise failed to exercise reasonable care.]

New April 2008

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the tenant alleges the affirmative defense of having exercised the right to make repairs and deduct their cost from the rent. (See Civ. Code, § 1942.) If the landlord alleges that repair and deduct is not available because of the tenant's affirmative misconduct, select the applicable reasons. The first two reasons do not apply if the landlord has expressly agreed in writing to perform those acts. (Civ. Code, § 1941.2(b).)

■ Civil Code section 1942 provides:

(a) If within a reasonable time after written or oral notice to the landlord or his agent, as defined in subdivision (a) of Section 1962, of dilapidations rendering the premises untenable which the landlord ought to repair, the landlord neglects to do so, the tenant may repair the same himself where the cost of such repairs does not require an expenditure more than one month's rent of the premises and deduct the expenses of such repairs from the rent when due, or the tenant may vacate the premises, in which case the tenant shall be discharged from further payment of rent, or performance of other conditions as of the date of vacating the premises. This remedy shall not be available to the tenant more than twice in any 12-month period.

(b) For the purposes of this section, if a tenant acts to repair and deduct after the 30th day following notice, he is presumed to have acted after a reasonable time. The presumption established by this subdivision is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence and shall not be construed to prevent a tenant from repairing and deducting after a shorter notice if all the circumstances require shorter notice.

(c) The tenant's remedy under subdivision (a) shall not be available if the condition was caused by the violation of Section 1929 or 1941.2.

(d) The remedy provided by this section is in addition to any other remedy provided by this chapter, the rental agreement, or other applicable statutory or common law.

■ Civil Code section 1929 provides: "The hirer of a thing must repair all deteriorations or injuries thereto occasioned by his want of ordinary care."

■ Civil Code section 1941.2 provides:

(a) No duty on the part of the landlord to repair a dilapidation shall arise under Section 1941 or 1942 if the tenant is in substantial violation of any of the following affirmative obligations, provided the tenant's violation contributes substantially to the existence of the dilapidation or interferes substantially with the landlord's obligation under Section 1941 to effect the necessary repairs:

(1) To keep that part of the premises which he occupies and uses clean and sanitary as the condition of the premises permits.

(2) To dispose from his dwelling unit of all rubbish, garbage and other waste, in a clean and sanitary manner.

(3) To properly use and operate all electrical, gas and plumbing fixtures and keep them as clean and sanitary as their condition permits.

(4) Not to permit any person on the premises, with his permission, to willfully or wantonly destroy, deface, damage, impair or remove any part of the structure or dwelling unit or the facilities, equipment, or appurtenances thereto, nor himself do any such thing.

(5) To occupy the premises as his abode, utilizing portions thereof for living, sleeping, cooking or dining purposes only which were respectively designed or intended to be used for such occupancies.

(b) Paragraphs (1) and (2) of subdivision (a) shall not apply if the landlord has expressly agreed in writing to perform the act or acts mentioned therein.

■ "[T]he limited nature of the 'repair and deduct' remedy, in itself, suggests that it was not designed to serve as an exclusive remedy for tenants in this area. As noted above, section 1942 only permits a tenant to expend up to one month's rent in making repairs, and now also provides that this self-help remedy can be invoked only once in any 12-month period. These limitations demonstrate that the Legislature framed the section only to encompass relatively minor dilapidations in leased premises. As the facts of the instant case reveal, in the most serious instances of deterioration, when the costs of repair are at all significant, section 1942 does not provide, and could not have been designed as, a viable solution." (Green v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 630-631 [111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Clearly, sections 1941 and 1942 express the policy of this state that landlords in the interest of public health and safety have the duty to maintain leased premises in habitable condition and that tenants have the right, after notice to the landlord, to repair dilapidations and deduct the cost of the repairs from the rent. The policy expressed in these sections cannot be effectuated if landlords may evict tenants who invoke the provisions of the statute. Courts would be withholding with one hand what the Legislature has granted with the other if they order evictions instituted in retaliation against the exercise of statutory rights." (Schweiger v. Superior Court of Alameda County (1970) 3 Cal.3d 507, 516 [90 Cal.Rptr. 729, 476 P.2d 97] .)

■ "[T]he statutory remedies provided a tenant under Civil Code section 1941 et seq. were not intended by the Legislature as the tenant's exclusive remedy for the landlord's failure to repair. 'Although past cases have held that the Legislature intended the remedies afforded by section 1942 to be the sole procedure for enforcing the statutory duty on landlords imposed by section 1941 [citations], no decision has suggested that the Legislature designed these statutory provisions to displace the common law in fixing the respective rights of landlord and tenant. On the contrary, the statutory remedies of section 1942 have traditionally been viewed as additional to, and complementary of, the tenant's common law rights.' Thus, '... the statutory framework of section 1941 et seq. has never been viewed as a curtailment of the growth of the common law in this field.' " (Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 903, 914-915 [162 Cal.Rptr. 194] , original italics, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

CACI 4327 Affirmative Defense--Landlord's Refusal of Rent

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] is not entitled to evict [him/her/it] because [name of plaintiff] refused to accept [name of defendant]'s payment of the rent. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove:

- 1. That after service of the three-day notice but before the three-day period had expired, [name of defendant] presented the full amount of rent that was due to [name of plaintiff]; and
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] refused to accept the payment.

[Giving a check constitutes payment if [name of plaintiff]'s practice was to accept payment by check unless [name of plaintiff] had previously notified [name of defendant] that payment by check was no longer acceptable.]

New October 2008

Directions for Use

Give the last bracketed paragraph if the tender was by check and there is an issue as to the landlord's motive in refusing the check.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1500 provides: "An obligation for the payment of money is extinguished by a due offer of payment, if the amount is immediately deposited in the name of the creditor, with some bank or savings and loan association within this state, of good repute, and notice thereof is given to the creditor."

■ "The mere giving of a check or checks does not constitute payment." (Mau v. Hollywood Commercial Bldgs., Inc. (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 459, 470 [15 Cal.Rptr. 181] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "On this appeal appellants do not discuss or mention the above finding of their bad faith, but argue that respondent was in default because its rental debt was not extinguished within the three-day period as respondent tendered checks instead of money, sent the checks by mail without checking delivery instead of making personal tender and did not keep the tender alive by deposit in a bank as provided by section 1500 of the Civil Code within the three-day period. However, we think that the finding of bad faith, which is supported by the evidence showing the facts, as stated hereinbefore, is of primary importance where appellants try to enforce a forfeiture." (Strom v. Union Oil Co. (1948) 88 Cal.App.2d 78, 81 [198 P.2d 347] .)

■ "With respect to appellants there is no doubt that they could have had timely payment if they had so desired, but that they were intentionally evasive and uncooperative, hoping thereby to induce some technical shortcoming on which to terminate a lease which they thought disadvantageous." (Strom, supra, 88 Cal.App.2d at pp. 83-84 .)

■ "Appellants complain that respondent mailed checks for the rent instead of tendering money in person. The lease does not contain any place or mode of payment of rent. Payment of rent to the original lessor had been made by mailing of checks to his assignee. Appellant was entitled to continue payment by mailing of checks so long as he had not been notified that this form of payment was no longer acceptable. ... If the payment by mailing of check, a normal mode of payment though not a legal tender, was not acceptable to appellants, as it had been to their predecessors, they should have notified respondent to that effect. Neither was respondent after the mailing under duty to take special measures to check timely receipt of the checks. 'The ordinary principles of reason, common sense, and justice should govern in questions of this kind. The lessee, in law, had a right to assume that the Postoffice Department would do its duty and deliver the envelop containing the rent in due time, and that the lessor would, in justice, accept such rent; and if for any reason it was not received or delivered the lessee should, as a matter of ordinary fairness and justice, be advised of such fact and have a chance to remedy the same.' This principle was held applicable even where the letter containing the rent was lost in the mail. It must govern a fortiori here, where the mail functioned correctly and the fact that the checks did not reach appellants was solely attributable to circumstances for which they were responsible. No further action of any kind could be expected from respondent until it was informed, by the return of the unclaimed letter, of the fact that the payment had not been effectuated. If respondent's action is open to any criticism it would be that the deposit of the rent in a bank ... did not follow soon enough after the checks were returned However the delay did not cause any prejudice or make any difference to appellants as they had then already launched the action in unlawful detainer at which they had been aiming ever since respondent refused increase of rent. The shortcoming of respondent is trivial compared to appellants' bad faith." (Strom, supra, 88 Cal.App.2d at p. 84 .)

■ "Nor does the rejection of the 'tender' that appellants made by letter, unaccompanied by payment, and conditioned upon dismissal of the action, after the action was brought, compel a finding of bad faith. It did not extinguish the debt, since the procedure prescribed by Civil Code, section 1500, was not followed. Nor was there a showing of continuous readiness to pay after the tender." (Budaeff v. Huber (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 12, 21 [14 Cal.Rptr. 729] .)

CACI 4340 Damages for Reasonable Rental Value

[Name of plaintiff] also claims that [he/she/it] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s wrongful occupancy of the property. If you decide that [name of defendant] wrongfully occupied the property, you must also decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages is the reasonable rental value of the premises during the time [name of defendant] occupied the property after the [____]-day notice period expired. The amount agreed between the parties as rent is evidence of the reasonable rental value of the property, but you may award a greater or lesser amount based on all the evidence presented during the trial.

[In determining the reasonable rental value of the premises, do not consider any limitations on the amount of rent that can be charged because of a local rent control ordinance.]

New August 2007

Directions for Use

In the second paragraph, insert the applicable number of days' notice required, whether 3, 30, 60, or some other number provided for in the lease. (Civ. Code, §§ 1946, 1946.1; Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.)

Include the optional last paragraph if the property is subject to rent control.

Sources and Authority

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1174(b) provides: "The jury or the court, if the proceedings be tried without a jury, shall also assess the damages occasioned to the plaintiff by any forcible entry, or by any forcible or unlawful detainer, alleged in the complaint and proved on the trial, and find the amount of any rent due, if the alleged unlawful detainer be after default in the payment of rent. If the defendant is found guilty of forcible entry, or forcible or unlawful detainer, and malice is shown, the plaintiff may be awarded statutory damages of up to six hundred dollars ($600), in addition to actual damages, including rent found due. The trier of fact shall determine whether actual damages, statutory damages, or both, shall be awarded, and judgment shall be entered accordingly."

■ "It is well established that losses sustained after termination of a tenancy may be recovered, and that 'damages awarded ... in an unlawful detainer action for withholding possession of the property are not "rent" but are in fact damages.' Thus, a landlord is entitled to recover as damages the reasonable value of the use of the premises during the time of the unlawful detainer either on a tort theory or a theory of implied-in-law contract. It is also settled that rent control regulations have no application to an award of damages for unlawfully withholding property." (Adler v. Elphick (1986) 184 Cal.App.3d 642, 649-650 [229 Cal.Rptr. 254] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In unlawful detainer, recovery of possession is the main object and recovery of rent a mere incident." (Harris v. Bissell (1921) 54 Cal.App. 307, 313 [202 P. 453] .)

■ "It is well established that unlawful detainer actions are wholly created and strictly controlled by statute in California. The 'mode and measure of plaintiff's recovery' are limited by these statutes. The statutes prevail over inconsistent general principles of law and procedure because of the special function of unlawful detainer actions to restore immediate possession of real property." (Balassy v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 1148, 1151 [226 Cal.Rptr. 817] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is well settled that damages allowed in unlawful detainer proceedings are only those which result from the unlawful detention and accrue during that time. Although a lessee guilty of unlawful detention may have also breached the terms of the lease contract, damages resulting therefrom are not necessarily damages resulting from the unlawful detention. As such, he is precluded from litigating a cause of action for these breaches in unlawful detainer proceedings." (Vasey v. California Dance Co. (1977) 70 Cal.App.3d 742, 748 [139 Cal.Rptr. 72] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]hen a 30-day notice is used to terminate a month-to-month tenancy, and any default in the payment of rents to that time are not claimed in a 3-day notice to pay rent or quit, the unlawful detainer proceeding thereon is not founded on a default in the payment of rent within the meaning of section 1174, subdivision (b); damages for the detention of the premises commencing with the end of the tenancy may be recovered, but rents accrued and unpaid prior to the end of the tenancy may not be recovered in that unlawful detainer proceeding." (Castle Park No. 5 v. Katherine (1979) 91 Cal.App.3d Supp. 6, 12 [154 Cal.Rptr. 498] .)

■ " 'If a tenant unlawfully detains possession after the termination of a lease, the landlord is entitled to recover as damages the reasonable value of the use of the premises during the time of such unlawful detainer. He is not entitled to recover rent for the premises because the leasehold interest has ended.' [P] The amount agreed between the parties as rent is evidence of the rental value of the property. But, '[since] the action is not upon contract, but for recovery of possession and, incidentally, for the damages occasioned by the unlawful detainer, such rental value may be greater or less than the rent provided for in the lease.' " (Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 9 [177 Cal.Rptr. 96] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Damages for Wrongful Holdover Should be Near Rental Rate: In a case where habitability defects are claimed to have lowered the fair rent owing, this instruction may yield a finding of reduced rent, which would impact the finding of habitability. A finding of no habitability defects would conflict with a finding of a lower daily damages than the daily rental rate. If this could be an issue, modify this instruction to clarify the jury's ability to reduce the daily damage amount without finding that the cause was habitability defects. By Steven R. Kellman

5-43 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4341

CACI 4341 Statutory Damages on Showing of Malice (Code Civ. Proc., § 1174(b))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/it] is entitled to statutory damages in addition to actual damages. To recover statutory damages, [name of plaintiff] must prove that [name of defendant] acted with malice.

A tenant acts with malice if he or she willfully continues to occupy the property with knowledge that he or she no longer has the right to do so.

You must determine how much, if any, statutory damages should be, up to a maximum of $600. You should not award any statutory damages if you find that [name of defendant] had a good-faith and a reasonable belief in [his/her/its] right to continue to occupy the premises.

New August 2007

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 1174(b) provides: "The jury or the court, if the proceedings be tried without a jury, shall also assess the damages occasioned to the plaintiff by any forcible entry, or by any forcible or unlawful detainer, alleged in the complaint and proved on the trial, and find the amount of any rent due, if the alleged unlawful detainer be after default in the payment of rent. If the defendant is found guilty of forcible entry, or forcible or unlawful detainer, and malice is shown, the plaintiff may be statutory damages of up to six hundred dollars ($600), in addition to actual damages, including rent found due. The trier of fact shall determine whether actual damages, statutory damages, or both, shall be, and judgment shall be entered accordingly."

- "The rule appears to be well established in California that a lessee of real property who wilfully, deliberately, intentionally and obstinately withholds possession of the property, with knowledge of the termination of his lease and against the will of the landlord, is liable for [statutory] damages." (Erbe Corp. v. W & B Realty Co. (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 773, 780 [63 Cal.Rptr. 462] .)

■ "Authorities ... do not hold that the [penalty should be imposed] where the conduct of the tenant is characterized by good faith and a reasonable belief in his right to remain" (Board of Public Service Comm'rs v. Spear (1924) 65 Cal.App. 214, 217-218 [223 P.423] , internal citations omitted, overruled, other grounds, Richard v. Degen & Brody, Inc. (1960) 181 Cal.App.2d 289, 302-304, 5 Cal.Rptr. 263 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Malice Is Not Presumed Just Because Defendant Remained in Possession After Demand to Vacate: The defendant's intentional holdover of possession of a rental property may be found to be wrongful, but this does not always mean it was malicious. The failure to return possession of a rental property is not malicious as long as the defendant believed he or she had a good faith claim or defense to the unlawful detainer action. Even knowledge that the defendant had no right of occupancy (possession) may not be determinative, since that knowledge may only be based on the plaintiff's notice and demand, which could later prove invalid. CHAPTER 43A Matthew Bender Unlawful Detainer Instructions

5-43A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions on the basic rules governing unlawful detainer proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161. These instructions may be used to supplement the CACI instructions in Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions on elements of a plaintiff's causes of action, including:
 - Introductory instructions [see MB 4300A.01].
 - Actions based on service of tenant's 30-day notice [see MB 4300A.10, MB 4300A.11].
 - Actions based on landlord's acceptance of tenant's surrender [see MB 4300A.20].
- Part B includes instructions on damages [see MB 4300A.30].

Suggestions are made on integrating these instructions and on special rules of law that may apply to a particular case.

General rules of contract law relating to the formation, validity, interpretation, performance, and breach of contracts (e.g., leases or rental agreements) are covered in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Chs. 3A-3G.

MB 4300A.01 Definitions of Claim and Debt

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As used in the instructions that I give you, "rent" means the amount of money that a tenant has agreed to pay or is required to pay the landlord for the right to use and occupy real property under a lease or rental agreement between them.

Authority: Atlantic Oil Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1968) 69 Cal.2d 585, 600, 72 Cal.Rptr. 886, 446 P.2d 1006 ; Silveira v. Ohm (1949) 33 Cal.2d 272, 276, 201 P.2d 387 ; Petroleum Collections, Inc. v. Swords (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 841, 846, 122 Cal.Rptr. 114 ; Haig v. Hogan (1947) 82 Cal.App.2d 876, 878, 187 P.2d 426 ; Glouberman v. Coffey (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d Supp. 906, 907-908, 292 P.2d 681 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the term "rent." It is used in an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2). These actions require the jury to determine whether and to what extent there has been a default in the payment of rent and to distinguish "rent" from "reasonable rental value" damages. Essentially, this instruction tells the jury that rent is the amount that has been fixed or agreed on under a lease or rental agreement as the compensation for the property's use. It should usually be given immediately after the instruction defining the elements and the plaintiff's burden of proof in an action based on a default in the payment of rent [see Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4302 ("Termination for Failure to Pay Rent--Essential Factual Elements")].

This instruction assumes that the rent at issue is sought under an express agreement. If the obligation to pay rent arises under an implied agreement, the definition should be expanded to include compensation fixed by the terms of an implied agreement and the jury should be instructed on rental agreements that are implied by law. If an oral agreement is involved, the instruction should be modified to include a specific reference to oral agreements. In this case, counsel should submit additional instructions on the effect of oral rental agreements [see, e.g., Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI No. 304 ("Oral or Written Contract Terms")].

Rent is alternatively defined as compensation the tenant has agreed to pay or is required to pay so the definition will be broad enough to be consistent with the instructions on the effect of a breach of the implied warranty of habitability on the tenant's obligation to pay rent [see Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4320 ("Affirmative Defense--Implied Warranty of Habitability")].

This instruction also assumes that the rent at issue is monetary compensation. If the plaintiff claims that the tenant defaulted in the payment of some other type of consideration constituting the agreed-on rent, the instruction should be modified accordingly [see [3], below].

[3] Comment

[a] What Constitutes Rent

Rent is the consideration given in return for the right to the possession, use, and enjoyment of property [Atlantic Oil Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1968) 69 Cal.2d 585, 600, 72 Cal.Rptr. 886, 446 P.2d 1006 ; Silveira v. Ohm (1949) 33 Cal.2d 272, 276, 201 P.2d 387 ; Petroleum Collections, Inc. v. Swords (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 841, 846, 122 Cal.Rptr. 114] . Rent is not limited to monetary compensation; it includes any consideration the tenant has agreed to give the landlord for the right to use and occupy the property [Atlantic Oil Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1968) 69 Cal.2d 585, 600, 72 Cal.Rptr. 886 (title to oil and gas); Silveira v. Ohm (1949) 33 Cal.2d 272, 276, 201 P.2d 387 (crops); Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1982) 136 Cal.App.3d 387, 399 n.4, 186 Cal.Rptr. 218 (construction of building)]. However, because unlawful detainer actions are rarely based on an agreement to pay rent consisting of nonmonetary consideration, this instruction assumes that the rent at issue will be an amount of money.

The most significant characteristic of rent, as opposed to damages, is that it is compensation that is fixed or determined by the terms of the express or implied lease or agreement under which the property is held [see Haig v. Hogan (1947) 82 Cal.App.2d 876, 878, 187 P.2d 426 ; Glouberman v. Coffey (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d Supp. 906, 907-908, 292 P.2d 681] . Consequently, this instruction defines rent as agreed-on compensation or compensation required under the terms of an agreement.

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A tenant may terminate a month-to-month tenancy by properly giving the landlord 30 days' written notice of the termination. Once the tenant properly gives the landlord notice of termination, the landlord is entitled to rely on that notice and the tenant may not revoke, change, or cancel it without the landlord's consent. The tenant's notice of termination will therefore operate to terminate the tenancy and give the landlord the right to possession of the property 30 days after the notice is given.

If the landlord is required to sue the tenant to recover possession of the property after the 30-day period expires, [he/she/it] is also entitled to recover damages for being deprived of possession during the time the tenant wrongfully occupied the property. If the tenant has acted with malice, the landlord may also be awarded statutory damages of up to $600, in addition to actual damages, including rent found due.

In this case, Plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] is entitled to possession of the property and damages because Defendant has wrongfully continued to occupy the property after Defendant terminated [his/her/ its] month-to-month tenancy by giving Plaintiff 30 days' written notice of the termination. Plaintiff also claims that Defendant has acted with malice and is requesting statutory damages.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

It has been established by _____ [stipulation of the parties or evidence that is not disputed] that _____ [list elements established as matter of law].

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

To be awarded possession of the property, Plaintiff has the burden of proving each of the following elements of [his/her/its] claim for possession:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

- 1. That Defendant occupied the property as a tenant of Plaintiff's--that is, as a result of a [lease/rental agreement] under which Plaintiff [leased/rented] the subject property to [him/her/it];
- 2. That Defendant had a month-to-month tenancy under the terms of the [lease/rental agreement] between Plaintiff and Defendant;
- 3. That Defendant properly gave Plaintiff 30 days' written notice of the termination of [his/her/its] tenancy;
- 4. That Defendant continued to occupy the property for more than 30 days after the written notice of termination was properly given;
- 5. That Defendant was still occupying the property on _____ [insert date action was commenced], when this lawsuit began; and
- 6. That Plaintiff did not give Defendant permission to continue to occupy the property after Defendant's tenancy was terminated. Plaintiff may be awarded damages only if [he/she/it] is awarded possession of the property.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the elements of the plaintiff's claim and the plaintiff's burden of proof in an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5). It is based on allegations that the defendant has terminated a month-to-month or other periodic tenancy by giving notice of termination in accordance with Civ. Code § 1946 or 1946.1.

Frequently, the evidence will support both a claim that the defendant terminated the tenancy under Civ. Code § 1946 or 1946.1 and a claim that the plaintiff accepted the defendant's offer of surrender. In such a case, the jury should be instructed on both theories [see MB 4300A.20]. This instruction may also be inapplicable, or may require modification, in actions involving hotel or motel rooms, mobilehomes, property subject to local rent control ordinances, or property owned, financed, or subsidized by governmental entities [see [3][e], [f], below].

This instruction should be given immediately after the introductory instruction in Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4300 ("Introductory Instruction"), and should be followed by a general instruction defining preponderance of the evidence as the burden of proof [see, e.g., Ch. 2, California Judicial Council

Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

This instruction construes Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) to require the plaintiff to show that the tenant used one of the methods of service authorized by Civ. Code § 1946 or 1946.1. However, there is no case law on this point and an argument can be made that this should not be an element of the plaintiff's cause of action.

This instruction assumes that the action is based on the termination of a month-to-month tenancy. If the action is based on the termination of some other type of periodic tenancy (e.g., a year-to-year tenancy), the references to the type of tenancy involved should be substituted for the references to a month-to-month tenancy and this instruction should be modified to reflect the different notice requirements that Civ. Code §§ 1946 and 1946.1 impose in the case of a periodic tenancy.

In addition, the instruction assumes that the action is based on giving 30 days' written notice. If the plaintiff is relying on a contention that the lease or rental agreement authorized a shorter notice period, modify the instruction accordingly.

This instruction also assumes that the action is based on the existence of a landlord-tenant relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. When a subtenant is a defendant, it should be modified accordingly and the jury should be separately instructed on the rights and liabilities of a subtenant [see Civ. Code § 822; Fifth & Broadway Partnership v. Kimmy, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 195, 201, 162 Cal.Rptr. 271 ; Four Seas Inv. Corp. v. International Hotel Tenants' Assn. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 604, 611-612, 146 Cal.Rptr. 531]. If the plaintiff is a successor in interest of the original landlord, the instruction should be modified accordingly and a separate instruction on the rights of a landlord's successor should be given [see Civ. Code §§ 821, 823, 1111].

This instruction assumes that the action is based on a claim that the defendant is in actual possession of the property. If it is claimed that the defendant is in possession through a subtenant, it should be modified to reflect that fact and the fact that a tenant may be considered to be in possession of property when it is occupied by a subtenant.

This instruction provides for the landlord's recovery of possession of the premises, plus recovery of damages, including statutory damages if the tenant acted with malice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1174(b)].

[3] Comment

[a] Claim to Possession Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5)

Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) states that a tenant is guilty of unlawful detainer "[w]hen he gives written notice as provided in Section 1946 of the Civil Code of his intention to terminate the hiring of the real property . . . but fails to deliver up possession at the time specified in said written notice, without the permission of his landlord. . . ." No apparent cases have interpreted this section's provisions. Conclusions about its purpose and effect must necessarily be drawn by considering its language and history in the context of related statutes and rules.

[b] Tenant Must Give Written Notice

Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) requires the landlord to show that the tenant has given written notice "as provided in Section 1946 of the Civil Code." This provision is treated here as imposing a requirement that the notice given by the tenant must comply with all of the requirements of Civ. Code § 1946, including the requirements relating to service of the notice. However, counsel should make his or her own evaluation to determine whether the landlord is required to prove that the tenant used one of the methods of service authorized by Civ. Code § 1946.

[c] Prerequisites: Landlord-Tenant Relationship; Tenant in Possession

In an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5), the plaintiff must establish the essential elements that are common to all of the actions authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161. The plaintiff must show both of the following:

- The defendant's claim to possession is based on a landlord-tenant relationship and the defendant is, or claims under, a tenant of the plaintiff or a predecessor in interest of the plaintiff [Francis v. West Virginia Oil Co. (1917) 174 Cal. 168, 169-171, 162 P. 394 ; Greene v. Municipal Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 446, 450-451, 124 Cal.Rptr. 139] ; and
- The defendant remained in possession following the tenancy's termination and the defendant was still in possession when the action was commenced [Markham v. Fralick (1934) 2 Cal.2d 221, 225-227, 39 P.2d 804 ; Briggs v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 53 Cal.App.3d 900, 905-907, 126 Cal.Rptr. 34] .

However, the plaintiff is not required to establish that the tenancy was terminated before the action's commencement. The fact that an action may have been prematurely commenced is not a defense, but merely a ground for abatement of the action. Once the tenancy has terminated and the cause of action has accrued, any premature commencement of the action will be disregarded and cannot have any bearing on the determination of the action [see Moore v. Fellner (1958) 50 Cal.2d 330, 343, 325 P.2d 857] .

[d] Termination by Co-Tenant

When there are two or more co-tenants, a co-tenant may terminate a month-to-month or other periodic tenancy as to himself or herself only without affecting the tenancy of the other co-tenants [Schmitt v. Felix (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 642, 648-649, 321 P.2d 473] . This rule has two implications when a co-tenant gives notice solely on his or her own behalf. First, a co-tenant who gives notice on his or her behalf and vacates the property will not be guilty of unlawful detainer because other co-tenants have remained in possession after the expiration of the notice period [Schmitt v. Felix (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 642, 648-649, 321 P.2d 473] . Second, a notice given solely on behalf of an individual co-tenant may not be the basis for an unlawful detainer action against the other co-tenants who remain in possession after the expiration of the notice period. When there is a claim that a co-tenant has acted on behalf of the other co-tenants in giving a notice of termination, the rule that a co-tenant may terminate a month-to-month or periodic tenancy as to himself or herself alone potentially gives rise to disputed factual issues concerning the notice's interpretation (that is, whether it was the intent of the notice to terminate the tenancy as to all of the co-tenants or only as to the co-tenant giving the notice) and the authority of the co-tenant giving notice to bind the other co-tenants.

[e] Application to Transients and Mobilehome Tenancies

Because Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 expressly exempts transient occupants of a hotel or motel and other hotel or motel residents from its definition of tenants, Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) is not applicable to those people, whose occupancy meets the criteria set forth in Civ. Code § 1940(b). It is probably inapplicable to mobilehome tenancies, the termination of which appears to be exclusively governed by the special provisions of Civ. Code §§ 798.55-798.61 [see Palmer v. Agee (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 377, 381-386, 150 Cal.Rptr. 841] .

[f] Effect of Rent Control Ordinances and Government Programs

Notwithstanding the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161, municipal rent control ordinances may limit or restrict the use of substantive grounds for termination of tenancies as long as the limitations or restrictions are reasonably related to the enforcement of rent restrictions [Fisher v. City of Berkeley (1984) 37 Cal.3d 644, 680-713, 209 Cal.Rptr. 682, 693 P.2d 261 ; Birkenfeld v. City of Berkeley (1976) 17 Cal.3d 129, 147-153, 130 Cal.Rptr. 465, 550 P.2d 1001] . If the property at issue is subject to a local rent control ordinance, counsel should carefully study its provisions to determine whether it precludes the tenancy's termination or imposes additional requirements on the landlord. If the property is government-owned or is financed or subsidized under a government program, the landlord's right to terminate the tenancy may also be limited or restricted [see, e.g., People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Lucero (1980) 114 Cal.App.3d 166, 171-176, 170 Cal.Rptr. 554] .

3-43A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4300A.11

MB 4300A.11 Sufficiency and Effect of Tenant's 30-Day Notice

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A tenant may terminate a month-to-month tenancy by giving the landlord [at least] 30 days' advance written notice that [he/she/it] is terminating the tenancy. The notice need not be in any particular form, but it must inform the landlord that the tenant intends to terminate the tenancy.

When the tenant properly gives the landlord a sufficient written notice of [his/her/its] intention to terminate a month-to-month tenancy, the tenancy is terminated and the landlord is entitled to possession of the property [30 days after the notice is given or on the termination date stated in the notice]. Once the notice is properly given, the landlord is entitled to rely on the notice and the tenant may not revoke or cancel it without the landlord's consent. However, a written notice of a tenant's intention to terminate a month-to-month tenancy that is not properly given is not effective and may not operate to terminate the tenancy or entitle the landlord to possession of the property.

A proper written notice of a tenant's intention to terminate a month-to-month tenancy is effective if it is given in [any of] the following way[s]:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. The notice may be given by delivering a copy of the written notice to the landlord; when the landlord actually receives a copy of the written notice, it is considered to have been delivered to [him/her/it], and therefore to have been properly given, even if it has not actually been handed or offered to the landlord by another person;

2. If the tenant paid the rent for the month before the date of the notice to an agent or employee of the landlord, the notice may be given by delivering a copy of the notice to that agent or employee; if the agent or employee actually receives a copy of the notice, it is considered to have been delivered to [him/her/it], and therefore to have been properly given, even if it has not actually been handed or offered to [him/her/it] by another person;

3. The notice may be given by sending a copy of the notice to the landlord by certified or registered mail in an envelope addressed to the landlord;

4. If the tenant paid the rent for the month before the date of the notice to an agent or employee of the landlord, the notice may be given by sending a copy of the notice to that agent or employee by certified or registered mail in an envelope addressed to the agent or employee;

5. If the landlord is not at home and not at [his/her/its] usual place of work, the notice may be given by leaving one copy of the notice with a responsible person at the landlord's home or usual place of work and mailing a second copy to the landlord's home in an envelope addressed to the landlord; or

6. If the landlord's home and the landlord's usual place of work cannot be located or if no responsible persons are found at the landlord's home or usual place of work, the notice may be given by posting a copy of the notice on the property that the tenant is [renting/leasing] from the landlord in a place where it can be easily noticed and mailing a second copy to the property that the tenant is [renting/leasing] from the landlord in an envelope addressed to the landlord.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find that Defendant properly gave Plaintiff sufficient written notice that [he/she/it] was terminating [his/her/its] tenancy, then you must find that Defendant's tenancy was terminated and that Plaintiff was entitled to possession of the property _____ [30 days after the notice was given or on the termination date stated in the notice]. If you find that Defendant did not properly give Plaintiff sufficient written notice that [he/she/it] was terminating Defendant's tenancy, then you must find that Defendant's tenancy was not terminated and that Defendant continued to be entitled to possession of the property.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to inform the jury when a notice of termination given by the tenant is sufficient to effect a termination of a month-to-month tenancy or other periodic tenancy. It should be used, with appropriate modifications, when an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) is based on the alleged termination of a month-to-month or other periodic tenancy by the defendant and the defendant contends that the notice relied on did not operate to terminate the tenancy under Civ. Code § 1946.

When a claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) is predicated on the landlord's written acceptance of an offer of surrender rather a termination by means of a notice complying with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1946, this instruction is not appropriate and the instruction in MB 4300A.20 should be used instead. Frequently, the evidence will support both a claim that the defendant terminated the tenancy under Civ. Code § 1946 and a claim that the plaintiff accepted the defendant's offer of surrender. In such a case, the jury should be instructed on both theories and the second and final paragraphs of this instruction should be modified to indicate that the tenancy would not have been terminated in the absence of a notice complying with Civ. Code § 1946--unless there was a written offer of surrender accepted in writing by the landlord.

This instruction may not be applicable, or may require modification, in actions involving hotel or motel rooms, mobilehomes, property subject to local rent control ordinances, or property owned, financed, or subsidized by governmental entities [see MB 4300A.10][e], [f]].

Because a co-tenant may terminate a month-to-month tenancy as to himself or herself alone without affecting the tenancy of the other co-tenants, a claim that a notice was given solely on behalf of an individual co-tenant presents problems that are not addressed in this instruction and may require modification of the instruction [see MB 4300A.10][d]].

This instruction is based on a construction of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) that requires the plaintiff to prove that the defendant served the subject notice of termination in one of the ways authorized by statute. The law is not entirely clear on this point [see [3][b], [c], below] and counsel are advised to make their own evaluations if the method of service is an issue.

This instruction assumes that the action is based on the termination of a month-to-month tenancy. If the action is based on the termination of some other type of periodic tenancy (e.g., a year-to-year tenancy), the references to the type of tenancy involved should be substituted for the references to a month-to-month tenancy and this instruction should be modified to reflect the fact that Civ. Code § 1946 imposes different requirements with regard to the notice needed to terminate a periodic tenancy other than a month-to-month tenancy [see [3][a], below].

This instruction also assumes that the parties are in agreement that at least 30 days' notice was required to terminate the tenancy. If the plaintiff is relying on a contention that the lease or rental agreement authorized a shorter notice period, it should be modified to reflect the plaintiff's contentions and the fact that the parties may agree to termination of a periodic tenancy on not less than seven days' notice. If there is a contention that the parties agreed that more than 30 days' notice would be required, it should also be modified accordingly.

If the written notice relied on by the plaintiff specified that the tenancy would terminate at the end of a period that was more than 30 days or if it specified a termination date that was more than 30 days after it was given, the first sentence of the first paragraph should include the bracketed phrase "at least" and the third sentence of the first paragraph and the first sentence of the final paragraph should include the bracketed choice that the tenancy terminated at the expiration of the period specified in the notice. If not, they should state that the tenancy terminated 30 days after it was given.

This instruction assumes that the action is based on the existence of a landlord-tenant relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. When a subtenant is a defendant, it should be modified accordingly and the jury should be separately instructed on the rights and liabilities of a subtenant [see Civ. Code § 822; Fifth & Broadway Partnership v. Kimny, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 195, 201, 162 Cal.Rptr. 271 ; Four Seas Inv. Corp. v. International Hotel Tenants' Assn. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 604, 611-612, 146 Cal.Rptr. 531] . If the plaintiff is a successor in interest of the original landlord, it should be modified accordingly and a separate instruction on the rights of a landlord's successor should be given [see Civ. Code §§ 821, 823, 1111].

Counsel should choose only the descriptions of the methods of service on which the plaintiff is relying, and omit the methods not at issue.

[3] Comment

[a] Timing and Form of Notice Under Civil Code Section 1946

Civ. Code § 1946 provides that in the absence of an agreement to the contrary "either of the parties" may terminate a month-to-month tenancy by giving "at least 30 days written notice" of the termination. The 30 days' written notice required to terminate a month-to-month tenancy may be given "at any time" [Civ. Code § 1946].

Because the statute requires "at least" 30 days' notice, a notice given under Civ. Code § 1946 may specify a period or a termination date that is more than 30 days after the notice is given; in that case, the tenancy will not be terminated until the expiration of the period specified in the notice [see Kriz v. Taylor (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 302, 312, 154 Cal.Rptr. 824 ; Highland Plastics, Inc. v. Enders (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 7, 167 Cal.Rptr. 353]. On the other hand, it has been held that when a notice specifies a termination date that is less than 30 days after it is given, it operates to terminate the tenancy on the expiration of the minimum 30-day statutory period [Kingston v. Colburn (1956) 139 Cal.App.2d 623, 625, 293 P.2d 805].

Civ. Code § 1946 authorizes the parties to provide by agreement "at the time such tenancy is created" (emphasis added) that a month-to-month tenancy may be terminated by giving not less than seven days' notice. However, when shortened notice is given the statute requires that it be given "not less than seven days before the expiration of the term" (emphasis added) while 30 days' notice may be given "at any time." Thus, although the courts have not construed this provision, it appears to require that notice be given at least seven days before the end of a monthly rental period and therefore, by necessary implication, to provide that a termination on shortened notice cannot be made effective earlier than the end of the rental period in which it is given.

In a case of a periodic tenancy other than a month-to-month tenancy, different requirements are imposed. If the tenancy's term is greater than one month, the notice must be given at least 30 days before the term's expiration. If the tenancy's term is less than one month, the notice must be at least as long before the term's expiration as the length of the term itself [Civ. Code § 1946]. These provisions necessarily imply that the termination of a periodic tenancy other than a month-to-month tenancy (which, unlike other periodic tenancies, may be terminated by notice given "at any time") can only be made effective as of the end of a term.

Other than to require that the tenant give "written notice of his intention to terminate [the tenancy]," Civ. Code § 1946 does not impose any specific requirements as to the form of the notice. Unlike Civ. Code § 789, it does not require that the notice specify the termination date [see Kingston v. Colburn (1956) 139 Cal.App.2d 623, 625, 293 P.2d 805].

The parties may provide in the lease or rental agreement that more than 30 days' notice is required to terminate the tenancy and, if they do, the provisions of the lease or rental agreement control [Watkins v. McCartney (1922) 57 Cal.App. 643, 644-645, 207 P. 909]. In the case of a commercial lease or rental agreement, contractual provisions that supersede statutory requirements as to the form, timing, or service of the notice will also control [Folberg v. Clara G. R. Kinney Co. (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 136, 140-141, 163 Cal.Rptr. 426 ; see Civ. Code § 1953 (residential leases or rental agreements)].

Notwithstanding Civ. Code § 1946, until January 1, 2010, a landlord must give notice at least 60 days before the proposed date of termination of a periodic tenancy [Civ. Code § 1946.1(b), (h)] unless the tenant has resided on the premises for less than one year or the property is being sold, in which case 30 days' notice is required [Civ. Code § 1946.1(c), (d)]. However, Civ. Code § 1946.1 provides that a tenant is required to give notice only for a period at least as long as the term of the periodic tenancy before the proposed date of termination [Civ. Code § 1946.1(b), (e)]. In either case, notice must be given in the same manner as notice under Civ. Code § 1946 [Civ. Code § 1946.1(f); see [d], below].

[c] Necessity of Authorized Method of Service

Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) states that a tenant is guilty of unlawful detainer "[w]hen he or she gives written notice as provided in Section 1946 of the Civil Code of his or her intention to terminate the hiring of real property . . . but fails to deliver possession." This instruction and the instruction on the elements of a claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) [see MB 4300A.10] construe this language as imposing a requirement that the landlord prove that the notice was served in accordance with the statutory requirements. There is no case law on this point and the contrary position (that the tenant should not be permitted to defeat the landlord's claim to possession by asserting that the method of service that he or she used was defective) is not wholly unreasonable. However, although it may create the appearance that the tenant is being permitted to benefit from his or her own mistake (or, in some cases, calculated tactical decision), a number of considerations compel the conclusion that proper service of the notice is an element of the landlord's cause of action.

First, Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) states that a tenant is guilty of unlawful detainer "when he or she gives written notice [of termination] as provided in Section 1946 of the Civil Code." Civ. Code § 1946 specifies that the notice of termination of tenancy for which it provides "shall be given" in the manner prescribed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1162 or by one of the other methods it authorizes. Because these statutes provide a method of effecting a forfeiture of valuable rights, they must be strictly construed [Woods-Drury, Inc. v. Superior Court (1936) 18 Cal.App.2d 340, 344, 63 P.2d 1184 ; see Magan Medical Clinic v. Cal. State Bd. of Medical Examiners (1967) 249 Cal.App.2d 124, 138, 57 Cal.Rptr. 256] . Both the statutory language and the rule requiring strict construction indicate that Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) applies to the manner of giving notice as well as the form and timing of the notice. If the statute does mandate compliance with the service requirements imposed by Civ. Code § 1946, then compliance is an essential element of the landlord's claim for relief under the unlawful detainer statutes [cf. Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 672, 674, 50 Cal.Rptr. 822] .

Second, a construction of the statutory language that dispensed with a requirement of proper service might give a landlord who becomes aware of an attempted but defective service by a tenant an unwarranted option to treat the tenancy as remaining in effect due to the tenant's failure to comply with Civ. Code § 1946 or to bring an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) on the basis of the tenant's notice. The tenant, who could be subjected to an unlawful detainer action by remaining in possession or to a claim for damages by moving, might not even be aware of the defect in service and, in any event, would have no effective way of compelling the landlord to elect a course of action.

Third, a number of rules prevent the landlord from being injured by reliance on a notice of termination that is not properly served. If the landlord actually receives the notice, this receipt, in and of itself, is sufficient to establish delivery of the notice in compliance with the statutory requirement [Hunstock v. Estate Development Corp. (1943) 22 Cal.2d 205, 211, 138 P.2d 1 ; University of So. Cal. v. Weiss (1962) 208 Cal.App.2d 759, 769-770, 25 Cal.Rptr. 475] . Therefore, in virtually all cases, the landlord will be able to cure any possible defects in an initial service and establish the fact of proper service with certainty by receipt of the notice. Moreover, if there is any question about the validity of service of a written notice of termination, the landlord may treat it as a written offer of surrender, accept it in writing, and proceed under those provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) that authorize an action based on the written acceptance of a written offer of surrender. Finally, if the landlord does, in fact, rely to his or her detriment on service that has purportedly been effected under Civ. Code § 1946, the doctrine of estoppel can be applied to preclude the tenant from asserting that the service was invalid [see Evid. Code § 623 (elements of estoppel); City of Long Beach v. Mansell (1970) 3 Cal.3d 462, 488-489, 91 Cal.Rptr. 23 ; see Abstract Investment Co. v. Hutchinson (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 242, 249, 22 Cal.Rptr. 309 (although estoppel is equitable doctrine, it is well settled that rules of equity apply in unlawful detainer action)].

[d] Manner of Service of Notice

Civ. Code § 1946 provides that the written notice of termination "shall be given in the manner prescribed in Section 1162 of the Code of Civil Procedure or by sending a copy by certified or registered mail addressed to the other party."

Thus, the tenant can effect service by mailing a copy of the notice to the landlord by certified or registered mail. Note that in contrast to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1162, which authorize service by mail, the provisions of Civ. Code § 1946 authorizing service on a party by certified or registered mail do not require that the notice be mailed to the party at a particular location.

Civ. Code § 1946 also provides that "the lessee may give such notice by sending a copy by certified or registered mail addressed to the agent of the lessor to whom the lessee has paid the rent for the month prior to the date of such notice or by delivering a copy to the agent personally." From the specific statutory language restricting service on an agent to "the agent to whom the lessee has paid the rent for the month prior to the date of such notice," it is clear that service on an agent of the landlord is not authorized unless the tenant has, in fact, made the previous month's rental payment to an agent. As in the case of service on the landlord by certified or registered mail, there is no requirement that a notice served on an agent by certified or registered mail be mailed to any particular location.

The tenant may also use any of the methods authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1162, which provides for three methods of service.

The first method is service by "delivering a copy to the [landlord] personally" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(1)].

The second method is (1) service by leaving a copy at the landlord's residence or usual place of business, and (2) mailing a copy to the landlord at the landlord's residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(2)]. This method can only be used if the landlord is "absent from his place of residence, and from his usual place of business" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(2); Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal.2d 597, 608, 12 Cal.Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20] .

A copy of the notice must be left with "some person of suitable age and discretion" at either the landlord's residence or usual place of business [Kwok v. Bergren (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 596, 598-600, 181 Cal.Rptr. 795] . The requirement embodied in the term "suitable age and discretion" has been said to be a "flexible" one intended to give the trier of fact broad latitude in passing on the notice's sufficiency [Lehr v. Crosby (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6, 177 Cal.Rptr. 96] . Essentially, the question is whether the notice's recipient was sufficiently mature, competent, responsible, and interested that it would have been reasonable to assume that it was likely that he or she would apprise the tenant of the notice [see Kwok v. Bergren (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 596, 598-600, 181 Cal.Rptr. 795] .

The third method of service is authorized if the landlord's place of residence and the landlord's usual place of business cannot be ascertained or if the server does not find a person of suitable age or discretion at the landlord's residence or usual place of business. In this case, service may be made by (1) affixing a copy of the written notice in a conspicuous place on the property that has been rented or leased to the tenant; and (2) delivering a copy to a person residing on that property, if one can be found [Highland Plastics, Inc. v. Enders (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6-7, 167 Cal.Rptr. 353 (if no resident is found on property when server attempts service, requirement of delivery of copy to resident is excused)]; and (3) sending a copy to the landlord at that property through the mail [Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(3); Highland Plastics, Inc. v. Enders (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 6-7, 167 Cal.Rptr. 353] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, which provides a five-day extension of the notice period for service by mail, does not extend the notice periods that are a prerequisite to filing an unlawful detainer action [Losornio v. Motta (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 110, 114-115, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 799 (reversing municipal court's determination that extension for service by mail under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) applied to notices served by "post and mail" procedure under Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(3))].

MB 4300A.20 Elements--Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

When a tenant makes a written offer to surrender [his/her/its] interest in the property to the landlord and the landlord accepts that offer in writing, there is an agreement in writing for the surrender of the tenant's interest. The tenancy will terminate and the landlord will be entitled to possession of the property at the time specified in the tenant's offer. Once the landlord has accepted the tenant's written offer of surrender in writing, the tenant may not revoke, change, or cancel the offer or the terms of the agreement for surrender without the landlord's consent.

If the landlord is required to sue the tenant to recover possession of the property after the specified time for surrender has passed, [he/she/it] is also entitled to recover damages for being deprived of possession during the time the tenant wrongfully occupied the property. If the tenant has acted with malice, the landlord may also be awarded statutory damages of up to $600, in addition to actual damages, including rent found due.

In this case, Plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] is entitled to possession of the property and damages because Defendant has wrongfully continued to occupy the property after the time specified in a written offer of surrender that was made by Defendant and accepted in writing by Plaintiff. Plaintiff also claims that Defendant acted with malice and is requesting statutory damages.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

It has been established by _____ [the stipulation of the parties or evidence that is not disputed] that _____ [list elements established as matter of law].

To be awarded possession of the property, Plaintiff has the burden of proving each of the following elements:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

1. That Defendant occupied the property as a tenant of Plaintiff's--that is, as a result of a [lease/rental agreement] under which Plaintiff [leased/rented] the property to [him/her/it];
2. That Defendant made a written offer to surrender [his/her/its] interest in the property to Plaintiff;
3. That Plaintiff accepted Defendant's offer of surrender in writing;
4. That Defendant failed to surrender possession of the property to Plaintiff and continued to occupy it after the time for surrender that was specified in Defendant's offer had passed;
5. That Defendant was still occupying the property on _____ [date action was commenced], when this lawsuit began; and
6. That Plaintiff did not give Defendant permission to continue to occupy the property after the time for surrender specified in Defendant's offer had passed.

Plaintiff may be awarded damages only if [he/she/it] is awarded possession of the property.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the elements of the plaintiff's claim and the plaintiff's burden of proof in an action brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5). It is based on allegations that the plaintiff accepted in writing the defendant's written offer of surrender.

When a claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) is predicated on termination by means of a notice complying with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1946 rather than the landlord's written acceptance of an offer of surrender, this instruction is not appropriate and the instruction in MB 4300A.10 should be used instead. Frequently, the evidence will support both a claim that the plaintiff accepted the defendant's offer of surrender and a claim that the defendant terminated the tenancy under Civ. Code § 1946. In such a case, the jury should be instructed on both theories.

This instruction may not apply, or may require modification, in actions involving hotel or motel rooms, mobilehomes, property subject to local rent control ordinances, or property owned, financed, or subsidized by governmental entities [see [3][d], [e], below].

This instruction should be given immediately after the introductory instruction in Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI 4300 ("Introductory Instruction"), and should be followed by a general instruction defining preponderance of the evidence as the burden of proof [see, e.g., Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

Because it appears that a co-tenant may surrender property and terminate a tenancy as to himself or herself alone without affecting the tenancy of the other co-tenants, a claim that an offer of surrender was made solely on behalf of an individual co-tenant presents problems not addressed in this instruction which may require modifications in such a situation [see [3][b], below].

This instruction assumes that the action is based on the existence of a landlord-tenant relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. When a subtenant is a defendant, the instruction should be modified accordingly and the jury should be separately instructed on the rights and liabilities of a subtenant [see Civ. Code § 822; Fifth & Broadway Partnership v. Kimny, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 195, 201, 162 Cal.Rptr. 271 ; Four Seas Inv. Corp. v. International Hotel Tenants' Assn. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 604, 611-612, 146 Cal.Rptr. 531] . If the plaintiff is a successor in interest of the original landlord, the instruction should be modified accordingly and a separate instruction on the rights of a landlord's successor should be given [see Civ. Code §§ 821, 823, 1111].

This instruction also assumes that the action is based on a claim that the defendant is in actual possession of the property. If it is claimed that the defendant is in possession through a subtenant, the instruction should be modified to reflect that fact and the fact that a tenant may be considered to be in possession of property when it is occupied by a subtenant.

This instruction provides for the landlord's recovery of possession of the premises, plus recovery of damages, including statutory damages if the tenant acted with malice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1174(b)].

For related Judicial Council Instructions, see [3][f], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Agreement to Surrender

Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) states that a tenant is guilty of unlawful detainer "[w]hen he . . . makes a written offer to surrender which is accepted in writing by the landlord, but fails to deliver up possession at the time specified in said written notice, without the permission of his landlord."

Surrender is the consensual transfer or release of a tenant's interest in real property to his or her landlord [Scott v. Mullins (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 51, 55, 27 Cal.Rptr. 269] . It can take place only with the consent, express or implied, of both the landlord and the tenant [Boral v. Caldwell (1963) 223 Cal.App.2d 157, 162, 35 Cal.Rptr. 689] .

Surrender can be effected by an express agreement or by an agreement that is implied in law from conduct that is inconsistent with the continuance of a landlord-tenant relationship [Boral v. Caldwell (1963) 223 Cal.App.2d 157, 162, 35 Cal.Rptr. 689 ; Scott v. Mullins (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 51, 55, 27 Cal.Rptr. 269] . When there is a surrender, the landlord-tenant relationship and the lease or rental agreement between the parties is terminated and the parties are relieved of any further obligations [People v. Urfer (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 307, 310, 79 Cal.Rptr. 60 ; Kreling v. Walsh (1947) 77 Cal.App.2d 821, 832, 176 P.2d 965] . A surrender also operates to terminate any interest that may have been acquired by subtenants claiming under the tenant [Scott v. Mullins (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 51, 55, 27 Cal.Rptr. 269] .

Whether there has been a surrender is generally regarded as a question of fact to be determined by examining all of the relevant facts and circumstances to ascertain the intent of the parties [People v. Urfer (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 307, 310, 79 Cal.Rptr. 60] .

Although there are no cases interpreting its provisions, it is apparent from the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) that it is intended to authorize the recovery of possession by the landlord only when the landlord's written acceptance of the tenant's written offer of surrender has resulted in an express agreement for the surrender of the tenant's interest. Thus, it appears that a determination of whether an agreement for surrender resulting from the making and acceptance of an offer should be governed by general principles of contract law [see Kelley v. R. F. Jones Co. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 113, 115-119, 77 Cal.Rptr. 170]. However, the case law is silent on this point and counsel should give careful consideration to the applicability of the legal rules governing the formation or termination of contracts [see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions, for instructions on potentially relevant rules of contract law relating to offer and acceptance and the formation and termination of contracts].

[b] Effect on Co-Tenants

A co-tenant may surrender his or her interest in property without affecting the tenancy of the other co-tenants [Schmitt v. Felix (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 642, 648-649, 321 P.2d 473]. This rule has two implications when there is a surrender of the individual interest of a co-tenant. First, a co-tenant who surrenders his or her individual interest and vacates the property will not be guilty of unlawful detainer because other co-tenants have remained in possession after the date of surrender [Schmitt v. Felix (1958) 157 Cal.App.2d 642, 648-649, 321 P.2d 473]. Second, the acceptance of an offer of surrender made on behalf of one individual co-tenant cannot be the basis for an unlawful detainer action against the other co-tenants who remain in possession after the expiration of the date of surrender. When there is a claim that a co-tenant has acted on behalf of the other co-tenants in making an offer of surrender, the rule that a co-tenant may surrender his or her individual interest potentially gives rise to disputed factual issues concerning the notice's interpretation (i.e., whether it was the offer's intent to surrender the collective interest of all of the co-tenants or only the interest of the co-tenant making the offer) and the authority of the co-tenant making the offer to bind the other co-tenants.

[c] Prerequisites: Landlord-Tenant Relationship; Tenant in Possession

In an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5), the plaintiff must establish the essential elements common to all actions authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161. The plaintiff must show both of the following:

- The defendant's claim to possession is based on a landlord-tenant relationship and the defendant is or claims under a tenant of the plaintiff or a predecessor in interest of the plaintiff [Francis v. West Virginia Oil Co. (1917) 174 Cal. 168, 169-171, 162 P. 394 ; Greene v. Municipal Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 446, 450-451, 124 Cal.Rptr. 139] ; and
- The defendant remained in possession following the tenancy's termination and the defendant was still in possession when the action was commenced [Markham v. Fralick (1934) 2 Cal.2d 221, 225-227, 39 P.2d 804 ; Briggs v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 53 Cal.App.3d 900, 905-907, 126 Cal.Rptr. 34] .

However, the plaintiff is not required to establish that the tenancy was terminated before the action's commencement. The fact that an action may have been prematurely commenced is not a defense but merely a ground for abatement of the action; once the tenancy has terminated and the cause of action has accrued, any premature commencement of the action will be disregarded and cannot have any bearing on the determination of the action [see Moore v. Fellner (1958) 50 Cal.2d 330, 343, 325 P.2d 857 ; Miller v. Mountain View Sav. & Loan Asso. (1965) 238 Cal.App.2d 644, 654-655, 48 Cal.Rptr. 278] .

[d] Application to Transients and Mobilehome Tenancies

Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5) is not applicable to transient occupants of a hotel or motel and other hotel or motel residents whose occupancy meets the criteria set forth in Civ. Code § 1940(b). It is probably inapplicable to mobilehome tenancies, the termination of which appears to be governed exclusively by the special provisions of Civ. Code §§ 798.55-798.61 [see Palmer v. Agee (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 377, 381-386, 150 Cal.Rptr. 841] .

[e] Effect of Rent Control Ordinances and Government Programs

Notwithstanding the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161, municipal rent control ordinances may limit or restrict the use of substantive grounds for termination of tenancies as long as the limitations or restrictions are reasonably related to the enforcement of rent restrictions [Fisher v. City of Berkeley (1984) 37 Cal.3d 644, 680-713, 209 Cal.Rptr. 682, 693 P.2d 261] . If the property is government-owned or is financed or subsidized under a government program, the landlord's right to terminate the tenancy may also be limited or restricted [see People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Lucero (1980) 114 Cal.App.3d 166, 171-176, 170 Cal.Rptr. 554] .

PART B. DAMAGES

3-43A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 4300A.30

MB 4300A.30 Reduced Award Due to Breach of Implied Warranty of Habitability

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff breached [his/her/its] implied agreement to keep the property in habitable condition, you will determine the rent that Defendant owes to Plaintiff for [his/her/its] use and occupancy of the property during the period from _____ [beginning date of period for which landlord claims tenant is in default] to the date on which you render your verdict by subtracting an amount that represents reasonable compensation for the loss that Defendant has suffered during this period as a result of Plaintiff's breach of the implied agreement from the rent specified in the [lease/rental agreement].

There are two methods that may be used to determine how much Defendant's rent should be reduced because of Plaintiff's breach of [his/her/its] implied agreement to maintain the property in a habitable condition:

1. The first method assumes that the best way to determine the amount of Defendant's loss is to find the difference between what the property would have been worth if Plaintiff had kept it in habitable condition and what it was actually worth in the substandard condition it was in. Under this method, the amount of the reduction is determined by finding the reasonable rental value the property would have had if Plaintiff had performed [his/her/its] agreement to keep it in habitable condition and finding and subtracting the reasonable rental value it actually had in the condition that it was in.
2. The second method assumes that the specified rent represents the value of the property's full use and enjoyment and that the reduction in rent should be the same as the reduction in use and enjoyment that was caused by Plaintiff's breach. Under this method, the amount of the reduction is determined by finding the percentage of the full use and enjoyment that Defendant lost because of the breach and reducing the specified rent by the same percentage.

In determining the reduction that should be made in the specified rent to compensate Defendant for the loss caused by Plaintiff's breach, you should use the method that you find produces the more accurate and certain result.

You will determine the rent that is owed to Plaintiff for the period from _____ [beginning date of period for which landlord claims tenant is in default] to the date on which you render your verdict by subtracting from the amount of rent specified in the [lease/rental agreement] (1) the reduction that you find should be made as a result of Plaintiff's failure to perform [his/her/its] agreement to keep the property in habitable condition, and (2) any amounts that Defendant paid Plaintiff for rent for that period.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to determine the reduced amount of rent owed by a residential tenant when there has been a breach of the implied warranty of habitability. The instruction is based on the rules established by the California Supreme Court in Green v. Superior Court [Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 639, 111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] . It assumes that the Legislature did not intend to change the substantive law governing the tenant's liability for rent when it enacted Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.2 in 1986 [see [3][a], below]. The warranty of habitability is not applicable to unlawful detainer actions involving commercial tenancies [Fish Construction Co. v. Moselle Coach Works, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 654, 658, 196 Cal.Rptr. 174] .

If appropriate, this instruction should be used when the defendant has asserted a defense based on the plaintiff's breach of the implied warranty of habitability and should be given after the general instruction on the nature and elements of the defense [see Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4320 ("Affirmative Defense--Implied Warranty of Habitability")].

Because one of the methods of determining the reduced rent requires the jury to find the difference between the property's reasonable rental value "as warranted" and "as is," the jury should also be instructed on the definition and determination of the property's reasonable rental value. The instruction on reasonable rental value in Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4340 ("Damages for Reasonable Rental Value"), may be modified and used for this purpose.

The optional bracketed language at the end of the last paragraph should be included if the defendant claims that he or she made payments to the plaintiff for rent for the period for which the reasonable rental value will be determined and awarded.

[3] Comment

[a] Legislative Intent; Measure of Defendant's Obligation, Generally

Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.2 provides that in an unlawful detainer action when the tenant has raised a defense based on an asserted breach of the implied warranty of habitability and the court has found that a substantial breach has occurred, "the court shall . . . determine the reasonable rental value of the premises in its untenable state to the date of trial." Although this provision appears to imply that habitability and the rental value of the premises are no longer jury issues, the legislature clarified its intentions with a 1988 amendment [see Stats. 1988, ch. 1405, § 3], which stated that nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.2 is intended to deny the tenant the right to a trial by jury [Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.2(d)].

If the jury finds that the plaintiff has breached an implied warranty of habitability, the decision in Green v. Superior Court [Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] requires the jury to proceed to determine the amount the defendant owes to the plaintiff for the use and occupancy of the property during the period at issue. Under Green, the measure of the defendant's obligation is not the reasonable value of the use and occupancy of the property but a reduced rent that is determined by offsetting the damages resulting from the plaintiff's breach against the rent provided for in the lease or rental agreement [Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 638-639, 111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] . The purpose of the habitability defense is to reduce the amount of daily damages for periods during which rent was not paid [N. 7th St. Assocs. v. Constante (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th Supp. 7, 11 n.1, 111 Cal.Rptr.2d 815] .

In cases when there is a substantial breach of the implied warranty of habitability, Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.2 requires the determination of "the reasonable rental value of the premises in its untenable state to the date of trial." It is not clear whether the Legislature intended, in enacting § 1174.2, to change the substantive law governing the tenant's liability for rent or merely to codify Green. If it is the intent of Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.2 to replace the "reduced rent" approach established by Green with the "reasonable rental value" used to determine damages arising from the tenant's continued occupation of the property in other types of cases [see Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4340 ("Damages for Reasonable Rental Value")], this instruction is improper, and a modified version of the instruction in Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions, CACI No. 4340 ("Damages for Reasonable Rental Value"), should be used.

[b] Methods for Determining Damages

Green suggests two methods for determining the reduction that should be made in the contract rent to reflect the damages occasioned by the breach. The first method is to determine, for the period at issue, the difference between the property's reasonable rental value "as warranted" (i.e., in the condition it would have been in had the plaintiff complied with the implied warranty) and "as is" (i.e., in the substandard or defective condition it was actually in) [Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 639, 111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] .

The second method is to reduce the rent specified in the lease or rental agreement by a percentage that corresponds to the percentage of the full use and enjoyment of the property that the defendant has been deprived of as a result of the plaintiff's breach. This method, although subsequently adopted, has been criticized as inherently uncertain and speculative [Cazares v. Ortiz (1980) 109 Cal.App.3d Supp. 23, 29, 168 Cal.Rptr. 108] .

The Green decision does not indicate a preference for one method. It recognizes the difficulty of precisely determining the tenant's damages and concludes that the courts must do the best they can to approximate the recovery that is fair and reasonable under all of the circumstances [Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal.3d 616, 638-639, 111 Cal.Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] . Accordingly, this instruction assumes that the selection of the most appropriate method of determining damages is to be made by the jury and is to be governed by the well-established rule that when there is more than one permissible method of determining damages, the one that will yield the more accurate and certain result should be used [A. A. Baxter Corp. v. Colt Industries, Inc. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 144, 160, 88 Cal.Rptr. 842] .

Directions for Use

This instruction is designed to introduce the jury to the issues involved in a case involving the misappropriation of trade secrets under the California Uniform Trade Secrets Act. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.1 et seq.) It should be read before the instructions on the substantive law.

In the first sentence, provide only a general description of the alleged trade secrets. Then in the second sentence, select a short term to identify the items, such as "information," "customer lists," or "computer code." The items that are alleged to be trade secrets will be described with more specificity in CACI No.

4401, Misappropriation of Trade Secrets--Essential Factual Elements.

Select the appropriate term, "owner" or "licensee," to indicate the plaintiff's interest in the alleged trade secrets. No reported California state court decision has addressed whether a licensee has a sufficient interest to assert a claim of trade secret misappropriation. These instructions take no position on the standing issue. The court should make a determination whether the plaintiff has standing if that issue is disputed.

Civil Code section 3426.1(b)(1) defines "misappropriation" as improper "[a]cquisition" of a trade secret, and subsection (b)(2) defines it as improper "[d]isclosure or use" of a trade secret. In some cases, the mere acquisition of a trade secret, as distinguished from a related disclosure or use, will not result in damages and will only be relevant to injunctive relief. Because generally the jury should be instructed only on matters relevant to damage claims, do not select "acquiring" in the second paragraph unless there is evidence that the acquisition resulted in damages, other than damages from related disclosure or use.

To avoid confusion, instruct the jury only on the particular theory of misappropriation applicable under the facts of the case. For example, the jury should not be instructed on misappropriation through "use" if the plaintiff does not assert that the defendant improperly used the trade secrets. Nor should the jury be instructed on a particular type of "use" if that type of "use" is not asserted and supported by the evidence.

In the third paragraph, select the nature of the recovery sought, either damages for harm to the plaintiff or for the defendant's unjust enrichment, or both.

Include the last paragraph if the defendant asserts any affirmative defenses.

- Civil Code section 3426.1 provides:

As used in this title, unless the context requires otherwise:

(a) "Improper means" includes theft, bribery, misrepresentation, breach or inducement of a breach of a duty to maintain secrecy, or espionage through electronic or other means. Reverse engineering or independent derivation alone shall not be considered improper means.

(b) "Misappropriation" means:

(1) Acquisition of a trade secret of another by a person who knows or has reason to know that the trade secret was acquired by improper means; or

(2) Disclosure or use of a trade secret of another without express or implied consent by a person who:

(A) Used improper means to acquire knowledge of the trade secret; or

(B) At the time of disclosure or use, knew or had reason to know that his or her knowledge of the trade secret was:

(i) Derived from or through a person who had utilized improper means to acquire it;

(ii) Acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or

(iii) Derived from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or

(C) Before a material change of his or her position, knew or had reason to know that it was a trade secret and that knowledge of it had been acquired by accident or mistake.

(c) "Person" means a natural person, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, limited liability company, association, joint venture, government, governmental subdivision or agency, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(d) "Trade secret" means information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that:

(1) Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and

(2) Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.

■ "[W]e agree with the federal cases applying California law, which hold that section 3426.7, subdivision (b), preempts common law claims that are 'based on the same nucleus of facts as the misappropriation of trade secrets claim for relief.' Directions for Use

In element 1, specifically describe all items that are alleged to be the trade secrets that were misappropriated. If more than one item is alleged, include "the following" and present the items as a list. Then in element 2, select a short term to identify the items, such as "information," "customer lists," or "computer code."

In element 1, select the appropriate term, "owned" or "was a licensee of," to indicate the plaintiff's interest in the alleged trade secrets. No reported California state court decision has addressed whether a licensee has a sufficient interest to assert a claim of trade secret misappropriation. These instructions take no position on the standing issue. The court should make a determination whether the plaintiff has standing if that issue is disputed.

Read also CACI No. 4402, "Trade Secret" Defined, to give the jury guidance on element 2.

Civil Code section 3426.1(b)(1) defines "misappropriation" as improper "[a]cquisition" of a trade secret, and subsection (b)(2) defines it as improper "[d]isclosure or use" of a trade secret. In some cases, the mere acquisition of a trade secret, as distinguished from a related disclosure or use, will not result in damages and will only be relevant to injunctive relief. Because generally the jury should be instructed only on matters relevant to damage claims, do not select "acquired" in element 3 or "acquisition" in element 5 unless there is evidence that the acquisition resulted in damages, other than damages from related disclosure or use.

To avoid confusion, instruct the jury only on the particular theory of misappropriation applicable under the facts of the case. For example, the jury should not be instructed on misappropriation through "use" if the plaintiff does not assert that the defendant improperly used the trade secrets. Nor should the jury be instructed on a particular type of "use" if that type of "use" is not asserted and supported by the evidence.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.1(d) provides:

"Trade secret" means information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that:

(1) Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and

(2) Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.

■ " 'Trade secrets are a peculiar kind of property. Their only value consists in their being kept private.' Thus, 'the right to exclude others is central to the very definition of the property interest. Once the data that constitute a trade secret are disclosed to others, or others are allowed to use those data, the holder of the trade secret has lost his property interest in the data.' " (DVD Copy Control Ass'n v. Bunner (2003) 31 Cal.4th 864, 881 [4 Cal.Rptr.3d 69, 75 P.3d 1] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he test for a trade secret is whether the matter sought to be protected is information (1) that is valuable because it is unknown to others and (2) that the owner has attempted to keep secret. ... [I]n order to qualify as a trade secret, the information 'must be secret, and must not be of public knowledge or of a general knowledge in the trade or business.' " (DVD Copy Control Ass'n v. Bunner (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 241, 251 [10 Cal.Rptr.3d 185] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[A] trade secret ... has an intrinsic value which is based upon, or at least preserved by, being safeguarded from disclosure.' Public disclosure, that is the absence of secrecy, is fatal to the existence of a trade secret. 'If an individual discloses his trade secret to others who are under no obligation to protect the confidentiality of the information, or otherwise publicly discloses the secret, his property right is extinguished.' A person or entity claiming a trade secret is also required to make 'efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.' " (In re Providian Credit Card Cases (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 292, 304 [116 Cal.Rptr.2d 833] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The requirement that a customer list must have economic value to qualify as a trade secret has been interpreted to mean that the secrecy of this information provides a business with a 'substantial business advantage.' In this respect, a customer list can be found to have economic value because its disclosure would allow a competitor to direct its sales efforts to those customers who have already shown a willingness to use a unique type of service or product as opposed to a list of people who only might be interested." CHAPTER 44 California Judicial Council Trade Secrets Instructions *

CACI 4403 Secrecy Requirement

The secrecy required to prove that something is a trade secret does not have to be absolute in the sense that no one else in the world possesses the information. It may be disclosed to employees involved in [name of plaintiff]'s use of the trade secret as long as they are instructed to keep the information secret. It may also be disclosed to nonemployees if they are obligated to keep the information secret. However, it must not have been generally known to the public or to people who could obtain value from knowing it.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Trade Secret Within Particular Trade or Industry: When the trade secret is specific to a particular trade or industry, an appropriate modification to this instruction is to add language in the last sentence that it must also not be generally known within the trade or business. This modification may serve to further clarify the existing language in the instruction that it is not merely the public that must be unaware of the trade secret, but also those conducting competitive businesses that would benefit from its use. This clarification will also aid counsel in explaining the significance of this element in closing argument, especially if the effort and cost of monitoring and maintaining the secrecy are significant issues as outlined in CACI No. 4404. (DVD Copy Control Ass'n v. Bunner (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 241, 251 [10 Cal.Rptr.3d 185] .) By Kelly O. Scott and Karina B. Sterman

CHAPTER 44 California Judicial Council Trade Secrets Instructions *

5-44 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4404

CACI 4404 Reasonable Efforts to Protect Secrecy

To establish that the [select short term to describe, e.g., information] [is/are] [a] trade secret[s], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/it] made reasonable efforts under the circumstances to keep it secret. "Reasonable efforts" are the efforts that would be made by a reasonable [person/business] in the same situation and having the same knowledge and resources as [name of plaintiff], exercising due care to protect important information of the same kind. [This requirement applies separately to each item that [name of plaintiff] claims to be a trade secret.]

In determining whether or not [name of plaintiff] made reasonable efforts to keep the [e.g., information] secret, you should consider all of the facts and circumstances. Among the factors you may consider are the following:

[a. Whether documents or computer files containing the [e.g., information] were marked with confidentiality warnings;]

[b. Whether [name of plaintiff] instructed [his/her/its] employees to treat the [e.g., information] as confidential;]

[c. Whether [name of plaintiff] restricted access to the [e.g., information] to persons who had a business reason to know the information;]

[d. Whether [name of plaintiff] kept the [e.g., information] in a restricted or secured area;]

[e. Whether [name of plaintiff] required employees or others with access to the [e.g., information] to sign confidentiality or nondisclosure agreements;]

[f. Whether [name of plaintiff] took any action to protect the specific [e.g., information], or whether it relied on general measures taken to protect its business information or assets;]

[g. The extent to which any general measures taken by [name of plaintiff] would prevent the unauthorized disclosure of the [e.g., information];]

[h. Whether there were other reasonable measures available to [name of plaintiff] that [he/she/it] did not take;]

[i. Specify other factor(s).]

The presence or absence of any one or more of these factors is not necessarily determinative.

New December 2007

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 4402, "Trade Secret" Defined, to guide the jury with regard to element 3 of that instruction, that the plaintiff made reasonable efforts to keep the information secret. Read only the factors supported by the evidence in the case. Use factor i to present additional factors.

Sources and Authority

■ "Reasonable efforts to maintain secrecy have been held to include advising employees of the existence of a trade secret, limiting access to a trade secret on 'need to know basis,' and controlling plant access. [P] ... Requiring employees to sign confidentiality agreements is a reasonable step to ensure secrecy." (Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 1443, 1454 [125 Cal.Rptr.2d 277 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A person or entity claiming a trade secret is also required to make 'efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.' A leading treatise has collected the cases of successful and unsuccessful claims of secrecy protection; among the factors repeatedly noted are restricting access and physical segregation of the information, confidentiality agreements with employees, and marking documents with warnings or reminders of confidentiality." (In re Providian Credit Card Cases (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 292, 304 [116 Cal.Rptr.2d 833] , referring to Trade Secrets Practice in California (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) §§ 4.9-4.10.)

■ "In addition to possessing actual or potential economic value, the other part of the definition of a trade secret is that the information must have been protected by 'efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.' [W]hether a party claiming a trade secret undertook reasonable efforts to maintain secrecy is a question of fact, and it may be implicit in a determination that the information does not qualify as a trade secret, also a question of fact." CACI 4405 Misappropriation by Acquisition

[Name of defendant] misappropriated [name of plaintiff]'s trade secret[s] by acquisition if [name of defendant] acquired the trade secret[s] and knew or had reason to know that [he/she/it/[name of third party]] used improper means to acquire [it/them].

New December 2007

Directions for Use

Read this instruction with CACI No. 4401, Misappropriation of Trade Secrets--Essential Factual Elements, if the plaintiff claims that the defendant's acquisition of the information alleged to be a trade secret is a misappropriation. Give also CACI No. 4408, Improper Means of Acquiring Trade Secret.

Civil Code section 3426.1(b)(1) defines "misappropriation" as improper "[a]cquisition" of a trade secret, and subsection (b)(2) defines it as improper "[d]isclosure or use" of a trade secret. In some cases, the mere acquisition of a trade secret, as distinguished from a related disclosure or use, will not result in damages and will only be relevant to injunctive relief. Because generally the jury should only be instructed on matters relevant to damage claims, this instruction should not be given unless there is evidence that the acquisition resulted in damages, other than damages from related disclosure or use.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.1(b)(1) provides:

(b) "Misappropriation" means:

(1) Acquisition of a trade secret of another by a person who knows or has reason to know that the trade secret was acquired by improper means.

■ "Defendants ... obtained these secrets improperly. Their tortious acts resulted from a breach of confidence by Van Den Berg in copying or stealing plans, designs and other documents related to [plaintiff]'s products which defendants themselves wanted to produce in competition with [plaintiff]. The protection which is extended to trade secrets fundamentally rests upon the theory that they are improperly acquired by a defendant, usually through theft or a breach of confidence." New December 2007

Read this instruction with CACI No. 4401, Misappropriation of Trade Secrets--Essential Factual Elements, if the plaintiff claims that the defendant's disclosure of the information alleged to be a trade secret is a misappropriation.

If consent is at issue, CACI No. 1302, Consent Explained, and CACI No. 1303, Invalid Consent, may also be given.

In element 2, select the applicable statutory act(s) alleged to constitute misappropriation by disclosure. (See Civ. Code, § 3624.1(b)(2).) If only one act is selected, omit the words "did any of the following."

If either of the first two acts constituting misappropriation by disclosure is alleged, give also CACI No. 4408, Improper Means of Acquiring Trade Secret.

Each act of misappropriation based on improper disclosure requires that the defendant have "knowledge of the trade secret." (See Civ. Code, § 3426.1(b)(2).) No reported California state court decision has interpreted the meaning of "knowledge of the trade secret."

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.1(b)(2) provides:

(b) "Misappropriation" means:

(2) Disclosure or use of a trade secret of another without express or implied consent by a person who:

(A) Used improper means to acquire knowledge of the trade secret; or

(B) At the time of disclosure or use, knew or had reason to know that his or her knowledge of the trade secret was:

(i) Derived from or through a person who had utilized improper means to acquire it;

(ii) Acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or

(iii) Derived from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or

(C) Before a material change of his or her position, knew or had reason to know that it was a trade secret and that knowledge of it had been acquired by accident or mistake.

- Civil Code section 19 provides: "Every person who has actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put a prudent man upon inquiry as to a particular fact, has constructive notice of the fact itself in all cases in which, by prosecuting such inquiry, he might have learned such fact."

■ "The fact that [defendant]'s postings were not of the 'entire secret,' and included only portions of courses, does not mean that [defendant]'s disclosures are not misappropriations. While previous partial disclosures arguably made public only those parts disclosed, [defendant]'s partial disclosures of non-public portions of the secrets may themselves be actionable because they constitute 'disclosure ... without ... consent by a person who ... knew or had reason to know that his ... knowledge of the trade secret was ... [either] derived from or through a person who had utilized improper means to acquire it [or] acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use.' ■ "Under the UTSA, simple disclosure or use may suffice to create liability. It is no longer necessary, if it ever was, to prove that the purpose to which the acquired information is put is outweighed by the interests of the trade secret holder or that use of a trade secret cannot be prohibited if it is infeasible to do so." (Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 1514, 1527 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 731] .)

■ "[N]othing in the UTSA requires that the defendant gain any advantage from the disclosure; it is sufficient to show 'use' by disclosure of a trade secret with actual or constructive knowledge that the secret was acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy." New December 2007

Read this instruction with CACI No. 4401, Misappropriation of Trade Secrets--Essential Factual Elements, if the plaintiff claims that the defendant's use of the information alleged to be a trade secret is a misappropriation.

If consent is at issue, CACI No. 1302, Consent Explained, and CACI No. 1303, Invalid Consent, may also be given.

In element 2, select the applicable statutory act(s) alleged to constitute misappropriation by use. (See Civ. Code, § 3624.1(b)(2).) If only one act is selected, omit the words "did any of the following."

If either of the first two acts constituting misappropriation by disclosure is alleged, give also CACI No. 4408, Improper Means of Acquiring Trade Secret.

Each act of misappropriation based on improper use requires that the defendant have "knowledge of the trade secret." (See Civ. Code, § 3426.1(b)(2).) No reported California state court decision has interpreted the meaning of "knowledge of the trade secret."

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.1(b)(2) provides:

(b) "Misappropriation" means:

(2) Disclosure or use of a trade secret of another without express or implied consent by a person who:

(A) Used improper means to acquire knowledge of the trade secret; or

(B) At the time of disclosure or use, knew or had reason to know that his or her knowledge of the trade secret was:

(i) Derived from or through a person who had utilized improper means to acquire it;

(ii) Acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or

(iii) Derived from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or

(C) Before a material change of his or her position, knew or had reason to know that it was a trade secret and that knowledge of it had been acquired by accident or mistake.

- Civil Code section 19 provides: "Every person who has actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put a prudent man upon inquiry as to a particular fact, has constructive notice of the fact itself in all cases in which, by prosecuting such inquiry, he might have learned such fact."

■ "Under the plain terms of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, defendants may be personally liable if: they used, through the corporation, [plaintiff]'s trade secrets; at the time of the use of the confidential information they knew or had reason to know that knowledge of the trade secrets was derived from or through a person who had improperly acquired the knowledge, or the secrets were obtained by a person who owed a duty to plaintiffs to maintain the secrecy. Employing the confidential information in manufacturing, production, research or development, marketing goods that embody the trade secret, or soliciting customers through the use of trade secret information, all constitute use. Use of a trade secret without knowledge it was acquired by improper means does not subject a person to liability unless the person receives notice that its use of the information is wrongful." (PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 1368, 1383 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 663] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Under the UTSA, simple disclosure or use may suffice to create liability. It is no longer necessary, if it ever was, to prove that the purpose to which the acquired information is put is outweighed by the interests of the trade secret holder or that use of a trade secret cannot be prohibited if it is infeasible to do so." (Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 1514, 1527 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 731] .)

■ "Our Supreme Court has previously distinguished solicitation--which is actionable--from announcing a job change--which is not: 'Merely informing customers of one's former employer of a change of employment, without more, is not solicitation. Neither does the willingness to discuss business upon invitation of another party constitute solicitation on the part of the invitee. Equity will not enjoin a former employee from receiving business from the customers of his former employer, even though the circumstances be such that he should be prohibited from soliciting such business.' " (Hilb v. Robb (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 1812, 1821 [39 Cal.Rptr. 2d 887] , internal citation omitted; but see Morlife, Inc., supra, 56 Cal.App.4th at p. 1527, fn. 8 ["we need not decide whether the 'professional announcement' exception ... has continued vitality in light of the expansive definition of misappropriation under the UTSA"].)

■ "[T]o prove misappropriation of a trade secret under the UTSA, a plaintiff must establish (among other things) that the defendant improperly 'used' the plaintiff's trade secret. Thus, under Evidence Code sections 500 and 520, the plaintiff bears the burden of proof on that issue, both at the outset and during trial." (Sargent Fletcher, Inc. v. Able Corp. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1658, 1668 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 279] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[I]nformation relative to customers (e.g., their identities, locations, and individual preferences), obtained by a former employee in his contacts with them during his employment, may amount to 'trade secrets' which will warrant his being enjoined from exploitation or disclosure after leaving the employment. [P] It is equally clear, however, that the proscriptions inhibiting the ex-employee reach only his use of such information, not to his mere possession or knowledge of it." (Golden State Linen Service, Inc. v. Vidalin (1977) 69 Cal.App.3d 1, 7-8 [137 Cal.Rptr. 807] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Since these 'Marks' likely encompass any trade secrets, it is reasonable to conclude that one party's use of the trade secrets that affects the other party's rights in the mark would constitute the misappropriation of the trade secrets 'of another.' " (Morton v. Rank Am., Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1993), 812 F.Supp. 1062, 1074 [one can misappropriate trade secret jointly owned with another].)

CACI 4408 Improper Means of Acquiring Trade Secret

Improper means of acquiring a trade secret or knowledge of a trade secret include, but are not limited to, [theft/bribery/misrepresentation/breach or inducing a breach of a duty to maintain secrecy/ [or] wiretapping, electronic eavesdropping, [or] [insert other means of espionage]].

[However, it is not improper to acquire a trade secret or knowledge of the trade secret by [any of the following]:

- [1. Independent efforts to invent or discover the information;]
- [2. Reverse engineering; that is, examining or testing a product to determine how it works, by a person who has a right to possess the product;]
- [3. Obtaining the information as a result of a license agreement with the owner of the information;]
- [4. Observing the information in public use or on public display;] [or]
- [5. Obtaining the information from published literature, such as trade journals, reference books, the Internet, or other publicly available sources.]]

New December 2007

Directions for Use

In the first paragraph, include only those statutory examples of "improper means" supported by the evidence. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.1(a).) The option for "wiretapping, eavesdropping, [or] [insert other" means of espionage]" expresses the statutory term "espionage."

Include the optional last paragraph if any of those methods of obtaining the information are supported by the evidence. Omit any methods that are not at issue. If only one is at issue, omit "any of the following."

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 3426.1(a) provides that " 'Improper means' includes theft, bribery, misrepresentation, breach or inducement of a breach of a duty to maintain secrecy, or espionage through electronic or other means. Reverse engineering or independent derivation alone shall not be considered improper means."

■ "The Restatement of Torts, Section 757, Comment (f), notes: 'A complete catalogue of improper means is not possible,' but Section 1(1) includes a partial listing. Proper means include: 1. Discovery by independent invention; 2. Discovery by "reverse engineering," that is, by starting with the known product and working backward to find the method by which it was developed. The acquisition of the known product must of course, also be by a fair and honest means, such as purchase of the item on the open market for reverse engineering to be lawful; 3. Discovery under a license from the owner of the trade secret; 4. Observation of the item in public use or on public display; 5. Obtaining the trade secret from published literature. ... [T]he assertion that a matter is readily ascertainable by proper means remains available as a defense to a claim of misappropriation. Information is readily ascertainable if it is available in trade journals, reference books, or published materials." (Civ. Code, § 3426.1, Legis. Comm. Comment (Senate), 1984 Addition.)

■ Penal Code section 630 provides in part: The Legislature hereby declares that advances in science and technology have led to the development of new devices and techniques for the purpose of eavesdropping upon private communications and that the invasion of privacy resulting from the continual and increasing use of such devices and techniques has created a serious threat to the free exercise of personal liberties and cannot be tolerated in a free and civilized society.

The Legislature by this chapter intends to protect the right of privacy of the people of this state.

5-44 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4409

CACI 4409 Remedies for Misappropriation of Trade Secret

If [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] misappropriated [his/her/its] trade secret[s], then [name of plaintiff] is entitled to recover damages if the misappropriation caused [[name of plaintiff] to suffer an actual loss/ [or] [name of defendant] to be unjustly enriched].

[If [name of defendant]'s misappropriation did not cause [[name of plaintiff] to suffer an actual loss/ [or] [name of defendant] to be unjustly enriched], [name of plaintiff] may still be entitled to a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time the use could have been prohibited. However, I will calculate the amount of any royalty.]

New December 2007

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 4401, Misappropriation of Trade Secrets--Essential Factual Elements, in all cases.

Select the nature of the recovery sought; either for the plaintiff's actual loss or for the defendant's unjust enrichment, or both. If the plaintiff's claim of actual injury or loss is based on lost profits, give CACI No. 3903N, Lost Profits (Economic Damage). If unjust enrichment is alleged, give CACI No. 4410, Unjust Enrichment.

If neither actual loss nor unjust enrichment is provable, Civil Code section 3426.3(b) provides for a third, alternate remedy: a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time the use could have been prohibited. Both the statute and case law indicate that the question of a reasonable royalty should not be presented to the jury. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.3(b) [the court may order the payment of a reasonable royalty]; Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 628 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741] ; see also Civ. Code, § 3426.2(b) [court may issue an injunction that conditions future of a trade secret on payment of a reasonable royalty].) However, no reported California state court case has directly held that "reasonable royalty" issues should not be presented to the jury. (But see Unilogic, Inc., supra, 10 Cal.App.4th at p. 627 .) Include the optional second paragraph if the court wants to advise the jury that even if it finds that the plaintiff suffered no actual loss and that the defendant was not unjustly enriched, the plaintiff may still be entitled to some recovery.

For simplicity, this instruction uses the term "damages" to refer to both actual loss and unjust enrichment, even though, strictly speaking, unjust enrichment may be considered a form of restitution rather than damages.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.3 provides:

(a) A complainant may recover damages for the actual loss caused by misappropriation. A complainant also may recover for the unjust enrichment caused by misappropriation that is not taken into account in computing damages for actual loss.

(b) If neither damages nor unjust enrichment caused by misappropriation are provable, the court may order payment of a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time the use could have been prohibited.

(c) If willful and malicious misappropriation exists, the court may award exemplary damages in an amount not exceeding twice any award made under subdivision (a) or (b).

- "Under subdivision (a), a complainant may recover damages for the actual loss caused by misappropriation, as well as for any unjust enrichment not taken into account in computing actual loss damages. Subdivision (b) provides for an alternative remedy of the payment of royalties from future profits where 'neither damages nor unjust enrichment caused by misappropriation [is] provable.' " (*Ajaxo Inc. v. E*Trade Group Inc.* (2005) 135 Cal.App.4th 21, 61] .)

- "[B]ased on the plain language of the statute, the Court--not the jury--determines if and in what amount a royalty should be awarded. See Cal. Civ. Code section 3416.3(b) ('the Court may order payment of a reasonable royalty')." (FAS Techs. v. Dainippon Screen Mfg. (N.D. Cal. 2001) 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15444, 9-10 .)

- "Nor was it necessary to submit the liability issue to the jury in order to allow the trial court thereafter to determine a reasonable royalty or to impose an injunction. Just as [cross complainant] presented no evidence of the degree of [cross defendant]'s enrichment, [cross complainant] likewise presented no evidence that would allow the court to determine what royalty, if any, would be reasonable under the circumstances." (Unilogic, Inc. supra, 10 Cal.App.4th at p. 628 .)

- "[T]he imposition of a reasonable royalty is reserved for those instances where the court finds that neither actual damages to the holder of the trade secret nor unjust enrichment to the user is provable." (Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 1514, 1529 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 731] .)

- "California law is clear, however. [Plaintiff] is entitled to a reasonable royalty only if neither actual damages nor unjust enrichment are provable. ... [P] ... California law differs on this point from both the UTSA and Federal patent law, neither of which require actual damages and unjust enrichment to be unprovable before a reasonable royalty may be imposed." (Cacique, Inc. v. Robert Reiser & Co. (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 619, 623 .)

Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Damage Calculations: Counsel should creatively assess potential damages. Costs of remedial efforts, development costs associated with the trade secret, and reduction in value of the trade secret owner's business or investment are recoverable. (See Southern California Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 431, 449 [7 Cal.Rptr. 43] ; Reid v. Mass Co. (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 293, 300-301 [318 P.2d 54] ; De Vries v. Starr (10th Cir. 1968) 393 F.2d 9, 20-21 .) Thus, plaintiff's counsel should use this instruction to claim damages even if the only actual loss suffered was the cost of modifying or creating a new system for protecting the trade secret. (Dozor Agency, Inc. v. Rosenberg (Pa. 1966) 218 A.2d 583, 585-586 .) By Kelly O. Scott and Karina B. Sterman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Discovery Tool: Counsel should use this instruction as a guide in discovery. In the absence of evidence of actual loss and unjust enrichment the rate of a reasonable royalty should be ascertained and proven at trial. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.3(b); Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 625-626 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741] .) Early consultation with an expert may also be advisable. By Kelly O. Scott and Karina B. Sterman

CACI 4410 Unjust Enrichment

[Name of defendant] was unjustly enriched if [his/her/its] misappropriation of [name of plaintiff]'s trade secret[s] caused [name of defendant] to receive a benefit that [he/she/it] otherwise would not have achieved.

To decide the amount of any unjust enrichment, first determine the value of [name of defendant]'s benefit that would not have been achieved except for [his/her/its] misappropriation. Then subtract from that amount [name of defendant]'s reasonable expenses[, including the value of the [specify categories of expenses in evidence, such as labor, materials, rents, interest on invested capital]]. [In calculating the amount of any unjust enrichment, do not take into account any amount that you included in determining any amount of damages for [name of plaintiff]'s actual loss.]

New December 2007

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 4409, Remedies for Misappropriation of Trade Secrets, if unjust enrichment is alleged and supported by the evidence. If it would be helpful to the jury, specify the categories of expenses to be allowed to the defendant. Include the last sentence if both actual loss and unjust enrichment are alleged.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.3 provides:

(a) A complainant may recover damages for the actual loss caused by misappropriation. A complainant also may recover for the unjust enrichment caused by misappropriation that is not taken into account in computing damages for actual loss.

(b) If neither damages nor unjust enrichment caused by misappropriation are provable, the court may order payment of a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time the use could have been prohibited.

(c) If willful and malicious misappropriation exists, the court may award exemplary damages in an amount not exceeding twice any award made under subdivision (a) or (b).

■ "In general, '[a] person who has been unjustly enriched at the expense of another is required to make restitution to the other.' (Rest., Restitution, § 1.) 'Ordinarily the benefit to the one and the loss to the other are co-extensive, and the result ... is to compel the one to surrender the benefit which he has received and thereby to make restitution to the other for the loss which he has suffered.' [P] 'In other situations, a benefit has been received by the defendant but the plaintiff has not suffered a corresponding loss or, in some cases, any loss, but nevertheless the enrichment of the defendant would be unjust. In such cases, the defendant may be under a duty to give to the plaintiff the amount by which he has been enriched.' " (Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 627-628 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741])

■ Restatement of Restitution, section 1, comment a, states: "A person is enriched if he has received a benefit (see Comment b). A person is unjustly enriched if the retention of the benefit would be unjust (see Comment c)."

■ Restatement of Restitution, section 1, comment b, states: "What constitutes a benefit. A person confers a benefit upon another if he gives to the other possession of or some other interest in money, land, chattels, or choses in action, performs services beneficial to or at the request of the other, satisfies a debt or a duty of the other, or in any way adds to the other's security or advantage. He confers a benefit not only where he adds to the property of another, but also where he saves the other from expense or loss. The word 'benefit,' therefore, denotes any form of advantage. The advantage for which a person ordinarily must pay is pecuniary advantage; it is not, however, necessarily so limited, as where a physician attends an insensible person who is saved subsequent pain or who receives thereby a greater chance of living."

■ Restatement of Restitution, section 1, comment c, states: "Unjust retention of benefit. Even where a person has received a benefit from another, he is liable to pay therefor only if the circumstances of its receipt or retention are such that, as between the two persons, it is unjust for him to retain it. The mere fact that a person benefits another is not of itself sufficient to require the other to make restitution therefor. Thus, one who improves his own land ordinarily benefits his neighbors to some extent, and one who makes a gift or voluntarily pays money which he knows he does not owe confers a benefit; in neither case is he entitled to restitution. The Restatement of this Subject states the rules by which it is determined whether or not it is considered to be just to require restitution."

5-44 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4411

CACI 4411 Punitive Damages for Willful and Malicious Misappropriation

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s misappropriation caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed [name of plaintiff] and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

In order to recover punitive damages, [name of plaintiff] must prove [by clear and convincing evidence] that [name of defendant] acted willfully and maliciously. You must determine whether [name of defendant] acted willfully and maliciously, but you will not be asked to determine the amount of any punitive damages. I will calculate the amount later.

"Willfully" means that [name of defendant] acted with a purpose or willingness to commit the act or engage in the conduct in question, and the conduct was not reasonable under the circumstances at the time and was not undertaken in good faith.

"Maliciously" means that [name of defendant] acted with an intent to cause injury, or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard for the rights of others. "Despicable conduct" is conduct so vile, base, or wretched that it would be looked down on and despised by ordinary decent people. [Name of defendant] acted with knowing disregard if [he/she/it] was aware of the probable consequences of [his/her/its] conduct and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences.

New December 2007

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if there is evidence that the defendant acted willfully and maliciously, so as to support an award of punitive damages. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.3(c).)

No reported California state court case has addressed whether the jury or the court should decide whether any misappropriation was "willful and malicious," and if so, whether the finding must be made by clear and convincing evidence rather than a preponderance of the evidence. In *Ajaxo Inc. v. E*Trade Group Inc.* (2005) 135 Cal.App.4th 21, 66], the court affirmed a jury's finding by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant's misappropriation was willful and malicious. If the court decides to require the "clear and convincing" standard, include the bracketed language in the first paragraph and also give CACI No. 201, More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof.

Once the jury finds "willful and malicious" conduct, it appears that the court should decide the amount of punitive damages. (See Robert L. Cloud & Assocs. v. Mikesell (1999), 69 Cal.App.4th 1141, 1151, fn. 8 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 143]). This would be consistent with the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, on which the California Uniform Trade Secrets Act is based. (See Uniform Trade Secrets Act § 3, 2005 com. ["This provision follows federal patent law in leaving discretionary trebling to the judge even though there may be a jury, compare 35 U.S.C. Section 284 (1976)"].)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.3(c) provides: "If willful and malicious misappropriation exists, the court may award exemplary damages in an amount not exceeding twice any award made under subdivision (a) or (b)."

- Civil Code section 3426.4 provides: "If a claim of misappropriation is made in bad faith, a motion to terminate an injunction is made or resisted in bad faith, or willful and malicious misappropriation exists, the court may award reasonable attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party."

- "The court instructed the jury that 'willful' means 'a purpose or willingness to commit the act or engage in the conduct in question, and the conduct was not reasonable under the circumstances then present and was not undertaken in good faith.' Further, the court instructed the jury that 'malice' means 'conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard for the rights of others when the defendant is aware [of] the probable consequences of its conduct and willfully and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences. Despicable conduct is conduct which is so vile and wretched that it would be looked down upon and despised by ordinary decent people.' In addition, the court instructed the jury that a finding of willful and malicious misappropriation must be supported by clear and convincing evidence. [P] Our Supreme Court has recognized that malice may be proven either expressly by direct evidence probative of the existence of hatred or ill will, or by implication from indirect evidence from which the jury may draw inferences." (Ajaxo Inc., supra, 135 Cal.App.4th at pp. 66-67, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "The limitation on punitive damages under the UTSA to twice the compensatory damages does not create an equivalency between an award of punitive damages under the UTSA and an award of treble damages under another statutory scheme. ... While an award of treble damages is equally punitive in its effect, the computation of the penalty is strictly mechanical. In contrast, an award of punitive damages under the UTSA is subject to no fixed standard; the statute merely sets a cap on the amount of the award. The trial court retains wide discretion to set the amount anywhere between zero and two times the actual loss. (§ 3426.3, subd. (c).) Thus, evidence of the defendant's financial condition remains essential for evaluating whether the amount of punitive damages actually awarded is appropriate." (Robert L. Cloud & Assocs. supra, 69 Cal.App.4th at p. 1151, fn. 8.)

■ "In order to justify [attorney] fees under Civil Code section 3426.4, the court must find that a 'willful and malicious misappropriation' occurred. That requirement is satisfied, in our view, by the jury's determination, upon clear and convincing evidence, that defendants' acts of misappropriation were done with malice. This finding was necessary to the award of punitive damages which was made by the jury." (Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 34, 54 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 602] .)

CACI 4412 "Independent Economic Value" Explained

[Select short term to describe, e.g., Information] has independent economic value if it gives the owner an actual or potential business advantage over others who do not know the [e.g., information] and who could obtain economic value from its disclosure or use.

In determining whether [e.g., information] had actual or potential independent economic value because it was secret, you may consider the following:

(a) The extent to which [name of plaintiff] obtained or could obtain economic value from the [e.g., information] in keeping [it/them] secret;

(b) The extent to which others could obtain economic value from the [e.g., information] if [it were/they were] not secret;

(c) The amount of time, money, or labor that [name of plaintiff] expended in developing the [e.g., information];

(d) The amount of time, money, or labor that [would be/was] saved by a competitor who used the [e.g., information];

[(e) [Insert other applicable factors .]

The presence or absence of any one or more of these factors is not necessarily determinative.

Directions for Use

Give this instruction to further explain element 2 of CACI No. 4402, "Trade Secret" Defined.
Inapplicable factors may be omitted.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.1(d) provides:

"Trade secret" means information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that:

(1) Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and

(2) Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.

■ "[I]t is not true that evidence of 'some' helpfulness or usefulness, if credited, would compel a finding of independent economic value. The Restatement defines trade secret as business or technical information 'that is sufficiently valuable and secret to afford an actual or potential economic advantage over others.' (Rest.3d, Unfair Competition, § 39.) The advantage 'need not be great,' but must be 'more than trivial.' (Rest.3d, Unfair Competition, § 39, com. e, p. 430.) Merely stating that information was helpful or useful to another person in carrying out a specific activity, or that information of that type may save someone time, does not compel a factfinder to conclude that the particular information at issue was 'sufficiently valuable ... to afford an ... economic advantage over others.' (Rest.3d, Unfair Competition, § 39.) The factfinder is entitled to expect evidence from which it can form some solid sense of how useful the information is, e.g., how much time, money, or labor it would save, or at least that these savings would be 'more than trivial.' (Rest.3d, Unfair Competition, § 39, com. e.)" (Yield Dynamics, Inc. v. TEA Systems Corp. (2007) 154 Cal.App.4th 547, 564-565 [66 Cal.Rptr.3d 1] , original italics.)

■ "Moreover, it seems inherent in the requirement of value, as codified, that it is relevant to ask to whom the information may be valuable. The statute does not speak of value in the abstract, but of the value that is '[d]eriv[ed] ... from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use' In other words, the core inquiry is the value to the owner in keeping the information secret from persons who could exploit it to the relative disadvantage of the original owner." (Yield Dynamics, Inc., supra, 154 Cal.App.4th at p. 568 , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ " '[C]ourts are reluctant to protect customer lists to the extent they embody information which is "readily ascertainable" through public sources, such as business directories. On the other hand, where the employer has expended time and effort identifying customers with particular needs or characteristics, courts will prohibit former employees from using this information to capture a share of the market. Such lists are to be distinguished from mere identities and locations of customers where anyone could easily identify the entities as potential customers. As a general principle, the more difficult information is to obtain, and the more time and resources expended by an employer in gathering it, the more likely a court will find such information constitutes a trade secret.' " (San Jose Construction, Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1528, 1539-1540 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The requirement that a customer list must have economic value to qualify as a trade secret has been interpreted to mean that the secrecy of this information provides a business with a 'substantial business advantage.' In this respect, a customer list can be found to have economic value because its disclosure would allow a competitor to direct its sales efforts to those customers who have already shown a willingness to use a unique type of service or product as opposed to a list of people who only might be interested." (Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 1514, 1522 [66 Cal.Rptr. 2d 731] , internal citations omitted.)

[Name of defendant] did not misappropriate [name of plaintiff]'s trade secret[s] if [name of defendant] proves that the [select short term to describe, e.g., information] [was/were] readily ascertainable by proper means at the time of the alleged [acquisition/use/ [or] disclosure].

There is no fixed standard for determining what is "readily ascertainable by proper means." In general, information is readily ascertainable if it can be obtained, discovered, developed, or compiled without significant difficulty, effort, or expense. For example, information is readily ascertainable if it is available in trade journals, reference books, or published materials. On the other hand, the more difficult information is to obtain, and the more time and resources that must be expended in gathering it, the less likely it is that the information is readily ascertainable by proper means.

New December 2007; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

Give also CACI No. 4408, Improper Means of Acquiring Trade Secret.

One case has suggested in a footnote that in order for the defense to apply, the defendant must have actually obtained plaintiff's secrets through readily ascertainable means rather than improperly. (See ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1, 21-22, fn. 9 [286 Cal.Rptr. 518] .) Such a requirement would not constitute an affirmative defense but rather would be a denial of the improper-means element of the plaintiff's claim. (See 5 Witkin, California Procedure (4th ed. 1996) Pleadings, § 1081 [affirmative defense admits the truth of the essential allegations of the complaint].) Because the advisory committee believes that this is an affirmative defense, no such requirement has been included in this instruction. (See San Jose Construction, Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155

Cal.App.4th 1528, 1542-1543 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54] [triable issue of fact as to whether information was readily ascertainable, that is, whether defendant could have replicated it within short period of time].)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3426.1(d)(1) provides:

(d) "Trade secret" means information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that:

(1) Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use;

- "The Legislative Committee Comment [to Civ. Code, § 3426.1] further explains the original draft defined a trade secret in part as 'not being readily ascertainable by proper means' and that 'the assertion that a matter is readily ascertainable by proper means remains available as a defense to a claim of misappropriation. Information is readily ascertainable if it is available in trade journals, reference books, or published materials.' " (DVD Copy Control Assn., Inc. v. Bunner (2003) 31 Cal.4th 864, 899] , conc. opn. of Werdegarr, J.; see Legis. Comm. Comment (Senate), 1984 Addition.)

- "The focus of the first part of the statutory definition is on whether the information is generally known to or readily ascertainable by business competitors or others to whom the information would have some economic value. Information that is readily ascertainable by a business competitor derives no independent value from not being generally known." (Syngenta Crop Protection, Inc. v. Helliker (2006) 138 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1172 [42 Cal.Rptr.3d 191] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[Defendant] argues that even if reverse engineering ... did not actually occur, the binder contents were not trade secrets because they could have been reverse engineered--that is, they were readily ascertainable. ... Considering the length of time that each proposal took to create and finalize and the urgency with which four of the project owners impressed upon the prospective contractors to begin the work, we cannot overlook the possibility that the information was not readily ascertainable in the circumstances presented. ... Thus, a triable issue of fact exists as to whether the entire proposal for each project was indeed readily ascertainable--that is, whether [defendant] could have replicated each offer within the short period it claimed to have needed." (San Jose Construction, Inc., supra, 155 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1542-1543 , footnote omitted.)

- "While ease of ascertainability is irrelevant to the definition of a trade secret, 'the assertion that a matter is readily ascertainable by proper means remains available as a defense to a claim of misappropriation.' Therefore, if the defendants can convince the finder of fact at trial (1) that 'it is a virtual certainty that anyone who manufactures' certain types of products uses rubber rollers, (2) that the manufacturers of those products are easily identifiable, and (3) that the defendants' knowledge of the plaintiff's customers resulted from that identification process and not from the plaintiff's records, then the defendants may establish a defense to the misappropriation claim. That defense, however, will be based upon an absence of misappropriation, rather than the absence of a trade secret." (ABBA Rubber Co., supra, 235 Cal.App.3d at pp. 21-22, fn. 9 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he evidence established that [plaintiff]'s customer list and related information was the product of a substantial amount of time, expense and effort on the part of [plaintiff]. Moreover, the nature and character of the subject customer information, i.e., billing rates, key contacts, specialized requirements and markup rates, is sophisticated information and irrefutably of commercial value and not readily ascertainable to other competitors. Thus, [plaintiff's] customer list and related proprietary information satisfy the first prong of the definition of 'trade secret' under section 3426.1." (Courtesy Temporary Serv., Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1278, 1288 [272 Cal.Rptr. 352] .)

■ "In viewing the evidence presented in the light most favorable to the prevailing party, it is difficult to find a protectable trade secret as that term exists under Civil Code section 3426.1, subdivision (d). While the information sought to be protected here, that is lists of customers who operate manufacturing concerns and who need shipping supplies to ship their products to market, may not be generally known to the public, they certainly would be known or readily ascertainable to other persons in the shipping business. The compilation process in this case is neither sophisticated nor difficult nor particularly time consuming. The evidence presented shows that the shipping business is very competitive and that manufacturers will often deal with more than one company at a time. There is no evidence that all of appellant's competition comes from respondents' new employer. Obviously, all the competitors have secured the same information that appellant claims and, in all likelihood, did so in the same manner as appellant--a process described herein by respondents." (American Paper & Packaging Prods., Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1318, 1326 [228 Cal.Rptr. 713] .)

Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Importance of CACI No. 4420: This instruction should be used when defendant can demonstrate a legitimate source for the alleged trade secret other than from plaintiff. This instruction can be used by defense counsel to defend the misappropriation claim based on two similar but distinct defenses: (1) the defense that the trade secret information was legitimately acquired (CACI No. 4408), and (2) the defense that the information does not qualify as a trade secret under Civ. Code, § 3426.1(d). Accordingly, defense counsel submitting this instruction should consider doing so along with CACI No. 4402 and, as appropriate CACI Nos. 4403 and 4404. Conversely, plaintiff's counsel can use this instruction to underscore the difficulty of creating the trade secret in terms of the time, expense, and effort expended, thereby demonstrating the need for protection.

5-44 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 4421

CACI 4421 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Three-Year Limit (Civ. Code, § 3426.6)

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that the claimed misappropriation of [name of plaintiff]'s trade secrets occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing].

However, the lawsuit was still filed on time if [name of plaintiff] proves that before [insert date three years before date of filing], [he/she/it] did not discover, nor with reasonable diligence should have discovered, facts that would have caused a reasonable person to suspect that [name of defendant] had misappropriated [name of plaintiff]'s [select short term to describe, e.g., information].

New April 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the California Uniform Trade Secrets Act statute of limitations is at issue. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.6.) In an action in which the defendant is or was a customer of the initial misappropriator, modifications may be required. (See Cypress Semiconductor Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal.App.4th 575 [77 Cal.Rptr.3d 685] .)

It is not necessary that the plaintiff know the identity of the defendant in order to trigger the duty to discover. (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 587 .) Therefore, "[name of defendant]" in the last sentence will need to be modified if inquiry notice may have been triggered against an actual, but unidentified, misappropriator. (See Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 585 .)

This instruction places the burden on the plaintiff to prove that it did not know nor have any reason to suspect the misappropriation earlier than three years before filing. (See Civ. Code, § 3426.6.) This is the rule for the burden of proof under the nonstatutory delayed-discovery rule. (See Glue-Fold, Inc. v. Slautterback Corp. (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 1018, 1030 [98 Cal.Rptr.2d 661] ; CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery.) Certain statutes that have their own delayed discovery language (as does Civil Code section 3426.6) have been construed to place the burden on the defendant to prove that the plaintiff knew or should have suspected the facts giving rise to the cause of action earlier than the limitation date. (See, e.g., Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal.4th 1, 8-10 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701] [construing Code Civ. Proc., § 340.6 on legal malpractice]; CACI No. 610, Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Attorney Malpractice--One-Year Limit.) No court has construed Civil Code section 3426.6 to transfer the burden of proof on delayed discovery to the defendant, so presumably the burden of proof remains with the plaintiff under the nonstatutory rule.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code Section 3426.6 provides:

An action for misappropriation must be brought within three years after the misappropriation is discovered or by the exercise of reasonable diligence should have been discovered. For the purposes of this section, a continuing misappropriation constitutes a single claim.

- "The unanimous conclusion of courts considering the issue--i.e., from federal courts construing section 3426.6--is that it is the first discovered (or discoverable) misappropriation of a trade secret which commences the limitation period." (Glue-Fold, Inc., supra, 82 Cal.App.4th at p. 1026 .)
- "The statute is triggered when the plaintiff knows or has reason to know the third party has knowingly acquired, used, or disclosed its trade secrets." (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th 585 .)
- "[T]he misappropriation that triggers the running of the statute is that which the plaintiff suspects, not that which may or may not actually exist." (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 587 .)
- "[A] plaintiff may have more than one claim for misappropriation, each with its own statute of limitations, when more than one defendant is involved. This is different from saying that each misappropriation gives rise to a separate claim, which is what section 3426.6 precludes." (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 583 , original italics.)
- "A misappropriation within the meaning of the UTSA occurs not only at the time of the initial acquisition of the trade secret by wrongful means, but also with each misuse or wrongful disclosure of the secret. But a claim for misappropriation of a trade secret arises for a given plaintiff against a given defendant only once, at the time of the initial misappropriation, subject to the discovery rule provided in section 3426.6. Each new misuse or wrongful disclosure is viewed as augmenting a single claim of continuing misappropriation rather than as giving rise to a separate claim." (Cadence Design Systems, Inc. v. Avant! Corp. (2002) 29 Cal.4th 215, 223 [127 Cal.Rptr.2d 169, 57 P.3d 647] , original italics.)
- "It [is appropriate] to construe section 3426.6 as meaning that a cause of action for misappropriation against a third party defendant accrues with the plaintiff's discovery of that defendant's misappropriation. Any continuing misappropriation by that defendant constitutes a single claim." (Cypress Semiconductor

■ "If someone steals a trade secret and then sells it to a third party, when does the statute of limitations begin to run on any misappropriation claim the trade secret owner might have against the third party? ... We conclude that with respect to the element of knowledge, the statute of limitations on a cause of action for misappropriation begins to run when the plaintiff has any reason to suspect that the third party knows or reasonably should know that the information is a trade secret. The third party's actual state of mind does not affect the running of the statute." (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 579 , original italics.)

■ "We conclude that the trial court erred in ruling, under the stipulated facts, that the statute of limitations did not begin to run until August 2003, when [defendant] actually learned that the DynaSpice program contained [plaintiff]'s trade secrets. Rather, the question is: When did [plaintiff] first have any reason to suspect that a ... customer [of the initial misappropriator] had obtained or used DynaSpice knowing, or with reason to know, that the software contained [plaintiff]'s trade secrets?" (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 588 , original italics.)

■ "[I]t is not necessary that the plaintiff be able to identify the person or persons causing the harm. Since the identity of the defendant is not an element of a cause of action, the failure to discover the identity of the defendant does not postpone accrual of the cause of action. ' "Although never fully articulated, the rationale for distinguishing between ignorance" of the defendant and "ignorance" of the cause of action itself "appears to be premised on the commonsense assumption that once the plaintiff is aware of" the latter, he "normally" has "sufficient opportunity," within the "applicable limitations period," "to discover the identity" of the former.' In this case, therefore, the statute began to run when [plaintiff] had any reason to suspect that the CSI customers knew or should have known that they had acquired [plaintiff]'s trade secrets." (Cypress Semiconductor Corp., supra, 163 Cal.App.4th at p. 587 , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 50 California Judicial Council Concluding Instructions

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Concluding Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 5000 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Duties of the judge and jury [CACI No. 5000].
- Insurance [CACI No. 5001].
- Evidence [CACI No. 5002] and witnesses [CACI No. 5003].
- Service provider for juror with disability [CACI No. 5004].
- Multiple parties [CACI No. 5005] and nonperson party [CACI No. 5006].
- Removal of claims or parties [CACI No. 5007].
- Duty to abide by translation provided in court [CACI No. 5008].
- Predeliberation instructions [CACI No. 5009].
- Taking notes during the trial [CACI No. 5010].
- Reading back of trial testimony in jury room [CACI No. 5011].

- Introduction to special-verdict form [CACI No. 5012].
- Deadlocked jury admonition [CACI No. 5013].
- Substitution of alternate juror [CACI No. 5014].
- Instruction to alternate jurors [CACI No. 5015].
- Judge's commenting on the evidence [CACI No. 5016].
- Polling the jury [CACI No. 5017].

The concluding series also includes two general verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-5000, VF-5001].

Several of the instructions in the Concluding Series mirror instructions in the Pretrial Series [compare, e.g., CACI No. 107 with CACI No. 5003 (two instructions on witnesses)]. This was done to accommodate those judges that prefer to give these general instructions at the end of the booklet of instructions rather than at the beginning. An attorney need not request the giving of both the same introductory and concluding instructions. As the Advisory Committee recommends in the Directions for Use of the Concluding instructions, if the Concluding instructions are used they should be read to the jury before the reading of instructions on the substantive law.

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5000

CACI 5000 Duties of the Judge and Jury

Members of the jury, you have now heard all the evidence [and the closing arguments of the attorneys]. [The attorneys will have one last chance to talk to you in closing argument. But before they do, it] [It] is my duty to instruct you on the law that applies to this case. You must follow these instructions [as well as those that I previously gave you]. You will have a copy of my instructions with you when you go to the jury room to deliberate. [I have provided each of you with your own copy of the instructions.] [I will display each instruction on the screen.]

You must decide what the facts are. You must consider all the evidence and then decide what you think happened. You must decide the facts based on the evidence admitted in this trial. Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries, the Internet, or other reference materials. Do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments. Do not contact anyone to assist you, such as a family accountant, doctor, or lawyer. Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate. All jurors must see or hear the same evidence at the same time. [Do not read, listen to, or watch any news accounts of this trial.] You must not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.

I will now tell you the law that you must follow to reach your verdict. You must follow the law exactly as I give it to you, even if you disagree with it. If the attorneys [have said/say] anything different about what the law means, you must follow what I say.

In reaching your verdict, do not guess what I think your verdict should be from something I may have said or done.

Pay careful attention to all the instructions that I give you. All the instructions are important because together they state the law that you will use in this case. You must consider all of the instructions together.

After you have decided what the facts are, you may find that some instructions do not apply. In that case, follow the instructions that do apply and use them together with the facts to reach your verdict.

If I repeat any ideas or rules of law during my instructions, that does not mean that these ideas or rules are more important than the others. In addition, the order in which the instructions are given does not make any difference.

[Most of the instructions are typed. However, some handwritten or typewritten words may have been added, and some words may have been deleted. Do not discuss or consider why words may have been added or deleted. Please treat all the words the same, no matter what their format. Simply accept the instruction in its final form.]

Directions for Use

As indicated by the brackets in the first paragraph, this instruction can be read either before or after closing arguments. The advisory committee recommends that this instruction be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 608 provides that "[i]n charging the jury the court may state to them all matters of law which it thinks necessary for their information in giving their verdict." It also provides that the court "must inform the jury that they are the exclusive judges of all questions of fact." (See also Code Civ. Proc., § 592.)

- Evidence Code section 312(a) provides that "[e]xcept as otherwise provided by law, where the trial is by jury [a]ll questions of fact are to be decided by the jury."

- An instruction to disregard any appearance of bias on the part of the judge is proper. (Gist v. French (1955) 136 Cal.App.2d 247, 257-259 [288 P.2d 1003] , disapproved on other grounds in Deshotel v. Atchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 664, 667 [328 P.2d 449] and West v. City of San Diego (1960) 54 Cal.2d 469, 478-479 [6 Cal.Rptr. 289, 353 P.2d 929] .)

- Jurors must avoid bias: "The right to unbiased and unprejudiced jurors is an inseparable and inalienable part of the right to trial by jury guaranteed by the constitution." (Weathers v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1971) 5 Cal.3d 98, 110 [95 Cal.Rptr. 516, 485 P.2d 1132] , internal citations omitted.) Evidence of racial prejudice and bias on the part of jurors amounts to misconduct and may constitute grounds for ordering a new trial. (Ibid.)

- An instruction to consider all the instructions together can help avoid instructional errors of conflict, omission, and undue emphasis. (Escamilla v. Marshburn Brothers (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 472, 484 [121 Cal.Rptr. 891] .)

- Providing an instruction stating that, depending on what the jury finds to be the facts, some of the instructions may not apply can help avoid reversal on the grounds of misleading jury instructions. (See Rodgers v. Kemper Construction Co. (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 608, 629-630 [124 Cal.Rptr. 143] .)

■ In Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal.3d 43, 57-59 [118 Cal.Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608], the Supreme Court held that the giving of cautionary instructions stating that no undue emphasis was intended by repetition and that the judge did not intend to imply how any issue should be decided, ought to be considered in weighing the net effect of the instructions on the jury.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Giving Instructions Before Closing Has

Advantages: Instructions can be given before or after closing argument. Many trial lawyers prefer to have the instructions read to the jury before closing argument. This enables the lawyer to use the instructions in the closing argument. Important instructions can also be displayed to the jury through enlargements or power point presentations if the instructions are given before the closing. Some judges, however, will always give the instructions at the end of trial. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

CACI 5001 Insurance

You must not consider whether any of the parties in this case has insurance. The presence or absence of insurance is totally irrelevant. You must decide this case based only on the law and the evidence.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004

If this instruction is used, the advisory committee recommends that it be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law.

- Evidence Code section 1155 provides: "Evidence that a person was, at the time a harm was suffered by another, insured wholly or partially against loss arising from liability for that harm is inadmissible to prove negligence or other wrongdoing."

- As a rule, evidence that the defendant has insurance is both irrelevant and prejudicial to the defendant. (Neumann v. Bishop (1976) 59 Cal.App.3d 451, 469 [130 Cal.Rptr. 786] .)

- Generally, evidence that the plaintiff was insured is not admissible under the "collateral source rule." (Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1, 16-18 [84 Cal.Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61] ; Acosta v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 19, 25-26 [84 Cal.Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72] .)

- Evidence of insurance coverage may be admissible where it is coupled with other relevant evidence, provided that the probative value of the other evidence outweighs the prejudicial effect of the mention of insurance. (Blake v. E. Thompson Petroleum Repair Co., Inc. (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 823, 831 [216

Cal.Rptr. 568] .)

■ An instruction to disregard whether a party has insurance may, in some cases, cure the effect of counsel's improper reference to insurance. (Sally v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1972) 23 Cal.App.3d 806, 814 [100 Cal.Rptr. 501] .)

There is no point in raising the subject of insurance for the first time and then telling the jury to disregard it. CHAPTER 50 California Judicial Council Concluding Instructions

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5002

CACI 5002 Evidence

Sworn testimony, documents, or anything else may be admitted into evidence. You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you have seen or heard during the trial, including any exhibits that I admit into evidence. You may not consider as evidence anything that you saw or heard when court was not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys, or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. In their opening statements and closing arguments, the attorneys talk to you about the law and the evidence. What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence.

The attorneys' questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses' answers are evidence. You should not think that something is true just because an attorney's question suggested that it was true. [However, the attorneys for both sides have agreed that certain facts are true. This agreement is called a stipulation. No other proof is needed and you must accept those facts as true in this trial.]

Each side had the right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I sustained an objection to a question, you must ignore the question. If the witness did not answer, you must not guess what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection. If the witness already answered, you must ignore the answer.

[During the trial I granted a motion to strike testimony that you heard. You must totally disregard that testimony. You must treat it as though it did not exist.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, February 2007

The advisory committee recommends that this instruction be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law. For a similar instruction to be given before trial, see CACI No. 106, Evidence.

Include the bracketed language in the third paragraph if the parties have entered into any stipulations of fact.

Read the last bracketed paragraph if a motion to strike testimony was granted during the trial.

■ Evidence Code section 140 defines "evidence" as "testimony, writings, material objects, or other things presented to the senses that are offered to prove the existence or nonexistence of a fact."

■ Evidence Code section 312 provides:

Except as otherwise provided by law, where the trial is by jury:

(a) All questions of fact are to be decided by the jury.

(b) Subject to the control of the court, the jury is to determine the effect and value of the evidence addressed to it, including the credibility of witnesses and hearsay declarants.

■ Evidence Code section 353 provides:

A verdict or finding shall not be set aside, nor shall the judgment or decision based thereon be reversed by reason of the erroneous admission of evidence unless:

(a) There appears of record an objection to or a motion to exclude or to strike the evidence that was timely made and so stated as to make clear the specific ground of the objection or motion; and

(b) The court which passes upon the effect of the error or errors is of the opinion that the admitted evidence should have been excluded on the ground stated and that the error or errors complained of resulted in a miscarriage of justice.

■ A stipulation in proper form is binding on the parties if it is within the authority of the attorney. Properly stipulated facts may not be contradicted. (Palmer v. City of Long Beach (1948) 33 Cal.2d 134, 141-142 [199 P.2d 952] .)

■ Courts have held that "attempts to suggest matters of an evidentiary nature to a jury other than by the legitimate introduction into evidence is misconduct whether by questions on cross-examination, argument or other means." (Smith v. Covell (1980) 100 Cal.App.3d 947, 960 [161 Cal.Rptr. 377] .)

■ Courts have stated that "[t]he right to object on appeal to misconduct or improper argument, even when prejudicial, is generally waived in the absence of a proper objection and request the jury be admonished." (Atkins v. Bisigier (1971) 16 Cal.App.3d 414, 427 [94 Cal.Rptr. 49] ; Horn v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1964) 61 Cal.2d 602, 610 [39 Cal.Rptr. 721, 394 P.2d 561] .)

In Joyce v. Simi Valley Unified School Dist. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 292, 305-306 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 712], the plaintiff's attorney at trial remarked about an off-site incident in final argument. The trial court sustained an objection and directed the jury to ignore the remarks. The trial court instructed the jury that the statements of counsel were not evidence and to decide all questions of fact from the evidence received at trial and not from any other source. The admonishment cured any prejudice and a motion for a new trial was denied.

CHAPTER 50 California Judicial Council Concluding Instructions

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5003

CACI 5003 Witnesses

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part, or none of a witness's testimony.

In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) How well did the witness see, hear, or otherwise sense what he or she described in court?
- (b) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?
- (c) How did the witness look, act, and speak while testifying?
- (d) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? Did the witness show any bias or prejudice? Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case? Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?
- (e) What was the witness's attitude toward this case or about giving testimony?

Sometimes a witness may say something that is not consistent with something else he or she said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember. Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider these differences, but do not decide that testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said. On the other hand, if you think the witness testified untruthfully about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true, the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin, [or] socioeconomic status[, or [insert any other impermissible form of bias]].

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, April 2007

This instruction may be given as either an introductory instruction before trial (see CACI No. 107) or as a concluding instruction.

The advisory committee recommends that this instruction be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law.

In the last paragraph, the court may delete inapplicable categories of potential jury bias.

■ Evidence Code section 312 provides:

Except as otherwise provided by law, where the trial is by jury:

- (a) All questions of fact are to be decided by the jury.
- (b) Subject to the control of the court, the jury is to determine the effect and value of the evidence addressed to it, including the credibility of witnesses and hearsay declarants.

■ Considerations for evaluating the credibility of witnesses are contained in Evidence Code section 780:

Except as otherwise provided by statute, the court or jury may consider in determining the credibility of a witness any matter that has any tendency in reason to prove or disprove the truthfulness of his testimony at the hearing, including but not limited to any of the following:

- (a) His demeanor while testifying and the manner in which he testifies.
- (b) The character of his testimony.
- (c) The extent of his capacity to perceive, to recollect, or to communicate any matter about which he testifies.
- (d) The extent of his opportunity to perceive any matter about which he testifies.
- (e) His character for honesty or veracity or their opposites.
- (f) The existence or nonexistence of a bias, interest, or other motive.
- (g) A statement previously made by him that is consistent with his testimony at the hearing.

- (h) A statement made by him that is inconsistent with any part of his testimony at the hearing.
- (i) The existence or nonexistence of any fact testified to by him.
- (j) His attitude toward the action in which he testifies or toward the giving of testimony.
- (k) His admission of untruthfulness.

■ Evidence Code section 411 provides that "[e]xcept where additional evidence is required by statute, the direct evidence of one witness who is entitled to full credit is sufficient proof of any fact." According to former Code of Civil Procedure section 2061, the jury should be instructed that "they are not bound to decide in conformity with the declarations of any number of witnesses, which do not produce conviction in their minds, against a less number or against a presumption or other evidence satisfying their minds."

■ The willfully false witness instruction was formerly codified at Code of Civil Procedure section 2061. This statute was repealed in 1965 to avoid giving undue emphasis to this rule compared to other common-law rules. Refusal to give an instruction on this point is not error: "It should certainly not be deemed of vital importance to tell the ordinary man of the world that he should distrust the statements of a witness whom he believes to be a liar." (Wallace v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1930) 105 Cal.App. 664, 671 [288 P. 834] .)

■ Standard 10.20(a)(2) of the Standards for Judicial Administration provides: "In all courtroom proceedings, refrain from engaging in conduct and prohibit others from engaging in conduct that exhibits bias, including but not limited to bias based on disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, and sexual orientation, whether that bias is directed toward counsel, court personnel, witnesses, parties, jurors, or any other participants."

■ Canon 3(b)(5) of the Code of Judicial Ethics provides: "A judge shall perform judicial duties without bias or prejudice. A judge shall not, in the performance of judicial duties, engage in speech, gestures, or other conduct that would reasonably be perceived as (1) bias or prejudice, including but not limited to bias or prejudice based on race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation, or socioeconomic status, or (2) sexual harassment." Canon 3(b)(6) requires the judge to impose these standards on attorneys also.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Witness Credibility: This is the standard instruction on witness credibility. If your case contains some inconsistencies in testimony or documents, you may want to emphasize the statement in the instruction that inconsistencies are not uncommon. On the other hand, if there is evidence that your witness deliberately testified untruthfully, the impact on your case can be devastating, particularly if the witness is a party to the action. However, that scenario will aid you if the other side's witnesses have this problem. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

- Code of Civil Procedure section 203(a)(6) provides: "All persons are eligible and qualified to be prospective trial jurors, except the following: ... Persons who are not possessed of sufficient knowledge of the English language, provided that no person shall be deemed incompetent solely because of the loss of sight or hearing in any degree or other disability which impedes the person's ability to communicate or which impairs or interferes with the person's mobility."

- Code of Civil Procedure section 224 provides:

- (a) If a party does not cause the removal by challenge of an individual juror who is deaf, hearing impaired, blind, visually impaired, or speech impaired and who requires auxiliary services to facilitate communication, the party shall (1) stipulate to the presence of a service provider in the jury room during jury deliberations, and (2) prepare and deliver to the court proposed jury instructions to the service provider.

(b) As used in this section, "service provider" includes, but is not limited to, a person who is a sign language interpreter, oral interpreter, deaf-blind interpreter, reader, or speech interpreter. If auxiliary services are required during the course of jury deliberations, the court shall instruct the jury and the service provider that the service provider for the juror with a disability is not to participate in the jury's deliberations in any manner except to facilitate communication between the juror with a disability and other jurors.

(c) The court shall appoint a service provider whose services are needed by a juror with a disability to facilitate communication or participation. A sign language interpreter, oral interpreter, or deaf-blind interpreter appointed pursuant to this section shall be a qualified interpreter, as defined in subdivision (f) of Section 754 of the Evidence Code. Service providers appointed by the court under this subdivision shall be compensated in the same manner as provided in subdivision (i) of Section 754 of the Evidence Code.

Directions for Use

If this instruction is used, the advisory committee recommends that it be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law.

The CACI instructions require the use of party names rather than party-status words like "plaintiff" and "defendant." In multiparty cases, it is important to name only the parties in each instruction to whom the instruction applies. For example, an instruction on loss of consortium (see CACI No. 3920) will not apply to all plaintiffs. Instructions on vicarious liability (see CACI No. 3700 et seq.) will not apply to all defendants. Unless all or nearly all of the instructions will apply to all of the parties, give the first option for the last paragraph.

■ "We realize, of course, that multiple defendants are involved and that each defendant is entitled to instructions on, and separate consideration of, every defense available and applicable to it. CHAPTER 50 California Judicial Council Concluding Instructions

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5009

CACI 5009 Predeliberation Instructions

When you go to the jury room, the first thing you should do is choose a presiding juror. The presiding juror should see to it that your discussions are orderly and that everyone has a fair chance to be heard.

It is your duty to talk with one another in the jury room and to consider the views of all the jurors. Each of you must decide the case for yourself, but only after you have considered the evidence with the other members of the jury. Feel free to change your mind if you are convinced that your position should be different. You should all try to agree. But do not give up your honest beliefs just because the others think differently.

Please do not state your opinions too strongly at the beginning of your deliberations or immediately announce how you plan to vote as it may interfere with an open discussion. Keep an open mind so that you and your fellow jurors can easily share ideas about the case.

You should use your common sense, but do not use or consider any special training or unique personal experience that any of you have in matters involved in this case. Your training or experience is not a part of the evidence received in this case.

Sometimes jurors disagree or have questions about the evidence or about what the witnesses said in their testimony. If that happens, you may ask to have testimony read back to you [or ask to see any exhibits admitted into evidence that have not already been provided to you]. Also, jurors may need further explanation about the laws that apply to the case. If this happens during your discussions, write down your questions and give them to the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant]. I will talk with the attorneys before I answer so it may take some time. You should continue your deliberations while you wait for my answer. I will do my best to answer them. When you write me a note, do not tell me how you voted on an issue until I ask for this information in open court.

[At least nine jurors must agree on a verdict. When you have finished filling out the form, your presiding juror must write the date and sign it at the bottom and then notify the [bailiff/clerk/court attendant] that you are ready to present your verdict in the courtroom.]

Your decision must be based on your personal evaluation of the evidence presented in the case. Each of you may be asked in open court how you voted on each question.

While I know you would not do this, I am required to advise you that you must not base your decision on chance, such as a flip of a coin. If you decide to award damages, you may not agree in advance to simply add up the amounts each juror thinks is right and then make the average your verdict.

You may take breaks, but do not discuss this case with anyone, including each other, until all of you are back in the jury room.

Directions for Use

The advisory committee recommends that this instruction be read to the jury after closing arguments and after reading instructions on the substantive law.

Read the sixth paragraph if a general verdict form is to be used. If a special verdict will be used, give CACI No. 5012, Introduction to Special Verdict Form.

Judges may want to provide each juror with a copy of the verdict form so that the jurors can use it to keep track of how they vote. Jurors can be instructed that this copy is for their personal use only and that the presiding juror will be given the official verdict form to record the jury's decision. Judges may also want to advise jurors that they may be polled in open court regarding their individual verdicts.

Delete the reference to reading back testimony if the proceedings are not being recorded.

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 613 provides, in part: "When the case is finally submitted to the jury, they may decide in court or retire for deliberation; if they retire, they must be kept together, in some convenient place, under charge of an officer, until at least three-fourths of them agree upon a verdict or are discharged by the court."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 614 provides: "After the jury have retired for deliberation, if there be a disagreement between them as to any part of the testimony, or if they desire to be informed of any point of law arising in the cause, they may require the officer to conduct them into court. Upon their being brought into court, the information required must be given in the presence of, or after notice to, the parties or counsel."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 618 and article I, section 16, of the California Constitution provide that three-fourths of the jurors must agree to a verdict in a civil case.

■ The prohibition on chance or quotient verdict is stated in Code of Civil Procedure section 657, which provides that a verdict may be vacated and a new trial ordered "whenever any one or more of the jurors have been induced to assent to any general or special verdict, or to a finding on any question submitted to them by the court, by a resort to the determination of chance." (See also Chronakis v. Windsor (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1058, 1064-1065 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 106] .)

■ The jurors may properly be advised of the duty to hear and consider each other's arguments with open minds, rather than preventing agreement by stubbornly sticking to their first impressions. (Cook v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1939) 13 Cal.2d 591, 594 [91 P.2d 118] .)

■ "The trial court properly denied the motion for new trial on the ground that [the plaintiff] did not demonstrate the jury reached a chance or quotient verdict. The jury agreed on a high and a low figure and, before calculating an average, they further agreed to adjust downward the high figure and to adjust upward the low figure. There is no evidence that this average was adopted without further consideration or that the jury agreed at any time to adopt an average and abide by the agreement without further discussion or deliberation." CACI 5010 Taking Notes During the Trial

If you have taken notes during the trial, you may take your notebooks with you into the jury room.

You may use your notes only to help you remember what happened during the trial. Your independent recollection of the evidence should govern your verdict. You should not allow yourself to be influenced by the notes of other jurors if those notes differ from what you remember.

At the end of the trial, your notes will be [collected and destroyed/collected and retained by the court but not as a part of the case record/ [specify other disposition]].

New April 2004; Revised February 2005, April 2007, December 2007

Directions for Use

If CACI No. 102, Taking Notes During the Trial, is given as a pretrial instruction, the court may also give this instruction as a concluding instruction.

In the last paragraph, specify the court's disposition of the notes after trial. No statute or rule of court requires any particular disposition.

Sources and Authority

- Rule 2.1031 of the California Rules of Court provides: "Jurors must be permitted to take written notes in all civil and criminal trials. At the beginning of a trial, a trial judge must inform jurors that they may take written notes during the trial. The court must provide materials suitable for this purpose."

■ "Because of [the risks of note-taking], a number of courts have held that a cautionary instruction is required. For example, [one court] held that the instruction should include 'an explanation ... that [jurors] should not permit their note-taking to distract them from the ongoing proceedings; that their notes are only an aid to their memory and should not take precedence over their independent recollection; that those jurors who do not take notes should rely on their independent recollection of the evidence and not be influenced by the fact that another juror has taken notes; and that the notes are for the note taker's own personal use in refreshing his recollection of the evidence. The jury must be reminded that should any discrepancy exist between their recollection of the evidence and their notes, they should request that the record of the proceedings be read back and that it is the transcript that must prevail over their notes.' " (People v. Whitt (1984) 36 Cal.3d 724, 747 [205 Cal.Rptr. 810, 685 P.2d 1161] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "In People v. Whitt, we recognized the risks inherent in juror note-taking and observed that it is 'the better practice' for courts to give, sua sponte, a cautionary instruction on note-taking. Although the ideal instruction would advert specifically to all the dangers of note-taking, we found the less complete instruction given in Whitt to be adequate: 'Be careful as to the amount of notes that you take. I'd rather that you observe the witness, observe the demeanor of that witness, listen to how that person testifies rather than taking copious notes [I]f you do not recall exactly as to what a witness might have said or you disagree, for instance, during the deliberation [sic] as to what a witness may have said, we can reread that transcript back ' " (People v. Silbertson (1985) 41 Cal.3d 296, 303 [221 Cal.Rptr. 152, 709 P.2d 1321] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

CACI 5011 Reading Back of Trial Testimony in Jury Room

You may request in writing that trial testimony be read to you. I will have the court reporter read the testimony to you. You may request that all or a part of a witness's testimony be read.

Your request should be as specific as possible. It will be helpful if you can state:

- 1. The name of the witness;
- 2. The subject of the testimony you would like to have read; and
- 3. The name of the attorney or attorneys asking the questions when the testimony was given.

The court reporter is not permitted to talk with you when she or he is reading the testimony you have requested.

While the court reporter is reading the testimony, you may not deliberate or discuss the case.

You may not ask the court reporter to read testimony that was not specifically mentioned in a written request. If your notes differ from the testimony, you must accept the court reporter's record as accurate.

New April 2004; Revised February 2005

The read-back should not be conducted in the jury room unless the attorneys stipulate to that location.

● Code of Civil Procedure section 614 provides: "After the jury have retired for deliberation, if there be a disagreement between them as to any part of the testimony, or if they desire to be informed of any point of law arising in the cause, they may require the officer to conduct them into court. Upon their being brought into court, the information required must be given in the presence of, or after notice to, the parties or counsel."

■ "Section 614 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that if there is a disagreement among jurors during their deliberations as to any part of the testimony which they have heard they may return into court and secure from the court in the presence of counsel for all parties the desired information as to the record. If they ask for testimony relating to a specified subject, they are entitled to hear all of it. However, it is equally clear that the trial judge does not have to order read any part of the record which is not thus requested by the jury foreman." (McGuire v. W. A. Thompson Distributing Co. (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 356, 365-366 [30 Cal.Rptr. 113] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Appellants assign as error the court's refusal to comply with their counsel's request for testimony reading. It was not. It is not the party to whom the law gives the right to select testimony to be read. And the law does not make the party or his attorney the arbiter to determine the jury's wishes." (*Asplund v. CACI 5012 Introduction to Special Verdict Form

I will give you [a] verdict form[s] with questions you must answer. I have already instructed you on the law that you are to use in answering these questions. You must follow my instructions and the form[s] carefully. You must consider each question separately. Although you may discuss the evidence and the issues to be decided in any order, you must answer the questions on the verdict form[s] in the order they appear. After you answer a question, the form tells you what to do next. All 12 of you must deliberate on and answer each question. At least 9 of you must agree on an answer before all of you can move on to the next question. However, the same 9 or more people do not have to agree on each answer.

When you have finished filling out the form[s], your presiding juror must write the date and sign it at the bottom [of the last page] and then notify the [bailiff/clerk/court attendant] that you are ready to present your verdict in the courtroom.

Directions for Use

If this instruction is read, do not read the sixth paragraph of CACI No. 5009, Predeliberation Instructions.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 624 provides: "The verdict of a jury is either general or special. A general verdict is that by which they pronounce generally upon all or any of the issues, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant; a special verdict is that by which the jury find the facts only, leaving the judgment to the Court. The special verdict must present the conclusions of fact as established by the evidence, and not the evidence to prove them; and those conclusions of fact must be so presented as that nothing shall remain to the Court but to draw from them conclusions of law."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 625 provides: "In all cases the court may direct the jury to find a special verdict in writing, upon all, or any of the issues, and in all cases may instruct them, if they render a general verdict, to find upon particular questions of fact, to be stated in writing, and may direct a written finding thereon. In all cases in which the issue of punitive damages is presented to the jury the court shall direct the jury to find a special verdict in writing separating punitive damages from compensatory damages. The special verdict or finding must be filed with the clerk and entered upon the minutes. Where a special finding of facts is inconsistent with the general verdict, the former controls the latter, and the court must give judgment accordingly."

■ "A special verdict presents to the jury each ultimate fact in the case, so that 'nothing shall remain to the Court but to draw from them conclusions of law.' This procedure presents certain problems: 'The requirement that the jury must resolve every controverted issue is one of the recognized pitfalls of special verdicts. '[T]he possibility of a defective or incomplete special verdict, or possibly no verdict at all, is much greater than with a general verdict that is tested by special findings ... ' ' ' With a special verdict, we do not imply findings on all issues in favor of the prevailing party, as with a general verdict. The verdict's correctness must be analyzed as a matter of law." (Trujillo v. North County Transit Dist. (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 280, 285 [73 Cal.Rptr.2d 596] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "When a jury is composed of 12 persons, it is sufficient if any nine jurors arrive at each special verdict, regardless of the jurors' votes on other special verdict questions." (Keener v. Jeld-Wen, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal.4th 247, 255 [92 Cal.Rptr.3d 862, 206 P.3d 403] , original italics.)

■ "Appellate courts differ concerning the use of special verdicts. In one case the court said, 'we should utilize opportunities to force counsel into requesting special verdicts.' In contrast, a more recent decision included the negative view: 'Toward this end we advise that special findings be requested of juries only when there is a compelling need to do so. Absent strong reason to the contrary their use should be discouraged.' Obviously, it is easier to tell after the fact, rather than before, whether the special verdict is helpful in disclosing the jury conclusions leading to the end result." (All-West Design, Inc. v. Boozer (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1212, 1221 [228 Cal.Rptr. 736] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]e begin with the requirement that at least nine of twelve jurors agree that each element of a cause of action has been proved by a preponderance of the evidence. The elements of a cause of action constitute the essential or ultimate facts in a civil case comparable to the elements of a single, discrete criminal offense in a criminal case. Analogizing a civil 'cause of action' to a single, discrete criminal offense, and applying the criminal law jury agreement principles to civil law, we conclude that jurors need not agree from among a number of alternative acts which act is proved, so long as the jurors agree that each element of the cause of action is proved." (Stoner v. Williams (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 986, 1002 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 243] , footnote omitted.)

■ "In civil cases in which there exist multiple causes of action for which multiple or alternative acts could support elements of more than one cause of action, possible jury confusion could result as to whether a specific cause of action is proved. In those cases, ... we presume that jury instructions may be appropriate to inform the jury that it must agree on specific elements of each specific cause of action. Yet, this still does not require that the jurors agree on exactly how each particular element of a particular cause of action is proved." (Stoner, supra, 46 Cal.App.4th at p. 1002 .)

■ "[A] juror who dissented from a special verdict finding negligence should not be disqualified from fully participating in the jury's further deliberations, including the determination of proximate cause. The jury is to determine all questions submitted to it, and when the jury is composed of twelve persons, each should participate as to each verdict submitted to it. To hold that a juror may be disqualified by a special verdict on negligence from participation in the next special verdict would deny the parties of 'the right to a jury of 12 persons deliberating on all issues.' Permitting any nine jurors to arrive at each special verdict best serves the purpose of less-than-unanimous verdicts, overcoming minor disagreements and avoiding costly mistrials. Once nine jurors have found a party negligent, dissenting jurors can accept the finding and participate in determining proximate cause just as they may participate in apportioning liability, and we may not assume that the dissenting jurors will violate their oaths to deliberate honestly and conscientiously on the proximate cause issue." (Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 676, 682 [205 Cal.Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Pay Attention to Potential Inconsistencies in Special Verdict Form: If a special verdict form is used, counsel should give special attention to the possibility of inconsistencies. Many times counsel simply assume that the jury will answer the special verdict form in the manner requested by one side or the other. However, a jury may come up with its own unique combination of answers that produces an inconsistency. If the inconsistency cannot be reconciled, the verdict can be set aside. Accordingly, counsel should examine the special verdict form with an eye to potential inconsistencies. Do not underestimate the potential confusion. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Large Illustration of Special Verdict Form: Try to use a blown-up version of the special verdict form during your closing argument and address each question with the jury at that time. When it comes time to deliberate, the jury will be more at ease with the verdict form since they have already seen it and you will have given them a clear and concise idea of what your client is requesting. By Dona Cohn-Payne

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5013

CACI 5013 Deadlocked Jury Admonition

You should reach a verdict if you reasonably can. You have spent time trying to reach a verdict and this case is important to the parties.

Please carefully consider the opinions of all the jurors, including those with whom you disagree. Keep an open mind and feel free to change your opinion if you become convinced that it is wrong.

You should not, however, surrender your beliefs concerning the truth and the weight of the evidence. Each of you must decide the case for yourself and not merely go along with the conclusions of your fellow jurors.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004

- Rule 2.1036 of the California Rules of Court provides:

(a) Determination

After a jury reports that it has reached an impasse in its deliberations, the trial judge may, in the presence of counsel, advise the jury of its duty to decide the case based on the evidence while keeping an open mind and talking about the evidence with each other. The judge should ask the jury if it has specific concerns which, if resolved, might assist the jury in reaching a verdict.

(b) Possible further action

If the trial judge determines that further action might assist the jury in reaching a verdict, the judge may:

- (1) Give additional instructions;
- (2) Clarify previous instructions;
- (3) Permit attorneys to make additional closing arguments; or
- (4) Employ any combination of these measures.

■ "The court told the jury they should reach a verdict if they reasonably could; they should not surrender their conscious convictions of the truth and the weight of the evidence; each juror must decide the case for himself and not merely acquiesce in the conclusion of his fellows; the verdict should represent the opinion of each individual juror; and in reaching a verdict each juror should not violate his individual judgment and conscience. These remarks clearly outweighed any offensive portions of the charge. The court did not err in giving the challenged instruction." (Inouye v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 648, 652 [179 Cal.Rptr. 13] .)

■ "A trial court may properly advise a jury of the importance of arriving at a verdict and of the duty of individual jurors to hear and consider each other's arguments with open minds, rather than to prevent agreement by obstinate adherence to first impressions. But, as the exclusive right to agree or not to agree rests with the jury, the judge may not tell them that they must agree nor may he harry their deliberations by coercive threats or disparaging remarks." (Cook v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1939) 13 Cal.2d 591, 594 [91 P.2d 118] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Only when the instruction has coerced the jurors into surrendering their conscientious convictions in order to reach agreement should the verdict be overturned." (Inouye v. Pacific Southwest Airlines, supra, 126 Cal.App.3d at p. 651 .)

■ "The instruction says if the jury did not reach a verdict, the case would have to be retried. It also says the jurors should listen with deference to the arguments and distrust their own judgment if they find a large majority taking a different view of the case. In a criminal case the mere presence of these remarks in a jury instruction is error. However, civil cases are subject to different considerations; the special protections given criminal defendants are absent." (Inouye v. Pacific Southwest Airlines, supra, 126 Cal.App.3d at p. 651 , internal citation omitted.)

CACI 5014 Substitution of Alternate Juror

One of your fellow jurors has been excused and an alternate juror has been selected to take [his/her] place. The alternate juror must be given the opportunity to participate fully in your deliberations. Therefore, you must set aside and disregard all past deliberations and begin your deliberations all over again.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004

■ "Deliberations provide the jury with the opportunity to review the evidence in light of the perception and memory of each member. Equally important in shaping a member's viewpoint are the personal reactions and interactions as any individual juror attempts to persuade others to accept his or her viewpoint. The result is a balance easily upset if a new juror enters the decision-making process after the 11 others have commenced deliberations." (People v. Collins (1976) 17 Cal.3d 687, 693 [131 Cal.Rptr. 782, 552 P.2d 742] .)

■ "We agree with plaintiff that the principles set forth in Collins apply to civil as well as criminal cases. The right to a jury trial in civil cases is also guaranteed by article I, section 16 of the California Constitution, and the provisions of the statute governing the substitution of jurors in civil cases are the same as the ones governing criminal cases. The same considerations require that each juror engage in all of the jury's deliberations in both criminal and civil cases. The requirement that at least nine persons reach a verdict is not met unless those nine reach their consensus through deliberations which are the common experience of all of them. Accordingly, we construe section 605 [now 234] of the Code of Civil Procedure to require that the court instruct the jury to disregard all past deliberations and begin deliberating anew when an alternate juror is substituted after jury deliberations have begun." CACI 5015 Instruction to Alternate Jurors

As alternate jurors, you are bound by the same rules that govern the conduct of the jurors who are sitting on the panel. You should not form or express any opinion about this case until after you have been substituted in for one of the deliberating jurors on the panel or until the jury has been discharged.

New February 2005

If an alternate juror is substituted, see CACI No. 5014, Substitution of Alternate Juror.

- "Alternate jurors are members of the jury panel which tries the case. They are selected at the same time as the regular jurors. They take the same oath and are subject to the same qualifications as the regular jurors. Alternate jurors hear the same evidence and are subject to the same admonitions as the regular jurors and, unless excused by the court, are available to participate as regular jurors." (Rivera v. Sassoon (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1045, 1048 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 144] , internal citations omitted.)

- Code of Civil Procedure section 234 provides:

Whenever, in the opinion of a judge of a superior court about to try a civil or criminal action or proceeding, the trial is likely to be a protracted one, or upon stipulation of the parties, the court may cause an entry to that effect to be made in the minutes of the court and thereupon, immediately after the jury is impaneled and sworn, the court may direct the calling of one or more additional jurors, in its discretion, to be known as "alternate jurors."

These alternate jurors shall be drawn from the same source, and in the same manner, and have the same qualifications, as the jurors already sworn, and shall be subject to the same examination and challenges. However, each side, or each defendant, as provided in Section 231, shall be entitled to as many peremptory challenges to the alternate jurors as there are alternate jurors called.

The alternate jurors shall be seated so as to have equal power and facilities for seeing and hearing the proceedings in the case, and shall take the same oath as the jurors already selected, and shall, unless excused by the court, attend at all times upon the trial of the cause in company with the other jurors, but shall not participate in deliberation unless ordered by the court, and for a failure to do so are liable to be punished for contempt.

They shall obey the orders of and be bound by the admonition of the court, upon each adjournment of the court; but if the regular jurors are ordered to be kept in the custody of the sheriff or marshal during the trial of the cause, the alternate jurors shall also be kept in confinement with the other jurors; and upon final submission of the case to the jury, the alternate jurors shall be kept in the custody of the sheriff or marshal who shall not suffer any communication to be made to them except by order of the court, and shall not be discharged until the original jurors are discharged, except as provided in this section.

If at any time, whether before or after the final submission of the case to the jury, a juror dies or becomes ill, or upon other good cause shown to the court is found to be unable to perform his or her duty, or if a juror requests a discharge and good cause appears therefor, the court may order the juror to be discharged and draw the name of an alternate, who shall then take his or her place in the jury box, and be subject to the same rules and regulations as though he or she has been selected as one of the original jurors.

All laws relative to fees, expenses, and mileage or transportation of jurors shall be applicable to alternate jurors, except that in civil cases the sums for fees and mileage or transportation need not be deposited until the judge directs alternate jurors to be impaneled.

CHAPTER 50 California Judicial Council Concluding Instructions

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5016

CACI 5016 Judge's Commenting on Evidence

In this case, I have exercised my right to comment on the evidence. However, you the jury are the exclusive judges of all questions of fact and of the credibility of the witnesses. You are free to completely ignore my comments on the evidence and to reach whatever verdict you believe to be correct, even if it is contrary to any or all of those comments.

New April 2007

Read this instruction before deliberations if the judge has exercised the right under article VI, section 10 of the California Constitution to comment on the evidence. This instruction should also be given if after deliberations have begun, the jury asks for additional guidance and the judge then comments on the evidence. (See People v. Rodriguez (1986) 42 Cal.3d 730 [230 Cal.Rptr. 667, 726 P.2d 113] .)

- Article VI, section 10 of the California Constitution permits the court to "make any comment on the evidence and the testimony and credibility of any witness as in its opinion is necessary for the proper determination of the cause."

- "[T]he decisions admonish that judicial comment on the evidence must be accurate, temperate, nonargumentative, and scrupulously fair. The trial court may not, in the guise of privileged comment, withdraw material evidence from the jury's consideration, distort the record, expressly or impliedly direct a verdict, or otherwise usurp the jury's ultimate factfinding power." (People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at p. 766 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] trial court has 'broad latitude in fair commentary, so long as it does not effectively control the verdict. For example, it is settled that the court need not confine itself to neutral, bland, and colorless summaries, but may focus critically on particular evidence, expressing views about its persuasiveness.' ... '[A] judge may restrict his comments to portions of the evidence or to the credibility of a single witness and need not sum up all the testimony, both favorable and unfavorable.' " (People v. Proctor (1992) 4 Cal.4th 499, 542 [15 Cal.Rptr.2d 340, 842 P.2d 1100] , original italics.)

■ "[A] judge's power to comment on the evidence is not unlimited. He cannot withdraw material evidence from the jury or distort the testimony, and he must inform the jurors that they are the exclusive judges of all questions of fact and of the credibility of the witnesses. In civil cases, the court's powers of comment are less limited than in criminal cases, but they still must be kept within certain bounds. The court may express an opinion on negligence, but the court's remarks must be appropriate and fair." (Lewis v. Bill Robertson & Sons Inc. (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 650, 654 [208 Cal.Rptr. 699] , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 50 California Judicial Council Concluding Instructions

5-50 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 5017

CACI 5017 Polling the Jury

After your verdict is read in open court, you may be asked individually to indicate whether the verdict expresses your personal vote. This is referred to as "polling" the jury and is done to ensure that at least nine jurors have agreed to each decision.

The verdict form[s] that you will receive ask[s] you to answer several questions. You must vote separately on each question. Although nine or more jurors must agree on each answer, it does not have to be the same nine for each answer. Therefore, it is important for each of you to remember how you have voted on each question so that if the jury is polled, each of you will be able to answer accurately about how you voted.

[Each of you will be provided a draft copy of the verdict form[s] for your use in keeping track of your votes.]

New October 2008

Directions for Use

Use this instruction to explain the process of polling the jury, particularly if a long special verdict form will be used to assess the liability of multiple parties and the damages awarded to each plaintiff from each defendant.

Sources and Authority

- Article I, section 16 of the California Constitutions provides in part: "Trial by jury is an inviolate right and shall be secured to all, but in a civil cause three-fourths of the jury may render a verdict."

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 618 provides: "When the jury, or three-fourths of them, have agreed upon a verdict, they must be conducted into court and the verdict rendered by their foreperson. The verdict must be in writing, signed by the foreperson, and must be read to the jury by the clerk, and the inquiry made whether it is their verdict. Either party may require the jury to be polled, which is done by the court or clerk, asking each juror if it is the juror's verdict. If upon inquiry or polling, more than one-fourth of the jurors disagree thereto, the jury must be sent out again, but if no disagreement is expressed, the verdict is complete and the jury discharged from the case."

■ "The polling process is designed to reveal mistakes in the written verdict, or to show 'that one or more jurors acceded to a verdict in the jury room but was unwilling to stand by it in open court.' " (Keener v. Jeld-Wen, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal.4th 247, 256 [92 Cal.Rptr.3d 862, 206 P.3d 403] .)

■ "[A] juror may change his or her vote at the time of polling." (Keener, supra, 46 Cal.4th at p. 256 .)

■ "[I]t is quite apparent that when a poll discloses that more than one-quarter of the members of the jury disagree with the verdict, the trial judge retains control of the proceedings, and may properly order the jury to retire and again consider the case." (Van Cise v. Lencioni (1951) 106 Cal.App.2d 341, 348 [235 P.2d 236] .)

■ "[W]e begin with the requirement that at least nine of twelve jurors agree that each element of a cause of action has been proved by a preponderance of the evidence. The elements of a cause of action constitute the essential or ultimate facts in a civil case comparable to the elements of a single, discrete criminal offense in a criminal case. Analogizing a civil 'cause of action' to a single, discrete criminal offense, and applying the criminal law jury agreement principles to civil law, we conclude that jurors need not agree from among a number of alternative acts which act is proved, so long as the jurors agree that each element of the cause of action is proved." (Stoner v. Williams (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 986, 1002 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 243] , footnote omitted.)

■ "In civil cases in which there exist multiple causes of action for which multiple or alternative acts could support elements of more than one cause of action, possible jury confusion could result as to whether a specific cause of action is proved. In those cases, ... we presume that jury instructions may be appropriate to inform the jury that it must agree on specific elements of each specific cause of action. Yet, this still does not require that the jurors agree on exactly how each particular element of a particular cause of action is proved." (Stoner, supra, 46 Cal.App.4th at p. 1002 .)

■ "[I]f nine identical jurors agree that a party is negligent and that such negligence is the proximate cause of the other party's injuries, special verdicts apportioning damages are valid so long as they command the votes of any nine jurors. To hold otherwise would be to prohibit jurors who dissent on the question of a party's liability from participation in the important remaining issue of allocating responsibility among the parties, a result that would deny all parties the right to a jury of 12 persons deliberating on all issues." (Juarez v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal.3d 759, 768 [183 Cal.Rptr. 852, 647 P.2d 128] .)

CHAPTER 70A Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions on the business tort of trade libel or disparagement and the related tort of slander of title, also known as disparagement of title. Many of the trade libel instructions can be modified for use in disparagement of title actions. Because of the frequency with which trade libel is coupled with a defamation cause of action for libel per se of a business or businessperson, separate instructions for these occasions are also included. Damages instructions are provided for each type of action. For the Judicial Council instructions on defamation generally, see Ch. 17, California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions. Judicial Council instructions on damages are set forth in Ch. 39, California Judicial Council Damages Instructions. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions on plaintiff's prima facie case [MB 7000A.01-MB 7000A.14], including the essential elements of trade libel [MB 7000A.01, MB 7000A.02], falsity and malice [MB 7000A.04, MB 7000A.05], special and punitive damages [MB 7000A.06-MB 7000A.09], and disparagement constituting libel or slander per se [MB 7000A.10-MB 7000A.12].
- Part B includes instructions on defenses, including privileged communications [MB 7000A.20], a statement by an interested person [MB 7000A.21], conditional privilege [MB 7000A.22], and the public figure standard [MB 7000A.23].
- Part C includes instructions on slander of title and provides a definition of the tort [MB 7000A.30], plaintiff's burden of proof [MB 7000A.31], damages [MB 7000A.32], and conditional privilege [MB 7000A.33].

It is important to note the overlap between disparagement and other torts:

■ When the publisher of a disparagement is a competitor of the object of the trade libel, the publisher might be guilty of unfair competition, which is covered in Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, and Ch. 33A, Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions.

■ Another related tort is that of interference with contract and/or prospective economic advantage, which may occur when the publisher intends to interfere with relationships between the object of the trade libel and its clients or customers. Instructions for interference with economic relations are set forth in Ch. 22, California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions, and Ch. 22A, Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions.

■ Finally, an act of trade libel, either alone or in combination with other acts, may, in rare instances, constitute an attempt to monopolize in violation of the Cartwright Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq., or the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. For instructions on the Cartwright Act, see Ch. 34, California Judicial Council Cartwright Act Instructions.

For detailed coverage of trade libel, slander of title, and defamation, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Chs. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part C, and 45, Defamation (Matthew Bender).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7000A.02-MB 7000A.06, which elaborate on the prima facie elements plaintiff has the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence. For an instruction regarding the preponderance of the evidence standard generally, see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True than Not True").

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][e], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Terms to Jury: There are several important concepts in this instruction, including the terms "publish," "malice," and "disparaging." These concepts, which are further defined in subsequent instructions in this chapter, will have to be carefully explained in closing argument. By Ronald Oster

[a] Elements of Trade Libel

The elements of a cause of action for trade libel are [OptInRealBig.com, LLC v. Ironport Sys., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2004) 323 F.Supp.2d 1037, 1048 ; Guess, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 176 Cal.App.3d 473, 479, 222 Cal.Rptr. 79 ; see Tuck Beckstoffer Wines LLC v. Ultimate Dist., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010) 682 F.Supp.2d 1003, 1021 (elements consisted of defendant's published statement; statement tended to disparage plaintiff's product; statement was provably false; defendant acted with knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard; and statement caused specific damage)]:

- (1) The defendant made a statement that disparaged the quality of the plaintiff's product;
- (2) The offending statement was couched as fact, not opinion;
- (3) The statement was false;
- (4) The statement was made with malice; and
- (5) The statement resulted in monetary loss.

Some California courts have stated that the plaintiff must prove in all cases that the publication has played a material and substantial part inducing others not to deal with the plaintiff, and that as a result the plaintiff has suffered special damages [see, e.g., Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co. v. J. Lamb, Inc. (2002) 100 Cal.App.4th 1017, 1035, 123 Cal.Rptr.2d 256 ; see also Erlich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 73, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256].

When the gravamen of a claim asserted by a plaintiff is the publication of an injurious falsehood, the plaintiff must satisfy the same constitutionally mandated requirements as the plaintiff in a defamation case. Consequently, one of the essential elements of the plaintiff's case-in-chief is that the statements were made "of and concerning" the plaintiff [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1042-1049, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177]. The United States Supreme Court and the California Supreme Court have both held that there is no constitutional privilege that protects all statements of opinion from defamation actions. However, a statement may not be the basis for a defamation action unless both of the following are true [Milkovich v. Lorain Journal Co. (1990) 497 U.S. 1, 19-20, 110 S.Ct. 2695, 111 L.Ed.2d 1 ; Weller v. American Broadcasting Companies, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 991, 999-1001, 283 Cal.Rptr. 644]:

(1) The statement is provable as false; and

(2) The statement can reasonably be interpreted as stating actual facts about the party defamed.

In a 1999 California case, the court of appeal applied the "actual malice" standard to statements made about a product manufactured by a company that was not a public figure, when the statements addressed a matter of public concern and were directed toward the company's products but not its reputation [Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1363-1365, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 ; see MB 7000A.23].

For discussion and authorities more precisely defining under California law the malice required as the fourth element of trade libel, see MB 7000A.05. For a related form, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander (Matthew Bender). For general coverage of trade libel, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part C (Matthew Bender).

[b] Defamation as Related Tort

Disparagement may be referred to as "trade libel," "product disparagement," or "slander of goods." Some authorities emphasize the independent common-law genesis of the law of trade libel [see, e.g., Polygram Records, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 543, 548-549, 216 Cal.Rptr. 252 ; Erlach v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 72-74, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256]. More commonly, however, both trade libel and defamation are pleaded, frequently resulting in avoidance of the more stringent elements required for a trade libel cause of action. Thus, appellate cases are more apt to involve defamation, even when they involve facts that conceptually fall into the trade libel area [see, e.g., Tuck Beckstoffer Wines LLC v. Ultimate Dist., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010) 682 F.Supp.2d 1003, 1021-1022 (contrary to defendant's appellate argument, it failed to plead specifically counterclaim for trade libel or defamation); Triton Ins. Underwriters v. National Chiropractic Ins. Co. (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 829, 835, 43 Cal.Rptr. 504 ; Di Giorgio Fruit Corp. v. AFL-CIO (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 560, 570-572, 30 Cal.Rptr. 350 ; see also Civ. Code § 45].

It is occasionally difficult to distinguish between disparagement and defamation. "The distinction between libel and trade libel is that the former concerns the person or reputation of plaintiff and the latter relates to his goods" [Shores v. Chip Steak Co. (1955) 130 Cal.App.2d 627, 630, 279 P.2d 595 ; see Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 381, 226 Cal.Rptr. 354]. Despite the fact that what has been come to be known as trade libel is similar to defamation in that both involve the imposition of liability for injuries sustained through publication to third parties of a false statement affecting the plaintiff, the two torts are distinct. Trade libel is not true libel and is not actionable as defamation [Polygram Records, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 543, 549-550, 216 Cal.Rptr. 252].

However, the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff who asserts any cause of action that has as its gravamen the publication or dissemination of an injurious falsehood must meet the constitutionally-mandated requirements that apply in defamation cases [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1041-1045, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177]. The same statement may attack a person's character as well as disparage a property interest, and the injured party may file a defamation action for injury to his or her personal character or the reputation of his or her business, or a disparagement action for injury to a property or business interest, or both [Polygram Records, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 543, 550 n.7, 216 Cal.Rptr. 252 ; see Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 381, 226 Cal.Rptr. 354]. It is good strategy to combine trade libel actions with actions for libel per se when possible, because this avoids the need to plead and prove special damages [see MB 7000A.10[3]]. Because of this close similarity, defamation cases are often applied to trade libel by analogy.

For coverage of trade libel and defamation, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Chs. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part C, and 45, Defamation (Matthew Bender).

[c] Slander of Title Distinguished

Confusion occasionally exists between trade libel and the related but distinct tort of slander of title, or disparagement of title, which constitutes a false communication that impugns the plaintiff's title to goods or to real property. The two torts have pronounced similarities. For example, both impair the vendability of the object the plaintiff is attempting to sell, the latter by impugning title to the object and the former by casting aspersions on the product's quality. Most courts frequently rely on rules in one area in cases involving the other [see, e.g., System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1140 ("[o]ur partial reliance on the slander of title cases is justified by the similarity between that tort and product disparagement"); see also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 623A, Comment a, §§ 624, 626].

Product disparagement and slander of title are grouped together in the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 623A under the general heading "injurious falsehood," which is defined as a false communication that results in harm to interests of the other having pecuniary value. Because other authorities may use the term injurious falsehood either more broadly or more narrowly [see, e.g., Note, Corporate Defamation and Product Disparagement: Narrowing the Analogy to Personal Defamation, 75 Colum. L. Rev. 963 n.3, 968 n. 28 (1975); see also Beane v. McMullen (1972) 265 Md. 585, 291 A.2d 37, 49 (broadly defining tort of injurious falsehood to include disparagement and slander of title)], the terms "trade libel" or "disparagement" are preferred. Authorities frequently cite product disparagement and disparagement of title cases interchangeably. When trade libel instructions in this chapter are based on disparagement of title or defamation cases, the "Authorities" following the instruction indicate this by parenthetical signals.

[d] Communication of Trade Libel

Although use of the term trade "libel" seems to connote, by analogy to the law of defamation, a written communication, trade libel or disparagement embraces not only written communications, but spoken communications as well [Polygram Records, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 543, 548, 216 Cal.Rptr. 252]. On occasion, however, courts do use the term "trade slander" to refer to spoken communications [see, e.g., Kilgore Ace Hardware, Inc. v. Newsome (Fla. App. 1977) 352 So.2d 918, 920]. Disparagement may also involve conduct without words, such as subjecting a product to abnormal stress to falsely communicate a lack of durability [Astro Music, Inc. v. Eastham (9th Cir. 1977) 564 F.2d 1236, 1238-1239].

PART A. TRADE LIBEL: PLAINTIFF'S PRIMA FACIE CASE

[1] Instruction Publication

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is not liable for making a false statement concerning the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] unless that statement is "published." A false statement concerning the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] must be "published." This means that the statement must be (1) communicated by Defendant to someone other than the Plaintiff, (2) actually heard or seen, and (3) understood by the person or persons to whom it is communicated.

There are three ways to communicate a false statement that make the communication a publication if it is heard or seen and understood:

- 1. The statement may be spoken to someone other than Plaintiff.
- 2. The statement may be written. For example, it may be written in a brochure, a newspaper, a book, or even a letter. Any writing may be a communication if it is read and understood by someone other than Plaintiff.
- 3. The statement may be published by conduct. For example, if a product is deliberately broken or is broken by putting that product to an abnormal use, then it is the publication of a false statement to show the broken product to someone as if it had broken during normal use.

The false statement may be published by any combination of these three ways of communicating.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7000A.01 and MB 7000A.03-MB 7000A.06. It should be modified depending on whether the plaintiff is seeking to recover based on a verbal statement, written statement, or conduct, or a combination of two or more of these things.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--If Applicable, Further Explain "Publication By Conduct" to Jury: The first two definitions of the term "publish" are fairly straightforward (i.e. speaking and writing). The third definition (to publish by conduct) is not self-evident and, if applicable to your case, will require further explanation in closing argument. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Defamation Cases as Authority for Trade Libel Publication Rules

Publication is one of the fundamental elements common to all types of defamation and disparagement cases [System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1140]. Accordingly, reference can be made by analogy to defamation cases [see Di Giorgio Fruit Corp. v. AFL-CIO (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 560, 569, 30 Cal.Rptr. 350]. Resort to defamation authorities is almost compulsory because of the paucity of disparagement authority specifically addressing the question of publication.

[b] Publication to Third Person; Publication by Defendant

Communication of a disparaging statement to a single third person is generally deemed adequate to constitute "publication" [Cunningham v. Simpson (1969) 1 Cal.3d 301, 306-307, 81 Cal.Rptr. 855, 461 P.2d 39 (by analogy--defamation)]. Of course, the disparaging communication, to be actionable, must be made by the defendant. If the slanderous words or statements or the written libel is sent to the one defamed, who then publishes it, the defendant is not responsible [Burkett v. Griffith (1891) 90 Cal. 532, 535, 27 P. 527 , overruled on other grounds, Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 556, 134 P.2d 217 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 577 (by analogy--slander of title)].

[c] Written Publication; Publication by Conduct

The most common form of publication is by a writing. For example, a Los Angeles poultry producer and distributor sued for trade libel for the publication of several written statements by defendants that plaintiff was distributing non-kosher chicken to various Jewish enterprises [Erllich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 70-71, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256].

Instances of disparagement by conduct are relatively rare. One example is a case in which defendant broke one of plaintiff's cranks by applying more pressure than would be imposed during normal use, and then displayed the broken crank to plaintiff's customers [see Astro Music, Inc. v. Eastham (9th Cir. 1977) 564 F.2d 1236, 1238-1239].

MB 7000A.03 Disparagement of Quality of Product or Service[1] Instruction Disparagement of Quality of Product or Service[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To be awarded damages for trade libel, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant published a false statement that disparaged Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services]. This means that Plaintiff must prove that the false statement published by Defendant was reasonably understood by one or more of the persons to whom it was published as a derogatory statement about Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] or as a statement that criticized the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services].

Authorities: Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1042-1049, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; *Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain disparagement and what the plaintiff must prove. It should be used in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7000A.01, MB 7000A.02, and MB 7000A.04-MB 7000A.06. Disparagement is a prima facie element of an action for trade libel, and the plaintiff must prove it by a preponderance of the evidence. For an instruction regarding the preponderance of the evidence standard generally, see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True").

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Defining Disparaging Statement: To define a disparaging statement as a "derogatory" statement does not provide much additional assistance to the jury. The phrase "criticized the quality of plaintiff's [goods]" (the second option in this instruction) will be easier for some jurors to understand. Remember that some jurors have a limited vocabulary. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

One of the distinguishing characteristics of a trade libel action, setting it apart from other types of defamation claims, is that the actionable statements must pertain to another's products or goods [Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 381, 226 Cal.Rptr. 354 ; Shores v. Chip Steak Co. (1955) 130 Cal.App.2d 627, 630, 279 P.2d 595]. Specifically, an actionable statement is one that disparages the quality of the products or goods [Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 381, 226 Cal.Rptr. 354 ; Erllich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 73, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256]. A statement is "disparaging" if it is understood in its disparaging sense and if the understanding is a reasonable construction of the language used or the acts done by the publisher. It is not material that the publisher did not intend the disparaging statement to be so understood [Nichols v. Great American Ins. Companies (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 766, 773, 215 Cal.Rptr. 416 , citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 629; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 623A, 626].

When the gravamen of a claim asserted by a plaintiff is the publication of an injurious falsehood, the plaintiff must satisfy the same constitutionally-mandated requirements as the plaintiff in a defamation case. Consequently, one of the essential elements of the plaintiff's case-in-chief is that the statements were made "of and concerning" the plaintiff [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1042-1049, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; E.piphany, Inc. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 2008) 590 F.Supp.2d 1244, 1252].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An essential element of disparagement or trade libel is that the published statement is false. If you find that the statement published by Defendant is true, then Plaintiff may not recover even if you believe that Defendant had a malicious or improper purpose in publishing the statement.

[3] Comment

[a] Statement Must Be False

In a disparagement or trade libel case, the statement on which the action is based must be false [see Erllich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 73-74, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256 (court, in holding special damages must be proved, implies necessity of proving falsehood); Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 573 (9th ed. 1988)]. To be actionable as a product disparagement, a false statement must contain allegations about plaintiff's property or product [System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1140].

Despite the general rule that in a defamation action falsity is presumed and truth is a defense to be proven by the defendant [Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 224, 233, 11 Cal.Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 ; Draper v. Hellman Com. T. & S. Bank (1928) 203 Cal. 26, 40-41, 263 P. 240 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 581A, Comment b; see Milkovich v. Lorain Journal Co. (1990) 497 U.S. 1, 16, 110 S.Ct. 2695, 111 L.Ed.2d 1 and Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc. v. Hepps (1986) 475 U.S. 767, 777, 106 S.Ct. 1558, 89 L.Ed.2d 783 (even in defamation actions, common-law presumption of falsity cannot stand when plaintiff seeks damages against media defendant for speech of public concern)], in trade libel the falsity of the statement published is an element of the tort [*System Operations v. CHAPTER 70A Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions
PART A. TRADE LIBEL: PLAINTIFF'S PRIMA FACIE CASE

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.05

MB 7000A.05 Malice

[1] Instruction Malice

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

For Plaintiff to prove [his/her/its] case, [he/she/it] must prove that Defendant published the false statement with malice. The malice requirement is satisfied if you find any one of the following to be true:

- 1. That Defendant's state of mind was characterized by actual hatred, spite, or ill will;
- 2. That Defendant published a false statement despite lacking reasonable grounds to believe it to be true or displayed a reckless disregard for the truth or falsity of the statement; or
- 3. That malice may be implied from Defendant's wrongful activities. For example, if you conclude that Defendant knew that the statement was false at the time [he/she/it] published it, that Defendant made the statement with the intent to deceive, or that other facts and circumstances demonstrate a malicious state of mind, no further evidence of malice is necessary.

Authorities: System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1140 ; Bose Corp. v. Consumers U. of U.S., Inc. (D. Mass. 1981) 508 F.Supp. 1249, 1270-1271 , rev'd on other grounds, (1st Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 189 , aff'd, 466 U.S. 485 (1984) ; Fearon v. Fodera (1915) 169 Cal. 370, 379-380, 148 P. 200 (by analogy--slander of title); Contra Costa County Title Co. v. Waloff (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 66-67, 7 Cal.Rptr. 358 (by analogy--slander of title).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set forth the requirement of malice. The attorney should consider whether this instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 7000A.21 dealing with qualified privilege. In general, if a qualified privilege applies, a showing of actual malice, as distinguished from malice implied in the act itself, is required to prevail on a disparagement or trade libel claim [see Kelly v. General Telephone Co. (1982) 136 Cal.App.3d 278, 285, 186 Cal.Rptr. 184 (by analogy--defamation case)].

This instruction should not be used in cases when the plaintiff's claim is subject to the requirements of New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686], because the plaintiff is a public official or a public figure or because the statements in issue relate to a matter of substantial public concern. For example, in a 1998 case in which plaintiff was not a public figure but the statements made addressed a matter of public concern and were directed towards plaintiff's products rather than its reputation, the court held that the jury was required to find that defendant acted with actual malice [Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1365, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 (trial court erred in giving instruction that permitted jury to find actual malice on objective, rather than subjective, basis); see MB 7000A.23]. In these instances, the instruction in MB 7000A.23 should be used.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain "Malice" to Jury: "Malice" is a term of art that must be carefully explained to the jury. It is important for plaintiff's counsel to explain that malice does not necessarily mean hatred or ill will (although that would certainly be sufficient to prove malice). In many cases, the second definition in this instruction will be the relevant test--did the defendant lack reasonable grounds or display reckless indifference to the truth? Note the higher standards applicable to public figures as explained in the comments in [3], below. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

Malice constitutes one of the essential elements of a product disparagement action [System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1140]. The degree of malice plaintiff must prove is not entirely clear, but malice may be express or implied [System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1140]. In a 1998 California case, the court of appeal applied the "actual malice" standard to statements made about a product manufactured by a company that was not a public figure, when the statements addressed a matter of public concern and were directed towards plaintiff's products rather than its reputation [Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1363-1365, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 (statements in book about presence of benzene in plaintiff's pharmaceutical consumer goods found to be matter of public concern)].

When no matters of public concern are involved, a showing of actual malice is not required [Dun & Bradstreet v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 763, 105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593]. One commentator takes the position that generally only a showing of implied malice is necessary under California law [Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 642 (10th ed. 2005)].

Although either actual or implied malice appears to be sufficient for purposes of building a prima facie case of disparagement, evidence of actual malice may be crucial to other aspects of plaintiff's action. There has been considerable confusion flowing from the use of the term malice, chiefly from the failure to clearly distinguish between malice implied in law and actual malice. The former is a mere legal fiction, while the latter denotes ill will or the desire to do harm for the satisfaction of doing it, or conduct that in effect amounts to the same thing. Actual malice is important on the question of punitive damages or the availability of certain conditional privileges [Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 543, 134 P.2d 217].

When the plaintiff's claim is subject to the requirements of New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] because the plaintiff is a public official or a public figure or because the statements at issue relate to a matter of substantial public concern, the plaintiff must prove, by clear and convincing evidence, that the statements were made with actual malice [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711]. Proof of actual malice requires a showing on the defendant's state of mind; the plaintiff must show that at the time of publishing the statements the defendant knew they were false or, in fact, entertained serious doubts as to their truthfulness [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1350, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 ; see also MB 7000A.23].

In slander of title cases, California courts have held that the malice necessary to establish a prima facie case is implied malice [Fearon v. Fodera (1915) 169 Cal. 370, 380-381, 148 P. 200 ; Contra Costa County Title Co. v. Waloff (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 66-67, 7 Cal.Rptr. 358].

PART A. TRADE LIBEL: PLAINTIFF'S PRIMA FACIE CASE

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.06

MB 7000A.06 Proof of Special Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff must prove that Defendant's false statements concerning the quality of _____ [describe goods or services] caused financial loss. This loss must be shown by proof of both of the following:

- 1. That Defendant's publication has played a material and substantial part in inducing others not to deal with [him/her/it]; and
- 2. That Plaintiff has suffered special damages.

To prove special damages, Plaintiff must prove a specific financial loss in [his/her/its] business that [he/she/it] suffered because of Defendant's false statement. It is not enough for Plaintiff to show merely a general business decline. Plaintiff must specifically identify the _____ [purchasers or clients or customers] that [he/she/it] has lost and the business transactions, such as sales or orders, that [he/she/it] has lost.

Plaintiff must also prove that Defendant's false statement was a substantial factor in the decision of the _____ [purchaser(s) or client(s) or customer(s)] not to do business with Plaintiff. Plaintiff does not have to prove that the false statement was the only factor in this decision or that it was the most important factor. Plaintiff only has to prove that the false statement was one substantial factor in the _____ [purchaser's or client's or customer's] decision not to deal with [him/her/it].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7000A.01-MB 7000A.05.

In any action for recovery premised strictly on trade libel or disparagement, a special damages instruction is mandatory. A potentially more confusing situation is presented when the plaintiff seeks relief based on both disparagement and defamation theories, in which event care must be taken to articulate the differences in damages requirements. In these circumstances, counsel should seriously consider using a special verdict form.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][d], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Pleading and Proving Special Damages

The special damages requirement in disparagement actions is nearly universally accepted [Astro Music, Inc. v. Eastham (9th Cir. 1977) 564 F.2d 1236, 1238-1239 ; Nichols v. Great American Ins. Companies (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 766, 773, 215 Cal.Rptr. 416 ; Erllich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 73, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256]. The special damages element of disparagement actions requires plaintiff to connect loss of a specific transaction with knowledge of the disparaging communication [Burkett v. Griffith (1891) 90 Cal. 532, 537, 27 P. 527 , overruled on other grounds, Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 554-556, 134 P.2d 217 (by analogy--slander of title); but see Wright v. Coules (1906) 4 Cal.App. 343, 347, 87 P. 809 (allegation by hotel that it lost unidentified guests as result of disparaging article stated cause of action)]. The necessity of pleading and proving special damages has been an integral part of the action of disparagement of property since it first developed as an extension of slander of title [Testing Systems, Inc. v. Magnaflux Corporation (E.D. Pa. 1966) 251 F.Supp. 286, 290]. The damages claimed usually consist of loss of prospective contracts with the plaintiff's customers [see, e.g., Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co. v. J. Lamb, Inc. (2002) 100 Cal.App.4th 1017, 1035, 123 Cal.Rptr.2d 256 ; see also Erllich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 73, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proving Special Damages Can Be Difficult:

Proceeding on a customer-by-customer basis to prove special damages can be difficult. This is why plaintiff's counsel frequently include other causes of action that do not have this requirement (e.g., defamation). By Ronald Oster

[b] Avoiding Special Damages Requirement

Although the strict requirement of proof of special damages has on occasion resulted in reversals of judgments for plaintiffs [see, e.g., Erllich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 36 Cal.Rptr. 256], the requirement can be avoided if one is able to plead libel per se in a defamation cause of action joined with the trade libel action [see, e.g., Triton Ins. Underwriters, v. National Chiropractic Ins. Co. (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 829, 833, 43 Cal.Rptr. 504] or by joining a trade libel cause of action with causes of action for unfair competition, interference with prospective economic advantage, or other related torts [see Royer v. Stoddy Co. (W.D. Okla. 1961) 192 F.Supp. 949, 953 ; see also Note, Trade Libel and its Special Damage Requirement, 17 Hastings L.J. 394 (1965)].

[c] Consequences of Omissions in Pleading or Proof When Special Damages Must Otherwise Be Proved

Because of the difficulty of satisfying the special damages requirement, special care must be taken in the pleading and the proof of other causes of action, such as libel per se or unfair competition, that would obviate the need to show special damages. Appellate courts have not been flexible in recognizing causes of action for the first time on appeal. For example, in an action originally brought on a trade libel theory, the Third Circuit refused to consider whether a preliminary injunction could be sustained on an unfair competition theory that had not been pleaded or otherwise raised below. The court dissolved the preliminary injunction because the record did not support the existence of special damages on plaintiff's trade libel claim [System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1144 (applying New Jersey law)].

CHAPTER 70A Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions
PART A. TRADE LIBEL: PLAINTIFF'S PRIMA FACIE CASE

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.07

MB 7000A.07 Prerequisites for Award of Punitive Damages

[1] Instruction Prerequisites for Award of Punitive Damages

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff was harmed or damaged as the result of a false statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] that was published by Defendant, then you must decide whether punitive damages should be awarded against Defendant. The purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts--that is, for retribution and deterrence.

[SELECT ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

Punitive damages may be awarded against Defendant only if Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services]. Therefore, you must first determine whether Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice].

"Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

"Malice" means either conduct that is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct that is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights of others.

A defendant acts with a willful and conscious disregard for the rights of others when [he/she/it] intentionally engages in particular conduct or intentionally follows a particular course of action even though [he/she/it] knows that it is highly probable that that conduct or that course of action will cause another person to suffer harm or damage.

[OR]

Punitive damages may be awarded against Defendant only if Defendant was guilty of actual malice in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services].

A defendant is guilty of actual malice in publishing a statement if, at the time of publication, the defendant knows the statement is false or, in fact, entertains serious doubts as to its truthfulness, and if the defendant's conduct, under the circumstances, is despicable.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

Plaintiff has the burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence, that Defendant is guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Additionally, punitive damages may be awarded against Defendant only if, in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services], Defendant acted with a state of mind arising from hatred or ill will toward Plaintiff that was based on something other than Defendant's good faith belief in the truth of the statements that Defendant made about _____ [either Plaintiff or goods and services offered by plaintiff].

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

In this phase of the trial, you will only determine whether _____ [describe prerequisites to award of punitive damages] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services]. I will have you fill out a special verdict form stating your decision on this question. If necessary, we will hold a second phase of the trial to determine whether punitive damages should be awarded and, if so, the amount that should be awarded as punitive damages.

[OR]

Unless you determine that _____ [describe prerequisites to award of punitive damages] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services], you may not award any punitive damages against Defendant. If you determine that _____ [describe prerequisites to award of punitive damages] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services], then you must determine whether punitive damages should be awarded and, if so, the amount that should be awarded as punitive damages.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages on a cause of action for trade libel or disparagement.

When this instruction is used, the general burden of proof instructions given to the jury should include the instruction on the "clear and convincing proof" standard [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201].

When the plaintiff's claim for punitive damages is based on the conduct of an employee or agent of a defendant, the jury should be instructed on the additional elements that must be established before punitive damages may be awarded against an employer or principal for the actions of an employee or agent [see Civ. Code § 3294(b)].

In actions governed only by Civ. Code § 3294, this instruction should be modified to reflect the fact that the applicable definitions of "malice" and "oppression" do not include any requirement of "despicable conduct."

The first set of alternative provisions in this instruction inform the jury of (1) the requirements imposed in a case governed solely by Civ. Code § 3294 and (2) the stricter requirements imposed when the plaintiff is required to prove "actual malice" in accordance with New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] to establish liability. In actions subject to the New York Times rule, the references to despicable conduct should not be used.

The optional provision is for use in cases governed by Civ. Code § 48a(2). In cases in which this section applies, the provisions of the instructions that are inconsistent with the standard it requires should be deleted. When the sufficiency of a correction demanded under Civ. Code § 48a is at issue, the instruction in MB 7000A.13 should be given with this instruction.

When issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are not bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d), this instruction should be followed by the instruction in MB 7000A.08.

This instruction contains alternative concluding paragraphs. The first alternative paragraph should be used when issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d). The second alternative paragraph should be used when the issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are not bifurcated and the jury will therefore be given the instruction on assessing punitive damages in MB 7000A.08.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][f], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Make Sure to Use Correct Options: This is a complicated instruction that contains a number of alternatives and options. Be sure you are using the correct options as indicated above. This is especially true with regard to the term "malice," which has different legal requirements depending on the type of case involved. Also, "malice" is not a commonly used word, at least with many jurors. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment[a] Requirements Under Civ. Code § 3294

Civ. Code § 3294 provides that in an action predicated on the breach of an obligation that does not arise from contract, punitive damages--damages that are awarded to punish and make an example of a defendant--may be awarded against a defendant who has been guilty of malice, fraud, or oppression [Civ. Code § 3294(a)].

Punitive damages are not recoverable unless the plaintiff proves that the defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Civ. Code § 3294(a)]. Punitive damages are not recoverable in the abstract, and the required oppression, fraud, or malice must lie in the conduct that gave rise to liability in the case [Medo v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 64, 68, 251 Cal.Rptr. 924]. "Oppression," "fraud," and "malice" are defined in Civ. Code § 3294(c). "Oppression" is defined by Civ. Code § 3294(c)(2) as "despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights." "Malice" is defined by Civ. Code § 3294(c)(1) as "conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others." Because the definition of "malice" is stated in the alternative, punitive damages may be awarded without a finding of despicable conduct [Courtesy Ambulance Service v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 1504, 1518, 11 Cal.Rptr.2d 161].

The provisions of Civ. Code § 3294(c) that permit a finding of oppression or malice to be based on a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others essentially incorporate preexisting case law that recognized that proof of an actual intent to harm the plaintiff was not essential to a punitive damage claim and allowed the recovery of punitive damages on the basis of proof that the defendant had intentionally pursued a particular course of conduct with the knowledge that there was a substantial likelihood that it would cause injury [Taylor v. Superior Court (1979) 24 Cal.3d 890, 894-896, 157 Cal.Rptr. 693, 598 P.2d 854 ; Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 922, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 ; Weisman v. Blue Shield of California (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 61, 64-67, 209 Cal.Rptr. 169 ; Ford Motor Co. v. Home Ins. Co. (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 374, 381, 172 Cal.Rptr. 59]. The definitions used in this instruction are based on an instruction approved in Weisman v. Blue Shield of California (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 61, 64-67, 209 Cal.Rptr. 169]. However, this instruction has modified the definition approved in Weisman in the following ways:

- It makes the definition more clearly applicable to cases when the defendant's conduct consists of affirmative actions rather than omissions; and
- It makes it clear that conscious disregard requires not merely knowledge of probable consequences, but knowledge of probable harm or injury.

To establish conscious disregard, the plaintiff is not required to show that the defendant knew the plaintiff's identity or knew that the plaintiff would likely be injured by the conduct at issue; a showing that the defendant knew that someone was likely to be injured is sufficient [Ramona Manor Convalescent Hospital v. Care Enterprises (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 1120, 1141-1142, 225 Cal.Rptr. 120].

Under Civ. Code § 3294(a), punitive damages may only be awarded if the plaintiff establishes oppression, fraud, or malice by clear and convincing evidence [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201 ("Clear and Convincing Proof")].

[b] Constitutional Requirements Regarding Public Officials and Public Figures

When the plaintiff is a public official or a public figure or when the statements at issue relate to a matter of substantial public concern, the plaintiff must comply with the requirements of New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times

Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] to establish liability [Wolston v. Reader's Digest Ass'n (1979) 443 U.S. 157, 163-164, 99 S.Ct. 2701, 61 L.Ed.2d 450 ; Rosenbloom v. Metromedia (1971) 403 U.S. 29, 43-44, 91 S.Ct. 1811, 29 L.Ed.2d 296 ; Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts (1967) 388 U.S. 130, 155, 87 S.Ct. 1975, 18 L.Ed.2d 1094 ; Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 747, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406]. For example, a court held that a newsletter published by Santa Cruz Women Against Rape involved a matter of public concern, and that it was therefore reversible error for the trial court to allow an award of punitive damages without an instruction under New York Times requiring proof of actual malice [Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1009, 1019-1022, 271 Cal.Rptr. 30]. The New York Times rule requires the plaintiff to prove, by clear and convincing evidence, that the allegedly libelous statements were made with actual malice [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447, 468 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835 (1987), 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711]. Proof of actual malice requires a showing as to the defendant's state of mind; the plaintiff must show that, at the time of publishing the statements, the defendant knew they were false or, in fact, entertained serious doubts as to their truthfulness [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447, 468 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835 (1987), 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1350, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 (trial court erred in giving instruction that permitted jury to find actual malice on objective, rather than subjective, basis); see also MB 7000A.23].

The showing required by the New York Times rule to establish "actual malice" is, in certain respects, stricter than the showing required to establish "malice" or "oppression" under Civ. Code § 3294 [McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835 (1987), 871-873, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711]. Accordingly, when the jury is instructed that the plaintiff must prove "actual malice" (as defined in New York Times) to establish liability, it is unnecessary, and potentially confusing, to instruct on those aspects of the definition contained in Civ. Code § 3294 that are inconsistent with the "actual malice" required by the New York Times rule.

[c] Requirements Under Civ. Code § 48a(2)

When a libel is published in a newspaper or a slander is broadcast on radio or television, Civ. Code § 48a provides that only special damages are available, unless a correction is demanded and the alleged tortfeasor either refuses to make this correction or does not publish or broadcast a correction that is substantially as conspicuous as the statements complained of [see MB 7000A.13[3]]. Even when no correction or an insufficient correction is offered, Civ. Code § 48a(2) provides that punitive damages may not be recovered unless the plaintiff proves that the defendant made the publication with actual malice and further provides that actual malice may not be inferred from the publication. Civ. Code § 48a(4)(d) defines "actual malice" as "that state of mind arising from hatred or ill will toward the plaintiff; provided, however, that such a state of mind occasioned by a good faith belief on the part of the defendant in the truth of the libelous publication ... at the time it is published ... shall not constitute actual malice." In cases in which Civ. Code § 48a(2) applies, the jury should not be instructed on those elements of the standard contained in Civ. Code § 3294 that are inconsistent with its provisions [McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 871-873, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711].

The applicable standard of proof under Civ. Code § 48a(2) still appears to be the preponderance of the evidence [see Evid. Code § 115; Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal.3d 278, 286-293, 137 Cal.Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316].

[d] Bifurcation of Punitive Damage Issues

Civ. Code § 3295(d) requires the trial court, on the defendant's motion, to exclude evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition until the jury finds that the defendant is liable to the plaintiff and that the defendant is guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal.3d 139, 147, 279 Cal.Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353]. When the defendant avails itself of this right to initially exclude evidence of its financial condition, the practical effect of these provisions is that the punitive damage issues will have to be bifurcated.

In the initial phase of the trial, the jury will be limited to determining the defendant's liability for compensatory damages and whether the plaintiff has established the statutory prerequisites for an award of punitive damages. If the jury holds the defendant liable and determines that the defendant is guilty of malice, fraud, or oppression in the initial phase of the trial, the plaintiff will be entitled to present evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition at a second phase of the trial, after which the jury will determine the issues relating to the proper amount of punitive damages. The issue of punitive damages must be heard by the same jury that found the defendant liable, although this requirement may be waived by a failure to object to the use of separate juries [Civ. Code § 3295(d); Medo v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 64, 66, 68-70, 251 Cal.Rptr. 924]. The substitution of alternate jurors to try the punitive damages phase of a case does not violate the "same jury" requirement [Rivera v. Sassoon (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1045, 1049, 46 Cal.Rptr.2d 144].

[e] Purpose of Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are imposed for purposes of retribution and deterrence [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; Pac. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 19, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1]. That is, the purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts [see Civ. Code § 3294(a); Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 745, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793].

Punitive damages may properly be imposed to further a state's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]. Although states possess discretion over the imposition of punitive damages, there are procedural and substantive constitutional limitations on these awards [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see MB 2100A.37[3]].

It is important to include a statement of the purpose of punitive damages in jury instructions on punitive damages to guide the jury's discretion. The United States Supreme Court, in upholding a punitive damages award against a due process challenge, cited such a statement of purpose in an Alabama jury instruction as an important limit on the jury's discretion [see Pac. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 19-20, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 ; see also MB 2100A.37[3]].

MB 7000A.08 Discretion to Award Punitive Damages When Prerequisites for Award Are Established

[1] Instruction Discretion to Award Punitive Damages When Prerequisites for Award Are Established

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[SELECT ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

In the first phase of this trial, you determined that _____ [describe prerequisites to award of punitive damages] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services]. In this phase of the trial you must determine whether punitive damages should be awarded against Defendant and, if so, the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded.

Because this is a case in which _____ [describe prerequisites to award of punitive damages] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services],

[OR]

If you find that _____ [describe prerequisites to award of punitive damages] in publishing the statement concerning Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services],

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

you may, but are not required to, award punitive damages against Defendant. In such a case, it is up to you to decide whether punitive damages should be awarded. If you decide to award punitive damages, it is also up to you to determine the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded.

The law does not provide any fixed standards or formulas for making decisions about the amount of punitive damages. Instead, it leaves them to your good judgment and common sense. However, in making any award of punitive damages, you should consider all of the following:

- 1. The reprehensibility of Defendant's conduct with respect to Plaintiff;
- 2. Defendant's financial condition and, in view of that financial condition, what amount of punitive damages it will take to punish and deter Defendant, based solely on the harm to Plaintiff; and
- 3. The amount of the actual [damages/harm or injury] caused by Defendant's wrongful conduct with respect to Plaintiff, because punitive damages must bear a reasonable relationship to the actual [damages/harm or injury].

In making decisions about punitive damages, you should act in a calm and deliberate manner and should not allow yourselves to be influenced by passion or prejudice.

Las Palmas Center Associates* (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1257-1258, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on its duty to determine the propriety and amount of punitive damages if the statutory prerequisites for a punitive damage award are established. When the punitive damage issues have not been bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d) [see MB 7000A.07[3][d]], this instruction should be given immediately after the instruction in MB 7000A.07. When the punitive damage issues have been bifurcated, this instruction should not be given in the first phase of the trial and should be given in a subsequent phase only if the jury renders a verdict finding that the plaintiff has established the prerequisites to an award of punitive damages.

This instruction contains two alternative introductory provisions. The first alternative provision should be used when the punitive damage issues have been bifurcated and the issues relating to the propriety and amount of a punitive damage award are presented in a second phase of the trial. The second alternative provision should be used when the punitive damage issues are not bifurcated.

In the list of factors to be considered in making an award of punitive damages, the third factor offers counsel the choice of the word "damages" or the phrase "harm or injury." In Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. [Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 260 Cal.Rptr. 305], the appellate court indicated that the latter might be preferable, especially when the plaintiff is not entitled to compensatory damages or only recovers nominal damages [Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1603-1604, 260 Cal.Rptr. 305].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use State Farm Guideposts: In State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 , the U.S.

Supreme Court provided new guideposts for courts to review punitive damages awards, including a discussion of specific permissible ratios between punitive and compensatory damages. These guideposts have not been incorporated into this instruction, and the Advisory Committee has elected not to include them in the CACI instructions on punitive damages [see Ch. 39, CACI Nos. 3940- 3949], because of the rapidly developing law on these issues. Nevertheless, counsel should be familiar with the State Farm guideposts when arguing the case to the jury because they will undoubtedly be addressed in post-trial motions or subsequent appeals of a punitive damage award. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Discretion to Award Punitive Damages

Even when the statutory prerequisites for a punitive damage award are met, the plaintiff is never entitled to punitive damages as a matter of right; rather, the decision to award or deny punitive damages is initially within the jury's discretion [Brewer v. Second Baptist Church (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 800-801, 197 P.2d 713 ; Thomson v. Catalina (1928) 205 Cal. 402, 406-407, 271 P. 198 ; Davis v. Hearst (1911) 160 Cal. 143, 173-174, 116 P. 530 ; Hannon Engineering, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 431, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78]. Similarly, the amount to be awarded as punitive damages is initially within the jury's discretion [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal.3d 139, 147, 279 Cal.Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353 ; Thomson v. Catalina (1928) 205 Cal. 402, 406-407, 271 P. 198 ; Hannon Engineering, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 431, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78 ; Ferraro v. Pacific Fin. Corp. (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 339, 351, 87 Cal.Rptr. 226]. An instruction that advises the jury that it has discretion to determine these questions but that its discretion should be exercised without passion or prejudice is proper [see Hannon Engineering, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 429-433, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78].

[b] Due Process Considerations

The United States Supreme Court has held that courts must ensure that the measure of punishment of punitive damages is both reasonable and proportionate both to the amount of harm to the plaintiff and to the general damages recovered. An excessive punitive damages award implicates the Due Process Clause of the U.S. Constitution [U.S. Const. amend. XIV] as an irrational and arbitrary deprivation of the defendant's property [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 428, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see Levy, Golden, Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 54, Punitive Damages (Matthew Bender)].

There are no concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff, and the punitive damages award [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 423-424, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]. However, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages will satisfy due process requirements. An award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages "might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety" [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 423-424, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 581, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 ; Pac. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 23-24, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1].

[c] Instructions Must Not Invite Jury to Impose Damages Sufficient to Punish and Deter Conduct Not Related to Particular Plaintiff

In light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in State Farm [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], jury instructions must not invite the jury to impose damages sufficient to punish and deter all conduct by a defendant of the type directed toward the plaintiff in that particular case [Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793 (rejecting use of BAJI No. 14.71; now see CACI Nos. 3940, 3947)].

[d] Instructions on Punitive Damages Must Not Be Vague

Vague jury instructions on punitive damages, or those that merely inform the jury to avoid "passion or prejudice," are impermissible, because they do little to aid the jury in its task of assigning appropriate weight to evidence that is relevant and to evidence that is tangential or only inflammatory [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 417-418, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].

[e] Wealth Is Relevant Regarding Punishment and Deterrence Only With Regard to Particular Plaintiff

In light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in State Farm [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], evidence concerning a defendant's financial condition is not unlawful or inappropriate. However, the jury may only use a defendant's wealth to determine the appropriate punishment for the malicious conduct involved in the particular case, not as a gauge for the imposition of a penalty that will actually deter the entire type or course of conduct that affected the plaintiff in that case [Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793]. The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award [State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 426-427, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see [b], above].

MB 7000A.09 Qualifications on Damages--Unauthorized and Authorized Republications

[1] Instruction Qualifications on Damages--Unauthorized and Authorized Republications

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Defendant has published a false statement with malice concerning the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services], you must go on to determine Plaintiff's damages that were caused by Defendant's false statement. Keep in mind that Defendant is not liable for damage caused by someone else's later repetition of the disparaging statement unless the Defendant directed or authorized the repetition or unless it was reasonably foreseeable that the statement would be repeated at the time Defendant made it.

If, on the other hand, you find either that Defendant authorized or directed the statement to be repeated, or that repetition of Defendant's statement was reasonably foreseeable at the time that it was first published, then Defendant is liable not only for the damage caused by [his/her/its] original publication, but the additional damage caused by later repetition(s).

Authorities: Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 295 P.2d 405 (by analogy--slander of title); Burkett v. Griffith (1891) 90 Cal. 532, 542, 27 P. 527, overruled on other grounds, Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 134 P.2d 217; Di Giorgio Corp. v. Valley Labor Citizen (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 268, 273, 67 Cal.Rptr. 82 (by analogy--defamation); Curley v. Vick (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 670, 673, 27 Cal.Rptr. 501 (by analogy--defamation).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used only when the plaintiff seeks to rely on subsequent republications of the defendant's false statement by another.

[3] Comment

By analogy to a general rule of defamation law, a defendant in a trade libel action is not liable for damage caused by any subsequent repetition of a disparaging statement by another unless that person is acting under the defendant's direction or authority [Burkett v. Griffith (1891) 90 Cal. 532, 542, 27 P. 527 , overruled on other grounds, Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 134 P.2d 217 (by analogy--slander of title)]. The exception to that general rule occurs when the republication is reasonably foreseeable [Di Giorgio Corp. v. Valley Labor Citizen (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 268, 273, 67 Cal.Rptr. 82 (by analogy--defamation); Curley v. Vick (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 670, 673, 27 Cal.Rptr. 501 (by analogy--defamation)].

CHAPTER 70A Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions
PART A. TRADE LIBEL: PLAINTIFF'S PRIMA FACIE CASE

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.10

MB 7000A.10 Disparagement Constituting Libel or Slander Per Se

[1] Instruction Disparagement Constituting Libel or Slander Per Se

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that Defendant's false communication about the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] is a libel as well as a trade libel. Libel is a kind of defamation. Defamation is an injury to a person's reputation. Libel is a defamation communicated by printing, writing, pictures, or any similarly permanent marks or symbols meant to be seen with the eyes.

Plaintiff has proved that [his/her/its] reputation was injured if [he/she/it] has proved that Defendant's publication exposed Plaintiff to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or caused Plaintiff to be shunned or avoided, or injured Plaintiff in [his/her/its] business, and that any of these injuries to Plaintiff's reputation would be caused by what appeared on the face of the publication itself without any reference to explanations or outside facts.

The Plaintiff is entitled to recover money damages for that injury unless Defendant proves that the publication was true or that it was privileged.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Plaintiff claims that Defendant's false communication about the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] is a slander as well as a trade libel. Slander is one kind of defamation. Defamation is an injury to a person's reputation. Slander is spoken defamation or defamation that is communicated by radio or television or any other machine.

Plaintiff has proved that [his/her/its] reputation was injured if [he/she/it] has proved that Defendant's spoken communication either:

- 1. Charged Plaintiff with a crime or with having been indicted, convicted, or punished for a crime; or
- 2. Tended to directly injure Plaintiff in [his/her/its] office, profession, trade, or business.

Plaintiff is entitled to recover money damages for that injury unless Defendant proves that [his/her/its] statement was true or that it was privileged.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 45a, 46; Finney v. Lockhart (1950) 35 Cal.2d 161, 163, 217 P.2d 19; Schomer v. Smidt (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 828, 834, 170 Cal.Rptr. 662; Albertini v. Schaefer (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 822, 829, 159 Cal.Rptr. 98; Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591; Douglas v. Janis (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 931, 940, 118 Cal.Rptr. 280.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the plaintiff claims that the defendant's communication was both a trade libel and libel or slander per se. If the court has already determined that the statement was libel or slander per se, use the instruction in MB 7000A.11[1].

If libel is at issue, this instruction should not be used with the option. If slander is at issue, the option should be used. If both are alleged, the whole instruction including the option should be used, with revisions to the instruction's first paragraph and the first paragraph of the option to avoid redundancy.

[3] Comment

[a] Libel Per Se Defined; Libel on Its Face Distinguished

Libel per se and libel on its face are two completely different concepts. Libel per se means a statement that is actionable in and of itself without any need for the pleading and proof of special damages. Libel on its face means a statement that carries a defamatory meaning on its face without the need to prove explanations or extrinsic facts [see Prosser & Keeton on Torts (5th ed. 1984), § 111, p. 782, § 112, pp. 795-796; McCormick on Damages (1935), § 113, pp. 417-419]. However, courts in California and elsewhere confused the two by holding that libel, always actionable per se at common law [see Prosser & Keeton on Torts (5th ed. 1984), § 112, pp. 795-796], required pleading and proof of special damages unless the statement at issue was libelous on its face [see Tonini v. Cevasco (1896) 114 Cal. 266, 270-271, 46 P. 103; Schomberg v. Walker (1901) 132 Cal. 224, 227, 64 P. 290]. This holding, criticized as without merit or logical foundation by numerous scholars [see Eldredge, The Spurious Rule of Libel Per Quod, 79 Harv. L. Rev. 733, 740 (1966); Carpenter, Libel Per Se in California and Some Other States, 17 So. Cal. L. Rev. 347 (1944); Comment, Libel and Slander, 19 So. Cal. L. Rev. 119, 120-121 (1945); McCormick on Damages (1935), § 113, pp. 417-418; Comment, Libel Per Se: Necessity of Alleging and Proving Special Damages in Libel Suits, 14 Cal. L. Rev. 61, 64-66 (1925)], has been codified in Civ. Code § 45a, which provides that a libel which is defamatory without the necessity of explanatory matter or extrinsic facts is a libel on its face, and that a defamatory statement not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges and proves that he or she has suffered special damage as a proximate result of that statement. Thus, under California law a statement that is libelous on its face is, as a result, libelous per se.

If a statement is libelous per se, then actual harm to the plaintiff's reputation is presumed, and he or she may recover general damages for that harm, if the statement is unprivileged and false [see MB 7000A.11[3]].

[b] Slander Per Se

Slander is defined in Civ. Code § 46. Civ. Code § 46(1)-(4) corresponds to the four types of slander per se generally accepted at common law as exceptions to the rule that an action for slander requires proof of special damages [see Prosser & Keeton on Torts (5th ed. 1984), § 112, pp. 788-793. It has been held that a slanderous statement falling within Civ. Code § 46] is slanderous per se and that slander per se is actionable without proof of special damages [Schomer v. Smidt (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 828, 834, 170 Cal.Rptr. 662 ; Albertini v. Schaefer (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 822, 829, 159 Cal.Rptr. 98 ; Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591], because damage to the plaintiff's reputation is conclusively presumed [Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591].

Only the first two definitions in Civ. Code § 46 are likely to apply in cases of trade libel. These definitions provide that a spoken statement or a communication by radio or other machine is slander if it charges a person with crime, or with having been indicted, convicted, or punished for crime, or if it tends to directly injure any person in that person's office, profession, trade, or business [Civ. Code § 46(1), (2)].

[c] Avoiding Special Damages Requirement

If a statement is libelous or slanderous per se, then special damages need not be pleaded or proved, because actual damage to the plaintiff is presumed as a matter of law [Finney v. Lockhart (1950) 35 Cal.2d 161, 163, 217 P.2d 19 ; Clark v. McClurg (1932) 215 Cal. 279, 283-284, 9 P.2d 505 ; Douglas v. Janis (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 931, 940, 118 Cal.Rptr. 280 ; Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591 ; Clay v. Lagiss (1956) 143 Cal.App.2d 441, 448, 299 P.2d 1025]. This means that an action for defamation per se may enable the plaintiff to avoid the special damages requirement of trade libel [see MB 7000A.06], and most trade libels can be interpreted to include some personal criticism of the tradesperson [Zerpol Corp. v. DMP Corp. (E.D. Pa. 1983) 561 F.Supp. 404, 409 ; Testing Systems, Inc. v. Magnaflux Corporation (E.D. Pa. 1966) 251 F.Supp. 286, 291].

Because of the desirability of avoiding the special damages requirement, it is always advisable to consider whether a trade libel action includes the elements of an action for libel or slander per se. In fact, the trend toward importation of defamation concepts, which concern injury to a person's reputation, into the area of disparagement, which conceptually involves injury to purely economic interests, can in part be explained as an outgrowth of the harshness of the special damages requirement: "Thus to avoid the near impossible burden of proving special damages, plaintiffs have frequently attempted to frame their complaints to sound in defamation rather than disparagement. Needless to say, the results of their efforts have been mixed and few bright line distinctions exist" [Zerpol Corp. v. DMP Corp. (E.D. Pa. 1983) 561 F.Supp. 404, 409].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Claim for Defamation Avoids Need to Prove

Special Damages: As indicated in the comments above, the advantage of including a claim for defamation (libel or slander regarding a person's reputation) is that it avoids the need to prove special damages. Whether or not a statement is defamatory is generally a question for the court. Any factual disputes, such as whether the statement was made, or whether the statement was false, are questions for the jury. This is a complicated area, so carefully think through your argument to the judge and to the jury. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[d] Constitutional Malice Requirement

If the action involves public concerns, presumed damages for defamation may not be awarded unless "actual malice" is shown under federal constitutional standards [Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 330-332, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789 ; Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 747, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406 ; Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1009, 1019, 271 Cal.Rptr. 30]. Actual malice is defined in New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] as knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard for the truth. Proof of actual malice requires a showing as to the defendant's state of mind; the plaintiff must show, by clear and convincing evidence, that at the time of publishing the statements at issue the defendant knew they were false or, in fact, entertained serious doubts as to their truthfulness [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1350, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 (trial court erred in giving instruction that permitted jury to find actual malice on objective, rather than subjective, basis); see also MB 7000A.23].

However, if a defamation does not involve matters of public concern, as will be the case in most trade libel cases, presumed damages can be awarded without a finding of actual malice under state law rules described in [a] and [b], above [Dun & Bradstreet v. Greenmoss Builders (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 762, 105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593]. For example, a false report of bankruptcy by a credit reporting company only to its customers who had agreed not to further disseminate the information is not a matter of public concern, and a finding of actual malice is not required by the First Amendment for an award of presumed and punitive damages [Dun & Bradstreet v. Greenmoss Builders (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 762-763, 105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593].

For further discussion of the scope of the First Amendment limitations on defamation under California defamation and trade libel law, see MB 7000A.21[3][e].

MB 7000A.11 Disparagement Constituting Libel or Slander Per Se--Prior Finding

[1] Instruction Disparagement Constituting Libel or Slander Per Se--Prior Finding

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Defendant published a false statement concerning the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services], then I have determined that you must also find that Plaintiff's reputation was injured as well, and [he/she/it] is entitled to general damages. This means that if you find that Defendant did publish this statement and that this statement was false, Plaintiff is entitled to recover for loss of reputation, shame, humiliation, and hurt feelings. The amount that Plaintiff is entitled to receive is for you to determine. In making this determination, calculate what amount seems just and reasonable to you, and consider the extent to which you believe the statement injured Plaintiff's reputation and feelings. Although Plaintiff need not offer any evidence of the injury to [his/her/its] reputation or feelings to recover, you should consider any evidence that is offered, unless I instruct you that the evidence is to be disregarded.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a cause of action for disparagement or trade libel is coupled with a defamation cause of action for libel per se. This particular instruction is an alternative to the instruction in MB 7000A.10[1], and should be used when the court has determined as a matter of law that the defendant's false statement concerning the quality of the plaintiff's goods or services constitutes libel per se. However, if the content of the statement published by the defendant is disputed, a special verdict should be submitted to the jury, and the court can defer its legal determination as to whether the statement is actionable as libel per se.

[3] Comment[a] Court Determination of Libel Per Se

In defamation cases, the court generally determines whether a statement is libelous on its face and therefore actionable per se [MacLeod v. Tribune Publishing Co. (1959) 52 Cal.2d 536, 546, 343 P.2d 36 ; see Mercado v. Hoefler (1961) 190 Cal.App.2d 12, 21, 11 Cal.Rptr. 787]. Presumably, the court would make the same determination in a trade libel case in which the plaintiff also alleged that the statements harmed his or her reputation and constituted libel per se.

[b] Presumption of General Damages

It is well established that actual injury is presumed, and that the plaintiff is entitled to general damages, when a defendant has published a statement that is libelous or slanderous per se [Schomer v. Smidt (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 828, 833-834, 170 Cal.Rptr. 662 ; Douglas v. Janis (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 931, 940, 118 Cal.Rptr. 280 ; Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591 ; Clay v. Lagiss (1956) 143 Cal.App.2d 441, 448, 299 P.2d 1025]. The amount of these damages is for the jury to determine [Lewis v. Hayes (1918) 177 Cal. 587, 590, 171 P. 293 ; Mercado v. Hoefler (1961) 190 Cal.App.2d 12, 20 n. 1, 11 Cal.Rptr. 787]. These presumed damages are sufficient to support the award of punitive damages even if no actual or nominal damages are awarded, because the law conclusively presumes actual harm to the plaintiff [Clark v. McClurg (1932) 215 Cal. 279, 283-285, 9 P.2d 505 ; Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358-359, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591], but the jury's discretion as to the amount of damages includes the discretion to award no general damages at all [see Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 358-359, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591 (punitive damages awarded without award of actual damages)]. In fact, some cases that speak of the effect of libel per se, rather than saying that the law presumes actual injury or that it presumes general damages, say that the law presumes that the plaintiff is entitled to at least nominal damages [Clark v. McClurg (1932) 215 Cal. 279, 283-285, 9 P.2d 505 ; Triton Ins. Underwriters v. National Chiropractic Ins. Co. (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 829, 833, 43 Cal.Rptr. 504 (jury award of $1.00 and costs of suit); Di Giorgio Fruit Corp. v. AFL-CIO (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 560, 577, 30 Cal.Rptr. 350]. It is unquestionably true that the jury need not award more than a nominal amount of general damages, but this is not the same thing as "nominal damages" [McCormick on Damages (1935), § 21, p. 87]. As Prosser points out, an award of nominal damages is inconsistent with the idea of assumed damages [see Prosser & Keeton on Torts (5th ed. 1984), § 112, p. 795]. However, an instruction that the plaintiff is entitled to "at least nominal damages" has been used without disapproval [Lewis v. Hayes (1918) 177 Cal. 587, 590, 171 P. 293], and defense attorneys should definitely ask for something in the instruction that makes it clear that the jury's discretion includes the discretion to award damages in a minimal amount [see Clark v. McClurg (1932) 215 Cal. 279, 283-285, 9 P.2d 505 ; Triton Ins. Underwriters v. National Chiropractic Ins. Co. (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 829, 833, 43 Cal.Rptr. 504 (jury award of $1.00 and costs of suit); Di Giorgio Fruit Corp. v. AFL-CIO (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 560, 577, 30 Cal.Rptr. 350 ; see also Contento v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 356, 359, 104 Cal.Rptr. 591 (when statement is found to be defamatory per se, award of punitive damages can be sustained despite jury's failure to award actual or nominal damages)].

MB 7000A.12 Damages--Disparagement Constituting Libel or Slander Per Se

[1] Instruction Damages--Disparagement Constituting Libel or Slander Per Se

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

I have already described to you the special damages that Plaintiff may recover based on [his/her/its] claim that Defendant published a false statement about the quality of Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services]. Because Plaintiff also alleges a separate claim for defamation based on [his/her/its] claim that this statement was _____ [libelous or slanderous], you must separately consider the question of damages as it relates to this second claim for defamation.

The first kind of damages Plaintiff may recover for defamation is called compensatory damages. It includes all damages that Plaintiff proves that [he/she/it] has suffered or will in the future suffer to [his/her/its] property, business, trade, profession, or occupation as a result of Defendant's statement. You should also include in your deliberations the amount of money Plaintiff has proved that [he/she/it] has spent, except for attorneys' fees, as a result of Defendant's statement.

In addition to compensatory damages, which I have just described to you, there is another kind of damages that Plaintiff may recover when Defendant's false statement is _____ [libelous or slanderous]. They are called general damages and are intended to compensate Plaintiff for the loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feelings that Plaintiff has experienced as a result of Defendant's false statement. Among the factors you may consider in computing general damages are the following:

1. The extent to which Defendant has published or circulated the false statement;
2. The shame, mortification, and hurt feelings that Plaintiff has suffered as a result of the publication of

Defendant's false statement;

3. Plaintiff's reputation, prominence, or good name in the community in which [he/she] lives before publication of Defendant's false statement, and the effect of the publication on Plaintiff's reputation, prominence, or good name; and

4. Plaintiff's professional or business standing in the community where [he/she/it] conducts business before and after publication of the false statement.

Although Plaintiff has brought two claims against Defendant, one for disparagement of [his/her/its] goods or services and one for _____ [libel or slander], you may not award Plaintiff damages for the same loss under each claim. In other words, if Plaintiff has proved special damages under its claim for disparagement, then you may not base any award of compensatory damages for _____ [libel or slander] on those same items of loss. Plaintiff is not permitted to recover twice for the same loss or harm.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 45a, 46(5), 48a(4); Albertini v. Schaefer (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 822, 829-830, 159 Cal.Rptr. 98 ; Di Giorgio Corp. v. Valley Labor Citizen (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 268, 277, 67 Cal.Rptr. 82 ; Fairfield v. American Photocopy Etc. Co. (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 82, 88-90, 291 P.2d 194 (by analogy--right to privacy).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a cause of action for trade libel is coupled with a defamation cause of action alleging defamation per se. If the defendant has made a retraction, the third paragraph of this instruction, which deals with general damages, should be omitted, unless there is an issue as to the retraction's sufficiency. General damages may still be available if the correction was not substantially as conspicuous as the statements complained of [Civ. Code § 48a(2)]. If the retraction's sufficiency is at issue, the instruction in MB 7000A.13 should be used, because the jury must be instructed that the general damages discussed above are available when a retraction has been published only if the retraction is not substantially as conspicuous as the statements complained of [Civ. Code § 48a(2); see MB 7000A.13]. In addition, the punitive damages instruction [see MB 7000A.07] should be modified and utilized in connection with the defamation cause of action if punitive damages are sought.

[3] Comment

Presumably, when a disparagement also constitutes libel per se and a demand for a retraction was not honored, general damages may be awarded under Civ. Code § 48a(4)(a), which defines general damages as "damages for loss of reputation, shame, mortification and hurt feelings" [see Di Giorgio Corp. v. Valley Labor Citizen (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 268, 277, 67 Cal.Rptr. 82 ; see also MB 7000A.13[3] for discussion of requirement that correction be substantially as conspicuous as statements complained of]. The court of appeal elaborated the type of damages recoverable for libel as follows: "One of the elements entering into damages for a libel is injury to the feelings of the person libeled. That injury may be inferred by the trier of fact from the testimony with relation to the social status of the person libeled. This inference may be supplemented by the direct statement of the plaintiff to the effect that his feelings were injured" [Fairfield v. American Photocopy Etc. Co. (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 82, 90, 291 P.2d 194 ; see Kerby v. Hal Roach Studios (1942) 53 Cal.App.2d 207, 213, 127 P.2d 577 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652H, Comment c].

A showing of special damages is required when a libelous statement is not libel per se [Civ. Code § 45a]. Libel per se is defined in Civ. Code § 45a [see MB 7000A.10]. Slander per se is defined in Civ. Code § 46(1)-(4) [see Albertini v. Schaefer (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 822, 829-830, 159 Cal.Rptr. 98 ; see also MB 7000A.10]. Special damages, defined in Civ. Code § 48a(4)(b), are awardable without regard to the existence of a retraction, and consist of "all damages which plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered in respect to his property, business, trade, profession or occupation, including such amounts of money as the plaintiff alleges and proves he has expended as a result of the alleged libel and no other" [see Di Giorgio Corp. v. Valley Labor Citizen (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 268, 277, 67 Cal.Rptr. 82]. Attorneys' fees are not recoverable [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021].

Note carefully that the statutory "special damages" recoverable in a defamation action are broader in scope than the special damages allowed in a disparagement action [see MB 7000A.06]. Obviously, divergent "special" damages instructions in combined disparagement/defamation actions would cause confusion. To avoid this confusion, these instructions use the word "compensatory" to refer to the statutory special damages recoverable in a defamation action.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Awarding of General Damages for Defamation

Per Se*: The court generally determines whether a statement constitutes defamation per se. If so, actual injury is presumed, and plaintiff can obtain general damages without need of further proof. The factors to be considered by the jury in awarding general damages are set forth in this instruction. By Ronald Oster

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.13

MB 7000A.13 Sufficiency of Correction: Availability of General Damages

[1] Instruction Sufficiency of Correction: Availability of General Damages

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

On _____ [date], Plaintiff served on Defendant a notice specifying the [allegedly] [libelous/slanderous] statements, and demanding that these statements be corrected. In its regular [issues/broadcasts] of _____ [specify date or dates of publication or broadcast of alleged corrections], Defendant [published/broadcast] a statement that it claims is a correction. The law requires a correction to be [published/broadcast] in substantially as conspicuous a manner as the [allegedly] [libelous/slanderous] statements. Plaintiff may not recover general [or punitive] damages unless [he/she/it] proves that the statement published by Defendant did not qualify as a correction.

The [allegedly] [libelous/slanderous] statements [published/broadcast] by Defendant on _____ [date], and the statement [published/broadcast] by Defendant on _____ [specify date or dates of publication or broadcast of alleged corrections] have been presented to you in evidence. You are to determine from this evidence whether the statement [published/broadcast] by Defendant on _____ [specify date or dates of publication or broadcast of alleged corrections] is a correction of the [allegedly] [libelous/slanderous] statements [published/broadcast] by Defendant on _____ [date] in substantially as conspicuous a manner as the statements complained of.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 48a; Pierce v. San Jose Mercury News (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 1626, 1631-1633, 263 Cal.Rptr. 410 ; Twin Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 656, 660-662, 256 Cal.Rptr. 310 ; Behrendt v. Times-Mirror Co. (1938) 30 Cal.App.2d 77, 87-89, 85 P.2d 949 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the trade libel complained of is also a libel or slander per se [see MB 7000A.10 -MB 7000A.12] and a dispute exists over the sufficiency of a correction published pursuant to the plaintiff's demand under Civ. Code § 48a. The instruction assumes that the only issue regarding the correction is whether it was published or broadcast in substantially as conspicuous a manner as the statements complained of [see Civ. Code § 48a(2); see also [3][a], below]. If other points are at issue, such as whether the plaintiff served a notice and demand at all, or whether the service was timely [see Civ. Code § 48a(1); see also [3][a], below], the jury will need to be instructed on these points.

Whether the bracketed "allegedly" should be inserted before "libelous" or "slanderous" depends on whether there has been a prior finding that the statements complained of were libelous or slanderous per se [see MB 7000A.11].

The bracketed "or punitive" should be inserted before "damages" if the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Demand for Correction

If a trade libel in a newspaper or on a radio or television broadcast is also a libel or slander per se, and a demand for a correction was not honored, it would appear that general damages may be awarded [see Civ. Code §§ 48a, 48.5(4) ("radio" and "radio broadcast" defined to include television); see also MB 7000A.12[3] for discussion of this point and of what constitutes "general damages" under Civ. Code § 48a(4)(a)]. Even when the requested correction is published, general damages are available if the correction is not sufficient [Civ. Code § 48a(2)]. To recover more than special damages for a libel in a newspaper or a slander in a radio or television broadcast, a plaintiff must serve a written notice identifying the statements complained of and demanding that the statements be corrected. This notice and demand must be served on the publisher at the place of publication or on the broadcaster at the place of broadcast within 20 days after knowledge of the publication or broadcast complained of [Civ. Code § 48a(1)].

If a correction is demanded in the required manner, and a correction is not published in the newspaper or broadcast on the radio or television station "in substantially as conspicuous a manner" as the statements complained of, then the plaintiff may recover general and exemplary damages as well as special damages. The correction must be in a regular issue that is published or broadcast within three weeks after service of the notice and demand for correction [Civ. Code § 48a(2)]. Whether the retraction was published or broadcast "in substantially as conspicuous a manner" as the statements complained of is a question of fact for the jury [Pierce v. San Jose Mercury News (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 1626, 1631-1633, 263 Cal.Rptr. 410 ; Twin Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 656, 660-662, 256 Cal.Rptr. 310 ; Behrendt v. Times-Mirror Co. (1938) 30 Cal.App.2d 77, 87-89, 85 P.2d 949] .

The plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving notice, demand, and failure to correct [Civ. Code § 48a(2)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Notice and Demand Requirement: The instruction in [1], above, addresses additional requirements that apply to defamation claims based on newspaper articles or slander claims based on radio or television broadcasts. Within 20 days after plaintiff learns of the defamatory statements, plaintiff must serve a notice specifying the defamatory statements and must demand a correction [Civ. Code § 48a(1)]. This instruction assumes that a proper notice and demand was timely served. However, if there are factual disputes regarding the notice and demand, the jury will have to be instructed on those issues as well. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Fact Versus Opinion

Statements of opinion are constitutionally protected; consequently, an essential element of any claim that is based on the publication of an allegedly false statement is that the statement was reasonably understood to be a statement of fact [Baker v. Los Angeles Herald Examiner (1986) 42 Cal.3d 254, 259-260, 228 Cal.Rptr. 206, 721 P.2d 87 ; Gregory v.

McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1976) 17 Cal.3d 596, 600-601, 131 Cal.Rptr. 641, 552 P.2d 425 ; Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 958, 970-971, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 83].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Fact vs. Opinion: There can be a thin or murky line between statements of fact and statements of opinion. Defense counsel will usually address this issue in a demurrer or by way of summary judgment. If the issue is not decided by the court and is submitted to the jury, this instruction does not provide much guidance. A little fuller explanation can be found in *CACI No. 1707. PART B. DEFENSES

MB 7000A.20 Privileged Communications--Official Duties or Proceedings

[1] Instruction Privileged Communications--Official Duties or Proceedings

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Publication of a statement that would otherwise be trade libel is absolutely privileged--meaning that Plaintiff may not recover for the statement--if the statement was made in either of the following circumstances:

- 1. The proper discharge of an official duty; or
- 2. Any legislative, judicial, or other official proceeding.

Publication of a statement is also absolutely privileged when the statement is:

[Select any of following that are applicable]

- 1. A fair and true report contained in, or a communication to, a public journal of a judicial, legislative, or other official proceeding, or of anything said in the course of such a proceeding.
- 2. A fair and true report contained in a public journal of a verified charge or complaint made by any person to a public official, which led to the issuance of a warrant.
- 3. A fair and true report [not necessarily contained in a public journal] of the proceedings of a lawful public meeting.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, a statement made by a report contained in, or a communication to, a public journal is not privileged if the statement does any of the following:

- (1) Violates Rule 5-120 of the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct concerning trial publicity;
- (2) Breaches a court order; or
- (3) Violates any requirement of confidentiality imposed by law.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, statements made concerning a third party in any pleading or affidavit filed in an action to dissolve a marriage are not privileged unless all of the following additional requirements are satisfied:

- 1. Defendant verified the pleading or swore to the truth of the affidavit under penalty of perjury;
- 2. Defendant made the statement without actual malice, meaning without hatred, spite, or ill will;
- 3. Defendant had reasonable or probable cause to believe the statement was true; and
- 4. Defendant's statement was material and relevant to the issues in the divorce action.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 47(a), (b), (d), (e); Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal.3d 205, 215-216, 266 Cal.Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365 ; Smith v. Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 625, 630, 223 Cal.Rptr. 339 ; Block v. Sacramento Clinical Labs, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 386, 389-390, 182 Cal.Rptr. 438 ; 117 Sales Corp. v. Olsen (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 645, 651, 145 Cal.Rptr. 778 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that the alleged disparaging statement was privileged because it was made (1) in discharge of an official duty, (2) in the course of official proceedings, or (3) in reports of official proceedings or public meetings.

The instruction's first optional paragraph should be used only if a defendant has made a statement that (1) violates Rule 5-120 of the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct (concerning trial publicity), (2) breaches a court order, or (3) violates any requirement of confidentiality imposed by law [see Civ. Code § 47(d)(2)].

The second optional paragraph of the instruction should be used only in the rare circumstance in which a defendant has published disparaging statements concerning a third party or its products as part of a divorce proceeding.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use of "Litigation Privilege": Of the various privileges covered by this instruction, the one that comes up the most is the privilege applicable to judicial proceedings [Civ. Code § 47(b)]. The so-called "litigation privilege" extends beyond statements made in a pleading and has been given a relatively wide application (e.g., press releases announcing the filing of a lawsuit). Note that the privilege is absolute, regardless of the degree of malice involved. However, the "litigation privilege" is a complicated area; be careful in these situations. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

The privileges contained in Civ. Code § 47 are fully applicable to torts based on an injurious falsehood [Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 378-379, 295 P.2d 405 ; Block v. Sacramento Clinical Labs, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 386, 389-390, 182 Cal.Rptr. 438], including disparagement or trade libel actions [117 Sales Corp. v. Olsen (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 645, 651, 145 Cal.Rptr. 778].

Communications that are made in the proper discharge of an official duty or that occur in the course of any official proceeding such as a court trial or legislative hearing are absolutely privileged, and provide a complete defense to a trade libel action [Civ. Code § 47(a), (b); see Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal.3d 205, 215-216, 218, 266 Cal.Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365 (holding Civ. Code § 47(b) privilege to be absolute); Rosenthal v. Vogt (1991) 229 Cal.App.3d 69, 73-74, 280 Cal.Rptr. 1 (Civ. Code § 47(b) privilege for communications in official proceedings is absolute)]. There are four narrowly drawn exceptions to this privilege, one of which applies only to certain statements made in proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation [see Civ. Code § 47(b)(1)]. The other three exceptions, none of which are likely to apply in a trade libel action, are the following:

- The privilege does not apply to a communication made to further an act of intentional destruction or alteration of physical evidence that is undertaken for the purpose of depriving a party to litigation of the use of that evidence, whether or not the content of the communication is the subject of a subsequent publication or broadcast that is privileged under Civ. Code § 47 [Civ. Code § 47(b)(2)];
- A communication made in a judicial proceeding that knowingly conceals the existence of an insurance policy is not privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b) [Civ. Code § 47(b)(3)]; and
- A recorded lis pendens is not a privileged communication unless it identifies an action previously filed with a court of competent jurisdiction that affects the title or right of possession of real property, as authorized or required by law [Civ. Code § 47(b)(4)]. Although this exception is not likely to be relevant to a trade libel action, it may in some cases be relevant to an action for slander of title [see MB 7000A.30 -MB 7000A.33].

A fair and true report of communications made in official proceedings is likewise privileged [Civ. Code § 47(d), (e)]. The law makes privileged both a fair and true report in, and any communication to, a public journal of a legislative, judicial, or other official proceeding, or of anything said in the course of such proceeding, or of a verified charge or complaint made by any person to a public official on which complaint a warrant has been issued [Civ. Code § 47(d)(1)]. However, a communication to a public journal is not privileged if it (1) violates Rule 5-120 of the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct (concerning trial publicity), (2) breaches a court order, or (3) violates any requirement of confidentiality imposed by law [Civ. Code § 47(d)(2)]. Although the fair and true report privileges contained in Civ. Code § 47(d) and (e) are not expressly denoted as absolute, the omission of the "without malice" requirement from those statutory provisions renders the privilege essentially absolute [Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 648 (10th ed. 2005)].

PART B. DEFENSES

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.21

MB 7000A.21 Statement by Interested Person

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A spoken or written statement that would otherwise be a trade libel may be "privileged." If Defendant's statement is privileged, then Plaintiff may not recover damages for that statement. Statements made to interested persons are privileged. An "interested person" is simply one who has a legitimate interest in the subject matter of the statement. This interest can be financial. For example, a bank loan officer is financially interested in the contents of a credit report on a person who wishes to borrow money from that officer's bank. There are other types of interest. Church members, for example, share a common interest in the affairs of their church.

[EITHER, if court has already determined that third party is an "interested person"]

In this case, the court has already determined, as a matter of law, that the person to whom Defendant made [some of] the statements at issue in this case, _____ [name of interested person], is an "interested person." Therefore, you must determine whether or not the statements Defendant made to _____ [name of interested person] were privileged under the instructions I am now about to give you.

[OR, if jury is to determine whether third party is an "interested person"]

You must first determine whether or not the person to whom Defendant made [some of] the statements at issue in this case, _____ [name of interested person], was an "interested person" under the instructions I just gave you. If you find that _____ [name of interested person] was not an interested person, then the statements made by Defendant to _____ [name of interested person] are not privileged, and the Defendant may be held liable for those statements if you find that Plaintiff is otherwise entitled to recover for trade libel under the instructions I have previously given you. If you find that _____ [name of interested person] was an interested person, then you must determine whether the statements Defendant made to _____ [name of interested person] were privileged under the instructions I am now about to give you.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

A statement made by Defendant to an interested person is privileged if Defendant proves that:

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

The interested person shares a common interest with Defendant, and the statement is of a kind reasonably calculated to protect or further that interest.

[OR]

Defendant stands in such relation to the interested person that it is reasonable to suppose that the motive for the statement is innocent.

[OR]

Defendant was requested by the interested person to give the information.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

However, even if you find that Defendant has proved that one or more of the statements [he/she/it] made to _____ [name of interested person] were privileged under the instructions I have just given you, the privilege does not apply to a statement if you find that Plaintiff has proved any one of the following facts concerning that statement:

1. Defendant made the statement out of hatred, spite, or ill will.
2. Defendant knew that the statement was false.
3. Defendant lacked any reasonable basis for believing the statement to be true. The privilege is not defeated merely because Defendant was careless in checking the statement's truth. To lose the benefit of the privilege, Defendant must have been so careless that [his/her/its] conduct showed a wanton and reckless disregard of the consequences and of the rights and the feelings of others.
4. Part of Defendant's statement was not related to the interest that the privilege was meant to protect.
5. Defendant published the statement to someone who did not need to see or hear it for Defendant's interest to be protected. This does not mean that the privilege is always defeated if any person sees or hears the statement who did not need to see or hear it for the protection of Defendant's interest. To preserve the privilege, Defendant is only required to choose a reasonable and appropriate way of communicating [his/her/its] statement.

6. Defendant's chief motive in making the statement was any motive other than the protection of [his/her/its] interest.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction may be of limited utility in trade libel cases because malice is one of the elements of the tort [see MB 7000A.05]. Proof that a statement was made with actual malice defeats the qualified privilege of Civ. Code § 47(c). Yet, some showing of malice must be made as part of the prima facie case of trade libel before a claim of privilege would be necessary to defeat the action. Therefore, only in the limited circumstances when malice is inferred from the statement at issue (an adequate showing to establish the prima facie case but specifically inadequate pursuant to Civ. Code § 48 to defeat the qualified privilege of Civ. Code § 47(c)) will the "interested person" privilege arise. In that sense, the "interested person" privilege contrasts with the absolute privilege for statements in, or concerning, official proceedings [Civ. Code § 47(b); see MB 7000A.20], which operates as a defense regardless of the degree of malice with which the communication was made.

If the facts of the case at issue bear too close a resemblance to the examples of interested persons given in Paragraph 1 of the instruction, counsel should change or delete those examples. Counsel should consider making the instructions more specific by substituting the name of the interested person to whom the statement was made for the term "interested person."

Counsel should also choose as many of the listed methods of defeating this conditional privilege from the options given in the instruction as are at issue in the case.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][f], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Interested Person" Privilege: The categories defining an "interested person" are relatively broad. Accordingly, the critical dispute usually involves the existence of one or more facts identified at the end of the instruction that overcome the privilege. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Conditional Privilege for Communications to Interested Persons--Application to Trade Libel

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, applying California law, has held that the conditional privilege of Civ. Code § 47(c) for communications to interested persons applies to actions premised on trade libel [Kemart Corp. v. Printing Arts Research Lab, Inc. (9th Cir. 1959) 269 F.2d 375, 393]. In addition, California courts have held that the privileges contained in Civ. Code § 47 are applicable to trade libel actions [see Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 378-379, 295 P.2d 405 ; Block v. Sacramento Clinical Labs, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 386, 389-390, 182 Cal.Rptr. 438 (specific holding of both cases limited to Civ. Code § 47(b)). Thus, for example, otherwise libelous statements by a seller to a prospective customer concerning a competitor's products are conditionally privileged and not actionable unless the privilege is defeated. Conduct that would otherwise be actionable as a tort is not actionable if that conduct is privileged [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 10; see Earp v. Nobmann (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 270, 277, 281-282, 175 Cal.Rptr. 767] .

The California Supreme Court has suggested that "the characterization of the privilege as qualified or conditional is incorrect to the extent that it suggests the privilege is defeasible." The Court described the use of the terms "qualified" or "conditional" as "somewhat misleading" [Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 723 n.7, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406]. Civ. Code § 47(c) defines a privileged communication as one made, without malice, to an interested person. "Thus, if malice is shown, the privilege is not merely overcome; it never arises in the first instance" [Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 723 n.7, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406]. The Supreme Court added that it "is the occasion giving rise to the publication that is conditionally privileged, i.e., under specified conditions the occasion gives rise to a privilege" [Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 723 n.7, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406]. Although this is a correct analysis of the statute, describing the interested person privilege as a conditional privilege that may be defeated by malice is nonetheless a useful shorthand, aptly suggesting the process usually required by the burden of proof. The burden of proof on the issue of the Civ. Code § 47(c) privilege requires the defendant to establish the privilege by proving that the communication was made to an interested person, and the plaintiff, to recover, must then prove that the communication was made with malice [see [d], below, for discussion of burden of proof].

[b] When "Interested Person" Privilege Applies

The conditional privilege of Civ. Code § 47(c) for communications to an "interested person" may be invoked in the following three different situations:

- The privilege applies when a communication is between two people who share a common interest and the communication is of a kind reasonably calculated to protect or further that interest [Civ. Code § 47(c); Williams v. Taylor (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 745, 751, 181 Cal.Rptr. 423 (by analogy)].
- The privilege also applies when the interested person has requested the information from the defendant [Civ. Code § 47(c)] and when the relationship between the defendant and the interested person gives reasonable grounds for believing that the defendant's motive for the statement was an innocent one [Civ. Code § 47(c)]. Reference to defamation cases in which the Civ. Code § 47(c) privilege has arisen provides examples of privileged "interested person" communications [see, e.g., Mason v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (1975) 52 Cal.App.3d 429, 438, 125 Cal.Rptr. 53 (telegraph company may presume that addressee and sender of telegram are "interested persons"); Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 841, 846-847, 115 Cal.Rptr. 582 (plaintiff's fellow employees were "interested persons" in connection with statements concerning plaintiff's forced retirement); Neal v. Gatlin (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 871, 877, 111 Cal.Rptr. 117 (potential employer and former employer are "interested persons" in connection with communications concerning potential employee)].
- The privilege specifically applies to certain communications regarding job performance or qualifications of an applicant for employment made by a current or former employer to a prospective employer [see Civ. Code § 47(c)]. However, this application of the privilege is more likely to be relevant to an action for personal defamation than to a trade libel action.

The California Supreme Court has ruled that the interested person privilege of Civ. Code § 47(c) does not create a public-interest privilege for the news media to publish or broadcast defamatory statements about a private person. A defamatory statement about a private person is not privileged because it is about a matter of public interest [Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 738, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406]. The word "interested" in Civ. Code § 47(c) means something narrower and more specific than the interest that readers and viewers have in the news of the day [Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 738, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406]. The United States Supreme Court has similarly declined to extend the constitutional privilege to defame to cover all matters of public interest [see [e], below].

[c] Defeating Privilege; Actual Malice

A plaintiff faced with the potential applicability of conditional privilege must overcome it to recover. This can be done by the proof of actual malice, defined as hatred, spite, or ill will [Kemart Corp. v. Printing Arts Research Lab., Inc. (9th Cir. 1959) 269 F.2d 375, 393 ; Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal.3d 932, 944-945, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 (by analogy)]. The plaintiff can also defeat the privilege by proving any of the following:

- That the defendant knew the statement was false [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 600];
- That the statement included irrelevant defamatory matter not related to the interest to be protected [Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 841, 847, 115 Cal.Rptr. 582 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 605A]; or
- That the defendant's primary motive in making the statement was not the protection of that interest which is the source of the privilege [Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal.3d 932, 944-945, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 (by analogy); Brewer v. Second Baptist Church (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 797, 197 P.2d 713].

The privilege can also be defeated by proof of (1) excessive publication [Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 841, 847, 115 Cal.Rptr. 582], or (2) the defendant's lack of a reasonable belief in the statement's truth [Rollenhagen v. City of Orange (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 414, 424, 172 Cal.Rptr. 49 , partially disapproved on other grounds, Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 738, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406 ; Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 368, 371-372, 83 Cal.Rptr. 540]. However, these defenses against a claim of privilege are somewhat more complex than the others. Excessive publication means publication to any person who does not need to hear the statement for the defendant's interest to be protected, although it is not necessary to insure that the statement is not seen or heard by any such person to retain the privilege. All that is necessary is that the defendant choose a means of communication that is reasonable and appropriate [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 604]. As for the defendant's lack of a reasonable belief that the statement was true, the privilege is not defeated merely because the plaintiff proves that the defendant was negligent in checking the statement's truth. To lose the benefit of the privilege, the defendant must have been so careless that his or her conduct showed a wanton and reckless disregard of the consequences and of the rights and the feelings of others [Rollenhagen v. City of Orange (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 414, 424, 172 Cal.Rptr. 49 , partially disapproved on other grounds, Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 738, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406 ; Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 368, 371-372, 83 Cal.Rptr. 540].

When a newspaper report attributes charges of official impropriety to a third person, the mere absence of belief in those charges does not give rise to an inference of malice. A newspaper need not determine the truth or falsity of charges against a public official, because the publication of charges of official misconduct serves the purpose behind the interested person privilege, that of informing the public, which has an interest in learning of possible official misconduct. The report must, nonetheless, be substantially accurate, and the privilege may be lost if the report of the charges is exaggerated, overdrawn, or colored to the plaintiff's detriment [Stockton Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 966, 980-985, 254 Cal.Rptr. 389].

The burden of proving a conditional privilege's existence is on the defendant [Fairfield v. Hagan (1967) 248 Cal.App.2d 194, 204, 56 Cal.Rptr. 402 (by analogy)]. However, once that defense is established, the burden of overcoming the privilege is on the plaintiff [Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 841, 848, 115 Cal.Rptr. 582 (by analogy); see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 702 (10th ed. 2005)]. If the communication's privileged nature appears on the face of the complaint, the burden is on the plaintiff to plead and prove facts that overcome the privilege [Felton v. Schaeffer (1991) 229 Cal.App.3d 229, 238 n.7, 279 Cal.Rptr. 713 ; Freeman v. Mills (1950) 97 Cal.App.2d 161, 167, 217 P.2d 687].

[e] The Constitutional Privilege to Defame

The First Amendment restrictions on defamation set by the United States Supreme Court in New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] and its progeny do constitute a conditional constitutional privilege to defame [see Prosser and Keeton on Torts, § 112, pp. 796-797, § 113, pp. 805-808 (West 5th ed. 1984)] that operates very like the privilege in Civ. Code § 47(c).

The New York Times case held that before a public official could sue the New York Times newspaper for libel, the First Amendment required that official to prove actual malice, defined as knowing or reckless falsity [New York Times Co. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686]. The result was that a statement clearly libelous at common law was not a libel, that in effect it was privileged, unless actual malice, as defined by the Supreme Court, was established. This rule was later extended to public figures [Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts (1967) 388 U.S. 130, 155, 87 S.Ct. 1975, 18 L.Ed.2d 1094], but the Supreme Court rejected the extension of the rule to all matters of public interest [Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 346, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789 ; see also Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 738, 257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406 , discussed in [b], above, which held that Civ. Code § 47(c) does not create a public-interest privilege for the news media]. Gertz also held that states could set whatever standards for liability for defamation they chose in cases involving private plaintiffs so long as they did not impose liability without fault [Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 347, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789] and required proof of knowing or reckless falsity before damages could be presumed or punitive damages imposed [Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 349, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789].

In cases in which the plaintiff's claim is subject to the requirements of New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, the plaintiff must prove actual malice by clear and convincing evidence [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711]. Proof of actual malice requires a showing as to the defendant's state of mind; the plaintiff must show that at the time of publishing the statements the defendant knew they were false or, in fact, entertained serious doubts as to their truthfulness [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1350, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 (trial court erred in giving instruction that permitted jury to find actual malice on objective, rather than subjective, basis); see also MB 7000A.23].

The holding in Gertz on presumed and punitive damages has been limited to cases involving matters of public concern [Dun & Bradstreet v. Greenmoss Builders (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 757-761, 105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593]. Therefore, in most trade libel cases the state law conditional privilege will be applicable because these cases do not usually involve matters of public concern. For instance, a false report of bankruptcy by a credit reporting company only to its customers who had agreed not to further disseminate the information is not a matter of public concern [Dun & Bradstreet v. Greenmoss Builders (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 761-763, 105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593]. However, if matters of public concern are involved, actual malice must be established before presumed or punitive damages can be awarded.

PART B. DEFENSES

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.22

MB 7000A.22 Conditional Privilege--Unfavorable Comparison

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Even if you find that Defendant wrote or spoke statements that make false and unfavorable comparisons of a general nature between Defendant's product and Plaintiff's product, Plaintiff may not recover damages for the statements if Defendant proves both of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff and Defendant are competitors; and
- 2. That Defendant did not know the statements were false and did not publish the statements with a reckless disregard for their truth or falsity.

The law says that Defendant is privileged to make false and unfavorable comparisons if [he/she/it] can prove the facts I have just described. However, this privilege does not apply if you find that Defendant made the statements in a way that suggested [he/she/it] had the necessary facts in hand to support the statements; that is, that the statements were based on such things as independent studies.

Authorities: Sims v. Mack Truck Corp. (E.D. Pa. 1980) 488 F.Supp. 592, 605 ; Testing Systems, Inc. v. Magnaflux Corporation (E.D. Pa. 1966) 251 F.Supp. 286, 288-289 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in situations limited to when the plaintiff and defendant are competitors and the defendant's statements at least arguably are descriptive of differences between the plaintiff's and the defendant's products or services.

The fact situations that will warrant the use of this instruction will in most cases also warrant the use of the statutory "interested person" privilege of Civ. Code § 47(c) [see MB 7000A.21].

[3] Comment

This common law privilege covers general untruthful and unfavorable comparisons by one competitor about the product of another [Sims v. Mack Truck Corp. (E.D. Pa. 1980) 488 F.Supp. 592, 605]. The type of statements contemplated by the privilege include traditional sales puffing, such as, "my product consistently outperforms my competitor's product." The privilege is conditional [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 649], and, accordingly, will be forfeited if a statement is made with knowledge of its falsity or with reckless disregard for its truth [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-283, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686]. Moreover, the privilege does not cover statements implying that the party making the statement has the necessary facts to support it [Testing Systems, Inc. v. Magnaflux Corporation (E.D. Pa. 1966) 251 F.Supp. 286, 289].

MB 7000A.23 Public Figure Standard--Prior Finding[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The law provides that Defendant is not liable for a false communication concerning the Plaintiff's _____ [describe goods or services] unless the communication was made by Defendant either with knowledge of its falsity, or with a reckless disregard of whether it was true or false. To show that Defendant made the communication with reckless disregard of whether it was true or false, the plaintiff must prove that the Defendant, in fact, had serious doubts about the truthfulness of the communication when it was made.

Plaintiff must prove this knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard for the truth by clear and convincing evidence. "Clear and convincing evidence" means evidence that makes you believe that it is highly probable that Defendant made this communication with knowledge of its falsity or with reckless disregard of whether it was true or false. Plaintiff must have offered evidence that is so clear as to leave no substantial doubt. Do not measure Plaintiff's evidence by the number of witnesses or the amount of evidence that [he/she/it] offers. Measure Plaintiff's evidence by how convincing that evidence is.

Superior Court* (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 646, 659, 165 Cal.Rptr. 347 (by analogy).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in the unusual case in which the plaintiff has become a public figure as a result of voluntarily and actively seeking, in a matter of public interest, to influence the resolution of any issues concerning the quality of its product or service [see Franklin v. Benevolent etc. Order of Elks (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 915, 929, 159 Cal.Rptr. 131 (defining "public figure")]. The instruction presumes that the court has found that plaintiff is a "public figure" with regard to the goods or services alleged to be disparaged. However, as discussed in [3][b], below, one court applied the "actual malice" standard to a factual situation in which the plaintiff was not a public figure when the statements made addressed a matter of public concern and were directed toward plaintiff's products rather than its reputation [see Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627].

Attorneys defending against trade libel actions should consider requesting this instruction because of the added burden of proof (clear and convincing evidence) it places on the plaintiff, particularly when the plaintiff relies exclusively or principally on implied malice to establish the element of malice required in a trade libel action. Otherwise, the actual malice shown in plaintiff's prima facie case might be adequate to meet the constitutional malice required by the "public figure" standard.

[3] Comment

The First Amendment as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court in New York Times Co. v. Sullivan [New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] and its progeny limits California libel law. Under this limitation, a plaintiff who is a "public figure" must prove "actual malice" by clear and convincing evidence as set forth in New York Times to recover [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts (1967) 388 U.S. 130, 162-165, 87 S.Ct. 1975, 18 L.Ed.2d 1094 ; New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280, 285-286, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686 ; Thomas v. L.A. Times Communications, LLC (C.D. Cal. 2002) 189 F.Supp.2d 1005, 1010-1011 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see [c], below, regarding what constitutes clear and convincing evidence]. A business or corporation as well as a natural person may be a "public figure" [Rancho La Costa, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 646, 659, 165 Cal.Rptr. 347].

In First Amendment law, "actual malice" is "a term of art denoting deliberate or reckless falsification" [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 499, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447]. "Actual malice" should not be confused with evil intent, spite, or ill will. A defamatory statement is made with actual malice when made with actual knowledge that it is false or with reckless disregard as to whether it is false or not [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510-511, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686]. The United States Supreme Court conceded that "actual malice" is an "unfortunate" phrase, as likely to confuse as to enlighten [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 511, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447]. For this reason, the Court recommends that "[i]n place of the term actual malice, it is better practice that jury instructions refer to publication of a statement with knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard as to truth or falsity" [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 511, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447]. The instruction in [1], above, complies with this recommendation.

[b] Application to Trade Libel Actions

The applicability of the "public figure" standard to actions grounded solely in trade libel or product disparagement remains an open question. In a 1998 decision, a California court of appeal applied the "actual malice" standard in a case in which the statements made about a product involved a matter of public concern [see Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627]. In another context, the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff who asserts a cause of action that has as its gravamen the publication or dissemination of an injurious falsehood must meet the constitutionally-mandated requirements that apply in defamation cases [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1042-1049, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177]. A United States District Court in Massachusetts concluded that the standard does fully apply to product disparagement cases when the plaintiff has conducted a vigorous promotional campaign on behalf of a product and this campaign preceded the defendant's alleged disparagement. The court reasoned that the application of the "public figure" doctrine was even more appropriate in the commercial context because the individual's interest in reputation was not at stake and because the manufacturer always has access to the means to refute disparaging comments [Bose Corp. v. Consumers U. of U.S., Inc. (D. Mass. 1981) 508 F.Supp. 1249, 1270-1274 , rev'd on other grounds, (1st Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 189, 194 , aff'd, 466 U.S. 485 (1984)].

In 1985, the United States Supreme Court indicated that the issue may be whether the libel action involves matters of public concern, rather than a public figure. The Court held that federal constitutional standards were only applicable to libel actions that involved matters of public concern in holding that a finding of actual malice was not necessary to award presumed and punitive damages if the action did not involve a matter of public concern [Dun & Bradstreet v. Greenmoss Builders (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 763, 105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593]. Therefore, if the action involves public concerns, attorneys for defendants should consider requesting this instruction.

In a 1998 California case, a court of appeal applied the "actual malice" standard to a factual situation in which the plaintiff was not a public figure, the statements made addressed a matter of public concern, and the statements were directed toward plaintiff's products rather than its reputation [Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1363-1365, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627 (statements in book about presence of benzene in plaintiff's pharmaceutical consumer goods found to be matter of public concern)]. The trial court instructed the jury that they could find actual malice if the person making the statements "must have had" serious doubts about the truth of those statements. The court found that the recklessness or doubt that gives rise to actual malice is subjective recklessness or doubt, and held that the trial court erred in giving an instruction which permitted the jury to find actual malice on an objective basis [Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1365-1366, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627]. For further discussion of the scope of limitations on defamation under California defamation and trade libel law, see MB 7000A.21[3][e].

In practice, the "public figure" standard may be of relatively little concern in trade libel or product disparagement cases under California law, because malice, though differently defined, is included as part of the prima facie case. If plaintiff introduces sufficient evidence of actual malice to meet the constitutional standard for malice, defendant will gain nothing by seeking to establish that plaintiff is a "public figure." However, the constitutional malice standard does require proof of malice by clear and convincing evidence, a higher burden than the traditional preponderance of the evidence standard under California law [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280, 285-286, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686 ; McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see Evid. Code § 115 (burden of proof requires proof by preponderance of evidence except as otherwise provided by law)]. The constitutional standard requires a higher degree of culpability [McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 871-872, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711]. Accordingly, defendants should always consider requesting a public figure determination, thereby requiring plaintiff to prove constitutional malice by clear and convincing evidence.

[c] Clear and Convincing Evidence

Proof of constitutional malice must be by evidence that is clear and convincing [Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510, 111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447 ; New York Times Co., Inc. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 285-286, 84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 580A, Comment f.]. "Clear and convincing evidence" has been variously defined as evidence that is (1) clear, explicit, and unequivocal; (2) so clear as to leave no substantial doubt; and (3) strong enough to command the unhesitating assent of every reasonable mind [see Sheehan v. Sullivan (1899) 126 Cal. 189, 193, 58 P. 543 ; United Professional Planning, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 377, 386, 88 Cal.Rptr. 551]. Clear and convincing evidence must persuade the trier of fact that it is highly probable that the facts asserted are true [Witkin, California Evidence, vol. 1, Burden of Proof and Presumptions, § 38

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Burden of Proof Increases When Plaintiff Is

Public Figure: If the court finds that plaintiff is a public figure, the burden of proof dramatically increases. Plaintiff must prove actual malice [see [a], above], which is a subjective test, and must prove actual malice by clear and convincing evidence. Defense counsel will emphasize both of these points in closing argument. By Ronald Oster

[d] "Public Figure" Issue a Matter of Law

A question of constitutional law as to whether the plaintiff is a public figure is a question for the court and may not be submitted to the jury [Harris v. Tomczak (E.D. Cal. 1982) 94 F.R.D. 687, 696 ; see Weingarten v. Block (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 129, 134-135, 162 Cal.Rptr. 701].

CHAPTER 70A Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions PART C. SLANDER OF TITLE

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.30

MB 7000A.30 Definition of Slander of Title

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Slander of title is a false statement that is spoken, written, or communicated by conduct, and that disparages or casts doubt on Plaintiff's title to _____ [personal property or land], resulting in financial loss to Plaintiff.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as a brief definition of slander of title and should serve as an introduction to the instruction in MB 7000A.31[1] which gives the elements of the cause of action and the plaintiff's burden of proof.

It is important to remember that slander of title claims are related to the broader concept of trade libel or product disparagement. Accordingly, whenever a slander of title instruction is appropriate, a cause of action for trade libel may exist as well, and the instructions in Part A may also be appropriate.

For coverage of trade libel and slander of title, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part C.

[3] Comment[a] Similarity of Slander of Title and Trade Libel

Slander of title and trade libel, while distinct torts, are often combined in case law and other authority [Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 640 (10th ed. 2005)]. Like trade libel, slander of title can occur without regard to the manner of publication [see System Operations v. Scientific Games Dev. Corp. (3d Cir. 1977) 555 F.2d 1131, 1138 n.6].

[b] Protection of Marketability; Adverse Possession

Slander of title can occur through the filing or recording of documents which, by asserting an interest in a piece of property, call into question another's title to that property [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 444, 447, 240 Cal.Rptr. 652 ; see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 642 (10th ed. 2005)]. However, because the slander of title tort is designed specifically to protect the marketability of property from injury [Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 264, 169 Cal.Rptr. 678 ; Broadway Fed. etc. Loan Assn. v. Howard (1955) 133 Cal.App.2d 382, 400, 285 P.2d 61], title acquired by adverse possession cannot provide the basis for a slander of title action. This title is not deemed to be marketable until it is judicially established against the record owner [Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 264, 169 Cal.Rptr. 678].

[c] Restrictions or Limits on Property's Use

Although the defendant's disparagement of title does not affect the vendability of the plaintiff's property per se, it may result in a reduction in the property's value by preventing its improvement or restricting its use. For example, a false boundary claim by the owner of an adjoining lot may result in the plaintiff being denied the opportunity to improve his or her lot. In such a case the plaintiff would be entitled to damages equaling the difference in the cost of the improvements between the time they were to be constructed and the time of trial [Appel v. Burman (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1209, 1215, 206 Cal.Rptr. 259].

[d] Personal Property; Timber Rights; Easements

Personal property can be the subject of a slander of title action. For example, trademark disparagement involves the malicious publishing of a false statement to the plaintiff's customers or potential customers that could be understood as casting doubt or confusion about the validity of the plaintiff's trademark rights, resulting in damages to the plaintiff's business [Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber (D. Colo. 1976) 408 F.Supp. 1219, 1234-1235, 1245, modified, (10th Cir. 1977) 561 F.2d 1365]. In addition, disparaging communications concerning resources affixed to real property, such as timber rights, can provide a basis for a slander of title action [Kalajian v. Nash (1957) 148 Cal.App.2d 495, 498-499, 306 P.2d 921], as well as disparaging communications concerning easements to property [see Hill v. Allan (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 470, 489, 66 Cal.Rptr. 676].

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.31

MB 7000A.31 Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover for a slander of title, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

1. That Defendant, without a privilege to do so, published a false statement that cast doubt on Plaintiff's title to _____ [describe land, chattels, or intangibles];

2. That the statement was reasonably understood by one or more of the persons to whom it was published to be a statement of fact;

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)

3. That Defendant should have foreseen that a potential buyer or renter of this property might be influenced by this statement not to _____ [e.g., buy the property or rent the property];

[OR]

3. That Defendant should have foreseen the statement would cause a reduction of the value of Plaintiff's property because _____ [specify, e.g., Plaintiff was unable to construct improvements on [his/her/its] property];

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

4. That Defendant knew that the statement was false or published the statement in reckless disregard of whether it was true or false; and

5. That Defendant's conduct has caused Plaintiff to suffer financial loss.

Authorities: Baker v. Los Angeles Herald Examiner (1986) 42 Cal.3d 254, 259-260, 228 Cal.Rptr. 206, 721 P.2d 87 ; Gregory v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1976) 17 Cal.3d 596, 600-601, 131 Cal.Rptr. 641, 552 P.2d 425 ; Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 378, 295 P.2d 405 ; Seeley v. Seymour (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 844, 856-859, 237 Cal.Rptr. 282 ; Appel v. Burman (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1209, 1214-1215, 206 Cal.Rptr. 259 ; Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 262-264, 169 Cal.Rptr. 678 ; Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 419, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; Hill v. Allan (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 470, 489-490, 66 Cal.Rptr. 676 ; Pavlovsky v. Board of Trade (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 110, 114, 340 P.2d 63 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions in MB 7000A.30 and MB 7000A.32, and the instruction in MB 7000A.02 defining publication. An instruction defining "preponderance of the evidence" should also be used in conjunction with this and all other instructions designating which party bears the burden of proof [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. If the defendant asserts the disparagement was privileged, the instruction in MB 7000A.33 should also be used.

The first alternative paragraph 3 should be used if the disparagement affected the vendability of the plaintiff's title. The second alternative is for use when the statement had the effect of reducing the value of the plaintiff's property, as, for example, by preventing the construction of improvements or restricting use.

[3] Comment

[a] Elements of Slander of Title

The necessary elements of a slander of title claim are (1) a publication, (2) without privilege, (3) of a false communication, (4) either made knowingly or without regard for its truth, that is disparaging to another's property in land, chattels, or intangible things, and (5) that causes direct and immediate pecuniary loss [Seeley v. Seymour (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 844, 856-859, 237 Cal.Rptr. 282 ; Appel v. Burman (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1209, 1214-1215, 206 Cal.Rptr. 259 ; Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 262-264, 169 Cal.Rptr. 678 ; Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 419, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 624]. A disparaging statement is one that is intended to cast doubt or is reasonably understood to cast doubt on a person's title to property, if the statement is actually understood to cast doubt by its recipient [Seeley v. Seymour (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 844, 856-859, 237 Cal.Rptr. 282 ; see Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 423, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 629]. Statements of opinion are constitutionally protected; consequently, an essential element of any claim that is based on the publication of an allegedly false statement is that the statement was reasonably understood to be a statement of fact [Baker v. Los Angeles Herald Examiner (1986) 42 Cal.3d 254, 259-260, 228 Cal.Rptr. 206, 721 P.2d 87 ; Gregory v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1976) 17 Cal.3d 596, 600-601, 131 Cal.Rptr. 641, 552 P.2d 425].

[b] Privilege

Generally, the privileges available in defamation and trade libel actions are likewise available to defendants in slander of title cases [Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 378, 295 P.2d 405 ; Smith v. Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 625, 630, n. 1, 223 Cal.Rptr. 339 ; Pavlovsky v. Board of Trade (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 110, 114, 340 P.2d 63]. In addition to those privileges, slander of title actions recognize a conditional "rival claimant" privilege [see MB 7000A.33], which is sometimes viewed as a variant of the conditional privilege contained in Civ. Code § 47(c) [Hill v. Allan (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 470, 490, 66 Cal.Rptr. 676]. The absence of a privilege is an element of a cause of action for slander of title in the sense that there is no right of recovery if the facts on which the Plaintiff's prima facie case is based establish that the publication of the statement at issue was privileged; however, when the existence of a privilege depends on facts that are not part of plaintiff's prima facie case, the defendant has the burden of proof on a claim of privilege [see Smith v. Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 625, 630-631, 223 Cal.Rptr. 339].

[c] Trade Libel Distinguished

The required elements of a slander of title cause of action correspond to the requisites for a trade libel claim. The main distinction between the basic elements of these torts concerns special damages, which are required for a trade libel claim [see MB 7000A.06], but not for a slander of title action [see MB 7000A.32].

[d] Malice

Early California slander of title cases spoke of a malice requirement [see Fearon v. Fodera (1915) 169 Cal. 370, 379-380, 148 P. 200], but later cases held that the only degree of malice required for a slander of title claim is malice implied in law, or, in other words, malice implied from the absence of privilege or justification [Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 543-544, 134 P.2d 217 , disapproved on other grounds, Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 381, 295 P.2d 405 ; Hill v. Allan (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 470, 490, 66 Cal.Rptr. 676 ; Contra Costa County Title Co. v. Waloff (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 66, 7 Cal.Rptr. 358]. Actual malice would be necessary only to justify punitive damages [Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 543-544, 134 P.2d 217 , disapproved on other grounds, Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 381, 295 P.2d 405] or to overcome a conditional privilege [Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 543-544, 134 P.2d 217 , disapproved on other grounds, Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 381, 295 P.2d 405 ; Hill v. Allan (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 470, 490-491, 66 Cal.Rptr. 676].

A still later case adopted the standard of a publication with knowledge of falsity or with reckless disregard for truth or falsity from Restatement (Second) of Torts § 623A [Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 264, 169 Cal.Rptr. 678]. This standard is based on the constitutionally required level of malice applied by the United States Supreme Court in defamation cases [McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 835, 860, 231 Cal.Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 ; see MB 7000A.05[3], MB 7000A.21[3][e]]. The court that gave this as an element of an action for slander of title also stated that malice, express or implied, was an element of the tort [Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 264, 169 Cal.Rptr. 678]. Therefore, the instruction in [1], above, requires a false, unprivileged statement (sufficient for implied malice) made with knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Burden of Proof: The intent requirement in this instruction is similar to the malice requirement in public figure defamation cases (i.e. knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard for the truth). Note, however, that the burden of proof is the normal standard and not the higher "clear and convincing" standard found in public figure defamation cases. By Ronald Oster

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Defendant has slandered Plaintiff's ownership of _____ [describe land, chattels, or intangibles], Plaintiff may recover for the actual financial loss that [he/she/it] proves resulted directly and immediately from Defendant's slanderous publication. These losses include both of the following:

- 1. Any decrease in the marketability or value of Plaintiff's property; and
- 2. The expense of measures reasonably necessary to counteract or remedy the slanderous publication, including costs and attorneys' fees incurred in a legal action to remove the doubt cast on the marketability or value of Plaintiff's property.

Waloff* (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 67, 7 Cal.Rptr. 358 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to enunciate the general measure of damages recoverable in slander of title actions, but it should be modified to reflect the particular items of damage at issue.

Because trade libel requires proof of special damages and slander of title does not, counsel should consider basing trade libel actions on slander of title as well as trade libel, whenever a disparagement claim can be construed as a communication concerning the title to real or personal property.

[3] Comment

[a] Measure of Damages in General

The compensatory damage recoverable in an action for slander of title is the pecuniary loss resulting from the impairment of marketability caused by the slander, together with any other detriment proximately caused by the same wrong [Seeley v. Seymour (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 844, 864, 237 Cal.Rptr. 282 ; Alpine Mut. Water Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 45, 53, 66 Cal.Rptr. 250]. However, loss of the property's value need not be related to its vendability. Damages for slander of title may also include losses resulting from impairment of use. For example, if the plaintiff is unable to build improvements on his or her property because of the defendant's slander, the plaintiff may be entitled to any increased costs that are incurred as a result of delaying the planned improvements [Appel v. Burman (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1209, 1214-1216, 206 Cal.Rptr. 259].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proof of Special Damages Not Required: Unlike trade libel, slander of title does not require proof of special damages. Attorneys' fees are recoverable to the extent required to clear title (though not to pursue the slander of title claim) [see [c], below]. Punitive damages can be recovered if malice is demonstrated [see [d], below]. By Ronald Oster

[b] Lost Sales or Leases

Damages recoverable in a slander of title action include the loss of a sale or lease of the property slandered, as well as the cost of litigation to remove the doubts occasioned by the title disparagement [see Spencer v. Harmon Enterprises, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 614, 622, 44 Cal.Rptr. 683 ; Contra Costa County Title Co. v. Waloff (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 67, 7 Cal.Rptr. 358]. However, the plaintiff may not recover damages for a loss of the use of proceeds of the property's sale or for emotional distress [Seeley v. Seymour (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 844, 863-865, 237 Cal.Rptr. 282].

The property owner need not demonstrate the loss of a particular sale or lease opportunity [Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 424, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514]. Instead, it is sufficient to show that as a direct result of the slander of title, the property's market value suffered [Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 424, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514]. However, the damages that may be awarded in an action for disparagement of title do not include the loss of use of the money that would have been received if a prospective sale had been consummated [Earp v. Nobmann (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 270, 287, 175 Cal.Rptr. 767].

[c] Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Attorneys' fees are recoverable in slander of title actions provided the action is joined with one to quiet title or there has been a separate action to clear the title. It is only those fees expended in clearing the title that are part of the plaintiff's special damages, which must be pleaded and proved at trial [Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 437-439, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; Spencer v. Harmon Enterprises, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 614, 621, 44 Cal.Rptr. 683 ; Contra Costa County Title Co. v. Waloff (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 67-68, 7 Cal.Rptr. 358]. Fees need not be expended in bringing or defending an action to quiet title to qualify as expenses of clearing title. For example, costs incurred in defending an unlawful detainer action have been allowed as special damages in a slander of title action [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 444, 448, 240 Cal.Rptr. 652]. For instructions to be used in unlawful detainer actions, see Ch. 43, California Judicial Council Unlawful Detainer Instructions.

[d] Punitive Damages

Punitive damages may be appropriate in a disparagement or slander of title action [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v.

Dedes (1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 444, 448, 450-451, 240 Cal.Rptr. 652 ; Spencer v. Harmon Enterprises, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 614, 626, 44 Cal.Rptr. 683]. For a punitive damages instruction appropriate in these actions, see MB 7000A.07 and MB 7000A.08.

PART C. SLANDER OF TITLE

6-70A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7000A.33

MB 7000A.33 Conditional Privilege--Rival Claimant

[1] Instruction Conditional Privilege--Rival Claimant

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant had a right to make an honest, good faith claim to _____ [describe property] and to bring an action in good faith to try to prove [his/her/its] title to this property. If you find that Defendant has proved that [his/her/its] claim was an honest, good faith claim, then Plaintiff may not recover for Defendant's making that claim.

Authorities: Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 545-546, 134 P.2d 217 ; Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 422 n. 3, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; *Spencer v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by a defendant when it has at least a colorable claim to possession of the property allegedly slandered. Typical examples would be a bona fide claimant to real property with a cloudy title, and a title record owner engaged in a dispute with a party claiming a legally protected easement over that property.

[3] Comment

[a] Requirements for Exercise of Privilege

The "rival claimant" privilege is well established in the law of slander of title. A rival claimant of property is conditionally privileged to disparage another's property in land by an honest good faith assertion of an inconsistent legally protected interest [Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 545, 134 P.2d 217 , disapproved on other grounds,

Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 381, 295 P.2d 405 ; Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 422 n. 3, 89 Cal.Rptr. 514]. For example, one who tells a would-be purchaser of land that he or she has an easement over the land in question is a rival claimant to its owner who is selling the land as free from easements [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 647, Comment e]. The person seeking protection under the rival claimant privilege need not believe in the claim's certain or even probable validity, so long as the person has a good faith belief in the substantial chance of the claim being sustained [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 647, Comment d].

[b] Conditional Nature of Privilege

The "rival claimant" privilege is conditional, and it can be lost if the defendant acted with malice [Davis v. Wood (1943) 61 Cal.App.2d 788, 794, 143 P.2d 740]. Lack of good faith or proof of actual malice will destroy the privilege [Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 546, 134 P.2d 217 , disapproved on other grounds, Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 381, 295 P.2d 405 ; Spencer v. Harmon Enterprises, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 614, 622, 44 Cal.Rptr. 683].

CHAPTER 71A Matthew Bender Common Counts for Indebtedness Instructions

6-71A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7100A.01

MB 7100A.01 Definition of Common Counts[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Common counts are a form of legal relief by which the person who is owed money, the creditor, sets forth in account form the basis of [his/her/its] claim. For example, _____ [insert kind(s) of common counts applicable, e.g., the creditor may make a claim for _____ (money had and received and/or goods sold and delivered and/or account stated)].

A common count alleges that the [Debtor/Defendant] became indebted to [Creditor/Plaintiff] for a specified amount of money. The essential elements for any common count include all of the following:

- 1. Defendant owes Plaintiff a specified amount of money;
- 2. The debt due is owed on some consideration, which means that that the money is owed for a service that was performed or for some goods that were sold; and
- 3. The defendant has not paid the sum due.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introduction to the common count causes of action. An instruction defining the standard of proof must be used with the common counts instructions [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence

Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True"). This instruction should also be used with the definitions of "creditor" and "debtor" in the instructions in MB 7100A.02 and MB 7100A.04.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][e], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Nature and Validity of Common Counts

A common count is a form of action on a debt in which the plaintiff seeks money owed. A common count must allege all of the following [Pike v. Zadig (1915) 171 Cal. 273, 275-276, 152 P. 923 ; Allen v. Powell (1967) 248 Cal.App.2d 502, 510, 56 Cal.Rptr. 715]:

- The defendant became indebted to the plaintiff for a specified sum of money;
- The debt is owed for some consideration, such as services performed or goods sold; and
- The defendant has not paid.

Although common counts contradict the principles of code pleading by alleging legal conclusions, common counts are not subject to demurrer, and they are accepted in California as well as in federal courts and other code jurisdictions [Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 Cal.2d 778, 792-793, 256 P.2d 947 ; Moya v. Northrup (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 276, 280, 88 Cal.Rptr. 783 ; see Pike v. Zadig (1915) 171 Cal. 273, 276, 152 P. 923 (practice of pleading by common counts "has been too long established in this state to be now open to question")]. California Judicial Council forms include allegations for common counts [see California Judicial Council Forms PLD-C-001(2)].

For relevant forms and a more detailed discussion of common counts, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 121, Common Counts (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Explain Common Counts to Jury: Common counts were developed in an earlier pleading era but they are still used today. Such an allegation can usually survive a demurrer. However, most jurors have never heard of common counts, so they will require some additional explanation in the opening statement and closing argument. By Ronald Oster

[b] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations period on common counts is either two or four years, depending on whether the indebtedness is based on a writing. Common counts for book accounts and account stated must be based on a writing, and always have a four-year limitation period [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(2)]. Causes of action for breach of an obligation or liability not founded on an instrument in writing must be brought within two years [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)]. However, in the case of a claim for the value of services that a cohabiting domestic partner provided for the other partner's business during their 21-year period of cohabitation without marriage, the cause of action in quantum meruit accrued at the relationship's termination, not at the time when some hypothetical paycheck might ordinarily have come due [Maglica v. Maglica (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 442, 454, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 101].

[c] When Common Counts May Be Used

Common counts are not proper in any of the following situations [see Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading, § 516 (4th ed. 1997)]:

- When plaintiff has not yet fully performed his or her duties under the contract [see Barrere v. Soms (1896) 113 Cal. 97, 102, 45 P. 177 (no basis for common count found when evidence showed plaintiff had not performed certain conditions)];

- When plaintiff seeks damages on a breach of contract theory [Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 Cal.2d 778, 793, 256 P.2d 947 ; see Willett & Burr v. Alpert (1919) 181 Cal. 652, 659, 185 P. 976 ; King v. San Jose Pacific Bldg. & Loan Asso. (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 705, 708, 107 P.2d 442]; and

- When the defendant's obligation is something other than the payment of money [see O'Connor v. Dingley (1864) 26 Cal. 11, 22 (when defendant obligated to pay plaintiff for plaintiff's services with promissory note, remedy of plaintiff based on failure to execute note, not common count for work and labor in amount of work)].

[d] Disadvantages of Pleading Common Counts Together With Contract or Quasi-Contract Actions

Although advantages exist for alleging common counts in addition to contract and quasi-contract causes of action, this practice can also be dangerous. First, a judgment based on a common count would probably not support an attorney's fee award under Civ. Code § 1717, because the action is not one to enforce a contract. When both contract and common counts are pleaded, and the judgment is ambiguous as to the theory applied by the judge in awarding payment, it is possible that attorney's fees will not be awarded [see McKenzie v. Kaiser-Aetna (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 84, 87-89, 127 Cal.Rptr. 275]. Second, when a common count is based on the same cause of action as a specific count pleaded with the common count, and the specific count is defective, the entire complaint is subject to demurrer [Zumbrun v. University of Southern California (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 1, 14, 101 Cal.Rptr. 499].

CHAPTER 71A Matthew Bender Common Counts for Indebtedness Instructions

6-71A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7100A.02

MB 7100A.02 Definition of Creditor

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A creditor is a person in whose favor an obligation exists by reason of which that person is entitled or may become entitled to the payment of money.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3430.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "creditor" in actions pleaded on common counts. It is not intended for use in actions involving secured creditors.

[3] Comment

Civ. Code § 3430 defines "creditor" as it is defined in [1], above. Black's Law Dictionary variously defines creditor as (1) a person to whom a debt is owing by another who is the debtor; (2) one who has the right to require the fulfillment of an obligation or contract; and (3) the opposite of "debtor." The term "is susceptible of latitudinous construction" and may have various special meanings when used in statutes, depending on the context in which it is used and the purpose of the statute [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979) at p. 332].

A creditor's ability to recover a debt and the creditor's priority in seeking to do so depend on his or her creditor status [see, e.g., Com. Code § 1201(13) (creditor may be general creditor, secured creditor, or lien creditor, and so on)]. However, the scope of this chapter is limited to actions pleaded on the common counts for the recovery of unsecured debts.

CHAPTER 71A Matthew Bender Common Counts for Indebtedness Instructions

6-71A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7100A.03

MB 7100A.03 Definition of Debt

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A debt is money that is due or owing from one person to another person.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1788.2(d).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the common count instructions to define "debt."

For purposes of this chapter, the definition of debt is limited to money due or owing. For this reason, the reference to "money, property, or their equivalent" in Civ. Code § 1788.2(d) has been simplified to "money." Similarly, the reference in Civ. Code § 1788.2 to money due or owing from a "natural person" has been revised. Although the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.; see Ch. 72A, Matthew Bender Debt Collection Torts Instructions, for instructions on unfair debt collection practices], from which the above definition is taken, limits debtors to natural persons [Civ. Code § 1788.2(h)], there is no such restriction on actions for debt based on the pleading of the common counts.

[3] Comment

The term "debt" has been variously defined. Indeed, it has been suggested that the word has no fixed legal meaning, but takes its precise meaning from the occasion of its use and the accompanying words [UMF Systems, Inc. v. Eltra Corp. (1976) 17 Cal.3d 753, 756, 132 Cal.Rptr. 129, 553 P.2d 225]. The definition given in [1], above, is based on the definition of debt in Civ. Code § 1788.2(d), which is part of the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.; see Gouskos v. Aptos Village Garage, Inc. (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 754, 759-760, 114 Cal.Rptr.2d 558

(construing definition of "debt collector" in Civ. Code § 1788.2(c)); see also Ch. 72A, Matthew Bender Debt Collection Torts Instructions]. Debt has also been defined as a sum of money due by contract, express or implied, or any obligation to pay money [Certified Grocers of California, Ltd. v. San Gabriel Valley Bank (1983) 150 Cal.App.3d 281, 288, 197 Cal.Rptr. 710]. Black's Law Dictionary defines debt as a specified sum of money owing to one person from another, including not only the debtor's obligation to pay but the creditor's right to receive and enforce payment. A debt is a fixed and certain obligation to pay money or some other valuable thing or things, now or in the future [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979) at p. 363].

CHAPTER 71A Matthew Bender Common Counts for Indebtedness Instructions

6-71A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7100A.04

MB 7100A.04 Definition of Debtor

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A debtor is a person who by reason of an existing obligation is or may become liable to pay money to another person, whether the liability is certain or contingent. A debt is certain, if it is clear that the debtor owes money to the other person right now, regardless of whatever else happens. A debt is contingent on the occurrence of some specified event, if something has to happen before the debtor actually owes the money.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3429.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "debtor" in actions pleaded on common counts.

[3] Comment

The definition of "debtor" in this instruction is taken from Civ. Code § 3429. Black's Law Dictionary also defines a debtor as one who owes a debt or one who is liable on a claim, whether due or to become due [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979), p. 364]. The Commercial Code defines a debtor in a secured transaction as any of the following [Com. Code § 9102(a)(28)]:

- A person having an interest, other than a security interest or other lien, in the collateral, whether or not the person is an obligor;
- A seller of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes; or

- A consignee.

The theory used to secure a debtor's obligation to a creditor on an unsecured debt depends on the kind of transaction engaged in. Thus, an alleged creditor may make a claim on a book account or account stated [see CACI Nos. 372, 373], a claim for money had and received [see CACI No. 370], or a claim for money lent. For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 121, Common Counts (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 71A Matthew Bender Common Counts for Indebtedness Instructions

6-71A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7100A.05

MB 7100A.05 Reasonable Value of Services

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may be compensated for the reasonable value of services rendered to Defendant by awarding Plaintiff the reasonable value of what it would have cost Defendant to obtain from another person the services that Plaintiff provided.

Authority: Maglica v. Maglica (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 442, 450, 452 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when plaintiff is asserting a cause of action in quantum meruit to obtain the reasonable value of services rendered to defendant.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Reasonable Value of Services

The legal test for recovery in quantum meruit for the value of services provided is the reasonable value of those services, not the value of the benefit conferred on the defendant by the services. It is reversible error to instruct that the reasonable value of services for recovery in quantum meruit is measured by the benefit to the defendant [Maglica v. Maglica (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 442, 450, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 101].

The threshold requirement that a benefit be derived from services rendered can lead to confusion. That the defendant benefited from the services is a ground for recovery; however, to measure the reasonable value of the services by the value of the benefit to the defendant is error. A contract price and the reasonable value of services rendered are to be distinguished.

For example, in a case involving a quantum meruit claim for the value of the plaintiff's services provided for the defendant's business during the parties' 21-year period of cohabitation without marriage, an $84 million jury verdict was reversed because the jury was mistakenly instructed that the reasonable value of the plaintiff's services was either the cost to obtain those services from someone else or the value of the defendant's benefit as a result of those services. To allow recovery based on the value of the resulting benefit, as contrasted with the reasonable cost of obtaining the services, would afford the best of all possible recoveries, whether contractual or quasi-contractual. In other words, measuring recovery in quantum meruit by the benefit resulting from a service would impose an open-ended standard that could result in a de facto change of ownership of a business, which would be grossly disproportionate to the cost of hiring the services [Maglica v. Maglica (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 442, 450, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 101].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Measure of Damages: As indicated in the comment above, the measure of damages is the reasonable value of the services rendered by plaintiff, not the benefit received by defendant. However, it is sometimes difficult to prove what is "reasonable." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

CHAPTER 72A Matthew Bender Debt Collection Torts Instructions

6-72A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7200A.01

MB 7200A.01 Definition of Collection Tort

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A tort is a private or civil wrong, other than a breach of contract, for which the injured party is entitled to recover damages.

A collection tort is a tort inflicted by a debt collector on a debtor while collecting or trying to collect a debt.

Authorities: Hallidie v. Enginger (1917) 175 Cal. 505, 507, 166 P. 1 ; Denning v. State (1899) 123 Cal. 316, 323, 55 P. 1000 ; Markwell v. Swift & Co. (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 245, 250, 272 P.2d 47 .

[2] Use of Instruction

The instruction should be used to define the term "collection tort." It should be used as an introductory instruction in actions brought by a debtor who claims to have been injured by the unreasonable acts of the debt collector/defendant during the debt collection process. The defendant may be a collection agency, an attorney, or a private person.

[3] Comment

[a] Definitions

A tort is a civil wrong, other than a breach of contract, for which a court will provide a remedy, usually in the form of an action for damages [L. B. Laboratories, Inc. v. Mitchell (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 56, 62, 244 P.2d 385 ; see Hallidie v. Enginger (1917) 175 Cal. 505, 507, 166 P. 1 (tort is personal action for wrongs not arising from contract); Markwell v. Swift & Co. (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 245, 250, 272 P.2d 47 (accord)].

Collection torts are torts committed by a debt collector during the collection process. Examples include the following:

- Intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress [see Ch. 16, California Judicial Council Emotional Distress Instructions];
- Defamation [see Ch. 17, California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions];
- Invasion of privacy [see Ch. 18, California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions];
- Interference with employment relations [see Ch. 24, California Judicial Council Wrongful Termination Instructions, and Ch. 24A, Matthew Bender Employment Contract Instructions]; and
- The tortious violation of a statutory duty [see MB 7200A.04 and Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence Per Se].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Be Wary of Using Term "Tort" With Jury: The term "tort" is likely to be unfamiliar to most jurors. In closing argument, counsel may want to use another term, such as "wrongful conduct" or "improper act." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[b] Liability of Creditor for Torts of Collector

It has been suggested by analogy to Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. [Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 654, 109 Cal.Rptr. 269] that in California a creditor may be liable for the collector's tortious acts [see California CEB, Debt Collection Tort Practice (Supp. Aug. 1987), § 3.1A]. In Noble, the court of appeal held that Sears was liable for the alleged torts of its private investigator. The court stated that holding the hirer of a detective agency liable for a tort committed by employees of the agency was analogous to the rule that an attorney who, as a principal, employed other attorneys to collect a judgment and who authorized them to levy on the debtor's property, may be vicariously liable for the acts of the agent attorneys within the scope of their authority [Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 654, 663, 109 Cal.Rptr. 269]. It appears that the court's reasoning in Noble could be applied against a creditor for the acts of its collector as well as against one who hires a private investigator [see California CEB, Debt Collection Tort Practice (Supp. Aug. 1987), § 3.1A].

CHAPTER 72A Matthew Bender Debt Collection Torts Instructions

6-72A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7200A.02

MB 7200A.02 Definition of Privilege

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant claims that [he/she/it] is not liable to Plaintiff because [his/her/its] conduct was privileged. As a [creditor/collector], Defendant is entitled to assert [his/her/its] legal rights of collection to the extent provided by law, even though asserting these rights may cause emotional distress to Plaintiff. If Defendant acted in an unreasonable and outrageous manner in exercising these rights, however, then the privilege does not apply. You must decide whether Defendant acted in good faith in believing that [he/she/it] was properly asserting [his/her/its] rights as a [creditor/collector] by _____ [describe the allegedly outrageous collection conduct of defendant] or whether Defendant's conduct went beyond permissible lawful conduct.

Authorities: Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal.App.3d 1458, 1469 ; Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 784, 789, 193 Cal.Rptr. 671 ; Fletcher v. Western Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 376, 394-396, 89 Cal.Rptr. 78 ; Timperley v. Chase Collection Service (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 697, 699, 77 Cal.Rptr. 782 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define privilege. It should be used in conjunction with instructions on intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress whenever it is claimed that the defendant's conduct was privileged [see Ch. 16, California Judicial Council Emotional Distress Instructions].

To determine whether the defendant's conduct was lawful and permissible, another instruction will be required. This instruction must be based on the particular facts of the case and on any relevant statute or rule. For discussion of the effect of statutes and rules on a collector's qualified privilege to pursue his or her economic interest, see [3][a], below.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using This Instructions: This is an introductory instruction that must be supplemented by more detailed instructions that directly address applicable statutory prohibitions. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Privilege to Assert Economic Interests

A common-law privilege exists to assert one's own economic interests [Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal.App.3d 1458, 1469, 275 Cal.Rptr. 871 ; Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 784, 789, 193 Cal.Rptr. 671 ; Fletcher v. Western Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 376, 394-396, 89 Cal.Rptr. 78 ; see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 44, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Matthew Bender)]. This privilege applies to a creditor who is attempting to collect a debt. A creditor is entitled take reasonable steps to collect a debt [Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 784, 789, 193 Cal.Rptr. 671 ; Timperley v. Chase Collection Service (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 697, 699, 77 Cal.Rptr. 782].

This privilege is a qualified privilege, and is lost when a creditor's collection practices are "outrageous and unreasonable" [Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal.App.3d 1458, 1469, 275 Cal.Rptr. 871 ; Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 784, 789, 193 Cal.Rptr. 671 ; Fletcher v. Western Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 376, 395, 89 Cal.Rptr. 78]. Because outrageous conduct is an element of the cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress and must therefore be proved in every case [see Ch. 16, California Judicial Council Emotional Distress Instructions, CACI Nos. 1600, 1602], it is not entirely clear what the effect of this privilege is. It has been suggested that because the privilege appears to apply only to conduct that was not actionable in the first place (i.e., conduct that was not outrageous), it is not a true privilege [see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 44, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Matthew Bender)]. The test is whether the creditor's attempts to collect exceed "all reasonable bounds of decency" [Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 784, 789, 193 Cal.Rptr. 671].

Because the area of creditor's remedies and debtor's rights is highly regulated, the determination of whether a creditor has stepped beyond the scope of the privilege often depends on whether the conduct at issue is prohibited by statute or regulation. For example, Civ. Code § 1788.11 of the Robbins-Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.] specifically prohibits the collector from harassing the debtor in collecting or attempting to collect a consumer debt. Prohibited types of harassment include all of the following:

- The use of obscene or profane language [Civ. Code § 1788.11(a)];
- Making telephone calls without disclosing the caller's identity [Civ. Code § 1788.11(b)]; and
- Communicating with the debtor with unreasonable frequency [Civ. Code § 1788.11(e)].

Civ. Code § 1788.12 also prohibits certain communications with others about the debt, such as the following [see Sanchez v. Client Svcs., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 520 F.Supp.2d 1149, 1158] :

- Telling the consumer's employer about the debt [Civ. Code § 1788.12(a)]; or
- Advertising the debt for sale by naming the debtor [Civ. Code § 1788.12(c)].

MB 7200A.03 Types of Invasion of Privacy Applicable in Creditor-Debtor Situations[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In actions between a debtor and a creditor, an invasion of privacy can be broken down into four distinct wrongs:

- 1. Intruding on one's solitude or seclusion;
- 2. Placing one in a false light in the public eye;
- 3. Publicly disclosing private facts; and
- 4. Violating the State constitutional right of privacy.

In this case, Plaintiff claims that Defendant invaded [his/her] privacy by _____ [describe alleged invasion of privacy]. Thus, Plaintiff claims that Defendant has invaded Plaintiff's privacy by _____ [intruding on Plaintiff's solitude and/or publicly disclosing private facts about Plaintiff and/or placing Plaintiff in a false light in the public eye and/or violating the State constitutional right of privacy].

I will now explain what Plaintiff must prove to recover on this claim.

Authorities: Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; Hill v. Nat'l Collegiate Athletic Ass'n (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Lugosi v. Universal Pictures (1979) 25 Cal.3d 813, 819, 160 Cal.Rptr. 323, 603 P.2d 425 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a debtor's action for invasion of privacy to introduce the debtor's case. Instructions on the types of invasion of privacy that apply generally in debtor-creditor litigation do not differ from general invasion of privacy instructions, such as instructions regarding unreasonable intrusion, false light, and public disclosure of private facts. These instructions can be found in Ch. 18, California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions.

The first paragraph of this instruction is intended to make it clear to the jury that invasion of privacy (as applied to debtor-creditor litigation) is not just one tort but is in fact four separate and distinct torts [see [3][b], below, regarding interference with right of publicity, which is not addressed in this instruction]. The distinctions among them are important when the plaintiff claims a right to relief under more than one right of privacy, because the elements that the plaintiff must prove will be different for each type. If the plaintiff claims relief under only one type, the first paragraph of this instruction may be omitted if the parties believe that it might confuse the jury by telling it more than it needs to know.

When filling in the blanks in the second paragraph of this instruction, it is important to be clear and specific about the plaintiff's factual allegations to help the jury focus on the plaintiff's claim.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][e], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Instruction Should Include Only Wrongs

Alleged in Your Case: This instruction should be cut down to include only the wrongs allegedly involved in the case at hand. Otherwise, this instruction could be confusing to the jury. Terms such as "false light" will have to be further explained in other instructions, as very few persons (including attorneys) know the meaning of "false light." By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[a] Origins of Right to Privacy

The California Constitution guarantees the inalienable right to privacy [Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; Sheehan v. San Francisco 49ers, Ltd. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 992, 997, 89 Cal.Rptr.3d 594, 201 P.3d 472 ; see, e.g., Jeffrey H. v. Imai, Tadlock & Keeney (2000) 85 Cal.App.4th 345, 353, 101 Cal.Rptr.2d 916 , overruled on other grounds, Jacob B. v. County of Shasta (2007) 40 Cal.4th 948, 962, 56 Cal.Rptr.3d 477, 154 P.3d 1003] . Any infringement of this right must be justified by a compelling state interest [Hill v. Nat'l Collegiate Athletic Ass'n (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633]. In addition to this constitutional right of privacy, tort law recognizes four separate types of the common-law tort of invasion of privacy:

- (1) Intruding on someone's solitude or seclusion.
- (2) Placing someone in a false light.
- (3) Publicly disclosing private facts.
- (4) Right of publicity.

In tort law, the idea of the "right to be let alone" [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652A, comment a; see Melvin v. Reid (1931) 112 Cal.App. 285, 289, 297 P. 91 ("right to be left alone")] is over 100 years old [Cooley, Torts (2d ed. 1888); Warren & Brandeis, The Right to Privacy, 4 Harv. L. Rev. 193 (1890)], and the right has been recognized in virtually every state [Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 118, 125, 188 Cal.Rptr. 762].

[b] Five Distinct Privacy Torts

Five distinct torts compose invasion of privacy: the constitutional cause of action and the four types of the common-law tort [see [3][a], above]. Each recognizes a different interest that may be invaded [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 23-32, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652A]. The right of privacy embraces the torts named in [1], above, as well as the right of action for misappropriation of name or likeness, known as the right of publicity [see Ch. 33A, Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions].

This instruction does not include the right of publicity because an action for misappropriation of name or likeness is not likely to arise when a creditor invades a debtor's privacy while attempting to collect a debt.

For a more complete review of the torts composing invasion of privacy, including an instruction on consent as a defense to a privacy claim, see Ch. 18, California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions. For further discussion of the right to privacy, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy (Matthew Bender). For forms that may be used in an action for invasion of privacy, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy (Matthew Bender).

[c] Objectionable or Offensive Invasions of Privacy

A creditor possesses a qualified privilege to protect its economic interest, but the privilege may be lost should the creditor use outrageous and unreasonable means in seeking payment. The applicable test is whether or not the creditor goes beyond "all reasonable bounds of decency" in attempting to collect the debt. Under the view set forth in the Restatement [Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 46, comment e], a collector who happens to demand payment in a rude and insolent manner is not liable unless other factors are present.

Such "other factors" may be supplied when the creditor has knowledge that the debtor is susceptible to emotional distress by reason of some physical or mental condition [Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 784, 789, 193 Cal. Rptr. 671]. Such intentional infliction of emotional distress is present when the defendant's extreme or outrageous acts are made in reckless disregard of the fact that his or her conduct would cause plaintiff severe or extreme emotional distress [Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 784, 790, 193 Cal. Rptr. 671].

[d] Related Statutes and Regulations

An action for invasion of privacy should be evaluated in conjunction with a review of the statutes and regulations that govern debt collection. Debt collection is a heavily regulated area, and the applicable statutes or rules may affect the relief available to the debtor [see, e.g., Nickoloff v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P. (C.D. Cal. 2007) 511 F.Supp.2d 1043, 1045 (Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act); Guevarra v. Progressive Fin. Svcs. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 497 F.Supp.2d 1090, 1090-1091 (same); Alkan v. Citimortgage, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2004) 336 F.Supp.2d 1061, 1064 (same)]. For example, Civ. Code § 1788.12 of the Robbins-Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.] forbids a collector to make certain disclosures in collecting or attempting to collect a consumer debt. A creditor's violation of these provisions might affect the creditor's liability for the public disclosure of private facts [see Ch. 18, California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions, CACI No. 1801].

An invasion of privacy action is not barred by a parallel action brought under the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1786.52; see Civ. Code § 1786.1 et seq.] or under the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1788.32; see Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.]. However, the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.] generally prohibits actions for invasion of privacy based on the reporting of information by or the furnishing of information to a consumer reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.32]. There is an exception for false information furnished with malice or willful intent to injure. Civ. Code § 1785.32. In addition, those injured by violations of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act may sue for actual damages resulting from the violation [Civ. Code § 1785.31].

MB 7200A.04 Violation of Statutory Duty[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

I have determined that under _____ [specify statute at issue] Defendant owed a duty to Plaintiff to _____ [specify duty, e.g., refrain from unfair or misleading collection practices]. Plaintiff claims that Defendant violated this duty. To recover damages on [his/her/its] claim for the violation of this duty, Plaintiff must prove both of the following:

1. Defendant violated [his/her/its] duty to _____ [specify duty, e.g., refrain from unfair or misleading collection practices]; and

2. Defendant's violation of this duty caused Plaintiff to suffer damages.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the debtor claims that he or she has been harmed by the collector's violation of a statutory duty owed to the debtor.

This instruction should be used with an instruction defining the standard of proof [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200, Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True]. The instruction should also be used with an instruction explaining proximate cause [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 430, Causation: Substantial Factor].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Violation of Statutory Duty

The violation of a statutory duty owed to another may be a tort, and the violation of a statute that embodies a public policy is generally actionable even though the statute itself does not provide for a remedy. Any injured person for whose benefit the statute was enacted may bring an action [Czap v. Credit Bureau of Santa Clara Valley (1970) 7 Cal.App.3d 1, 6, 86 Cal.Rptr. 417 ; Laczko v. Jules Meyers, Inc. (1969) 276 Cal.App.2d 293, 295, 80 Cal.Rptr. 798 ; Wetherton v. Growers Farm Labor Assoc. (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 168, 174, 79 Cal.Rptr. 543 ; see Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal.2d 647, 651, 320 P.2d 16 (action against notary public for losses resulting from notary's drafting of will in violation of prohibition against unauthorized practice of law); Hudson v. Craft (1949) 33 Cal.2d 654, 655-657, 204 P.2d 1 (action for damages against a promoter for injuries suffered in illegal prize fight)]. This rule is similar to the doctrine of negligence per se, which is codified at Evid. Code § 669. Evid. Code § 669 provides a presumption of negligence when a statutory violation proximately causes plaintiff's injury, the statute was designed to prevent the type of injury resulting, and the plaintiff is a member of the class that the statute was intended to protect [see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 3, Proof of Negligence (Matthew Bender)].

The elements of a tort action for breach of a statutory duty are [see Laczko v. Jules Meyers, Inc. (1969) 276 Cal.App.2d 293, 295, 80 Cal.Rptr. 798]:

- (1) A statutory duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff.
- (2) A breach of that duty.
- (3) Damages suffered by the plaintiff as a result of the defendant's breach of the duty.

This cause of action is available for the violation of a duty imposed by a statute governing debt collection just as it would be for the violation of any other statutory duty. For example, in Czap v. Credit Bureau, the plaintiff alleged a tort based on harm to the plaintiff resulting from an unfair collection practice by the credit bureau. The trial judge sustained the credit bureau's demurrer and dismissed the action, but the appellate court reversed, noting that the standard of conduct set by the statute for unfair collection practices did appear to be designed to protect the public. The court stated that whether any particular act by a licensed collector is an unfair collection practice under former Bus. & Prof. Code § 6947(k) will normally be a question of fact [Czap v. Credit Bureau (1970) 7 Cal.App.3d 1, 6, 86 Cal.Rptr. 417].

Under this theory, federal, state, and local statutes and regulations governing the collection process may provide the basis for a tort action against a debt collector who violates such a statute or rule [see, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 45(a)(1) (unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive practices in commerce); 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 628.5 (collection agencies' unlawful acts); see also Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 460 F.3d 1162, 1167 (action under federal and Oregon state laws); Dupuy v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co. (N.D. Cal. 2006) 442 F.Supp.2d 822, 824 (action under federal and California state laws)].

CHAPTER 72A Matthew Bender Debt Collection Torts Instructions

6-72A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7200A.05

MB 7200A.05 Definition of Repossession

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Repossession is the creditor's self-help method of retaking property. The authority to repossess may be based on common law, contract, or statute.

A repossession tort is the retaking of property in such an unreasonable way that the debtor suffers damages.

I will now instruct you on the elements of the repossession tort of _____ [insert one or more conversion and/or trespass to land or chattel and/or assault and battery and/or false imprisonment and/or emotional distress].

Authorities: Com. Code § 9609; Kipp v. Cozens (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 709, 713-715, 115 Cal.Rptr. 423 ; Shirley v. State Nat'l Bank of Connecticut (2d Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 739, 742 ; Adams v. Southern California First Nat'l Bank (9th Cir. 1973) 492 F.2d 324, 330 ; Black's Law Dictionary (7th ed. 1999) at 1303.

[2] Use of Instruction

Repossession torts may be asserted when a chattel has been unreasonably repossessed. This instruction should be used as an introduction in conjunction with the specific repossession tort at issue, for example:

- Assault and battery [see Ch. 13, California Judicial Council Assault and Battery Instructions];
- False imprisonment [see Ch. 14, California Judicial Council False Imprisonment Instructions];
- Trespass [see Ch. 20, California Judicial Council Trespass and Nuisance Instructions]; or

- Conversion [see Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, and Ch. 21A, Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions].

[3] Comment

[a] Definition of "Repossession"; Validity

Black's Law Dictionary defines "repossession" as the act or an instance of retaking property, especially a seller's retaking of goods sold on credit when the buyer has failed to pay for them [Black's Law Dictionary (7th ed. 1999) at 1303]. Black's further defines "self-help" as an attempt to redress a perceived wrong by one's own action rather than through normal legal processes [Black's Law Dictionary (7th ed. 1999) at 1364].

Self-help repossession is one of the most commonly used means of collecting an overdue debt, because it does not require resort to the slow and expensive assistance of the courts [McCall, The Past as Prologue: A History of the Right to Repossess, 47 S. Cal. L. Rev. 58, 95 (1973)]. Self-help repossession under former Com. Code § 9503 [see now Com. Code § 9609] was challenged and upheld in the case of Kipp v. Cozens [Kipp v. Cozens (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 709, 115 Cal.Rptr. 423 ; see also Adams v. Southern California First Nat'l Bank (9th Cir. 1973) 492 F.2d 324, 335-336 ; Shirley v. State Nat'l Bank of Connecticut (2d Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 739, 741 ; Black's Law Dictionary (7th ed. 1999) at 1364 (UCC and other statutes provide for particular self-help remedies including repossession if remedy can be executed without breaching the peace)].

[b] Origins and Basis of Right to Repossess

The right to repossess is a common-law right that may also arise under a statute or a contract [Com. Code § 9609; Kipp v. Cozens (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 709, 715, 115 Cal.Rptr. 423 , citing 2 Pollock & Maitland, The History of English Law (1909), p. 574; 2 Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England, pp. 856-858]. Most security agreements covering the sale of personal property include a provision giving the creditor the right to possession of the goods if the debtor defaults [see Debt Collection Practice in California (2d ed. CEB 1999), § 4.6]. Even when the contract did not expressly provide this right, the right was often implied at common law [Adams v. Southern California First Nat'l Bank (9th Cir. 1973) 492 F.2d 324, 330 n.11].

In addition to these contractual and common-law repossession rights, the Commercial Code provides that after default, a secured party may take possession of the collateral without judicial process, if the secured party proceeds without breach of the peace [Com. Code § 9609]. Civ. Code § 1812.2, part of the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.] governing retail installment sales [Civ. Code § 1802.5], provides that when a buyer defaults on a retail installment contract, the holder [see Civ. Code § 1802.13 ("holder" is seller who acquires contract or financing agency or other assignee who buys it)] of that contract, pursuant to the rights granted in the contract, may retake the goods and proceed as provided for in the Unruh Act.

[c] Repossession Torts

There are two types of repossession torts:

- Repossession torts based on the fact that the creditor lacked the right to repossess the goods. Conversion is the principal example [see Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, Ch. 21A, Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions].
- Repossession torts based not on the lack of a right to repossess, but on the way that the repossession was carried out—for example, assault and battery [see Ch. 13, California Judicial Council Assault and Battery Instructions] or trespass [see Ch. 20, California Judicial Council Trespass and Nuisance].

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions on the most frequently litigated areas involving providers of professional services in real estate transactions. The chapter covers tort and contract actions against (1) real estate licensees (brokers and agents), (2) escrow agents, and (3) notaries public, whose services are customarily used by the buyers and sellers of real property in California. Each of the three professions has special, unique duties that are set out in statutes and longstanding case law. Specifically, the chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions surrounding actions against real estate brokers and sales agents [see MB 7400A.01 -MB 7400A.51]. The Part includes instructions defining "brokers" and "sales agents" [see MB 7400A.01, MB 7400A.02] and instructions on fraud and negligence [see MB 7400A.10-7400A.44] and damages [see MB 7400A.50, MB 7400A.51].
- Part B includes instructions surrounding actions against escrows and escrow agents [see MB 7400A.60 -MB 7400A.113]. The Part includes instructions defining applicable terms [see MB 7400A.60 -MB 7400A.62] and instructions relating to actions for breach of contract [see MB 7400A.70 -MB 7400A.77], negligence [see MB 7400A.90 -MB 7400A.98], and fraud [see MB 7400A.110 -MB 7400A.113].
- Part C includes instructions surrounding the duties and liabilities of notary publics and sureties [see MB 7400A.120-7400A.128].

Additional instructions for actions by and against buyers and sellers of real property are in Ch. 75A, Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions.

Jury instructions in actions for fraud and deceit can be found in Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions.

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Many contract instructions applicable to the actions covered in this chapter are in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

Jury instructions in actions for the breach of fiduciary duties can be found in Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131, 10131.1, 10131.2, 10131.3, 10131.4, 10131.45.

[2] Use of Instruction

[a] In General

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that he or she is not a real estate broker within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131, 10131.1, 10131.2, 10131.3, 10131.4, or 10131.45. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 is authority for the first alternate instruction, Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.4 for the second, Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.45 for the third, Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1 for the fourth, Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.2 for the fifth, and Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.3 for the sixth. Which alternate or alternates to use depends on the activities alleged as the basis for the claim that the defendant was the plaintiff's broker. The bracketed "also" in the alternate instructions should be used when the jury is being instructed on more than one definition. This instruction should be used with the general agency instructions in Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, MB 300C.50-MB 300C.59.

[b] For Legal Person or Natural Person

This instruction and the instruction in MB 7400A.02 make no attempt to distinguish between the legal person that a broker must be [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 10006 ("person" defined)] and the natural person that a salesperson must be [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132]. If the broker is an entity rather than a natural person, the word "person" in this instruction may be replaced with a phrase such as "person or corporation" or "person or business."

[c] For Person Engaged in Business as Principal

The fourth alternative in this instruction is for use only when there is evidence supporting the contention that the defendant was engaged as a principal in any of the described business activities. In that case, it could be necessary to use an additional instruction defining certain terms in the second criterion [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(2) ("sale"; "resale"; "exchange")] or third criterion [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(3),(4) ("own funds")]. Also, the reference in the third criterion to any transaction negotiated through a large-scale broker will require an additional instruction, based on Bus. & Prof. Code § 10232(a) or (b) and the evidence, explaining what are the relevant tests for identifying a broker as a large-scale broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(1)(C)].

[3] Comment

[a] General Definition of Real Estate Brokers

Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 defines a real estate broker as a person who, for or in expectation of compensation, does or negotiates to do one or more of the following acts for another person:

- Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, solicits buyers or sellers of, solicits or obtains listings of, or negotiates the purchase, sale, or exchange of real property or a business opportunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(a)];
- Leases or rents, offers to lease or rent, places for rent, solicits listings of places for rent, solicits for prospective tenants, or negotiates the sale, purchase, or exchange of leases on real property, or on a business opportunity, or collects rents from real property, or improvements on realty, or from business opportunities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(b)];
- Assists or offers to assist in filing an application to buy or lease, or in locating or entering on, lands owned by the state or federal government [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(c)];
- Solicits borrowers or lenders for, or negotiates for, loans secured by liens on real property or on a business opportunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(d)];
- Collects payments or performs services for borrowers, lenders, or note owners in connection with loans secured by liens on real property or on a business opportunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(d)]; and/or
- Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, or exchanges or offers to exchange a real property sales contract or a promissory note secured by a lien on real property or on a business opportunity, and performs services for the holders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(e)].

A real estate broker may also be a financial consultant; the statutory schemes applicable to these professions are not mutually exclusive [Onofrio v. Rice (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 413, 418-419, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 74 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 et seq. (brokers); Bus. & Prof. Code § 2945 et seq. (financial consultants)].

A real estate broker may also be a person who, for or in expectation of compensation, does or negotiates to do one or more of the following things for another person with regard to mineral, oil, or gas property [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131.4, 10131.45]:

- Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, solicits prospective sellers or purchasers, or solicits or obtains listings with regard to the property;
- Solicits borrowers or lenders for the property, or collects payments for lenders in connection with these loans;
- Rents or places for rent the property, or collects rent or royalties from the property, or from improvements on it; and/or
- Assists or offers to assist others in filing applications for the purchase of, or to locate on the property owned by the state or federal government. However, a person who is acting as an officer or employee of the state or federal government while performing these acts is not a real estate broker.

A real estate broker may also be a person who, as a principal, engages in the business of buying, leasing, or taking an option on mineral, oil, or gas property for the purpose of sale, exchange, lease, sublease, or assignment of a lease of the property or any part of the property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.45(a)]. However, a real estate broker's license is not required to negotiate a lease or agreement between an owner of mineral, oil, or gas lands, leases, or mineral rights and a person organized for or engaging in oil or gas or mineral or metal production. In addition, a real estate broker's license is not required to enter into leases or agreements with an owner of mineral, oil, or gas lands, leases, or mineral rights on behalf of a disclosed or undisclosed person organized for or engaging in oil or gas or mineral or metal production [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.35(d)].

A real estate broker may also be a person who engages in the business of offering mining claims or any interest in mining claims for sale or assignment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.45(b)].

A real estate broker who acts pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(d) and who meets specified requirements must notify the Department annually in writing on a form that is acceptable to the Commissioner [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.02(a)].

[b] Exceptions

The provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(b) defining real estate brokers to include those who lease or rent real property [see MB 7400A.01[3][a]] do not apply to any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.01(a)]:

- The manager of a hotel, motel, or auto and trailer park;
- The resident manager of an apartment building, apartment complex, or court;
- The employees of the managers described in the first two items of this list;
- Any person or entity who (on behalf of another or others) solicits or arranges, or accepts reservations or money, or both, for transient occupancies [see Civ. Code § 1940(b)] in a dwelling unit in a common interest development [see Civ. Code § 1351(c) ("common interest development" defined)], an apartment building or complex, or in a single-family home; and
- Employees (other than the resident manager or employees of that manager) of the property management firm retained to manage a residential apartment building or complex or court. To qualify for the exception, an employee must perform certain specified functions under the supervision and control of a broker of record who is an employee of the property management firm or a salesperson licensed to the broker who meets certain minimum requirements.

For further discussion of license requirements and the exemptions from those requirements, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 64, Licensing and Discipline of Brokers (Matthew Bender).

[c] Real Property Sales Contracts and Promissory Notes

A real estate broker is also a person who engages as a principal in the business of making loans secured directly or collaterally by liens on real property or buying from, selling to, or exchanging with the public real property sales contracts or promissory notes secured by liens on real property, or who makes agreements with the public for the collection of payments or the performance of services in connection with real property sales contracts or promissory notes secured by liens on real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(a)]. A person is "in the business" if he or she does any of the following:

- Acquires during a single calendar year eight or more real property sales contracts or promissory notes secured by liens on real property for resale to the public, and not as an investment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(1)(A)];

- Sells or exchanges with the public during a single calendar year eight or more real property sales contracts or promissory notes secured by liens on real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(1)(B)] (however, no transaction negotiated through real estate licensee will be considered in determining whether person is real estate broker based on these facts); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(2) (meaning of "sells or exchanges"); or

- Makes eight or more loans in a calendar year from the person's own funds to the public when those loans are held or resold and are secured directly or collaterally by a lien on residential real property consisting of a single dwelling unit in a condominium or cooperative or on any parcel containing only residential buildings if the total number of units on the parcel is four or less [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(1)(C)] (however, no transaction negotiated through real estate broker who meets criteria of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10232(a) or (b)--that is, large-scale broker--will be considered in determining whether person is real estate broker based on these facts); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1(b)(3),(4) (meaning of "own funds").

[d] Advance Fees

A real estate broker is also a person who, for an advance fee, is employed to do either of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.3]:

- Promote the sale or lease of real property or the sale or lease of a business opportunity by an advance fee listing, an advertisement, or any other offering to sell, lease, exchange, or rent property or a business opportunity; or
- Get a loan on real property or on a business opportunity.

[e] Real Estate Syndication Securities

A real estate broker is also a person who, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, does any of the following things for another person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.3]:

- Issues or sells real estate syndication securities [see Corp. Code § 25206];
- Solicits prospective buyers or sellers of real estate syndication securities;
- Gets or solicits listings of real estate syndication securities; or
- Negotiates the purchase, sale, or exchange of real estate syndication securities.

A broker-dealer or agent of a broker-dealer licensed by the Commissioner of Corporations under the California Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.; see Marsh & Volk, Practice Under the California Securities Laws, Ch. 31, (Matthew Bender)] is not a real estate broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.3]. Note that the Department of Housing and Community Development licenses and regulates salespersons of mobilehomes, manufactured homes, and commercial coaches, who are not brokers [Health & Safety Code § 18053.5]. "Commercial coach" is deemed to include "commercial modular" [Health & Safety Code § 18015.1].

[f] Mobilehome Sales

A licensed real estate broker may buy, sell, or otherwise deal in mobilehomes only if the mobilehome has been registered under Health & Safety Code § 18000 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.6(a)]. Although this requirement is included here because it helps to define who is a real estate broker, this point is not mentioned at all in the instruction in [1], above. In the unlikely event that this requirement becomes a jury issue in the case at hand, the instruction will have to be revised accordingly.

CHAPTER 74A Matthew Bender Professional Liability in Real Property Transactions Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS AGAINST BROKERS AND SALES AGENTS

1. General Instructions

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.02

MB 7400A.02 Definition of "Sales Agent"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A real estate salesperson is a person who, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, is employed by a licensed real estate broker to perform one or more of the functions of a broker that I have already explained to you.

Authority: Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that he or she is not a real estate salesperson within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132. The instruction must be used with the alternative or alternatives from the instruction in MB 7400A.01 that explain the functions of a broker allegedly performed by the real estate salesperson in the case at hand.

The words of this instruction do not point out that a real estate salesperson must be "a natural person" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132]. This distinction is not likely to be an issue for the jury, and it is therefore better not to confuse the jury by mentioning this requirement.

[3] Comment

A real estate salesperson is a natural person who, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, is employed by a licensed real estate broker to perform one or more of the functions of a broker set out in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131,

CHAPTER 74A Matthew Bender Professional Liability in Real Property Transactions Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS AGAINST BROKERS AND SALES AGENTS

1. General Instructions

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.03

MB 7400A.03 Sales Agent Is Agent of Broker[1] Instruction Sales Agent Is Agent of Broker[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A real estate salesperson is an agent of his or her broker. A real estate salesperson can act only for, on behalf of, and in place of a broker under whom he or she is licensed, and his or her acts are limited to acts that he or she does as agent for the broker. If you find that _____ [name of salesperson] was licensed under _____ [name of broker], then _____ [name of broker] is liable for the acts of _____ [name of salesperson] in the transaction of _____ [name of broker]'s business.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 2079.13(b), 2338; Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10132, 10137, 10160, 10177; People v. Asuncion (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 422, 425, 199 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 890, 895, 192 Cal.Rptr. 637 ; Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 190, 203, 206-207, 30 Cal.Rptr. 253 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the broker's alleged liability rests on the acts of the salesperson.

[3] Comment

By law, a real estate salesperson is an agent of the broker [Civ. Code §§ 2079.13(b), 2338; Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)]. All of a real estate salesperson's professional compensation must come through the broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137] and the salesperson's license must be in the broker's custody [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10160].

In one case it was held that any contract that purports to change the relationship from that of agent to independent contractor is invalid as being contrary to the real estate law. Whether or not the principal or employer is responsible for the act of the agent depends on whether the agent was engaged at that time in the transaction or the business of his or her principal or whether the agent was engaged in an act performed for his or her own personal convenience or accommodation and related to an end or purpose exclusively and individually on his or her own [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 190, 207, 30 Cal.Rptr. 253]. However, Bus. & Prof. Code § 10032(b) now provides that a real estate broker and a real estate salesperson may contract between themselves as independent contractors or as employer and employee, and this contract determines their legal relationship with and obligations to each other. The Legislature expressly provided that this statute's adoption does not affect the holding in Gipson that (1) a real estate broker may be vicariously liable for the tortious acts of a salesperson licensed under the broker, (2) real estate salespersons cannot be classified as independent contractors for purposes of liability to third parties, and (3) any contract that purports to change the salesperson from agent to independent contractor is invalid as being contrary to law for purposes of tort liability to third parties [1991 Stats., ch. 679, § 2].

The salesperson may not contract in his or her own name and is not exempt from usury laws [People v. Asuncion (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 422, 426, 199 Cal.Rptr. 514].

For purposes of tort liability, the broker is liable for the acts of his or her salesperson under the doctrine of respondeat superior [Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 890, 895, 192 Cal.Rptr. 637].

1. General Instructions

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.04

MB 7400A.04 Fiduciary Duty of Broker or Sales Agent

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The relationship of a [real estate broker/sales agent] to [his/her/its] principal is a fiduciary relationship, similar to that of a trustee to [his/her/its] beneficiary. In acting for a principal, a [real estate broker/sales agent] is bound to the same standards of conduct as a trustee. These standards include undivided service, loyalty, integrity, and good faith. As a matter of law, the relationship binds the [real estate broker/sales agent] to the utmost good faith, not only in form, but in substance. This standard requires a high degree of honesty, loyalty, and integrity, and the most faithful service.

Authorities: Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 674, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1553, 1563, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 866 ; Gann v. Williams Brothers Realty, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 1698, 1705, 283 Cal.Rptr. 128 ; Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 64-65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353 ; Jorgensen v. Beach 'N' Bay Realty, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 155, 161, 177 Cal.Rptr. 882 ; Burch v. Argus Properties, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 128, 131, 154 Cal.Rptr. 485 ; Ford v. Courdale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 180-181 n.6, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a constructive fraud action by a client against a real estate broker or salesperson when the broker or salesperson claims that a fiduciary relationship did not exist. The burden of proof instruction for constructive fraud in MB 7400A.18 should be used with this instruction. In addition, the Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) include an instruction that explains "fiduciary duty." CACI No. 4100 provides that a real estate agent or broker, among others, owes a fiduciary duty to his or her principal or client, and that this duty requires the agent or broker "to act with the utmost good faith in the best interests of" the principal or client.

For additional Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Brokers Are Fiduciaries

Real estate brokers are fiduciaries [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; Jorgensen v. Beach 'N' Bay Realty, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 155, 161, 177 Cal.Rptr. 882] who owe to their principals the same obligation of undivided service and loyalty that a trustee owes to his or her beneficiary [Gann v. Williams Brothers Realty, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 1698, 1705, 283 Cal.Rptr. 128 ; Jorgensen v. Beach 'N' Bay Realty, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 155, 161, 177 Cal.Rptr. 882 ; Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 180, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334]. The principal of a real estate broker is entitled to the highest degree of loyalty and good faith [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1553, 1563, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 866 ; Burch v. Argus Properties, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 128, 131, 154 Cal.Rptr. 485].

A real estate sales agent who acts for a client has the same fiduciary duties to that client as a broker [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 64-65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353].

An instruction similar to this one was approved in Ford v. Cournale [Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 181 n.6, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334].

2. Constructive Fraud

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.10

MB 7400A.10 Definition of "Constructive Fraud"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Constructive fraud is

any breach of duty without an actual fraudulent intent that gains an advantage to the person [optional (see Use of Instruction), or any one claiming under him or her,] who breached by misleading another to his or her prejudice [optional (see Use of Instruction) or to the prejudice of any one claiming under him or her].

[OR]

any act or omission that the law specifically declares to be fraudulent, without the occurrence of actual fraud.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

This means that every breach by the [real estate broker/sales agent] of [his/her/its] fiduciary duties to [his/her/its] principal that (1) gains an advantage to the broker, and (2) causes prejudice to the principal is a constructive fraud against the principal.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1573; Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 936-939, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action for constructive fraud against a broker, a sales agent, or both. It defines constructive fraud as it is defined in Civ. Code § 1573. The optional bracketed phrases in the first of the two alternative paragraphs in the instruction should be added when the advantage from the breach of duty is gained by one claiming under the wrongdoer or when the advantage is gained to the prejudice of one claiming under the person misled by the wrong [see Civ. Code § 1573]. The optional final paragraph should be considered for use whenever the first definition of constructive fraud is at issue. This optional paragraph clarifies the relationship of the definition to the broker's or agent's fiduciary duties.

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7400A.01 defining "broker." CACI No. 4100, explaining the broker's "fiduciary duty," should also be used [see also MB 7400A.04]. If the acts or liability of a sales agent are at issue, this instruction should also be used with the instruction in MB 7400A.02 defining "sales agent," and the instruction in MB 7400A.03 explaining the duties of a sales agent and the agent's relation to the broker.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Constructive Fraud

Under Civ. Code § 1573, constructive fraud consists of the following:

- Any breach of duty without an actual fraudulent intent that gains an advantage to the person who breached, or anyone claiming under that person, by misleading another to his or her prejudice, or to the prejudice of anyone claiming under him or her; or
- Any such act or omission that the law specifically declares to be fraudulent, without respect to the occurrence of actual fraud.

Civ. Code § 1573 clearly provides that fraudulent intent is not required, and a special verdict form requiring an intentional failure to disclose material facts was reversible error [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 936-939, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609].

A real estate franchise company may be liable on a theory of ostensible agency for the fraud of its franchisee, the real estate broker [Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 741, 747-748, 69 Cal.Rptr.2d 640 (triable issue of fact existed with regard to ostensible agency of real estate broker who independently owned and operated Coldwell Banker franchise)]. However, in determining whether a true agency relationship exists between a franchisor and franchisee, the courts focus on the right to control. A true principal-agency relationship exists only when the franchisor retains complete or substantial control over the daily activities of the franchisee's business [Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 741, 745-746, 69 Cal.Rptr.2d 640 ; Cislav v. Southland Corp. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1284, 1296, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 386 ; see Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A [real estate broker/sales agent] gains an advantage from [his/her/its] transactions with a client whenever the [real estate broker/sales agent]'s position is improved or the [real estate broker/sales agent] obtains a favorable opportunity or otherwise gains, benefits, or profits.

Authorities: Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 Cal.2d 244, 250, 18 Cal.Rptr. 736, 368 P.2d 360 ; Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal.2d 147, 152, 272 P.2d 11 ; Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction, which defines the meaning of the term "advantage," should be used with the applicable general instructions from MB 7400A.01-MB 7400A.04 and the instruction in MB 7400A.10 defining constructive fraud. This instruction should also be used with the CACI "Breach of Fiduciary Duty" series of instructions [see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions, CACI Nos. 4100- 4105; see also [3][b], below].

[3] Comment

[a] "Advantage" Defined

A fiduciary, such as a real estate broker or sales agent [see CACI No. 4100, MB 7400A.04], obtains an advantage when he or she enters into a transaction with a beneficiary that results in an improvement of the fiduciary's position, or the obtaining of a favorable opportunity or other gains, benefits, or profits [Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 Cal.2d 244, 250, 18 Cal.Rptr. 736, 368 P.2d 360 ; Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal.2d 147, 152, 272 P.2d 11]. An advantage includes the benefit to a lending bank when the financial position of its debtor is improved by a merger [see Barrett v. Bank of America (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1362, 1369, 229 Cal.Rptr. 16] and the profit to a sales agent on a commission [see Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353]. Because brokers and sales agents usually receive a commission, it is seldom difficult to show advantage.

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.12

MB 7400A.12 Broker's Fiduciary Duty Includes Investigating Material Facts of Transaction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A real estate broker has a fiduciary duty to investigate the material facts of the transaction. The broker may not accept information received from others as being true, and transmit it to [his/her/its] principal, without verifying the information or disclosing that the information has not been verified.

Authorities: Pagano v. Krohn (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 1, 11, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 1 ; Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 562-563, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain that the fiduciary duty of a broker explained in CACI No. 4100 and MB 7400A.04 requires the broker to investigate material facts of the transaction or to notify the client of the broker's reliance on another's (usually the seller's) representations. It is applicable in a constructive fraud action when the plaintiff claims either of the following:

- The broker has not told the plaintiff that the broker has failed to independently verify information on a multiple listing sheet; or
- The broker has failed to notify the plaintiff of the reliance on the seller's representations.

The instruction should be used, when applicable, in conjunction with the further instructions of a broker's fiduciary duty to make full disclosure of material facts [see MB 7400A.13 -MB 7400A.16].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Investigation of Material Facts

A real estate broker has a fiduciary duty to a client to refrain from making representations of fact material to the client's decision to buy the property without advising the client that the broker is merely passing on information received from the seller without verifying its accuracy [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 562 n.3, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463]. Although the broker is not required to investigate a seller's representations or the truth of a description contained in a multiple listing service sheet before showing the property to clients, the broker is at least required to tell the clients that the broker had not verified the information the broker passed on to the clients and that the broker was simply relying on the description provided by the sellers [Pagano v. Krohn (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 1, 11, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 1 ; Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 563, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463].

A breach of a fiduciary duty usually constitutes constructive fraud [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 563, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463]. Civ. Code § 1573 defines constructive fraud [see MB 7400A.10]. For an instruction that a broker's failure to disclose material facts is constructive fraud, see MB 7400A.16. For instructions relating to constructive fraud in general, see Ch. 19A, Fraud and Deceit. [a] Duty of Full Disclosure

A real estate broker is a fiduciary and thus owes a duty to its principal to fully disclose all material facts about the transaction that might affect the principal's decision [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101]. The duty continues even if the broker becomes a principal in the transaction [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1553, 1563, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 866]. A real estate sales agent has the same duty to his or her clients [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 64, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353]. A broker's or agent's principal is entitled to the highest degree of loyalty and good faith [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1553, 1563, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 866 ; Burch v. Argus Properties, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 128, 131, 154 Cal.Rptr. 485].

An instruction containing language very similar to this one was approved in Ford v. Cournale [Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 181 n.6, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334].

It is not necessary for the broker to directly profit from the transaction for liability to be imposed for breach of this duty of nondisclosure [Jorgensen v. Beach 'N' Bay Realty, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 155, 162, 177 Cal.Rptr. 882].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The [real estate broker/sales agent]'s duty to disclose requires a full and fair disclosure. To be full and fair, the disclosure must meet both of the following tests:

(1) The [real estate broker/sales agent] must disclose all the information that the principal needs to make an informed decision; and

(2) The [real estate broker/sales agent] must not suppress or conceal any facts within [his/her/its] knowledge that materially qualify the facts stated.

Authorities: Truman v. Thomas (1980) 27 Cal.3d 285, 291, 165 Cal.Rptr. 308, 611 P.2d 902 ; Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 63, 68, 3 Cal.Rptr. 612 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when it is claimed that the broker or sales agent has not made a "full and fair" disclosure.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Disclosure Must Be "Full and Fair"

A fiduciary has a duty not only to state truly what he or she knows, but also not to suppress or conceal any facts within his or her knowledge that materially qualify the facts stated. The disclosure must be "full and fair" [Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 63, 67-68, 3 Cal.Rptr. 612]. The California Supreme Court has said that the scope of a doctor's duty to disclose "is measured by the amount of knowledge a patient needs in order to make an informed choice. All information material to the ... decision should be given" [Truman v. Thomas (1980) 27 Cal.3d 285, 291, 165 Cal.Rptr. 308, 611 P.2d 902].

[1] Instruction

Failure to make a full and complete disclosure [optional: or any concealment of a material fact] amounts to and is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation or fraud on the principal.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1573; Bay Shore Homes, Inc. v. San Diego Trust & Sav. Bk. (1969) 276 Cal.App.2d 108, 115, 80 Cal.Rptr. 849 ; see also Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 579, 581-583, 163 Cal.Rptr. 764 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a constructive fraud action when the plaintiff claims that the real estate broker breached his or her fiduciary duty by failing to disclose a material fact. It should be used in conjunction with the instructions in CACI No. 4100 and MB 7400A.04, as appropriate.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Failure to Disclose Material Fact

Any breach of a duty without actual fraudulent intent that gains an advantage to the fiduciary is constructive fraud [Civ. Code § 1573(1)]. Failure to disclose is a breach of a broker's (or agent's) fiduciary duty [see Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; see also Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 63-65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353 (agent subject to same fiduciary duties as broker)]. Any act that the law specially declares to be fraudulent is also constructive fraud [Civ. Code § 1573(2)].

A broker who withholds information from his or her principal that the commission is being used to help the purchaser buy the property is defrauding the principal [Bay Shore Homes, Inc. v. San Diego Trust & Sav. Bk. (1969) 276 Cal.App.2d 108, 115, 80 Cal.Rptr. 849]. A broker must disclose to the broker's principal his or her relationship with the other party to the transaction if it suggests in any way that the broker may be acquiring an interest in the property [Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 579, 582, 163 Cal.Rptr. 764].

A broker or agent must also disclose all compensation, commissions, or profits that it receives as a benefit of a transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g); Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1553, 1563, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 866]. Thus, an agent who entered into a purchase agreement for a property with her principal, and then entered into an assignment agreement with a third party that included an assignment fee from the third party, was required to disclose the existence and amount of the assignment fee [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1553, 1566-1567, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 866].

A broker's fiduciary duties to [his/her/its] principal extend until the transaction closes.

Authorities: Bate v. Marsteller (1959) 175 Cal.App.2d 573, 577-581, 346 P.2d 903 ; Menzel v. Salka (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 612, 623-624, 4 Cal.Rptr. 78 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when an issue exists concerning when the fiduciary relationship and its attached duties terminate.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Relationship Exists Until Close of Escrow

Since the broker is involved in the entire escrow process, the fiduciary relationship exists until the close of escrow [Bate v. Marsteller (1959) 175 Cal.App.2d 573, 577-581, 346 P.2d 903]. In fact, the relationship continues to exist as long as the principal continues to rely on the broker within the context of the specific transaction [Menzel v. Salka (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 612, 623-624, 4 Cal.Rptr. 78]. Thus, the relationship may continue even after a transaction closes, depending on the facts.

MB 7400A.18 Broker's Burden of Proof

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The real estate [broker/agent] who has obtained any advantage in a transaction with [his/her/its] principal has the burden of proving that [he/she/it] acted with the utmost good faith toward the principal and that before the transaction [he/she/it] made a full disclosure of all the facts at issue and that the transaction was without undue influence.

Authorities: See Prob. Code § 16004(c); Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 785, 793, 98 Cal.Rptr. 242 ; Pepper v. Underwood (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 698, 712, 122 Cal.Rptr. 343 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions in MB 7400A.04 and MB 7400A.10 because it allocates the correct burden of proof when a broker is being sued by a client for constructive fraud. As appropriate, this instruction should also be used with the CACI "Breach of Fiduciary Duty" series of instructions [see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions, CACI Nos. 4100- 4105], in particular, CACI No. 4100, " 'Fiduciary Duty' Explained."

[3] Comment

Prob. Code § 16004(c) (effective July 1, 1987) repeats for actual trusts the historic allocation of burden of proof in a fiduciary relationship [Prob. Code § 16004(c)]. A breach of fiduciary duties is presumed. When the principal questions the acts of the agent done in the course of the agency, the burden is put on the agent to prove that he or she acted in the utmost good faith toward the principal and made full disclosure [Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 785, 793, 98 Cal.Rptr. 242]. However, the plaintiff still has the burden of proving the fact of the agency [Pepper v. Underwood (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 698, 712, 122 Cal.Rptr. 343].

[a] Duty of Care

As an agent, a real estate broker or agent has the duty to exercise reasonable skill and ordinary diligence on the client's behalf. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever an issue of negligent supervision exists. The first alternative should be used if the alleged negligent supervision of an individual broker is at issue. The second alternative should be used if alleged negligent supervision by a corporate broker licensee is at issue. If both are at issue, both alternatives should be used.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Duty to Supervise

The law imposes a duty on a broker to exercise "reasonable" supervision over the activities of his or her salespersons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h); see Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353], and the officer designated by a corporate broker licensee must exercise reasonable supervision and control of all corporate activities for which a real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)]. What is reasonable is a question of fact. However, a supervising broker for a corporate licensee is not personally liable for his or her negligent supervision, although the corporate licensee is liable [Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 1, 35, 147 Cal.Rptr. 655].

_____ [Name of real estate salesperson] is an agent of _____ [name of real estate broker] and can act only for, on behalf of, and in place of _____ [name of real estate broker], the broker under whom [he/she] is licensed. The acts of _____ [name of real estate salesperson] are limited to those that [he/she] does and performs as agent for _____ [name of real estate broker]. Because _____ [name of real estate salesperson] is an agent of _____ [name of real estate broker], _____ [name of real estate broker] is liable for those acts of _____ [name of real estate salesperson] that are done in the transaction of _____ [name of real estate broker]'s business.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10137, 10160, 10177; Civ. Code § 2338; People v. Asuncion (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 422, 425, 199 Cal.Rptr. 514 ; *Grubb & Ellis Co. v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the broker's liability is based on the acts of his or her salesperson. The instruction assumes that the salesperson's employment by the broker is not a fact in dispute. The employer-employee relationship should not generally be in dispute, because the laws regulating real estate licensing tie the salesperson so tightly to his or her broker. For example, the name of the employing broker must be stated on the salesperson's license, and the name on the license must be changed if the salesperson enters the employ of a different broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10161.8(d)]. Further, every broker must have a signed and dated written agreement with each salesperson, whether licensed as a salesperson or broker, that covers the material aspects of their relationship, including supervision of licensed activities, duties, and compensation [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2726].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Salesperson Is Agent of Broker

A real estate salesperson is, as a matter of law, an agent of the broker under whose license he or she operates [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h); Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 890, 895, 192 Cal.Rptr. 637 ; Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 190, 203, 206, 207, 30 Cal.Rptr. 253]. All of a real estate salesperson's professional compensation must come through the broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137], and the salesperson's license must be in the broker's custody [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10160].

Any contract that purports to change the salesperson from the broker's agent to an independent contractor is invalid as contrary to the real estate law. Whether the broker is responsible for the act of the agent depends on whether the agent was engaged at that time in the transaction of the broker's business or in an act done for the agent's own personal convenience or accommodation and related to an end or purpose exclusively and individually his or her own [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 190, 207-209, 30 Cal.Rptr. 253].

The salesperson may not contract in his or her own name and is not exempt from usury laws [People v. Asuncion (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 422, 426, 199 Cal.Rptr. 514].

For purposes of tort liability, the broker is liable for the acts of the broker's salesperson under the doctrine of respondeat superior, because a salesperson is the agent of the broker [Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 890, 895, 192 Cal.Rptr. 637 ; see Civ. Code § 2338 (principal responsible to third persons for negligence of agent in transaction of agency business)].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a fiduciary is accused of actual fraud in lieu of the general fraud instructions [see Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions, CACI No. 4100, " 'Fiduciary Duty' Explained"]. It encompasses fraud by knowing or reckless misrepresentation, concealment, and negligent misrepresentation [see Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, CACI Nos. 1900, 1901, 1903, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, MB 1900A.03, MB 1900A.04]. The first alternative paragraph 3 should be used if fraud by knowing or reckless misrepresentation or concealment is in issue. The second alternative paragraph 3 should be used when negligent misrepresentation is the issue. This instruction omits the requirement that the false statement must be a false statement of a material fact. It also omits the requirement that the plaintiff's reliance must be a justified reliance. For the reasons explained in [3][a], below, these elements of fraud will ordinarily not be at issue in a case involving the professional liability of a broker.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Elements of Fraud or Deceit

"Fraud" is defined by Civ. Code § 1572, and "deceit" is defined by Civ. Code § 1710. The elements of fraud or deceit are stated in Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. [Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal.2d 412, 422, 159 P.2d 958]. The elements of negligent misrepresentation are stated in Walters v. Marler [Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 1, 17, 147 Cal.Rptr. 655].

Because of the professional knowledge expected of and the fiduciary duties imposed on a broker, this instruction may be more appropriate than general fraud instructions. For example, the issue of independent investigation need not be a matter for instruction [see Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, MB 1900A.23[3]; see also Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions, CACI No. 4100, " 'Fiduciary Duty' Explained"].

This instruction omits the requirement that the false statement must be a false statement of a material fact [see Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 1, 17, 147 Cal.Rptr. 655]. This requirement is unnecessary because a false statement of opinion will support an action for fraud if the party making the statement has superior knowledge or special information about that subject [Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 63, 68, 3 Cal.Rptr. 612]. A real estate professional is presumed to have the skill and knowledge of a professional with regard to real estate transactions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10153; Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 63, 68, 3 Cal.Rptr. 612].

This instruction also omits the requirement that the plaintiff's reliance must be a justified reliance, because a principal is justified in relying on the advice of a fiduciary giving advice in the context of the agency assumed [Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 154, 162, 59 Cal.Rptr. 359 ; see MB 7400A.44]. Reliance on a professional is reasonable. A professional agent must provide direct and fair answers to inquiries and not discourage investigation by telling a purchaser "[you have] nothing ... to worry about" [Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 63, 68, 3 Cal.Rptr. 612 ; Civ. Code § 1572].

A real estate franchise company may be liable on a theory of ostensible agency for the fraud of its franchisee, the real estate broker [Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 741, 747-748, 69 Cal.Rptr.2d 640 (triable issue of fact existed with regard to ostensible agency of real estate broker who independently owned and operated Coldwell Banker franchise)]. However, in determining whether a true agency relationship exists between a franchisor and franchisee, the courts focus on the right to control. A true principal-agency relationship exists only when the franchisor retains complete or substantial control over the daily activities of the franchisee's business [Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 741, 745-746, 69 Cal.Rptr.2d 640 ; Cislaw v. Southland Corp. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1284, 1296, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 386 ; see Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

You have been instructed that one of the things that Plaintiff must prove is that _____ [name of broker] [concealed/falsely stated] a material fact.

A material fact is one that is significant and is directly related to Plaintiff's decision to deal with _____ [name of broker]. The fact must be a fact of such nature, weight, and force that without the [false statement/concealment] of this fact the contract would not have been made. It is not necessary for Plaintiff to prove that the [false statement/concealment] of this fact was the only reason that Plaintiff made the contract.

Authorities: Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 183 n. 10, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334 ; Schaub v. Schaub (1945) 71 Cal.App.2d 467, 475, 162 P.2d 966 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when fraud is alleged against a broker. In these cases, the jury should be instructed on what constitutes a material fact.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Material Fact

A fact is material if it relates to a matter of substance and directly affects the purpose of the party deceived in entering the contract [Schaub v. Schaub (1945) 71 Cal.App.2d 467, 475, 162 P.2d 966]. Proof of one such fact is enough to justify recovery [Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 183 n. 10, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334 ; Gormly v. Dickinson (1960) 178 Cal.App.2d 92, 104, 2 Cal.Rptr. 650]. It is not necessary for plaintiff to prove that the misrepresentation was the sole inducement to the contract [Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 183 n. 10, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334].

[3] Comment

[a] Justifiable Reliance

It is well established in California that in an action for fraud or deceit, negligence on the part of the plaintiff in failing to discover the falsity of the defendant's statement is no defense when the misrepresentation was intentional [Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1502, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59] . A principal is justified in relying on the advice of a fiduciary giving advice in the context of the agency assumed [*Schoenberg v. [1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages from _____ [name of real estate broker or agent], then the damages awarded must be in an amount that will compensate Plaintiff for all the harm or loss caused by _____ [name of real estate broker or agent]'s wrongful conduct, whether the harm or loss could have been anticipated or not.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3333; Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240-1241, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 ; Lewis v. Upton (1984) 151 Cal.App.3d 232, 237, 198 Cal.Rptr. 494 ; Brown v. Critchfield (1980) 100 Cal.App.3d 858, 871, 161 Cal.Rptr. 342 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in negligence cases. It should also be used when damages are sought from a fiduciary for fraud in the purchase or sale of real property. Ordinarily, the damages available for fraud in the purchase or sale of real property are fixed by Civ. Code § 3343 rather than Civ. Code § 3333, but this is not the case when the defendant stands in a fiduciary relationship to the plaintiff, as explained in [3][a], below.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Damages

Civ. Code § 3343 provides the usual measure of damages relating to fraud in the purchase or sale of real property. If the defrauding party stands in a fiduciary relationship to the victim, damages will be measured by Civ. Code § 3333, which governs compensation for obligations not arising from contract-torts, for example [Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240-1241, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 ; Brown v. Critchfield (1980) 100 Cal.App.3d 858, 871, 161 Cal.Rptr. 342 ; cf. Hensley v. McSweeney (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1081, 1085-1086, 109 Cal.Rptr.2d 489 (in cases involving negligent misrepresentation by fiduciary, out-of-pocket measure of damages applies as set forth in Civ. Code § 3343)]. Civ. Code § 3333 provides for damages in the amount that will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused by the wrongful act, whether this detriment could have been anticipated or not. This means that, for example, emotional distress damages, which are not available under Civ. Code § 3343, may be recovered from a broker under Civ. Code § 3333 [Lewis v. Upton (1984) 151 Cal.App.3d 232, 237, 198 Cal.Rptr. 494].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that the conduct of _____ [name of broker or agent] amounted to bad faith, disloyalty, or actual fraud, then _____ [(name of broker) has no right to receive a commission or (name of principal) is entitled to recover the commission that (he/she/it) paid to _____ (name of broker)]. However, negligence in the performance of [his/her/its] duties when there is no disloyalty, actual fraud, or bad faith will not deprive _____ [name of broker] of [his/her/its] right to be paid a commission.

Authorities: Ziswasser v. Cole & Cowan, Inc. (1985) 164 Cal.App.3d 417, 423-425, 210 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Bay Shore Homes, Inc. v. San Diego Trust & Sav. Bk. (1969) 276 Cal.App.2d 108, 115-116, 80 Cal.Rptr. 849 ; Tackett v. Croonquist (1966) 244 Cal.App.2d 572, 578, 53 Cal.Rptr. 388 ; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 469.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the broker's actual fraud, bad faith, or disloyalty is raised in a claim to recover a commission paid to the broker or in defense of the broker's claim or counterclaim for a commission. It should be used with the instructions in MB 7400A.40 and MB 7400A.41 or those in Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, to explain what actual fraud is. Because a broker is in a fiduciary relationship with his or her principal, this instruction will likely also be appropriate with the CACI "Breach of Fiduciary Duty" series [see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions, CACI Nos. 4100- 4105], in particular, CACI No. 4100, " 'Fiduciary Duty' Explained," and CACI No. 4102, "Duty of Undivided Loyalty--Essential Factual Elements."

[3] Comment

A broker will be denied a commission when that broker willfully fails to obtain the best terms for his or her principal, and has received a greater commission than he or she would otherwise have received [Bay Shore Homes, Inc. v. San Diego Trust & Sav. Bk. (1969) 276 Cal.App.2d 108, 115-116, 80 Cal.Rptr. 849]. Mere negligence or constructive fraud by the broker or agent does not deprive the broker of a commission when there is no disloyalty, bad faith, or actual fraud [Ziswasser v. Cole & Cowan, Inc. (1985) 164 Cal.App.3d 417, 423-425, 210 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; *Tackett v. CHAPTER 74A Matthew Bender Professional Liability in Real Property Transactions Instructions
PART B. ACTIONS INVOLVING ESCROWS AND ESCROW AGENTS
1. General Instructions

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.60

MB 7400A.60 Definition of "Escrow"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An "escrow" is a transaction in which one person, to sell, transfer, encumber, or lease property, delivers documents or money to a third person to be held by the third person until a specified event happens or a prescribed condition has been performed. When the specified event happens or the prescribed condition is performed, the documents or money is then to be delivered by that third person to a person specified in the escrow instructions.

The sale, transfer, or encumbrance of the property does not take effect until the documents or money held by the third party is delivered to the person specified in the escrow instructions.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1057; Fin. Code § 17003(a); Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 ; Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 103, 118, 284 Cal.Rptr. 367 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the term "escrow." Although the instruction will most often be used in real property litigation, an escrow need not concern real property. Personal property may also be subject to escrow [Fin. Code § 17003; see Fin. Code § 17003(b) (special provisions applicable to Internet escrow companies with regard to transfer of personal property or services)].

[3] Comment

A grant deposited by the grantor with a third person to be delivered to the grantee on performance of a condition is called an escrow while it is in the possession of the third person and subject to the condition [Civ. Code § 1057]. "Escrow" means any transaction in which one person, to sell, transfer, encumber, or lease property, delivers a written instrument, money, evidence of title, or some other thing of value to a third person to be held by that third person until the happening of a specified event or the performance of a prescribed condition, when it is then to be delivered by that third person to a grantee, grantor, promisee, promisor, obligee, obligor, bailee, bailor, or any agent or employee of the latter [Fin. Code § 17003(a); Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 103, 118, 284 Cal.Rptr. 367 ; see Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548]. An escrow can involve personal as well as real property [Fin. Code § 17003].

PART B. ACTIONS INVOLVING ESCROWS AND ESCROW AGENTS
1. General Instructions

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.62

MB 7400A.62 Definition of "Escrow Instructions"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Escrow instructions are a customary and necessary means of consummating a real estate transaction. The instructions do not take the place of the agreement for sale, but merely carry it into effect.

Authorities: Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 682, 685, 87 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Tancredi v. Garrett (1962) 210 Cal.App.2d 818, 822, 27 Cal.Rptr. 52 ; Karras v. Title Ins. & Guar. Co. (1953) 118 Cal.App.2d 659, 664, 258 P.2d 866 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when an alleged difference between the escrow instructions and the contract of the parties is in issue.

[3] Comment

Often, an escrow agent will not see the deposit receipt or any other documents evidencing the contract between the buyer and seller of real property. The agent will not know whether the instructions are consistent with the underlying contract of sale. As long as the instructions do not contradict one another and appear to contain all of the basic transaction's elements, an escrow can close even though the result may violate the terms of the contract between the principals. An escrow agent has no responsibility to even look at the contract. The agent's duty is to comply with the escrow instructions [Amen v. Merced County Title Co. (1962) 58 Cal.2d 528, 531, 25 Cal.Rptr. 65, 375 P.2d 33]. The agreement of sale and the escrow instructions are separate documents with separate functions so that an instruction to the escrow agent canceling all previous instructions and stating that the escrow is not to be consummated is no bar to an action for specific performance on the underlying contract of sale [Cohen v. Shearer (1980) 108 Cal.App.3d 939, 941-942, 167 Cal.Rptr. 10].

Escrow is a process of consummating a real estate transaction [Karras v. Title Ins. & Guar. Co. (1953) 118 Cal.App.2d 659, 664, 258 P.2d 866]. The instructions do not supplant the basic agreement between buyer and seller although the two may be read together to ascertain intent [Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 682, 685, 87 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Tancredi v. Garrett (1962) 210 Cal.App.2d 818, 822, 27 Cal.Rptr. 52]. Escrows are a method of carrying out the agreement employed by custom for convenience [Tancredi v. Garrett (1962) 210 Cal.App.2d 818, 822, 27 Cal.Rptr. 52].

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.70

MB 7400A.70 Escrow Instructions--No Requirement of Writing

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Escrow instructions may be either written or oral.

Authorities: Cannon v. Handley (1887) 72 Cal. 133, 144, 13 P. 315 ; Zang v. Northwestern Title Co. (1982) 135 Cal.App.3d 159, 167-168, 185 Cal.Rptr. 176 ; Womble v. Wilbur (1906) 3 Cal.App. 535, 547, 86 P. 916 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when an issue exists regarding oral escrow instructions. Because the underlying contract in an escrow transaction is usually one for the sale of real property, statute of frauds [see [3][a], below] or parole evidence rule [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1856 (parole evidence rule); see also Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions, MB 300B.02] issues may arise concerning that underlying contract. If these issues do arise, and if all or part of the escrow instructions in the case are oral, it will be important to instruct the jury that escrow instructions are different from contracts for the sale of real estate in that they need not be in writing. Although escrow instructions need not be in writing [see [3][a], below] a conflict between alleged oral escrow instructions and a contemporaneous written agreement may raise parole evidence issues concerning the escrow instructions [see [3][b], below] that will require instructions to the jury [see Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions, MB 300B.02].

[3] Comment

[a] Escrow Instructions May Be Oral

It is a well accepted principle that escrow instructions may be oral [Zang v. Northwestern Title Co. (1982) 135 Cal.App.3d 159, 167-168, 185 Cal.Rptr. 176 ; Womble v. Wilbur (1906) 3 Cal.App. 535, 547, 86 P. 916 ; Cannon v. Handley (1887) 72 Cal. 133, 144, 13 P. 315]. Even when the underlying contract is for the sale of real property and subject to the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3), (4)], there is no requirement that the escrow instructions be in writing [Cannon v. Handley (1887) 72 Cal. 133, 144, 13 P. 315].

[b] Disadvantages of Oral Instructions

Although oral escrow instructions are permissible, they may pose certain disadvantages. When the existence of an oral instruction is in dispute, the escrow holder may have the burden of proof [Prob. Code § 16004(c)]. If the alleged oral instruction is inconsistent with a contemporaneous written agreement, the escrow holder may also face a parol evidence question [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856; see Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions, MB 300B.02].

The Insurance Code declares that disbursing or offering to disburse escrow funds before the conditions of the escrow applicable to that disbursement have been met is deemed to be an unlawful inducement [Ins. Code § 12404(c)(5)]. Without written escrow instructions, an escrow agent disbursing funds would probably be unable to meet the code requirement for documenting the transaction [Ins. Code §§ 12407, 12414.22].

Moreover, it is the universal custom of escrow and underwriting title companies in California to require written instructions. A failure to obtain at least some written instructions executed by the parties to the escrow might raise tort as well as contract questions. For example, the failure to comply with custom by requiring written escrow instructions could be interpreted in an action alleging negligence as a failure by the escrow holder to exercise ordinary skill and diligence in his or her employment [see MB 7400A.91 (escrow holder's duty of care)].

Defendant contends that _____ [state defendant's contention]. This dispute raises a question of interpretation of the escrow instructions that you must decide according to the following rules of interpretation.

Authorities: Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 291, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 437, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749 ; Francis v. Eisenmayer (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 221, 227, 340 P.2d 54 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a conflict exists in the extrinsic evidence offered to interpret written escrow instructions, as explained in [3][b], below. The instruction should be used when there is a claim that the escrow agents incorrectly followed an escrow instruction or that it was ambiguous or contradicted other escrow instructions. It should be followed with those interpretational instructions based on Civ. Code §§ 1636-1663 that are appropriate to the particular case.

For possible instructions to be used other than the instruction on uncertainty in MB 7400A.72, see Ch. 3, California

Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314-320 (general interpretation of contract instructions) [see [3][c], below], and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions.

[3] Comment

[a] Contract Rules Apply to Interpretation of Escrow Instructions

An escrow agent's task involves strict compliance with the escrow instructions [Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 435, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749 ; see MB 7400A.92 (instruction on escrow holder's duty to comply strictly with principal's instructions)]. These instructions are interpreted under the rules applicable to contracts [Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 437, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749 ; Francis v. Eisenmayer (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 221, 226-227, 340 P.2d 54]. For instructions on the rules of contract interpretation, see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, CACI Nos. 314-320, and Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions.

[b] Question for Court or for Jury

The interpretation of a written instrument is solely a judicial function unless the interpretation turns on the credibility of extrinsic evidence [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 865, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839 ; Greater Middleton Assn. v. Holmes Lumber Co. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 980, 989-990, 271 Cal.Rptr. 917]. When the interpretation does turn on the credibility of extrinsic evidence, it is proper to submit the question of interpretation to the jury [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 291, 85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996]. For further discussion, see Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions, MB 300B.01 and MB 300B.02.

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Any uncertainty in escrow instructions must be interpreted most strongly against the party who _____ [caused the uncertainty to exist or prepared the instructions, because (he/she/it) caused the uncertainty to exist].

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1654; Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 437, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749 ; Diaz v. United California Bank (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 161, 171, 139 Cal.Rptr. 314 ; Francis v. Eisenmayer (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 221, 227, 340 P.2d 54 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7400A.71 when the jury is asked to ascertain the meaning of the escrow instructions based on extrinsic evidence. It should be used when there is an ambiguity or a contradiction contained within a single instruction or among several instructions. The second bracketed alternative directing the jury to construe the instructions against the party who prepared them should be used when the preparation of the instructions is causing the uncertainty that is at issue.

[3] Comment

When an uncertainty in an agreement is not removed by the general rules of interpretation in Civ. Code §§ 1635-1663, the language of the agreement should be interpreted most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist [Civ. Code § 1654]. This rule of contract interpretation applies as well to the interpretation of escrow instructions [

Diaz v. United California Bank (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 161, 171, 139 Cal.Rptr. 314 ; Francis v. Eisenmayer (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 221, 227, 340 P.2d 54].

The escrow agent's basic contractual duty is to comply strictly with instructions of the parties [Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 435, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749]. Any ambiguity is resolved against the party preparing the instruction [Francis v. Eisenmayer (1959) 171 Cal.App.2d 221, 227, 340 P.2d 54]. Any seeming contradiction in or among instructions requires that the escrow agent, in the exercise of due care, resolve the ambiguity or contradiction before proceeding to close [Diaz v. United California Bank (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 161, 171, 139 Cal.Rptr. 314].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Full performance of escrow instructions is required for an escrow to close; substantial performance of the instructions is not enough. No title passes until the terms of the escrow have been fully performed.

Authorities: Love v. White (1961) 56 Cal.2d 192, 194-195, 14 Cal.Rptr. 442, 363 P.2d 482 ; Weisberg v. Ashcraft (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 225, 231, 14 Cal.Rptr. 817 ; Borgonovo v. Henderson (1960) 182 Cal.App.2d 220, 226, 6 Cal.Rptr. 236 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given in the event of an alleged improper delivery of documents or funds by the escrow agent.

[3] Comment

The doctrine of substantial performance does not apply to escrows [Love v. White (1961) 56 Cal.2d 192, 194-195, 14 Cal.Rptr. 442, 363 P.2d 482 ; *Weisberg v. If an escrow holder delivers or records a deed before full performance of the escrow terms, the delivery or recordation is a nullity and no title passes [Borgonovo v. Henderson (1960) 182 Cal.App.2d 220, 226, 6 Cal.Rptr. 236].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If there is a conflict or an apparent error in an escrow instruction, the escrow holder has a duty to take corrective steps to clear up the conflict or apparent error.

Authorities: Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 436, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749 ; St. Paul Title Co. v. Meier (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 948, 952, 226 Cal.Rptr. 538 ; Diaz v. United California Bank (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 161, 166-167, 170-171, 139 Cal.Rptr. 314 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a conflict or ambiguity in an escrow instruction is at issue.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Duty to Correct Conflict or Ambiguity

When a conflict or ambiguity exists in an instruction, the escrow holder has a duty to take corrective steps before obeying questionable instructions [Kirk Corp. v. First American Title Co. (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 785, 807, 270 Cal.Rptr. 24]. The escrow holder should first make an effort to clarify the problem [Claussen v. First American Title Guaranty Co. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 429, 436, 230 Cal.Rptr. 749]. The escrow agent's duty is to delay the transfer until the conflict is resolved [Kirby v. Palos Verdes Escrow Co. (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 57, 66, 227 Cal.Rptr. 785 , disapproved on other grounds, Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 714, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548]. If the conflict cannot be resolved, the escrow agent cannot proceed to close without incurring some liability to one party or the other. In such a case, the escrow holder's option is to interplead the dispute [Diaz v. United California Bank (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 161, 170-171, 139 Cal.Rptr. 314 ; St. Paul Title Co. v. Meier (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 948, 952, 226 Cal.Rptr. 538]. Closing an escrow when the instructions are indefinite and uncertain is a disposition of the principal's property without instructions, because the instructions given are meaningless. An escrow agent who does this is negligent and has failed to exercise due diligence in complying with the escrow instructions [Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 682-683, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The escrow instructions constitute the full measure of the obligations assumed by _____ [name of escrow holder] as escrow holder and owing to Plaintiff. _____ [Name of escrow holder] is not required to give Plaintiff information that [he/she/it] has if that information is not [related to/subject to disclosure under] [his/her/its] specific escrow instructions.

Authorities: Blackburn v. McCoy (1934) 1 Cal.App.2d 648, 655, 37 P.2d 153 ; Cunningham v. Security Title Ins. Co. (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 626, 630-631, 50 Cal.Rptr. 724 ; Mefford v. Security Title Ins. Co. (1962) 199 Cal.App.2d 578, 585, 18 Cal.Rptr. 877 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to describe the basic duty of an escrow agent, who is not required to make disclosures to the parties unless required to do so in the context of the instructions.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Requirement to Make Disclosures

The scope of an escrow agent's duty to disclose to his or her principal facts that might affect the principal's decisions has been the topic of a great deal of litigation. Due to the nature of the escrow business, escrow agents repeatedly come into contact with the same real estate agents, brokers, lenders, and investors. Indeed, escrow agents are often encouraged by their employers to maintain these individuals as clients because they bring substantial repeat business to the employer. In the course of this relationship, the escrow agent will obviously learn facts about these people that a principal would like to know. Requiring the escrow agent to disclose these facts to a principal any time that they might be material, even when the facts are outside the fair interpretation of a given principal's instructions, could subject the agent to liability for interference with the contract. Moreover, the business of escrow would be impaired [see Lee v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1968) 264 Cal.App.2d 160, 163, 70 Cal.Rptr. 378].

Accordingly, it has been firmly established in the law that an escrow holder is a limited agent whose agency is limited to the escrow instructions given [Blackburn v. McCoy (1934) 1 Cal.App.2d 648, 654-655, 37 P.2d 153] . Thus, a general agent's duty of disclosure does not extend to an escrow holder [Cunningham v. Security Title Ins. Co. (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 626, 630-631, 50 Cal.Rptr. 724], unless the escrow holder is obligated under the escrow instructions to provide the information [Mefford v. Security Title Ins. Co. (1962) 199 Cal.App.2d 578, 585, 18 Cal.Rptr. 877]. Some facts that an escrow holder should disclose include clouds on title [Contini v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 536, 547, 115 Cal.Rptr. 257], specific conditions applicable to loans secured on title (construction loans) [Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 681-684, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658], and assignments that affect a party's interest in escrow funds [Kirby v. Palos Verdes Escrow Co. (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 57, 65, 227 Cal.Rptr. 785 , disapproved on other grounds, Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 714, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548]. When the escrow instructions require all changes to be given in writing by all the affected parties, the escrow holder may be liable for failing to verify the signatures on the amendments to the escrow instructions [Lee v. Escrow Consultants, Inc. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 915, 923-924, 259 Cal.Rptr. 117].

Even when no duty to disclose exists, if the escrow holder does make a disclosure, the holder is required to speak honestly, and may not mislead or suppress other facts that materially qualify those stated [Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 63, 68, 3 Cal.Rptr. 612].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the scope of an escrow agent's duty is at issue.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] No Duty to Go Beyond Strict Performance of Instructions

The agency relationship between the escrow agent and the principal is a limited one, and there is no duty to go beyond strict performance of the escrow instructions [Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002)

27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 ; Axley v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1978) 88 Cal.App.3d 1, 8, 151 Cal.Rptr. 570 ; Lee v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1968) 264 Cal.App.2d 160, 162-163, 70 Cal.Rptr. 378]. For example, there is no duty to disclose to a buyer of real property that the other parties to the escrow are defrauding him or her by means of a second transaction of which he or she is not aware [Gordon v. D & G Escrow Corp. (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 616, 622, 122 Cal.Rptr. 150]. Further, an escrow agent is not required to disclose to the buyer that the seller was actually in the process of buying the property himself or herself so he or she could resell it to the buyer at a higher price [Blackburn v. McCoy (1934) 1 Cal.App.2d 648, 655, 37 P.2d 153 ; see Schaefer v. Manufacturers Bank (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 70, 77, 163 Cal.Rptr. 402]. An escrow agent has no duty to deposit escrow funds in an interest-bearing account. The escrow holder's duty is satisfied by faithful compliance with the escrow instructions; no general duty exists for policing the affairs of its depositors [Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 ; Hannon v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1122, 1127-1128, 260 Cal.Rptr. 21] .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to state the damages due for an escrow holder's failure to comply with the escrow instructions. The measure of damages is the same whether the action is one in contract for failure to comply with the instructions or in tort for failure to exercise ordinary skill and diligence in the performance of the instructions [see [3][a], below].

[3] Comment

[a] Liability for Damages

An escrow agent [*Fin. An escrow holder who closes an escrow contrary to the instructions of his or her principal breaches the escrow contract and may also be liable for negligence for failure to exercise ordinary care in carrying out the instructions [*Common Wealth Ins. [1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An escrow agent is bound above all things not to take sides between the parties to the escrow.

Authorities: In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429, 440, 110 Cal.Rptr.2d 615 ; Karras v. Title Ins. & Guar. Co. (1953) 118 Cal.App.2d 659, 666, 258 P.2d 866 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to describe the basic duty of an escrow agent.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Purpose of Escrow

The basic purpose of an escrow is to place performance of concurrent conditions in the hands of a neutral party. Escrow agents are stakeholders acting for the benefit of both parties [In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429, 440, 110 Cal.Rptr.2d 615 ; Karras v. Title Ins. & Guar. Co. (1953) 118 Cal.App.2d 659, 666, 258 P.2d 866]. The abrogation of this responsibility by the escrow agent defeats the purpose of the escrow and breaches the contract between the principal and the escrow agent and does not meet the appropriate standard of care for an escrow agent. An unfaithful agent also breaches his or her fiduciary duty [see Civ. Code § 1573].

It is the duty of an escrow holder to comply strictly with the instructions of [his/her/its] principal.

Authorities: Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 ; *Amen v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in both contract and tort actions and should be given when the issue is whether the escrow agent properly complied with the principals' instructions in closing an escrow.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Strict Compliance Required

An escrow agent's basic contract with his or her principals is to receive money or documents and to hold them until the specific conditions of the escrow have been met, at which time the documents or money are exchanged between the principals. Failure to strictly follow instructions is a breach of contract [Amen v. Merced County Title Co. (1962) 58

Cal.2d 528, 532, 25 Cal.Rptr. 65, 375 P.2d 33], and may also constitute negligence [Colonial Savings & L. Assn. v. Redwood Empire Title Co. (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 186, 191, 46 Cal.Rptr. 16].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

An escrow holder must not accept [a/an] [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction] that contains a blank space to be filled in after the [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction] is signed or initialed. An escrow holder must not permit anyone to add to, delete from, or otherwise change [a/an] [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction], unless the change is signed or initialed by every person who signed or initialed the [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction] before it was changed.

[OR]

An Internet escrow agent should not accept over the Internet [a/an] [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction] that contains a blank space to be filled in after the [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction] is signed or initialed. An Internet escrow agent should not permit anyone, over the Internet, to add to, delete from, or otherwise change [a/an] [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction], unless the change is signed or initialed by every person who signed or initialed the [escrow instruction/amended escrow instruction/supplemental escrow instruction] before it was changed.

Authority: Fin. Code § 17403.2.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the escrow holder has accepted incomplete written escrow instructions or has allowed changes to written escrow instructions without the required signatures or initials. Which alternative instruction to use depends on whether the escrow holder is an Internet escrow agent. The instruction sets forth an obvious duty of ordinary care.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][c], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Escrow Agent's Duty

Under Fin. Code § 17403.2(a), an escrow agent should not accept written instructions with blanks, nor should the agent allow changes in written instructions without obtaining the signatures (or initials) of all who originally signed (or initialed) those instructions. Fin. Code § 17403.2(b) prohibits an Internet escrow agent from accepting over the Internet escrow instructions with blanks to be filled in after executing the instructions. An Internet escrow agent also should not permit any person, over the Internet, to make any changes in the instructions, unless the change is executed by all persons who originally executed the instruction. The conduct prohibited by § 17403.2 would be beneath the escrow holder's standard of care.

An escrow agent who violates the provisions of Fin. Code § 17403.2 may have committed negligence per se under Evid. Code § 669(a), which provides that failure to exercise due care is presumed when a person causes injury by violating a statute designed to prevent the occurrence that caused the injury, if the injured party was one of those whom the statute was intended to protect.

[b] Caveat: Exemptions

Under the Financial Code, attorneys at law and licensed real estate brokers are exempt from the provisions of Fin. Code § 17000 et seq., including Fin. Code § 17403.2 [Fin. Code § 17006(a)(2), (4)]. The exemptions for attorneys and real estate brokers are personal, and the attorney or broker may not delegate any duties other than duties performed under the direct supervision of the attorney or broker [Fin. Code § 17006(b)]. These exemptions are not available for any arrangement entered into for the purpose of performing escrows for more than one business [Fin. Code § 17006(b)]. Furthermore, an attorney is exempt only if he or she has a bona fide client relationship with a principal in a real estate or personal property transaction, and is not actively engaged in the business of an escrow agent [Fin. Code § 17006(a)(2)].

In addition, a person is exempt if his or her principal business is preparing abstracts or making title searches that are used for issuing title insurance policies by a company doing business under any California law relating to insurance companies [Fin. Code § 17006(a)(3)]. The question of what constitutes a principal business is one of fact [54 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 13, 15 (1971)]. Finally, there is an exemption for any person doing business under any California or federal law relating to banks, trust companies, building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, or insurance companies [Fin. Code § 17006(a)(1)].

The burden of proving an exemption or an exception from the Financial Code is on the person claiming it [Fin. Code § 17006.5].

Authority: Fin. Code § 17403.3.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to set out an escrow holder's duty to deliver a copy of the instructions to the proper parties. Which of the alternative instructions to use depends on whether the escrow holder is an Internet escrow agent.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Duty to Deliver Executed Instructions

Nonexempt escrow agents [see MB 7400A.93[3][b]] must comply with this requirement to provide a copy of each executed escrow instruction to each executing party [Fin. Code. § 17403.3], although the courts have not addressed this issue. An Internet escrow agent should deliver the instruction electronically. If a person who executed the instructions is unable to receive the instruction electronically, the Internet escrow agent must mail a copy of the instruction to that person within 24 hours of the instruction's execution [Fin. Code § 17403.3(b)]. Failure to carry out this duty may amount to negligence per se [Evid. Code § 669(a); see MB 7400A.93[3][a]].

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.95

MB 7400A.95 Duty to Disclose

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An escrow agent has the duty to exercise ordinary care to communicate to [his/her/its] principal, knowledge acquired in the course of carrying out [his/her/its] escrow instructions, if the knowledge acquired concerns those instructions.

Authorities: In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429, 441, 110 Cal.Rptr.2d 615 ; Wade v. Lake County Title Co. (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 824, 828-829, 86 Cal.Rptr. 182 ; Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 684, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the agent's negligent failure to disclose information is an issue. To properly balance the escrow holder's duty to disclose against the limited nature of that duty, this instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7400A.76.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Duty to Disclose

The negligent failure to communicate knowledge is a negligent misrepresentation and is actionable not only as a breach of fiduciary duty but also as ordinary negligence [Wade v. Lake County Title Co. (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 824, 828-829, 86 Cal.Rptr. 182 ; Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 682-684, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658].

The critical factual questions involve the course and scope of the agency [see MB 7400A.76[3]]. Accordingly, a "balanced" disclosure instruction in tort litigation should include both this instruction and the instruction in MB 7400A.76.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action between a principal and an escrow holder, and should not be used in a suit against a principal based on vicarious liability principles. This instruction explains the nature of the escrow holder's agency before and after the escrow conditions are complied with. This explanation helps show to whom the holder owes the various duties of an escrow holder explained in MB 7400A.90-MB 7400A.94 and it should accordingly be used with the appropriate instructions from those sections.

[3] Comment

An escrow holder is the agent of all parties to the escrow at all times before the escrow conditions are performed [Shreeves v. Pearson (1924) 194 Cal. 699, 707, 230 P. 448 ; In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429, 440, 110 Cal.Rptr.2d 615 ; Ruth v. Lytton Sav. & Loan Assn. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 831, 839, 72 Cal.Rptr. 521 , modified on other grounds, 272 Cal.App.2d 24, 76 Cal.Rptr. 926 ; Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 682, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658]. After the escrow conditions have been performed, the holder becomes the agent of each party, rather than the dual agent of both [Shreeves v. Pearson (1924) 194 Cal. 699, 707, 230 P. 448]. For additional discussion of this point, see MB 7400A.110[3][a].

The escrow agent's duty of disclosure is viewed in light of the agency (fiduciary) relationship with the principal [Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 684, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658]. An escrow holder is a limited agent; his or her knowledge will be imputed to the escrow parties if it is acquired within the course and scope of his or her limited agency [In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429, 440, 110 Cal.Rptr.2d 615 ; Ruth v. Lytton Sav. & Loan Assn. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 831, 843, 72 Cal.Rptr. 521 , modified on other grounds, 272 Cal.App.2d 24, 76 Cal.Rptr. 926].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that _____ [name of escrow holder] was negligent in carrying out the escrow instructions, then _____ [name of escrow holder] is responsible for any losses of _____ [name of principal] that were caused by _____ [name of escrow holder]'s negligence.

Authorities: Colonial Savings & L. Assn. v. Redwood Empire Title Co. (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 186, 190-191, 46 Cal.Rptr. 16 ; Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 682-683, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action for negligence against an escrow agent.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Liability of Escrow Holder

An escrow holder who acts negligently is liable for any loss proximately caused by the negligence [Colonial Savings & L. Assn. v. Redwood Empire Title Co. (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 186, 191, 46 Cal.Rptr. 16]. The defense of comparative negligence is available to the escrow agent in a negligence action [*Spaziani v. 30 Cal.Rptr. 658].

3. Negligence

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.98

MB 7400A.98 Party to Escrow Not Vicariously Liable

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A party to an escrow who is not [himself/herself/itself] negligent is not liable for the acts or omissions of an escrow holder.

Authority: Common Wealth Ins. Systems, Inc. v. Kersten (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1033, 115 Cal.Rptr. 653 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when an issue exists concerning the vicarious liability of a party to an escrow based on respondeat superior.

For the CACI series on vicarious responsibility, see Ch. 37, Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions. In particular, the CACI series includes an instruction on the essential factual elements when seeking tort liability against a principal [see CACI No. 3701].

[3] Comment

Although for certain purposes an escrow holder is an agent of the escrow parties, the relationship is not one that justifies the imputation of negligence. The relationship between a party to an escrow and the escrow holder is not that of master and servant, and neither the rationale of control nor that of allocation of risk justifies holding an innocent escrow party vicariously liable for the torts of its escrow holder [Common Wealth Ins. Systems, Inc. v. Kersten (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1033, 115 Cal.Rptr. 653]. Accordingly, in a negligence action, particularly when a vicarious liability instruction is given on an agency issue, this instruction should be given to ensure that a principal is not held liable based solely on the negligent conduct of the escrow holder.

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As an agent, _____ [name of escrow holder] owes a fiduciary duty to the parties to the escrow. As soon as the escrow is opened, this duty begins, and it is a dual duty, because _____ [name of escrow holder] is the agent of both _____ [name of seller or grantor] and _____ [name of buyer or grantee]. After _____ [the escrow's conditions have been fully performed or _____ (name of seller or grantor) has _____ (describe escrow conditions to be performed by seller or grantor) and _____ (name of buyer or grantee) has _____ (describe escrow conditions to be performed by buyer or grantee)], _____ [name of escrow holder] is the agent not of both parties, but of each party separately, with regard to those things placed in escrow to which each is now entitled. This means that _____ [name of escrow holder] is the fiduciary of _____ [name of seller or grantor] with regard to the money and of _____ [name of buyer or grantee] with regard to the deed to the property.

Authorities: Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 ; Greenzweight v. Title Guar. & Tr. Kersten (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1030, 115 Cal.Rptr. 653 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action involving an escrow agent when there exists an issue of nondisclosure, misrepresentation, or undue influence.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Fiduciary Duty of Escrow Holder

Once an escrow is opened, the escrow holder is the agent (and fiduciary) of both parties. The holder is a dual agent. When the escrow conditions have been performed, the holder becomes the agent of each party, rather than the dual agent of both. That is, after the escrow conditions have been complied with, the escrow holder is the agent of each party with regard to that party's aspect of the escrow [Greenzweight v. Title Guar. & Tr. Co. (1934) 1 Cal.2d 577, 582, 36 P.2d 186 ; Shreeves v. Pearson (1924) 194 Cal. 699, 707, 230 P. 448]. Thus, after the escrow instructions have been fully complied with, the holder is the seller's agent with regard to the money [Gordon v. D & G Escrow Corp. (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 616, 622, 122 Cal.Rptr. 150] and the buyer's agent as to the deed [Shreeves v. Pearson (1924) 194 Cal. 699, 707, 230 P. 448 ; Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 4, Real Property, § 183 (9th ed. 1987)].

Escrow agents bear a fiduciary relationship to each escrow party, but the escrow agent's duties are limited by the parties' instructions [Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 711, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 ; Common Wealth Ins. Systems, Inc. v. Kersten (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1030-1033, 115 Cal.Rptr. 653 ; Ruth v. Lytton Sav. & Loan Assn. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 831, 843-844, 72 Cal.Rptr. 521 , modified on other grounds, 272 Cal.App.2d 24, 76 Cal.Rptr. 926 ; Colonial Savings & L. Assn. v. Redwood Empire Title Co., (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 186, 193-194, 46 Cal.Rptr. 16 ; Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 681-685, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658].

An escrow agent has a fiduciary duty to disclose to his or her principal all facts acquired in the course of the agency that materially affect a principal's interest in the property or escrow funds [Contini v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 536, 547, 115 Cal.Rptr. 257 ; see MB 7400A.112].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. ____

The fiduciary duty owed by _____ [name of escrow holder] to _____ [name of principal] as a party to the escrow is a personal duty owed directly to _____ [name of principal]. This duty continues even though _____ [name of principal] is also represented by _____ [name of real estate broker or attorney-at-law], [a real estate broker/an attorney-at-law], in this same transaction.

Authorities: Former Civ. Code § 2216; Prob. Code § 15003(b); UMET Trust v. Santa Monica Medical Investment Co. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 864, 873, 189 Cal.Rptr. 922 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given if other fiduciaries, such as attorneys and real estate brokers, are also involved in the litigation, or if third parties are making a claim against the agent.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Fiduciary Duty Is Personal

A fiduciary duty is a personal obligation [see former Civ. Code § 2216 (repealed as of July 1, 1987); Prob. Code §

15003(b)]. The fact that a principal may employ more than one fiduciary does not relieve any fiduciary of his or her personal obligation to the principal [UMET Trust v. Santa Monica Medical Investment Co. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 864, 873, 189 Cal.Rptr. 922]. The escrow agent owes this duty only to the parties to the escrow and not to strangers to the escrow [Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 713-715, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548].

As an escrow holder, _____ [name of escrow holder] is an agent and a fiduciary. Like any other fiduciary, _____ [name of escrow holder] is under a duty to communicate to [his/her/its] principal, _____ [name of principal], any material facts learned in the course of [his/her/its] agency that might affect _____ [name of principal]'s decision on the pending transaction.

Authorities: Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 684, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the duty of an escrow agent to disclose a specific fact is in issue.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Limited Duty of Disclosure

An escrow agent may not make a decision as to what is material. If the fact "might" affect a decision, it should be disclosed. This principle is particularly true when the escrow holder knows the principal is looking to the agent for protection on the very facts of which the agent has knowledge [Vournas v. Fidelity Nat. Tit. Ins. Co. (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 668, 674-675, 86 Cal.Rptr.2d 490 ; Contini v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 536, 547, 115 Cal.Rptr. 257]. The matters the agent must disclose are determined by the course and scope of the agency [Spaziani v. Millar (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 667, 684, 30 Cal.Rptr. 658]. All information obtained during the course and within the scope of the agency that materially affect a principal's interest in the property or in the escrow funds must be disclosed [In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429, 441, 110 Cal.Rptr.2d 615].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Any violation by an escrow holder of [his/her] fiduciary duties that is without actual fraudulent intent, but that gains an advantage to the escrow holder and that causes prejudice to the principal, is a constructive fraud against the principal.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1573(1); Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 936-939, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to state that part of the statutory [see Civ. Code § 1573] definition of constructive fraud most expressly applicable to a breach of fiduciary duties. See the instruction in MB 7400A.18 for a burden of proof instruction involving constructive fraud of a fiduciary and the instructions in MB 7400A.01 and MB 7400A.02 for definitions of "broker" and "sales agent."

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Constructive Fraud

The Civil Code sets out the basic rule that breach of a fiduciary duty even without fraudulent intent is fraud against the principal when (1) the fiduciary gains advantage, and (2) the principal is damaged [Civ. Code § 1573(1)]. Under applicable law, an escrow agent who gains knowledge of a material fact affecting a party's interest in property or escrow funds during the course and within the scope of the agency and who does not disclose it breaches a fiduciary duty [Kirby v. Palos Verdes Escrow Co. (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 57, 64, 227 Cal.Rptr. 785 , disapproved on other grounds, Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 705, 714, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 541, 41 P.3d 548].

An instruction requiring a fraudulent intent would be grounds for reversal [see Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 936-939, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 (special verdict form requiring finding of intent in action against investment adviser for breach of fiduciary duty held reversible error)].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As a notary public, the primary duty of _____ [name of notary public] was to take acknowledgment or proof that _____ [name of document] had been executed by _____ [name of person] and to give a certificate of this proof or acknowledgment endorsed on or attached to the _____ [name of document]. _____ [Name of notary public] was required to sign the certificate in [his/her] own handwriting. _____ [Name of notary public] was required not to accept any acknowledgment or proof of [name of document] if it was incomplete.

Authorities: Gov. Code § 8205(a)(2); Vanderhoof v. Prudential Sav. & Loan Assn. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 507, 511, 120 Cal.Rptr. 207.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given in an action against a notary public or against the notary's surety to establish the notary's basic duty.

[3] Comment

The duty of a notary public, when requested, is to take acknowledgment or proof of advance health care directives, powers of attorney, mortgages, deeds, grants, transfers, and other instruments in writing executed by any person and to give a certificate of this proof or acknowledgment. This certificate must be endorsed on or attached to the instrument, and must be signed by the notary in the notary's own handwriting. A notary public must not accept any acknowledgment or proof of any instrument that is incomplete [Gov. Code § 8205(a)(2)].

An acknowledgment is a ministerial act devoid of discretion [Vanderhoof v. Prudential Sav. & Loan Assn. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 507, 511, 120 Cal.Rptr. 207]. For a document to be recorded, it must be acknowledged or proved [Civ. Code § 1170].

Only after a document is recorded does it impart constructive notice of its contents to subsequent purchasers or mortgagees [Civ. Code § 1213]. However, the operative event is actually the indexing of the document as required by statute [Lewis v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 1850, 1866-1867, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 63 ; see Gov. Code §§ 27230-27265].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A notary public must not take an acknowledgment of a document unless the notary public has satisfactory evidence that the person making the acknowledgment is the person whose signature is being notarized.

Authority: Civ. Code § 1185.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7400A.120 in an action concerning the liability of a notary public or the notary's surety for neglect in obtaining an acknowledgment.

[3] Comment

A notary must not take the acknowledgment of a document unless he or she has satisfactory evidence that the person making the acknowledgment is the person who is described in and who executed the instrument [Civ. Code § 1185(a)]. For this purpose, "satisfactory evidence" means the absence of any information, evidence, or other circumstances which would lead a reasonable person to believe that the person making the acknowledgment is not the individual he or she claims to be, together with any one of the following [Civ. Code § 1185(b)]:

- The oath or affirmation of a credible witness personally known to the officer, whose identity is proved to the officer on presentation of any document satisfying the requirements of Civ. Code § 1185(b)(3) or (4), that the person making the acknowledgment is personally known to the witness and that each of the following are true [Civ. Code § 1185(b)(1)(A); see Civ. Code § 1185(b)(1)(B) (civil penalty for notary public who fails to obtain this evidence)]:

- The person making the acknowledgment is the person named in the document.
- The person making the acknowledgment is personally known to the witness.
- It is the reasonable belief of the witness that the circumstances of the person making the acknowledgment are such that it would be very difficult or impossible for that person to obtain another form of identification.
- The person making the acknowledgment does not possess any of the identification documents named in Civ. Code § 1185(b)(3) and (4).
- The witness does not have a financial interest in the document being acknowledged and is not named in the document.
- The oath or affirmation under penalty of perjury of two credible witnesses, whose identities are proved to the officer on the presentation of any document satisfying the requirements of Civ. Code § 1185(b)(3) or (4), that each statement in Civ. Code § 1185(b)(1) is true [Civ. Code § 1185(b)(2)].
- Reasonable reliance on the presentation to the officer of any one of the following, if the document is current or has been issued within five years [Civ. Code § 1185(b)(3)]:
 - An identification card or driver's license issued by the California Department of Motor Vehicles; or
 - A passport issued by the U.S. Department of State.
- Reasonable reliance on the presentation of any one of the following, provided that the document is current or was issued within five years, contains a photograph and a description of the person named on it, is signed by the person, and bears a serial or other identifying number [Civ. Code § 1185(b)(4)(A)-(E)]:
 - A passport issued by a foreign government, which has been stamped by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (superseded by the Citizenship and Immigration Services);
 - A driver's license issued by a state other than California or by a Canadian or Mexican public agency authorized to issue drivers' licenses;
 - An identification card issued by a state other than California;
 - An identification card issued by any branch of the U.S. Armed Forces; or
 - An inmate identification card issued after 1987 by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, if the inmate is in custody.
- Reasonable reliance on the presentation of an inmate identification card issued before 1988 by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, if the inmate is in custody [Civ. Code § 1185(b)(4)(F)].

MB 7400A.122 False Certification by Notary

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The making of a false certification of acknowledgment or any other misuse of the notary public seal of office is official misconduct.

Authorities: Gov. Code § 8207; Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action against a notary or surety when the issue is the notary's negligence or misconduct.

[3] Comment

The false certification of an acknowledgment includes the affixing of the notary's seal to the document. Any use by the notary of the official seal is an official act, and the wrongful use of the seal is official misconduct [Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; Gov. Code § 8207]. A notary public must not use the official notarial seal except for carrying out his or her duties and responsibilities under the notary laws [Gov. Code § 8207].

PART C. ACTIONS INVOLVING NOTARIES PUBLIC AND SURETIES

6-74A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7400A.123

MB 7400A.123 Duty to Maintain Sequential Journal

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

It is the duty of the notary public to keep one active sequential journal at a time of all official acts performed as a notary public. This journal must be kept in a locked and secured area under the direct and exclusive control of the notary. It must include all of the following:

- 1. The date, time, and type of each official act.
- 2. The character of every instrument sworn to, affirmed, acknowledged, or proved.
- 3. The signature of each person whose signature is being notarized.
- 4. A statement of the type of information used to identify the party whose signature is being notarized.
- 5. The fee charged for the notarial service.

[ADD, if witnesses were used to identify person making acknowledgment or taking an oath or affirmation:]

- 6. The type, number, and date of documents presented by witnesses to establish their identity.

[ADD, if document being notarized is deed, quitclaim deed, or deed of trust affecting real property:]

7. The right thumbprint of the party signing the [deed/quitclaim deed/deed of trust/power of attorney].

Authority: Gov. Code § 8206(a).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in cases of alleged notary misconduct or when negligence by inadequate identification of the acknowledging party is alleged.

The first optional provision should be used when witnesses, rather than other evidence of identity, are used to establish the identity of the person making the acknowledgment or taking an oath or affirmation [see Gov. Code § 8206(a)(2)(D), (E)]. The second optional provision does not apply to a trustee's deed resulting from a decree of foreclosure or a nonjudicial foreclosure pursuant to Civ. Code § 2924, or to a deed of reconveyance [Gov. Code § 8206(a)(2)(G)].

[3] Comment

The notary law requires a notary public to keep one active sequential journal at a time to establish that the duty to properly identify the acknowledging party has been performed [Gov. Code § 8206(a)(1)]. The sequential journal is important admissible evidence on issues such as the delivery of deeds [Williams v. Kidd (1915) 170 Cal. 631, 641, 151 P. 1]. Therefore, if the journal is stolen, lost, misplaced, destroyed, damaged, or otherwise rendered unusable, the notary public must immediately notify the Secretary of State by certified or registered mail [Gov. Code § 8206(b)].

The failure to keep this journal is actionable misconduct if the plaintiff suffered damage proximately caused by this failure [Kirk Corp. v. First American Title Co. (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 785, 812, 270 Cal.Rptr. 24].

MB 7400A.124 Notary Prohibited From Volunteering Legal Information

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A notary may not volunteer legal information about the document being notarized.

Authorities: Gov. Code § 8214.1(g); Vanderhoof v. Prudential Sav. & Loan Assn. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 507, 511, 120 Cal.Rptr. 207 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used defensively by a notary who is defending a failure to "explain" the effect of the document being notarized or the legal significance of notarization. It may also be used affirmatively by a plaintiff who is suing a notary for providing legal information concerning the effect of the document or the significance of notarization.

[3] Comment

A notary has no duty to explain to a person whose will he or she is notarizing that the will's notarization does not invest the document with legal validity [Vanderhoof v. Prudential Sav. & Loan Assn. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 507, 511, 120 Cal.Rptr. 207]. Notaries public are specifically forbidden to provide legal advice [Gov. Code § 8214.1(g)]. It follows that a notary has no duty to explain to a person whose will he or she is notarizing that the notarization of that will does not invest the document with legal validity [Vanderhoof v. Prudential Sav. & Loan Assn. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 507, 511, 120 Cal.Rptr. 207].

Authorities: Bank of Woodland v. Oberhaus (1899) 125 Cal. 320, 324, 57 P. 1070 ; Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action against a notary public for damages based on the notarization of an official recorded document in which the notary has an interest.

[3] Comment

A notary may not certify an acknowledgment in any matter in which he or she has a beneficial or financial interest [Bank of Woodland v. Oberhaus (1899) 125 Cal. 320, 324, 57 P. 1070]. A notary who acknowledges his or her own signature or a fictitious name in which he or she has an interest has committed official misconduct [Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The [notary public/surety] is liable to any person who was injured by the official misconduct or neglect of the notary public for all the damages caused by this official misconduct or neglect.

Authorities: Gov. Code § 8214; Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 693, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action that claims notary negligence, the making of false certificates of acknowledgment, or the misuse of the notary public's seal.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Liability of Notary for Official Misconduct or Neglect

If there is any official misconduct or neglect by a notary public, then the notary and the sureties on his or her official bond are liable to those injured by this misconduct or neglect for all the damages sustained [Gov. Code § 8214]. Civil liability for neglect or misconduct depends on the existence of damages proximately caused by the notary's conduct. It has been held, for example, that the failure to keep the required journal [see MB 7400A.123] is not grounds for civil liability when the plaintiff suffered no damage proximately caused by this lack of compliance [Kirk Corp. v. First American Title Co. (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 785, 812, 270 Cal.Rptr. 24].

False certification is official misconduct [Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779]. The notary's bond per incident is set by statute [Gov. Code § 8212].

MB 7400A.127 Burden of Proof--Action Against Notary

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In an action against [a notary public/a notary's surety] for negligence or official misconduct based on the notary public's failure to establish proper identification of a person making the acknowledgment, the burden of proof is on the party seeking the damages.

Authority: Civ. Code § 1185(e).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7400A.121 in an action against a notary public or the notary's surety.

[3] Comment

Ordinarily, when a statute sets out a duty such as the notary public's duty to take acknowledgments [Gov. Code § 8205(a)(2)] or to keep a sequential journal with regard to obtaining satisfactory evidence of a person's identity [Gov. Code § 8206(a); Civ. Code § 1185], Evid. Code § 669 (negligence per se) would apply, creating a presumption in favor of the person injured and against the notary. However, in actions for negligence or official misconduct based on the notary public's failure to establish proper identification of a person making an acknowledgment, Civ. Code § 1185(d) puts the burden of proof on the party bringing the action. The sequential journal required under Gov. Code § 8206 would ordinarily constitute the basic evidence in the required proof. Thus, the omission or misstatement of information required in a sequential journal under Gov. Code § 8206 may assist the plaintiff in meeting his or her burden.

To succeed in [his/her/its] action to recover for the negligence or official misconduct of _____ [name of notary public], Plaintiff must show that [his/her/its] loss was caused by reliance on the notary's certificate.

Authority: Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694-695, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to state the requirement of causation in an action against a notary or the notary's surety.

[3] Comment

The misconduct or neglect of the notary need not be the sole proximate cause of loss. An action against a notary or surety is not dependent on a lack of contributory negligence or misconduct by others. A person injured by the improper notarial certification need only show that reliance on the notary's certificate was a proximate cause of damages. Reliance on the authenticity of a notary's certificate (barring other information concerning the notary or the signature notarized) has been held to be justifiable [Bank of America v. Dowdy (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 690, 694-695, 9 Cal.Rptr. 779].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions for actions involving real estate sales transactions. The chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes general definitions of "broker" and "sales agent" [see MB 7500A.01 -MB 7500A.03], instructions for actions by brokers to recover commissions [see MB 7500A.10 -MB 7500A.21], and instructions for actions against brokers by persons damaged by the broker's breach of a duty [see MB 7500A.30 -MB 7500A.36].
- Part B includes instructions for actions by both buyers and sellers against each other for breach of contracts of sale [see MB 7500A.50 -MB 7500A.57].
- Part C includes damages instructions for actions by and against brokers and between buyers and sellers for breach of contract [see MB 7500A.70 -MB 7500A.77].

In actions for breach of a real estate sales contract or a brokerage contract, many of the general contract instructions in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Chs. 3A through 3G, will apply.

If the action is for fraud, the general fraud instructions in Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, will apply.

If the action involves the breach of a fiduciary duty of a real estate broker or sales agent, see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions.

Detailed instructions for tort and contract actions against real estate professionals in particular are set forth in Ch. 74A, Matthew Bender Professional Liability in Real Property Transactions Instructions.

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

1. General Definitions

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.01

MB 7500A.01 Definition of Broker[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

For someone to be called a real estate broker in California, he or she must have a valid real estate broker's license issued by the State of California. A real estate broker is someone who _____ [specify statutory acts of broker in issue, e.g., buys or sells real property] or negotiates to _____ [repeat statutory acts of broker in issue] on behalf of someone else. A broker does this for pay, or with an expectation that he or she will be paid at some time for doing it.

If you find that [Plaintiff/Defendant] possessed a valid California real estate broker's license, and _____ [specify statutory acts of broker in issue, e.g., bought or sold real property] on behalf of [Plaintiff/Defendant] for pay, or with the expectation that he or she would be paid for doing it, then you must find that [Plaintiff/Defendant] was [Plaintiff/Defendant]'s real estate broker.

Authorities: Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131(a), 10136; Garcia v. Wetzel (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1093, 1096, 206 Cal.Rptr. 251 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in two different ways. In an action to collect a commission, a broker should use it to claim that he or she is a real estate broker as specified by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131(a) and 10136. In an action by a client against a broker, the instruction should be used by the client to assert that the defendant is, indeed, a broker, or by the broker to claim that he or she is not a real estate broker within the meaning of those sections. A more detailed instruction for actions against a broker by a client based on professional liability claims is in Ch. 74A, Matthew Bender

Professional Liability in Real Property Transactions Instructions, MB 7400A.01.

Depending on the circumstances, this instruction should be used with the general agency instructions in Ch. 37, Judicial Council Vicarious Responsibility Instructions, and in Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, MB 300C.50 through MB 300C.59, or with the instruction on the definition of an agent in MB 7500A.02, and the more specific instruction in MB 7500A.03 on broker's liability for acts of sales agents. In addition, because a "real estate broker" is in a fiduciary relationship with his or her principal, this instruction may also be appropriate for use with the California Judicial Council's "Breach of Fiduciary Duty" series of instructions [see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions], in particular, CACI No. 4100, " 'Fiduciary Duty' Explained," and CACI No. 4102, "Duty of Undivided Loyalty--Essential Factual Elements."

[3] Comment

Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(a) defines a real estate broker as a person who for compensation, or in expectation of compensation, does or negotiates the following:

- Sells or offers to sell real property or a business opportunity;
- Buys or offers to buy real property or a business opportunity;
- Solicits prospective sellers or purchasers of real property or a business opportunity;
- Solicits or obtains listings of real property or a business opportunity; or
- Negotiates the purchase, sale, or exchange of real property or a business opportunity.

Regarding this last item, a person is not negotiating as a broker when he or she merely arranges an introduction between an owner and a prospective purchaser; conversely, the person is deemed to be acting as a broker if he or she takes any part in negotiations, no matter how slight [Spielberg v. Granz (1960) 185 Cal.App.2d 283, 290-291, 8 Cal.Rptr. 190].

For a person [see Estate of Baldwin (1973) 34 Cal.App.3d 596, 604, 110 Cal.Rptr. 189 (for these purposes, corporation is deemed a "person")]] to be deemed a real estate broker, the person must meet all of the following requirements when performing these acts [Garcia v. Wetzel (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1093, 1096, 206 Cal.Rptr. 251]:

- Have a current, valid California real estate broker's license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136];
- Be acting on behalf of someone else [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(a)]; and
- Be working for compensation (or with the expectation of compensation) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

1. General Definitions

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.02

MB 7500A.02 Definition of Sales Agent

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A real estate salesperson is someone who is employed by a licensed real estate broker to perform one or more of the functions of a broker that I have already explained to you. For someone to be a real estate salesperson, he or she must perform these functions for pay or with the expectation that he or she will be paid at some point.

Authority: Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in two different ways. In an action to collect a commission, the instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7500A.01, which explains the functions of a broker allegedly performed by the real estate sales agent. In an action by a client against a broker and his or her agents, the instruction should be used by the client claiming that the person is, indeed, a sales agent or by the defendant to claim that the person is not a real estate salesperson within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132. The client in such a case could also use the instruction to assert that the person falls within the requirements of this section to show that the broker is thus liable in contract or tort for actions taken in this capacity.

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7500A.03 on the status of the sales agent as the broker's agent. In addition, because a "sales agent" is in a fiduciary relationship with his or her principal, this instruction may also be appropriate for use with the Judicial Council's "Breach of Fiduciary Duty" series of instructions [see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions], in particular, CACI No. 4100, "Fiduciary Duty' Explained," and CACI No. 4102, "Duty of Undivided Loyalty--Essential Factual Elements."

The wording of this instruction does not point out that a real estate salesperson must be a "natural person" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132]. This distinction is not likely to be an issue for the jury, and it is therefore better not to confuse the jury by mentioning this requirement.

[3] Comment

A real estate salesperson is a natural person who, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, is employed by a licensed real estate broker to perform one or more of the functions of broker as set out in the Real Estate Licensing Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132]. The functions are set out specifically in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131, 10131.1, 10131.2, 10131.3, 10131.4, 10131.45, 10131.6.

MB 7500A.03 Sales Agent Is Agent of Broker[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A real estate salesperson is an agent of his or her broker. A real estate salesperson can act only for, on behalf of, and in place of a broker under whom he or she is licensed. The salesperson's acts are limited to acts that he or she does as agent for the broker. If you find that _____ [name of salesperson] was licensed under _____ [name of broker], then _____ [name of broker] [is liable for/may claim responsibility for] the acts of _____ [name of salesperson] in the transaction of _____ [name of broker]'s business.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the broker's alleged liability or claim rests on the acts of a salesperson, and should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 7500A.02.

[3] Comment

A real estate salesperson is an agent of the broker [Civ. Code § 2338; Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)]. All of a real estate salesperson's professional compensation must come through the broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137]. The salesperson's license must be in the broker's custody [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10160]. Any contract that purports to change the relationship from that of agent to independent contractor is invalid as contrary to the real estate law. The responsibility of the principal (or broker employer) for the agent's act depends on whether the agent was engaged at that time in the transaction or the business of his or her principal or whether the agent was engaged in an act performed for his or her own personal convenience or accommodation and related to an end or purpose exclusively and individually on his or her own [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 190, 207, 30 Cal.Rptr. 253]. In this capacity, the salesperson may not contract in his or her own name, and is not exempt from usury laws [People v. Asuncion (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 422, 426, 199 Cal.Rptr. 514].

For tort liability, the broker is liable for the acts of the salesperson under the doctrine of respondeat superior [Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 890, 895, 192 Cal.Rptr. 637].

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.10

MB 7500A.10 Definition of Listing

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A listing is a written contract between an owner of property and a broker. This contract authorizes the broker to do one of the following two things:

- (1) Sell the property; or
- (2) Find or obtain a buyer for compensation or commission.

A listing agreement may contain any provision the parties freely agree on. However, there are certain things that must be included in a listing agreement. These things are:

- (1) An adequately detailed property description;
- (2) The performance required of the broker; and
- (3) The terms and conditions that entitle the broker to compensation.

If you find that the written contract between _____ [name of broker] and _____ [name of property owner] meets all of these requirements, the agreement is a listing.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1086(f), 2079.13(e), (f); Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal.3d 815, 821, 122 Cal.Rptr. 745, Malloy* (1945) 70 Cal.App.2d 317, 319, 160 P.2d 893 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define "listing" or "listing agreement" as that term is used in this chapter. The instruction may be used in conjunction with instructions on specific kinds of listing agreements contained in MB 7500A.11 through MB 7500A.14, and with the instructions on the broker's burden of proof in action for commission in MB 7500A.15 and MB 7500A.17. The instruction may also be used with instructions on the fiduciary duties of a broker or sales agent in MB 7500A.30 through MB 7500A.33 [see also Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions].

[3] Comment

[a] Requirements for Listing Agreement

To satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and thus be enforceable, a listing agreement must be in writing and executed by the seller, except when the listing is for the lease of property for one year or less [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4); Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal.3d 815, 821, 122 Cal.Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , disapproved on other grounds in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 n.5, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740]. Although the parties to the listing agreement are free to negotiate any lawful terms, all of the following items must be set forth in the agreement [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal.3d 963, 969, 115 Cal.Rptr. 31, 524 P.2d 127 ; Metzenbaum v. R.O.S. Associates (1986) 188 Cal.App.3d 202, 210, 232 Cal.Rptr. 741]:

- An adequate property description;
- The performance required of the broker; and
- The terms and conditions under which the broker is entitled to compensation.

Absent an express authorization from the seller, a listing agreement does not authorize the broker to sell the property or execute a sale contract or deed on behalf of the seller, but merely to find or obtain a buyer for the property [Holway v. Malloy (1945) 70 Cal.App.2d 317, 319, 160 P.2d 893 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 (definition of broker's duties that does not include selling property or executing sale contract or deed on behalf of seller); see Civ. Code § 1086(b) (terms "sell" and "sale" include lease and exchange)]. A seller incurs no obligation to a broker until he or she has been given an opportunity to accept or reject the offer [Duin v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1955) 132 Cal.App.2d Supp. 904, 905-906, 283 P.2d 790 (broker not entitled to commission under listing agreement because buyer's offer was never communicated to seller)].

Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5, any listing agreement for residential property of four units or less must contain a statement advising seller that broker's commissions are not fixed by law, but are subject to negotiation and agreement between the parties. This requirement also applies to mobile home listings.

[b] Parties to Listing Agreement

A listing agreement imposes certain fiduciary duties on the broker [Jorgensen v. Beach 'N' Bay Realty, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 155, 161, 177 Cal.Rptr. 882 ; see MB 7500A.30 -MB 7500A.33; see also Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions]. Although Civ. Code § 1086(f) defines a "listing" as a contract between an owner and an agent, no prohibition exists against a listing agreement entered into between a broker and potential purchaser of property [Miller & Starr, California Real Estate (West 3d ed. 2000), Ch. 2, Specific Contracts]. Usually, no distinction is made between a seller's listing and a buyer's listing for determining whether enforceability requirements have been met [Miller & Starr, California Real Estate (West 3d ed. 2000), Ch. 2, Specific Contracts]. However, the requirement of an adequate property description may be relaxed in the latter situation because the broker must first locate the property before any negotiation begins [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 61, Employment and Authority of Brokers (Matthew Bender)]. Nonetheless, the property description and the terms of sale should be as specific as possible to avoid disagreement over the broker's entitlement to his or her commission. A buyer's broker must disclose to the seller and his or her principal that the broker is solely representing the buyer, even though he or she may receive a portion of the commission [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(d)].

[c] Prohibition on Listing Seller's Agent Acting as Buyer's Agent; Required Disclosures

A selling agent who is also the listing agent for residential real property may not act as an agent for the buyer alone in the same transaction [Civ. Code § 2079.18]. In addition, the Civil Code requires real estate agents in residential property transactions to provide two agency disclosure forms to buyers and sellers. First, listing agents and selling agents must provide the seller and buyer with a copy of the disclosure form set out in Civ. Code § 2079.16 (Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Agency Relationship) [Civ. Code § 2079.14; see Brown v. FSR Brokerage Inc. (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 766, 774-776, 72 Cal.Rptr.2d 828 ; see also California Legal Forms, Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents (Matthew Bender)]. The agents must obtain a signed acknowledgment of receipt from that seller or buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.14], except when (1) the selling agent does not deal on a face-to-face basis with the seller; or (2) the buyer or seller refuses to acknowledge receipt [Civ. Code §§ 2079.14(c), 2079.15]. The listing agent must provide this disclosure form to the seller before entering into the listing agreement [Civ. Code § 2079.14(a)]. Failure to provide the required disclosure before entering into the listing agreement relieves the seller of the obligation to pay the agent's commission [Huijers v. DeMarrais (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 676, 686, 14 Cal.Rptr.2d 232 ; see Brown v. FSR Brokerage Inc. (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 766, 777, 72 Cal.Rptr.2d 828]. The selling agent must provide the disclosure form to the seller as soon as practicable before presenting the seller with an offer to buy, unless the selling agent is also the listing agent and has already provided the seller with a copy of the form before entering into the listing agreement [Civ. Code § 2079.14(b); see Brown v. FSR Brokerage Inc. (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 766, 773-774, 777, 72 Cal.Rptr.2d 828]. The selling agent must provide the disclosure form to the buyer as soon as practicable before the execution of the buyer's offer to purchase. If the offer to purchase is not prepared by the selling agent, the selling agent must present the disclosure form to the buyer not later than the next business day after the selling agent receives the offer to purchase from the buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.14(d)].

In addition to the disclosure form required by Civ. Code § 2079.14 [Civ. Code § 2079.17(d)], a real estate agent must disclose his or her actual relationship to the buyer or seller in a particular transaction. This disclosure must be made as soon as practicable [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b)]. A selling agent must disclose to the buyer and seller whether he or she is acting exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as dual agent representing both buyer and seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a)]. The disclosure must be confirmed in the sale contract or in a separate writing acknowledged by the seller, buyer, and selling agent before or coincident with the sale contract's execution by the buyer and seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a); see California Legal Forms, Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents (Matthew Bender)].

The listing agent must disclose to the seller whether the agent is acting exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both buyer and seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(b)]. This relationship must also be confirmed in the sale contract or some other writing executed or acknowledged by the seller before or contemporaneously with the sale contract's execution by the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(b); see California Legal Forms, Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents (Matthew Bender)].

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.11

MB 7500A.11 Definition of Open or General Listing

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An open or general listing is a listing in which the seller is obligated to pay a commission to a broker only if the broker [optional: or the broker's agent] procures an enforceable offer and presents it to the seller. The offer must meet all of the following requirements:

- 1. The offer must be from a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to carry out the offer's terms;
- 2. The offer must be on the terms set forth in the listing or contain terms that are otherwise acceptable to the seller;
- 3. The offer must be presented to the seller by the broker before the [he/she] sells the property by [himself/herself], or before another broker sells it; and
- 4. The offer must be presented to the seller by the broker before the listing expires by its terms or is revoked by the seller.

If you find that the evidence presented shows that the broker [optional: or the broker's agent] procured an enforceable offer, that the broker [optional: or the broker's agent] presented the offer to the seller, and that the offer meets the requirements that I just specified, you must find that an open listing agreement existed between _____ [name of broker] and _____ [name of property owner].

Mayer* (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 438, 445-446, 265 P.2d 52 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to distinguish an open or general listing from other kinds of listing agreements, and should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 7500A.15 on the broker's burden of proof in an action for commission on an open listing. A dispute arising under an open listing may require a determination of the sale's "procuring cause" if more than one broker claims a commission. Exclusive agency and exclusive right to sell listings normally do not require such a determination, because the exclusive broker is entitled to a commission regardless of which other broker procured the buyer. Thus, this definition should be used with the instructions defining "procure" in MB 7500A.19 and "ready, willing, and able" in MB 7500A.18. For a general instruction and comments for "listing agreements," see MB 7500A.10.

[3] Comment

An open or general listing is a listing by which a seller is obligated to pay a commission to a broker only if the broker procures an enforceable offer and presents it to the seller [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3); see also MB 7500A.02[3], MB 7500A.03[3] (real estate salesperson, acting as a broker's agent, may also procure offer)]. For a broker to be able to collect a commission on a sale under an open listing, the broker must show either that he or she actually sold the property to a person procured by the broker [Towle v. Lewis (1969) 274 Cal.App.3d 377, 377, 79 Cal.Rptr. 58] or that the offer meets all of the following requirements [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]:

- The offer must be from a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to carry out the offer's terms [Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 556, 570, 102 Cal.Rptr. 170 ; Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 544-545, 339 P.2d 613].
- The offer must be on the terms set forth in the listing or contain terms that are otherwise accepted by the seller [Kopf v. Milam (1963) 60 Cal.2d 600, 605, 35 Cal.Rptr. 614, 387 P.2d 390 ; Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 556, 570, 102 Cal.Rptr. 170 ; Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 544-545, 339 P.2d 613].
- The offer must be presented to the seller by the broker before the listing agreement is terminated by the sale of the property either (1) directly by the seller [Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 546, 339 P.2d 613 ; see Nelson v. Mayer (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 438, 445, 265 P.2d 52 (property's sale directly by seller terminates listings of all brokers)]; or (2) by another broker [see Estate of Ross (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 895, 900, 162 Cal.Rptr. 111 ; Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 556, 570-573, 102 Cal.Rptr. 170 (open listing allows seller to employ number of brokers to sell same property and first broker to procure ready, willing, and able buyer earns commission; thus, when sale of property is procured by one broker, open listing is terminated for other brokers)]. Property is "sold" when legally binding commitment to sell, lease, or exchange property comes into existence [Civ. Code § 1086(b), (i)]. The seller is not obligated to notify the other brokers of the agreement's sale or termination [Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 546, 339 P.2d 613].
- The offer must be presented to the seller by the broker before the listing expires by its terms [see Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 545, 339 P.2d 613 (introducing principal to party who comes to agreement with principal after termination of agency, but who was not ready, willing, and able to consummate transaction during agency term insufficient to entitle broker to commission)] or is revoked by the seller. Because it may be revoked without liability for a commission at any time before it is performed, an open listing contract need not have the definite termination date that is required for an exclusive agency and exclusive right to sell listing [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f) (license of real estate licensee may be suspended or revoked for failure to specify definite date of final and complete termination in exclusive listing agreement)]. However, a seller's revocation of an open listing that lacks a specified duration must be made in good faith [Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 545-547, 339 P.2d 613].

The broker must also show that he or she set in motion a continuous chain of events that resulted in the offer by the ready, willing, and able buyer [Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 319, 323, 317 P.2d 1027 ; Nelson v. Mayer (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 438, 445, 265 P.2d 52 ; see Estate of Ross (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 895, 900-901, 162 Cal.Rptr. 111 (broker must prove that sale was direct and proximate result of efforts to obtain commission); see MB 7500A.19[1] ("procure" defined), MB 7500A.18[1] ("ready, willing, and able")].

It should be noted that an open listing may contain an agreement by the seller to pay the listing broker in any amount, at any time, and for any service, other than for selling the property or procuring or finding a buyer, as the agreement may specify [Civ. Code § 1089].

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

MB 7500A.12 Definition of Exclusive Right to Sell Listing

[1] Instruction Definition of Exclusive Right to Sell Listing

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An exclusive right to sell listing gives to a broker for a specified period of time the sole right to sell or obtain a buyer for the property that is described in the listing. This means that no one else can sell the property during a period of time that is specified in the listing.

[USE ONE OF FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

A broker is entitled to the commission as stated in the listing when the broker presents to the seller an enforceable offer from a ready, willing, and able buyer on the terms that are set forth in the listing or that are otherwise acceptable to the seller.

[OR]

A broker is entitled to the commission as stated in the listing if, during the specified time period, the property is sold, no matter who procured the buyer or effected the sale.

[OR]

A broker is entitled to the commission as stated in the listing when the listing contains a provision for broker compensation under the following conditions, which are fulfilled: the property is sold within a specified period of time after the listing terminates to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before the termination.

[OR]

A broker is entitled to the commission even if the property is withdrawn from sale during the term of the listing, if the listing contains a provision that a commission is earned under these circumstances.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find that the listing gives _____ [name of broker] an exclusive right to sell the property or to obtain a buyer for the property and that this exclusive right was for a specified period of time during which _____ [the property was sold or the broker presented to the seller an enforceable offer from a ready, willing, and able buyer on the terms set forth in the listing or that were otherwise acceptable to the seller or the property was sold within a specified period of time after the listing terminated to someone with whom the agent had negotiated before the termination or the property was withdrawn from sale, and the listing agreement contained a provision for payment of commission under these circumstances], then you must find that the listing was an exclusive right to sell listing.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define an exclusive right to sell listing whenever that term is used in this chapter. One of the four alternatives should be selected to set forth the broker's performance under the listing agreement. The instruction should be used in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7500A.10 ("listing" defined), MB 7500A.16 (broker's burden of proof in action for commission on exclusive right to sell listing), MB 7500A.18 ("ready, willing, and able" defined) and MB 7500A.19 ("procure" defined). It may also be desirable to use the instruction in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7500A.01 through MB 7500A.03 ("broker" and "salesperson" defined and salesperson as broker's agent). It may be necessary to use the instruction in MB 7500A.11 ("open" listing defined) to distinguish the exclusive right to sell listing from an open listing.

[3] Comment

An "exclusive right to sell" listing is a listing in which the seller grants to a broker, for a specified period of time, the exclusive right to sell or to find or obtain a buyer for the property [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. The broker is entitled to the agreed compensation, during that period of time, if (1) the property is sold, no matter who effected the sale, or (2) the listing agent received and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1); Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652-653, 335 P.2d 665].

The exclusive right to sell listing may provide that the broker is entitled to a commission when the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the broker had negotiated before the termination [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. In addition, the listing agreement may provide that a broker may recover all or part of the commission when, during the listing period, the property is either (1) withdrawn from the market [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal.3d 963, 115 Cal.Rptr. 31, 524 P.2d 127 ; Baumgartner v. Meek (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 505, 511-512, 272 P.2d 552], or (2) otherwise rendered unmarketable by the seller [Berzon v. U.L.C. Corp. (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 690, 696, 79 Cal.Rptr. 277 (broker entitled to commission under provision when sale of property by seller made performance by broker impossible)].

In exchange for the exclusivity of the listing, the broker is required to exercise due diligence in performing his or her contract duties [Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 612, 615, 98 Cal.Rptr. 559 ; see Nystrom v. First Nat. Bank of Fresno (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 759, 767, 146 Cal.Rptr. 711 ("[t]here is implied in every contract a covenant by each party not to do anything which will deprive the other parties thereto of the benefits of the contract... [T]his covenant not only imposes upon each contracting party the duty to refrain from doing anything which would render performance of the contract impossible by any act of his own, but also the duty to do everything that the contract presupposes that he will do to accomplish its purpose"); Baumgartner v. Meek (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 505, 511, 272 P.2d 552 (consideration for seller's promise to pay money if sale was made by her, was performance of services by brokers in seeking purchaser)]. Thus, under an exclusive right to sell listing, the broker need not prove that he or she was the sale's procuring cause if he or she made diligent efforts to find a buyer [Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652-653, 335 P.2d 665 ; but see MB 7500A.11 (broker must make such a showing for an open listing)].

An exclusive right to sell listing must contain a definite and final termination date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f); Nystrom v. First Nat. Bank of Fresno (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 759, 764-765, 146 Cal.Rptr. 711]. However, a lack of a definite termination date renders the listing voidable, not void. The broker may still recover a commission when he or she has rendered full performance and the seller has benefited from the broker's services [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 858, 863, 109 Cal.Rptr. 454]. If the broker has not fully performed or if the owner has not unjustly benefited from the services, however, the agreement is voidable at the seller's option [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 858, 862-864, 109 Cal.Rptr. 454 ; Nichols v. Boswell-Alliance Constr. Corp. (1960) 181 Cal.App.2d 584, 588-589, 5 Cal.Rptr. 546].

An exclusive right to sell listing must clearly indicate that the broker is entitled to a commission when the property is sold or when a legally binding commitment to sell, lease, or exchange the property comes into existence during the listing period [see Civ. Code § 1086(b) ("sell" and "sale" include lease and exchange), (i) ("sold" includes leased and exchanged; property is sold when legally binding commitment to sell it comes into existence)]. An "exclusive" listing agreement that does not mention an exclusive right to sell or right to a commission when the property is sold by the owner is presumed to be an exclusive agency listing without any right to a commission on sale by owner [E.A. Strout Western Realty v. Gregoire (1950) 101 Cal.App.2d 512, 518, 225 P.2d 585]. For discussion of an exclusive agency listing, see MB 7500A.13.

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.13

MB 7500A.13 Definition of Exclusive Agency Listing

[1] Instruction Definition of Exclusive Agency Listing

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An exclusive agency listing gives to a broker the sole right, for a specific period of time, to sell or obtain a buyer for the property that is described in the listing. This means that no other broker can sell the property during that time period. [Optional: Unlike an exclusive right to sell listing,] [The/the] seller under an exclusive agency listing reserves the right to directly sell the property by himself or herself without incurring an obligation to pay a commission to the broker.

[USE ONE OF FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

A broker is entitled to the commission as stated in the listing when the broker presents to the seller an enforceable offer from a ready, willing, and able buyer on the terms that are set forth in the listing or that are otherwise acceptable to the seller.

[OR]

A broker is entitled to the commission as stated in the listing if, during the specified time period, the property is sold by someone other than the seller.

[OR]

A broker is entitled to the commission as stated in the listing when the listing contains a provision for broker compensation under the following conditions, which are fulfilled: the property is sold within a specified period of time after the listing terminates to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before the termination.

[OR]

A broker is entitled to the commission even if the property is withdrawn from sale during the term of the listing, if the listing contains a provision that a commission is earned under these circumstances.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

If you find that the listing gives _____ [name of broker] an exclusive right to sell the property or to obtain a buyer for the property, but reserves to the seller the right to sell the property directly, that the exclusive right was for a specified period of time, during which _____ [the property was sold by someone other than the seller or the broker presented to the seller an enforceable offer from a ready, willing, and able buyer on the terms set forth in the listing or that were otherwise acceptable to the seller or the property was sold within a specified period of time after the listing terminated to someone with whom the agent had negotiated before the termination or the property was withdrawn from sale, and the listing agreement contained a provision for payment of commission under these circumstances], you must find that the listing was an exclusive agency listing.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1), (2); Coldwell Banker & Co. v. Pepper Tree Office Center (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 272, 278, 165 Cal.Rptr. 51, disapproved on other grounds, Barrett v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 401-402, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747; E.A. Strout Western Realty v. Gregoire (1950) 101 Cal.App.2d 512, 518, 225 P.2d 585.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define an exclusive agency listing whenever that term is used in this chapter. One of the four alternative paragraphs should be selected to set forth the broker's performance under the listing agreement. The optional language in the bracketed portion may be used to distinguish an exclusive agency listing from an exclusive right to sell listing [see MB 7500A.12].

The instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 7500A.17 regarding the broker's burden of proof in an action for commission on an exclusive agency listing. In a dispute arising from a sale by the seller and the denial of commission to the exclusive broker, this instruction should be used in conjunction with the instructions for "procure" in MB 7500A.19 and "ready, willing, and able" in MB 7500A.18. However, these issues do not arise when the property is sold by another broker.

An instruction on the exclusive right to sell listing is set forth in MB 7500A.12. For an instruction and comments on listing agreements in general, see MB 7500A.10.

[3] Comment

The feature that distinguishes an exclusive agency listing from an exclusive right to sell listing is that it reserves to the seller the right to directly sell the property by himself or herself. Thus, the comments on the exclusive right to sell listing in MB 7500A.12 apply to the exclusive agency listing.

As with an exclusive right to sell listing, an exclusive agency listing may provide that the broker receive a commission if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing period to a buyer with whom the broker had negotiated before the listing period terminates [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1); Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652-653, 335 P.2d 665]. In addition, the listing must contain clear and specific language of the "exclusive" agency [Summers v. Freeman (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 828, 831, 276 P.2d 131].

An exclusive agency listing also must contain a "definite, specified date of final and complete termination" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f)]. Absent a specific contrary contractual provision, an exclusive agency automatically terminates without notice when the seller sells to a buyer procured independently of the broker [E.A. Strout Western Realty v. Gregoire (1950) 101 Cal.App.2d 512, 518-519, 225 P.2d 585].

In an exclusive agency listing the seller can sell the property himself or herself without incurring an obligation to pay a commission to the listing broker [Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 401-402, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747]. However, if the broker presents a ready, willing, and able buyer before actual execution of a purchase contract between the seller and another buyer who was independently procured by the seller, the broker is entitled to a commission [Houston v. Williams (1921) 53 Cal.App. 267, 278, 200 P. 55 ; see Civ. Code § 1086(b) (terms "sell" and "sale" include lease and exchange)].

If another broker makes the sale, the listing broker need not show that he or she was the procuring cause of the sale [Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 401, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747 ; see Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652, 335 P.2d 665 (under exclusive right to sell agreement, it is immaterial that agent was not procuring cause of sale)]. However, if the seller sells to a buyer who has already been contacted by the listing broker, the broker must show that he or she was the procuring cause [Coldwell Banker & Co. v. Pepper Tree Office Center Associates (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 272, 278, 165 Cal.Rptr. 51 , disapproved on other grounds, Barrett v. Bank of America (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1362, 1370-1371, 229 Cal.Rptr. 16].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.14

MB 7500A.14 Definition of Multiple Listing Service

[1] Instruction Definition of Multiple Listing Service

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A multiple listing service is an exchange of existing listings between two or more brokers. In a multiple listing service, brokers pool their listings by furnishing the listings to the service, which compiles and disseminates them to all the member brokers who all become authorized agents of the seller.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

When an exclusive-listing property is sold through a multiple listing service, the commission is divided in agreed proportions between the listing broker and the selling broker. A listing broker who is also the selling broker is entitled to the entire commission, less the multiple listing fee.

[OR]

When an open-listing property is sold through a multiple listing service, the commission is paid to the selling agent who procures an enforceable offer from a ready, willing, and able buyer on terms accepted by the seller. An open listing need not specify any commission but may state that the compensation is to be negotiated between the selling agent and the seller.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

A multiple listing is valid only if the seller has authorized the listing broker to place the listing in the multiple listing service.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

A listing agent is one who has obtained a listing of property of the kind for which he or she is licensed to act as agent for compensation.

A selling agent is an agent participating in a multiple listing service who acts in cooperation with a listing agent and who sells, or finds and obtains a buyer for, the property.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1086(g), (h), 1087, 1088; Korstad v. Hoffman (1963) 221 Cal.App.2d Supp. 805, 808-809, 35 Cal.Rptr. 61 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the rights of listing brokers and cooperating or selling brokers are in issue, and it may be used in conjunction with the instructions in MB 7500A.11 through MB 7500A.13 and MB 7500A.15 through MB 7500A.17, as appropriate. For a definition of listing agreements in general, see MB 7500A.10. Alternatives are provided for specifying the compensation arrangement under either an open or exclusive listing. In appropriate cases, the optional definitions of listing agent and selling agent may be used.

[3] Comment

A multiple listing service is an exchange of existing listings between two or more brokers. That is, it is an entity rather than a technical legal term for a kind of listing. In a multiple listing service, brokers pool their listings by furnishing the listings to the service, which compiles and disseminates them to members who all become authorized agents of the seller [Korstad v. Hoffman (1963) 221 Cal.App.2d Supp. 805, 808-809, 35 Cal.Rptr. 61].

The Civil Code contains the following, somewhat obtuse, definition. A multiple listing service is a facility of cooperation of agents (and appraisers), operating through an intermediary that does not itself act as an agent (or appraiser), through which agents establish express or implied legal relationships with regard to listed properties (or that may be used by agents and appraisers, pursuant to the rules of the service, to prepare market evaluations and appraisals of real property) [Civ. Code § 1087]. (The references to appraisers are in the statute but are enclosed in parentheses here because they are superfluous in the present context.) The statutory definition may be substituted for the one in this instruction.

As a practice, when a broker sells an exclusive-listing property, the commission is divided in agreed proportions between the listing broker and the selling broker. A listing broker is defined as the broker who obtains the listing [Civ. Code § 1086(g)]. A selling broker is "an agent participant in a multiple listing service who acts in cooperation with a listing agent and who sells, or finds and obtains a buyer for, the property" [Civ. Code § 1086(h)]. A property is "sold" when a legally binding commitment to sell, lease, or exchange the property comes into existence [Civ. Code § 1086(b), (i)]. A listing agent who is also the selling agent is entitled to the entire commission, less the multiple listing fee [see Civ. Code § 1090 (listing agent as selling agent)].

When an open-listing property is sold through the multiple listing service, the commission is paid to the selling agent who procures an enforceable offer from a ready, willing, and able buyer on terms accepted by the seller [Civ. Code §

1087]. An open listing need not specify any commission to the selling agent but may state that the compensation is to be negotiated between selling agent and seller [Civ. Code § 1087].

A multiple listing service that restricts membership to members of a local or state realtors association or refuses to list agreements other than "exclusive right to sell" [see MB 7500A.12, MB 7500A.16] agreements may be violating antitrust laws [Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 Cal.3d 920, 939-940, 130 Cal.Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833 ; People v. National Association of Realtors (1981) 120 Cal.App.3d 459, 478-479, 174 Cal.Rptr. 728].

A listing may not be placed in a multiple listing service without the seller's authorization [Civ. Code § 1088]. The listing broker who places the listing in a multiple listing service is responsible for the truth and accuracy of all representations made by the agent [Civ. Code § 1088].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff broker is seeking to recover on an open listing. Its alternative paragraphs are for use in the following three different situations in which the broker is entitled to recover on an open listing:

- The person procured buys the property;
- The person procured is ready, willing, and able to buy the property on the terms in the listing; and
- The person procured agrees to buy the property on terms set by defendant.

If certain facts are not at issue, such as the broker's license, that element of the instruction should not be given. The optional provision in paragraph 2 should be given when the broker's agent performed some of the contractual duties.

When appropriate, the instructions in MB 7500A.01 through MB 7500A.03, on the definitions of broker and real estate salesperson and the salesperson as the broker's agent, may be used. In addition, the instructions on the general definition of a listing in MB 7500A.10 and the definition of an open listing in MB 7500A.11 should be used with this instruction.

"Ready, willing, and able" is defined in MB 7500A.18, and "procure" is defined in MB 7500A.19. The instruction defining the term "cause" set forth in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, must be used with this instruction.

A preponderance of evidence instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")] and an instruction defining the term "cause" [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")] must be used with this instruction.

[3] Comment

A broker earns a commission under an open listing only if he or she procures and presents to the owner an enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on the terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner, before the property is otherwise sold and before the listing expires or is revoked [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]. Thus, a broker earns the commission by first procuring a ready, willing, and able buyer [Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal.App.3d 556, 102 Cal.Rptr. 170], by procuring an offer accepted by the seller [Kopf v. Milam (1963) 60 Cal.2d 600, 605, 35 Cal.Rptr. 614, 387 P.2d 390], or when the property is sold to the person procured by the broker [Board of Trustees v. Superior Court of El Dorado County (1969) 79 Cal.Rptr. 58].

If the broker produces a satisfactory buyer during the listing period and the contract of sale is entered into either before or after the expiration of the listing, the broker is entitled to the commission regardless of when the ultimate sale is formally consummated [Walter v. Libby (1945) 72 Cal.App.2d 138, 164 P.2d 21]. When a purchaser is found and negotiations are begun within the time limit, it is immaterial that the negotiations are not completed until after expiration of the listing term [De La Questa v. Armstrong Holdings Co. (1920) 48 Cal.App. 487, 192 P. 135].

The broker must also show that he or she set in motion a continuous chain of events that resulted in the offer by a ready, willing, and able buyer [Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 319, 323, 317 P.2d 1027 ; Nelson v. Mayer (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 438, 445, 265 P.2d 52 ; see Estate of Ross (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 895, 900-901, 162 Cal.Rptr. 111 (broker must prove that sale was direct and proximate result of efforts to obtain commission); see also MB 7500A.19 ("procure" defined), MB 7500A.18 ("ready, willing, and able" defined)].

A real estate broker must plead and prove that he or she was duly licensed at the time the cause of action arose [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136]. Under the statute of frauds, the listing agreement must be in writing and executed by the defendant to be enforceable [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4); Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal.3d 815, 821, 122 Cal.Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , disapproved on other grounds, Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 n.5, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; see Friddle v. Epstein (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1649, 1655-1656 (defendant's ratification of purchase agreement was sufficient to satisfy former Civ. Code § 1624(d) [see now Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]). A licensed real estate broker or salesperson may not enforce an oral commission agreement by asserting equitable estoppel [see Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions] against a statute of frauds defense, unless there is a showing of actual fraud by the party to be charged under that agreement [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1247, 1264, 241 Cal.Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 ; see Ch. 19, Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions].

Additional discussion of the issues surrounding the definition of broker and real estate salesperson, the real estate salesperson as the broker's agent, and the definitions of "listing" and "open listing" are found in MB 7500A.01 through MB 7500A.11.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff broker is seeking to recover on an exclusive right to sell listing. The four alternative paragraphs in the instruction are to be used when (1) the property is sold by anyone during the period of the listing, (2) the broker procures a buyer and the defendant refuses to sell, (3) the property is withdrawn from sale, and (4) the property is sold after the listing has expired but during a further period specified in the listing to a person with whom the broker had negotiated during the term of the listing. The optional provision in paragraph 2 should be given when the broker's agent performed some of the contractual duties. For an instruction on an exclusive agency listing when the property is sold during the period of the listing by some person other than the owner [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)], see MB 7500A.17.

When appropriate, the instructions in MB 7500A.01 through MB 7500A.03, on the definitions of broker and real estate salesperson and the salesperson as the broker's agent, may be used. In addition, the instructions on the general definition of a listing in MB 7500A.10 and the definition of an exclusive right to sell listing in MB 7500A.11 should be used with this instruction.

"Ready, willing, and able" is defined in MB 7500A.18, and "procure" is defined in MB 7500A.19.

A preponderance of evidence instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")] and an instruction defining the term "cause" [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")] must be used with this instruction.

[3] Comment

A broker earns a commission under an exclusive right to sell listing if during the term of the listing the property is sold, no matter who effected the sale, or the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner. The listing may also provide for the broker's compensation if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before that termination [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)].

If there is a valid exclusive right to sell listing [see MB 7500A.12], the broker is entitled to the commission even if the owner sells the property himself or herself during the period of the listing [Berzon v. U.L.C. Corp. (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 690, 696-697, 79 Cal.Rptr. 277 ; Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 401-402, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747]. If the listing provides that the commission is earned if the property is withdrawn from sale during its term, the clause is enforceable [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal.3d 963, 115 Cal.Rptr. 31, 524 P.2d 127 ; Baumgartner v. Meek (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 505, 511-512, 272 P.2d 552]. If the agreement provides that the commission will be earned if the property is sold during a specified period after the listing expires to a person with whom the broker has negotiated, the agreement is enforceable and the broker does not even have to establish that he or she was the procuring cause of the sale [Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652-653, 335 P.2d 665].

In exchange for the exclusivity of the listing, the broker is required to exercise due diligence in performing his or her contract duties [Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 612, 615, 98 Cal.Rptr. 559 ; see Nystrom v. First Nat. Bank of Fresno (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 759, 767, 146 Cal.Rptr. 711 ("[t]here is implied in every contract a covenant by each party not to do anything which will deprive the other parties thereto of the benefits of the contract... [T]his covenant not only imposes upon each contracting party the duty to refrain from doing anything which would render performance of the contract impossible by any act of his own, but also the duty to do everything that the contract presupposes that he will do to accomplish its purpose"); Baumgartner v. Meek (1954) 126 Cal.App.2d 505, 511, 272 P.2d 552 (consideration for seller's promise to pay money if sale was made by her was performance of services by brokers in seeking purchaser)]. Thus, under an exclusive right to sell listing, the broker need not prove that he or she was the procuring cause of the sale if he or she made diligent efforts to find a buyer [Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652-653, 335 P.2d 665 ; but see MB 7500A.11 (broker must make such a showing for an open listing)].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff broker is seeking recovery on an exclusive agency listing. One of the four alternative paragraphs should be selected to set forth the broker's performance under the listing agreement. The optional language in the bracketed portion may be used to distinguish an exclusive agency listing from an exclusive right to sell listing [see MB 7500A.12 and MB 7500A.16].

The instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 7500A.13 on the definition of an exclusive agency listing. In a dispute arising from a sale by the seller and the denial of commission to the exclusive broker, this instruction should be used in conjunction with the instructions for "procure" in MB 7500A.19 and "ready, willing, and able" in MB 7500A.18. However, these issues do not arise when the property is sold by another broker.

An instruction on the broker's burden of proof for recovery on an exclusive right to sell listing is set forth in MB 7500A.16. For an instruction and comments on listing agreements in general, see MB 7500A.10.

[3] Comment

An exclusive agency listing differs from an exclusive right to sell listing by its reservation to the seller of the right to directly sell the property by himself or herself. Thus, the comments on the exclusive right to sell listing set forth in MB 7500A.12 and MB 7500A.16 apply to the exclusive agency listing.

In an exclusive agency listing the seller can sell the property himself or herself without incurring an obligation to pay a commission to the listing broker [Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 401-402, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747]. However, if the broker presents a ready, willing, and able buyer before actual execution of a purchase contract between the seller and another buyer who was independently procured by the seller, the broker is entitled to a commission [Houston v. Williams (1921) 53 Cal.App. 267, 278, 200 P. 55 ; see Civ. Code § 1086(b) (terms "sell" and "sale" include lease and exchange)].

If another broker makes the sale, the listing broker need not show that he or she was the procuring cause of the sale [Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 401, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747 ; see Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652, 335 P.2d 665 (under exclusive right to sell agreement, it is immaterial that agent was not procuring cause of sale)]. However, if the seller sells to a buyer who has already been contacted by the listing broker, the broker must show that he or she was the procuring cause [Coldwell Banker & Co. v. Pepper Tree Office Center Associates (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 272, 278, 165 Cal.Rptr. 51 , disapproved on other grounds, Barrett v. Bank of America (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1362, 1370-1371, 229 Cal.Rptr. 16]. As with an exclusive right to sell listing, an exclusive agency listing may provide for the broker to receive a commission if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing period to a buyer with whom the broker had negotiated before the listing period terminates [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1); Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal.2d 649, 652-653, 335 P.2d 665].

As with an exclusive right to sell listing, the listing must contain clear and specific language of the "exclusive" agency [Summers v. Freeman (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 828, 831, 276 P.2d 131]. An exclusive agency listing also must contain a "definite, specified date of final and complete termination" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f)]. Absent a specific contrary contractual provision, an exclusive agency automatically terminates without notice when the seller sells to a buyer procured independently of the broker [E.A. Strout Western Realty v. Gregoire (1950) 101 Cal.App.2d 512, 518-519, 225 P.2d 585].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.18

MB 7500A.18 Definition of Ready, Willing, and Able

[1] Instruction Definition of Ready, Willing, and Able

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

For a broker to have earned the commission, [he/she/it] must demonstrate that the buyer was "ready, willing, and able" and that the offer was substantially in accordance with the terms contained in the listing agreement. A "ready and willing" buyer is one who makes an offer to purchase the property on the terms contained in the listing agreement or on such other terms as are acceptable to the owner. The buyer is "able" when [he/she/it] has the legal capacity and the financial ability to purchase the property. "Financial ability" means that [he/she/it] has sufficient resources available to consummate the transaction when the time comes to do so.

Authorities: Martin v. Culver Enterprises, Inc. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 925, 929, 49 Cal.Rptr. 149 ; Herring v. Fisher (1952) 110 Cal.App.2d 322, 327, 242 P.2d 963 ; Baber v. Pappas (1929) 97 Cal.App. 534, 536, 275 P. 978 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the issue is whether the prospective buyer was ready, willing, and able to make the purchase so as to entitle the broker to the commission. This issue only arises when the seller refuses to contract with the prospective buyer.

[3] Comment

A buyer is ready and willing to purchase the property when he or she makes an offer to purchase the property on the seller's terms [Martin v. Culver Enterprises, Inc. (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 925, 929, 49 Cal.Rptr. 149]. A buyer is able to purchase the property when he or she is financially able to purchase the property. The burden is on the broker to show that the buyer is able [Herring v. Fisher (1952) 110 Cal.App.2d 322, 327, 242 P.2d 963]. The buyer does not have to have sufficient funds when the offer is made; it is sufficient that it can be shown that he or she would have had the necessary credit or assets at the time the transaction was to be consummated [Baber v. Pappas (1929) 97 Cal.App. 534, 536, 275 P. 978].

A prospective seller owes a duty to the broker not to act arbitrarily or in bad faith to prevent the transaction's consummation when the broker has found a prospective buyer who is ready, able, and willing to purchase the property, and the prospective buyer and the prospective seller have agreed on the sale's terms and conditions. Even if the listing agreement provided for a broker's commission only on completion of the sale and the sale is not consummated because the seller acted arbitrarily or in bad faith, preventing consummation, the broker is entitled to a commission [Stromer v. Browning (1966) 65 Cal.2d 421, 55 Cal.Rptr. 18, 420 P.2d 730].

PART A. ACTIONS INVOLVING BROKERS

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.19

MB 7500A.19 Definition of Procure

[1] Instruction Definition of Procure

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff procured the buyer if [he/she/it] set in motion a chain of events which, without a break in their continuity, caused the buyer to make an offer on the seller's terms or on terms agreed to by the seller.

Authorities: Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 319, 323, 317 P.2d 1027 ; Nelson v. Mayer (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 438, 445, 265 P.2d 52 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define procure when that term is used in this chapter.

[3] Comment

If the broker establishes that there was a ready, willing, and able buyer, the broker must also establish that he or she procured the buyer. "Procure" means to set in motion a chain of events that, without a break in continuity, results in the offer by the ready, willing, and able buyer [Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 319, 323, 317 P.2d 1027 ; Nelson v. Mayer (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 438, 445, 265 P.2d 52 ; see Estate of Ross (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 895, 900-901, 162 Cal.Rptr. 111].

MB 7500A.20 Defense of Revocation of Open Listing[1] Instruction Defense of Revocation of Open Listing

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Defendant notified Plaintiff that [he/she/it] revoked the listing agreement before Plaintiff procured an enforceable offer and presented it to the Defendant, Plaintiff may not recover the commission.

Authority: Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 545-546, 339 P.2d 613 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that he or she revoked the open listing agreement before the plaintiff performed the duties set forth in the listing.

[3] Comment

When the listing is an open listing in which no termination date is specified [see MB 7500A.11], the seller may revoke the agreement without liability at any time before it is performed [Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 545-546, 339 P.2d 613]. Only performance of the contract duties by the real estate agent would prevent the seller's revocation or withdrawal [Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 540, 545-546, 339 P.2d 613]. For a discussion of what would constitute performance by the broker, see MB 7500A.11 and MB 7500A.15.

2. Broker's Action to Recover Commission Based on Listing Agreement

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.21

MB 7500A.21 Defense of Rescission of Exclusive Listing

[1] Instruction Defense of Rescission of Exclusive Listing

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff failed to use due diligence in looking for a buyer for Defendant's property and the Defendant notified Plaintiff that [he/she/it] rescinded the listing agreement before Plaintiff found a buyer, Plaintiff may not recover the commission.

Authorities: Coleman v. Mora (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 137, 149-152, 69 Cal.Rptr. 166 ; Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 402, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant contends that he or she rescinded the listing agreement because of the plaintiff's failure to use due diligence in finding a buyer.

[3] Comment

A seller may rescind an exclusive listing for failure of consideration if the broker fails to use due diligence in looking for a buyer. The rescission is a defense to the broker's action for a commission [Coleman v. Mora (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 137, 149-152, 69 Cal.Rptr. 166]. The seller must notify the broker of the rescission before the broker has performed. If the seller does not notify the broker and sells himself or herself, the failure to use due diligence is not a defense [Carlsen v. Zane (1968) 261 Cal.App.2d 399, 402, 67 Cal.Rptr. 747].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Because Defendant was Plaintiff's real estate [broker/salesperson], Defendant was in a confidential relationship with Plaintiff. This relationship imposed on Defendant the duty of acting in the highest good faith toward Plaintiff and precluded Defendant from obtaining any advantage over Plaintiff. Thus, the burden of proof is on Defendant to establish that Defendant acted in good faith toward Plaintiff and that _____ [describe transaction at issue] was fair to Plaintiff.

Authorities: Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; Solon v. Lichtenstein (1952) 39 Cal.2d 75, 82, 244 P.2d 907 ; Leko v. Cornerstone Bldg. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 180-181, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action against a real estate broker by a client based on fraud. It may apply to a defendant who was a real estate salesperson acting of the plaintiff's behalf. It should be used with the more general fraud instructions in Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions. It should also be used with the Judicial Council instructions on breach of fiduciary duty [see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions], in particular, CACI No. 4100, " 'Fiduciary Duty' Explained." A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. This instruction should also be used with the instructions in MB 7500A.02 and MB 7500A.03 when the action involves a salesperson employed by the broker.

For detailed instructions on professional liability in real estate transactions, see Ch. 74A, Matthew Bender Professional Liability in Real Property Transactions Instructions.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Broker's Fiduciary Duty

A real estate broker is charged with the same duty of undivided service and loyalty toward a client that is imposed on a trustee dealing with a beneficiary [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; Leko v. Cornerstone Bldg. Inspection Serv. (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1115-1116, 103 Cal.Rptr.2d 858 ; Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal.App.3d 172, 180-181, 111 Cal.Rptr. 334 ; see Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions]. A real estate salesperson who acts on behalf of the broker's client in a real estate transaction may have the same duty of undivided service and loyalty that the law imposes on the broker [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 62-64, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353]. When the client questions the acts done by the broker, the burden is on the broker to establish that he or she acted in the utmost good faith and that the transaction was fair to the client [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; Solon v. Lichtenstein (1952) 39 Cal.2d 75, 82, 244 P.2d 907].

A real estate franchise company may be liable on a theory of ostensible agency for the fraud of its franchisee, the real estate broker [Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 741, 747-748, 69 Cal.Rptr.2d 640 (triable issue of fact existed with regard to ostensible agency of real estate broker who independently owned and operated Coldwell Banker franchise)]. However, in determining whether a true agency relationship exists between a franchisor and franchisee, the courts focus on the right to control. A true principal-agency relationship exists only when the franchisor retains complete or substantial control over the daily activities of the franchisee's business [Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 741, 745-746, 69 Cal.Rptr.2d 640 ; Cislav v. Southland Corp. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1284, 1296, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 386 ; see Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Because Defendant was in a confidential relationship with Plaintiff, Defendant had the duty to disclose all material facts concerning the _____ [describe transaction at issue] to Plaintiff.

Authorities: Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 62-64, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue as to whether a broker disclosed all the material facts to a client. It may also be applicable to a defendant who was a real estate salesperson acting on the plaintiff's behalf. An instruction defining material fact is in Ch. 3G, Matthew Bender Rescission of Contract Instructions. This instruction should be used with the general fraud instructions in Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions. It should also be used, as appropriate, with the breach of fiduciary duty instructions in Ch. 41, California Judicial Council Breach of Fiduciary Duty Instructions [see, e.g., CACI No. 4103, "Duty of Confidentiality--Essential Factual Elements"].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Duty to Disclose

A real estate broker as a fiduciary has the duty to disclose to the principal all of the material facts concerning the transaction [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal.2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal.Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101]. A real estate salesperson who acts on behalf of the broker's principal in a real estate transaction may have the same duty of full disclosure the law imposes on the broker [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 62-64, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Duty of Care

As an agent, a real estate broker has the duty to exercise reasonable skill and diligence on the client's behalf. As professionals, brokers are required to exercise the particular skill reasonably to be expected of them and to have special knowledge with regard to their duties as brokers [Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1279-1280, 63 Cal.Rptr.2d 373 ; Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 745, 754 ; *Stiefel v. A real estate salesperson who acts on behalf of the broker's client in a real estate transaction may have the same duty to use the skill and care expected of a professional real estate agent [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353].

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.33

MB 7500A.33 Broker's Duty to Inspect Property and Make Related Disclosures to Buyer

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant as a real estate [broker/salesperson] was under a duty to Plaintiff to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property _____ [which comprised one to four dwelling units or a manufactured home as defined in Health & Safety Code § 18007] and to disclose to Plaintiff all facts that _____ [materially affected or were important in determining] the property's value or desirability that an investigation would have revealed. In exercising [his/her/its] duty, Defendant was required to exercise the degree of care that a reasonably prudent real estate _____ [broker or salesperson] would exercise.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant's duty to inspect does not include an inspection of any areas that are not reasonably and normally accessible in a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property. Defendant's duty to inspect also does not include an affirmative inspection of areas off the site of the subject property or of public records or permits concerning the property's title or use.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The duty to inspect does not include an inspection of more than the specific unit offered for sale.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant's duty to inspect does not include inquiring of the homeowners' association whether there are construction defects in the common areas of the property or whether there is pending or proposed litigation concerning those defects.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 2079(a), 2079.2, 2079.3; Pagano v. Krohn (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 1, 8-9, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 1 ; Robinson v. Grossman (1997) 57 Cal.App.4th 634, 640-641, 67 Cal.Rptr.2d 380 ; Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1280-1282, 63 Cal.Rptr.2d 373 ; Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 298, 308 ; Smith v. Rickard (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 1354, 1359-1363, 254 Cal.Rptr. 633 ; Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 90, 98-102, 199 Cal.Rptr. 383 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a negligence action against a real estate broker by a buyer for failure to reasonably inspect the property and to disclose material facts about the property sold that were known or should have been known to the broker. It may also be applicable to a defendant who was a real estate salesperson acting on the plaintiff's behalf. The instruction should be used in an action against the seller's broker or a cooperating broker [Civ. Code § 2079; see [3][b], below]. The buyer's broker has no similar duty to inspect [Murray v. Hayden (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 311, 314-316, 259 Cal.Rptr. 257 ; see [3][c], below].

The first optional paragraph should be used when there is a factual issue as to whether the broker had a duty to inspect certain areas. The second optional paragraph should be used when the property sold was a unit in a planned development, a condominium, or a stock cooperative and there is a factual issue about whether the broker's duty extended beyond the particular unit that was for sale. The third optional paragraph should be used when the property sold was a unit in a planned development and there is a factual issue about whether the broker had a duty to ascertain whether there was any pending or proposed litigation concerning the property.

If there is evidence that the buyer or prospective buyer breached the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself, counsel for the broker should consider the instruction in MB 7500A.36.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][g], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Establishment of Broker's Duty to Inspect

This instruction is based on the rule promulgated in Easton v. Strassburger [Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 90, 98-102, 199 Cal.Rptr. 383], which established that a broker has a duty to reasonably inspect property the broker is offering for sale and to disclose to the buyer all material defects. Breach of this duty renders the broker open to potential liability in negligence. The Easton case extended the rule in earlier cases that a broker was liable to a buyer for failure to disclose facts known to the broker that materially affected the property's value [see Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal.App.3d 860, 866, 128 Cal.Rptr. 724 ; Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal.App.2d 729, 733, 29 Cal.Rptr. 201].

The court in Easton pointed out that limiting the duty to disclose would protect incompetent and unscrupulous brokers and provide a disincentive to make an inspection. The court also found that buyers justifiably rely on real estate brokers in residential sales transactions to provide information and that brokers are in a position to make a competent inspection. The court further noted that the Code of Ethics of the National Association of Realtors contained an affirmative duty to make an inspection. However, the court did not express an opinion as to whether the duty to inspect applied to sales of commercial real estate [Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 90, 98-102, 199 Cal.Rptr. 383].

Although California courts have not confronted this precise issue, real estate salespersons who act on behalf of brokers' clients in real estate transactions may have the same duty to inspect and disclose that the law imposes on brokers [cf. Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal.App.3d 57, 65, 221 Cal.Rptr. 353 (real estate salesperson had duty to exercise skill and care expected of professional real estate agent)].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 63, Duties and Liabilities of Brokers (Matthew Bender).

[b] Codification of Rule in Civil Code

The holding in Easton v. Strassburger [Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 90, 98-102, 199 Cal.Rptr. 383 ; see [a], above] was codified and further defined in Civ. Code § 2079 et seq. Civ. Code §§ 2079.6-2079.11 were subsequently added to Article 2 on "Duty to Prospective Purchaser of Residential Property." The Legislature declared that Civ. Code §§ 2079-2079.6 should be construed as a definition of the duty of care found to exist by the holding of Easton, and the manner of its discharge, and is declarative of the common law regarding this duty [Civ. Code § 2079.12(a)(4)]. However, the Legislature stated further that nothing in Civ. Code § 2079.12 is intended to affect a court's ability to interpret Civ. Code §§ 2079-2079.6 [Civ. Code § 2079.12(a)(4)].

Civ. Code § 2079(a) provides that a licensed real estate broker or salesperson [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq.] has a duty to a prospective buyer of residential real property comprising one to four dwelling units or a manufactured home as defined in Health & Safety Code § 18007 to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale and to disclose to that prospective purchaser all facts that materially affect the property's value or desirability that an investigation would reveal. Whether information has sufficient materiality to affect the value or desirability of residential property is ordinarily a question of fact [Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal.App.4th 973, 977, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 453 ; Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal.App.2d 729, 737, 29 Cal.Rptr. 201]. Once the seller and the seller's agent make the required disclosures, the potential purchasers must investigate and make an informed decision based on those disclosures. In making the required disclosures, the seller's agent is required only to act in good faith and not convey the seller's representations without a reasonable basis for believing them to be true. The agent has no duty to verify independently or disclaim the accuracy of the seller's representations [Robinson v. Grossman (1997) 57 Cal.App.4th 634, 642-644, 67 Cal.Rptr.2d 380 (trial court correctly refused jury instructions expanding duty of seller's agent to buyer beyond Civ. Code § 2079)].

Civ. Code § 2079 applies to a broker who has a listing agreement with the seller to find or obtain a buyer and to a broker who acts in cooperation with a listing broker to find and obtain a buyer [Civ. Code § 2079(a)]. The duty also encompasses leases of the property that include an option to purchase, ground leases of land on which one to four dwelling units have been constructed, and real property sales contracts as defined in Civ. Code § 2985 [Civ. Code § 2079.1].

A broker's statutory inspection and disclosure duties apply exclusively to prospective buyers, and not to other persons who are not parties to a real estate transaction. Thus, a child could not state a cause of action against a broker for failure to disclose microbial contamination in a home purchased by the child's mother [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal.App.4th 158, 165, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 564].

[c] Limitations on Duty to Inspect

The broker's duty does not extend to areas that are not reasonably and normally accessible to an inspection or to an affirmative inspection of areas off the subject property's site or of public records or permits concerning the property's title or use [Civ. Code § 2079.3; Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 298, 308]. Furthermore, if the property comprises a unit in a planned development [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003], a condominium [see Civ. Code § 783], or a stock cooperative [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.2], the duty does not include an inspection of more than the unit offered for sale provided the seller or broker has complied with the provisions of Civ. Code § 1368 regarding documents to be provided to the prospective purchaser [Civ. Code § 2079.3]. If the property is a unit in a planned development, the duty does not include a duty to inquire of the homeowners' association regarding pending or proposed litigation, or to search public records for such litigation [Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1280-1282, 63 Cal.Rptr.2d 373].

The broker's duty to inspect does not apply to subdivision transfers that must be accompanied by a copy of the Real Estate Commissioner's public report [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1 (requirement of subdivision public report)], or to subdivision transfers that can be made without a public report pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.4, unless the property has been previously occupied [Civ. Code § 2079.6].

The broker's duty to inspect under Easton v. Strassburger [Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 90, 98-102, 199 Cal.Rptr. 383] and Civ. Code § 2079 is limited to residential property, and the presence of a residence on commercial property does not transform the property into residential property [Smith v. Rickard (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 1354, 1363, 254 Cal.Rptr. 633 (duty of inspection and disclosure does not apply to 50-acre property with 25 acres of income-producing lemon and avocado trees despite presence of residence on property)].

[d] Limitations on Duty to Disclose

The broker's duty does not extend to elaborating on essential facts disclosed to a buyer. For example, when the essential facts about a water intrusion problem were disclosed to a buyer before he made an offer to buy the subject property, the broker was not duty bound to elaborate on those facts by providing further details regarding the various manifestations of water intrusion throughout the development or the precise allegations in the condominium association's complaint against the developer [Pagano v. Krohn (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 1, 8-10, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 1].

[e] Broker's Standard of Care

The standard of care owed by a broker is the degree of care that a reasonably prudent real estate licensee would exercise. The standard is measured by the degree of knowledge through education, experience, and examination, required to obtain a broker's license [Civ. Code § 2079.2; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10000-10481].

[f] Statute of Limitations

An action for a broker's breach of the duty to inspect and disclose material facts affecting the value or desirability of residential property must be commenced within two years of the date the buyer takes possession of the property. The date of possession is the date of recordation, the date of close of escrow, or the date of occupancy, whichever occurs first [Civ. Code § 2079.4]. However, the two-year statute of limitations does not apply to causes of action for intentional fraud [Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 857, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 34]. The two-year statute of limitations established by Civ. Code § 2079.4 does not apply to claims for breach of fiduciary duty brought against real estate brokers by purchasers whom they exclusively represent [Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 18, 26-27, 73 Cal.Rptr.2d 784 (rejecting contention that cooperation of buyer's broker with seller's broker in completing sales transaction rendered buyer's broker "cooperating broker" under Civ. Code § 2079)].

[OR]

Based on that inspection, Defendant was under a duty to Plaintiff to disclose any material facts on the "Agent's Inspection Disclosure" portion of the _____ [Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement or Manufactured Home and Mobilehome Transfer Disclosure Statement].

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1102.6, 1102.6d.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a buyer's negligence action against a real estate broker for failure to make disclosures required on the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement (TDS) set forth in Civ. Code § 1102.6 or the Manufactured Home and Mobilehome TDS set forth in Civ. Code § 1102.6d. The first alternative instruction should be used when the broker represented the seller in the transaction. The second should be used when the broker who obtained the offer did not represent the seller in the transaction.

[3] Comment

[a] Establishment of Broker's Duty to Disclose

This instruction is based on Civ. Code §§ 1102.6 and 1102.6d, which establish sellers' and their brokers' duty to disclose to prospective buyers information concerning the condition of the real property [Civ. Code § 1102.6] and manufactured homes and mobilehomes [Civ. Code § 1102.6d] to be sold. The disclosures must be made on a copy of the appropriate statutory transfer disclosure statement ("TDS") form set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1102.6 (real estate TDS) and 1102.6d (manufactured home and mobilehome TDS).

This statutory duty to disclose is independent of, and does not change or diminish, a broker's duty to disclose any known fact materially affecting the property's value and desirability [Civ. Code § 1102.1; see MB 7500A.31 (common law duty to disclose material facts), MB 7500A.33 (codified duty to inspect and disclose)]. Further, the specification of items for disclosure on the TDS does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision of law or that may exist to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the sale of the property [Civ. Code § 1102.8].

The following subsections summarize the statutory disclosure requirements. For more detailed coverage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser (Matthew Bender), and California Legal Forms, Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements (Matthew Bender).

[b] Transfers to Which Disclosure Requirements Apply; Exceptions; Waiver

Civ. Code § 1101 et seq. requires transfers of real property, or residential stock cooperatives, containing one to four dwelling units to complete and provide prospective transferees with a statutory TDS [see Civ. Code §§ 1102.3, 1102.6]. On and after January 1, 2000, these requirements also apply to a resale of a manufactured home or mobilehome that is classified as personal property intended for use as a residence [Civ. Code § 1102(b)]. The types of transfers subject to these requirements include sales, exchanges, installment land sale contracts, leases with options to purchase, any other options to purchase, and ground leases coupled with improvements [Civ. Code § 1102(a)].

Exceptions to the disclosure requirements are set forth in Civ. Code § 1102.2. They include, for example, transfers that are subject to the public reporting requirements of the Subdivided Lands Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11000 et seq. (Act), 11018.1] and transfers from one co-owner to one or more other co-owners.

Any waiver of the disclosure requirements is void as against public policy [Civ. Code § 1102(c); Realmuto v. Gagnard (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 193, 201, 1 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].

[c] Separate and Distinct Obligations of Seller and Broker

The TDS is prepared in part by the seller and in part by the broker or agent, and the seller/broker or agent have separate and distinct obligations in preparing their respective sections of the TDS. The majority of the TDS seeks to elicit information solely from the seller regarding the condition of specific aspects of the subject property. The broker or agent must identify those material facts discovered during a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property by completing Paragraph III (if the broker/agent represents the seller) or IV (to be completed by any other broker/agent who obtains an offer) of the TDS.

[d] Delivery of Transfer Disclosure Statement

The transfer disclosure statement's delivery must be made in person or by mail. Delivery to the buyer's spouse is deemed delivery to the buyer, unless otherwise provided by contract [Civ. Code § 1102.10].

If more than one broker is acting as an agent in a transaction, the broker who obtained the offer made by the buyer must deliver the disclosure to the buyer unless the seller has given other written instructions for delivery and except as provided in the next paragraph [Civ. Code § 1102.12(a)].

If a broker responsible for delivering the disclosures cannot obtain the disclosure statement and does not have written assurance from the buyer that the disclosure has been received, the broker must advise the buyer in writing of his or her right to the disclosure [Civ. Code § 1102.12(b)].

[e] Limitation on Broker's Liability

A listing or selling agent will not be liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information delivered under the statutory disclosure requirements if all of the following factors are present [Civ. Code § 1102.4(a)]:

- The error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within that agent's personal knowledge;
- The error, inaccuracy, or omission was based on information timely provided by public agencies or by certain other persons (i.e., a licensed engineer, land surveyor, geologist, structural pest control operator, contractor, or other expert, dealing with matters within the scope of the professional's license or expertise) in accordance with a request by a prospective transferee; and
- Ordinary care was exercised in obtaining and transmitting it.

[f] Consequences of Non-Compliance

A seller's failure to provide the transfer disclosure statement gives the buyer the right of rescission [Realmuto v. Gagnard (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 193, 201, 1 Cal.Rptr.3d 569]. Once the property has been transferred, failure to make a required disclosure will not invalidate a transaction. However, a broker who willfully or negligently violates or fails to make the required disclosures is liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a buyer [Civ. Code § 1102.13].

[g] Subsequent Inaccuracy

If information disclosed on a transfer disclosure statement is rendered inaccurate as a result of any act, occurrence, or agreement after the delivery of the required disclosures, the resulting inaccuracy does not constitute a violation of the disclosure provisions. If at the time the disclosures are required to be made, an item of information required to be disclosed is unknown or not available to the seller, and the seller or his or her broker has made a reasonable effort to ascertain it, the seller may use an approximation of the information, provided the approximation is (1) clearly identified as such, (2) reasonable, (3) based on the best information available to the seller or his or her broker, and (4) not used for the purpose of circumventing or evading the disclosure requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.5].

county assessor, and county planning agency stating the location of the map and any information regarding changes to the map received by _____ (state name of local agency)].

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1103-1103.14; Gov. Code §§ 8589.4, 51178; Pub. Res. Code §§ 2622, 4125.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a buyer's negligence action against a real estate broker for failure to disclose that the property is located in a statutorily specified natural hazard area. The first optional paragraph should be used when the property in question is located in a special flood hazard area designated as zone type "A" or "V" by the Federal Emergency Management Agency or when the property is located in an area of potential flooding. The second paragraph should be used when the property is located in (1) an area designated in Pub. Res. Code § 51178 as a very high fire hazard severity zone; (2) an earthquake fault zone, designated pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 2622; (3) a seismic hazard zone, designated pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 2696; or (4) a state responsibility area (i.e., an area subject to substantial forest fire risks and hazards) subject to Pub. Res. Code § 4125.

[3] Comment

[a] Establishment of Broker's Duty to Disclose

This instruction is based on Civ. Code § 1103, which requires sellers and their agents to notify prospective transferees when the real property lies within any of the following hazardous areas [Civ. Code § 1103(c); see Civ. Code § 1103.2]:

- A special flood hazard area [see Gov. Code § 8589.3];
- An area of potential flooding [see Gov. Code § 8589.4];
- A very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51183.5];
- A wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards [see Pub. Res. Code § 4125];
- An earthquake fault zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9]; and
- A seismic hazard zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2694].

The following subsections summarize these disclosure requirements. For more detailed coverage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser (Matthew Bender).

[b] Transfers to Which Disclosure Requirements Apply; Exceptions

These disclosures are required with regard to the transfer of real property or of a residential stock cooperative improved with or consisting of one to four dwelling units. This applies to transfers by sale, exchange, installment land sale contract, lease with an option to purchase, any other option to purchase, or ground lease coupled with improvements [Civ. Code § 1103(a); see Civ. Code § 1103.2]. These requirements also apply to a resale of a manufactured home or mobilehome that is classified as personal property intended for use as a residence if the transaction was entered into after 1999 [Civ. Code § 1103(b); see Health & Safety Code §§ 18007, 18008].

If the transaction is subject to the statutory real estate transfer disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code §§ 1102, 1102.6; see also MB 7500A.34], the disclosures must be made in a (1) statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2], or (2) local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a].

Exceptions to the disclosure requirements are set forth in Civ. Code § 1103.1(a). They include, for example, transfers from one co-owner to one or more co-owners and transfers to a spouse.

[c] Primary Disclosure Obligation

Civ. Code § 1103 requires the transferor (i.e., the seller) or the seller's agent to deliver the natural hazard disclosure statement. The statement provides that the disclosures are made by the seller and his or her agent(s), and includes signature blanks for the seller and agent(s) [see Civ. Code § 1103.2(a)]. Further, Civ. Code § 1103.2(e) provides that the required disclosures may be provided by the seller and seller's agent in the local option real estate disclosure statement. Thus, if the transaction is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., both the seller and the seller's agent share responsibility for making the required disclosures.

If the transaction is not subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., the statutory provision governing the specific type of disclosure required to be made will determine the party responsible for making the disclosure. Thus, the disclosure must be made by the following person or entity:

- The seller, if the property is located within a very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51179] or wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards (i.e., state responsibility area) [Gov. Code § 51183.5(a); Pub. Res. Code § 4136(a); see Pub. Res. Code § 4136]; or
- The seller's agent, or the seller if he or she is acting without any agent, if the property is located within a designated special flood hazard area, area of potential flooding shown on an inundation map, delineated earthquake fault zone, or designated seismic hazard zone [Gov. Code §§ 8589.3, 8589.4(a); Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9(a), 2694(a)].

[d] Consequences of Non-Compliance

Failure to make a required natural hazard disclosure will not invalidate a transaction. However, a broker who willfully or negligently violates or fails to make the required disclosures is liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a buyer [Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[e] Limitations on Liability

A broker who uses ordinary care in obtaining and transmitting the information is not liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information that is disclosed if it was not within the broker's personal knowledge and was based on information timely provided by public agencies [Civ. Code § 1103.4(a)]. A broker also is not liable for the delivery of a report or opinion prepared by a licensed engineer, land surveyor, geologist, or expert in natural hazard discovery dealing with matters within the scope of the professional's license or expertise, if the information was provided to the prospective buyer pursuant to a written or oral request for that information. In responding to the request, the expert is required to make the following determinations and include the following statements, as appropriate, in the report [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)]:

- If the property is determined to be within an "airport influence area" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010(b)(13)(B) (definition)], the report must include this statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)(1)]:
"NOTICE OF AIRPORT IN VICINITY. This property is presently located in the vicinity of an airport, within what is known as an airport influence area. For that reason, the property may be subject to some of the annoyances or inconveniences associated with proximity to airport operations (for example: noise, vibration, or odors). Individual sensitivities to those annoyances can vary from person to person. You may wish to consider what airport annoyances, if any, are associated with the property before you complete your purchase and determine whether they are acceptable to you."

- If the property is determined to be within the jurisdiction of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission [see Gov. Code § 66620 et seq.], the report must include this statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)(2)]: "NOTICE OF SAN FRANCISCO BAY CONSERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION JURISDICTION. This property is located within the jurisdiction of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission. Use and development of property within the commission's jurisdiction may be subject to special regulations, restrictions, and permit requirements. You may wish to investigate and determine whether they are acceptable to you and your intended use of the property before you complete your transaction."

- If the property is determined to be within one mile of a parcel of real property designated as "Prime Farmland," "Farmland of Statewide Importance," "Unique Farmland," "Farmland of Local Importance," or "Grazing Land" on the most current "Important Farmland Map" issued by the California Department of Conservation, Division of Land Resource Protection, using solely the county-level GIS map data, if any, available on the Farmland Mapping and Monitoring Program web site, the report must include this statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)(3)]: "NOTICE OF RIGHT TO FARM. This property is located within one mile of a farm or ranch land designated on the current county-level GIS 'Important Farmland Map,' issued by the California Department of Conservation, Division of Land Resource Protection. Accordingly, the property may be subject to inconveniences or discomforts resulting from agricultural operations that are a normal and necessary aspect of living in a community with a strong rural character and a healthy agricultural sector. Customary agricultural practices in farm operations may include, but are not limited to, noise, odors, dust, light, insects, the operation of pumps and machinery, the storage and disposal of manure, bee pollination, and the ground or aerial application of fertilizers, pesticides, and herbicides. These agricultural practices may occur at any time during the 24-hour day. Individual sensitivities to those practices can vary from person to person. You may wish to consider the impacts of such agricultural practices before you complete your purchase. Please be advised that you may be barred from obtaining legal remedies against agricultural practices conducted in a manner consistent with proper and accepted customs and standards pursuant to Section 3482.5 of the Civil Code or any pertinent local ordinance."

After complying with these natural hazard disclosure requirements, a broker is relieved of further duty of disclosure with regard to those items of information. A broker is not required to provide notice to the buyer if the information provided subsequently becomes inaccurate as a result of any governmental action, map revision, changed information, or other act or occurrence unless the broker has actual knowledge that the information has become inaccurate [Civ. Code § 1103.5(a)]. If information that is disclosed becomes inaccurate after the delivery of the required disclosures, the resulting inaccuracy does not constitute a violation of the disclosure requirements [Civ. Code § 1103.5(a)].

[f] Actions of Agents; Delivery of Disclosures

Any person or entity, other than a real estate licensee licensed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq., acting in the capacity of an escrow agent for the transfer of real property subject to these disclosure requirements will not be deemed the agent of the transferor or transferee for purposes of the disclosure requirements unless the person or entity is empowered to act by any express written agreement, which will govern the extent of that agency [Civ. Code § 1103.11].

If more than one licensed real estate broker is acting as an agent in a transaction subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq., the broker who obtained the offer must, except as otherwise provided in Civ. Code § 1103 et seq., deliver the written disclosure to the transferee, unless the seller has given other written instructions for delivery [Civ. Code § 1103.12(a)]. If a broker responsible for delivering the disclosures cannot obtain the required disclosure statement and does not have written assurance from the buyer that the disclosure has been received, the broker must advise the buyer in writing of his or her rights to the disclosure. A broker responsible for delivering disclosures must maintain a record of the action taken to effect compliance in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10148 [Civ. Code § 1103.12(b)].

[g] Effect on Other Laws

The specification of items for disclosure in Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. does not limit or abridge any disclosure obligation created by any other provision of law or that may exist to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transactions. These provision were not intended to affect the existing obligations of the parties to a real estate contract, or their agents, to disclose any fact materially affecting the value and desirability of the property, including, but not limited to, the property's physical condition and previously received reports of physical inspection noted on the disclosure form provided pursuant to Civ. Code §§ 1102.6 and 1102.6a [Civ. Code § 1103.8(a)]. Similarly, these provisions do not change the duty of a real estate broker or salesperson to inspect property pursuant to Civ. Code § 2079 [Civ. Code § 1103.8(a)].

MB 7500A.36 Buyer's Duty to Exercise Reasonable Care--Affirmative Defense

[1] Instruction Buyer's Duty to Exercise Reasonable Care--Affirmative Defense

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff as a _____ [buyer or prospective buyer] of real property had a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect [himself/herself/itself]. This duty included those facts that are known to or within Plaintiff's diligent attention and observation. In exercising this duty, Plaintiff was required to exercise the degree of care that a reasonably prudent _____ [buyer or prospective buyer] would exercise.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 2079.5; Pagano v. Krohn (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 1, 10, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 1 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in cases involving the broker's duty to inspect and disclose material facts affecting the property's value or desirability [see MB 7500A.33], when there is evidence that the material facts that were not inspected for or disclosed could have been known to the buyer as well on diligent observation of the property.

[3] Comment

Notwithstanding a broker's duty to prospective purchasers of residential property to inspect and disclose material facts affecting the property's value or desirability, a buyer or prospective buyer has a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself. This duty includes those facts that are known to or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer or prospective buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.5]. For example, when the buyers of a condominium knew there was water intrusion at the condominium development, which had resulted in litigation against the developer, the additional details they claimed the broker should have disclosed, including the content of the condominium association's complaint, were within their own diligent attention [Pagano v. Krohn (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 1, 10, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 1 ; see Assilzadeh v. California Federal Bank (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 399, 416, 98 Cal.Rptr.2d 176 (after broker informed purchaser of condominium unit that homeowners' association had filed and settled construction defect lawsuit against developer, "buyer should have investigated the facts further and, if necessary, should have hired an attorney for advice on the legal aspects of the lawsuit and settlement")]. For discussion of the broker's duty to inspect and disclose, see MB 7500A.33.

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.50

MB 7500A.50 Buyer's Burden of Proof in Action for Damages for Seller's Breach of Contract of Sale

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff and Defendant entered into a written contract for Plaintiff to purchase Defendant's property _____ [describe property];
- 2. That Plaintiff either performed what [he/she/it] was required to do under the contract, or was excused from doing any more under that contract;
- 3. That Defendant breached the contract of sale by _____ [describe breach of contract, e.g., failure to execute escrow instructions and failure to deposit demands and deed in escrow];
- 4. That Defendant's failure to perform caused the damages that Plaintiff complains of; and
- 5. The nature and extent of Plaintiff's damages.

Authorities: Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal.2d 822, 830, 69 Cal.Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1371, 1388, 272 Cal.Rptr. 387 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a buyer's action for breach of a contract to sell real property. General breach of contract instructions are set forth in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Chs. 3A through 3G.

Specific damages instructions are set forth in CACI Nos. 350-361 and MB 7500A.70-MB 7500A.77.

A preponderance of evidence instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")] and an instruction defining the term "cause" [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")] must be used with this instruction. If foreseeability of damage is an issue, the instructions on that issue in Chs. 3 and 3E, as appropriate, must also be given.

[3] Comment

The essential elements of a cause of action for breach of contract are:

- The contract;
- Plaintiff's performance or excuse for non-performance;
- Defendant's breach;
- The resulting damages to plaintiff [Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal.2d 822, 830, 69 Cal.Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1371, 1388, 272 Cal.Rptr. 387]; and
- Proximate causation of those damages [Civ. Code § 3300].

Under the statute of frauds, the sales contract must be in writing and must have been executed by the defendant to be enforceable [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3); see Kaljian v. Menezes (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 573, 588-589, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 510 (failure to give requested statute of frauds jury instruction based on former Civ. Code § 1624(c) [see now Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3)] was prejudicial error). For general instructions on the statute of frauds, see Ch. 3F, Defenses]. To satisfy the statute of frauds, the writing must describe the real property so that it can be identified with reasonable certainty [Alameda Belt Line v. City of Alameda (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 15, 20-21, 5 Cal.Rptr.3d 879]. Although a real estate contract must contain the "essential" elements of the agreement to satisfy the statute of frauds, what is "essential" depends on the circumstances of the agreement. For example, a real estate sales contract is not unenforceable for failure to specify a time of performance because the law implies a reasonable time [Patel v. Liebermensch (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 344, 350, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 366, 197 P.3d 177 ; House of Prayer v. Evangelical Assn. for India (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 48, 53, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 24]. In addition, the manner of payment is a term that may be supplied by implication [Patel v. Liebermensch (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 344, 351, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 366, 197 P.3d 177 (disapproving King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal.2d 584, 588, 591, 197 P.2d 321 to the extent it suggests that time and manner of payment are material elements that must appear in writing in every real estate sale agreement)].

A licensed real estate broker or salesperson cannot enforce an oral commission agreement by asserting equitable estoppel [see Ch. 3F, Matthew Bender Contract Defenses Instructions] against a statute of frauds defense, unless there is a showing of actual fraud [see Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions] by the party to be charged under that agreement [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1247, 1264, 241 Cal.Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279].

MB 7500A.52 Counter Offer

[1] Instruction Counter Offer

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If the seller modifies any term or condition of the original offer from the buyer, such an alteration or modification becomes a counter offer. The buyer must accept the counter offer before a binding contract is created.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1585; Smith v. Holmwood (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 549, 552-553, 41 Cal.Rptr. 907 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is a dispute between a buyer and seller as to whether the offer was accepted or a counter offer was made.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Acceptance Must Be Unqualified

An acceptance must be absolute and unqualified. A qualified acceptance is a new proposal [Civ. Code § 1585]. Thus, if the acceptance changes a term of the offer, there is no contract unless the counter offer is accepted [Smith v. Holmwood (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 549, 552-553, 41 Cal.Rptr. 907].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If a condition to the contract is solely for one party's benefit, that party may decide not to require the performance of that condition.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

Therefore, if you find that _____ [describe condition at issue] was inserted in the contract solely to benefit Defendant and that Defendant's actions indicated to Plaintiff that the condition did not have to occur, Defendant may not rely on the failure of _____ [describe condition at issue] to occur as the basis for [his/her/its] failure to perform.

[OR]

Therefore, if you find that _____ [describe condition at issue] was inserted in the contract solely to benefit Plaintiff and that Plaintiff's actions indicated to Defendant that the condition did not have to occur, Plaintiff may enforce the contract even though _____ [describe condition at issue] did not occur.

Authorities: Galdjie v. Darwish (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 1331, 1339, 7 Cal.Rptr.3d 178 ; Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 682, 687, 87 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Wesley N. Taylor Co. v. Russell (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 816, 828-829, 15 Cal.Rptr. 357 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is an issue as to whether a party has waived a condition in a contract that was inserted solely for his or her benefit. The first alternative should be used when the defendant is relying on a failure of the condition as a basis for not performing; the second alternative should be used when the plaintiff is seeking to enforce the contract after having waived the performance of a condition for his or her benefit.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment[a] Waiver of Condition

A party to a contract can waive the performance of a condition to a contract that is in the contract solely for his or her benefit, such as a condition that financing be obtained or that a liquor license be obtained [Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 682, 687, 87 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Wesley N. Taylor Co. v. Russell (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 816, 828-829, 15 Cal.Rptr. 357 ; see *Galdjie v. If the condition is waived, it is as if it has been performed for the purpose of enforcing the contract [Wesley N. Taylor Co. v. Russell (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 816, 828-829, 15 Cal.Rptr. 357].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions
PART B. ACTIONS FOR BREACH OF CONTRACTS TO SELL

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.54

MB 7500A.54 Defense of Failure of Buyer's Condition[1] Instruction Defense of Failure of Buyer's Condition[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Under the terms of the contract of sale, Defendant was obligated to purchase the property only if _____ [describe condition precedent, e.g., Plaintiff paved the road leading from the residence to the adjoining highway or Defendant's Board of Directors approved the terms of the purchase].

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

If this condition was not satisfied--that is, if _____ [describe facts constituting failure of condition, e.g., Plaintiff failed to pave the road]--then Defendant had no obligation to purchase the property and did not breach the contract of sale.

[OR]

However, if the contract also required Defendant to make reasonable efforts to _____ [describe defendant's implied duty, e.g., obtain the Board of Director's approval], and if [he/she/it] failed to do so, the law will not permit [him/her/it] to take advantage of that failure to avoid an obligation to _____ [describe obligation at issue, e.g., purchase the property]. Consequently, if _____ [describe events constituting nonoccurrence, e.g., the lack of Board approval] was caused by Defendant's failure to make reasonable efforts to _____ [describe defendant's implied duty, e.g., obtain the Board's approval], then Defendant is obligated to Plaintiff in the same manner as if _____ [describe events] constituting fulfillment of condition, e.g., the Board had approved the terms of the purchase]. Plaintiff has the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that Defendant did not make reasonable efforts to _____ [describe defendant's implied duty, e.g., obtain the Board's approval].

If you find that Defendant made reasonable efforts to _____ [describe defendant's implied duty, e.g., obtain the Board's approval], you must find that Defendant had no obligation under the contract to purchase the property and did not breach the contract of sale. On the other hand, if you find that Defendant failed to make reasonable efforts to _____ [describe defendant's implied duty, e.g., obtain the Board's approval], you must find that Defendant is obligated to Plaintiff in the same manner as if the _____ [describe events constituting fulfillment of condition, e.g., the Board had approved the terms of the purchase] [optional (see Use of Instruction): , unless Defendant proves, by a preponderance of the evidence, that _____ (describe events constituting nonoccurrence, e.g., the Board would not have given its approval) even if Defendant had made reasonable efforts to (describe defendant's implied duty, e.g., obtain the Board's approval)].

Authorities: Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal.2d 119, 330 P.2d 625 ; Jacobs v. Tenneco West, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 1413, 1417, 231 Cal.Rptr. 351 ; Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 828, 837-838, 83 Cal.Rptr. 855 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction assumes that the existence of the condition precedent and the nonoccurrence of the condition precedent are not disputed. If there is conflicting evidence as to the existence or failure of a condition precedent, this instruction should be modified to inform the jury that the above rules will only become applicable if it determines that there was a condition precedent to defendant's obligation and if it determines that that condition did not occur.

The first alternative provision should be used when the buyer has no obligation to use reasonable diligence to bring about the fulfillment of the condition or when there is no contention that the buyer has failed to use reasonable diligence. The second alternative provision should be used when the seller claims that the failure of the condition was the result of the buyer's failure to use reasonable diligence. The optional portion of the final sentence of this second alternative should be used when a defendant contends that the condition precedent would have failed even if he or she had made reasonable efforts to secure its fulfillment.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Failure of Condition

When a party to a contract of sale conditions his or her performance on certain conditions being satisfied, the contract is enforceable and not illusory. However, the person benefited by the condition can terminate the contract if the condition is not met [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal.2d 119, 330 P.2d 625]. A party whose obligation to perform is subject to a condition precedent has an implied obligation to use reasonable diligence to secure the fulfillment of the condition [Campbell v. Kennedy (1918) 177 Cal. 430, 432, 170 P. 1107 ; Lynch v. Keystone Con. Min. Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 690, 699, 126 P. 968 ; Jacobs v. Freeman (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 177, 188-191, 163 Cal.Rptr. 680]. When a party's failure to use reasonable diligence contributes materially to the nonoccurrence of a condition precedent, the condition is excused and the party will be obligated in the same manner as if the condition had occurred [Jacobs v. Tenneco West, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 1413, 1417, 231 Cal.Rptr. 351 ; Rains v. Arnett (1961) 189 Cal.App.2d 337, 347-348, 11 Cal.Rptr. 299]. The plaintiff has the burden of proving that the defendant failed to use reasonable diligence to secure the fulfillment of a condition precedent [Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 828, 838, 83 Cal.Rptr. 855]. If the plaintiff proved or if it is conceded that the defendant has failed to use reasonable diligence, the burden of proof shifts to the defendant; the defendant then has the burden of proving that his or her failure did not contribute materially to the nonoccurrence of the condition (i.e., that the condition would not have occurred even if defendant had used reasonable diligence) and the occurrence of the condition will be excused if defendant does not sustain this burden [Jacobs v. Tenneco West, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 1413, 1418-1419, 231 Cal.Rptr. 351 ; Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 828, 838, 83 Cal.Rptr. 855].

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.55

MB 7500A.55 Impossibility of Fulfilling Condition

[1] Instruction Impossibility of Fulfilling Condition

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Defendant establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that _____ [describe unfulfilled condition] was impossible to fulfill, the fact that it was not fulfilled is a defense to Plaintiff's action regardless of whether Defendant used due diligence in trying to fulfill the condition.

Authority: Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 828, 837-838, 83 Cal.Rptr. 855 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant raises the issue that the performance of a condition was impossible and therefore that his or her due diligence in attempting to perform the condition was irrelevant. A preponderance of evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Impossibility

When the buyer concedes, or lets it be assumed for the sake of presenting all possible defenses, that he or she did not use due diligence to perform a condition and contends that, even if he or she had used due diligence, the condition could not have been fulfilled, the burden is on the buyer to establish the impossibility [Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d

[1] Instruction Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Excuses Nonoccurrence of Condition

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The failure to satisfy a condition may be excused if the satisfaction of the condition was prevented or hindered through a breach of the implied promise of good faith and fair dealing.

If Plaintiff proves that Defendant prevented or hindered the satisfaction of the condition through a breach of the implied promise of good faith and fair dealing, then you must determine Defendant's obligations to Plaintiff as if the condition had been satisfied.

Authorities: Ninety Nine Investments, Ltd. v. Overseas Courier Service (Singapore) Private, Ltd. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 1118, 1131-1132, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 891 ; R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 1589, 1601-1604, 17 Cal.Rptr.2d 425 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 225, Comment b.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff alleges that the defendant prevented or hindered the satisfaction of a condition through a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The instruction should be used with an instruction on preponderance of the evidence [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")], and the instruction on the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in Ch. 3B, Matthew Bender Interpretation of Contract Instructions, MB 300B.08.

[3] Comment

The nonoccurrence of a condition may be excused by the prevention or hindrance of its occurrence through a breach of the implied promise of good faith and fair dealing [Ninety Nine Investments, Ltd. v. Overseas Courier Service (Singapore) Private, Ltd. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 1118, 1131-1132, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 891 ; R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 1589, 1601-1604, 17 Cal.Rptr.2d 425 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 225, Comment b]. In R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan, the defendant hired the plaintiff, a real estate broker, to find a site for an auto dealership. The commission's payment was conditioned on the completion of the purchase by the defendant. The plaintiff found a site, but the defendant did not buy it. A third party bought the property, but the defendant acquired an option on half of the property and the third party agreed to pay half of any commission that the defendant might owe to the plaintiff. The court stated that the defendant in effect traded his position under the unconsummated contract with the seller for a valuable consideration, an option to buy half the property, and indemnification for half of any commission owed to the plaintiff. This conversion of the defendant's right to buy the entire property into an indemnity and an option let the defendant profit unfairly from the plaintiff's services and breached the defendant's duty of good faith and fair dealing. The court therefore held that the defendant breached the brokerage contract by failing to pay the plaintiff's commission [R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 1589, 1601-1604, 17 Cal.Rptr.2d 425].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action against an escrow holder. It can be based on either breach of contract in failing to follow the instructions or negligence in conducting the escrow.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Liability for Violation of Escrow Instructions

An escrow holder bears a fiduciary relationship to each party to the escrow and must comply strictly with the instructions of the principals. If the escrow holder violates the instructions, liability attaches for breach of contract. An escrow holder also has the duty to exercise ordinary skill and diligence; any negligence gives rise to liability for any loss proximately caused by the negligence [Garton v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 365, 381-382, 165 Cal.Rptr. 449 ; Wade v. Lake County Title Co. (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 824, 828-829, 86 Cal.Rptr. 182 ; *Ruth v. PART C. DAMAGES

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.70

MB 7500A.70 Measure of Buyer's Damages--Seller's Title Encumbered

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If under the court's instructions you find that the Defendant has breached an agreement to sell real property by conveying the property with encumbrances contrary to the terms and provisions of the agreement, then you must award Plaintiff damages, if any, in an amount equal to the money actually expended by Plaintiff in removing the encumbrance.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, you may not award more than you find to be the fair market value of the property conveyed.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3305.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller has breached the contract by conveying the property encumbered in a manner not allowed by the agreement of sale and the encumbrance can be removed by the payment of money. If the encumbrance is one, such as an easement, that cannot be removed at the owner's will, the measure of damages is the one set forth in MB 7500A.71. This instruction must be used with the general damages instructions for breach of contract in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, and with the instruction in MB 7500A.72 defining encumbrance.

If there is evidence that the amount expended might exceed the property's value at the time of the breach, the optional paragraph must be used, and the definition of fair market value instruction in MB 7500A.73 must be given.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Measure of Damages

The measure of damages for the breach of a covenant against encumbrances is, ordinarily, the amount that the plaintiff has actually expended in removing the encumbrance. However, damages may not exceed the property's value at the time of the breach [Civ. Code § 3305]. This rule refers only to encumbrances that may be removed by the payment of money such as mortgages and liens, and it is not applicable to encumbrances that cannot be extinguished at the owner's will by the payment of money, such as easements or restrictions on the use of the land [Evans v. Faught (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 698, 712-713, 42 Cal.Rptr. 133].

PART C. DAMAGES

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.71

MB 7500A.71 Measure of Buyer's Damages--Seller's Title Encumbered by Restriction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If under the court's instructions you find that the Defendant has breached an agreement to sell real property by conveying the property encumbered contrary to the terms and provisions of the agreement, then you must award the Plaintiff damages, if any, caused by the existence and continuance of the encumbrance. This damage is measured by the amount, if any, that the existence of the encumbrance reduces the real property's fair market value.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3300; Evans v. Faught (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 698, 712-713, 42 Cal.Rptr. 133 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the seller has breached the contract by conveying the property encumbered in a manner not allowed by the agreement of sale and the encumbrance cannot be removed by the payment of money, such as an easement or restriction. If the encumbrance can be removed at the owner's will, such as by a lien, the measure of damages is the one set forth in MB 7500A.70. This instruction must be used with the general damage for breach of contract instructions in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, with the definition of encumbrance instruction in MB 7500A.72, and with the definition of fair market value instructions in Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions, CACI No. 3501, and MB 7500A.73.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Measure of Damages

The measure of damages for the breach of a covenant against encumbrances in the case of restrictions such as easements is the general breach of contract measure of damages in Civ. Code § 3300. Damages are based on the natural and proximate consequences to the plaintiff of the existence and continuance of the encumbrance, which are the decrease in fair market value caused by the encumbrance [Evans v. Faught (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 698, 712-713, 42 Cal.Rptr. 133].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions
PART C. DAMAGES

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.72

MB 7500A.72 Definition of Encumbrance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An "encumbrance" is any right to, or interest in, land held by someone other than the Plaintiff which right or interest diminishes the land's value. An encumbrance may affect the physical condition of the land or may affect the title to the land.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The court has determined that _____ [describe encumbrance] encumbers the property.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1114; Evans v. Faught (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 698, 706, 42 Cal.Rptr. 133 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in defining encumbrance when that term is used in an instruction. The optional sentence should be used when the court has determined as a matter of law that there is an encumbrance on the property.

[3] Comment

Civ. Code § 1114 defines encumbrance as including taxes, assessments, and all liens on real property. The inclusive nature of the definition allows for other burdens on real property to constitute encumbrances, in addition to the burdens recognized by the statute [Evans v. Faught (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 698, 706, 42 Cal.Rptr. 133 ; Fraser v. Bentel (1911) 161 Cal. 390, 394, 119 P. 509]. Therefore, encumbrance has been judicially defined as any right to, or interest in, real property which belongs to someone other than the fee owner and reduces the property's value but which is consistent with the transfer of the fee [Evans v. Faught (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 698, 706, 42 Cal.Rptr. 133].

MB 7500A.73 Definition of Fair Market Value

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The fair market value of real property is the highest price in cash that the property would bring if it were exposed for sale in the open market for a reasonable period of time and if the buyers had knowledge of all the uses and purposes to which the property is adaptable.

Authorities: Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 43, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345 ; Sacramento S. R. Co. v. Heilbron (1909) 156 Cal. 408, 409, 104 P. 979 ; CMSH Co. v. Antelope Development, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 174, 182, 272 Cal.Rptr. 605 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with instructions using the term "fair market value" to define that term.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Fair Market Value Defined

When the measure of damages turns on the value of a piece of property, whether liability sounds in breach of contract or in tort, the standard is fair market value [Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal.2d 744, 752-753, 192 P.2d 935 ; CMSH Co. v. Antelope Development, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 174, 182, 272 Cal.Rptr. 605 ; Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 141, 135 Cal.Rptr. 802].

The fair market value of real property is the highest price in cash that the property would bring if it were exposed for sale in the open market for a reasonable period of time and if the buyers had knowledge of all the uses and purposes to which the property is adaptable [Klopping v. City of Whittier (1972) 8 Cal.3d 39, 43, 104 Cal.Rptr. 1, 500 P.2d 1345 ; Sacramento S. R. Co. v. Heilbron (1909) 156 Cal. 408, 409, 104 P. 979 ; CMSH Co. v. Antelope Development, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 174, 182, 272 Cal.Rptr. 605]. This definition is based on a cash sale, not a credit sale [CMSH Co. v. Antelope Development, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 174, 182, 272 Cal.Rptr. 605 ; Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 141, 135 Cal.Rptr. 802].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions
PART C. DAMAGES

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.74

MB 7500A.74 Measure of Seller's Damages--Liquidated Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The contract between Plaintiff and Defendant contains a liquidated damages provision. You must award Plaintiff _____ [amount of damages in liquidated damage clause] unless Defendant proves that the liquidated damages clause was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made. In deciding whether the clause was unreasonable, you may consider all of the circumstances that existed when the contract was made. These include all of the following:

- (1) The relationship that the damages provided in the contract bore to the range of harm that could have reasonably been anticipated;
- (2) The relative equality of the bargaining power of the parties;
- (3) Whether the parties were represented by lawyers when the contract was made;
- (4) The anticipation of the parties that proof of actual damages would be costly or inconvenient;
- (5) The difficulty of proving the cause and foreseeability of damages; and
- (6) Whether the liquidated damages provision is in a form contract.

Because you must consider the circumstances at the time the contract was made, you may not consider the amount of damages actually suffered by Plaintiff in determining whether the clause was unreasonable.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1671; Cal. Law. Revision Comment to Civ. Code § 1671.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action involving the validity of a liquidated damages clause in a transaction that does not involve residential property. If property containing four or fewer residential units is involved, the instruction in MB 7500A.75 must be used. This instruction assumes that the plaintiff is attempting to recover the liquidated damages. If the plaintiff has retained the liquidated damages and the defendant is seeking to recover them, the instruction must be modified accordingly.

This instruction should be used with the general damages instructions in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Liquidated Damages

A contractual liquidated damages clause is valid unless the party seeking to invalidate the provision establishes that it was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671(b); Ridgley v. Topa Thrift & Loan Assn. (1998) 17 Cal.4th 970, 977, 73 Cal.Rptr.2d 378, 953 P.2d 484 ; Allen v. Smith (2002) 94 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1278, 114 Cal.Rptr.2d 898]. There is a different standard for liquidated damages clauses in residential sales [Civ. Code §§ 1675-1681] and for clauses in contracts for retail purchase of personal, family, or household goods or for leases for dwelling purposes [Civ. Code § 1671(c), (d)].

The California Law Revision Commission Comment to Civ. Code § 1671 gives examples of the circumstances at the time the contract was made that can be considered in determining whether the liquidated damages clause was unreasonable. They are:

- The relationship that the damages provided in the contract bore to the range of harm that could have reasonably been anticipated;
- The relative equality of the bargaining power of the parties;
- Whether the parties were represented by lawyers when the contract was made;
- The anticipation of the parties that proof of actual damages would be costly or inconvenient;
- The difficulty of proving causation and foreseeability of damages; and
- Whether the liquidated damages provision is in a form contract.

The Law Revision Commission also stated that the actual damages suffered could not be considered because only the circumstances at the time the contract was made are relevant [Cal. Law. Revision Comment to Civ. Code § 1671].

CHAPTER 75A Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions
PART C. DAMAGES

6-75A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7500A.75

MB 7500A.75 Measure of Seller's Damages--Liquidated Damages in Residential Sale

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To find that the Defendant is entitled to liquidated damages specified in the contract for the sale of real property, you must find all of the following:

- 1. That at the time the contract to sell the property was made, the Plaintiff intended to occupy _____ [the dwelling or one of the units in the dwelling] as Plaintiff's residence;
- 2. That the provision in the contract liquidating the damages to the Defendant as seller was separately signed or initialed by each party to the contract; and

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

3. That Plaintiff has failed to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that _____ [amount of liquidated damages actually paid to defendant] is unreasonable as liquidated damages.

[OR]

3. That Defendant has proved by a preponderance of the evidence that _____ [amount of liquidated damages actually paid to defendant] is not unreasonable as liquidated damages.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

For the purpose of determining whether the amount actually paid as liquidated damages was unreasonable, you must take into account both of the following:

- 1. The circumstances existing at the time the contract was made; and
- 2. The price and other terms and circumstances of any subsequent sale or contract of sale for the same property if such sale or contract was made within six months of the Plaintiff's default.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1675, 1676, 1677, 1678.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the validity of a liquidated damages clause in a contract to sell residential property is at issue. It assumes that the buyer is seeking the return of liquidated damages held by the seller. The first alternative paragraph 3 should be used when the amount of liquidated damages paid to the seller was less than three percent of the purchase price. The second alternative paragraph 3 should be used when the amount of liquidated damages paid to the seller was more than three percent of the purchase price [Civ. Code § 1675(c), (d)]. The jury should only be instructed on the requirements that are at issue in the particular case.

This instruction should be used with the general damages instructions in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment[a] Liquidated Damages

The enforceability of liquidated damages clauses in sales of residential property is governed by Civ. Code § 1675. Residential property is defined as dwellings of not more than four residential units, at least one of which the buyer intends, at the time the contract is made, to occupy as his or her residence [Civ. Code § 1675(a)].

To be enforceable, the liquidated damages must have been actually paid in the form of cash or a currently dated or postdated check [Civ. Code § 1675(b); Allen v. Smith (2002) 94 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1278, 114 Cal.Rptr.2d 898]. The liquidated damages provision must be separately signed or initialed by each party to the contract and, if the provision is included in a printed form, must be set out either in at least 10 point bold type or in contrasting red print in at least eight point bold type [Civ. Code § 1677].

If the amount paid is not in excess of three percent of the purchase price, the buyer has the burden of establishing that the amount is unreasonable to invalidate the liquidated damages provision. If the amount paid is greater than three percent, the seller has the burden of establishing that the amount was reasonable [Civ. Code § 1675(c), (d); Allen v. Smith (2002) 94 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1278-1279, 114 Cal.Rptr.2d 898].

The reasonableness of the amount actually paid as liquidated damages must be determined by (1) the circumstances at the time the agreement was executed and (2) the price and other terms and circumstances of any subsequent sale or sale agreement made within six months of the buyer's default [Civ. Code § 1675(e)].

For the initial sale of newly constructed attached condominium units, as defined in Civ. Code § 783, that involves the sale of an attached residential condominium unit located within a structure of 10 or more residential condominium units and the amount actually paid to the seller pursuant to the liquidated damages provision exceeds 3 percent of the purchase price, both of the following must occur in the event of a buyer's default [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(1)]:

- The seller must perform an accounting of its costs and revenues related to and fairly allocable to the construction and sale of the residential unit within 60 calendar days after the final close of escrow of the sale of the unit within the structure; and
- The accounting must include any and all costs and revenues related to the construction and sale of the residential property and any delay caused by buyer's default. The seller must make reasonable efforts to mitigate any damages arising from the default. In addition, the seller must refund to the buyer any amounts previously retained as liquidated damages in excess of the greater of either (1) 3 percent of the originally agreed-upon purchase price of the residential property or (2) the amount of the seller's losses resulting from the buyer's default, as calculated by the accounting.

The refund referred to above must be sent to the buyer's last known address within 90 days after the final close of escrow of the sale or lease of all the residential condominium units within the structure [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(2)]. If the amount retained by the seller after the accounting does not exceed 3 percent of the purchase price, the amount is valid unless the buyer establishes that the amount is unreasonable as liquidated damages [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(3); see Civ. Code § 1675(e)].

With regard to newly constructed attached condominium units to which these provision apply, the seller does not have the burden of establishing that an amount paid as liquidated damages that exceeded 3 percent was reasonable [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(4); see Civ. Code § 1675(d)].

If a "new qualified buyer" has entered into the contract to purchase the condominium unit, the seller must perform the accounting referred to above within 60 calendar days after a new qualified buyer has entered into a contract to purchase [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(5)]. A "new qualified buyer" is a buyer that (1) has been issued a loan commitment that satisfies the purchase agreement loan contingency requirement by an institutional lender to obtain a loan for an amount equal to the purchase price less any down payment possessed by the buyer, and (2) has contracted to pay a purchase price that is greater than or equal to the purchase price to be paid by the original buyer [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(7)].

If more than one payment made by the buyer is to be valid as liquidated damages, the amount of all payments after the first payment must satisfy the burden of proof and reasonableness standards set forth above, and a separate liquidated damages provision satisfying the above described requirements for initialing and bold or red type must exist [Civ. Code § 1678].

MB 7500A.76 Measure of Broker's Damages for Failure to Be Paid Commission

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If, under the court's instructions, you find that Plaintiff broker is entitled to a verdict against Defendant for breach of the agreement to pay a commission, then you must award damages to Plaintiff arising from the breach.

The amount of the award must include both of the following:

- 1. The agreed amount of commission, less any commission actually paid to Plaintiff; and
- 2. The amount of any other foreseeable damages, if any.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3300; Dixon v. Malloy (1945) 70 Cal.App.2d 322, 329, 160 P.2d 896 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in an action against a principal to recover a broker's commission. The instruction should be used with the general damages instructions in Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions.

[3] Comment

An action for a broker's commission is an action for breach of contract [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal.3d 963, 969, 115 Cal.Rptr. 31], and therefore the damages are measured by the general breach of contract measure of damages set forth in Civ. Code § 3300, which include the amount of the unpaid commission [Dixon v. Malloy (1945) 70 Cal.App.2d 322, 329, 160 P.2d 896].

[3] Comment[a] Measure of Damages

As a fiduciary, a broker is liable to his or her client for all losses caused by the breach of fiduciary duty [Civ. Code § 3333; Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal.3d 278, 283-284, 137 Cal.Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316 ; Pepitone v. Russo (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 685, 688-690, 134 Cal.Rptr. 709]. These damages include all of the following:

- Any commission paid by the client to the broker [Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 579, 582-583, 163 Cal.Rptr. 764];
- Secret profits earned by the broker in excess of the agreement with the client [St. James Armenian Church of Los Angeles v. Kurkjian (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 547, 553, 121 Cal.Rptr. 214];
- Lost profits caused by the fraud [Jolton v. Minster Graf & Co. (1942) 53 Cal.App.2d 516, 521-522, 128 P.2d 101]; and
- The difference between the benefit to the client had the broker performed faithfully and what the client actually received [Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 229, 239, 1 Cal.Rptr.3d 616 ; Pepitone v. Russo (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 685, 688-690, 134 Cal.Rptr. 709].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions for actions involving the acquisition of title to real property or the acquisition of specified interests in real property. The chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes an instruction on the definition of title to property [see MB 7600A.01].
- Part B includes instructions on acquiring title by deeds [see MB 7600A.10 -MB 7600A.19].
- Part C includes instructions on adverse possession [see MB 7600A.30 -MB 7600A.38].
- Part D includes instructions on common law dedication [see MB 7600A.50 -MB 7600A.56].

The instructions in this chapter will most commonly be used in a quiet title action or in cases in which a deed to real property has been executed but the effectiveness of its delivery or acceptance has been questioned, requiring instructions on delivery and acceptance of deeds and instructions on adverse possession under color of title.

For related instructions on acquiring title to real property by purchase and sale, see Ch. 75A, Matthew Bender Real Property Sales Instructions. For instructions on acquiring the right to use land without acquiring title and ownership, see Ch. 77A, Matthew Bender Easement Instructions.

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART A. INTRODUCTION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.01

MB 7600A.01 Introductory Instruction: Definition of Title to Property[1] Instruction Introductory Instruction: Definition of Title to Property[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The word "title" has a variety of meanings. It sometimes means property or ownership in the sense that the owner of title has a right to possession or use of land. A common meaning of title is complete ownership, meaning that the owner of title to land possesses all of the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that an owner may have with regard to land. However, the title to real property may also be limited. For example:

1. Title may be shared with one or more persons;
2. The right to the real property's enjoyment may be deferred or limited in time;
3. The right to the real property's use may be restricted; or
4. The duration of the right to the real property's use may be limited in time.

In this case, [Plaintiff/Defendant] claims to have acquired title to _____ [describe property and claimed interest, e.g., fee estate or life estate or easement] by virtue of _____ [describe method, e.g., adverse possession or dedication or transfer by deed].

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 669, 671, 678-682, 1000 ; Smith v. Bank of America etc. Assn. (1936) 14 Cal.App.2d 78, 85-86, 57 P.2d 1363 ; Adams v. Hopkins (1904) 144 Cal. 19, 33, 77 P. 712 ; Black's Law Dictionary (7th ed. 1999) at 1493-1494.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introduction to actions that involve disputes over the title to real property, or the title to an interest in real property, and the means by which title to real property may be acquired. The instruction should be used as an introduction to instructions on deeds, adverse possession, and dedication.

[3] Comment

[a] Title Defined

Title has been defined as "the means whereby the owner of lands hath the just possession of his property" [Adams v. Hopkins (1904) 144 Cal. 19, 33, 77 P. 712 ; Arrington v. Liscom (1868) 34 Cal. 365, 385] and as "the means by which property in land is established, as in the expression chain of title" [Smith v. Bank of America etc. Assn. (1936) 14 Cal.App.2d 78, 85, 57 P.2d 1363]. A common meaning of the word "title" is complete ownership, in the sense of all the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities an owner may have with regard to real property [Smith v. Bank of America etc. Assn. (1936) 14 Cal.App.2d 78, 85, 57 P.2d 1363].

All property has an owner [Civ. Code § 669], and any person may own property in California [Civ. Code § 671]. Ownership or title to property is either absolute or qualified [Civ. Code § 678]. The ownership of property is absolute when a single person has the absolute dominion over it and may use it or dispose of it according to his or her pleasure, subject only to general laws [Civ. Code § 679]. The ownership of property is qualified when it is shared with one or more persons, when the time of enjoyment is deferred or limited, or when the use of the property is restricted [Civ. Code § 680]. The ownership of property by a single person is designated as a sole or several ownership [Civ. Code § 681], whereas the ownership of property by several persons may be ownership by joint interests, partnership interests, interests in common, or community interest of husband and wife [Civ. Code § 682].

[b] Methods of Acquiring Title

Civ. Code § 1000 provides that property is acquired by (1) occupancy, (2) accession, (3) transfer, (4) will, or (5) succession. The specific methods by which title to real property may be acquired are public grant, private grant, involuntary alienation (which includes execution sales and other transfers by operation of law under judicial decree or statute), descent or succession, devise (i.e., will), adverse possession, escheat, dedication, eminent domain, estoppel, accretion, and abandonment or forfeiture [see generally California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 80, Deeds and Transfer of Title (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Quiet Title Actions

Actions to quiet title are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 760.010 et seq. Under these provisions, the plaintiff must allege the basis of the title to be quieted in a verified complaint and file a lis pendens [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 761.020, 761.010(b)].

In a quiet title action the plaintiff must prevail on the strength of his or her own title and not on the weakness of the defendant's title [Millyard v. Faus (1968) 268 Cal.App.2d 76, 82, 73 Cal.Rptr. 697]. A plaintiff can prove his or her claim to title to property by relying on paper title alone [Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal.2d 702, 706, 336 P.2d 525] or on possession of the property [Davis v. Crump (1912) 162 Cal. 513, 519, 123 P. 294]. A plaintiff who relies on paper title alone (i.e., who is not in possession) must, when the defendant also asserts paper title, trace title back to one of the following four sources [Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal.2d 702, 706, 336 P.2d 525]:

- The government;
- A grantor in possession;

- A grantor in common to the plaintiff or defendant; or
- A grantor who had obtained a judgment quieting title.

Title to property can also be proven by possession of the property [Davis v. Crump (1912) 162 Cal. 513, 519, 123 P. 294]. The presumption of ownership by possession [Evid. Code §§ 637-638 ; Civ. Code §§ 1006-1007] may be rebutted [Evid. Code § 630 ; see Bond v. Aickley (1919) 168 Cal. 161, 163-164, 141 P. 1188 ; see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 370, Quieting Title and Determining Adverse Claims (Matthew Bender)].

Once the plaintiff has established a prima facie case, the defendant must prove that he or she is a bona fide purchaser of the property or otherwise has an adverse claim [Crook v. Forsyth (1866) 30 Cal. 662, 663 ; Oaks v. Renshaw (1946) 74 Cal.App.2d 144, 149, 168 P.2d 199 ; President & Presiding Elder v. Goodwin (1931) 119 Cal.App. 37, 39, 5 P.2d 973]. If the defendant establishes a claim of right by introducing evidence to show that his or her title predates that of the plaintiff, the burden of proof shifts back to the plaintiff [Douglass v. Willard (1900) 129 Cal. 38, 39-40, 61 P. 572 (deed); Cuddy v. O'Brien (1921) 55 Cal.App. 469, 472, 204 P. 37]. Although the plaintiff's burden of proof in quiet title actions is the "clear and convincing" standard pursuant to Evid. Code § 662 [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201], when the dispute involves the beneficial, rather than legal, title, the "preponderance of evidence" standard is applicable when the legal title itself is in dispute [Murray v. Murray (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1067-1068, 31 Cal Rptr. 2d 855 (jury was properly instructed on burden of proof in case involving challenge to legal title); see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART B. DEEDS

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.10

MB 7600A.10 Deeds: Introductory Instruction

[1] Instruction Deeds: Introductory Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A written transfer of title to real property is called a "grant" or a "conveyance." The party who transfers the title is called the "grantor," and the party who receives the title is the "grantee." The written instrument that conveys or transfers the title to real property is called a "deed." A deed is an executed conveyance that acts as a present transfer of title to real property. A deed can also be called an instrument of conveyance.

To be effective, a deed must satisfy all of the following requirements:

1. The deed must be in writing;
2. The deed must be signed by the grantor;
3. The grantor must have the mental capacity to convey;
4. The grantee must be another person or entity in existence and capable of taking and holding title to real property;
5. The deed must be delivered to the grantee; and
6. The deed must be accepted by the grantee.

These are the minimum requirements for a valid conveyance of title to real property by deed. If they are all present, the deed is effective to transfer the title to the real property to the grantee.

I will now instruct you in more detail on the law that governs the issues that you must decide in this case.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1039, 1053, 1054, 1091 ; Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 477, 132 P.2d 801 ; Estate of Stephens (2002) 28 Cal.4th 665, 671-672, 122 Cal.Rptr.2d 358, 49 P.3d 1093 ; Peterson v. Ellebrecht (1962) 205 Cal.App.2d 718, 721, 23 Cal.Rptr. 349 ; Burns v. Grable (1956) 138 Cal.App.2d 280, 286, 291 P.2d 969

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the requirements for a valid transfer of title by deed when the validity of the transfer is at issue. The jury should be instructed on only those requirements that are at issue. The most common issue in litigation over deeds is whether there has been a valid and effective delivery of the deed, but acceptance or capacity to convey may also be at issue. Because the sufficiency of a writing to constitute an instrument of conveyance and the capacity of a grantee to accept a conveyance are not commonly questions of fact for a jury, they are excluded from this instruction and are excluded from the scope of this part on deeds.

If capacity to convey is at issue, this instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7600A.11. If delivery is at issue, this instruction should be used with one or more of the instructions in MB 7600A.12-MB 7600A.18. If acceptance is at issue, this instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7600A.19.

[3] Comment

"Transfer" is an act of the parties, or of the law, that conveys title to real property from one living person to another [Civ. Code § 1039]. Except for estates at will and estates that do not exceed one year, estates in real property may be transferred only by operation of law or by an instrument in writing that is signed by the transferring party or that party's agent [Civ. Code § 1091]. The required writing ordinarily takes the form of a deed [see Civ. Code § 1092 (statutory sample form for grant deed); see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 80, Deeds and Transfer of Title (Matthew Bender)]. A "deed" is a written instrument conveying title to real property [Estate of Stephens (2002) 28 Cal.4th 665, 671-672, 122 Cal.Rptr.2d 358, 49 P.3d 1093 ; Brusseau v. Hill (1927) 201 Cal. 225, 228, 256 P. 419]. A deed can also be referred to as a grant or a conveyance [Civ. Code § 1053]. A transfer of title by deed takes effect, and the interest to be transferred is vested, only on the delivery of the deed by the grantor to the grantee [Civ. Code § 1054]. For a delivery of a deed to be effective, the deed must be accepted by the grantee [Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 418, 426, 203 P.2d 72 ; see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 80, Deeds and Transfer of Title, §§ 80.40, 80.138 (Matthew Bender); see also MB 7600A.19]. Whether the deed was delivered is generally a question of fact to be determined from all the surrounding circumstances [Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 477, 132 P.2d 801]. The rules on delivery are discussed in more detail in MB 7600A.12 -MB 7600A.18.

If a person is of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, a conveyance made by that person before a judicial determination of incapacity is subject to rescission [Civ. Code § 39 ; see Ch. 3G, Matthew Bender Rescission of Contract Instructions, MB 300G.69, for discussion of rescission of contracts under Civ. Code § 39]. The existence of the capacity to convey is a question of fact for the trier of fact [Peterson v. Ellebrecht (1962) 205 Cal.App.2d 718, 721, 23 Cal.Rptr. 349]. For further discussion on capacity to convey, see MB 7600A.11.

A deed will not effect a conveyance unless the grantee is a person, either natural or artificial, capable of taking and holding the property [Burns v. Grable (1956) 138 Cal.App.2d 280, 286, 291 P.2d 969].

PART B. DEEDS

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.11

MB 7600A.11 Deeds: Capacity to Convey

[1] Instruction Deeds: Capacity to Convey

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

_____ [Name of party alleging incapacity] claims that the deed conveying _____ [specify property] from _____ [grantor] to _____ [grantee] is invalid because _____ [grantor] was not of sound mind when [he/she] made and delivered the deed.
_____ [Name of party alleging incapacity] has the burden of proving this claim.

A deed made and delivered by a person who is not of sound mind is not valid.

The test for determining if _____ [grantor] was of sound mind and able to convey real property by deed is whether the _____ [grantor]'s mind and memory was sufficiently sound to enable [him/her] to know and understand the business in which [he/she] was engaged at the time that [he/she] executed the deed.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

A person is not incompetent to execute a deed merely because [he/she] is old, sick, or impaired of body. It is the state of the mind, not the body, that determines whether a person is capable of conveying property.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The test for determining if a person is of a sound mind is whether, at the time [he/she] executed and delivered the deed, [he/she] had sufficient mental capacity to be able to understand the nature of [his/her] act and to fairly and rationally consider all of the following:

- 1. The character and extent of [his/her] property;
- 2. The people to whom [he/she] is bound by blood or by friendship; and
- 3. The manner and the proportions in which [he/she] wants the property to go.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

Although _____ [name of party alleging incapacity] must prove that _____ [grantor] was of unsound mind at the very time the deed was executed and delivered, evidence of mental unsoundness before or after this time must be considered in determining the grantor's mental condition at the time of execution and delivery.

Authorities: Marback v. Marback (1965) 235 Cal.App.2d 354, 356-357, 45 Cal.Rptr. 341 ; Allen v. Samuels (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 710, 715, 22 Cal.Rptr. 528 ; Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819 ; Brunoni v. Brunoni (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 215, 218, 208 P.2d 1028 ; Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 564-566, 177 P.2d 939 ; Clark v. Abrams (1942) 49 Cal.App.2d 497, 499, 121 P.2d 750 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the mental capacity of the grantor to convey real property is at issue. This instruction should be accompanied by the introductory instruction in MB 7600A.01.

The first option should be used if the grantor is old, ill, handicapped, or otherwise infirm. The second option should be used when the circumstances of the conveyance raise issues of testamentary intent--as when the deed was executed shortly before the grantor's death.

This instruction must be used with an instruction on preponderance of the evidence [see, e.g., Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")].

[3] Comment

The grantor must have the capacity to convey title at the time the deed is executed [Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 564, 177 P.2d 939] and at the time it is delivered [Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1933 (execution of instrument includes its delivery)]. The existence of capacity is a question of fact [Marback v. Marback (1965) 235 Cal.App.2d 354, 356-357, 45 Cal.Rptr. 341] to be determined from the particular circumstances of each case [Allen v. Samuels (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 710, 715, 22 Cal.Rptr. 528 ; Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 564, 177 P.2d 939]. The party alleging incapacity has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the incapacity existed when the deed was executed and delivered [Clark v. Abrams (1942) 49 Cal.App.2d 497, 499, 121 P.2d 750].

The rules governing capacity to execute and deliver a deed are in general the same as those governing testamentary capacity [Blevin v. Mayfield (1961) 189 Cal.App.2d 649, 652, 11 Cal.Rptr. 882 ; Brunoni v. Brunoni (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 215, 218, 208 P.2d 1028 ; Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 564, 177 P.2d 939]. Thus, a grantor has sufficient capacity to convey if the grantor is able to understand the nature of his or her act and is capable of considering fairly and rationally (1) the character and extent of his or her property, (2) the persons to whom he or she is bound by blood or friendship, and (3) the persons to whom and the manner and proportions in which he or she wants the property to go [Marback v. Marback (1965) 235 Cal.App.2d 354, 356, 45 Cal.Rptr. 341 ; Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 565-566, 177 P.2d 939]. Neither old age nor physical incapacity renders a person incompetent to execute a deed, so long as sufficient intelligence remains [Blevin v. Mayfield (1961) 189 Cal.App.2d 649, 652, 11 Cal.Rptr. 882 ; Brunoni v. Brunoni (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 215, 218, 208 P.2d 1028 ; Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 564, 177 P.2d 939]. The mind and memory of the grantor must be sound enough to enable the grantor to know and understand the business in which he or she was engaged when he or she executed the deed [Hughes v. Grandy (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 555, 564, 177 P.2d 939].

MB 7600A.12 Delivery of Deeds: Introductory Instruction

[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Introductory Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A valid delivery requires a mutual intention on the part of the parties, particularly on the part of the grantor, to pass title to the property immediately. In other words, there is a valid delivery only if the grantor intends for the instrument to be presently operative as a deed, that is, there must be the intent on the part of the grantor to divest [himself/herself] presently of the title to the real property.

A valid delivery requires a physical delivery of the deed with the intent to transfer title to the property at that time. This means that _____ [grantor] must have intended for the delivery of the deed to operate as a present transfer of the title to _____ [specify real property at issue], or there was no delivery.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1054, 1056 ; Hotaling v. Hotaling (1924) 193 Cal. 368, 382, 224 P. 455 ; Gonzales v. Gonzales (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d 428, 435, 73 Cal.Rptr. 83 ; Danenberg v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129, 330 P.2d 250 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introductory instruction with the instructions following in MB 7600A.13-MB 7600A.18 in actions that involve questions about the grantor's intentions regarding delivery of a deed. The grantor's intent usually becomes an issue when this intent is obscured by the way that the grantor dealt with the deed or with the real property subject to the deed. For example, the issue may arise when the grantor fails to manually transfer the executed deed to the grantee or places the deed in an extended escrow for later delivery. The issue might also arise if the deed is not recorded as a public document or the grantor retains physical possession of the real property. This instruction should be supplemented with the instructions in MB 7600A.13-MB 7600A.18, as applicable.

If there was no physical delivery of the deed to the grantee, but a constructive delivery is alleged, this instruction must be modified accordingly [see [3][b], below, for discussion of constructive delivery].

[3] Comment

[a] Grantor's Intent to Deliver; Question of Fact

A deed takes effect only when it is delivered by the grantor [Civ. Code § 1054 ; Huth v. Katz (1947) 30 Cal.2d 605, 606-608, 185 P.2d 521 ; Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal.App.2d 485, 506, 286 P.2d 399 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1933 (execution of instrument includes its delivery)]. Delivery of a deed depends on the intention of the parties that title to the real property must pass irrevocably [Hotaling v. Hotaling (1924) 193 Cal. 368, 381-383, 224 P. 455 ; Danenberg v. O'Connor (1961) 195 Cal.App.2d 194, 200, 15 Cal.Rptr. 667]. In addition to physical delivery [see [b], below], there must be a mutual intention on the part of the parties, particularly the grantor, to pass title to the property immediately [Gonzales v. Gonzales (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d 428, 435, 73 Cal.Rptr. 83 ; Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129, 330 P.2d 250] and unconditionally [Civ. Code § 1059]. The instrument must be intended to be presently operative as a deed. That is, the grantor must intend to divest himself or herself presently of the title [Gonzales v. Gonzales (1968) 267 Cal.App.2d 428, 435, 73 Cal.Rptr. 83 ; Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129, 330 P.2d 250].

Whether the grantor has the necessary intent is generally a question of fact to be determined by the trial court or the jury from all the circumstances surrounding the transaction [Williams v. Kidd (1915) 170 Cal. 631, 639, 151 P. 1 ; Meyer v. Wall (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 24, 27, 75 Cal.Rptr. 236 ; Mecchi v. Picchi (1966) 245 Cal.App.2d 470, 482, 54 Cal.Rptr. 1 ; Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819].

[b] Actual or Constructive Delivery

Even when the deed is not actually delivered into the grantee's possession, the deed is deemed to be constructively delivered in either of the following circumstances [Civ. Code § 1059]:

- There is an agreement between the parties that the deed is understood to be delivered and that the grantee is entitled to its possession; or
- The deed is delivered to a stranger for the grantee's benefit, and the grantee's assent is shown or may be presumed.

Under these circumstances there may be a legal "delivery," even though the deed has not actually been given to the grantee, if the grantor has the intent required for a delivery [see, e.g., Osborn v. Osborn (1954) 42 Cal.2d 358, 363, 365-367, 267 P.2d 333 (deposit of deed with trustee); see [a], above, for discussion of intent required for delivery].

Not only is an actual, physical delivery of the deed sometimes unnecessary, it is not conclusive evidence of the intent required for delivery [Huth v. Katz (1947) 30 Cal.2d 605, 606-609, 184 P.2d 521 ; Meyer v. Wall (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 24, 28, 75 Cal.Rptr. 236], although the grantee's possession of the deed is some evidence of its delivery [see MB 7600A.15 for discussion of possession of deed by grantee as evidence of delivery].

[c] Incapacity

A person who is incapable of entertaining the necessary intent cannot deliver a deed [Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819 ; Piercy v. Piercy (1912) 18 Cal.App. 751, 759, 124 P. 561]. The rules governing capacity to execute a deed are in general the same as those governing capacity to execute a will [Hughes v. Grandy

[d] Mistake

If a deed is executed and delivered but the grantor mistakenly believes that an additional act is required to transfer title to the real property, no delivery will be found until the subsequent act is performed [Kimbrow v. Kimbro (1926) 199 Cal. 344, 350-351, 249 P. 180 (grantor believed acknowledgment required); Hotaling v. Hotaling (1924) 193 Cal. 368, 383-384, 224 P. 455 (both parties believed that deed not effective until recorded)]. In these cases, since the parties understood that the deed could have no effect until the future act was performed, there was no intent that the conveyance be immediately operative and therefore there was no delivery [Kimbrow v. Kimbro (1926) 199 Cal. 344, 350-351, 249 P. 180 ; Hotaling v. Hotaling (1924) 193 Cal. 368, 383-384, 224 P. 455].

PART B. DEEDS

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.13

MB 7600A.13 Delivery of Deeds: Presumptions and Inferences

[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Presumptions and Inferences

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In determining whether or not _____ [grantor] had the intent that is required for a valid delivery of a deed, certain presumptions and inferences may arise either in favor of or against the delivery of the deed's validity.

A presumption is an assumption of fact that the law requires to be made from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action. An inference, on the other hand, is a deduction of fact that may logically or reasonably be drawn from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action.

However, all of the presumptions and inferences that I will explain to you may be rebutted by evidence of the grantor's actual intent. The grantor's declarations and acts before and after the alleged delivery, and the grantee's declarations and acts afterwards, may be considered in determining the grantor's intent.

Authorities: Evid. Code § 600 ; Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812-813, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651 ; Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129-130, 330 P.2d 250 ; Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 354, 360-361, 250 P.2d 333 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to introduce the instructions in MB 7600A.14-MB 7600A.17 on the various presumptions and inferences that may arise with regard to the issue of delivery. These include the presumptions and inferences raised by the recording of the deed [see MB 7600A.17] and the possession of the deed by the grantor [see MB 7600A.16], the grantee [see MB 7600A.15], or a third party.

[3] Comment

Various presumptions and inferences may arise with regard to the issue of delivery [see MB 7600A.14 -MB 7600A.17]. For example, possession of a deed by the grantee raises an inference that the deed was duly delivered [Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812-813, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651 ; Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 354, 360-361, 250 P.2d 333]. A prima facie case of valid delivery may be established by evidence that the grantor signed the deed and manually handed it to the grantee, that the deed was acknowledged and recorded, and that the deed was in the grantee's possession [Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129-130, 330 P.2d 250]. However, this prima facie case of delivery can be rebutted through the introduction of other evidence, such as testimony that at the date of the alleged delivery the grantor did not intend the deed to be operative as a deed and to divest the grantor presently of his or her title [Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129-130, 330 P.2d 250].

Inferences and presumptions regarding the delivery of a deed or instrument of conveyance are rebuttable and may be overcome by contrary evidence [see, e.g., Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129-131, 330 P.2d 250 (presumptions and inferences raised by signing of deed, manual delivery to grantee, acknowledgment and recording of deed, and possession by grantee, overcome by testimony as to grantor's intent); see also Evid. Code § 601 (presumption is either conclusive or rebuttable)]. The burden of proof is on the party against whom the inference or presumption operates to present persuasive evidence to the contrary [Evid. Code § 606].

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.14

MB 7600A.14 Delivery of Deeds: Date of Delivery

[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Date of Delivery

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A duly signed and delivered deed is presumed to have been delivered on the date that is on the deed.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1055 ; Code Civ. Proc. § 1933 ; Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 475-476, 132 P.2d 801 ; Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651 ; Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 354, 360-362, 250 P. 333 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the date of delivery is at issue.

[3] Comment

The presumption stated in this instruction applies only to the time of delivery, and not to the issue of whether there was a delivery [Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651]. Once delivery in fact is established, a presumption attaches that the deed was delivered on the date it bears [Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 475-476, 132 P.2d 801 ; Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651].

MB 7600A.15 Delivery of Deeds: Physical Possession of Instrument by Grantee; Inference of Delivery

[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Physical Possession of Instrument by Grantee; Inference of Delivery

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Possession of the deed by the grantee is some evidence of its delivery and, in the absence of any contradictory evidence, is sufficient evidence to establish delivery.

Authorities: Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 354, 360-361, 250 P.2d 333 ; Ephraim v. Oakland Title etc. Co. (1921) 54 Cal.App. 379, 383, 201 P. 946 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the introductory instruction on delivery in MB 7600A.12 and the introductory instruction on inferences and presumptions in MB 7600A.13. The instruction will generally be offered by a grantee in possession of a deed in support of an inference of delivery by virtue of possession.

[3] Comment

The grantee's possession of a duly executed deed gives rise to an inference that the instrument was duly delivered, but this inference can be rebutted by evidence that the grantee came into possession of the deed without the grantor's intent to deliver it [Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 477, 132 P.2d 801 ; Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812-813, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651 ; Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 354, 360-361, 250 P.2d 333]. Possession of the deed by the grantee is sufficient to establish delivery if there is no evidence to the contrary [Ephraim v. Oakland Title etc. Co. (1921) 54 Cal.App. 379, 383, 201 P. 946]. It is therefore incumbent on the party disputing delivery to produce evidence that there has been no delivery [Rich v. Ervin (1948) 86 Cal.App.2d 386, 394, 194 P.2d 809].

Although there is a statutory presumption as to the date of delivery of an instrument [see Civ. Code § 1055 ; see also

MB 7600A.14], there is only a nonstatutory inference as to the fact of the instrument's delivery when it is in the grantee's possession [Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 475-477, 132 P.2d 801 ; Blackburn v. Drake (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 806, 812-813, 27 Cal.Rptr. 651]. The inference of delivery is rebuttable, and, when contrary evidence is offered, delivery is a question of fact for the trial court or jury to determine [Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819 ; Hennelly v. Bank of America (1951) 102 Cal.App.2d 754, 758, 228 P.2d 79].

PART B. DEEDS

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.16

MB 7600A.16 Delivery of Deeds: Possession by Grantor; Inference of Nondelivery

[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Possession by Grantor; Inference of Nondelivery

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Possession of the deed by the grantor raises an inference that the deed has not been delivered to the grantee. If there is no contradictory evidence, this inference is sufficient to establish lack of delivery.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

This inference can be rebutted by evidence that the deed was actually delivered to the grantee and that the grantor's possession of the deed was merely for safekeeping or a similar purpose.

Authorities: Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 477-478, 132 P.2d 801 ; Condencia v. Nelson (1960) 187 Cal.App.2d 300, 303, 9 Cal.Rptr. 759 ; Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the introductory instruction on delivery in MB 7600A.12 and the introductory instruction on inferences and presumptions in MB 7600A.13. The instruction will generally be offered by the grantor seeking to prove nondelivery based on the grantor's possession of the deed. The grantee may wish to modify the instruction by adding the optional clause to inform the jury that the inference may be rebutted by evidence of actual delivery with intent to pass title.

[3] Comment

When a deed or conveyance is in the grantor's possession, an inference arises that the deed or conveyance has not been delivered. This evidence is sufficient to make out a case of nondelivery, unless the grantee proves that there was an actual delivery and that the grantor's possession was merely for safekeeping or some similar purpose [Miller v. Jansen (1943) 21 Cal.2d 473, 477-478, 132 P.2d 801 ; Condencia v. Nelson (1960) 187 Cal.App.2d 300, 303, 9 Cal.Rptr. 759 ; Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819]. When evidence is offered to rebut this inference, the issue of delivery is a question of fact for the trial court or the jury to determine [Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 468, 472, 6 Cal.Rptr. 819].

MB 7600A.17 Delivery of Deeds: Inference of Delivery by Execution and Recording of Deed

[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Inference of Delivery by Execution and Recording of Deed

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The deed to _____ [describe subject property] was acknowledged and recorded. When a deed is acknowledged and recorded, the deed is presumed to be genuine, and it is presumed that the deed was properly executed and delivered.

Authority: Thomas v. Peterson (1931) 213 Cal. 672, 674, 3 P.2d 306 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by the grantee to establish delivery when the deed was acknowledged by the grantor and recorded with the County Recorder. The instruction should be used with the introductory instruction on delivery in MB 7600A.12 and the introductory instruction on inferences and presumptions in MB 7600A.13.

In offering this instruction, counsel should be aware that the court decision on which it is based was itself based on former Code Civ. Proc. § 1951, repealed in 1965 [see Thomas v. Peterson (1931) 213 Cal. 672, 674, 3 P.2d 306 ; see also Stats. 1965, ch. 299].

[3] Comment

When a deed is acknowledged and recorded, its genuineness and due execution and delivery are presumed [Thomas v. Peterson (1931) 213 Cal. 672, 674, 3 P.2d 306]. If the deed is recorded but not acknowledged, the recording raises a presumption of delivery that will support a judgment in the absence of evidence to the contrary [Blevin v. Mayfield (1961) 189 Cal.App.2d 649, 651, 11 Cal.Rptr. 882]. However, even though a deed is recorded, evidence may be adduced to rebut the presumption and show that in fact the deed was not "delivered" to the grantee by the grantor [

Priest v. Bell (1954) 123 Cal.App.2d 528, 532, 267 P.2d 49 ; Rousseau v. Hurtado (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 705, 716-717, 265 P.2d 580].

MB 7600A.18 Delivery of Deeds: Conditional Delivery When Grantor's Death a Condition[1] Instruction Delivery of Deeds: Conditional Delivery When Grantor's Death a Condition[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Even if the deed was manually delivered to _____ [grantee], if you find that _____ [grantor] intended that the deed was to become operative only on [his/her/its] death, then the deed is testamentary in character and it is void as a deed and it must be considered under the law of wills.

Authorities: Coffey v. Cooper (1960) 185 Cal.App.2d 464, 467, 8 Cal.Rptr. 358 ; Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129, 330 P.2d 250 ; Kelly v. Bank of America (1952) 112 Cal.App.2d 388, 396, 246 P.2d 92 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the party challenging the deed claims that the conveyance was conditioned on the grantor's death. The instruction may be supplemented with instructions on the requirements for execution of a will. If the grantee claims that the grantor intended to convey a present fee estate to the grantee while retaining a life estate in the property, then this instruction may also be supplemented with an instruction calling for the jury to determine whether or not this was indeed the grantor's intention. This instruction should be used with the introductory instruction in MB 7600A.12.

[3] Comment

A testamentary transfer of real property can be made only by a document that satisfies all of the requirements of a will [Coffey v. Cooper (1960) 185 Cal.App.2d 464, 467, 8 Cal.Rptr. 358 ; Kelly v. Bank of America (1952) 112 Cal.App.2d 388, 396, 246 P.2d 92]. A deed is valid and effective only if the grantor intends for the deed to operate as a present and immediate transfer to the grantee [Hotaling v. Hotaling (1924) 193 Cal. 368, 381-383, 224 P. 455]. A deed that only becomes operative on the grantor's death, and that is meanwhile subject to the grantor's power to control or recall the conveyance, is not a conveyance of a present and immediate interest in property, and therefore there is no delivery [Stone v. Daily (1919) 181 Cal. 571, 575, 185 P. 665 ; Fisher v. Oliver (1917) 174 Cal. 781, 784-787, 164 P. 800 ; Kelly v. Bank of America (1952) 112 Cal.App.2d 388, 396, 246 P.2d 92]. A conveyance that is testamentary in character is void as a deed [Coffey v. Cooper (1960) 185 Cal.App.2d 464, 467, 8 Cal.Rptr. 358 ; Henneberry v. Henneberry (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 125, 129, 330 P.2d 250].

An ineffective conditional delivery should be distinguished from a present delivery with a life estate retained by the grantor [see Osborn v. Osborn (1954) 42 Cal.2d 358, 362-363, 267 P.2d 333 (collecting cases)]. The deposit in escrow or with a third party of a deed granting an estate in fee simple, with instructions that the deed be transmitted to the grantee on the grantor's death, conveys a remainder interest in fee simple to the grantee with the life estate reserved in the grantor, so long as the grantor intended the deposit to be irrevocable [Osborn v. Osborn (1954) 42 Cal.2d 358, 362-363, 267 P.2d 333]. The result is the same as if the grantor delivered to the grantee a deed reserving a life estate and granting a remainder in fee [Osborn v. Osborn (1954) 42 Cal.2d 358, 362-363, 267 P.2d 333].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART B. DEEDS

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.19

MB 7600A.19 Acceptance of Deeds[1] Instruction Acceptance of Deeds[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

For delivery of a deed to be complete, and the deed to be valid and effective, the delivery must be accepted by the grantee. Acceptance is necessary to complete delivery, because the law does not force a person to take title to real property against his or her will.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

In certain circumstances, acceptance will be presumed. Acceptance is presumed if _____ [insert relevant presumption (See [3], below), e.g., the deed is in the grantee's possession or the deed was beneficial to the grantee and the grantee lacks the mental capacity for acceptance]. _____ [If presumption is rebuttable, add: This presumption is rebuttable. That is, the presumption may be rebutted by evidence that the grantee did not accept the deed. Or, if presumption is conclusive, add: This presumption is conclusive. If you find that the deed was beneficial to the grantee and that the grantee lacked the mental capacity to accept the deed, then you must find that the deed was accepted].

Authorities: Green v. Skinner (1921) 185 Cal. 435, 439-440, 197 P. 60 ; Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 418, 426, 203 P.2d 72 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions on delivery of deeds [see MB 7600A.12 -MB 7600A.18] to explain the need for acceptance to complete delivery. The optional paragraph should be used to supplement this instruction with an instruction on any applicable presumptions or inferences concerning acceptance [see [3], below].

[3] Comment

A deed cannot take effect until the deed, or the gift made by the deed, is accepted by the grantee [Green v. Skinner (1921) 185 Cal. 435, 438-439, 197 P. 60]. An effective delivery requires not only that the deed must be meant by its maker to take immediate effect [see MB 7600A.12], it also requires the deed to be presumably or in fact accepted by the grantee [Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 418, 426, 203 P.2d 72]. Delivery and acceptance are of necessity simultaneous and correlative acts. The law will not force a person to take title to real property against his or her will. The assent of the grantee is therefore necessary to make a delivery effective and a deed operative [Danenbergh v. O'Connor (1961) 195 Cal.App.2d 194, 202-203, 15 Cal.Rptr. 667 ; Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 418, 426, 203 P.2d 72].

Acceptance is presumed in various situations. Acceptance is presumed when the deed has been recorded [Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 418, 426, 203 P.2d 72] and when the deed is in the grantee's possession [California Trust Co. v. Hughes (1952) 111 Cal.App.2d 717, 721, 245 P.2d 374 ; Hodoian v. Garabedian (1926) 79 Cal.App. 762, 769-770, 251 P. 227]. These presumptions are rebuttable [California Trust Co. v. Hughes (1952) 111 Cal.App.2d 717, 721, 245 P.2d 374 (possession of deed by grantee is prima facie evidence of acceptance); Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal.App.2d 418, 426, 203 P.2d 72 ("this presumption [from recording] is a disputable one")]. A conveyance for the benefit of a person who is incapable of accepting, such as a minor [Adams v. Adams (1952) 113 Cal.App.2d 654, 656, 248 P.2d 784] or an incompetent [Estate of Kalt (1940) 16 Cal.2d 807, 813-814, 108 P.2d 401], is conclusively presumed to be accepted [Estate of Kalt (1940) 16 Cal.2d 807, 813-814, 108 P.2d 401 ; Turner v. Turner (1916) 173 Cal. 782, 787, 161 P. 980 ; Adams v. Adams (1952) 113 Cal.App.2d 654, 656, 248 P.2d 784]. The law accepts the conveyance for the minor or incompetent if it is to his or her benefit [De Levillain v. Evans (1870) 39 Cal. 120, 123]. Acceptance has also been presumed when a grantee knew of a deed beneficial to him and did not reject it [Marshall v. Marshall (1956) 140 Cal.App.2d 475, 479, 295 P.2d 131]. Similarly, when a deed is accepted by one or more of several grantees, and the deed is beneficial to all, acceptance by the others may be presumed [Marshall v. Marshall (1956) 140 Cal.App.2d 475, 479, 295 P.2d 131].

As between the grantor and the grantee, the grantee's assent, once given, will relate back to the time that the grantor first handed the deed over to a third person to be delivered to the grantee [Green v. Skinner (1921) 185 Cal. 435, 438, 197 P. 60]. An assent after the grantor's death may therefore be effective by relation back, so that the deed will be deemed delivered in the grantor's lifetime [Green v. Skinner (1921) 185 Cal. 435, 438, 197 P. 60]. However, the grantee's assent will operate retroactively by relation back only when the rights of third persons have not intervened [Green v. Skinner (1921) 185 Cal. 435, 438, 197 P. 60].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.30

MB 7600A.30 Adverse Possession: Burden of Proof[1] Instruction Adverse Possession: Burden of Proof[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In this case, [Plaintiff/Defendant] claims to have title to _____ [describe real property] because [he/she/it] has acquired title by means of a legal doctrine known as adverse possession.

To prove that [he/she/it] has acquired title to _____ [describe real property] by adverse possession, [Plaintiff/Defendant] must prove each of the following things by clear and satisfactory evidence:

1. [Plaintiff/Defendant] has paid all taxes levied and assessed on

_____ [describe real property] during the period that [he/she/it] has occupied the property; and

2. [Plaintiff/Defendant] has occupied

_____ [describe real property] for at least five years and this occupation was:

- a. Open and notorious;
- b. Continuous;
- c. Hostile to the true owner; and

d. Under a claim of title.

If [Plaintiff/Defendant] proves all of these things, then [he/she/it] has proven title by adverse possession. The burden of proof will then shift to _____ [name], the owner of record title to _____ [describe real property], to disprove [Plaintiff/Defendant]'s title. I will now provide you with further instructions on each of the things that [Plaintiff/Defendant] must prove.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as an introductory instruction when a party in a quiet title action, or other proceeding when title and the right to possession of property are at issue, seeks to prove that title has been acquired by adverse possession. This instruction will need to be accompanied with the instructions that follow on the individual elements of adverse possession [see MB 7600A.31 -MB 7600A.38]. The instruction should be supplemented with instructions on the applicable burdens of proof [see [3][c], below], standards of proof, and presumptions and inferences.

[3] Comment[a] Definition and Elements of Adverse Possession; Exceptions

Adverse possession is a method of acquiring title to real property by possession under specified conditions for the period of a statute of limitations [Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 338, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46 ; see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender)], which in California is five years [Code Civ. Proc. § 321]. A holder of title by adverse possession is not a successor in interest of the former owner. Title by adverse possession is new, absolute fee title [Williams v. Sutton (1872) 43 Cal. 65, 73]. To acquire title by adverse possession, the claimant has the burden of proving [see [c], below] all of the following five elements [Civ. Code § 1007 ; Code Civ. Proc. § 321 ; Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal.2d 417, 421, 24 Cal.Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 ; West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal.2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219 ; California Maryland Funding, Inc. v. Lowe (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1798, 1803, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 784 ; Buic v. Buic (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1600, 1604, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 738 ; Machado v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 347, 361-362, 284 Cal.Rptr. 560 ; Sevier v. Locher (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1082, 1085, 1087, 272 Cal.Rptr. 287 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1258, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779]:

- Acts hostile to the true owner's title;
- Actual, open, and notorious occupancy of the land;
- Possession under claim of right or color of title;
- Continuous and uninterrupted possession for five years; and
- Payment of all taxes levied and assessed for the possession period.

All five of these elements must be proven to establish title [Tobin v. Stevens (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 945, 947, 251

Cal.Rptr. 587 (even though claimant was in possession for 15 years, adverse possession not established because claimant did not pay taxes)]. Whether the elements of adverse possession have been established is a question of fact [Sevier v. Locher (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1082, 1087, 272 Cal.Rptr. 287].

Certain properties and people are exempt from adverse possession. Property dedicated to or owned by the state or any public entity is not subject to adverse possession [Civ. Code § 1007]. Minors and insane people are protected from adverse possession for 20 years or until their disability ends [Code Civ. Proc. § 328]. In addition, people imprisoned for less than a life term are protected from adverse possession for two years or until their imprisonment ends [Code Civ. Proc. § 328.5].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender).

[b] Prescription Distinguished

Adverse possession is similar to prescription, and sometimes confused with it, but there are important differences between the two. Prescription is a way of acquiring incorporeal hereditaments, rights in the land of another that do not include the right or title to the land itself, such as easements. Adverse possession refers to title acquired by continuous possession of another's land for the required period, while prescription refers to the right to use another's land acquired by the use of that land for the same period [Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 338, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46]. There are also differences in the conduct required for each process. The most important of these differences is that the right of use gained by prescription is measured by the actual use made of the property by the claimant, whereas the title obtained by adverse possession is focused on the exclusive possession of the premises [Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 338-339, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46]. When a claimant cannot satisfy the requirements for adverse possession, the claimant may not receive a prescriptive easement that extends so far that it becomes the equivalent of a fee interest and dispossesses the record title owners of part of their property [Mehdizadeh v. Mincer (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1296, 1304-1305, 54 Cal.Rptr.2d 284].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 343, Easements and Licenses (Matthew Bender).

[c] Burden of Proof

The burden is on the person claiming adverse possession to prove each of the five elements in [a], above, necessary to establish title [Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal.2d 417, 421, 24 Cal.Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 ; West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal.2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219]. Once the claimant meets his or her burden of proof, the burden shifts to the record owner to disprove the adverse claimant's title [West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal.2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219 ; California Maryland Funding, Inc. v. Lowe (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1798, 1810, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 784].

However, a plaintiff is not required to bring an action to perfect his or her claim of adverse possession. Rather, it is the record owner--not the intruder--who must bring an action within the prescribed five-year period after adverse possession commences to recover the property [Marriage v. Keener (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 186, 191, 31 Cal.Rptr.2d 511 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 318].

PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.31

MB 7600A.31 Payment of Taxes Levied and Assessed for Possession Period[1] Instruction Payment of Taxes Levied and Assessed for Possession Period[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To establish adverse possession, _____ [claimant] must prove that [he/she/it] has paid all the state, county, or municipal taxes that have been levied and assessed on _____ [specify property at issue] during _____ [claimant]'s five-year period of possession.

If taxes have been levied and assessed on _____ [specify property at issue], then _____ [claimant] must prove this fact and must also prove that [he/she/it] has paid the taxes. If no taxes have been levied and assessed against the land, then _____ [claimant] must prove this fact as a reason for not making payment.

The word "assessed" refers to an act of the assessor, and the word "levied" refers to an act of the board of supervisors or city council.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 325 ; Allen v. McKay & Co. (1898) 120 Cal. 332, 334-336, 52 P. 828 ; Reynolds v. Willard (1889) 80 Cal. 605, 607, 22 P. 262 ; Smith v. Byer (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 118, 119-121, 3 Cal.Rptr. 645 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the requirement that a party claiming adverse possession must establish payment of all taxes levied and assessed against the subject property during the period of possession. The instruction must be given with the introductory instruction in MB 7600A.30 explaining the elements of adverse possession.

[3] Comment

[a] Payment Requirement

A party claiming title to land by adverse possession must prove that it has paid all taxes--state, county, or municipal--that have been levied and assessed on the land [Code Civ. Proc. § 325 ; Gibbons v. Yosemite Lumber Co. (1916) 172 Cal. 714, 716, 158 P. 196]. The adverse possessor has the burden of proving that he or she paid the taxes on the property or, alternatively, that no taxes were levied and assessed and therefore none were paid [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 326, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Glatts v. Henson (1948) 31 Cal.2d 368, 372, 188 P.2d 745 ; Reynolds v. Willard (1889) 80 Cal. 605, 607, 22 P. 262 ; Raab v. Casper (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 866, 878, 124 Cal.Rptr. 590]. Whether the claimant paid the taxes is a question of fact [Finley v. Yuba County Water Dist. (1979) 99 Cal.App.3d 691, 698, 160 Cal.Rptr. 423].

The claimant must actually pay the taxes to comply with this requirement. The tax collector's refusal to accept the claimant's offer to pay will not excuse the failure to pay, and this refusal will therefore prevent the establishment of adverse title [Glowner v. De Alvarez (1909) 10 Cal.App. 194, 195-196, 101 P. 432]. Payment of the taxes by a third party may be sufficient in some circumstances [see, e.g., Kraemer v. Kraemer (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 291, 309-310, 334 P.2d 675 (oil company's payment of taxes under lease agreement with claimant held to be payment on claimant's behalf because it was made to discharge company's obligation under lease); Williams v. Stillwell (1933) 217 Cal. 487, 491-492, 19 P.2d 773 (payment by claimant's mother and sister sufficient if claimant reimburses them in money or labor)]. For discussion of these circumstances, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender).

[b] Exceptions

The rule requiring payment of taxes does not apply if no taxes are assessed [Costa v. Fawcett (1962) 202 Cal.App.2d 695, 701, 21 Cal.Rptr. 143] or if the assessment was void [Los Angeles Mountain Park Co. v. Burrows (1932) 121 Cal.App. 165, 166-167, 8 P.2d 489]. The rule also does not apply if the issue is raised in an action that is not between the holder of legal title and the adverse claimant [Shanahan v. Tomlinson (1894) 103 Cal. 89, 90, 36 P. 1009]. There is also an exception for claimants that are semi-public in nature, such as a school district [Mings v. Compton City School Dist. (1933) 129 Cal.App. 413, 417, 18 P.2d 967], or an irrigation district, which is not subject to taxation of property used by it in its governmental capacity [Anderson-Cottonwood Irrigation Dist. v. Zinzer (1942) 51 Cal.App.2d 587, 591, 125 P.2d 82].

The payment requirement also does not apply to easements acquired by prescription. However, a party that has enclosed and possessed land may not escape the statutory requirement for paying taxes by claiming a prescriptive easement [Kapner v. Meadowlark Ranch Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 1182, 1187, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 138]. For discussion of easements and prescription, see Ch. 77A, Matthew Bender Easement Instructions, MB 7700A.06.

[c] Period for Which Taxes Must Be Paid

The period for which taxes must be paid to establish an adverse possession claim is five years [Code Civ. Proc. § 325]. This is the same five years during which the claimant's possession must be continuous and uninterrupted [Walner v. City of Turlock (1964) 230 Cal.App.2d 399, 409, 41 Cal.Rptr. 29] and it dates from the time that the claimant went into possession [Smith v. Byer (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 118, 119, 3 Cal.Rptr. 645]. Taxes levied and assessed before the beginning of possession by the claimant need not be paid [Allen v. McKay & Co. (1898) 120 Cal. 332, 336, 52 P. 828], but the failure to pay taxes on any part of the five-year period can defeat a claim for adverse possession [Smith v. Byer (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 118, 119-120, 3 Cal.Rptr. 645].

The five-year period for which taxes are due refers to the time the taxes are levied and assessed, not to the time they must be paid [Smith v. Byer (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 118, 120, 3 Cal.Rptr. 645]. Thus, even if taxes cannot be paid until after the five-year period expires, they must be paid if they were levied and assessed during that period [Smith v. Byer (1960) 179 Cal.App.2d 118, 120, 3 Cal.Rptr. 645]. The levy and assessment of taxes after the five-year period is completed does not affect the acquisition of title by adverse possession, and the failure to pay these taxes will not defeat title previously acquired [Nord v. McIlroy (9th Cir. 1961) 296 F.2d 12, 16].

Taxes must be paid only if they were both levied and assessed during the applicable period. Thus, a claimant is not obliged to pay taxes that were assessed before the applicable period of possession even if those taxes were levied during the claimant's period of possession [Allen v. McKay & Co. (1898) 120 Cal. 332, 335, 52 P. 828]. "Levied" refers to the act of the board of supervisors in making the levy, and "assessed" refers to the act of the assessor in making the assessment [Allen v. McKay & Co. (1898) 120 Cal. 332, 334, 52 P. 828].

[d] Redemption

Redemption of property, which is the buying back of property sold because of nonpayment of taxes [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 4101-4116], can qualify as the payment of taxes if done in good faith and while the claimant was in undisturbed possession of the property [Owsley v. Matson (1909) 156 Cal. 401, 404-405, 104 P. 983]. There is no payment when the redeemers were never in possession of the property and later conveyed the property to the adverse claimant [Warden v. Bailey (1933) 133 Cal.App. 383, 388, 24 P.2d 192]. In addition, a redemption after the claimant's adverse possession has ended does not relate back, and it is therefore not a payment during the period of possession [Owsley v. Matson (1909) 156 Cal. 401, 404-405, 104 P. 983 ; McDonald v. McCoy (1898) 121 Cal. 55, 73, 53 P. 421].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.32

MB 7600A.32 Claim of Title by Virtue of Claim of Right[1] Instruction Claim of Title by Virtue of Claim of Right[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

_____ [Claimant] bases [his/her/its] claim of title on a claim of right. _____ [Claimant] must therefore prove that [he/she/it] possessed _____ [describe real property at issue] under a claim of right.

A claim of right means that _____ [claimant] entered the land as an intruder or trespasser and then claimed the property as [his/her/its] own. A claim of right is a claim of title that is not based on a written instrument, judgment, or decree. The claim of right must be exclusive of any other right, and _____ [claimant] must actually and continually occupy the land.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. §§ 324, 325 ; Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 458, 196 P.2d 900 ; Kimball v. Lohmas (1866) 31 Cal. 154, 159 ; Brown v. Berman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 327, 329, 330, 21 Cal.Rptr. 401 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in adverse possession cases when the claimant alleges possession under a claim of right and not under color of title. Adverse possession under a claim of right does not involve a written instrument, judgment, or decree. It is based solely on possession. When a written instrument is involved, the instruction in MB 7600A.33 on color of title should be used. Both this instruction and the color of title instruction should be used when a person receives a deed that applies to only a part of the land actually occupied and claimed, as this person can claim title under color of title only to that part of the property described in the instrument that evidences color of title. For the remaining part of the occupied property, the claimant must prove adverse possession under a claim of right.

This instruction should be given with the instruction in MB 7600A.30 on the elements of adverse possession, and the instruction in MB 7600A.35 on actual possession under a claim of right.

[3] Comment

Adverse possession by a claim of right is based on actual and continued possession of land under a claim of title that is not based on a written instrument, judgment, or decree. The claim of title must be exclusive of any other right [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 324, 325 ; Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 458, 196 P.2d 900 ; Buic v. Buic (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1600, 1604, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 738]. A party who claims title under a claim of right generally has no bona fide belief in his or her title and therefore enters into possession as a trespasser and intruder, but with an intent to claim exclusive title and to hold it against all comers [Kimball v. Lohmas (1866) 31 Cal. 154, 159 ; Brown v. Berman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 327, 329, 330, 21 Cal.Rptr. 401].

A claim of right may be hostile or based on mistake [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 323-324, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 459-460, 196 P.2d 900 ; Woodward v. Faris (1895) 109 Cal. 12, 16-17, 41 P. 781]. When the occupation of land is by a mere mistake, with no intention by the occupant to claim the land as his or her own, but with the intention to claim only to the true boundary line, the holding is not adverse [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 459-460, 196 P.2d 900]. On the other hand, when the possessor intends to claim the area occupied as his or her own, the holding is adverse despite the fact that the claim is based on mistake, unless the claimant showed an intent not to claim the occupied land if record title was in another [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 323-324, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588]. This intent not to claim the occupied land must be established by substantial evidence [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 323-324, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1259-1260, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779].

It is possible that a claimant may assert title to property under both claim of right and color of title if the written instrument on which a claim of title under color of title is based does not include all the areas that the claimant actually possessed and seeks title to [see Johns v. Scobie (1939) 12 Cal.2d 618, 628, 86 P.2d 820 ; see also MB 7600A.33 for an instruction on claim of title under color of title].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the claimant has entered into possession of the land on a claim of title based on a written instrument or court decree that is defective in some manner. This instruction should be given with the introductory instruction on the elements of adverse possession in MB 7600A.30 and with the applicable instructions explaining those elements in MB 7600A.31-MB 7600A.38.

[3] Comment

Color of title is apparent title based on a written instrument (such as a deed), judgment, or decree that purports to convey or grant title, but is somehow defective [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 322, 323 ; Packard v. Moss (1885) 68 Cal. 123, 127, 8 P. 818 ; Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 339, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46]. In effect, color of title is merely a means of showing hostility of possession; it is never good title, but merely an appearance of it [Johns v. Scobie (1939) 12 Cal.2d 618, 626, 86 P.2d 820 ; Packard v. Moss (1885) 68 Cal. 123, 127-128, 8 P. 818]. Adverse possession perfected by color of title dispenses with other proof of hostile or adverse claim [Wilson v. Atkinson (1888) 77 Cal. 485, 491, 20 P. 66]. Moreover, the claimant is not bound to show a forcible ouster of the true owner [Wilson v. Atkinson (1888) 77 Cal. 485, 491, 20 P. 66].

Under claim of title by color of title, the land described in the defective instrument, judgment, or decree is the land that may be claimed by adverse possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 322]. If, for example, a tract of land described in a deed is claimed adversely under color of title, continuous possession of only part of the tract is sufficient to support an adverse possession claim for the entire tract [Wheatley v. San Pedro, etc. R.R. Co. (1915) 169 Cal. 505, 515, 147 P. 135]. By contrast, with claim of right, the land claimed by adverse possession is only the land that is actually occupied [Wheatley v. San Pedro, etc. R.R. Co. (1915) 169 Cal. 505, 515, 147 P. 135 ; see MB 7600A.32].

The claim to ownership of one claiming under color of title must be in good faith [Madden v. Alpha Hardware & Supply Co. (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 72, 76, 274 P.2d 705], and the claimant must have a bona fide belief that he or she owns the property [Buic v. Buic (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1600, 1604, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 738 ; Devlin v. Powell (1924) 67 Cal.App. 165, 172, 227 P. 231]. To eliminate the required good faith, there must be actual knowledge that the writing on which the claim is based is invalid: "[T]he knowledge of the true character of the instrument by the occupant must be actual, and not such as would arise from the legal construction of the instrument" [Wilson v. Atkinson (1888) 77 Cal. 485, 493, 20 P. 66]. "[A]ctual knowledge ... of invalidity eliminates the essential element of good faith" [Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 650, 658, 29 Cal.Rptr. 754 ; see Madden v. Alpha Hardware & Supply Co. (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 72, 76, 274 P.2d 705 ; Yuba River Sand Co. v. City of Marysville (1947) 78 Cal.App.2d 421, 430, 177 P.2d 642].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.34

MB 7600A.34 Actual, Open, and Notorious Possession[1] Instruction Actual, Open, and Notorious Possession[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Actual possession of land means a subjection of the land to the will and dominion of _____ [claimant]. This is usually evidenced by occupation together with a substantial enclosure, cultivation, or otherwise making an appropriate use of the land, according to the customs of the particular locality and the quality of the property. Actual possession is not established just by asserting title; there must be acts of ownership that proclaim to the world, and bring notice to the owner, that a right is claimed in the land. Thus _____ [claimant] does not necessarily have to prove that [he/she/it] lived on the land or cultivated the land. Rather, _____ [claimant] must prove that the land was occupied and used during the five-year period in the same manner that owners of land of like character in that vicinity usually occupy and exercise dominion over their property.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 325 ; West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal.2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219 ; Hart v. Cox (1915) 171 Cal. 364, 367, 153 P. 391 ; Coryell v. Cain (1860) 16 Cal. 567, 573 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with one of the two instructions that follow on actual possession under claim of right [see MB 7600A.35] or color of title [see MB 7600A.36]. The instruction is to be read in conjunction with the introductory instruction in MB 7600A.30 and the remaining applicable instructions on the elements of adverse possession in MB 7600A.31-MB 7600A.38.

[3] Comment[a] Actual Possession

To establish adverse possession, a claimant must have been in actual possession of the real property for a continuous period of five years [Stanley v. Westover (1928) 93 Cal.App. 97, 109, 269 P. 468]. Actual possession of the land requires an act beyond the mere assertion of title. There must be overt acts of ownership that proclaim to the world, and bring notice to the owner, that a right is claimed in the land over which the claimant seeks to exercise dominion [West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal.2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219 ; Wareham v. Randolph (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 218, 225, 7 Cal.Rptr. 483 ; Bell v. Towne (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 225, 229, 318 P.2d 110]. Actual possession means "a subjection [of the real property] to the will and dominion of the claimant, and is usually evidenced by occupation--by a substantial enclosure--by cultivation, or by appropriate use, according to the particular locality and quality of the property" [Coryell v. Cain (1860) 16 Cal. 567, 573 ; see Hart v. Cox (1915) 171 Cal. 364, 367, 153 P. 391 (there must be subjection of land to adverse possessor's will and control, as opposed to mere assertion of title and exercise of casual acts of ownership)].

In determining what types of acts are sufficient to constitute possession of a specific piece of real property, the courts consider numerous factors. "[T]he character of the land, its locality, and the customs of the community" are factors in determining whether there is actual possession [Landini v. Day (1968) 264 Cal.App.2d 278, 282-283, 70 Cal.Rptr. 260]. For examples of specific acts that have been found to satisfy this requirement, see [b], below.

[b] Acts That Constitute Actual Possession

Actions that satisfy the actual possession requirement include, but are not limited to, all of the following:

- A substantial enclosure of land [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 323, 325 ; Brumagim v. Bradshaw (1870) 39 Cal. 24, 44 ; Polack v. McGrath (1867) 32 Cal. 15, 21-22];
- The construction of improvements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 323, 325 ; Blume v. MacGregor (1944) 64 Cal.App.2d 244, 258, 148 P.2d 656];
- Cultivation [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 323, 325 ; Blume v. MacGregor (1944) 64 Cal.App.2d 244, 258, 148 P.2d 656 ; County of Los Angeles v. Pacific E. R. Co. (1928) 93 Cal.App. 512, 514, 269 P. 767];
- Pasturage [Mattes v. Hall (1913) 21 Cal.App. 552, 562-563, 132 P. 295]; and
- Possession by a tenant of the adverse claimant [Palin v. Sweitzer (1937) 8 Cal.2d 329, 331, 65 P.2d 351].

Occasional use of the property, though generally insufficient, may amount to actual possession when, because of climate, inaccessibility, or some similar factor, occasional use is the ordinary and usual use of the property [Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 290, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435]. For a comprehensive discussion of acts sufficient to constitute actual possession, see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW AND PRACTICE, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender).

[c] Open and Notorious

An adverse possession claim requires an occupancy that is open and notorious [Klein v. Caswell (1948) 88 Cal.App.2d 774, 779, 199 P.2d 689] so as to give the owner reasonable notice of the adverse nature of the claimant's possession [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 461, 196 P.2d 900]. The purpose for giving notice is to provide the owner an opportunity to bring a lawsuit to regain possession of the land [Mauldin v. Costa (1885) 67 Cal. 387, 394, 7 P. 804]. In most cases, the actions that constitute actual occupancy (e.g., enclosure, cultivation, or construction of improvements) also satisfy the open and notorious requirement [see Mattes v. Hall (1915) 28 Cal.App. 361, 365, 152 P. 436 (enclosure, occupation, and cultivation generally sufficient to give owner notice, but there are exceptions to rule, as when enclosure is consistent with permission to use land); see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender)]. The claimant's occupancy must be of a type that constitutes reasonable notice to the true owner that the claimant is claiming the land as his or her own [Kraemer v. Kraemer (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 291, 309, 334 P.2d 675]. The record owner's unawareness of his or her rights in the land is immaterial [Lobro v. Watson (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 180, 187, 116 Cal.Rptr. 533 ; Kraemer v. Kraemer (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 291, 309, 334 P.2d 675]. Notice to the owner must be actual or the use must be so open, visible, and notorious that it constitutes reasonable notice [Kerr Land & Timber Co. v. Emmerson (1969) 268 Cal.App.2d 628, 634, 74 Cal.Rptr. 307]. Constructive notice of the use is sufficient to constitute reasonable notice. Constructive notice can be defined as any visible act that demonstrates the intention to claim ownership and possession and that would put the legal owner on inquiry [Weyse v. Biedebach (1927) 86 Cal.App. 712, 721, 261 P. 1086 ; but see Madden v. Alpha Hardware & Supply Co. (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 72, 75, 274 P.2d 705 (open and notorious possession is not sufficient notice when it is with owner's permission)].

PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.35

MB 7600A.35 Actual Possession Under Claim of Right[1] Instruction Actual Possession Under Claim of Right[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

_____ [Claimant] may establish actual possession of _____ [describe real property at issue] under a claim of right only if _____ [describe real property at issue] has been (1) protected by a substantial enclosure, or (2) cultivated or improved in the usual manner. Only the land that is actually possessed by means of enclosure, cultivation, or improvement may be claimed by adverse possession.

To constitute a substantial enclosure, there must be a barrier surrounding the property sufficient to protect it from intrusion by livestock or people during the five-year period.

To establish usual cultivation, it is sufficient to show that _____ [claimant] was present at all times and seasons appropriate to the regular and usual cultivation of the land.

To establish a usual improvement, it is sufficient to show that _____ [claimant] has been in actual possession of the property and improved the property in the manner or to the extent usual in the case of similar property. Land will be considered usually improved by the making of improvements that are permanent in their nature, are usual in the case of similar property, and are of a nature that indicates exclusive management and control, rather than mere temporary trespass.

Investment Co. (1928) 90 Cal.App. 201, 210-211, 265 P. 982 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction on actual occupancy of property in MB 7600A.34 when the claimant is seeking to prove adverse possession under a claim of right.

[3] Comment

The statutory requirements for possession differ depending on whether the claimant holds his possession under color of title or merely under a claim of right [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 323-325 ; Brown v. Berman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 327, 329, 21 Cal.Rptr. 401]. The requirements of possession are more stringent when the possessor acts under a mere claim of right than when he or she occupies the land under color of title [Brown v. Berman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 327, 329, 21 Cal.Rptr. 401]. For occupation under a claim of right, the claimant must protect the property with a substantial enclosure or must "usually" cultivate or improve the property [Code Civ. Proc. § 325].

A claimant possessing land under a claim of right sufficiently possesses the claimed property when the claimant builds a substantial enclosure around the property that is sufficient to prevent the intrusion of cattle or people onto the property [Code Civ. Proc. § 325 ; Ross v. Burkhard Investment Co. (1928) 90 Cal.App. 201, 210-211, 265 P. 982]. When property is fenced on three sides, leaving the fourth side open to a vacant lot, however, this is not a substantial enclosure, and the claimant must rely on cultivation to prove possession under a claim of right [Williams v. Stillwell (1933) 217 Cal. 487, 492-493, 19 P.2d 773].

The requirement of usual cultivation does not require that the claimant be constantly present on the land [County of Los Angeles v. Pacific E. R. Co. (1928) 93 Cal.App. 512, 514, 269 P. 767]. It is enough if the adverse claimant is present at all times and seasons appropriate to the land's regular and usual cultivation [County of Los Angeles v. Pacific E. R. Co. (1928) 93 Cal.App. 512, 514, 269 P. 767].

Actual possession may be shown by "the making of improvements which are permanent in their nature, are usual in the case of similar property, and are such as to indicate exclusive management and control, rather than a mere temporary trespass" [Blume v. MacGregor (1944) 64 Cal.App.2d 244, 258, 148 P.2d 656]. The requirement of a usual improvement of the property means that the property should be improved in a manner or to the extent usual in the case of similar property [Gray v. Walker (1910) 157 Cal. 381, 384, 108 P. 278]. This requirement was found to be satisfied when a claimant had been in actual possession of the property, used and improved it, and constructed a building on it [Mings v. Compton City School Dist. (1933) 129 Cal.App. 413, 418, 18 P.2d 967].

The adverse claimant need not personally occupy or reside on the property. An adverse claimant in possession of a structure, who thereafter rents and manages the structure for five years, has been held to adequately possess the property to perfect title by adverse possession [People v. Lapcheske (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 571, 573, 86 Cal.Rptr.2d 565 ; Treager v. Friedman (1947) 79 Cal.App.2d 151, 168, 179 P.2d 387 (under color of title)].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.36

MB 7600A.36 Actual Possession Under Color of Title

[1] Instruction Actual Possession Under Color of Title

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To establish actual possession under color of title, _____ [claimant] must prove that [he/she/it] has done one of the following with the land:

1. Cultivated or improved it in the usual manner;
2. Protected it by a substantial enclosure;
3. Used it for the supply of fuel or of fencing timber;
4. Used it for husbandry;
5. Used it for pasturage; or
6. Used it for the occupant's ordinary use.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If a known farm or single lot has been partly improved, the portion of the farm or lot that has not been cleared or enclosed is considered to have been occupied for the same length of time as the part that was improved and cultivated.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

To establish actual possession under color of title it is only necessary that the claimed land be used in a way that is appropriate to that piece of land. If, for example, the land is only suitable for seasonal use, then the land's use during the seasons when it is fit for use is sufficient to establish actual possession. If the land is only suitable for slight use, then slight use is sufficient to establish actual possession.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 323 ; Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 712, 7 P.2d 1020 ; Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 290, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435 ; Kellogg v. Huffman (1934) 137 Cal.App. 278, 284, 30 P.2d 593 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction on actual occupancy of property in MB 7600A.34 when the claimant is seeking to prove adverse possession under color of title. Because an adverse possessor claiming under color of title may also prove possession of the property by all the means available to an adverse claimant under claim of right, this instruction may be supplemented with elements of the instruction in MB 7600A.35 on possession under claim of right if the facts warrant. If the claimant alleges adverse possession of all of a farm or single lot that has only been partly improved, the optional part of the instruction should be used.

[3] Comment

A party claiming adverse possession under color of title, like a claimant under a claim of right, can establish actual possession if he or she protects the property by a substantial enclosure or "usually" cultivates or improves the property [Code Civ. Proc. § 323]. If the adverse possessor seeks to prove actual possession by an occupation of the property in satisfaction of one of these requirements, the rules discussed with reference to actual possession under a claim of right will apply [see MB 7600A.35]. However, in certain circumstances an adverse possessor claiming under color of title need not satisfy the strict requirements of possession under claim of right.

An adverse possessor who has color of title can establish possession of the real property when the adverse possessor uses timber from the property to supply fuel or fencing materials, or when the property is used for purposes of husbandry or for pasturage [Code Civ. Proc. § 323]. If the adverse possessor claims to have used the unenclosed property for grazing or pasturage, and the land is reasonably fit only for pasturage, it is sufficient use and occupation of land under color of title to use the land as pasture throughout the grazing season of each year while feed is available, if this use is to the exclusion of others [Kellogg v. Huffman (1934) 137 Cal.App. 278, 284, 30 P.2d 593]. To establish adverse possession under color of title, it is only necessary that land be put to such use as can reasonably be made of it, and this use is sufficiently continuous if, during the required time, it is used at all times when it can be used for the purpose to which it is adapted [Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 712, 7 P.2d 1020 ; Kellogg v. Huffman (1934) 137 Cal.App. 278, 284, 30 P.2d 593].

An adverse possessor claiming title to property under color of title can also prove possession by use that qualifies as "the ordinary use of the occupant" [Code Civ. Proc. § 323]. Thus, the adverse possessor can prove possession by showing use of the property in the manner normal and usual for other, similar property in the area [Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 712, 7 P.2d 1020 ; Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 290, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435]. For example, when a party held color of title to a mountain cabin, the court held that "using land in a mountainous area for summer and weekend recreation purposes, coupled with the modest effort to extract gold, albeit not in commercial quantities, constitutes 'an ordinary use' of such land" [Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 290, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435]. The court, quoting from prior authorities, reasoned: "If but slight use can be made of land claimed adversely, then the requirements of continuous and uninterrupted occupancy are satisfied, if such slight use as can be made, is made thereof" [Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 290, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.37

MB 7600A.37 Acts Hostile to the True Owner's Title[1] Instruction Acts Hostile to the True Owner's Title[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The requirement of "hostility" means, not that the parties must have a dispute as to the title during the period of possession, or that there is open aggression or combat, but that _____ [claimant]'s possession must be adverse to the record owner, unaccompanied by any recognition of _____ [owner]'s rights in the property. _____ [Claimant]'s possession of the property must be under a claim of title against _____ [owner] during the entire five-year period.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If _____ [claimant] is in actual possession of _____ [describe real property at issue] under color of title, then [his/her/its] possession is hostile to the rights of any other person.

[USE IF PERMISSIVE POSSESSION IS IN ISSUE (See Use of Instruction)]

A claimant who uses land with the owner's consent may change the possession into a possession that is hostile to the owner's title, by an unqualified and definite renunciation of the subordination to the owner. The use is then hostile even though the character of use to which the claimant puts the property after the renunciation may be identical to that contemplated by the parties when the claimant first entered on the land.

The renunciation must be clear enough to put the owner on notice that subsequent possession is adverse to [his/her/its] title. The owner may be charged with constructive notice of the plaintiff's claimed renunciation if the owner has actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put a prudent person on inquiry.

[USE IF CLAIMANT ENTERS LAND BY MISTAKE (See Use of Instruction)]

When an adverse possessor enters on land mistakenly believing that [he/she/it] is the land's owner, the possession is adverse unless _____ [party disputing adverse title] proves by substantial evidence that the adverse claimant (1) recognized the record owner's claim to the land, and (2) expressly or impliedly showed an intent to claim the disputed land only if record title was determined in [his/her/its] favor.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 322 ; Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 322-326, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Southern Pacific Co. v. San Francisco (1964) 62 Cal.2d 50, 56, 41 Cal.Rptr. 79, 396 P.2d 383 ; Buic v. Buic (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1600, 1605, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 738 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1259, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 288-289, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435 ; Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 650, 658, 29 Cal.Rptr. 754 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction on hostile possession should be given with the introductory instruction on adverse possession in MB 7600A.30 and it should follow the instructions on claim of right or color of title [see MB 7600A.32, MB 7600A.35 (claim of right), MB 7600A.33, MB 7600A.36 (color of title)]. If actual possession under color of title is proven, no other proof of hostility is needed. If actual possession under color of title is alleged, the first optional paragraph should be used. If permissive possession or entry by mistake is at issue, then the options on permissive possession or entry of land by mistake should be used.

[3] Comment

[a] Hostile Possession

To establish adverse possession, the claimant must show that his or her possession is hostile to the owner's title [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 459, 196 P.2d 900 ; Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 288-289, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435 ; Faus v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1956) 146 Cal.App.2d 370, 378, 303 P.2d 814]. Hostility need not be in the form of open aggression but requires that the claimant's possession be adverse to the record owner and without any recognition, express or inferable from the circumstances, of the right in the record owner, during the entire statutory period [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 459, 196 P.2d 900 ; Buic v. Buic (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1600, 1605, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 738 ; Kunza v. Gaskell (1979) 91 Cal.App.3d 201, 210, 154 Cal.Rptr. 101 ; Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 289, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435]. Acts considered hostile are those that operate as an invasion of the right of the party against whom they are asserted [Laubisch v. Roberdo (1954) 43 Cal.2d 702, 706, 277 P.2d 9]. The invasion must be of the type that is sufficient to give the record owner grounds for legal action against the adverse claimant [Anaheim Water Co. v. Semi--Tropic Water Co. (1883) 64 Cal. 185, 192, 30 P. 623]. Actual possession under color of title is a hostile occupancy, and no other proof of hostility is required [Code Civ. Proc. § 322 ; Wilson v. Atkinson (1888) 77 Cal. 485, 487, 491, 20 P. 66 ; Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 650, 657-658, 29 Cal.Rptr. 754].

[b] Permissive Possession

Permissive possession is occupancy of the land with the permission of or under a license from the owner [Alper v. Tormey (1907) 7 Cal.App. 8, 11, 93 P. 402]. While possession is permissive, the statute of limitations does not commence [Davis v. Martin (1910) 157 Cal. 657, 661, 108 P. 866]. However, if the claimant repudiates his or her relation with the true owner and asserts his or her own title to the land and gives clear notice to the owner, the claimant can trigger the statute of limitations [Southern Pacific Co. v. San Francisco (1964) 62 Cal.2d 50, 56, 41 Cal.Rptr. 79, 396 P.2d 383] and change a permissive possession to a hostile one. Constructive notice is sufficient if the acts evidencing it are such that notice to the true owner will be presumed [Packard v. Johnson (1881) 57 Cal. 180, 183 ; see Southern Pac. Co. v. San Francisco (1964) 62 Cal.2d 50, 57, 41 Cal.Rptr. 79, 396 P.2d 383 (court held that listing of railroad as owner of property on city tax rolls was not sufficient notice to city to change permissive nature of railroad's occupancy of disputed land to a hostile one)].

[c] Mistake

Mistake can be the basis for adverse possession [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 322, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588]. When a person enters on land and mistakenly believes that he or she is the owner, possession is adverse unless it is established by substantial evidence that the person recognized the record owner's potential claim and expressly or impliedly showed an intent to claim the disputed land only if record title was determined in his or her favor [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 326, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1259, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779].

The statute of limitations for an adverse possession claim based on mistake begins to run when the claimant takes possession, not on the date that the mistake is discovered [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 460, 196 P.2d 900]. Further, a mistaken belief that the United States (government) owned land is not a bar to holding adversely as against all others [Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 289, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435].

[d] Exclusive Use

The claimant's possession of the property must be exclusive [Strauss v. Canty (1915) 169 Cal. 101, 105, 145 P. 1012 ; Berry v. Cohn (1920) 47 Cal.App. 19, 22, 189 P. 1044 ; Cory v. Hotchkiss (1916) 31 Cal.App. 443, 446, 160 P. 841]. Title may not be perfected if the owner and others also use the property [Myran v. Smith (1931) 117 Cal.App. 355, 360, 4 P.2d 219 ; Cory v. Hotchkiss (1916) 31 Cal.App. 443, 446-447, 160 P. 841]. Occasional use by the public in general will not disprove exclusiveness of use [Webber v. Clarke (1887) 74 Cal. 11, 19, 15 P. 431 (public right of way for livestock not inconsistent with claim of possession)], so long as the claimant's claim is based on his or her individual use of the property rather than on use as a member of the public [see O'Banion v. Borba (1948) 32 Cal.2d 145, 151, 195 P.2d 10 (easement by prescription)].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART C. ADVERSE POSSESSION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.38

MB 7600A.38 Continuous and Uninterrupted Possession for Five Years

[1] Instruction Continuous and Uninterrupted Possession for Five Years

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To prove title by adverse possession, _____ [claimant] must prove that [he/she/it] possessed _____ [describe real property at issue] continuously and uninterruptedly for a five-year period.

[USE ONE OR MORE OF FOLLOWING AS APPLICABLE (See Use of Instruction)]

The continuity of adverse possession necessary to establish a claim of title by adverse possession does not require _____ [claimant] to be constantly present on the land. To establish adverse possession, it is only necessary that the land be put to such use as can reasonably be made of it, and such a use is sufficiently continuous if, during the required five years, the land is used at all times when it can be used for the purpose to which it is suited.

[OR]

The continuity of adverse possession necessary to establish adverse possession under color of title does not require _____ [claimant] to be constantly present on the land. _____ [Claimant]'s possession is sufficiently continuous if the land is devoted to its ordinary use. Constant occupancy and use is not always required. If only a slight use can be made of the land, then the requirement of continuous and uninterrupted possession is satisfied if a slight use is made of the land.

[OR]

_____ [Claimant] may add to [his/her/its] period of possession the time that a prior adverse possessor spent on the land. This is called "tacking." However, to "tack" on another person's time to meet the five-year statutory requirement, there must be privity of possession among the successive possessors of land. The privity required for tacking successive possessions of property may be based on any connecting relationship or agreement that will prevent a breach in the adverse possession.

[OR]

If you find that _____ [owner] re-entered the land in question or that _____ [claimant]'s use of the land was interrupted by some other person, and that the interruption was open, notorious, and under a claim of right, or if you find that _____ [claimant] abandoned the land, or _____ [claimant] recognized title to the land in another, at any time during the five-year period, then _____ [claimant] has not met [his/her/its] burden of proving a continuous use.

[OR]

The running of the five-year period of possession that an adverse claimant must prove is temporarily suspended if the landowner was _____ [a minor/insane/in prison] at any time during that period. If you find that _____ [owner] was _____ [a minor/insane/in prison] during any part of _____ [claimant]'s five-year period of possession, then the five-year period must be extended by the length of the time that its running [is/was] suspended due to _____ [owner]'s _____ [minority/insanity/imprisonment].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the requirement of continuous and uninterrupted possession and its exceptions, including tacking [see [3][b], below] and tolling [see [3][e], below]. Use the first optional instruction for making a claim of right, the second for claiming under color of title, the third for making a tacking claim, the fourth for claiming interruption, and the fifth for claiming that the time limit is tolled. This instruction should be read with the introductory instruction in MB 7600A.30 and with the applicable instructions on the other elements required for adverse possession from MB 7600A.31-MB 7600A.37.

[3] Comment[a] Five-Year Period

Under the doctrine of adverse possession, a claimant must possess the land continuously for five years [Hayes v. Martin (1873) 45 Cal. 559, 562]. The five-year duration is required under the statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 318, 319, 321, 322, 325]. After the five-year period has passed, the adverse claimant is the property's owner [Civ. Code § 1007] and may defend an action concerning ownership of the property [see, e.g., City and County of San Francisco v. Fulde (1869) 37 Cal. 349, 351] or bring an action to quiet title to the property [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020 ; see Mings v. Compton City School Dist. (1933) 129 Cal.App. 413, 418, 18 P.2d 967]. The claimant need not bring the action immediately after the five-year period of continuous possession is completed [Comstock v. Finn (1936) 13 Cal.App.2d 151, 155, 56 P.2d 957]. The issue of whether possession has been exclusive and continuous for the full five-year period is a question of fact [Kendrick v. Klein (1944) 65 Cal.App.2d 491, 496, 150 P.2d 955].

Code Civ. Proc. § 318 provides that "[n]o action for the recovery of real property, or for the recovery of the possession thereof, can be maintained, unless it appear that the plaintiff, his ancestors, predecessor, or grantor, was seized or possessed of the property in question, within five years before the commencement of the action." The statute of limitations begins to run when the cause of action accrues [Dillon v. Board of Pension Commrs. (1941) 18 Cal.2d 427, 430, 116 P.2d 37]. A cause of action for the recovery of real property accrues when the owner is deprived of possession of the property [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 460, 196 P.2d 900]. The owner of record title therefore has five years from the day he or she was deprived of possession to bring suit to recover it [Code Civ. Proc. § 318]. The adverse claimant may commence or defend a suit to protect his or her possession after five years has passed from the date on which he or she entered into continuous and adverse possession [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 322, 325].

[b] Tacking

Tacking is the process that permits an adverse possessor to add his or her period of possession to that of a prior adverse possessor or successive occupant to establish a continuous possession for the statutory period [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender)]. Privity between the successive possessors of land is necessary and their occupancies must be connected so that each occupant can go back or "tack" his or her time to the original entry or holding as a source of title [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 461-464, 196 P.2d 900]. The required privity may be based on any connecting relationship that will prevent a breach in the adverse possession and that will enable each occupant to find the source of his or her claim to the original entry or holding [Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal.2d 453, 463-464, 196 P.2d 900]. For example, the courts have recognized privity based on a deed [Meier v. Meier (1945) 71 Cal.App.2d 502, 506, 162 P.2d 950] and privity of blood between family members [Park v. Powers (1935) 2 Cal.2d 590, 594-595, 42 P.2d 75].

[c] Continuity of Use

The requirement that to acquire title by adverse possession the possession must be continuous for the statutory period does not mean that the claimant must be continuously present on the land for five years. The continuity of use required for adverse possession depends on whether the occupation of the property was under claim of right or color of title. When the occupation is under color of title, it is enough that the occupation be devoted to "the ordinary use of the occupant" [Code Civ. Proc. § 323(3), (4)]. If only slight use can be made of land held adversely under color of title, then the requirement of continuous occupancy is satisfied by this slight use [Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 712, 7 P.2d 1020 ; Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 279, 290, 83 Cal.Rptr. 435 ; Kellogg v. Huffman (1934) 137 Cal.App. 278, 284, 30 P.2d 593].

When the adverse possessor acts under mere claim of right, and not color of title, the requirements of possession are much more stringent [Landini v. Day (1968) 264 Cal.App.2d 278, 282, 70 Cal.Rptr. 260]. Additionally, when possession is under a claim of right, "the land so actually occupied, and no other, is deemed to have been held adversely" [Code Civ. Proc. § 324]. For a more complete discussion of the requirements for actual possession under a claim of right, see MB 7600A.35.

[d] Re-entry by Owner; Interruption of Possession

If the claimant's possession is interrupted, the continuity required for adverse possession is broken and the statutory period ceases to run [Laubisch v. Roberdo (1954) 43 Cal.2d 702, 707, 277 P.2d 9 ; Big Three Min. & Mill Co. v. Hamilton (1909) 157 Cal. 130, 140, 107 P. 301]. An interruption is a disturbance in the claimant's possession [Montgomery & Mullen L. Co. v. Quimby (1912) 164 Cal. 250, 253, 128 P. 402 ; Blume v. MacGregor (1944) 64 Cal.App.2d 244, 258, 148 P.2d 656].

Re-entry by the owner, even if by force or fraud [San Jose v. Trimble (1871) 41 Cal. 536, 543] interrupts the adverse claimant's possession if the re-entry is open, notorious, and under claim of right, and it equals in dignity and character the possession required to initiate an adverse possession [Smith v. Southern P. R. Co. (1934) 1 Cal.2d 272, 275, 34 P.2d 713 ; Kendrick v. Klein (1944) 65 Cal.App.2d 491, 496, 150 P.2d 955]. The owner can also interrupt the claimant's possession by means of a quiet title action [Myran v. Smith (1931) 117 Cal.App. 355, 361, 4 P.2d 219] or an action in ejectment [Newman v. Bank of California (1889) 80 Cal. 368, 373, 22 P. 261]. If the owner loses the lawsuit, the running of the statute of limitations is not interrupted by the filing of the action [Dong Chun Len v. Luke Kow Lee (1935) 7 Cal.App.2d 194, 196, 45 P.2d 827]. Once a judgment is obtained in the owner's favor, the owner must enter the land, otherwise the statutory period begins to run again from the date of entry of the judgment [Hodgkins v. People's Water Co. (1918) 177 Cal. 730, 732, 171 P. 945]. Another way for a true owner to interrupt possession is by paying taxes on the land [Commercial Nat. Bank v. Schlitz (1907) 6 Cal.App. 174, 184, 91 P. 750].

An adverse claimant may interrupt his or her own possession by abandoning the land [see Goodrich v. Mortimer (1919) 44 Cal.App. 576, 582, 186 P. 844] or recognizing title to the claimed property in another [Lovell v. Frost (1872) 44 Cal. 471, 474-475 ; Cannon v. Stockmon (1869) 36 Cal. 535, 538]. Acceptance of a lease is a recognition of the owner's title that interrupts the running of the statute of limitations [Abbey Homestead v. Willard (1874) 48 Cal. 614, 618-619].

The statute of limitations for adverse possession does not run when the parties occupy a fiduciary relationship toward each other. Thus, when one of the decedent's heirs claimed that he had established adverse possession of a parcel formerly owned by the decedent, the period in which that heir was acting as executor of the estate could not be considered in determining whether the five-year period had run [Estate of Siefert (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 64, 68, 26 Cal.Rptr.3d 560].

[e] Tolling

If a person is entitled to bring a lawsuit for the recovery of real property, to recover possession of real property, or to make an entry or a defense founded on the title to real property, and this person is (1) a minor, (2) insane, or (3) in prison, the time during which the disability continues is not to be made a part of the time set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 315-330. The action may be commenced, or the entry or defense made, within five years after the disability or imprisonment ceases. If the person entitled to bring the action or to make the entry or defense dies under the disability or while imprisoned, then the action must be begun within five years after his or her death [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 328, 328.5]. The running of the five-year period is tolled by imprisonment only if the imprisonment is on a criminal charge or a criminal conviction for a term less than life [Code Civ. Proc. § 328.5]. In addition, the tolling provision for prisoners is limited to two years as opposed to 20 years for minors or insane persons [compare Code Civ. Proc. § 328 with Code Civ. Proc. § 328.5]. A minor owner has until five years after he or she attains majority to recover possession of the property [Akley v. Bassett (1922) 189 Cal. 625, 643-644, 209 P. 576 ; Westphal v. Arnoux (1921) 51 Cal.App. 532, 535, 197 P. 395].

Furthermore, the running of the five-year period is tolled by the filing of an action contesting the right to the property. However, an unsuccessful action leading to no change of possession does not interrupt the running of the statute [California Maryland Funding, Inc. v. Lowe (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1798, 1803-1806, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 784 (adverse claimant's earlier lawsuit over right to property, dismissed for failure to prosecute, held not to toll statute)].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART D. COMMON LAW DEDICATION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.50

MB 7600A.50 Common Law Dedication Defined

[1] Instruction Common Law Dedication Defined

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A dedication is a voluntary transfer of an interest in land to the public for public use. Because dedication involves the loss of private property without compensation, there is no dedication unless the property owner shows a clear and unequivocal intent to dedicate the property to public use.

Proof of dedication requires proof of other facts, because dedication results from the acts of the land's owner coupled with the intent with which [he/she/it] carries out those acts. It may be express and completed by a single act, as when the land is dedicated by deed, or it may be implied from a series of acts.

A common law dedication does not require a writing, nor must the formalities of any statute, such as the statute of frauds, be satisfied. All that is necessary is sufficient evidence that the property owner either expressly or impliedly manifested an unequivocal intention to offer the property for a public purpose and that there was an acceptance of the offer by the public. Acceptance by the public may be express or implied.

I will now provide you with more detailed instructions on what constitutes an offer to dedicate and on what constitutes an acceptance of an offer to dedicate.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when common law dedication is at issue. Common law dedication is to be distinguished from statutory dedication [see [3][f], below] and dedication by public use [see MB 7600A.55]. This instruction can also be used when a dedication of an easement is at issue. For a definition of easement, see Ch. 77A, Matthew Bender Easement Instructions, MB 7700A.01. This instruction serves as an introduction to instructions on offer [see MB 7600A.51, MB 7600A.54], acceptance [see MB 7600A.52, MB 7600A.53], and abandonment of dedicated property [see MB 7600A.56].

[3] Comment

[a] Common Law Dedication Defined

Common law dedication is a voluntary transfer of interest in land that is in the nature of both a grant and a gift [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 240, 267 P.2d 10 ; Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135 ; Sacramento v. Jensen (1956) 146 Cal.App.2d 114, 118, 1303 P.2d 549]. The owner must show a clear and unequivocal intent to dedicate the property because dedication results in the loss of private property without compensation [Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135].

The offer of dedication and the acceptance by the public can be express or implied in fact [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 240, 267 P.2d 10 ; Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135 ; Cherokee Valley Farms, Inc. v. Summerville Elementary Sch. Dist. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 579, 585, 106 Cal.Rptr. 467 ; Faus v. Los Angeles County (1967) 256 Cal.App.2d 604, 610, 64 Cal.Rptr. 181]. The difference between an implied and an express dedication is the way the offer of dedication by a landowner and acceptance of the offer by the public is proven [see Yucaipa Water Co. No. 1 v. Public Utilities Comm'n. (1960) 54 Cal.2d 823, 827-828, 9 Cal.Rptr. 239, 357 P.2d 295]. Dedication is implied when the acts and conduct of the owner clearly indicate an intention to devote the land to public use [People v. Myring (1904) 144 Cal. 351, 354, 77 P. 975 ; Laguna Beach v. Consolidated Mfg. Co. (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 38, 155 P. 2d 844 ; see instruction on implied dedication by public use in MB 7600A.55]. Common law dedication often has elements of an estoppel against the property owner in the public's favor, arising out of the owner's failure to object to acts or events that indicate his or her implied intent to dedicate the property [Sussman v. County of San Luis Obispo (1899) 126 Cal. 536, 539, 59 P. 24 ; Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 297, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436 ; Cherokee Valley Farms, Inc. v. Summerville Elementary School Dist. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 579, 585, 106 Cal.Rptr. 467].

In its operation and effect, dedication is legally equivalent to the granting of an easement [Jones v. Deeter (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 798, 802, 199 Cal.Rptr. 825].

[b] Question of Fact; Acceptance

Whether a dedication of private property has occurred is a question of fact [Henry Cowell Lime & Cement Co. v. State (1941) 18 Cal.2d 169, 173, 114 P.2d 331 ; Richmond Ramblers Motorcycle Club v. Western Title Guaranty Co. (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 747, 754, 755, 121 Cal.Rptr. 308 ; Cherokee Valley Farms, Inc. v. Summerville Elementary Sch. Dist. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 579, 585, 106 Cal.Rptr. 467 ; Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 428, 429, 96 Cal.Rptr. 902].

Acceptance of the offer to dedicate may be express or implied. Express acceptance occurs when a formal acceptance is made by the proper authorities. Acceptance is implied when the public has made use of the property for a period of time that demonstrates an intention to accept dedication or where actions by the responsible public officials indicate an assumption of control over the property [Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227

Cal.Rptr. 135]. Maintenance and repair work on the property may constitute implied acceptance [Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 297, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436 ; Ackley v. City & County of San Francisco (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 108, 113, 89 Cal.Rptr. 480]. For further discussion of acceptance, see MB 7600A.52.

[c] Use of Land

The doctrine of dedication applies to land that is used for any of the following public purposes:

- Roads, streets, alleys, squares, or parks [Kittle v. Pfeiffer (1863) 22 Cal. 485, 489 ; Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 297, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436];
- Canals for drainage or navigation [People v. Williams (1884) 64 Cal. 498, 502, 2 P. 393];
- Cemeteries [Hollywood Cemetery Ass'n. v. Powell (1930) 210 Cal. 121, 130, 291 P. 397];
- Levees [Napa v. Howland (1890) 87 Cal. 84, 88, 25 P. 247];
- Ferry crossings [Humboldt County v. Van Duzer (1920) 48 Cal.App. 640, 645, 192 P. 192];
- Schools [Board of Education v. Martin (1891) 92 Cal. 209, 214-215, 28 P. 799]; and
- Athletic fields [Morse v. Miller (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 237, 242, 275 P.2d 545].

Dedicated property may only be used for the purposes for which it was dedicated. For a more complete discussion on the variety of uses of dedicated land, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 361, Dedication (Matthew Bender).

[d] Capacity to Dedicate

A person may dedicate only land that he or she owns [Eureka v. McKay & Co. (1899) 123 Cal. 666, 671, 56 P. 439]. A person who dedicates land without title and later acquires title to that same property is estopped from denying dedication [Napa v. Howland (1890) 87 Cal. 84, 86, 25 P. 247].

[e] Adverse Possession Distinguished

The difference between adverse possession and dedication by adverse use or acquiescence in a user is that a person seeking to establish title by adverse possession is acting to gain a private right and intends to claim a personal legal right in property [O'Banion v. Borba (1948) 32 Cal.2d 145, 148, 151, 195 P.2d 10]. In dedication, no personal claim of right needs to be demonstrated, and the public's use of the property need not be "adverse" as required and defined in adverse possession cases [Gion v. City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 Cal.3d 29, 39, 84 Cal.Rptr. 162, 465 P.2d 50 ; see MB 7600A.55[3]]. Simply stated, adverse possession applies if a private property right is the claimant's objective, and dedication applies if public use is the ultimate objective [People v. Ocean Shore Railroad (1948) 32 Cal.2d 406, 420, 196 P.2d 570].

[f] Statutory Dedication Distinguished

Statutory dedication, which is discussed here only to distinguish statutory and common law dedication, can be accomplished only by recording a map in substantial compliance with the Subdivision Map Act [see Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.]. Common law dedication embraces all forms of dedication other than statutory dedication [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 361, Dedication (Matthew Bender)]. An attempted statutory dedication that fails to substantially comply with the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act may nonetheless qualify as a common law dedication [People v. Marin County (1894) 103 Cal. 223, 229, 37 P. 203 ; Hanshaw v. Long Valley Road Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 471, 477, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 357].

[g] Actions to Determine Title

Whether title to land has been transferred to the public is generally litigated in quiet title actions, though an action for declaratory relief might also be instituted [see, e.g., Safwenberg v. Marquez (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 301, 304, 123 Cal.Rptr. 405 ; Cherokee Valley Farms, Inc. v. Summerville Elementary Sch. Dist. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 579, 582, 584-586, 106 Cal.Rptr. 467]. Title to property may also be raised as an issue when an action is instituted against a public entity for personal injuries sustained on the land allegedly dedicated [see, e.g., Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 238-245, 267 P.2d 10 ; Ackley v. City and County of San Francisco (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 108, 112-114, 89 Cal.Rptr. 480].

[1] Instruction Offer

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Dedication is like a contract and consists of an offer and an acceptance. Under common law dedication, there must be a clear and unequivocal intent by the owner to dedicate the property to public use. The intention to dedicate land can be express or can be inferred from the owner's actions in [his/her/its] dealings with and relations to the property. Inferred dedication is normally shown by an act that is reasonably interpreted and relied on by the public as an indication of willingness to provide service from the property to all who might apply. You must find that there has been a valid offer before there can be an acceptance.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the offer required for a common law dedication, and it should follow the general instruction on common law dedication in MB 7600A.50. If a valid offer to dedicate has already been established, use the instruction on acceptance in MB 7600A.52. If the jury is being instructed on implied dedication by public use, this instruction should also be used with the instruction on that topic in MB 7600A.55.

[3] Comment

[a] Offer Defined

A common law dedication is a voluntary transfer of an interest in land by a private owner to the public [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 240, 267 P.2d 10]. Dedication, like a contract, consists of an offer and an acceptance [City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 508, 118 P.2d 303]. An offer of dedication can be made in a variety of ways. The offer must be indicated clearly and unequivocally by the owner's words and actions [Cal. Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 Cal.2d 478, 494, 495, 334 P.2d 887 ; Cordano v. Wright (1911) 159 Cal. 610, 619, 115 P. 227 ; Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135 ; Cherokee Valley Farms, Inc. v. Summerville Elementary Sch. Dist. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 579, 584, 106 Cal.Rptr. 467]. If there is any doubt, an examination of the pertinent circumstances must be made to determine whether an offer has been made [Hays v. Vanek (1989) 217 Cal.App.3d 271, 282, 266 Cal.Rptr. 856 ; Flavio v. McKenzie (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 549, 552, 32 Cal.Rptr. 535]. Whether sufficient facts exist to evidence an owner's intent to dedicate the land for public use is a question of fact [Gion v. City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 Cal.3d 29, 41, 84 Cal.Rptr. 162, 465 P.2d 50 ; Hays v. Vanek (1989) 217 Cal.App.3d 271, 282, 266 Cal.Rptr. 856 ; Richmond Ramblers Motorcycle Club v. Western Title Guaranty Co. (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 747, 755-759, 121 Cal.Rptr. 308 ; Flavio v. McKenzie (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 549, 552, 32 Cal.Rptr. 535].

[b] Written Offer of Dedication

The clearest form of express dedication occurs when an owner provides a written offer of dedication [Gov. Code § 7050]. An express conveyance to a public agency can be made in the form of an absolute conveyance in fee title [City & County of San Francisco v. Linares (1940) 16 Cal.2d 441, 442-443, 106 P.2d 369] or by transfer for a specific purpose [Slavich v. Hamilton (1927) 201 Cal. 299, 304, 257 P. 60]. The granting of an easement is another way of dedicating property by express conveyance [United States v. 5. United States v. 5.324 Acres of Land (S.D. Cal. 1948) 79 F.Supp. 748, 753].

[c] Offer to Dedicate Through Description in Conveyances or Contracts

An owner's intent to dedicate land can also be evidenced by a description in conveyances or contracts [Eureka v. Gates (1902) 137 Cal. 89, 92-93, 69 P. 850], such as the reservation by the grantor of a right of way over land that has been used by the public [see, e.g., Smith v. Krintz (1962) 201 Cal.App.2d 696, 698, 700, 20 Cal.Rptr. 471], or a reference in a deed to certain land as being reserved for road purposes [Santa Ana v. Santa Ana Valley Irrigation Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 211, 217, 124 P. 847]. Note, however, that mere reference in a deed may not be enough to constitute dedication [Flavio v. McKenzie (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 549, 553, 32 Cal.Rptr. 535 ; see Santa Ana v. Santa Ana Valley Irrigation Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 211, 217, 124 P. 847]. The owner's intent to dedicate property to public use is a primary requirement for dedication, and this intent must be unequivocally manifested [Flavio v. McKenzie (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 549, 552, 32 Cal.Rptr. 535].

[d] Offer to Dedicate by Map or Plat

An offer of dedication can be evidenced by a map or plat if the map or plat specifically identifies certain property as for public or common use [see Morse v. Miller (1954) 128 Cal.App.2d 237, 239, 247, 275 P.2d 545], and the map is subsequently filed and recorded [Archer v. Salinas (1892) 93 Cal. 43, 49, 50, 28 P. 839 (park); Hanshaw v. Long Valley Road Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 471, 482, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 357 (road); Tischauer v. Newport Beach (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 138, 144, 37 Cal.Rptr. 141 (streets)]. This kind of dedication is not the same as dedication under the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.]. The common law rule that the owner's actions must evidence the owner's intent is fully applicable [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 240, 267 P.2d 10].

[e] Offer to Dedicate by Declaration

An offer of dedication can also be evidenced by the declaration of an owner of land. The owner's statement is not itself an offer, but it is a probative fact of value in determining whether or not the land has been dedicated [Cerf v. Pfleging (1892) 94 Cal. 131, 136, 29 P. 417].

CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART D. COMMON LAW DEDICATION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.52

MB 7600A.52 Acceptance

[1] Instruction Acceptance

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Acceptance of an offer of dedication is not binding until there has been unequivocal proof of acceptance. The acceptance may be actual or implied. A dedication without acceptance is merely an offer to dedicate and an offer does not impose any burdens or confer any rights unless there is an acceptance.

[USE ONE OR BOTH OF FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

Actual acceptance of dedication occurs when formal acceptance is made by the proper authorities. In this instance the acceptance was made by _____ [specify applicable authority, e.g., city council/board of supervisors].

[AND/OR]

Acceptance is implied when the public has made use of the property for a period of time that demonstrates an intention to accept dedication or when actions by the responsible public officials indicate an assumption of control over the property. For example, maintenance or repair work on property would indicate an assumption of control over that property.

Use of the land by the public for the purpose[s] for which it was dedicated over a reasonable period of time constitutes an acceptance of the offer without any formal action by the governmental authority, and if this acceptance by use occurs before the offer is revoked, the dedication is immediately effective and irrevocable.

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

The public's intent to accept must be clear. I will now provide you with instructions on what constitutes a "reasonable" time for acceptance and when an offer is revoked.

Authorities: Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 240-241, 267 P.2d 10 ; County of Inyo v. Given (1920) 183 Cal. 415, 418, 191 P. 688 ; Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 297-298, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436 ; Mikels v. Rager (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 334, 353-354, 284 Cal.Rptr. 87 ; Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135 ; Tischauser v. City of Newport Beach (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 138, 145, 37 Cal.Rptr. 141 ; McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 115-116, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 508, 118 P.2d 303 ; McGinn v. State Board of Harbor Commrs. (1931) 113 Cal.App. 695, 703-704, 299 P. 100 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should follow the instruction on common law dedication in MB 7600A.50 and the instruction on offers in MB 7600A.51. The first optional paragraph should be used if actual acceptance is at issue. The second optional paragraph should be used if implied acceptance is at issue. If both methods of acceptance are at issue, then both options should be used. The implied acceptance instruction must be read with the instruction on implied dedication by public use in MB 7600A.55.

[3] Comment

[a] Acceptance, Actual and Implied

Dedication is like a contract in that it consists of an offer and an acceptance and is not binding until acceptance [Mikels v. Rager (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 334, 353-354, 284 Cal.Rptr. 87 ; Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135]. Proof of acceptance must be unequivocal. The acceptance may be actual or implied [McGinn v. State Board of Harbor Commrs. (1931) 113 Cal.App. 695, 703, 299 P. 100]. Acceptance is actual when formal acceptance [see [b], below] is made by the proper authorities [Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 508, 118 P.2d 303 ; Elliott v. McIntosh (1919) 41 Cal.App. 763, 766-767, 183 P. 692], and implied when a use has been made of the property by the public for a length of time that shows an intention to accept the dedication, or when actions by responsible public officials assume control over the property [Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 297-298, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436 ; Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135 ; Tischauser v. City of Newport Beach (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 138, 145, 37 Cal.Rptr. 141]. A dedication without acceptance is merely an offer to dedicate and an offer does not impose any burdens or confer any rights, unless it is accepted [City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 508, 118 P.2d 303].

Whether a particular use is sufficient to constitute acceptance is a question of fact [Fitzgerald v. Smith (1928) 94 Cal.App. 480, 484, 271 P. 507]. The circumstances of the case are taken into account to determine whether there has been acceptance [City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 509, 118 P.2d 303].

[b] Formal Acceptance

Formal acceptance of dedication is an acceptance by the proper public authorities, usually in the form of an ordinance or resolution accepting the offered property [Eureka v. Armstrong (1890) 83 Cal. 623, 625, 22 P. 928]. A formal acceptance by official action requires some evidence of intent for the action to operate as acceptance of the dedication [ see County of Inyo v. Given (1920) 183 Cal. 415, 418, 191 P. 688 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 510, 118 P.2d 303]. Incidental reference to property as a street or park in some official action does not necessarily constitute acceptance [see City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 510, 118 P.2d 303].

[c] Informal Acceptance

There are two kinds of informal acceptance. The first is official government actions [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 244, 267 P.2d 10] such as maintenance or repair work that indicates that the public has taken dominion over the property or depiction of a public road on official maps [Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 298, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436 ; Ackley v. City & County of San Francisco (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 108, 113, 89 Cal.Rptr. 480 ; Tischauser v. Newport Beach (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 138, 145, 37 Cal.Rptr. 141 ; see Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 244, 267 P.2d 10 ; Smith v. Krantz (1962) 201 Cal.App.2d 696, 701, 20 Cal.Rptr. 471].

The second kind of informal acceptance is by public use. Use of dedicated land by the public for the purpose for which it was dedicated over a reasonable period of time constitutes acceptance of the offer [City of Yuba City v. Consolidated Mausoleum Syndicate (1929) 207 Cal. 587, 590, 279 P. 427 ; Hanshaw v. Long Valley Road Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 471, 482, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 357 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 508, 118 P.2d 303 ; see MB 7600A.55 on implied dedication by public use] without any formal action [City of Monterey v. Malarin (1893) 99 Cal. 290, 293, 33 P. 840 ; Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo (1892) 95 Cal. 463, 466, 30 P. 591 ; McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 115, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263]. If this informal acceptance precedes the offer's revocation, the dedication immediately becomes effective and irrevocable [McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 115-116, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263]. If a proposal is made to dedicate real property for public improvement, there is a conclusive presumption that the proposed dedication was not accepted if certain conditions are satisfied [Code Civ. Proc. § 771.010].

[d] After Acceptance

After the public has accepted an offer, a dedicator may not revoke that offer [Archer v. Salinas (1892) 93 Cal. 43, 51, 28 P. 839 ; see MB 7600A.54 for discussion of revocation].

MB 7600A.53 Time Limit for Acceptance: Reasonable Time

[1] Instruction Time Limit for Acceptance: Reasonable Time

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If the property owner made an offer of dedication, acceptance must occur within a reasonable time after the offer is made. What constitutes a reasonable time depends on the circumstances in each case.

Authorities: McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 116, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 511, 118 P.2d 303 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if it is alleged that the dedication offer was not accepted within a reasonable time. In this case, the instruction should accompany the instruction on implied acceptance in MB 7600A.52 and the instruction on revocation of offer in MB 7600A.54.

[3] Comment

The public must accept the offer of dedication within a reasonable time after the offer is made [McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 116, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Ca1. App. 2d 502, 511, 118 P.2d 303]. What constitutes a "reasonable time" to accept an implied offer of dedication is a question of fact in each case [McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 116, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263 ; City of Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1941) 47 Cal.App.2d 502, 511, 512, 118 P.2d 303]. What constitutes a reasonable time depends on the type of dedicated property and the nature of the dedication. The range of times found to be reasonable has varied from two to 31 years [Yuba City v. Mausoleum Syndicate (1929) 207 Cal. 587, 589, 590, 279 P. 427 (31 years a reasonable time); Eureka v. Gates (1902) 137 Cal. 89, 93, 69 P. 850 (seven years a reasonable time); City of Eureka v. Kennard (1928) 94 Cal.App. 450, 452, 453, 271 P. 342 (seven years a reasonable time)], while periods from nine years to over 40 years have been held unreasonable [Anaheim v. Langenberger (1901) 134 Cal. 608, 610-611, 66 P. 855 (20 years not a reasonable time); Forsyth v. Dunnagan (1892) 94 Cal. 438, 440-441, 29 P. 770 (nine years not a reasonable time); *People v. CHAPTER 76A Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions
PART D. COMMON LAW DEDICATION

6-76A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7600A.54

MB 7600A.54 Revocation of Offer

[1] Instruction Revocation of Offer

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

At any time before an offer of dedication is accepted, the offer may be revoked. After a dedication is completed by the public's acceptance, whether express or implied, the property becomes public property and the owner loses all control over it. The owner may revoke the offer by resuming the possession of the property or by any other act that is inconsistent with the use for which it is claimed the land was dedicated. For example, an offer of dedication may be revoked by conveying title to a third party without recognizing the dedication.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

The owner may revoke the dedication until the offer has been acted on in such a way that the acting party would be injured by the revocation.

Authorities: City of Los Angeles v. McCollum (1909) 156 Cal. 148, 151-153, 103 P. 914 ; Schmitt v. San Francisco (1893) 100 Cal. 302, 307, 34 P. 961 ; People v. Reed (1889) 81 Cal. 70, 80, 22 P. 474 ; Morse v. E.A. Robey & Co. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 464, 469, 29 Cal.Rptr. 734 ; Myers v. City of Oceanside (1907) 7 Cal.App. 87, 92, 93 P. 686

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions on acceptance and the time limitations for acceptance [see MB 7600A.52, MB 7600A.53]. The second paragraph should only be used if estoppel is at issue.

[3] Comment

Dedication, whether by deed or otherwise, may be revoked by the owner of land before acceptance [County of Inyo v. Given (1920) 183 Cal. 415, 420, 191 P. 688 ; Eltinge v. Santos (1915) 171 Cal. 278, 282, 152 P. 915 ; Prescott v. Edwards (1897) 117 Cal. 298, 301, 49 P. 178 ; Schmitt v. San Francisco (1893) 100 Cal. 302, 306-308, 34 P. 961 ; People v. Reed (1889) 81 Cal. 70, 80, 22 P. 474]. Once dedicated property is accepted by the public, the dedication is complete and the landowner, whether an individual or the state [Slavich v. Hamilton (1927) 201 Cal. 299, 306, 257 P. 60 ; Morse v. E.A. Robey & Co. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 464, 469, 29 Cal.Rptr. 734 ; see McGuinn v. State Board of Harbor Commrs. (1931) 113 Cal.App. 695, 704, 299 P. 100], no longer has the power to revoke [Morse v. E.A. Robey & Co. (1963) 214 Cal.App.2d 464, 469, 29 Cal.Rptr. 734 ; Fitzgerald v. Smith (1928) 94 Cal.App. 480, 483, 271 P. 507]. The dedication immediately becomes effective and irrevocable [McKinney v. Ruderman (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 109, 115, 116, 21 Cal.Rptr. 263]. An exception to the general rule permits a landowner to be estopped from revoking an offer, even where there has been no acceptance, if a person has acted on the offer in such a way as to be injured by revocation [City of Los Angeles v. McCollum (1909) 156 Cal. 148, 151, 103 P. 914 ; Schmitt v. San Francisco (1893) 100 Cal. 302, 307-308, 34 P. 961].

Acts of revocation are acts whereby the property owner uses his or her property in a way that is inconsistent with the public use, including any of the following:

- Filing a map or plat that designates the property as private property [Myers v. City of Oceanside (1907) 7 Cal.App. 87, 92, 93 P. 686];
- Conveying title to the subject property to a third party without recognizing the offer of dedication [Myers v. City of Oceanside (1907) 7 Cal.App. 87, 92, 93 P. 686]; or
- Subjecting the property to an inconsistent use [Orange County v. Cole (1950) 96 Cal.App.2d 163, 170, 215 P.2d 41].

The offer may also be revoked by the dedicator's death [Orange County v. Cole (1950) 96 Cal.App.2d 163, 170, 215 P.2d 41]. Whether or not the acts of the property owner constitute a revocation of the offer to dedicate land is a question of fact [Henry Cowell Lime & Cement Co. v. State (1941) 18 Cal.2d 169, 173, 114 P.2d 331 ; Yuba City v. Consolidated Mausoleum Syndicate (1929) 207 Cal. 587, 590, 279 P. 427 ; City of Los Angeles v. McCollum (1909) 156 Cal. 148, 151-153, 103 P. 914].

MB 7600A.55 Implied Dedication by Public Use[1] Instruction Implied Dedication by Public Use[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To prove that _____ [specify property at issue] was dedicated to the public,
_____ [party claiming dedication] must prove either one of the following:

1. That _____ [owner], the property's owner, acquiesced in the use of the land under circumstances that negate the idea that the use was under license; or
2. That there was open and continuous use by the public for five years.

When dedication by acquiescence for a period of less than five years is claimed, _____ [party claiming dedication] must prove that _____ [owner] actually consented to the dedication.
_____ [Owner]'s intent is the crucial factor.

If _____ [party claiming dedication] seeks to establish dedication by adverse use, the inquiry shifts from the owner's intent and activities to those of the public. _____ [Party claiming dedication] must prove by substantial evidence that the public has used the land for a period of more than five years with the owner's full knowledge without asking for permission to do so, and without objection being made by anyone.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used only if the rights to the land vested before March 4, 1972. After March 4, 1972, Civ. Code § 1009 protects property owners from the threat of losing their land through dedication implied from public use [see [3][d], below]. This instruction should also be read with the instruction defining license in Ch. 77A, Matthew Bender Easement Instructions, MB 7700A.13.

[3] Comment

[a] Introduction

Public use of private property can result in common law dedication by (1) acquiescence of the owner in the use of land under circumstances negating the idea that the use is under license, or (2) open and continuous use of land by the public for five years [Gion v. City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 Cal.3d 29, 38, 84 Cal.Rptr. 162, 465 P.2d 50 ; Hays v. Vanek (1989) 217 Cal.App.3d 271, 281, 266 Cal.Rptr. 856].

In establishing an implied dedication to the public, it is necessary to show that persons have used the property as they would have used the public land, or as if they believed the public had a right to such use [Bess v. County of Humboldt (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 1544, 1550-1551, 5 Cal.Rptr.2d 399 ; Aptos Seascap Corp. v. County of Santa Cruz (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d 484, 501, 188 Cal.Rptr. 191]. Various groups of persons rather than a limited and definable number must use the land in a substantial way [Hanshaw v. Long Valley Road Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 471, 482, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 357 ; Aptos Seascap Corp. v. County of Santa Cruz (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d 484, 500-501, 188 Cal.Rptr. 191], and there must be substantial evidence of this use [County of Orange v. Chandler-Sherman Corp. (1976) 54 Cal.App.3d 561, 566, 126 Cal.Rptr. 765]. If implied public dedication is found because of open and continuous public use of private property for a five-year period, the dedication's scope (that is, the purposes for which the dedicated property may be used) is limited to the purposes for which the property was used during the prescriptive period [Burch v. Gombos (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 352, 362, 98 Cal.Rptr.2d 119].

Acceptance is implied when the public has made use of the property for a period of time that demonstrates an intention to accept dedication, or when actions by the responsible public officials indicate an assumption of control over the property [Carstens v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 182 Cal.App.3d 277, 285, 227 Cal.Rptr. 135].

[b] Dedication by Acquiescence in Public Use

Dedication by acquiescence in public use is a dedication implied in fact [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 241, 267 P.2d 10 ; see Laguna Beach v. Consolidated Mfg. Co. (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 38, 43, 155 P.2d 844]. When dedication by acquiescence is for a period of less than five years, the owner's actual consent to the dedication must be proven [Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 241, 267 P.2d 10].

Persons seeking to show that land has been dedicated to the public need only produce evidence that persons have used the land as they would have used public land. Thus, if the land involved is a beach or shoreline area, they should show that the land was used as if it were a public recreation area. For roads, it must be shown that it was used as if it were a public road [Gion v. City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 Cal.3d 29, 39, 84 Cal.Rptr. 162, 465 P.2d 50 ; Bess v. County of Humboldt (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 1544, 1550-1551, 5 Cal.Rptr.2d 399 ; Hays v. Vanek (1989) 217 Cal.App.3d 271, 281, 266 Cal.Rptr. 856]. However, when an implied public dedication of a road arises by prescription (that is, by open and continuous use of the road by the public for five years), the road's use under the implied dedication will be limited to the use during the prescriptive period. Thus, if a dedication arose from recreational use of a road, the road could not be used for logging operations [Burch v. Gombos (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 352, 362, 98 Cal.Rptr.2d 119].

[c] Dedication by Adverse Use

Dedication by adverse use is a dedication implied in law [County of Los Angeles v. Berk (1980) 26 Cal.3d 201, 218, 161 Cal.Rptr. 742, 605 P.2d 381 ; Union Transp. Co. v. Sacramento County (1954) 42 Cal.2d 235, 241, 267 P.2d 10]. The litigant's burden of proof shifts from the owner of the land's intent and activities to those of the public [Gion v. City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 Cal.3d 29, 38, 84 Cal.Rptr. 162, 465 P.2d 50 ; Hays v. Vanek (1989) 217 Cal.App.3d 271, 281, 266 Cal.Rptr. 856]. Adverse use is established if the public has used the land for a period of more than five years with the full knowledge of the owner, without asking for or receiving permission to do so and without any objection being made by anyone [Gion v. City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 Cal.3d 29, 38, 84 Cal.Rptr. 162, 465 P.2d 50 ; Bess v. County of Humboldt (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 1544, 1550, 5 Cal.Rptr.2d 399].

[d] Dedication by Public Use After March 4, 1972

Dedication by public use as described in this instruction only applies to rights that vested before March 4, 1972. Civ. Code § 1009, effective March 4, 1972, protects property owners from the threat of losing their land through implied dedication by public use [Bustillos v. Murphy (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 1277, 1280-1281, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 895]. For a discussion on the effect of Civ. Code § 1009, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 361, Dedication (Matthew Bender).

There are two exceptions to the rule that public use of property after March 4, 1972, cannot result in a dedication. Certain coastal properties are exempted from the statute [see Civ. Code § 1009(e)], and a governmental entity may acquire a vested right to use the land if it has expended public funds on visible improvements on the land such as cleaning and maintenance [see Civ. Code § 1009(d)].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used following the instruction on common law dedication [see MB 7600A.50] or the instruction on implied dedication by public use [see MB 7600A.55] when the title to dedicated property is at issue and abandonment is the cause of the dispute. This instruction can also be used when abandonment of an easement is at issue [see Ch. 77A, Matthew Bender Easement Instructions].

[3] Comment

The abandonment of dedicated property (or an easement) must be evidenced by the user's clear intent to abandon the property [Humboldt County v. Van Duzer (1920) 48 Cal.App. 640, 644, 192 P. 192]. Mere nonuse of property does not amount to abandonment [Humboldt County v. Van Duzer (1920) 48 Cal.App. 640, 644, 192 P. 192]. The burden is on the party claiming abandonment of a road to show that deviations from the originally dedicated road "are so profound as to constitute abandonment" [Western Aggregates, Inc. v. County of Yuba (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 278, 308, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 436]. Abandonment of dedicated property can occur when a governmental body acting in its legislative capacity so designates [County of Inyo v. Given (1920) 183 Cal. 415, 421, 191 P. 688].

Dedicated property reverts to the dedicator's ownership if the property is abandoned [County of Inyo v. Given (1920) 183 Cal. 415, 421, 191 P. 688].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions concerning the types of easements that may arise in the absence of an express written grant. These easements include easements implied by grant or reservation, easements by necessity, and prescriptive easements. Parol licenses, insofar as they are distinguished from easements, are covered. Instructions on the recovery of damages for an unreasonable interference with an easement are also included. Specifically, the chapter covers the following topics:

- An introductory instruction defining an "easement," "dominant estate," and "servient estate" [see MB 7700A.01].
- Easements by implied grant or reservation, including reasonable necessity of use [see MB 7700A.02 -MB 7700A.04].
- Easements by necessity [see MB 7700A.05].
- Easements by prescription [see MB 7700A.06 -MB 7700A.08].
- The extent of an easement's use [see MB 7700A.09].
- The unreasonable interference with an easement [see MB 7700A.10] and damages for such an interference [see MB 7700A.11].
- The termination of an easement by abandonment [see MB 7700A.12].
- License in real property [see MB 7700A.13].

The creation and interpretation of express written easements and other servitudes in land, such as covenants, conditions, and equitable servitudes, generally involve issues of law and equity within the sole province of the court, and they are not included in this chapter. Although they may be written, oral, or implied, revocable licenses in real property are governed by general contract principles. For instructions on the creation, validity, and breach of contracts, see Ch. 3, California Judicial Council Contracts Instructions, and Chs. 3A through 3G.

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.01

MB 7700A.01 Easement: Introductory Instruction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An easement is an interest in the land of another that entitles the easement owner to a limited use or enjoyment of the other's land. An easement may be affirmative, allowing the owner to do certain acts, or it may be negative, preventing certain acts from being performed on the property.

The land that is benefited by having the use of an easement on another's land is called the "dominant" estate or tenement. The land on which the easement is imposed is called the "servient" estate or tenement.

In this case, [Plaintiff/Defendant], as owner of the dominant estate, claims that [a/an] [implied easement/prescriptive easement/easement by necessity] has been created in the form of _____ [describe alleged easement, e.g., a right-of-way or a right of pasture or a right of taking water, wood, minerals, or other things] attached to or imposed on property owned by [Defendant/Plaintiff].

Stephens* (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 890, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692 ; Mosier v. Mead (1955) 45 Cal.2d 629, 632, 290 P.2d 495 ; Committee to Save the Beverly Highlands Homes Assn. v. Dykes (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 561, 568, 226 Cal.Rptr. 673 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 1.2 (2000).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to precede and introduce the instructions on easement by implied grant or reservation [see MB 7700A.02 -MB 7700A.04], prescriptive easement [see MB 7700A.06 -MB 7700A.08], or easement by necessity [see MB 7700A.05]. It includes definitions of "dominant" estate and "servient" estate, technical terms commonly used in the law of easements.

The last paragraph may be used to instruct the jury in nontechnical terms on the specific type of easement at issue.

[3] Comment

[a] Nature of Easement

An easement is an interest of a landowner in the land of another, which entitles the easement owner to the limited use or enjoyment of the other's land [Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 865, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Mosier v. Mead (1955) 45 Cal.2d 629, 632, 290 P.2d 495 ; Committee to Save the Beverly Highlands Homes Assn. v. Beverly Highlands Home Assn. (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 1247, 1269, 112 Cal.Rptr.2d 732 ; City of Long Beach v. Daugherty (1977) 75 Cal.App.3d 972, 977, 142 Cal.Rptr. 593 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 1.2 (2000)]. An easement interest conveys no property rights to the land subject to the easement. It exists only to benefit the easement holder's property [Kazi v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (2001) 24 Cal.4th 871, 885, 103 Cal.Rptr.2d 1, 15 P.3d 223]. An easement may be affirmative, allowing the doing of acts, or it may be negative, preventing acts from being performed on the property [Wolford v. Thomas (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 347, 354, 235 Cal.Rptr. 422]. It may be created by prescription or by express or implied grant [Wolford v. Thomas (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 347, 354, 235 Cal.Rptr. 422]. Although an easement is an interest in real property, it is a nonpossessory interest and cannot become a fee estate in real property [Darr v. Lone Star Industries, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal.App.3d 895, 901, 157 Cal.Rptr. 90 ; see Concord & Bay Point Land Co. v. City of Concord (1991) 229 Cal.App.3d 289, 295, 280 Cal.Rptr. 623 (easement is interest in land of another rather than estate in land)].

In California, easements include any "land burdens, or servitudes on land" [Civ. Code § 801]. The Civil Code and case law make no distinctions between easements and profits and in fact include typical profits as easements [Civ. Code § 801]. Easements and profits a prendre are indistinguishable in terms of the legal consequences stemming from ownership [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 890, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692].

Because an easement is an interest in land, an express grant of an easement must be in writing [Elliott v. McCombs (1941) 17 Cal.2d 23, 32, 109 P.2d 329]. Thus, an instrument creating an easement is subject to the same rules of construction that apply to deeds and contracts in general [Civ. Code § 1066; Willard v. First Church of Christ, Scientist (1972) 7 Cal.3d 473, 476, 102 Cal.Rptr. 739, 498 P.2d 987 ; Continental Baking Co. v. Katz (1968) 68 Cal.2d 512, 521, 67 Cal.Rptr. 761, 439 P.2d 889].

However, when there is a claim of easement by implied grant or reservation, the trier of fact must examine the surrounding circumstances, the parties' relationships, the prior uses of the properties, and the nature and purpose of the easement to ascertain the intentions of both grantor and grantee [Mosier v. Mead (1955) 45 Cal.2d 629, 632-633, 290 P.2d 495 ; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 8, 215 P.2d 729 ; Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 266, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789].

An easement may be appurtenant to land or in gross. An appurtenant easement is attached to the land itself and benefits the landowner in his or her use of the land [Civ. Code § 801; Committee to Save the Beverly Highlands Homes Assn. v. Beverly Highlands Home Assn. (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 1247, 1269, 112 Cal.Rptr.2d 732 ; Franceschi v. Kuntz (1967) 253 Cal.App.2d 1041, 1046, 61 Cal.Rptr. 810 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 1.5(1) (2000)]. The property benefited is called the dominant tenement [Civ. Code § 803; Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 865, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Wright v. Best (1942) 19 Cal.2d 368, 381, 121 P.2d 702 ; Moylan v. Dykes (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 561, 568, 226 Cal.Rptr. 673]. The property burdened by the appurtenant easement is the servient tenement [Civ. Code § 803; Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 865, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758].

By contrast, an easement in gross is not attached to any particular land but belongs to a person individually. An easement in gross is a personal interest in real property that can be transferred [Civ. Code § 802; Collier v. Oelke (1962) 202 Cal.App.2d 843, 847, 21 Cal.Rptr. 140 ; Bates v. Terry (1961) 194 Cal.App.2d 137, 144, 14 Cal.Rptr. 829].

[b] Right to Jury Trial in Easement Case

Easement issues typically arise in actions that seek equitable relief, such as an injunction or a judgment quieting title. However, the form of action does not determine a litigant's right to a jury trial of the factual issues [Frahm v. Briggs (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 441, 444, 90 Cal.Rptr. 725]. When legal and equitable issues are joined in the same action, the parties are entitled to a jury trial on the legal issues [Robinson v. Puls (1946) 28 Cal.2d 664, 665-666, 171 P.2d 430].

When the establishment of an easement is a condition precedent to the granting of equitable relief, the denial of a jury trial on issues concerning a claimant's entitlement to an easement is reversible error [Frahm v. Briggs (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 441, 445, 90 Cal.Rptr. 725]. When a claimant's right to an easement is clear, it is the court's function to grant injunctive or declaratory relief. If, however, the claimant's entitlement to an easement is in substantial dispute, no equitable relief will be granted until the claim is established at law [Frahm v. Briggs (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 441, 445, 90 Cal.Rptr. 725].

The establishment of title by the resolution of factual, as opposed to legal, questions does not create undesirable uncertainty regarding the real property's ownership, because trial courts and juries frequently make these determinations [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 889, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692]. The stability of title is protected by adherence to the rules of law governing real property ownership [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 889, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692].

Plaintiff contends that [he/she/it] acquired an easement by implied [grant/reservation] over _____ [describe burdened land] on a prior separation or transfer of title when Plaintiff's land and Defendant's land were owned by a single person. To prove that an easement by implied [grant/reservation] was created on a separation or transfer of title, Plaintiff must prove all of the following:

- 1. That _____ [describe dominant estate] and _____ [describe servient estate] were once a single parcel under common ownership and that title to this parcel was separated when the common owner conveyed part of the property to another;
- 2. That, before the separation took place, the _____ [describe use or activity that gives rise to easement] was so long continued and so obvious as to show that it was intended to be permanent; and
- 3. That the _____ [describe use or activity that gives rise to easement] was reasonably necessary to the beneficial enjoyment of the land [granted/retained].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Plaintiff [was the common owner of both pieces of property/owns the property that was retained by the common owner when title to the property was separated]. Plaintiff claims an easement by implied reservation on the transferred property resulting from the separation of title. Because the grantor is the party in a conveyance who is best able to protect [himself/herself/itself], the law requires a conveyance to be interpreted against the grantor.

This means that you must interpret any ambiguity in the circumstances of the conveyance by [Plaintiff/the common owner] against Plaintiff and in favor of Defendant.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

If you find that the evidence presented shows that Plaintiff has proved all three of the required facts, you must find that an easement exists in Plaintiff's favor as the owner of the dominant estate and against Defendant as the owner of the servient estate. However, if you find that the granting of an implied easement is contrary to the intent of the parties to the original transfer, then you must find that no implied easement was created.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when it is alleged that an easement arose out of an implied grant or reservation, as opposed to an express grant by written instrument or an easement by prescription [see MB 7700A.06 -MB 7700A.08]. It should be used with the introductory instruction in MB 7700A.01 and with the instructions that follow on continuous and obvious use [see MB 7700A.03] and reasonable necessity of use [see MB 7700A.04].

The optional paragraph should be added if the claimant is the original grantor, or a successor in interest of the original grantor, and the claimant alleges an easement by implied reservation.

This instruction concerns implied easements acquired in connection with the transfer of title to land. A tenant may also possess an implied easement appurtenant with regard to the property it leases [see, e.g., Dubin v. Robert Newhall Chesebrough Trust (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 465, 472-475, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 872]. In Dubin, a tenant had an implied easement over a driveway that permitted access to his vehicle repair shop because use of the driveway was reasonably necessary to the beneficial use of the leased property [Dubin v. Robert Newhall Chesebrough Trust (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 465, 472-475, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 872].

If an easement providing access to leased property is in issue, this instruction should be modified.

[3] Comment

[a] Implied Easements: General Rule

An easement may be created by conveyance even when there is no express grant of an easement. Civ. Code § 1104 provides that when land under common ownership is divided by conveyance into separately owned parts, the grantee will acquire an easement to use the granted land in the same way and to the same extent as that land was "obviously and permanently" used by the grantor before the transfer. An easement in the grantee's favor arises by implication out of the separation of ownership [Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 2.11 (2000)]. An implied easement may be created only in connection with a conveyance [Kytasty v. Godwin (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 762, 768, 162 Cal.Rptr. 556]. For example, an easement by implication may be created when an owner of real property dies intestate and the property is then divided and distributed to the intestate's heirs by court decree [Larsson v. Grabach (2004) 121

Cal.App.4th 1147, 1153-1154, 18 Cal.Rptr.3d 136].

Based on the provisions of Civ. Code § 1104, California courts have developed the following three principal elements required for the creation of an easement by implication [Mikels v. Rager (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 334, 357, 284 Cal. Rptr. 87]:

- (1) There must be a separation of title;
- (2) Before this separation, the use that gives rise to the easement must be so long continued and so obvious as to show that it was intended to be permanent [see MB 7700A.03]; and
- (3) The easement must be reasonably necessary to the beneficial enjoyment of the land granted [see MB 7700A.04; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 2.11, Comment (e) (2000) (if easement is implied by reservation, it must be reasonably necessary to land retained, not land granted); see also [c], below].

[b] Intent to Create Easement

The factors enumerated in Civ. Code § 1104 are not exclusive of other factors that may be relevant in ascertaining the existence or extent of an easement by implied grant or reservation. Civ. Code § 1104 must be read with Civ. Code § 806, which has the effect of establishing intent as the criterion [Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 867, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 9, 215 P.2d 729]. This is in accord with the rationale for implied easements, because the primary purpose of the doctrine of implied easements is to give effect to the actual intent of the parties as shown by all the facts and circumstances [Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 8, 215 P.2d 729 ; George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 861-862, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94]. An implied easement will not be enforced contrary to the actual intent of the parties [Kellogg v. Garcia (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 796, 804, 125 Cal.Rptr.2d 817 ; County of Los Angeles v. Bartlett (1962) 203 Cal.App.2d 523, 529, 21 Cal.Rptr. 776].

Whether an implied easement exists is a question of fact to be determined by the trier of fact [Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 274, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789]. To determine the intent of the parties, the trier of fact must consider (1) all relevant facts and circumstances attending the original conveyance, (2) the particular relationship of the parties, and (3) the nature and extent of the prior use [George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 862-863, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 274, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Kaynor v. Fisch (1951) 103 Cal.App.2d 832, 839, 230 P.2d 418].

What facts and circumstances are relevant to this determination will depend on the terms of the deed and facts of the case [County of Los Angeles v. Bartlett (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 523, 530, 21 Cal. Rptr. 776]. Factors to consider in the determining whether an easement should be implied include: (1) the policies behind requiring written expressions of intent to create interests in land and those behind permitting exceptions to the requirement; (2) meeting the reasonable expectations of land owners and purchasers; (3) arriving at results that are fair to all parties; (4) avoiding unnecessary waste of resources when that can be done without violating the reasonable expectations of land owners; (4) the relative abilities of the parties to have acted to avoid the loss; (5) the consideration paid; (6) the overall economic impact of the decision; and (7) the value of developing caselaw that provides a sound basis for prediction [Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 2.11, Comment f (2000)].

If simultaneous conveyances are made to two or more grantees, the likelihood that an easement was intended is stronger, since it is reasonable to infer that a grantor who divided land among several grantees intends the privileges of use to be shared by them all [McCarty v. Walton (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 39, 43-44, 27 Cal. Rptr. 792].

Implied easements are generally disfavored and will not be imposed absent a showing of the intent of the parties to create the easement [County of Los Angeles v. Bartlett (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 523, 529-531, 21 Cal. Rptr. 776]. An easement by implication will not be found absent clear evidence that it was intended by the parties [Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 1, 21, 147 Cal.Rptr. 655]. However, the need for "clear" evidence of intent does not create a "clear and convincing" standard of proof [Tusher v. Gabrielsen (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 131, 145-146, 80 Cal.Rptr.2d 126 (proper standard of proof to establish implied easement is by preponderance of evidence)].

[c] Easements by Implied Reservation

Easements may result from implied reservations as well as implied grants [Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 2.12, Comment a (2000); see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 343, Easements and Licenses (Matthew Bender)]. Even though Civ. Code § 1104 refers only to implying an easement in the grantee's favor, California courts also recognize easements by implied reservation [Kytasty v. Godwin (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 762, 770, 162 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Horowitz v. Noble (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 120, 133, 144 Cal.Rptr. 710]. The elements of an easement by implied reservation are the same as the elements required for an easement by implied conveyance [see [a], above], except that the easement must be reasonably necessary for the beneficial enjoyment of the land retained rather than the land granted [Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 2.15 (2000)]. In addition, the existing use must be actually known to the grantee or must be so obvious and apparently permanent that the grantee's knowledge may be implied [Horowitz v. Noble (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 120, 131-132, 144 Cal.Rptr. 710].

In view of the rule that a conveyance is to be construed against the grantor [Civ. Code § 1069], an easement will be implied in the grantee's favor more readily than in the grantor's favor [Kytasty v. Godwin (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 762, 769, 162 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hacienda Mobile Home Park (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 519, 525, 119 Cal.Rptr. 559]. Accordingly, circumstances that may be sufficient to imply the creation of an easement by grant may not suffice to imply the existence of an easement by reservation [Orr v. Kirk (1950) 100 Cal.App.2d 678, 682, 224 P.2d 71].

A conveyance is construed against the grantor because the grantor has more control than the grantee over the language of the conveyance and the circumstances under which it is made [Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 412, 432, 89 Cal. Rptr. 514]. This means that if there are any ambiguities in the language or the circumstances of the conveyance, they should be resolved against the grantor [Mammoth Gold Dredging Co. v. Forbes (1940) 39 Cal.App.2d 739, 750-751, 104 P.2d 131].

In contrast to private party conveyances, conveyances involving a sovereign as the common owner typically do not give rise to implied reservations of easements or other property interests in conveyed land [Murphy v. Burch (2009) 46 Cal.4th 157, 165, 92 Cal.Rptr.3d 381, 205 P.3d 289]. When a claimant traces common ownership back to the federal government and seeks to establish an implied reservation of an access right-of-way, the intent of Congress is paramount and the government's power of eminent domain also bears significance. Given the unique historical and legal nature of land patents, extreme caution must be exercised in determining whether the circumstances surrounding a government land grant are sufficient to overcome the inference prompted by the omission of an express reference to a reserved right of access. The easement claimant bears the burden of producing evidence on the issues regarding the government's intent to reserve an easement and the government's lack of power to condemn. An easement is not a matter of necessity when the federal government had the power of eminent domain to gain access to its property and strict necessity may be extinguished when a sovereign owner failed to exercise that power [Murphy v. Burch (2009) 46 Cal.4th 157, 167, 92 Cal.Rptr.3d 381, 205 P.3d 289 ; Moore v. Walsh (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1051, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 389].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.03

MB 7700A.03 Easement by Implied Grant or Reservation: Long-Continued and Obvious Use

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To find that an easement has been continued long enough to show that it was intended to be permanent, you must find that the use involved was not occasional, accidental, or temporary, but was of such a character that _____ [claimant] was reasonably entitled to rely on the continuance of the use.

To find that an easement is obvious, you must find something on the servient estate that is either visible or in the nature of a permanent artificial structure so as to confirm the original owner's intent to use part of [his/her/its] land for the benefit of the other and to give notice to future grantees of the easement's existence.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1104; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 8, 215 P.2d 729 ; George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 860, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 266, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Kytasty v. Godwin (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 762, 769, 162 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Piazza v. Schaefer (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 328, 332-333, 63 Cal.Rptr. 246 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the requirement of long-continued and obvious use for an easement by implied grant or implied reservation. It should be given after the elements of proof instruction for easements by an implied grant or reservation in MB 7700A.02.

[3] Comment

One element required for an implied easement is that the use that gives rise to the easement must be so continuous and so obvious as to show that it was intended to be permanent [Civ. Code § 1104; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5,

8, 215 P.2d 729 ; Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 266, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Kytasty v. Godwin (1980) 102 Cal.App.3d 762, 769, 162 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Piazza v. Schaefer (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 328, 332-333, 63 Cal.Rptr. 246]. The reason for this requirement is that the easement's obvious and permanent quality confirms the original owner's intent to use part of his or her land for the benefit of the other part and that it gives notice to the owner's successors in interest that the future servient estate is burdened with the easement in favor of the future dominant estate [George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 860, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94]. Generally, there must be something on the servient estate that is either visible or in the nature of a permanent artificial structure [George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 860, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94].

An easement has been continued long enough to show that it was intended to be permanent if the use involved was not occasional, accidental, or temporary, but was of such a character that the claimant was reasonably entitled to rely on the continuance of the use [George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 860, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.04

MB 7700A.04 Easements by Implied Grant or Reservation: Reasonable Necessity of Use

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To find that the easement is reasonably necessary for the beneficial use of _____ [claimant]'s property, you must find that the easement is necessary for the convenient and comfortable enjoyment of the property as it existed when the severance was made. Mere convenience is insufficient, but absolute necessity is not required.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Among the factors that you may consider in determining whether the easement is reasonably necessary for the beneficial use of _____ [claimant]'s property is whether _____ [claimant] can create a substitute on [his/her/its] property at a reasonable cost.

Authorities: Owsley v. Hamner (1951) 36 Cal.2d 710, 718-720, 227 P.2d 263 ; Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 268-273, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Navarro v. Paulley (1944) 66 Cal.App.2d 827, 829-830, 153 P.2d 397 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the requirement that an easement may be implied only if the easement is reasonably necessary to the beneficial enjoyment of the land granted or retained. The optional part of the instruction should be used when evidence of the reasonable cost of creating a substitute on the easement claimant's property has been admitted. The instruction should be given after the elements of proof instruction for easements by an implied grant or reservation in MB 7700A.02.

[3] Comment

An easement by implied grant or implied reservation will be recognized only if the easement is reasonably necessary to the beneficial enjoyment of the land conveyed [Owsley v. Hamner (1951) 36 Cal.2d 710, 718-720, 227 P.2d 263 ; Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 269, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Navarro v. Paulley (1944) 66 Cal.App.2d 827, 829, 153 P.2d 397] or retained [Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 2.15 (2000)]. Mere convenience is insufficient, but absolute necessity is not required [Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 269, 271-273, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 (no precise definition of "reasonable necessity" can be given, but it is less than "strict necessity" and more than "mere convenience"); Navarro v. Paulley (1944) 66 Cal.App.2d 827, 830, 153 P.2d 397 ; but see Dubin v. Robert Newhall Chesebrough Trust (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 465, 477, 116 Cal.Rptr.2d 872 (in connection with easement by necessity with regard to leased property, court found that to state claim plaintiff must plead he had "no other means of access to his property")]. An easement is reasonably necessary if the easement is necessary for the convenient and comfortable enjoyment of the property as it existed when the severance was made [Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 269, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Navarro v. Paulley (1944) 66 Cal.App.2d 827, 830, 153 P.2d 397].

In determining whether an easement is reasonably necessary to the use and benefit of a claimant, the jury may consider whether the claimant can create a substitute on its own property at a reasonable cost [Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 268-269, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789 ; Navarro v. Paulley (1944) 66 Cal.App.2d 827, 829-830, 153 P.2d 397]. The jury may be instructed to consider the cost of an alternative, as long as the jury is informed that the cost of a substitute is not determinative but merely a factor that it may consider in determining the easement's reasonable necessity [Leonard v. Haydon (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 263, 268, 272-273, 167 Cal.Rptr. 789].

Evidence that the conveyed property is worth substantially less without the easement is also a factor bearing on the easement's reasonable necessity [Owsley v. Hamner (1951) 36 Cal.2d 710, 720, 227 P.2d 263].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.05

MB 7700A.05 Easement by Necessity: Defense of Lack of Intent

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

When a division of property owned by a single grantor creates a parcel of land that is completely shut off from access to an outside road, the law presumes that the grantor intended to [grant/reserve] an access easement to use the parcel [sold to another/retained by the grantor].

To rebut the presumption of an easement by necessity, _____ [servient landowner] must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the original grantor did not intend to [grant/reserve] an easement through _____ [specify parcel subject to presumed easement]. As jurors, you must determine the intent and expectations of the original grantor and grantee in dividing the parcel of land. To make this determination, you must examine all of the circumstances surrounding the original transaction.

Authorities: Kellogg v. Garcia (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 796, 804, 125 Cal.Rptr.2d 817 ; Hewitt v. Meaney (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 361, 367, 226 Cal.Rptr. 349 ; Lichty v. Sickels (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 696, 699, 197 Cal.Rptr. 137 ; Pipkin v. Der Torosian (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 722, 729-730, 111 Cal.Rptr. 46 ; Daywalt v. Walker (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 669, 672, 31 Cal.Rptr. 899 ; Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 324, 331-333, 30 Cal.Rptr. 868 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when an easement by necessity is alleged and the owner of a potentially servient estate attempts to rebut the presumption of necessity by showing that the common grantor did not intend to grant or reserve an easement. It should be used with the introductory instruction in MB 7700A.01 that explains what an easement is. The instruction should be supplemented with an explanation of the terms "grantor" and "grantee." The explanation of these terms in the introductory instruction on deeds in Ch. 76A, Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions, MB 7600A.10, can be used for this purpose.

[3] Comment

An easement by necessity arises when ownership of land is divided in a way that creates a landlocked parcel [Kellogg v. Garcia(2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 796, 804, 125 Cal.Rptr.2d 817 ; Daywalt v. Walker (1963) 217 Cal.App.2d 669, 672, 31 Cal.Rptr. 899] . An easement by necessity may be enforced only if the claimed dominant and servient estates were under common ownership when the property was divided [Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 324, 332-333, 30 Cal.Rptr. 868]. Thus, an easement by necessity arises by operation of law when a grantor conveys land that is entirely shut off from access to any road, if it is shut off by land retained by the grantor or by the grantor's land and by a stranger's land [Lichty v. Sickels (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 696, 699, 197 Cal.Rptr. 137 ; Reese v. Borghi (1963) Cal.App.2d 324, 331-332, 30 Cal.Rptr. 868]. The doctrine is of common-law origin and is supported by the rule of sound public policy that lands should not be rendered unfit for occupancy or successful cultivation [Kellogg v. Garcia (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 796, 803, 125 Cal.Rptr.2d 817 ; Reese v. Borghi (1963) Cal.App.2d 324, 331, 30 Cal.Rptr. 868].

An easement by necessity exists only in a case of strict necessity [Hewitt v. Meaney (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 361, 370, 226 Cal.Rptr. 349]. It will not exist if a property owner has a means of access across his or her own property, albeit with difficulty [Horowitz v. Noble (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 120, 133, 144 Cal.Rptr. 710], nor will strict necessity exist if the claimant has already acquired an easement by prescription [Pipkin v. Der Torosian (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 722, 730, 111 Cal.Rptr. 46]. The easement by necessity continues only while the necessity exists [Lichty v. Sickels (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 696, 699, 197 Cal.Rptr. 137].

Although an easement by necessity is based on public policy, the implication of such an easement is a factual inquiry based on the inferred intent of the parties, which is to be determined either as a matter of law from the terms of the instrument involved, or from all the circumstances surrounding the transaction as a matter of fact [Hewitt v. Meaney (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 361, 366, 226 Cal.Rptr. 349]. Although the fact of necessity may be evidence of the grantor's intention to convey an easement, an easement by necessity will not be imposed contrary to the actual intent of the parties [Kellogg v. Garcia (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 796, 804, 125 Cal.Rptr.2d 817 ; Hewitt v. Meaney (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 361, 366-367, 226 Cal.Rptr. 349].

Conveyances involving a sovereign as the common owner typically do not give rise to implied reservations of easements or other property interests in conveyed land [Murphy v. Burch (2009) 46 Cal.4th 157, 165, 92 Cal.Rptr.3d 381, 205 P.3d 289]. When the claimant of an easement by necessity traces common ownership back to the federal government and seeks to establish an implied reservation of an access right-of-way, the intent of Congress is paramount and the government's power of eminent domain also bears significance. Given the unique historical and legal nature of land patents, extreme caution must be exercised in determining whether the circumstances surrounding a government land grant are sufficient to overcome the inference prompted by the omission of an express reference to a reserved right of access. The easement claimant bears the burden of producing evidence on the issues regarding the government's intent to reserve an easement and the government's lack of power to condemn. An easement is not a matter of necessity when the federal government had the power of eminent domain to gain access to its property and strict necessity may be extinguished when a sovereign owner failed to exercise that power [Murphy v. Burch (2009) 46 Cal.4th 157, 167, 92 Cal.Rptr.3d 381, 205 P.3d 289 ; Moore v. Walsh (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1051, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 389].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.06

MB 7700A.06 Easement by Prescription: Elements of Proof

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In this case, the plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] has acquired an easement by prescription on the defendant's land. An easement by prescription is a means of acquiring a limited right to make a specific use of another's property by continuously using that property in the manner required by law for five years. The right acquired to use the easement must be less than the right of ownership.

As jurors, you must decide whether the plaintiff has proven by clear and convincing evidence that each of the three elements required for an easement by prescription has been met. I will first instruct you what these elements are and then explain the meaning of each element. In so doing, I may at times refer to an easement by prescription simply as a prescriptive easement.

To prove that [he/she/it] has acquired a prescriptive easement, Plaintiff must show that for a period of five years [his/her/its] use of Defendant's property has been (1) open and notorious, (2) continuous and uninterrupted, and (3) under a claim of right hostile to the defendant's right of exclusive use as owner.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1007; Code Civ. Proc. § 321; Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 570, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; Kapner v. Meadowlark Ranch Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 1182, 1186, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 138 ; Harrison v. Welch (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 1084, 1090, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 92 ; Mehdizadeh v. DeMann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 235, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1260-1261, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 338-339, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46 ; Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 708, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by a party who claims to have acquired a right to make a specific use of another's property by open, notorious, and continuous use that is adverse to the interest of the true owner. The party may be either a plaintiff or a defendant in a quiet title, trespass, or nuisance action. The instruction should follow the general introductory instruction in MB 7700A.01 and be used in conjunction with an instruction on the "clear and convincing evidence" standard of proof [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201]. It may also be used by a servient landowner who seeks to prove the extinguishment of an easement by a use of the easement that is adverse to the easement owner's rights.

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7700A.07 that explains the meaning of "open and notorious" use.

[3] Comment

[a] Nature of Prescriptive Easement

An easement is a restricted right to a specific or limited use or activity on another's property, which must be less than the right of ownership [Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1261, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779]. A prescriptive easement for traveling across the property of another is limited to a "single, defined right-of-way" [Bustillos v. Murphy (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 1277, 1281, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 895]. A prescriptive easement in another's property may be acquired by open, notorious, continuous, adverse use, under a claim of right, for a period of five years [Code Civ. Proc. § 321; Civ. Code § 1007; Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 570, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; Felgenhauer v. Soni (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 445, 449, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 135 ; Kapner v. Meadowlark Ranch Assn. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 1182, 1186, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 138 ; Harrison v. Welch (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 1084, 1090, 11 Cal.Rptr.3d 92 ; Otay Water Dist. v. Beckwith (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1045, 3 Cal.Rptr.2d 223 ; Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 708, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331].

These elements are designed to ensure that the true real property's owner being encroached on has actual or constructive notice of the adverse use and to provide the true owner sufficient time to take necessary action to prevent that adverse use from ripening into a prescriptive easement [Field-Escandon v. DeMann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 235, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49 ; Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 593, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25]. Whether each of the elements of prescription is established is a question of fact for the court or jury [Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 570, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 593, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 343, Easements and Licenses (Matthew Bender).

[b] Adverse Possession Distinguished From Prescriptive Easement

The elements necessary for prescriptive easement resemble those necessary for adverse possession, but the doctrines are not identical nor are their prerequisites interchangeable [Felgenhauer v. Soni (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 445, 449, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 135 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1261, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; see Ch. 76A, Matthew Bender Acquiring Title to Real Property Instructions, Part C, for instructions on adverse possession]. Unlike adverse possession, proof of a prescriptive easement does not require proof of payment of taxes [see [d], below]. Under Civ. Code § 806, which provides that the extent of a servitude is determined by the nature of the enjoyment by which it was acquired, a claimant's right to a prescriptive easement is limited to the actual use of the easement during the statutory period [Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 340, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46]. Unlike adverse possession, which refers to title acquired by continuous possession of another's land, a prescriptive easement is the right to use another's land acquired by continuous use [Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 338, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46]. A court may not grant a prescriptive easement if it would deprive the owner of essentially all rights in the property. In that case, the claimant must proceed under the adverse possession doctrine, and show payment of taxes on the disputed property [Bustillos v. Murphy (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 1277, 1281, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 895].

When a claimant cannot satisfy the requirements for adverse possession, the claimant may not receive a prescriptive easement that extends so far that it becomes the equivalent of a fee interest and dispossesses the record title owners of part of their property [Mehdizadeh v. Mincer (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1296, 1304-1305, 54 Cal.Rptr.2d 284]. Moreover, a party claiming a prescriptive easement may not use the doctrine of color of title to expand the area of the claim--the extent of a prescriptive easement is determined solely by the area actually used [Thomson v. Dypvik (1985) 174 Cal.App.3d 329, 340, 220 Cal.Rptr. 46].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 360, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender).

[c] Burden of Proof on Party Claiming Easement

The party claiming the prescriptive easement bears the burden of proving each of its elements [Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 570, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1248, 1260, 228 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 593, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25]. When the claimant offers satisfactory evidence that all of the required elements exist, the burden of showing that the use was merely permissive shifts to the owner of the servient land [Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 594, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25 ; see MB 7700A.08 for instruction on defense of permissive use]. Continuous use of an easement over a long period of time without the landowner's interference is presumptive evidence of its existence, and, in the absence of evidence of mere permissive use, this presumption will be sufficient to sustain a judgment [Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 571-572, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; MacDonald Properties, Inc. v. Bel-Air Country Club (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 693, 702, 140 Cal.Rptr. 367].

A finding of the existence of a prescriptive easement must be based on clear and convincing evidence [Field-Escandon v. DeMann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 235, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49 ; Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 708, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331]. The character and extent of the use (e.g., the type and intensity of traffic) determines the nature and extent of the easement [Otay Water Dist. v. Beckwith (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1047, 3 Cal.Rptr.2d 223 ; Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 594, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25]. Thus, an easement allowing a right of way over another's land is limited only by the extent of the use made during the statutory period; subsequent use cannot exceed the burden imposed by the use during that time [Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 594-595, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25 , quoting Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes v. Vuller (9th Cir. 1971) 437 F.2d 177, 181].

[d] Payment of Taxes Not Required

Unlike adverse possession, proof of a prescriptive easement does not require proof of payment of taxes [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal.3d 317, 327, 178 Cal.Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Otay Water Dist. v. Beckwith (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1045, 1048, 3 Cal.Rptr.2d 223]. Because easements are seldom taxed separately from land itself, the burden of showing that taxes were assessed on the easement is on the party contesting the prescriptive easement [Welsher v. Glickman (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 134, 137, 77 Cal.Rptr. 141 ; Cleary v. Trimble (1964) 229 Cal.App.2d 1, 11, 39 Cal.Rptr. 776]. Until there is evidence that the easement was separately assessed, the prescriptive claimant need not prove payment of taxes [Balestrieri v. Sullivan (1956) 142 Cal.App.2d 332, 341-342, 298 P.2d 688].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.07

MB 7700A.07 Easement by Prescription: "Open and Notorious" Use

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To establish the existence of a prescriptive easement on another's property, Plaintiff must prove that [his/her/its] use was "open and notorious." To prove this element, Plaintiff must prove by clear and convincing evidence that Defendant was actually aware of or had constructive notice of the existence of the adverse use on Defendant's property so that Defendant had an opportunity to take action to prevent that adverse use from ripening into a prescriptive easement.

[OPTIONAL (Use if constructive notice is at issue)]

Defendant had constructive notice of the adverse use if both of the following are true:

- 1. Defendant had actual notice of circumstances sufficient to cause a prudent person to inquire further; and
- 2. Defendant might have learned about the adverse use if [he/she/it] had inquired further.

For example, if there were visible signs of the adverse use, then a prudent person would probably inquire further.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 19; Field-Escandon v. Demann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 236-237, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49 ; Jones v. Harmon (1959) 175 Cal.App.2d 869, 879, 1 Cal.Rptr. 192 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 7700A.06 on the elements of proving an easement by prescription to explain in more detail the term "open and notorious." The optional part of the instruction should be used when constructive notice is at issue.

[3] Comment

To establish the existence of a prescriptive easement on another's property, the claimant must prove that the use was open and notorious. This requires proof that the property owner was aware of the adverse use, with the resulting opportunity to take action to prevent the adverse use from ripening into a prescriptive easement [Field-Escandon v. Demann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 235-236, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49]. An open and notorious use is a use that notifies the owner that the property is being used in a way that is inconsistent with the owner's rights [Kerr Land & Timber Co. v. Emmerson (1969) 268 Cal.App.2d 628, 634, 74 Cal.Rptr. 307]. Notice to the owner may be either actual or constructive [Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 709-710, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331]. The burden of proving open and notorious use is on the person asserting the claim of easement by prescription [Field-Escandon v. Demann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 235, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49 ; Zimmer v. Dykstra (1974) 39 Cal.App.3d 422, 431, 114 Cal.Rptr. 380].

A person who has actual notice of circumstances that would be deemed sufficient to notify a prudent person of a particular fact has constructive notice of the fact itself if he or she might have learned the fact by further inquiry [Civ. Code § 19]. In most cases, the courts require some visibility of the easement throughout its prescriptive period, or at least the existence of apparent accessories or other physical signs [Field-Escandon v. Demann (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 228, 236-237, 251 Cal.Rptr. 49]. There cannot be concealment or furtive conduct on the claimant's part [Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 593, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25].

Although mere passage over the property is insufficient to establish a prescriptive easement, the fact that the easement is used by family members, guests, friends, and business invitees is evidence that supports an inference of open and notorious use [Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 709, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331]. Unlike an adverse possessor, a user claiming easement by prescription is not required to show that he or she used the easement to the exclusion of all others, including the true owner [Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 710, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331]. However, the claimant's right to use the easement must be based on individual use rather than use as a member of the public [Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 709-710, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.08

MB 7700A.08 Easement by Prescription: Defense of Permissive Use

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Plaintiff proves by clear and convincing evidence that [he/she/it] openly, notoriously, and continuously used the claimed easement for more than five years without protest, opposition, or interference from Defendant, the land's owner, then the burden shifts to Defendant to prove that Plaintiff's use was merely permissive.

As jurors, if you find that Plaintiff has proven all of the elements required to establish a prescriptive easement, you must then determine whether Plaintiff's use was adverse to Defendant or was merely a matter of neighborly accommodation. To make this determination, you must examine the relation of the parties, their conduct, the situation of the property, and all of the surrounding circumstances.

Permission may be shown by evidence of a written or spoken license to use the property. Permission may be inferred from other circumstances, such as the neighborly relations of the parties.

When property is used by permission of the owner, the permission is presumed to continue until it is repudiated. Prescriptive use begins only after the owner has notice that the permission has been repudiated and the property is now being used without [his/her/its] permission.

Authorities: Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 570-572, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; MacDonald Properties, Inc. v. Bel-Air Country Club (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 693, 701-702, 140 Cal.Rptr. 367 ; Everett v. Bosch (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 648, 656, 50 Cal.Rptr. 813 ; Finley v. Botto (1958) 161 Cal.App.2d 614, 619-620, 327 P.2d 353 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a landowner defends against a claim of prescriptive easement by arguing that the claimant's use was permissive rather than adverse. It should be used with the instruction in MB 7700A.06 on the elements of proving an easement by prescription. The instruction may also be used with the instruction on license in MB 7700A.13.

[3] Comment

When the claimant offers satisfactory evidence that all of the required elements exist for a prescriptive easement, the burden of showing that the use was merely permissive shifts to the owner of the servient land [Twin Peaks Land Co. v. Briggs (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 587, 594, 181 Cal.Rptr. 25]. The continuous use of an easement over a long period of time without the landowner's interference is presumptive evidence of its existence and that, in the absence of evidence of mere permissive use, this presumption will be sufficient to sustain a judgment [Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 571-572, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; MacDonald Properties, Inc. v. Bel-Air Country Club (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 693, 702, 140 Cal.Rptr. 367].

The presumption of adverse use based on open and notorious use without protest has been criticized [O'Banion v. Borba (1948) 32 Cal.2d 145, 148-151, 195 P.2d 10 ; Conaway v. Toogood (1916) 172 Cal. 706, 708-709, 158 P. 200]. In one case, an instruction on this presumption was criticized on the ground that it "did not follow the better rule" [LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal.App.2d 154, 162, 22 Cal.Rptr. 747 (better rule is that open and notorious use is evidence of adverse use, but it does not raise presumption of adverse use)]. However, the court found that the instruction did not constitute prejudice, and it upheld the verdict. In upholding the jury's verdict, the court relied in part on the other instructions given, including an instruction in language similar to that used in the second paragraph of the instruction in [1], above [LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal.App.2d 154, 159-164, 170-171, 22 Cal.Rptr. 747].

Despite this criticism, the presumption continues to be applied [Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 571-572, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584 ; Applegate v. Ota (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 702, 708-711, 194 Cal.Rptr. 331 ; MacDonald Properties, Inc. v. Bel-Air Country Club (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 693, 702-703, 140 Cal.Rptr. 367]. A case decided in 2008 noted that there is still a split of authority as to the existence of the presumption [Grant v. Ratliff (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 1304, 1308, 79 Cal.Rptr.3d 902]. That court concluded that Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. did not overrule O'Banion v. Borba, but stands for nothing more than that the open, notorious, and continuous use of another person's land is sufficient evidence to support a finding that the use was adverse [Grant v. Ratliff (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 1304, 1309, 79 Cal.Rptr.3d 902]. Grant also noted that Warsaw did not specify the type of presumption, and concluded that if a presumption did apply, it would be one affecting the burden of producing evidence, not the burden of proof [Grant v. Ratliff (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 1304, 1309-1310, 79 Cal.Rptr.3d 902].

Whether the use is hostile or is merely a matter of neighborly accommodation is a question of fact to be determined in light of the surrounding circumstances and the relationship between the parties [Warsaw v. Chicago Metallic Ceilings, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 564, 572, 199 Cal.Rptr. 773, 676 P.2d 584]. The posting of appropriate permissive use signs provided for by Civ. Code § 1008 or the recording of a notice of revocable consent under Civ. Code § 813 is conclusive evidence of the permissive nature of the use.

Permission may be shown by evidence of a written or oral license to use the property [see MB 7700A.13]. It may also be inferred from other circumstances, such as the neighborly relations of the parties [Finley v. Botto (1958) 161 Cal.App.2d 614, 619-620, 327 P.2d 55]. When property is used by permission of the owner, the permission is presumed to continue until it is repudiated, and prescriptive use only begins when the owner has notice of the repudiation [Everett v. Bosch (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 648, 656, 50 Cal.Rptr. 813].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.09

MB 7700A.09 Extent of Use

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In this case, Plaintiff contends that [he/she/it] has acquired [an implied easement/a prescriptive easement] over Defendant's land. If you find that such an easement exists in Plaintiff's favor, you must further determine whether the easement's extent and scope allows Plaintiff to _____ [describe use, activity, or conduct in question].

[USE THE FOLLOWING AS APPROPRIATE (Use when implied easement or easement by necessity is at issue.)]

In determining the extent and scope of an easement by [implied grant/implied reservation/necessity], you should consider (1) all the circumstances that existed at the time of the original transfer to ascertain the intent of the parties involved, (2) the prior use that gave rise to the easement, and (3) the character and extent of the prior use. [Optional (Use if access easement is at issue): In the case of an access easement, for example, you should consider the type and intensity of traffic.]

In addition, you should consider what was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time of conveyance. In so doing, you should assume that the parties anticipated those uses that might reasonably be required by normal development of the dominant estate, but it is not to be assumed that they anticipated an abnormal development that would impose an undue burden on the servient estate.

[USE THE FOLLOWING AS APPROPRIATE (Use when prescriptive easement is at issue.)]

In determining the extent and scope of a prescriptive easement, you should consider the nature, character, extent, location, and type of use that the dominant tenement experienced during the prescriptive period. To determine whether the present use is permissible, you must compare the present use and the use by which the easement was created on the following points:

- 1. Their physical character;
- 2. Their purpose; and
- 3. The relative burden caused by them on the servient tenement.

The ultimate criterion in determining a prescriptive easement's scope is that of avoiding increased burdens on the servient tenement while allowing some flexibility in the use of the dominant tenement. However, the nature, scope, and extent of the use in question must not substantially increase the burden placed on the servient tenement as it existed during the prescriptive period.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 806; Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 866-867, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Neff v. Ernst (1957) 48 Cal.2d 628, 636, 311 P.2d 849 ; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 9-10, 215 P.2d 729 ; George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 862, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Horowitz v. Noble (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 120, 133-134, 144 Cal.Rptr. 710 ; Jordan v. Worthen (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 310, 324-325, 137 Cal.Rptr. 282 ; Pipkin v. Der Torosian (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 722, 729, 111 Cal.Rptr. 46 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 4.10 (2000).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a dispute exists over the permissibility or propriety of the use of a particular easement by the dominant landowner. The first option should be used when the easement in question was originally established by implied grant (or reservation) or necessity. The second option should be used when the easement was acquired by prescription.

[3] Comment

[a] Easement by Implication

The extent to which an owner may use an implied easement depends on "the nature of the enjoyment by which it was acquired" [Civ. Code § 806]. The scope of an easement created by implication is to be inferred from the circumstances that give rise to the implication [Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 866-867, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Southern Pacific Co. v. San Francisco (1964) 62 Cal.2d 50, 54, 41 Cal.Rptr. 79, 396 P.2d 383 ; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 9, 215 P.2d 729 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 4.10 (2000)]. One of these circumstances is the use being made of the dominant estate at that time, but the authorized use of the easement is not limited to the use required by the dominant estate at the time the easement arose [Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 866-867, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 9, 215 P.2d 729 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 4.10 (2000)].

The extent of the authorized use is to be measured by the uses that the parties might reasonably have expected from the future use of the dominant estate, based on the circumstances at the time the property was divided [Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 866-867, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 9, 215 P.2d 729 ; George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 862, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 4.10 (2000)]. It is assumed that the parties anticipated the uses that might reasonably be required by a normal development of the dominant estate [Camp Meeker Water System, Inc. v. Public Utilities Com. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 845, 866-867, 274 Cal.Rptr. 678, 799 P.2d 758 ; Neff v. Ernst (1957) 48 Cal.2d 628, 636, 311 P.2d 849 ; George v. Goshgarian (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 856, 862, 189 Cal.Rptr. 94]. However, it is not assumed that the parties anticipated an abnormal development [Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 9, 215 P.2d 729 ; Restatement (Third) of Property (Servitudes) § 4.10 (2000)].

The authorized use may be greater or lesser than the preexisting use. Because an easement is implied only when it is reasonably necessary for the property's beneficial use [Fristoe v. Drapeau (1950) 35 Cal.2d 5, 8, 215 P.2d 729 ; see MB 7700A.04], a court may determine as a question of fact that the extent of permissible use of the servient estate should be less than the preexisting use because that is all that is required for the dominant landowner's benefit [Horowitz v. Noble (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 120, 133-134, 144 Cal.Rptr. 710]. In addition, an easement's use can be enlarged when it can be shown that (1) an increased use was within the natural contemplation of the parties as a foreseeable and ordinary development of the dominant estate, and (2) the use is for reasonable purposes consistent with the basic purpose of the easement's scope [see Laux v. Freed (1960) 53 Cal.2d 512, 525, 2 Cal.Rptr. 265, 348 P.2d 873 ; Pasadena v. California-Michigan etc. Co. (1941) 17 Cal.2d 576, 579, 110 P.2d 983].

Whether the increased or different use is excessive or abnormal is a question of fact that depends on the circumstances that existed at the time of the easement's creation [Neff v. Ernst (1957) 48 Cal.2d 628, 635-636, 311 P.2d 849].

[b] Easement by Prescription

The location and extent of a prescriptive easement is generally determined by the use made during the prescriptive period [Otay Water Dist. v. Beckwith (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1047-1048, 3 Cal.Rptr.2d 223 ; Connolly v. McDermott (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 973, 977, 208 Cal.Rptr. 796]. The extent of an easement not acquired by grant depends on "the nature of the enjoyment by which it was acquired" [Civ. Code § 806]. This means that the owner of a prescriptive easement may not make any substantially different or greater use of the easement than was made during the prescriptive period [Jordan v. Worthen (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 310, 322, 137 Cal.Rptr. 282 ; Bartholomew v. Staheli (1948) 86 Cal.App.2d 844, 850, 195 P.2d 824].

To determine whether a particular use is permissible, the use at issue must be compared to the use by which the easement was created in all of the following regards [Jordan v. Worthen (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 310, 324-325 n.2, 137 Cal.Rptr. 282]:

- The physical character of the two uses;
- Their purposes;
- The relative burden caused by the uses on the servient estate; and
- The needs that result from a normal evolution by the dominant landowner's use.

Because land is subject to continuous change caused by natural forces and human activity, the extent of a prescriptive easement cannot be exactly measured by the conditions of the dominant estate during the prescriptive period [Jordan v. Worthen (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 310, 324-325 n.2, 137 Cal.Rptr. 282].

The ultimate criterion in determining a prescriptive easement's scope is that of avoiding increased burdens on the servient estate while allowing some flexibility in the use of the dominant estate [Pipkin v. Der Torosian (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 722, 729, 111 Cal.Rptr. 46].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.10

MB 7700A.10 Unreasonable Interference With Easement by Servient Landowner

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff contends that [his/her/its] ability to use a validly acquired easement is being unreasonably interfered with by Defendant. Even though an easement exists in Plaintiff's favor, Defendant, as [the owner/the owner's assignee] of the servient estate, retains every incident or benefit of ownership that is not inconsistent with the easement and that does not interfere unreasonably with the easement.

As the owner of the dominant estate, Plaintiff must prove all of the facts necessary to establish that Defendant's use of [his/her/its] land is an unreasonable interference with Plaintiff's easement. In determining whether Defendant's use of [his/her/its] land is an unreasonable interference with Plaintiff's easement, you must consider (1) the intent of the original grantor and grantee at the time of the original conveyance, (2) the nature of the enjoyment by which the easement was acquired, and (3) all the circumstances surrounding the easement's creation.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 806; Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 224, 259 P.2d 429 ; Pasadena v. California-Michigan etc. Co. (1941) 17 Cal.2d 576, 579, 110 P.2d 983 ; McCann v. City of Los Angeles (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 112, 116, 144 Cal.Rptr. 696 ; City of Los Angeles v. Ingersoll-Rand Co. (1976) 57 Cal.App.3d 889, 893, 129 Cal.Rptr. 485 ; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hacienda Mobile Home Park (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 519, 528, 119 Cal.Rptr. 559 ; Guerra v. Packard (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 272, 295, 46 Cal.Rptr. 25 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when an easement owner claims that the servient estate's owner, or an authorized representative of the servient owner, is unreasonably interfering with the easement. The instruction presumes the existence of a valid easement and may be used regardless of whether the easement arose by express or implied grant or reservation, by necessity, or by prescription.

This instruction must be used with an instruction on preponderance of the evidence [see, e.g., Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200, Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True].

[3] Comment

In general, every incident of ownership not inconsistent with the easement and its enjoyment is retained by the servient estate's owner [City of Los Angeles v. Ingersoll-Rand Co. (1976) 57 Cal.App.3d 889, 893-894, 129 Cal.Rptr. 485 ; Guerra v. Packard (1965) 236 Cal.App.2d 272, 295, 46 Cal.Rptr. 25]. The servient estate's owner may make any use of the property that does not interfere unreasonably with the easement owner's superior right [Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 224, 259 P.2d 429 ; Pasadena v. California-Michigan etc. Co. (1941) 17 Cal.2d 576, 579, 110 P.2d 983 ; McCann v. City of Los Angeles (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 112, 116, 144 Cal.Rptr. 696].

Whether a particular use of land by the owner of the servient estate constitutes an unreasonable interference with the easement is a question of fact for the jury or trier of fact, and its findings based on conflicting evidence are binding on appeal [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hacienda Mobile Home Park (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 519, 528, 119 Cal.Rptr. 559 ; City of Los Angeles v. Howard (1966) 244 Cal.App.2d 538, 543-544, 53 Cal.Rptr. 274]. Because the extent of an easement is determined by the terms of the grant (express easements) or the nature of the enjoyment by which the easement was created (implied and prescriptive easements) [Civ. Code § 806], the reasonableness of the servient landowner's use must be considered in light of the parties' intent and all the circumstances surrounding the easement's creation [McCann v. City of Los Angeles (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 112, 117, 144 Cal.Rptr. 696 ; City of Los Angeles v. Jameson (1958) 165 Cal.App.2d 351, 357, 331 P.2d 1014].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.11

MB 7700A.11 Damages for Unreasonable Interference With Easement

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff has suffered damages that were caused by Defendant's unreasonable interference with Plaintiff's easement, then Plaintiff is entitled to recover the following damages:

1. The amount that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff for the damage to [his/her/its] property interest. This amount equals the difference in the fair market value of the property immediately before the injury and immediately after the injury. However, if the defendant proves that the injury has been repaired or is capable of being repaired, and that this repair has restored or will restore the property to the value it had before the injury, then the cost of this repair is the proper measure of damage, if the cost of the repair is less than the amount of the difference in fair market value.

2. The amount that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff for [his/her] annoyance, discomfort, or mental distress naturally flowing from Defendant's act[s] and from Plaintiff's loss of use. The amount of these damages, if any, is left to your sound judgment and discretion based on the evidence, without the necessity of receiving any opinion testimony concerning the amount of the damages.

"Market value" means the highest price in money that the property would bring if offered for sale in the open market, with a reasonable time allowed to find a buyer who buys with knowledge of all the uses and purposes to which the property is suited and of which it is capable.

Authorities: Harman v. City and County of San Francisco (1972) 7 Cal.3d 150, 165, 101 Cal.Rptr. 880, 496 P.2d 1248 ; Merced Irrigation Dist. v. Woolstenhulme (1971) 4 Cal.3d 478, 488, 93 Cal.Rptr. 833, 483 P.2d 1 ; Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 265, 267, 288 P.2d 507 ; Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 225, 259

P.2d 429 ; Moylan v. Dykes (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 561, 574, 226 Cal.Rptr. 673 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by an easement owner who claims to have suffered damages resulting from unreasonable interference with the easement. The action for interference may be against an interfering servient landowner or a third party.

[3] Comment

A person who interferes with or obstructs an easement's use deprives the easement owner of a protectable property interest [Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 225, 259 P.2d 429]. This interference is a private nuisance or trespass for which the easement owner may recover damages [Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 225, 259 P.2d 429 ; Moylan v. Dykes (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 561, 574, 226 Cal.Rptr. 673]. The easement owner may recover compensatory damages measured by the depreciation in market value caused by the defendant's interference [Moylan v. Dykes (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 561, 574, 226 Cal.Rptr. 673], as well as damages for personal discomfort, annoyance, and mental distress, even if the nuisance or trespass does not injure the property or decrease its value [Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 265, 274, 288 P.2d 507 ; Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 225, 259 P.2d 429].

If the interference results in a reduction in the property's market value, the plaintiff's damages are measured by the difference in the property's value immediately before and after the interference [Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 265, 267, 288 P.2d 507 ; Lawlor v. Southern Pacific Co. (1918) 39 Cal.App. 97, 100, 178 P. 165]. Once the plaintiff establishes his or her damages by showing the reduction in the property's value, the burden is on the defendant to come forward with proof that the cost of restoring the property would be less than the amount of the reduction in market value [Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal.2d 219, 226, 259 P.2d 429 ; for the definition of "market value" used in this instruction, see Harman v. City and County of San Francisco (1972) 7 Cal.3d 150, 165, 101 Cal.Rptr. 880, 496 P.2d 1248 ; Merced Irrigation Dist. v. Woolstenhulme (1971) 4 Cal.3d 478, 488, 93 Cal.Rptr. 833, 483 P.2d 1 ; see also Ch. 35, California Judicial Council Eminent Domain Instructions, CACI No. 3501, "Fair Market Value" Explained].

If the nuisance can be abated, the remedy is either abatement or damages for loss of market value, but not both [Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal.2d 265, 269, 239 P.2d 625]. If the nuisance will continue indefinitely, the plaintiff can recover in a single action damages for past and future injuries, that is, for the reduction in the property's value up to the time of the suit and for damages foreseeably resulting from the future continuance of the unreasonable interference. Alternatively, the plaintiff can elect to sue for past injuries and bring later actions for any future injuries [Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 265, 269-271, 288 P.2d 507 ; Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal.2d 265, 268-270, 239 P.2d 625].

In any action for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death that is based on comparative fault, each defendant is liable only for the amount of non-economic damages that is allocated to that defendant in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault, and there must be a separate judgment against that defendant for that amount [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. "Non-economic damages" are subjective, non-monetary losses including, but not limited to, pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental suffering, emotional distress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation, and humiliation [Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(2)].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.12

MB 7700A.12 Termination of Easement by Abandonment[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

_____ [Servient landowner] contends that the easement was abandoned by _____ [easement owner]. To prove this abandonment, _____ [servient landowner] must prove that _____ [easement owner] has shown by [his/her/its] conduct a clear intention to forgo all future conforming uses of the easement. The fact that _____ [easement owner] has not used the easement for _____ [specify period of nonuse, e.g., three years] is not by itself proof of abandonment, but it is evidence that you may consider in deciding whether [he/she/it] intended to abandon the easement. You must find that _____ [easement owner]'s conduct is so decisive and conclusive that it shows a clear intent to abandon the easement.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a servient landowner sues or defends by claiming that the dominant owner's easement has been abandoned. The instruction applies only to an easement acquired by express or implied grant (or reservation), and it may not be applied to an easement by prescription or an easement by necessity [see [3][b], below, for discussion of special rules applicable to prescriptive easements]. This instruction should be used with the introductory instruction in MB 7700A.01, which explains what an easement is.

[3] Comment[a] Abandonment of Easement Acquired by Grant

The owner of an easement acquired by grant may terminate the easement by abandoning it. Extinguishment of an easement by abandonment requires (1) nonuse, and (2) the intent to abandon the easement [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 890-892, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692 ; Faus v. City of Los Angeles (1967) 67 Cal.2d 350, 363, 62 Cal.Rptr. 193, 431 P.2d 849 ; Buechner v. Jonas (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 127, 132, 39 Cal.Rptr. 298 ; Lake Merced Golf & Country Club v. Ocean S. R. Co. (1962) 206 Cal.App.2d 421, 436-439, 23 Cal.Rptr. 881 ; Flanagan v. San Marcos Silk Co. (1951) 106 Cal.App.2d 458, 462-463, 235 P.2d 107] . Proof of intent to abandon requires evidence of acts by the owner so decisive and conclusive that they show a clear intent to abandon the easement [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 890-892, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692 ; Tract Development Service, Inc. v. Kepler (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 1374, 1384-1385, 246 Cal.Rptr. 469 ; Flanagan v. San Marcos Silk Co. (1951) 106 Cal.App.2d 458, 462, 235 P.2d 107]. Nonuse alone does not prove intent or constitute an abandonment, but nonuse is some evidence of an intent to abandon [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 890-892, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692 ; Flanagan v. San Marcos Silk Co. (1951) 106 Cal.App.2d 458, 462, 235 P.2d 107].

Because abandonment depends primarily on the owner's intent, abandonment is a question of fact to be determined by the trial court or the jury from a consideration of the easement owner's conduct and all the surrounding circumstances [Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal.2d 864, 892, 69 Cal.Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692 ; Buechner v. Jonas (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 127, 131, 39 Cal.Rptr. 298].

[b] Abandonment of Prescriptive Easement

A special rule applies to the abandonment of prescriptive easements. Under Civ. Code § 811(4), an easement acquired by prescription may be extinguished by "disuse" by the easement owner for the period prescribed for acquiring a prescriptive easement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 321; Civ. Code § 1007 (period for acquiring prescriptive easement is five years); see also MB 7700A.06]. The disuse required is failure to use the easement in the way it was formerly used [Strong v. Baldwin (1908) 154 Cal. 150, 161, 97 P. 178]. It is not necessary to show an intent to abandon to prove the abandonment of a prescriptive easement [People v. Ocean Shore Railroad (1948) 32 Cal.2d 406, 419, 196 P.2d 570].

[c] Statutory Abandonment Procedure

A special statutory procedure is available to establish the abandonment of certain easements that have not been used for at least 20 years [Civ. Code §§ 887.010-887.090]. This statutory procedure is supplementary to the common law of abandonment and does not limit or affect the common law governing abandonment of an easement or any other procedure provided by statute or otherwise for clearing an abandoned easement from the title to real property [Civ. Code § 887.030; see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 343, Easements and Licenses (Matthew Bender) for discussion of this statutory procedure].

CHAPTER 77A Matthew Bender Easement Instructions

6-77A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 7700A.13

MB 7700A.13 License in Real Property

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] has been granted a license to _____ [describe use or activity] on Defendant's land.

A license in real property is a grant of a personal privilege authorizing a person or entity (called the licensee) to perform some specified act or acts on the land of another person or entity (called the licensor) without conferring any possessory interest in the other's land. In the absence of something written, a license may be created by spoken words or by the exercise of the privilege with the licensor's acquiescence.

You must examine the acts of the parties and their relations with each other to determine whether Plaintiff has proved that Defendant assented to _____ [describe use or activity] by Plaintiff. Defendant's assent may be manifested by written or spoken words, or it may be inferred from the acts of the parties, their relations with each other, or custom. For example, when a property owner knows that people are entering his or her property for a certain purpose and does not object to that entry, a license to enter may be inferred.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

An easement, which cannot be revoked by the grantor, is not a license. A license is generally revocable at any time at the will of the licensor. Moreover, the privilege conferred by a license is personal to the licensee and cannot be inherited, transferred, or assigned.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

If you find that Defendant has agreed to or acquiesced in Plaintiff's use of Defendant's land and that this agreement or acquiescence has not been revoked, then you must find that the _____ [describe use or activity] is permitted by license.

Krejci* (1960) 187 Cal.App.2d 553, 555, 9 Cal.Rptr. 703 ; Fisher v. General Petroleum Corp. (1954) 123 Cal.App.2d 770, 776, 267 P.2d 841 ; Eastman v. Piper (1924) 68 Cal.App. 554, 560, 229 P. 1002 ; Restatement of Property § 512.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain what constitutes a license in real property. The optional paragraph should be used when it is necessary to distinguish a license from an easement.

[3] Comment

[a] Nature of License

A license granted by a private landowner is generally defined as personal, revocable, and nonassignable permission or authority to perform specified acts on the landowner's property [Belmont County Water Dist. v. State of California (1976) 65 Cal.App.3d 13, 17, 135 Cal.Rptr. 163 ; Eastman v. Piper (1924) 68 Cal.App. 554, 560, 229 P. 1002 ; Restatement of Property § 512]. A license may be created in writing, orally, or by the exercise of the privilege with the licensor's acquiescence [Zellers v. State of California (1955) 134 Cal.App.2d 270, 273, 285 P.2d 962 ; Fisher v. General Petroleum Corp. (1954) 123 Cal.App.2d 770, 776, 267 P.2d 841].

No formalities are necessary to create a license [Restatement of Property § 515]. The only thing essential to the creation of a license is some expression of assent to the licensee's use by the licensor [Eastman v. Piper (1924) 68 Cal.App. 554, 560, 229 P. 1002 ; Restatement of Property § 512(b)]. In the absence of any spoken or written words evidencing the licensor's assent, the assent may be inferred from the acts of the parties or their relations with each other [Eastman v. Piper (1924) 68 Cal.App. 554, 560, 229 P. 1002 ; Restatement of Property § 516, Comment c]. For example, a license to enter will be inferred whenever a landowner knows that people are entering on his or her property and the owner does not object to that entry [Lusk v. Krejci (1960) 187 Cal.App.2d 553, 555, 9 Cal.Rptr. 703].

Similarly, the revocation of a license requires no formalities. A licensor's attempt to interfere with or frustrate the licensee's use may be sufficient to show the license's revocation [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 343, Easements and Licenses (Matthew Bender)]. With certain exceptions [see [d], below], a mere license may be revoked at any time at the licensor's pleasure [Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 618, 220 P.2d 729 ; County of Alameda v. Ross (1939) 32 Cal.App.2d 135, 143, 89 P.2d 460 ; Restatement of Property § 519(1)].

[b] Licenses and Easements Compared Licenses and easements are very similar. In fact, when parties try to create an easement, a license may result if they fail to satisfy one or more of the requirements for an easement [Noronha v. Stewart (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 485, 490, 245 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Restatement of Property § 514]. However, there are important differences between licenses and easements. The principal difference is that a license, unlike an easement, is revocable at the will of the licensor. A license is therefore generally not a compensable interest in real property [County of Alameda v. Ross (1939) 32 Cal.App.2d 135, 143, 89 P.2d 460]. In addition, a license is an entirely personal interest, and is terminated if the licensee attempts to transfer or assign it [see Powell On Real Property, Ch. 34, Easements and Licenses, § 34.25 (Matthew Bender); California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 343, Easements and Licenses, § 343.35[2] (Matthew Bender)] or the licensor transfers the property to a third party [Shaw v. Caldwell (1911) 16 Cal.App. 1, 7-8, 115 P. 941]. Because a license requires the licensor's assent, a license may not form the basis of a prescriptive title [Everett v. Bosch (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 648, 656, 50 Cal.Rptr. 813 ; Kaler v. Brown (1951) 101 Cal.App.2d 716, 719, 226 P.2d 66].

[c] Licenses and Leases Compared

To determine whether an agreement for the property's use is a license or a lease, one must examine the "nature of the possession granted ... [i]f the contract gives exclusive possession of the premises against all the world, including the owner, it is a lease; if it merely confers a privilege to occupy the premises under the owner, it is a license" [Qualls v. Lake Berryessa Enterprises, Inc. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 1277, 1283, 91 Cal.Rptr.2d 143]. Thus, a concession agreement that granted mobilehome owners the right to a mobilehome space and specified services, such as parking passes and garbage collection, but did not purport to convey any sort of title or possessory interest, created a license rather than a lease [Qualls v. Lake Berryessa Enterprises, Inc. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 1277, 1284, 91 Cal.Rptr.2d 143].

[d] License Coupled With Interest

Although usually revocable at the will of the licensor, a license may become irrevocable when coupled with an interest [Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 618, 220 P.2d 729 ; Restatement of Property § 519(1), (3)]. A license coupled with an interest is a license that is incidental to the ownership of an interest in personal property located on the subject land [Restatement of Property § 513]. Thus, the owner of a chattel may have the right to cross another's land to use, secure, or remove the chattel [Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 618, 220 P.2d 729 ; Restatement of Property § 513, Comment a]. The license serves as a defense to an action for trespass [Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 619, 220 P.2d 729]. A license coupled with an interest continues to exist for the period contemplated by the license [Bomberger v. McKelvey (1950) 35 Cal.2d 607, 618, 220 P.2d 729].

[e] Estoppel

A license may become irrevocable when a licensee makes expenditures, builds structures, expends labor, or otherwise changes position in reasonable reliance on the license [Hammond v. Mustard (1967) 257 Cal.App.2d 384, 389, 64 Cal.Rptr. 829 ; Restatement of Property § 519(4)]. The transformation of a license from a mere revocable personal privilege into an enforceable right is based on equitable estoppel [Cooke v. Ramponi (1952) 38 Cal.2d 282, 286, 239 P.2d 638].

[f] Effect of Irrevocable License

When the licensor is estopped to revoke the license, the licensee has the right to enter on the licensor's land to exercise the license and, if necessary, to maintain, secure, or remove any equipment or structures erected in accordance with the license [Higgins v. Kadjevich (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 520, 523-524, 9 Cal.Rptr. 115]. When a license is irrevocable, the license has the same effect as an easement [Noronha v. Stewart (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 485, 490, 245 Cal.Rptr. 94 ; Higgins v. Kadjevich (1960) 186 Cal.App.2d 520, 523-524, 9 Cal.Rptr. 115]. The irrevocable license will continue for as long as the nature of the license requires [Cooke v. Ramponi (1952) 38 Cal.2d 282, 286, 239 P.2d 638].
