Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1100, Dangerous Condition on Public Property--Essential Factual Elements.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

Publisher's Notes

This verdict form covers issues presented in BAJI No. 16.30.

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1100, Dangerous Condition on Public Property--Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 1111, Affirmative Defense--Condition Created by Reasonable Act or Omission, and CACI No. 1112, Affirmative Defense--Reasonable Act or Omission to Correct.

For questions 4 and 6, choose the first bracketed options if liability is alleged because of an employee's negligent conduct under Government Code section 835(a). Use the second bracketed options if liability is alleged for failure to act after actual or constructive notice under Government Code section 835(b). Both options may be given if the plaintiff is proceeding under both theories of liability.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

CHAPTER 12 California Judicial Council Products Liability Instructions

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Product Liability Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1200 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Strict liability causes of action, including essential factual elements generally [CACI No. 1200], manufacturing defects [CACI Nos. 1201, 1202], design defects [CACI Nos. 1203, 1204], the failure to warn [CACI Nos. 1205, 1206], and comparative fault/contributory negligence [CACI Nos. 1207A, 1207B].
- Negligence causes of action, including essential factual elements [CACI No. 1220], the basic standard of care [CACI No. 1221] and the standard of care in a product rental case [CACI No. 1224], the duty to warn [CACI No. 1222], and recall/retrofit [CACI No. 1223].
- Warranties, including essential factual elements for an express warranty [CACI No. 1230], the implied warranty of merchantability [CACI No. 1231], the implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose [CACI No. 1232], and the implied warranty of merchantability for food [CACI No. 1233].
- Affirmative defenses [CACI Nos. 1241-1242, 1244, 1246] and notification/reasonable time [CACI No. 1243].

The products liability series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1200-VF-1208].

Sources and Authority

■ "A manufacturer, distributor, or retailer is liable in tort if a defect in the manufacture or design of its product causes injury while the product is being used in a reasonably foreseeable way." (Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 560 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Strict liability has been invoked for three types of defects--manufacturing defects, design defects, and 'warning defects,' i.e., inadequate warnings or failures to warn." (Anderson v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1991) 53 Cal.3d 987, 995 [281 Cal.Rptr. 528, 810 P.2d 549] .)

■ "A manufacturer is strictly liable in tort when an article he places on the market, knowing that it is to be used without inspection for defects, proves to have a defect that causes injury to a human being. ... The purpose of such liability is to insure that the costs of injuries resulting from defective products are borne by the manufacturers that put such products on the market rather than by the injured persons who are powerless to protect themselves." (Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 57, 62-63 [27 Cal.Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897] .)

■ "Beyond manufacturers, anyone identifiable as 'an integral part of the overall producing and marketing enterprise' is subject to strict liability." (Arriaga v. CitiCapital Commercial Corp. (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 1527, 1534 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 143] .)

■ "[T]o hold a defendant strictly liable under a marketing/distribution theory, the plaintiff must demonstrate that: '(1) the defendant received a direct financial benefit from its activities and from the sale of the product; (2) the defendant's role was integral to the business enterprise such that the defendant's conduct was a necessary factor in bringing the product to the initial consumer market; and (3) the defendant had control over, or a substantial ability to influence, the manufacturing or distribution process.' " (Arriaga, supra, 167 Cal.App.4th at p. 1535 .)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the [product] contained a manufacturing defect. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
- 2. That the [product] contained a manufacturing defect when it left [name of defendant]'s possession;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed while using the [product] in a reasonably foreseeable way; and
- 4. That the [product]'s defect was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised April 2009, December 2009

Directions for Use

Product misuse is a complete defense to strict products liability if the defendant proves that an unforeseeable abuse or alteration of the product after it left the manufacturer's hands was the sole reason that the product caused injury. (Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] .) See CACI No. 1245, Affirmative Defense--Product Misuse or Modification. Misuse or modification that was a substantial factor in, but not the sole cause of, plaintiff's harm may also be considered in determining the comparative fault of the plaintiff or of third persons. See CACI No. 1207A, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff, and CACI No. 1207B, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Third Person.

Sources and Authority

■ " 'Regardless of the theory which liability is predicated upon ... it is obvious that to hold a producer, manufacturer, or seller liable for injury caused by a particular product, there must first be proof that the defendant produced, manufactured, sold, or was in some way responsible for the product' " (Garcia v. Joseph Vince Co. (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 868, 874 [148 Cal.Rptr. 843] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]here a plaintiff alleges a product is defective, proof that the product has malfunctioned is essential to establish liability for an injury caused by the defect." (Khan v. Shiley Inc. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 848, 855 [266 Cal.Rptr. 106] , original italics.)

■ In California, there is no requirement that the plaintiff prove that the defect made the product "unreasonably dangerous." (Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal.3d 121, 134-135 [104 Cal.Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153] .) Also, the plaintiff does not have to prove that he or she was unaware of the defect. (Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal.3d 136, 146 [104 Cal.Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163] .)

■ "A manufacturer is liable only when a defect in its product was a legal cause of injury. A tort is a legal cause of injury only when it is a substantial factor in producing the injury." (Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1972) 8 Cal.4th 548, 572 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] , internal citations omitted.)

*2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1202CACI 1202 Strict Liability--"Manufacturing Defect" Explained

A product contains a manufacturing defect if the product differs from the manufacturer's design or specifications or from other typical units of the same product line.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- The Supreme Court has defined a manufacturing defect as follows: "In general, a manufacturing or production defect is readily identifiable because a defective product is one that differs from the manufacturer's intended result or from other ostensibly identical units of the same product line." (Barker v. Lull Engineering Co. (1978) 20 Cal.3d 413, 429 [143 Cal.Rptr. 225, 573 P.2d 443] .)
- "[A] defective product is viewed as one which fails to match the quality of most like products, and the manufacturer is then liable for injuries resulting from deviations from the norm" (Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 379, 383 [93 Cal.Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681] .)

CACI 1203 Strict Liability--Design Defect--Consumer Expectation Test--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims the [product]'s design was defective because the [product] did not perform as safely as an ordinary consumer would have expected it to perform. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
2. That the [product] did not perform as safely as an ordinary consumer would have expected at the time of use;
3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed while using the [product] in a reasonably foreseeable way; and
4. That the [product]'s failure to perform safely was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, April 2009, December 2009

Directions for Use

If both tests (the consumer expectation test and the risk-benefit test) for design defect are asserted by the plaintiff, the burden-of-proof instructions must make it clear that the two tests are alternatives. (Bracisco v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1101, 1106-1107 [206 Cal.Rptr. 431] .)

Product misuse is a complete defense to strict products liability if the defendant proves that an unforeseeable abuse or alteration of the product after it left the manufacturer's hands was the sole reason that the product caused injury. (Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] .) - "A manufacturer, distributor, or retailer is liable in tort if a defect in the manufacture or design of its product causes injury while the product is being used in a reasonably foreseeable way." (Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 560 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] .)

- In Barker v. Lull Engineering (1978) 20 Cal.3d 413 [143 Cal.Rptr. 225, 573 P.2d 443] , the court established two alternative tests for determining whether a product is defectively designed. Under the first test, a product may be found defective in design if the plaintiff demonstrates that the product "failed to perform as safely as an ordinary consumer would expect when used in an intended or reasonably foreseeable manner." (Id. at p. 429 .) Under the second test, a product is defective if the risk of danger inherent in the design outweighs the benefits of such design. (Id. at p. 430 .)

- "[The] dual standard for design defect assures an injured plaintiff protection from products that either fall below ordinary consumer expectations as to safety or that, on balance, are not as safely designed as they should be." (Barker, supra, 20 Cal.3d at p. 418 .)

- The consumer expectation test "acknowledges the relationship between strict tort liability for a defective product and the common law doctrine of warranty, which holds that a product's presence on the market includes an implied representation 'that it [will] safely do the jobs for which it was built.' " (Soule, supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 562 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he jury may not be left free to find a violation of ordinary consumer expectations whenever it chooses. Unless the facts actually permit an inference that the product's performance did not meet the minimum safety expectations of its ordinary users, the jury must engage in the balancing of risks and benefits required by the second prong of Barker. Accordingly, as Barker indicated, instructions are misleading and incorrect if they allow a jury to avoid this risk-benefit analysis in a case where it is required." (Soule, supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 568 .)

- "[T]he consumer expectation test is reserved for cases in which the everyday experience of the product's users permits a conclusion that the product's design violated minimum safety assumptions, and is thus defective regardless of expert opinion about the merits of the design." (Soule, supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 567 , original italics.)

- "In determining whether a product's safety satisfies [the consumer expectation test], the jury considers the expectations of a hypothetical reasonable consumer, rather than those of the particular plaintiff in the case." (Campbell v. General Motors Corp. (1982) 32 Cal.3d 112, 126, fn. 6 [184 Cal.Rptr. 891, 649 P.2d 224] .)

- State-of-the-art evidence is not relevant when the plaintiff relies on a consumer expectation theory of design defect. (Morton v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 1529, 1536 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 22] .)

■ "Where liability depends on the proof of a design defect, no practical difference exists between negligence and strict liability; the claims merge." (Lambert v. General Motors (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 1179, 1185 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 657].)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1204

CACI 1204 Strict Liability--Design Defect--Risk-Benefit Test--Essential Factual Elements--Shifting Burden of Proof

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the [product]'s design caused harm to [name of plaintiff]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed while using the [product] in a reasonably foreseeable way;
and
- 3. That the [product]'s design was a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff].

If [name of plaintiff] has proved these three facts, then your decision on this claim must be for [name of plaintiff] unless [name of defendant] proves that the benefits of the design outweigh the risks of the design. In deciding whether the benefits outweigh the risks, you should consider the following:

- (a) The gravity of the potential harm resulting from the use of the [product];
- (b) The likelihood that this harm would occur;
- (c) The feasibility of an alternative safer design at the time of manufacture;
- (d) The cost of an alternative design; [and]
- (e) The disadvantages of an alternative design; [and]

(f) [Other relevant factor(s)].

New September 2003; Revised February 2007, April 2009, December 2009

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff asserts both tests for design defect (the consumer expectation test and the risk-benefit test), the instructions must make it clear that the two tests are alternatives. (Bracisco v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1101, 1106-1107 [206 Cal.Rptr. 431] .) Risk-benefit weighing is not a formal part of, nor may it serve as a defense to, the consumer expectations test. (Bresnahan v. Chrysler Corp. (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1569 [38 Cal.Rptr.2d 446] .)

Product misuse is a complete defense to strict products liability if the defendant proves that an unforeseeable abuse or alteration of the product after it left the manufacturer's hands was the sole reason that the product caused injury. (Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] .) See CACI No. 1245, Affirmative Defense--Product Misuse or Modification. Misuse or modification that was a substantial factor in, but not the sole cause of, plaintiff's harm may also be considered in determining the comparative fault of the plaintiff or of third persons. See CACI No. 1207A, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff, and CACI No. 1207B, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Third Person.

Sources and Authority

- Under the risk-benefit test, the plaintiff does not have to prove the presence of a defect. Rather, once the plaintiff makes a prima facie showing that the product's design caused the injury, the burden shifts to the defendant to prove the design was not defective. A jury instruction stating that the plaintiff had the burden of proving that a design was defective in a case based on the risk-benefit test was held to be error in Moreno v. Fey Manufacturing Corp. (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 23, 27 [196 Cal.Rptr. 487] , and in Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co., Inc. (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 485, 498 [200 Cal.Rptr. 387] .

- " '[I]n evaluating the adequacy of a product's design pursuant to [the risk-benefit] standard, a jury may consider, among other relevant factors, the gravity of the danger posed by the challenged design, the likelihood that such danger would occur, the mechanical feasibility of a safer alternative design, the financial cost of an improved design, and the adverse consequences to the product and to the consumer that would result from an alternative design.' '[O]nce the plaintiff makes a prima facie showing that the injury was proximately caused by the product's design, the burden should appropriately shift to the defendant to prove, in light of the relevant factors, that the product is not defective.' " (Gonzalez v. Autoliv ASP, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal.App.4th 780, 786-787 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 908] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Taken together, section 2, subdivision (b), and section 5 of the Restatement indicate that a component part manufacturer may be held liable for a defect in the component. When viewed in its entirety, the Restatement does not support [defendant]'s argument that '[o]nly if the component part analysis establishes sufficient control over the design of the alleged defect should the component manufacturer be held to the standard of the risk-benefit test.' Instead, the test considering foreseeable risks of harm and alternative designs is applied to the component part manufacturer when the alleged defect is in the component." (Gonzalez, supra, 154 Cal.App.4th at pp. 789-790 .)

CACI 1205 Strict Liability--Failure to Warn--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the [product] lacked sufficient [instructions] [or] [warning of potential [risks/side effects/allergic reactions]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
2. That the [product] had potential [risks/side effects/allergic reactions] that were [known] [or] [knowable by the use of scientific knowledge available] at the time of [manufacture/distribution/sale];
3. That the potential [risks/side effects/allergic reactions] presented a substantial danger to users of the [product];
4. That ordinary consumers would not have recognized the potential [risks/side effects/allergic reactions];
5. That [name of defendant] failed to adequately warn [or instruct] of the potential [risks/side effects/allergic reactions];
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed while using the [product] in a reasonably foreseeable way; and
7. That the lack of sufficient [instructions] [or] [warnings] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[The warning must be given to the prescribing physician and must include the potential risks, side effects, or allergic reactions that may follow the foreseeable use of the product. [Name of defendant] had a continuing duty to warn physicians as long as the product was in use.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2009, December 2009

Directions for Use

A fuller definition of "scientific knowledge" may be appropriate in certain cases. Such a definition would advise that the defendant did not adequately warn of a potential risk, side effect, or allergic reaction that was "knowable in light of the generally recognized and prevailing best scientific and medical knowledge available." (Carlin v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 1104, 1112 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 162, 920 P.2d 1347] .)

The last bracketed paragraph should be read only in prescription product cases: "In the case of prescription drugs and implants, the physician stands in the shoes of the 'ordinary user' because it is through the physician that a patient learns of the properties and proper use of the drug or implant. Thus, the duty to warn in these cases runs to the physician, not the patient." (Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal.App.4th 1467, 1483 [81 Cal.Rptr.2d 252] .)

Product misuse is a complete defense to strict products liability if the defendant proves that an unforeseeable abuse or alteration of the product after it left the manufacturer's hands was the sole reason that the product caused injury. (Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] .) See CACI No. 1245, Affirmative Defense--Product Misuse or Modification. Misuse or modification that was a substantial factor in, but not the sole cause of, plaintiff's harm may also be considered in determining the comparative fault of the plaintiff or of third persons. See CACI No. 1207A, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff, and CACI No. 1207B, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Third Person.

Sources and Authority

- "Our law recognizes that even 'a product flawlessly designed and produced may nevertheless possess such risks to the user without a suitable warning that it becomes 'defective' simply by the absence of a warning.' ... Thus, manufacturers have a duty to warn consumers about the hazards inherent in their products. The purpose of requiring adequate warnings is to inform consumers about a product's hazards and faults of which they are unaware, so that the consumer may then either refrain from using the product altogether or avoid the danger by careful use." (Taylor v. Elliott Turbomachinery Co., Inc. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 564, 577 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 414] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "Negligence and strict products liability are separate and distinct bases for liability that do not automatically collapse into each other because the plaintiff might allege both when a product warning contributes to her injury." (Conte v. Wyeth, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 89, 101 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 299] .)

- "[F]ailure to warn in strict liability differs markedly from failure to warn in the negligence context. Negligence law in a failure-to-warn case requires a plaintiff to prove that a manufacturer or distributor did not warn of a particular risk for reasons which fell below the acceptable standard of care, i.e., what a reasonably prudent manufacturer would have known and warned about. Strict liability is not concerned with the standard of due care or the reasonableness of a manufacturer's conduct. The rules of strict liability require a plaintiff to prove only that the defendant did not adequately warn of a particular risk that was known or knowable in light of the generally recognized and prevailing best scientific and medical knowledge available at the time of manufacture and distribution. ... [P] [T]he manufacturer is liable if it failed to give warning of dangers that were known to the scientific community at the time it manufactured or distributed the product." (Anderson v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1991) 53 Cal.3d 987, 1002-1003 [281 Cal.Rptr. 528, 810 P.2d 549] .)

■ "It is true that the two types of failure to warn claims are not necessarily exclusive: 'No valid reason appears to require a plaintiff to elect whether to proceed on the theory of strict liability in tort or on the theory of negligence. ... [P] Nor does it appear that instructions on the two theories will be confusing to the jury. There is nothing inconsistent in instructions on the two theories and to a large extent the two theories parallel and supplement each other.' Despite the often significant overlap between the theories of negligence and strict liability based on a product defect, a plaintiff is entitled to instructions on both theories if both are supported by the evidence." (Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 700, 717 [99 Cal.Rptr.3d 418] .)

■ "The actual knowledge of the individual manufacturer, even if reasonably prudent, is not the issue. We view the standard to require that the manufacturer is held to the knowledge and skill of an expert in the field; it is obliged to keep abreast of any scientific discoveries and is presumed to know the results of all such advances." (Carlin, supra, 13 Cal.4th at p. 1113, fn. 3 .)

■ "[A] defendant in a strict products liability action based upon an alleged failure to warn of a risk of harm may present evidence of the state of the art, i.e., evidence that the particular risk was neither known nor knowable by the application of scientific knowledge available at the time of manufacture and/or distribution." (Anderson, supra, 53 Cal.3d at p. 1004 .)

■ "[T]here can be no liability for failure to warn where the instructions or warnings sufficiently alert the user to the possibility of danger." (Aguayo v. Crompton & Knowles Corp. (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1032, 1042 [228 Cal.Rptr. 768] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A duty to warn or disclose danger arises when an article is or should be known to be dangerous for its intended use, either inherently or because of defects." (DeLeon v. Commercial Manufacturing and Supply Co. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 336, 343 [195 Cal.Rptr. 867] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "... California is well settled into the majority view that knowledge, actual or constructive, is a requisite for strict liability for failure to warn" (Anderson, supra, 53 Cal.3d at p. 1000 .)

■ "[T]he duty to warn is not conditioned upon [actual or constructive] knowledge [of a danger] where the defectiveness of a product depends on the adequacy of instructions furnished by the supplier which are essential to the assembly and use of its product." (Midgley v. S. S. Kresge Co. (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 67, 74 [127 Cal.Rptr. 217] .)

■ Under Cronin, plaintiffs in cases involving manufacturing and design defects do not have to prove that a defect made a product unreasonably dangerous; however, that case "did not preclude weighing the degree of dangerousness in the failure to warn cases." (Cavers v. Cushman Motor Sales, Inc. (1979) 95 Cal.App.3d 338, 343 [157 Cal.Rptr. 142] .)

■ "[T]he warning requirement is not limited to unreasonably or unavoidably dangerous products. Rather, directions or warnings are in order where reasonably required to prevent the use of a product from becoming unreasonably dangerous. It is the lack of such a warning which renders a product unreasonably dangerous and therefore defective." (Gonzales v. Carmenita Ford Truck Sales, Inc. (1987)

■ "In most cases, ... the adequacy of a warning is a question of fact for the jury." (Jackson v. Deft, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 1305, 1320 [273 Cal.Rptr. 214] .)

■ "[A] pharmaceutical manufacturer may not be required to provide warning of a risk known to the medical community." (Carlin, supra, 13 Cal.4th at p. 1116 .)

■ " 'A manufacturer's duty to warn is a continuous duty which lasts as long as the product is in use.' ... [T]he manufacturer must continue to provide physicians with warnings, at least so long as it is manufacturing and distributing the product." (Valentine, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at p. 1482 .)

■ "[T]he law now requires a manufacturer to foresee some degree of misuse and abuse of his product, either by the user or by third parties, and to take reasonable precautions to minimize the harm that may result from misuse and abuse." (Self v. General Motors Corp. (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 1, 7 [116 Cal.Rptr. 575] , disapproved and overruled on another issue in Soule v. GM Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 580 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] .)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1206

CACI 1206 Strict Liability--Failure to Warn--Products Containing Allergens (Not Prescription Drugs)--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that the [product] was defective because it lacked sufficient warnings of potential allergic reactions. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
- 2. That a substantial number of people are allergic to an ingredient in the [product];
- 3. That the danger of the ingredient is not generally known, or, if known, the ingredient is one that a consumer would not reasonably expect to find in the [product];
- 4. That [name of defendant] knew or, by the use of scientific knowledge available at the time, should have known of the ingredient's danger and presence;
- 5. That [name of defendant] failed to provide sufficient warnings concerning the ingredient's danger or presence;
- 6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 7. That the lack of sufficient warnings was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

A fuller definition of "scientific knowledge" may be appropriate in certain cases. Such a definition would advise that the defendant did not adequately warn of a potential risk, side effect, or allergic reaction that was "knowable in light of the generally recognized and prevailing best scientific and medical knowledge available," (Carlin v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 1104, 1112 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 162, 920 P.2d 1347]), and knowable " 'by the application of reasonable, developed human skill and foresight.' " (Livingston v. Marie Callenders Inc. (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 830, 839 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 528] .)

- This instruction is based on the holding in Livingston v. Marie Callenders, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 830, 838-839 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 528] , adopting Restatement Second of Torts, section 402A, comment j, and Restatement Third of Torts: Products Liability, section 2, comment k, in cases involving allergic reactions.

- "California has adopted the Restatement Second of Torts, section 402A, comment j, application of strict tort liability failure to warn in the case of allergies. Several Court of Appeal decisions in the context of allergic reactions to nonfood products are consistent with or have expressly adopted comment j." (Livingston, supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at p. 838 .)

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 402A, comment j, states: "In order to prevent the product from being unreasonably dangerous, the seller may be required to give directions or warning, on the container, as to its use. The seller may reasonably assume that those with common allergies, as for example to eggs or strawberries, will be aware of them, and he is not required to warn against them. Where, however, the product contains an ingredient to which a substantial number of the population are allergic, and the ingredient is one whose danger is not generally known, or if known is one which the consumer would reasonably not expect to find in the product, the seller is required to give warning against it, if he has knowledge, or by the application of reasonable, developed human skill and foresight should have knowledge, of the presence of the ingredient and the danger. Likewise in the case of poisonous drugs, or those unduly dangerous"

- "[A] defendant may be liable to a plaintiff who suffered an allergic reaction to a product on a strict liability failure to warn theory when: the defendant's product contained 'an ingredient to which a substantial number of the population are allergic'; the ingredient 'is one whose danger is not generally known, or if known is one which the consumer would reasonably not expect to find in the product'; and where the defendant knew or 'by the application of reasonable, developed human skill and foresight should have know[n], of the presence of the ingredient and the danger.' " (Livingston, supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at p. 839 .)

- "The recently adopted Restatement Third of Torts: Products Liability, section 2, comment k, ... similarly states: 'Cases of adverse allergic or idiosyncratic reactions involve a special subset of products that may be defective because of inadequate warnings [P] The general rule in cases involving allergic reactions is that a warning is required when the harm-causing ingredient is one to which a substantial number of persons are allergic.' Further, the Restatement Third of Torts: Products Liability, section 2, comment k notes: 'The ingredient that causes the allergic reaction must be one whose danger or whose presence in the product is not generally known to consumers. ... When the presence of the allergenic ingredient would not be anticipated by a reasonable user or consumer, warnings concerning its presence are required.' " (Livingston, supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at pp. 838-839.)

- "[T]hose issues [noted in the Restatement] are for the trier of fact to determine." (Livingston, supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at p. 840 .)

■ Livingston was a food product case; however there are several non-food product cases that are consistent with or have also expressly adopted comment j. (See McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 602, 607, 608 fn. 3 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 72] [home hair-frosting product]; Oakes v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal.App.2d 645, 649 [77 Cal.Rptr. 709] [weed killer]; Harris v. Belton (1968) 258 Cal.App.2d 595, 608 [65 Cal.Rptr. 808] [skin tone cream].)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1207A

CACI 1207A Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff

[Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff]'s own negligence contributed to [his/her] harm. To succeed on this claim, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. [insert one or more of the following:]

[That [name of plaintiff] negligently [used/misused/modified] the [product];] [or]

[That [name of plaintiff] was [otherwise] negligent;]

and

2. That this negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

If [name of defendant] proves the above, [name of plaintiff]'s damages are reduced by your determination of the percentage of [name of plaintiff]'s responsibility. I will calculate the actual reduction.

Derived from former CACI No. 1207 April 2009; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the defendant alleges that the plaintiff's own negligence contributed to his or her harm. See also CACI No. 405, Comparative Fault of Plaintiff. For an instruction on the comparative fault of a third person, see CACI No. 1207B, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Third Person.

Subsequent misuse or modification may be considered in determining comparative fault if it was a substantial factor in causing the plaintiff's injury. (See Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1, 17 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 455] .) Unforeseeable misuse or modification can be a complete defense if it is the sole cause of the plaintiff's harm. (See Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] .) See also CACI No. 1245, Affirmative Defense--Product Misuse or Modification.

Sources and Authority

- In Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal.3d 725, 737 [144 Cal.Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162] , the California Supreme Court held that comparative fault applies to strict products liability actions. The court explained: "[W]e do not permit plaintiff's own conduct relative to the product to escape unexamined, and as to that share of plaintiff's damages which flows from his own fault we discern no reason of policy why it should, following Li, be borne by others."

- "[A] petitioner's recovery may accordingly be reduced, but not barred, where his lack of reasonable care is shown to have contributed to his injury." (Bradfield v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 681, 686 [152 Cal.Rptr. 172] .)

- "The record does not support [defendant]'s assertion that modification of the bracket was the sole cause of the accident. The record does indicate that if the bracket had not been modified there would have been no need to remove it to reach the flange bolts, and thus the modification was one apparent cause of [plaintiff]'s death. However, a number of other causes, or potential causes, were established, including: [plaintiff]'s failure to wear protective clothing; [third party]'s failure to furnish the correct replacement bracket for the valve; [third party]'s failure to furnish [employer] with all of the literature it received from [defendant]; and negligence on the part of [employer] independent of its modification of the valve, including violations of various federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations governing equipment and training in connection with the accident." CACI 1207B Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Third Person

[Name of defendant] claims that the [negligence/fault] of [name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)] [also] contributed to [name of plaintiff]'s harm. To succeed on this claim, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. [Insert one or both of the following:]

[That [name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)] negligently modified the [product];] [or]

[That [name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)] was [otherwise] [negligent/at fault];]

2. That this [negligence/fault] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

If you find that the [negligence/fault] of more than one person, including [name of defendant], [name of plaintiff], and [name(s) or description(s) of nonparty tortfeasor(s)], was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm, you must then decide how much responsibility each has by assigning percentages of responsibility to each person listed on the verdict form. The percentages must total 100 percent.

You will make a separate finding of [name of plaintiff]'s total damages, if any. In determining an amount of damages, you should not consider any person's assigned percentage of responsibility.

["Person" can mean an individual or a business entity.]

Derived from former CACI No. 1207 April 2009; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the defendant has raised the issue of the comparative fault of a third person who is not also a defendant at trial, including defendants who settled before trial and nonjoined alleged tortfeasors. (See Dafonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 593, 603 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 238, 828 P.2d 140] ; see also CACI No. 406, Apportionment of Responsibility.) For an instruction on the comparative fault of the plaintiff, see CACI No. 1207A, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff.

In the first sentence, include "also" if the defendant concedes some degree of liability or alleges the comparative fault of the plaintiff, and select "fault" unless the only basis for liability at issue is negligence. Include the last paragraph if any of the defendants or others alleged to have contributed to the plaintiff's harm are not individuals.

Subsequent misuse or modification may be considered in determining comparative fault if it was a substantial factor in causing the plaintiff's injury. (See Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1, 17 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 455] .) Unforeseeable misuse or modification can be a complete defense if it is the sole cause of the plaintiff's harm. (See Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] .) See also CACI No. 1245, Affirmative Defense--Product Misuse or Modification.

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1221

CACI 1221 Negligence--Basic Standard of Care

A [designer/manufacturer/supplier/installer/repairer] is negligent if [he/she/it] fails to use the amount of care in [designing/ manufacturing/inspecting/installing/repairing] the product that a reasonably careful [designer/manufacturer/supplier/installer/ repairer] would use in similar circumstances to avoid exposing others to a foreseeable risk of harm.

In determining whether [name of defendant] used reasonable care, you should balance what [name of defendant] knew or should have known about the likelihood and severity of potential harm from the product against the burden of taking safety measures to reduce or avoid the harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The duty to inspect or test is included in the "knew or should have known" standard of this instruction: "If the manufacturer designs the product safely, manufactures the product safely, and provides an adequate warning of dangers inherent in the use of the product, then a failure to test the product cannot, standing alone, cause any injury. The duty to test is a subpart of the other three duties because a breach of the duty to test cannot by itself cause any injury." (Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal.App.4th 1467, 1486 [81 Cal.Rptr.2d 252] , quoting Kociemba v. G.D. Searle & Co. (D.Minn. 1989) 707 F.Supp. 1517, 1527 .)

Presumably, the judge will have already determined that the manufacturer owed the plaintiff a duty because the product was of a type that could endanger others if it was negligently made. Accordingly, that element is eliminated in this instruction.

Sources and Authority

■ "A manufacturer/seller of a product is under a duty to exercise reasonable care in its design so that it can be safely used as intended by its buyer/consumer." (Williams v. Beechnut Nutrition Corp. (1986) 185 Cal.App.3d 135, 141 [229 Cal.Rptr. 605] .) This duty " 'extends to all persons within the range of potential danger.' " (Ibid., internal citations omitted.)

■ "In determining what precautions, if any, were required under the circumstances, the likelihood of harm, and the gravity of the harm if it happens, must be balanced against the burden of the precaution which would be effective to avoid the harm." (Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 1062, 1077-1078 [91 Cal.Rptr. 319] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 395, provides: "A manufacturer who fails to exercise reasonable care in the manufacture of a chattel which, unless carefully made, he should recognize as involving an unreasonable risk of causing physical harm to those who use it for a purpose for which the manufacturer should expect it to be used and to those whom he should expect to be endangered by its probable use, is subject to liability for physical harm caused to them by its lawful use in a manner and for a purpose for which it is supplied."

■ In a non-res ipsa loquitur case involving a manufacturing defect only, the failure to follow Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 379, 387 [93 Cal.Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681] by refusing to give negligence instructions does not require reversal. (Montez v. Ford Motor Co. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 315, 317 [161 Cal.Rptr. 578] .)

■ "[F]reedom from negligence does not inure to the manufacturer because it purchased parts from another which were defective." (Sheward v. Virtue (1942) 20 Cal.2d 410, 412 [126 P.2d 345] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 398, provides: "A manufacturer of a chattel made under a plan or design which makes it dangerous for the uses for which it is manufactured is subject to liability to others whom he should expect to use the chattel or to be endangered by its probable use for physical harm caused by his failure to exercise reasonable care in the adoption of a safe plan or design."

■ Section 398 was cited with approval in Pike v. Frank G. Hough Co. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 465, 470 [85 Cal.Rptr. 629, 467 P.2d 229] .

■ "What is 'reasonable care,' of course, varies with the facts of each case, but it involves a balancing of the likelihood of harm to be expected from a machine with a given design and the gravity of harm if it happens against the burden of the precaution which would be effective to avoid the harm." (Pike, supra, 2 Cal.3d at p. 470 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A danger is unreasonable when it is foreseeable, and the manufacturer's ability, actual, constructive, or potential, to forestall unreasonable danger is the measure of its duty in the design of its product." (Balido v. Improved Machinery, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 633, 640 [105 Cal.Rptr. 890] , disapproved on other grounds in Regents of University of California v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 624, 641-642 [147 Cal.Rptr. 486, 581 P.2d 197] .)

■ "With respect to tests or inspections, it is well settled that where an article is such that it is reasonably certain, if negligently manufactured or designed, to place life and limb in peril, the manufacturer is chargeable with negligence if the defective condition could be disclosed by reasonable inspection and tests, and such inspection and tests are omitted." (Putensen, supra, 12 Cal.App.3d at p. 1078 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 396, provides: "A manufacturer of a chattel is subject to liability under the rules stated in sections 394 and 395 although the dangerous character or condition of the chattel is discoverable by an inspection which the seller or any other person is under a duty to the person injured to make."

■ "[W]here an article is either inherently dangerous or reasonably certain to place life and limb in peril when negligently made, a manufacturer owes a duty of care to those who are the ultimate users. This duty requires reasonable care to be exercised in assembling component parts and inspecting and testing them before the product leaves the plant." (Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equipment, Inc. (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 724, 736 [7 Cal.Rptr. 879] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1222 Negligence--Manufacturer or Supplier--Duty to Warn--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was negligent by not using reasonable care to warn [or instruct] about the [product]'s dangerous condition or about facts that make the [product] likely to be dangerous. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
2. That [name of defendant] knew or reasonably should have known that the [product] was dangerous or was likely to be dangerous when used in a reasonably foreseeable manner;
3. That [name of defendant] knew or reasonably should have known that users would not realize the danger;
4. That [name of defendant] failed to adequately warn of the danger [or instruct on the safe use of the [product]];
5. That a reasonable [manufacturer/distributor/seller] under the same or similar circumstances would have warned of the danger [or instructed on the safe use of the [product]];
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s failure to warn [or instruct] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[The warning must be given to the prescribing physician and must include the potential risks or side effects that may follow the foreseeable use of the product. [Name of defendant] had a continuing duty to warn physicians as long as the product was in use.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The last bracketed paragraph is to be used in prescription drug cases only.

Sources and Authority

■ A manufacturer "has a duty to use reasonable care to give warning of the dangerous condition of the product or of facts which make it likely to be dangerous to those whom he should expect to use the product or be endangered by its probable use, if the manufacturer has reason to believe that they will not realize its dangerous condition." (Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 1062, 1076-1077 [91 Cal.Rptr. 319] .)

■ "Negligence and strict products liability are separate and distinct bases for liability that do not automatically collapse into each other because the plaintiff might allege both when a product warning contributes to her injury." (Conte v. Wyeth, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 89, 101 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 299] .)

■ "[F]ailure to warn in strict liability differs markedly from failure to warn in the negligence context. Negligence law in a failure-to-warn case requires a plaintiff to prove that a manufacturer or distributor did not warn of a particular risk for reasons which fell below the acceptable standard of care, i.e., what a reasonably prudent manufacturer would have known and warned about. Strict liability is not concerned with the standard of due care or the reasonableness of a manufacturer's conduct. The rules of strict liability require a plaintiff to prove only that the defendant did not adequately warn of a particular risk that was known or knowable in light of the generally recognized and prevailing best scientific and medical knowledge available at the time of manufacture and distribution. Thus, in strict liability, as opposed to negligence, the reasonableness of the defendant's failure to warn is immaterial." (Anderson v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1991) 53 Cal.3d 987, 1002 [281 Cal.Rptr. 528, 810 P.2d 549] .)

■ "It is true that the two types of failure to warn claims are not necessarily exclusive: 'No valid reason appears to require a plaintiff to elect whether to proceed on the theory of strict liability in tort or on the theory of negligence. ... [P] Nor does it appear that instructions on the two theories will be confusing to the jury. There is nothing inconsistent in instructions on the two theories and to a large extent the two theories parallel and supplement each other.' Despite the often significant overlap between the theories of negligence and strict liability based on a product defect, a plaintiff is entitled to instructions on both theories if both are supported by the evidence." (Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 700, 717 [99 Cal.Rptr.3d 418] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts section 388 provides:

One who supplies directly or through a third person a chattel for another to use is subject to liability to those whom the supplier should expect to use the chattel with the consent of the other or to be endangered by its probable use, for physical harm caused by the use of the chattel in the manner for which and by a person for whose use it is supplied, if the supplier

(a) knows or has reason to know that the chattel is or is likely to be dangerous for the use for which it is supplied, and

(b) has no reason to believe that those for whose use the chattel is supplied will realize its dangerous condition, and

(c) fails to exercise reasonable care to inform them of its dangerous condition or of the facts which make it likely to be dangerous.

■ Restatement Second of Torts section 394 provides: "The manufacturer of a chattel which he knows or has reason to know to be, or to be likely to be, dangerous for use is subject to the liability of a supplier of chattels with such knowledge."

■ These sections have been cited with approval by California courts. (See Putensen, supra, 12 Cal.App.3d at p. 1077 and cases cited therein.)

■ There is no duty to warn of obvious defects. (Krawitz v. Rusch (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 957, 966 [257 Cal.Rptr. 610] ; Holmes v. J.C. Penney Co. (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 216, 220 [183 Cal.Rptr. 777] ; Morris v. Toy Box (1962) 204 Cal.App.2d 468, 471 [22 Cal.Rptr. 572] .)

■ "When a manufacturer or distributor has no effective way to convey a product warning to the ultimate consumer, the manufacturer should be permitted to rely on downstream suppliers to provide the warning. 'Modern life would be intolerable unless one were permitted to rely to a certain extent on others doing what they normally do, particularly if it is their duty to do so.' " (Persons v. Salomon N. Am. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 168, 178 [265 Cal.Rptr. 773] , internal citation omitted.)

■ The duty of a manufacturer to warn about the potential hazards of its product, even when that product is only a component of an item manufactured or assembled by a third party, has been recognized, but is limited. (See Garza v. Asbestos Corp., Ltd. (2008) 161 Cal.App.4th 651, 661 [74 Cal.Rptr.3d 359] ; Artiglio v. General Electric Co. (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 830, 837 [71 Cal.Rptr.2d 817] .)

CHAPTER 12 California Judicial Council Products Liability Instructions

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1223

CACI 1223 Negligence--Recall/Retrofit

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was negligent because [he/she/it] failed to [recall/retrofit] the [product]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [manufactured/distributed/sold] the [product];
- 2. That [name of defendant] knew or reasonably should have known that the [product] was dangerous or was likely to be dangerous when used in a reasonably foreseeable manner;
- 3. That [name of defendant] became aware of this defect after the [product] was sold;
- 4. That [name of defendant] failed to [recall/retrofit] [or warn of the danger of] the [product];
- 5. That a reasonable [manufacturer/distributor/seller] under the same or similar circumstances would have [recalled/retrofitted] the [product];
- 6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 7. That [name of defendant]'s failure to [recall/retrofit] the [product] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004

If the issue concerns a negligently conducted recall, modify this instruction accordingly.

■ "Failure to conduct an adequate retrofit campaign may constitute negligence apart from the issue of defective design." (Hernandez v. Badger Construction Equipment Co. (1994) 28 Cal.App.4th 1791, 1827 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 732] , internal citation omitted.)

■ In Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co. (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 485 [200 Cal.Rptr. 387] , the court observed that, where the evidence showed that the manufacturer became aware of dangers after the product had been on the market, the jury "could still have found that Clark's knowledge of the injuries caused by these features imposed a duty to warn of the danger, and/or a duty to conduct an adequate retrofit campaign." The failure to meet the standard of reasonable care with regard to either of these duties could have supported a finding of negligence. (Id. at p. 494 , original italics.)

■ In Balido v. Improved Machinery, Inc. (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 633 [105 Cal.Rptr. 890] (disapproved on other grounds in Regents of University of California v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 624, 641-642 [147 Cal.Rptr. 486, 581 P.2d 197]), the court concluded that a jury could reasonably have found negligence based upon the manufacturer's failure to retrofit equipment determined to be unsafe after it was sold, even though the manufacturer told the equipment's owners of the safety problems and offered to correct those problems for $500. (Id. at p. 649 .)

■ If a customer fails to comply with a recall notice, this will not automatically absolve the manufacturer from liability: "A manufacturer cannot delegate responsibility for the safety of its product to dealers, much less purchasers." (Springmeyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1998) 60 Cal.App.4th 1541, 1562-1563 [71 Cal.Rptr.2d 190] , internal citations omitted.)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1224

CACI 1224 Negligence--Negligence for Product Rental/Standard of Care

[A person who rents products to others for money is negligent if he or she fails to use reasonable care to:

- 1. Inspect the products for defects;
- 2. Make them safe for their intended use; and
- 3. Adequately warn of any known dangers.]

[or]

[A person who lends products to others without charge only is required to use reasonable care to warn of known defects.]

New September 2003

Use this instruction in conjunction with CACI No. 1220, Negligence--Essential Factual Elements, and instead of CACI No. 1221, Negligence--Basic Standard of Care, in cases involving rentals.

If the case involves a product lent gratuitously for the mutual benefit of the parties (e.g., to a prospective purchaser), the first paragraph is applicable and the instruction needs to be modified.

In a purely gratuitous lending case, if the object is a "dangerous instrumentality" there may be a duty to conduct a reasonable inspection before lending. (See Tierstein v. Licht (1959) 174 Cal.App.2d 835, 842 [345 P.2d 341] .)

■ If a bailment is for hire, or provides a mutual benefit, the bailor has a duty to the bailee and to third persons to (1) warn of actually known defects and (2) to use reasonable care to make an examination of the good before lending it "in order to make certain that it [is] fit for the use known to be intended." (Tierstein, supra, 174 Cal.App.2d at pp. 840-841 .)

■ A bailment, otherwise gratuitous, where made to induce a purchase, has been considered sufficient to give rise to the same duty of reasonable care on the part of the bailor as an ordinary bailment for hire. This is regarded as a bailment for mutual benefit. (Tierstein, supra, 174 Cal.App.2d at p. 842 .)

■ Under either a negligence or an implied warranty theory, "the essential inquiry ... is whether [the defendants] made such inspection of their equipment as was necessary to discharge their duty of reasonable care." (McNeal v. Greenberg (1953) 40 Cal.2d 740, 742 [255 P.2d 810] .) The bailor is not an insurer or guarantor. (Tierstein, supra, 174 Cal.App.2d at p. 841 .)

■ Civil Code section 1955 provides: "Except as otherwise agreed by the lessor and the lessee in lease agreements for a term of more than 20 days, one who leases personal property must deliver it to the lessee, secure his or her quiet enjoyment thereof against all lawful claimants, put it into a condition fit for the purpose for which he or she leases it, and repair all deteriorations thereof not occasioned by the fault of the lessee and not the natural result of its use."

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 408, provides: "One who leases a chattel as safe for immediate use is subject to liability to those whom he should expect to use the chattel, or to be endangered by its probable use, for physical harm caused by its use in a manner for which, and by a person for whose use, it is leased, if the lessor fails to exercise reasonable care to make it safe for such use or to disclose its actual condition to those who may be expected to use it."

■ This Restatement section was cited with approval in Rae v. California Equipment Co. (1939) 12 Cal.2d 563, 569 [86 P.2d 352] .

■ "The general rule is that the only duty which a gratuitous bailor owes either to the bailee or to third persons is to warn them of actually known defects which render the chattel dangerous for the purpose for which it is ordinarily used; he has no liability for injuries caused by defects in the subject matter of the bailment of which he was not aware." (Tierstein, supra, 174 Cal.App.2d at p. 841 .)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1230

CACI 1230 Express Warranty--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/it] was harmed by the [product] because [name of defendant] represented, either by words or actions, that the [product] [insert description of alleged express warranty, e.g., "was safe"], but the [product] was not as represented. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [insert one or more of the following:]

[made a [statement of fact/promise] [to/received by] [name of plaintiff] that the [product] [insert description of alleged express warranty];] [or]

[gave [name of plaintiff] a description of the [product];] [or]

[gave [name of plaintiff] a sample or model of the [product];]

2. That the [product] [insert one or more of the following :]

[did not perform as [stated/promised];] [or]

[did not meet the quality of the [description/sample/model];]

3. [That [name of plaintiff] took reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [product] was not as represented, whether or not [name of defendant] received such notice;]

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That the failure of the [product] to be as represented was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[Formal words such as "warranty" or "guarantee" are not required to create a warranty. It is also not necessary for [name of defendant] to have specifically intended to create a warranty. But a warranty is not created if [name of defendant] simply stated the value of the goods or only gave [his/her] opinion of or recommendation regarding the goods.]

New September 2003; Revised February 2005

The giving of notice to the seller is not required in personal injury or property damage lawsuits against a manufacturer or another supplier with whom the plaintiff has not directly dealt. (Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 57, 61 [27 Cal.Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897] ; Ghera v. Ford Motor Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 639, 652-653 [55 Cal.Rptr. 94] .)

If an instruction on the giving of notice to the seller is needed, see CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time.

■ "A warranty relates to the title, character, quality, identity, or condition of the goods. The purpose of the law of warranty is to determine what it is that the seller has in essence agreed to sell." (Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 20 [220 Cal.Rptr. 392] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A warranty is a contractual term concerning some aspect of the sale, such as title to the goods, or their quality or quantity." (4 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Sales, § 51.)

■ California Commercial Code section 2313 provides:

(1) Express warranties by the seller are created as follows:

(a) Any affirmation of fact or promise made by the seller to the buyer which relates to the goods and becomes part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the goods shall conform to the affirmation or promise.

(b) Any description of the goods which is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the goods shall conform to the description.

(c) Any sample or model which is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the whole of the goods shall conform to the sample or model.

(2) It is not necessary to the creation of an express warranty that the seller use formal words such as "warrant" or "guarantee" or that he have a specific intention to make a warranty, but an affirmation merely of the value of the goods or a statement purporting to be merely the seller's opinion or commendation of the goods does not create a warranty.

■ California Commercial Code section 2102 provides: "Unless the context otherwise requires, this division applies to transactions in goods." Section 2105 defines "goods" as "all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale."

■ "Privity is not required for an action based upon an express warranty." (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 115, fn. 8 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] .)

■ "The determination as to whether a particular statement is an expression of opinion or an affirmation of a fact is often difficult, and frequently is dependent upon the facts and circumstances existing at the time the statement is made." (Keith, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 21 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Statements made by a seller during the course of negotiation over a contract are presumptively affirmations of fact unless it can be demonstrated that the buyer could only have reasonably considered the statement as a statement of the seller's opinion. Commentators have noted several factors which tend to indicate an opinion statement. These are (1) a lack of specificity in the statement made, (2) a statement that is made in an equivocal manner, or (3) a statement which reveals that the goods are experimental in nature." (Keith, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 21 .)

■ "It is important to note ... that even statements of opinion can become warranties under the code if they become part of the basis of the bargain." (Hauter, supra, 14 Cal.3d at p. 115, fn. 10 .)

■ The California Supreme Court has stated that "[t]he basis of the bargain requirement represents a significant change in the law of warranties. Whereas plaintiffs in the past have had to prove their reliance upon specific promises made by the seller, the Uniform Commercial Code requires no such proof." (Hauter, supra, 14 Cal.3d at p. 115 , internal citations omitted.) However, the Court also noted that there is some controversy as to the role, if any, of reliance in this area.

■ The court in Keith, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 23 , held that the seller has the burden of proving that the bargain did not rest at all on the representation, for example, by showing that the buyer inspected and discovered the defect before the contract was made.

■ "It is immaterial whether defendant had actual knowledge of the contraindications. 'The obligation of a warranty is absolute, and is imposed as a matter of law irrespective of whether the seller knew or should have known of the falsity of his representations.' " (Grinnell v. Charles Pfizer & Co. (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 424, 442 [79 Cal.Rptr. 369] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] sale is ordinarily an essential element of any warranty, express or implied" (Fogo v. Cutter Laboratories, Inc. (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 744, 759 [137 Cal.Rptr. 417] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1231 Implied Warranty of Merchantability--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] [also] claims that [he/she/it] was harmed by the [product] that [he/she/it] bought from [name of defendant] because the [product] did not have the quality that a buyer would expect. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] bought the [product] from [name of defendant];
2. That, at the time of purchase, [name of defendant] was in the business of selling these goods [or by [his/her/its] occupation held [himself/herself/itself] out as having special knowledge or skill regarding these goods];
3. That the [product] [insert one or more of the following:]
[was not of the same quality as those generally acceptable in the trade;]
[was not fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used;]
[did not conform to the quality established by the parties' prior dealings or by usage of trade;]
[other ground as set forth in Commercial Code section 2314(2);]
4. [That [name of plaintiff] took reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [product] did not have the expected quality;]
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

6. That the failure of the [product] to have the expected quality was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

This cause of action could also apply to products that are leased. If so, modify the instruction accordingly.

The giving of notice to the seller is not required in personal injury or property damage lawsuits against a manufacturer or another supplier with whom the plaintiff has not directly dealt. (Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 57, 61 [27 Cal.Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897]; Gherna v. Ford Motor Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 639, 652-653 [55 Cal.Rptr. 94] .)

If an instruction on the giving of notice to the seller is needed, see CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time.

- "A warranty is a contractual term concerning some aspect of the sale, such as title to the goods, or their quality or quantity." (4 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Sales, § 51.)

- "Unlike express warranties, which are basically contractual in nature, the implied warranty of merchantability arises by operation of law. It does not 'impose a general requirement that goods precisely fulfill the expectation of the buyer. Instead, it provides for a minimum level of quality.' " (American Suzuki Motor Corp. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1291, 1295-1296 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 526] , internal citations omitted.)

- It has been observed that "in cases involving personal injuries resulting from defective products, the theory of strict liability in tort has virtually superseded the concept of implied warranties." (Grinnell v. Charles Pfizer & Co. (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 424, 432 [79 Cal.Rptr. 369] .)

- Commercial Code section 2314 provides:

(1) Unless excluded or modified (Section 2316), a warranty that the goods shall be merchantable is implied in a contract for their sale if the seller is a merchant with respect to goods of that kind. Under this section the serving for value of food or drink to be consumed either on the premises or elsewhere is a sale.

(2) Goods to be merchantable must be at least such as

(a) Pass without objection in the trade under the contract description; and

(b) In the case of fungible goods, are of fair average quality within the description; and

(c) Are fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used; and

(d) Run, within the variations permitted by the agreement, of even kind, quality and quantity within each unit and among all units involved; and

(e) Are adequately contained, packaged, and labeled as the agreement may require; and

(f) Conform to the promises or affirmations of fact made on the container or label if any.

(3) Unless excluded or modified (Section 2316) other implied warranties may arise from course of dealing or usage of trade.

■ "Vertical privity is a prerequisite in California for recovery on a theory of breach of the implied warranties of fitness and merchantability." (United States Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 1431, 1441 [279 Cal.Rptr. 533] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Although privity appears to be required for actions based upon the implied warranty of merchantability, there are exceptions to this rule, such as one for members of the purchaser's family. (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 115, fn. 8 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] .) Vertical privity is also waived for employees. (Peterson v. Lamb Rubber Co. (1960) 54 Cal.2d 339 [5 Cal.Rptr. 863, 353 P.2d 575] .) A plaintiff satisfies the privity requirement when he or she leases or negotiates the sale or lease of the product. (United States Roofing, Inc., supra.)

■ Commercial Code section 2104(1) defines "merchant," in relevant part, as "a person who deals in goods of the kind or otherwise by his occupation holds himself out as having knowledge or skill peculiar to the practices or goods involved in the transaction."

■ Commercial Code section 2105(1) defines "goods," in relevant part, as "all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale other than the money in which the price is to be paid."

■ Commercial Code section 1303 provides:

(a) A "course of performance" is a sequence of conduct between the parties to a particular transaction that exists if:

(1) the agreement of the parties with respect to the transaction involves repeated occasions for performance by a party; and

(2) the other party, with knowledge of the nature of the performance and opportunity for objection to it, accepts the performance or acquiesces in it without objection.

(b) A "course of dealing" is a sequence of conduct concerning previous transactions between the parties to a particular transaction that is fairly to be regarded as establishing a common basis of understanding for interpreting their expressions and other conduct.

(c) A "usage of trade" is any practice or method of dealing having such regularity of observance in a place, vocation, or trade as to justify an expectation that it will be observed with respect to the transaction in question. The existence and scope of such a usage must be proved as facts. If it is established that such a usage is embodied in a trade code or similar record, the interpretation of the record is a question of law.

(d) A course of performance or course of dealing between the parties or usage of trade in the vocation or trade in which they are engaged or of which they are or should be aware is relevant in ascertaining the meaning of the parties' agreement, may give particular meaning to specific terms of the agreement, and may supplement or qualify the terms of the agreement. A usage of trade applicable in the place in which part of the performance under the agreement is to occur may be so utilized as to that part of the performance.

(e) Except as otherwise provided in subdivision (f), the express terms of an agreement and any applicable course of performance, course of dealing, or usage of trade must be construed whenever reasonable as consistent with each other. If such a construction is unreasonable:

(1) express terms prevail over course of performance, course of dealing, and usage of trade;

(2) course of performance prevails over course of dealing and usage of trade;

(3) course of dealing prevails over usage of trade.

(f) Subject to Section 2209, a course of performance is relevant to show a waiver or modification of any term inconsistent with the course of performance.

(g) Evidence of a relevant usage of trade offered by one party is not admissible unless that party has given the other party notice that the court finds sufficient to prevent unfair surprise to the other party.

- "A warranty is a contractual term concerning some aspect of the sale, such as title to the goods, or their quality or quantity." (4 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Sales, § 51.)

- Commercial Code section 2315 provides: "Where the seller at the time of contracting has reason to know any particular purpose for which the goods are required and that the buyer is relying on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods, there is unless excluded or modified under the next section an implied warranty that the goods shall be fit for such purpose."

- "An implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose arises only where (1) the purchaser at the time of contracting intends to use the goods for a particular purpose, (2) the seller at the time of contracting has reason to know of this particular purpose, (3) the buyer relies on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish goods suitable for the particular purpose, and (4) the seller at the time of contracting has reason to know that the buyer is relying on such skill and judgment." (Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 13, 25 [220 Cal.Rptr. 392] , internal citation omitted.)

- " 'A "particular purpose" differs from the ordinary purpose for which the goods are used in that it envisages a specific use by the buyer which is peculiar to the nature of his business whereas the ordinary purposes for which goods are used are those envisaged in the concept of merchantability and go to uses which are customarily made of the goods in question.' " (American Suzuki Motor Corp. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1291, 1295, fn. 2 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 526] , internal citation omitted.)

- "The warranty of fitness for a particular purpose is not limited to sales by a merchant as is the warranty of merchantability. It may be imposed on any seller possessing sufficient skill and judgment to justify the buyer's reliance. The Code drafters suggest, however, that a nonmerchant seller will only in particular circumstances have that degree of skill and judgment necessary to justify imposing the warranty." (4 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Sales, § 75.)

- "The reliance elements are important to the consideration of whether an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose exists. ... The major question in determining the existence of an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose is the reliance by the buyer upon the skill and judgment of the seller to select an article suitable for his needs." (Keith, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 25 , internal citations omitted.)

- In Keith, the reviewing court upheld the trial court's finding that there was no reliance because "the plaintiff did not rely on the skill and judgment of the defendants to select a suitable vessel, but that he rather relied on his own experts." (Keith, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 25 .)

- "Vertical privity is a prerequisite in California for recovery on a theory of breach of the implied warranties of fitness and merchantability." (United States Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 1431, 1441 [279 Cal.Rptr. 533] , internal citations omitted.)

- Although privity appears to be required for actions based upon the implied warranty of merchantability, there are exceptions to this rule, such as one for members of the purchaser's family. (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 115, fn. 8 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] .) Vertical privity is also waived for employees. (Peterson v. Lamb Rubber Co. (1960) 54 Cal.2d 339 [5 Cal.Rptr. 863, 353 P.2d 575] .) A plaintiff satisfies the privity requirement when he or she leases or negotiates the sale or lease of the product. 2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1233

CACI 1233 Implied Warranty of Merchantability for Food--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed by the [food product] that was sold by [name of defendant] because the [food product] was not fit for human consumption. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [ate/drank] a [food product] sold by [name of defendant];
2. That, at the time of purchase, [name of defendant] was in the business of selling the [food product] [or by [his/her] occupation held [himself/herself/itself] out as having special knowledge or skill regarding this [food product]];
3. That the [food product] was harmful when consumed;
4. That the harmful condition would not reasonably be expected by the average consumer;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That the [food product] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

If an instruction on the giving of notice to the seller is needed, see CACI No. 1243, Notification/Reasonable Time.

The advisory committee believes that the judge, not the jury, would decide whether the food substance is natural or foreign under Mexicali Rose v. Superior Court (1992) 1 Cal.4th 617 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 145, 822 P.2d 1292] .

■ "In the peculiar context of foodstuffs, the theory of breach of an implied warranty of merchantability has closer affinities to tort law than to contract law because it allows recovery of damages, without regard to privity of contract, for personal injuries as well as economic loss." (Shade Foods, Inc. v. Innovative Products Sales & Marketing, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 847, 871 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 364] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the injury-producing substance is natural to the preparation of the food served, it can be said that it was reasonably expected by its very nature and the food cannot be determined unfit or defective. A plaintiff in such a case has no cause of action in strict liability or implied warranty. If, however, the presence of the natural substance is due to a restaurateur's failure to exercise due care in food preparation, the injured patron may sue under a negligence theory." (Mexicali Rose v. Superior Court (1992) 1 Cal.4th 617, 633 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 145, 822 P.2d 1292] .)

■ "If the injury-causing substance is foreign to the food served, then the injured patron may also state a cause of action in implied warranty and strict liability, and the trier of fact will determine whether the substance (i) could be reasonably expected by the average consumer and (ii) rendered the food unfit or defective." (Mexicali Rose, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 633 .)

■ The Mexicali Rose decision was limited to commercial restaurant establishments. (Mexicali Rose, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 619, fn. 1 .) However, the reasoning of that case has been applied to supermarkets. (Ford v. Miller Meat Co. (1994) 28 Cal.App.4th 1196 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 899] .)

■ "The term 'natural' refers to bones and other substances natural to the product served, and does not encompass substances such as mold, botulinus bacteria or other substances (like rat flesh or cow eyes) not natural to the preparation of the product served." (Mexicali Rose, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 631, fn. 5 .)

■ It appears that the court would decide as a matter of law if the injury-producing substance is "natural" or not: "If the injury-producing substance is natural to the preparation of the food served, it can be said that it was reasonably expected by its very nature and the food cannot be determined unfit or defective. A plaintiff in such a case has no cause of action in strict liability or implied warranty." (Mexicali Rose, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 633 .)

Directions for Use

Limitation can be by words or conduct.

Sources and Authority

- Commercial Code section 2316(1) provides: "Words or conduct relevant to the creation of an express warranty and words or conduct tending to negate or limit warranty shall be construed wherever reasonable as consistent with each other; but subject to the provisions of this division on parol or extrinsic evidence (Section 2202) negation or limitation is inoperative to the extent that such construction is unreasonable."

- "Although section 2316 has drawn criticism for its vagueness, its purpose is clear. No warranty, express or implied, can be modified or disclaimed unless a seller clearly limits his liability." (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 118-119 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Because a disclaimer or modification is inconsistent with an express warranty, words of disclaimer or modification give way to words of warranty unless some clear agreement between the parties dictates the contrary relationship. At the very least, section 2316 allows limitation of warranties only by means of words that clearly communicate that a particular risk falls on the buyer." (Hauter, supra, 14 Cal.3d at p. 119 , internal citation omitted.)

- The Uniform Commercial Code Comment to section 2316 states: "This section is designed principally to deal with those frequent clauses in sales contracts which seek to exclude 'all warranties, express or implied.' It seeks to protect a buyer from unexpected and unbargained language of express warranty"

- "[A]ny disclaimer or modification must be strictly construed against the seller." (Hauter, supra, 14 Cal.3d at p. 119 .)

- "Strict construction against the person who has both warranted a particular fact to be true and then attempted to disclaim the warranty is especially appropriate in light of the fact that '[a] disclaimer of an express warranty is essentially contradictory, ...' " (Fundin v. Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. (1984) 152 Cal.App.3d 951, 958 [199 Cal.Rptr. 789] , internal citation omitted.)

- "A disclaimer of warranties must be specifically bargained for so that a disclaimer in a warranty given to the buyer after he signs the contract is not binding." (Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 11, 19-20 [120 Cal.Rptr. 516] .)

- "Interpretation of a written document, where extrinsic evidence is unnecessary, is a question of law for the trial court to determine." (Temple v. Velcro USA, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 1090, 1095 [196 Cal.Rptr. 531] , internal citations omitted.)

[That the parties' prior dealings, course of performance, or usage of trade had eliminated any implied representations.]

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Commercial Code section 2316(2) provides, in part: "Subject to subdivision (3), to exclude or modify the implied warranty of merchantability or any part of it the language must mention merchantability and in case of a writing must be conspicuous"

- The Uniform Commercial Code Comment to this section states: "Disclaimer of the implied warranty of merchantability is permitted under subsection (2), but with the safeguard that such disclaimers must mention merchantability and in case of a writing must be conspicuous."

- In most cases, it appears that a jury would be instructed on this theory of disclaimer only if the alleged disclaimer was made orally: "Interpretation of a written document, where extrinsic evidence is unnecessary, is a question of law for the trial court to determine." (Temple v. Velcro USA, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 1090, 1095 [196 Cal.Rptr. 531] , internal citations omitted.)

- Commercial Code section 2316(2) also provides, in part: "Language to exclude all implied warranties of fitness is sufficient if it states, for example, that 'There are no warranties which extend beyond the description on the face hereof.' "

- The Uniform Commercial Code Comment to section 2316 states: "Unlike the implied warranty of merchantability, implied warranties of fitness for a particular purpose may be excluded by general language, but only if it is in writing and conspicuous." Accordingly, disclaimers of warranties for a particular purpose are probably issues for the court only. Section 1201(10) provides: "A term or clause is conspicuous when it is so written that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. A printed heading in capitals (as: NONNEGOTIABLE BILL OF LADING) is conspicuous. Language in the body of a form is 'conspicuous' if it is in larger or other contrasting type or color. But in a telegram any stated term is 'conspicuous.' Whether a term or clause is 'conspicuous' or not is for decision by the court."

- The Uniform Commercial Code Comment to section 2316 observes that "oral language of disclaimer may raise issues of fact as to whether reliance by the buyer occurred and whether the seller had 'reason to know' under the section on implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose."

- "A disclaimer of warranties must be specifically bargained for so that a disclaimer in a warranty given to the buyer after he signs the contract is not binding." (Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 11, 19-20 [120 Cal.Rptr. 516] .)

- "[A]ny disclaimer or modification must be strictly construed against the seller." (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 119 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] .)

- Commercial Code section 2316(3) provides:

Notwithstanding subdivision (2)

(a) Unless the circumstances indicate otherwise, all implied warranties are excluded by expressions like "as is," "with all faults" or other language which in common understanding calls the buyer's attention to the exclusion of warranties and makes plain that there is no implied warranty; and

(b) When the buyer before entering into the contract has examined the goods or the sample or model as fully as he desired or has refused to examine the goods there is no implied warranty with regard to defects which an examination ought in the circumstances to have revealed to him; and

of performance or usage of trade.

■ The Uniform Commercial Code Comment to section 2316 states that the three exceptions listed under subdivision (3) "are common factual situations in which the circumstances surrounding the transaction are in themselves sufficient to call the buyer's attention to the fact that no implied warranties are made or that a certain implied warranty is being excluded."

■ The Uniform Commercial Code comment to section 2316 states: "Paragraph (a) of subsection (3) deals with general terms such as 'as is,' 'as they stand,' 'with all faults,' and the like. Such terms in ordinary commercial usage are understood to mean that the buyer takes the entire risk as to the quality of the goods involved."

■ The Uniform Commercial Code comment to section 2316 states: "In order to bring the transaction within the scope of 'refused to examine' in paragraph (b), it is not sufficient that the goods are available for inspection. There must in addition be a demand by the seller that the buyer examine the goods fully."

■ The Uniform Commercial Code comment to section 2316 states: "The particular buyer's skill and the normal method of examining goods in the circumstances determine what defects are excluded by the examination."

CHAPTER 12 California Judicial Council Products Liability Instructions

CACI 1243 Notification/Reasonable Time

If a buyer is required to notify the seller that a product [is not as represented] [does not have the expected quality] [is not suitable] [is in a harmful condition], [he/she/it] must do so within a reasonable time after [he/she/it] discovers or should have discovered this. A reasonable time depends on the circumstances of the case. In determining whether notice was given within a reasonable time, you must apply a more relaxed standard to a retail consumer than you would to a merchant buyer. A buyer notifies a seller by taking such steps as may be reasonably required to inform the seller [regardless of whether the seller actually receives the notice].

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Commercial Code section 2607(3) provides: "Where a tender has been accepted [t]he buyer must within a reasonable time after he discovers or should have discovered any breach notify the seller of breach or be barred from any remedy."
- Commercial Code section 1202(d) defines "notification" as follows: "A person 'notifies' or 'gives' a notice or notification to another person by taking such steps as may be reasonably required to inform the other person in ordinary course, whether or not the other person actually comes to know of it."
- Commercial Code section 1205(a) provides: "Whether a time for taking an action required by this code is reasonable depends on the nature, purpose, and circumstances of the action."
- The Uniform Commercial Code comment to section 2-607(4) states: "The time of notification is to be determined by applying commercial standards to a merchant buyer. 'A reasonable time' for notification from a retail consumer is to be judged by different standards so that in his case it will be extended, for the rule of requiring notification is designed to defeat commercial bad faith, not to deprive a good faith consumer of his remedy. [P] The content of the notification need merely be sufficient to let the seller know that the transaction is still troublesome and must be watched. There is no reason to require that the notification which saves the buyer's rights under this section must include a clear statement of all the objections that will be relied on by the buyer, as under the section covering statements of defects upon rejection (Section 2-605). Nor is there reason for requiring the notification to be a claim for damages or of any threatened litigation or other resort to a remedy. The notification which saves the buyer's rights under this Article need only be such as informs the seller that the transaction is claimed to involve a breach, and thus opens the way for normal settlement through negotiation."

- A plaintiff is not required to prove that he or she gave notice of a breach of warranty in personal injury and property damage lawsuits against a manufacturer or another supplier with whom the plaintiff has not directly dealt. (Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 57, 61 [27 Cal.Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897] ; Ghera v. Ford Motor Co. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 639, 652-653 [55 Cal.Rptr. 94] .)

- Notice is more likely to be required in disputes between merchants. (See Fieldstone Co. v. Briggs Plumbing Products, Inc. (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 357, 369-370 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 701] .)

- When required, notice must be pleaded and proved. (Vogel v. Thrifty Drug Co. (1954) 43 Cal.2d 184, 188 [272 P.2d 1] .)

- The purpose of the demand for notice is to protect the seller from stale claims (Whitfield v. Jessup (1948) 31 Cal.2d 826, 828 [193 P.2d 1] ; Metowski v. Traid Corp. (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 332, 339 [104 Cal.Rptr. 599]) and to give the defendant an opportunity to repair the defective item, reduce damages, improve products in the future, and negotiate settlements. (Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Development Co. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 374, 380 [115 Cal.Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] .)

CACI 1244 Affirmative Defense--Sophisticated User

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/it] is not responsible for any harm to [name of plaintiff] based on a failure to warn because [name of plaintiff] is a sophisticated user of the [product]. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that, at the time of the injury, [name of plaintiff], because of [his/her] particular position, training, experience, knowledge, or skill, knew or should have known of the [product]'s risk, harm, or danger.

New October 2008

Directions for Use

Give this instruction as a defense to CACI No. 1205, Strict Liability--Failure to Warn--Essential Factual Elements, or CACI No. 1222, Negligence--Manufacturer or Supplier--Duty to Warn--Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- "A manufacturer is not liable to a sophisticated user of its product for failure to warn of a risk, harm, or danger, if the sophisticated user knew or should have known of that risk, harm, or danger." (Johnson v. American Standard, Inc. (2008) 43 Cal.4th 56, 71 [74 Cal.Rptr.3d 108, 179 P.3d 905] .)
- "The sophisticated user defense exempts manufacturers from their typical obligation to provide product users with warnings about the products' potential hazards. The defense is considered an exception to the manufacturer's general duty to warn consumers, and therefore, in most jurisdictions, if successfully argued, acts as an affirmative defense to negate the manufacturer's duty to warn." (Johnson, supra, 43 Cal.4th at p. 65 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Under the sophisticated user defense, sophisticated users need not be warned about dangers of which they are already aware or should be aware. Because these sophisticated users are charged with knowing the particular product's dangers, the failure to warn about those dangers is not the legal cause of any harm that product may cause. The rationale supporting the defense is that 'the failure to provide warnings about risks already known to a sophisticated purchaser usually is not a proximate cause of harm resulting from those risks suffered by the buyer's employees or downstream purchasers.' This is because the user's knowledge of the dangers is the equivalent of prior notice." (Johnson, supra, 43 Cal.4th at p. 65 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he defense applies equally to strict liability and negligent failure to warn cases. The duty to warn is measured by what is generally known or should have been known to the class of sophisticated users, rather than by the individual plaintiff's subjective knowledge." (Johnson, supra, 43 Cal.4th at pp. 65-66 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] manufacturer is not liable to a sophisticated user for failure to warn, even if the failure to warn is a failure to provide a warning required by statute." (Johnson v. Honeywell Internat. Inc. (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 549, 556 [101 Cal.Rptr.3d 726] .)

■ "The sophisticated user defense concerns warnings. Sophisticated users 'are charged with knowing the particular product's dangers.' The rationale supporting the defense is that 'the failure to provide warnings about risks already known to a sophisticated purchaser usually is not a proximate cause of harm resulting from those risks suffered by the buyer's employees or downstream purchasers.' [Citation.]' [P] [Plaintiff]'s design defect cause of action was not concerned with warnings. Instead, he alleged that respondents' design of their refrigerant was defective. We see no logical reason why a defense that is based on the need for warning should apply." (Johnson, supra, 179 Cal.App.4th at p. 559 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The relevant time for determining user sophistication for purposes of this exception to a manufacturer's duty to warn is when the sophisticated user is injured and knew or should have known of the risk." (Johnson, supra, 43 Cal.4th at p. 73 .)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1245

CACI 1245 Affirmative Defense--Product Misuse or Modification

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/it] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm because the [product] was [misused/ [or] modified] after it left [name of defendant]'s possession. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that:

- 1. The [product] was [misused/ [or] modified] after it left [name of defendant]'s possession;
- 2. That the [misuse/ [or] modification] was not reasonably foreseeable to [name of defendant]; and
- 3. That the [misuse/ [or] modification] was the sole cause of [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New April 2009; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the defendant claims a complete defense to strict product liability because the product was misused or modified after it left the defendant's possession and control, and the subsequent misuse or modification was so unforeseeable that it should be deemed the sole or superseding cause. If misuse or modification was a substantial factor contributing to, but not the sole or superseding cause of, plaintiff's harm, there is no complete defense, but the conduct of the plaintiff or of third parties may be considered under principles of comparative negligence or fault. (See Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1, 15-21 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 455] .) See CACI No. 1207A, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Plaintiff, and CACI No. 1207B, Strict Liability--Comparative Fault of Third Person.

Sources and Authority

■ "[T]he law now requires a manufacturer to foresee some degree of misuse and abuse of his product, either by the user or by third parties, and to take reasonable precautions to minimize the harm that may result from misuse and abuse. ... [T]he extent to which designers and manufacturers of dangerous machinery are required to anticipate safety neglect presents an issue of fact. ... [A] manufacturer owes a foreseeable user of its product a duty to warn of risks of using the product." (Wright v. Stang Mfg. Co. (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1218, 1235 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 422] .)

■ "[P]roduct misuse [is] a defense to strict products liability only when the defendant prove[s] that an unforeseeable abuse or alteration of the product after it left the manufacturer's hands was the sole reason that the product caused injury." (Campbell v. Southern Pacific Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 51, 56 [148 Cal.Rptr. 596, 583 P.2d 121] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "[S]trict liability should not be imposed upon a manufacturer when injury results from a use of its product that is not reasonably foreseeable." (Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal.3d 121, 126 [104 Cal.Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153] .)

■ "'Misuse' is a defense only when that misuse is the actual cause of the plaintiff's injury, not when some other defect produces the harm. This causation is one of the elements of the 'misuse' affirmative defense and thus the burden falls on the defendant to prove it." (Huynh v. Ingersoll-Rand (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 825, 831 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 296] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]here are cases in which the modification of a product has been determined to be so substantial and unforeseeable as to constitute a superseding cause of an injury as a matter of law. However, foreseeability is a question for the jury unless undisputed facts leave no room for a reasonable difference of opinion. Thus, the issue of superseding cause is generally one of fact. Superseding cause has been viewed as an issue of fact even in cases where 'safety neglect' by an employer has increased the risk of injury, or modification of the product has made it more dangerous." (Torres, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 19 , internal citations omitted.)

2-12 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1246

CACI 1246 Affirmative Defense--Design Defect--Government Contractor

[Name of defendant] may not be held liable for design defects in the [product] if it proves all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] contracted with the United States government to provide the [product] for military use;
- 2. That the United States approved reasonably precise specifications for the [product];
- 3. That the [product] conformed to those specifications; and
- 4. That [name of defendant] warned the United States about the dangers in the use of the [product] that were known to [name of defendant] but not to the United States.

New June 2010

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant's product whose design is challenged was provided to the United States government for military use. The essence of the defense is that the plaintiff should not be able to impose on a government contractor a duty under state law that is contrary to the duty imposed by the government contract. (See Boyle v. United Technologies Corp. (1988) 487 U.S. 500, 508-509 [108 S.Ct. 2510, 101 L.Ed.2d 442] .) It has been stated that the defense is not limited to military contracts (see Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 700, 710 [99 Cal.Rptr.3d 418]), though no California court has expressly so held. There would appear to be no policy reason why this defense should be limited to military contracts.

Different standards and elements apply in a failure-to-warn case. This instruction must be modified for use in such a case. (See Oxford, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 712 ; Butler v. Ingalls Shipbuilding (9th Cir. 1996) 89 F.3d 582, 586 .)

Sources and Authority

- "The [United States] Supreme Court noted that in areas of ' "uniquely federal interests" ' state law may be preempted or displaced by federal law, and that civil liability arising from the performance of federal procurement contracts is such an area. The court further determined that preemption or displacement of state law occurs in an area of uniquely federal interests only where a ' "significant conflict" ' exists between an identifiable federal policy or interest and the operation of state law. The court concluded that 'state law which holds Government contractors liable for design defects in military equipment does in some circumstances present a "significant conflict" with federal policy and must be displaced.' " (Oxford, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 708 , quoting Boyle, supra, 487 U.S. at pp. 500 , 504, 507, 512.)

- "Liability for design defects in military equipment cannot be imposed, pursuant to state law, when (1) the United States approved reasonably precise specifications; (2) the equipment conformed to those specifications; and (3) the supplier warned the United States about the dangers in the use of the equipment that were known to the supplier but not to the United States. The first two of these conditions assure that the suit is within the area where the policy of the 'discretionary function' would be frustrated--i.e., they assure that the design feature in question was considered by a Government officer, and not merely by the contractor itself. The third condition is necessary because, in its absence, the displacement of state tort law would create some incentive for the manufacturer to withhold knowledge of risks, since conveying that knowledge might disrupt the contract but withholding it would produce no liability. We adopt this provision lest our effort to protect discretionary functions perversely impede them by cutting off information highly relevant to the discretionary decision." (Boyle, supra, 487 U.S. at pp. 512-513 .)

- "[T]he fact that a company supplies goods to the military does not, in and of itself, immunize it from liability for the injuries caused by those goods. Where the goods ordered by the military are those readily available, in substantially similar form, to commercial users, the military contractor defense does not apply." (In re Hawaii Federal Asbestos Cases (9th Cir. 1992) 960 F.2d 806, 811 .)

- "In our view, if a product is produced according to military specifications and used by the military because of particular qualities which serve a military purpose, and is incidentally sold commercially as well, that product may nonetheless still qualify as military equipment under the military contractor defense." (Jackson v. Deft, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 1305, 1319 [273 Cal.Rptr. 214] .)

- "While courts such as the court in Hawaii have sought to confine the government contractor defense to products that are made exclusively for the military, we agree with the court in Jackson that this limitation is unduly confining. Though the court in Boyle discussed the parameters of the contractor defense in terms of 'military equipment,' use of that term appears to have followed from the facts of that case. Other courts considering this issue have concluded the defense is not limited to military contracts. ... [Boyle's] application focuses instead on whether the issue or area is one involving 'uniquely federal interests' and, if so, whether the application of state law presents a 'significant conflict' with federal policy." (Oxford, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 710 ; the split on this issue in the federal and other state courts is noted in Carley v. Wheeled Coach (3d Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 1117, 1119, fn. 1 .)

■ "[T]he Supreme Court in Boyle did not expressly limit its holding to products liability causes of action. Thus, the government contractor defense is applicable to related negligence claims." (Oxford, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 711 .)

■ "In a failure-to-warn action, where no conflict exists between requirements imposed under a federal contract and a state law duty to warn, regardless of any conflict which may exist between the contract and state law design requirements, Boyle commands that we defer to the operation of state law." (Butler, supra, 89 F.3d at p. 586 .)

■ "The appellate court in Tate [Tate v. Boeing Helicopters (6th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 1150, 1156-1157] offered an alternative test for applying the government contractor defense in the context of failure to warn claims: 'When state law would otherwise impose liability for a failure to warn of dangers in using military equipment, that law is displaced if the contractor can show: (1) the United States exercised its discretion and approved the warnings, if any; (2) the contractor provided warnings that conformed to the approved warnings; and (3) the contractor warned the United States of the dangers in the equipment's use about which the contractor knew, but the United States did not.' " (Oxford, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 712 .)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] [manufacture/distribute/sell] the [product]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [product] contain a manufacturing defect when it left [name of defendant]'s possession?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the [product] used in a way that was reasonably foreseeable to [name of defendant]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the manufacturing defect a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages? Do not reduce the damages based on the fault, if any, of [name of plaintiff] or [name/description of other person].

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1204, Strict Liability --Design Defect-- Risk-Benefit Test --Essential Factual Elements-- Shifting Burden of Proof. If product misuse or modification is alleged as a complete defense, questions 2 and 3 of CACI No. VF-1201, Strict Products Liability --Design Defect--Consumer Expectation Test--Affirmative Defense--Misuse or Modification, may be included after question 1. If the comparative fault or negligence of the plaintiff or of third persons is at issue, questions 6 through 10 of CACI No. VF-1200, Strict Products Liability--Manufacturing Defect--Comparative Negligence at Issue, may be added at the end.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. However, do not combine this verdict form with CACI No. VF-1201, Strict Products Liability --Design Defect-- Consumer Expectation Test--Affirmative Defense--Misuse or Modification. The verdict forms must make it clear to the jury that the two tests are alternative theories of liability (Bracisco v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1101, 1106-1107 [206 Cal.Rptr. 431]) and that the burden shifting to the defendant to prove that the benefits outweigh the risks does not apply to the consumer-expectation test.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Under various circumstances, the plaintiff must also prove that he or she made a reasonable attempt to notify the defendant of the defect. Thus, where appropriate, the following question should be added prior to the question regarding the plaintiff's harm: "Did [name of plaintiff] take reasonable steps to notify [name of defendant] within a reasonable time that the [product] [was not/did not perform] as requested?"

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1230, Express Warranty--Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 1240, Affirmative Defense to Express Warranty--Not "Basis of Bargain."

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

Do not include question 2 if the affirmative defense is not at issue.

CHAPTER 13 California Judicial Council Assault and Battery Instructions

3-13 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Assault and Battery Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1300 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- The essential factual elements for a cause of action in battery [CACI No. 1300] and assault [CACI No. 1301].
- Consent explained [CACI No. 1302] and invalid consent [CACI No. 1303].
- Self-defense and the defense of others [CACI No. 1304].
- Battery by a peace officer [CACI No. 1305].
- Sexual battery [CACI No. 1306].
- The intent requirement and transferred intent [CACI Nos. 1320, 1321].

The assault and battery series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1300-VF-1303].

*3-13 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1300CACI 1300 Battery--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] committed a battery. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [touched [name of plaintiff]] [or] [caused [name of plaintiff] to be touched] with the intent to harm or offend [him/her];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to the touching; and
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed [or offended] by [name of defendant]'s conduct; [and]
- [4. That a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s situation would have been offended by the touching.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2004

Give the bracketed words in element 3 and the last bracketed element only if the offensive nature of the conduct is at issue. In most cases, it will be clear whether the alleged conduct was offensive. The offensive nature of the conduct will most likely not be at issue if the conduct was clearly harmful.

For a definition of "intent," see CACI No. 1320, Intent.

- "A battery is any intentional, unlawful and harmful contact by one person with the person of another. ... A harmful contact, intentionally done is the essence of a battery. A contact is 'unlawful' if it is unconsented to." (Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 604, 611 [278 Cal.Rptr. 900] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A battery is a violation of an individual's interest in freedom from intentional, unlawful, harmful or offensive unconsented contacts with his or her person." (Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 933, 938 [198 Cal.Rptr. 249] .)

■ "Although it is not incorrect to say that battery is an unlawful touching, ... it is redundant to use 'unlawful' in defining battery in a jury instruction, and may be misleading to do so without informing the jury what would make the conduct unlawful." (Barouh v. Haberman (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 40, 45 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 259] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The crimes of assault and battery are intentional torts. In the perpetration of such crimes negligence is not involved. As between the guilty aggressor and the person attacked the former may not shield himself behind the charge that his victim may have been guilty of contributory negligence, for such a plea is unavailable to him." (Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 378, 385 [59 Cal.Rptr. 382] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 13 provides:

An actor is subject to liability to another for battery if

(a) he acts intending to cause a harmful or offensive contact with the person of the other or a third person, or an imminent apprehension of such a contact, and

(b) a harmful contact with the person of the other directly or indirectly results.

■ " 'It has long been established, both in tort and criminal law, that "the least touching" may constitute battery. In other words, force against the person is enough; it need not be violent or severe, it need not cause bodily harm or even pain, and it need not leave any mark.' " (People v. Mansfield (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 82, 88 [245 Cal.Rptr. 800] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Civil Code section 3515 provides: "He who consents to an act is not wronged by it."

■ "The element of lack of consent to the particular contact is an essential element of battery." (Rains, supra, 150 Cal.App.3d at p. 938 .)

■ "As a general rule, one who consents to a touching cannot recover in an action for battery. ... However, it is well-recognized a person may place conditions on the consent. If the actor exceeds the terms or conditions of the consent, the consent does not protect the actor from liability for the excessive act." (Ashcraft, supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at pp. 609-610 .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 19 provides: "A bodily contact is offensive if it offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity."

■ " 'The usages of decent society determine what is offensive.' " (Barouh, supra, 26 Cal.App.4th at p. 46, fn. 5 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Even though pushing a door cannot be deemed a harmful injury, the pushing of a door which was touching the prosecutrix could be deemed an offensive touching and a battery is defined as a harmful or offensive touching." (People v. Puckett (1975) 44 Cal.App.3d 607, 614-615 [118 Cal.Rptr. 884] .)

■ " 'If defendant unlawfully aims at one person and hits another he is guilty of assault and battery on the party he hit, the injury being the direct, natural and probable consequence of the wrongful act.' " (Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 637, 642 [301 P.2d 440] , internal citation omitted.)

[A touching is offensive if it offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity.]

[Words alone do not amount to an assault.]

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, June 2005

For a definition of "intent," see CACI No. 1320, Intent. The last bracketed sentence should be read in cases in which there is a dispute as to whether the defendant's conduct involved more than words.

■ "'Generally speaking, an assault is a demonstration of an unlawful intent by one person to inflict immediate injury on the person of another then present.' A civil action for assault is based upon an invasion of the right of a person to live without being put in fear of personal harm." (Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. of California (1944) 63 Cal.App.2d 1, 6-7 [146 P.2d 57] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The tort of assault is complete when the anticipation of harm occurs." (Kiseskey v. Carpenters' Trust for Southern California (1983) 144 Cal.App.3d 222, 232 [192 Cal.Rptr 492] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 21 provides:

(1) An actor is subject to liability to another for assault if
(a) he acts intending to cause a harmful or offensive contact with the person of the other or a third person, or an imminent apprehension of such a contact, and

(b) the other is thereby put in such imminent apprehension.

(2) An action which is not done with the intention stated in Subsection (1, a) does not make the actor liable to the other for an apprehension caused thereby although the act involves an unreasonable risk of causing it and, therefore, would be negligent or reckless if the risk threatened bodily harm.

■ Words alone do not amount to an assault. (Tomblinson v. Nobile (1951) 103 Cal.App.2d 266, 269 [229 P.2d 97] .)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 31 provides: "Words do not make the actor liable for assault unless together with other acts or circumstances they put the other in reasonable apprehension of an imminent harmful or offensive contact with his person."

Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI instruction on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Liability vs. Damages: CACI No. 1301 appears to be an accurate instruction on the tort of assault. CACI No. 1301 requires that a plaintiff prove that he or she was "harmed" to establish the cause of action. As a practical matter, this might be the hardest element to prove in an assault case. Thus, the "Tip" here is that there can be liability for the threat of offensive touching without actual contact, although there may be no actual damages. If that is the case, the plaintiff would be limited to recovery of nominal damages. Punitive damages may also be available if the plaintiff can prove by "clear and convincing" evidence that the assault occurred as a result of the defendant's oppression or malice. By Joseph Devine

CACI 1302 Consent Explained

A plaintiff may express consent by words or acts that are reasonably understood by another person as consent.

A plaintiff may also express consent by silence or inaction if a reasonable person would understand that the silence or inaction intended to indicate consent.

New September 2003

See CACI No. 1303, Invalid Consent, if there is an issue concerning the validity of plaintiff's consent.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 892 provides:

(1) Consent is willingness in fact for conduct to occur. It may be manifested by action or inaction and need not be communicated to the actor.

(2) If words or conduct are reasonably understood by another to be intended as consent, they constitute apparent consent and are as effective as consent in fact.

■ Civil Code section 3515 provides: "He who consents to an act is not wronged by it."

■ "The element of lack of consent to the particular contact is an essential element of battery." (Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 933, 938 [198 Cal.Rptr. 249] .)

■ "Consent to an act, otherwise a battery, normally vitiates the wrong." (Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145

Cal.App.3d 369, 375 [193 Cal.Rptr. 422] .)

■ "As a general rule, one who consents to a touching cannot recover in an action for battery. ... However, it is well-recognized a person may place conditions on the consent. [Name of plaintiff] claims that [his/her] consent [was obtained by fraud/mistake/duress] [was obtained as a result of [his/her] incapacity] [or that [name of defendant]'s conduct went beyond the scope of [his/her] limited consent].

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 892B provides:

- (1) Except as stated in subsection (2), consent to conduct of another is effective for all consequences of the conduct and for the invasion of any interests resulting from it.
- (2) If the person consenting to the conduct of another is induced to consent by a substantial mistake concerning the nature of the invasion of his interests or the extent of the harm to be expected from it and the mistake is known to the other or is induced by the other's misrepresentation, the consent is not effective for the unexpected invasion or harm.
- (3) Consent is not effective if it is given under duress.

■ Consent may be invalidated if the act exceeds the scope of the consent or if the consent is fraudulently induced. (Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 369, 375 [193 Cal.Rptr. 422] .)

CACI 1304 Self-Defense/Defense of Others

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm because [he/she] was acting in [self-defense/defense of another]. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] reasonably believed that [name of plaintiff] was going to harm [him/her/[insert identification of other person]]; and

2. That [name of defendant] used only the amount of force that was reasonably necessary to protect [himself/herself/[insert identification of other person]].

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 50 provides, in part: "Any necessary force may be used to protect from wrongful injury the person or property of oneself, ... or member of one's family, or of a ward, servant, master, or guest."

- "Self-defense being an affirmative defense, it must, in a civil action, be established by the defendant by a preponderance of the evidence." (Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 378, 386 [59 Cal.Rptr. 382] .)

- "The right to use force against another has long been limited by the condition that the force be no more than 'that which reasonably appears necessary, in view of all the circumstances of the case, to prevent the impending injury.' ' When the amount of force used is justifiable under the circumstances, it is not willful and the actor may escape liability for intentionally injurious conduct that is otherwise actionable. But if force is applied in excess of that which is justified, the actor remains subject to liability for the damages resulting from the excessive use of force. ... When an alleged act of self-defense or defense of property is at issue, the question of what force was reasonable and justified is peculiarly one for determination by the trier of fact." (Calvillo-Silva v. Home Grocery (1998) 19 Cal.4th 714, 730-731 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 506, 968 P.2d 65] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The right of self-defense is not limited by actualities. The correct rule ... [is]: 'Generally ... , the force that one may use in self-defense is that which reasonably appears necessary, in view of all the circumstances of the case, to prevent the impending injury.' In emphasizing that the law of self-defense is a law of necessity courts should never lose sight of the fact that the necessity may be either real or apparent." (Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal.2d 586, 599-600 [191 P.2d 432] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1305 Battery by Peace Officer

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her] by using unreasonable force to [arrest [him/her]/prevent [his/her] escape/overcome [his/her] resistance/[insert other applicable action]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] intentionally touched [name of plaintiff] [or caused [name of plaintiff] to be touched];
- 2. That [name of defendant] used unreasonable force to [arrest/prevent the escape of/overcome the resistance of/ insert other applicable action] [name of plaintiff];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to the use of that force;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s use of unreasonable force was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[A/An] [insert type of peace officer] may use reasonable force to arrest or detain a person when he or she has reasonable cause to believe that that person has committed a crime. Even if the [insert type of peace officer] is mistaken, a person being arrested or detained has a duty not to use force to resist the [insert type of peace officer] unless the [insert type of peace officer] is using unreasonable force.

In deciding whether [name of defendant] used unreasonable force, you must determine the amount of force that would have appeared reasonable to [a/an] [insert type of peace officer] in [name of defendant]'s position under the same or similar circumstances. You should consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) The seriousness of the crime at issue;

(b) Whether [name of plaintiff] reasonably appeared to pose an immediate threat to the safety of [name of defendant] or others; and

(c) Whether [name of plaintiff] was actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest.

[[A/An] [insert type of peace officer] who makes or attempts to make an arrest is not required to retreat or cease from his or her efforts because of the resistance or threatened resistance of the person being arrested.]

■ California Penal Code section 835a states: "Any peace officer, who has reasonable cause to believe that the person to be arrested has committed a public offense, may use reasonable force to effect the arrest, to prevent escape or to overcome resistance. A peace officer who makes or attempts to make an arrest need not retreat or desist from his efforts by reason of the resistance or threatened resistance of the person being arrested; nor shall such officer be deemed an aggressor or lose his right to self-defense by the use of reasonable force to effect the arrest or to prevent escape or to overcome resistance."

■ California Penal Code section 834a states: "If a person has knowledge, or by the exercise of reasonable care, should have knowledge, that he is being arrested by a peace officer, it is the duty of such person to refrain from using force or any weapon to resist such arrest."

■ A plaintiff bringing a battery action against a police officer has the burden of proving unreasonable force as an element of the tort. (Edson v. City of Anaheim (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1269, 1272 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 614] .)

CHAPTER 13 California Judicial Council Assault and Battery Instructions

3-13 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1306

CACI 1306 Sexual Battery--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] committed a sexual battery. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove the following:

1. [(a) That [name of defendant] intended to cause a harmful [or offensive] contact with [name of plaintiff]'s [sexual organ/anus/groin/buttocks/ [or] breast], and a sexually offensive contact with [name of plaintiff] resulted, either directly or indirectly;]

[OR]

[(b) That [name of defendant] intended to cause a harmful [or offensive] contact with [name of plaintiff] by use of [name of defendant]'s [sexual organ/anus/groin/buttocks/ [or] breast], and a sexually offensive contact with [name of plaintiff] resulted, either directly or indirectly;]

[OR]

[(c) That [name of defendant] caused an imminent fear of a harmful [or offensive] contact with [name of plaintiff]'s [sexual organ/anus/groin/buttocks/ [or] breast]/ [or] [name of plaintiff] by use of [name of defendant]'s [sexual organ/anus/groin/buttocks/ [or] breast]], and a sexually offensive contact with [name of plaintiff] resulted, either directly or indirectly;]

AND

2. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to the touching; and

3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed [or offended] by [name of defendant]'s conduct.

["Offensive contact" means contact that offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity.]

New October 2008

Directions for Use

Omit any of the options for element 1 that are not supported by the evidence. If more than one are at issue, include the word "OR" between them.

Give the bracketed words "or offensive" in element 1 and "or offended" in element 3 and include the optional last sentence if the offensive nature of the conduct is at issue. In most cases, it will be clear whether the alleged conduct was offensive. The offensive nature of the conduct will most likely not be at issue if the conduct was clearly harmful.

For a definition of "intent," see CACI No. 1320, Intent.

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 1708.5 provides:

(a) A person commits a sexual battery who does any of the following:

(1) Acts with the intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact with an intimate part of another, and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results.

(2) Acts with the intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact with another by use of his or her intimate part, and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results.

(3) Acts to cause an imminent apprehension of the conduct described in paragraph (1) or (2), and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results.

(b) A person who commits a sexual battery upon another is liable to that person for damages, including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages.

(c) The court in an action pursuant to this section may award equitable relief, including, but not limited to, an injunction, costs, and any other relief the court deems proper.

(d) For the purposes of this section "intimate part" means the sexual organ, anus, groin, or buttocks of any person, or the breast of a female.

(e) The rights and remedies provided in this section are in addition to any other rights and remedies provided by law.

(f) For purposes of this section "offensive contact" means contact that offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity.

■ Civil Code section 3515 provides: "He who consents to an act is not wronged by it."

3-13 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1306

■ "A cause of action for sexual battery under Civil Code section 1708.5 requires the batterer intend to cause a 'harmful or offensive' contact and the batteree suffer a 'sexually offensive contact.' Moreover, the section is interpreted to require that the batteree did not consent to the contact." (Angie M. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1217, 1225 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 197] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The element of lack of consent to the particular contact is an essential element of battery." (Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal.App.3d 933, 938 [198 Cal.Rptr. 249] .)

■ "As a general rule, one who consents to a touching cannot recover in an action for battery. ... However, it is well-recognized a person may place conditions on the consent. If the actor exceeds the terms or conditions of the consent, the consent does not protect the actor from liability for the excessive act." (Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 604, 609-610 [278 Cal.Rptr. 900] .)

CACI 1320 Intent

[Name of defendant] acted intentionally if [he/she] intended to [insert facts, e.g., "assault [name of plaintiff]," "commit a battery"] or if [he/she] was substantially certain that the [insert facts, e.g., "assault," "battery"] would result from [his/her] conduct.

New September 2003

This instruction may be used to define intent for other intentional torts, where appropriate.

■ "In an action for civil battery the element of intent is satisfied if the evidence shows defendant acted with a 'willful disregard' of the plaintiff's rights." (Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 604, 613 [278 Cal.Rptr. 900] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "As a general rule, California law recognizes that '... every person is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts.' Thus, a person who acts willfully may be said to intend ' " those consequences which (a) represent the very purpose for which an act is done (regardless of the likelihood of occurrence), or (b) are known to be substantially certain to result (regardless of desire).' " ' The same definition is applied to many intentional torts." (Gomez v. Acquistapace (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 740, 746 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 821] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1321 Transferred Intent

If [name of defendant] intended to commit a battery or assault on one person, but by mistake or accident committed the act on [name of plaintiff], then the battery or assault is the same as if the intended person had been the victim.

New October 2008

Directions for Use

Use this instruction with CACI No. 1300, Battery--Essential Factual Elements, or 1301, Assault--Essential Factual Elements, if it is alleged that the defendant intended to batter or assault one person, and mistakenly or accidentally battered or assaulted the plaintiff.

Sources and Authority

■ "While throwing rocks at trees or into the street ordinarily is an innocent and lawful pastime, that same act when directed at another person is wrongful. The evidence at bar ... warrants an inference that [defendant] threw at [third party] and inadvertently struck [plaintiff]. In such circumstances the doctrine of "transferred intent" renders him liable to [plaintiff]. ... 'If defendant unlawfully aims at one person and hits another he is guilty of assault and battery on the party he hit, the injury being the direct, natural and probable consequence of the wrongful act.' The rule is not confined to criminal cases, as argued by respondents." (Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 637, 642 [301 P.2d 440] , internal citations omitted.)

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1300, Battery--Essential Factual Elements.

Give the bracketed words in question 3 and bracketed question 4 only if the offensive nature of the conduct is at issue. In most cases, it will be clear whether the alleged conduct was offensive. The offensive nature of the conduct will most likely not be at issue if the conduct was clearly harmful.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

New September 2003; Revised April 2007

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1305, Battery by Peace Officer.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

CHAPTER 14 California Judicial Council False Imprisonment Instructions

3-14 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "False Imprisonment Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1400 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- The essential factual elements for a cause of action when no arrest is involved [CACI No. 1400] and when there has been a false arrest without a warrant [CACI No. 1401].
- The affirmative defense of probable cause to arrest when there has been a false arrest without a warrant by a peace officer [CACI No. 1402].
- The essential factual elements for a cause of action regarding a false arrest by a private citizen without a warrant [CACI No. 1403].
- The affirmative defense of probable cause to arrest when there has been a false arrest without a warrant by a private citizen [CACI No. 1404].
- The essential factual elements for a cause of action for a false arrest with a warrant [CACI No. 1405].
- A peace officer's affirmative defense of "good faith" when a false arrest is made with a warrant [CACI No. 1406].
- The essential factual elements for a cause of action for the unnecessary delay in a plaintiff's processing or release [CACI No. 1407].

- The affirmative defense of a police officer's lawful authority to detain [CACI No. 1408].
- The common law right to detain for investigation [CACI No. 1409].

The false imprisonment series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1400- 1407].

CACI 1400 Essential Factual Elements--No Arrest Involved

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was wrongfully [restrained/confined/detained] by [name of defendant].
To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] intentionally deprived [name of plaintiff] of [his/her] freedom of movement by use of [physical barriers/force/threats of force/menace/fraud/deceit/unreasonable duress]; [and]
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was [actually] harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Element 2 should be either eliminated or modified by inserting the words "knowingly" or "voluntarily" before the word "consent" if it is alleged that fraud was involved: "Because '[t]here is no real or free consent when it is obtained through fraud' ... the girls' confinement on the aircraft was nonconsensual and therefore actionable as a false imprisonment." (Scofield v. Critical Air Medicine, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 990, 1006, fn. 16 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 915] , internal citations omitted.)

If plaintiff is seeking nominal damages as an alternative to actual damages, insert the following paragraph above element 3:

If you find both of the above, then the law assumes that [name of plaintiff] has been harmed and [he/she] is entitled to a nominal sum such as one dollar. [Name of plaintiff] is also entitled to additional damages if [he/she] proves the following:

The second sentence of the above paragraph, along with the final two elements of this instruction, should be omitted if plaintiff is seeking nominal damages only. Read "actually" in the third element only if nominal damages are also being sought.

If the defendant alleges that he or she had a lawful privilege, the judge should read the applicable affirmative defense instructions immediately following this one.

The confinement must be for "an appreciable length of time, however short." (City of Newport Beach v. Sasse (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 803, 810 [88 Cal.Rptr. 476] .) If this is an issue, the judge can instruct on this point as follows: "There is no requirement that the confinement last for a particular period of time."

Insert the following at the end of the instruction if applicable: "At the time, [name of plaintiff] need not have been aware that [he/she] was being [restrained/confined/detained]." (See Scofield, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1006-1007 .)

- Penal Code section 236 provides: "False imprisonment is the unlawful violation of the personal liberty of another." Courts have held that this statutory definition applies whether the offense is treated as a tort or a crime. (See Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701, 715 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559] ; Molko v. Holy Spirit Ass'n (1988) 46 Cal.3d 1092, 1123 [252 Cal.Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46] ; see also Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1124, 1135 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 169] [the tort of false imprisonment is "a willful and wrongful interference with the freedom of movement of another against his will"].)

- "[T]he tort [of false imprisonment] consists of the " 'nonconsensual, intentional confinement of a person, without lawful privilege, for an appreciable length of time, however short.' " " (Scofield, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1001 , internal citations omitted.)

- "The only mental state required to be shown to prove false imprisonment is the intent to confine, or to create a similar intrusion." (Fermino, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 716 .)

- There is no requirement that the restraint last for any particular period of time. (See Alterauge v. Los Angeles Turf Club (1950) 97 Cal.App.2d 735, 736 [218 P.2d 802] [15 minutes was sufficient for false imprisonment]; see also City of Newport Beach, supra, 9 Cal.App.3d at p. 810 [restraint must be for an "appreciable length of time, however short"].)

- False imprisonment "requires some restraint of the person and that he be deprived of his liberty or compelled to stay where he does not want to remain, or compelled to go where he does not wish to go; and that the person be restrained of his liberty without sufficient complaint or authority." (Collins v. County of Los Angeles (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d 451, 459-460 [50 Cal.Rptr. 586] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]t is clear that force or the threat of force are not the only means by which the tort of false imprisonment can be achieved. Fraud or deceit or any unreasonable duress are alternative methods of accomplishing the tort." (Scofield, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1002 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[C]ontemporaneous awareness of the false imprisonment is not, and need not be, an essential element of the tort." (Scofield, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1006 .)

- "[T]he critical question as to causation in intentional torts is whether the actor's conduct is a substantial factor in bringing about the type of harm which he intended from his original act." (Null v. City of Los Angeles (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 1528, 1536, fn. 6 [254 Cal.Rptr. 492] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he law of this state clearly allows a cause of action for false imprisonment notwithstanding the fact a plaintiff suffered merely nominal damage." (Scofield, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1007 .)

- "In addition to recovery for emotional suffering and humiliation, one subjected to false imprisonment is entitled to compensation for other resultant harm, such as loss of time, physical discomfort or inconvenience, any resulting physical illness or injury to health, business interruption, and damage to reputation, as well as punitive damages in appropriate cases." (Scofield, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1009 , internal citation omitted.)

New September 2003

Directions for Use

In the brackets, the judge must insert the fact or facts that are actually controverted and that may be necessary to arrive at the probable cause determination. There may be one or more facts or combinations of facts that are necessary to make this determination, in which case they can be phrased in the alternative.

If a criminal act is alleged as justification, it may be necessary to instruct whether the crime is a felony, misdemeanor, or public offense.

Penal Code section 836 provides, in part, that a warrantless arrest may be made if a person has committed a felony, although not in the officer's presence. While the requirement of probable cause is not explicitly stated, it would seem that the officer must always have probable cause at the time of the arrest and that subsequent conviction of a felony does not sanitize an improper arrest.

If the first bracketed paragraph is used, the judge should include "in the officer's presence" as part of the facts that the jury needs to find if there is a factual dispute on this point.

Sources and Authority

- Penal Code section 836(a) provides, in part:

A peace officer ... without a warrant, may arrest a person whenever any of the following circumstances occur:

- (1) The officer has probable cause to believe that the person to be arrested has committed a public offense in the officer's presence.
- (2) The person arrested has committed a felony, although not in the officer's presence.
- (3) The officer has probable cause to believe that the person to be arrested has committed a felony, whether or not a felony, in fact, has been committed.

- Penal Code section 15 provides: "A crime or public offense is an act committed or omitted in violation of a law forbidding or commanding it, and to which is annexed, upon conviction, either of the following punishments: (1) death; (2) imprisonment; (3) fine; (4) removal from office; or, (5) disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit in this State."

- Penal Code section 17(a) provides: "A felony is a crime which is punishable with death or by imprisonment in the state prison. Every other crime or public offense is a misdemeanor except those offenses that are classified as infractions."

- Penal Code section 830 and following provisions define who are peace officers in California.

- "An officer is not liable for false imprisonment for the arrest without a warrant of a person whom he has reasonable grounds to believe is guilty of a crime. The question of the existence of probable cause to believe that one is guilty of a crime must be determined as a matter of law from the facts and circumstances of the case." (Allen v. McCoy (1933) 135 Cal.App. 500, 507-508 [27 P.2d 423] .)

- "It has long been the law that a cause of action for false imprisonment is stated where it is alleged that there was an arrest without process, followed by imprisonment and damages. Upon proof of those facts the burden is on the defendant to prove justification for the arrest. Considerations of both a practical and policy nature underlie this rule. The existence of justification is a matter which ordinarily lies peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant. The plaintiff would encounter almost insurmountable practical problems in attempting to prove the negative proposition of the nonexistence of any justification. This rule also serves to assure that official intermeddling is justified, for it is a serious matter to accuse someone of committing a crime and to arrest him without the protection of the warrant process." (Cervantez v. J. C. Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 579, 592 [156 Cal.Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975] , footnote and internal citations omitted.)

- "The existence of probable cause depends upon facts known by the arresting officer at the time of the arrest." (

Hamilton v. City of San Diego (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 838, 844 [266 Cal.Rptr. 215] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "If the facts that gave rise to the arrest are undisputed, the issue of probable cause is a question of law for the trial court. When, however, the facts that gave rise to the arrest are controverted, the trial court must instruct the jury as to what facts, if established, would constitute probable cause. 'The trier of fact's function in false arrest cases is to resolve conflicts in the evidence. Accordingly, where the evidence is conflicting with respect to probable cause, " 'it [is] the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to what facts, if established, would constitute probable cause.' " ... The jury then decides whether the evidence supports the necessary factual findings.' " (Levin v. United Air Lines, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal.App.4th 1002, 1018-1019 [70 Cal.Rptr.3d 535] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'Presence' is not mere physical proximity but is determined by whether the offense is apparent to the officer's senses." (People v. Sjosten (1968) 262 Cal.App.2d 539, 543-544 [68 Cal.Rptr. 832] , internal citations omitted.)

"such conduct can be a basis for imposing liability for false imprisonment." (Id. at p. 942 .)

- "It has long been the law that a cause of action for false imprisonment is stated where it is alleged that there was an arrest without process, followed by imprisonment and damages. Upon proof of those facts the burden is on the defendant to prove justification for the arrest." (Cervantez v. J.C. Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 579, 592 [156 Cal.Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975].)

3-14 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1404

CACI 1404 False Arrest Without Warrant--Affirmative Defense--Private Citizen--Probable Cause to Arrest

[Name of defendant] claims the citizen's arrest was not wrongful because [he/she] had the authority to cause [name of plaintiff] to be arrested without a warrant.

[If [name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff] committed or attempted to commit a crime in [name of defendant]'s presence, then the arrest was lawful.]

[or]

[If [name of defendant] proves that a felony was committed and that [insert facts, that if proved, would establish that defendant had reasonable cause to believe that plaintiff had committed a felony], then the arrest was lawful.]

New September 2003

The judge must insert in the brackets the fact or facts that are actually controverted and that may be necessary to arrive at the probable cause determination. There may be one or more facts or combinations of facts that are necessary to make this determination, in which case they can be phrased in the alternative.

If a criminal act is alleged as justification, it may be necessary to instruct whether the crime is a felony, misdemeanor, or public offense.

Penal Code section 837 provides, in part, that a warrantless arrest may be made if a person has committed a felony, although not in the citizen's presence. While the requirement of probable cause is not explicitly stated, it would seem that the citizen must always have probable cause at the time of the arrest and that subsequent conviction of a felony does not sanitize an improper arrest.

■ Penal Code section 837 provides:

A private person may arrest another:

1. For a public offense committed or attempted in his presence.
2. When the person arrested has committed a felony, although not in his presence.
3. When a felony has been in fact committed, and he has reasonable cause for believing the person arrested to have committed it.

■ Penal Code section 15 provides: "A crime or public offense is an act committed or omitted in violation of a law forbidding or commanding it, and to which is annexed, upon conviction, either of the following punishments: (1) death; (2) imprisonment; (3) fine; (4) removal from office; or, (5) disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit in this State."

■ Penal Code section 17(a) provides: "A felony is a crime which is punishable with death or by imprisonment in the state prison. Every other crime or public offense is a misdemeanor except those offenses that are classified as infractions."

■ "What is probable cause, as has been often announced, is not a question of fact for the jury, but one of law for the court, to be decided in accordance with the circumstances at the time of the detention, unhampered by the outcome of the charge against the plaintiff of the public offense or by the conclusions of the trial court." (Collyer v. S.H. Kress Co. (1936) 5 Cal.2d 175, 181 [54 P.2d 20] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "'Presence' is not mere physical proximity but is determined by whether the offense is apparent to the [person]'s senses." (People v. Sjosten (1968) 262 Cal.App.2d 539, 543-544 [68 Cal.Rptr. 832] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 14 California Judicial Council False Imprisonment Instructions

CACI 1405 Essential Factual Elements--False Arrest With Warrant

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was wrongfully arrested by [name of defendant]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. [That [name of defendant] arrested [name of plaintiff];]

[That [name of defendant] intentionally caused [name of plaintiff] to be wrongfully arrested;]
[and]

2. That [insert facts supporting the invalidity of the warrant or the unlawfulness of the arrest, e.g., "the warrant for [name of plaintiff]'s arrest had expired"];

3. That [name of plaintiff] was [actually] harmed; and

4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

CACI No. 1406, False Arrest With Warrant --Peace Officer-- Affirmative Defense--"Good-Faith" Exception, should be given after this instruction if that defense is asserted.

If the plaintiff is seeking nominal damages as an alternative to actual damages, insert the following paragraph above element 3:

If you find both of the above, then the law assumes that [name of plaintiff] has been harmed and [he/she] is entitled to a nominal sum such as one dollar. [Name of plaintiff] is also entitled to additional damages if [he/she] proves the following:

The second sentence of the above paragraph, along with the final two elements of this instruction, should be omitted if plaintiff is seeking nominal damages only. Read "actually" in the third element only if nominal damages are also being sought.

- Penal Code section 834 provides: "An arrest is taking a person into custody, in a case and in the manner authorized by law. An arrest may be made by a peace officer or by a private person."

- "'[F]alse arrest' and 'false imprisonment' are not separate torts. False arrest is but one way of committing a false imprisonment, and they are distinguishable only in terminology." (Collins v. City and County of San Francisco (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 671, 673 [123 Cal.Rptr. 525] .)

- Government Code section 820.4 provides: "A public employee is not liable for his act or omission, exercising due care, in the execution or enforcement of any law. Nothing in this section exonerates a public employee from liability for false arrest or false imprisonment."

- A person is liable for false imprisonment if he or she " 'authorizes, encourages, directs, or assists an officer to do an unlawful act, or procures an unlawful arrest, without process, or participates in the unlawful arrest ... ' " (Du Lac v. Perma Trans Products, Inc. (1980) 103 Cal.App.3d 937, 941 [163 Cal.Rptr. 335] , internal citation omitted.) Where a defendant "knowingly gives the police false or materially incomplete information, of a character that could be expected to stimulate an arrest"... "such conduct can be a basis for imposing liability for false imprisonment." (Id. at p. 942 .)

- Where an arrest is made without process, plaintiff does not need to allege that "such arrest was unlawful... ." [However,] "if process was employed, the facts constituting the invalidity thereof must be set forth." (Peters v. Bigelow (1934) 137 Cal.App. 135, 138 [30 P.2d 450] .)

3-14 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1406

CACI 1406 False Arrest With Warrant--Peace Officer--Affirmative Defense--"Good-Faith" Exception

[Name of defendant] claims that the arrest was not wrongful. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That the arrest warrant would have appeared valid to a reasonably intelligent and informed person;
- 2. That [name of defendant] believed the warrant was valid; and
- 3. That [name of defendant] had a reasonable belief that [name of plaintiff] was the person referred to in the warrant.

If [name of defendant] has proven all of the above, then the arrest was not wrongful.

New September 2003

The absence-of-malice requirement is satisfied if the officer believes the warrant is valid and the warrant is valid on its face, notwithstanding any personal hostility or ill will.

■ Civil Code section 43.55(a) provides: "There shall be no liability on the part of, and no cause of action shall arise against, any peace officer who makes an arrest pursuant to a warrant of arrest regular upon its face if the peace officer in making the arrest acts without malice and in the reasonable belief that the person arrested is the one referred to in the warrant."

■ "With regard to Civil Code section 43.55, the immunity set forth therein for arrests made pursuant to a regular warrant is only conditional. A failure of any condition prevents the immunity from attaching to a public entity or employee." (Harden v. Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1989) 215 Cal.App.3d 7, 14 [263 Cal.Rptr. 549] .)

■ " 'Malice,' as that term is used in section 43.55, refers not to the actual physical execution of the warrant, but to the officer's state of mind in procuring or executing the warrant. For instance, malice for purposes of section 43.55 has been found in situations where the officer purposefully withheld exculpatory evidence from the magistrate issuing the arrest warrant, where the officer knowingly used false information in order to obtain the warrant, or where the officer executes the warrant with knowledge that it has been recalled or is no longer valid." (Ting v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1991) 927 F.2d 1504, 1514 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Courts have described the meaning of a warrant "regular on its face" as follows: "Unless there is a clear absence of jurisdiction on the part of the court or magistrate issuing the process, it is sufficient if upon its face it [the warrant] appears to be valid in the judgment of an ordinarily intelligent and informed layman." (Allison v. County of Ventura (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 689, 697 [137 Cal.Rptr. 542] .)

■ "Peace officers are not required to investigate the supportive legal proceedings from which a warrant issues. However, they are required to exercise the judgment of an 'ordinarily intelligent and informed layman' to observe the blatant and patent inadequacy of a warrant emanating from a civil action which directs arrest and neither sets bail nor informs the arrestee of the offense charged for which arrest is ordered." (Allison, supra, 68 Cal.App.3d at p. 703 .)

■ "A police officer must use reasonable prudence and diligence to determine whether a party being arrested is the one described in the warrant. The officer may not refuse to act upon information offered him which discloses the warrant is being served on the wrong person. But, the prudence and diligence required of an arresting officer in determining whether to make an arrest must be balanced against the need to act swiftly and to make on-the-spot evaluations, often under chaotic conditions." (Lopez v. City of Oxnard (1989) 207 Cal.App.3d 1, 7 [254 Cal.Rptr. 556] .)

- 1. That [name of defendant] held [name of plaintiff] in custody;

The second sentence of the above paragraph, along with the final two elements of this instruction, should be omitted if plaintiff is seeking nominal damages only. Read "actually" in the fourth element only if nominal damages are also being sought.

- Penal Code section 834 provides: "An arrest is taking a person into custody, in a case and in the manner authorized by law. An arrest may be made by a peace officer or by a private person."

- Penal Code section 825(a) provides, in part: "[T]he defendant shall in all cases be taken before the magistrate without unnecessary delay, and, in any event, within 48 hours after his or her arrest, excluding Sundays and holidays."

- "The critical factor is the necessity for any delay in arraignment. These provisions do not authorize a two-day detention in all cases. Instead, 'a limit [is placed] upon what may be considered a necessary delay, and a detention of less than two days, if unreasonable under the circumstances, is in violation of the statute' and of the Constitution." (People v. Thompson (1980) 27 Cal.3d 303, 329 [165 Cal.Rptr. 289, 611 P.2d 883] .)

Where a defendant "knowingly [gives] the police false or materially incomplete information, of a character that could be expected to stimulate an arrest" ... "such conduct can be a basis for imposing liability for false imprisonment." (Id. at p. 942 .)

- "In determining which delays are necessary, this court has rejected arguments that the delay was 'not unusual' or made 'the work of the police and the district attorney easier.' As the Court of Appeal recently observed, '[t]here is no authority to delay for the purpose of investigating the case. Subject to obvious health considerations the only permissible delay between the time of arrest and bringing the accused before a magistrate is the time necessary: to complete the arrest; to book the accused; to transport the accused to court; or the district attorney to evaluate the evidence for the limited purpose of determining what charge, if any, is to be filed; and to complete the necessary clerical and administrative tasks to prepare a formal pleading.' City of Los Angeles (1997) 15 Cal.4th 744 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 842, 937 P.2d 273]*) only damages attributable to injuries arising from false arrest and false imprisonment are compensable in an action under state law against a public entity and its employees. False imprisonment ends at the point malicious prosecution begins which, under Asgari, is the point at which the person is arraigned." (*County of Los Angeles v. CACI 1408 Affirmative Defense--Police Officer's Lawful Authority to Detain

[Name of defendant] claims that the detention was not wrongful because [he/she] had a right to detain [name of plaintiff] for questioning or other limited investigation.

If [name of defendant] has proven that [insert facts, that if established, would constitute a reasonable suspicion], then [name of defendant] had a right to detain [name of plaintiff] for questioning or other limited investigation.

New September 2003

This instruction is intended to apply to false imprisonment actions not involving an arrest. The inserted facts must support a finding of reasonable suspicion as a matter of law.

If the factual issues are too complicated, consider bifurcating the trial.

■ "In an action for false arrest and imprisonment, the question of reasonable or probable cause is ordinarily one for the court, and not for the jury. When the facts are admitted or are beyond controversy, the question is to be determined by the court alone. When the facts are controverted or the evidence conflicting, the determination of their legal effect by the court is necessarily hypothetical and the jury is to be told that if it finds the facts in a designated way such facts do or do not amount to probable cause." (Whaley v. Jansen (1962) 208 Cal.App.2d 222, 227 [25 Cal.Rptr. 184] .)

■ "Although the line may at times be a fine one, there is a well-settled distinction in law between an arrest and a detention. A detention is a lesser intrusion upon a person's liberty requiring less cause and consisting of briefly stopping a person for questioning or other limited investigation." (Cervantez v. J.C.

Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 579, 591, fn. 5 [156 Cal.Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975] .)

■ Government Code section 820.4 provides: "A public employee is not liable for his act or omission, exercising due care, in the execution or enforcement of any law. Nothing in this section exonerates a public employee from liability for false arrest or false imprisonment."

■ "The Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution prohibits seizures of persons, including brief investigative stops, when they are 'unreasonable.' Our state Constitution has a similar provision. A seizure occurs whenever a police officer 'by means of physical force or show of authority' restrains the liberty of a person to walk away." (People v. Souza (1994) 9 Cal.4th 224, 229 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 569, 885 P.2d 982] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A detention ... has been said to occur 'if the suspect is not free to leave at will--if he is kept in the officer's presence by physical restraint, threat of force, or assertion of authority.' " (Evans v. City of Bakersfield (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 321, 330 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 406] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "It is settled that circumstances short of probable cause to make an arrest may justify a police officer stopping and briefly detaining a person for questioning or other limited investigation." (In re Tony C. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 888, 892 [148 Cal.Rptr. 366, 582 P.2d 957] .)

■ "A detention is reasonable under the Fourth Amendment when the detaining officer can point to specific articulable facts that, considered in light of the totality of the circumstances, provide some objective manifestation that the person detained may be involved in criminal activity." (Souza, supra, 9 Cal.4th at p. 231 .)

■ "The state bears the burden of justifying a detention, as with all warrantless intrusions." (People v. Wilkins (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 804, 809 [231 Cal.Rptr. 1] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[W]e conclude that the merchant's probable cause defense is limited to suits based upon a detention and does not extend to suits based upon an arrest." (Cervantez v. J.C. Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 579, 591 [156 Cal.Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975] .)

■ "Ordinarily, the owner of property, in the exercise of his inherent right to protect the same, is justified in restraining another who seeks to interfere with or injure it." (Collyer v. S.H. Kress Co. (1936) 5 Cal.2d 175, 180 [54 P.2d 20] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Merchants who detain individuals whom they have probable cause to believe are about to injure their property are privileged against a false imprisonment action. ■ "We note that the merchant's privilege is a defense to a false imprisonment action. As such, the lack of that privilege on defendant's part need not be specifically pleaded by plaintiff. Although a false imprisonment must involve an 'unlawful' restraint on an individual's liberty, [plaintiff's] allegations sufficiently plead that her confinement was unlawful. Moreover, the question of whether a detainment was reasonable is generally a question of fact." (Fermino, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 723, fn. 8 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Penal Code section 490.5(f) provides, in part: "A merchant may detain a person for a reasonable time for the purpose of conducting an investigation in a reasonable manner whenever the merchant has probable cause to believe the person to be detained is attempting to unlawfully take or has unlawfully taken merchandise from the merchant's premises."

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1400, Essential Factual Elements--No Arrest Involved.

If the jury returns a verdict of no harm, the plaintiff is still entitled to an award of nominal damages, such as one dollar. If nominal damages are being sought, modify the directions after question 3 to direct the jury to skip question 4 and answer question 5 if they find no harm. Then add a new question 5: "What amount of nominal damages do you award [name of plaintiff]?" If this is done, add a direction after question 4 that the jury should not answer question 5. Please note that the committee has found no cases requiring the jury to determine the amount of nominal damages.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 4 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

CACI VF-1407 False Imprisonment--Unnecessary Delay in Processing/Releasing

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] hold [name of plaintiff] in custody?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was there an unnecessary delay [insert facts, e.g., "in taking [name of plaintiff] before a judge" or "in releasing [name of plaintiff]"]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] consent to the delay?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[After it has been signed/After all verdict forms have been signed], deliver this verdict form to the [clerk/bailiff/judge].

If the jury returns a verdict of no harm, the plaintiff is still entitled to an award of nominal damages, such as one dollar. If nominal damages are being sought, modify the directions after question 4 to direct the jury to skip question 5 and answer question 6 if they find no harm. Then add a new question 6: "What amount of nominal damages do you award [name of plaintiff]?" If this is done, add a direction after question 5 that the jury should not answer question 6. Please note that the committee has found no cases requiring the jury to determine the amount of nominal damages.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI verdict form on this subject.

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Malicious Prosecution Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1500 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Former criminal proceedings [CACI No. 1500].
- Wrongful use of civil [CACI No. 1501] and administrative [CACI No. 1502] proceedings.
- Reliance on counsel as an affirmative defense [CACI No. 1505].
- Public entities and employees [CACI No. 1506].
- Essential factual elements for an action for abuse of process [CACI No. 1520].

The malicious prosecution series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1500-VF-1504].

CHAPTER 15 California Judicial Council Malicious Prosecution Instructions

CACI 1500 Former Criminal Proceeding

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully caused a criminal proceeding to be brought against [him/her/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was actively involved in causing [name of plaintiff] to be prosecuted [or in causing the continuation of the prosecution];
- [2. That the criminal proceeding ended in [name of plaintiff]'s favor;]
- [3. That no reasonable person in [name of defendant]'s circumstances would have believed that there were grounds for causing [name of plaintiff] to be arrested or prosecuted;]
- 4. That [name of defendant] acted primarily for a purpose other than to bring [name of plaintiff] to justice;
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[The law requires that the trial judge, rather than the jury, decide if [name of plaintiff] has proven element 2 above, whether the criminal proceeding ended in [his/her/its] favor. But before I can do so, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proven the following:

[List all factual disputes that must be resolved by the jury.]

The special [verdict/interrogatory] form will ask for your finding on [this/these] issue[s].]

[The law [also] requires that the trial judge, rather than the jury, decide if [name of plaintiff] has proven element 3 above, whether a reasonable person in [name of defendant]'s circumstances would have believed that there were grounds for causing [name of plaintiff] to be arrested or prosecuted. But before I can do so, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proven the following:

[List all factual disputes that must be resolved by the jury.]

Directions for Use

Malicious prosecution requires that the criminal proceeding have ended in the plaintiff's favor (element 2) and that the defendant did not reasonably believe that there were any grounds (probable cause) to initiate the proceeding (element 3). Probable cause is to be decided by the court as a matter of law. However, it may require the jury to find some preliminary facts before the court can make its legal determination, including facts regarding what the defendant knew or did not know at the time. (See Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Olier (1989) 47 Cal.3d 863, 881 [254 Cal.Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498] .) If so, include element 3 and also the bracketed part of the instruction that refers to element 3.

Favorable termination is handled in much the same way. If a proceeding is terminated other than on the merits, there may be disputed facts that the jury must find in order to determine whether there has been a favorable termination. (See Fuentes v. Berry (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1800, 1808 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 848] .) If so, include element 2 and also the bracketed part of the instruction that refers to element 2. Once these facts are determined, the jury does not then make a second determination as to whether there has been a favorable termination. The matter is determined by the court based on the resolution of the disputed facts. See Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1159 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726] [element of favorable termination is for court to decide].)

Either or both of the elements of probable cause and favorable termination should be omitted if there are no disputed facts regarding that element for the jury.

Element 4 expresses the malice requirement.

- Restatement Second of Torts section 653 provides:

A private person who initiates or procures the institution of criminal proceedings against another who is not guilty of the offense charged is subject to liability for malicious prosecution if

(a) he initiates or procures the proceedings without probable cause and primarily for a purpose other than that of bringing an offender to justice, and

(b) the proceedings have terminated in favor of the accused.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 673 provides:

- (1) In an action for malicious prosecution the court determines whether
 - (a) the proceedings of which the plaintiff complains were criminal in character;
 - (b) the proceedings were terminated in favor of the plaintiff;
 - (c) the defendant had probable cause for initiating or continuing the proceedings;
 - (d) the harm suffered by the plaintiff is a proper element for the jury to consider in assessing damages.

(2) In an action for malicious prosecution, subject to the control of the court, the jury determines

- (a) the circumstances under which the proceedings were initiated in so far as this determination may be necessary to enable the court to determine whether the defendant had probable cause for initiating or continuing the proceedings;
- (b) whether the defendant acted primarily for a purpose other than that of bringing an offender to justice;
- (c) the circumstances under which the proceedings were terminated;
- (d) the amount that the plaintiff is entitled to recover as damages;
- (e) whether punitive damages are to be awarded, and if so, their amount.

■ "When there is a dispute as to the state of the defendant's knowledge and the existence of probable cause turns on resolution of that dispute, ... the jury must resolve the threshold question of the defendant's factual knowledge or belief. ■ In Bertero [*Bertero v. (Bertero, supra, 13 Cal.3d at pp. 55-57 .) This holding was reaffirmed in Crowley v. Katleman (1994) 8 Cal.4th 666, 695 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 386, 881 P.2d 1083] .)

■ " '[T]he plaintiff in a malicious prosecution action must plead and prove that the prior judicial proceeding of which he complains terminated in his favor.' Termination of the prior proceeding is not necessarily favorable simply because the party prevailed in the prior proceeding; the termination must relate to the merits of the action by reflecting either on the innocence of or lack of responsibility for the misconduct alleged against him." (Sagonowsky, supra, 64 Cal.App.4th at p. 128 , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The theory underlying the requirement of favorable termination is that it tends to indicate the innocence of the accused, and coupled with the other elements of lack of probable cause and malice, establishes the tort, that is, the malicious and unfounded charge of crime against an innocent person.' " (Cote v. Henderson (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 796, 804 [267 Cal.Rptr. 274] , quoting Jaffe v. Stone (1941) 18 Cal.2d 146, 150 [114 P.2d 335] .)

■ "Where a proceeding is terminated other than on the merits, the reasons underlying the termination must be examined to see if it reflects the opinion of the court or the prosecuting party that the action would not succeed. If a conflict arises as to the circumstances explaining a failure to prosecute an action further, the determination of the reasons underlying the dismissal is a question of fact." (Fuentes, supra, 38 Cal.App.4th at p. 1808 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The plea of nolo contendere is considered the same as a plea of guilty. Upon a plea of nolo contendere the court shall find the defendant guilty, and its legal effect is the same as a plea of guilty for all purposes. Directions for Use

Malicious prosecution requires that the proceeding have ended in the plaintiff's favor (element 2) and that the defendant did not reasonably believe that there were any grounds (probable cause) to initiate the proceeding (element 3). Probable cause is to be decided by the court as a matter of law. However, the jury may be required to find some preliminary facts before the court can make its legal determination, including facts regarding what the defendant knew or did not know at the time. (See Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Olier (1989) 47 Cal.3d 863, 881 [254 Cal.Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498] .) If so, include element 3 and also the bracketed part of the instruction that refers to element 3.

Favorable termination is handled in much the same way. If a proceeding is terminated other than on the merits, there may be disputed facts that the jury must find in order to determine whether there has been a favorable termination. (See Fuentes v. Berry (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1800, 1808 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 848] .) If so, include element 2 and also the bracketed part of the instruction that refers to element 2. Once these facts are determined, the jury does not then make a second determination as to whether there has been a favorable termination. The matter is determined by the court based on the resolution of the disputed facts. See Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1159 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726] [element of favorable termination is for court to decide].)

Either or both of the elements of probable cause and favorable termination should be omitted if there are no disputed facts regarding that element for the jury to decide.

Element 4 expresses the malice requirement.

Sources and Authority

- "Although the tort is usually called 'malicious prosecution,' the word 'prosecution' is not a particularly apt description of the underlying civil action. The Restatement uses the term 'wrongful use of civil proceedings' to refer to the tort." (5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Torts, § 486, internal citations omitted.)

- Government Code section 821.6 provides: "A public employee is not liable for injury caused by his instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his employment, even if he acts maliciously and without probable cause."

- "To establish a cause of action for the malicious prosecution of a civil proceeding, a plaintiff must plead and prove that the prior action (1) was commenced by or at the direction of the defendant and was pursued to a legal termination in his, plaintiff's, favor; (2) was brought without probable cause; and (3) was initiated with malice." (Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal.3d 43, 50 [118 Cal.Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The remedy of a malicious prosecution action lies to recompense the defendant who has suffered out of pocket loss in the form of attorney fees and costs, as well as emotional distress and injury to reputation because of groundless allegations made in pleadings which are public records." (Sagonowsky v. More (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 122, 132 [75 Cal.Rptr.2d 118] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The malicious commencement of a civil proceeding is actionable because it harms the individual against whom the claim is made, and also because it threatens the efficient administration of justice. The individual is harmed because he is compelled to defend against a fabricated claim which not only subjects him to the panoply of psychological pressures most civil defendants suffer, but also the additional stress of attempting to resist a suit commenced out of spite or ill will, often magnified by slanderous allegations in the pleadings." (Merlet v. Rizzo (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 53, 59 [75 Cal.Rptr.2d 83] , internal citation omitted.)

■ The litigation privilege of Civil Code section 47 does not preclude malicious prosecution actions. (See Kimmel v. Goland (1990) 51 Cal.3d 202, 209 [271 Cal.Rptr. 191, 793 P.2d 524] [litigation privilege "has been interpreted to apply to virtually all torts except malicious prosecution"]; Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal.3d 205, 216 [266 Cal.Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365] ["only exception ... has been for malicious prosecution actions"]; Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 392, 406 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 781] ["privilege applies only to tort causes of action, and not to the tort of malicious prosecution"].)

■ A person who had no part in the commencement of the action but who participated in it at a later time may be held liable for malicious prosecution: "There does not appear to be any good reason not to impose liability upon a person who inflicts harm by aiding or abetting a malicious prosecution which someone else has instituted." (Lujan v. Gordon (1977) 70 Cal.App.3d 260, 264 [138 Cal.Rptr. 654] .)

■ "[A] cause of action for malicious prosecution lies when predicated on a claim for affirmative relief asserted in a cross-pleading even though intimately related to a cause asserted in the complaint." (Bertero, supra, 13 Cal.3d at p. 53 .)

■ "Our repeated references in Bertero to the types of harm suffered by an 'individual' who is forced to defend against a baseline suit do not indicate ... that a malicious prosecution action can be brought only by an individual. On the contrary, there are valid policies which would be furthered by allowing nonindividuals to sue for malicious prosecution." (City of Long Beach v. Bozek (1982), 31 Cal.3d 527, 531 [183 Cal.Rptr. 86, 645 P.2d 137] , reiterated on remand from United States Supreme Court at 33 Cal.3d 727 [but holding that public entity cannot sue for malicious prosecution].)

■ "[T]he courts have refused to permit malicious prosecution claims when they are based on a prior proceeding that is (1) less formal or unlike the process in the superior court (i.e., a small claims hearing, an investigation or application not resulting in a formal proceeding), (2) purely defensive in nature, or (3) a continuation of an existing proceeding." (Merlet, supra, 64 Cal.App.4th at p. 60 .)

■ "[I]t is not enough that the present plaintiff (former defendant) prevailed in the action. The termination must 'reflect on the merits,' and be such that it 'tended to indicate [the former defendant's] innocence of or lack of responsibility for the alleged misconduct.' " (Drummond v. Desmarais (2009) 176 Cal.App.4th 439, 450 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 183] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] voluntary dismissal on technical grounds, such as lack of jurisdiction, laches, the statute of limitations or prematurity, does not constitute a favorable termination because it does not reflect on the substantive merits of the underlying claim. ..." (Drummond, supra, 176 Cal.App.4th at p. 456 .)
- "[A] malicious prosecution plaintiff is not precluded from establishing favorable termination where severable claims are adjudicated in his or her favor." (Sierra Club Found., supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at p. 1153 , internal citation omitted.)
- "Where a proceeding is terminated other than on the merits, the reasons underlying the termination must be examined to see if it reflects the opinion of the court or the prosecuting party that the action would not succeed. If a conflict arises as to the circumstances explaining a failure to prosecute an action further, the determination of the reasons underlying the dismissal is a question of fact." (Fuentes, supra, 38 Cal.App.4th at p. 1808 , internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]hen a dismissal results from negotiation, settlement, or consent, a favorable termination is normally not recognized. Under these latter circumstances, the dismissal reflects ambiguously on the merits of the action." (Weaver v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal.App.3d 166, 184-185 [156 Cal.Rptr. 745] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Sheldon Appel Co., supra, 47 Cal.3d at p. 882 .)
- " 'Should a conflict arise as to the circumstances explaining the failure to prosecute, the trier of fact must exercise its traditional role in deciding the conflict.' " (Weaver, supra, 95 Cal.App.3d at p. 185 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "Not every case in which a terminating sanctions motion is granted necessarily results in a 'favorable termination.' But where the record from the underlying action is devoid of any attempt during discovery to substantiate allegations in the complaint, and the court's dismissal is justified by the plaintiff's lack of evidence to submit the case to a jury at trial, a prima facie showing of facts sufficient to satisfy the 'favorable termination' element of a malicious prosecution claim is established" (Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal.App.4th 204, 219 [105 Cal.Rptr.3d 683] .)
- " 'Probable cause exists when a cause of action is, objectively speaking, legally tenable.' ... The claim need not be meritorious in fact, but only 'arguably tenable ... ' " (Drummond, supra, 176 Cal.App.4th at p. 453 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- In Bertero, the court approved a jury instruction stating that liability can be found if the prior action asserts a legal theory that is brought without probable cause, even if alternate theories are brought with probable cause. (Bertero, supra, 13 Cal.3d at pp. 55-57 .) This holding was reaffirmed in Crowley v. Katleman (1994) 8 Cal.4th 666, 695 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 386, 881 P.2d 1083] .)
- "[T]he existence or absence of probable cause has traditionally been viewed as a question of law to be determined by the court, rather than a question of fact for the jury [P] [It] requires a sensitive evaluation of legal principles and precedents, a task generally beyond the ken of lay jurors" (Sheldon Appel Co., supra, 47 Cal.3d at p. 875 .)
- "When there is a dispute as to the state of the defendant's knowledge and the existence of probable cause turns on resolution of that dispute, ... the jury must resolve the threshold question of the defendant's factual knowledge or belief. Thus, when ... there is evidence that the defendant may have known that the factual allegations on which his action depended were untrue, the jury must determine what facts the defendant knew before the trial court can determine the legal question whether such facts constituted probable cause to institute the challenged proceeding." (Sheldon Appel Co., supra, 47 Cal.3d at p. 881 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Whereas the malice element is directly concerned with the subjective mental state of the defendant in instituting the prior action, the probable cause element calls on the trial court to make an objective determination of the 'reasonableness' of the defendant's conduct, i.e., to determine whether, on the basis of the facts known to the defendant, the institution of the prior action was legally tenable." (Sheldon Appel Co., supra, 47 Cal.3d at p. 878 , original italics.)

■ " 'The facts to be analyzed for probable cause are those known to the defendant [in the malicious prosecution action] at the time the underlying action was filed.' " (Walsh v. Bronson (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 259, 264 [245 Cal.Rptr. 888] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A litigant will lack probable cause for his action either if he relies upon facts which he has no reasonable cause to believe to be true, or if he seeks recovery upon a legal theory which is untenable under the facts known to him." (Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal.4th 260, 292 [46 Cal.Rptr.3d 638, 139 P.3d 30] .)

■ "Probable cause may be present even where a suit lacks merit. ... Suits which all reasonable lawyers agree totally lack merit--that is, those which lack probable cause--are the least meritorious of all meritless suits. Only this subgroup of meritless suits present[s] no probable cause." (Roberts v. Sentry Life Insurance (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 375, 382 [90 Cal.Rptr.2d 408] .)

■ "[A]n attorney may be held liable for malicious prosecution for continuing to prosecute a lawsuit discovered to lack probable cause." (Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal.4th 958, 970 [12 Cal.Rptr.3d 54, 87 P.3d 802] .)

■ "California courts have held that victory at trial, though reversed on appeal, conclusively establishes probable cause." (Roberts, supra, 76 Cal.App.4th at p. 383 .)

■ "As an element of the tort of malicious prosecution, malice at its core refers to an improper motive for bringing the prior action. As an element of liability it reflects the core function of the tort, which is to secure compensation for harm inflicted by misusing the judicial system, i.e., using it for something other than to enforce legitimate rights and secure remedies to which the claimant may tenably claim an entitlement. Thus the cases speak of malice as being present when a suit is actuated by hostility or ill will, or for some purpose other than to secure relief. It is also said that a plaintiff acts with malice when he asserts a claim with knowledge of its falsity, because one who seeks to establish such a claim 'can only be motivated by an improper purpose.' A lack of probable cause will therefore support an inference of malice." (Drummond, supra, 176 Cal.App.4th at pp. 451-452 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "Negligence does not equate with malice. Nor does the negligent filing of a case necessarily constitute the malicious prosecution of that case." (Grindle v. Lorbeer (1987) 196 Cal.App.3d 1461, 1468 [242 Cal.Rptr. 562] .)

■ "The motive of the defendant must have been something other than that of bringing a perceived guilty person to justice or the satisfaction in a civil action of some personal or financial purpose. The plaintiff must plead and prove actual ill will or some improper ulterior motive. It may range anywhere from open hostility to indifference." (Downey Venture v. LMI Insurance Co. (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 478, 494 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 142] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Suits with the hallmark of an improper purpose are those in which: '... (1) the person initiating them does not believe that his claim may be held valid; (2) the proceedings are begun primarily because of hostility or ill will; (3) the proceedings are initiated solely for the purpose of depriving the person against whom they are initiated of a beneficial use of his property; (4) the proceedings are initiated for the purpose of forcing a settlement which has no relation to the merits of the claim.'" (Sierra Club Found., supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1156-1157 .)

■ "Although Zamos [supra] did not explicitly address the malice element of a malicious prosecution case, its holding and reasoning compel us to conclude that malice formed after the filing of a complaint is actionable." (Daniels, supra, 182 Cal.App.4th at p. 226 .)

In George F. Hillenbrand, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of North America (2002) 104 Cal.App.4th 784, 819 [128 Cal.Rptr.2d 586] , the jury was instructed that it could infer malice from the absence of probable cause and on the meaning of malice for malicious prosecution. The court approved the challenged instruction because it did not suggest that the inference of malice drawn from the absence of probable cause was sufficient to demonstrate malice. When taken in the context of all the instructions on the elements of malicious prosecution and malice, it correctly informed the jury that one inference to be drawn from the frivolous nature of the lawsuits was a malicious intent.

CACI 1502 Wrongful Use of Administrative Proceedings

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully brought an administrative proceeding against [him/her/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was actively involved in bringing [or continuing] the administrative proceeding;
- 2. That [name of administrative body] did not conduct an independent investigation;
- [3. That the proceeding ended in [name of plaintiff]'s favor;]
- [4. That no reasonable person in [name of defendant]'s circumstances would have believed that there were reasonable grounds to bring the proceeding against [name of plaintiff];]
- 5. That [name of defendant] acted primarily for a purpose other than succeeding on the merits of the claim;
- 6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[The law requires that the trial judge, rather than the jury, decide if [name of plaintiff] has proven element 3 above, whether the criminal proceeding ended in [his/her/its] favor. But before I can do so, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proven the following:

[List all factual disputes that must be resolved by the jury.]

The special [verdict/interrogatory] form will ask for your finding on [this/these] issue[s].

[The law [also] requires that the trial judge, rather than the jury, decide if [name of plaintiff] has proven element 4 above, whether a reasonable person in [name of defendant]'s circumstances would have believed that there were there were reasonable grounds for bringing the proceeding against [name of plaintiff]. But before I can do so, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proven the following:

[List all factual disputes that must be resolved by the jury.]

The special [verdict/interrogatory] form will ask for your finding on [this/these] issue[s].

Directions for Use

Malicious prosecution requires that the proceeding have ended in the plaintiff's favor (element 3) and that the defendant did not reasonably believe that there were any grounds (probable cause) to initiate the proceeding (element 4). Probable cause is to be decided by the court as a matter of law. However, it may require the jury to find some preliminary facts before the court can make its legal determination, including facts regarding what the defendant knew or didn't know at the time. (See Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal.3d 863, 881 [254 Cal.Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498] .) If so, include element 4 and also the bracketed part of the instruction that refers to element 4.

Favorable termination is handled in much the same way. If a proceeding is terminated other than on the merits, there may be disputed facts that the jury must find in order to determine whether there has been a favorable termination. (See Fuentes v. Berry (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1800, 1808 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 848] .) If so, include element 3 and also the bracketed part of the instruction that refers to element 3. Once these facts are determined, the jury does not then make a second determination as to whether there has been a favorable termination. The matter is determined by the court based on the resolution of the disputed facts. See Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1159 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726] [element of favorable termination is for court to decide].)

Either or both of the elements of probable cause and favorable termination should be omitted if there are no disputed facts regarding that element for the jury.

Element 5 expresses the malice requirement.

Sources and Authority

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 680 provides:

One who takes an active part in the initiation, continuation or procurement of civil proceedings against another before an administrative board that has power to take action adversely affecting the legally protected interests of the other, is subject to liability for any special harm caused thereby, if

(a) he acts without probable cause to believe that the charge or claim on which the proceedings are based may be well founded, and primarily for a purpose other than that of securing appropriate action by the board, and

(b) except where they are ex parte, the proceedings have terminated in favor of the person against whom they are brought.

CACI 1506 Public Entities and Employees (Gov. Code, § 821.6)

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] cannot be held responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, because [he/she] was a public employee acting within the scope of [his/her] employment. To establish this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [he/she] was acting within the scope of [his/her] employment.

New September 2003

For an instruction on scope of employment, see CACI No. 3720, Scope of Employment, in the Vicarious Responsibility series.

■ Government Code section 821.6 provides: "A public employee is not liable for injury caused by his instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his employment, even if he acts maliciously and without probable cause."

■ In Tur v. City of Los Angeles (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 897, 904 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 470], the court concluded that "the failure to instruct under section 821.6 was prejudicial error." The court observed that "[d]efendants did not enjoy an unqualified immunity from suit. Their immunity would have depended on their proving by a preponderance of the evidence [that] they were acting within the scope of their employment in doing the acts alleged to constitute malicious prosecution." (Ibid.)

CACI 1520 Abuse of Process--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully [insert legal procedure, e.g., "took a deposition"].
To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] [insert legal procedure, e.g., "took the deposition of [name of deponent]"];
- 2. That [name of defendant] intentionally used this legal procedure to [insert alleged improper purpose that procedure was not designed to achieve];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

■ "To establish a cause of action for abuse of process, a plaintiff must plead two essential elements: that the defendant (1) entertained an ulterior motive in using the process and (2) committed a wilful act in a wrongful manner." (Coleman v. Gulf Insurance Group (1986) 41 Cal.3d 782, 792 [226 Cal.Rptr. 90, 718 P.2d 77] , internal citations omitted.)

■ This tort has been "long recognized at common law but infrequently utilized." (Kappel v. Bartlett (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 1457, 1463 [246 Cal.Rptr. 815] , internal citation omitted.)

3-15 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1520

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 682 provides: "One who uses a legal process, whether criminal or civil, against another primarily to accomplish a purpose for which it is not designed, is subject to liability to the other for harm caused by the abuse of process."

■ "Malicious prosecution and abuse of process are distinct. The former concerns a meritless lawsuit (and all the damage it inflicted). The latter concerns the misuse of the tools the law affords litigants once they are in a lawsuit (regardless of whether there was probable cause to commence that lawsuit in the first place). Hence, abuse of process claims typically arise for improper or excessive attachments or improper use of discovery." (Bidna v. Rosen (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 27, 40 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 251] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The gist of the tort is the misuse of the power of the court: It is an act done under the authority of the court for the purpose of perpetrating an injustice, i.e., a perversion of the judicial process to the accomplishment of an improper purpose. Some definite act or threat not authorized by the process or aimed at an objective not legitimate in the use of the process is required. And, generally, an action lies only where the process is used to obtain an unjustifiable collateral advantage. For this reason, mere vexation [and] harassment are not recognized as objectives sufficient to give rise to the tort." (Younger v. Solomon (1974) 38 Cal.App.3d 289, 297 [113 Cal.Rptr. 113] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Process is action taken pursuant to judicial authority. It is not action taken without reference to the power of the court." (Adams v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 521, 530 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 49] .)

■ "The term 'process' as used in the tort of abuse of process has been broadly interpreted to encompass the entire range of procedures incident to litigation. ... This broad reach of the 'abuse of process' tort can be explained historically, since the tort evolved as a 'catch-all' category to cover improper uses of the judicial machinery that did not fit within the earlier established, but narrowly circumscribed, action of malicious prosecution." (Younger, supra, 38 Cal.App.3d at p. 296 , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The improper purpose usually takes the form of coercion to obtain a collateral advantage, not properly involved in the proceeding itself, such as the surrender of property or the payment of money, by the use of the process as a threat or a club.' " (Spellens v. Spellens (1957) 49 Cal.2d 210, 232-233 [317 P.2d 613] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[A]n improper purpose may consist in achievement of a benefit totally extraneous to or of a result not within its legitimate scope. Mere ill will against the adverse party in the proceedings does not constitute an ulterior or improper motive." (Ion Equipment Corp. v. Nelson (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 868, 876 [168 Cal.Rptr. 361] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Merely obtaining or seeking process is not enough; there must be subsequent abuse, by a misuse of the judicial process for a purpose other than that which it was intended to serve. The gist of the tort is the improper use of the process after it is issued." (Adams, supra, 2 Cal.App.4th at pp. 530-531 , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'Some definite act or threat not authorized by the process, or aimed at an objective not legitimate in the use of the process, is required; and there is no liability where the defendant has done nothing more than carry out the process to its authorized conclusion, even though with bad intentions.' " (Clark Equipment Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 503, 524 [154 Cal.Rptr. 874] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Civil Code section 47 provides, in part, that a privileged publication or broadcast is one made "(b) ...

(2) in any judicial proceeding." The privilege applies to statements that are (1) made in judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings, (2) by litigants or other participants authorized by law, (3) to achieve the objects of the litigation, and (4) that [have] some connection or logical relation to the action." (Kimmel v. Goland (1990) 51 Cal.3d 202, 209 [271 Cal.Rptr. 191, 793 P.2d 524] .)

■ "[I]t is consistent with the purpose of section 47, subdivision (2) to exempt malicious prosecution while still applying the privilege to abuse of process causes of action." (Abraham v. Lancaster Community Hospital (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 796, 824 [266 Cal.Rptr. 360] .)

■ "[T]he scope of 'publication or broadcast' includes noncommunicative conduct like the filing of a motion for a writ of sale, the filing of assessment liens, or the filing of a mechanic's lien. The privilege also applies to conduct or publications occurring outside the courtroom, to conduct or publications which are legally deficient for one reason or another, and even to malicious or fraudulent conduct or publications." (O'Keefe v. Kompa (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 130, 134 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 602] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The litigation privilege can defeat an abuse-of-process claim. (Merlet v. Rizzo (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 53, 65 [75 Cal.Rptr.2d 83] .)

■ "The use of the machinery of the legal system for an ulterior motive is a classic indicia of the tort of abuse of process. However, the tort requires abuse of legal process, not just filing suit. Simply filing a lawsuit for an improper purpose is not abuse of process." (Trear v. Sills (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1341, 1359 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 281] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he essence of the tort 'abuse of process' lies in the misuse of the power of the court; it is an act done in the name of the court and under its authority for the purpose of perpetrating an injustice.' [P] We have located no authority extending the tort of abuse of process to administrative proceedings. Application of the tort to administrative proceedings would not serve the purpose of the tort, which is to preserve the integrity of the court." (Stolz v. Wong Communications Ltd. Partnership (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 1811, 1822-1823 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 229] , internal citations omitted.)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] actively involved in causing [name of plaintiff] to be prosecuted [or in causing the continuation of the prosecution]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] act primarily for a purpose other than that of bringing [name of plaintiff] to justice?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?[a. Past economic loss

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case. This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1500, Former Criminal Proceeding. This form can be adapted to include the affirmative defense of reliance on counsel. See

VF-1502 for a form that includes this affirmative defense.

If there are disputed issues of fact on the elements of probable cause or favorable termination that the jury must resolve, include additional questions or provide special interrogatories on these elements. (See CACI Nos. 1503, Reasonable Grounds, and 1504, Favorable Termination).

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 4 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

CHAPTER 16 California Judicial Council Emotional Distress Instructions

3-16 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Emotional Distress Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1600 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress [CACI No. 1600], including an instruction based on fear of cancer, HIV, or AIDS [CACI No. 1601].
- Definitions of "outrageous conduct" [CACI No. 1602], "reckless disregard" [CACI No. 1603], and "severe emotional distress" [CACI No. 1604].
- Privileged conduct as an affirmative defense to an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress [CACI No. 1605].
- Essential factual elements for causes of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress [CACI No. 1620 (direct victim), CACI No. 1621 (bystander)], including instructions based on fear of cancer, HIV, or AIDS [CACI No. 1622; CACI No. 1623 (malicious, oppressive, or fraudulent conduct)].

The emotional distress series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1600-VF-1606].

CACI 1600 Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [him/her] to suffer severe emotional distress. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was outrageous;

2. [That [name of defendant] intended to cause [name of plaintiff] emotional distress;]

[or]

[That [name of defendant] acted with reckless disregard of the probability that [name of plaintiff] would suffer emotional distress, knowing that [name of plaintiff] was present when the conduct occurred;]

3. That [name of plaintiff] suffered severe emotional distress; and

4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s severe emotional distress.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

CACI Nos. 1602-1604, regarding the elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress, should be given with the above instruction.

Depending on the facts of the case, a plaintiff could choose one or both of the bracketed choices in element 2.

Sources and Authority

■ "A cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress exists when there is '(1) extreme and outrageous conduct by the defendant with the intention of causing, or reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; (2) the plaintiff's suffering severe or extreme emotional distress; and (3) actual and proximate causation of the emotional distress by the defendant's outrageous conduct.' A defendant's conduct is 'outrageous' when it is so 'extreme as to exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized community.' And the defendant's conduct must be 'intended to inflict injury or engaged in with the realization that injury will result.' " (Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal.4th 1035, 1050-1051 [95 Cal.Rptr.3d 636, 209 P.3d 963])

■ " '[I]t is generally held that there can be no recovery for mere profanity, obscenity, or abuse, without circumstances of aggravation, or for insults, indignities or threats which are considered to amount to nothing more than mere annoyances.' " (Yurick v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 1116, 1128 [257 Cal.Rptr. 665] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is not enough that the conduct be intentional and outrageous. It must be conduct directed at the plaintiff, or occur in the presence of a plaintiff of whom the defendant is aware." (Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal.3d 868, 903-904 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 79, 820 P.2d 181] .)

■ "Severe emotional distress [is] emotional distress of such substantial quantity or enduring quality that no reasonable man in a civilized society should be expected to endure it." (Fletcher v. Western Life Insurance Co. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 376, 397 [89 Cal.Rptr. 78] .)

■ " 'It is for the court to determine whether on the evidence severe emotional distress can be found; it is for the jury to determine whether, on the evidence, it has in fact existed.' " (Fletcher, supra, 10 Cal.App.3d at p. 397 , internal citation omitted.)

■ " 'The law limits claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress to egregious conduct toward plaintiff proximately caused by defendant.' The only exception to this rule is that recognized when the defendant is aware, but acts with reckless disregard of, the plaintiff and the probability that his or her conduct will cause severe emotional distress to that plaintiff. Where reckless disregard of the plaintiff's interests is the theory of recovery, the presence of the plaintiff at the time the outrageous conduct occurs is recognized as the element establishing a higher degree of culpability which, in turn, justifies recovery of greater damages by a broader group of plaintiffs than allowed on a negligent infliction of emotional distress theory." (Christensen, supra, 54 Cal.3d at pp. 905-906 , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Plaintiff's Prior Psychological/Psychiatric History: Remember that any claim for severe emotional distress will probably open the door to the plaintiff's prior psychological/psychiatric history. A plaintiff's litigator should diligently protect a plaintiff's right to privacy and prevent disclosure of psychological/psychiatric treatment if a subpoena is overbroad and/or if the plaintiff's claims are just for emotional distress resulting from a harm caused by the defendant in which the plaintiff did not seek psychological/psychiatric treatment. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CACI 1601 Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress--Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [him/her] to suffer severe emotional distress by exposing [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was outrageous;
- 2. That [name of defendant]'s conduct exposed [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS];
- 3. [That [name of defendant] intended to cause [name of plaintiff] emotional distress;] [or]
[That [name of defendant] acted with reckless disregard of the probability that [[name of plaintiff]/the group of individuals including [name of plaintiff]] would suffer emotional distress, knowing that [he/she/they] [was/were] present when the conduct occurred;]
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] suffered severe emotional distress from a reasonable fear of developing [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS]; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s severe emotional distress.

A fear of developing [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] is "reasonable" if the fear stems from the knowledge, confirmed by reliable medical or scientific opinion, that a person's risk of [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] has significantly increased and that the resulting risk is significant.

CACI Nos. 1602-1604, regarding the elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress, should be given with the above instruction. Depending on the facts of the case, a plaintiff could choose one or both of the bracketed choices in element 3.

There may be other harmful agents and medical conditions that could support this cause of action.

See CACI Nos. 1622 and 1623 for claims of negligent infliction of emotional distress involving fear of cancer, HIV, or AIDS.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Pleading and Proving Both Intentional and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress: CACI No. 1601 can also be used for any sexually transmitted disease (i.e. herpes). Both intentional infliction of emotional distress and negligent infliction of emotional distress should be plead in a complaint. Further, this instruction could be used as well as CACI No. 1622 (negligent infliction of emotional distress), should the jury conclude that the actions were not intentional. Attempting to prove that a defendant "intended" to cause emotional distress may be difficult so use the negligent instruction as well. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CACI 1602 Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress--"Outrageous Conduct" Defined

"Outrageous conduct" is conduct so extreme that it goes beyond all possible bounds of decency. Conduct is outrageous if a reasonable person would regard the conduct as intolerable in a civilized community. Outrageous conduct does not include trivialities such as indignities, annoyances, hurt feelings, or bad manners that a reasonable person is expected to endure.

In deciding whether [name of defendant]'s conduct was outrageous, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) Whether [name of defendant] abused a position of authority or a relationship that gave [him/her] real or apparent power to affect [name of plaintiff]'s interests;
- (b) Whether [name of defendant] knew that [name of plaintiff] was particularly vulnerable to emotional distress; and
- (c) Whether [name of defendant] knew that [his/her] conduct would likely result in harm due to mental distress.

3-16 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1604

CACI 1604 Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress--"Severe Emotional Distress" Defined

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame.

"Severe emotional distress" is not mild or brief; it must be so substantial or long lasting that no reasonable person in a civilized society should be expected to bear it. [Name of plaintiff] is not required to prove physical injury to recover damages for severe emotional distress.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- " 'It is for the court to determine whether on the evidence severe emotional distress can be found; it is for the jury to determine whether, on the evidence, it has in fact existed.' " (Fletcher v. Western National Life Insurance Co. (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 376, 397 [89 Cal.Rptr. 78] , internal citation omitted.)

- "Emotional distress" includes any "highly unpleasant mental reactions, such as fright, horror, grief, shame, humiliation, embarrassment, anger, chagrin, disappointment, or worry." (Fletcher, supra, 10 Cal.App.3d at p. 397 .)

- "With respect to the requirement that the plaintiff show severe emotional distress, this court has set a high bar. 'Severe emotional distress means "emotional distress of such substantial quality or enduring quality that no reasonable [person] in civilized society should be expected to endure it." ' " (*Hughes v. [Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, because [name of defendant]'s conduct was permissible. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] was [exercising [his/her] legal right to [insert legal right]] [or] [protecting [his/her] economic interests];
- 2. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was lawful and consistent with community standards; and

If you find all of the above, then [name of defendant]'s conduct was permissible.

Directions for Use

Whether a given communication is within the privileges afforded by Civil Code section 47 is a legal question for the judge.

Sources and Authority

- "Whether treated as an element of the prima facie case or as a matter of defense, it must also appear that the defendants' conduct was unprivileged." (Fletcher v. Western National Life Insurance Co. (1970))

10 Cal.App.3d 376, 394 [89 Cal.Rptr. 78] .)

- The statutory privileges that Civil Code section 47 affords to certain oral and written communications are applicable to claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. (Agostini v. Strycula (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 804, 808 [42 Cal.Rptr. 314] .)

- "The usual formulation is that the [litigation] privilege applies to any communication (1) made in judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings; (2) by litigants or other participants authorized by law; (3) to achieve the objects of the litigation; and (4) that have some connection or logical relation to the action." (Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal.3d 205, 212 [266 Cal.Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365] .)

- "Where an employer seeks to protect his own self-interest and that of his employees in good faith and without abusing the privilege afforded him, the privilege obtains even though it is substantially certain that emotional distress will result from uttered statements." (Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal.App.3d 841, 849-850 [115 Cal.Rptr. 582] .)

- "Nevertheless, the exercise of the privilege to assert one's legal rights must be done in a permissible way and with a good faith belief in the existence of the rights asserted. It is well established that one who, in exercising the privilege of asserting his own economic interests, acts in an outrageous manner may be held liable for intentional infliction of emotional distress." (Fletcher, supra, 10 Cal.App.3d at p. 395 , internal citations omitted.)

- "While it is recognized that the creditor possesses a qualified privilege to protect its economic interest, the privilege may be lost should the creditor use outrageous and unreasonable means in seeking payment." (Bundren v. Superior Court (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 784, 789 [193 Cal.Rptr. 671] .)

- "In determining whether the conduct is sufficiently outrageous or unreasonable to become actionable, it is not enough that the creditor's behavior is rude or insolent. However, such conduct may rise to the level of outrageous conduct where the creditor knows the debtor is susceptible to emotional distress because of her physical or mental condition." (Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal.App.3d 1458, 1469 [275 Cal.Rptr. 871] , internal citations omitted.)

CACI 1620 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress--Direct Victim--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [him/her] to suffer serious emotional distress. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was negligent;
2. That [name of plaintiff] suffered serious emotional distress; and
3. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress.

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame. Serious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The California Supreme Court has allowed plaintiffs to bring negligent infliction of emotional distress actions as "direct victims" in only three types of factual situations: (1) the negligent mishandling of corpses (Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal.3d 868, 879 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 79, 820 P.2d 181]); (2) the negligent misdiagnosis of a disease that could potentially harm another (Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 923 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813]); and (3) the negligent breach of a duty arising out of a preexisting relationship (Burgess v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.4th 1064, 1076 [9 Cal.Rptr.2d 615, 831 P.2d 1197]).

The judge will normally decide whether a duty was owed to the plaintiff as a direct victim. If the issue of whether the plaintiff is a direct victim is contested, a special instruction with the factual dispute laid out for the jury will need to be drafted.

This instruction should be read in conjunction with either CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care, or CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence per se.

This instruction is for use if the plaintiff is a "direct victim" of defendant's negligent conduct. If the plaintiff witnesses the injury of another, use CACI No. 1621, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress--Bystander--Essential Factual Elements.

Elements 1 and 3 of this instruction could be modified for use in a strict products liability case. A plaintiff may seek damages for the emotional shock of viewing the injuries of another when the incident is caused by defendant's defective product. (Kately v. Wilkinson (1983) 148 Cal.App.3d 576, 587 [195 Cal.Rptr. 902] .)

Sources and Authority

■ "[The] negligent causing of emotional distress is not an independent tort but the tort of negligence ... 'The traditional elements of duty, breach of duty, causation, and damages apply. Whether a defendant owes a duty of care is a question of law. Its existence depends upon the foreseeability of the risk and upon a weighing of policy considerations for and against imposition of liability.' " (Marlene F. v. Affiliated Psychiatric Medical Clinic, Inc. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 583, 588 [257 Cal.Rptr. 98, 770 P.2d 278] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "'Direct victim' cases are cases in which the plaintiff's claim of emotional distress is not based upon witnessing an injury to someone else, but rather is based upon the violation of a duty owed directly to the plaintiff." (Wooden v. Raveling (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 1035, 1038 [71 Cal.Rptr.2d 891] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[D]uty is found where the plaintiff is a 'direct victim,' in that the emotional distress damages result from a duty owed the plaintiff 'that is "assumed by the defendant or imposed on the defendant as a matter of law, or that arises out of a relationship between the two." ' " (McMahon v. Craig (2009) 176 Cal.App.4th 222, 230 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 555] .)

■ In a negligence action, damages may be recovered for serious emotional distress unaccompanied by physical injury: "We agree that the unqualified requirement of physical injury is no longer justifiable." (Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 928 .)

CACI 1621 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress--Bystander--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] suffered serious emotional distress as a result of perceiving [an injury to/the death of] [name of injury victim]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] negligently caused [injury to/the death of] [name of injury victim];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was present at the scene of the injury when it occurred and was aware that [name of injury victim] was being injured;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] suffered serious emotional distress; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress.

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame. Serious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in bystander cases, where a plaintiff seeks recovery for damages suffered as a percipient witness of injury to others. If the plaintiff is a direct victim of tortious conduct, use CACI No. 1620, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress --Direct Victim--Essential Factual Elements.

This instruction should be read in conjunction with either CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care, or CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence per se.

In element 2, the phrase "was being injured" is intended to reflect contemporaneous awareness of injury.

Whether the plaintiff had a sufficiently close relationship with the victim should be determined as an issue of law because it is integral to the determination of whether a duty was owed to the plaintiff.

Sources and Authority

- A bystander who witnesses the negligent infliction of death or injury of another may recover for resulting emotional trauma even though he or she did not fear imminent physical harm. (Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal.2d 728, 746-747 [69 Cal.Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912] .)
- "As an introductory note, we observe that plaintiffs ... framed both negligence and negligent infliction of emotional distress causes of action. To be precise, however, 'the [only] tort with which we are concerned is negligence. Negligent infliction of emotional distress is not an independent tort' " (Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 856, 875-876 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 352] .)
- "In the absence of physical injury or impact to the plaintiff himself, damages for emotional distress should be recoverable only if the plaintiff: (1) is closely related to the injury victim, (2) is present at the scene of the injury-producing event at the time it occurs and is then aware that it is causing injury to the victim and, (3) as a result suffers emotional distress beyond that which would be anticipated in a disinterested witness." - The close relationship required between the plaintiff and the injury victim does not include the relationship found between unmarried cohabitants. (Elden v. Sheldon (1988) 46 Cal.3d 267, 273 [250 Cal.Rptr.254, 758 P.2d 582] .)
- "Although a plaintiff may establish presence at the scene through nonvisual sensory perception, 'someone who hears an accident but does not then know it is causing injury to a relative does not have a viable [bystander] claim for [negligent infliction of emotional distress], even if the missing knowledge is acquired moments later.' " (Ra v. Superior Court (2007) 154 Cal.App.4th 142, 149 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 539] , internal citation omitted.)

CACI 1622 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress--Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [him/her] to suffer serious emotional distress by exposing [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] was exposed to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of [name of defendant]'s negligence;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] suffered serious emotional distress from a fear that [he/she] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure;
- 3. That reliable medical or scientific opinion confirms that it is more likely than not that [name of plaintiff] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress.

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame. Serious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.

3-16 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1622

This instruction should be read in conjunction with either CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care, or CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence per se.

If plaintiff alleges that defendant's conduct constituted oppression, fraud, or malice, then CACI No. 1623, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress-- Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS--Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct, should be read.

■ "[D]amages for negligently inflicted emotional distress may be recovered in the absence of physical injury or impact" (Potter v. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 965, 986 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 863 P.2d 795] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he way to avoid damage awards for unreasonable fear, i.e., in those cases where the feared cancer is at best only remotely possible, is to require a showing of the actual likelihood of the feared cancer to establish its significance." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 990 .)

■ "[D]amages for fear of cancer may be recovered only if the plaintiff pleads and proves that (1) as a result of the defendant's negligent breach of a duty owed to the plaintiff, the plaintiff is exposed to a toxic substance which threatens cancer; and (2) the plaintiff's fear stems from a knowledge, corroborated by reliable medical or scientific opinion, that it is more likely than not that the plaintiff will develop the cancer in the future due to the toxic exposure." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 997 .)

■ The California Supreme Court has acknowledged the Hawaii Supreme Court's definition of "serious emotional distress": " '[S]erious mental distress may be found where a reasonable man, normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.' " (Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 927-928 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813] , quoting Rodrigues v. State (1970) 52 Haw. 156, 173 [472 P.2d 509] .)

■ "[W]e hold that the cost of medical monitoring is a compensable item of damages where the proofs demonstrate, through reliable medical expert testimony, that the need for future monitoring is a reasonably certain consequence of a plaintiff's toxic exposure and that the recommended monitoring is reasonable." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1009 .)

■ Courts have applied the reasoning of Potter, supra , to cases alleging that defendant's conduct caused plaintiff emotional distress based on fear of contracting AIDS. (See Kerins v. Hartley (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1073-1075 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 172] ; Herbert v. Regents of University of California (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 782, 785-788 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 709] .)

■ Comparative fault principles may be applied to reduce amount of recovery for emotional distress based on fear of developing cancer when plaintiff's smoking is negligent and a portion of the fear of cancer is attributable to the smoking. (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at pp. 965 , 974.)

3-16 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1623

CACI 1623 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress--Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS--Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] acted with [malice/oppression/fraudulent intent] in exposing [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] and that this conduct caused [name of plaintiff] to suffer serious emotional distress. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was exposed to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of [name of defendant]'s negligent conduct;

2. That [name of defendant] acted with [malice/oppression/fraudulent intent] because [insert one or more of the following, as applicable]:

[[Name of defendant] intended to cause injury to [name of plaintiff];] [or]

[[Name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was carried out with a willful or conscious disregard of [name of plaintiff]'s rights or safety;] [or]

[[Name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of [name of plaintiff]'s rights;] [or]

[[Name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact known to [name of defendant], intending to cause [name of plaintiff] harm;]

3. That [name of plaintiff] suffered serious emotional distress from a fear that [he/she] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure;

4. That reliable medical or scientific opinion confirms that [name of plaintiff]'s risk of developing [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] was significantly increased by the exposure and has resulted in an actual risk that is significant; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress.

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame. Serious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so mean, vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

New September 2003

Use CACI No. 1622, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress--Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS, if plaintiff alleges the same tort without punitive conduct.

This instruction should be read in conjunction with either CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care, or CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence per se.

"Oppression, fraud, or malice" is used here as defined by Civil Code section 3294, except that the higher "clear and convincing" burden of proof is not required in this context.

In some cases the judge should make clear that the defendant does not need to have known of the individual plaintiff where there is a broad exposure and plaintiff is a member of the class that was exposed.

■ "[D]amages for negligently inflicted emotional distress may be recovered in the absence of physical injury or impact" (Potter v. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 965, 986 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 863 P.2d 795] , quoting Burgess v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.4th 1064, 1074 [9 Cal.Rptr.2d 615, 831 P.2d 1197] .)

■ "[A] toxic exposure plaintiff need not meet the more likely than not threshold for fear of cancer recovery in a negligence action if the plaintiff pleads and proves that the defendant's conduct in causing the exposure amounts to 'oppression, fraud, or malice' as defined in Civil Code section 3294." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 998 .)

■ The California Supreme Court has acknowledged the Hawaii Supreme Court's definition of "serious emotional distress": " '[S]erious mental distress may be found where a reasonable man, normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.' " (Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 927-928 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813] , quoting Rodrigues v. State (1970) 52 Haw. 156, 173 [472 P.2d 509] .)

■ Courts have applied the reasoning of Potter, supra , to cases alleging that defendant's conduct caused plaintiff emotional distress based on fear of contracting AIDS. (See Kerins v. Hartley (1994) 27

Cal.App.4th 1062, 1073-1075 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 172] ; Herbert v. Regents of University of California (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 782, 785-788 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 709] .)

■ Civil Code section 3294(c) provides:

As used in this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) "Malice" means conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others.

(2) "Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

(3) "Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

■ "Despicable conduct is conduct which is so vile, base, contemptible, miserable, wretched or loathsome that it would be looked down upon and despised by ordinary decent people." (Mock v. Mich. Millers Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 306, 331 [5 Cal.Rptr.2d 594].)

■ "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.'" (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 725 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894] .)

■ [Although] "Civil Code section 3294 requires a plaintiff to prove oppression, fraud, or malice by 'clear and convincing evidence' for purposes of punitive damages," this higher burden of proof has not been applied to fear-of-cancer cases. (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1000, fn. 20 .)

■ Comparative fault principles may be applied to reduce amount of recovery for emotional distress based on fear of developing cancer when plaintiff's smoking is negligent and a portion of the fear of cancer is attributable to the smoking. (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 965 .)

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1600, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress--Essential Factual Elements.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

There is no BAJI verdict form on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Seeking Damages in Intentional Tort Cases:

Any intentional tort should be accompanied by a demand for punitive damages and accordingly placed in the verdict form. Insurance companies have universally stopped covering acts involving intentional torts so it may be prudent to use negligence as your theory if your only way to collect damages is through an insurance policy. By Dona Cohn-Payne

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Defamation Series" of civil jury instructions [CACI No. 1700 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for causes of action for defamation per se [CACI No. 1700 (public officer, public figure, and limited public figure); CACI No. 1702 (private figure--matter of public concern); CACI No. 1704 (private figure--matter of private concern)].
- Essential factual elements for causes of action for defamation per quod [CACI No. 1701 (public officer, public figure, and limited public figure); CACI No. 1703 (private figure--matter of public concern); CACI No. 1705 (private figure--matter of private concern)].
- Definition of statement [CACI No. 1706].
- Fact versus opinion [CACI No. 1707].
- Coerced self-publication [CACI No. 1708].
- Defenses of truth [CACI No. 1720] and consent [CACI No. 1721].
- Retraction in a newspaper or broadcast under Civ. Code § 48a [CACI No. 1722].
- Qualified privilege under Civ. Code § 47(c) [CACI No. 1723].

- Defense of statute of limitations in defamation action [CACI No. 1724].

The defamation series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1700-VF-1705].

A table outlining defamation per se and defamation per quod is included at the end of this chapter.

CACI 1700 Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per se defamatory statements]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove that all of the following are more likely true than not true:

Liability

- 1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
- 3. [That [this person/these people] reasonably understood the statement(s) to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]]; and
- 4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false.

In addition, [name of plaintiff] must prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she] is entitled to recover [his/her] actual damages if [he/she] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following:

- a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
- b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
- c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
- d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Assumed Damages

Even if [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for harm to reputation or shame, mortification or hurt feelings, the law nonetheless assumes that [he/she] has suffered this harm. Without presenting evidence of damage, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to receive compensation for this assumed harm in whatever sum you believe is reasonable. You must award at least a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940 -3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008

Directions for Use

Special verdict form CACI No. VF-1700, Defamation per se (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure), should be used in this type of case.

Use the bracketed element 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face (i.e., if the judge has not determined that the statement is defamatory as a matter of law). For statutory grounds of defamation per se, see Civil Code sections 45 (libel) and 46 (slander). Note that certain specific grounds of libel per se have been defined by case law.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 44 provides:

Defamation is effected by either of the following:

(a) Libel.

(b) Slander.

- Civil Code section 45 provides: "Libel is a false and unprivileged publication by writing, printing, picture, effigy, or other fixed representation to the eye, which exposes any person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy, or which causes him to be shunned or avoided, or which has a tendency to injure him in his occupation."

- Civil Code section 45a provides: "A libel which is defamatory of the plaintiff without the necessity of explanatory matter, such as an inducement, innuendo or other extrinsic fact, is said to be a libel on its face. Defamatory language not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered special damage as a proximate result thereof. Special damage is defined in Section 48a of this code."

■ Civil Code section 46 provides:

Slander is a false and unprivileged publication, orally uttered, and also communications by radio or any mechanical or other means which:

1. Charges any person with crime, or with having been indicted, convicted, or punished for crime;
2. Imputes in him the present existence of an infectious, contagious, or loathsome disease;
3. Tends directly to injure him in respect to his office, profession, trade or business, either by imputing to him general disqualification in those respects which the office or other occupation peculiarly requires, or by imputing something with reference to his office, profession, trade, or business that has a natural tendency to lessen its profits;
4. Imputes to him impotence or a want of chastity; or
5. Which, by natural consequence, causes actual damage.

■ Section 558 of the Restatement Second of Torts provides:

To create liability for defamation there must be:

- (a) a false and defamatory statement concerning another;
- (b) an unprivileged publication to a third party;
- (c) fault amounting at least to negligence on the part of the publisher; and
- (d) either actionability of the statement irrespective of special harm or the existence of special harm caused by the publication.

■ "Defamation is an invasion of the interest in reputation. The tort involves the intentional publication of a statement of fact that is false, unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 645 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397] .)

■ California does not follow the majority rule, which is that all libel is actionable per se. If the court determines that the statement is reasonably susceptible to a defamatory interpretation, it is for the jury to determine if a defamatory meaning was in fact conveyed to a listener or reader. (Kahn v. Bower (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1599, 1608 [284 Cal.Rptr. 244] .)

■ A plaintiff is not required to allege special damages if the statement is libelous per se (either on its face or by jury finding). (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1130 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838] .)

■ "A slander that falls within the first four subdivisions of Civil Code section 46 is slander per se and requires no proof of actual damages. A slander that does not fit into those four subdivisions is slander per quod, and special damages are required for there to be any recovery for that slander." (The Nethercutt Collection v. Regalia (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 361, 367 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 882] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "With respect to slander per se, the trial court decides if the alleged statement falls within Civil Code section 46, subdivisions 1 through 4. It is then for the trier of fact to determine if the statement is defamatory. This allocation of responsibility may appear, at first glance, to result in an overlap of responsibilities because a trial court determination that the statement falls within those categories would seemingly suggest that the statement, if false, is necessarily defamatory. But a finder of fact might rely upon extraneous evidence to conclude that, under the circumstances, the statement was not defamatory." (The Nethercutt Collection, supra, 172 Cal.App.4th at pp. 368-369 .)

■ "[T]he jury was instructed that if it found that defendant published matter that was defamatory on its face and it found by clear and convincing evidence that defendant knew the statement was false or published it in reckless disregard of whether it was false, then the jury 'also may award plaintiff presumed general damages.' Presumed damages 'are those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter and are presumed to exist. They include reasonable compensation for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feeling. No definite standard or method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for presumed damages, and no evidence of actual harm is required. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for presumed damages, you shall exercise your authority with calm and reasonable judgment and the damages you fix shall be just and reasonable in the light of the evidence. You may in the exercise of your discretion award nominal damages only, namely an insignificant sum such as one dollar.' [PP] ... [T]he instant instruction, which limits damages to 'those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter,' constitutes substantial compliance with [Civil Code] section 3283. Thus, the instant instructions, 'if obeyed, did not allow the jurors to "enter the realm of speculation" regarding future suffering.' " (Sommer v. Gabor (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1455, 1472-1473 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 235] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The distinction between fact and opinion is not absolute. "A statement of opinion ... may still be actionable 'if it implies the allegation of undisclosed defamatory facts as the basis for the opinion.' " (Copp v. Paxton (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 829, 837 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 831] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In defamation actions generally, factual truth is a defense which it is the defendant's burden to prove. In a defamation action against a newspaper by a private person suing over statements of public concern, however, the First Amendment places the burden of proving falsity on the plaintiff. As a matter of constitutional law, therefore, media statements on matters of public interest, including statements of opinion which reasonably imply a knowledge of facts, 'must be provable as false before there can be liability under state defamation law.' Whether a statement contains provably false factual assertions is a question of law for the trial court to decide." (Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1382 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802] , internal citations omitted.)

■ In matters involving public concern, the First Amendment protection applies to nonmedia defendants, putting the burden of proving falsity of the statement on the plaintiff. (Nizam-Aldine v. City of Oakland (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 364, 375 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 781] .)

■ "Publication means communication to some third person who understands the defamatory meaning of the statement and its application to the person to whom reference is made. Publication need not be to the 'public' at large; communication to a single individual is sufficient." (Smith, supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at p. 645 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]hen a party repeats a slanderous charge, he is equally guilty of defamation, even though he states the source of the charge and indicates that he is merely repeating a rumor." (Jackson v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 10, 26 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 1] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "At common law, one who republishes a defamatory statement is deemed thereby to have adopted it and so may be held liable, together with the person who originated the statement, for resulting injury to the reputation of the defamation victim. California has adopted the common law in this regard, although by statute the republication of defamatory statements is privileged in certain defined situations." (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 268 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The general rule is that "a plaintiff cannot manufacture a defamation cause of action by publishing the statements to third persons; the publication must be done by the defendant." There is an exception to this rule. [When it is foreseeable that the plaintiff] " 'will be under a strong compulsion to disclose the contents of the defamatory statement to a third person after he has read it or been informed of its contents.' " (Live Oak Publishing Co. v. Cohagan (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1277, 1284 [286 Cal.Rptr. 198] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "To qualify as a limited purpose public figure, a plaintiff 'must have undertaken some voluntary [affirmative] act[ion] through which he seeks to influence the resolution of the public issues involved.' " (Rudnick v. McMillan (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 1183, 1190 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 193] ; see also Mosesian v. McClatchy Newspapers (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1685, 1689 [285 Cal.Rptr. 430] .)

■ "The First Amendment limits California's libel law in various respects. When, as here, the plaintiff is a public figure, he cannot recover unless he proves by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant published the defamatory statement with actual malice, i.e., with 'knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not.' Mere negligence does not suffice. Rather, the plaintiff must demonstrate that the author 'in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of his publication,' or acted with a 'high degree of awareness of ... probable falsity.' " (Masson v. New Yorker Magazine (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510 [111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447] , internal citations omitted; see St. Amant v. Thompson (1968) 390 U.S. 727, 731 [88 S.Ct. 1323, 20 L.Ed.2d 262] ; New York Times v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280 [84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686] .)

■ The New York Times v. Sullivan standard applies to private individuals with respect to presumed or punitive damages if the statement involves a matter of public concern. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 349 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789] .)

■ "California ... permits defamation liability so long as it is consistent with the requirements of the United States Constitution." (Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1359 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627] , citing Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 740-742 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406] .)

■ "Actual malice under the New York Times standard should not be confused with the concept of malice as an evil intent or a motive arising from spite or ill will. ... In place of the term actual malice, it is better practice that jury instructions refer to publication of a statement with knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard as to truth or falsity." (Masson, supra, 501 U.S. at pp. 510-511 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Actual malice "does not require that the reporter hold a devout belief in the truth of the story being reported, only that he or she refrain from either reporting a story he or she knows to be false or acting in reckless disregard of the truth." (Jackson, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at p. 35 .)

■ "The law is clear [that] the recklessness or doubt which gives rise to actual or constitutional malice is subjective recklessness or doubt." (Melaleuca, supra, 66 Cal.App.4th at p. 1365 .)

■ To show reckless disregard, "[t]here must be sufficient evidence to permit the conclusion that the defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of his publication. Publishing with such doubts shows reckless disregard for truth or falsity and demonstrates actual malice." (St. Amant, supra, 390 U.S. at p. 731 .)

■ "Although the issue turns on the subjective good faith of the defendant, the plaintiff may attempt to prove reckless disregard for truth by circumstantial evidence. 'A failure to investigate, anger and hostility toward the plaintiff, reliance upon sources known to be unreliable, or known to be biased against the plaintiff--such factors may, in an appropriate case, indicate that the publisher himself had serious doubts regarding the truth of his publication.' " (Copp, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 847 , internal citations omitted, quoting Reader's Digest Assn., supra, 37 Cal.3d at p. 258 , footnote omitted.)

■ "An entity other than a natural person may be libeled." (Live Oak Publishing Co., supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 1283 .)

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1701

CACI 1701 Defamation per quod--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per quod defamatory statements].

Liability

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove that all of the following are more likely true than not true:

- 1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
- 3. That because of the facts and circumstances known to the [listener(s)/reader(s)] of the statement(s), [it/they] tended to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her] occupation [or to expose [him/her] to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or shame] [or to discourage others from associating or dealing with [him/her]];
- 4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false;
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm to [his/her] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and
- 6. That the statement(s) [was/were] a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In addition, [name of plaintiff] must prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she] is entitled to recover if [he/she] proves it is more likely true than not true that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following actual damages:

- a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
- b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
- c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
- d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings;

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940 -3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1701, Defamation per quod (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure), should be used in this type of case.

Presumed damages either are not available or will likely not be sought in a per quod case.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 44 provides:

Defamation is effected by either of the following:

(a) Libel.

(b) Slander.

- Civil Code section 45 provides: "Libel is a false and unprivileged publication by writing, printing, picture, effigy, or other fixed representation to the eye, which exposes any person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy, or which causes him to be shunned or avoided, or which has a tendency to injure him in his occupation."

- Civil Code section 45a provides: "A libel which is defamatory of the plaintiff without the necessity of explanatory matter, such as an inducement, innuendo or other extrinsic fact, is said to be a libel on its face. Defamatory language not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered special damage as a proximate result thereof. Special damage is defined in Section 48a of this code."

■ Civil Code section 46 provides:

Slander is a false and unprivileged publication, orally uttered, and also communications by radio or any mechanical or other means which:

1. Charges any person with crime, or with having been indicted, convicted, or punished for crime;
2. Imputes in him the present existence of an infectious, contagious, or loathsome disease;
3. Tends directly to injure him in respect to his office, profession, trade or business, either by imputing to him general disqualification in those respects which the office or other occupation peculiarly requires, or by imputing something with reference to his office, profession, trade, or business that has a natural tendency to lessen its profits;
4. Imputes to him impotence or a want of chastity; or
5. Which, by natural consequence, causes actual damage.

■ Civil Code section 48a(4)(b) provides: " 'Special damages' are all damages which plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered in respect to his property, business, trade, profession or occupation, including such amounts of money as the plaintiff alleges and proves he has expended as a result of the alleged libel, and no other."

■ "If [a] defamatory meaning would appear only to readers who might be able to recognize it through some knowledge of specific facts and/or circumstances, not discernible from the face of the publication, and which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod." (Palm Springs Tennis Club v. Rangel (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 1, 5 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 73] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In pleading a case of libel per quod the plaintiff cannot assume that the court has access to the reader's special knowledge of extrinsic facts but must specially plead and prove those facts." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 7 .)

■ "A libel 'per quod,' ... requires that the injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof." (Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal.3d 149, 153-154 [185 Cal.Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886] .)

■ "In the libel context, 'inducement' and 'innuendo' are terms of art: '[W]here the language is ambiguous and an explanation is necessary to establish the defamatory meaning, the pleader must do two things: (1) Allege his interpretation of the defamatory meaning of the language (the "innuendo," ...); (2) support that interpretation by alleging facts showing that the readers or hearers to whom it was published would understand it in that defamatory sense (the "inducement").' " (Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 387 [226 Cal.Rptr. 354] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A slander that falls within the first four subdivisions of Civil Code section 46 is slander per se and requires no proof of actual damages. A slander that does not fit into those four subdivisions is slander per quod, and special damages are required for there to be any recovery for that slander." (The Nethercutt Collection v. Regalia (2009) 172

■ "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203-204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740] , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1702

CACI 1702 Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure--Matter of Public Concern)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per se defamatory statement(s)]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

- 1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
- 3. [That [this person/these people] reasonably understood the statement(s) to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]];
- 4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false; and
- 5. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she] is entitled to recover [his/her] actual damages if [he/she] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following:

- a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
- b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
- c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
- d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Assumed Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for harm to reputation or shame, mortification, or hurt feelings but proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or that [he/she] had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s), then the law assumes that [name of plaintiff]'s reputation has been harmed and that [he/she] has suffered shame, mortification, or hurt feelings. Without presenting evidence of damage, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to receive compensation for this assumed harm in whatever sum you believe is reasonable. You must award at least a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] either knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s), and that [he/she] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940 -3949.]

Special verdict form CACI No. VF-1702, Defamation per se (Private Figure--Matter of Public Concern), should be used in this type of case.

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Use the bracketed element 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face (i.e., if the judge has not determined that the statement is defamatory as a matter of law). For statutory grounds of defamation per se, see Civil Code sections 45 (libel) and 46 (slander). Note that certain specific grounds of libel per se have been defined by case law.

Sources and Authority

■ "Defamation is an invasion of the interest in reputation. The tort involves the intentional publication of a statement of fact that is false, unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 645 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397] .)

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1702

■ "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203-204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740] , internal citation omitted.)

■ A private plaintiff is not required to prove malice to recover actual damages. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 347-348 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789] ; Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 742 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406] .)

■ " '[I]f the issue was being debated publicly and if it had foreseeable and substantial ramifications for nonparticipants, it was a public controversy.' " (Copp v. Paxton (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 829, 845 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 831] , quoting Waldbaum v. Fairchild Publications, Inc. (D.C. Cir. 1980) 627 F.2d 1287, 1297 .)

■ "[T]he jury was instructed that if it found that defendant published matter that was defamatory on its face and it found by clear and convincing evidence that defendant knew the statement was false or published it in reckless disregard of whether it was false, then the jury 'also may award plaintiff presumed general damages.' Presumed damages 'are those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter and are presumed to exist. They include reasonable compensation for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feeling. No definite standard or method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for presumed damages, and no evidence of actual harm is required. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for presumed damages, you shall exercise your authority with calm and reasonable judgment and the damages you fix shall be just and reasonable in the light of the evidence. You may in the exercise of your discretion award nominal damages only, namely an insignificant sum such as one dollar.' [PP] ... [T]he instant instruction, which limits damages to 'those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter,' constitutes substantial compliance with [Civil Code] section 3283. Thus, the instant instructions, 'if obeyed, did not allow the jurors to "enter the realm of speculation" regarding future suffering.' " (Sommer v. Gabor (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1455, 1472-1473 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 235] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "When the speech involves a matter of public concern, a private-figure plaintiff has the burden of proving the falsity of the defamation." (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 747 .)

■ "Suffice it to say that actual injury is not limited to out-of-pocket loss. Indeed, the more customary types of actual harm inflicted by defamatory falsehood include impairment of reputation and standing in the community, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering. Of course, juries must be limited by appropriate instructions, and all awards must be supported by competent evidence concerning the injury, although there need be no evidence which assigns an actual dollar value to the injury." (Gertz, supra, 418 U.S. at p. 350 .)

■ "A private-figure plaintiff must prove at least negligence to recover any damages and, when the speech involves a matter of public concern, he must also prove New York Times malice ... to recover presumed or punitive damages. This malice must be established by 'clear and convincing proof.' " (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 747 , internal citations omitted.)

■ When the court is instructing on punitive damages, it is error to fail to instruct that New York Times malice is required when the statements at issue involve matters of public concern. (Carney, supra, 221 Cal.App.3d at p. 1022 .)

■ "To prove actual malice ... a plaintiff must 'demonstrate with clear and convincing evidence that the defendant realized that his statement was false or that he subjectively entertained serious doubts as to the truth of his statement.' " (Khawar, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 275 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Because actual malice is a higher fault standard than negligence, a finding of actual malice generally includes a finding of negligence" (Khawar, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 279 .)

■ "The inquiry into the protected status of speech is one of law, not fact." (Nizam-Aldine v. City of Oakland (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 364, 375 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 781] , quoting Connick v. Myers (1983) 461 U.S. 138, 148, fn. 7 [103 S.Ct. 1684, 75 L.Ed.2d 708] .)

■ "For the New York Times standard to be met, 'the publisher must come close to willfully blinding itself to the falsity of its utterance.' " (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 747 , internal citation omitted.)

■ " 'While such speech is not totally unprotected by the First Amendment, its protections are less stringent' [than that applying to speech on matters of public concern]." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 445 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305] , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1703

CACI 1703 Defamation per quod--Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure--Matter of Public Concern)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [insert all claimed per quod defamatory statements]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

- 1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
- 3. That because of the facts and circumstances known to the [listener(s)/reader(s)] of the statement(s), [it/they] tended to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her] occupation [or to expose [him/her] to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or shame] [or to discourage others from associating or dealing with [him/her]];
- 4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false;
- 5. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s);
- 6. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm to [his/her] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and

7. That the statements [was/were] a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she] is entitled to recover if [he/she] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following actual damages:

- a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
- b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
- c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
- d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] either knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s), and that [he/she] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1703, Defamation per quod (Private Figure--Matter of Public Concern), should be used in this type of case.

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1701, Defamation per quod--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Presumed damages either are not available or will likely not be sought in a per quod case.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 45a provides: "A libel which is defamatory of the plaintiff without the necessity of explanatory matter, such as an inducement, innuendo or other extrinsic fact, is said to be a libel on its face. Defamatory language not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered special damage as a proximate result thereof. Special damage is defined in Section 48a of this code."

- Civil Code section 48a(4)(b) provides: "'Special damages' are all damages which plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered in respect to his property, business, trade, profession or occupation, including such amounts of money as the plaintiff alleges and proves he has expended as a result of the alleged libel, and no other."

- "Libel is recognized as either being per se (on its face), or per quod (literally meaning, 'whereby'), and each requires a different standard of pleading." (Palm Springs Tennis Club v. Rangel (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 1, 5 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 73] .)

- "If [a] defamatory meaning would appear only to readers who might be able to recognize it through some knowledge of specific facts and/or circumstances, not discernible from the face of the publication, and which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 5 , internal citation omitted.)

- "In pleading a case of libel per quod the plaintiff cannot assume that the court has access to the reader's special knowledge of extrinsic facts but must specially plead and prove those facts." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 7 , footnote omitted.)

- "A libel 'per quod' ... requires that the injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof." (Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal.3d 149, 153-154 [185 Cal.Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886] .)

- "In the libel context, 'inducement' and 'innuendo' are terms of art: '[W]here the language is ambiguous and an explanation is necessary to establish the defamatory meaning, the pleader must do two things: (1) Allege his interpretation of the defamatory meaning of the language (the "innuendo," ...); (2) support that interpretation by alleging facts showing that the readers or hearers to whom it was published would understand it in that defamatory sense (the "inducement").' " (Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 387 [226 Cal.Rptr. 354] .)

- "A defamatory publication not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges that he has suffered special damages as a result thereof." (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1130 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838] .)

- "The question whether a statement is reasonably susceptible to a defamatory interpretation is a question of law for the trial court. Only once the court has determined that a statement is reasonably susceptible to such a defamatory interpretation does it become a question for the trier of fact whether or not it was so understood." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 647 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397] , internal citations omitted.)

- Private-figure plaintiffs must prove actual malice to recover punitive or presumed damages for defamation if the matter is one of public concern. They are only required to prove negligence to recover damages for actual injury to reputation. (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 273-274 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696] .)

- " '[I]f the issue was being debated publicly and if it had foreseeable and substantial ramifications for nonparticipants, it was a public controversy.' " (Copp v. Paxton (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 829, 845 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 831] , quoting Waldbaum v. Fairchild Publications, Inc. (D.C. Cir. 1980) 627 F.2d 1287, 1297 .)

- If the language is not defamatory on its face, there is no distinction between libel and slander: "In either case, the fact that a statement is not defamatory on its face requires only that the plaintiff plead and prove the defamatory meaning and special damages." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 447 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305] .)

■ A plaintiff must prove that the defendant was at least negligent in failing to ascertain the truth or falsity of the statement. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 345-347 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789] .)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1704

CACI 1704 Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure--Matter of Private Concern)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per se defamatory statement(s)]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

- 1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
- 3. [That [this person/these people] reasonably understood the statement(s) to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]];
- 4. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

[If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she] is entitled to recover [his/her] actual damages if [he/she] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following:

- a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;

b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;

c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or

d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Assumed Damages

Even if [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for harm to reputation or shame, mortification or hurt feelings, the law assumes that [he/she] has suffered this harm. Without presenting evidence of damage, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to receive compensation for this assumed harm in whatever sum you believe is reasonable. You must award at least a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940 -3949.]

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1704, Defamation per se--Affirmative Defense--Truth (Private Figure--Matter of Private Concern), may be used in this type of case.

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Use the bracketed element 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face (i.e., if the judge has not determined that the statement is defamatory as a matter of law). For statutory grounds of defamation per se, see Civil Code sections 45 (libel) and 46 (slander). Note that certain specific grounds of libel per se have been defined by case law.

Sources and Authority

- "Defamation is an invasion of the interest in reputation. The tort involves the intentional publication of a statement of fact that is false, unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 645 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397] .)
- "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure [or not] is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203-204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740] , internal citation omitted.)
- The jury should be instructed that the defendant's negligence is an element of libel if the plaintiff is a private figure. (Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1009, 1016 [271 Cal.Rptr. 30] .)

■ "A private-figure plaintiff must prove at least negligence to recover any damages and, when the speech involves a matter of public concern, he must also prove New York Times malice ... to recover presumed or punitive damages." (Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 747 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406] .)

■ "The First Amendment trumps the common law presumption of falsity in defamation cases involving private-figure plaintiffs when the allegedly defamatory statements pertain to a matter of public interest." (Nizam-Aldine v. City of Oakland (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 364, 375 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 781] .)

■ "Thus, in a defamation action the burden is normally on the defendant to prove the truth of the allegedly defamatory communications. However, in accommodation of First Amendment considerations (which are implicated by state defamation laws), where the plaintiff is a public figure, the 'public-figure plaintiff must show the falsity of the statements at issue in order to prevail in a suit for defamation.' " (Stolz, supra, 30 Cal.App.4th at p. 202 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Since the statements at issue here involved a matter of purely private concern communicated between private individuals, we do not regard them as raising a First Amendment issue. 'While such speech is not totally unprotected by the First Amendment, its protections are less stringent' [than that applying to speech on matters of public concern]." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 445 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305] , quoting Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 760 [105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "We conclude that permitting recovery of presumed and punitive damages in defamation cases absent a showing of 'actual malice' does not violate the First Amendment when the defamatory statements do not involve matters of public concern." (Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., supra, 472 U.S. at p. 763 .)

■ "[T]he jury was instructed that if it found that defendant published matter that was defamatory on its face and it found by clear and convincing evidence that defendant knew the statement was false or published it in reckless disregard of whether it was false, then the jury 'also may award plaintiff presumed general damages.' Presumed damages 'are those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter and are presumed to exist. They include reasonable compensation for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feeling. No definite standard or method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for presumed damages, and no evidence of actual harm is required. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for presumed damages, you shall exercise your authority with calm and reasonable judgment and the damages you fix shall be just and reasonable in the light of the evidence. You may in the exercise of your discretion award nominal damages only, namely an insignificant sum such as one dollar.' [PP] ... [T]he instant instruction, which limits damages to 'those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter,' constitutes substantial compliance with [Civil Code] section 3283. Thus, the instant instructions, 'if obeyed, did not allow the jurors to "enter the realm of speculation" regarding future suffering.' " (Sommer v. Gabor (1995) 40

■ "In defamation actions generally, factual truth is a defense which it is the defendant's burden to prove. In a defamation action against a newspaper by a private person suing over statements of public concern, however, the First Amendment places the burden of proving falsity on the plaintiff." (Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1382 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802] .)

- 4. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s);
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm to [his/her] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and
- 6. That the statement(s) [was/were] a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she] is entitled to recover if [he/she] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following actual damages:

- a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
- b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
- c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
- d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940 -3949.]

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1705, Defamation per quod (Private Figure--Matter of Private Concern), should be used in this type of case.

Presumed damages either are not available or will likely not be sought in a per quod case.

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1701, Defamation per quod--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 45a provides: "A libel which is defamatory of the plaintiff without the necessity of explanatory matter, such as an inducement, innuendo or other extrinsic fact, is said to be a libel on its face. Defamatory language not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered special damage as a proximate result thereof. Special damage is defined in Section 48a of this code."

- Civil Code section 48a(4)(b) provides: " 'Special damages' are all damages which plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered in respect to his property, business, trade, profession or occupation, including such amounts of money as the plaintiff alleges and proves he has expended as a result of the alleged libel, and no other."

- "Libel is recognized as either being per se (on its face), or per quod (literally meaning, 'whereby'), and each requires a different standard of pleading." (Palm Springs Tennis Club v. Rangel (1999) 73

Cal.App.4th 1, 5 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 73] .)

■ "If [a] defamatory meaning would appear only to readers who might be able to recognize it through some knowledge of specific facts and/or circumstances, not discernible from the face of the publication, and which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 5 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In pleading a case of libel per quod the plaintiff cannot assume that the court has access to the reader's special knowledge of extrinsic facts but must specially plead and prove those facts." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 7 , footnote omitted.)

■ "A libel 'per quod' ... requires that the injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof." (Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal.3d 149, 153-154 [185 Cal.Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886] .)

■ "In the libel context, 'inducement' and 'innuendo' are terms of art: '[W]here the language is ambiguous and an explanation is necessary to establish the defamatory meaning, the pleader must do two things: (1) allege his interpretation of the defamatory meaning of the language (the "innuendo," ...); (2) support that interpretation by alleging facts showing that the readers or hearers to whom it was published would understand it in that defamatory sense (the "inducement").' " (Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 387 [226 Cal.Rptr. 354] .)

■ "A defamatory publication not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges that he has suffered special damages as a result thereof." (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1130 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838] .)

■ "The question whether a statement is reasonably susceptible to a defamatory interpretation is a question of law for the trial court. Only once the court has determined that a statement is reasonably susceptible to such a defamatory interpretation does it become a question for the trier of fact whether or not it was so understood." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 647 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Private-figure plaintiffs must prove actual malice to recover punitive or presumed damages for defamation if the matter is one of public concern. They are required to prove only negligence to recover damages for actual injury to reputation. (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 273-274 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696] .)

■ If the language is not defamatory on its face, there is no distinction between libel and slander: "In either case, the fact that a statement is not defamatory on its face requires only that the plaintiff plead and prove the defamatory meaning and special damages." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 447 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305] .)

■ A plaintiff must prove that the defendant was at least negligent in failing to ascertain the truth or falsity of the statement. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 345-347 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789] .)

■ "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSF 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203-204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740] , internal citation omitted.)

CACI 1706 Definition of Statement

The word "statement" in these instructions refers to any form of communication or representation, including spoken or written words [or] pictures [or] [insert audible or visual representations].

New September 2003

This instruction may be necessary in every case, but could be useful in cases where defamatory material is not written or verbal.

■ Civil Code section 45 provides: "Libel is a false and unprivileged publication by writing, printing, picture, effigy, or other fixed representation to the eye, which exposes any person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy, or which causes him to be shunned or avoided, or which has a tendency to injure him in his occupation."

■ Civil Code section 46 provides:

Slander is a false and unprivileged publication, orally uttered, and also communications by radio or any mechanical or other means which:

1. Charges any person with crime, or with having been indicted, convicted, or punished for crime;
2. Imputes in him the present existence of an infectious, contagious, or loathsome disease;
3. Tends directly to injure him in respect to his office, profession, trade or business, either by imputing to him general disqualification in those respects which the office or other occupation peculiarly requires, or by imputing something with reference to his office, profession, trade, or business that has a natural tendency to lessen its profits;

4. Imputes to him impotence or a want of chastity; or

5. Which, by natural consequence, causes actual damage.

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1707

CACI 1707 Fact Versus Opinion

For [name of plaintiff] to recover, [name of defendant]'s statement(s) must have been statements of fact, not opinion. A statement of fact is a statement that can be proved to be true or false. An opinion may be considered a statement of fact if the opinion suggests that facts exist.

In deciding this issue, you should consider whether the average [reader/listener] would conclude from the language of the statement and its context that [name of defendant] was making a statement of fact.

New September 2003

This instruction may not be necessary in all cases: "The critical determination of whether an allegedly defamatory statement constitutes fact or opinion is a question of law for the court and therefore suitable for resolution by demurrer. If the court concludes the statement could reasonably be construed as either fact or opinion, the issue should be resolved by a jury." (Campanelli v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 572, 578 [51 Cal.Rptr.2d 891], internal citations omitted.)

- The statutory definitions of libel in slander "can be meaningfully applied only to statements that are capable of being proved as false or true." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 445 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305] .)

- "Thus, 'rhetorical hyperbole,' 'vigorous epithet[s],' 'lusty and imaginative expressions[s] of ... contempt,' and language used 'in a loose, figurative sense' have all been accorded constitutional protection." (Ferlauto v. Hamsher (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1394, 1401 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 843] .)

■ "If a speaker says, 'In my opinion John Jones is a liar,' he implies a knowledge of facts which lead to the conclusion that Jones told an untruth. Even if the speaker states the facts upon which he bases his opinion, if those facts are either incorrect or incomplete, or if his assessment of them is erroneous, the statement may still imply a false assertion of fact." (Milkovich v. Lorain Journal Co. (1990) 497 U.S. 1, 18 [110 S.Ct. 2695, 111 L.Ed.2d 1] .)

■ "[S]ome statements are ambiguous and cannot be characterized as factual or nonfactual as a matter of law. 'In these circumstances, it is for the jury to determine whether an ordinary reader would have understood the article as a factual assertion' " (Kahn v. Bower (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1599, 1608 [284 Cal.Rptr. 244] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1708

CACI 1708 Coerced Self-Publication

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] is responsible for [his/her] harm even though [name of defendant] did not communicate the statement(s) to anyone other than [name of plaintiff]. To succeed, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] made the statement(s) to [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] was under strong pressure to communicate [name of defendant]'s statement(s) to another person; and
- 3. That when [name of defendant] made the statements, [he/she] should have known that [name of plaintiff] would be under strong pressure to communicate them to another person.

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then you must find that [name of defendant] was responsible for the communication of the statement(s).

New September 2003

- The general rule is that "[a] plaintiff cannot manufacture a defamation cause of action by publishing the statements to third persons; the publication must be done by the defendant." The exception to the rule occurs "when it [is] foreseeable that the defendant's act would result in plaintiff's publication to a third person." (Live Oak Publishing Co. v. Cohagan (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1277, 1284 [286 Cal.Rptr. 198] .)

- [A] "self-publication of the alleged defamatory statement may be imputed to the originator of the statement if 'the person defamed is operating under a strong compulsion to republish the defamatory statement and the circumstances which create the strong compulsion are known to the originator of the defamatory statement at the time he communicates it to the person defamed.' " (Davis v. Consolidated Freightways (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 354, 373 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 438] , quoting McKinney v. County of Santa Clara (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 787, 797-798 [168 Cal.Rptr. 89] .)

■ "This exception has been limited to a narrow class of cases, usually where a plaintiff is compelled to republish the statements in aid of disproving them." (Live Oak Publishing Co., supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 1285 .)

■ To determine if the coercion exception applies, the test is "whether 'because of some necessity he was under to communicate the matter to others, it was reasonably to be anticipated that he would do so.' " (Live Oak Publishing Co., supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 1285 .)

CACI 1720 Affirmative Defense--Truth

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, if [he/she] proves that [his/her] statement(s) about [name of plaintiff] [was/were] true. [Name of defendant] does not have to prove that the statement(s) [was/were] true in every detail, so long as the statement(s) [was/were] substantially true.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

This instruction is to be used only in cases involving private plaintiffs on matters of private concern. In cases involving public figures or matters of public concern, the burden of proving falsity is on the plaintiff.

■ Section 581A of the Restatement Second of Torts provides: "One who publishes a defamatory statement of fact is not subject to liability for defamation if the statement is true."

■ "Truth, of course, is an absolute defense to any libel action. In order to establish the defense, the defendant need not prove the literal truth of the allegedly libelous accusation, so long as the imputation is substantially true so as to justify the 'gist or sting' of the remark." CACI 1721 Affirmative Defense--Consent

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, if [he/she] proves that [name of plaintiff] consented, by words or conduct, to [name of defendant]'s communication of the statement(s) to others. In deciding whether [name of plaintiff] consented to the communication, you should consider the circumstances surrounding the words or conduct.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 583, provides, in part: "[T]he consent of another to the publication of defamatory matter concerning him is a complete defense to his action for defamation."

■ "One of the oldest and most widely recognized defenses to the publication of defamatory matter is the doctrine of consent, which has been classified as a form of absolute privilege." (Royer v. Steinberg (1979) 90 Cal.App.3d 490, 498 [153 Cal.Rptr. 499] .)

■ "One of the primary purposes of the doctrine of consent in defamation law is to prevent a party from inviting or inducing indiscretion and thereby laying the foundation of a lawsuit for his own pecuniary gain." (Royer, supra, 90 Cal.App.3d at p. 499 .)

■ This rule applies when the plaintiff asks the defendant to repeat the statement to others and when the plaintiff himself repeats the statements to others. (Royer, supra, 90 Cal.App.3d at p. 498 [but see CACI No. 1708, Coerced Self-Publication].)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1722

CACI 1722 Retraction: Newspaper or Broadcast (Civ. Code, § 48a)

Because [name of defendant] is a [newspaper/broadcaster], [name of plaintiff] may recover only the following:

- (a) Damages to property, business, trade, profession, or occupation; and
- (b) Damages for money spent as a result of the defamation.

However, this limitation does not apply if [name of plaintiff] proves both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] demanded a correction of the statement within 20 days of discovering the statement; and

2. That [name of defendant] did not publish an adequate correction;

[or]

That [name of defendant]'s correction was not substantially as conspicuous as the original [publication/broadcast];

[or]

That [name of defendant]'s correction was not [published/broadcast] within three weeks of [name of plaintiff]'s demand.

The judge should decide whether the demand for a retraction was served in compliance with the statute. (O'Hara v. Storer Communications, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 1101, 1110 [282 Cal.Rptr. 712] .)

■ Civil Code section 48a provides:

(1) In any action for damages for the publication of a libel in a newspaper, or of a slander by radio broadcast, plaintiff shall recover no more than special damages unless a correction be demanded and be not published or broadcast, as hereinafter provided. Plaintiff shall serve upon the publisher, at the place of publication or broadcaster at the place of broadcast, a written notice specifying the statements claimed to be libelous and demanding that the same be corrected. Said notice and demand must be served within 20 days after knowledge of the publication or broadcast of the statements claimed to be libelous.

(2) If a correction be demanded within said period and be not published or broadcast in substantially as conspicuous a manner in said newspaper or on said broadcasting station as were the statements claimed to be libelous, in a regular issue thereof published or broadcast within three weeks after such service, plaintiff, if he pleads and proves such notice, demand and failure to correct, and if his cause of action be maintained, may recover general, special and exemplary damages; provided that no exemplary damages may be recovered unless the plaintiff shall prove that defendant made the publication or broadcast with actual malice and then only in the discretion of the court or jury, and actual malice shall not be inferred or presumed from the publication or broadcast.

(3) A correction published or broadcast in substantially as conspicuous a manner in said newspaper or on said broadcasting station as the statements claimed in the complaint to be libelous, prior to receipt of a demand therefor, shall be of the same force and effect as though such correction had been published or broadcast within three weeks after a demand therefor.

(4) [Definitions.] As used herein, the terms "general damages," "special damages," "exemplary damages" and "actual malice," are defined as follows:

(a) "General damages" are damages for loss of reputation, shame, mortification and hurt feelings;

(b) "Special damages" are all damages which plaintiff alleges and proves that he has suffered in respect to his property, business, trade, profession or occupation, including such amounts of money as the plaintiff alleges and proves he has expended as a result of the alleged libel, and no other;

(c) "Exemplary damages" are damages which may in the discretion of the court or jury be recovered in addition to general and special damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing a defendant who has made the publication or broadcast with actual malice;

(d) "Actual malice" is that state of mind arising from hatred or ill will toward the plaintiff; provided, however, that such a state of mind occasioned by a good faith belief on the part of the defendant in the truth of the libelous publication or broadcast at the time it is published or broadcast shall not constitute actual malice.

■ "Under California law, a newspaper gains immunity from liability for all but 'special damages' when it prints a retraction satisfying the requirements of section 48a." (Pierce v. San Jose Mercury News (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 1626, 1631 [263 Cal.Rptr. 410] ; see also Twin Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 656, 660-661 [256 Cal.Rptr. 310] .)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1723

CACI 1723 Qualified Privilege (Civ. Code, § 47(c))

Under the circumstances of this case, [name of plaintiff] cannot recover damages from [name of defendant], even if the statement(s) [was/were] false, unless [he/she] also proves that [name of defendant] acted with hatred or ill will toward [him/her].

If [name of defendant] acted without reasonable grounds for believing the truth of the statement(s), this is a factor you may consider in determining whether [he/she] acted with hatred or ill will toward [name of plaintiff].

New September 2003

This instruction is applicable only if the judge determines that the conditions supporting the Civil Code section 47(c) privilege have arisen.

The judge determines all the other Civil Code section 47 privileges as a matter of law.

- Civil Code section 47(c) grants a conditional privilege against defamation to communications made without malice on subjects of mutual interest. A privileged publication is made "without malice, to a person interested therein, (1) by one who is also interested, or (2) by one who stands in such a relation to the person interested as to afford a reasonable ground for supposing the motive for the communication to be innocent, or (3) who is requested by the person interested to give the information."

- Civil Code section 48 provides that, with respect to section 47(c), "malice is not inferred from the communication."

- For purposes of this section "malice has been defined as 'a state of mind arising from hatred or ill will, evidencing a willingness to vex, annoy or injure another person.' " (Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 723 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406] , internal citation omitted.)
- "[M]aliciousness cannot be derived from negligence. Malice entails more than sloppiness or, as in this case, an easily explained typo." (Bierbower v. FHP, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 1, 9 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 393] .)
- Instructing the jury on "malice" as defined in the context of the common-interest privilege is insufficient by itself to impose liability for defamation. (Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1009, 1016 [271 Cal.Rptr. 30] .) Even in matters of private interest, the jury must find that the defendant was at least negligent. (Ibid.)
- While defendants have the burden of proving that an allegedly defamatory statement falls within the scope of the common-interest privilege, plaintiffs have the burden of proving that that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279] .)
- "[I]f malice is shown, the privilege is not merely overcome; it never arises in the first instance... . [T]he characterization of the privilege as qualified or conditional is incorrect to the extent that it suggests the privilege is defeasible." (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 723, fn. 7 .)

CHAPTER 17 California Judicial Council Defamation Instructions

3-17 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1724

CACI 1724 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations--Defamation

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [he/she/it] first communicated the alleged defamatory statement to a person other than [name of plaintiff] before [insert date one year before date of filing]. [For statements made in a publication, the claimed harm occurred when the publication was first generally distributed to the public.]

[If, however, [name of plaintiff] proves that on [insert date one year before date of filing] [he/she/it] had not discovered the facts constituting the defamation, and with reasonable diligence could not have discovered those facts, the lawsuit was filed on time.]

New April 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action was not filed within the applicable one-year limitation period for defamation. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 340(c).)

If the defamation was published in a publication such as a book, newspaper, or magazine, include the last sentence of the first paragraph, and do not include the second paragraph. The delayed-discovery rule does not apply to these statements. (Shively v. Bozanich (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1230, 1250-1251 [7 Cal.Rptr.3d 576, 80 P.3d 676] .) Otherwise, include the second paragraph if the plaintiff alleges that the delayed-discovery rule avoids the limitation defense.

The plaintiff bears the burden of pleading and proving delayed discovery. (See McKelvey v. Boeing North Am. Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 151, 160 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 645] .) See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery.

The delayed discovery rule can apply to matters published in an inherently secretive manner. (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco v. Goldman (2007) 42 Cal.4th 883, 894 [70 Cal.Rptr.3d 178, 173 P.3d 1004] . Modify the instruction if inherent secrecy is at issue and depends on disputed facts. It is not clear whether the plaintiff has the burden of proving inherent secrecy or the defendant has the burden of proving its absence.

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 340 provides in part:

Within one year:

(c) An action for libel, slander, false imprisonment, seduction of a person below the age of legal consent, or by a depositor against a bank for the payment of a forged or raised check, or a check that bears a forged or unauthorized endorsement, or against any person who boards or feeds an animal or fowl or who engages in the practice of veterinary medicine as defined in Section 4826 of the Business and Professions Code, for that person's neglect resulting in injury or death to an animal or fowl in the course of boarding or feeding the animal or fowl or in the course of the practice of veterinary medicine on that animal or fowl.

- "In a claim for defamation, as with other tort claims, the period of limitations commences when the cause of action accrues. ... [A] cause of action for defamation accrues at the time the defamatory statement is 'published' (using the term 'published' in its technical sense). [P] [I]n defamation actions the general rule is that publication occurs when the defendant communicates the defamatory statement to a person other than the person being defamed. As also has been noted, with respect to books and newspapers, publication occurs (and the cause of action accrues) when the book or newspaper is first generally distributed to the public." (Shively, supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 1246-1247 , internal citations omitted.)

- "This court and other courts in California and elsewhere have recognized that in certain circumstances it may be appropriate to apply the discovery rule to delay the accrual of a cause of action for defamation or to impose an equitable estoppel against defendants who assert the defense after the limitations period has expired." (Shively, supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 1248-1249 .)

- "[A]pplication of the discovery rule to statements contained in books and newspapers would undermine the single-publication rule and reinstate the indefinite tolling of the statute of limitations intended to be cured by the adoption of the single-publication rule. If we were to recognize delayed accrual of a cause of action based upon the allegedly defamatory statement contained in the book ... on the basis that plaintiff did not happen to come across the statement until some time after the book was first generally distributed to the public, we would be adopting a rule subjecting publishers and authors to potential liability during the entire period in which a single copy of the book or newspaper might exist and fall into the hands of the subject of a defamatory remark. Inquiry into whether delay in discovering the publication was reasonable has not been permitted for publications governed by the single-publication rule. Nor is adoption of the rule proposed by plaintiff appropriate simply because the originator of a privately communicated defamatory statement may, together with the author and the publisher of a book, be liable for the defamation contained in the book. Under the rationale for the single-publication rule, the originator, who is jointly responsible along with the author and the publisher, should not be liable for millions of causes of action for a single edition of the book. Similarly, consistent with that rationale, the originator, like the author or the publisher, should not be subject to suit many years after the edition is published." (Shively, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1251 .)

■ "The single-publication rule as described in our opinion in Shively and as codified in Civil Code section 3425.3 applies without limitation to all publications." (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 893 .)

■ "[T]he single-publication rule applies not only to books and newspapers that are published with general circulation (as we addressed in Shively), but also to publications like that in the present case that are given only limited circulation and, thus, are not generally distributed to the public. Further, the discovery rule, which we held in Shively does not apply when a book or newspaper is generally distributed to the public, does not apply even when, as in the present case, a publication is given only limited distribution." (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 890 .)

■ " '... [C]ourts uniformly have rejected the application of the discovery rule to libels published in books, magazines, and newspapers,' stating that 'although application of the discovery rule may be justified when the defamation was communicated in confidence, that is, "in an inherently secretive manner," the justification does not apply when the defamation occurred by means of a book, magazine, or newspaper that was distributed to the public. [Citation.]' " (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 894 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per se defamatory statement.]

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [this person/these people] reasonably understand the statement to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the statement false?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer questions 6, 7, and 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

6. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff] actual harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, skip question 7 and answer question 8.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages for:

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

Give the jury question 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face.

In question 7, omit damage items c and d if the plaintiff elects not to present proof of actual damages for harm to reputation and for shame mortification, or hurt feelings. Whether or not proof for both categories is offered, include question 8. For these categories, the jury may find that no actual damages have been proven but must still make an award of assumed damages.

Omit question 10 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per quod defamatory statement.]

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the statement false?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] fail to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Is the statement, because of facts known to the people who heard or read the statement, the kind of statement that would tend to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her] occupation?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer harm to [his/her] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was the statement a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages?[$_____]

If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form. If you awarded actual damages, answer question 9.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

9. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. Has [name of plaintiff] proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 10 is yes, then answer question 11. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

11. What amount, if any, do you award as punitive damages against [name of defendant]?

New September 2003; Revised December 2005

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1703, Defamation per quod--Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure--Matter of Public Concern).

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

Users may need to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 if, for example, there are multiple defendants and issues regarding apportionment of damages under Proposition 51.

Question 5 may be modified by referring to one of the other two grounds listed in element 3 of CACI No. 1703, Defamation per quod--Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure--Matter of Public Concern), depending on which ground is applicable in the case.

Additional questions may be needed on the issue of punitive damages if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Omit question 11 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case. This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1704, Defamation per se--Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure--Matter of Private Concern), and CACI No. 1720, Affirmative Defense--Truth. Delete question 4 if the affirmative defense of the truth is not at issue.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

Give the jury question 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face.

In question 7, omit damage items c and d if the plaintiff elects not to present proof of actual damages for harm to reputation and for shame, mortification, or hurt feelings. Whether or not proof for both categories is offered, include question 8. For these categories, the jury may find that no actual damages have been proven but must still make an award of assumed damages.

Additional questions on the issue of punitive damages may be needed if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Omit question 10 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Right of Privacy Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1800 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Intrusion into private affairs [CACI No. 1800].
- Public disclosure of private facts [CACI No. 1801] and false light [CACI No. 1802].
- Appropriation and use of name or likeness [CACI Nos. 1803, 1804A, 1804B], and the First Amendment defense to appropriating or using name or likeness [CACI No. 1805].
- Affirmative defense to the constitutional right of privacy [CACI No. 1807].
- Stalking under Civ. Code § 1708.7 [CACI No. 1808].
- Recording of confidential information [CACI No. 1809].
- Damages [CACI Nos. 1820, 1821].

The defamation series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1800-VF-1804, VF-1807].

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1800

CACI 1800 Intrusion Into Private Affairs

name of plaintiff ] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] had a reasonable expectation of privacy in [specify place or other circumstance];
- 2. That [name of defendant] intentionally intruded in [specify place or other circumstance];
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s intrusion would be highly offensive to a reasonable person;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In deciding whether [name of plaintiff] had a reasonable expectation of privacy in [specify place or other circumstance], you should consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) The identity of [name of defendant];
- (b) The extent to which other persons had access to [specify place or other circumstance] and could see or hear [name of plaintiff]; and
- (c) The means by which the intrusion occurred.

In deciding whether an intrusion is highly offensive to a reasonable person, you should consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) The extent of the intrusion;
- (b) [Name of defendant]'s motives and goals; and
- (c) The setting in which the intrusion occurred.

New September 2003; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

Sources and Authority

■ "Seventy years after Warren and Brandeis proposed a right to privacy, Dean William L. Prosser analyzed the case law development of the invasion of privacy tort, distilling four distinct kinds of activities violating the privacy protection and giving rise to tort liability: (1) intrusion into private matters; (2) public disclosure of private facts; (3) publicity placing a person in a false light; and (4) misappropriation of a person's name or likeness ... Prosser's classification was adopted by the Restatement Second of Torts in sections 652A-652E. California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .)

■ The tort of intrusion "encompasses unconsented-to physical intrusion into the home, hospital room or other place the privacy of which is legally recognized, as well as unwarranted sensory intrusions such as eavesdropping, wiretapping, and visual or photographic spying." (Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 200, 230 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 955 P.2d 469] , internal citation omitted.)

■ The right of privacy was first recognized in California in the case of Melvin v. Reid (1931) 112 Cal.App. 285, 291 [297 P. 91] . The court found a legal foundation for the tort in the right to pursue and obtain happiness found in article 1, section 1 of the California Constitution.

■ "The foregoing arguments have been framed throughout this action in terms of both the common law and the state Constitution. These two sources of privacy protection 'are not unrelated' under California law. (Shulman, supra, 18 Cal.4th 200, 227; accord, Hill, supra, 7 Cal.4th 1, 27; but see Katzberg v. Regents of University of California (2002) 29 Cal.4th 300, 313, fn. 13 [127 Cal.Rptr.2d 482, 58 P.3d 339] [suggesting it is an open question whether the state constitutional privacy provision, which is otherwise self-executing and serves as the basis for injunctive relief, can also provide direct and sole support for a damages claim].)" (Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 272, 286 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063] .)

■ "[W]e will assess the parties' claims and the undisputed evidence under the rubric of both the common law and constitutional tests for establishing a privacy violation. Borrowing certain shorthand language from Hill, supra, 7 Cal.4th 1, which distilled the largely parallel elements of these two causes of action, we consider (1) the nature of any intrusion upon reasonable expectations of privacy, and (2) the offensiveness or seriousness of the intrusion, including any justification and other relevant interests." (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal.4th at p. 288 .)

- The element of intrusion "is not met when the plaintiff has merely been observed, or even photographed or recorded, in a public place. Rather, 'the plaintiff must show the defendant penetrated some zone of physical or sensory privacy surrounding, or obtained unwanted access to data about, the plaintiff.' " (Sanders v. American Broadcasting Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 907, 914-915 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 909, 978 P.2d 67] , internal citations omitted.)

- "As to the first element of the common law tort, the defendant must have 'penetrated some zone of physical or sensory privacy ... or obtained unwanted access to data' by electronic or other covert means, in violation of the law or social norms. In either instance, the expectation of privacy must be 'objectively reasonable.' In Sanders [supra, at p. 907] ... , this court linked the reasonableness of privacy expectations to such factors as (1) the identity of the intruder, (2) the extent to which other persons had access to the subject place, and could see or hear the plaintiff, and (3) the means by which the intrusion occurred." (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal.4th at pp. 286-287 .)

- The plaintiff does not have to prove that he or she had a "complete expectation of privacy": "Privacy for purposes of the intrusion tort must be evaluated with respect to the identity of the alleged intruder and the nature of the intrusion." (Sanders, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 917-918 .)

- "The second common law element essentially involves a 'policy' determination as to whether the alleged intrusion is 'highly offensive' under the particular circumstances. Relevant factors include the degree and setting of the intrusion, and the intruder's motives and objectives. Even in cases involving the use of photographic and electronic recording devices, which can raise difficult questions about covert surveillance, 'California tort law provides no bright line on ["offensiveness"]'; each case must be taken on its facts.' " (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal. 4th at p. 287 , internal citations omitted.)

- "While what is 'highly offensive to a reasonable person' suggests a standard upon which a jury would properly be instructed, there is a preliminary determination of 'offensiveness' which must be made by the court in discerning the existence of a cause of action for intrusion. ... A court determining the existence of 'offensiveness' would consider the degree of intrusion, the context, conduct and circumstances surrounding the intrusion as well as the intruder's motives and objectives, the setting into which he intrudes, and the expectations of those whose privacy is invaded." (Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1483-1484 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668] .)

- "Plaintiffs must show more than an intrusion upon reasonable privacy expectations. Actionable invasions of privacy also must be 'highly offensive' to a reasonable person, and 'sufficiently serious' and unwarranted as to constitute an 'egregious breach of the social norms.' Publisher's Notes

This instruction replaces BAJI No. 7.20.

The court in Marich v. MGM/UA Telecommunications, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 415, 421 n3, 422, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 60, discussed the intent element of the tort of intrusion into private affairs by noting that the civil jury instruction as given had since been rewritten, and that the instruction now provides a dual definition of intent for general use in intentional torts. This definition is based on the Restatement (Second of Torts), § 8A, in which intent denotes "that the actor desires to cause consequences of his act, or that he believes that the consequences are substantially certain to result from it." (Italics added.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use CACI Instructions: There are more complaints of intrusion into private affairs by public celebrities and individuals being filed these days. CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

CACI 1801 Public Disclosure of Private Facts

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] publicized private information concerning [name of plaintiff];
- 2. That a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would consider the publicity highly offensive;
- 3. That [name of defendant] knew, or acted with reckless disregard of the fact, that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would consider the publicity highly offensive;
- 4. That the private information was not of legitimate public concern [or did not have a substantial connection to a matter of legitimate public concern];
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In deciding whether the information was a matter of legitimate public concern, you should consider, among other factors, the following:

- (a) The social value of the information;
- (b) The extent of the intrusion into [name of plaintiff]'s privacy; [and]

(c) Whether [name of plaintiff] consented to the publicity explicitly or by voluntarily seeking public attention or a public office; [and]

(d) [Insert other applicable factor].

[In deciding whether [name of defendant] publicized the information, you should determine whether it was made public either by communicating it to the public at large or to so many people that the information was substantially certain to become public knowledge.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

Comment (a) to Restatement Second of Torts, section 652D states that "publicity" "means that the matter is made public, by communicating it to the public at large, or to so many persons that the matter must be regarded as substantially certain to become one of public knowledge." This point has been placed in brackets because it may not be an issue in every case.

Sources and Authority

■ "[T]he allegations involve a public disclosure of private facts. The elements of this tort are ' "(1) public disclosure (2) of a private fact (3) which would be offensive and objectionable to the reasonable person and (4) which is not of legitimate public concern." ' The absence of any one of these elements is a complete bar to liability." (Moreno v. Hanford Sentinel, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 1125, 1129-1130 [91 Cal.Rptr.3d 858] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 652D provides:

One who gives publicity to a matter concerning the private life of another is subject to liability to the other for invasion of his privacy, if the matter publicized is of a kind that

(a) would be highly offensive to a reasonable person, and

(b) is not of legitimate concern to the public.

■ "California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Generally speaking, matter which is already in the public domain is not private, and its publication is protected." (Diaz v. Oakland Tribune (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 118, 131 [188 Cal.Rptr. 762] , internal citations omitted.) However, "matter which was once of public record may be protected as private facts where disclosure of that information would not be newsworthy." (Id. at p. 132 .)

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1801

■ Because of the right to freedom of speech, the Supreme Court has stated: "[W]e find it reasonable to require a plaintiff to prove, in each case, that the publisher invaded his privacy with reckless disregard for the fact that reasonable men would find the invasion highly offensive." (Briscoe v. Reader's Digest Assn., Inc. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 529, 542-543 [93 Cal.Rptr. 866, 483 P.2d 34] .)

■ In Johnson v. Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 880, 891, fn. 11 [118 Cal.Rptr. 370] , the court observed: "If a jury finds that a publication discloses private facts which are 'highly offensive and injurious to the reasonable man' [citation] then it would inter alia also satisfy the reckless disregard requirement."

■ "Diaz ... expressly makes the lack of newsworthiness part of the plaintiff's case in a private facts action. ... We therefore agree with defendants that under California common law the dissemination of truthful, newsworthy material is not actionable as a publication of private facts." (Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 200, 215 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 955 P.2d 469] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In the matter before us, however, there is no indication that any issue of public interest or freedom of the press was involved. ' "In determining what is a matter of legitimate public interest, account must be taken of the customs and conventions of the community; and in the last analysis what is proper becomes a matter of the community mores. The line is to be drawn when the publicity ceases to be the giving of information to which the public is entitled, and becomes a morbid and sensational prying into private lives for its own sake, with which a reasonable member of the public, with decent standards, would say that he had no concern." ' Put another way, morbid and sensational eavesdropping or gossip 'serves no legitimate public interest and is not deserving of protection. [Citations.]' " (Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 856, 874 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 352] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Almost any truthful commentary on public officials or public affairs, no matter how serious the invasion of privacy, will be privileged." (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 535, fn. 5 .)

■ Courts have devised a three-part test for evaluating newsworthiness: " '[1] the social value of the facts published, [2] the depth of the article's intrusion into ostensibly private affairs, and [3] the extent to which the party voluntarily acceded to a position of public notoriety.' " (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 541 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he right of privacy is purely personal. It cannot be asserted by anyone other than the person whose privacy has been invaded." (Moreno, supra, 172 Cal.App.4th at p. 1131 .)

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1802

CACI 1802 False Light

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] publicized information or material that showed [name of plaintiff] in a false light;

3. [That there is clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the publication would create a false impression about [name of plaintiff] or acted with reckless disregard for the truth;]

[or]

[That [name of defendant] was negligent in determining the truth of the information or whether a false impression would be created by its publication;]

4. [That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and]

[or]

[That [name of plaintiff] sustained harm to [his/her] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and]

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[In deciding whether [name of defendant] publicized the information or material, you should determine whether it was made public either by communicating it to the public at large or to so many people that the information or material was substantially certain to become public knowledge.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

The bracketed options for element 3 should be used in the alternative, depending on whether the conduct involves a matter of public concern.

Comment (a) to Restatement Second of Torts, section 652D states that "publicity" "means that the matter is made public, by communicating it to the public at large, or to so many persons that the matter must be regarded as substantially certain to become one of public knowledge." This point has been placed in brackets because it may not be an issue in every case.

As reflected in the citations below, false light claims are subject to the same constitutional protections that apply to defamation claims. Thus, a knowing violation or reckless disregard for the plaintiff's rights is required where the plaintiff is a public figure or the subject matter of the communication is a matter of public concern. If a false light claim is combined with a defamation or libel claim, the standard applied in the instructions should be equivalent.

If plaintiff has combined a false light claim with a claim of defamation or libel, the court should consider whether separate instructions on each claim should be given in light of Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1385, fn. 13 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802] and Briscoe v. Reader's Digest Assn. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 529, 543 [93 Cal.Rptr. 866, 483 P.2d 34] .

Sources and Authority

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 652E provides:

One who gives publicity to a matter concerning another that places the other before the public in a false light is subject to liability to the other for invasion of his privacy, if
(a) the false light in which the other was placed would be highly offensive to a reasonable person, and

(b) the actor had knowledge of or acted in reckless disregard as to the falsity of the publicized matter and the false light in which the other would be placed.

- "California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In order to be actionable, the false light in which the plaintiff is placed must be highly offensive to a reasonable person. Although it is not necessary that the plaintiff be defamed, publicity placing one in a highly offensive false light will in most cases be defamatory as well." (Fellows v. National Enquirer (1986) 42 Cal.3d 234, 238-239 [228 Cal.Rptr. 215, 721 P.2d 97] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "When a false light claim is coupled with a defamation claim, the false light claim is essentially superfluous, and stands or falls on whether it meets the same requirements as the defamation cause of action." (Eisenberg, supra, 74 Cal.App.4th at p. 1385, fn. 13 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] 'false light' cause of action 'is in substance equivalent to ... [a] libel claim, and should meet the same requirements of the libel claim ... including proof of malice.' " (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 543 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The New York Times decision defined a zone of constitutional protection within which one could publish concerning a public figure without fear of liability. That constitutional protection does not depend on the label given the stated cause of action; it bars not only actions for defamation, but also claims for invasion of privacy." (Reader's Digest Assn., Inc. v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal.3d 244, 265 [208 Cal.Rptr. 137, 690 P.2d 610] , internal citations omitted.)

■ In Time, Inc. v. Hill (1967) 385 U.S. 374 [87 S.Ct. 534, 17 L.Ed.2d 456] , the Court held that the New York Times v. Sullivan malice standard applied to a privacy action that was based on a "false light" statute where the matter involved a public figure. Given the similarities between defamation and false light actions, it appears likely that the negligence standard for private figure defamation plaintiffs announced in Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789] should apply to private figure false light plaintiffs.

■ Plaintiffs must comply with the retraction statute (Civ. Code, § 48a) to recover more than special damages in a false light cause of action. (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 543 .)

■ "We hold that whenever a claim for false light invasion of privacy is based on language that is defamatory within the meaning of section 45a, pleading and proof of special damages are required." (Fellows, supra, 42 Cal.3d at p. 251 .)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] used [name of plaintiff]'s name, likeness, or identity without [his/her] permission;

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

If the alleged "benefit" is not commercial, the judge will need to determine whether the advantage gained by the defendant qualifies as "some other advantage."

If suing under both the common law and Civil Code section 3344, the judge may need to explain that a person's voice, for example, may qualify as "identity" if the voice is sufficient to cause listeners to identify the plaintiff. The two causes of action overlap, and the same conduct should be covered by both.

The last bracketed element and the last bracketed paragraph are appropriate in cases that implicate a defendant's First Amendment right to freedom of expression and freedom of the press. (See Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 409-410 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307] .)

Sources and Authority

- "A common law cause of action for appropriation of name or likeness may be pleaded by alleging (1) the defendant's use of the plaintiff's identity; (2) the appropriation of plaintiff's name or likeness to defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise; (3) lack of consent; and (4) resulting injury." (Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 417 [198 Cal.Rptr. 342] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The difficulty in defining the boundaries of the right, as applied in the publication field, is inherent in the necessity of balancing the public interest in the dissemination of news, information and education against the individuals' interest in peace of mind and freedom from emotional disturbances. When words relating to or actual pictures of a person or his name are published, the circumstances may indicate that public interest is predominant. Factors deserving consideration may include the medium of publication, the extent of the use, the public interest served by the publication, and the seriousness of the interference with the person's privacy." (Gill v. Curtis Publishing Co. (1952) 38 Cal.2d 273, 278-279 [239 P.2d 630] .)

- "Even if each of these elements is established, however, the common law right does not provide relief for every publication of a person's name or likeness. The First Amendment requires that the right to be protected from unauthorized publicity 'be balanced against the public interest in the dissemination of news and information consistent with the democratic processes under the constitutional guaranties of freedom of speech and of the press.' " (Gionfriddo, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th at pp. 409-410 , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

Directions for Use

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1804A

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing. One's name and likeness are protected under both the common law and under Civil Code section 3344. As the statutory remedy is cumulative (Civ. Code, § 3344(g)), both this instruction and CACI No. 1803, Appropriation of Name or Likeness, which sets forth the common-law cause of action, will normally be given.

Different standards apply if the use is in connection with a news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or with a political campaign. (See Civ. Code, § 3344(d); Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 421-426 [198 Cal.Rptr. 342] .) The plaintiff bears the burden of proving the nonapplicability of these exceptions. (Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 416-417 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307] .) Element 2 may be omitted if there is no question of fact with regard to this issue. See CACI No. 1804B, Use of Name or Likeness--Use in Connection With News, Public Affairs, or Sports Broadcast or Account, or Political Campaign, for an instruction to use if one of the exceptions of Civil Code section 3344(d) applies.

If plaintiff alleges that the use was not covered by Civil Code section 3344(d) (e.g., not a "news" account) but that even if it were covered it is not protected under the standards of Eastwood, then both this instruction and CACI No. 1804B should be given in the alternative. In that case, it should be made clear to the jury that if the plaintiff fails to prove the inapplicability of Civil Code section 3344(d) as set forth in element 2, the claim is still viable if the plaintiff proves all the elements of CACI No. 1804B.

Note that a plaintiff is entitled to the sum of $750 under Civil Code section 3344(a) even if actual damages are not proven. (See Miller v. Collectors Universe, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 988, 1008 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 194] [claim for 14,060 misappropriations of plaintiff's name under section 3344(a) constitutes single cause of action for which statutory damages are $750].)

- Civil Code section 3344(a) provides: "Any person who knowingly uses another's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner, on or in products, merchandise, or goods, or for purposes of advertising or selling, or soliciting purchases of, products, merchandise, goods or services, without such person's prior consent, or, in the case of a minor, the prior consent of his parent or legal guardian, shall be liable for any damages sustained by the person or persons injured as a result thereof. In addition, in any action brought under this section, the person who violated the section shall be liable to the injured party or parties in an amount equal to the greater of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750) or the actual damages suffered by him or her as a result of the unauthorized use, and any profits from the unauthorized use that are attributable to the use and are not taken into account in computing the actual damages. In establishing such profits, the injured party or parties are required to present proof only of the gross revenue attributable to such use, and the person who violated this section is required to prove his or her deductible expenses. Punitive damages may also be awarded to the injured party or parties. The prevailing party in any action under this section shall also be entitled to attorney's fees and costs."

- Civil Code section 3344(d) provides: "For purposes of this section, a use of a name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness in connection with any news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or any political campaign, shall not constitute a use for which consent is required under subdivision (a)."

CACI 1804B Use of Name or Likeness--Use in Connection With News, Public Affairs, or Sports Broadcast or Account, or Political Campaign (Civ. Code, § 3344(d))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] knowingly used [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] [on merchandise/ [or] to advertise or sell [describe what is being advertised or sold]];
- 2. That the use occurred in connection with a [[news/public affairs/sports] broadcast or account/political campaign];
- 3. That the use contained false information;
- 4. [Use for public figure : That [name of defendant] knew the [broadcast or account/campaign material] was false or that [he/she/it] acted with reckless disregard of its falsity;]

[or]

[Use for private individual : That [name of defendant] was negligent in determining the truth of the [broadcast or account/campaign material];]

- 5. That [name of defendant]'s use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] was directly connected to [name of defendant]'s commercial purpose;

6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 1804 April 2008; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff's name or likeness has been used in connection with a news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or with a political campaign. In this situation, consent is not required. (Civ. Code, § 3344(d).) However, in Eastwood v. Superior Court, the court held that the constitutional standards under defamation law apply under section 3344(d) and that the statute as it applies to news does not provide protection for a knowing or reckless falsehood. (Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 421-426 [198 Cal.Rptr. 342] .) Under defamation law, this standard applies only to public figures, and private individuals may sue for negligent publication of defamatory falsehoods. (Id. at p. 424 .) Presumably, the same distinction between public figures and private individuals would apply under Civil Code section 3344(d). Element 4 provides for the standards established and suggested by Eastwood.

Give CACI No. 1804A, Use of Name or Likeness, if there is no issue whether one of the exceptions of Civil Code section 3344(d) applies. If plaintiff alleges that the use was not covered by subdivision (d) (e.g., not a "news" account) but that even if it were covered it is not protected under the standards of Eastwood, then both this instruction and CACI No. 1804A should be given in the alternative. In that case, it should be made clear to the jury that if the plaintiff fails to prove the inapplicability of Civil Code section 3344(d) as set forth element 2 of CACI No. 1804A, the claim is still viable if the plaintiff proves all the elements of this instruction.

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing. One's name and likeness are protected under both the common law and under Civil Code section 3344. As the statutory remedy is cumulative (Civ. Code, § 3344(g)), both this instruction and CACI No. 1803, Appropriation of Name or Likeness, which sets forth the common-law cause of action, will normally be given.

Note that a plaintiff is entitled to the sum of $750 under Civil Code section 3344(a) even if actual damages are not proven. (See Miller v. Collectors Universe, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 988, 1008 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 194] [claim for 14,060 misappropriations of plaintiff's name under section 3344(a) constitutes single cause of action for which statutory damages are $750].)

Even though consent is not required, it may be an affirmative defense. CACI No. 1721, Affirmative Defense--Consent (to defamation), may be used in this situation.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3344(a) provides: "Any person who knowingly uses another's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner, on or in products, merchandise, or goods, or for purposes of advertising or selling, or soliciting purchases of, products, merchandise, goods or services, without such person's prior consent, or, in the case of a minor, the prior consent of his parent or legal guardian, shall be liable for any damages sustained by the person or persons injured as a result thereof. In addition, in any action brought under this section, the person who violated the section shall be liable to the injured party or parties in an amount equal to the greater of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750) or the actual damages suffered by him or her as a result of the unauthorized use, and any profits from the unauthorized use that are attributable to the use and are not taken into account in computing the actual damages. In establishing such profits, the injured party or parties are required to present proof only of the gross revenue attributable to such use, and the person who violated this section is required to prove his or her deductible expenses. Punitive damages may also be awarded to the injured party or parties. The prevailing party in any action under this section shall also be entitled to attorney's fees and costs."

- Civil Code section 3344(d) provides: "For purposes of this section, a use of a name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness in connection with any news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or any political campaign, shall not constitute a use for which consent is required under subdivision (a)."

- Civil Code section 3344 is "a commercial appropriation statute which complements the common law tort of appropriation." (KNB Enters. v. Matthews (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 362, 366-367 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 713] .)

- "[C]alifornia's appropriation statute is not limited to celebrity plaintiffs." (KNB Enters., supra, 78 Cal.App.4th at p. 367 .)

- "The differences between the common law and statutory actions are: (1) Section 3344, subdivision (a) requires a knowing use whereas under case law, mistake and inadvertence are not a defense against commercial appropriation; and (2) Section 3344, subdivision (g) expressly provides that its remedies are cumulative and in addition to any provided for by law." (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 417, fn. 6 , internal citation omitted.)

- In addition to the common law elements, a party seeking the statutory remedy provided in section 3344 must also allege "a knowing use of the plaintiff's name, photograph or likeness" and "a 'direct' connection must be alleged between the use and the commercial purpose." (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at pp. 417-418 , internal citation omitted; see Johnson v. Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 880, 895 [118 Cal.Rptr. 370] .)

- "The spacious interest in an unfettered press is not without limitation. This privilege is subject to the qualification that it shall not be so exercised as to abuse the rights of individuals. Hence, in defamation cases, the concern is with defamatory lies masquerading as truth. Similarly, in privacy cases, the concern is with nondefamatory lies masquerading as truth. Accordingly, we do not believe that the Legislature intended to provide an exemption from liability for a knowing or reckless falsehood under the canopy of 'news.' We therefore hold that Civil Code section 3344, subdivision (d), as it pertains to news, does not provide an exemption for a knowing or reckless falsehood." (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 426 , internal citations omitted.)

- The burden of proof as to knowing or reckless falsehood under Civil Code section 3344(d) is on the plaintiff. (See Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 426 .)

- "[T]he single-publication rule as codified in [Civil Code] section 3425.3 applies, in general, to a cause of action for unauthorized commercial use of likeness." (Christoff v. Nestle USA, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 468, 476 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 798, 213 P.3d 132] .)

■ "Any facts which tend to disprove one of the allegations raised in a complaint may be offered in the defendant's answer based upon a general denial and need not be raised by affirmative defense. ... Throughout this litigation plaintiffs have borne the burden of establishing that their names and likenesses were used in violation of section 3344, and this burden has always required proof that the disputed uses fell outside the exemptions granted by subdivision (d)." (Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 416-417 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "We presume that the Legislature intended that the category of public affairs would include things that would not necessarily be considered news. Otherwise, the appearance of one of those terms in the subsection would be superfluous, a reading we are not entitled to give to the statute. We also presume that the term 'public affairs' was intended to mean something less important than news. Public affairs must be related to real-life occurrences." (Dora v. Frontline Video, Inc. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 536, 546 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 790] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[N]o cause of action will lie for the 'publication of matters in the public interest, which rests on the right of the public to know and the freedom of the press to tell it.' " (Montana v. San Jose Mercury News (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 790, 793 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 639] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1805

CACI 1805 Affirmative Defense to Use or Appropriation of Name or Likeness--First Amendment (Comedy III)

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she] has not violated [name of plaintiff]'s right of privacy because the [insert type of work, e.g., "picture"] is protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech and expression. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove either of the following:

- 1. That the [insert type of work, e.g., "picture"] adds something new to [name of plaintiff]'s likeness, giving it a new expression, meaning, or message; or
- 2. That the value of the [insert type of work, e.g., "picture"] does not result primarily from [name of plaintiff]'s fame.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes that the plaintiff is the celebrity whose likeness is the subject of the trial. This instruction will need to be modified if the plaintiff is not the actual celebrity.

Sources and Authority

- "In sum, when an artist is faced with a right of publicity challenge to his or her work, he or she may raise as affirmative defense that the work is protected by the First Amendment inasmuch as it contains significant transformative elements or that the value of the work does not derive primarily from the celebrity's fame." (Comedy III Productions, Inc. v. Gary Saderup, Inc. (2001) 25 Cal.4th 387, 407 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 126, 21 P.3d 797] .)

■ "[C]ourts can often resolve the question as a matter of law simply by viewing the work in question and, if necessary, comparing it to an actual likeness of the person or persons portrayed. Because of these circumstances, an action presenting this issue is often properly resolved on summary judgment or, if the complaint includes the work in question, even demurrer." (Winter v. DC Comics (2003) 30 Cal.4th 881, 891-892 [134 Cal.Rptr.2d 634, 69 P.3d 473] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Although surprisingly few courts have considered in any depth the means of reconciling the right of publicity and the First Amendment, we follow those that have in concluding that depictions of celebrities amounting to little more than the appropriation of the celebrity's economic value are not protected expression under the First Amendment." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 400 .)

■ "Furthermore, in determining whether a work is sufficiently transformative, courts may find useful a subsidiary inquiry, particularly in close cases: does the marketability and economic value of the challenged work derive primarily from the fame of the celebrity depicted? If this question is answered in the negative, then there would generally be no actionable right of publicity. When the value of the work comes principally from some source other than the fame of the celebrity--from the creativity, skill, and reputation of the artist--it may be presumed that sufficient transformative elements are present to warrant First Amendment protection. If the question is answered in the affirmative, however, it does not necessarily follow that the work is without First Amendment protection--it may still be a transformative work." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 407 .)

■ "As the Supreme Court has stated, the central purpose of the inquiry into this fair use factor 'is to see ... whether the new work merely "supersede[s] the objects" of the original creation, or instead adds something new, with a further purpose or different character, altering the first with new expression, meaning, or message; it asks, in other words, whether and to what extent the new work is "transformative." ' " (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 404 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We emphasize that the transformative elements or creative contributions that require First Amendment protection are not confined to parody and can take many forms, from factual reporting to fictionalized portrayal, from heavy-handed lampooning to subtle social criticism." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 406 .)

■ "This 'transformative use' defense poses 'what is essentially a balancing test between the First Amendment and the right of publicity.' " (Hilton v. Hallmark Cards (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 874, 889 .)

■ "The application of the defense, which the California Supreme Court based loosely on the intersection of the First Amendment and copyright liability, depends upon 'whether the celebrity likeness is one of the "raw materials" from which an original work is synthesized, or whether the depiction or imitation of the celebrity is the very sum and substance of the work in question.' In other words, '[w]e ask ... whether a product containing a celebrity's likeness is so transformed that it has become primarily the defendant's own expression rather than the celebrity's likeness. And when we use the word "expression," we mean expression of something other than the likeness of the celebrity.' '[U]nder [this] test,' yet another formulation cautions, 'when an artist's skill and talent is manifestly subordinated to the overall goal of creating a conventional portrait of a celebrity so as to commercially exploit his or her fame, then the artist's right of free expression is outweighed by the right of publicity.' " (Hilton, supra, 580 F.3d at p. 889 , footnote and internal citations omitted.)

■ "The distinction between parody and other forms of literary expression is irrelevant to the Comedy

III transformative test. It does not matter what precise literary category the work falls into. What matters is whether the work is transformative, not whether it is parody or satire or caricature or serious social commentary or any other specific form of expression." (Winter, supra, 30 Cal.4th at p. 891 .)

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1807

CACI 1807 Affirmative Defense--Invasion of Privacy Justified

[Name of defendant] claims that even if [name of plaintiff] has proven all of the above, [his/her/its] conduct was justified. [Name of defendant] must prove that the circumstances justified the invasion of privacy because the invasion of privacy substantially furthered [insert relevant legitimate or compelling competing interest].

If [name of defendant] proves that [his/her/its] conduct was justified, then you must find for [name of defendant] unless [name of plaintiff] proves that there was a practical, effective, and less invasive method of achieving [name of defendant]'s purpose.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008, June 2010

Sources and Authority

- "A defendant may prevail in a state constitutional privacy case by negating any of the three elements just discussed or by pleading and proving, as an affirmative defense, that the invasion of privacy is justified because it substantively furthers one or more countervailing interests. The plaintiff, in turn, may rebut a defendant's assertion of countervailing interests by showing there are feasible and effective alternatives to defendant's conduct which have a lesser impact on privacy interests. Of course, a defendant may also plead and prove other available defenses, e.g., consent, unclean hands, etc., that may be appropriate in view of the nature of the claim and the relief requested." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 40 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .)

- "The existence of a sufficient countervailing interest or an alternative course of conduct present threshold questions of law for the court. The relative strength of countervailing interests and the feasibility of alternatives present mixed questions of law and fact. Again, in cases where material facts are undisputed, adjudication as a matter of law may be appropriate." (Hill, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 40 .)

■ "Hill and its progeny further provide that no constitutional violation occurs, i.e., a 'defense' exists, if the intrusion on privacy is justified by one or more competing interests. For purposes of this balancing function--and except in the rare case in which a 'fundamental' right of personal autonomy is involved--the defendant need not present a 'compelling' countervailing interest; only 'general balancing tests are employed.' To the extent the plaintiff raises the issue in response to a claim or defense of competing interests, the defendant may show that less intrusive alternative means were not reasonably available. A relevant inquiry in this regard is whether the intrusion was limited, such that no confidential information was gathered or disclosed." (Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 272, 288 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Note that whether the countervailing interest needs to be "compelling" or "legitimate" depends on the status of the defendant. "In general, where the privacy violation is alleged against a private entity, the defendant is not required to establish a 'compelling interest' but, rather, one that is 'legitimate' or 'important.' " (Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 402, 440 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 46] .)

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1808

CACI 1808 Stalking (Civ. Code, § 1708.7)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] engaged in a pattern of conduct with the intent to [follow/alarm/harass] [name of plaintiff]. The pattern of conduct must be supported by evidence in addition to [name of plaintiff]'s testimony;
- 2. That as a result of this conduct [name of plaintiff] reasonably feared for [his/her] own safety [or for the safety of an immediate family member]; and
- 3. (a) That, as part of the pattern of conduct, [name of defendant] made a believable threat with the intent to place [name of plaintiff] in reasonable fear for [his/her] safety [or the safety of an immediate family member]; and
 - (b) That [name of plaintiff] clearly demanded at least once that [name of defendant] stop; and
 - (c) That [name of defendant] persisted in [his/her] pattern of conduct;

[or]

That [name of defendant] violated a restraining order prohibiting the pattern of conduct;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

["Harass" means a knowing and willful course of conduct directed at [name of plaintiff] that seriously alarms, annoys, torments, or terrorizes [him/her], and which serves no legitimate purpose. The course of conduct must be such as would cause a reasonable person to suffer substantial emotional distress, and must actually cause substantial emotional distress to [name of plaintiff].

A "pattern of conduct" means a series of words or actions over a period of time, however short, that reflects an ongoing purpose.

Sources and Authority

■ Civil Code section 1708.7 provides:

(a) A person is liable for the tort of stalking when the plaintiff proves all of the following elements of the tort:

(1) The defendant engaged in a pattern of conduct the intent of which was to follow, alarm, or harass the plaintiff. In order to establish this element, the plaintiff shall be required to support his or her allegations with independent corroborating evidence.

(2) As a result of that pattern of conduct, the plaintiff reasonably feared for his or her safety, or the safety of an immediate family member. For purposes of this paragraph, "immediate family" means a spouse, parent, child, any person related by consanguinity or affinity within the second degree, or any person who regularly resides, or, within the six months preceding any portion of the pattern of conduct, regularly resided, in the plaintiff's household.

(3) One of the following:

(A) The defendant, as a part of the pattern of conduct specified in paragraph (1), made a credible threat with the intent to place the plaintiff in reasonable fear for his or her safety, or the safety of an immediate family member and, on at least one occasion, the plaintiff clearly and definitively demanded that the defendant cease and abate his or her pattern of conduct and the defendant persisted in his or her pattern of conduct.

(B) The defendant violated a restraining order, including, but not limited to, any order issued pursuant to Section 527.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, prohibiting any act described in subdivision (a).

(b) For the purposes of this section:

(1) "Pattern of conduct" means conduct composed of a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose. Constitutionally protected activity is not included within the meaning of "pattern of conduct."

(2) "Credible threat" means a verbal or written threat, including that communicated by means of an electronic communication device, or a threat implied by a pattern of conduct or a combination of verbal, written, or electronically communicated statements and conduct, made with the intent and apparent ability to carry out the threat so as to cause the person who is the target of the threat to reasonably fear for his or her safety or the safety of his or her immediate family.

(3) "Electronic communication device" includes, but is not limited to, telephones, cellular telephones, computers, video recorders, fax machines, or pagers. "Electronic communication" has the same meaning as the term defined in Subsection 12 of Section 2510 of Title 18 of the United States Code.

(4) "Harass" means a knowing and willful course of conduct directed at a specific person which seriously alarms, annoys, torments, or terrorizes the person, and which serves no legitimate purpose. The course of conduct must be such as would cause a reasonable person to suffer substantial emotional distress, and must actually cause substantial emotional distress to the person.

(c) A person who commits the tort of stalking upon another is liable to that person for damages, including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages pursuant to Section 3294.

(d) In an action pursuant to this section, the court may grant equitable relief, including, but not limited to, an injunction.

(e) The rights and remedies provided in this section are cumulative and in addition to any other rights and remedies provided by law.

(f) This section shall not be construed to impair any constitutionally protected activity, including, but not limited to, speech, protest, and assembly.

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

Elements 4 and 5 are in brackets because if there is no actual harm, plaintiff can recover the statutory penalty. If plaintiff is seeking actual damages, such damages must be proven along with causation.

■ Penal Code section 632(a) provides: "Every person who, intentionally and without the consent of all parties to a confidential communication, by means of any electronic amplifying or recording device, eavesdrops upon or records the confidential communication, whether the communication is carried on among the parties in the presence of one another or by means of a telegraph, telephone, or other device, except a radio, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500), or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or in the state prison, or by both that fine and imprisonment. If the person has previously been convicted of a violation of this section or Section 631, 632.5, 632.6, 632.7, or 636, the person shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000), by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or in the state prison, or by both that fine and imprisonment."

■ Penal Code section 637.2 provides:

(a) Any person who has been injured by a violation of this chapter may bring an action against the person who committed the violation for the greater of the following amounts:
(1) Five thousand dollars ($5,000).

(2) Three times the amount of actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff.

(b) Any person may, in accordance with Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 525) of Title 7 of Part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, bring an action to enjoin and restrain any violation of this chapter, and may in the same action seek damages as provided by subdivision (a).

(c) It is not a necessary prerequisite to an action pursuant to this section that the plaintiff has suffered, or be threatened with, actual damages.

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1820

CACI 1820 Damages

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that was caused by [name of defendant], even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

- 1. [Mental suffering/anxiety/humiliation/emotional distress;]
- 2. [Harm to reputation and loss of standing in the community;]
- 3. [The commercial value of [name of plaintiff]'s name or likeness;]
- 4. [Insert other applicable item of damage.]

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of damages for [insert item of mental or emotional distress]. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

[To recover for future [insert item of mental or emotional distress], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she] is reasonably certain to suffer that harm.]

New September 2003

This instruction is not intended for cases involving invasion of privacy by false light. Damages for false light are similar to the damages available in defamation (see CACI Nos. 1700 to 1705).

Item 2 will probably not be relevant in all cases. It will have particular application to the aspect of this tort involving the publication of private facts. (See Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 118, 137 [188 Cal.Rptr. 762] .)

Item 3 is intended only for cases involving violation of privacy by appropriation.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 652H provides:

One who has established a cause of action for invasion of his privacy is entitled to recover damages for

(a) the harm to his interest in privacy resulting from the invasion;

(b) his mental distress proved to have been suffered if it is of a kind that normally results from such an invasion; and

(c) special damage of which the invasion is a legal cause.

Note that this Restatement section has not been cited by any published California cases.

■ "Damages recoverable in California for invasion of a privacy right were discussed in detail in Fairfield v. American Photocopy Equipment Co. The Court of Appeal declared that because the interest involved privacy, the damages flowing from its invasion logically would include an award for mental suffering and anguish. Fairfield was an appropriation case, but the principles it laid down concerning damage awards in privacy cases relied on a body of California law which had already recognized violation of the right of privacy as a tort." (Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1484 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The elements of emotional distress damages, i.e., anxiety, embarrassment, humiliation, shame, depression, feelings of powerlessness, anguish, etc., would thus be subjects of legitimate inquiry by a jury in the action before us, taking into account all of the consequences and events which flowed from the actionable wrong." (Miller, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 1485 .)

■ "The actual injury involved herein is not limited to out-of-pocket loss. It generally includes 'impairment of reputation and standing in the community, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering.'" (Diaz, supra, 139 Cal.App.3d at p. 137 , internal citation omitted.)

■ In Time, Inc. v. Hill (1967) 385 U.S. 374, 384, fn. 9 [87 S.Ct. 534, 17 L.Ed.2d 456] , the court stated: "In the 'right of privacy' cases the primary damage is the mental distress from having been exposed to public view, although injury to reputation may be an element bearing upon such damage."

■ "There is a distinction between causes of action for invasion of privacy and defamation with regard to the respective interests protected and compensated by each. The gist of a cause of action in a privacy case is not injury to the character or reputation but a direct wrong of a personal character resulting in injury to the feelings without regard to any effect which the publication may have on the property, business, pecuniary interest, or the standing of the individual in the community. The right of privacy concerns one's own peace of mind, while the right of freedom from defamation concerns primarily one's reputation. The injury is mental and subjective.' " (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1135 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838], internal citations omitted.)

■ "California recognizes the right to profit from the commercial value of one's identity as an aspect of the right of publicity." (Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 409 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "What may have originated as a concern for the right to be left alone has become a tool to control the commercial use and, thus, protect the economic value of one's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness." (KNB Enterprises v. Matthews (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 362, 366 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 713] .)

■ "The first type of appropriation is the right of publicity ... which is 'in essence that the reaction of the public to name and likeness, which may be fortuitous or which may be managed or planned, endows the name and likeness of the person involved with commercially exploitable opportunities.' The other is the appropriation of the name and likeness that brings injury to the feelings, that concerns one's own peace of mind, and that is mental and subjective." (Dora v. Frontline Video, Inc. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 536, 541-542 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 790] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1821

CACI 1821 Damages Under Civil Code Section 3344

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

- 1. Humiliation, embarrassment, and mental distress;
- 2. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; [and]
- 3. [Insert other item(s) of claimed harm].

If [name of plaintiff] has not proved the above damages, or has proved an amount of damages less than $750, then you must award [him/her] $750.

In addition, [name of plaintiff] may recover any profits that [name of defendant] received from the use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] [that have not already been taken into account in computing the above damages]. To establish the amount of such profits you must:

- 1. Determine the gross, or total, revenue that [name of defendant] received from such use;

2. Determine the expenses that [name of defendant] had in obtaining the gross revenue; and

3. Deduct [name of defendant]'s expenses from the gross revenue.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of gross revenue, and [name of defendant] must prove the amount of expenses.

New September 2003

Give the bracketed phrase in the last full paragraph only if profits have been included in the calculation of actual damages.

The advisory committee recognizes some ambiguity in Civil Code section 3344 regarding whether the minimum measure of damages is $750 plus profits or just $750. If the court decides that $750 is to be awarded as an alternative to all other damages, including profits, then the sentence regarding $750 should be moved to the end of the instruction.

■ Civil Code section 3344(a) provides: "Any person who knowingly uses another's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner, on or in products, merchandise, or goods, or for purposes of advertising or selling, or soliciting purchases of, products, merchandise, goods or services, without such person's prior consent, or, in the case of a minor, the prior consent of his parent or legal guardian, shall be liable for any damages sustained by the person or persons injured as a result thereof. In addition, in any action brought under this section, the person who violated the section shall be liable to the injured party or parties in an amount equal to the greater of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750) or the actual damages suffered by him or her as a result of the unauthorized use, and any profits from the unauthorized use that are attributable to the use and are not taken into account in computing the actual damages. In establishing such profits, the injured party or parties are required to present proof only of the gross revenue attributable to such use, and the person who violated this section is required to prove his or her deductible expenses. Punitive damages may also be awarded to the injured party or parties. The prevailing party in any action under this section shall also be entitled to attorney's fees and costs."

■ "[Plaintiff] alleges, and submits evidence to show, that he was injured economically because the ad will make it difficult for him to endorse other automobiles, and emotionally because people may be led to believe he has abandoned his current name and assume he has renounced his religion. These allegations suffice to support his action. Injury to a plaintiff's right of publicity is not limited to present or future economic loss, but 'may induce humiliation, embarrassment, and mental distress.' " (Abdul-Jabbar v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 85 F.3d 407, 416 , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 18 California Judicial Council Right of Privacy Instructions

3-18 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI VF-1802

CACI VF-1802 Privacy--False Light

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] publicize information or material that showed [name of plaintiff] in a false light?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Would a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position consider the false light created by the publication to be highly offensive?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Is there clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] either knew the publication would create a false impression about [name of plaintiff] or acted with reckless disregard for the truth?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1802, False Light.

If the conduct does not involve a matter of public concern, then substitute the following for question number 3: "Was [name of defendant] negligent in determining the truth of the information or whether a false impression would be created by its publication?" If the conduct involved material that is not defamatory on its face, the following question should be added to this form: "Did [name of plaintiff] sustain harm to [his/her] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statements(s)]?"

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Fraud or Deceit Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 1900 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Intentional [CACI No. 1900] and negligent [CACI No. 1903] misrepresentation.
- Concealment [CACI No. 1901] and false promise [CACI No. 1902].
- Opinions as statements of fact [CACI No. 1904].
- Definition of important fact/promise [CACI No. 1905].
- Misrepresentations made to persons other than the plaintiff [CACI No. 1906].
- Reliance [CACI No. 1907] and reasonable reliance [CACI No. 1908].
- Real estate seller's nondisclosure of material facts [CACI No. 1910].
- Damages, including the buyer's damages [CACI Nos. 1920, 1921], the seller's damages [CACI No. 1922], and the "out of pocket" [CACI No. 1923] and "benefit of the bargain" [CACI No. 1924] rules.
- Defense of statute of limitations [CACI Nos. 1925].

The fraud or deceit series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-1900-VF-1903].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Inserting Party Names: The task for the lawyer preparing CACI fraud or deceit instructions, although difficult, is not impossible. For example, CACI Nos. 1900-1903 provide for the insertion of the names of the parties repeatedly. (Specifically, for these four instructions, a jury will hear the plaintiff's name recited 32 times and the defendant's name addressed on 27 occasions.) The Judicial Council appeared to recognize this issue, at least in part, by providing as follows ["Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions"; see MB 100A.02[5]]:

Multiple Parties: Because jurors more easily understand instructions that refer to parties by name rather than by legal terms such as 'plaintiff' and 'defendant,' the instructions provide for insertion of names. For simplicity of presentation, the instructions use single party plaintiffs and defendants as examples. If a case involves multiple parties or cross-complaints and counterclaims, the user will want to modify the instructions. Rather than naming a number of parties in each place calling for names, the user may consider putting the names of all applicable parties in the beginning and thereafter identifying them as 'plaintiffs,' 'defendants,' 'cross-complaints,' etc.

The judge can probably get through the reading of CACI Nos. 1900-1903 without offending his or her constituency. However, the poor jury forced to sit through the tedious repetition of name calling may lose sight of the law they are supposed to apply to the disputed facts. By Joseph Devine

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Judicial Council's Fraud or Deceit Instructions Early On in Your Case: In preparing a witness or party for testimony it is imperative that the attorney use these jury instructions early on. A lot of the CACI Fraud or Deceit instructions have multiple points that must be addressed during the testimony of a witness at trial if one is to prevail. Use of the instructions in the pre-trial preparation is extremely helpful in organizing your witnesses and evidence.

During closing argument, the attorney should go over each of the points listed in the applicable instructions and apply the evidence/testimony facts to each point for the jury. Using a visual aid in the form of a blow up of the applicable instructions is always helpful. This way the jury will already be familiar with the instructions when they retire to deliberate. By Dona Cohn-Payne

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1900

CACI 1900 Intentional Misrepresentation

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] made a false representation that harmed [him/her/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] represented to [name of plaintiff] that an important fact was true;
- 2. That [name of defendant]'s representation was false;
- 3. That [name of defendant] knew that the representation was false when [he/she] made it, or that [he/she] made the representation recklessly and without regard for its truth;
- 4. That [name of defendant] intended that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation;
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s representation;
- 6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 7. That [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/its] harm.

Directions for Use

If it is disputed that a representation was made, the jury should be instructed that "a representation may be made orally, in writing, or by nonverbal conduct."

Sources and Authority

■ "Fraud" and "deceit" are defined in Civil Code sections 1572, 1709, and 1710. Courts appear to refer to the terms interchangeably, though technically "fraud" applies to only contract actions.

■ Civil Code section 1709 defines "deceit" generally: "One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce him to alter his position to his injury or risk, is liable for any damage which he thereby suffers."

■ Civil Code section 1710 specifies four kinds of deceit. This instruction applies to the first:

A deceit, within the meaning of [section 1709], is either:

1. The suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true [intentional misrepresentation of fact];
2. The assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true [negligent misrepresentation of fact];
3. The suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact [concealment or suppression of fact]; or,
4. A promise, made without any intention of performing it [promissory fraud].

■ Civil Code section 1572, dealing specifically with fraud in the making of contracts, restates these definitions in slightly differing language, with the addition of a fifth kind of deceit, described generally as "[a]ny other act fitted to deceive." Fraud in the context of contract formation is covered by other instructions.

■ The tort of deceit or fraud requires: " '(a) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) knowledge of falsity (or 'scienter'); (c) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) justifiable reliance; and (e) resulting damage.' " (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 951, 974 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 938 P.2d 903] , internal quotation marks omitted; see also Molko v. Holy Spirit Ass'n (1988) 46 Cal.3d 1092, 1108 [252 Cal.Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46] .)

■ Sometimes this tort is stated with four elements instead of five: "(1) a knowingly false representation by the defendant; (2) an intent to deceive or induce reliance; (3) justifiable reliance by the plaintiff; and (4) resulting damages." (Service by Medallion, Inc. v. Clorox Co. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 1807, 1816 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 650] .)

■ The representation must ordinarily be an affirmation of fact, as opposed to an opinion. Under the Restatement Second of Torts section 538A, a representation is an opinion "if it expresses only (a) the belief of the maker, without certainty, as to the existence of a fact; or (b) his judgment as to quality, value, authenticity, or other matters of judgment." Opinions are addressed in CACI No. 1904, Opinions as Statements of Fact.

■ "Puffing," or sales talk, is generally considered opinion, unless it involves a representation of product safety. (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 112 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] .)

■ "Fraud is an intentional tort; it is the element of fraudulent intent, or intent to deceive, that distinguishes it from actionable negligent misrepresentation and from nonactionable innocent misrepresentation. It is the element of intent which makes fraud actionable, irrespective of any contractual or fiduciary duty one party might owe to the other." (City of Atascadero v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 445, 482 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 329] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A misrepresentation need not be oral; it may be implied by conduct." (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1567 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[F]alse representations made recklessly and without regard for their truth in order to induce action by another are the equivalent of misrepresentations knowingly and intentionally uttered.' " (Engalla, supra, 15 Cal.4th at p. 974 , quoting Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 50, 55 [30 Cal.Rptr. 629] .)

■ "Actual reliance occurs when a misrepresentation is " 'an immediate cause of [a plaintiff's] conduct, which alters his legal relations,' " and when, absent such representation, " 'he would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction.' " 'It is not ... necessary that [a plaintiff's] reliance upon the truth of the fraudulent misrepresentation be the sole or even the predominant or decisive factor in influencing his conduct. ... It is enough that the representation has played a substantial part, and so has been a substantial factor, in influencing his decision.' " (Engalla, supra, 15 Cal.4th at pp. 976-977 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Justifiable reliance is an essential element of a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation, and the reasonableness of the reliance is ordinarily a question of fact." (Guido v. Koopman (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 837, 843 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 437] internal citations omitted.)

■ "A 'complete causal relationship' between the fraud or deceit and the plaintiff's damages is required. ... Causation requires proof that the defendant's conduct was a " 'substantial factor' " in bringing about the harm to the plaintiff." (Williams v. Wraxall (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 120, 132 [39 Cal.Rptr.2d 658] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In order to recover for fraud, as in any other tort, the plaintiff must plead and prove the 'detriment proximately caused' by the defendant's tortious conduct. Deception without resulting loss is not actionable fraud." (Service by Medallion, Inc., supra, 44 Cal.App.4th at p. 1818 , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Terminology of CACI No. 1900: Although courts sometimes use legal terms interchangeably (e.g., fraud and deceit), be careful as to where your claim fits in the legal sense. New CACI No. 1900 uses the term "important fact" in place of the older term "material fact." Since materiality is often a critical issue in fraud cases, the change in terminology should help clarify this issue for the jury. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1901

CACI 1901 Concealment

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] was harmed because [name of defendant] concealed certain information. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

[1. (a) That [name of defendant] and [name of plaintiff] were [insert type of fiduciary relationship, e.g., "business partners"]; and

(b) That [name of defendant] intentionally failed to disclose an important fact to [name of plaintiff];]

[or]

[1. That [name of defendant] disclosed some facts to [name of plaintiff] but intentionally failed to disclose [other/another] important fact(s), making the disclosure deceptive;]

[or]

[1. That [name of defendant] intentionally failed to disclose an important fact that was known only to [him/her/it] and that [name of plaintiff] could not have discovered;]

[or]

[1. That [name of defendant] actively concealed an important fact from [name of plaintiff] or prevented [him/her/it] from discovering that fact;]

2. That [name of plaintiff] did not know of the concealed fact;

3. That [name of defendant] intended to deceive [name of plaintiff] by concealing the fact;
4. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s deception;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s concealment was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Directions for Use

Under the second, third, and fourth bracketed instructions under element 1, if the defendant asserts that there was no relationship based on a transaction giving rise to a duty to disclose, then the jury should also be instructed to determine whether the requisite relationship existed. Regarding the fourth bracketed instruction, the parties may wish to research whether active concealment alone is sufficient to support a cause of action for fraud in tort or whether it is merely grounds for voiding a contract under Civil Code section 1572. (See Williams v. Graham (1948) 83 Cal.App.2d 649, 652 [189 P.2d 324] .)

Element 2 may be deleted if the third alternative bracketed instruction under element 1 is used.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1710 specifies four kinds of deceit. This instruction is derived from the third kind:

A deceit, within the meaning of [section 1709], is either:

1. The suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true;
2. The assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be;
3. The suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact; or,
4. A promise, made without any intention of performing it.

- "[T]he elements of an action for fraud and deceit based on a concealment are: (1) the defendant must have concealed or suppressed a material fact, (2) the defendant must have been under a duty to disclose the fact to the plaintiff, (3) the defendant must have intentionally concealed or suppressed the fact with the intent to defraud the plaintiff, (4) the plaintiff must have been unaware of the fact and would not have acted as he did if he had known of the concealed or suppressed fact, and (5) as a result of the concealment or suppression of the fact, the plaintiff must have sustained damage." (Marketing West, Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 603, 612-613 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 859] .)

- "There are 'four circumstances in which nondisclosure or concealment may constitute actionable fraud: (1) when the defendant is in a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff; (2) when the defendant had exclusive knowledge of material facts not known to the plaintiff; (3) when the defendant actively conceals a material fact from the plaintiff; and (4) when the defendant makes partial representations but also suppresses some material facts. ... Each of the [three nonfiduciary] circumstances in which nondisclosure may be actionable presupposes the existence of some other relationship between the plaintiff and defendant in which a duty to disclose can arise. ... [P] ... [S]uch a relationship can only come into being as a result of some sort of transaction between the parties. ... Thus, a duty to disclose may arise from the relationship between seller and buyer, employer and prospective employee, doctor and patient, or parties entering into any kind of contractual agreement.' All of these relationships are created by transactions between parties from which a duty to disclose facts material to the transaction arises under certain circumstances." (Limandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 336-337 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539] , internal citations, italics, and footnote omitted.)

■ "Ordinarily, failure to disclose material facts is not actionable fraud unless there is some fiduciary relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose ... [however,] '[t]he duty to disclose may arise without any confidential relationship where the defendant alone has knowledge of material facts which are not accessible to the plaintiff.' " (Magpali v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 471, 482 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 225] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In transactions which do not involve fiduciary or confidential relations, a cause of action for non-disclosure of material facts may arise in at least three instances: (1) the defendant makes representations but does not disclose facts which materially qualify the facts disclosed, or which render his disclosure likely to mislead; (2) the facts are known or accessible only to defendant, and defendant knows they are not known to or reasonably discoverable by the plaintiff; (3) the defendant actively conceals discovery from the plaintiff." (Warner Construction Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 294 [85 Cal.Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996] , footnotes omitted.)

■ "[A]ctive concealment of facts and mere nondisclosure of facts may under certain circumstances be actionable without [a fiduciary or confidential] relationship. For example, a duty to disclose may arise without a confidential or fiduciary relationship where the defendant, a real estate agent or broker, alone has knowledge of material facts which are not accessible to the plaintiff, a buyer of real property." (La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1131, 1151 [261 Cal.Rptr. 146] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Even if a fiduciary relationship is not involved, a non-disclosure claim arises when the defendant makes representations but fails to disclose additional facts which materially qualify the facts disclosed, or which render the disclosure likely to mislead." (Roddenberry v. Roddenberry (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 634, 666 [51 Cal.Rptr.2d 907] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[T]he rule has long been settled in this state that although one may be under no duty to speak as to a matter, "if he undertakes to do so, either voluntarily or in response to inquiries, he is bound not only to state truly what he tells but also not to suppress or conceal any facts within his knowledge which materially qualify those stated. If he speaks at all he must make a full and fair disclosure." ' " (Marketing West, Inc., supra, 6 Cal.App.4th at p. 613 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Contrary to plaintiffs' assertion, it is not logically impossible to prove reliance on an omission. One need only prove that, had the omitted information been disclosed, one would have been aware of it and behaved differently." (Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1093 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568] .)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1710 specifies four kinds of deceit. This instruction is based on the fourth one:

A deceit, within the meaning of [section 1709], is either:

1. The suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true;
2. The assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true;
3. The suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact; or,
4. A promise, made without any intention of performing it.

■ "'Promissory fraud' is a subspecies of fraud and deceit. A promise to do something necessarily implies the intention to perform; hence, where a promise is made without such intention, there is an implied misrepresentation of fact that may be actionable fraud. [P] An action for promissory fraud may lie where a defendant fraudulently induces the plaintiff to enter into a contract.' " (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 951, 973-974 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 938 P.2d 903] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A promise of future conduct is actionable as fraud only if made without a present intent to perform. 'A declaration of intention, although in the nature of a promise, made in good faith, without intention to deceive, and in the honest expectation that it will be fulfilled, even though it is not carried out, does not constitute a fraud.' Moreover, ' "something more than nonperformance is required to prove the defendant's intent not to perform his promise." ... [I]f plaintiff adduces no further evidence of fraudulent intent than proof of nonperformance of an oral promise, he will never reach a jury.' " (Magpali v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 471, 481 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 225] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]n order to support a claim of fraud based upon the alleged failure to perform a promise, it must be shown that the promisor did not intend to perform at the time the promise was made." 3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1903

CACI 1903 Negligent Misrepresentation

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/it] was harmed because [name of defendant] negligently misrepresented an important fact. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] represented to [name of plaintiff] that an important fact was true;
- 2. That [name of defendant]'s representation was not true;
- 3. That [although [name of defendant] may have honestly believed that the representation was true,] [[name of defendant]/he/she] had no reasonable grounds for believing the representation was true when [he/she] made it;
- 4. That [name of defendant] intended that [name of plaintiff] rely on this representation;

- 7. That [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/its] harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

If both negligent misrepresentation and intentional misrepresentation are alleged in the alternative, give both this instruction and CACI No.1900, Intentional Misrepresentation. If only negligent misrepresentation is alleged, the bracketed reference to the defendant's honest belief in the truth of the representation in element 3 may be omitted. (See Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 407-408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] .)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1710 specifies four kinds of deceit. This instruction is based on the second one:

A deceit, within the meaning of [section 1709], is either:

1. The suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true [intentional misrepresentation of fact];
2. The assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true [negligent misrepresentation of fact];
3. The suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact [concealment or suppression of fact]; or,
4. A promise, made without any intention of performing it.

- "Negligent misrepresentation is a separate and distinct tort, a species of the tort of deceit. 'Where the defendant makes false statements, honestly believing that they are true, but without reasonable ground for such belief, he may be liable for negligent misrepresentation, a form of deceit.' " (Bily, supra, 3 Cal.4th at pp. 407 , internal citations omitted.)

- "This is not merely a case where the defendants made false representations of matters within their personal knowledge which they had no reasonable grounds for believing to be true. Such acts clearly would constitute actual fraud under California law. In such situations the defendant believes the representations to be true but is without reasonable grounds for such belief. His liability is based on negligent misrepresentation which has been made a form of actionable deceit. On the contrary, in the instant case, the court found that the defendants did not believe in the truth of the statements. Where a person makes statements which he does not believe to be true, in a reckless manner without knowing whether they are true or false, the element of scienter is satisfied and he is liable for intentional misrepresentation." (Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 50, 57 [30 Cal.Rptr. 629] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "Negligent misrepresentation is a form of deceit, the elements of which consist of (1) a misrepresentation of a past or existing material fact, (2) without reasonable grounds for believing it to be true, (3) with intent to induce another's reliance on the fact misrepresented, (4) ignorance of the truth and justifiable reliance thereon by the party to whom the misrepresentation was directed, and (5) damages." (Fox v. Pollack (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 954, 962 [226 Cal.Rptr. 532] , internal citation omitted.)

- " 'To be actionable deceit, the representation need not be made with knowledge of actual falsity, but need only be an "assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true" and made "with intent to induce [the recipient] to alter his position to his injury or his risk. ...' " The elements of negligent misrepresentation also include justifiable reliance on the representation, and resulting damage." (B.L.M. v. Sabo & Deitsch (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 823, 834 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 335] , internal citations omitted.)

- "As is true of negligence, responsibility for negligent misrepresentation rests upon the existence of a legal duty, imposed by contract, statute or otherwise, owed by a defendant to the injured person. The determination of whether a duty exists is primarily a question of law." (Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 858, 864 [245 Cal.Rptr. 211] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " ' "Where the defendant makes false statements, honestly believing that they are true, but without reasonable ground for such belief, he may be liable for negligent misrepresentation, a form of deceit." ' If defendant's belief 'is both honest and reasonable, the misrepresentation is innocent and there is no tort liability.' " (Diediker v. Peelle Financial Corp. (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 288, 297 [70 Cal.Rptr.2d 442] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Parties cannot read something into a neutral statement in order to justify a claim for negligent misrepresentation. The tort requires a 'positive assertion.' 'An "implied" assertion or representation is not enough.' " (Diediker, supra, 60 Cal.App.4th at pp. 297-298 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Whether a defendant had reasonable ground for believing his or her false statement to be true is ordinarily a question of fact." (Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1687, 1696 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 592] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1904

CACI 1904 Opinions as Statements of Fact

Ordinarily, an opinion is not considered a representation of fact. An opinion is a person's belief that a fact exists, a statement regarding a future event, or a judgment about quality, value, authenticity, or similar matters. However, [name of defendant]'s opinion is considered a representation of fact if [name of plaintiff] proves that:

[[Name of defendant] claimed to have special knowledge about the subject matter that [name of plaintiff] did not have;] [or]

[[Name of defendant] made a representation, not as a casual expression of belief, but in a way that declared the matter to be true;] [or]

[[Name of defendant] had a relationship of trust and confidence with [name of plaintiff];] [or]

[[Name of defendant] had some other special reason to expect that [name of plaintiff] would rely on his or her opinion.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2004

This is not a stand-alone instruction. It should be read in conjunction with one of the elements instructions (CACI Nos. 1900-1903).

The second bracketed option appears to be limited to cases involving professional opinions. (Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] .)

Alternative bracketed options that do not apply to the facts of the case may be deleted.

■ Restatement of Torts, section 542 states:

The recipient of a fraudulent misrepresentation solely of the maker's opinion is not justified in relying upon it in a transaction with the maker, unless the fact to which the opinion relates is material, and the maker

(a) purports to have special knowledge of the matter that the recipient does not have, or

(b) stands in a fiduciary or other similar relation of trust and confidence to the recipient, or

(c) has successfully endeavored to secure the confidence of the recipient, or

(d) has some other special reason to expect that the recipient will rely on his opinion.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 538A states: "A representation is one of opinion if it expresses only (a) the belief of the maker, without certainty, as to the existence of a fact; or (b) his judgment as to quality, value, authenticity, or other matters of judgment."

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 539 states:

(1) A statement of opinion as to facts not disclosed and not otherwise known to the recipient may, if it is reasonable to do so, be interpreted by him as an implied statement

(a) that the facts known to the maker are not incompatible with his opinion; or

(b) that he knows facts sufficient to justify him in forming it.

(2) In determining whether a statement of opinion may reasonably be so interpreted, the recipient's belief as to whether the maker has an adverse interest is important.

■ "Generally, actionable misrepresentation must be one of existing fact; 'predictions as to future events, or statements as to future action by some third party, are deemed opinions, and not actionable fraud' But there are exceptions to this rule: '(1) where a party holds himself out to be specially qualified and the other party is so situated that he may reasonably rely upon the former's superior knowledge; (2) where the opinion is by a fiduciary or other trusted person; [and,] (3) where a party states his opinion as an existing fact or as implying facts which justify a belief in the truth of the opinion.' " (Cohen v. S&S Construction Co. (1983) 151 Cal.App.3d 941, 946 [201 Cal.Rptr. 173] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A statement couched as an opinion, by one having special knowledge of the subject, may be treated as an actionable misstatement of fact. Whether a statement is nonactionable opinion or actionable misrepresentation of fact is a question of fact for the jury." (Furla v. Jon Douglas Co. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1069, 1080-1081 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 911] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Puffing," or sales talk, is generally considered opinion, unless it involves a representation that a product is safe. (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] ; see also Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 388, 424 [264 Cal.Rptr. 779] .)

■ "Under certain circumstances, expressions of professional opinion are treated as representations of fact. When a statement, although in the form of an opinion, is 'not a casual expression of belief' but 'a deliberate affirmation of the matters stated,' it may be regarded as a positive assertion of fact. Moreover, when a party possesses or holds itself out as possessing superior knowledge or special information or expertise regarding the subject matter and a plaintiff is so situated that it may reasonably rely on such supposed knowledge, information, or expertise, the defendant's representation may be treated as one of material fact." LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Statements of Fact vs. Opinion: In some situations, it may be difficult deciding whether the statement was one of fact or opinion. Statements of opinion cause more difficulties for the plaintiff. Sometimes that can be avoided by presenting the case in a certain way. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Special Reason" for Relying on Opinion: The instruction that an opinion may be considered a representation of fact, if there was a "special reason" for plaintiff to rely on the opinion, requires special care. Be sure that the "special reason" is legally recognized as a valid basis for making a statement of opinion actionable. By Ronald Oster

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1905

CACI 1905 Definition of Important Fact/Promise

A [fact/promise] is important if it would influence a reasonable person's judgment or conduct. A [fact/promise] is also important if the person who [represents/makes] it knows that the person to whom the [representation/promise] is made is likely to be influenced by it even if a reasonable person would not.

New September 2003

■ "According to the Restatement of Torts, '[r]eliance upon a fraudulent misrepresentation is not justifiable unless the matter misrepresented is material. ... The matter is material if ... a reasonable [person] would attach importance to its existence or nonexistence in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question' But materiality is a jury question, and a 'court may [only] withdraw the case from the jury if the fact misrepresented is so obviously unimportant that the jury could not reasonably find that a reasonable man would have been influenced by it.' " (Charpentier v. Los Angeles Rams (1999) 75 Cal.App.4th 301, 312-313 [89 Cal.Rptr.2d 115] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Viewed in terms of materiality, '[a] false representation which cannot possibly affect the intrinsic merits of a business transaction must necessarily be immaterial because reliance upon it could not produce injury in a legal sense.' " (Service by Medallion, Inc. v. Clorox Co. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 1807, 1818 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 650] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A misrepresentation of fact is material if it induced the plaintiff to alter his position to his detriment. Stated in terms of reliance, materiality means that without the misrepresentation, the plaintiff would not have acted as he did. 'It must be shown that the plaintiff actually relied upon the misrepresentation; i.e., that the representation was "an immediate cause of his conduct which alters his legal relations," and that without such representation, "he would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction." ' ' ' (Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 805, 828 [250 Cal.Rptr. 220] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1906

CACI 1906 Misrepresentations Made to Persons Other Than the Plaintiff

[Name of defendant] is responsible for a representation that was not made directly to [name of plaintiff] if [he/she/it] made the representation [to a group of persons including [name of plaintiff]] [or] [to another person, intending or reasonably expecting that it would be repeated to [name of plaintiff]].

New September 2003

An instruction on concealment made to a person other than the plaintiff is not necessary; this point is covered by the third option of element 1 in CACI No. 1901, Concealment.

■ Civil Code section 1711 provides: "One who practices a deceit with intent to defraud the public, or a particular class of persons, is deemed to have intended to defraud every individual in that class, who is actually misled by the deceit."

■ "It is true that in order for a defendant to be liable for fraud, he or she must intend that a particular representation (or concealment) be relied upon by a specific person or persons. However, it is also established that a defendant cannot escape liability if he or she makes a representation to one person while intending or having reason to expect that it will be repeated to and acted upon by the plaintiff (or someone in the class of persons of which plaintiff is a member). This is the principle of indirect deception described in section 533 of the Restatement Second of Torts (section 533): 'The maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation is subject to liability for pecuniary loss to another who acts in justifiable reliance upon it if the misrepresentation, although not made directly to the other, is made to a third person and the maker intends or has reason to expect that its terms will be repeated or its substance communicated to the other, and that it will influence his conduct in the transaction or type of transaction involved.' Comment d to section 533 makes it clear the rule of section 533 applies where the maker of the misrepresentation has information that gives him special reason to expect that the information will be communicated to others and will influence their conduct. Comment g goes on to explain that it is not necessary that the maker of the misrepresentation have the particular person in mind. It is enough that it is intended to be repeated to a particular class of persons." (Shapiro v. Sutherland (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 1534, 1548 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 101] , internal citations omitted; see also Geernaert v. Mitchell (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 601, 605-606 [37 Cal.Rptr.2d 483] .)

[Name of plaintiff] relied on [name of defendant]'s [misrepresentation/concealment] if it caused [him/her/it] to [insert brief description of the action, e.g., "buy the house"], and if [he/she/it] would probably not have done so without such [misrepresentation/concealment].

It is not necessary for a [misrepresentation/concealment] to be the only reason for [name of plaintiff]'s conduct. It is enough if a [misrepresentation/concealment] substantially influenced [name of plaintiff]'s choice, even if it was not the only reason for [his/her/its] conduct.

New September 2003

■ "It is settled that a plaintiff, to state a cause of action for deceit based on a misrepresentation, must plead that he or she actually relied on the misrepresentation." (Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1088 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Reliance exists when the misrepresentation or nondisclosure was an immediate cause of the plaintiff's conduct which altered his or her legal relations, and when without such misrepresentation or nondisclosure he or she would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction. 'Except in the rare case where the undisputed facts leave no room for a reasonable difference of opinion, the question of whether the plaintiff's reliance is reasonable is a question of fact.' " (Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1239 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In establishing the reliance element of a cause of action for fraud, it is settled that the alleged fraud need not be the sole cause of a party's reliance. Instead, reliance may be established on the basis of circumstantial evidence showing the alleged fraudulent misrepresentation or concealment substantially influenced the party's choice, even though other influences may have operated as well." (Sangster v. Paetkau (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 151, 170 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 66] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] presumption, or at least an inference, of reliance arises wherever there is a showing that a misrepresentation was material. A misrepresentation is judged to be 'material' if 'a reasonable man would attach importance to its existence or nonexistence in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question' and as such, materiality is generally a question of fact unless the 'fact misrepresented is so obviously unimportant that the jury could not reasonably find that a reasonable man would have been influenced by it.' CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

CACI 1908 Reasonable Reliance

You must determine the reasonableness of [name of plaintiff]'s reliance by taking into account [his/her] mental capacity, knowledge, and experience.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004

This instruction is appropriate for cases in which evidence of the plaintiff's greater or lesser personal knowledge, education, experience, or capacity has been introduced. Trial of class actions may require a different instruction. (See Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal.3d 800, 814 n. 9 [94 Cal.Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964] ; see also Wilner v. Sunset Life Insurance Co. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 952, 963 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 413] .)

- "Whether reliance is justified is a question of fact for the determination of the trial court; the issue is whether the person who claims reliance was justified in believing the representation in the light of his own knowledge and experience." (Gray v. Don Miller & Associates, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 498, 503 [198 Cal.Rptr. 551, 674 P.2d 253] , internal citations omitted.)

- The "leading case" (see Blankenheim v. E.F. Hutton, Co., Inc. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1474 [266 Cal.Rptr. 593]) on justifiable reliance states: "[N]or is a plaintiff held to the standard of precaution or of minimum knowledge of a hypothetical, reasonable man. Exceptionally gullible or ignorant people have been permitted to recover from defendants who took advantage of them in circumstances where persons of normal intelligence would not have been misled. 'No rogue should enjoy his ill-gotten plunder for the simple reason that his victim is by chance a fool.' If the conduct of the plaintiff in the light of his own intelligence and information was manifestly unreasonable, however, he will be denied a recovery.

'He may not put faith in representations which are preposterous, or which are shown by facts within his observation to be so patently and obviously false that he must have closed his eyes to avoid discovery of the truth.' " (Quoting Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal.2d 409, 415 [115 P.2d 977] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Except in the rare case where the undisputed facts leave no room for a reasonable difference of opinion, the question of whether a plaintiff's reliance is reasonable is a question of fact. 'What would constitute fraud in a given instance might not be fraudulent when exercised toward another person. The test of the representation is its actual effect on the particular mind' " (Blankenheim, supra, 217 Cal.App.3d at p. 1475 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[Plaintiff]'s deposition testimony on which appellants rely also reveals that she is a practicing attorney and uses releases in her practice. In essence, she is asking this court to rule that a practicing attorney can rely on the advice of an equestrian instructor as to the validity of a written release of liability that she executed without reading. In determining whether one can reasonably or justifiably rely on an alleged misrepresentation, the knowledge, education and experience of the person claiming reliance must be considered. Under these circumstances, we conclude as a matter of law that any such reliance was not reasonable." (Guido v. Koopman (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 837, 843-844 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 437] , internal citations omitted.)

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1910

CACI 1910 Real Estate Seller's Nondisclosure of Material Facts

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to disclose certain information, and that because of this failure to disclose, [name of plaintiff] was harmed. In order to establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] purchased [describe real property] from [name of defendant];
- 2. That [name of defendant] knew that [specify information that was not disclosed];
- 3. That [name of defendant] did not disclose this information to [name of plaintiff];
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] did not know, and could not reasonably have discovered, this information;
- 5. That [name of defendant] knew that [name of plaintiff] did not know, and could not reasonably have discovered, this information;
- 6. That this information significantly affected the value or desirability of the property;
- 7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 8. That [name of defendant]'s failure to disclose the information was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the common law duty of disclosure that a real estate seller has to his or her buyer. Nondisclosure is tantamount to a misrepresentation. (See Calemine v. Samuelson (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 153, 161 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 495] .)

For certain transfers, there is also a statutory duty of disclosure. (See Civ. Code, § 1102 et seq.) The scope of the required disclosure is set forth on a statutory form. (See Civ. Code, § 1102.6.) The common law duty is not preempted by the statutory duty (see Civ. Code, § 1102.1(a)), but breach of the statutory duty can constitute proof of breach of the common law duty if all of the elements are established. (See, e.g., Calemine, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at pp. 164-165 [seller did not disclose earlier lawsuits, as required by statutory form].)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 1102.13 provides: "No transfer subject to this article shall be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with any provision of this article. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by any provision of this article shall be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee."

- "A real estate seller has both a common law and statutory duty of disclosure. [Under the common law duty]: 'In the context of a real estate transaction, " ... where the seller knows of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property ... and also knows that such facts are not known to, or within the reach of the diligent attention and observation of the buyer, the seller is under a duty to disclose them to the buyer. [Citations.]' [Citations.] Undisclosed facts are material if they would have a significant and measurable effect on market value. [Citation.]' A seller's duty of disclosure is limited to material facts; once the essential facts are disclosed a seller is not under a duty to provide details that would merely serve to elaborate on the disclosed facts. Where a seller fails to disclose a material fact, he may be subject to liability 'for mere nondisclosure since his conduct in the transaction amounts to a representation of the nonexistence of the facts which he has failed to disclose [citation].' Generally, whether the undisclosed matter was of sufficient materiality to have affected the value or desirability of the property is a question of fact." (Calemine, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at p. 161 , internal citations omitted.)

- "Generally, where one party to a transaction has sole knowledge or access to material facts and knows that such facts are not known or reasonably discoverable by the other party, then a duty to disclose exists." (See Shapiro v. Sutherland (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 1534, 1544 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 101] .)

- "Failure of the seller to fulfill [the] duty of disclosure constitutes actual fraud." (Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal.App.2d 729, 736 [29 Cal.Rptr. 201] .)

- "When and where the action by the purchaser is based on conditions that are visible and that a personal inspection at once discloses and, when it is admitted that such personal inspection was in fact made, then manifestly it cannot be successfully contended that the purchaser relied upon any alleged misrepresentations with regard to such visible conditions. But personal inspection is no defense when and where the conditions are not visible and are known only to the seller, and 'where material facts are accessible to the vendor only and he knows them not to be within the reach of the diligent attention and observation of the vendee, the vendor is bound to disclose such facts to the vendee.' " (Buist v. C. Dudley De Velbiss Corp. (1960) 182 Cal.App.2d 325, 331 [6 Cal.Rptr. 259] .)

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1910

■ "In enacting [Civil Code section 1102 et seq.], the Legislature made clear it did not intend to alter a seller's common law duty of disclosure. The purpose of the enactment was instead to make the required disclosures specific and clear. (Calemine, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at pp. 161-162 .)

■ "The legislation was sponsored by the California Association of Realtors to provide a framework for formal disclosure of facts relevant to a decision to purchase realty. The statute therefore confirms and perhaps clarifies a disclosure obligation that existed previously at common law." (Shapiro, supra, 64 Cal.App.4th at p. 1539, fn. 6 .)

CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1920

CACI 1920 Buyer's Damages for Purchase or Acquisition of Property

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

- 1. The difference between [the amount that [name of plaintiff] paid] [or] [the fair market value of what [name of plaintiff] exchanged for the property] and the fair market value of the property at the time of sale;
 - 2. Amounts that [name of plaintiff] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent in the purchase or acquisition of the property; [and]
 - 3. [Insert additional harm arising from the transaction] to the extent that [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] was a substantial factor in causing that [insert additional harm arising from the transaction]; [and]
 - 4. [Lost profits [or other gains].]

New September 2003

For an instruction on damages for loss of use, see CACI No. 3903G, Loss of Use of Real Property (Economic Damage).

The first element of this instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145-146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802].)

■ Civil Code section 3343 provides:

(a) One defrauded in the purchase, sale or exchange of property is entitled to recover the difference between the actual value of that with which the defrauded person parted and the actual value of that which he received, together with any additional damage arising from the particular transaction, including any of the following:

(1) Amounts actually and reasonably expended in reliance upon the fraud.

(2) An amount which would compensate the defrauded party for loss of use and enjoyment of the property to the extent that any such loss was proximately caused by the fraud.

(3) Where the defrauded party has been induced by reason of the fraud to sell or otherwise part with the property in question, an amount which will compensate him for profits or other gains which might reasonably have been earned by use of the property had he retained it.

(4) Where the defrauded party has been induced by reason of the fraud to purchase or otherwise acquire the property in question, an amount which will compensate him for any loss of profits or other gains which were reasonably anticipated and would have been earned by him from the use or sale of the property had it possessed the characteristics fraudulently attributed to it by the party committing the fraud, provided that lost profits from the use or sale of the property shall be recoverable only if and only to the extent that all of the following apply:

(i) The defrauded party acquired the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for a profit.

(ii) The defrauded party reasonably relied on the fraud in entering into the transaction and in anticipating profits from the subsequent use or sale of the property.

(iii) Any loss of profits for which damages are sought under this paragraph have been proximately caused by the fraud and the defrauded party's reliance on it.

(b) Nothing in this section shall do either of the following:

(1) Permit the defrauded person to recover any amount measured by the difference between the value of property as represented and the actual value thereof.

(2) Deny to any person having a cause of action for fraud or deceit any legal or equitable remedies to which such person may be entitled.

■ "As they apply to damages for fraud, subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) of section 3343 are limited to recovery of damages by sellers of real property, while subdivision (a)(4) deals with purchasers of real property." (Channell v. Anthony (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 290, 309 [129 Cal.Rptr. 704] , footnote omitted.)

■ "Before 1935 the California courts had no statutory mandate on the measure of damages for fraud. CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1921

CACI 1921 Buyer's Damages for Purchase or Acquisition of Property--Lost Profits

[Name of plaintiff] may recover damages for profits [or other gains] [he/she/it] would have made if the property had been as represented. [Name of plaintiff] can recover these profits [or other gains] only if [he/she/it] has proved all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] acquired the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for a [profit/gain];
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] in entering into the transaction and in anticipating [profits/gains] from the use or sale of the property; and
- 3. That [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] and [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on it were both substantial factors in causing the lost profits.

You do not have to calculate the amount of the lost profits with mathematical precision, but there must be a reasonable basis for computing the loss.

New September 2003

This instruction should be read immediately after CACI No. 1920, Buyer's Damages for Purchase or Acquisition of Property, if the plaintiff is claiming lost profits.

■ Civil Code section 3343(a)(4) provides:

Where the defrauded party has been induced by reason of the fraud to purchase or otherwise acquire the property in question, an amount which will compensate him for any loss of profits or other gains which were reasonably anticipated and would have been earned by him from the use or sale of the property had it possessed the characteristics fraudulently attributed to it by the party committing the fraud, provided that lost profits from the use or sale of the property shall be recoverable only if and only to the extent that all of the following apply:

(i) The defrauded party acquired the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for a profit.

(ii) The defrauded party reasonably relied on the fraud in entering into the transaction and in anticipating profits from the subsequent use or sale of the property.

(iii) Any loss of profits for which damages are sought under this paragraph have been proximately caused by the fraud and the defrauded party's reliance on it.

■ "With glaring inconsistency, California's statutory structure before 1971 permitted recovery of lost profits and earnings under Civil Code section 3333 in fraud cases which did not concern the 'purchase, sale or exchange of property,' and even in simple negligence cases and breach of contract cases the injured parties could recover lost profits and earnings, while the 'out of pocket' rule barred the fraud victim in property transaction cases from recovering more than the difference between the amount he paid for the property and its actual value." (Channell v. Anthony (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 290, 312 [129 Cal.Rptr. 704] , internal citations and footnote omitted.)

■ "The Legislature removed all doubt concerning the recovery of loss of profits resulting from the fraudulently induced property acquisition. Clearly and specifically, lost profits proximately caused are recoverable. The cases cited, the arguments made concerning Civil Code section 3343 limitations are simply not relevant to post-1971 proceedings, where profits are the claimed loss. Civil Code section 3343 as amended, in so many words, authorizes recovery of lost profits." (Hartman v. Shell Oil Co. (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 240, 247 [137 Cal.Rptr. 244] .)

CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1922

CACI 1922 Seller's Damages for Sale or Exchange of Property

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

- 1. The difference between the fair market value of the property at the time of sale and [the amount that [name of plaintiff] received] [or] [the fair market value of what [name of plaintiff] received in exchange for the property];
- 2. Amounts that [name of plaintiff] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent in the sale or exchange of the property;
- 3. Loss of use and enjoyment of the property from [insert beginning date] to [insert end date], to the extent that [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] was a substantial factor in causing that loss of use and enjoyment of the property;
- 4. Profits or other gains from [insert beginning date] to [insert end date], that [name of plaintiff] might reasonably have earned by use of the property if [he/she] had kept it; and

5. Any additional damage arising from the particular transaction.

New September 2003

This instruction should be tailored to fit the facts and evidence in the particular case: "If the seller parts with title and elects to forego his right of rescission and sue for damages only, then of course subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) of section 3343 do not apply and should not be given by the trial court (unless, as here, the contract itself creates such rights). In each case in which a seller of property is defrauded by a buyer, the trial court will have to examine the circumstances of the particular case and decide whether the questioned portions of section 3343 do or do not apply." (Channell v. Anthony (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 290, 317 [129 Cal.Rptr. 704] .)

The first element of this instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145-146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802].)

For an instruction on lost profits, see CACI No. 3903N, Lost Profits (Economic Damage).

■ Civil Code section 3343 provides:

(a) One defrauded in the purchase, sale or exchange of property is entitled to recover the difference between the actual value of that with which the defrauded person parted and the actual value of that which he received, together with any additional damage arising from the particular transaction, including any of the following:

(1) Amounts actually and reasonably expended in reliance upon the fraud.

(2) An amount which would compensate the defrauded party for loss of use and enjoyment of the property to the extent that any such loss was proximately caused by the fraud.

(3) Where the defrauded party has been induced by reason of the fraud to sell or otherwise part with the property in question, an amount which will compensate him for profits or other gains which might reasonably have been earned by use of the property had he retained it.

(4) Where the defrauded party has been induced by reason of the fraud to purchase or otherwise acquire the property in question, an amount which will compensate him for any loss of profits or other gains which were reasonably anticipated and would have been earned by him from the use or sale of the property had it possessed the characteristics fraudulently attributed to it by the party committing the fraud, provided that lost profits from the use or sale of the property shall be recoverable only if and only to the extent that all of the following apply:

(i) The defrauded party acquired the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for a profit.

(ii) The defrauded party reasonably relied on the fraud in entering into the transaction and in anticipating profits from the subsequent use or sale of the property.

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1922

(iii) Any loss of profits for which damages are sought under this paragraph have been proximately caused by the fraud and the defrauded party's reliance on it.

(b) Nothing in this section shall do either of the following:

(1) Permit the defrauded person to recover any amount measured by the difference between the value of property as represented and the actual value thereof.

(2) Deny to any person having a cause of action for fraud or deceit any legal or equitable remedies to which such person may be entitled.

■ "As they apply to damages for fraud, subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) of section 3343 are limited to recovery of damages by sellers of real property, while subdivision (a)(4) deals with purchasers of real property." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 309 , footnote omitted.)

■ "Before 1935 the California courts had no statutory mandate on the measure of damages for fraud. (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 312 , internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1923

CACI 1923 Damages--"Out of Pocket" Rule

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that [name of defendant] was a substantial factor in causing, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

To decide the amount of damages you must determine the [fair market] value of what [name of plaintiff] gave and subtract from that amount the [fair market] value of what [he/she/it] received.

["Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid on the date of the transaction to a willing seller, assuming:

- 1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
- 2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the [insert item] is reasonably capable of being used.]

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover amounts that [he/she/it] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/false promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent.

- Civil Code section 1709 provides: "One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce him to alter his position to his injury or risk, is liable for any damage which he thereby suffers."

- Civil Code section 3333 provides: "For the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, the measure of damages, except where otherwise expressly provided by this code, is the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not."

- Civil Code section 3343 provides, in part: "One defrauded in the purchase, sale or exchange of property is entitled to recover the difference between the actual value of that with which the defrauded person parted and the actual value of that which he received"

- This instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145-146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802] .)

- "There are two measures of damages for fraud: out of pocket and benefit of the bargain. The 'out-of-pocket' measure of damages 'is directed to restoring the plaintiff to the financial position enjoyed by him prior to the fraudulent transaction, and thus awards the difference in actual value at the time of the transaction between what the plaintiff gave and what he received. The "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure, on the other hand, is concerned with satisfying the expectancy interest of the defrauded plaintiff by putting him in the position he would have enjoyed if the false representation relied upon had been true; it awards the difference in value between what the plaintiff actually received and what he was fraudulently led to believe he would receive.' 'In California, a defrauded party is ordinarily limited to recovering his "out-of-pocket" loss'" (Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Of the two measures the 'out-of-pocket' rule has been termed more consistent with the logic and purpose of the tort form of action (i.e., compensation for loss sustained rather than satisfaction of contractual expectations) while the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule has been observed to be a more effective deterrent (in that it contemplates an award even when the property received has a value equal to what was given for it)." (Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal.3d 718, 725 [150 Cal.Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228] .)

- "In fraud cases involving the 'purchase, sale or exchange of property,' the Legislature has expressly provided that the 'out-of-pocket' rather than the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' measure of damages should apply. Civil Code section 3343 provides the exclusive measure of damages for fraud in such cases." (Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 229, 236 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 616] .)

■ "Civil Code section 3343 does not apply, however, 'when a victim is defrauded by its fiduciaries.' Instead, in the case of fraud by a fiduciary, 'the "broader" measure of damages provided by sections 1709 and 3333 applies.' ... [P] In the case of a negligent misrepresentation by a fiduciary, 'a plaintiff is only entitled to its actual or "out-of-pocket" losses suffered because of [the] fiduciary's negligent misrepresentation under section 3333.' [P] The Supreme Court has not decided whether 'the measure of damages under section 3333 might be greater for a fiduciary's intentional misrepresentation' " (Fragale, supra, 110 Cal.App.4th at pp. 236-237 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "We have previously held that a plaintiff is only entitled to its actual or 'out-of-pocket' losses suffered because of fiduciary's negligent misrepresentation under section 3333. While the measure of damages under section 3333 might be greater for a fiduciary's intentional misrepresentation, we need not address that issue here." (Alliance Mortgage Co., supra, 10 Cal.4th at pp. 1249-1250 .)

■ "To recover damages for fraud, a plaintiff must have sustained damages proximately caused by the misrepresentation. A damage award for fraud will be reversed where the injury is not related to the misrepresentation." (*Las Palmas Associates v. CHAPTER 19 California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions

CACI 1924 Damages--"Benefit of the Bargain" Rule

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that [name of defendant] was a substantial factor in causing, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

To determine the amount of damages, you must:

- 1. Determine the fair market value that [name of plaintiff] would have received if the representations made by [name of defendant] had been true; and
- 2. Subtract the fair market value of what [he/she/it] did receive.

The resulting amount is [name of plaintiff]'s damages. "Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid to a willing seller, assuming:

- 1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
- 2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the [insert item] is reasonably capable of being used.

Fair market value must be determined as of the date that [name of plaintiff] discovered [name of defendant]'s [false representation/ failure to disclose].

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover amounts that [he/she/it] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/false promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

There is a split of authority regarding whether benefit-of-the-bargain damages can ever be recovered for intentional misrepresentation in the sale or exchange of property. It is settled that in a nonfiduciary relationship, damages are limited to the out-of-pocket measure, even if the misrepresentation is intentional. (See Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601] ; Civ. Code, § 3343.) However, there is disagreement on the proper measure if there is a fiduciary relationship.

Some courts have held that benefit-of-the-bargain damages are available if there is both a fiduciary relationship and intentional misrepresentation. (See Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 229, 235-239 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 616] ; Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 564 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463] ; see also Alfaro v. Community Housing Improvement System & Planning Assn., Inc. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 1356, 1383 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 659] .) At least one court has held to the contrary, that only out-of-pocket losses may be recovered. (See Hensley v. McSweeney (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1081, 1086 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 489] .)

This instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145-146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802] .)

- Civil Code section 1709 provides: "One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce him to alter his position to his injury or risk, is liable for any damage which he thereby suffers."

- Civil Code section 3333 provides: "For the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, the measure of damages, except where otherwise expressly provided by this code, is the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not."

- "There are two measures of damages for fraud: out of pocket and benefit of the bargain. The 'out-of-pocket' measure of damages 'is directed to restoring the plaintiff to the financial position enjoyed by him prior to the fraudulent transaction, and thus awards the difference in actual value at the time of the transaction between what the plaintiff gave and what he received. The "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure, on the other hand, is concerned with satisfying the expectancy interest of the defrauded plaintiff by putting him in the position he would have enjoyed if the false representation relied upon had been true; it awards the difference in value between what the plaintiff actually received and what he was fraudulently led to believe he would receive.' 'In California, a defrauded party is ordinarily limited to recovering his "out-of-pocket" loss' " (Alliance Mortgage Co. supra, 10 Cal.4th at p. 1240 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Of the two measures the 'out-of-pocket' rule has been termed more consistent with the logic and purpose of the tort form of action (i.e., compensation for loss sustained rather than satisfaction of contractual expectations) while the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule has been observed to be a more effective deterrent (in that it contemplates an award even when the property received has a value equal to what was given for it.)" (Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal.3d 718, 725 [150 Cal.Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228] .)

■ "We have previously held that a plaintiff is only entitled to its actual or 'out-of-pocket' losses suffered because of fiduciary's negligent misrepresentation under section 3333. While the measure of damages under section 3333 might be greater for a fiduciary's intentional misrepresentation, we need not address that issue here." (Alliance Mortgage Co., supra, 10 Cal.4th at pp. 1249-1250 .)

■ "The measure of damages for a real estate broker's intentional misrepresentation to a buyer for whom he acts as agent is not limited to the out-of-pocket losses suffered by the buyer. Because the broker is a fiduciary, damages for intentional fraud may be measured by the broader benefit-of-the-bargain rule." (Fragale, supra, 110 Cal.App.4th at p. 232 .)

■ "[T]he measure of damages for fraud by a fiduciary is out-of-pocket damages, not the benefit of the bargain computation normally applicable to contract causes of action." (Hensley, supra, 90 Cal.App.4th at p. 1085 .)

■ "Recognizing a split of authority on the matter, we follow those cases adopting the broader measure of damages under sections 1709 and 3333, a course that is not only consonant with the position we have taken in the past but just. This division has consistently applied the broader measure of damages for fiduciary fraud, refusing to limit damages to the 'out of pocket' measure." (Salahutdin, supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at pp. 566-567 .)

■ "Unlike the 'out of pocket' measure of damages, which are usually calculated at the time of the transaction, 'benefit of the bargain' damages may appropriately be calculated as of the date of discovery of the fraud." (Salahutdin, supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 568 .)

■ "To recover damages for fraud, a plaintiff must have sustained damages proximately caused by the misrepresentation. A damage award for fraud will be reversed where the injury is not related to the misrepresentation." (*Las Palmas Associates v. LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Arguing Benefit of Bargain

Damages: "Benefit of the bargain" is a difficult concept for some judges and attorneys. Imagine then the reaction of jurors. Further, note the split of authority discussed above as to whether "benefit of the bargain" damages are even appropriate. Hence, be careful in explaining and arguing these types of damages. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

CACI 1925 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitation--Fraud or Mistake

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing].

[If [name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing], [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was still filed on time if [name of plaintiff] proves that before that date, [he/she/it] did not discover facts constituting the fraud or mistake, and with reasonable diligence could not have discovered those facts.]

New April 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action was not filed within the applicable three-year period for fraud or mistake. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 338(d).) Include the second paragraph if the plaintiff alleges that the delayed-discovery rule applies to avoid the limitation defense. The plaintiff bears the burden of pleading and proving delayed discovery. (See E-Fab, Inc. v. Accountants, Inc. Services (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 1308, 1319 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 9] [regardless of which limitation statute applied to case, burden was on plaintiff].)

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 338 provides in part:

3-19 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 1925

Within three years:

(d) An action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake. The cause of action in that case is not deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.

■ The three-year statute of limitations of Code of Civil Procedure section 338, subdivision (d) does not begin to run until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake. (Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 671, 701 [148 Cal.Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920] .)

■ "The discovery rule 'may be expressed by the Legislature or implied by the courts.' By statute, the discovery rule applies to fraud actions. (Code Civ. Proc., § 338, subd. (d).) In addition, 'judicial decisions have declared the discovery rule applicable in situations where the plaintiff is unable to see or appreciate a breach has occurred.' " (E-Fab, Inc., supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 1318 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Code of Civil Procedure section 338, subdivision (d), effectively codifies the delayed discovery rule in connection with actions for fraud, providing that a cause of action for fraud 'is not to be deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.' In a case such as this, that date is the date the complaining party learns, or at least is put on notice, that a representation was false." (Brandon G. v. Gray (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 29, 35 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 330] .)

■ "Case law has interpreted this accrual provision to mean that 'a cause of action [under Code Civ. Proc., § 338(d)] accrues, and the limitations period commences to run, when the aggrieved party could have discovered the ... mistake through the exercise of reasonable diligence.' " (Creditors Collection Serv. v. Castaldi (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1044 [45 Cal.Rptr. 2d 511] .)

■ "With respect to actions based on fraud, the statute of limitations is tolled whenever plaintiff is able to show the defendant fraudulently concealed facts which would have led him to discover his potential cause of action. ... 'Technical rules as to when a cause of action accrues apply therefore only in those cases which are free from fraud committed by the defendant. Said section 338, subdivision 4, ... recognizes the nonapplicability of those technical rules where the fraud of the defendant may be so concealed that in the absence of circumstances imposing greater diligence on the plaintiff, the cause of action is deemed not to accrue until the fraud is discovered. Otherwise, in such cases, the defendant by concealing his fraud, would effectively block recovery by the plaintiff because of the intervention of the statute of limitations.' " (Snow v. A. H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal.App.3d 120, 127-128 [211 Cal.Rptr. 271] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[C]ourts have relied on the nature of the relationship between defendant and plaintiff to explain application of the delayed accrual rule. The rule is generally applicable to confidential or fiduciary relationships. The fiduciary relationship carries a duty of full disclosure, and application of the discovery rule 'prevents the fiduciary from obtaining immunity for an initial breach of duty by a subsequent breach of the obligation of disclosure.' " (Parsons v. Tickner (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1513, 1526 [37 Cal.Rptr. 2d 810] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'The provision tolling operation of [section 338(d)] until discovery of the fraud has long been treated as an exception and, accordingly, this court has held that if an action is brought more than three years after commission of the fraud, plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving that he did not make the discovery until within three years prior to the filing of his complaint.' " (Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal.4th 1, 14 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[T]he section 338, subdivision (d), three-year statute of limitations applies to an unjust enrichment cause of action based on mistake." (Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Dintino (2008), 167 Cal.App.4th 333, 348 [84 Cal.Rptr.3d 38] ,

CACI VF-1900 Intentional Misrepresentation

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make a false representation of an important fact to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know that the representation was false, or did [he/she] make the representation recklessly and without regard for its truth?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] intend that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] reasonably rely on the representation?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1900, Intentional Misrepresentation.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. However, if both intentional misrepresentation and negligent misrepresentation (see CACI No. 1903) are to be presented to the jury in the alternative, the preferred practice would seem to be that this verdict form and VF-1903, Negligent Misrepresentation, be kept separate and presented in the alternative.

With respect to the same misrepresentation, question 2 above cannot be answered "yes" and question 3 of VF-1903 cannot also be answered "no." The jury may continue to answer the next question from one form or the other, but not both.

If both intentional and negligent misrepresentation are before the jury, it is important to distinguish between a statement made recklessly and without regard for the truth (see question 2 above) and one made without reasonable grounds for believing it is true (see CACI No. VF-1903, question 3). Question 2 of VF-1903 should be included to clarify that the difference is that for negligent misrepresentation, the defendant honestly believes that the statement is true. (See Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 407-408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] .)

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

This verdict form covers issues presented in BAJI No. 16.50.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1903, Negligent Misrepresentation.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. However, if both negligent misrepresentation and intentional misrepresentation (see CACI No. 1903) are to be presented to the jury in the alternative, the preferred practice would seem to be that this verdict form and VF-1900, Intentional Misrepresentation, be kept separate and presented in the alternative.

With respect to the same misrepresentation, question 3 above cannot be answered "no" and question 2 of VF-1900 cannot also be answered "yes." The jury may continue to answer the next question from one form or the other, but not both.

If both intentional and negligent misrepresentation are before the jury, it is important to distinguish between a statement made without reasonable grounds for believing it is true (see question 3 above) and one made recklessly and without regard for the truth (see CACI No. VF-1900, question 2). Include question 2 to clarify that the difference is that for negligent misrepresentation, the defendant honestly believes that the statement is true. (See Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 407-408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] .)

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions relating to causes of action for fraud and deceit. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on fraud and deceit, see Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions on the basic elements of a civil action for fraud [see MB 1900A.01 -MB 1900A.05].
- Part B includes instructions explaining the key aspects of these basic elements [see MB 1900A.20 -MB 1900A.26].
- Part C includes instructions on the liability of third parties for fraud [see MB 1900A.40 -MB 1900A.43].
- Part D includes instructions on the nature and amount of fraud damages, and the propriety and amount of punitive damages [see MB 1900A.50 -MB 1900A.55].

Coverage of the effect of fraud specifically on the formation or performance of contracts is found in Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions, and Ch. 3D, Matthew Bender Performance and Breach of Contract Instructions.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Filling in the Blanks: A number of the CACI Fraud or Deceit instructions, as well as some of the Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions in this chapter, include blanks requiring the attorneys to fill in the specific act, transaction, statement, etc. alleged to be the wrongful conduct or action by the plaintiff. Such an effort might be useful to lawyers who need to focus on and prepare the specific facts they need to prove at trial. However, the jury may be asked to decide whether any number of facts could be found to support different theories of liability. As a practical matter, jury instructions become more and more complicated and confusing as more facts are inserted into the actual instructions. It would be more useful and less confusing to a jury to correctly state the law that applies without attempting to define specifically all the disputed facts that might support a jury verdict.

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions
Part A. FRAUD CAUSE OF ACTION IN GENERAL

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.01

MB 1900A.01 Introductory Instruction

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff claims that Defendant, by an act of fraud, caused Plaintiff to _____ [describe transaction]. Plaintiff also claims that, as a result, [he/she/it] suffered money losses, which the law calls damages. Plaintiff seeks to recover those damages in this proceeding.

Authority: Civ. Code § 1709.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the nature of the plaintiff's claim for fraud. It should be given before the instruction outlining the plaintiff's burden of proof [see MB 1900A.02 -MB 1900A.04].

For detailed discussion of fraud, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts (Matthew Bender). For related discussion and forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[3] Comment

Fraud is defined by Civ. Code § 1572. Deceit is defined in a similar, but not identical, manner by Civ. Code § 1710. Civ. Code § 1709 provides that a person who willfully deceives another person is liable for that person's damages.

Under the Civil Code, "fraud" and "deceit" are technically two distinct concepts. "Fraud" refers to one of the bases for rescission of a contract, that is, lack of valid consent [see Civ. Code §§ 1566, 1567(3), 1689(b)(1)]. "Deceit" refers to the basis for the tort cause of action for damages [see Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710; Multifamily Captive Group, LLC v. Assurance Risk Managers, Inc. (E.D. Cal. 2008) 578 F.Supp.2d 1242, 1249-1250]. Nevertheless, the courts frequently use the terms interchangeably to refer to the common-law tort cause of action for fraud or deceit [see, e.g., Apollo Capital Fund LLC v. Roth Capital Partners, LLC (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 226, 240, 70 Cal.Rptr.3d 199 ; OCM Principal Opportunities Fund, L.P. v. CIBC World Mkts. Corp. (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 835, 845, 68 Cal.Rptr.3d 828]. For further discussion, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part A (Matthew Bender).

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is liable to Plaintiff for damages for fraud if Plaintiff proves all of the following:

- 1. Defendant represented to _____ [either the public or name of third person] that _____ [state claimed misrepresentation];
- 2. The representation was untrue;
- 3. The representation was material to Plaintiff's decision to _____ [specify act or transaction at issue, e.g., buy the car];
- 4. Defendant _____ [knew that the representation was false or made the representation without believing it to be true and without knowing whether it was true or false];
- 5. Defendant made the representation with the intention that it be repeated, or with reason to expect that it would be repeated, to _____ [Plaintiff or a class of persons including Plaintiff] and that it would be relied on by [him/her/it/them];
- 6. The representation was repeated to Plaintiff, who did actually rely on it in _____ [specify action or transaction at issue, e.g., buying the car];

7. Plaintiff was justified in relying on the representation; and

8. Plaintiff suffered damages as a result of _____ [specify action or transaction at issue, e.g., buying the car].

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1711; Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1088, 1091-1093, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal.3d 1092, 1108, 252 Cal.Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 ; Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal.2d 412, 422, 159 P.2d 958 ; *Pacific Standard Life Ins. Co. v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the fraud at issue is based on an affirmative misrepresentation made to the public or to a third party. If the misrepresentation was negligent rather than knowing or reckless, use the instruction in MB 1900A.04[1]. If the action is one for concealment of material facts, use the instruction in MB 1900A.03[1]. Specific elements of fraud are further explained and defined in MB 1900A.20-MB 1900A.26.

This instruction must be used with an instruction defining the standard of proof [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("Obligation to Prove--More Likely True Than Not True")].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][d], below.

[3] Comment[a] Definition of Fraud

Fraud embraces anything that is intended to deceive, including statements, acts [see, e.g., Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1567, 54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468 ; Universal By-Prods., Inc. v. City of Modesto (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 145, 151, 117 Cal.Rptr. 525], concealments, and omissions involving a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence that results in injury to one who justifiably relies thereon [Pearson v. Norton (1964) 230 Cal.App.2d 1, 7, 40 Cal.Rptr. 634 ; see, e.g., Starbucks Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1436, 1447, 86 Cal.Rptr.3d 482 (actual reliance with respect to fraud by omission requires confidence in material completeness of defendant's representations)].

For further discussion, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part A (Matthew Bender).

[b] Elements of Cause of Action for Fraud

The elements of fraud are set forth in Lazar v. Superior Court [Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal.4th 631, 638, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 ; see Lingad v. IndyMac Fed. Bank (2010) 682 F.Supp.2d 1142, 1152-1153], Molko v. Holy Spirit Association [Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal.3d 1092, 1108, 252 Cal.Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 ; see Gil v. Am. (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 1396, 1408, 254 Cal.Rptr. 377 (elements of fraud)], and Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. [Hobart v. General Dynamics Corp. (9th Cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 1144, 1156 n.3 ; Kelley v. Mortgage Elec. Registration Sys., Inc. (2009) 642 F.Supp.2d 1048, 1056 ; Anthony v. Yahoo! Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2006) 421 F.Supp.2d 1257, 1263 ; Glen Holly Entm't, Inc. v. Tektronix,

Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1999) 100 F.Supp.2d 1086, 1093 ; Bains v. Moores (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 445, 456-457, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 309 (for individual defendants' stock sale to raise inference of scienter, plaintiffs must provide meaningful trade history for purposes of comparison to stock sales within class period; no inference of scienter in absence of allegation that stock sales are inconsistent); Mendoza v. Ruesga (2008) 169 Cal.App.4th 270, 284, 86 Cal.Rptr.3d 610 ; Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 995, 1016-1017, 84 Cal.Rptr.3d 642 ; Buckland v. Threshold Enter., Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 798, 806-807, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 543]:

- (1) Misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure);
- (2) Knowledge of falsity (scienter);
- (3) Intent to defraud (i.e., to induce reliance);
- (4) Justifiable reliance; and
- (5) Resulting damage.

Paragraph 3 of this instruction defines materiality as a separate element of fraud. Not all definitions of fraud separate that element [see Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal.2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977 ; Zinn v. Ex-Cell-O Corp. (1957) 148 Cal.App.2d 56, 306 P.2d 1017]. Rather, the materiality of the representation is considered an aspect of justifiable reliance [Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 537, 538]. Other cases include the materiality of the representation as a separate element of the cause of action [see Thomas v. Hawkins (1950) 96 Cal.App.2d 377, 379, 215 P.2d 495].

A person who makes representations in a reckless manner without knowing whether they are true or false is liable for fraud if he or she did not believe the representations to be true [Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 50, 57, 30 Cal.Rptr. 629]. If the person believes the representations to be true but is without reasonable grounds for the belief, he or she is liable only for negligent misrepresentation [see Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 50, 57, 30 Cal.Rptr. 629].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Carefully Establish Each Element of Claim:

Because the most frequent defense in fraud cases is a direct attack on the essential elements of the claim (especially the misrepresentation of a material fact), counsel should be sure to fully establish each of these matters to the jury. Few pleadings are subject to as much motion practice in this regard as fraud pleadings. By Publisher's Editorial Staff

[c] Elements of Cause of Action for Negligent Misrepresentation

The elements of negligent misrepresentation are as follows [Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Principal Fin. Group (N.D. Cal. 2006) 412 F.Supp.2d 1037, 1044 ; Cedars Sinai Med. v. Mid-W. Nat'l Ins. Co. (C.D. Cal. 2000) 118 F.Supp.2d 1002, 1010 ; Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal.2d 481, 487-488, 275 P.2d 15 ; see Pacific Ins. Co. v. Kent (C.D. Cal. 2000) 120 F.Supp.2d 1205 (negligent misrepresentation requires affirmative representation that is false; implied assertion or representation is insufficient)]:

- (1) The defendant made a statement as to a past or existing material fact;
- (2) The statement was untrue;
- (3) The defendant, regardless of his or her actual belief, made the statement without any reasonable grounds for believing it was true;
- (4) The defendant made the statement with the intent to induce the plaintiff to rely on it;

(5) The plaintiff justifiably relied on the statement; and

(6) The plaintiff sustained damages.

A single misrepresentation of a material fact is sufficient to support a judgment for fraud [Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 592, 597, 225 Cal.Rptr. 628].

A misrepresentation need not be oral; it may be implied by conduct [see, e.g., Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1567, 54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468 ; Universal By-Prods., Inc. v. City of Modesto (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 145, 151, 117 Cal.Rptr. 525]. Therefore, in a computer hacking action, the unauthorized use of a telephone access code may constitute a misrepresentation. Furthermore, a computerized network may constitute the plaintiff company's agent or legal equivalent that depended on the access code to identify the hackers as authorized users of the system. This indirect reliance is detrimental if the access permitted the hackers to steal computer services [Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1567-1568, 54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468].

Writing a letter of recommendation about a former employee, which makes a misrepresentation that presents a foreseeable and substantial risk of physical harm to a third person, can subject the writer to liability for fraud to the injured third person, even without reliance by the third person [Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1066, 1075-1081, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 (student assaulted by former employee of school district, which wrote letter unreservedly recommending former employee for employment without disclosing facts regarding prior charges or complaints of sexual misconduct, could sue school district for fraud)].

For further discussion, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part A (Matthew Bender).

[d] Misrepresentation Made to Another Person

Representations made to one person with the intention or with reason to expect that they will be repeated to another person and acted on by that person, and that are repeated and acted on to the injury of that other, give the person so acting the same right to an action for fraud as if the representations had been made to him or her directly [cf. Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1095-1097, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; Geernaert v. Mitchell (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 601, 606-607, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 483 ; Pacific Standard Life Ins. Co. v. Tower Indus., Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1881, 1891, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 524 ; Barnhouse v. City of Pinole (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 171, 191-192, 183 Cal.Rptr. 881 ; Massei v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 1522, 1530, 92 Cal.Rptr.3d 399 (inapplicable because plaintiff was not "injured actor-in-reliance")].

Whether a seller of real property had "reason to expect" transmission of the representation to the plaintiff depends on (1) the extent of the seller's knowledge of resale to a particular person or class of persons, and (2) the likelihood that the particular misrepresentation or concealment would be passed on to them [Geernaert v. Mitchell (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 601, 608, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 483]. Liability may be imposed if the representation was intended to be relied on by the public or by a general class of persons including the plaintiff. The defendant need not have intended that the representation would be relied on by the plaintiff specifically [see Barnhouse v. City of Pinole (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 171, 191-192, 183 Cal.Rptr. 881 ; see also Civ. Code § 1711]. However, there is no liability unless the representation was ultimately communicated to and actually relied on by the plaintiff [see Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1088-1100, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; see also MB 1900A.24].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is liable for damages suffered by Plaintiff because of Plaintiff's decision to _____ [specify act or transaction at issue, e.g., make the purchase], if Plaintiff proves all of the following:

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

1. Defendant did not disclose a material fact that [he/she/it] should have disclosed because of [his/her/its] special relationship of trust and confidence with Plaintiff;

[OR]

1. Defendant gave Plaintiff some facts but concealed other facts that were material, and the facts given by Defendant were likely to mislead Plaintiff in view of the facts that were concealed;

[OR]

1. Defendant purposely concealed a material fact that was peculiarly within Defendant's knowledge and not reasonably available to Plaintiff;

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

2. Defendant knew that [he/she/it] _____ [concealed or failed to disclose] the fact;

3. Defendant intended that [his/her/its] _____ [concealment of or failure to disclose] the fact would cause Plaintiff _____ [specify, e.g., to sign the sales agreement] because of Plaintiff's ignorance of that fact;

4. Plaintiff actually relied on the information that [he/she/it] received from Defendant;

5. Plaintiff was justified in relying on this information; and

6. Plaintiff suffered damages as a result of that reliance.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the fraud or deceit consists of concealing facts rather than affirmatively misrepresenting them.

The first alternative Paragraph 1 should be used when the defendant was in a fiduciary or confidential relationship with the plaintiff and failed to disclose material facts within his or her knowledge. If this alternative is used, the definition of confidential relationship in MB 1900A.26 should be used with this instruction.

The second alternative Paragraph 1 should be used when the defendant disclosed some facts but failed to disclose other material facts.

The third alternative Paragraph 1 should be used when there is an affirmative effort to conceal material facts that the defendant is aware of but that are not reasonably available to the plaintiff [see, e.g., Johnson v. Mitsubishi Digital Electronics America, Inc. (C.D. Cal. 2008) 578 F.Supp.2d 1229, 1239].

Definitions of significant terms and elements in this instruction are set forth in MB 1900A.20-MB 1900A.26.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Fraud or Deceit by Concealment

Civ. Code § 1710(3) sets forth the elements of fraud or deceit by concealment as the suppression of a fact by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts that are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact. Fraudulent concealment is often an issue when the defendant bears a fiduciary responsibility to the plaintiff, such as a defendant who is a corporate officer with special knowledge of the affairs of the corporation [Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal.2d 412, 433, 159 P.2d 958 ; see Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal.3d 476, 481, 483, 286 Cal.Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892 (partner or joint venturer may be liable as fiduciary for nondisclosure)]. A real estate broker may be liable for fraudulent concealment with respect to a client even if the conduct does not violate the statutory disclosure law applicable to that business, because those causes of action involve different elements [Michel v. Moore & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797 ; see Civ. Code § 2079; Lee v. Escrow Consultants, Inc. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 915, 925, 259 Cal.Rptr. 117 (escrow holder may be liable as fiduciary for nondisclosure)]. A defendant is liable for fraudulent concealment only if it had a legal duty to disclose the concealed fact [Lincoln Gen. Ins. Co. v. Access Claims Administrators, Inc. (E.D. Cal. 2009) 596 F.Supp.2d 1351, 1373].

If a defendant discloses certain facts about a transaction, he or she will be liable for failure to disclose other material facts that make the facts disclosed misleading [Civ. Code § 1710(3); Marketing W., Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 603, 613, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 859 ; McCue v. Bruce Enterprises, Inc. (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 21, 27, 39 Cal.Rptr. 125 ; see, e.g., Apollo Capital Fund LLC v. Roth Capital Partners, LLC (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 226, 242, 70 Cal.Rptr.3d 199].

If the plaintiff and defendant are not in a fiduciary relationship but the defendant has knowledge of material facts to which the plaintiff has no reasonable access, the failure to disclose those facts may be the basis for liability [Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 334, 349-350, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 377 ; Marketing W., Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 603, 613, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 859 ; Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 388, 404-406, 264 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; Ballou v. Master Props. No. 6 (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 65, 75-76, 234 Cal.Rptr. 264 ; Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal.App.2d 729, 735, 29 Cal.Rptr. 201 ; Sime v. Malouf (1949) 95 Cal.App.2d 82, 99, 212 P.2d 946 ; see also Vega v. Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 282, 291, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 26 (active concealment or suppression of facts by nonfiduciary is equivalent of false representation and thus actual fraud)]. However, the duty to disclose cannot arise when the material facts are not actually known to the defendant, or when knowledge is "imputed" to the defendant [San Diego Hospice v. County of San Diego (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1048, 1055-1058, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 501].

In some instances in which a duty of disclosure would otherwise exist, special legislation may nullify that duty or bar a cause of action based on a failure to disclose [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1710.2 (barring cause of action based on failure to disclose to transferee fact that occupant of property was afflicted with AIDS or facts relating to death of former occupant occurring more than three years before transfer)].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is liable to Plaintiff for damages for negligent misrepresentation if Plaintiff proves all of the following:

1. That Defendant represented to Plaintiff that _____ [specify positive assertion or assertion of fact that constitutes alleged misrepresentation];
2. That the representation was untrue;
3. That the representation was material to Plaintiff's decision to act;
4. That, regardless of what Defendant actually believed, [he/she/it] made the representation without any reasonable ground for believing that it was true;
5. That Plaintiff did not know that the representation was untrue;
6. That Defendant made the representation intending that Plaintiff would rely on it;
7. That Plaintiff did rely on the representation;
8. That Plaintiff was justified in relying on the representation; and

9. That, as a result of [his/her/its] reliance on the representation, Plaintiff suffered damages.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant has negligently represented a material fact in the course of a transaction.

Definitions of significant terms and elements in this instruction are set forth in MB 1900A.20-MB 1900A.26. This instruction must be used with an instruction defining the standard of proof [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200, "Obligation to Prove--More Likely True than Not True"]].

The alleged misrepresentation or misrepresentations used to fill in the blank to complete the first numbered element in the instruction must be "positive assertions" [Civ. Code § 1572(2)] or assertions of fact made with no reasonable belief that the facts are true [Civ. Code § 1710(2); Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 940-942, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 ; see Feldman v. 1100 Park Lane Assoc. (2008) 160 Cal.App.4th 1467, 1493, 74 Cal.Rptr.3d 1 ; OCM Principal Opportunities Fund, L.P. v. CIBC World Mkts. Corp. (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 835, 854-855, 68 Cal.Rptr.3d 828 ; McCulloch v. Ford Dealers Advertising Assn. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1385, 1389, 1392, 286 Cal.Rptr. 223 (advertising association did not make assertion of truth of promotional materials for race when it placed its logo on those materials)]. An assertion of negligent misrepresentation by omission has been held to be insufficient [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 940-942, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 ; see Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1066, 1081-1084, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 (representations in letter recommending former school district employee for any position without reservation or qualification were misleading half-truths strongly implying employee was fit to interact appropriately and safely with female students, in light of defendants' alleged knowledge of charges of repeated sexual improprieties, invoking exception to general rule excluding liability for negligent misrepresentation for mere nondisclosure)].

[a] Elements of Cause of Action for Negligent Misrepresentation

Each of the elements listed in this instruction is necessary to sustain a claim of negligent misrepresentation [see, e.g., Telephia, Inc. v. Cuppy (N.D. Cal. 2006) 411 F.Supp.2d 1178, 1185 (existence of several elements questioned); National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa. v. Cambridge Integrated Svcs. Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 35, 50, 89 Cal.Rptr.3d 473 ; Buckland v. Threshold Enter., Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 798, 807, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 543 ; Melican v. The Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 168, 181-182, 59 Cal.Rptr.3d 672 (elements of misrepresentation, justifiable reliance and damage questioned); Century Sur. Co. v. Crosby Ins., Inc. (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 116, 129-130, 21 Cal.Rptr.3d 115 ; Clement v. Smith (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 39, 44-47, 19 Cal.Rptr.2d 676 ; Home Budget Loans, Inc. v. Jacoby & Meyers Law Offices (1989) 207 Cal.App.3d 1277, 1285, 255 Cal.Rptr. 483 ; Christiansen v. Roddy (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 780, 785-786, 231 Cal.Rptr. 72 ; Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal.App.3d 1, 17, 147 Cal.Rptr. 655].

The tort of negligent misrepresentation does not require scienter or intent to defraud. It encompasses the assertion, as a fact, of something that is not true, by a person who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true; and the positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of something that is not true, though he or she believes it to be true [Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1255, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127 ; OCM Principal Opportunities Fund, L.P. v. CIBC World Mkts. Corp. (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 835, 845, 68 Cal.Rptr.3d 828 ; see Apollo Capital Fund LLC v. Roth Capital Partners, LLC (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 226, 243, 70 Cal.Rptr.3d 199 (in contrast to fraud, negligent misrepresentation does not require knowledge of falsity)].

Negligent misrepresentation is a form of actionable deceit [Civ. Code §§ 1572(2), 1710(2); Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal.2d 481, 487, 275 P.2d 15 ; McCulloch v. Ford Dealers Advertising Assn. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1385, 1388-1389, 286 Cal.Rptr. 223 ; Hale v. George A. Hormel & Co. (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 73, 84, 121 Cal.Rptr. 144]. Civ. Code § 1572(2) describes negligent misrepresentation as a "positive assertion in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, though he believes it to be true" [see McClain v. Octagon Plaza, LLC (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 784, 792-793, 71 Cal.Rptr.3d 885 ; Evan F. v. Hughson United Methodist Church (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 828, 840 n.2, 10 Cal.Rptr.2d 748 (tort of negligent misrepresentation requires positive misrepresentation and does not apply to implied misrepresentations)]. Civ. Code § 1710(2) defines it as "the assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true." It is unclear whether the differences in those two sections create any difference in the concept. A history of the development of the tort of negligent misrepresentation can be found in Hale v. George A. Hormel & Co. [Hale v. George A. Hormel & Co. (1975) 48 Cal.App.3d 73, 82-85, 121 Cal.Rptr. 144].

In one case, before his death, a man executed a donation agreement for his body with a university program that accepted human cadavers for scientific and anatomical studies [see Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127]. Following the husband's death, the wife-plaintiff arranged for the delivery of the body as specified in the agreement. Later, she read reports of irregularities in the donation program that alleged the university failed to maintain adequate records and that the donated bodies could not be located. In response to her inquiries, she was told there were no records of the location of her husband's body. In her suit against the university and others, the complaint included causes of action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation. Plaintiff further alleged that she had suffered injuries to her health and emotional distress as a result of defendant's misconduct and sought compensatory and punitive damages [see Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1248, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127].

With respect to fraud, the complaint alleged that the program, through its agent, represented that the body would be used for research and teaching purposes (not for gain or profit), and would be handled in a respectful manner. It further alleged that the representations were false, in that the defendants used the body for profit with respect to tutoring classes and the sale of body parts; and that they failed to keep proper records and to return the remains to the plaintiff. It also alleged that the defendant program made the representations to induce the plaintiff to participate in the donation program, and that the plaintiff, who was ignorant of the falsity of the representations, relied on them in electing to participate, suffering consequent emotional distress [see Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1256, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127].

The California Supreme Court affirmed summary judgment for the defendants, holding among other things, that the plaintiff failed to show that she actually relied on the alleged misrepresentations, an essential element of both claims of deceit. Actual reliance occurs when a misrepresentation is an immediate cause of a plaintiff's conduct, which alters the plaintiff's legal relations, and when, absent that representation, the plaintiff would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction. It is not necessary that a plaintiff's reliance on the truth of the fraudulent misrepresentation be the sole or even the predominant or decisive factor in influencing the plaintiff's conduct. It is enough that the representation has played a substantial part, and so has been a substantial factor, in influencing the plaintiff's decision. The actual donor was the decedent, who executed the donation agreement. Although the plaintiff did deliver the body in the specified manner to the university, she did not execute her husband's donation agreement, or make any decision regarding disposition of his body, and thus had no legal right to control the disposition of the body.

The right of the plaintiff, as the surviving spouse, to control the disposition of her husband's body was superseded by the terms of the written donation agreement executed by her husband. The plaintiff failed to identify any legal basis for altering her husband's instructions. The Court held that her actions are not cognizable as reliance for purposes of a claim of deceit, inasmuch as her husband's gift was already irrevocable on his death. She did not enter into an agreement with the university regarding her husband's body, nor did the representations of the university's agent cause her to alter her legal relations with the university. The husband's gift as specified in the donation agreement did not require her consent, concurrence, or approval. Hence, her claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation did not survive a summary judgment motion [Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1256-1258, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127].

Writing a letter of recommendation about a former employee making a misrepresentation that presents a foreseeable and substantial risk of physical harm to a third person can subject the writer to liability for negligent misrepresentation to the injured third person, even without reliance by the third person [Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1066, 1075-1081, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 (student assaulted by former employee of school district, which wrote letter unreservedly recommending former employee for employment without disclosing facts regarding prior charges or complaints of sexual misconduct, could sue school district for negligent misrepresentation)].

The doctrine of comparative negligence is not applicable in cases involving negligent misrepresentation [Carroll v. Gava (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 892, 896-897, 159 Cal.Rptr. 778].

Although negligent misrepresentation may be considered a form of actionable deceit, punitive damages may not be based on a finding of negligent misrepresentation [Delos v. Farmers Ins. Group (1979) 93 Cal.App.3d 642, 656, 155 Cal.Rptr. 843].

MB 1900A.05 Elements of Constructive Fraud[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT/S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[In addition to seeking damages for actual fraud,] Plaintiff seeks to recover damages from Defendant for what the law calls "constructive fraud." "Constructive fraud" refers to acts, omissions, or concealments that amount to a breach of duty arising from a confidential or fiduciary relationship, such as that which exists between _____ [specify type of relationship involved in case, e.g., a real estate broker and his or her client], even though no actual fraud is committed. You must find in Plaintiff's favor if you find both of the following:

1. That Defendant breached [his/her/its] fiduciary duty as Plaintiff's [specify type of fiduciary or confidential relationship involved in case, e.g., real estate broker] by _____ [specify nature of alleged breach of duty, e.g., passing on false or misleading information concerning the size of the real estate parcel that Plaintiff intended to purchase, without disclosing that the information had come from the sellers and that Defendant had not verified its accuracy]; and
2. That Plaintiff suffered damages as a result of Defendant's breach of duty.

As I previously mentioned, Plaintiff does not need to establish actual fraud to recover for constructive fraud. Therefore, Plaintiff may recover for constructive fraud even though, for example, no actual false statement was made by Defendant and even if Defendant did not intend to mislead Plaintiff.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 1573; Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 562-563, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ; Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 938, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 ; Barrett v. Bank of Am. (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1362, 1368-1368, 229 Cal.Rptr. 16 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given when the plaintiff seeks to recover from the defendant on a theory of constructive fraud, as distinguished from actual fraud.

As discussed in [3], below, case law defines constructive fraud very generally as breach of a duty arising from a confidential or fiduciary relationship that causes damage to the plaintiff [see, e.g., Sandy v. McClure (N.D. Cal. 2009) 676 F.Supp.2d 866, 882 (plaintiff need not establish fraudulent intent, as long as parties are in fiduciary or confidential relationship); Warren v. Merrill (2006) 143 Cal.App.4th 96, 109, 49 Cal.Rptr.3d 122 (constructive fraud arises on breach of duty by person in fiduciary relationship who misleads another person to his or her prejudice); Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of Cal., Inc. (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 949, 960, 23 Cal.Rptr.3d 233 (cause of action for constructive fraud was dismissed because plaintiff failed to plead requisite fiduciary or special confidential relationship)]. However, it is recommended that the court provide further guidance for the jury by specifying in the instruction the nature of alleged breaches of duty involved in the particular case.

In many cases the existence of a fiduciary or confidential relationship between the parties may have already been admitted by the defendant or determined by the court as a matter of law. If there is a factual issue concerning whether a confidential or fiduciary relationship existed between the plaintiff and the defendant, the instruction in MB 1900A.26[1] should be given along with this instruction.

[3] Comment

Civ. Code § 1573 defines constructive fraud as one of the following:

- A breach of duty by which a person, without an actually fraudulent intent, gains an advantage by misleading another to his or her prejudice (or to the prejudice of anyone claiming under him or her); or
- Any act or omission that the law specially declares to be fraudulent, without regard to actual fraud.

Cases define constructive fraud generally as acts, omissions, and concealments involving a breach of a legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence, and resulting in damages to another. Constructive fraud exists when conduct, although not actually fraudulent, ought to be treated as fraudulent [Barrett v. Bank of Am. (1986) 183 Cal.App.3d 1362, 1368-1369, 229 Cal.Rptr. 16 ; see Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 562, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463]. For example, constructive fraud may consist of a failure by a person who owes a fiduciary duty to another to disclose material facts concerning a transaction between them or in which the fiduciary is representing the other [see, e.g., Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 561-563, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ; Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 937-938, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609 ; see also In re Harmon (9th Cir. 2001) 250 F.3d 1240, 1248, n.10 (constructive fraud in partnership law); Alfaro v. Community Housing Improvement System & Planning Assn., Inc. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 1356, 1382-1383, n.19, 89 Cal.Rptr.3d 659 (disclosure duty of seller of real property; constructive fraud not pleaded)]. The failure of a fiduciary to disclose a material fact to its principal that might affect the fiduciary's motives or the principal's decision, which is known (or should be known) to the fiduciary, may constitute constructive fraud [Michel v. Moore & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 763, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797] .

A real estate broker has a fiduciary duty to its client [Civ. Code § 2079.24; Michel v. Moore & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797] . A real estate agent, as a fiduciary, is liable to the principal for constructive fraud even though its conduct is not actually fraudulent. Most acts by an agent in breach of its fiduciary duties constitute constructive fraud [Michel v. Moore & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762-763, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797] . In an action for constructive fraud based on nondisclosure, plaintiff need not prove that the defendant intended to fail to disclose material facts [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 926, 938, 268 Cal.Rptr. 609] .

For additional discussion, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud, Deceit, and Other Business Torts (Matthew Bender). For forms of pleading for use in actions for constructive fraud, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

You have been instructed that Plaintiff must prove that any false representations made by Defendant were made with the intent to deceive Plaintiff and that Plaintiff rely on them. This means that any false representations made by Defendant must have been made to cause Plaintiff to _____ [describe transaction, e.g., purchase the property].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used by the defendant when he or she contends that any misrepresentations, although made, were not intended to induce the plaintiff's ultimate action.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment[a] Requirement of Intent Generally

An intent to deceive is not an essential element of the cause of action for deceit. Instead, what is required is the intent to induce action [Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal.2d 481, 488 n.5, 275 P.2d 15 ; Lacher v. Superior Court (1991) 230

Cal.App.3d 1038, 1046, 281 Cal.Rptr. 640 ; Christiansen v. Roddy (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 780, 786-788, 231 Cal.Rptr. 72 ; see Apollo Capital Fund LLC v. Roth Capital Partners, LLC (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 226, 240, 70 Cal.Rptr.3d 199]. Such intent is often established by circumstantial evidence and may be inferred from circumstances such as defendant's failure even to attempt performance [see Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal.3d 18, 30, 216 Cal.Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212 ; Locke v. Warner Brothers, Inc. (1997) 57 Cal.App.4th 354, 368, 66 Cal.Rptr.2d 921 (triable issue of material fact on fraudulent intent, precluding summary judgment)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip --Warning--Failure to Include Intent Instruction Is Grounds for Reversal: Keep in mind that a jury instruction on fraud or deceit that fails to include intent as one of the elements is erroneous and grounds for reversal [Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 388, 405-408, 264 Cal.Rptr. 779] . By Publisher's Editorial Staff

MB 1900A.21 Time of Plaintiff's Reliance Determines Falsity of Representations

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

In deciding whether representations were true or false you must look at the situation at the time Plaintiff relied on them.

Authority: Blickman Turkus, LP v. MF Downtown Sunnyvale, LLC (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 858, 877-878, 76 Cal.Rptr.3d 325 ; United States Nat'l Bank v. Stiller (1931) 119 Cal.App. 442, 444, 6 P.2d 529 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the burden-of-proof instructions that refer to "false" as an element of the instruction. However, depending on the circumstances of the case, it may not always be appropriate. For example, in certain situations, representations may be true when they are made but may later become false through no fault of the defendant. Thus, the instruction should be used with caution.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Time of Reliance on Representation

In general, false representations are required as a basis of an action for fraud [Civ. Code § 1572(1)].

The truth or falsity of facts is measured as of the time they were relied on by the plaintiff [United States Nat'l Bank v.

Stiller (1931) 119 Cal.App. 442, 444, 6 P.2d 529 (representations in question were false both when they were made and when they were relied on by plaintiff); see Blickman Turkus, LP v. MF Downtown Sunnyvale, LLC (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 858, 877-878, 76 Cal.Rptr.3d 325].

Plaintiff may not recover damages for any loss or harm caused by any false representations made by Defendant about the requirements of the law _____ [if appropriate (see Use of Instruction): unless you find that Plaintiff and Defendant had a special relationship of trust and confidence or unless you find that Defendant also misrepresented the facts that (he/she/it) claimed supported (his/her/its) statement about the requirements of the law or unless you find that Plaintiff reasonably believed that, as compared to (himself/herself), Defendant had special knowledge or skill regarding the subject matter of the representation].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that his or her representations, even though false, were representations of law and not of fact. The first alternative should be given when the plaintiff contends that a misrepresentation of law is actionable because of a confidential or fiduciary relationship between the parties. This alternative should be used with MB 1900A.26 defining confidential relationship. The second alternative should be given when the plaintiff contends that misrepresentations of law are actionable because the defendant misrepresented the facts on which the legal representations were based. The third alternative should be given if the plaintiff contends that the misrepresentation of law is actionable because the plaintiff reasonably believed that, as compared to himself or herself, the defendant had special knowledge or skill regarding the subject matter.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Misrepresentations of Law Normally Not Actionable

Generally, misrepresentations of law do not constitute actionable fraud [Golden W. Baseball Co. v. Talley (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1294, 1306-1307, 284 Cal.Rptr. 53 ; Bledsoe v. Watson (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 105, 110, 106 Cal.Rptr. 197]. However, there are exceptions to this rule. A misrepresentation of law will be actionable in the following circumstances:

- There is a confidential or fiduciary relationship between the plaintiff and defendant [Lynch v. Cruttenden & Co. (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 802, 808, 22 Cal.Rptr.2d 636 ; Terry v. Bender (1956) 143 Cal.App.2d 198, 213, 300 P.2d 119];
- In addition to a misrepresentation of what the law requires, the defendant also misrepresents the facts on which the requirement of law is based [De Zemplén v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1963) 221 Cal.App.2d 197, 202, 34 Cal.Rptr. 334]; and
- The plaintiff reasonably believed that, as compared to himself or herself, the defendant had special knowledge or skill regarding the subject matter [see Lynch v. Cruttenden & Co. (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 802, 808, 22 Cal.Rptr.2d 636].

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions
Part B. SPECIFIC ELEMENTS OF FRAUD

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.23

MB 1900A.23 Justified Reliance--Failure to Investigate

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The general rule is that Plaintiff is permitted to rely on Defendant's representations without investigation, even if an investigation would have shown that the representations were false. However, Plaintiff is not excused from a failure to investigate if you find that [his/her] failure to investigate was irrational in light of [his/her] own information and intelligence.

Authority: Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 942, 965, 72 Cal.Rptr. 722 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used as a further definition of adequate justification when the plaintiff has failed to investigate misrepresentations. However, as discussed in [3][a], below, this instruction may not be appropriate in actions involving allegedly fraudulent misrepresentations about insurance coverage.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Effect of Plaintiff's Failure to Investigate

A plaintiff is not ordinarily compelled to investigate the representations made by the defendant [Storage Servs. v. Oosterbaan (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 498, 508, 262 Cal.Rptr. 689], unless in the circumstances, including the plaintiff's knowledge and intelligence, the failure to investigate is irrational [Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 942, 965, 72 Cal.Rptr. 722]. Even when an independent investigation is made, there can be justified reliance when the falsity of the statement is not apparent from investigation, the person making the representation has superior knowledge, or the plaintiff is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance [Arthur L. Sachs, Inc. v. Oceanside (1984) 151 Cal.App.3d 315, 323, 198 Cal.Rptr. 483].

Although the plaintiff is not ordinarily required to investigate the truth of affirmative misrepresentations, the courts appear to have created an exception to this rule in the case of alleged misrepresentations about insurance coverage, holding that an insured may not justifiably rely on the misrepresentations if he or she could have discovered their falsity by reading the express terms of the insurance policy [see Hadland v. NN Investors Life Ins. Co. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 1578, 1586-1589, 30 Cal.Rptr.2d 88 ; Hackethal v. National Cas. Co. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1102, 1111-1112, 234 Cal.Rptr. 853 ; but see, e.g., Butcher v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2000) 77 Cal.App.4th 1442, 1462, 92 Cal.Rptr.2d 521 ("Absent some notice or warning, an insured should be able to rely on an agent's representations of coverage without independently verifying the accuracy of those representations by examining the relevant policy provisions")]. Therefore, the instruction in [1], above, is probably not appropriate in cases involving misrepresentations about insurance coverage, since the language allowing plaintiff to rely on misrepresentations without investigation might mislead the jury into thinking that the plaintiff had no duty to read the insurance policy.

For further discussion of what constitutes justifiable reliance, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud, Deceit, and Other Business Torts, Part A (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions
Part B. SPECIFIC ELEMENTS OF FRAUD

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.24

MB 1900A.24 Reliance Not Present

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

You may not find that Plaintiff relied on any representations of Defendant if you find any of the following:

- 1. Defendant's representations were never communicated to Plaintiff or Plaintiff had not heard of or seen the representations at the time Plaintiff entered into the transaction _____
[if appropriate, add: unless you find that the representations were communicated to an agent acting on Plaintiff's behalf];
- 2. Plaintiff investigated the facts and learned the truth;
- 3. Plaintiff relied on [his/her/its] own judgment and not on any representations by Defendant; or
- 4. Plaintiff relied on the advice of some third person and not on any representations by Defendant.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

In this case, Plaintiff claims that [he/she/it] relied on fraudulent misrepresentations made by Defendant before or at the time when Plaintiff signed the purchase agreement. If you find that this is true, then you must find for the Plaintiff on the issue of reliance, even though Plaintiff may have learned the true facts after signing the purchase agreement but before the close of escrow. If Plaintiff was induced by Defendant's false representations to sign a purchase agreement, [he/she/it] is not precluded from suing the Defendant for damages by the fact that [he/she/it] later learned the true facts and could have chosen to withdraw from the agreement.

Authorities: Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1088, 1091-1100, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; Fassberg Construction Co. v. Brown (1943) 59 Cal.App.2d 836, 838, 140 P.2d 86 ; Hackleman v. Lyman (1920) 50 Cal.App. 323, 328, 195 P. 263 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when there is evidence that the plaintiff did not rely on any alleged misrepresentation by the defendant.

The optional paragraph may be used in an action involving a real property sales transaction in which there is evidence that plaintiff learned the true facts after the purchase agreement was signed but before the close of escrow. The purpose of this language, as further discussed in [3][c], below, is to clarify for the jury that the plaintiff's discovery of the true facts after signing the purchase agreement but before the close of escrow does not preclude a finding of reliance with regard to representations made before the purchase agreement was signed [see Jue v. Smiser (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 312, 316-319, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 242]. This language may also be potentially applicable in cases involving other types of executory agreements, if the plaintiff signed an agreement in reliance on fraudulent representations and later discovered the true facts before the deal was consummated.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][d], below.

[3] Comment

[a] No Actual Reliance on Representation

Actual reliance exists only when the plaintiff acts based on belief in the truth of defendant's representations. A plaintiff who suspects that defendant's claims are false and acts based on that suspicion with the intent to sue for fraud if plaintiff's suspicions turn out to be true has not actually relied on the truth of defendant's misrepresentations [Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 798, 808, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 543]. Thus, a consumer who purchases a product with the belief that the manufacturer has falsely represented the product in its advertising cannot show actual reliance when purchasing the product with the specific intent to sue if the advertising does turn out to be false [Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 798, 808-809, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 543].

In one case, before his death, the plaintiff's husband executed a donation agreement for his body with a university program that accepted human cadavers for scientific and anatomical studies [see Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127]. Following his death, the plaintiff arranged for the delivery of his body as specified in the agreement. Some months later, she read newspaper reports of irregularities in the donation program, which alleged that the university failed to maintain adequate records, and that the donated bodies could not be located. In response to her inquiries, she was informed that there were no records concerning the location of her husband's body. In her suit against the university and others, the complaint included causes of action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation. The plaintiff alleged that she, as the holder of the statutory right to control the disposition of her husband's body, had entrusted her husband's body to the defendant donation program for purposes of teaching and research; that she was to receive the remains on completion of the educational and research purposes for which the donation was made; that she discovered that the defendants were using the cadavers for unauthorized purposes, including private for-profit tutoring classes and the transport and dismembering of bodies for profit; that defendant had failed to maintain records to ensure that the cadavers were used only for authorized purposes and to enable return of the remains to the appropriate family members; and that her husband's body "was misused in that the body was not used for medical research by the university." Plaintiff further alleged that she had suffered injuries to her health and emotional distress as a result of defendant's misconduct, and sought compensatory and punitive damages [see Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1248, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127].

With respect to fraud, the complaint alleged that the program, through its agent, represented that the body would be used for research and teaching purposes (not for gain or profit), and would be handled in a respectful manner. It further alleged that the representations were false, in that the defendants used the body for profit with respect to tutoring classes and the sale of body parts; and that they failed to keep proper records and to return the remains to the plaintiff. It also alleged that the defendant program made the representations to induce the plaintiff to participate in the donation program, and that the plaintiff, who was ignorant of the falsity of the representations, relied on them in electing to participate, suffering consequent emotional distress [see Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1256, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127].

The California Supreme Court affirmed summary judgment for the defendants, holding among other things, that the plaintiff failed to show that she actually relied on the alleged misrepresentations, which is an essential element of both claims of deceit. Actual reliance occurs when a misrepresentation is an immediate cause of a plaintiff's conduct, which alters the plaintiff's legal relations, and when, absent that representation, the plaintiff would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction. It is not necessary that a plaintiff's reliance on the truth of the fraudulent misrepresentation be the sole or even the predominant or decisive factor in influencing the plaintiff's conduct. It is enough that the representation has played a substantial part, and so has been a substantial factor, in influencing the plaintiff's decision. The actual donor was the decedent, who executed the donation agreement. Although the plaintiff did deliver the body in the specified manner to the university, she did not execute her husband's donation agreement, or make any decision regarding disposition of his body, and thus had no legal right to control the disposition of the body. The right of the plaintiff, as the surviving spouse, to control the disposition of her husband's body was superseded by the terms of the written donation agreement executed by her husband. The plaintiff failed to identify any legal basis for altering her husband's instructions. The Court held that her actions are not cognizable as reliance for purposes of a claim of deceit, inasmuch as her husband's gift was already irrevocable on his death. She did not enter into an agreement with the university regarding her husband's body, nor did the representations of the university's agent cause her to alter her legal relations with the university. The husband's gift as specified in the donation agreement did not require her consent, concurrence, or approval. Hence, her claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation did not survive a summary judgment motion [Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1256-1258, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127].

[b] No Communication to Plaintiff of Representation

It is essential that the person complaining of fraud actually relied on the alleged fraud [Conroy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1244, 1256-1258, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 532, 203 P.3d 1127 ; The MEGA Life & Health Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 1522, 1530, 92 Cal.Rptr.3d 399 ; Buckland v. Threshold Enter., Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 798, 807-808, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 543].

Because the plaintiff must actually have relied on the misrepresentation to state a cause of action for fraud or deceit, there is generally no liability if the plaintiff never heard or read the misrepresentation before entering into the transaction [see Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1088, 1091-1100, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; Gawara v. United States Brass Corp. (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1341, 1359, 74 Cal.Rptr.2d 663 ; Suarez v. Life Ins. Co. of N. Am. (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 1396, 1408, 254 Cal.Rptr. 377]. An exception exists if the representation was made to a person acting as the plaintiff's agent, even if sometimes that person did not repeat the misrepresentation to the plaintiff [see Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1097-1098, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; Grinnell v. Charles Pfizer & Co. (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 424, 441, 79 Cal.Rptr. 369 (patients could sue pharmaceutical companies on basis of misrepresentations communicated to physicians on theory that physicians had acted as patients' agents); Toole v.

Richardson-Merrell, Inc. (1967) 251 Cal.App.2d 689, 707, 60 Cal.Rptr. 398 (same); Roberts v. Salot (1958) 166 Cal.App.2d 294, 301, 333 P.2d 232 (property owner could sue lender for misrepresentations made to owner's agent)].

In Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods, Inc., the California Supreme Court permitted a class action by parents suing for alleged false representations contained in television advertisements directed at children, even though it was conceded that many of the parents had not actually heard the misrepresentations, nor had the children literally repeated them to the parents [Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods, Inc. (1983) 35 Cal.3d 197, 219, 197 Cal.Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660]. Later, the Court interpreted its earlier opinion as merely standing for the proposition that "children cannot be expected to convey representations about products with precision," and as not dispensing with the requirement that the representation be communicated to and relied on by the plaintiff [Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1098-1099, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568]. The Court specifically declined to apply the "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine, used in actions under federal and state securities laws, to common-law fraud actions [see Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1100-1108, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568]. The "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine allows persons who buy or sell securities at a price affected by a misrepresentation to sue the person who made the misrepresentation, even if the buyer or seller never actually heard or relied on the misrepresentation [see, e.g., Stoneridge Inv. Partners, LLC v. Scientific-Atlanta, Inc. (2008) 552 U.S. 148, 128 S.Ct. 761, 769, 776, 169 L.Ed.2d 627] .

There is no showing of reliance if there is no connection between the misrepresentation and the circumstances, such as a delay in construction, alleged to have caused the plaintiff economic damages [Fassberg Construction Co. v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 267, 300, 60 Cal.Rptr.3d 375] .

[c] Effect of Plaintiff's Reliance on Investigation, Own Judgment, or Third Parties

If the plaintiff has investigated the defendant's representations and independently discovered the facts, the plaintiff may not sustain a claim of justifiable reliance [Smith v. Brown (1943) 59 Cal.App.2d 836, 839-840, 140 P.2d 86 ; Hackleman v. Lyman (1920) 50 Cal.App. 323, 328, 195 P. 263]. Also, if the plaintiff relied on his or her own judgment or the advice of someone other than the defendant, there is no justifiable reliance [Podlasky v. Price (1948) 87 Cal.App.2d 151, 162, 196 P.2d 608]. For example, a court held that a sophisticated company with its own attorneys could not claim that it justifiably relied on alleged misrepresentations by the other party to a lease about the meaning of an amended lease that was the product of 19 months of negotiations [Golden W. Baseball Co. v. Talley (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1294, 1306-1307, 284 Cal.Rptr. 53].

[d] Effect of Plaintiff's Discovery of True Facts After Signing Agreement But Before Close of Escrow

In fraud actions involving real property transactions, an issue may arise concerning the effect of the plaintiff's discovery of the true facts after signing a purchase agreement, but before the close of escrow, on the plaintiff's right to claim that he or she relied on the defendant's misrepresentations.

In one case, plaintiffs were induced to sign an agreement to buy a house by defendants' false representations that the house was designed by a famous architect. After signing the agreement, but before close of escrow, the plaintiffs learned that in fact it was impossible to confirm whether or not the architect had designed the house. Nevertheless, instead of canceling the agreement, plaintiffs proceeded with the sale and then sued defendants for fraud. Defendants argued that plaintiffs' discovery of the true facts before the close of escrow, when plaintiffs could still have withdrawn from the deal, precluded a finding of justifiable reliance on the defendants' representations. The court of appeal rejected this argument, holding that the plaintiffs' reliance on the defendants' misrepresentations at the transaction's inception is sufficient to support recovery for fraud, and that the plaintiffs need not establish continuing reliance on the misrepresentation until the contract is fully executed [Jue v. Smiser (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 312, 317, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 242 ; see also Storage Servs. v. Oosterbaan (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 498, 511, 262 Cal.Rptr. 689 (party to contract who learns he or she has been defrauded may elect to stand on contract and sue for damages, rather than rescinding)].

Part B. SPECIFIC ELEMENTS OF FRAUD

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.25

MB 1900A.25 Reliance on Defendant's Opinion--General Rule and Exceptions

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As a general rule, a representation that is an opinion cannot support an action for fraud. Therefore, if you find that any of Defendant's representations were Defendant's opinion, you may not hold Defendant liable for fraud on the basis of those representations.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

However, you may hold Defendant liable for fraud on the basis of Defendant's opinion if you find that:

[EITHER]

The opinion was not honestly held by Defendant.

[AND/OR]

Defendant claimed to have expert knowledge concerning the matter on which the opinion was given.

[AND/OR]

Plaintiff and Defendant were in a relationship of confidence and mutual trust at the time the opinion was given.

[AND/OR]

Defendant's opinion misrepresented the facts on which the opinion was based.

[AND/OR]

Defendant claimed or Plaintiff reasonably believed that Defendant based the opinion on superior knowledge or special information concerning the matter on which the opinion was given.

Authorities: Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal.2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977 ; Union Flower Mkt., Ltd. v. Southern Cal. Flower Mkt., Inc. (1938) 10 Cal.2d 671, 676, 76 P.2d 503 ; Macdonald v. De Fremery (1914) 168 Cal. 189, 199-200, 142 P. 73 ; Neu-Visions Sports, Inc. v. Soren/McAdams/Bartells (2000) 86 Cal.App.4th 303, 308, 103 Cal.Rptr.2d 159 ; Lynch v. Cruttenden & Co. (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 802, 808, 22 Cal.Rptr.2d 636 ; Edmunds v. Valley Circle Estates (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1290, 1301, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 701 ; Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 592, 597, 225 Cal.Rptr. 628 ; Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal.App.2d 496, 506-507, 282 P.2d 574 ; Williams v. Lowenthal (1932) 124 Cal.App. 179, 183, 12 P.2d 75 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that the plaintiff relied on an opinion expressed by defendant, rather than on an assertion of fact. An "opinion" is defined as "a person's belief that a fact exists, a statement regarding a future event, or a judgment about quality, value, authenticity, or similar matters" [CACI No. 1904 ("Opinions as Statements of Fact")]; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 538A].

The alternatives should be used when the plaintiff claims that there were adequate reasons to justify his or her reliance on the defendant's opinion.

Choice of the alternatives in this instruction should be made as the facts warrant. If a confidential relationship is the asserted basis of justifiable reliance, then the instruction in MB 1900A.26[1], defining confidential relationship, also should be used.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Liability for Statement of Opinion

As a general rule there is no liability for a person's expression of an opinion [Edmunds v. Valley Circle Estates (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1290, 1301, 20 Cal.Rptr.2d 701 ; Nibbi Brothers, Inc. v. Home Federal Savings & Loan Assn. (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 1415, 1423, 253 Cal.Rptr. 289 ; Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal.App.2d 496, 506-507, 282 P.2d 574 ; Williams v. Lowenthal (1932) 124 Cal.App. 179, 183, 12 P.2d 75 ; see, e.g., Apollo Capital Fund LLC v. Roth Capital Partners, LLC (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 226, 241, 70 Cal.Rptr.3d 199 (some misrepresentations were nonactionable opinion; some properly supported fraud claim)]. This includes legal conclusions drawn from a true statement of facts [see Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal.App.2d 126, 136, 64 Cal.Rptr. 845].

The statement of an opinion is actionable if that opinion is not honestly entertained by the person making it [Macdonald v. De Fremery (1914) 168 Cal. 189, 199-200, 142 P. 73 ; Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal.App.2d 496, 506-507, 282 P.2d 574]. Further, a person may justifiably rely on statements of opinion when the person stating the opinion claims to have expert knowledge concerning the matter, occupies a position of trust and confidence with the plaintiff, or misrepresents the facts on which the opinion is based [Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal.2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977 ; Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal.App.2d 126, 136-137, 64 Cal.Rptr. 845]. Also, a false statement of opinion fraudulently made may form the basis of an action when the person making it claimed superior knowledge or special information regarding the subject matter of the representation [Union Flower Mkt., Ltd. v. Southern Cal. Flower Mkt., Inc. (1938) 10 Cal.2d 671, 676, 76 P.2d 503 ; Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 592, 597, 225 Cal.Rptr. 628] or when the recipient of the opinion reasonably believed that, compared to himself or herself, the other person had special knowledge or skill concerning the subject matter [Lynch v. Cruttenden & Co. (1993) 18 Cal.App.4th 802, 808, 22 Cal.Rptr.2d 636].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--No Clear Line Between Fact and Opinion: The line between fact and opinion cannot normally be drawn with precision and varies with the factual circumstance [Bank of Am. v. Hutchinson (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 142, 148, 27 Cal.Rptr. 787]. However, in determining whether or not an opinion is actionable in a particular case, key factors include (1) whether a fiduciary relationship exists between the defendant and the plaintiff, (2) whether the defendant holds himself or herself out as an expert, and (3) whether the opinion is couched in concrete factual language as opposed to generalities or "puffing." By Publisher's Editorial Staff

Part B. SPECIFIC ELEMENTS OF FRAUD

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.26

MB 1900A.26 Definition of Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A special relationship of trust and confidence exists whenever one person, with justification and good reason, places trust and confidence in the honesty and fairness of another.

Authority: Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 123, 129, 54 Cal.Rptr. 533 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when a fiduciary or confidential relationship is involved. In lieu of "fiduciary" or "confidential," the language "special relationship of trust and confidence" is used to simplify the terminology for the jury.

[3] Comment

Confidential and fiduciary relationships are legally synonymous [Twomey v. Mitchum, Jones, & Templeton, Inc. (1968) 262 Cal.App.2d 690, 708, 69 Cal.Rptr. 222]. Such a relationship exists when a person justifiably places trust and confidence in the integrity and fidelity of another person [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 Cal.App.2d 123, 129, 54 Cal.Rptr. 533 ; see, e.g., Warren v. Merrill (2006) 143 Cal.App.4th 96, 109-110, 49 Cal.Rptr.3d 122 (real estate agent held fiduciary position of trust toward client, but falsely promised him she would place his name on title to condominium if he agreed to her structured transaction, then put her own name on title and kept deposit)]. It does not require a blood relationship; it exists when the parties are associated so that one must rely on the good faith and integrity of the other [Pryor v. Bistline (1963) 215 Cal.App.2d 437, 446-447, 30 Cal.Rptr. 376 ; Stevens v. Marco (1956) 147 Cal.App.2d 357, 372, 305 P.2d 669].

A real estate broker has a fiduciary duty to its client [Civ. Code § 2079.24; Michel v. Moore & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797]. A real estate agent, as a fiduciary, is liable to the principal for constructive fraud even though its conduct is not actually fraudulent. Most acts by an agent in breach of its fiduciary duties constitute constructive fraud [Michel v. Moore & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762-763, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797; see MB 1900A.05].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Fiduciary

Relationships: Certain relationships are easily recognized as fiduciary relationships (e.g., attorney-client). For other relationships, defendant should require authority that the law recognizes the relationship as fiduciary in nature before accepting this instruction. By Ronald Oster

Part C. LIABILITY FOR FRAUD OF THIRD PARTY

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.40

MB 1900A.40 Principal's Liability for Fraud of Agent[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that fraudulent representations were made by _____ [name of agent], Defendant may be responsible for those representations if you also find that:

1. _____ [Name of agent] was an agent of Defendant; and
2. Defendant permitted _____ [name of agent] to be in a position to make the representations while appearing to act within the powers given to [him/her/it] by Defendant.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

In such a case, you may find Defendant liable for the fraud of [his/her/its] agent even though the agent acted solely for [his/her/its] own purposes and Defendant was personally innocent and received no benefit from the transaction.

Authorities: Rutherford v. Rideout Bank (1938) 11 Cal.2d 479, 484, 80 P.2d 978 ; Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 942, 960, 72 Cal.Rptr. 722 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant's agent is alleged to have been responsible for the misrepresentation either in addition to the defendant or on the defendant's behalf.

The optional part of the instruction should be added if there are no facts on which the jury could find a benefit to the defendant as a result of the fraud.

The instruction in Ch. 3C, Matthew Bender Contract Party Instructions, MB 300C.50, defining agent, should be given along with this instruction.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Principal's Liability for Fraud of Agent

The rationale for the rule stated by this instruction is that the principal should be liable for the fraud of his or her agent if the agent, acting in the ordinary course of the principal's business, was thereby able to perpetrate the fraud [Rutherford v. Rideout Bank (1938) 11 Cal.2d 479, 484, 80 P.2d 978 ; Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 942, 960, 72 Cal.Rptr. 722]. The principal's liability may be based on ostensible as well as actual authority [Rutherford v. Rideout Bank (1938) 11 Cal.2d 479, 485, 80 P.2d 978].

A corporate principal is liable on this same basis for the fraud of an agent [Ghiglione v. American Trust Co. (1942) 49 Cal.App.2d 633, 637-638, 122 P.2d 301].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant, _____ [name of officer defendant], is an officer of _____ [name of corporation], a corporation. [He/She] is liable only for any fraudulent acts of the corporation that you find that [he/she] participated in or authorized.

Authority: United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal.3d 586, 595, 83 Cal.Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a trial against both a corporation and its officers for fraudulent acts, when there is evidence that an individual officer or officers did not authorize or participate in those acts. It may be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 1900A.41[1] concerning personal liability of officers for fraudulent acts committed on the corporation's behalf.

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions
Part D. DAMAGES

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.50

MB 1900A.50 General Damages for Fraud

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages, those damages should be an amount that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff for all of [his/her/its] loss or harm to the extent that the loss or harm was caused by the Defendant's conduct, whether or not the loss or harm could have been anticipated by Defendant.

[ADD, if case involves fraud by fiduciary (See Use of Instruction)]

Plaintiff's damages should include the difference between the actual value of the property that plaintiff received and the value it would have had if Defendant's representations had been true. You should calculate these damages as of the date that Plaintiff discovered the fraud.

[CONTINUE]

Plaintiff is entitled to recover only for the loss or harm actually suffered because of [his/her/its] reliance on the Defendant's conduct. You may not consider any loss or harm suffered by Plaintiff that was not caused by reliance on that conduct.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 1709, 3333; Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 565-568, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ; Kenly v. California Bank (1962) 208 Cal.App.2d 347, 354, 25 Cal.Rptr. 383 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in fraud actions except those governed by the provisions of Civ. Code § 3343, which specifies the measure of damages for fraud in most cases involving the sale, purchase, or exchange of property. In those cases, the instructions in MB 1900A.51 or MB 1900A.52 should be used instead of this instruction.

The optional paragraph may be included in an action involving sale of property in which the defendant owed a fiduciary or confidential duty to the plaintiff, as further discussed in [3][b], below.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][c], below.

[3] Comment

[a] When Instruction Applies

Civ. Code §§ 3333 and 1709 specify the damages recoverable for fraud not involving the purchase or sale of property as the amount that will compensate for the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not [see Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal.2d 481, 490, 275 P.2d 15 ; Kenly v. Ukegawa (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 49, 53-55, 19 Cal.Rptr.2d 771 ; Walker v. Signal Cos., Inc. (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 982, 994, 149 Cal.Rptr. 119]. The more restrictive provisions of Civ. Code § 3343 covered in MB 1900A.51 and MB 1900A.52 are applicable to fraud in the sale or purchase of property [see Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal.3d 278, 284, 137 Cal.Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316], with certain exceptions discussed in the comments to those instructions.

For further discussion, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part A (Matthew Bender).

For forms of pleadings pertaining to actions for fraud, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender). For memoranda pertaining to damages in fraud actions, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[b] "Benefit-of-the Bargain" Damages in Cases of Fiduciary Fraud

Damages for fraud in the sale or purchase of property are normally governed by the more restrictive measure of damages in Civ. Code § 3343. That statute provides for recovery of damages based on the difference between the actual value of that which the defrauded party parted and that which he or she received [Civ. Code § 3343(a)], which is referred to in the cases as the "out-of-pocket loss" measure of damages. The "out-of-pocket loss" measure is distinguished from the "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure, which is the difference between the actual value of the property received and the value it would have had if the representations had been true [see, e.g., Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 563-564, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ; Housley v. City of Poway (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 801, 812-813 & n.9, 24 Cal.Rptr.2d 554].

Cases have recognized an exception to the applicability of Civ. Code § 3343 when fraud in a purchase or sale of property involves a breach of a fiduciary or a confidential duty; in those cases, courts have held that the broader measure of damages under Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 applies [Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 565-568, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ; Pepitone v. Russo (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 685, 688-689, 134 Cal.Rptr. 709 ; Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal.App.2d 307, 315, 298 P.2d 667]. However, there is a conflict among the courts of appeal concerning whether Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 authorize a "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure in cases of fiduciary or a confidential fraud [compare Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 565-568, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 (authorizing "benefit-of-bargain" measure) and Pepitone v. Russo (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 685, 688-689, 134 Cal.Rptr. 709 (same) with Hensley v. McSweeney (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1081, 1086, 109 Cal.Rptr.2d 489 (trial court erred in giving jury instructions for both out-of-pocket and benefit-of-bargain measure of damages in action by buyer against fiduciary; error of giving both was compounded by court's own instruction permitting jury to choose between two methods regarding fiduciary and nonfiduciary tort causes of action) and Overgaard v. Johnson (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 821, 827-828, 137 Cal.Rptr. 412 (Civ. Code § 3333 does not permit "benefit-of-bargain" measure of damages in cases involving fiduciary fraud)]. The optional paragraph in this instruction sets forth a "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure, which appears to be authorized by a majority of the cases.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Unusual Measure of Damages: In some cases neither the "benefit-of-the-bargain" nor the "out-of-pocket loss" measures may be appropriate. In one case the plaintiff sold his house in reliance on representations from a broker and seller that the he would be able to close simultaneously on the the seller's house. However, the seller was unable to sell because of previously undisclosed tax liens. The plaintiff searched for suitable replacement property but prices rose so quickly that he was unable to find any. The court of appeal upheld compensatory damages for the plaintiff that included the appreciation in value of the property the plaintiff had sold from when he sold it to trial even though the damages were not measured by either "benefit-of-the-bargain" or "out-of-pocket loss" [Strebel v. Brenlar Invs., Inc. (2006) 135 Cal.App.4th 740, 748-750, 37 Cal.Rptr.3d 699]. By Publisher's Editorial Staff

[c] Availability of Interest on Fraud Damages

Prejudgment interest is proper in a fraud action if damages can be ascertained with certainty [Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 803, 813, 97 Cal.Rptr. 164]. To recover interest for prejudgment amounts due, the plaintiff need not plead or specially pray for interest [Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal.App.3d 803, 813, 97 Cal.Rptr. 164].

In an action for breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice, interest may be awarded in the discretion of the jury [Civ. Code § 3288]. Although the statute uses the word "jury," the trial court, if acting as the trier of fact, can award prejudgment interest under the statute [Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 n.16, 148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109; Segura v. McBride (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1028, 1040 n.13, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 436]. In a case tried to a jury, the court may not usurp the discretion conferred on the jury by the statute [Barry v. Raskov (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 447, 457, 283 Cal.Rptr. 463].

Prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3288 may be awarded only on a recovery of a specific sum of money or of property subject to specific valuation. It may not be awarded on nonpecuniary damages that are not readily subject to precise calculation, such as the intangible, noneconomic aspects of mental and emotional injury [Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal.3d 86, 103, 160 Cal.Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329].

[d] Nominal Damages and Attorney's Fees Not Recoverable for Fraud Claim

Compensatory damages for a fraud claim do not include attorney's fees [Hynix Semiconductor, Inc. v. Rambus, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 527 F.Supp.2d 1084, 1099] . The "American rule" requires each party to bear its own legal fees [Civ. Code § 1021; Hynix Semiconductor, Inc. v. Rambus, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 527 F.Supp.2d 1084, 1099] .

Because damages are essential to a claim for fraud, nominal damages are not awarded in deceit. However, they can be awarded when a plaintiff has proven that actual damage has occurred (and therefore has satisfied fraud's damages element), but cannot prove the amount of the actual damage [Hynix Semiconductor, Inc. v. Rambus, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 527 F.Supp.2d 1084, 1100] .

Part D. DAMAGES

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.51

MB 1900A.51 Damages for Fraud in Sale and Purchase--Plaintiff as Buyer

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to damages, you must award Plaintiff the difference between what [he/she/it] paid to Defendant and the value of what [he/she/it] received in return. You should calculate these values as of the transaction's date.

[IF APPROPRIATE (See Use of Instruction)]

As additional damages, you must also award Plaintiff:

[CHOOSE FROM THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

- 1. The amount [he/she/it] actually and reasonably spent in reliance on the Defendant's fraud.
- 2. The amount necessary to compensate Plaintiff for the loss of the property's use and enjoyment, to the extent that Defendant's fraud was a substantial factor in causing that loss of use or enjoyment.
- 3. The amount necessary to compensate Plaintiff for gains or profits reasonably anticipated from the transaction if the property had been as it was represented to Plaintiff by Defendant. To award damages for anticipated gains or profits, you must also find all of the following:

(a) That Plaintiff purchased the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for a profit;

(b) That Plaintiff reasonably relied on the Defendant's fraud in purchasing the property and anticipating a profit from its later use or resale; and

(c) That Defendant's fraud and Plaintiff's reliance on that fraud was a substantial factor in causing the loss of profits.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3343(a); Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 592, 598-603, 225 Cal.Rptr. 628 ; Carter v. Turner (1928) 90 Cal.App. 193, 200, 265 P. 870 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on determining the appropriate measure of damages awardable to the plaintiff when he or she purchased property in reliance on the defendant's fraud, unless the transaction is a sale of goods subject to Com. Code § 2721 [see [3][a], below]. Paragraph 1 gives the jury the basic rule that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the difference between what he or she paid for the property and the property's actual value. The instruction's remaining portions should be used if the plaintiff is also claiming damages for any additional amounts spent in reliance on the fraud, damages for loss of use, or damages for lost profits.

For an instruction when the plaintiff is seeking damages for property sold by him or her in reliance on the defendant's fraud, see MB 1900A.52[1]. An instruction on the general measure of damages for fraud not involving the purchase or sale of property is in MB 1900A.50[1].

This instruction should not be used if the defendant had a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff. In these cases, the instruction in MB 1900A.50[1] should be used.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][c], below.

[3] Comment

[a] When Civ. Code § 3343 Applies to Fraud Action

The measure of damages in a fraud action arising from the purchase, sale, or exchange of property is that provided by Civ. Code § 3343 unless the defendant had a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff or the transaction was a sale of goods subject to Com. Code § 2721. If the defendant had a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff, the damages are determined under the general provisions of Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 [Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 565-568, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463 ; Brown v. Critchfield (1980) 100 Cal.App.3d 858, 871, 161 Cal.Rptr. 342 ; Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal.App.2d 307, 315, 298 P.2d 667 ; see MB 1900A.50].

If the transaction at issue was a sale of goods, then damages are determined under Com. Code § 2721, which provides that the remedies for material misrepresentation or fraud include all remedies available under Commercial Code Division 2 for nonfraudulent breach [see Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 388, 430-431, 264 Cal.Rptr. 779 (recovery for fraud in sale of aircraft is subject to "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure of damages under Com. Code § 2721)]. For jury instructions on the remedies available under Division 2 of the Commercial Code, see Ch. 3H, Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contract Instructions.

[b] Measure of Damages Under Civ. Code § 3343

Under Civ. Code § 3343, a person who is defrauded in the purchase, sale, or exchange of property is entitled to recover the difference between the actual value of what the defrauded person parted with and the actual value of what he or she received, together with any additional damage arising from the transaction [Civ. Code § 3343]. The value paid and the actual value of the item received must be determined as of the transaction's date [Carter v. Turner (1928) 90 Cal.App. 193, 200, 265 P. 870 ; see Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 568, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463].

Additional damages that may be recovered include (1) amounts actually and reasonably expended in reliance on the fraud [Civ. Code § 3343(a)(1)]; (2) any amount that will compensate the defrauded party for loss of use and enjoyment of the property, to the extent that such a loss was proximately caused by the fraud [Civ. Code § 3343(a)(2)]; and (3) an amount that will compensate plaintiff for any lost profits or other gains that were reasonably anticipated and would have been earned from the property's use or sale if it had been as represented by the party committing the fraud. Lost profits are recoverable only if the loss of profits was proximately caused by the fraud, the defrauded party relied on that fraud, and the defrauded party acquired the property for the purpose of using it or reselling it for a profit and that party reasonably relied on the fraud in entering into the transaction and anticipating profits from the property's subsequent use or sale [Civ. Code § 3343(a)(4)].

A plaintiff's failure to establish an out-of-pocket loss (i.e., a loss attributable to the fact that the property's fair market value received was less than the purchase price) does not preclude the plaintiff from recovering the elements of additional damage specified in Civ. Code § 3343(a) [Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 592, 601-602, 225 Cal.Rptr. 628].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Damages Calculated as of Transaction Date: In calculating damages for fraud, it is important to remember that damages are calculated as of the date of the transaction. This may require some difficult expert testimony. It is surprising how often counsel (and courts) miss this point. By Ronald Oster

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on determining the appropriate measure of damages awardable to the plaintiff when he or she sold property to defendant in reliance on the defendant's fraud. Paragraph 1 gives the jury the basic rule that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the difference between the property's actual value and what he or she received in return from the defendant. The remaining parts of the instruction should be used if the plaintiff is also claiming damages for any additional amounts spent in reliance on the fraud, damages for loss of use, or damages for lost profits.

[b] Measure of Damages Under Civ. Code § 3343

The substance of Civ. Code § 3343 as it relates to this instruction is covered in MB 1900A.51[3], with the exception of the additional damages provided for in optional Paragraph 2. As it relates to that provision, Civ. Code § 3343(a)(3) provides that when a defrauded party, because of the fraud, has been induced to sell or otherwise part with property, he or she is entitled to an amount that will compensate him or her for profits or other gains that might reasonably have been earned by using the property if it had been retained.

If the seller elects to enforce the contract and recover the sale price to which he or she agreed, the seller may not recover lost profits under Civ. Code § 3343(a)(3); however, the seller may recover lost profits if he or she elects to rescind the contract [see Croeni v. Goldstein (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 754, 759-760, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 412].

Absent a fiduciary or confidential relationship, the "out-of-pocket" loss measure under Civ. Code § 3343 is the exclusive measure of damages for a fraudulently induced sale of property [see Croeni v. Goldstein (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 754, 759, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 412]. Thus, in a case in which a property owner was defrauded into granting a right-of-way easement for road construction, which affected additional property to which an easement had not been granted, the court held that the property owner was not entitled to the "cost of repair" of the additional property affected by construction (i.e., cost of restoring it to its condition before construction). The court held that the owner was entitled only to the difference between the value of that parted with and the value of that received, which in this case was the value of the additional property "taken" for the construction [see Housley v. City of Poway (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 801, 812-813, 24 Cal.Rptr.2d 554].

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions
Part D. DAMAGES

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.53

MB 1900A.53 Prerequisites for Award of Punitive Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff was harmed or damaged as the result of the Defendant's fraud, you must decide whether punitive damages should be awarded against Defendant. The purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts--that is, for retribution and deterrence.

Plaintiff is entitled to recover [his/her/its] actual damages, the damages necessary to compensate [him/her/it] for the loss or harm [he/she/it] suffered, if [he/she/it] proves that Defendant committed fraud by a preponderance of the evidence. However, before punitive damages may be recovered, the law requires proof that the fraud was intentional and requires stronger proof than the proof required for the recovery of actual damages. Punitive damages may be awarded against Defendant only if Plaintiff proves that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud by clear and convincing evidence. Therefore, you must first determine whether Plaintiff has proven, by clear and convincing evidence, that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud, as I will now define that term for you.

"Intentional fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to a defendant with the intention on the defendant's part of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

In this phase of the trial, you will determine only whether Plaintiff has proven, by clear and convincing evidence, that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud that harmed or damaged plaintiff. I will have you fill out a special verdict form stating your decision on this question. If necessary, we will hold a second phase of the trial to determine whether punitive damages should be awarded and, if so, the amount that should be awarded as punitive damages.

If you determine that Plaintiff has failed to prove, by clear and convincing evidence, that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud that harmed or damaged Plaintiff, then you may not award any punitive damages against Defendant. If you determine that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud that harmed or damaged plaintiff, then you must determine whether punitive damages should be awarded and, if so, the amount that should be awarded as punitive damages.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3295(d); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 426, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1, 12 n.1, 19-24 ; Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 928, n.13, 148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980 ; Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 452, 462-463, 113 Cal.Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103 ; Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 745, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793 ; Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leshner (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 169, 200, 231 Cal.Rptr. 791 ; Esparza v. Specht (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 1, 6, 127 Cal.Rptr. 493 ; Kuchta v. Allied Builders Corp. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 541, 549, 98 Cal.Rptr. 588 ; Horn v. Guaranty Chevrolet Motors (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 477, 484, 75 Cal.Rptr. 871 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages in connection with a cause of action for fraud. It assumes that the sole statutory ground relied on by the plaintiff to support the imposition of punitive damages is fraud. If the plaintiff is also asserting that the defendant was guilty of malice or oppression, a modified version of the instruction in Ch. 21A, Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions, MB 2100.36, should be used. When the jury is instructed on both fraud claims and breach of contract claims, use this instruction together with the instruction in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.13.

When this instruction is used, the general burden of proof instructions given to the jury should include an instruction on the "clear and convincing evidence" standard [see, e.g., Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201, ("More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof")].

When the plaintiff's claim for punitive damages is based on the conduct of an employee or agent of a defendant, the jury should be instructed on the additional elements that must be established before punitive damages may be awarded against an employer or principal for the actions of an employee or agent [see Civ. Code § 3294(b)].

When issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are not bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d), this instruction should be followed by the instruction set forth in MB 1900A.54[1].

This instruction contains alternative concluding paragraphs. The first alternative paragraph should be used when issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d). The second alternative paragraph should be used when the issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are not bifurcated and the jury therefore will be given the instruction on assessing punitive damages that is set forth in MB 1900A.54.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][f], below.

[3] Comment[a] Prerequisites for Punitive Damage Award

In an action predicated on the breach of an obligation that does not arise from contract, punitive damages--damages that are awarded to punish and make an example of a defendant--may be awarded against a defendant who is guilty of malice, fraud, or oppression [Civ. Code § 3294(a); Brewer v. Premier Golf Prop., LP (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1243, 1247-1250, n.5, 1254-1256, 86 Cal.Rptr.3d 225 (unavailability of punitive damages in cause of action under certain Labor Code provisions)].

Notwithstanding the fact that Civ. Code § 3294(a) authorizes punitive damages only in an action "for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract," punitive damages may be awarded in an action predicated on a claim that the defendant fraudulently induced the plaintiff to enter into a contract [Kuchta v. Allied Builders Corp. (1971) 21 Cal.App.3d 541, 549, 98 Cal.Rptr. 588]. This is true even if the plaintiff seeks rescission rather than damages [Horn v. Guaranty Chevrolet Motors (1969) 270 Cal.App.2d 477, 484, 75 Cal.Rptr. 871].

Punitive damages are not recoverable unless the plaintiff proves that the defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Civ. Code § 3294(a); Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 1004, 1052, 90 Cal.Rptr.3d 453].

Actual damages are an absolute predicate for an award of exemplary or punitive damages [Estate of Martin v. California VA (9th Cir. 2009) 560 F.3d 1042, 1051 ; Fassberg Construction Co. v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 267, 301, 60 Cal.Rptr.3d 375]. When a jury explicitly finds $0 of compensatory damages, the general rule precludes punitive damages. A finding of harm without compensatory damages, or mere restitution when compensatory damages are available, is insufficient [California v. Altus Fin. S.A. (9th Cir. 2008) 540 F.3d 992, 1001-1004]. When nominal damages are awarded, punitive damages should generally represent only a single-digit ratio (that is, less than 10) to satisfy due process requirements, although exceptions exist [see Mendez v. County of San Bernardino (9th Cir. 2008) 540 F.3d 1109, 1121-1122 ; see also 4 Levy et al., California Torts Ch. 54, Punitive Damages, Part B (Matthew Bender)].

[b] Fraud

"Fraud" is defined in Civ. Code § 3294(c)(3) as "an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing" [Fariba v. Dealer Svcs. Corp. (2009) 178 Cal.App.4th 156, 175, 100 Cal.Rptr.3d 219]. Because this definition requires an element of intent that may not be essential to establish liability for compensatory damages in an action based on certain types of fraud (e.g., negligent misrepresentation), this instruction uses the term "intentional fraud" to refer to the type of fraud required by Civ. Code § 3294(c)(3) and distinguish it from the fraud that must be proven to recover compensatory damages. Punitive damages may not be recovered for negligent misrepresentation [Reid v. Moskovitz (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 29, 32, 255 Cal.Rptr. 910].

[c] Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

Punitive damages may be awarded only if the plaintiff establishes oppression, fraud, or malice by clear and convincing evidence [Civ. Code § 3294(a); see, e.g., Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201 ("More Likely True--Clear and Convincing Proof")].

[d] Bifurcation of Punitive Damage Issues

Civ. Code § 3295(d) requires the trial court, on the defendant's motion, to exclude evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition until the jury finds that the defendant is liable to the plaintiff and that the defendant is guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal.3d 139, 147, 279 Cal.Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353].

When the defendant avails itself of this right to initially exclude evidence of its financial condition, the practical effect of these provisions is that the punitive damage issues will have to be bifurcated. In the initial phase of the trial, the jury will be limited to determining the defendant's liability for compensatory damages and whether the plaintiff has established the "fraud" required by Civ. Code § 3294. If the jury holds the defendant liable and determines that the plaintiff has established the requisite fraud in the initial phase of the trial, the plaintiff will be entitled to present evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition at a second phase of the trial, after which the jury will determine the issues relating to the proper amount of punitive damages. The issue of punitive damages must be heard by the same jury that found the defendant liable, although this requirement may be waived by a failure to object to the use of separate juries [Civ. Code § 3295(d); Medo v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 64, 66, 69-70, 251 Cal.Rptr. 924]. The substitution of alternate jurors to try the punitive damages phase of a case does not violate the "same jury" requirement [Rivera v. Sassoon (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1045, 1049, 46 Cal.Rptr.2d 144].

[e] Purpose of Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are imposed for purposes of retribution and deterrence [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 426, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 17-23, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1]. That is, the purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts [see Civ. Code § 3294(a); Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 745, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793]. Punitive damages are aimed not at compensation but principally at retribution and deterring harmful conduct [Exxon Shipping Co. v. Baker (2008) -- U.S. --, 128 S.Ct. 2605, 2621, 171 L.Ed.2d 570].

Punitive damages may properly be imposed to further a state's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 416, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]. Although individual states possess discretion over the imposition of punitive damages, there are constitutional, procedural and substantive limitations on those awards [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 416, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see MB 1900A.54[3][b] -[e]].

A statement as to the purpose of punitive damages should be included in jury instructions on punitive damages to guide the jury's discretion. The United States Supreme Court, in upholding a punitive damages award against a due process challenge, cited such a statement of purpose in an Alabama jury instruction as an important limit on the jury's discretion [see Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 17-23, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 ; see also MB 2300A.233[3]].

Part D. DAMAGES

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.54

MB 1900A.54 Discretion to Award Punitive Damages if Prerequisites for Award Are Established

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[SELECT ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

In the first phase of this trial, you determined that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud that resulted in harm or damage to Plaintiff. In this phase of the trial you must determine whether punitive damages should be awarded against Defendant and, if so, the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded.

Because this is a case in which Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud,

[OR]

If you find that Defendant was guilty of intentional fraud,

you may, but are not required to, award punitive damages against Defendant. In such a case, it is up to you to decide whether punitive damages should be awarded. If you decide to award punitive damages, it is also up to you to determine the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded.

The law does not provide any fixed standards or formulas for making decisions about the amount of punitive damages. Instead, it leaves them to your good judgment and common sense. However, in making any award of punitive damages, you should consider all of the following:

- 1. The reprehensibility of Defendant's conduct with respect to Plaintiff;
- 2. Defendant's financial condition and, in view of that financial condition, what amount of punitive damages it will take to punish and deter Defendant, based solely on the harm to Plaintiff; and
- 3. The actual [damages/harm or injury] that was caused by Defendant's wrongful conduct with respect to Plaintiff, because punitive damages must bear a reasonable relationship to the actual [damages/harm or injury].

In making decisions about punitive damages, you should act in a calm and deliberate manner and should not allow yourselves to be influenced by passion or prejudice.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3295(d); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 426, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 ; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 6 n.1, 15-24, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 ; Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 111, 114-118, 123, 284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348 ; Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 809, 819-823, 169 Cal.Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 923-928, 148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980 ; Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793 ; Las Palmas Assocs. v. Las Palmas Ctr. (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1257-1258, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on its duty to determine the propriety and amount of punitive damages if the statutory prerequisites for a punitive damage award are established. When the punitive damage issues have not been bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d) [see Ch. 21A, Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions, MB 2100A.36[3][g]], this instruction should be given immediately after the instruction set forth in MB 1900A.53[1]. When the punitive damage issues have been bifurcated, this instruction should not be given in the trial's first phase and should be given in a subsequent phase only if the jury renders a verdict finding the defendant guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.

This instruction contains two alternative introductory provisions. The first alternative provision should be used when the punitive damage issues have been bifurcated and the issues relating to the propriety and amount of a punitive damage award are presented in a second phase of the trial. The second alternative provision should be used when the punitive damage issues are not bifurcated.

In the list of factors to be considered in making an award of punitive damages, the third factor offers counsel the choice of the word "damages" or the phrase "harm or injury." In Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. [Gagnon v. Continental Cas. Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1603, 260 Cal.Rptr. 305], the appellate court indicated that the latter might be preferable, especially when the plaintiff is not entitled to compensatory damages or only recovers nominal damages.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][f], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Discretion to Award Punitive Damages

Even when the statutory prerequisites for a punitive damage award are met, the plaintiff is never entitled to punitive damages as a matter of right; rather, the decision to award or deny punitive damages is initially within the jury's discretion [Brewer v. Second Baptist Church (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 800-801, 197 P.2d 713 ; Thomson v. Catalina (1928) 205 Cal. 402, 406-407, 271 P. 198 ; Davis v. Hearst (1911) 160 Cal. 143, 173-174, 116 P. 530 ; Hannon Eng'g, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 431, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78].

Similarly, the amount to be awarded as punitive damages is initially within the discretion of the jury [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal.3d 139, 147, 279 Cal.Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353 ; Thomson v. Catalina (1928) 205 Cal. 402, 406-407, 271 P. 198 ; Hannon Eng'g, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 431, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78 ; Ferraro v. Pacific Fin. Corp. (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 339, 351, 87 Cal.Rptr. 226]. An instruction that advises the jury that it has discretion to determine these questions but that its discretion should be exercised without passion or prejudice is proper [Hannon Eng'g, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 429-433, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78 ; see Las Palmas Assocs. v. Las Palmas Ctr. (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1257-1258, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301].

[b] Due Process Considerations With Punitive Damages

The United States Supreme Court has held that courts must ensure that the measure of punishment of punitive damages is both reasonable and proportionate both to the amount of harm to the plaintiff and also to the general damages recovered. An excessive punitive damages award implicates the Due Process Clause of the U.S. Constitution (U.S. Const. amend. XIV) as an irrational and arbitrary deprivation of the defendant's property [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 428, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see Levy, Golden, Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 54, Punitive Damages (Matthew Bender)].

There are no concrete constitutional limits on the ratio that compares the punitive damages award to the harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 424, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]. However, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages will satisfy due process requirements. An award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages "might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety" [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 581, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 ; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 23-24, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1].

In a fraud case, the California Supreme Court held that an award of punitive damages in an amount "just exceeding the largest single-digit ratio amount"--that is, 10 times the amount of the compensatory damages--was the maximum allowable amount under federal constitutional guidelines [Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159, 1189, 29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63 ($50,000/$5,000 reduced from $1.7 million/$5,000)].

[c] Instructions Cannot Invite Jury to Impose Damages Sufficient to Punish and Deter Conduct Not Related to Particular Plaintiff

In light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], jury instructions must not invite the jury to impose damages sufficient to punish and deter all conduct by defendant of the type directed toward the plaintiff(s) in a particular case [Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793 (rejecting use of BAJI 14.71; now see CACI Nos. 3940, 3947)].

[d] Instructions on Punitive Damages Cannot Be Vague

Vague jury instructions on punitive damages, or those that merely inform the jury to avoid "passion or prejudice," are impermissible, because they do little to aid the jury in its task of assigning appropriate weight to evidence that is relevant and to evidence that is tangential or only inflammatory [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003)

538 U.S. 408, 418, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].

[e] Wealth Relevant Only With Respect to Particular Plaintiff

In light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], evidence concerning a defendant's financial condition is not unlawful or inappropriate. However, the jury may use a defendant's wealth only to determine the appropriate punishment for the malicious conduct in the particular case, not as a gauge for the imposition of a penalty that will actually deter the entire type or course of conduct that affected the plaintiff(s) in that case [Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793]. The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 427, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see [b], above].

CHAPTER 19A Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions
Part D. DAMAGES

3-19A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 1900A.55

MB 1900A.55 Liability of Principal for Punitive Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Punitive damages may be awarded against Defendant for the fraudulent conduct of [his/her/its] agent if Defendant _____ [directed or authorized or ratified] that conduct.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3294(b); Walker v. Signal Cos., Inc. (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 982, 999, 149 Cal.Rptr. 119 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when plaintiff contends that fraud of the defendant's agent is the basis on which punitive damages should be awarded.

The instruction may be modified to request punitive damages from an employer for an employee's fraud if the criteria covered in [3][b], below, are met.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][c], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Punitive Damages Based on Fraud of Agent

A principal is not liable for punitive damages based on the acts of his or her agent unless the principal directed, authorized, or ratified the acts [Walker v. Signal Cos., Inc. (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 982, 999, 149 Cal.Rptr. 119 ; Ebaugh v. Rabkin (1972) 22 Cal.App.3d 891, 895, 99 Cal.Rptr. 706].

[b] Punitive Damages Based on Fraud of Employee

An employer is not liable for punitive damages based on the fraudulent acts of an employee unless one or more of the following is true:

- The employer had advance knowledge of the employee's unfitness and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights of others;
- The employer authorized or ratified the fraudulent conduct for which the damages are awarded; or
- The employer was personally guilty of fraud.

With regard to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification, or act of fraud must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation [Civ. Code § 3294(b)]. However, Civ. Code § 3294 does not require that the employer itself be guilty of fraud, oppression, or malice (i.e., the conduct authorizing liability for punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294(a)) over and above the conduct described in Civ. Code § 3294(b) [Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1153-1154, 74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510].

Imposing punitive damages on an employer for the fraud committed by its employee does not violate the employer's due process rights [Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 14-15, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1].

For further discussion of the criteria for imposing punitive damage liability on a principal or employer based on tortious conduct of an agent or employee, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 54, Punitive Damages (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 20 California Judicial Council Trespass Instructions

3-20 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Trespass Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 2000 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Trespass generally [CACI No. 2000], trespass when an extrahazardous activity is involved [CACI No. 2001], and trespass to timber [CACI No. 2002; CACI No. 2003 (treble damages for trespass to timber)].
- Intentional entry [CACI No. 2004].
- Defense of necessity [CACI No. 2005].
- Essential factual elements for causes of action in public [CACI No. 2020] and private [CACI No. 2021] nuisances.
- Defense of statute of limitations [CACI No. 2030].

The trespass series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-2000-VF-2006].

CHAPTER 20 California Judicial Council Trespass Instructions

3-20 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2000

CACI 2000 Trespass

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] trespassed on [his/her/its] property. To establish this claim, [ name of plaintiff ] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
- 2. That [name of defendant] [intentionally, recklessly, or negligently entered [name of plaintiff]'s property] [or]
[intentionally, recklessly, or negligently caused [another person/[insert name of thing]] to enter [name of plaintiff]'s property];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] did not give permission for the entry [or that [name of defendant] exceeded [name of plaintiff]'s permission]; [and]
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was [actually] harmed; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s [entry/conduct] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[Entry may occur indirectly, such as by causing vibrations that damage the land or structures or other improvements on the land.]

New September 2003

If plaintiff is seeking nominal damages as an alternative to actual damages, insert the following paragraph above element 4:

If you find all of the above, then the law assumes that [name of plaintiff] has been harmed and [name of plaintiff] is entitled to a nominal sum such as one dollar. [Name of plaintiff] is entitled to additional damages if [name of plaintiff] proves the following:

The last sentence of the above paragraph, along with the final two elements of this instruction, should be omitted if plaintiff is seeking nominal damages only. Read "actually" in the fourth element only if nominal damages are also being sought.

Nominal damages alone are not available in cases involving intangible intrusions such as noise and vibrations; proof of actual damage to the property is required: "[T]he rule is that actionable trespass may not be predicated upon nondamaging noise, odor, or light intrusion. ..." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 936 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669] , internal citation omitted.)

For an instruction on control of property, see CACI No. 1002, Extent of Control Over Premises Area, in the Premises Liability series.

Intent to commit the act constituting the trespass is a necessary element, but intent to damage is not necessary. (Meyer v. Pacific Employers Insurance Co. (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 321 [43 Cal.Rptr. 542] .)

- "As a general rule, landowners and tenants have a right to exclude persons from trespassing on private property; the right to exclude persons is a fundamental aspect of private property ownership." (Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1386, 1390 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 530] , internal citation omitted.)

- "Trespass is an unlawful interference with possession of property. The emission of sound waves which cause actual physical damage to property constitutes a trespass. Liability for trespass may be imposed for conduct which is intentional, reckless, negligent or the result of an extra-hazardous activity." (Staples v. Hoefke (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1397, 1406 [235 Cal.Rptr. 165] , internal citations omitted.)

- "California's definition of trespass is considerably narrower than its definition of nuisance. 'A trespass is an invasion of the interest in the exclusive possession of land, as by entry upon it A nuisance is an interference with the interest in the private use and enjoyment of the land and does not require interference with the possession.' " California has adhered firmly to the view that '[t]he cause of action for trespass is designed to protect possessory--not necessarily ownership--interests in land from unlawful interference.' " (Capogeannis v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 668, 674 [15 Cal.Rptr.2d 796] , internal citations omitted.)

- " '[A] trespass may be committed by the continued presence on the land of a structure, chattel, or other thing which the actor has tortiously placed there, whether or not the actor has the ability to remove it.' Under this definition, 'tortious conduct' denotes that conduct, whether of act or omission, which subjects the actor to liability under the principles of the law of torts." (Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 334, 345 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 377] , internal citations omitted.)

■ The common-law distinction between direct and constructive trespass is not followed in California. A trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injuries as well as by direct and forcible harm. (Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal.App.2d 638, 641 [295 P.2d 958] .)

■ "An action for trespass may technically be maintained only by one whose right to possession has been violated; however, an out-of-possession property owner may recover for an injury to the land by a trespasser which damages the ownership interest." (Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 769, 774 [184 Cal.Rptr. 308] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Under the forcible entry statutes the fact that a defendant may have title or the right to possession of the land is no defense. The plaintiff's interest in peaceable even if wrongful possession is secured against forcible intrusion by conferring on him the right to restitution of the premises, the primary remedy, and incidentally awarding damages proximately caused by the forcible entry." (Allen v. McMillion (1978) 82 Cal.App.3d 211, 218-219 [147 Cal.Rptr. 77] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Where there is a consensual entry, there is no tort, because lack of consent is an element of the wrong." (Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 1, 16-17 [135 Cal.Rptr. 915] .)

■ " 'A conditional or restricted consent to enter land creates a privilege to do so only insofar as the condition or restriction is complied with.' " (Civic Western Corp., supra, 66 Cal.App.3d at p. 17 , quoting Rest.2d Torts, § 168.)

■ "Where one has permission to use land for a particular purpose and proceeds to abuse the privilege, or commits any act hostile to the interests of the lessor, he becomes a trespasser. [P] 'A good faith belief that entry has been authorized or permitted provides no excuse for infringement of property rights if consent was not in fact given by the property owner whose rights are at issue. Accordingly, by showing they gave no authorization, [plaintiffs] established the lack of consent necessary to support their action for injury to their ownership interests.' " (Cassinovs v. Union Oil Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1770, 1780 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 574] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " '[T]he intent required as a basis for liability as a trespasser is simply an intent to be at the place on the land where the trespass allegedly occurred The defendant is liable for an intentional entry although he has acted in good faith, under the mistaken belief, however reasonable, that he is committing no wrong.' " (Miller v. National Broadcasting Corp. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1480-1481 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The general rule is simply that damages may be recovered for annoyance and distress, including mental anguish, proximately caused by a trespass." (Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 887, 905 [267 Cal.Rptr. 399] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Causes of action for conversion and trespass support an award for exemplary damages." (Krieger v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 137, 148 [173 Cal.Rptr. 751] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "It is true that an action for trespass will support an award of nominal damages where actual damages are not shown. However, nominal damages need not be awarded where no actual loss has occurred. 'Failure to return a verdict for nominal damages is not in general ground for reversing a judgment or granting a new trial.' " (Staples, supra, 189 Cal.App.3d at p. 1406 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Trespass may be ' "by personal intrusion of the wrongdoer or by his failure to leave; by throwing or placing something on the land; or by causing the entry of some other person." ' A trespass may be on the surface of the land, above it, or below it. The migration of pollutants from one property to another may constitute a trespass, a nuisance, or both." (Martin Marietta Corp. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1113, 1132 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 670] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Respondent's plant was located in a zone which permitted its operation. It comes within the protection of section 731a of the Code of Civil Procedure which, subject to certain exceptions, generally provides that where a manufacturing or commercial operation is permitted by local zoning, no private individual can enjoin such an operation. It has been determined, however, that this section does not operate to bar recovery for damages for trespassory invasions of another's property occasioned by the conduct of such manufacturing or commercial use." (Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 526, 529 [10 Cal.Rptr. 519] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Civil Code section 3346 provides, in part: "For wrongful injuries to timber, trees, or underwood upon the land of another, or removal thereof, the measure of damages is three times such sum as would compensate for the actual detriment"

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 733 provides: "Any person who cuts down or carries off any wood or underwood, tree, or timber ... or otherwise injures any tree or timber on the land of another person ... is liable to the owner of such land ... for treble the amount of damages which may be assessed therefor, in a civil action, in any Court having jurisdiction."

■ "Although an award of double the actual damages is mandatory under section 3346, the court retains discretion whether to triple them under that statute or Code of Civil Procedure section 733. [P] 'So, the effect of section 3346 as amended, read together with section 733, is that the Legislature intended, insofar as wilful and malicious trespass is concerned under either section, to leave the imposition of treble damages discretionary with the court, but to place a floor upon that discretion at double damages which must be applied whether the trespass be wilful and malicious or casual and involuntary, etc. There are now three measures of damages applicable to the pertinent types of trespass: (1) for wilful and malicious trespass the court may impose treble damages but must impose double damages; (2) for casual and involuntary trespass, etc., the court must impose double damages; and (3) for trespass under authority actual damages.' " (Ostling v. Loring (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1731, 1742 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 391] , internal citation omitted.)

■ The damages provisions in sections 3346 and 733 must be "treated as penal and punitive." (Baker v. Ramirez (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1138 [235 Cal.Rptr. 857] , internal citation omitted.)

■ " 'However, due to the penal nature of these provisions, the damages should be neither doubled nor tripled under section 3346 if punitive damages are awarded under section 3294. That would amount to punishing the defendant twice and is not necessary to further the policy behind section 3294 of educating blunderers (persons who mistake location of boundary lines) and discouraging rogues (persons who ignore boundary lines).' " (Hassoldt v. Patrick Media Group, Inc. (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 153, 169 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 662] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Treble damages could only be awarded under [section 3346] where the wrongdoer intentionally acted wilfully or maliciously. The required intent is one to vex, harass or annoy, and the existence of such intent is a question of fact for the trial court." (Sills v. Siller (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 735, 743 [32 Cal.Rptr. 621] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Although neither section [3346 or 733] expressly so provides, it is now settled that to warrant such an award of treble damages it must be established that the wrongful act was willful and malicious." (Caldwell v. Walker (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 758, 762 [27 Cal.Rptr. 675] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Diminution in market value ... is not an absolute limitation; several other theories are available to fix appropriate compensation for the plaintiff's loss. ... [P] One alternative measure of damages is the cost of restoring the property to its condition prior to the injury. Courts will normally not award costs of restoration if they exceed the diminution in the value of the property; the plaintiff may be awarded the lesser of the two amounts." (Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 858, 862 [162 Cal.Rptr. 104] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The rule precluding recovery of restoration costs in excess of diminution in value is, however, not of invariable application. Restoration costs may be awarded even though they exceed the decrease in market value if 'there is a reason personal to the owner for restoring the original condition,' or 'where there is reason to believe that the plaintiff will, if fact, make the repairs.' " (Heninger, supra, 101 Cal.App.3d at p. 863 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Courts have stressed that only reasonable costs of replacing destroyed trees with identical or substantially similar trees may be recovered." (Heninger, supra, 101 Cal.App.3d at p. 865 .)

CHAPTER 20 California Judicial Council Trespass Instructions

3-20 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2004

CACI 2004 Intentional Entry Explained

[An entry is intentional if a person knowingly goes onto the property of another or knowingly causes something to go onto that property.]

[An entry is [also] intentional if a person engages in conduct that is substantially certain to cause something to go onto that property.]

[An entry is [also] intentional even if a person mistakenly thinks he or she has a right to come onto that property.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is not intended for general use in every case. Read a bracketed sentence or sentences only in unusual cases where an issue regarding the entry is raised and further explanation is required.

Sources and Authority

- "The doing of an act which will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter upon another's land suffices for an intentional trespass to land upon which liability may be based. It was error to instruct the jury that an 'intent to harm' was required." (Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 526, 530-531 [10 Cal.Rptr. 519] , internal citation omitted.)

- An instruction on the definition of intentional trespass is considered a proper statement of law.

Failure to give this instruction on request where appropriate is error. (Staples v. Hoefke (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1397, 1407 [235 Cal.Rptr. 165] .)

■ "As Prosser and Keeton on Torts ... explained, '[t]he intent required as a basis for liability as a trespasser is simply an intent to be at the place on the land where the trespass allegedly occurred The defendant is liable for an intentional entry although he has acted in good faith, under the mistaken belief, however reasonable, that he is committing no wrong.' CHAPTER 20 California Judicial Council Trespass Instructions

CACI 2005 Affirmative Defense--Necessity

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/it] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, because the entry on to [name of plaintiff]'s property was lawful. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that it was necessary, or reasonably appeared to [him/her/it] to be necessary, to enter the land to prevent serious harm to a person or property.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Sources and Authority

■ "[I]t has long [been] recognized that '[n]ecessity often justifies an action which would otherwise constitute a trespass, as where the act is prompted by the motive of preserving life or property and reasonably appears to the actor to be necessary for that purpose.' " (People v. Ray (1999) 21 Cal.4th 464, 473 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 1, 981 P.2d 928] , internal citations omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 197 provides:

(1) One is privileged to enter or remain on land in the possession of another if it is or reasonably appears to be necessary to prevent serious harm to
(a) the actor, or his land or chattels, or

(b) the other or a third person, or the land or chattels of either, unless the actor knows or has reason to know that the one for whose benefit he enters is unwilling that he shall take such action.

(2) Where the entry is for the benefit of the actor or a third person, he is subject to liability for any harm done in the exercise of the privilege stated in Subsection (1) to any legally protected interest of the possessor in the land or connected with it, except where the threat of harm to avert which the entry is made is caused by the tortious conduct or contributory negligence of the possessor.

■ This Restatement section was approved in People v. Ray, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p. 474 .

CHAPTER 20 California Judicial Council Trespass Instructions

3-20 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2020

CACI 2020 Public Nuisance--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she] suffered harm because [name of defendant] created a nuisance. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant], by acting or failing to act, created a condition that [insert one or more of the following:]

[was harmful to health;] [or]

[was indecent or offensive to the senses;] [or]

[was an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property;] [or]

[unlawfully obstructed the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway;]

2. That the condition affected a substantial number of people at the same time;

3. That an ordinary person would be reasonably annoyed or disturbed by the condition;

4. That the seriousness of the harm outweighs the social utility of [name of defendant]'s conduct;

5. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to [name of defendant]'s conduct;

6. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm that was different from the type of harm suffered by the general public; and

7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

Private nuisance concerns injury to a property interest. Public nuisance is not dependent on an interference with rights of land: "[A] private nuisance is a civil wrong based on disturbance of rights in land while a public nuisance is not dependent upon a disturbance of rights in land but upon an interference with the rights of the community at large." (Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal.App.3d 116, 124 [99 Cal.Rptr. 350] , internal citation omitted.)

Sources and Authority

- Civil Code section 3479 provides: "Anything which is injurious to health, including, but not limited to, the illegal sale of controlled substances, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, or unlawfully obstructs the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway, is a nuisance."

- Civil Code section 3480 provides: "A public nuisance is one which affects at the same time an entire community or neighborhood, or any considerable number of persons, although the extent of the annoyance or damage inflicted upon individuals may be unequal."

- Civil Code section 3493 provides: "A private person may maintain an action for a public nuisance, if it is specially injurious to himself, but not otherwise."

- Civil Code section 3482 provides: "Nothing which is done or maintained under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance."

- "[T]he exculpatory effect of Civil Code section 3482 has been circumscribed by decisions of this court. ... " "A statutory sanction cannot be pleaded in justification of acts which by the general rules of law constitute a nuisance, unless the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute under which the justification is made, or by the plainest and most necessary implication from the powers expressly conferred, so that it can be fairly stated that the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act which occasions the injury." ' ' (Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal.3d 285, 291 [142 Cal.Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43] , internal citation omitted.)

- "Where the nuisance alleged is not also a private nuisance as to a private individual he does not have a cause of action on account of a public nuisance unless he alleges facts showing special injury to himself in person or property of a character different in kind from that suffered by the general public." (Venuto, supra, 22 Cal.App.3d at p. 124 , internal citations omitted; but see Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1540, 1550 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 602] ["to the extent Venuto ... can be read as precluding an action to abate a public nuisance by a private individual who has suffered personal injuries as a result of the challenged condition, we believe it is an incorrect statement of the law"].)

- "Unlike the private nuisance--tied to and designed to vindicate individual ownership interests in land--the 'common' or public nuisance emerged from distinctly different historical origins. The public nuisance doctrine is aimed at the protection and redress of community interests and, at least in theory, embodies a kind of collective ideal of civil life which the courts have vindicated by equitable remedies since the beginning of the 16th century." (People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1090, 1103 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 277, 929 P.2d 596] .)
- "[W]hen the nuisance is a private as well as a public one, there is no requirement the plaintiff suffer damage different in kind from that suffered by the general public. That is, the plaintiff ' "does not lose his rights as a landowner merely because others suffer damage of the same kind, or even of the same degree ... ' " (Birke, supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 1551 , internal citations omitted.)
- "Of course, not every interference with collective social interests constitutes a public nuisance. To qualify ... the interference must be both substantial and unreasonable." (People ex rel. Gallo, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1105 .)
- "The fact that the defendants' alleged misconduct consists of omission rather than affirmative actions does not preclude nuisance liability." (Birke, supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 1552 [citing this instruction], internal citation omitted.)
- "A nuisance may be either a negligent or an intentional tort." (Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 903, 920 [162 Cal.Rptr. 194] , internal citation omitted.)
- "An essential element of a cause of action for nuisance is damage or injury." (Helix Land Co., Inc. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal.App.3d 932, 950 [147 Cal.Rptr. 683] .)
- "By analogy to the rules governing tort liability, courts apply the same elements to determine liability for a public nuisance." (People ex rel. Gallo, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1105, fn. 3 , internal citation omitted.)
- "The elements 'of a cause of action for public nuisance include the existence of a duty and causation.' Public nuisance liability 'does not hinge on whether the defendant owns, possesses or controls the property, nor on whether he is in a position to abate the nuisance; the critical question is whether the defendant created or assisted in the creation of the nuisance.' " (Melton v. Boustred (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 521, 542 [107 Cal.Rptr.3d 481] , internal citations omitted.)
- " 'Where negligence and nuisance causes of action rely on the same facts about lack of due care, the nuisance claim is a negligence claim.' The nuisance claim 'stands or falls with the determination of the negligence cause of action' in such cases." (Melton, supra, 183 Cal.App.4th at p. 542 , internal citations omitted.)

■ Civil Code section 3479 provides: "Anything which is injurious to health, including, but not limited to, the illegal sale of controlled substances, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, or unlawfully obstructs the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway, is a nuisance."

■ Civil Code section 3482 provides: "Nothing which is done or maintained under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance."

■ "[T]he exculpatory effect of Civil Code section 3482 has been circumscribed by decisions of this court. ... ' "A statutory sanction cannot be pleaded in justification of acts which by the general rules of law constitute a nuisance, unless the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute under which the justification is made, or by the plainest and most necessary implication from the powers expressly conferred, so that it can be fairly stated that the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act which occasions the injury." ' " (Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal.3d 285, 291 [142 Cal.Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "In distinction to trespass, liability for nuisance does not require proof of damage to the plaintiff's property; proof of interference with the plaintiff's use and enjoyment of that property is sufficient." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 937 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669] .)

■ "[T]he essence of a private nuisance is its interference with the use and enjoyment of land. The activity in issue must 'disturb or prevent the comfortable enjoyment of property,' such as smoke from an asphalt mixing plant, noise and odors from the operation of a refreshment stand, or the noise and vibration of machinery." (Oliver v. AT&T Wireless Services (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 521, 534 [90 Cal.Rptr.2d 491] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Unlike public nuisance, which is an interference with the rights of the community at large, private nuisance is a civil wrong based on disturbance of rights in land. A nuisance may be both public and private, but to proceed on a private nuisance theory the plaintiff must prove an injury specifically referable to the use and enjoyment of his or her land. The injury, however, need not be different in kind from that suffered by the general public." (Koll-Irvine Center Property Owners Assn. v. County of Orange (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 1036, 1041 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 664] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Examples of interferences with the use and enjoyment of land actionable under a private nuisance theory are legion. 'So long as the interference is substantial and unreasonable, and such as would be offensive or inconvenient to the normal person, virtually any disturbance of the enjoyment of the property may amount to a nuisance.' " (Koll-Irvine Center Property Owners Assn., supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 1041 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The first additional requirement for recovery of damages on a nuisance theory is proof that the invasion of the plaintiff's interest in the use and enjoyment of the land was substantial, i.e., that it caused the plaintiff to suffer 'substantial actual damage.' The Restatement recognizes the same requirement as the need for proof of 'significant harm,' which it variously defines as 'harm of importance' and a 'real and appreciable invasion of the plaintiff's interests' and an invasion that is 'definitely offensive, seriously annoying or intolerable.' The degree of harm is to be judged by an objective standard, i.e., what effect would the invasion have on persons of normal health and sensibilities living in the same community? 'If normal persons in that locality would not be substantially annoyed or disturbed by the situation, then the invasion is not a significant one, even though the idiosyncrasies of the particular plaintiff may make it unendurable to him.' This is, of course, a question of fact that turns on the circumstances of each case." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co., supra, 13 Cal.4th at p. 938 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The second additional requirement for nuisance is superficially similar but analytically distinct: 'The interference with the protected interest must not only be substantial, but it must also be unreasonable', i.e., it must be 'of such a nature, duration or amount as to constitute unreasonable interference with the use and enjoyment of the land.' The primary test for determining whether the invasion is unreasonable is whether the gravity of the harm outweighs the social utility of the defendant's conduct, taking a number of factors into account. Again the standard is objective: the question is not whether the particular plaintiff found the invasion unreasonable, but 'whether reasonable persons generally, looking at the whole situation impartially and objectively, would consider it unreasonable.' And again this is a question of fact: 'Fundamentally, the unreasonableness of intentional invasions is a problem of relative values to be determined by the trier of fact in each case in the light of all the circumstances of that case.' " (San Diego Gas & Electric Co., supra, 13 Cal.4th at pp. 938-939 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The fact that the defendants' alleged misconduct consists of omission rather than affirmative actions does not preclude nuisance liability." (Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1540, 1552 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 602] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A nuisance may be either a negligent or an intentional tort." (Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 903, 920 [162 Cal.Rptr. 194] , internal citation omitted.)

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 822 provides:

One is subject to liability for a private nuisance if, but only if, his conduct is a legal cause of an invasion of another's interest in the private use and enjoyment of land, and the invasion is either

(a) intentional and unreasonable, or

(b) unintentional and otherwise actionable under the rules controlling liability for negligent or reckless conduct, or for abnormally dangerous conditions or activities.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 826 provides:

An intentional invasion of another's interest in the use and enjoyment of land is unreasonable if

- (a) the gravity of the harm outweighs the utility of the actor's conduct, or
- (b) the harm caused by the conduct is serious and the financial burden of compensating for this and similar harm to others would not make the continuation of the conduct not feasible.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 827 provides:

In determining the gravity of the harm from an intentional invasion of another's interest in the use and enjoyment of land, the following factors are important:

- (a) the extent of the harm involved;
- (b) the character of the harm involved;
- (c) the social value that the law attaches to the type of use or enjoyment invaded;
- (d) the suitability of the particular use or enjoyment invaded to the character of the locality; and
- (e) the burden on the person harmed of avoiding the harm.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 828 provides:

In determining the utility of conduct that causes an intentional invasion of another's interest in the use and enjoyment of land, the following factors are important:

- (a) the social value that the law attaches to the primary purpose of the conduct;
- (b) the suitability of the conduct to the character of the locality; and
- (c) the impracticability of preventing or avoiding the invasion.

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action was not filed within the applicable three-year period for injury to real property. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 338(b).) This instruction may be used for a permanent trespass other than an action for damages for wrongful damage to timber, to which a five-year statute applies. (See Civ. Code, § 3346(c).) It may also be used for a permanent private nuisance. There is no limitation period for a public nuisance. (See Civ. Code, § 3490.) There is also essentially no statute of limitation for a continuing trespass or continuing private nuisance, but damages for future harm are not recoverable. (See Lyles v. State of California (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 281, 291 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 696] [nuisance]; Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 583, 592 [63 Cal.Rptr.3d 165] [trespass].)

Include the optional second paragraph if there is an issue of fact as to whether the trespass or nuisance is permanent or continuous. If applicable, include the last sentence in the case of a nuisance.

If the plaintiff alleges that the delayed-discovery rule applies to avoid the limitation defense, CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations--Delayed Discovery, may be adapted for use.

See also CACI No. 3903F, Damage to Real Property (Economic Damage), and CACI No. 3903G, Loss of Use of Real Property (Economic Damage).

Sources and Authority

- Code of Civil Procedure section 338 provides in part:

Within three years:

- (b) An action for trespass upon or injury to real property.

- Civil Code section 3490 provides: "No lapse of time can legalize a public nuisance, amounting to an actual obstruction of public right."

■ "[A] trespass may be continuing or permanent. A permanent trespass is an intrusion on property under circumstances that indicate an intention that the trespass shall be permanent. In these cases, the law considers the wrong to be completed at the time of entry and allows recovery of damages for past, present, and future harm in a single action, generally the diminution in the property's value. The cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run at the time of entry. ... [P] In contrast, a continuing trespass is an intrusion under circumstances that indicate the trespass may be discontinued or abated. In these circumstances, damages are assessed for present and past damages only; prospective damages are not awarded because the trespass may be discontinued or abated at some time, ending the harm. ... Continuing trespasses are essentially a series of successive injuries, and the statute of limitations begins anew with each injury. In order to recover for all harm inflicted by a continuing trespass, the plaintiff is required to bring periodic successive actions." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 592 .)

■ "Two distinct classifications have emerged in nuisance law which determine the remedies available to injured parties and the applicable statute of limitations. On the one hand, permanent nuisances are of a type where 'by one act a permanent injury is done, [and] damages are assessed once for all.' ... In such cases, plaintiffs ordinarily are required to bring one action for all past, present and future damage within three years after the permanent nuisance is erected. The statutory period is shorter for claims against public entities. (Gov. Code, § 911.2.) Damages are not dependent upon any subsequent use of the property but are complete when the nuisance comes into existence. [P] On the other hand, if a nuisance is a use which may be discontinued at any time, it is considered continuing in character and persons harmed by it may bring successive actions for damages until the nuisance is abated. Recovery is limited, however, to actual injury suffered prior to commencement of each action. Prospective damages are unavailable." (Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Auth. (1985) 39 Cal.3d 862, 868-869 [218 Cal.Rptr. 293, 705 P.2d 866] , internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

- "Historically, the application of the statute of limitations for trespass has been the same as for nuisance and has depended on whether the trespass has been continuing or permanent." (Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 1125, 1148 [281 Cal.Rptr. 827] .)
- "[G]enerally the principles governing the permanent or continuing nature of a trespass or nuisance are the same and the cases discuss the two causes of action without distinction." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 594 .)
- "Generally, whether a trespass is continuing or permanent is a question of fact properly submitted to the jury. A trial court may remove the issue of fact from the jury by directed verdict only if there is no evidence tending to prove the case of the party opposing the motion." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 597 , internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he key question [in determining whether a trespass is continuous or permanent] is whether the trespass or nuisance can be discontinued or abated and there are a number of tests used to answer this question. A respected legal treatise summarizes the various tests as follows: '[W]hether (1) the offense activity is currently continuing, which indicates that the nuisance is continuing, (2) the impact of the condition will vary over time, indicating a continuing nuisance, or (3) the nuisance can be abated at any time, in a reasonable manner and for reasonable cost, and is feasible by comparison of the benefits and detriments to be gained by abatement.' " (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at pp. 593-594 , citing 8 Miller & Starr, Cal. Real Estate (3d ed. 2000) § 22.39, pp. 148-149.)
- "The jury's conclusion that it was unknown whether the soil contamination could be abated by reasonable means at a reasonable cost means that plaintiff had failed to prove her claims of continuing nuisance and trespass." (McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 56, 86 [103 Cal.Rptr.3d 37] .)
- "[T]he 'continuing' nature of a nuisance 'refers to the continuing damage caused by the offensive condition, not to the acts causing the offensive condition to occur.' " (Lyles, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 291 , internal citation omitted.)
- "[A] cause of action for damage to real property accrues when the defendant's act causes ' immediate and permanent injury' to the property or, to put it another way, when there is '[a]ctual and appreciable harm' to the property." (Siegel v. Anderson Homes, Inc. (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 994, 1005 [13 Cal.Rptr.3d 462] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "Property damage cases ... are different from medical malpractice cases in the sense that, when property is damaged, there is ordinarily some wrongful cause. Thus, when one's property is damaged, one should reasonably suspect that someone has done something wrong to him and, accordingly, be charged with knowledge of the information that would have been revealed by an investigation. That particular property damage could result from natural causes does not mean that the same property damage could result only from natural causes." (Lyles, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at pp. 287-288 .)
- "The traditional rule in tort cases is that the statute of limitations begins to run upon the occurrence of the last fact essential to the cause of action. Although sometimes harsh, the fact that plaintiff is neither aware of his cause of action nor of the identity of a wrongdoer will not toll the statute. [P] The harshness of this rule has been ameliorated in some cases where it is manifestly unjust to deprive plaintiffs of a cause of action before they are aware that they have been injured. This modified rule has been applied to latent defects in real property and improvements. In the case of such latent defects the statute of limitations begins to run only when 'noticeable damage occurs.' " (Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 398, 406-407 [163 Cal.Rptr. 711] , internal citations omitted, disapproved on another ground in Trope v. Katz (1995) 11 Cal.4th 274, 292 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 241, 902 P.2d 259] , original italics.)

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2000, Trespass.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of plaintiff's consent, question 3 can be modified, as in element 3 in CACI No. 2000.

This form may be modified if the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest on specific losses that occurred prior to judgment.

New September 2003; Revised April 2007

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2001, Trespass--Extrahazardous Activities.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of plaintiff's consent, question 4 can be modified.

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Conversion Series" of civil jury instructions [CACI No. 2100 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for a cause of action in conversion [CACI No. 2100].
- Essential factual elements for a cause of action in trespass to chattels [CACI No. 2101].
- Presumed measure of damages for conversion [CACI No. 2102].

The conversion series also includes special verdict forms for use in conversion actions [CACI No. VF-2100].

CHAPTER 21 California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions

3-21 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2100

CACI 2100 Conversion--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully exercised control over [his/her/its] personal property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/possessed/had a right to possess] [a/an] [insert item of personal property];

2. That [name of defendant] intentionally [insert one or more of the following:]

[took possession of the [insert item of personal property] for a significant period of time;] [or]

[prevented [name of plaintiff] from having access to the [insert item of personal property] for a significant period of time;] [or]

[destroyed the [insert item of personal property]];] [or]

[refused to return [name of plaintiff]'s [insert item of personal property] after [name of plaintiff] demanded its return.]

3. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent;

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

The last option for element 2 may be used if the defendant's original possession of the property was not tortious. (See Atwood v. S. Cal. Ice Co. (1923) 63 Cal.App. 343, 345 [218 P. 283] .)

Sources and Authority

■ "[Cross-complainant] maintains that he alleged the essential elements of a conversion action, which 'are the plaintiff's ownership or right to possession of the property at the time of the conversion; the defendant's conversion by a wrongful act or disposition of property rights; and damages. It is not necessary that there be a manual taking of the property; it is only necessary to show an assumption of control or ownership over the property, or that the alleged converter has applied the property to his own use.' ..." (Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 1489, 1507 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 268] .)

■ "Conversion is a strict liability tort. The foundation of the action rests neither in the knowledge nor the intent of the defendant. Instead, the tort consists in the breach of an absolute duty; the act of conversion itself is tortious. Therefore, questions of the defendant's good faith, lack of knowledge, and motive are ordinarily immaterial." (Burlesci v. Petersen (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1066 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 704] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]t is generally acknowledged that conversion is a tort that may be committed only with relation to personal property and not real property." (Munger v. Moore (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 1, 7 [89 Cal.Rptr. 323] , disagreeing with Katz v. Enos (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 266, 269 [156 P.2d 461] .)

■ "The first element of that cause of action is his ownership or right to possession of the property at the time of the conversion. Once it is determined that [plaintiff] has a right to reinstate the contract, he has a right to possession of the vehicle and standing to bring conversion. Unjustified refusal to turn over possession on demand constitutes conversion even where possession by the withholder was originally obtained lawfully and of course so does an unauthorized sale." (Cerra v. Blackstone (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 604, 609 [218 Cal.Rptr. 15] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'To establish a conversion, plaintiff must establish an actual interference with his ownership or right of possession. ... Where plaintiff neither has title to the property alleged to have been converted, nor possession thereof, he cannot maintain an action for conversion.' " (Moore v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 120, 136 [271 Cal.Rptr. 146, 793 P.2d 479] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In a conversion action the plaintiff need show only that he was entitled to possession at the time of conversion; the fact that plaintiff regained possession of the converted property does not prevent him from suing for damages for the conversion." (Enterprise Leasing Corp. v. Shugart Corp. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 737, 748 [282 Cal.Rptr. 620] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "It is clear that legal title to property is not a requisite to maintain an action for damages in conversion. To mandate a conversion action 'it is not essential that plaintiff shall be the absolute owner of the property converted but she must show that she was entitled to immediate possession at the time of conversion.' " (Hartford Financial Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 598 [158 Cal.Rptr. 169] , internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he law is well settled that there can be no conversion where an owner either expressly or impliedly assents to or ratifies the taking, use or disposition of his property." (Farrington v. A. Teichert & Son, Inc. (1943) 59 Cal.App.2d 468, 474 [139 P.2d 80] , internal citations omitted.)
- "As to intentional invasions of the plaintiff's interests, his consent negatives the wrongful element of the defendant's act, and prevents the existence of a tort. 'The absence of lawful consent,' said Mr. Justice Holmes, 'is part of the definition of an assault.' The same is true of false imprisonment, conversion, and trespass." (Tavernier v. Maes (1966) 242 Cal.App.2d 532, 552 [51 Cal.Rptr. 575] , internal citations omitted.)
- " 'Money cannot be the subject of a cause of action for conversion unless there is a specific, identifiable sum involved, such as where an agent accepts a sum of money to be paid to another and fails to make the payment.' A 'generalized claim for money [is] not actionable as conversion.' " (PCO, Inc. v. Christensen, Miller, Fink, Jacobs, Glaser, Weil & Shapiro, LLP (2007) 150 Cal.App.4th 384, 395 [58 Cal.Rptr.3d 516] , internal citations omitted.)
- " 'Conversion is any act of dominion wrongfully exerted over another's personal property in denial of or inconsistent with his rights therein.' One who buys property in good faith from a party lacking title and the right to sell may be liable for conversion. The remedies for conversion include specific recovery of the property, damages, and a quieting of title." (State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 1076, 1081-1082 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 178] , internal citations omitted.)
- "Conversion is the wrongful exercise of dominion over the personal property of another. The act must be knowingly or intentionally done, but a wrongful intent is not necessary. Because the act must be knowingly done, 'neither negligence, active or passive, nor a breach of contract, even though it result in injury to, or loss of, specific property, constitutes a conversion.' It follows therefore that mistake, good faith, and due care are ordinarily immaterial, and cannot be set up as defenses in an action for conversion." (Taylor v. Forte Hotels International (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1119, 1124 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 189] , internal citations omitted.)
- "In order to establish a conversion, the plaintiff 'must show an intention or purpose to convert the goods and to exercise ownership over them, or to prevent the owner from taking possession of his property.' Thus, a necessary element of the tort is an intent to exercise ownership over property which belongs to another. For this reason, conversion is considered an intentional tort." (Collin v. American Empire Insurance Co. (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 787, 812 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 391] , internal citations omitted.)
- "A conversion can occur when a willful failure to return property deprives the owner of possession." (Fearon v. Department of Corrections (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 1254, 1257 [209 Cal.Rptr. 309] , internal citation omitted.)
- "A demand for return of the property is not a condition precedent to institution of the action when possession was originally acquired by a tort as it was in this case." (Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 122, 127 [249 P.2d 558] .)
- " 'Negligence in caring for the goods is not an act of dominion over them such as is necessary to make the bailee liable as a converter.' Thus a warehouseman's negligence in causing a fire which destroyed the plaintiffs' goods will not support a conversion claim." (Gonzales v. Pers. Storage Inc. (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 464, 477 [65 Cal.Rptr.2d 473] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Although damages for conversion are frequently the equivalent to the damages for negligence, i.e., specific recovery of the property or damages based on the value of the property, negligence is no part of an action for conversion." (Taylor, supra, 235 Cal.App.3d at p. 1123 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "A person without legal title to property may recover from a converter if the plaintiff is responsible to the true owner, such as in the case of a bailee or pledgee of the property." (Department of Industrial Relations v. UI Video Stores, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 1084, 1096 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 457] , internal citation omitted.)

Sources and Authority

- "Trespass to chattel, although seldom employed as a tort theory in California ... , lies where an intentional interference with the possession of personal property has proximately caused injury. Prosser notes trespass to chattel has evolved considerably from its original common law application--concerning the asportation of another's tangible property--to include even the unauthorized use of personal property: 'Its chief importance now,' according to Prosser, 'is that there may be recovery ... for interferences with the possession of chattels which are not sufficiently important to be classed as conversion, and so to compel the defendant to pay the full value of the thing with which he has interfered. Trespass to chattels survives today, in other words, largely as a little brother of conversion.' " (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1566-1567 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468] , footnotes and internal citations omitted.)
- "Where the conduct complained of does not amount to a substantial interference with possession or the right thereto, but consists of intermeddling with or use of or damages to the personal property, the owner has a cause of action for trespass or case, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use." (Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal.2d 541, 551 [176 P.2d 1] , internal citations omitted.)
- " "Though not amounting to conversion, the defendant's interference must, to be actionable, have caused some injury to the chattel or to the plaintiff's rights in it. Under California law, trespass to chattels "lies where an intentional interference with the possession of personal property has proximately caused injury." In cases of interference with possession of personal property not amounting to conversion, "the owner has a cause of action for trespass or case, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use." ...' " (Jamgotchian v. Slender (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 1384, 1400-1401 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 122] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "It is well settled that a person having neither the possession nor the right to the possession of personal chattels, cannot maintain trespass or trover for an injury done to the property." (Triscony v. Orr (1875) 49 Cal. 612, 617 , internal citations omitted.)
- "In order to prevail on a claim for trespass based on accessing a computer system, the plaintiff must establish: (1) defendant intentionally and without authorization interfered with plaintiff's possessory interest in the computer system; and (2) defendant's unauthorized use proximately resulted in damage to plaintiff." (eBay, Inc. v. Bidder's Edge (N.D. Cal. 2000) 100 F.Supp.2d 1058, 1069-1070 , internal citations omitted.)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 218, provides:
 - One who commits a trespass to a chattel is subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel if, but only if,
 - (a) he dispossesses the other of the chattel, or
 - (b) the chattel is impaired as to its condition, quality, or value, or
 - (c) the possessor is deprived of the use of the chattel for a substantial time, or
 - (d) bodily harm is caused to the possessor, or harm is caused to some person or thing in which the possessor has a legally protected interest.
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 222, comment (a), states: "Normally any dispossession is so clearly a serious interference with the right of control that it amounts to a conversion; and it is frequently said that any dispossession is a conversion. There may, however, be minor and unimportant disposessions, such as taking another man's hat by mistake and returning it within two minutes upon discovery of the mistake, which do not seriously interfere with the other's right of control, and so do not amount to conversion. In such a case the remedy of the action of trespass remains, and will allow recovery of damages for the interference with the possession."

CHAPTER 21 California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions

3-21 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2102

CACI 2102 Presumed Measure of Damages for Conversion (Civ. Code, § 3336)

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

1. [The fair market value of the [insert item of personal property] at the time [name of defendant] wrongfully exercised control over it;]

[or]

[Special damages resulting from [name of defendant]'s conduct;] [and]

2. Reasonable compensation for the time and money spent by [name of plaintiff] in attempting to recover the [insert item of personal property]; [and]

3. [Emotional distress suffered by [name of plaintiff] as a result of [name of defendant]'s conduct.]

[In order to recover special damages, [name of plaintiff] must prove:

1. That [describe special circumstances that require a measure of damages other than value];

2. That it was reasonably foreseeable that special injury or harm would result from the conversion; and

3. That reasonable care on [name of plaintiff]'s part would not have prevented the loss.]

["Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid to a willing seller, assuming:

1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and

2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the [insert item] is reasonably capable of being used.]

New September 2003

The third element of listed damages, emotional distress, is bracketed because it appears that such damages are recoverable only if the second alternative measure of damages stated in the first paragraph of Civil Code section 3336 applies. (See Gonzales v. Pers. Storage (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 464, 477 [65 Cal.Rptr.2d 473].)

See Commercial Code section 3420 regarding conversion of negotiable instruments.

■ Civil Code section 3336 provides:

The detriment caused by the wrongful conversion of personal property is presumed to be:

First--The value of the property at the time of the conversion, with the interest from that time, or, an amount sufficient to indemnify the party injured for the loss which is the natural, reasonable and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of and which a proper degree of prudence on his part would not have averted; and Second--A fair compensation for the time and money properly expended in pursuit of the property.

■ Civil Code section 3337 provides: "The presumption declared by the last section cannot be repelled, in favor of one whose possession was wrongful from the beginning, by his subsequent application of the property to the benefit of the owner, without his consent."

■ "[W]e are of the opinion that section 3337 can only be held to apply to a situation where the property was voluntarily applied by the party guilty of conversion to the benefit of the injured party, and can have no application to a situation such as here where the application was compelled by a legal duty." (Goldberg v. List (1938) 11 Cal.2d 389, 393 [79 P.2d 1087] .)

■ "Although the first part of section 3336 appears to provide for alternative measures of recovery, the first of the two measures, namely the value of the property converted at the time and place of conversion with interest from that time, is generally considered to be the appropriate measure of damages in a conversion action. The determination of damages under the alternative provision is resorted to only where the determination on the basis of value at the time of conversion would be manifestly unjust." (Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116 [43 Cal.Rptr. 420] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "As a general rule, the value of the converted property is the appropriate measure of damages, and resort to the alternative occurs only where a determination of damages on the basis of value would be manifestly unjust. Accordingly, a person claiming damages under the alternative provision must plead and prove special circumstances that require a measure of damages other than value, and the jury must determine whether it was reasonably foreseeable that special injury or damage would result from the conversion." (Lueter v. State of California (2002) 94 Cal.App.4th 1285, 1302 [115 Cal.Rptr.2d 68] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The damage measures set forth in the first paragraph of section 3336 are in the alternative. The first alternative is to compensate for the value of the property at the time of conversion with interest from the time of the taking. The second alternative is compensation in a sum equal to the amount of loss legally caused by the conversion and which could have been avoided with a proper degree of prudence. Both of these alternatives are in addition to the damage element for the time spent pursuing the converted property set forth in the second paragraph of section 3336." (Moreno v. Greenwood Auto Center (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 201, 209 [110 Cal.Rptr.2d 177] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Civil Code section 3336 sets out the presumptive measure of damages in conversion, which is rebuttable, save and except when section 3337 applies. Under Civil Code section 3337, a defendant cannot rebut the presumption by claiming that he applied the converted property to plaintiff's benefit when he took unlawful possession of the property from the beginning. Consequently, the effect of section 3337 is to prevent mitigation when property is stolen from the plaintiff and subsequently applied to his benefit. In this situation, the defendant will not be able to claim that his conversion benefited plaintiff; he will thereby be prevented from claiming an offset derived from his original wrong. In contrast to this situation, if the particular facts of a case indicate, as in the instant case, that the possession was lawful before the conversion occurred ... Civil Code section 3337 is inapplicable, and a converter is not precluded from claiming mitigation of damages." (Dakota Gardens Apartment Investors "B" v. Pudwill (1977) 75 Cal.App.3d 346, 351-352 [142 Cal.Rptr. 126].)

■ "[W]e conclude that notwithstanding further developments in the law of negligence, damages for emotional distress growing out of a defendant's conversion of personal property are recoverable." (Gonzales, supra, 56 Cal.App.4th at p. 477 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In the absence of special circumstances the appropriate measure of damages for conversion of personal property is the fair market value of that property plus interest from the date of conversion, the standard first listed in section 3336, Civil Code. However, where proof establishes an injury beyond that which would be adequately compensated by the value of the property and interest, the court may award such amounts as will indemnify for all proximate reasonable loss caused by the wrongful act. Where damages for loss of use exceeds the legal rate of interest, it is appropriate to award the former, but not both." (Lint v. Chisholm (1981) 121 Cal.App.3d 615, 624-625 [177 Cal.Rptr. 314] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'To entitle a party to such compensation the [evidence] should tend to show that money was properly paid out and time properly lost in pursuit of the property, and how much.' Such evidence should be definite and certain. Expenses 'incurred in preparation for litigation and not in pursuit of property' cannot be allowed as damages under Civil Code section 3336. Additionally, any such compensation must be fair, i.e., reasonable." (Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 1553, 1559 [239 Cal.Rptr. 178] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A]lthough good faith and mistake are not defenses to an action for conversion, the plaintiff's damages will be reduced if the defendant returns the property or the plaintiff otherwise recovers the property." (Krusi v. Bear, Stearns & Co. (1983) 144 Cal.App.3d 664, 673 [192 Cal.Rptr. 793] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Causes of action for conversion and trespass support an award for exemplary damages." (Krieger v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 137, 148 [173 Cal.Rptr. 751] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "Ordinarily 'value of the property' at the time of the conversion is determined by its market value at the time. However, '[w]here certain property has a peculiar value to a person recovering damages for deprivation thereof, or injury thereto, that may be deemed to be its value ... against a willful wrongdoer.' " (In re Brian S. (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 523, 530 [181 Cal.Rptr. 778] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In an action for damages for conversion, it is the rule that the plaintiff, although owning but a limited or qualified interest in the property, may, as against a stranger who has no ownership therein, recover the full value of the property converted." (Camp v. Ortega (1962) 209 Cal.App.2d 275, 286 [25 Cal.Rptr. 873] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "A plaintiff seeking recovery under the alternative provision of the statute must therefore plead and prove the existence of 'special circumstances which require a different measure of damages to be applied.' Having done so, the trier of fact must then determine 'whether it was reasonably foreseeable to a prudent person, having regard for the accompanying circumstances, that injury or damage would likely result from his wrongful act.' " (Krueger v. Bank of America (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 204, 215 [193 Cal.Rptr. 322] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Defendants contend that the anticipated loss of profits is not 'the natural, reasonable and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of,' within the meaning of section 3336. Although no California case which has applied the alternative measure of damages in a conversion case has specifically defined this language, we are satisfied that its meaning is synonymous with the term 'proximate cause' or 'legal cause.' These terms mean, in essence, 'that there be some reasonable connection between the act or omission of the defendant and the damage which the plaintiff has suffered.' In determining whether this connection exists, the question is whether it was reasonably foreseeable to a prudent person, having regard for the accompanying circumstances, that injury or damage would likely result from his wrongful act. This question being one of fact to be determined generally by the trier of fact." (Myers, supra, 233 Cal.App.2d at pp. 119-120 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "In exceptional circumstances, to avoid injustice, loss of profits may be the measure." (Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 783, 794 [62 Cal.Rptr. 553] , internal citation omitted.)

■ Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.320(a) provides: "The fair market value of the property taken is the highest price on the date of valuation that would be agreed to by a seller, being willing to sell but under no particular or urgent necessity for so doing, nor obliged to sell, and a buyer, being ready, willing, and able to buy but under no particular necessity for so doing, each dealing with the other with full knowledge of all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably adaptable and available."

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions on the tort of conversion. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on conversion, see Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions. Ch. 21 includes Judicial Council instructions on the essential factual elements for an action in conversion [CACI No. 2100] and trespass to chattels [CACI No. 2101], and an instruction on the presumed measure of damages for conversion [CACI No. 2102]. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes instructions on the elements of a cause of action for conversion [see MB 2100A.01 -MB 2100A.16].
- Part B includes instructions on damages for conversion [see MB 2100A.30 -MB 2100A.37].
- Part C includes instructions on defenses and privileges [see MB 2100A.50 -MB 2100A.60].
- Part D includes instructions on the alternative remedy of an action for the specific recovery of personal property [see MB 2100A.70 -MB 2100A.74].

An injured party may choose to waive the tort of conversion and bring an action in quasi-contract. Quasi-contract actions are covered in Ch. 3A, Matthew Bender Formation of Contract Instructions.

For instructions relating to title and possession of goods under Division 2, Sales, of the California Commercial Code, see Ch. 3H, Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contract Instructions. n

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART A. ELEMENTS OF CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.01

MB 2100A.01 Possession or Right to Possession at Time of Conversion

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

For Plaintiff to recover money damages for conversion of _____ [describe property] by Defendant, Plaintiff must prove either that [he/she/it] was in actual possession of this property or that [he/she/it] had the right to the property's immediate possession at the time of its conversion.

[EITHER (See Use of Instruction)]

In this case, that means that Plaintiff must prove that _____ [specify basis of plaintiff's right to possession, e.g., Mr. Smith was a buyer under a conditional sales contract and that he did not make a required payment or was otherwise in default on his agreement to buy the 2003 Ford automobile. If you find that Mr. Smith was in default, then Plaintiff had a right to immediate possession of the Ford, and [he/she/it] may recover money for its conversion.].

[OR (See Use of Instruction)]

In this case, that means that Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] actually possessed _____ [describe property].

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If Plaintiff has proved either a right to possess the property or the property's actual possession, it does not matter that Plaintiff is not the property's owner. Plaintiff is entitled to sue for the property's entire value regardless of the fact that [he/she/it] owes the owner money for the property or is holding the property in trust.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims the right to bring an action for conversion based on the possession of or the right to immediate possession of the property allegedly converted. If the action is based on the right to possession, the first of the alternative second paragraphs should be completed by filling in the blank with the appropriate facts. For further examples, see [3][a], below, and the list of persons who might bring an action for conversion. If the action is based on actual possession, then the second alternative paragraph should be used. The final optional paragraph would be appropriate when the plaintiff is not the property owner and this fact is raised by the defendant to limit plaintiff's recovery. Of course, when the plaintiff's interest is limited and he or she is suing the owner, any reference to damages equaling the property's full value would be inappropriate. For a damage instruction limiting the plaintiff's recovery under these circumstances, see MB 2100A.32.

This instruction must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Conversion Actions Generally: Conversion is an effective claim assuming that the prerequisites are satisfied. Thus, be careful that the case's allegations fall within the scope of this tort. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Requirement of Possession

As a rule, one must have possession [Ortega v. Toyota Motor Sales, USA, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 2008) 572 F.Supp.2d 1218, 1220 ; Igaue v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 122, 127, 249 P.2d 558 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 224A] or the right to immediate possession [DIRECTV v. Pahnke (E.D. Cal. 2005) 405 F.Supp.2d 1182, 1189-1190 (direct broadcast satellite television service had conversion claim against person who pirated satellite signals); Enterprise Leasing Corp. v. Shugart Corp. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 737, 748, 282 Cal.Rptr. 620 ; Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 1324, 1329-1331, 245 Cal.Rptr. 548 ; Cerra v. Blackstone (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 604, 609, 218 Cal.Rptr. 15 ; Aero Props., Inc. v. Gottlieb (1962) 206 Cal.App.2d 711, 716, 24 Cal.Rptr. 277 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 225] of property to bring an action for conversion of that property. Any valuable right or interest in the property plus possession or the right of possession is enough. For example, conversion actions may be brought by any of the following:

- The seller in a conditional sale [Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 1324, 1329-1331, 245 Cal.Rptr. 548 ; Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 597-600, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169 ; Redwine v. Trowbridge (1929) 99 Cal.App. 762, 765-766, 279 P. 666 ; Covington v. Grant (1927) 82 Cal.App. 749, 751, 256 P. 213 ; see MB 2100A.51[3][a] for further discussion of conditional seller's right to repossess as basis for conversion action];

- A repossessed conditional buyer who tenders the amount owed [Cerra v. Blackstone (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 604, 609, 218 Cal.Rptr. 15];
- A chattel mortgagee [Mathew v. Mathew (1903) 138 Cal. 334, 336-337, 71 P. 344 ; Montgomery v. Grattan (1958) 156 Cal.App.2d 832, 835, 320 P.2d 106];
- A trustee [Perlick v. Pacific Discount Corp. (1942) 53 Cal.App.2d 136, 141, 127 P.2d 647]; or
- A lienholder [Bastanchury v. Times-Mirror Co. (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 217, 236, 156 P.2d 488 ; see Thomsen v. Culver City Motor Co., Inc. (1935) 4 Cal.App.2d 639, 646, 41 P.2d 597].

Ownership of the property is not necessary [Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 122, 127, 249 P.2d 558 ; Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 598, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169], and may not be sufficient [see MB 2100A.02[3][a] for discussion of mere ownership without possession or right to immediate possession as basis for conversion action].

A plaintiff's having regained possession of the converted property does not prevent the plaintiff from suing for damages for the conversion [Virtanen v. O'Connell (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 688, 707, 44 Cal.Rptr.3d 702].

For related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Recovering Property's Value: A plaintiff with the right to immediate possession (though not the owner) of the property can still recover the property's entire value. The exception to this rule is when the defendant is the owner, and the plaintiff only has a limited interest in the property [see MB 2100A.34 regarding limited interests]. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART A. ELEMENTS OF CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.02

MB 2100A.02 Ownership at Time of Conversion

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may recover money for the conversion of _____ [describe property] without proof of possession or the right to immediate possession of that property if, and only if, Plaintiff has proved both of the following:

1. That [he/she/it] owned the property at the time Defendant is claimed to have wrongfully interfered with it; and

2. That Defendant either destroyed the property, or permanently deprived Plaintiff of the property's ownership.

Authorities: Snapp & Assocs. Ins. Servs., Inc. v. Robertson (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 884, 892 n.2, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 331 ; Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal.App.2d 586, 596, 292 P.2d 559

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff contends that his or her action for conversion is justified by ownership of the property in question, without possession or the right to immediate possession. Whenever the terms "that property" or "the property" are used in the instruction, the property at issue could be substituted.

This instruction must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

[3] Comment

[a] Ownership at Time of Conversion

The plaintiff in actions for conversion must prove actual possession or the right to possession [Ortega v. Toyota Motor Sales, USA, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 2008) 572 F.Supp.2d 1218, 1220 ; Aero Props., Inc. v. Gottlieb (1962) 206 Cal.App.2d 711, 716, 24 Cal.Rptr. 277 ; Perlick v. Pacific Discount Corp. (1942) 53 Cal.App.2d 136, 141, 127 P.2d 647]. The right to possession must be a right to immediate possession [see MB 2100A.01]. However, in Reynolds v. Lerman [Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal.App.2d 586, 292 P.2d 559], the court held that a judgment debtor whose attached property was wrongfully sold could recover for conversion even though he or she was not in actual possession or entitled to possession at the time the property was converted. The court emphasized that when the improper sale "divest[ed] the owner's title entirely, right of immediate possession is not essential to his recovery for conversion" [Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal.App.2d 586, 596, 292 P.2d 559 ; see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion (Matthew Bender)].

It is not clear how this decision should be applied--whether ownership without a right to possession is generally sufficient or is sufficient only in closely similar fact situations. As a general rule either ownership or a right to possession is sufficient [Witkin, Summary of California Law, Vol. 5, Torts, § 619 (9th ed. 1988); Witkin, Summary of California Procedure, Vol. 5, Pleading, § 653 (3d ed. 1985)] and this view has been cited with approval by the courts [Swingless Golf Club Corp. v. Taylor (N.D. Cal. 2009) 679 F.Supp.2d 1060, 1068 (plaintiff must show ownership or right to possession at time of conversion); Plummer v. Day/Eisenberg, LLP (2010) 184 Cal.App.4th 38, 45, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 455 (party need only allege it is entitled to immediate possession at time of conversion); Baldwin v. Marina City Props., Inc. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 393, 410, 145 Cal.Rptr. 406 ; see also Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 598, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART A. ELEMENTS OF CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.03

MB 2100A.03 Assignees[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may recover money for the conversion of _____ [describe property] if Plaintiff has been assigned the right to bring an action for the conversion of that property by a person who was entitled to bring an action for its conversion. To prove this assignment, Plaintiff must have proved both of the following:

1. That _____ [name of assignor] intended to transfer [his/her/its] right of action to Plaintiff; and

2. That _____ [name of assignor] owned, was in possession of, or had a right to immediate possession of the property at the time of its conversion.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 953, 954; McCown v. Spencer (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 216, 225, 87 Cal.Rptr. 213 ; Cockerell v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 284, 291-292, 267 P.2d 16 ; Miller v. Bank of Am. (1942) 52 Cal.App.2d 512, 515, 126 P.2d 444 ; Staley v. McClurken (1939) 35 Cal.App.2d 622, 625, 96 P.2d 805 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff bases his or her right of action for conversion on the assignment of a chose in action rather than on ownership, possession, or the right of possession. It must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

[3] Comment

[a] Conversion Action May Be Assigned

A thing in action, that is, a right to recover money or personal property by a judicial proceeding [Civ. Code § 953], is transferrable if it arises out of the violation of a right of property [Civ. Code § 954]. Thus, the right to bring a conversion action is transferrable [Champion Home Builders Co. v. Sipes (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1415, 1425, 269 Cal.Rptr. 75 ; Miller v. Bank of Am. (1942) 52 Cal.App.2d 512, 515, 126 P.2d 444 ; Staley v. McClurken (1939) 35 Cal.App.2d 622, 625, 96 P.2d 805]. This means that a plaintiff may sue for conversion who never had ownership, possession, or the right to possession, so long as the plaintiff is the assignee of one who did have ownership, possession, or the right to possession at the time of the conversion [Staley v. McClurken (1939) 35 Cal.App.2d 622, 625-627, 96 P.2d 805]. The party who claims under an assignment has the burden of proving that assignment [Cockerell v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 284, 292, 267 P.2d 16]. To prove an assignment, the plaintiff must prove that the owner of the right showed the intent to transfer that right, without the necessity of any further action [Cockerell v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 284, 291, 267 P.2d 16 ; McCown v. Spencer (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 216, 225, 87 Cal.Rptr. 213].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Examine Assignments to Determine Their

Validity: Assignments are common in conversion actions arising out of conditional sales contracts. In some cases, ownership interests may have been transferred several times, especially if several financial institutions are involved. In such cases it is important to examine each assignment to determine its validity. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Satisfy Required Elements of Assignment: As with any matter involving an assignment, care should be taken to satisfy the proper elements. Thus, a plaintiff's counsel should assure that the elements are met; while a defense counsel should examine how to demonstrate their absence. By Rex Heeseman

PART A. ELEMENTS OF CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.04

MB 2100A.04 Fixtures

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may not recover money for the conversion of land. Property that is affixed to land is called a fixture and is considered a part of that land. This means that Plaintiff may not recover for the conversion of _____ [describe property], if it is a fixture. To decide whether the property is a fixture, there are three things that you must consider. First you must consider how the property is physically attached to the land. Property is affixed to land if it meets one of the following requirements:

- 1. It is attached to the land by roots, like a bush or a tree;
- 2. It is imbedded in the land like a wall;
- 3. It permanently rests on the land like a building; or
- 4. It is permanently attached to something that rests permanently on the land. This may be done, for example, by means of cement, bolts, nails, or screws.

Second, you must consider whether the property has been adapted to the purpose for which the land is used.

Third, you must consider whether the person who attached _____ [describe property] to the land intended for it to become part of the land.

Authorities: Civ. Code §§ 660, 1013; Simms v. County of Los Angeles (1950) 35 Cal.2d 303, 217 P.2d 936 ; Munger v. Moore (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 1, 7, 89 Cal.Rptr. 323 ; Sill Props., Inc. v. CMAG, Inc.

(1963) 219 Cal.App.2d 42, 48-50, 33 Cal.Rptr. 155 ; Bedell v. Mashburn (1948) 87 Cal.App.2d 417, 422-423, 197 P.2d 98 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when plaintiff's claim is for conversion of property that is or was attached to real property but is severed or severable from that real property. The issue will be whether the property was a fixture and part of the realty or was still personal property. The instruction must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Using MB 2100A.04[1]: This instruction is most likely to come up in connection with landlord-tenant disputes. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

[a] Conversion of Real Property; Severability

As a general rule, real property is not the subject of conversion [Munger v. Moore (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 1, 7, 89 Cal.Rptr. 323]. Two California court of appeals cases have allowed damages for the conversion of real property [Murphy v. Wilson (1957) 153 Cal.App.2d 132, 135-136, 314 P.2d 507 ; Katz v. Enos (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 266, 269, 156 P.2d 461], but both were subsequently questioned and disagreed with [Munger v. Moore (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 1, 7, 89 Cal.Rptr. 323], and Murphy v. Wilson is a poorly reasoned decision. However, property that is attached to realty may be the subject of conversion, if it is severed or severable [Eistrat v. Western Hardwood Lumber Co. (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 374, 379, 330 P.2d 629]. This includes fixtures [Sill Props., Inc. v. CMAG, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal.App.2d 42, 48-50, 33 Cal.Rptr. 155 ; Bedell v. Mashburn (1948) 87 Cal.App.2d 417, 422-423, 197 P.2d 98].

[b] Definition; Three Part Test

"Affixed" is defined in Civ. Code § 660 to mean things attached to land by roots, imbedded in land, permanently resting on land, or permanently attached to things permanently affixed to the land. The courts have expanded on this definition by establishing a test for determining whether property is a fixture. This test considers the following three things [Simms v. County of Los Angeles (1950) 35 Cal.2d 303, 217 P.2d 936 ; Pajaro Valley Bank v. Santa Cruz County (1962) 207 Cal.App.2d 621, 24 Cal.Rptr. 639]:

- The way in which the property is physically attached to the land;
- Whether the property has been adapted to the purpose for which the realty is used; and
- Whether the person attaching the property to the land intended for it to be a fixture.

[c] Ownership; Right to Remove

Civ. Code § 1013 provides that when property is affixed to the land of another without an agreement permitting its removal, that property generally belongs to the landowner, unless the owner requires the person who placed it there to remove it. (There is also a limited right under Civ. Code § 1013.5 to remove property affixed to another's land by a good faith error.) In cases involving lease agreements, the agreement should be examined to determine whether it gives the tenant the right to remove what would otherwise be a fixture. A tenant does have the right to remove from the demised premises, at any time during the lease term, anything affixed to those premises for trade, manufacture, ornament, or domestic use, if it can be removed without injury to the premises. This exception for tenants does not apply if the property has, by the manner in which it is affixed, become an integral part of the premises [Civ. Code § 1019].

[3] Comment

[a] Money Can Be Converted

Money can be the subject of conversion [Watson v. Stockton Morris Plan Co. (1939) 34 Cal.App.2d 393, 403, 93 P.2d 855] but only when a specific, identifiable sum has been converted [Ortega v. Toyota Motor Sales, USA, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 2008) 572 F.Supp.2d 1218, 1220 ; Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal.2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331 ; Grodensky v.

Machado* (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1069, 1072-1074, 58 Cal.Rptr.2d 213 ; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590, 599, 124 Cal.Rptr. 297 ; see Miniaze v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (2006) 424 F.Supp.2d 1168, 1184 (conversion inapplicable to defendant's creation of authorized director's fee)]. This does not mean that each coin or bill must be earmarked, but only that a specific, identifiable amount of money is involved [Ortega v. Toyota Motor Sales, USA, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 2008) 572 F.Supp.2d 1218, 1220 ; Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal.2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331 ; Fischer v. Machado (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1069, 1072-1074, 58 Cal.Rptr.2d 213 ; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590, 599, 124 Cal.Rptr. 297].

Most reported cases in which the plaintiff included a count for conversion of money also presented facts supporting a cause of action for money had and received [see, e.g., Walter v. Hughes Communs., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010) 682 F.Supp.2d 1031, 1047 (foundation for action for conversion on money had and received count is unjust enrichment of wrongdoer); Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590, 124 Cal.Rptr. 297]. The amounts of money in those cases were deemed alleged with sufficient specificity for purposes of the conversion cause of action. What the situation might be in the case, for example, of an embezzlement of an amount that cannot be exactly fixed by proof (because, for example, records have been tampered with), is not clear. However, the general rule that wrongdoers must bear the risk of uncertainty created by their own wrongdoing suggests that the right to recovery will not be confused with the difficulty of ascertaining an exact amount [see Donahue v. United Artists Corp. (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 794, 804, 83 Cal.Rptr. 131].

For related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART A. ELEMENTS OF CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.06

MB 2100A.06 Actual and Substantial Interference

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may recover money for the conversion of _____ [describe property] only if [he/she/it] has proven both of the following:

1. That Defendant actually interfered with Plaintiff's ownership or possession of _____ [describe property]. This means that Plaintiff must have proved that Defendant did some act that actually interfered with Plaintiff's ownership or possession. It is not enough to prove that Defendant wanted to interfere, planned to interfere, or threatened to interfere, or even that [he/she/it] had agreed with another person to interfere with Plaintiff's ownership or possession of Plaintiff's property.

2. That Defendant's interference with Plaintiff's ownership or possession of _____ [describe property] was substantial. This means that Plaintiff must have proved that what Defendant did showed an assumption by Defendant of ownership or control over Plaintiff's property or that what Defendant did prevented Plaintiff from enjoying [his/her/its] rights of ownership or possession.

Authorities: Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal.2d 597, 610, 12 Cal.Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 ; Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal.2d 541, 549-551, 176 P.2d 1 ; Aronson v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Becker (1942) 54 Cal.App.2d 466, 471-474, 129 P.2d 159 ; McCaffey Canning Co., Inc. v. Bank of Am. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 415, 424, 294 P. 45 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever actual or substantial interference is at issue. It must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

This instruction must also be used to introduce all of the other instructions in MB 2100A.07-MB 2100A.15 that deal with what constitutes actual and substantial interference.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Claiming Interference:

"Interference" with another's property may sometimes be a tricky concept to prove. Further, that interference must be "substantial" [see [3][b], below]. Hence, care must often be taken in proving this element of the tort. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Actual Interference

For conversion to have occurred, there must be actual interference with the plaintiff's ownership or possession of personal property [Home v. Kramer (1936) 7 Cal.2d 361, 363-364, 60 P.2d 854 ; see, e.g., Kelley v. Mortgage Elec. Registration Sys. (N.D. Cal. 2009) 642 F.Supp.2d 1048, 1056-1057 (no elements of conversion alleged)]. Neither a mere claim of dominion over property [Kee v. Becker (1942) 54 Cal.App.2d 466, 471-474, 129 P.2d 159], nor an unconsummated purpose to interfere with another's dominion over property is enough to constitute conversion [Aronson v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n (1937) 9 Cal.2d 640, 643, 72 P.2d 548 ; Kee v. Becker (1942) 54 Cal.App.2d 466, 471-474, 129 P.2d 159].

[b] Substantial Interference

Even actual interference alone is not enough. For example, mere intermeddling, or use of the property, or damage to it is not enough. The actual interference must be a "substantial interference" [Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal.2d 597, 610, 12 Cal.Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 ; Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal.2d 541, 551, 176 P.2d 1 ; Heaps v. Heaps (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 286, 292, 21 Cal.Rptr.3d 239 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 222A]. For this reason, it is not conversion for the landlord of a bankrupt tenant to make a quitclaim sale of fixtures claimed by the tenant's trustee in bankruptcy, if possession of the fixtures is not disturbed. Sale by quitclaim does not deny the claim of the trustee in bankruptcy [Home v. Kramer (1936) 7 Cal.2d 361, 363-364, 60 P.2d 854]. "It is the substantial injury inflicted which constitutes the gravamen of the action" [McCaffey Canning Co., Inc. v. Bank of Am. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 415, 424, 294 P. 45].

"Substantial interference" means that the defendant's interference must be an act that shows an assumption of ownership or control by the defendant or an act that prevents the plaintiff from exercising his or her rights of ownership or possession [see Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal.2d 541, 549-551, 176 P.2d 1 ; Plummer v. Day/Eisenberg, LLP (2010) 184 Cal.App.4th 38, 50, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 455]. According to the Restatement, the act must be one that "so seriously interferes with the right of another to control [the property] that the actor may justly be required to pay the other the full value of the chattel" [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 222A].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Plaintiff has proved that Defendant took _____ [describe property] from Plaintiff's possession, then Plaintiff has proved an actual interference with [his/her/its] rights to personal property.

De Vries v. Brumback (1960) 53 Cal.2d 643, 647, 650, 2 Cal.Rptr. 764, 349 P.2d 532 ; Union Oil Co. v. Mutual Oil Co. (1937) 19 Cal.App.2d 409, 411-415, 65 P.2d 896 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This introduction should be used when the conversion complained of was achieved by an actual taking of property from plaintiff. This instruction must be used with the instruction in MB 2100A.06[1] that explains actual and substantial interference, and with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

[3] Comment

[a] Taking as Actual Interference

Taking property from the plaintiff is an actual interference with his or her property rights that may constitute conversion [Union Oil Co. v. Mutual Oil Co. (1937) 19 Cal.App.2d 409, 411-415, 65 P.2d 896 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 221, 222, 223(a), 225] if the interference is substantial [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 22; see MB 2100A.06]. Thus, disposing of stolen property as part of a conspiracy to commit robbery is a conversion [De Vries v. Brumback (1960) 53 Cal.2d 643, 647, 650, 2 Cal.Rptr. 764, 349 P.2d 532].

[3] Comment[a] Change to Property as Interference

Changes to the personal property of another, including damage to that property, constitute interference with that property and may be conversion [*Bedell v. [1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Plaintiff has proven that Defendant sold or otherwise transferred Plaintiff's property without authority to do so, then Plaintiff has proven that Defendant actually and substantially interfered with the property.

Authorities: Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 866, 874, 105 Cal.Rptr. 395 ;

Cal.App.2d 299, 302, 63 P.2d 1176 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims a conversion by unauthorized sale or transfer. It must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

See also "LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Claiming Interference" in MB 2100A.06[2].

[3] Comment

[a] Transfer as Conversion

The sale or transfer of another person's personal property without authority is conversion [Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal.App.2d 586, 592, 292 P.2d 559 ; Meyer v. Thomas (1936) 18 Cal.App.2d 299, 302, 63 P.2d 1176]. For example, both of the following constitute conversion:

- The unauthorized release of pledged securities by the person to whom they were pledged [Meyer v. Thomas (1936) 18 Cal.App.2d 299, 302, 63 P.2d 1176]; and

- The unauthorized sale of a mental patient's personal property by the Department of Mental Hygiene in compromise of a disputed claim [Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 866, 874, 105 Cal.Rptr. 395].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has proved Defendant's actual and substantial interference with _____ [describe property] if Plaintiff has proved all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff was entitled to immediate possession of _____ [describe property];
- 2. That Defendant had possession of that property;
- 3. That Plaintiff demanded that Defendant return the property; and

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction is for use when the plaintiff's claim for conversion is based on the defendant's refusal to return property after a demand. It must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements"), and with the instruction in MB 2100A.06[1].

[3] Comment[a] Refusal to Return as Interference

The refusal by one in possession of a chattel to return that chattel on a demand for its return by one entitled to immediate possession is an actual and substantial interference [Fearon v. Department of Corrections (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 1254, 1257, 209 Cal.Rptr. 309 ; Wolfe v. Willard H. George, Inc. (1930) 110 Cal.App. 532, 535-536, 294 P. 436 ; see Edwards v. Jenkins (1932) 214 Cal. 713, 720-722, 7 P.2d 702 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 237-241]. However, a good faith qualified refusal to return for a reasonable period and for a reasonable purpose, such as to inquire into the claimant's right to possession [Giacomelos v. Bank of Am. (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 99, 100-101, 46 Cal.Rptr. 612 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 240], is not a conversion [Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 238-241; see MB 2100A.54].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims a conversion by misdelivery. It should be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements"), and with the instruction in MB 2100A.06[1].

[3] Comment

[a] Misdelivery as Actual Interference

Delivery of goods to a person not entitled to possession of them is actual interference [Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal.2d 297, 299-301, 65 P.2d 67 ; Newlove v. Pond (1900) 130 Cal. 342, 344-345, 62 P. 561 ; Fisher v. Pickwick Hotel, Inc. (1940) 42 Cal.App.2d Supp. 823, 825, 108 P.2d 1001 ; Smith v. Miller (1935) 5 Cal.App.2d 564, 572, 43 P.2d 347 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 223(f), 234, 235] for which the person entitled to possession may bring an action. This is true even if the delivery is made in good faith to the apparent owner of the goods [Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal.2d 297, 299, 65 P.2d 67].

However, the Restatement provides two exceptions. A bailee, agent, or servant who redelivers the property at issue to his or her bailor, principal, or master is not liable to a person entitled to immediate possession unless that person has made an adverse claim on the bailee, agent, or servant for the property [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 235(2)]. Similarly, a bailee, agent, or servant who delivers the property to someone else on instructions from his or her bailor, principal, or master is not liable to the person entitled to immediate possession unless he or she knew or had reason to know that the bailor, principal, or master lacked authority to order that delivery [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 235(3)].

Note that for a bailee, agent, or servant to be liable to his or her bailor, principal, or master for conversion by misdelivery, the delivery must be unauthorized by the bailor, principal, or master in addition to being a delivery to a person not entitled to immediate possession [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 234].

MB 2100A.14 Buying From One Without Title or Right as Actual Interference[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has proved that Defendant actually interfered with _____ [specify property] if Plaintiff has proved all of the following:

1. That Defendant _____ [bought or received] the property from _____ [name of seller, pledgor, or other transferor];

2. That Defendant has kept the property and claimed _____ [specify right, title, or interest claimed by defendant in property]; and

3. That _____ [name of defendant's transferor] had no right, title, or interest in the property.

Authorities: Swim v. Wilson (1891) 90 Cal. 126, 129-131, 27 P. 33 ; Culp v. Signal Van & Storage Co. (1956) 142 Cal.App.2d Supp. 859, 861, 298 P.2d 162 ; First Nat'l Bank v. Thompson (1943) 60 Cal.App.2d 79, 82, 140 P.2d 75 ; Jackins v. Bacon (1923) 63 Cal.App. 463, 467, 218 P. 1027 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims that the defendant converted the plaintiff's property by buying or receiving that property from someone without any right or title to the property. It should be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements"), and with the instruction in MB 2100A.06[1].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Bona Fide Purchaser Has Defense to

Conversion: This instruction is correct as far as it goes. However, note that an innocent purchaser for value without notice (i.e. a bona fide purchaser) still has a defense to conversion [see MB 2100A.56 regarding jury instruction on defendant's claim of being bona fide purchaser]. By Ronald Oster and Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Buying From One Without Right or Title

One who buys or receives property from another who is without right or title to that property can receive no greater title than his or her transferor or seller has to give, and therefore possession of the property by this buyer or transferor with a claim of right or title amounts to a conversion of the property [see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 229]. The reason for this is because the claim constitutes a wrongful exercise of dominion over another person's property that is inconsistent with the owner's rights in that property [see Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590, 599, 124 Cal.Rptr. 297 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 222A(1)].

Thus, for example, it is conversion to buy previously converted goods [Culp v. Signal Van & Storage Co. (1956) 142 Cal.App.2d Supp. 859, 861, 298 P.2d 162] or to buy personal property at a void execution sale [Jackins v. Bacon (1923) 63 Cal.App. 463, 467, 218 P. 1027]. It is also a conversion for an innocent purchaser to buy goods from a defaulting conditional purchaser when the seller has retained title and is entitled to possession under the conditional sales contract [First Nat'l Bank v. Thompson (1943) 60 Cal.App.2d 79, 82, 140 P.2d 75].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART A. ELEMENTS OF CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.15

MB 2100A.15 False Third Party Claim as Actual Interference

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has proved that Defendant actually interfered with _____ [specify property] if Plaintiff has proved all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff had executed a writ of attachment and placed a lien on the property;
- 2. That this was done so that the property could be sold under a writ of execution to satisfy a debt that _____ [name of owner], the actual owner of the property, owed to Plaintiff;
- 3. That Defendant defeated the writ of execution and prevented the property's sale by filing a third party claim on it with the court; and
- 4. That this third party claim filed by Defendant was not valid.

Authorities: Service v. Trombetta (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 313, 316, 28 Cal.Rptr. 68 ; McCaffey Canning Co., Inc. v. Bank of Am. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 415, 424, 294 P. 45 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims that the defendant has committed conversion by filing a false third party claim that defeated a writ of execution on property owned by the plaintiff's judgment debtor. Additional instructions may be necessary to clarify execution and sale procedures for the jury. For example, it may prove advisable to define terms such as "levy," "execution," "writ of attachment," and "writ of execution." The instruction should be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100

("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements"), and with the instruction in MB 2100A.06[1].

[3] Comment

[a] Filing of False Third Party Claim

When the levy of a writ of execution is defeated, and the judgment creditor's lien lost, by the filing of a false third party claim, then the plaintiff may recover against the third party claimant for conversion, even if the claim was made in good faith [Service v. Trombetta (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 313, 316, 28 Cal.Rptr. 68 ; McCaffey Canning Co., Inc. v. Bank of Am. (1930) 109 Cal.App. 415, 422-426, 294 P. 45] . The lien may be lost if, for example, the judgment debtor is discharged in bankruptcy before the third party claim is adjudicated false [Service v. Trombetta (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 313, 316, 320-321, 28 Cal.Rptr. 68].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the intent required by the elements of conversion as outlined in the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements"), which must be used with this instruction. Use the optional paragraph when conversion by nonfeasance through failure to return or account for property in the defendant's possession or control is at issue. This option must also be used with the instruction in MB 2100A.12 on refusal to return property on demand.

[3] Comment

[a] Required Intent

To constitute conversion, the wrongful interference with the personal property of another must be an intentional interference [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 918, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 ; Taylor v. Forte Hotels International (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1119, 1124, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 189 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 222A, 223, cmt. b]. The intent required is merely the intent to do the act exercising wrongful dominion or control [Bailey v. County of San Joaquin (E.D. Cal. 2009) 671 F.Supp.2d 1167, 1178 ; Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 539, 544, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810 ; Mendoza v. Continental Sales Co. (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1395, 1404-1405, 45 Cal.Rptr.3d 525 ; Virtanen v. O'Connell (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 688, 707, 44 Cal.Rptr.3d 702 ; Varela v. Wells Fargo Bank (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 741, 749-750, 93 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 223, cmt. b; but see Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 918, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 , in which Court indicates that as a general rule intent required is intent to affect property]. A wrongful or corrupt intent is not required [Poggi v. Scott (1914) 167 Cal. 372, 376, 139 P. 815 ; Burlesci v. Petersen (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1066-1067, 80 Cal.Rptr.2d 704 ; Varela v. Wells Fargo Bank (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 741, 749, 93 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Beverly Fin. Co. v. American Cas. Co. (1969) 273 Cal.App.2d 259, 264, 78 Cal.Rptr. 334].

However, negligence alone is not enough to establish intent and conversion [George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 Cal.2d 834, 837-838, 205 P.2d 1037 ; Taylor v. Forte Hotels Int'l (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1119, 1124, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 189 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 223, cmt. b]. Thus, good faith [Poggi v. Scott (1914) 167 Cal. 372, 376, 139 P. 815 ; Varela v. Wells Fargo Bank (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 741, 750, 93 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Beverly Fin. Co. v. American Cas. Co. (1969) 273 Cal.App.2d 259, 264, 78 Cal.Rptr. 334 ; Service v. Trombetta (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 313, 316, 28 Cal.Rptr. 68], ignorance or mistake [Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal.2d 297, 299, 65 P.2d 67 ; Poggi v. Scott (1914) 167 Cal. 372, 376, 139 P. 815 ; Varela v. Wells Fargo Bank (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 741, 749-750, 93 Cal.Rptr. 428 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 223, cmt. b, 244], and due care [Poggi v. Scott (1914) 167 Cal. 372, 376, 139 P. 815 ; Fresno Air Serv. v. Wood (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 801, 806, 43 Cal.Rptr. 276] are not defenses and do not negate the required intent.

When conversion is accomplished by nonfeasance, such as the refusal to return on demand plaintiff's property that is in defendant's possession or control [see Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 918, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 ; see also MB 2100A.12[3][a]], the required intent is demonstrated by proving that the failure to return the property was a willful omission [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 918, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the alternative measure of damages based on an amount sufficient to indemnify the plaintiff for "the loss which is the natural, reasonable, and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of" [Civ. Code § 3336] is at issue in the case. The instruction defines when the plaintiff's loss is the "natural, reasonable, and proximate result" of the defendant's conversion.

[3] Comment

[a] Wrongful Conversion

Civ. Code § 3336 provides that the detriment caused by the wrongful conversion of personal property is presumed to be (1) the property's value at the time of the conversion, with the interest from that time, or, an amount sufficient to indemnify the party injured for the loss which is the natural, reasonable, and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of and which a proper degree of prudence on his or her part would not have averted; and (2) a fair compensation for the time and money properly expended in pursuit of the property [see Virtanen v. O'Connell (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 688, 708, n.8, 44 Cal.Rptr.3d 702 ; Spates v. Dameron Hospital Assn. (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 208, 221, 7 Cal.Rptr.3d 597 ; Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 783, 794, 62 Cal.Rptr. 553 ; Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420 ; Everfresh, Inc. v. Goodman (1955) 131 Cal.App.2d 818, 820, 281 P.2d 560 ; Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal.App.2d 943, 947, 185 P.2d 610 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 927]. However, attorneys' fees expended in an attempted pursuit of the property are not recoverable as damages [Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 1553, 1559, 239 Cal.Rptr. 178].

Generally, litigation-related expenses are excluded from the compensation allowed for time and money spent in trying to recover the property. When legal proceedings are the only way to recover the property, however, efforts with a purpose independent of the litigation should be compensated [Gladstone v. Hillel (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 977, 991-992, 250 Cal.Rptr. 372]. These efforts include preparation of lists of missing property, inspections of inventories, meetings with parties, contacts with law enforcement authorities, and inquiries regarding proper courses of action [Gladstone v. Hillel (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 977, 991-992, 250 Cal.Rptr. 372].

For related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion (Matthew Bender).

[b] Alternative Measures of Damages

The first part of Civ. Code § 3336 appears to provide for equal and fungible alternative measures of recovery, but the property's value at the time of conversion, with interest, is generally the appropriate measure of damages [Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 692, 698 n.3, 702, 704, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 815 (plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest ended at summary adjudication in plaintiff's favor); Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420]. The alternative measure of an amount sufficient to indemnify is used when special circumstances require a different measure of damages [Krueger v. Bank of America (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 204, 215, 193 Cal.Rptr. 322], for example, to prevent manifest injustice [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420 ; Betzer v. Olney (1936) 14 Cal.App.2d 53, 61, 57 P.2d 1376]. A plaintiff seeking recovery under the alternative measure of damages must plead and prove those special circumstances that justify its application [Krueger v. Bank of America (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 204, 215, 193 Cal.Rptr. 322 ; see Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 117-124, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420].

The alternative measure of damages for conversion that is appropriate when justified by special circumstances is based on an amount sufficient to indemnify the plaintiff for "the loss which is the natural, reasonable, and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of," plus a fair compensation for the time and money spent in trying to get the converted property back [Civ. Code § 3336]. The causation requirement of this alternative measure of damages has been held to be equivalent to "proximate cause" or "legal cause" [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 119, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420]. This means that there must be a reasonable connection between the defendant's conversion and the plaintiff's loss. This reasonable connection exists if it was reasonably foreseeable to a prudent person that under the circumstances injury or damage would probably result from this conversion [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 119-120, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART B. DAMAGES FOR CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.31

MB 2100A.31 Value of Negotiable Instrument

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you determine that Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages for the conversion of [his/her/its] _____ [specify negotiable instrument at issue, e.g., check], the measure of damages is presumed to be the amount payable on the _____ [specify negotiable instrument at issue, e.g., check], but Plaintiff's recovery may not exceed the amount of [his/her/its] interest in the _____ [specify negotiable instrument at issue, e.g., check].

If Defendant [offers/has offered] evidence to support a different value for the _____ [specify negotiable instrument at issue, e.g., check], then you must consider all the evidence about its value.

Authorities: Com. Code § 3420(b).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the value of a negotiable instrument (usually a check) is at issue.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Value of Negotiable Instrument

In an action for the conversion of a negotiable instrument, the measure of liability is presumed to be the amount payable on the instrument, but recovery may not exceed the amount of the plaintiff's interest in the instrument [Com. Code § 3420(b); see Gil v. Bank of Am., Nat'l Ass'n (2006) 138 Cal.App.4th 1371, 1377-1381, 42 Cal.Rptr.3d 310 (bank customer's only recourse against bank for wrongful acceptance of check was conversion under statute)].

It has been claimed that a different measure of value applies to secured nonrecourse obligations, such as a purchase money note secured by a deed of trust. One court has held that the measure of damages is the value of the security as of the conversion's date. This notion was held supported by the fact that (1) the secured party would only receive the security in the event of default, and (2) Civ. Code § 3356 states that "for the purpose of estimating damages, the value of an instrument in writing is presumed to be equal to that of the property to which it entitles its owner" [Knudsen v. Hill (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 639, 642, 38 Cal.Rptr. 859 ; see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 6, Torts, § 1723 (10th ed. 2005)].

PART B. DAMAGES FOR CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.32

MB 2100A.32 Loss of Profits From Sale of Goods

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Plaintiff has proved that _____ [describe property] would have been sold for a specific price if it had not been converted, then you may consider evidence of the amount that Plaintiff lost because of Defendant's conversion as evidence of Plaintiff's damages. For example, if crops are converted before they are ripe and ready to sell, the owner of those crops is entitled to recover the amount that he or she would have received on the sale of those crops when they were ripe.

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3336; Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 783, 794, 62 Cal.Rptr. 553 ; Carey v. Glenco Citrus Prods. (1965) 235 Cal.App.2d 572, 581, 45 Cal.Rptr. 365 ; Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116, 119, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420 ; Crofoot Lumber, Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal.App.2d 238, 247-249, 12 Cal.Rptr. 639 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the plaintiff makes a claim for the loss of profits on goods held for sale. It should be used with the instruction defining proximate cause [see MB 2100A.30[1]], and with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2102 ("Presumed Measure of Damages for Conversion (Civ. Code, § 3336)").

[3] Comment

[a] Loss of Profit

For goods grown [Carey v. Glenco Citrus Prods. (1965) 235 Cal.App.2d 572, 581, 45 Cal.Rptr. 365 ; Crofoot Lumber,

Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal.App.2d 238, 247-249, 12 Cal.Rptr. 639], produced, or purchased [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116-118, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420] to be sold for profit, the property's value at the time of conversion does not always accurately reflect the property's real value to the owner. If it does not, then this is a special circumstance justifying the use of the alternative measure of damages discussed in MB 2100A.30[3][b]. This alternative measures the plaintiff's damages by: "the loss which is the natural, reasonable and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of" [Civ. Code § 3336]. Under this standard, loss of gross profit may be the measure of damages [see Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 783, 794, 62 Cal.Rptr. 553] because the loss naturally, reasonably, and proximately resulting from the conversion of property held to be sold for profit is precisely this profit that is now lost. The courts have upheld lost profits as a proper measure of damages for the conversion of timber that was to be marketed [Crofoot Lumber, Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal.App.2d 238, 247-249, 12 Cal.Rptr. 639], oranges that were to be marketed [Carey v. Glenco Citrus Prods. (1965) 235 Cal.App.2d 572, 581, 45 Cal.Rptr. 365], and a moveable house that was to be renovated and sold [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116-118, 43 Cal.Rptr. 420].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART B. DAMAGES FOR CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.33

MB 2100A.33 Loss of Use

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have already explained to you, if Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages for the conversion of _____ [specify property], then those damages include interest on the value of that property at 7 percent from the date of the conversion until now. This recovery by Plaintiff of interest in addition to the property's value is intended to compensate Plaintiff for the loss of the use of [his/her/its] property while it was converted. In this case, however, Plaintiff claims that the true value of this property's use is greater than 7 percent of its value. If you find that Plaintiff has proved that the value of using [his/her/its] property for the time that Defendant kept the property is worth more than the interest on the property's value for that time, then Plaintiff may recover this use value instead of interest. This means that Plaintiff's damages will include either the use value or the interest, whichever is higher, but Plaintiff may not have both.

Authorities: Gustafson v. Byers (1930) 105 Cal.App. 584, 587, 288 P. 111 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 927, cmt. o.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff claims damages for the loss of the use of the converted goods. The instruction must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2102 ("Presumed Measure of Damages for Conversion").

[3] Comment

[a] Loss of Use

The general measure of damages for conversion is, as explained in CACI No. 2102 and MB 2100A.30[3][b], the property's value at the time of conversion, with interest from that time. However, if the property has a "use value" that exceeds the legal interest rate, then the plaintiff is entitled to recover the reasonable value of the use for the period that the defendant kept the property [Gustafson v. Byers (1930) 105 Cal.App. 584, 587, 288 P. 111 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 927, cmt. o]. It has been suggested that this recovery for use value is in lieu of interest [see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 927, cmt. o (1977)]. This is apparently true, because one court allowed recovery for the property's value plus use value, with no recovery for interest [Gustafson v. Byers (1930) 105 Cal.App. 584, 587, 288 P. 111].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--"Use" May be Difficult to Understand: The concept of "use value" may be difficult for many jurors (and some judges) to grasp. People generally understand "interest," but "use" is a more amorphous concept. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Valuing Loss of Use: If converted property has a market rental value, the value of the loss of use can be established. If there is no rental market, the task is more difficult, and expert testimony will probably be required. The fall back position is interest at the rate of 7 percent. By Ronald Oster

Even if Plaintiff has proved by a preponderance of the evidence that [he/she/it] suffered money damages as a result of Defendant's conversion of Plaintiff's property, Defendant can limit the damages that Plaintiff may recover to less than the property's full value if Defendant can prove both of the following:

If Defendant can prove these two things, then Plaintiff's damages are limited to _____ [specify, e.g., the amount of Plaintiff's lien], plus the time and money reasonably spent trying to recover the property.

Authority: Civ. Code § 3338.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's right to damages is limited by the plaintiff's limited interest in the property converted. It should be given with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2102 ("Presumed Measure of Damages for Conversion").

[3] Comment[a] Limited Interest in Converted Property as Limit on Damages

Civ. Code § 3338 provides that one with a mere lien on personal property may not recover greater damages for its conversion from one having a superior right, after the lien is discharged, than the amount secured by the lien, and the compensation allowed by Civ. Code § 3336 for loss of time and expenses [see Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 605, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169 ; Service v. Trombetta (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 313, 316, 28 Cal.Rptr. 68 ; Bastanchury v. Times-Mirror Co. (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 217, 236, 156 P.2d 488]. Civ. Code § 3336 allows a fair compensation for the time and money properly expended in pursuit of the property [see CACI No. 2102 and MB 2100A.30[3][a]]. This rule limiting the recovery of one with a limited interest to the amount of that limited interest applies to types of limited interests other than liens, such as the ownership of 2 percent of a prune crop [California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Ainsworth (1901) 134 Cal. 461, 463-464, 66 P. 586], the interest of a mortgagee [Hopkins v. Anderson (1933) 218 Cal. 62, 67-68, 21 P.2d 560], and the interest of an assignee in insolvency of a partnership [Carrie v. Cloverdale Banking & Commercial Co. (1891) 90 Cal. 84, 86, 88-90, 27 P. 58].

[b] Exception to Rule Limiting Damages

The limit on damages recoverable applies only when the defendant has a superior right to the property [Civ. Code § 3338; Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 605, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169]. The limit applies, for example, when the lien holder sues the property owner for conversion [California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Ainsworth (1901) 134 Cal. 461, 463-464, 66 P. 586], but it does not apply when the defendant is a stranger to the title [Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 605, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169]. Thus, when a plaintiff with a limited interest in property sues a defendant with no interest in that property, the plaintiff may recover the property's full value [Camp v. Ortega (1962) 209 Cal.App.2d 275, 286, 25 Cal.Rptr. 873 ; see Goldberg v. List (1938) 11 Cal.2d 389, 392-393, 79 P.2d 1087].

PART B. DAMAGES FOR CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.35

MB 2100A.35 Statute of Limitations and Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The statute of limitations is a law providing that unless a person begins a legal action within a certain period of time he or she loses the right to do so. In this action for conversion, the law requires the Plaintiff to begin the action three years from _____ [the date the act of conversion was committed or such other date as may apply]. This means that Plaintiff may not claim any damages for acts committed more than three years before _____, the date on which Plaintiff began this action. Therefore, in computing the amount of damages, if any, that were suffered by Plaintiff, you must ignore all claims for damages that were alleged to have been suffered before _____ [date].

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c); Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal.2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20 ; Hartman Ranch Co. v. Associated Oil Co. (1937) 10 Cal.2d 232, 251, 73 P.2d 1163 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant wants to limit the amount of damages that the plaintiff may recover by arguing that all or part of these damages are barred by the statute of limitations. For certain types of conversion actions, different, specific limitation periods are provided. Substitute the appropriate period in place of the three years given in this instruction when one of these special limitation periods is involved [see MB 2100A.58 for discussion of conversion limitation periods]. Note also that although the limitation period usually runs from the time the act of conversion was committed, other periods may apply, as when a fraud is involved [see MB 2100A.58[3][b] for discussion of when limitation period begins to run from another date].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip --Using MB 2100A . 35: There are several important qualifications to this instruction, including cases involving fraudulent concealment and cases involving fiduciaries [see MB 2100A.58[3][b]]. By Ronald Oster

[3] Comment

For most conversion actions, the limitation period is three years [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c); see also MB 2100A.58[3][a]] from the date the act of conversion was committed [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal.2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20 ; Barnes v. Witt (1962) 207 Cal.App.2d 441, 445, 24 Cal.Rptr. 545 ; see MB 2100A.58[3][b] for discussion of when limitation period begins to run from another date]. This means that if more than one tortious act is involved, recovery for the damages caused by some acts may be barred while damages for others are still available [see Hartman Ranch Co. v. Associated Oil Co. (1937) 10 Cal.2d 232, 251, 73 P.2d 1163].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART B. DAMAGES FOR CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.36

MB 2100A.36 Prerequisites for Award of Punitive Damages

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff was harmed or damaged as the result of a conversion of [his/her/its] property by Defendant, you must decide whether punitive damages should be awarded against Defendant. The purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts--that is, for retribution and deterrence.

Punitive damages may be awarded against Defendant only if Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice] in connection with a conversion of Plaintiff's property. Therefore, you must first determine whether Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice].

"Oppression" means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights.

"Fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the defendant's part of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.

"Malice" means either conduct that is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct that is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights of others.

A defendant acts with a willful and conscious disregard for the rights of others when [he/she/it] intentionally engages in particular conduct or intentionally follows a particular course of action even though [he/she/it] knows that it is highly probable that that conduct or that course of action will cause another person to suffer harm or damage.

Plaintiff has the burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence, that Defendant is guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice].

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

In this phase of the trial, you will only determine whether Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice] in connection with a conversion of Plaintiff's property. I will have you fill out a special verdict form stating your decision on this question. If necessary, we will hold a second phase of the trial to determine whether punitive damages should be awarded and, if so, the amount that should be awarded as punitive damages.

[OR]

If you determine that Defendant was not guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice] in connection with any conversion of Plaintiff's property, then you may not award any punitive damages against Defendant. If you determine that Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice] in connection with a conversion of Plaintiff's property, then you must determine whether punitive damages should be awarded and, if so, the amount that should be awarded as punitive damages.

Specht* (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 1, 6, 127 Cal.Rptr. 493

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages on a cause of action for conversion. When the jury is instructed on a conversion claim and a breach of contract claim, use this instruction together with the instruction in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.13.

When this instruction is used, the general burden of proof instructions given to the jury should include an instruction on the "clear and convincing evidence" standard [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201].

When the plaintiff's claim for punitive damages is based on the conduct of an employee or agent of a defendant, the jury should be instructed on the additional elements that must be established before punitive damages may be awarded against an employer or principal for the actions of an employee or agent [see Civ. Code § 3294(b)].

This instruction contains alternative concluding paragraphs. The first alternative paragraph should be used when issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d). The second alternative paragraph should be used when the issues relating to the propriety and amount of punitive damages are not bifurcated and the jury will therefore be given the instruction on assessing punitive damages in MB 2100A.37.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][g], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Prerequisites for Punitive Damage Award

In an action predicated on the breach of an obligation that does not arise from contract, punitive damages--damages that are awarded to punish and make an example of a defendant--may be awarded against a defendant who has been guilty of malice, fraud, or oppression [Civ. Code § 3294(a)].

Because Civ. Code § 3294(a) authorizes punitive damages only in an action "for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract," punitive damages may not be awarded in an action in which the only causes of action asserted by the plaintiff are for breach of contract [Frazier v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 90, 106-107, 214 Cal.Rptr. 883 ; see Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.12[3]]. However, the limitation imposed by Civ. Code § 3294(a) does not preclude an award of punitive damages because a conversion also constitutes a breach of contract [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 921-922, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662]. Even when alternative conversion and breach of contract claims are based on the same alleged acts or omissions and seek damages for the same injuries, the plaintiff--although not permitted to recover on both the conversion and contract claims--is ordinarily entitled to have both claims submitted to the jury [see Weaver v. Bank of Am. (1963) 59 Cal.2d 428, 432, 30 Cal.Rptr. 4, 380 P.2d 644 ; Acadia, Cal., Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal.2d 328, 336-337, 5 Cal.Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294].

Punitive damages are not recoverable unless the plaintiff proves that the defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Civ. Code § 3294(a)]. Punitive damages are not recoverable in the abstract, and the required oppression, fraud, or malice must lie in the conduct that gave rise to liability in the case Medo v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 64, 68, 251 Cal.Rptr. 924]. "Oppression," "fraud," and "malice" are defined by Civ. Code § 3294(c) [see [b], below].

[b] Oppression, Fraud, and Malice

"Oppression" is defined by Civ. Code § 3294(c)(2) as "despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights."

"Fraud" is defined by Civ. Code § 3294(c)(3) as "an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury."

"Malice" is defined by Civ. Code § 3294(c)(1) as "conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others." Because the definition of "malice" is stated in the alternative, punitive damages may be awarded without a finding of despicable conduct [Courtesy Ambulance Serv. v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 1504, 1518, 11 Cal.Rptr.2d 161].

[c] Willful and Conscious Disregard

The provisions of Civ. Code § 3294(c) that permit a finding of oppression or malice to be based on a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others essentially incorporate preexisting case law that recognized that proof of an actual intent to harm the plaintiff was not essential to a punitive damage claim and allowed the recovery of punitive damages on the basis of proof that the defendant had intentionally pursued a particular course of conduct with the knowledge that there was a substantial likelihood that it would cause injury [Taylor v. Superior Court (1979) 24 Cal.3d 890, 894-896, 157 Cal.Rptr. 693, 598 P.2d 854 ; Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 922, 114 Cal.Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 ; Weisman v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 61, 64-67, 209 Cal.Rptr. 169 ; Ford Motor Co. v. Home Ins. Co. (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 374, 381, 172 Cal.Rptr. 59]. The definitions used in this instruction are based on an instruction approved in Weisman v. Blue Shield of California [Weisman v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 61, 64-67, 209 Cal.Rptr. 169]. However, this instruction has modified the definition approved in Weisman by (1) making it more clearly applicable to cases in which the defendant's conduct consists of affirmative actions rather than omissions; and (2) making it clear that conscious disregard requires not merely knowledge of probable consequences, but knowledge of probable harm or injury.

To establish conscious disregard, the plaintiff is not required to show that the defendant knew the plaintiff's identity or knew that the plaintiff would likely be injured by the conduct at issue; a showing that the defendant knew that someone was likely to be injured is sufficient [Ramona Manor Convalescent Hosp. v. Care Enters. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 1120, 1141-1142, 225 Cal.Rptr. 120].

[d] Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

Punitive damages may only be awarded if the plaintiff establishes oppression, fraud, or malice by clear and convincing evidence [Civ. Code § 3294(a); see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 201].

[e] Bifurcation of Punitive Damage Issues

Civ. Code § 3295(d) requires the trial court, on the defendant's motion, to exclude evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition until the jury finds that the defendant is liable to the plaintiff and that the defendant is guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal.3d 139, 147, 279 Cal.Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353]. When the defendant avails itself of this right initially to exclude evidence of its financial condition, the practical effect of these provisions is that the punitive damage issues will have to be bifurcated. In the initial phase of the trial, the jury will be limited to determining the defendant's liability for compensatory damages and whether the plaintiff has established the statutory prerequisites for an award of punitive damages. If the jury holds the defendant liable and determines that the defendant is guilty of malice, fraud, or oppression in the initial phase of the trial, the plaintiff will be entitled to present evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition at a second phase of the trial, after which the jury will determine the issues relating to the proper amount of punitive damages. The issue of punitive damages must be heard by the same jury that found the defendant liable, although this requirement may be waived by a failure to object to the use of separate juries [Civ. Code § 3295(d); Medo v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 64, 66, 69-70, 251 Cal.Rptr. 924]. The substitution of alternate jurors to try the punitive damages phase of a case does not violate the "same jury" requirement [Rivera v. Sassoon (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1045, 1049, 46 Cal.Rptr.2d 144].

[f] Purpose of Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are imposed for purposes of retribution and deterrence [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 19, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1]. That is, the purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoers and thereby deter the commission of wrongful acts [see Civ. Code § 3294(a); Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 745, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793].

Punitive damages may properly be imposed to further a state's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and detering its repetition [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]. Although states possess discretion over the imposition of punitive damages, there are procedural and substantive constitutional limitations on these awards [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see MB 2100A.37[3]].

It is important to include a statement of the purpose of punitive damages in jury instructions on punitive damages to guide the jury's discretion. The United States Supreme Court, in upholding a punitive damages award against a due process challenge, cited such a statement of purpose in an Alabama jury instruction as an important limit on the jury's discretion [see Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 19-20, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 ; see also MB 2100A.37[3]].

PART B. DAMAGES FOR CONVERSION

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.37

MB 2100A.37 Discretion to Award Punitive Damages When Prerequisites for Award Are Established

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[SELECT ONE OF THE FOLLOWING (See Use of Instruction)]

In the first phase of this trial, you determined that Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds found by jury, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice] in connection with a conversion of Plaintiff's property. In this phase of the trial you must determine whether punitive damages should be awarded against Defendant and, if so, the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded.

Because this is a case in which Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds found by jury, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice],

[OR]

If you find that Defendant was guilty of _____ [describe statutory grounds asserted by plaintiff, e.g., oppression, fraud, or malice],

[CONTINUE INSTRUCTION]

you may but are not required to award punitive damages against Defendant. In such a case, it is up to you to decide whether punitive damages should be awarded. If you decide to award punitive damages, it is also up to you to determine the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded.

The law does not provide any fixed standards or formulas for making decisions about the amount of punitive damages. Instead, it leaves them to your good judgment and common sense. However, in making any award of punitive damages, you should consider all of the following:

- (1) The reprehensibility of Defendant's conduct with respect to Plaintiff;
- (2) Defendant's financial condition and, in view with respect to Plaintiff of that financial condition, what amount of punitive damages it will take to punish and deter Defendant, based solely on the harm to Plaintiff; and
- (3) The amount of the actual [damages/harm or injury] caused by Defendant's wrongful conduct with respect to Plaintiff because punitive damages must bear a reasonable relationship to the actual [damages/harm or injury].

In making decisions about punitive damages, you should act in a calm and deliberate manner and should not allow yourselves to be influenced by passion or prejudice.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to instruct the jury on its duty to determine the propriety and amount of punitive damages if the statutory prerequisites for a punitive damage award are established. When the punitive damage issues have not been bifurcated under Civ. Code § 3295(d) [see MB 2100A.36[3][e]], this instruction should be given immediately after the instruction in MB 2100A.36[1]. When the punitive damage issues have been bifurcated, this instruction should not be given in the first phase of the trial and should be given in a subsequent phase only if the jury renders a verdict finding the defendant guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.

This instruction contains two alternative introductory provisions. The first alternative provision should be used when the punitive damage issues have been bifurcated and the issues relating to the propriety and amount of a punitive damage award are presented in a second phase of the trial. The second alternative provision should be used when the punitive damage issues are not bifurcated.

In the list of factors to be considered in making an award of punitive damages, the third factor offers counsel the choice of the word "damages" or the phrase "harm or injury." In Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. [Gagnon v. Continental Cas. Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 260 Cal.Rptr. 305], the appellate court indicated that the latter might be preferable, especially when the plaintiff is not entitled to compensatory damages or only recovers nominal damages.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][f], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Discretion to Award Punitive Damages

Even when the statutory prerequisites for a punitive damage award are met, the plaintiff is never entitled to punitive damages as a matter of right; rather, the decision to award or deny punitive damages is initially within the jury's discretion [Brewer v. Second Baptist Church (1948) 32 Cal.2d 791, 800-801, 197 P.2d 713 ; Thomson v. Catalina (1928) 205 Cal. 402, 406-407, 271 P. 198 ; Davis v. Hearst (1911) 160 Cal. 143, 173-174, 116 P. 530 ; Hannon Eng'g, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 431, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78]. Similarly, the amount to be awarded as punitive damages is initially within the jury's discretion [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal.3d 139, 147, 279 Cal.Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353 ; Thomson v. Catalina (1928) 205 Cal. 402, 406-407, 271 P. 198 ; Hannon Eng'g, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 431, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78 ; Ferraro v. Pacific Fin. Corp. (1970) 8 Cal.App.3d 339, 351, 87 Cal.Rptr. 226]. An instruction that advises the jury that it has discretion to determine these questions but that its discretion should be exercised without passion or prejudice is proper [Hannon Eng'g, Inc. v. Reim (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 415, 429-433, 179 Cal.Rptr. 78].

[b] Due Process Considerations

The United States Supreme Court has held that courts must ensure that the measure of punishment of punitive damages is both reasonable and proportionate both to the amount of harm to the plaintiff and to the general damages recovered. An excessive punitive damages award implicates the Due Process Clause of the U.S. Constitution [U.S. Const. amend. XIV] as an irrational and arbitrary deprivation of the defendant's property [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 428, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see Levy, Golden, Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 54, Punitive Damages (Matthew Bender)].

There are no concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff, and the punitive damages award [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 423-424, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]. However, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages will satisfy due process requirements. An award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages "might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety" [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 423-424, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 581, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 ; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 23-24, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1].

[c] Instructions Must Not Invite Jury to Impose Damages Sufficient to Punish and Deter Conduct Not Related to Particular Plaintiff

In light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], jury instructions must not invite the jury to impose damages sufficient to punish and deter all conduct by a defendant of the type directed toward the plaintiff in that particular case [Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793 (rejecting use of BAJI 14.71; now see CACI Nos. 3940, 3947)].

[d] Instructions on Punitive Damages Must Not Be Vague

Vague jury instructions on punitive damages, or those that merely inform the jury to avoid "passion or prejudice," are impermissible, because they do little to aid the jury in its task of assigning appropriate weight to evidence that is relevant and to evidence that is tangential or only inflammatory [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 417-418, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].

[e] Wealth Is Relevant Regarding Punishment and Deterrence Only With Regard to Particular Plaintiff

In light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell [State Farm

Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585], evidence concerning a defendant's financial condition is not unlawful or inappropriate. However, the jury may only use a defendant's wealth to determine the appropriate punishment for the malicious conduct involved in the particular case, not as a gauge for the imposition of a penalty that will actually deter the entire type or course of conduct that affected the plaintiff in that case [Romo v. Ford Motor Co. (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 738, 753, n.7, 6 Cal.Rptr.3d 793] . The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 426-427, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 ; see [b], above].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's recovery is barred by the plaintiff's consent to the actions complained of. Use the optional section if the plaintiff claims that the consent given was obtained through fraud or duress. If the option is used, then a definition of "fraud" will be required. For an instruction defining "fraud," see Ch. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instructions, and Ch. 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions. In either case, this instruction must be used with the instruction in Ch. 21, California Judicial Council Conversion Instructions, CACI No. 2100 ("Conversion--Essential Factual Elements").

[3] Comment[a] Defense of Consent

The plaintiff's consent to the act or acts of interference complained of is a defense to an action for conversion [Klett v. Security Acceptance Co. (1952) 38 Cal.2d 770, 789-790, 242 P.2d 873 ; Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 783, 793, 62 Cal.Rptr. 553 ; Wade v. Southwest Bank (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 392, 406, 27 Cal.Rptr. 337 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 252]. The only exceptions are when the consent was obtained by fraud [*Freedman v. Queen Ins. CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.51

MB 2100A.51 Right to Possession

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Defendant has proved that [he/she/it] was entitled to possession of _____ [describe property] when [he/she/it] _____ [took or kept] possession of it, then you must find that Defendant did not commit an act of conversion.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Defendant sold _____ [describe property] to Plaintiff under a conditional sales contract. One of the conditions of this contract was that if Plaintiff _____ [state condition on which defendant becomes entitled to possession], then Defendant was entitled to immediate possession of _____ [describe property]. If you find that Plaintiff did fail to comply with this condition, then Defendant did have the right to the property's immediate possession, and there was no conversion.

Authorities: Com. Code § 9609; Silverstin v. Kohler & Chase (1919) 181 Cal. 51, 54, 183 P. 451 ; Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 600, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169 ; Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal.App.2d 587, 594-595, 281 P.2d 90 ; Ray v. Mercantile Acceptance Corp. (1941) 44 Cal.App.2d 327, 331, 112 P.2d 295 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant justifies taking or keeping possession of the allegedly converted property on the basis that he or she was entitled to possession of that property. Use the optional paragraph if the defendant claims a right to possession based on the plaintiff's failure to comply with the requirements of a conditional sales contract.

[3] Comment

[a] Right to Take Possession; Secured Transactions; Unlawful Entry

Taking possession of personal property is not conversion if the defendant had a right to possession of that property [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 272], as when the plaintiff is in default under a conditional sales contract [Silverstin v. Kohler & Chase (1919) 181 Cal. 51, 54, 183 P. 451 ; Ray v. Mercantile Acceptance Corp. (1941) 44 Cal.App.2d 327, 331, 112 P.2d 295]. The secured party in a secured transaction has the right to possession on the buyer's default unless the parties agree otherwise [Com. Code § 9609]. However, even when a secured party is otherwise entitled to take possession of property on a default on a finance contract, repossession by unlawful entry is a conversion of that property. Liability of the secured party for such an unlawful entry by a reposessor employed on its behalf does not depend on authorization, ratification, knowledge, intent, or bad faith. The gist of conversion, as discussed in MB 2100A.06[3][a], lies in an unwarranted interference with the plaintiff's property resulting in injury. Wrongful motives are not necessary and need not be proved [Henderson v. Security Nat'l Bank (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 764, 770-771, 140 Cal.Rptr. 388 ; see MB 2100A.16[3][a]]. The secured party's inability to take possession without unlawful entry or other breach of the peace does not mean that that party lacks the right to possession. This means only that the secured party must resort to the law rather than to self-help. The right to possession on a default in a secured transaction remains sufficient to support an action for conversion if the secured party is denied possession [Hartford Fin. Corp. v. Burns (1979) 96 Cal.App.3d 591, 600, 158 Cal.Rptr. 169].

Sellers of goods must take great care in exercising the right to repossess on default. For example, it is a conversion for a secured party to take rightful possession of an automobile, then fail to return or account for jewelry left in the car's glove compartment [see Varela v. Wells Fargo Bank (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 741, 749-750, 93 Cal.Rptr. 428]. In addition, a seller who does not acquire a security interest in the goods sold is merely an unpaid seller and does not have the special rights of a secured party. A car dealership that sold a car to a used car dealer for a draft without any security agreement was held to be liable for conversion for repossessing the car from a third party who bought the car [English v. Ralph Williams Ford (1971) 17 Cal.App.3d 1038, 1047-1049, 95 Cal.Rptr. 501].

[b] Right to Keep Possession; Secured Transactions; Excessive Demands

Keeping possession of property is also not conversion if one has a right to possession of that property. For example, it is not conversion to hold another's stock shares despite a demand for their return, if the shares are held under an option contract that gives the one holding the shares the right to possession [Glascok v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal.App.2d 587, 594-595, 281 P.2d 90]. Further, a secured party lawfully in possession of the collateral on default does not commit a conversion by demanding payment of an amount not covered by the security agreement. The debtor can redeem the collateral by tendering an amount sufficient to meet all obligations secured by the property at issue, plus reasonable expenses and attorney's fees [Com. Code § 9623; see Com. Code § 9615(a)(1) (reasonable expenses and attorney's fees)]. If it does not do so, then the debtor remains in default and the secured party is not liable for conversion, despite its excessive demands [Clark Equip. Co. v. Mastelotto, Inc. (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 88, 93-94, 150 Cal.Rptr. 797].

[c] Liability for Torts Other Than Conversion

Even when the defendant had a right to the property's possession and should not be liable for conversion, the defendant may be otherwise liable if he or she improperly takes possession of the property [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 272, cmts. a, b]. For example, a defendant who uses force may be liable for assault [Silverstin v. Kohler & Chase (1919) 181 Cal. 51, 54, 183 P. 451].

Authorities: Bruce v. Sibeck (1938) 25 Cal.App.2d 691, 696, 78 P.2d 741 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 265.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims to be a public officer who acted in the public interest in taking the plaintiff's property. If the defendant claims to have acted under the authority of a specific statute or rule, cite and explain that authority.

[3] Comment

Public officers acting under a duty or authority to protect the public interest are privileged to seize personal property without liability for conversion [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 265]. Thus, for example, a game warden may seize a boat and other equipment used in violation of the law [Bruce v. Sibeck (1938) 25 Cal.App.2d 691, 696, 78 P.2d 741].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.53

MB 2100A.53 Court Order[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If Defendant has proved that, acting as a _____ [sheriff or other ministerial officer], [he/she/it] took the Plaintiff's property under a _____ [court order or other process] that was _____ [valid or apparently valid], then Defendant is not liable for converting that property.

A court order is apparently valid if it would appear valid to an ordinarily intelligent and informed person who is not trained in the law.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 262.1; Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 149, 154, 265 P.2d 907 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant is a sheriff or other ministerial officer who claims that his or her taking of the plaintiff's property is privileged because the property was taken under a court order or other process.

[3] Comment

A "sheriff or other ministerial officer" is justified in executing and must execute all process and orders regular on their face and issued by competent authority, whatever may be the defects in the proceedings on which they were issued [Code Civ. Proc. § 262.1]. Therefore, a sheriff or other ministerial officer [see Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 149, 154, 265 P.2d 907 (sheriff is ministerial or executive, not judicial, officer)] cannot be held liable for taking property under an order or process valid on its face [Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 149, 154, 265 P.2d 907 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 266]. For a process or an order to be valid, it is enough if it appears to be valid on its face in the judgment of an ordinarily intelligent and informed layperson [Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal.2d 149, 154, 265 P.2d 907].

However, acting under a court order is not a complete shield against liability for those who are not public officers. In one case, the owner of personal property mortgaged that property to secure a debt. The mortgage provided that on default in payment of that debt, the mortgagee would be entitled to possession of the property. The owner died, and his executor failed to make the required payment. Subsequently, a court ordered a sale of property for the estate's benefit, including the mortgaged property. Before the sale, the mortgagee demanded possession of the mortgaged property. The executor refused to deliver the property, and sold it. The Court held that the order to sell did not protect the executor, because the court had merely ordered a sale; it did not order the executor to refuse possession to one entitled to possession [Mathew v. Mathew (1903) 138 Cal. 334, 336-337, 71 P. 344].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.54

MB 2100A.54 Qualified Refusal Privilege

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have already explained to you, it is ordinarily a conversion to refuse a demand for the return of property if the demand is made by one entitled to immediate possession of that property. However, if the refusal is a qualified refusal, Defendant may refuse to return the property without being liable for conversion. A qualified refusal is a limited refusal. That is, it is not an absolute refusal to return the property under any circumstances. A qualified refusal is a refusal to return property that is based on a specific reason.

To prove a qualified refusal, Defendant must have proved both of the following:

1. That Defendant's refusal to return the property was a limited refusal given because:

[CHOOSE ONE OR MORE (See Use of Instruction)]

a. Plaintiff's demand for the return of _____ [describe property] was unreasonable under the circumstances. For example, Plaintiff's demand was unreasonable if Plaintiff asked for the property when Defendant could not get to it, or if Plaintiff asked for the property in the middle of the night.

[AND/OR]

b. Defendant wanted time to identify Plaintiff.

[AND/OR]

c. Defendant wanted time to investigate Plaintiff's right to the property, which was in doubt.

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

2. That this reason was communicated to Plaintiff when [he/she/it] demanded the property.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If Defendant refused to return the property to _____ [identify Plaintiff or investigate Plaintiff's right to it], then [his/her/its] refusal is a qualified refusal only if the refusal lasts no longer than is reasonably necessary to _____ [identify Plaintiff or investigate Plaintiff's right to the property].

Giacomelos v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Asso. (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 99, 100-101, 46 Cal.Rptr. 612 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 238-241.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that his or her refusal to return the plaintiff's property on demand was not a conversion because the refusal was a qualified refusal. It should be used with the instruction in MB 2100A.12[1], which explains liability for refusal to return property on demand.

The three reasons given as choices for the conclusion of Paragraph 1 are the three permissible reasons for giving a qualified refusal. Counsel may use any one of them, any two of them, or all three, depending on which of them is at issue. Any one of these reasons is sufficient to justify a qualified refusal if the other requirements are met [see [3][a], below].

The optional last paragraph should be used if the plaintiff claims that the defendant's refusal, although initially privileged, lost its privileged character because it lasted for an unreasonable time.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip --Using MB 2100A . 54: This is a complicated instruction. Hence, care should be given in constructing the related argument to the jury. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Privilege for Qualified Refusal

Although it is ordinarily a conversion to refuse a demand for the return of property if the demand is made by one entitled to that property [see MB 2100A.12], a qualified refusal may be privileged under certain circumstances [Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 238-241]. A qualified refusal is a conditional, limited refusal [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 238, cmt. a].

[b] Good Faith; Reason for Refusal

To be privileged, a qualified refusal must be made in good faith [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 241(a)] for a reasonable purpose [Prosser & Keeton on Torts (5th ed. 1984) § 15, pp. 99-100]. For example, a qualified refusal may be privileged if the refusal is made because the demand for the property's return was unreasonable [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 238], or to identify the claimant [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 239], or to investigate a doubtful claim [Giacomelos v. Bank of Am. (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 99, 100-101, 46 Cal.Rptr. 612 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 240]. This reason must be communicated to the one making the demand for the property at that time [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 241(b)], unless the circumstances justify the failure to do so [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 241(b)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Reasonableness of Demand: Whether or not a demand is "unreasonable" will depend on the nature of the property in question. Even if the demand is "unreasonable," the defendant should be prepared to show that he/she was willing to comply with a reasonable demand. Note that this qualified privilege only lasts for a limited amount of time [see [c], below]. By Ronald Oster

[c] Time That Privilege to Refuse Lasts

A qualified refusal is privileged only if it is for a reasonable length of time [Prosser & Keeton on Torts (5th ed. 1984) § 15, p. 99]. For example, a qualified refusal to identify a claimant or to investigate a doubtful claim is privileged only for the time reasonably necessary to accomplish these purposes [Giacomelos v. Bank of Am. (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 99, 101, 46 Cal.Rptr. 612 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 239, cmt. c, 240, cmt. a].

MB 2100A.55 Estoppel--Apparent Title or Authority[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may not claim ownership of _____ [describe property], and therefore may not recover for its conversion, if Defendant has proved all of the following:

1. That Plaintiff did something to make it appear that _____ [name of defendant's transferor] owned or could rightfully dispose of Plaintiff's property;
2. That Defendant actually believed that _____ [name of third party] owned or had the power to dispose of the property; and
3. That because _____ [name of third party] appeared to own the property or have the right to dispose of it, Defendant _____ [e.g., bought] it.

Authorities: Chase v. Whitmore (1886) 68 Cal. 545, 547, 9 P. 942 ; Eistrat v. Western Hardwood Lumber Co. (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 374, 384, 330 P.2d 629 ; Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1921) 54 Cal.App. 691, 695, 202 P. 929 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant claims to have acquired the allegedly converted property from a third party clothed by the plaintiff with apparent title to that property or apparent authority to dispose of that property.

[3] Comment

A party may be estopped to assert title to property in a conversion action if the party has clothed another with the apparent title to or power of disposition over the property, and an innocent third party is thereby induced to deal with this other person for the property [Chase v. Whitmore (1886) 68 Cal. 545, 547, 9 P. 942 ; Eistrat v. Western Hardwood Lumber Co. (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 374, 384, 330 P.2d 629 ; Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1921) 54 Cal.App. 691, 695, 202 P. 929]. If the plaintiff cannot assert title in a conversion action when the defendant has acquired the property from a third party with apparent title or power of disposition, then the plaintiff may not recover [see Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1921) 54 Cal.App. 691, 695, 202 P. 929].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.56

MB 2100A.56 Innocent Purchaser for Value Without Notice

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant claims as a defense that _____ [he/she/it] was an innocent purchaser for value without notice of the transferor's conversion. To establish this defense, Defendant must prove both of the following:

1. Defendant purchased the _____ [specify property at issue] for value; and
2. Defendant had no actual or constructive notice that the transferor of that property had obtained the _____ [specify property at issue] fraudulently.

If Defendant proves both of these things, then Plaintiff may not recover damages for conversion against Defendant.

Authorities: Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1908) 153 Cal. 411, 414, 95 P. 1029 ;
Bank of Ukiah v. Gibson (1895) 109 Cal. 197, 41 P. 1008 ; Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43
Cal.App.4th 539, 549, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims to be a bona fide purchaser as a defense to plaintiff's action for conversion. For an instruction in which the defendant claims that plaintiff's actions made it appear that the defendant's transferor could rightly dispose of plaintiff's property, see MB 2100A.55[1].

[3] Comment

[a] Purchase From Fraudulent Transferor

Generally, an innocent purchaser for value and without actual or constructive notice that the transferor secured the goods fraudulently is not liable for conversion [CRS Recovery, Inc. v. Laxton (9th Cir. 2010) 600 F.3d 1138, 1145 ; Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 539, 546, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810]. However, a person who acquires property from the fraudulent transferor under such circumstances that the acquiring party cannot be held to be a purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration, is in no better position than the fraudulent transferor, and the defrauded party has the same remedies for conversion against the acquiring party as against the fraudulent transferor [Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1908) 153 Cal. 411, 414, 95 P. 1029 ; Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 539, 549, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810].

[b] Value

A party who is free from fraud and bought without notice nonetheless is not a bona fide purchaser if that party did not part with valuable consideration. A promise that is not an exchange for value, by which the purchaser loses nothing by the transaction, is not a payment of value [Bank of Ukiah v. Gibson (1895) 109 Cal. 197, 41 P. 1008 ; Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 539, 548, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Purchasing "For Value": A key term in this defense instruction is the requirement that the defendant purchased the property "for value." If the defendant paid the fair market value, there should be no problem. However, if the defendant paid below market value, the issue of constructive knowledge on the defendant's part becomes an issue [see also § 2100A.14[2]]. By Ronald Oster

[c] Notice

Absence of notice is an essential requirement for one to be regarded as a bona fide purchaser [Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 539, 549, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810 ; Gates Rubber Co. v. Ulman (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 356, 364, 262 Cal.Rptr. 630]. If the property is taken from the fraudulent transferor with knowledge of the fraud, or with knowledge of facts and circumstances that would put a reasonable person on inquiry, the purchaser is not a bona fide purchaser [Oakdale Vill. Group v. Fong (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 539, 546, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 810].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.57

MB 2100A.57 Waiver

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may not recover damages for conversion of [his/her/its] property if Defendant has proved that Plaintiff waived [his/her/its] _____ [either title to or interest in that property or right to bring an action against Defendant for conversion]. To prove this waiver, Defendant must prove all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff had at the time of the waiver _____ [either title to or interest in the property or a right to bring an action against Defendant for conversion];
- 2. That Plaintiff knew that [he/she/it] had this _____ [right or title or interest]; and
- 3. That Plaintiff either intentionally gave up this _____ [right or title or interest] or acted in a way so inconsistent with the intent to enforce [his/her/its] rights that it was reasonable for Defendant to believe that this _____ [right or title or interest] had been relinquished.

Defendant bears the burden of proving this waiver by clear and convincing evidence. This means that Defendant must have offered evidence that makes you believe that it is highly probable that each of these three things is true. Defendant must have offered evidence that is so clear as to leave no substantial doubt. Do not measure Defendant's evidence by the number of witnesses or the amount of evidence that [he/she/it] offers. Measure Defendant's evidence by how convincing that evidence is.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant claims that the plaintiff is barred from recovery for conversion by the waiver of his or her interest in the property at issue or by the waiver of his or her right to bring the action.

[3] Comment

[a] Waiver Defined; Elements of Waiver; Question of Fact

Waiver is generally defined as the intentional relinquishment of a known right or privilege [Johnson v. Zerbst (1938) 304 U.S. 458, 464, 58 S.Ct. 1019, 82 L.Ed. 1461 ; Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 1, 31-32, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 370, 900 P.2d 619 ; Imperial NH3 v. Central Valley Feed Yards, Inc. (1977) 70 Cal.App.3d 513, 518, 139 Cal.Rptr. 8 ; see Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 84, cmt. b]. This definition breaks down into the following three elements:

- An existing right or privilege [City of Redondo Beach v. Kumnick (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 830, 838, 31 Cal.Rptr. 367];
- Knowledge of that right or privilege [Jones v. Brown (1970) 13 Cal.App.3d 513, 519, 89 Cal.Rptr. 651]; and
- The intent to waive it [Kay v. Kay (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 214, 218, 10 Cal.Rptr. 196] or conduct so inconsistent with an intent to enforce that right or privilege as to induce a reasonable belief that it has been relinquished [Crest Catering Co. v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal.2d 274, 278, 42 Cal.Rptr. 110, 398 P.2d 150 ; Rheem Mfg. Co. v. United States (1962) 57 Cal.2d 621, 626, 21 Cal.Rptr. 802, 371 P.2d 578].

Whether there has been a waiver is generally a question of fact for the trier of fact [see Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 Cal.2d 169, 189, 14 Cal.Rptr. 297, 363 P.2d 313 ; Hefferan v. Freebairn (1950) 34 Cal.2d 715, 722, 214 P.2d 386].

[b] Waiver as Defense to Conversion

Waiver is available as a defense in conversion actions [Imperial NH3 v. Central Valley Feed Yards, Inc. (1977) 70 Cal.App.3d 513, 518-520, 139 Cal.Rptr. 8 ; Eistrat v. Western Hardwood Lumber Co. (1958) 164 Cal.App.2d 374, 381-382, 330 P.2d 629 ; Bastanchury v. Times-Mirror Co. (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 217, 233-236, 240, 156 P.2d 488]. For example, one who claimed a crop mortgage lien on certain crops and the proceeds from their sale has been held to have waived those lien rights and to be unable to recover for the taking of the proceeds because of this waiver. A third party with a prior lien claim to the land involved held a pledgee's sale to sell the land to satisfy its security interest. The plaintiff was present and did not protest. The other lien claimant bought the property at that pledgee's sale, then entered onto the land and financed, cultivated, and sold the crops without protest from the plaintiff who had full knowledge of these events. The court found that this was a waiver of any lien rights the plaintiff had and that the plaintiff was not entitled to bring an action for the conversion of the proceeds of the crop sales [Bastanchury v. Times-Mirror Co. (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 217, 233-236, 240, 156 P.2d 488].

[c] Burden of Proof

The party claiming the benefit of the waiver bears the burden of proving it [Gaunt v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 18, 23, 62 Cal.Rptr. 624 ; Perini v. Perini (1964) 225 Cal.App.2d 399, 407, 37 Cal.Rptr. 354 ; Brewer v. Municipal Court (1961) 193 Cal.App.2d 510, 515, 14 Cal.Rptr. 391] by "clear and convincing evidence that does not leave the matter to speculation" [City of Ukiah v. Fones (1966) 64 Cal.2d 104, 107-108, 48 Cal.Rptr. 865, 410 P.2d 369 ; see also Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 1, 31-32, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 370, 900 P.2d 619 (burden is on party claiming waiver of right to prove it by clear and convincing evidence that does not leave matter to speculation; doubtful cases will be decided against waiver); DRG/Beverly Hills, Ltd. v. Chopstix Dim Sum Cafe & Takeout III, Ltd. (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 54, 60-61, 35 Cal.Rptr.2d 515 (trial court correctly instructed jury that waiver of known right must be shown by clear and convincing evidence)]. There must be "a clear showing of an intent to relinquish that right" [Isaacson v. City of Oakland (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 414, 419, 69 Cal.Rptr. 379 ; Caesar's Rest. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1959) 175 Cal.App.2d 850, 856, 1 Cal.Rptr. 97].

"Clear and convincing evidence" has been variously defined as evidence that is (1) clear, explicit, and unequivocal; (2) so clear as to leave no substantial doubt; and (3) strong enough to command the unhesitating assent of every reasonable mind [see Sheehan v. Sullivan (1899) 126 Cal. 189, 193, 58 P. 543 ; United Prof'l Planning, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 377, 386, 88 Cal.Rptr. 551]. Clear and convincing evidence must persuade the trier of fact that it is highly probable that the facts asserted are true [Witkin, California Evidence, vol. 1, Burden of Proof and Presumptions, § 38 (4th ed., 2000); McBaine, Burden of Proof: Degrees of Belief, 32 Cal. L. Rev. 242, 251-254, 262-264 (1944)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Emphasize Higher Burden of Proof: As noted above, the defense of waiver requires proof by "clear and convincing" evidence. A defendant should emphasize this higher burden of proof in closing argument. By Ronald Oster

PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.58

MB 2100A.58 Statute of Limitations[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The statute of limitations is a law providing that unless a person begins a legal action within a certain period of time he or she loses the right to do so. In this action for conversion, the law requires the Plaintiff to sue for conversion _____ [three years or other applicable time] from _____ [the date the act of conversion was committed or such other date as may apply]. This means that Plaintiff may not sue in this court if the act or acts of conversion occurred more than _____ [three years or other applicable time] before _____, which is the date on which Plaintiff began this lawsuit. Therefore, if you find that the act or acts of conversion occurred before _____ [date either three years or other applicable date before action begun], then you must find that Plaintiff may not recover for conversion, and you need not and must not consider any other evidence offered once you have made this finding.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c); Snapp & Assocs. Ins. Servs., Inc. v. Robertson (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 884, 892 n.2, 117 Cal.Rptr.2d 331 ; Fabrice Prods. v. United Cal. Bank (1968) 264 Cal.App.2d 113, 117, 70 Cal.Rptr. 50 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action is barred by the running of the statute of limitations. For an instruction defining how damages may be limited by the statute of limitations, see MB 2100A.35[1].

[3] Comment[a] Time for Commencing Action

An action for conversion must generally be commenced [see Code Civ. Proc. § 335] by filing a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 350] within three years [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c); Fabricon Prods. v. United Cal. Bank (1968) 264 Cal.App.2d 113, 117, 70 Cal.Rptr. 50]. Certain conversion actions are subject to special limitation periods, for example:

- Three years after discovery of whereabouts of any article of historical, interpretive, scientific, or artistic significance [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)].
- Six months for wrongful levy by tax collector or for stock improperly sold for delinquent assessment [Code Civ. Proc. § 341].
- 90 days for trover against hotel, furnished apartment, or furnished bungalow owner [Code Civ. Proc. § 341a].
- 180 days for conversion of oil, gas, or other liquid or fluid from drilled well [Code Civ. Proc. § 3493/4].
- Six months after claim filed with State Board of Control has been denied if defendant is public entity [Gov. Code §§ 905.2, 911.2, 913, 945.6].
- Three years after end of guardianship or conservatorship or three years after removal of any legal disability to sue that existed when cause of action accrued for action against guardian by ward or one claiming under ward to recover property sold [Prob. Code § 2548].
- Three years after settlement of executor's or administrator's final account or three years after discovery of fraud for action against executor or administrator by one claiming under decedent to recover property sold [Prob. Code § 10382].

[b] Running of Statute of Limitations

Ordinarily, the three-year period begins to run when the conversion is committed, even if the injured party is entirely ignorant of the conversion and of his or her rights [Eistrat v. Cekada (1958) 50 Cal.2d 289, 291, 324 P.2d 881 ; Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal.2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20 ; Barnes v. Witt (1962) 207 Cal.App.2d 441, 445, 24 Cal.Rptr. 545]. However, if the tortfeasor conceals the conversion's facts, then the limitation period does not begin to run until the owner discovers or should have discovered these facts [Barnes v. Witt (1962) 207 Cal.App.2d 441, 445, 24 Cal.Rptr. 545 ; see Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal.2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20 (fraudulent concealment)]. Because of the fiduciary's duty of disclosure to the beneficiary, any conversion of trust property amounts to a fraudulent concealment, and therefore the limitation period does not begin to run until the owner learns of the conversion or learns facts sufficient to arouse his or her suspicion [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal.2d 540, 561-562, 305 P.2d 20 ; Bono v. Clark (2002) 103 Cal.App.4th 1409, 1433, 128 Cal.Rptr.2d 31 (no concealment; limitations period expired)]. Thus, if one becomes aware of facts that would make a reasonably prudent person suspicious, it is no longer enough to rely on the fiduciary relationship. At that point one has a duty to look further, and one may be charged with all the knowledge such an investigation would have revealed [Miller v. Bechtel Corp. (1983) 33 Cal.3d 868, 874-875, 191 Cal.Rptr. 619, 663 P.2d 177]. If the converted property was first taken lawfully under a bailment, then there is no conversion and no running of the statute of limitations until a demand for the property is made and refused or until a repudiation of the owner's title is clearly and unequivocally brought to the owner's attention [Coy v. County of Los Angeles (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1077, 1088, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 215 ; Bufano v. City & County of San Francisco (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 61, 70, 43 Cal.Rptr. 223]. However, this rule does not apply to stock lawfully taken then converted by a broker [Coy v. E.F. Hutton (1941) 44 Cal.App.2d 386, 390-391, 112 P.2d 639] or a pledgee-bank [Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 242, 94 P. 889]. In addition, the statute does not run during any period in which the plaintiff is legally restrained from taking action to protect his or her property [Eistrat v. Cekada (1958) 50 Cal.2d 289, 290-293, 324 P.2d 881]. During the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings the plaintiff may be so restrained by orders issued to protect the bankrupt's property. Finally, special rules apply to a claim of conspiracy to convert. In an action based on civil conspiracy, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until after the commission of the last overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy [Maheu v. CBS, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 662, 673-674, 247 Cal.Rptr. 304].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.59

MB 2100A.59 Privilege of Self-Defense or Defense of Third Person

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant is not liable for converting Plaintiff's property if Defendant proves the following:

1. Defendant reasonably believed that _____ [(he/she/it) AND/OR _____ (name of third person)] [was/were] in danger of unlawful attack by Defendant.

2. Defendant took Plaintiff's property to defend _____ [(himself/herself/itself) AND/OR _____ (name of third person)] against this attack.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

3. Defendant reasonably believed that [his/her/its] intervention was necessary for the protection of _____ [name of third person].

[CONTINUE WITH INSTRUCTION]

By an "unlawful attack," I mean any [unprivileged] harmful or offensive contact or other bodily harm.

Authorities: Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1060, 1072-1073, 283 Cal.Rptr. 917 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 261.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant claims that the taking of the plaintiff's property was justified under the privilege of self-defense. The bracketed references to the third person in paragraphs 1 and 2, and the optional paragraph 3, should be used when the defendant's claim of privilege is based on or includes the defense of a third person.

The bracketed word "unprivileged" in the final paragraph of the instruction should not be used unless the plaintiff attempts to defeat the defendant's claim of the privilege of self-defense by arguing that the attack defended against was itself privileged.

[3] Comment

The Restatement (Second) of Torts recognizes that a person is privileged to commit an act that would otherwise be a conversion of property in the possession of another to defend the actor or a third person against the other [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 261; Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 278 (9th ed. 1988)]. The privilege applies under the same conditions that would justify the infliction of a harmful or offensive contact [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 261], that is, when the actor reasonably believes that the other is about to inflict an unprivileged harmful or offensive contact or other bodily harm on the actor [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 63]. The privilege also applies to the defense of a third person if the actor correctly or reasonably believes that (1) the third person has a privilege of self-defense, and (2) the actor's intervention is necessary for the third person's protection [Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 76]. One court of appeal has upheld the application of this defense to conversion [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1060, 1072-1073, 283 Cal.Rptr. 917 ; see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 623 (9th ed. Supp. 2002)]. In so holding, the court of appeal noted that the defendant had taken the documents in question because he believed that "his life, his physical and mental well-being, as well as that of his wife," were in danger from the plaintiff and that taking the documents was the only way to defend himself and his wife. The court rejected the plaintiff's argument that the defense only applied in emergencies, holding that it was enough for the defendant to show that he was under a reasonable apprehension of danger when he took the documents [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1060, 1072 n.6, 1073, 283 Cal.Rptr. 917].

This privilege is a "conditional privilege" [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1060, 1072-1073, 283 Cal.Rptr. 917]. The privilege of defending oneself or a third person against unlawful attack by another is based on the value of the interest to be protected by the exercise of the privilege. The privilege is therefore conditional in that the act is privileged only if it is done to protect or advance that interest [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 10, cmt. d; Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 278 (9th ed. 1988)].

PART C. DEFENSES AND PRIVILEGES

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.60

MB 2100A.60 Unclean Hands

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Defendant claims as a defense that Plaintiff's misconduct bars Plaintiff from enforcing [his/her/its] claim of conversion. To establish this defense, Defendant must prove both of the following:

- 1. Plaintiff's misconduct was directly connected with Plaintiff's claim that Defendant converted _____ [specify property at issue]; and
- 2. Plaintiff's misconduct was so prejudicial to Defendant that it would be unfair to allow Plaintiff to recover on [his/her/its] claim of conversion.

If Defendant proves both of these things, then Plaintiff may not recover damages for conversion.

Authorities: Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 618-623, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741 ; Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1048, 1059-1063, 272 Cal.Rptr. 250 ; Soon v. Beckman (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 33, 36, 44 Cal.Rptr. 190 ; Fibreboard Paper Prods. Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 675, 728-729, 39 Cal.Rptr. 64 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant raises the doctrine of unclean hands as a defense to plaintiff's action for conversion. Although unclean hands is an equitable doctrine, it may be raised as a defense in an action at law, and the issue may be decided by the jury [see Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 618-623, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741 ; see also [3], below].

[3] Comment

Unclean hands is an equitable doctrine that may be raised as a defense in an action at law [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 618-623, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741 ; Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1048, 1059-1063, 272 Cal.Rptr. 250 ; Fibreboard Paper Prods. Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 675, 728-729, 39 Cal.Rptr. 64]. Because unclean hands is an affirmative defense, the burden of proof is on the defendant [Evid. Code § 500]. A plaintiff has unclean hands when (1) he or she has engaged in misconduct that is directly related to the matter before the court, and (2) that misconduct is so prejudicial that it would be unfair to allow the plaintiff to prevail in his or her cause of action [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 620-621, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741 ; Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1048, 1060, 272 Cal.Rptr. 250 ; Soon v. Beckman (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 33, 36, 44 Cal.Rptr. 190 ; Fibreboard Paper Prods. Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 675, 728-729, 39 Cal.Rptr. 64].

The application of the doctrine of unclean hands is primarily a question of fact [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 620, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741 ; California Satellite Sys., Inc. v. Nichols (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 56, 70, 216 Cal.Rptr. 180 ; Fibreboard Paper Prods. Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal.App.2d 675, 727, 39 Cal.Rptr. 64], and this question may properly be submitted to a jury in an action at law, such as an action for conversion [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 612, 621-623, 12 Cal.Rptr.2d 741].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Arguing "Unclean Hands":

"Unclean hands" is a difficult concept for many jurors. Care must therefore be used when putting together the closing argument related to this instruction. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip --MB 2100A . 60[1] Allows Room for Argument:

This is a relatively wide open instruction. The jury is being asked to decide whether plaintiff's misconduct is so prejudicial that it would be "unfair" to allow plaintiff to recover. This instruction allows defense counsel plenty of room to argue the case in closing. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART D. SPECIFIC RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.70

MB 2100A.70 Elements of Action for Specific Recovery of Personal Property--Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff may recover possession of _____ [describe property] from Defendant if Plaintiff can prove all of the following:

- 1. That Plaintiff had the right to possess the property at the time [he/she/it] began this lawsuit;
- 2. That the property is tangible personal property that can be identified and seized; and
- 3. That Defendant wrongfully possesses the property.

Authorities: Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 82, 290 P. 583 ; Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. Mariposa County (1950) 99 Cal.App.2d 210, 213, 215, 221 P.2d 232 ; Lamus v. Engwicht (1919) 39 Cal.App. 523, 528-529, 179 P. 435 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to inform the jury of the plaintiff's burden of proof in an action for specific recovery of personal property. For an instruction explaining the burden of proof, see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True"). In addition, use either the instruction in MB 2100A.71 or MB 2100A.72 that is needed to define a particular element of the cause of action more fully. Keep in mind that this instruction may be used with some of the instructions in MB 2100A.01 through MB 2100A.60 on conversion because a plaintiff whose property has been taken is seldom sure of just what happened to that property after the taking or of who has the property at the time of the action. Therefore, the plaintiff's attorney will often be well advised to bring an action for both conversion and specific recovery of personal property. Note too that neither this instruction nor any other part of this chapter deals with the provisional remedy of claim and delivery provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 511.010-516.050.

[3] Comment

When property is wrongfully detained, the aggrieved party may bring an action for specific recovery rather than seek damages based on the property's value in a conversion action [see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 6, Torts, §§ 1457-1459]. The action for the recovery of specific personal property is the equivalent of the common law writ of replevin [Berry v. Bank of Bakersfield (1918) 177 Cal. 206, 209, 170 P. 415]. Specific recovery is equivalent to replevin if the property's original taking was wrongful [see Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 79, 290 P. 583 ; Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. Mariposa County (1950) 99 Cal.App.2d 210, 211, 213, 221 P.2d 232], but is in the nature of detinue if the original taking was lawful [see Commercial Credit Co. v. Peak (1924) 195 Cal. 27, 29, 32, 231 P. 340].

This action is sometimes referred to as "claim and delivery," although "claim and delivery" properly refers not to an action of any sort, but to a provisional pretrial remedy [Faulkner v. First Nat'l Bank (1900) 130 Cal. 258, 263-264, 62 P. 463] set out in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 511.010-516.050.

As explained in the instruction, an action for the recovery of personal property has the following three essential elements:

- (1) The plaintiff must be entitled to immediate possession at the time of the action [Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. Mariposa County (1950) 99 Cal.App.2d 210, 213, 221 P.2d 232];
- (2) The property at issue must be tangible personal property capable of identification and seizure [Lamus v. Engwicht (1919) 39 Cal.App. 523, 528-529, 179 P. 435 ; but see CRS Recovery, Inc. v. Laxton (9th Cir. 2010) 600 F.3d 1138, 1142 (under California law, internet domain names are intangible property subject to conversion claims despite common-law tort law distinction between tangible and intangible property for conversion claims); Haro v. Ibarra (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 823, 835, 103 Cal.Rptr.3d 340 (stock shares are subject to action for conversion); Fremont Indem. Co. v. Fremont Gen. Corp. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 97, 119-126, 55 Cal.Rptr.3d 621 (conversion lies for misappropriation of net operating losses; sustaining of demurrer reversed)]; and
- (3) The defendant must at the time of the action be in wrongful possession of the property or have the power to return it [Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. Mariposa County (1950) 99 Cal.App.2d 210, 215, 221 P.2d 232].

If the defendant obtained possession of the property lawfully, then a demand for possession by plaintiff, followed by a refusal is necessary before the plaintiff has met the third requirement [Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 82, 290 P. 583 ; see MB 2100A.72].

Although this form concerns the recovery of tangible personal property, and traditionally the tort of conversion has been limited to interference with physical personal property, these limitations have eroded over time, allowing a conversion cause of action for certain types of intangible personal property [see Hernandez v. Lopez (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 932, 940, 103 Cal.Rptr.3d 376 ; see, e.g., CRS Recovery, Inc. v. Laxton (9th Cir. 2010) 600 F.3d 1138, 1142, 1144 (California law recognizes property interest in internet domain names; domain names are intangible property subject to conversion claims)].

PART D. SPECIFIC RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.71

MB 2100A.71 Plaintiff's Right to Possession at Time of Action

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

To recover possession of [his/her/its] property, Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] is entitled to immediate possession of the property at this time. This does not mean Plaintiff must prove that [he/she/it] is the property's absolute owner. It is enough if Plaintiff proves that [he/she/it] has some interest in the property that entitles [him/her/it] to immediate possession.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

Plaintiff must also prove that this right to immediate possession is exclusive. If Defendant and Plaintiff own the property in common, then Plaintiff does not have the right to take possession of the property from Defendant.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If there is any act to be performed or condition to be satisfied before Plaintiff is entitled to possession of the property, and that act or that condition has not been performed or occurred, the Plaintiff may not recover the property.

Authorities: Commercial Disc. Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 Cal.2d 610, 613, 116 P.2d 599 ; Teater v. Good Hope Dev. Corp. (1939) 14 Cal.2d 196, 208, 93 P.2d 112 ; Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 79, 290 P. 583 ; International Airports, Inc. v. Finn (1955) 132 Cal.App.2d 293, 297, 282 P.2d 102 ; Estergren v. Sager (1940) 39 Cal.App.2d 401, 403, 103 P.2d 177 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the right of immediate possession required to bring an action for the specific recovery of personal property. It should be used in conjunction with the introductory instruction in MB 2100A.70[1]. The option concerning exclusive possession and the option concerning preliminary acts and conditions precedent are to be used only if these points are at issue.

[3] Comment[a] Right to Immediate and Exclusive Possession

To recover the possession of personal property, the plaintiff must prove that he or she had the right to exclusive and immediate possession of that property at the time that the action was commenced [Commercial Disc. Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 Cal.2d 610, 613, 116 P.2d 599 ; Teater v. Good Hope Dev. Corp. (1939) 14 Cal.2d 196, 208, 93 P.2d 112]. The plaintiff does not have to prove absolute ownership of the property that he or she seeks to recover [Commercial Disc. Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 Cal.2d 610, 613, 116 P.2d 599 ; Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 79, 290 P. 583]. The plaintiff also does not have to prove that he or she ever had actual possession of this property [Commercial Disc. Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 Cal.2d 610, 613, 116 P.2d 599]. It is enough for the plaintiff to prove any right or interest in the property that entitles him or her to immediate and exclusive possession, such as a possessory aircraft lien [International Airports, Inc. v. Finn (1955) 132 Cal.App.2d 293, 297, 282 P.2d 102] or the interest of a chattel mortgagee under a mortgage giving the mortgagee the right of possession on default [Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 78-79, 290 P. 583].

For related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery (Matthew Bender).

[b] Conditional Right to Possession

The plaintiff is not entitled to bring the action if there is some preliminary act to be done or condition to be satisfied before he or she is entitled to possession, because under these conditions, the plaintiff's right to possession is not truly immediate. For example, if a seller of goods fails to declare a forfeiture when the buyer defaults on payment for the goods, the seller is not yet entitled to immediate possession and may not get possession of the goods [Teater v. Good Hope Dev. Corp. (1939) 14 Cal.2d 196, 209, 93 P.2d 112]. If some other person is also entitled to possession, the plaintiff may not recover possession from that person. Thus, one owner in common may not recover possession of the common property from the other co-owner [Estergren v. Sager (1940) 39 Cal.App.2d 401, 403, 103 P.2d 177].

MB 2100A.72 Defendant's Wrongful Possession at Time of Action[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have already told you, Plaintiff must prove that Defendant wrongfully possessed _____ [describe property] at the time that this lawsuit was begun. In addition, Plaintiff must prove either:

1. That the manner in which Defendant originally obtained possession of the property was wrongful; or
2. That Defendant lawfully acquired possession of the property, but after Defendant's right to continued possession ended, [he/she/it] refused to give it to Plaintiff when Plaintiff demanded it.

Authorities: Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 82, 290 P. 583 ; Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. Mariposa County (1950) 99 Cal.App.2d 210, 213, 215, 221 P.2d 232 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define the element of wrongful possession necessary to an action for the specific recovery of personal property. It must be used with the instruction in MB 2100A.70[1].

[3] Comment

For the plaintiff to be entitled to bring an action for the specific recovery of personal property, the defendant must at the time of the action be in wrongful possession of that property or must have the power to deliver it [Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. Mariposa County (1950) 99 Cal.App.2d 210, 215, 221 P.2d 232]. If the defendant obtained possession of the property lawfully, then a demand for possession by plaintiff, followed by a refusal, is necessary before the plaintiff has met the third requirement [Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 82, 290 P. 583].

PART D. SPECIFIC RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.73

MB 2100A.73 Damages if Property Is Recovered

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to recover possession of _____ [describe property], then Plaintiff is also entitled to money damages to compensate Plaintiff for the harm caused to [him/her/it] by Defendant's wrongful keeping of the property.

These damages may include all of the following:

1. Compensation for Plaintiff's loss of the property's use during the period that Defendant kept it. This loss of use should be measured by whichever of the following is greater: either (1) by the property's rental value for that period of time; or (2) by interest at 7 percent per year on the property's full value for the time that Defendant kept it.

In calculating the rental value that Plaintiff is entitled to recover, you must allow the Defendant a credit for the cost of the property's upkeep, including repairs. You must also remember to allow in your calculations for the decrease in the property's rental value caused by depreciation.

2. Compensation for the loss in value of Plaintiff's property during the time that Defendant had that property.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

3. Compensation for the cost to Plaintiff of renting a substitute for _____ [describe property].

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. § 667; Civ. Code § 3294; Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414-415, 202 P.2d 10 ; *Spencer Kennelly, Ltd. v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the damages available in an action for the specific recovery of personal property. If the property cannot be recovered, as when, for example, it has been lost or destroyed, the measure of damages is different and more closely resembles the damages for conversion. Similarly, a different rule will apply if the court decides that the equities of the situation require that a bona fide purchaser from the plaintiff's conditional purchaser be allowed to keep the property [see MB 2100A.74[3]]. If the plaintiff has rented a substitute to mitigate damages resulting from the property's loss of use (e.g., lost profits) for the period of its wrongful detention, use optional Paragraph 3 instead of Paragraph 1. If the plaintiff claims punitive damages, use the instructions in MB 2100A.36[1] and MB 2100A.37[1].

[3] Comment

In an action to recover specific personal property, a prevailing plaintiff is entitled to recover the property itself, plus damages for its detention [Code Civ. Proc. § 667; Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414-415, 202 P.2d 10 ; Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 692, 700, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 815 ; see MB 2100A.74[3] regarding the measure of recovery when property's return is not available].

The statute does not define "damages for the detention" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 667], but these have been found to include interest on the property's value from the time it was taken [see Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414, 202 P.2d 10 ; Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 692, 700, 702, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 815 (appropriate if type of property at issue is without substantial use value)], or the property's use value, whichever is greater [Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414, 202 P.2d 10 ; Ferris v. Cooper (1932) 125 Cal.App. 234, 237, 13 P.2d 536]. An alternative measure is the cost of renting a substitute [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 931]. The property's loss of value and special damages may also be added to the measure of damages [see Spencer Kennelly, Ltd. v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Asso. (1942) 19 Cal.2d 586, 589, 122 P.2d 552 ; Ruzanoff v. Retailers Credit Ass'n (1929) 97 Cal.App. 682, 686, 276 P. 156 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 931].

Use value and interest on the property's value are alternative measures. Both are not available at the same time. Use value, which is virtually synonymous with rental value, is the appropriate measure if it exceeds the amount of interest on the property's value, because, in that circumstance, interest does not furnish adequate compensation for the wrongful detention [Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414, 202 P.2d 10 ; Helmick v. Ritchie (1958) 158 Cal.App.2d 776, 779, 323 P.2d 584]. Repair costs and other upkeep costs must be subtracted from the property's rental value, and depreciation must be allowed for in calculating rental value [Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414-415, 202 P.2d 10].

Punitive damages may also be awarded in an action for recovering personal property [Tucker v. Hagerty (1918) 37 Cal.App. 789, 795, 174 P. 908], if there is proof of fraud, oppression, or malice [Civ. Code § 3294; see MB 2100A.36[3]].

CHAPTER 21A Matthew Bender Conversion Instructions
PART D. SPECIFIC RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

3-21A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2100A.74

MB 2100A.74 Damages if Property Is Not Recovered

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

I have determined that even if Plaintiff is able to prove [his/her/its] case, the law will not permit [him/her/it] to recover the property. However, if Plaintiff proves each element of the action for the specific recovery of personal property, Plaintiff can recover the value of _____ [describe property] as a substitute for its return. In addition, Plaintiff may recover damages for the property's wrongful keeping and the loss of its use. These damages for wrongful keeping and loss of use are the same as the damages available if the property were returned, which I have already explained to you.

Authorities: Code Civ. Proc. §§ 627, 667; Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414-415, 202 P.2d 10 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the damages available in an action for the specific recovery of personal property if the property cannot be recovered, because, for example, it has been lost or destroyed.

[3] Comment

If the property sought cannot be returned to a prevailing plaintiff in an action for the specific recovery of personal property, then that plaintiff is entitled to recover the property's value plus damages for its detention [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 627, 667]. The damages for the wrongful detention include recovery for loss of use [see Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 414-415, 202 P.2d 10 ; Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal.App.4th 692, 700, 28 Cal.Rptr.3d 815 (rule applies to property with readily provable use or rental value, such as machinery and automobiles)].

If the defendant is an innocent purchaser for value who has bought the property from the plaintiff's conditional vendee, then the court may find that the defendant is entitled to keep the property if it pays to the plaintiff the balance due under the conditional sales agreement plus interest. This is a matter for the court to decide by balancing the equities of the situation [see Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal.2d 402, 411, 202 P.2d 10 ; Martin v. Hollins (1931) 118 Cal.App. 561, 562-565, 5 P.2d 899].

CHAPTER 22 California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions

3-22 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Economic Interference Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 2200 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Inducing breach of contract [CACI No. 2200].
- Intentional interference with contractual relations [CACI No. 2201].
- Intentional interference with prospective economic relations [CACI No. 2202].
- Intent [CACI No. 2203].
- Negligent interference with prospective economic relations [CACI No. 2204].

The economic interference series also includes special verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-2200-VF-2203].

CHAPTER 22 California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions

3-22 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2200

CACI 2200 Inducing Breach of Contract

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] intentionally caused [name of third party] to breach [his/her/its] contract with [name of plaintiff]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That there was a contract between [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party];
- 2. That [name of defendant] knew of the contract;
- 3. That [name of defendant] intended to cause [name of third party] to breach the contract;
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of third party] to breach the contract;
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

If the validity of a contract is an issue, see the series of contracts instructions (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

● Restatement Second of Torts, section 766A provides: "One who intentionally and improperly interferes with the performance of a contract (except a contract to marry) between another and a third person by inducing or otherwise causing the third person not to perform the contract, is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary loss resulting to the other from the failure of the third person to perform the contract."

■ "The elements which a plaintiff must plead to state the cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations are (1) a valid contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant's intentional acts designed to induce a breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1126 [270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[C]ases have pointed out that while the tort of inducing breach of contract requires proof of a breach, the cause of action for interference with contractual relations is distinct and requires only proof of interference." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1129 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[A] cause of action for intentional interference with contract requires an underlying enforceable contract. Where there is no existing, enforceable contract, only a claim for interference with prospective advantage may be pleaded." (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 601 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877] .)

■ "The act of inducing the breach must be an intentional one. If the actor had no knowledge of the existence of the contract or his actions were not intended to induce a breach, he cannot be held liable though an actual breach results from his lawful and proper acts." (Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 37 [112 P.2d 631] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "It is not enough that the actor intended to perform the acts which caused the result--he or she must have intended to cause the result itself." (Kasparian v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 242, 261 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 90] .)

■ "[T]he tort cause of action for interference with a contract does not lie against a party to the contract. [Citations.] [P] ... The tort duty not to interfere with the contract falls only on strangers-interlopers who have no legitimate interest in the scope or course of the contract's performance." (Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 514 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]nterference with an at-will contract is actionable interference with the contractual relationship, on the theory that a contract 'at the will of the parties, respectively, does not make it one at the will of others. [Citations]' " (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1127 , internal citations and quotations omitted.)

■ "Because interference with an existing contract receives greater solicitude than does interference with prospective economic advantage, it is not necessary that the defendant's conduct be wrongful apart from the interference with the contract itself." (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guaranty Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 55 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "We conclude that a plaintiff seeking to state a claim for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because defendant induced another to undertake litigation, must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and that the litigation concluded in plaintiff's favor." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1137 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Inducing Breach of Contract vs. Intentional Interference with Contractual Relations: CACI No. 2200 applies when defendant's conduct caused a complete breach of contract. In cases where there was not a complete breach, but performance was made more difficult or expensive, the instruction for intentional interference with contractual relations applies [see CACI No. 2201; MB 2200A.03]. If plaintiff's counsel is uncertain as to whether the jury will find a complete breach, both theories should be pursued. By Ronald Oster

"[W]hen a manager stood to reap a tangible personal benefit from the principal's breach of contract, so that it is at least reasonably possible that the manager acted out of self-interest rather than in the interest of the principal, the manager should not enjoy the protection of the manager's privilege unless the trier of fact concludes that the manager's predominant motive was to benefit the principal." Directions for Use

Regarding element 4, the court must specifically state for the jury the conduct that the judge has determined as a matter of law would satisfy the "wrongful conduct" standard. This conduct must fall outside the privilege of fair competition. (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 603 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877] ; Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] .) The jury must then decide whether the defendant engaged in the conduct as defined by the judge. If the conduct is tortious, the judge should instruct on the elements of the tort.

Sources and Authority

- "The tort of intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage imposes liability for improper methods of disrupting or diverting the business relationship of another which fall outside the boundaries of fair competition." (Settimo Associates v. Environ Systems, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 842, 845 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 757] , internal citation omitted.)

- "The tort of interference with prospective economic advantage protects the same interest in stable economic relationships as does the tort of interference with contract, though interference with prospective advantage does not require proof of a legally binding contract. The chief practical distinction between interference with contract and interference with prospective economic advantage is that a broader range of privilege to interfere is recognized when the relationship or economic advantage interfered with is only prospective." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1126 [270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587] , internal citations omitted.)

- The elements are "(1) [a]n economic relationship between the plaintiff and some third party, with the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) the defendant's knowledge of the relationship; (3) intentional acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) economic harm to the plaintiff proximately caused by the acts of the defendant." (Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal.3d 64, 71, fn. 6 [233 Cal.Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728] .)

- "With respect to the third element, a plaintiff must show that the defendant engaged in an independently wrongful act. It is not necessary to prove that the defendant acted with the specific intent, or purpose, of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Instead, 'it is sufficient for the plaintiff to plead that the defendant "[knew] that the interference is certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of his action." ' "[A]n act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful, that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard.' "[A]n act must be wrongful by some legal measure, rather than merely a product of an improper, but lawful, purpose or motive.' " (San Jose Construction, Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1528, 1544-1545 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54] , internal citations omitted.)

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 766B provides:

One who intentionally and improperly interferes with another's prospective contractual relation (except a contract to marry) is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary harm resulting from loss of the benefits of the relation, whether the interference consists of:

(a) inducing or otherwise causing a third person not to enter into or continue the prospective relation or

(b) preventing the other from acquiring or continuing the prospective relation.

■ Restatement Second of Torts, section 767 provides:

In determining whether an actor's conduct in intentionally interfering with a contract or a prospective contractual relation of another is improper or not, consideration is given to the following factors:

- (a) the nature of the actor's conduct,
- (b) the actor's motive,
- (c) the interests of the other with which the actor's conduct interferes,
- (d) the interests sought to be advanced by the actor,
- (e) the social interests in protecting the freedom of action of the actor and the contractual interests of the other,
- (f) the proximity or remoteness of the actor's conduct to the interference and
- (g) the relations between the parties.

■ "[A]n essential element of the tort of intentional interference with prospective business advantage is the existence of a business relationship with which the tortfeasor interfered. Although this need not be a contractual relationship, an existing relationship is required." (Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 530, 546 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 706] , internal citations omitted.)

■ As in the tort of interference with contractual relations, a party to the prospective economic relation cannot be made the subject of an action for interference with that prospective relation. (Kasparian v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 242, 266 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 90] .)

■ "Although varying language has been used to express this threshold requirement, the cases generally agree it must be reasonably probable that the prospective economic advantage would have been realized but for defendant's interference." (Youst, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 71 , internal citations omitted.)

■ In Della Penna, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 393 , the Supreme Court held that "a plaintiff seeking to recover for an alleged interference with prospective contractual or economic relations must plead and prove as part of its case-in-chief that the defendant not only knowingly interfered with the plaintiff's expectancy, but engaged in conduct that was wrongful by some legal measure other than the fact of interference itself."

■ "Della Penna did not specify what sort of conduct would qualify as 'wrongful' apart from the interference itself." (Limandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 340 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539] .)

■ "Justice Mosk's concurring opinion in Della Penna advocates that proscribed conduct be limited to means that are independently tortious or a restraint of trade. The Oregon Supreme Court suggests that conduct may be wrongful if it violates 'a statute or other regulation, or a recognized rule of common law, or perhaps an established standard of a trade or profession.' ... Our Supreme Court may later have occasion to clarify the meaning of 'wrongful conduct' or 'wrongfulness,' or it may be that a precise definition proves impossible." (Arntz Contracting Co. v. St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 464, 477-478 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 888] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Commonly included among improper means are actions which are independently actionable, violations of federal or state law or unethical business practices, e.g., violence, misrepresentation, unfounded litigation, defamation, trade libel or trade mark infringement." (PMC, Inc., supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 603 , internal citation omitted.)
- "It is insufficient to allege the defendant engaged in tortious conduct distinct from or only tangentially related to the conduct constituting the actual interference." (Limandri, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 342 .)
- "[O]ur focus for determining the wrongfulness of those intentional acts should be on the defendant's objective conduct, and evidence of motive or other subjective states of mind is relevant only to illuminating the nature of that conduct." (Arntz Contracting Co., supra, 47 Cal.App.4th at p. 477 .)
- "Since the crux of the competition privilege is that one can interfere with a competitor's prospective contractual relationship with a third party as long as the interfering conduct is not independently wrongful (i.e., wrongful apart from the fact of the interference itself), Della Penna's requirement that a plaintiff plead and prove such wrongful conduct in order to recover for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has resulted in a shift of burden of proof. It is now the plaintiff's burden to prove, as an element of the cause of action itself, that the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful and, therefore, was not privileged rather than the defendant's burden to prove, as an affirmative defense, that it's [sic] conduct was not independently wrongful and therefore was privileged." (Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 867, 881 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 830] .)
- Other courts have stated that "[t]he Della Penna court disapproved the view treating justification as an affirmative defense." (Westside Center Associates v. Safeway Stores 23, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 507, 521, fn. 16 [49 Cal.Rptr.2d 793] .)
- There are other privileges that a defendant could assert in appropriate cases, such as the "manager's privilege" (see Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1383, 1391-1392 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 383] .)
- "We conclude that a plaintiff seeking to state a claim for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because defendant induced another to undertake litigation, must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and that the litigation concluded in plaintiff's favor." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1137 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proving This Tort: Interference with prospective economic relations requires proof that defendant's conduct was "wrongful" apart from the interference itself. This generally requires proof that defendant's conduct amounted to an independent tort or violated a statute. This issue is likely to be the subject of motion practice in advance of trial. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Preparing Closing Argument:

Proving a defendant acted "intentionally" is often challenging. Thus, the structure of the related closing argument must often be carefully prepared. By Rex Heeseman

After Della Penna, "the third element also requires a plaintiff to plead intentional wrongful acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship." (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1154 [131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937] .)

"The tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage does not require a plaintiff to plead that the defendant acted with the specific intent, or purpose, of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Instead, to satisfy the intent requirement for this tort, it is sufficient to plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of its action." CHAPTER 22 California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions

3-22 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2203

CACI 2203 Intent

In deciding whether [name of defendant] acted intentionally, you may consider whether [he/she/it] knew that a [breach/disruption] was substantially certain to result from [his/her/its] conduct.

New September 2003

■ "In this case, the jury was instructed that '[a] defendant is deemed to have acted intentionally if it knew that disruption or interference with an advantageous relationship was substantially certain to result from its conduct.' [P] Intent, of course, may be established by inference as well as by direct proof. Thus, the trial court could properly have instructed the jury that it might infer culpable intent from conduct 'substantially certain' to interfere with the contract. Here, though, the jury was instructed that culpable intent was 'deemed' to exist if Standard knew that its conduct would interfere with the contract. Under the principles outlined above, this instruction was clearly in error." (Seaman's Direct Buying Service, Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 752, 767 [206 Cal.Rptr. 354, 686 P.2d 1158] , overruled on other grounds in Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 85, 98 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] ; disapproved on other grounds in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393, fn. 5 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740].)

■ The Della Penna court observed that intentional interference torts are only remotely related to, and have a "superficial kinship" with, other intentional torts, such as battery or false imprisonment. (Della Penna, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 383 .)

 - 4. That [name of defendant] failed to act with reasonable care;
 - 5. That [name of defendant] engaged in wrongful conduct through [insert grounds for wrongfulness, e.g., breach of contract with another, misrepresentation, fraud, violation of statute];
 - 6. That the relationship was disrupted;
 - 7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
 - 8. That [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

Regarding the fifth element, the judge must specifically state for the jury the conduct that the judge has determined as a matter of law would satisfy the "wrongful conduct" standard. This conduct must fall outside the privilege of fair competition. (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 603 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877] ; Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] .) The jury must then decide whether the defendant engaged in the conduct as defined by the judge. If the conduct is tortious, judge should instruct on the elements of the tort.

Sources and Authority

- "The tort of intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage imposes liability for improper methods of disrupting or diverting the business relationship of another which fall outside the boundaries of fair competition." (Settimo Associates v. Environ Systems, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 842, 845 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 757] , internal citation omitted.)
- "The tort of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is established where a plaintiff demonstrates that (1) an economic relationship existed between the plaintiff and a third party which contained a reasonably probable future economic benefit or advantage to plaintiff; (2) the defendant knew of the existence of the relationship and was aware or should have been aware that if it did not act with due care its actions would interfere with this relationship and cause plaintiff to lose in whole or in part the probable future economic benefit or advantage of the relationship; (3) the defendant was negligent; and (4) such negligence caused damage to plaintiff in that the relationship was actually interfered with or disrupted and plaintiff lost in whole or in part the economic benefits or advantage reasonably expected from the relationship." (North American Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 764, 786 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 466] .)
- " 'The tort of negligent interference with economic relationship arises only when the defendant owes the plaintiff a duty of care.' " (Limandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 348 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539] , internal citation omitted.)
- "Where a special relationship exists between the parties, a plaintiff may recover for loss of expected economic advantage through the negligent performance of a contract although the parties were not in contractual privity." (J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 804 [157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60] .)
- The trial court should instruct the jury on the "independently wrongful" element of the tort of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage. (National Medical Transportation Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 412, 440 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 720] .)
- "Commonly included among improper means are actions which are independently actionable, violations of federal or state law or unethical business practices, e.g., violence, misrepresentation, unfounded litigation, defamation, trade libel or trade mark infringement." (PMC, Inc., supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 603 , internal citation omitted.)
- "While the trial court and [defendant] are correct that a defendant incurs liability for interfering with another's prospective economic advantage only if the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful, we have been directed to no California authority, and have found none, for the trial court's conclusion that the wrongful conduct must be intentional or willful. The defendant's conduct must 'fall outside the boundaries of fair competition' ... , but negligent misconduct or the violation of a statutory obligation suffice. The approved CACI No. 2204 does not indicate otherwise and, in fact, indicates that either a misrepresentation or 'violation of statute' is sufficient." (Venhaus v. Shultz (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1072, 1079-1080 [66 Cal.Rptr.3d 432] , internal citations omitted.)

- Notably, one of "[t]he criteria for establishing [the existence of] a duty of care is the 'blameworthiness' of the defendant's conduct." (Lange v. TIG Insurance Co. (1999) 68 Cal.App.4th 1179, 1187 [81 Cal.Rptr.2d 39] .) The Lange court stated that in a negligent interference case "a defendant's conduct is blameworthy only if it was independently wrongful apart from the interference itself." (Ibid.) Thus, the "independently wrongful" element may, in effect, be decided by the judge in the course of determining whether a duty of care was owed.

- There is currently no cause of action for negligent interference with contractual relations (see Fifield Manor v. Finston (1960) 54 Cal.2d 632, 636-637 [7 Cal.Rptr. 377, 354 P.2d 1073]): "Although the continuing validity of the so-called 'Fifield rule' is questionable in light of the California Supreme Court's recognition in J'Aire of a cause of action for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage, the Supreme Court has yet to disapprove Fifield." (LiMandri, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 349 .)

- "Under the privilege of free competition, a competitor is free to divert business to himself as long as he uses fair and reasonable means. Thus, the plaintiff must present facts indicating the defendant's interference is somehow wrongful--i.e., based on facts that take the defendant's actions out of the realm of legitimate business transactions." (Tri-Growth Centre City, Ltd. v. Silldorf, Burdman, Duignan & Eisenberg (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 1139, 1153-1154 [265 Cal.Rptr. 330] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Since the crux of the competition privilege is that one can interfere with a competitor's prospective contractual relationship with a third party as long as the interfering conduct is not independently wrongful (i.e., wrongful apart from the fact of the interference itself), Della Penna's requirement that a plaintiff plead and prove such wrongful conduct in order to recover for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has resulted in a shift of burden of proof. It is now the plaintiff's burden to prove, as an element of the cause of action itself, that the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful and, therefore, was not privileged rather than the defendant's burden to prove, as an affirmative defense, that it's [sic] conduct was not independently wrongful and therefore was privileged." (Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 867, 881 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 830] .)

- There are other privileges that a defendant could assert in appropriate cases, such as the "manager's privilege." (See Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1383, 1391-1392 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 383] .)

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2200, Inducing Breach of Contract.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form.

Publisher's Notes

There is no BAJI verdict form on this subject.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care When Preparing Special Verdicts:

Special verdicts are case specific. Care should therefore be closely exercised in applying these standards to the facts at issue. Specifically, if special verdict forms are used, counsel should go over each question and answer in closing argument, preferably with enlarged copies of the verdict forms as visual aids. This can be done during closing argument or as a summary at the end. By Rex Heeseman and Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions regarding the family of torts known as interference with economic relations. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on economic interference, see Ch. 22, California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions. The Judicial Council instructions include general instructions regarding inducing breach of contract [CACI No. 2200], intentional interference with contractual relations [CACI No. 2201] and prospective economic relations [CACI No. 2202], intent [CACI No. 2203], and negligent interference with prospective economic relation [CACI No. 2204]. The Judicial Council instructions also include specific verdict forms relating to inducing breach of contract and intentional and negligent interference causes of action [CACI Nos. VF-2200-VF-2203]. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- A general instruction on the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [see MB 2200A.01].
- An instruction on inducing a breach of contract that is terminable at will [see MB 2200A.02].
- Instructions on the burden of proof [see MB 2200A.03, MB 2200A.04].
- Instructions on the intent requirement [see MB 2200A.05, MB 2200A.06].
- An instruction on intentional interference by unlawful means [see MB 2200A.07].
- An instruction on the interference with contractual relations that prevents the plaintiff's performance or renders performance more burdensome or expensive [see MB 2200A.08].

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

- An instruction on negligent interference with prospective economic advantage [see MB 2200A.09].
- Instructions on the defenses of privilege and justification [see MB 2200A.10, MB 2200A.11].
- An instruction on damages [see MB 2200A.12].

The torts of intentional interference with contract and prospective advantage have much in common with the field of unfair competition, as frequently defendants will be charged with conduct that fits within both areas. For instructions relating to unfair competition, see Ch. 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, and Ch. 33A, Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions. For detailed instructions pertaining to contracts, see Chs. 3 through 3I. n

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A plaintiff who has suffered harm because of a defendant who intentionally interfered with a prospective contractual or economic relationship between the plaintiff and a third party is entitled to recover damages from the defendant for that interference, if the interference was wrongful by some measure other than the fact of interference itself.

An act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful--that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard.

Authorities: Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal.4th 937, 944, 81 Cal.Rptr.3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 ; Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1154, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 340, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 ; Westside Ctr. Assocs. v. Safeway Stores 23, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 507, 521 n.16, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 793 ; Deeter v. Angus (1986) 179 Cal.App.3d 241, 249-253, 224 Cal.Rptr. 801 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to give the jury a general background on the cause of action of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage before setting forth the elements to be proved by the plaintiff. The instruction is best used as a preface to the burden of proof instruction in MB 2200A.04.

For discussion, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud, Deceit, and Other Business Torts, § 40.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender). For related discussion and forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Intentional Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

In Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1154, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937], the California Supreme Court found that "[t]he tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage does not require a plaintiff to plead that the defendant acted with the specific intent, or purpose, of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Instead, to satisfy the intent requirement for this tort, it is sufficient to plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of its action." Practitioners arguing this cause of action should stress the decision in Korea Supply Co. [see San Jose Constr., Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1528, 1544-1545, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54]; see also CACI Nos. 2202, 2203.

In Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 391-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740], the California Supreme Court recast the elements of the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage and allocated the associated burdens of proof between the parties to the action. The Court emphasized the need to draw and enforce a sharpened distinction between claims for the tortious disruption of an existing contract and claims for tortious interference with a prospective contractual or economic relationship. It stated that courts should endeavor to bring "a greater solicitude to those relationships that have ripened into agreements, while recognizing that relationships short of that subsist in a zone where the rewards and risks of competition are dominant" [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740]. Thus, the Court held that a plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged interference with prospective economic advantage has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was itself "wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself" [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 (quoting Top Service Body Shop, Inc. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 283 Or. 201, 209, 582 P.2d 1365)]; see also CRST Van Expedited, Inc. v. Werner Enters., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1099, 1108-1110 (plaintiff must allege that defendant's acts were unlawful for a reason other than that they interfered with plaintiff's prospective economic advantage); Visto Corp. v. Sproqit Techs., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2005) 360 F.Supp.2d 1064, 1066-1067; San Jose Constr., Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1528, 1544, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54; Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 212, 241, 26 Cal.Rptr.3d 798].

The California Supreme Court subsequently held that an act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful—that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937; see Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal.4th 937, 944, 81 Cal.Rptr.3d 282, 189 P.3d 285; San Jose Constr., Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1528, 1545, 67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54; Stevenson Real Estate Servs., Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Servs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal.App.4th 1215, 1220-1224, 42 Cal.Rptr.3d 235 (violation of well defined, established rules or standards of trade, association, or profession may constitute this type of wrongful conduct); RLH Industries, Inc. v. SBC Communications, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal.App.4th 1277, 1286-1287, 35 Cal.Rptr.3d 469; Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 212, 242, 26 Cal.Rptr.3d 798].

In a case filed by the defendant's former employee for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage and unfair competition, based on the defendant's requirement that the plaintiff give consideration to be released from a noncompetition agreement, the California Supreme Court held that the noncompetition agreement was invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal.4th 937, 955, 81 Cal.Rptr.3d 282, 189 P.3d 285]. Hence, the Court reversed the decision of the court of appeal affirming judgment for the defendant with respect to the cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, in which the independent wrong alleged was the requirement to sign the release for consideration, costing the plaintiff an employment opportunity with another firm [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal.4th 937, 944-948, 955, 81 Cal.Rptr.3d 282, 189 P.3d 285].

Wrongfulness independent of the inducement to breach the contract is not an element of the tort of intentional interference with existing contractual relations [Quelimane Co., Inc. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 55, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 ; see Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 212, 238, 26 Cal.Rptr.3d 798 ; see also MB 2200A.03[3]]. For an instruction and discussion regarding plaintiff's burden of proof, see MB 2200A.04.

The California Supreme Court has held that a plaintiff may recover damages for intentional interference with an at-will employment relationship under the same California standard applicable to claims for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. Therefore, to recover for a defendant's interference with an at-will employment relationship, a plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant engaged in an independently wrongful act--that is, an act proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard [Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1140, 1152-1153, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 ; see also Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; see generally MB 2200A.02].

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.02

MB 2200A.02 Inducing Breach of Contract That Is Terminable at Will

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

You have heard testimony that the contract between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party] was terminable at will, which means, in effect, that either Plaintiff or _____ [name of third party] could have terminated the contract for any reason without incurring any liability to one another for that termination. However, the fact that the parties to a contract can terminate the contract at will does not mean that the contract can be terminated at the will of others, such as Defendant. Thus, Defendant can be held liable for intentionally inducing a breach of the contract if you find that [his/her/its] conduct caused _____ [name of third party] to breach the contract with Plaintiff.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

If Defendant is shown to have interfered with an at-will employment relationship between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party], then for Defendant to be liable, the interference must be in the nature of an independent wrong, other than the interference itself.

An act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful--that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard.

Authorities: Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1140, 1152-1153, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 ; Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal.2d 34, 39, 172 P.2d 867 ; *Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Westminster Nat'l Bank (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 593, 598, 86 Cal.Rptr. 52 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used for those cases in which the contract is terminable at the will of a third party. Even in those cases, counsel may choose not to submit this instruction unless either the defendant has made an issue of the fact that the contract was terminable at will or counsel is concerned that the jury may be confused or prejudiced by the terminable-at-will language in the contract itself.

If an at-will employment contract is the basis for the cause of action, the optional paragraph should be used [Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1140, 1152-1153, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 289, 95 P.3d 513].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] "At Will" Contracts

As this instruction reflects, courts repeatedly have held that a cause of action will lie for intentionally inducing breach of an "at will" contract [Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal.2d 34, 39, 172 P.2d 867 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 448, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 844, 862, 89 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat'l Bank (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 593, 598, 86 Cal.Rptr. 52]. As courts frequently note, the fact that a contract exists at the will of the parties to it does not imply that the contract exists at the will of others [Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal.2d 34, 39, 172 P.2d 867 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 448, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305]. For example, a defendant may be held liable for improperly inducing an employer to terminate an employee's employment, even if the employment was terminable at the will of the employer [see Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 448, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305].

The California Supreme Court has held that a plaintiff may recover damages for intentional interference with an at-will employment relationship under the same California standard applicable to claims for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1140, 1152-1153, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 ; see MB 2200A.01]. To recover for a defendant's interference with an at-will employment relation, a plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant engaged in an independently wrongful act--that is, an act proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard [Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1140, 1152-1153, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 ; see also Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; compare CRST Van Expedited, Inc. v. Werner Enters., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1099, 1105-1107 (employment was not at-will for relevant first-year period)]. This particular case involved several causes of action by an employer (a law firm) against another employer (a law firm started by former employees) that allegedly induced additional employees to change jobs and committed related torts. The Court stated that because an interference as such is primarily an interference with the future relationship between the former employer and the at-will employee, inducing the termination of an at-will employment relationship may be actionable under the standard applicable to claims for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1140, 1144, 17 Cal.Rptr.3d 289, 95 P.3d 513].

In cases involving contracts terminable at will, the defendant will be inclined to stress that the third party was not affected by the defendant's conduct when it terminated its contract with the plaintiff but was merely exercising an absolute right it had under the contract. Plaintiff's counsel may wish to consider, when appropriate, a motion in limine to prevent defendant from introducing evidence of the "at will" status of the contract on the ground that the evidence is immaterial and risks jury confusion and prejudice [Romano v. Wilbur Ellis & Co. (1947) 82 Cal.App.2d 670, 673, 186 P.2d 1012].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--At Will Contracts: This is an important instruction in cases involving at will contracts. Some jurors may be surprised that a contract terminable at will can be the subject of a lawsuit. Plaintiff's counsel must explain not only the legal rule but the reason for the rule--the fact that the other contracting party could terminate the contract does not mean that the defendant had the right to do so. By Ronald Oster

Superior Court* (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 673, 677, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 372 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant interfered with or disrupted contractual relations but did not actually cause a breach of a valid, existing contract. If there was no valid, existing contract with which the defendant could interfere, the instruction in MB 2200A.04 should be used.

A preponderance of the evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")]. An instruction defining "cause" must also be used with this instruction [see, e.g., Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03 (damages resulting from breach)].

When the plaintiff claims that the defendant disrupted or interfered with a contractual relationship by publishing or disseminating false statements or information, this instruction should be modified to reflect that the plaintiff is required to prove the additional elements necessary to establish that the statements or information were not entitled to First Amendment protection [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1044-1045, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547]. For general discussion of First Amendment restrictions on imposing liability for defamatory statements or other false information, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation (Matthew Bender).

The first option in the instruction reflects the more common fact pattern and will be used by most plaintiffs [see, e.g., Heritage Provider Network, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 158 Cal.App.4th 1146, 1154, 70 Cal.Rptr.3d 645] . The second option applies only when the cause of action is one for an intentional interference based on the defendant's inducing a third party to disrupt the contractual relationship by filing a lawsuit without probable cause. This option rephrases the third element of the cause of action and adds the requirement that the prior lawsuit induced by defendant's acts must have been concluded in the plaintiff's favor [see [3][a], below, for discussion of the requirement of favorable termination].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Intentional Interference With Contractual Relations

Intentional interference with contractual relations is one of three theories comprising the family of torts known as interference with economic relations. The other two are intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [ see CACI No. 2202; MB 2200A.01] and negligent interference with contractual relations [see CACI No. 2204 (Negligent Interference with Prospective Economic Relations); MB 2200A.09].

The California Supreme Court has characterized the tort of intentional interference with contractual relations as "merely a series of the broader tort of interference with prospective economic advantage" [Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal.3d 815, 823, 122 Cal.Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865]. Intentional interference with contractual relations is broader than inducing breach of contract and less inclusive than interference with prospective economic advantage [Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 118, 122-123, 212 Cal.Rptr. 313]. It may be useful for counsel to view intentional interference with contractual relations as a special case in which the plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party is defined in an existing and enforceable contract. For using instructions related to intentional interference with contractual relations, see CACI No. 2201 and [2], above.

Inducing breach of contract may be characterized as a species of the tort of intentional interference with contractual relations arising out of conduct by the defendant that induced a third party to breach an existing contract with the plaintiff. To recover, the plaintiff must prove all of the following [Quelimane Co., Inc. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 55, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 ; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1126, 270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ; Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 1027, 1047, 72 Cal.Rptr.3d 210 ; Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 212, 238, 26 Cal.Rptr.3d 798 ; LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 343-344, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 ; PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 595, 52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 448, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; SCEcorp. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 673, 677, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 372]:

- That the plaintiff had an existing, enforceable contract with a third party;
- That the defendant knew of the contract;
- That the defendant committed intentional acts designed to interfere with or disrupt the contract;
- That there was actual interference with or disruption of the contractual relationship between the plaintiff and the third party; and
- That there were resulting damages to the plaintiff.

When there is no existing, enforceable contract, the plaintiff should state its claim as one for interference with prospective economic advantage [Cappiello, Hofmann & Katz v. Boyle (2001) 87 Cal.App.4th 1064, 1067-1068, 105 Cal.Rptr.2d 147 ; Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Vill. Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 867, 879, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 830 (alleged lease agreement on which action was based was unenforceable as matter of law under statute of frauds); PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 601, 52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877 (distinguishing "enforceable" contracts from both "void" and "voidable" contracts)]. For instructions and discussion of interference with prospective economic advantage, see CACI No. 2202 and MB 2200A.04.

The California Supreme Court's directive in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P. 2d 740 ; see MB 2200A.04] that courts give greater solicitude to existing contractual relationships means that the requirement of wrongfulness apart from the interference itself does not apply to a cause of action for intentional interference with existing contractual relations. It applies only to a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [Quelimane Co., Inc. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 55, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 ; LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 343, 60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539 ; see CACI 2202 and MB 2200A.04]. Moreover, the tort of intentional interference with performance of a contract does not require that the actor's primary purpose be disruption of the contract. Intentional interference, in which the actor does not act for the purpose of interfering with the contract or desire it but knows that the interference is certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of that action, is sufficient [Quelimane Co., Inc. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 56, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 (quoting from Restatement (Second) of Torts § 766, cmt. j)].

A plaintiff who claims that a defendant disrupted or interfered with a contractual relationship by publishing or disseminating false statements or information must satisfy the same constitutionally-mandated requirements as the plaintiff in a defamation case [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1044-1045, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547]. Thus, for example, one of the essential elements of the plaintiff's case-in-chief is that the statements were made "of and concerning" the plaintiff [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1042, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177]. Furthermore, expressions of opinion may not form the basis of an action for intentional interference with contract unless they contain false and defamatory statements of fact [see Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 450, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; see also Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation (Matthew Bender)].

A plaintiff who claims that a defendant disrupted or interfered with a contractual relationship by inducing a third party to file a lawsuit may not recover unless the plaintiff proves that the lawsuit was brought without probable cause and that it was concluded in the plaintiff's favor. No cause of action is stated if the only damage to plaintiff resulting from the defendant's conduct is the burden and expense of defending a potentially meritorious lawsuit [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1137, 270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ("[t]o permit a cause of action for interference with contract or prospective economic advantage to be based on inducing potentially meritorious litigation on the contract would threaten free access to the courts by providing an end run around the limitations on the tort of malicious prosecution")]. The existence of probable cause is an issue of law for the court [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1131, 270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587].

Likewise, an action for intentional interference with contractual relations may not be brought against a defendant whose conduct induces the plaintiff to institute litigation to determine its rights under a contract with a third party, at least when the plaintiff's position on the contractual dispute is not indisputably correct. When the defendant has a business relationship with a party to a contract that merely brings to a head the contracting parties' good-faith dispute about the interpretation of the contract, the defendant will not be liable for tortious interference [Golden W. Baseball Co. v. City of Anaheim (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 11, 51, 31 Cal.Rptr.2d 378].

For further discussion, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud, Deceit, and Other Business Torts, § 40.110 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff is claiming that Defendant intentionally interfered with prospective economic relations between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party]. To recover on this claim, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following by a preponderance of the evidence:

- 1. That there was an existing business or economic relationship between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party] and that this relationship, although not formalized in an existing, enforceable contract, was reasonably certain to produce future economic benefits to Plaintiff;
- 2. That Defendant knew of that relationship;
- 3. That Defendant intentionally committed wrongful acts designed to interfere with or disrupt the relationship;
- 4. That Defendant's wrongful acts caused disruption of the relationship independently; and
- 5. That Plaintiff suffered damages caused by the disruption of the relationship.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the defendant interfered with a business or economic relationship that was not defined by an enforceable contract. The tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage protects nonformalized business or economic relationships in which benefits to the plaintiff, although reasonably certain to occur, are nevertheless prospective [PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 601, 52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877]. By using this instruction, plaintiff's counsel can avoid having to prove the existence of a legally recognized contract and can overcome a defense that the contract with which the defendant interfered is void or unenforceable due to some technical defect, such as failure to comply with the statute of frauds, lack of consideration, and uncertainty [see Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 118, 124, 212 Cal.Rptr. 313]. However, as discussed in [3], below, counsel takes a risk that the defendant may be accorded a broader competitive privilege, as courts pay greater deference to relationships defined by contract than to those that are not [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; cf. Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 36, 112 P.2d 631].

A preponderance of the evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True Than Not True")]. An instruction defining "cause" must also be used with this instruction [see Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")].

[a] Nature of Tort

In Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740], the California Supreme Court recast the elements of the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage and allocated the associated burdens of proof between the parties to the action. The Court emphasized the need to draw and enforce a sharpened distinction between claims for the tortious disruption of an existing contract and claims for tortious interference with a prospective contractual or economic relationship. The Court stated that courts should endeavor to bring "a greater solicitude to those relationships that have ripened into agreements, while recognizing that relationships short of that subsist in a zone where the rewards and risks of competition are dominant" [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740]. The Court held that a plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was itself "wrongful 'by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself' " [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 (quoting Top Service Body Shop, Inc. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 283 Or. 201, 209, 582 P.2d 1365) ; see [b], below].

For further discussion, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud, Deceit, and Other Business Torts, § 40.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[b] Required Elements

To recover on a claim of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff must prove each of the five elements listed in this instruction [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; Plummer v. Day/Eisenberg, LLP (2010) 184 Cal.App.4th 38, 51, 108

Cal.Rptr.3d 455 ; Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 695-696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 448, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 118, 123, 212 Cal.Rptr. 313 ; see Tele Atlas N.V. v. NAVTEQ Corp. (2005) 397 F.Supp.2d 1184, 1194 (courts often require plaintiff to identify at least one third party; plaintiff failed to identify third parties with which it had economic relationships)]. In Della Penna, the California Supreme Court held that plaintiffs must plead and prove that the defendant engaged in wrongful conduct other than the act of interference itself, but reserved "[t]he question of whether additional refinements to the plaintiff's pleading and proof burdens merit adoption by California courts--questions embracing the precise scope of 'wrongfulness' " [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740].

The California Supreme Court has clarified that an act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful--that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; see MB 2200A.01].

The plaintiff may not rely on an "interference with the market" theory to satisfy the first required element of an existing business or economic relationship. Plaintiff must show that the defendant intended to interfere with a specific prospective relationship, and not merely with plaintiff's ability to reap benefits from anticipated dealings with a class of unknown investors or purchasers [Westside Ctr. Assocs. v. Safeway Stores 23, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 507, 520 n.15, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 793]. Without an existing relationship with an identifiable buyer, plaintiff's expectation of future sales is at most a hope for an economic relationship and desire for future benefit [Westside Ctr. Assocs. v. Safeway Stores 23, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 507, 527-528, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 793], and the defendant's acts of interference are therefore not actionable.

The tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage does not require a plaintiff to plead that the defendant acted with the specific intent, or purpose, of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Instead, to satisfy the intent requirement for this tort, it is sufficient to plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of the defendant's action [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1153, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937].

With regard to the causation element set forth in paragraph 4 in the instruction in [1], above, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to show that were it not for the defendant's acts of disruption or interference, plaintiff would have enjoyed some prospective economic benefit (typically profits) reasonably certain to flow from plaintiff's relationship with the third party [see Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal.3d 64, 71, 233 Cal.Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 ; Westside Ctr. Assocs. v. Safeway Stores 23, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 507, 522, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 793 ; see also Pardi v. Kaiser Permanente Hosp., Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 389 F.3d 840, 852 (failure to raise issue of material fact regarding causation requirement sufficient under Youst was fatal to cause of action)].

A plaintiff who claims that a defendant disrupted or interfered with an advantageous economic relationship by publishing or disseminating false statements must satisfy the same constitutionally-mandated requirements as the plaintiff in a defamation case [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1045, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547]. Thus, for example, one of the essential elements of the plaintiff's case-in-chief is that the statements were made "of and concerning" the plaintiff [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1042, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177]. Furthermore, expressions of opinion may not form the basis of an action for interference with prospective economic advantage unless they contain false and defamatory statements of fact [see Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547 ; Savage v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 450, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation (Matthew Bender), for detailed discussion of what constitutes defamatory statement].

The fact that a contract is subject to conditions precedent does not render the plaintiff's expectancy of benefits under the contract so uncertain as to relegate the plaintiff to a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [SCEcorp. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 673, 682, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 372]. Stated another way, the existence of conditions precedent does not preclude plaintiff from stating a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Specific Intent Not Required: This instruction could be confusing to the jury on the issue of the level of intent required. The instruction refers to wrong acts by the defendant that are "designed" to interfere with the relationship. Yet the California Supreme Court has made clear that specific intent is not required. Rather, it is sufficient if defendant knew that interference with the relationship was substantially certain to occur [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1154, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; see MB 2200A.06]. By Ronald Oster

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.05

MB 2200A.05 Intent Requirement for Interference With Contractual Relations

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have instructed you, one of the essential elements that Plaintiff must prove to succeed on [his/her/its] claim for intentional interference with contractual relations is that Defendant intended to [interfere with/disrupt] Plaintiff's contract with _____ [name of third party]. To prove this intent, Plaintiff must show that the Defendant's actions were intentional and were done for the purpose of [disrupting the contractual relationship between Plaintiff and _____ (name of third party) or inducing _____ (name of third party) to breach (his/her/its) contract with Plaintiff.] [*Optional: However, Plaintiff is not required to show that Defendant knew Plaintiff's name or identity; it is sufficient if Plaintiff shows that Defendant knew that _____ (name of third party) had entered into a contract with some other person or entity and that Defendant acted with the intent of (interfering with/disrupting the contract or inducing _____ [name of third party] to breach the contract with that person or entity).*]

If you find that Defendant was substantially certain that [his/her/its] conduct would [interfere with/disrupt or cause a breach of] the contract, you may infer from that fact that Defendant intended to [interfere with/disrupt the contract or cause the breach].

Authorities: Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 449, 450, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; Herrick v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal.App.3d 787, 790-793, 233 Cal.Rptr. 675 ; Ramona Manor Convalescent Hosp. v. Care Enters. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 1120, 1130-1136, 225 Cal.Rptr. 120 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the issue is defendant's intent to cause a breach of contract. When the issue is defendant's intent to interfere with plaintiff's prospective economic advantage, see the instructions in CACI Nos. 2202 and 2203, and MB 2200A.06. The optional sentence at the end of the first paragraph should be used in cases when the defendant did not know, or may not have been aware, of plaintiff's name or identity when defendant committed the acts that led to the breach.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Intent Requirement

In Ramona Manor Convalescent Hospital v. Care Enterprises [Ramona Manor Convalescent Hosp. v. Care Enters. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 1120, 1130-1136, 225 Cal.Rptr. 120], the court held that the trial court did not err when it instructed the jury that a party's intent to cause a breach could be inferred from its knowledge that a breach was the natural and probable consequence of its actions. The court also held that the plaintiff was not required to show that the defendant knew plaintiff's name or identity as long as the plaintiff established that the defendant knew that the party induced to breach had in fact entered into the subject contract with some other person or entity [Ramona Manor Convalescent Hosp. v. Care Enters. (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 1120, 1133, 225 Cal.Rptr. 120].

However, in Herrick v. Superior Court [Herrick v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal.App.3d 787, 233 Cal.Rptr. 675], the court held that a drunk driver who injured the plaintiff's employee could not be held liable for interfering with their employment relationship when he was not specifically aware of the relationship and his actions were not calculated to disrupt it [Herrick v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal.App.3d 787, 790-793, 233 Cal.Rptr. 675]. In reaching its decision, the court impliedly concluded that the trier of fact could not infer the defendant's intent to disrupt the contractual relationship between an employer and an employee solely from the fact that a defendant engaged in conduct that was highly likely to cause an incapacitating physical injury to the employee. However, an action may be stated for intentional interference with contractual relations when the defendant's acts are calculated to disrupt the employer-employee relationship [see I. J. Weinrot & Son v. Jackson (1985) 40 Cal.3d 327, 341, 220 Cal.Rptr. 103, 708 P.2d 682].

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.06

MB 2200A.06 Intent Requirement for Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have instructed, one of the essential elements that Plaintiff must prove to succeed on [his/her/its] claim for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage is that Defendant intentionally committed wrongful acts that were designed to interfere with or disrupt Plaintiff's business or economic relationship with _____ [name of third party]. To prove this intent, Plaintiff must show that Defendant's wrongful acts were designed to disrupt that relationship. However, if you find that Defendant was substantially certain that [his/her/its] conduct would interfere with Plaintiff's prospective economic advantage, you may infer from that fact that Defendant intended to cause the disruption.

Authorities: Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1153, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; *Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when defendant's intent to interfere with plaintiff's prospective economic advantage is at issue. If the claim is for intentionally inducing breach of contract, see CACI No. 2200 and CACI No. 2203, and MB 2200A.05.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Intent Requirement

To prevail on a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, the plaintiff must prove that defendant intentionally engaged in wrongful acts or conduct designed to interfere with or disrupt the relationship [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 380, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 (adding requirement that interfering conduct be "wrongful"); Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 449, 450, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; see Tuck Beckstoffer Wines LLC v. Ultimate Dist., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010) 682 F.Supp.2d 1003, 1021 ; Monex Deposit Co. v. Gilliam (C.D. Cal. 2010) 680 F.Supp.2d 1148, 1163 ; TPS Utilicom Servs. v. AT&T Corp. (C.D. Cal. 2002) 223 F.Supp. 2d 1089, 1103]. In Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc., the California Supreme Court held that the defendant's interference must be "wrongful 'by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself,' " but declined in that case to define the scope of "wrongfulness" [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; see also MB 2200A.04].

The California Supreme Court subsequently held that an act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful--that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ; see Monex Deposit Co. v. Gilliam (C.D. Cal. 2010) 680 F.Supp.2d 1148, 1163 ; see also MB 2200A.01].

The tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage does not require a plaintiff to plead that the defendant acted with the specific intent, or purpose, of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Instead, to satisfy the intent requirement for this tort, it is sufficient to plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of the defendant's action [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1153, 131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937].

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.07

MB 2200A.07 Intentional Interference by Unlawful Means[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff contends that Defendant used the following unlawful means to interfere with the prospective economic advantage between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party]: _____ [describe unlawful means at issue in case, e.g., fraud, libel, slander, force, illegal detention, coercion, physical violence, or threats thereof].

I will instruct you momentarily on the elements Plaintiff must prove to establish Defendant's unlawful conduct. However, for our purposes here, if you find that Defendant committed the unlawful acts alleged by Plaintiff and that those acts were intended to and did interfere with Plaintiff's prospective economic advantage based on the business or economic relationship between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party], causing damage to Plaintiff, then you must disregard any evidence Defendant may have introduced in an effort to explain or justify [his/her/its] conduct and rule in favor of Plaintiff on the claim for intentional interference.

Authorities: Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; Imperial Ice Co. v. McCulloch Corp. (1976) 60 Cal.App.3d 663, 672, 131 Cal.Rptr. 597 ; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 844, 862, 89 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal.App.2d 45, 51, 15 Cal.Rptr. 486 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction is drafted in the form of a directed verdict instruction. It should be used when plaintiff contends that the defendant's conduct in interfering with the prospective economic advantage between the plaintiff and the third party was, standing alone, unlawful.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Unlawful Means

A defendant is liable for intentionally interfering with prospective economic advantage if the defendant employs means that are in themselves unlawful [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 35, 112 P.2d 631 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 449, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 ; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 844, 862, 89 Cal.Rptr. 556]. If the means were, in fact, unlawful, a defendant is not permitted to evade liability by presenting evidence explaining or justifying the conduct [Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 844, 862, 89 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; see Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 449, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305].

The unlawful means that are frequently cited include fraud, libel, slander, force, illegal detention, coercion, and physical violence or threats thereof [Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 35, 112 P.2d 631 ; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 844, 862, 89 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal.App.2d 45, 51, 15 Cal.Rptr. 486]. Other recognized unlawful means include conduct that has as its objective the violation of state or federal antitrust laws [Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal.2d 34, 44, 172 P.2d 867].

Among the most common unlawful means employed by defendants to interfere with or disrupt an economic relationship appear to be libel or slander, or some derivation of libel or slander, such as trade libel or slander of title [see Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 224, 232-233, 11 Cal.Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 (defamation); Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 449-450, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305 (defamation); Baker v. Kale (1947) 83 Cal.App.2d 89, 189 P.2d 57 (slander of title); Guillory v. Godfrey (1955) 134 Cal.App.2d 628, 286 P.2d 474 (trade libel in addition to physical intimidation)]. However, when the plaintiff seeks to recover damages for intentional interference based on alleged falsehoods, First Amendment protections apply [Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1033, 1045, 232 Cal.Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 676, 696, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 547]. For general discussion of First Amendment restrictions on the imposition of liability for defamatory statements or other false information, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation (Matthew Bender).

Counsel should keep in mind that it will not be sufficient merely to allege that a defendant used unlawful means; the plaintiff will have to prove that the means were, in fact, unlawful [Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 224, 233, 11 Cal.Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465]. As a matter of pleading and proof, this will generally not impose any additional burden on the plaintiff, as the plaintiff will typically be suing the defendant not only on the tortious interference claim but separately on the unlawful means claim as well. Thus, for example, if the defendant defamed the plaintiff for the purpose of interfering with the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage with a third party, the plaintiff would typically sue the defendant not only for intentional interference, but for defamation as well. For specific instructions regarding unlawful means that might arise in an intentional interference case, see Chs. 19, California Judicial Council Fraud or Deceit Instruction, 19A, Matthew Bender Fraud and Deceit Instructions, 33, California Judicial Council Unfair Practices Act Instructions, 33A, Matthew Bender Unfair Competition Instructions, and 70A, Matthew Bender Trade Libel and Disparagement Instructions.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Disregarding Defendant's Evidence: This can be a very useful instruction from plaintiff's point of view because it instructs the jury to disregard any evidence the defendant may have introduced to explain or justify defendant's conduct. In essence, the instruction tells the jury that if defendant committed the underlying wrongful act, then there is no justification. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.08

MB 2200A.08 Interference With Contractual Relations That Prevents Plaintiff's Performance or Renders Plaintiff's Performance More Burdensome or Expensive

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

As I have instructed you, one of the essential elements that Plaintiff must establish to prevail on a claim for intentional interference with contractual relations is that Defendant's actions caused actual disruption of the relationship between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party]. To establish this element, Plaintiff may prove that Defendant's conduct either prevented Plaintiff from performing under [his/her/its] contract with _____ [name of third party] or made Plaintiff's performance more burdensome or expensive than it would otherwise have been.

Authorities: Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 224, 232, 11 Cal.Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 ; Fifield Manor v. Finston (1960) 54 Cal.2d 632, 636, 7 Cal.Rptr. 377, 354 P.2d 1073 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction is for use when a defendant's actions prevented the plaintiff from meeting its obligation under a contractual relationship with a third party or made the plaintiff's performance more burdensome or expensive.

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][b], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Interference That Prevents Performance or Makes Performance More Burdensome or Expensive

Intentional interference claims typically involve conduct on the defendant's part that induces a third party to breach its contract or sever its economic relationship with the plaintiff. However, the plaintiff can state a cause of action for intentional interference if the defendant's conduct was not directed at the third party but rather at the plaintiff instead, preventing the plaintiff from performing plaintiff's contractual obligations with the third party or making that performance more burdensome or expensive, thereby diminishing the net benefit the plaintiff would otherwise derive from mutual performance [Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal.2d 224, 232, 11 Cal.Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 ; Fifield Manor v. Finston (1960) 54 Cal.2d 632, 636, 7 Cal.Rptr. 377, 354 P.2d 1073 ; Greenberg v. Hollywood Turf Club (1970) 7 Cal.App.3d 968, 975, 86 Cal.Rptr. 885].

None of the cases cited above elaborate on what is meant by conduct that renders a plaintiff's performance more burdensome or expensive. If this standard is interpreted expansively, plaintiffs may be entitled to get to a jury on a claim for intentional interference even though the defendant is only guilty of a simple breach of contract. For example, if the defendant breaches a supply contract with the plaintiff, that breach could, in turn, make it more difficult or expensive for the plaintiff to perform under contracts that plaintiff may have with customers. Under the authorities cited, the plaintiff could conceivably state a cause of action against the defendant in this situation for intentional interference. As a result, the defendant would face tort damages for his or her breach of contract, and the only defense may be that he or she did not intend, by breaching the contract with the plaintiff, to interfere with the plaintiff's relationship with others. For instructions on the issue of intent, see CACI No. 2203 and MB 2200A.05.

If the only damage caused to the plaintiff by the defendant's conduct is the burden and expense of defending a potentially meritorious lawsuit, then no cause of action is stated. To state a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations based on the allegation that the defendant induced a third party to file a lawsuit, such as a declaratory relief action seeking a judicial determination of whether the third party may terminate the contract with the plaintiff according to its terms, the plaintiff must allege that the lawsuit was brought without probable cause and that it was resolved or otherwise concluded in the plaintiff's favor [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1137, 270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ; see CACI No. 2201; MB 2200A.03].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Use Care With This Argument: The "more burdensome or expensive" aspect may be difficult to prove and/or rebut, another area that needs a careful jury argument. By Rex Heeseman

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.09

MB 2200A.09 Negligent Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff has alleged that Defendant negligently interfered with _____ [a business or economic relationship or prospective economic advantage] between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party]. To recover on this claim, Plaintiff has the burden of proving all of the following by a preponderance of the evidence:

- 1. That there was an existing business or economic relationship between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party] and that this relationship was reasonably certain to produce future economic benefits to Plaintiff;
- 2. That Defendant knew of that relationship;
- 3. That Defendant negligently committed independently wrongful acts that disrupted the relationship;
- 4. That the relationship was, in fact, disrupted; and
- 5. That Plaintiff suffered damages caused by the disruption of the relationship.

To prove that Defendant acted negligently, Plaintiff has the burden of establishing that Defendant owed Plaintiff a duty of care to prevent or minimize foreseeable harm and failed to exercise ordinary care under the circumstances. Ordinary care is that degree of care that would be exercised by a reasonably prudent person under the same or similar circumstances.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the cause of action is based on negligent, rather than intentional, interference with prospective economic advantage. Because the potential fact situations are so varied, the instruction is general in nature, and some modification may be required to tailor it to the specific fact situation at hand.

A preponderance of the evidence instruction must be used with this instruction [see Ch. 2, California Judicial Council Evidence Instructions, CACI No. 200 ("More Likely True than Not True")]. An instruction defining "cause" must also be used with this instruction [see, e.g., Ch. 4, California Judicial Council Negligence Instructions, CACI No. 430 ("Causation: Substantial Factor")].

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][d], below.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--CAUTION!: Negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is now not a favored tort. That is, J'Aire [see [3][a], below] is not generally looked upon with much favor. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

[a] Origin of Tort

The tort of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage was first recognized in J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 803-805, 157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60]. The complaint alleged that the plaintiff operated a restaurant in leased premises. The landlord entered into a contract with the defendant to make improvements on the premises. Due to the defendant's negligence, the work was not finished on time, which resulted in loss of business and resulting loss of profits. The California Supreme Court held that the allegations stated a cause of action for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage. The Court found that the defendant owed a duty of care to the plaintiff-lessee in this situation and that a plaintiff may recover for loss of expected economic advantage through the negligent performance of a contract even though the parties were not in contractual privity [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 804-805, 157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60].

The Court noted that recovery in these cases is limited to unusual instances in which all of the following are true [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 808, 157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 ; see Ott v. Alfa-Laval Agri, Inc. (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1439, 1455-1456, 37 Cal.Rptr.2d 790 (denying recovery to dairy farmers for alleged negligence of milking machine manufacturer due to lack of special relationship and foreseeability requirements for imposition of duty under J'Aire)]:

- The risk of harm is foreseeable and closely connected with the defendant's conduct;
- Damages are not wholly speculative; and
- The injury is not part of the plaintiff's ordinary business risk.

Accordingly, an award of damages for profits lost by an interrupted business should be confined to the interruption period and that additional period of time reasonably necessary to return the business to operation at its former capacity [Blake v. E. Thompson Petroleum Repair Co. (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 823, 834, 216 Cal.Rptr. 568].

In a case arising in another context, a cause of action was stated against a subcontractor for negligent failure to supply a second subcontractor, when the failure caused the second subcontractor to breach its contract with the plaintiff, to the plaintiff's damage [Chameleon Eng'g Corp. v. Air Dynamics Inc. (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 418, 423, 161 Cal.Rptr. 463].

[b] Independent Element of Wrongfulness

In one case, the court of appeal held that the trial court erred in giving a jury instruction on negligent interference with prospective economic advantage that omitted the element of "independent wrongfulness," citing Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. [National Med. Transp. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 412, 440, 72 Cal.Rptr.2d 720 ; see Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; see also Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 1179, 1187-1188, 81 Cal.Rptr.2d 39 (no independently wrongful conduct occurred, appellant owed respondents no duty of care, and trial court erred in instructing jury otherwise)]. The court further concluded that the instructional error prejudiced the defense [National Med. Transp. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 412, 440-442, 72 Cal.Rptr.2d 720].

In Della Penna, the California Supreme Court held that "a plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged interference with prospective economic relations has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was wrongful 'by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself' " [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 (quoting Top Service Body Shop, Inc. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 283 Or. 201, 209, 582 P.2d 1365)]. The instruction set forth in [1], above, reflects this element. For further discussion of Della Penna, see MB 2200A.04[3].

In another case, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant failed to provide a sufficient statement of the unpaid balance due on a promissory note secured by a deed of trust on real property that the plaintiff was attempting to sell, interfering with prospective sales of the property. The trial court gave a modified instruction based on CACI No. 2204 (Negligent Interference With Prospective Economic Relations). The Directions for Use that accompany CACI No. 2204 state [see Venhaus v. Shultz (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1072, 1078, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 432 ; see also CACI No. 2204; Ch. 22, California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions]:

Regarding the fifth element [that the defendant engaged in wrongful conduct through a specific act, e.g., breach of contract], the judge must specifically state for the jury the conduct that the judge has determined as a matter of law would satisfy the "wrongful conduct" standard.

The fifth paragraph of the instruction given to the jury read:

That [defendant] engaged in wrongful conduct by [P] a. intentionally misrepresenting the amount owed on the loan, or [P] b. willfully failing to submit a written payoff statement within 21 days after receiving a written demand. Willfully means an intentional failure to comply, without just cause or excuse.

Although the defendant did not object at trial, the appellate court held that the modified instruction was erroneous and prejudicial. The court stated that it had been directed to no California authority, and found none, for the trial court's conclusion that the wrongful conduct must be intentional or willful. Although the defendant's conduct must "fall outside the boundaries of fair competition," negligent misconduct or the violation of a statutory obligation suffice. The approved CACI No. 2204 does not indicate otherwise and, in fact, indicates that either a misrepresentation or "violation of statute" is sufficient [see Venhaus v. Shultz (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1072, 1078-1080, 66 Cal.Rptr.3d 432 ; see also CACI No. 2204; Ch. 22, California Judicial Council Economic Interference Instructions].

[c] Burden of Proof

The plaintiff's burden of proof on the issue of the defendant's breach of the standard of care is that applicable in a traditional negligence action, i.e., that the defendant failed to exercise ordinary care [Civ. Code § 1714(a)], defined as that level of care that would be exercised by a reasonably prudent person under the same or similar circumstances [Tucker v. Lombardo (1956) 47 Cal.2d 457, 462, 303 P.2d 1041].

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.10

MB 2200A.10 Justification or Privilege--Balancing of Interests

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Defendant intentionally interfered with or disrupted Plaintiff's contractual relationship or prospective economic advantage with _____ [name of third party], you must then decide whether Defendant's conduct was justified or privileged. In making this decision you must, as a general matter, balance the importance of the objective that Defendant sought to achieve by [his/her/its] interference against the importance of Plaintiff's interest with which Defendant interfered. You must keep in mind both the nature of Defendant's conduct and the relationship of all the parties involved.

Authorities: Herron v. State Farm Mut. Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal.2d 202, 206, 14 Cal.Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310 ; Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 1174, 1180-1181, 209 Cal.Rptr. 124 ; Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 200, 230, 194 Cal.Rptr. 180 , overruled on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 ; Richardson v. La Rancherita of La Jolla, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 73, 80, 159 Cal.Rptr. 285 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used when the defendant has introduced evidence to the effect that conduct interfering with plaintiff's contractual relationship or prospective economic advantage was justified or privileged. This instruction is general in nature by necessity, as there is no defined set of elements that a defendant must prove to establish the affirmative defense of justification or privilege. Instead, the cases characterize the defense of justification as a "balancing of interests" [Herron v. State Farm Mut. Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal.2d 202, 206, 14 Cal.Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310 ; Freed v. Manchester Serv., Inc. (1958) 165 Cal.App.2d 186, 190, 331 P.2d 689].

None of the authorities following this instruction specifically authorize the use of this instruction. Instead, as with most of the issues related to the tort of intentional interference, much of the discussion of justification or privilege occurred at the pleading stage, instead of following trial. To make this instruction more understandable to the jury, counsel should consider a specific discussion in the instruction of the objective that the defendant sought to achieve apart from interfering with the plaintiff's relationship. Counsel should also consult the more specific instruction in MB 2200A.12 regarding damages.

This instruction should not be given if the defendant's conduct in interfering with the contractual relationship or prospective economic advantage was, standing alone, unlawful [Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 844, 862, 89 Cal.Rptr. 556 ; see MB 2200A.07]. Moreover, the plaintiff's counsel should argue against the use of this instruction if the plaintiff has shown that the defendant was motivated by a desire to injure the plaintiff. If the defendant has acted in that manner, it could be argued that the defendant's conduct might never be justified [Bridges v. Cal-Pac. Leasing Co. (1971) 16 Cal.App.3d 118, 132, 93 Cal.Rptr. 796].

[3] Comment

[a] Balancing of Interests

Whether justification existed for the defendant's conduct is a question of fact that the jury must determine by examining all of the circumstances of the case [Gianelli Distrib. Co. v. Beck & Co. (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 1020, 1054, 219 Cal.Rptr. 203 , overruled on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal.4th 384, 394, 46 Cal.Rptr.3d 668, 139 P.3d 56] . This instruction reflects the fact that the cases have not established any precise formula or standard by which to judge a defendant's conduct to determine if it was justified [Freed v. Manchester Serv., Inc. (1958) 165 Cal.App.2d 186, 190, 331 P.2d 689]. Instead, the trier of fact is essentially left to determine, through a balancing of interests, whether the defendant's conduct was "fair and reasonable under the circumstance" [Herron v. State Farm Mut. Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal.2d 202, 206, 14 Cal.Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310 ; Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 1174, 1180-1181, 209 Cal.Rptr. 124 ; Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 200, 230, 194 Cal.Rptr. 180 , overruled on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454]. In this way, this instruction tracks the courts' general pronouncements as to the defense of justification [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 13, 20-21, 144 Cal.Rptr. 664 ; Greenberg v. Hollywood Turf Club (1970) 7 Cal.App.3d 968, 977, 86 Cal.Rptr. 885 ; Masoni v. Board of Trade of S.F. (1953) 119 Cal.App.2d 738, 742, 260 P.2d 205].

This instruction is the simplest statement of the interests to be balanced by the trier of fact in deciding whether the defendant's interference or disruption was justified. Some courts have also cited favorably the more elaborate approach adopted by the Restatement (Second) of Torts. "In determining whether an actor's conduct intentionally interfering with a contract or a prospective contractual relation of another is improper or not, consideration is given to the following factors:

- The nature of the actor's conduct;
- The actor's motive;
- The interests of the other with which the actor's conduct interferes;
- The interests sought to be advanced by the actor;
- The social interests in protecting the freedom of action of the actor and the contractual interests of the other;
- The proximity or remoteness of the actor's conduct to the interference; and

■ The relations between the parties" [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 767; see; Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 200, 230, 194 Cal.Rptr. 180, overruled on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454; Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 13, 21, 144 Cal.Rptr. 664; Masoni v. Board of Trade of S.F. (1953) 119 Cal.App.2d 738, 742, 260 P.2d 205].

Although courts have occasionally cited the Restatement approach in specific reference to the affirmative defense of privilege or justification, the Restatement itself does not view the issue in terms of justification, but rather in terms of whether a defendant's conduct was "improper" under the circumstances. The Restatement takes this approach because the tort of intentional interference does not have a definitive set of rules as to when a defendant's conduct is justified or privileged, as do other torts such as libel [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 767].

Although there is no definitive set of rules as to when a defendant's conduct is privileged or justified, the cases in California are clear that privilege or justification is an affirmative defense to be pled and proved by the defendant [see Herron v. State Farm Mut. Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal.2d 202, 207, 14 Cal.Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310; Saunders v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 832, 843, 33 Cal.Rptr.2d 438; Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal.Rptr. 664]. Thus, under the law's present state the jury must be instructed on this issue when the defendant has claimed that his or her conduct was privileged or justified. The instruction set forth above would seem more understandable than the lengthy and general approach adopted by the Restatement and cited with approval by several courts. At the same time, the instruction clearly advises the jury that the defense of justification or privilege is not a clear cut issue, but one that must be resolved by a balancing of interests.

[b] "Manager's Privilege"

To the extent a plaintiff seeks to impose liability on individual managerial employees for alleged tortious interference with plaintiff's contract with their employer, these individuals may well invoke the so-called "manager's privilege" as an affirmative defense. Under this privilege, a managerial employee or agent may counsel his or her employer or principal to breach a contract with a third party so long as he or she reasonably believes the contract to be harmful to the employer's or principal's best interests and does not act out of any selfish or self-interested motive [Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1383, 1391-1393, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 383; Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat'l Bank (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 674, 684, 274 Cal.Rptr. 81]. Whether the privilege is qualified or absolute is the subject of continuing uncertainty [Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat'l Bank (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 674, 685, 274 Cal.Rptr. 81; see, e.g., Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1383, 1395-1396, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 383 (when at-will employee is terminated, manager's privilege is absolute)].

[c] First Amendment Rights

If defendant's intentional interference is motivated by political considerations, such as advocating a boycott against a newspaper because of its editorial policies, First Amendment rights may be paramount and tip the balance in favor of defendants [Environmental Planning & Info. Council v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal.3d 188, 194, 203 Cal.Rptr. 127, 680 P.2d 1086].

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.11

MB 2200A.11 Efforts to Secure Performance of Contract With Third Party as Justification for Defendant's Conduct[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Plaintiff and Defendant both had contracts with _____ [name of third party]. If you find that Defendant's conduct was lawful and undertaken for the purpose of ensuring that _____ [name of third party] performed [his/her/its] contract with Defendant, then you must find in Defendant's favor even though that conduct _____ [(interfered with or disrupted) the contractual relations between Plaintiff and _____ (name of third party) or caused _____ (name of third party) to breach (his/her/its) contract with Plaintiff].

Authorities: Pankow Constr. Co. v. Advance Mortgage Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 611, 616 (applying California law); Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 37, 112 P.2d 631 ; Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 884, 906, 88 Cal.Rptr.2d 594 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be given in those cases when the conduct being challenged by the plaintiff was undertaken by the defendant to secure performance of a contract that the defendant had with the third party. Whether the defendant's conduct will be considered privileged under the circumstances (e.g., under the privilege to engage in lawful acts of competition), will usually be resolved by the court as a matter of law [Pankow Constr. Co. v. Advance Mortgage Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 611, 616 (affirming motion to dismiss)]. However, like other privileges [see MB 2200A.10], this privilege depends on the defendant's motive or purpose and also on whether the conduct at issue was lawful [Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 35-37, 112 P.2d 631]. Thus, questions of fact may remain for the jury to resolve.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Beware!: Proving that one's activity or action should be deemed "justified" or "privileged" is a difficult concept for many jurors and it is often challenging to make the point in a closing argument. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

If two parties have separate contracts with a third, each may resort to any legitimate means at his or her disposal to secure performance of his or her contract even though the necessary result will be to cause a breach or impose added burdens on the performance of the other contract [Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 37, 112 P.2d 631].

This privilege was asserted in a case before the Ninth Circuit, in which the plaintiff had a contract with a developer to construct an apartment complex. The developer also had a loan agreement with a mortgage lender to supply funds for the development. The developer defaulted on interest payments under the loan agreement, and the lender ceased disbursements under the loan agreement to plaintiff, which left plaintiff unpaid for certain construction work. The lender and the developer eventually reached a settlement to cure the default, which still left the plaintiff unpaid. The plaintiff claimed that through this settlement the lender had intentionally interfered with the plaintiff's contract with the developer. The District Court dismissed the action and the Ninth Circuit affirmed, based on the lender's right to secure performance of its own contract [Pankow Constr. Co. v. Advance Mortgage Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 611, 616].

In a case involving this instruction [Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 884, 905-906, 88 Cal.Rptr.2d 594], a corporation (Hyatt) sold four parcels of real property to a mortgage company, which executed a promissory note in Hyatt's favor, secured by a trust deed on one parcel. In addition, a bank loaned the mortgage company part of the purchase price, secured by a trust deed on all four parcels. That trust deed was recorded first. The title to the property was transferred twice within the next two years; Hyatt assigned its note to an individual. The mortgage company failed to make any payments on the note, and the Hyatt note's assignee commenced foreclosure proceedings. The mortgage company owner, who could have paid off the note, instead did the following:

- Transferred the title to the property to another company he controlled;
- Used another corporation he controlled (Inland) to purchase the note from the bank to the mortgage company;
- Had the mortgage company default on the note; and
- Had Inland foreclose on the property, thus eliminating the security of the assignee of the original Hyatt note, which was secured by one of the parcels.

The trial court characterized these transactions by the mortgage company as a "sham foreclosure" [Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 884, 893, 88 Cal.Rptr.2d 594]. The assignee of the Hyatt note and holder of the junior lien, which was extinguished by virtue of the foreclosure of the senior lien, sued the owner of the mortgage company and the business entities involved in these transactions, alleging among other causes of action conspiracy to intentionally interfere with a contractual relationship. The defendants proposed a special jury instruction asserting Inland's right of foreclosure to enforce its note, based on the instruction in [1], above. The trial court refused to give this and a related instruction because they would have isolated the component parts of the transaction in question to show that each part was proper. The court felt that the pleadings did not authorize the defendants to approach the issue in this manner, although it allowed the defendants to argue to that effect [Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 884, 905, 88 Cal.Rptr.2d 594].

On appeal, the court noted that this instruction is a correct statement of the law. It stated that even if the trial court erred in failing to give this instruction, the error was nonprejudicial, because the jury was instructed on defendants' justification defense as set forth in Restatement Second of Torts § 767 (factors relating to whether interference is improper), and the defendants argued justification to the jury [Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74

Cal.App.4th 884, 906, 88 Cal.Rptr.2d 594].

CHAPTER 22A Matthew Bender Interference With Economic Relations Instructions

3-22A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2200A.12

MB 2200A.12 Damages[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If you find that Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages from Defendant for interfering with or disrupting the _____ [contractual relationship or prospective economic advantage] between Plaintiff and _____ [name of third party], then Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages in an amount that will compensate [him/her/it] for all of the following:

1. The financial loss resulting from the loss of the benefits of the [contractual relationship or prospective economic advantage];
2. Emotional distress or actual harm to Plaintiff's reputation, if either might reasonably have been expected to result from the interference or disruption; and
3. Any other loss or harm caused by Defendant's interference [optional (See [2] below, Use of Instruction), whether or not the loss or harm could have been anticipated by Defendant].

Authorities: Civ. Code § 3333; Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal.3d 311, 330, 216 Cal.Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 ; Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 505, 508-509, 47 Cal.Rptr. 114 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 774A.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to describe the damages available for the tort of interference with contractual relations or with prospective economic advantage.

The optional bracketed language in paragraph 3 of the instruction is based on Civ. Code § 3333, which states the general measure of damages for tort actions. Counsel for the plaintiff may wish to include this language, especially if the action for interference is combined with an action for the breach of the contract. The optional language helps distinguish the damages available for the tort of interference from those available for breach of contract. Damages for breach of contract, unlike tort damages, are limited to those deemed to be foreseeable under the standard established in Hadley v. Baxendale [Hadley v. Baxendale (1854) 9 Ex. 341]. For an instruction on the availability of consequential damages for a breach of contract for the sale of goods, see Ch. 3H, Matthew Bender Commercial Code Sales Contract Instructions, MB 300H.255.

The instruction in Ch. 3E, Matthew Bender Contract Damages Instructions, MB 300E.03, which explains the substantial factor test for causation, must be used with this instruction.

If punitive damages are at issue in a claim for libel, the instructions in Ch. 70A, Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions, MB 7000A.07 and MB 7000A.08, may be adapted for use with this instruction.

[3] Comment

The Restatement (Second) of Torts states that the damages available for interference with a contract or with contractual relations or with prospective economic advantage are as follows [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 774A; see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 6, Torts, § 1440 (9th ed. 1988)]:

- The monetary loss resulting from the loss of the benefits of the contract or the prospective economic advantage.
- Emotional distress or actual harm to reputation, if either is reasonably to be expected to result from the interference.
- Consequential losses proximately caused by the interference.

In Duff v. Engelberg, the court applied a similar measure of damages [Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 505, 508-509, 47 Cal.Rptr. 114].

The instruction in [1], above, does not use the term "consequential losses" adopted by the Restatement. "Consequential losses" means only that an action for interference "is one in tort and damages are not based on the contract rules," the latter requiring foreseeability [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 774A, comment d]. Damages for the tort of interference with contract or interference with economic advantage are governed by the tort measure of damages set out in Civ. Code § 3333, which provides compensation for all detriment proximately caused by the tort, whether or not the detriment could have been anticipated by the defendant [Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 505, 508-509, 47 Cal.Rptr. 114]. The instruction in [1], above, adopts this language.

Punitive damages are also available if the prerequisites imposed by Civ. Code § 3294 are met [Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal.App.2d 505, 509, 47 Cal.Rptr. 114 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 774A, comment a; see Ch. 70A, Matthew Bender Trade Libel or Disparagement Instructions, MB 7000A.07, MB 7000A.08 (instructions on punitive damages)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Availability of Damages: One of the advantages of recovery in tort is that the damages are not limited to "reasonably foreseeable" damages but extend to all proximately caused damages. Furthermore, punitive damages can be recovered if the plaintiff satisfies the heightened requirements of fraud, malice, or oppression. By Ronald Oster

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter contains the California Judicial Council's "Insurance Litigation Series" of jury instructions [CACI No. 2300 et seq.]. The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) included in this publication are the product of the Judicial Council of California Task Force on Jury Instructions, which are updated by the Judicial Council of California Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions.

This chapter includes instructions on the following topics:

- Essential factual elements for causes of action for breach of a contractual duty to pay a covered claim [CACI No. 2300], breach of an insurance binder [CACI No. 2301], and breach of a contract for temporary life insurance [CACI No. 2302].
- Burdens of proof for insurance policy exclusion [CACI No. 2303] and exception to insurance policy exclusion [CACI No. 2304].
- Lost or destroyed insurance policy [CACI No. 2305] and covered and excluded risks [CACI No. 2306].
- Insurance agency relationship disputed [CACI No. 2307].
- Essential factual elements for a cause of action for rescission for misrepresentation or concealment in an insurance application [CACI No. 2308].
- Termination of an insurance policy for fraudulent claim [CACI No. 2309].
- Affirmative defenses [CACI Nos. 2320, 2321], including a defense based on the insured's voluntary payment [CACI No. 2322].

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

- Implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing explained [CACI No. 2330] and essential factual elements for a cause of action for breach of the implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing [CACI No. 2331].
- Bad faith, including essential factual elements for causes of action for bad faith [CACI Nos. 2332-2334], bad faith based on the advice of counsel [CACI No. 2335] and on the unreasonable failure to defend [CACI No. 2336], factors in insurer's conduct [CACI No. 2337], and damages for bad faith [CACI No. 2350].
- Essential factual elements for causes of action by a judgment creditor against an insurer [CACI No. 2360] and for the failure to obtain insurance coverage [CACI No. 2361].

The insurance litigation series also includes verdict forms [CACI Nos. VF-2300-VF-2301, VF-2303].

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2300

CACI 2300 Breach of Contractual Duty to Pay a Covered Claim-- Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached its duty to pay [him/her/it] for a loss covered under an insurance policy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss, [all or part of] which was covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
- 2. That [name of defendant] was notified of the loss [as required by the policy]; and
- 3. The amount of the covered loss that [name of defendant] failed to pay.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for first party coverage claims. Use the bracketed language in element 2 if the jury is required to resolve a factual dispute over whether the manner in which the insurer received notice conformed to the policy requirements for notice. For a claim arising under an insurance binder rather than an issued policy, see CACI No. 2301, Breach of Insurance Binder--Essential Factual Elements. If the policy at issue has been lost or destroyed, read CACI No. 2305, Lost or Destroyed Insurance Policy. For instructions on general breach of contract issues, see the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

- "Wrongful failure to provide coverage or defend a claim is a breach of contract." (Isaacson v. California Insurance Guarantee Assn. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 775, 791 [244 Cal.Rptr. 655, 750 P.2d 297] .)

CACI 2301 Breach of Insurance Binder--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached its duty to pay [him/her/it] for a loss or liability covered under a temporary insurance contract called an insurance binder. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] or its authorized agent agreed, orally or in writing, to provide [name of plaintiff] with an insurance binder;
- 2. That [name of plaintiff] [paid/was obligated to pay] for the insurance binder [or that payment was waived];
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss during the time the insurance binder was in effect;
- 4. That [all or part of] the loss was covered under the [insurance binder] [terms of the insurance policy [name of defendant] would have issued to [name of plaintiff]];
- 5. That [name of defendant] was notified of the loss [as required by the insurance binder]; and
- 6. The amount of the covered loss or liability that [name of defendant] failed to pay.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2301

This instruction is intended for an alleged breach of a contract of temporary insurance coverage. The court must interpret as a matter of law whether an ordinary person in the applicant's circumstances would conclude, based on the language of the application, that coverage began immediately. Do not use this instruction unless the court has decided this issue.

Use bracketed language in element 5 if the jury is required to resolve a factual dispute over whether the manner in which the insurer received notice conformed to the policy requirements for notice. Element 4 should be modified if there is an issue regarding whether the insurance company's agent made oral statements at variance with the policy language.

Note that the statutory requirements for a "binder" under Insurance Code section 382.5 do not apply to life or disability insurance, for insurance of any kind in the amount of $1 million or more, or to an oral binder (see Ins. Code, § 382.5(a)).

■ Insurance Code section 382.5 provides, in part: "A binder which is issued in accordance with this section shall be deemed an insurance policy for the purpose of proving that the insured has the insurance coverage specified in the binder. ... Except as superseded by the clear and express terms of the binder, a binder shall be deemed to include all of the usual terms of the policy as to which the binder was given, together with applicable endorsements as are designated in the binder."

■ Insurance Code section 481.1 provides:

(a) In the event any conditional receipt, binder, or other evidence of temporary or implied insurance [with specified exceptions] is canceled, rejected, or surrendered by the insurer, the coverage thereby extended shall terminate 10 days after written notice to the named insured is deposited, properly addressed with postage prepaid, with the United States Postal Service.

(b) Any conditional receipt, binder, or other evidence of temporary or implied insurance described in subdivision (a) shall remain in force for a period of at least 30 days from the date of its issuance unless sooner canceled, rejected, or surrendered pursuant to the provisions of subdivision (a).

■ "Under California law, a contract of temporary insurance may arise from completion of an application for insurance and payment of the first premium if the language of the application would lead an ordinary lay person to conclude that coverage was immediate." (Ahern v. Dillenback (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 36, 47 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 339] .)

■ "[A] binder is an independent contract, separate and distinct from the permanent insurance policy. It is intended to give temporary protection pending the investigation of the risk by the insurer and until issuance of a formal policy or rejection of the insurance application by the insurer." (Ahern, supra, 1 Cal.App.4th at p. 48 .)

■ "[P]ractically dictates that a temporary insurance binder issued upon an application for insurance cannot contain all of the details and terms of the proposed insurance contract. ... [I]nsurance binders are adequate if they indicate the subject matter, the coverage period, the rate and the amount of insurance. (National Emblem Insurance Co. v. Rios (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 70, 76 [79 Cal.Rptr. 583] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Whether or not a valid binder exists is a question of fact insofar as a finding comprehends issues relating to the credibility of witnesses or the weight of the evidence, but a question of law insofar as a finding embraces a conclusion that such factual elements do not constitute a valid oral binder." (Spott Electrical Co. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1973)

30 Cal.App.3d 797, 805 [106 Cal.Rptr. 710] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'For the sake of convenience, contracts of insurance sometimes exist in two forms: (1) A preliminary contract intended to protect the applicant pending investigation of the risk by the company or until the policy can be properly issued. (2) The final contract or policy itself. ... An agent possessing authority to bind the company by contracts of insurance has authority to bind it by a preliminary or temporary contract of insurance. ...' This preliminary contract is sometimes called 'cover note' or 'binder.' ... 'A valid temporary or preliminary contract of present insurance may be made orally, or it may be partly in parol and partly in writing.' " (Parlier Fruit Co. v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. (1957) 151 Cal.App.2d 6, 19-20 [311 P.2d 62] , internal quotation marks and citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2302

CACI 2302 Breach of Contract for Temporary Life Insurance--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached an agreement to pay life insurance benefits. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of defendant] or its authorized agent received [name of decedent]'s application for life insurance;
- 2. That [name of decedent] paid the first insurance premium;
- 3. That [name of decedent] died [on/after/before] [insert relevant date]; and
- 4. The amount of the insurance benefits that [name of defendant] failed to pay.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for an alleged breach of a contract of temporary life insurance coverage. The court must interpret as a matter of law whether an ordinary person in the applicant's circumstances would conclude, based on the language of the application, that coverage began immediately. Do not use this instruction unless the court has decided this issue.

■ Insurance Code section 10115 provides, in pertinent part: "When a payment is made equal to the full first premium at the time an application for life insurance ... is signed by the applicant and ... the insurer ... approves the application ... and the person to be insured dies ... before such policy is issued and delivered, the insurer shall pay such amount as would have been due under the terms of the policy in the same manner and subject to the same rights, conditions and defenses as if such policy had been issued and delivered on the date the application was signed by the applicant. The provisions of this section shall not prohibit an insurer from limiting the maximum amount ... if a statement to this effect is included in the application."

■ "We are of the view that a contract of insurance arose upon defendant's receipt of the completed application and the first premium payment. ... The understanding of an ordinary person is the standard [that] must be used in construing the contract, and such a person upon reading the application would believe that he would secure the benefit of immediate coverage by paying the premium in advance of delivery of the policy." (Ransom v. The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. (1954) 43 Cal.2d 420, 425 [274 P.2d 633] .)

■ "[A]n insurance company is not precluded from imposing conditions precedent to the effectiveness of insurance coverage despite the advance payment of the first premium. However, ... any such condition must be stated in conspicuous, unambiguous and unequivocal language which an ordinary layman can understand." (Thompson v. Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California (1973) 9 Cal.3d 904, 912 [109 Cal.Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353] .)

■ Temporary life insurance coverage "is not terminated until the applicant receives from the insurer both a notice of the rejection of his application and a refund of his premium." (Smith v. Westland Life Insurance Co. (1975) 15 Cal.3d 111, 120 [123 Cal.Rptr. 649, 539 P.2d 433] .)

■ "Under California law, a contract of temporary insurance may arise from completion of an application for insurance and payment of the first premium if the language of the application would lead an ordinary lay person to conclude that coverage was immediate." (Ahern v. Dillenback (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 36, 47 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 339] [automobile insurance].)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Burden of Proof: The general rule is that the insurer has the burden of proving that an exclusion to coverage applies. However, sometimes a restriction on coverage is not technically labeled an "exclusion" even though it operates in exactly the same way. Counsel for the insured should argue that the insurer has the burden of proving any significant limitation on coverage regardless of the label. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Shifting Burdens of Proof: CACI No. 2304 applies when an exclusion in the policy contains an exception that partially reinstates coverage. For example, some variations of the pollution exclusion contain an exception for pollution that is "sudden and accidental." In general, the insured has the burden of proving that the exception to the exclusion applies. These shifting burdens of proof can be confusing, because the insurer first has to prove the applicability of the exclusion, then the burden shifts to the insured to prove the exception. By Ronald Oster

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/it] was covered under an insurance policy that was lost or destroyed. To establish coverage under a lost policy, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] was insured under the lost policy during the period in question; and
- 2. That the terms of the policy included the following:
 - a. [describe each policy provision essential to the claimed coverage].

[Name of plaintiff] is not required to prove the exact words of the lost policy, but only the substance of the policy's terms essential to [his/her/its] claim for insurance benefits.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

Read this instruction in conjunction with CACI No. 2300, Breach of Contractual Duty to Pay a Covered Claim--Essential Factual Elements. Whether the terms of a lost policy must be established by a heightened degree of proof appears to be an open issue. The Supreme Court in Dart Industries, Inc. v. Commercial Union Insurance Co. (2002) 28 Cal.4th 1059 [124 Cal.Rptr.2d 142, 52 P.3d 79] , expressly declined to address the issue of the necessary degree of proof. (Id at p. 1072, fn. 4 .)

This instruction is intended for use in cases where the plaintiff insured claims coverage for a loss under an insurance policy that was lost or destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the insured. The admission of oral testimony of the contents of a lost document requires the court to determine certain preliminary facts: (1) the proponent does not have possession or control of a copy of the policy; and (2) the policy was lost or destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the proponent. (Evid. Code, §§ 402(b), 1521, 1523(b).)

■ Evidence Code section 402(b) provides, in pertinent part: "The court may hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence out of the presence or hearing of the jury."

■ Evidence Code section 1521(a) provides:

The content of a writing may be proved by otherwise admissible secondary evidence. The court shall exclude secondary evidence of the content of writing if the court determines either of the following:

(1) A genuine dispute exists concerning material terms of the writing and justice requires the exclusion.

(2) Admission of the secondary evidence would be unfair.

■ Evidence Code section 1523(b) provides, in pertinent part: "Oral testimony of the content of a writing is not ... inadmissible ... if the proponent does not have possession or control of a copy of the writing and the original is lost or has been destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the proponent of the evidence."

■ "In an action on an insurance policy that has not been lost or destroyed, it is well settled that '[t]he burden is on an insured to establish that the occurrence forming the basis of its claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage. And, once an insured has made this showing, the burden is on the insurer to prove the claim is specifically excluded.' ... [P] We see no reason not to apply this rule to a policy that has been lost or destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the insured. Thus, the claimant has the burden of proving (1) the fact that he or she was insured under the lost policy during the period in issue, and (2) the substance of each policy provision essential to the claim for relief, i.e., essential to the particular coverage that the insured claims. Which provisions those are will vary from case to case; the decisions often refer to them simply as the material terms of the lost policy. In turn, the insurer has the burden of proving the substance of any policy provision 'essential to the ... defense,' i.e., any provision that functions to defeat the insured's claim. Those provisions, too, will be case specific." (Dart Industries, Inc., supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 1068 , internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

■ "A corollary of the rule that the contents of lost documents may be proved by secondary evidence is that the law does not require the contents of such documents be proved verbatim." (Dart Industries, Inc., supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 1069 .)

■ "The rule ... for the admission of secondary evidence of a lost paper, requires 'that a bona fide and diligent search has been unsuccessfully made for it in the place where it was most likely to be found;' and further, 'the party is expected to show that he has in good faith exhausted in a reasonable degree all the sources of information and means of discovery which the nature of the case would naturally suggest, and which were accessible to him.' " (Dart Industries, Inc., supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 1068 , internal citation omitted.)

■ "No fixed rule as to the necessary proof to establish loss [of a written instrument], or what constitutes reasonable search, can be formulated. ... The sole object of such proof is to raise a reasonable presumption merely that the instrument is lost, and this is a preliminary inquiry addressed to the discretion of the judge." (Kenniff v. Caulfield (1903) 140 Cal. 34, 41 [73 P. 803] .)

■ "Preliminary proof of the loss or destruction is required and it is committed to the trial court's discretion to determine whether the evidence so offered is or is not sufficient." (Guardianship of Levy (1955) 137 Cal.App.2d 237, 249 [290 P.2d 320] .)

If the lost policy is a manuscript (i.e. typewritten) policy, proof is more difficult and will probably consist of oral testimony. Note that CACI No. 2305 does not include a heightened burden of proof as is required by many states. By Ronald Oster

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use in first party property insurance cases where there is evidence that a loss was caused by both covered and excluded perils. In most cases the court will determine as a question of law what perils are covered and excluded under the policy.

Depending on the type of insurance at issue, the court must select the bracketed paragraph that presents the correct burden of proof. For all-risk homeowner's policies, for example, once the insured establishes basic coverage, the insurer bears the burden of proving the loss was caused by an excluded peril. In contrast, for "named perils" policies (for example, fire insurance) the insured bears the burden of proving the loss was caused by the specified peril. (See Strubble v. United Services Automobile Assn. (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 498, 504 [110 Cal.Rptr. 828] .)

Sources and Authority

- Insurance Code section 530 provides: "An insurer is liable for a loss of which a peril insured against was the proximate cause, although a peril not contemplated by the contract may have been a remote cause of the loss; but he is not liable for a loss of which the peril insured against was only a remote cause."

- Insurance Code section 532 provides: "If a peril is specially excepted in a contract of insurance and there is a loss which would not have occurred but for such peril, such loss is thereby excepted even though the immediate cause of the loss was a peril which was not excepted."

- "[In] determining whether a loss is within an exception in a policy, where there is a concurrence of different causes, the efficient cause--the one that sets others in motion--is the cause to which the loss is to be attributed, though the other causes may follow it, and operate more immediately in producing the disaster." (Sabella v. Wisler (1963) 59 Cal.2d 21, 31-32 [27 Cal.Rptr. 689, 377 P.2d 889] , internal quotation marks and citation omitted.)

- "Sabella defined 'efficient proximate cause' alternatively as the 'one that sets others in motion,' and as 'the predominating or moving efficient cause.' We use the term 'efficient proximate cause' (meaning predominating cause) when referring to the Sabella analysis because we believe the phrase 'moving cause' can be misconstrued to deny coverage erroneously, particularly when it is understood literally to mean the 'triggering' cause." (Garvey v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 395, 403 [257 Cal.Rptr. 292, 770 P.2d 704] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he 'cause' of loss in the context of a property insurance contract is totally different from that in a liability policy. This distinction is critical to the resolution of losses involving multiple causes. Frequently property losses occur which involve more than one peril that might be considered legally significant. ... 'The task becomes one of identifying the most important cause of the loss and attributing the loss to that cause.' [P] On the other hand, the right to coverage in the third party liability insurance context draws on traditional tort concepts of fault, proximate cause and duty." (Garvey, supra, 48 Cal.3d at pp. 406-407 , internal quotation marks, italics, and citations omitted.)

- "[I]n an action upon an all-risks policy such as the one before us (unlike a specific peril policy), the insured does not have to prove that the peril proximately causing his loss was covered by the policy. This is because the policy covers all risks save for those risks specifically excluded by the policy. The insurer, though, since it is denying liability upon the policy, must prove the policy's noncoverage of the insured's loss." (Strubble, supra, 35 Cal.App.3d at p. 504 .)

- "[T]he scope of coverage under an all-risk homeowner's policy includes all risks except those specifically excluded by the policy. When a loss is caused by a combination of a covered and specifically excluded risks, the loss is covered if the covered risk was the efficient proximate cause of the loss. ... [T]he question of what caused the loss is generally a question of fact, and the loss is not covered if the covered risk was only a remote cause of the loss, or the excluded risk was the efficient proximate, or predominate, cause." (State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Von Der Lieth (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1123, 1131-1132 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 183, 820 P.2d 285] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[A]n insurer is not absolutely prohibited from drafting and enforcing policy provisions that provide or leave intact coverage for some, but not all, manifestations of a particular peril. This is, in fact, an everyday practice that normally raises no questions regarding section 530 or the efficient proximate cause doctrine." (Julian v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 747, 759 [27 Cal.Rptr.3d 648, 110 P.3d 903] .)

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction must be modified based on the evidence presented and theories of liability in the case. The distinction between an agent and a broker relationship may be crucial in determining, for example, whether an insurance salesperson's representations bind the insurer, or whether the insurance salesperson has assumed a specific duty to the insured.

If ostensible agency is an issue, the court may modify and give CACI No. 3709, Ostensible Agent, in the Vicarious Responsibility series.

■ Insurance Code section 31 provides, in part: " 'Insurance agent' means a person authorized, by and on behalf of an insurer, to transact all classes of insurance other than life insurance." (See also Ins. Code, § 1621.)

■ Insurance Code section 33 provides: " 'Insurance broker' means a person who, for compensation and on behalf of another person, transacts insurance other than life insurance with, but not on behalf of, an insurer." (See also Ins. Code, § 1623.)

■ Civil Code section 2315 provides: "An agent has such authority as the principal, actually or ostensibly, confers upon him."

■ "An individual cannot act as an insurance agent in California without a valid license issued by the commissioner of insurance. In addition to possessing a license, an insurance agent must be authorized by an insurance carrier to transact insurance business on the carrier's behalf. This authorization must be evidenced by a notice of agency appointment on file with the Department of Insurance. An agent is generally not limited in the number of agency appointments that he or she may have; thus, an agent may solicit business on behalf of a variety of different insurance carriers, and still technically be an agent of each of those carriers." (Loehr v. Great Republic Insurance Co. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 727, 732-733 [276 Cal.Rptr. 667] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[S]tatutes defining 'broker' are not determinative of the actual relationship in a particular case. The actual relationship is determined by what the parties do and say, not by the name they are called." (Maloney v. Rhode Island Insurance Co. (1953) 115 Cal.App.2d 238, 245 [251 P.2d 1027] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "While we note many similarities in the services performed and the monetary functions of agents and brokers, there is a more fundamental legal distinction between insurance agents and brokers. Put quite simply, insurance brokers, with no binding authority, are not agents of insurance companies, but are rather independent contractors" (Marsh & McLennan of California, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 108, 118 [132 Cal.Rptr. 796] .)

■ "Although an insurance broker is ordinarily the agent of the insured and not of the insurer, he may become the agent of the insurer as well as for the insured." (Fraser-Yamor Agency, Inc. v. County of Del Norte (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 201, 213 [137 Cal.Rptr. 118] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "When the broker accepts the policy from the insurer and the premium from the assured, he has elected to act for the insurer to deliver the policy and to collect the premium." (Maloney, supra, 115 Cal.App.2d at p. 244 .)

■ "Generally speaking, a person may do by agent any act which he might do himself. An agency is either actual or ostensible. 'An agency is ostensible when the principal intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, causes a third person to believe another to be his agent who is not really employed by him.' To establish ostensible authority in an agent, it must be shown the principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care has caused or allowed a third person to believe the agent possesses such authority." ■ Sending notice of an automobile accident to the insured's broker did not satisfy the insured's obligation under the policy to provide prompt notice of a claim to the insurer since the broker was the agent of the insured and not of the insurer. 4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2308

CACI 2308 Rescission for Misrepresentation or Concealment in Insurance Application--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of insurer] claims that no insurance contract was created because [name of insured] [concealed an important fact/made a false representation] in [his/her/its] application for insurance. To establish this claim, [name of insurer] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of insured] submitted an application for insurance with [name of insurer];
- 2. That in the application for insurance [name of insured] [intentionally] [failed to state/represented] that [insert omission or alleged misrepresentation];
- 3. [That the application asked for that information;]
- 4. That [name of insured] [select one of the following:]
[knew that [insert omission];
[knew that this representation was not true;]
- 5. That [name of insurer] would not have issued the insurance policy if [name of insured] had stated the true facts in the application;
- 6. That [name of insurer] gave [name of insured] notice that it was rescinding the insurance policy; and
- 7. That [name of insurer] [returned/offered to return] the insurance premiums paid by [*name of insured].

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, October 2004

Use the bracketed word "intentionally" for cases involving Insurance Code section 2071.

Element 3 applies only if plaintiff omitted information, not if he or she misrepresented information. Elements 5 and 6 may be resolved by the language of the complaint, in which case these could be decided as a matter of law. (Civ. Code, § 1691.)

If the insured's misrepresentation or concealment in the insurance application is raised as an affirmative defense by the insurer, this instruction may be modified for use. The elements of the defense would be the same as stated above.

If it is alleged that omission occurred in circumstances other than a written application, this instruction should be modified accordingly.

- Civil Code section 1689(b)(1) provides that a party may rescind a contract under the following circumstances: "If the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him, was given by mistake, or obtained through duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence, exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom he rescinds, or of any other party to the contract jointly interested with such party."

- Insurance Code section 650 provides: "Whenever a right to rescind a contract of insurance is given to the insurer by any provision of this part such right may be exercised at any time previous to the commencement of an action on the contract. The rescission shall apply to all insureds under the contract, including additional insureds, unless the contract provides otherwise."

- Insurance Code section 330 provides: "Neglect to communicate that which a party knows, and ought to communicate, is concealment."

- Insurance Code section 331 provides: "Concealment, whether intentional or unintentional, entitles the injured party to rescind insurance."

- Insurance Code section 332 provides: "Each party to a contract of insurance shall communicate to the other, in good faith, all facts within his knowledge which are or which he believes to be material to the contract and as to which he makes no warranty, and which the other has not the means of ascertaining."

- Insurance Code section 334 provides: "Materiality is to be determined not by the event, but solely by the probable and reasonable influence of the facts upon the party to whom the communication is due, in forming his estimate of the disadvantages of the proposed contract, or in making his inquiries."

- Insurance Code section 338 provides: "An intentional and fraudulent omission, on the part of one insured, to communicate information of matters proving or tending to prove the falsity of a warranty, entitles the insurer to rescind."

- Insurance Code section 359 provides: "If a representation is false in a material point ... the injured party is entitled to rescind the contract from the time the representation becomes false."

- "When the [automobile] insurer fails ... to conduct ... a reasonable investigation [of insurability] it cannot assert ... a right of rescission" under section 650 of the Insurance Code as an affirmative defense to an action by an injured third party. (Barrera v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 659, 678 [79 Cal.Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674] .)

- "[A]n insurer has a right to know all that the applicant for insurance knows regarding the state of his health and medical history. Material misrepresentation or concealment of such facts [is] grounds for rescission of the policy, and an actual intent to deceive need not be shown. Materiality is determined solely by the probable and reasonable effect [that] truthful answers would have had upon the insurer. The fact that the insurer has demanded answers to specific questions in an application for insurance is in itself usually sufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law." (Thompson v. Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California (1973) 9 Cal.3d 904, 915-916 [109 Cal.Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]f the applicant for insurance had no present knowledge of the facts sought, or failed to appreciate the significance of information related to him, his incorrect or incomplete responses would not constitute grounds for rescission. Moreover, '[questions] concerning illness or disease do not relate to minor indispositions but are to be construed as referring to serious ailments which undermine the general health.' Finally, as the misrepresentation must be a material one, 'incorrect answer on an insurance application does not give rise to the defense of fraud where the true facts, if known, would not have made the contract less desirable to the insurer.' And the trier of fact is not required to believe the 'post mortem' testimony of an insurer's agents that insurance would have been refused had the true facts been disclosed." (Thompson, supra, 9 Cal.3d at p. 916 , internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he burden of proving misrepresentation [for purposes of rescission] rests upon the insurer." (Thompson, supra, 9 Cal.3d at p. 919 .)

- "The materiality of a representation made in an application for a contract of insurance is determined by a subjective standard (i.e., its effect on the particular insurer to whom it was made) and rescission will be allowed even though the misrepresentation was the result of negligence or the product of innocence. On the other hand, in order to void a policy based upon the insured's violation of the standard fraud and concealment clause ... , the false statement must have been knowingly and wilfully made with the intent (express or implied) of deceiving the insurer. The materiality of the statement will be determined by the objective standard of its effect upon a reasonable insurer." (Cummings v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1988) 202 Cal.App.3d 1407, 1415, fn.7 [249 Cal.Rptr. 568] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "Cancellation and rescission are not synonymous. One is prospective, while the other is retroactive." (Fireman's Fund American Insurance Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 610, 619 [145 Cal.Rptr. 785] .)

- "[U]pon a rescission of a policy of insurance, based upon a material concealment or misrepresentation, all rights of the insured thereunder (except the right to recover any consideration paid in the purchase of the policy) are extinguished" (Imperial Casualty & Indemnity Co. v. Sogomonian (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 169, 184 [243 Cal.Rptr. 639] .)

- "The consequence of rescission is not only the termination of further liability, but also the restoration of the parties to their former positions by requiring each to return whatever consideration has been received. ... [T]his would require the refund by [the insurer] of any premiums and the repayment by the defendants of any proceed advance which they may have received." (Imperial Casualty & Indemnity Co., supra, 198 Cal.App.3d at p. 184 , internal citation omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proving Intent: The original version of CACI No. 2308 stated "intentionally or unintentionally" in the second element. This was subsequently revised to delete reference to the term "unintentionally." Whether an intentional or unintentional standard applies depends on the type of policy and/or its actual provisions. The standard fire policy [see Ins. Code § 2071] prescribes that intent be proven [see [2], above, "Directions for Use," which provides that the word "intentionally" in the second element of the instruction be used for cases involving Ins. Code § 2071]. However, with most policies the insurer does not have to prove intent. By Rex Heeseman

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Rescission Cases: The exact wording of the insurance policy and the insurance application are critical in rescission cases. If the wording of the application is vague or ambiguous, and if the insured provides some of the information, the insurer may have a difficult time proving that the omitted information was material. A failure by the insurer to follow up on information that was provided may also undercut the insurer's case. By Ronald Oster

[Name of insurer] claims that [name of insured] [is not entitled to recover under/is not entitled to benefits under] the insurance policy because [he/she] made a false claim. To establish this claim, [name of insurer] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of insured] made a claim for insurance benefits under a policy with [name of insurer];
- 2. That [name of insured] represented to [name of insurer] that [insert allegedly false representation];

- 5. That [name of insured] intended that [name of insurer] rely on this representation in [investigating/paying] [name of insured]'s claim for insurance benefits; and
- 6. That the representation that [insert allegedly false representation], if true, would affect a reasonable insurance company's [investigation of/decision to pay] a claim for insurance benefits.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use by an insurer as a defense to a breach of contract action based on a third party liability policy. The defense does not apply to "claims made" policies (see Pacific Employers Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1348, 1357-1360 [270 Cal.Rptr. 779]). This instruction also may be modified for use as a defense to a judgment creditor's action to recover on a liability policy.

Sources and Authority

■ "The right of an injured party to sue an insurer on the policy after obtaining judgment against the insured is established by statute. An insurer may assert defenses based upon a breach by the insured of a condition of the policy such as a cooperation clause, but the breach cannot be a valid defense unless the insurer was substantially prejudiced thereby. Similarly, it has been held that prejudice must be shown with respect to breach of a notice clause." (Campbell v. Allstate Insurance Co. (1963) 60 Cal.2d 303, 305-306 [32 Cal.Rptr. 827, 384 P.2d 155] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[P]rejudice is not shown simply by displaying end results; the probability that such result could or would have been avoided absent the claimed default or error must also be explored." (Clemmer v. Hartford Insurance Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 883, fn. 12 [151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098] .)

■ "If the insurer asserts that the underlying claim is not a covered occurrence or is excluded from basic coverage, then earlier notice would only result in earlier denial of coverage. To establish actual prejudice, the insurer must show a substantial likelihood that, with timely notice, and notwithstanding a denial of coverage or reservation of rights, it would have settled the claim for less or taken steps that would have reduced or eliminated the insured's liability." (Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Parks (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 992, 1004 [88 Cal.Rptr.3d 730] .)

■ "California's 'notice-prejudice' rule operates to bar insurance companies from disavowing coverage on the basis of lack of timely notice unless the insurance company can show actual prejudice from the delay. The rule was developed in the context of 'occurrence' policies." (Pacific Employers Insurance Co., supra, 221 Cal.App.3d at p. 1357 .)

■ "[The notice-prejudice rule] does not apply to every time limit on any insurance policy. [P] Where the policy provides that special coverage for a particular type of claim is conditioned on express compliance with a reporting requirement, the time limit is enforceable without proof of prejudice. Such reporting time limits often are found in provisions for expanded liability coverage that the insurer usually does not cover. The insurer makes an exception and extends special coverage conditioned on compliance with a reporting requirement and other conditions. The reporting requirement becomes 'the written notice necessary to trigger the expanded coverage afforded' by the special policy provision." (Venoco, Inc. v. Gulf Underwriters Ins. Co. (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 750, 760 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 409], internal citations omitted.)

■ "With respect to notice provisions, one Court of Appeal has explained: '[A]n "occurrence" policy provides coverage for any acts or omissions that arise during the policy period even though the claim is made after the policy has expired.' ... [P] ... [P] Occurrence policies were developed to provide coverage for damage caused by collision, fire, war, and other identifiable events. ... Because the occurrence of these events was relatively easy to ascertain, the insurer was able to 'conduct a prompt investigation of the incident' ... Notice provisions contained in such occurrence policies were 'included to aid the insurer in investigating, settling, and defending claims[.]' ... If an insured breaches a notice provision, resulting in substantial prejudice to the defense, the insurer is relieved of liability." (Belz v. Clarendon America Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 615, 626 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 864] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "The 'general rule' is that an insurer is not bound by a judgment unless it had notice of the pendency of the action. ... However, if an insurer denies coverage to the insured, the insured's contractual obligation to notify the insurer ceases." (Samson v. Transamerica Insurance Co. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 220, 238 [178 Cal.Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Proving Different Result Can Be Difficult: As noted in the "Directions for Use," CACI No. 2320 does not apply to "claims made" policies. When the instruction applies (e.g., occurrence policies), it can be very difficult for the insurer to show that a different result would have occurred but for the late notice. The insurer not only has to show it would have taken different steps, but that these different steps would have produced a different and better result. Apart from default cases, this standard will be difficult to meet. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Substantial Prejudice: Proving "substantial prejudice" is usually very difficult for the insurer. By Rex Heeseman

CACI 2321 Affirmative Defense--Insured's Breach of Duty to Cooperate in Defense

[Name of defendant] claims that it does not have to pay the [judgment against/settlement by] [name of plaintiff] because [name of plaintiff] failed to cooperate in [his/her/its] defense. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] failed to cooperate in the defense of the lawsuit against [him/her/it];
- 2. That [name of defendant] used reasonable efforts to obtain [name of plaintiff]'s cooperation;
and
- 3. That [name of defendant] was prejudiced by [name of plaintiff]'s failure to cooperate in [his/her/its] defense.

To establish prejudice, [name of defendant] must show a substantial likelihood that, if [name of plaintiff] had cooperated, [name of defendant] would have [taken steps that would have substantially reduced or eliminated [name of plaintiff]'s liability] [or] [settled for a substantially smaller amount].

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use by an insurer as a defense to a breach of contract action based on a third party liability policy. This instruction also may be modified for use as a defense to a judgment creditor's action to recover on a liability policy.

Depending on the facts of the case, the second element of this instruction may not always be necessary.

■ "The right of an injured party to sue an insurer on the policy after obtaining judgment against the insured is established by statute. An insurer may assert defenses based upon a breach by the insured of a condition of the policy such as a cooperation clause, but the breach cannot be a valid defense unless the insurer was substantially prejudiced thereby. ... [P] The burden of proving that a breach of a cooperation clause resulted in prejudice is on the insurer." (Campbell v. Allstate Insurance Co. (1963) 60 Cal.2d 303, 305-306 [32 Cal.Rptr. 827, 384 P.2d 155] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[W]e apprehend that Campbell stands for these propositions: (1) that breach by an insured of a cooperation ... clause may not be asserted by an insurer unless the insurer was substantially prejudiced thereby; (2) that prejudice is not presumed as a matter of law from such breach; (3) that the burden of proving prejudicial breach is on the insurer; and (4) that, although the issue of prejudice is ordinarily one of fact, it may be established as a matter of law by the facts proved." (Northwestern Title Security Co. v. Flack (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 134, 141 [85 Cal.Rptr. 693] .)

■ "[C]ooperation clauses serve an important purpose. "[A] condition of a policy requiring the cooperation and assistance of the assured in opposing a claim or an action lodged against him by an injured person is material to the risk and of the utmost importance in a practical sense. Without such cooperation and assistance the insurer is severely handicapped and may in some instances be absolutely precluded from advancing any defense." ... "[S]uch provisions 'enable the [insurer] to possess itself of all knowledge, and all information as to other sources and means of knowledge, in regard to facts, material to [its] rights, to enable [it] to decide upon [its] obligations, and to protect [itself] against false claims.' " ... Where an insured violates a cooperation clause, the insurer's performance is excused if its ability to provide a defense has been substantially prejudiced.' " (Belz v. Clarendon America Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 615, 626 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 864] .)

■ "[A]n insurer, in order to establish it was prejudiced by the failure of the insured to cooperate in his defense, must establish at the very least that if the cooperation clause had not been breached there was a substantial likelihood the trier of fact would have found in the insured's favor." (Billington v. Interinsurance Exchange of Southern California (1969) 71 Cal.2d 728, 737 [79 Cal.Rptr. 326, 456 P.2d 982] .)

■ "[I]f the trial court finds ... that the insurer failed to diligently seek its insured's presence a finding that he breached the cooperation clause would not be justified." (Billington, supra, 71 Cal.2d at p. 744 .)

■ "[P]rejudice is not shown simply by displaying end results; the probability that such results could or would have been avoided absent the claimed default or error must also be explored." (Clemmer v. Hartford Insurance Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 883, fn. 12 [151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098] .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Duty to Cooperate: Insurers frequently demand all types of coverage information from the insured on the ground that the insured has a "duty to cooperate." However, this duty to cooperate relates to the defense of the insured, not a coverage investigation. As indicated in the instruction, the duty is breached if the insured fails to cooperate in its own defense to such a degree that prejudice results. The insurer must not only prove that it was prevented from taking different steps to defend the insured, but that the different steps would have produced a different and better result. By Ronald Oster

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use by an insurer as a defense to a breach of contract action based on a third party liability policy. This instruction also may be modified for use as a defense to a judgment creditor's action to recover on a liability policy. This defense is not available if the insurer refused to defend before the voluntary payment was made.

A voluntary-payments clause in an insurance policy typically provides that the insured may not voluntarily make a payment, assume an obligation, or incur an expense without the insurer's consent. (See, e.g., Truck Ins. Exchange v. Unigard Ins. Co. (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 966, 976 [94 Cal.Rptr.2d 516].) In element 1, select the appropriate options depending on the acts alleged. Modify, as necessary, depending on the actual language of the policy. Use the first option if the insured has made a payment in settlement of the claim. Use the second option if the insured has made a payment, assumed an obligation, or incurred an expense for other reasons, such as to an attorney for legal services, or to a creditor of the claimant, such as a provider of medical or repair services.

- "The general validity of no-voluntary-payment provisions in liability insurance policies is well established. ... [S]uch clauses are common 'to prevent collusion as well as to invest the insurer with the complete control and direction of the defense or compromise of suits or claims.' " (Insua v. Scottsdale Ins. Co. (2002) 104 Cal.App.4th 737, 742 [129 Cal.Rptr.2d 138] , internal citations omitted.)

- "California law enforces ... no-voluntary-payments provisions in the absence of economic necessity, insurer breach, or other extraordinary circumstances. They are designed to ensure that responsible insurers that promptly accept a defense tendered by their insureds thereby gain control over the defense and settlement of the claim. That means insureds cannot unilaterally settle a claim before the establishment of the claim against them and the insurer's refusal to defend in a lawsuit to establish liability [T]he decision to pay any remediation costs outside the civil action context raises a 'judgment call left solely to the insurer.' In short, the provision protects against coverage by fait accompli." Low v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1532, 1544 [2 Cal.Rptr.3d 761] , internal citations omitted.)

- " 'Typically, a breach of that provision occurs, if at all, before the insured has tendered the defense to the insurer.' ... [A voluntary-payments] provision is [also] enforceable posttender until the insurer wrongfully denies tender. '[I]t is only when the insured has requested and been denied a defense by the insurer that the insured may ignore the policy's provisions forbidding the incurring of defense costs without the insurer's prior consent and under the compulsion of that refusal undertake his own defense at the insurer's expense' " (Low, supra, 110 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1546-1547 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- " '[T]he existence or absence of prejudice to [the insurer] is simply irrelevant to [its] duty to indemnify costs incurred before notice. The policy plainly provides that notice is a condition precedent to the insured's right to be indemnified; a fortiori the right to be indemnified cannot relate back to payments made or obligations incurred before notice.' ... The prejudice requirement ... applies only to the insurer's attempt to assert lack of notice as a policy defense against payment even of losses and costs incurred after belated notice." (Jamestown Builders, Inc. v. General Star Indemnity Co. (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 341, 350 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 514] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- " 'There may be exceptions to the prohibition on voluntary payments, as where the insured is unaware of the identity of the insurer, the payment is necessary for reasons beyond the insured's control, or the insured faces a situation requiring an immediate response to protect its legal interests.' In a circumstance of that nature, the insured's payment is considered involuntary." (Belz v. Clarendon America Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 615, 628 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 864] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2330

CACI 2330 Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Explained

In every insurance policy there is an implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing that neither the insurance company nor the insured will do anything to injure the right of the other party to receive the benefits of the agreement.

To fulfill its implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing, an insurance company must give at least as much consideration to the interests of the insured as it gives to its own interests.

To breach the implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing, an insurance company must, unreasonably or without proper cause, act or fail to act in a manner that deprives the insured of the benefits of the policy. It is not a mere failure to exercise reasonable care. However, it is not necessary for the insurer to intend to deprive the insured of the benefits of the policy.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

This instruction may be used to introduce a "bad-faith" claim arising from an alleged breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

Sources and Authority

- "There is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything which will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement." (Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 654, 658 [328 P.2d 198] .)

■ "For the insurer to fulfill its obligation not to impair the right of the insured to receive the benefits of the agreement, it again must give at least as much consideration to the latter's interests as it does to its own." (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 809, 818-819 [169 Cal.Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141] .)

■ "[T]o establish the insurer's 'bad faith' liability, the insured must show that the insurer has (1) withheld benefits due under the policy, and (2) that such withholding was 'unreasonable' or 'without proper cause.' The actionable withholding of benefits may consist of the denial of benefits due; paying less than due; and/or unreasonably delaying payments due." (Major v. Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1209 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 556] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[T]he covenant of good faith can be breached for objectively unreasonable conduct, regardless of the actor's motive.' ... [A]n insured plaintiff need only show, for example, that the insurer unreasonably refused to pay benefits or failed to accept a reasonable settlement offer; there is no requirement to establish subjective bad faith." (Bosetti v. United States Life Ins. Co. in the City of New York (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 1208, 1236 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 744], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "Bad faith may involve negligence, or negligence may be indicative of bad faith, but negligence alone is insufficient to render the insurer liable." Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 679, 689 [319 P.2d 69] .)

■ "Thus, a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing involves something more than a breach of the contract or mistaken judgment. There must be proof the insurer failed or refused to discharge its contractual duties not because of an honest mistake, bad judgment, or negligence, 'but rather by a conscious and deliberate act, which unfairly frustrates the agreed common purposes and disappoints the reasonable expectations of the other party thereby depriving that party of the benefits of the agreement.' " (Century Surety Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 922, 949 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 468] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]f the insurer denies benefits unreasonably (i.e., without any reasonable basis for such denial), it may be exposed to the full array of tort remedies, including possible punitive damages." (Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1073 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312] .)

■ "Subterfuges and evasions violate the obligation of good faith in performance even though the actor believes his conduct to be justified. But the obligation goes further: bad faith may be overt or may consist of inaction, and fair dealing may require more than honesty. A complete catalogue of types of bad faith is impossible, but the following types are among those which have been recognized in judicial decisions: evasion of the spirit of the bargain, lack of diligence and slacking off, willful rendering of imperfect performance, abuse of a power to specify terms, and interference with or failure to cooperate in the other party's performance." (R. J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 1589, 1602 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 425] .)

■ "[A]n insurer is not required to pay every claim presented to it. Besides the duty to deal fairly with the insured, the insurer also has a duty to its other policyholders and to the stockholders (if it is such a company) not to dissipate its reserves through the payment of meritless claims. Such a practice inevitably would prejudice the insurance seeking public because of the necessity to increase rates, and would finally drive the insurer out of business." (Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 1, 30 [148 Cal.Rptr. 653] , overruled on other grounds in Egan, supra, 24 Cal.3d at p. 824 fn. 7 .)

■ "Unique obligations are imposed upon true fiduciaries which are not found in the insurance relationship. For example, a true fiduciary must first consider and always act in the best interests of its trust and not allow self-interest to overpower its duty to act in the trust's best interests. An insurer, however, may give its own interests consideration equal to that it gives the interests of its insured; it is not required to disregard the interests of its shareholders and other policyholders when evaluating claims; and it is not required to pay noncovered claims, even though payment would be in the best interests of its insured." (Love v. Fire Ins. Exchange (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1136, 1148-1149 [271 Cal.Rptr. 246] , internal citations omitted.)

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2331

CACI 2331 Breach of the Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing--Failure or Delay in Payment (First Party)--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached the obligation of good faith and fair dealing by [failing to pay/delaying payment of] benefits due under the insurance policy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
- 2. That [name of defendant] was notified of the loss;
- 3. That [name of defendant], unreasonably or without proper cause, [failed to pay/delayed payment of] policy benefits;
- 4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 5. That [name of defendant]'s [failure to pay/delay in payment of] policy benefits was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In determining whether [name of defendant] acted unreasonably or without proper cause, you should consider only the information that [name of defendant] knew or reasonably should have known at the time when it [failed to pay/delayed payment of] policy benefits.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, April 2008, December 2009

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

If there is a genuine issue as to the insurer's liability under the policy for the claim asserted by the insured, there can be no bad-faith liability imposed on the insurer for advancing its side of that dispute. This is known as the "genuine dispute" doctrine. The genuine-dispute doctrine is subsumed within the test of reasonableness or proper cause (element 3). No specific instruction on the doctrine need be given. (See McCoy v. Progressive West Ins. Co. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 785, 792-794 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 74] .)

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- If an insurer "fails to deal fairly and in good faith with its insured by refusing, without proper cause, to compensate its insured for a loss covered by the policy, such conduct may give rise to a cause of action in tort for breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. ... [P] ... [W]hen the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort." (Gruenberg v. Aetna Insurance Co. (1973) 9 Cal.3d 566, 574-575 [108 Cal.Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032] , original italics.)

- "An insurer's obligations under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing with respect to first party coverage include a duty not to unreasonably withhold benefits due under the policy. An insurer that unreasonably delays, or fails to pay, benefits due under the policy may be held liable in tort for breach of the implied covenant. The withholding of benefits due under the policy may constitute a breach of contract even if the conduct was reasonable, but liability in tort arises only if the conduct was unreasonable, that is, without proper cause. In a first party case, as we have here, the withholding of benefits due under the policy is not unreasonable if there was a genuine dispute between the insurer and the insured as to coverage or the amount of payment due." (Rappaport-Scott v. Interinsurance Exch. of the Auto. Club (2007) 146 Cal.App.4th 831, 837 [53 Cal.Rptr.3d 245] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]here are at least two separate requirements to establish breach of the implied covenant: (1) benefits due under the policy must have been withheld; and (2) the reason for withholding benefits must have been unreasonable or without proper cause." (Love v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1136, 1151 [271 Cal.Rptr. 246] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]n insurer's erroneous failure to pay benefits under a policy does not necessarily constitute bad faith entitling the insured to recover tort damages. '[T]he ultimate test of [bad faith] liability in the first party cases is whether the refusal to pay policy benefits was unreasonable.' ... In other words, 'before an [insurer] can be found to have acted tortiously, i.e., in bad faith, in refusing to bestow policy benefits, it must have done so "without proper cause." ' " (Opsal v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1991) 2 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1205 [10 Cal.Rptr.2d 352] , citations omitted.)

- "[A]n insurer denying or delaying the payment of policy benefits due to the existence of a genuine dispute with its insured as to the existence of coverage liability or the amount of the insured's coverage claim is not liable in bad faith even though it might be liable for breach of contract." (Chateau Chamberay Homeowners Assn. v. Associated International Insurance Co. (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 335, 347 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 776] .)

■ "The genuine dispute rule does not relieve an insurer from its obligation to thoroughly and fairly investigate, process and evaluate the insured's claim. A genuine dispute exists only where the insurer's position is maintained in good faith and on reasonable grounds. ... 'The genuine issue rule in the context of bad faith claims allows a [trial] court to grant summary judgment when it is undisputed or indisputable that the basis for the insurer's denial of benefits was reasonable--for example, where even under the plaintiff's version of the facts there is a genuine issue as to the insurer's liability under California law. ... On the other hand, an insurer is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law where, viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, a jury could conclude that the insurer acted unreasonably.' " (Wilson v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 713, 724 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 746, 171 P.3d 1082] , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

■ "We evaluate the reasonableness of the insurer's actions and decision to deny benefits as of the time they were made rather than with the benefit of hindsight." (Century Surety Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 922, 949 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 468] .)

■ "[I]f the insurer denies benefits unreasonably (i.e., without any reasonable basis for such denial), it may be exposed to the full array of tort remedies, including possible punitive damages." (Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1073 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312] .)

■ "While many, if not most, of the cases finding a genuine dispute over an insurer's coverage liability have involved legal rather than factual disputes, we see no reason why the genuine dispute doctrine should be limited to legal issues. That does not mean, however, that the genuine dispute doctrine may properly be applied in every case involving purely a factual dispute between an insurer and its insured. This is an issue which should be decided on a case-by-case basis." (Chateau Chamberay Homeowners Assn., supra, 90 Cal.App.4th at p. 348 , original italics, footnote and internal citations omitted.)

■ "[I]f the conduct of [the insurer] in defending this case was objectively reasonable, its subjective intent is irrelevant." (Bosetti v. United States Life Ins. Co. in the City of New York (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 1208, 1236 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 744]; cf. Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Development California, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 342, 372 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 467, 826 P.2d 710] ["[I]t has been suggested the covenant has both a subjective and objective aspect--subjective good faith and objective fair dealing. A party violates the covenant if it subjectively lacks belief in the validity of its act or if its conduct is objectively unreasonable."].)

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2332

CACI 2332 Bad Faith (First Party)--Failure to Properly Investigate Claim

[Name of defendant] acted unreasonably or without proper cause if it failed to conduct a full, fair, and thorough investigation of all of the bases of the claim. When investigating [name of plaintiff]'s claim, [name of defendant] had a duty to diligently search for and consider evidence that supported coverage of the claimed loss.

Directions for Use

This instruction must be used with CACI No. 2331, Breach of the Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing--Failure or Delay in Payment (First Party)--Essential Factual Elements, if it is alleged that the insurer acted unreasonably or without proper cause by failing to properly investigate the claim.

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

■ "To fulfill its implied obligation, an insurer must give at least as much consideration to the interests of the insured as it gives to its own interests. When the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort. And an insurer cannot reasonably and in good faith deny payments to its insured without fully investigating the grounds for its denial." (Frommoethelydo v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1986) 42 Cal.3d 208, 214-215 [228 Cal.Rptr. 160, 721 P.2d 41] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "To protect [an insured's] interests it is essential that an insurer fully inquire into possible bases that might support the insured's claim. Although we recognize that distinguishing fraudulent from legitimate claims may occasionally be difficult for insurers, ... an insurer cannot reasonably and in good faith deny payments to its insured without thoroughly investigating the foundation for its denial." (Egan, supra, 24 Cal.3d at p. 819 .)

■ "When investigating a claim, an insurance company has a duty to diligently search for evidence which supports its insured's claim. If it seeks to discover only the evidence that defeats the claim it holds its own interest above that of the insured." (Mariscal v. Old Republic Life Ins. Co. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1617, 1620 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 224] .)

■ "While we agree with the trial court ... that the insurer's interpretation of the language of its policy which led to its original denial of [the insured]'s claim was reasonable, it does not follow that [the insurer]'s resulting claim denial can be justified in the absence of a full, fair and thorough investigation of all of the bases of the claim that was presented." (Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1066 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312] , original italics.)

■ "An unreasonable failure to investigate amounting to ... unfair dealing may be found when an insurer fails to consider, or seek to discover, evidence relevant to the issues of liability and damages. ... [P] The insurer's willingness to reconsider its denial of coverage and to continue an investigation into a claim has been held to weigh in favor of its good faith." (Shade Foods, Inc. v. Innovative Products Sales & Marketing, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 847, 880 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 364] , internal citation omitted.)

■ "[The insurer], of course, was not obliged to accept [the doctor]'s opinion without scrutiny or investigation. To the extent it had good faith doubts, the insurer would have been within its rights to investigate the basis for [plaintiff]'s claim by asking [the doctor] to reexamine or further explain his findings, having a physician review all the submitted medical records and offer an opinion, or, if necessary, having its insured examined by other physicians (as it later did). What it could not do, consistent with the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, was ignore [the doctor]'s conclusions without any attempt at adequate investigation, and reach contrary conclusions lacking any discernable medical foundation." (Wilson v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 713, 722 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 746, 171 P.3d 1082] , original italics.)

■ "[W]hether an insurer breached its duty to investigate [is] a question of fact to be determined by the particular circumstances of each case." (Paulfrey v. Blue Chip Stamps (1983) 150 Cal.App.3d 187, 196 [197 Cal.Rptr. 501] .)

■ "[W]ithout actual presentation of a claim by the insured in compliance with claims procedures contained in the policy, there is no duty imposed on the insurer to investigate the claim." (California Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Insurance Co. (1985) 175 Cal.App.3d 1, 57 [221 Cal.Rptr. 171] .)

■ "It would seem reasonable that any responsibility to investigate on an insurer's part would not arise unless and until the threshold issue as to whether a claim was filed, or a good faith effort to comply with claims procedure was made, has been determined. In no event could an insured fail to keep his/her part of the bargain in the first instance, and thereafter seek recovery for breach of a duty to pay seeking punitive damages based on an insurer's failure to investigate a nonclaim." 4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2333

CACI 2333 Bad Faith (First Party)--Breach of Duty to Inform Insured of Rights--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached the obligation of good faith and fair dealing by failing to reasonably inform [him/her/it] of [his/her/its] rights and obligations under an insurance policy. To succeed, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
- 2. That [name of defendant] [denied coverage for/refused to pay] [name of plaintiff]'s loss;
- 3. That under the policy [name of plaintiff] had the [right/obligation] to [describe right or obligation at issue; e.g., "to request arbitration within 180 days"];
- 4. That [name of defendant] did not reasonably inform [name of plaintiff] of [his/her/its] [right/obligation] to [describe right or obligation];
- 5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 6. That [name of defendant]'s failure to reasonably inform [name of plaintiff] was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/its] harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use in appropriate cases if the insured alleges that the insurer breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by failing to reasonably inform the insured of his or her remedial rights and obligations under an insurance policy.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- The insurer's implied duty of good faith and fair dealing includes "the duty reasonably to inform an insured of the insured's rights and obligations under the insurance policy. In particular, in situations in which an insured's lack of knowledge may potentially result in a loss of benefits or a forfeiture of rights, an insurer [is] required to bring to the insured's attention relevant information so as to enable the insured to take action to secure rights afforded by the policy." (Davis v. Blue Cross of Northern California (1979) 25 Cal.3d 418, 428 [158 Cal.Rptr. 828, 600 P.2d 1060] .)

- The trial court in the instant case found that [the insurer] knew that in many instances its insureds would not be aware of the arbitration clause and that, despite this knowledge, [it] deliberately decided not to inform its insureds of the arbitration procedure. In this context, the practical effect of the insurer's practice was to transform its arbitration clause into a unilateral provision, establishing a procedure to which the insurer could require its insureds to resort when [it] deemed it advisable, but one that would not generally provide a speedy, economic or readily accessible remedy for the bulk of [its] uninformed insureds. [P] We think the trial court was fully justified in finding that [the insurer] had breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing in adopting such a course of conduct. (Davis, supra, 25 Cal.3d at pp. 430-431 .)

- "When a court is reviewing claims under an insurance policy, it must hold the insured bound by clear and conspicuous provisions in the policy even if evidence suggests that the insured did not read or understand them. Once it becomes clear to the insurer that its insured disputes its denial of coverage, however, the duty of good faith does not permit the insurer passively to assume that its insured is aware of his rights under the policy. The insurer must instead take affirmative steps to make sure that the insured is informed of his remedial rights." (Sarchett v. Blue Shield of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1, 14-15 [233 Cal.Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267] , plurality opinion.)

- But see Chase v. Blue Cross of California (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1142, 1155 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 178] [while insurer may not misrepresent facts or fail to clarify an insured's obvious misunderstanding of the policy coverage, it does not have an ongoing duty to keep the insured informed of his or her rights once those rights have been clearly set forth in the policy].)

- "In order to find a forfeiture by the insurer of the right to arbitration, we understand Davis and Sarchett to require conduct designed to mislead policyholders." (Chase, supra, 42 Cal.App.4th at p. 1157 , original italics.)

- An insurer owes a duty to an additional insured under an automobile policy to disclose within a reasonable time the existence and amount of any underinsured motorist coverage. (Ramirez v. USAA Casualty Insurance Co. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 391, 397-402 [285 Cal.Rptr. 757] .)

■ "California courts have imposed a duty on the insurer to advise its insureds of the availability of and procedure for initiating arbitration; to notify him of a 31-day option period in which to convert his group insurance policy into individual coverage after termination; and to notify an assignee of a life insurance policy taken as security for a loan to the insured of previous assignments of the policy known to the insurer." (Westrick v. State Farm Insurance (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 685, 692 [187 Cal.Rptr. 214] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2334

CACI 2334 Bad Faith (Third Party)--Refusal to Accept Reasonable Settlement Within Liability Policy Limits--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/it] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s breach of the obligation of good faith and fair dealing because [name of defendant] failed to accept a reasonable settlement demand in a lawsuit against [name of plaintiff]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff in underlying case] brought a lawsuit against [name of plaintiff] for a claim that [[he/she/it] alleged] was covered by [name of defendant]'s insurance policy;
- 2. That [name of defendant] failed to accept a reasonable settlement demand for an amount within policy limits; and
- 3. That a monetary judgment was entered against [name of plaintiff] for a sum greater than the policy limits.

"Policy limits" means the highest amount available under the policy for the claim against [name of plaintiff].

A settlement demand is reasonable if [name of defendant] knew or should have known at the time the settlement demand was rejected that the potential judgment was likely to exceed the amount of the settlement demand based on [name of plaintiff in underlying case]'s injuries or loss and [name of plaintiff]'s probable liability.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use if the insurer assumed the duty to defend the insured, but failed to accept a reasonable settlement offer. For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

If it is alleged that a demand was made in excess of limits and there is a claim that the defendant should have contributed the policy limits, then this instruction will need to be modified.

This instruction should be modified if the insurer did not accept the policy-limits demand because of potential remaining exposure to the insured, such as a contractual indemnity claim or exposure to other claimants.

Sources and Authority

- "[T]he implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing requires the insurer to settle in an appropriate case although the express terms of the policy do not impose such a duty. [P] The insurer, in deciding whether a claim should be compromised, must take into account the interest of the insured and give it at least as much consideration as it does to its own interest. When there is great risk of a recovery beyond the policy limits so that the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is a settlement which can be made within those limits, a consideration in good faith of the insured's interest requires the insurer to settle the claim." (Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 654, 659 [328 P.2d 198] , citation omitted.)

- "Liability is imposed not for a bad faith breach of the contract but for failure to meet the duty to accept reasonable settlements, a duty included within the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing." (Crisci v. Security Insurance Co. of New Haven, Connecticut (1967) 66 Cal.2d 425, 430 [58 Cal.Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173] .)

- "In determining whether an insurer has given consideration to the interests of the insured, the test is whether a prudent insurer without policy limits would have accepted the settlement offer." (Crisci, supra, 66 Cal.2d at p. 429 .)

- "[I]n deciding whether or not to compromise the claim, the insurer must conduct itself as though it alone were liable for the entire amount of the judgment. ... [T]he only permissible consideration in evaluating the reasonableness of the settlement offer becomes whether, in light of the victim's injuries and the probable liability of the insured, the ultimate judgment is likely to exceed the amount of the settlement offer." (Johansen v. California State Auto. Asso. Inter-Insurance Bureau (1975) 15 Cal.3d 9, 16 [123 Cal.Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744] , internal citation omitted.)

- "The size of the judgment recovered in the personal injury action when it exceeds the policy limits, although not conclusive, furnishes an inference that the value of the claim is the equivalent of the amount of the judgment and that acceptance of an offer within those limits was the most reasonable method of dealing with the claim." (Crisci, supra, 66 Cal.2d at p. 431 .)

- "The covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in every insurance policy obligates the insurer, among other things, to accept a reasonable offer to settle a lawsuit by a third party against the insured within policy limits whenever there is a substantial likelihood of a recovery in excess of those limits. The insurer must evaluate the reasonableness of an offer to settle a lawsuit against the insured by considering the probable liability of the insured and the amount of that liability, without regard to any coverage defenses. An insurer that fails to accept a reasonable settlement offer within policy limits will be held liable in tort for the entire judgment against the insured, even if that amount exceeds the policy limits. An insurer's duty to accept a reasonable settlement offer in these circumstances is implied in law to protect the insured from exposure to liability in excess of coverage as a result of the insurer's gamble-- on which only the insured might lose." (Rappaport-Scott v. Interinsurance Exch. of the Auto. Club (2007) 146 Cal.App.4th 831, 836 [53 Cal.Rptr.3d 245] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Determination of the reasonableness of a settlement offer for purposes of a reimbursement action is based on the information available to [the insurer] at the time of the proposed settlement." (Isaacson v. California Ins. Guarantee Assn. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 775, 793 [244 Cal.Rptr. 655, 750 P.2d 297] .)

- "The [workers'] compensation-carrier consent prerequisite of a valid settlement is imposed by law. ... In the absence of reasonable provisions for the legal rights of the [worker's compensation carrier], we conclude that [the insurer] cannot be held liable for bad faith 'rejection of a reasonable settlement offer,' or for failing 'to accept a reasonable settlement offer.'" (Coe v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 981, 993 [136 Cal.Rptr. 331] , internal citations omitted.)

- "Whether [the insurer] 'refused' the 'offer,' and whether it could reasonably have acted otherwise in light of the 11-day deadline imposed by the offer's terms, were questions for the jury." (Coe, supra, 66 Cal.App.3d at p. 994 .)

- "A cause of action for bad faith refusal to settle arises only after a judgment has been rendered in excess of the policy limits. ... Until judgment is actually entered, the mere possibility or probability of an excess judgment does not render the refusal to settle actionable." (Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Superior Court (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 782, 788 [84 Cal.Rptr.2d 43] , internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]n insurer's 'good faith,' though erroneous, belief in noncoverage affords no defense to liability flowing from the insurer's refusal to accept a reasonable settlement offer." (Johansen, supra, 15 Cal.3d at p. 16 , internal citation omitted.)

- "A good faith belief in noncoverage is not relevant to a determination of the reasonableness of a settlement offer." (Samson v. Transamerica Insurance Co. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 220, 243 [178 Cal.Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32] , internal citation omitted.)

- "An insurer that breaches its duty of reasonable settlement is liable for all the insured's damages proximately caused by the breach, regardless of policy limits. Where the underlying action has proceeded to trial and a judgment in excess of the policy limits has been entered against the insured, the insurer is ordinarily liable to its insured for the entire amount of that judgment, excluding any punitive damages awarded." (Hamilton v. Maryland Casualty Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 718, 725 [117 Cal.Rptr.2d 318, 41 P.3d 128] , internal citations omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Reasonable Settlement Demand: A critical element in a bad faith refusal to settle case is a reasonable settlement demand within policy limits. This demand must be communicated to the insurer. If the settlement demand is above policy limits, the insured (or an excess carrier) must be willing to pay the amount above policy limits in order to trigger the primary carrier's duty to settle. By Ronald Oster

CACI 2335 Bad Faith--Advice of Counsel

[Name of defendant] did not breach the obligation of good faith and fair dealing if it reasonably relied on the advice of its lawyer. [Name of defendant]'s reliance was reasonable if:

- 1. [Name of defendant] acted in reliance on the opinion and advice of its lawyer;
- 2. The lawyer's advice was based on full disclosure by [name of defendant] of all relevant facts that it knew, or could have discovered with reasonable effort;
- 3. [Name of defendant] reasonably believed the advice of the lawyer was correct; [and]
- 4. In relying on its lawyer's advice, [name of defendant] gave at least as much consideration to [name of plaintiff]'s interest as it gave its own interest; [and]
- 5. [Name of defendant] was willing to reconsider and act accordingly when it determined that the lawyer's advice was incorrect.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

The "advice of counsel defense" is not a true affirmative defense, but rather negates an essential element of the insured's cause of action for bad faith. (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 721, 725-726 [279 Cal.Rptr. 116] .)

Advice of counsel is irrelevant, however, when an insurer denies coverage and for that reason refuses a reasonable settlement offer. (See, e.g., Johansen v. California State Auto. Asso. Inter-Insurance Bureau (1975) 15 Cal.3d 9, 16 [123 Cal.Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744] ["an insurer's 'good faith,' though erroneous, belief in noncoverage affords no defense to liability flowing from the insurer's refusal to accept a reasonable settlement offer"].)

- "An insurer may defend itself against allegations of bad faith and malice in claims handling with evidence the insurer relied on the advice of competent counsel. The defense of advice of counsel is offered to show the insurer had 'proper cause' for its actions even if the advice it received is ultimately unsound or erroneous." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at p. 725 , internal citations omitted.)

- "If the insurer has exercised good faith in all of its dealings under its policy, and if the settlement which it has rejected has been fully and fairly considered and has been based upon an honest belief that the insurer could defeat the action or keep any possible judgment within the limits of the policy, and its judgments are based on a fair review of the evidence after reasonable diligence in ascertaining the facts, and upon sound legal advice, a court should not subject the insurer to further liability if it ultimately turns out that its judgment is a mistaken judgment" (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at p. 725 , internal citation omitted.)

- "[I]t is a complete defense to a claim of extreme and outrageous conduct when the evidence shows (1) the defendant acted on the opinion and advice of counsel; (2) counsel's advice was based on full disclosure of all the facts by defendant or the advice was initiated by counsel based on counsel's familiarity with the case; and (3) the defendant's reliance on the advice of counsel was in good faith." (Melovich Builders, Inc. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal.App.3d 931, 936-937 [207 Cal.Rptr. 47] [intentional infliction of emotional distress action].)

- "Good faith reliance on counsel's advice simply negates allegations of bad faith and malice as it tends to show the insurer had proper cause for its actions. Because advice of counsel is directed to an essential element of a plaintiff's cause of action, it does not constitute new matter and need not be specifically alleged." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at pp. 725-726 .)

- "An insurer's receipt of and reliance on [the written opinion of its legal counsel] is a relevant circumstance to be considered on the issue of its alleged bad faith." (Mock v. Mich. Millers Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 306, 326, fn. 20 [5 Cal.Rptr.2d 594].)

- "Exemplary damages are not recoverable against a defendant who acts in good faith and under the advice of counsel." (Fox v. Aced (1957) 49 Cal.2d 381, 385 [317 P.2d 608] .)

- "A good faith belief in noncoverage is not relevant to a determination of the reasonableness of a settlement offer." (Samson v. Transamerica Insurance Co. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 220, 243 [178 Cal.Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32] , internal citation omitted.)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Advice of Counsel Defense Waives

Attorney-Client Privilege: One consequence of relying on advice of counsel as a defense to a bad faith claim is that it waives the attorney-client privilege as to the advice. If the privilege is waived, the insured's counsel will not only scrutinize the advice, but also scrutinize whether there was a "full disclosure" of all relevant facts. For these reasons, insurers rarely rely on this defense. By Ronald Oster

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is an insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction also assumes that the judge will decide the issue of whether the claim was potentially covered by the policy. If there are factual disputes regarding this issue, a special interrogatory could be used.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

If it is alleged that a demand was made in excess of limits and there is a claim that the defendant should have contributed the policy limits, then this instruction will need to be modified. Note that an excess insurer generally owes no duty to defend without exhaustion of the primary coverage by judgment or settlement.

Sources and Authority

- "To prevail in an action seeking declaratory relief on the question of the duty to defend, 'the insured must prove the existence of a potential for coverage, while the insurer must establish the absence of any such potential. In other words, the insured need only show that the underlying claim may fall within policy coverage; the insurer must prove it cannot.' The duty to defend exists if the insurer 'becomes aware of, or if the third party lawsuit pleads, facts giving rise to the potential for coverage under the insuring agreement.' " (Delgado v. Interinsurance Exchange of Automobile Club of Southern California (2009) 47 Cal.4th 302, 308 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 298, 211 P.3d 1083] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- " '[A]n insurer has a duty to defend an insured if it becomes aware of, or if the third party lawsuit pleads, facts giving rise to the potential for coverage under the insuring agreement. ... This duty ... is separate from and broader than the insurer's duty to indemnify. ... ' "[F]or an insurer, the existence of a duty to defend turns not upon the ultimate adjudication of coverage under its policy of insurance, but upon those facts known by the insurer at the inception of a third party lawsuit. ... Hence, the duty 'may exist even where coverage is in doubt and ultimately does not develop.' ..." ' " (State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 317, 323 [78 Cal.Rptr.3d 828] , internal citations omitted.)

- "If any facts stated or fairly inferable in the complaint, or otherwise known or discovered by the insurer, suggest a claim potentially covered by the policy, the insurer's duty to defend arises and is not extinguished until the insurer negates all facts suggesting potential coverage. On the other hand, if, as a matter of law, neither the complaint nor the known extrinsic facts indicate any basis for potential coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance." (GGIS Ins. Services, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1493, 1506 [86 Cal.Rptr.3d 515] .)

- "In determining its duty to defend, the insurer must consider facts from any source--the complaint, the insured, and other sources. An insurer does not have a continuing duty to investigate the potential for coverage if it has made an informed decision on coverage at the time of tender. However, where the information available at the time of tender shows no coverage, but information available later shows otherwise, a duty to defend may then arise." (American States Ins. Co. v. Progressive Casualty Ins. Co. (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 18, 26 [102 Cal.Rptr.3d 591] , internal citations omitted.)

- "The obligation of the insurer to defend is of vital importance to the insured. 'In purchasing his insurance the insured would reasonably expect that he would stand a better chance of vindication if supported by the resources and expertise of his insurer than if compelled to handle and finance the presentation of his case. He would, moreover, expect to be able to avoid the time, uncertainty and capital outlay in finding and retaining an attorney of his own.' 'The insured's desire to secure the right to call on the insurer's superior resources for the defense of third party claims is, in all likelihood, typically as significant a motive for the purchase of insurance as is the wish to obtain indemnity for possible liability.' " (Amato v. Mercury Casualty Co. (Amato II) (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 825, 831-832 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 909] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "An anomalous situation would be created if, on the one hand, an insured can sue for the tort of breach of the implied covenant if the insurer accepts the defense and later refuses a reasonable settlement offer, but, on the other hand, an insured is denied tort recovery if the insurer simply refuses to defend. ... This dichotomy could have the effect of encouraging an insurer to stonewall the insured at the outset by simply refusing to defend." (Campbell v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 1308, 1319-1320 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 385] .)

■ "[T]he mere existence of a legal dispute does not create a potential for coverage: 'However, we have made clear that where the third party suit never presented any potential for policy coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance, and the insurer may properly deny a defense. Moreover, the law governing the insurer's duty to defend need not be settled at the time the insurer makes its decision.' " (Griffin Dewatering Corp. v. Northern Ins. Co. of New York (2009) 176 Cal.App.4th 172, 209 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 568] , original italics.)

■ "The trial court erroneously thought that because the case law was 'unsettled' when the insurer first turned down the claim, that unsettledness created a potential for a covered claim. ... [I]f an insurance company's denial of coverage is reasonable, as shown by substantial case law in favor of its position, there can be no bad faith even though the insurance company's position is later rejected by our state Supreme Court." (Griffin Dewatering Corp., supra, 176 Cal.App.4th at p. 179, original italics.)

■ "A breach of the duty to defend in itself constitutes only a breach of contract, but it may also violate the covenant of good faith and fair dealing where it involves unreasonable conduct or an action taken without proper cause. On the other hand, '[i]f the insurer's refusal to defend is reasonable, no liability will result.' " (Shade Foods, Inc. v. Innovative Products Sales & Marketing, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 847, 881 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 364] , internal citations omitted.)

■ " 'If the insurer is obliged to take up the defense of its insured, it must do so as soon as possible, both to protect the interests of the insured, and to limit its own exposure to loss. ... [T]he duty to defend must be assessed at the outset of the case.' It follows that a belated offer to pay the costs of defense may mitigate damages but will not cure the initial breach of duty." (Shade Foods, Inc., supra, 78 Cal.App.4th at p. 881 , internal citations omitted.)

■ "No tender of defense is required if the insurer has already denied coverage of the claim. In such cases, notice of suit and tender of the defense are excused because other insurer has already expressed its unwillingness to undertake the defense." (Croskey et al., Cal. Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation (The Rutter Group) P 7:614.)

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2337

CACI 2337 Factors to Consider in Evaluating Insurer's Conduct

In determining whether [name of defendant] acted unreasonably or without proper cause, you may consider whether the defendant did any of the following:

[(a) Misrepresented to [name of plaintiff] relevant facts or insurance policy provisions relating to any coverage at issue.]

[(b) Failed to acknowledge and act reasonably promptly after receiving communications about [name of plaintiff]'s claim arising under the insurance policy.]

[(c) Failed to adopt and implement reasonable standards for the prompt investigation and processing of claims arising under its insurance policies.]

[(d) Failed to accept or deny coverage of claims within a reasonable time after [name of plaintiff] completed and submitted proof-of-loss requirements.]

[(e) Did not attempt in good faith to reach a prompt, fair, and equitable settlement of [name of plaintiff]'s claim after liability had become reasonably clear.]

[(f) Required [name of plaintiff] to file a lawsuit to recover amounts due under the policy by offering substantially less than the amount that [he/she/it] ultimately recovered in the lawsuit, even though [name of plaintiff] had made a claim for an amount reasonably close to the amount ultimately recovered.]

[(g) Attempted to settle [name of plaintiff]'s claim for less than the amount to which a reasonable person would have believed he or she was entitled by referring to written or printed advertising material accompanying or made part of the application.]

[(h) Attempted to settle the claim on the basis of an application that was altered without notice to, or knowledge or consent of, [name of plaintiff], [his/her/its] representative, agent, or broker.]

[(i) Failed, after payment of a claim, to inform [name of plaintiff] at [his/her/its] request, of the coverage under which payment was made.]

[(j) Informed [name of plaintiff] of its practice of appealing from arbitration awards in favor of insureds or claimants for the purpose of forcing them to accept settlements or compromises less than the amount awarded in arbitration.]

[(k) Delayed the investigation or payment of the claim by requiring [name of plaintiff], [or [his/her] physician], to submit a preliminary claim report, and then also required the submission of formal proof-of-loss forms, both of which contained substantially the same information.]

[(l) Failed to settle a claim against [name of plaintiff] promptly once [his/her/its] liability had become apparent, under one portion of the insurance policy coverage in order to influence settlements under other portions of the insurance policy coverage.]

[(m) Failed to promptly provide a reasonable explanation of its reasons for denying the claim or offering a compromise settlement, based on the provisions of the insurance policy in relation to the facts or applicable law.]

[(n) Directly advised [name of plaintiff] not to hire an attorney.]

[(o) Misled [name of plaintiff] as to the applicable statute of limitations, that is, the date by which an action against [name of defendant] on the claim had to be filed.]

[(p) Delayed the payment or provision of hospital, medical, or surgical benefits for services provided with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) or AIDS-related complex for more than 60 days after it had received [name of plaintiff]'s claim for those benefits, doing so in order to investigate whether [name of plaintiff] had the condition before obtaining the insurance coverage. However, the 60-day period does not include any time during which [name of defendant] was waiting for a response for relevant medical information from a healthcare provider.]

The presence or absence of any of these factors alone is not enough to determine whether [name of defendant]'s conduct was or was not unreasonable or without proper cause. You must consider [name of defendant]'s conduct as a whole in making this determination.

New April 2008

Directions for Use

Although there is no private cause of action under Insurance Code section 790.03(h) (see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1988) 46 Cal.3d 287, 304-305 [250 Cal.Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58]), this instruction may be given in an insurance bad-faith action to assist the jury in determining whether the insurer's conduct was unreasonable or without proper cause. (See Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1078 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312] , internal citations omitted.)

Include only the factors that are relevant to the case.

Sources and Authority

- Insurance Code section 790.03 provides in part:

The following are hereby defined as unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts or practices in the business of insurance.

(h) Knowingly committing or performing with such frequency as to indicate a general business practice any of the following unfair claims settlement practices:

(1) Misrepresenting to claimants pertinent facts or insurance policy provisions relating to any coverages at issue.

(2) Failing to acknowledge and act reasonably promptly upon communications with respect to claims arising under insurance policies.

(3) Failing to adopt and implement reasonable standards for the prompt investigation and processing of claims arising under insurance policies.

(4) Failing to affirm or deny coverage of claims within a reasonable time after proof of loss requirements have been completed and submitted by the insured.

(5) Not attempting in good faith to effectuate prompt, fair, and equitable settlements of claims in which liability has become reasonably clear.

(6) Compelling insureds to institute litigation to recover amounts due under an insurance policy by offering substantially less than the amounts ultimately recovered in actions brought by the insureds, when the insureds have made claims for amounts reasonably similar to the amounts ultimately recovered.

(7) Attempting to settle a claim by an insured for less than the amount to which a reasonable person would have believed he or she was entitled by reference to written or printed advertising material accompanying or made part of an application.

(8) Attempting to settle claims on the basis of an application which was altered without notice to, or knowledge or consent of, the insured, his or her representative, agent, or broker.

(9) Failing, after payment of a claim, to inform insureds or beneficiaries, upon request by them, of the coverage under which payment has been made.

(10) Making known to insureds or claimants a practice of the insurer of appealing from arbitration awards in favor of insureds or claimants for the purpose of compelling them to accept settlements or compromises less than the amount awarded in arbitration.

(11) Delaying the investigation or payment of claims by requiring an insured, claimant, or the physician of either, to submit a preliminary claim report, and then requiring the subsequent submission of formal proof of loss forms, both of which submissions contain substantially the same information.

(12) Failing to settle claims promptly, where liability has become apparent, under one portion of the insurance policy coverage in order to influence settlements under other portions of the insurance policy coverage.

(13) Failing to provide promptly a reasonable explanation of the basis relied on in the insurance policy, in relation to the facts or applicable law, for the denial of a claim or for the offer of a compromise settlement.

(14) Directly advising a claimant not to obtain the services of an attorney.

(15) Misleading a claimant as to the applicable statute of limitations.

(16) Delaying the payment or provision of hospital, medical, or surgical benefits for services provided with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome or AIDS-related complex for more than 60 days after the insurer has received a claim for those benefits, where the delay in claim payment is for the purpose of investigating whether the condition preexisted the coverage. However, this 60-day period shall not include any time during which the insurer is awaiting a response for relevant medical information from a health care provider.

■ "[Plaintiff] was not seeking to recover on a claim based on a violation of Insurance Code section 790.03, subdivision (h). Rather, her claim was based on a claim of common law bad faith arising from [defendant]'s breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing which she is entitled to pursue. [Plaintiff]'s reliance upon the [expert's] declaration was for the purpose of providing evidence supporting her contention that [defendant] had breached the implied covenant by its actions. This is a proper use of evidence of an insurer's violations of the statute and the corresponding regulations." (Jordan, supra, 148 Cal.App.4th at p. 1078 , original italics, internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 23 California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions

4-23 California Forms of Jury Instruction CACI 2350

CACI 2350 Damages for Bad Faith

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that was caused by [name of defendant], even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

- 1. [Mental suffering/anxiety/humiliation/emotional distress;] [and]
- 2. [The cost of attorney fees to recover the insurance policy benefits;] [and]
- 3. [Insert other applicable item of damage.]

[No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of damages for [insert item of mental or emotional distress]. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.]

[To recover for future [insert item of mental or emotional distress], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she] is reasonably certain to suffer that harm.]

[To recover attorney fees [name of plaintiff] must prove that because of [name of defendant]'s breach of the obligation of good faith and fair dealing it was reasonably necessary for [him/her/it] to hire an attorney to recover the policy benefits. [Name of plaintiff] may recover attorney fees [he/she/it] incurred to obtain policy benefits but not attorney fees [he/she/it] incurred for other purposes.]

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

For instructions on damages for pain and suffering, see CACI No. 3905, Items of Noneconomic Damage, and CACI No. 3905A, Physical Pain, Mental Suffering, and Emotional Distress (Noneconomic Damage). For instructions on punitive damages, see other instructions in the Damages series.

Sources and Authority

- "When an insurer's tortious conduct reasonably compels the insured to retain an attorney to obtain the benefits due under a policy, it follows that the insurer should be liable in a tort action for that expense. The attorney's fees are an economic loss--damages--proximately caused by the tort." (Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal.3d 813, 817 [210 Cal.Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796] .)

- "The fees recoverable ... may not exceed the amount attributable to the attorney's efforts to obtain the rejected payment due on the insurance contract. Fees attributable to obtaining any portion of the plaintiff's award which exceeds the amount due under the policy are not recoverable. [P] Since the attorney's fees are recoverable as damages, the determination of the recoverable fees must be made by the trier of fact unless the parties stipulate otherwise." (Brandt, supra, 37 Cal.3d at p. 819 .)

- "If ... the matter is to be presented to the jury, the court should instruct along the following lines: 'If you find (1) that the plaintiff is entitled to recover on his cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and (2) that because of such breach it was reasonably necessary for the plaintiff to employ the services of an attorney to collect the benefits due under the policy, then and only then is the plaintiff entitled to an award for attorney's fees incurred to obtain the policy benefits, which award must not include attorney's fees incurred to recover any other portion of the verdict.' " (Brandt, supra, 37 Cal.3d at p. 820 .)

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Attorney's Fees and Bad Faith: Attorney's fees are recoverable in bad faith cases, but only the attorney's fees incurred to obtain the policy benefits (as opposed to fees to prove the bad faith). This distinction will require the insured's counsel to show it has allocated its fees when the evidence of damage is presented to the jury. By Ronald Oster

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Damages for Emotional Distress: In litigating bad faith cases, one of the arguments that attorneys for insurance companies want to make is that the plaintiff gets no emotional distress damages unless plaintiff can show that he or she has suffered economic loss [see, e.g., Cates Construction, Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 28, 43, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 855, 980 P.2d 407 ; Waters v. United Services Auto. Assn. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1063, 1079, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 910] . A plaintiff can frequently show economic loss, although sometimes they will have trouble pointing out what the economic loss actually is, especially if the case involves a "delay in benefits." By Rex Heeseman

CACI 2360 Judgment Creditor's Action Against Insurer--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] must pay [all or part of] a judgment against [name of insured]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] brought a lawsuit for [personal injury/wrongful death/property damage] against [name of insured] and a judgment was entered against [name of insured];
- 2. That [all or part of] [name of insured]'s liability under the judgment is covered by an insurance policy with [name of defendant]; and
- 3. The amount of the judgment [covered by the policy].

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for a judgment creditor's action against an insurer to collect on an insurance policy pursuant to Insurance Code section 11580(b)(2). This instruction should be used only where there are factual issues on any of the above elements. This instruction may need to be augmented with instructions on specific factual findings.

Note that Insurance Code section 11580 requires that the policy be "issued or delivered to [a] person in this state." This issue should be added as an element if it is disputed in the case.

■ Insurance Code section 11580(b)(2) provides, in pertinent part, that a liability policy must contain, and will be construed as containing if it does not: "[a] provision that whenever judgment is secured against the insured or the executor or administrator of a deceased insured in an action based upon bodily injury, death, or property damage, then an action may be brought against the insurer on the policy and subject to its terms and limitations, by such judgment creditor to recover on the judgment."

■ "A direct action under section 11580 is a contractual action on the policy to satisfy a judgment up to policy limits." (Wright v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 998, 1015 [14 Cal.Rptr.2d 588] .)

■ "[I]t is not necessary for property damage to be caused by a vehicle or draught animal in order to bring a direct action against an insurer under section 11580." (People ex rel. City of Willits v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 1125, 1131-1132] .)

■ "Because the insurer's duties flow to its insured alone, a third party claimant may not bring a direct action against an insurance company. As a general rule, a third party may directly sue an insurer only when there has been an assignment of rights by, or a final judgment against, the insured." (Shaolian v. Safeco Insurance Co. (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 268, 271 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 702] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Under section 11580 a third party claimant bringing a direct action against an insurer should ... prove 1) it obtained a judgment for bodily injury, death, or property damage, 2) the judgment was against a person insured under a policy that insures against [the] loss or damage ..., 3) the liability insurance policy was issued by the defendant insurer, 4) the policy covers the relief awarded in the judgment, 5) the policy either contains a clause that authorizes the claimant to bring an action directly against the insurer or the policy was issued or delivered in California and insures against [the] loss or damage" (Wright, supra, 11 Cal.App.4th at p. 1015 .)

■ "Under Insurance Code section 11580, a third party creditor bringing a direct action against an insurer to recover the proceeds of an insurance policy must plead and prove not only that it obtained a judgment for bodily injury, but that 'the judgment was against a person insured under a policy ...' and 'the policy covers the relief awarded in the judgment' " (Miller v. American Home Assurance Co. (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 844, 847-848 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 765] , original italics, internal citation omitted.)

■ "[Insurance Code Section 11580(b)(2)] and the standard policy language permit an action against an insurer only when the underlying judgment is final and 'final,' for this purpose, means an appeal from the underlying judgment has been concluded or the time within which to appeal has passed." (McKee v. National Union Fire Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh, PA. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 282, 285 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 286] .)

■ "[W]here the insurer may be subject to a direct action under Insurance Code section 11580 by a judgment creditor who has or will obtain a default judgment in a third party action against the insured, intervention is appropriate. ... Where an insurer has failed to intervene in the underlying action or to move to set aside the default judgment, the insurer is bound by the default judgment." (Reliance Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 383, 386-387 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 807] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "The [standard] 'no action' clause gives the insurer the right to control the defense of the claim--to decide whether to settle or to adjudicate the claim on its merits. When the insurer provides a defense to its insured, the insured has no right to interfere with the insurer's control of the defense, and a stipulated judgment between the insured and the injured claimant, without the consent of the insurer, is ineffective to impose liability upon the insurer." (Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Superior Court (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 782, 787 [84 Cal.Rptr.2d 43], internal citations omitted.)

■ A standard "no action" clause in an indemnity insurance policy "provides that [the insurer] may be sued directly if the amount of the insured's obligation to pay was finally determined either by judgment against the insured after actual trial or by 'written agreement of the insured, the claimant and the company.'" (Rose v. Royal Insurance Co. of America (1991) 2 Cal.App.4th 709, 716-717 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 483] .)

■ "[A] trial does not have to be adversarial to be considered an 'actual trial' under the 'no action' clause, or to be considered binding against the insurer in a section 11580 proceeding. ... [W]e conclude that the term 'actual trial' in the standard 'no action' clause has two components: (1) an independent adjudication of facts based on an evidentiary showing; and (2) a process that does not create the potential for abuse, fraud or collusion." (National Union Fire Insurance Co. v. Lynette C. (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1434, 1449 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 496] .)

■ "A defending insurer cannot be bound by a settlement made without its participation and without any actual commitment on its insured's part to pay the judgment, even where the settlement has been found to be in good faith for purposes of [Code of Civil Procedure] section 877.6." (Hamilton v. Maryland Casualty Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 718, 730 [117 Cal.Rptr.2d 318, 41 P.3d 128] .)

■ "[W]hen ... a liability insurer wrongfully denies coverage or refuses to provide a defense, then the insured is free to negotiate the best possible settlement consistent with his or her interests, including a stipulated judgment accompanied by a covenant not to execute. Such a settlement will raise an evidentiary presumption in favor of the insured (or the insured's assignee) with respect to the existence and amount of the insured's liability. The effect of such presumption is to shift the burden of proof to the insurer to prove that the settlement was unreasonable or the product of fraud or collusion. If the insurer is unable to meet that burden of proof then the stipulated judgment will be binding on the insurer and the policy provision proscribing a direct action against an insurer except upon a judgment against the insured after an 'actual trial' will not bar enforcement of the judgment." (Pruyn v. Agricultural Insurance Co. (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 500, 509 [42 Cal.Rptr.2d 295] .)

CACI 2361 Negligent Failure to Obtain Insurance Coverage--Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/it] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s negligent failure to obtain insurance requested by [him/her/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

- 1. That [name of plaintiff] requested [name of defendant] to obtain [describe requested insurance] and [name of defendant] promised to obtain that insurance for [him/her/it];
- 2. That [name of defendant] was negligent in failing to obtain the promised insurance;
- 3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
- 4. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

For general tort instructions, including the definition of "substantial factor," see the Negligence series (CACI No. 400 et seq.).

● "A 'failure to deliver the agreed-upon coverage' case is actionable An insurance agent has an 'obligation to use reasonable care, diligence, and judgment in procuring insurance requested by an insured.' A broker's failure to obtain the type of insurance requested by an insured may constitute actionable negligence and the proximate cause of injury." (Desai v. Farmers Insurance Exchange (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 1110, 1119-1120 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 276] , internal citations omitted.)

■ "Absent some notice or warning, an insured should be able to rely on an agent's representations of coverage without independently verifying the accuracy of those representations by examining the relevant policy provisions." (Clement v. Smith (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 39, 45 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 676] .)

■ "[W]hile an insurance agent who promises to procure insurance will indeed be liable for his negligent failure to do so, it does not follow that he can avoid liability for foreseeable harm caused by his silence or inaction merely because he has not expressly promised to assume responsibility." (Westrick v. State Farm Insurance (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 685, 691 [187 Cal.Rptr. 214] , internal citations omitted.)

CHAPTER 23A Matthew Bender Insurance Contract Instructions *

4-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter includes jury instructions for use in litigation on first-party property insurance policies and third-party general liability policies. For the California Judicial Council jury instructions on insurance litigation, see Ch. 23, California Judicial Council Insurance Litigation Instructions. The Judicial Council instructions include, for example, Instructions on breach of an insurance contract [CACI Nos. 2300- 2302], policy exclusions [CACI Nos. 2303, 2304, 2306], disputing the contractual relationship [CACI Nos. 2307- 2309], affirmative defenses [CACI Nos. 2320- 2322], and bad faith [CACI Nos. 2330- 2350]. The Judicial Council instructions also include specific verdict forms relating to breach and bad faith [CACI Nos. VF-2300-VF-2303]. The instructions in this chapter are intended to supplement the Judicial Council instructions see [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050].

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Part A includes preliminary and definitional instructions [see MB 2300A.01 -MB 2300A.13] and instructions surrounding the burden of proof [see MB 2300A.20, MB 2300A.21], fortuitous events [see MB 2300A.22], and willful acts [see MB 2300A.23].
- Part B includes instructions on insurance contract issues, such as the issuance and rescission of a policy, policy conditions, and exclusions [see MB 2300A.30 -MB 2300A.125].
- Part C includes instructions on bad faith issues, such as the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing, unreasonable refusal to settle, and defenses [see MB 2300A.140 -MB 2300A.202].
- Part D includes instructions on contract and tort damages [see MB 2300A.210 -MB 2300A.240].

Many instructions in this chapter are generally based on standard policy form language developed by the Insurance Services Office, Inc. (ISO). ISO was formed by the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters and the Mutual Insurance Rating Bureau for the purpose of promulgating standard policy language [see California Insurance Law and Practice,

Ch. 49 (Matthew Bender); Long, Law of Liability Insurance, Vol. 3, App. B (Matthew Bender)]. The standard general liability policy is called a Commercial General Liability or Comprehensive General Liability policy, usually abbreviated as "CGL."

Litigation on insurance policies involves cases in which (1) the insured is the plaintiff (typically bad faith cases), (2) the insurer is the plaintiff (typically declaratory relief cases), and (3) the insurer and the insured both make claims against each other (such as declaratory relief cases in which the insured cross-complains for bad faith). For that reason, this chapter generally avoids using the terms "plaintiff" and "defendant," and instead uses "insured" and "insurer." By virtue of this format, throughout these instructions the parties' names may be substituted for references to "[insurer]" and "[insured]" without concern for who is the plaintiff and who is the defendant.

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.01

MB 2300A.01 Parties

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The plaintiff in this action is _____ [name of insured/insurer].

The defendant in this action is _____ [name of insured/insurer].

Unless otherwise specified, [insured/insurer] will be referred to as _____ [shorthand reference] or as Plaintiff; [insured/insurer] will be referred to as _____ [shorthand reference] or as Defendant.

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used to explain to the jury who the parties are and what they may be called in additional jury instructions.

[3] Comment

These instructions generally avoid use of the terms "plaintiff" and "defendant," although there may be instances when it is more convenient to refer to the parties that way. Generally, however, to personalize the parties, counsel may wish to use their names. Therefore, an insured named Jane Doe might be referred to as "Ms. Doe" instead of as plaintiff, and an insurer named Acme Mutual Inter-Insurance Bureau of the Northwest might be referred to as "Acme."

CHAPTER 23A Matthew Bender Insurance Contract Instructions *

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.02

MB 2300A.02 Nature of Insurance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Insurance is a contract in which one person undertakes to indemnify another person against loss, damage, or liability arising from a contingent or unknown event. Any contingent or unknown event, whether past or future, that may create loss or damage to, or liability against, a person may be insured against.

Authorities: Ins. Code §§ 22, 250; Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal.4th 645, 689-690, 692, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 324, 913 P.2d 878 ; Cametal Corp. v. National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1961) 189 Cal.App.2d Supp. 831, 835-836, 11 Cal.Rptr. 280 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in cases involving the issue of whether a loss was already certain or known to the insured before the inception of the insurance policy. Although the language of this instruction is taken directly from Ins. Code §§ 22 and 250, if the jury is likely to find the word "indemnify" confusing or unclear, counsel may wish to request that the court use a less precise but reasonably synonymous term such as "compensate" or "pay for."

This instruction is applicable to first-party cases. It is unlikely to be applicable in third-party cases, because the California Supreme Court has interpreted "contingent or unknown" in the third-party context merely to require "some contingency" [Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal.4th 645, 690, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 324, 913 P.2d 878 (emphasis in original)] and has held that some contingency exists so long as there is "uncertainty about the imposition of liability" [Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal.4th 645, 692, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 324, 913 P.2d 878 (emphasis in original)].

[3] Comment

Ins. Code §§ 22 and 250 make clear that certain or known losses may not be insured against [Cametal Corp. v. National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1961) 189 Cal.App.2d Supp. 831, 835-836, 11 Cal.Rptr. 280]. This restriction is particularly important in cases of first-party fraud [see, e.g., Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal.3d 674, 274 Cal.Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 (when first-party loss is no longer contingent)]. This restriction will almost never apply to a third-party loss, which remains "contingent or unknown" so long as the insured's legal obligation to pay for that loss has not been established (for example, by way of final judgment) [Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal.4th 645, 693, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 324, 913 P.2d 878].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Need For Instruction: This instruction may not be needed, because almost all jurors now have an understanding of insurance. By Rex Heeseman

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.03

MB 2300A.03 Object of Insurance

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The person insured is entitled to receive full, but no more than full, value for the loss suffered. The insured may not be put in a better position than [he/she/it] was in before the loss.

Authorities: Ins. Code § 22; Davis v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 409, 415, 43 P. 1115 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain the purpose of an insurance contract. It applies if the insurer claims that the insured is seeking to recover more than the amount of its loss.

[3] Comment

The definition of "insurance" in Ins. Code § 22 makes it clear that the purpose of insurance is only to make the insured whole, and not to give the insured a profit [Davis v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 409, 415, 43 P. 1115]. For discussion of Ins. Code § 22 and the definition of "insurance," see MB 2300A.02.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Excess Amounts: This instruction could be misleading, depending on the type of insurance and type of case. For example, a homeowner policy with "replacement cash value" could provide benefits that exceed the actual cash value of damaged or destroyed property. In that case, the excess amount is not a "profit," but is part of the bargained-for benefit of the policy. In that case, the excess amount is not a "profit" on the insured's loss, but is rather a consequence of the insurer's bad faith. By Ronald Oster and Susan E. Firtch

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.04

MB 2300A.04 Nature of Declaratory Relief Action: General Liability

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

This case involves a dispute as to whether [insurer] is obligated to provide certain benefits under an insurance policy that it issued to [insured]. [Insured] contends that those benefits are due because a [claim was made/lawsuit was brought] against [him/her/it] by third parties seeking damages covered by the policy. [Insurer] contends that the policy does not cover the damages sought by that [claim/lawsuit].

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in a declaratory relief action arising out of a third-party claim or lawsuit against the insured. It is intended to be general in nature, and may be used in conjunction with more specific instructions set forth elsewhere regarding specific benefits that may be due under the policy.

[3] Comment

A declaratory judgment action is a common and appropriate means of resolving insurance coverage issues [Keene Corp. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (D.C. Cir. 1981) 667 F.2d 1034, 1040 n.8 ; see Long, Law of Liability Insurance, Vol. 3, § 26.01 (Matthew Bender); see, e.g., Standard Fire Ins. Co. v. Spectrum Community Assn. (2006) 141 Cal.App.4th 1117, 1120, 46 Cal.Rptr.3d 804 , rev. denied, 2006 Cal. LEXIS 12875].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Need For Instruction: This instruction is often unnecessary because the judge invariably decides the cause of action for declaratory relief (see § 2300A.07). By Rex Heeseman

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.05

MB 2300A.05 Underlying Claim

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

This case arises out of a [claim/lawsuit] brought against [insured] by third parties. [Insured] contends that under the terms of the insurance policy that [insurer] issued, [insurer] is obligated to defend and indemnify [insured] against the third party [claim/lawsuit]. When I use the term "underlying claim" or "underlying lawsuit," I mean that [claim/lawsuit] brought against [insured] by the third parties.

Authorities: Shernoff, Gage & Levine, Insurance Bad Faith Litigation, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender); Long, Law of Liability Insurance, Vol. 1, § 1.01 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in cases arising out of third-party claims or lawsuits against the insured to explain the nature of the insurance lawsuit and define the terms "underlying claim" and "underlying lawsuit."

[3] Comment

The liability of an insurance company to an insured depends on the terms of the policy [Long, Law of Liability Insurance, Vol. 1, § 1.01 (Matthew Bender)]. Even as to matters covered by the policy, the insurance company is not liable to the insured under a standard liability policy unless the insured is potentially liable to a third party [Shernoff, Gage & Levine, Insurance Bad Faith Litigation, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender); Long, Law of Liability Insurance, Vol. 3, App. B, § 2 (Matthew Bender)]. This means that there must be a claim or an action against the insured by the third-party on which the insured is or may be liable [see, e.g., Unified W. Grocers, Inc. v. Twin City Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2006)]

457 F.3d 1106, 1110 ; Medill v. Westport Ins. Corp. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 819, 826, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 570]. This instruction defines that claim or action against the insured to provide a convenient way of distinguishing it from the dispute between the insured and the insurer. An instruction of this type is probably not necessary in a first-party case, because it is convenient enough to refer to the particular event at issue as, for example, "the fire" or "the theft."

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.06

MB 2300A.06 Equitable Subrogation

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

If one insurance company pays a claim for which another person is liable, the insurance company that made the payment is said to stand in the shoes of the insured. It is entitled to assert all of the same claims against the liable person that the insured could assert, and it is subject to all of the same defenses that could be asserted against the insured.

Authorities: Commercial Union Assurance Cos. v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (1980) 26 Cal.3d 912, 917-918, 164 Cal.Rptr. 709, 610 P.2d 1038 ; Fire Ins. Exch. v. Hammond (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 313, 317, 99 Cal.Rptr.2d 596 ; Walbrook Ins. Co. Ltd. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1445, 1454, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 513 ; United Pac. Ins. Co. v. Hanover Ins. Co. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 925, 936, 266 Cal.Rptr. 231 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain to the jury that they should regard the insurer the same way that they would regard the insured. It applies if an insurer is seeking recovery from a third party--whether another insurer or a third party tortfeasor--on an equitable subrogation theory.

[3] Comment

Equitable subrogation is one of the theories on which one insurer may seek recovery from another for a loss to their common insured [Walbrook Ins. Co. Ltd. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1445, 1454, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 513 ; United Pac. Ins. Co. v. Hanover Ins. Co. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 925, 936, 266 Cal.Rptr. 231 ; Employers Mut. Liab.

Ins. Co. v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1959) 167 Cal.App.2d 369, 376, 334 P.2d 658 ; see, e.g., Chandler v. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2010) 598 F.3d 1115, 1117 ; JPI Westcoast Constr., L.P. v. RJS & Assoc., Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 1448, 1463-1464, 68 Cal.Rptr.3d 91 ; see generally California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 35, § 35.11 (Matthew Bender)]. Recovery on this theory is not based on any separate duty owed by one insurer to another [Commercial Union Assurance Cos. v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (1980) 26 Cal.3d 912, 918, 164 Cal.Rptr. 709, 610 P.2d 1038 ; Walbrook Ins. Co. Ltd. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1445, 1454, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 513 ; Northwestern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Farmers' Ins. Group (1978) 76 Cal.App.3d 1031, 1050, 143 Cal.Rptr. 415], but rather is based on the principle that the subrogated insurer is enforcing the nonpaying insurer's obligation to the insured [Northwestern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Farmers' Ins. Group (1978) 76 Cal.App.3d 1031, 1050, 143 Cal.Rptr. 415].

Enforcement of the insured's rights by the subrogated insurer in no way increases or diminishes the obligation owed by the nonpaying insurer [Peter v. Travelers Ins. Co. (C.D. Cal. 1974) 375 F.Supp. 1347, 1350 ; Northwestern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Farmers' Ins. Group (1978) 76 Cal.App.3d 1031, 1045, 143 Cal.Rptr. 415]. Because equitable subrogation by an insurer involves the enforcement of the insured's rights and because the subrogee steps into the insured's shoes, the subrogee is bound by all of the insured's actions [Century Indem. Co. v. London Underwriters (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1701, 1709, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 393 (in determining priority of subrogation rights, primary insurer bound by insured's agreement with excess insurer that excess insurer would be reimbursed before any amounts paid by any primary insurer would be reimbursed); Continental Cas. Co. v. Royal Ins. Co. (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 111, 120, 268 Cal.Rptr. 193 (in action against primary insurer, excess insurer bound by insured's rejection of settlement offer)]. The insurer may not claim a right that the insured does not have and cannot acquire by subrogation something to which the insured has no rights [Chandler v. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2010) 598 F.3d 1115, 1117-1118 ; Great American Ins. Cos. v. Gordon Trucking, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 445, 451, 81 Cal.Rptr.3d 65 ; Fire Ins. Exch. v. Hammond (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 313, 317, 99 Cal.Rptr.2d 596]. For example, if an insured releases the insured's claims against another party, the insurer, as subrogee, is bound by that release and may not recover [Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 1586, 1596-1597, 26 Cal.Rptr.2d 762]. A number of cases have noted an exception under which a release will not bar an insurer's subrogation rights if the tortfeasor obtains a release with knowledge that the insured has already been indemnified by the insurer [see, e.g., Conservatorship of Edwards (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 1176, 1184, 244 Cal.Rptr. 330]. However, none of the cases commonly cited as authority for the existence of this exception at common law have actually permitted an insurer's subrogation rights to survive a release executed by a party to the underlying claim [see generally California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 35, § 35.11[5] (Matthew Bender)].

Similarly, if the insured has already sued another party, the insurer cannot subsequently sue the same party for damages arising from the same accident [Allstate Ins. Co. v. Mel Raption, Inc. (2000) 77 Cal.App.4th 901, 914, 92 Cal.Rptr.2d 151].

A defense to an equitable subrogation claim is that the insurer paid the claim without any obligation to do so. In the context of payment by an insurer to its first-party insured, however, if the loss is covered under the basic grant of coverage without regard to policy exclusions, the insurer is not necessarily a "volunteer" even in the face of authority suggesting that policy exclusions would have precluded coverage [State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. East Bay Mun. Util. Dist. (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 769, 778, 62 Cal.Rptr.2d 72].

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.07

MB 2300A.07 Role of Jury: Declaratory Judgment or Contract Action

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The insurance policy and the law as set forth in these instructions govern the rights and duties of [insurer] and [insured]. I have already decided the meaning and interpretation of the insurance policy, and I will instruct you shortly on the meaning of certain terms and conditions of the policy. You will then decide certain questions of fact, and your decision on those facts will determine whether the policy applies to the underlying claim.

Authorities: Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1154, 1168, 286 Cal.Rptr. 146 ; San Jose Crane & Rigging, Inc. v. Lexington Ins. Co. (1991) 227 Cal.App.3d 1314, 1316, 278 Cal.Rptr. 301 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This is a preliminary instruction that should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 2300A.05 defining "underlying claim." In cases involving first-party losses, a phrase descriptive of the loss should be substituted for "underlying claim." In cases involving bad faith issues as well as contractual issues, additional Instructions will be required regarding whether the insurer acted in bad faith [see MB 2300A.140 -MB 2300A.202 (instructions on bad faith)].

[3] Comment

The interpretation of a contract is a matter of law, to be decided by the court [Abifadel v. Cigna Ins. Co. (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 145, 159, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 910 ; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1154, 1168, 286 Cal.Rptr. 146]. However, the determination of the facts on which the application of an insurance contract depends is a matter for the jury [see San Jose Crane & Rigging, Inc. v. Lexington Ins. Co. (1991) 227 Cal.App.3d 1314, 1316, 278 Cal.Rptr. 301 (determination of when appreciable damage occurs, which would trigger running of limitation period contained in policy, is factual matter that should have been submitted to jury)].

CHAPTER 23A Matthew Bender Insurance Contract Instructions *

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.08

MB 2300A.08 Definition of "Primary Insurance"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

"Primary" insurance is insurance that applies immediately on the happening of the event that gives rise to a covered claim or loss.

Authorities: St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Frontier Pac. Ins. Co. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 1234, 1252-1253, 4 Cal.Rptr.3d 416 ; Century Indem. Co. v. London Underwriters (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1701, 1706-1707, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 393 ; Olympic Ins. Co. v. Employers Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 593, 597, 178 Cal.Rptr. 908 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instruction in MB 2300A.09 if it is necessary to distinguish between primary and excess insurance policies.

[3] Comment

A primary liability (third-party) insurance policy applies immediately on the happening of the occurrence that gives rise to liability [St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Frontier Pac. Ins. Co. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 1234, 1252-1253, 4 Cal.Rptr.3d 416]. The insurer providing such coverage has the primary duty to defend and indemnify, unless specific policy language excuses or excludes that duty [St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Frontier Pac. Ins. Co. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 1234, 1252-1253, 4 Cal.Rptr.3d 416].

A primary insurance policy does not specify any threshold amount that must be reached before the insurer's obligations under the policy are triggered [Olympic Ins. Co. v. Employers Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 593, 597-598, 178 Cal.Rptr. 908 ; see Century Indem. Co. v. London Underwriters (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1701, 1706-1707, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 393], although there may be a deductible amount that the insured agrees to pay on each loss. Consistent with immediate attachment of obligations, general liability policies typically specify that in resolving claims the insurer may advance the deductible on behalf of the insured, for which the insured must then reimburse the insurer.

If two or more primary policies apply to the same loss, the question of which policy pays first, and which policy or policies pay next (that is, which policies are "excess") is usually resolved by the policies' "other insurance" provisions. In some instances, statutes mandate when one primary policy will be primary and another will be "excess." If so, the statutory provisions override any policy language [see, e.g., Ins. Code § 11580.9 (automobile liability insurance if two or more policies apply to same vehicle); Wilshire Ins. Co., Inc. v. Sentry Select Ins. Co. (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 27, 35, 21 Cal.Rptr.3d 60 ; Travelers Indem. Co. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1538, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 271 ; see generally California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 50, § 50.13 (Matthew Bender)].

For further discussion, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 14 (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Primary Versus Excess Insurance: The terms "primary" and "excess" can be confusing because they are often used in two different contexts. The first context is with regard to layers of coverage. A true primary policy provides immediate coverage, as already explained. A true excess policy provides an additional layer of coverage on top of the primary policy [see MB 2300A.09]. Additional excess policies can provide further layers of coverage. The second context in which the terms "primary" and "excess" are used involves two policies at the same layer that cover the same loss--for example, if there are two true primary policies, and one is deemed to be "primary" and pay first pursuant to its "other insurance" clause. In that case, the second policy will be referred to as "excess," even though it is a primary policy. By Susan E. Firtch

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.09

MB 2300A.09 Definition of "Excess Insurance"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

"Excess" insurance is insurance that provides an additional layer of coverage that does not apply until other identified insurance coverage is longer on the risk.

Authorities: St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Frontier Pac. Ins. Co. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 1234, 1253, 4 Cal.Rptr.3d 416 ; Century Indem. Co. v. London Underwriters (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1701, 1707, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 393 ; Olympic Ins. Co. v. Employers Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 593, 598, 178 Cal.Rptr. 908 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever the applicability of an excess insurance policy is at issue. It should be used with the instruction in MB 2300A.08 if it is necessary to distinguish between primary and excess insurance.

[3] Comment

Excess insurance provides coverage after underlying primary insurance is no longer on the risk [St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Frontier Pac. Ins. Co. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 1234, 1252-1253, 4 Cal.Rptr.3d 416 ; see Padilla Constr. Co., Inc. v. Transportation Ins. Co. (2007) 150 Cal.App.4th 984, 987, 58 Cal.Rptr.3d 807]. An excess policy typically does not apply until a specified amount of losses has been paid [Century Indem. Co. v. London Underwriters (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1701, 1707, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 393 ; Olympic Ins. Co. v. Employers Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 593, 598, 178 Cal.Rptr. 908 ; see, e.g., Carmel Dev. Co. v. RLI Ins. Co. (2005) 126 Cal.App.4th 502, 510, 24 Cal.Rptr.3d 588 (one policy specifically excess); American Cas. Co. v. General Star Indem. Co. (2005) 125

Cal.App.4th 1510, 1520-1521, 24 Cal.Rptr.3d 34 (umbrella policy provided no liability coverage until exhaustion of all applicable primary policies); Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Transcontinental Ins. Co. (2004) 122 Cal.App.4th 949, 959, 19 Cal.Rptr.3d 272 (excess policy stated that excess coverage triggered when specified primary insurance is exhausted)], either by the underlying insurer or by the insured. If primary insurance exists, liability under an excess policy does not attach until all primary insurance is exhausted, even if the total amount of primary insurance exceeds the amount contemplated in the excess policy [Community Redevelopment Agency v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 329, 339-340, 57 Cal.Rptr.2d 755 ; North River Ins. Co. v. American Home Assurance Co. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 108, 114-115, 257 Cal.Rptr. 129 ; Olympic Ins. Co. v. Employers Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 593, 600, 178 Cal.Rptr. 908 ; see also Iolab Corp. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 15 F.3d 1500, 1504]. If no primary insurance exists, the insured must pay a threshold amount, referred to as a self-insured retention (or an "SIR"). An SIR is a form of self-insurance [Nabisco, Inc. v. Transport Indem. Co. (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 831, 835, 192 Cal.Rptr. 207 ; see Forecast Homes, Inc. v. Steadfast Ins. Co. (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 1466, 1473-1474, 105 Cal.Rptr.3d 200 ; General Star Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 1586, 1593, 55 Cal.Rptr.2d 322 ; United States Elevator Corp. v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1989) 215 Cal.App.3d 636, 646, 263 Cal.Rptr. 760]. In some respects, self-insurance retentions are equivalent to primary liability insurance, and policies that are subject to SIRs are "excess policies" that have no duty to indemnify until the SIR is exhausted [see Forecast Homes, Inc. v. Steadfast Ins. Co. (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 1466, 1474, 105 Cal.Rptr.3d 200]. However, the analogy between "primary" and "excess" insurance should not be carried too far; an SIR is not the same as primary insurance for all purposes [Forecast Homes, Inc. v. Steadfast Ins. Co. (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 1466, 1474, 105 Cal.Rptr.3d 200], and is not considered when determining whether all primary insurance is exhausted [Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Imperial Cas. & Indem. Co. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 356, 369, 97 Cal.Rptr.2d 44].

In some cases, excess policies have applied even though the primary insurer was insolvent and had paid no losses at all [see, e.g., Reserve Ins. Co. v. Pisciotto (1982) 30 Cal.3d 800, 815, 180 Cal.Rptr. 628, 640 P.2d 764 ; Fageol Truck & Coach Co. v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1941) 18 Cal.2d 748, 751, 117 P.2d 669]. The decisions in those cases have been based on the particular language of the excess policy in question. In any given case, the actual policy language should control [Reserve Ins. Co. v. Pisciotto (1982) 30 Cal.3d 800, 814, 180 Cal.Rptr. 628, 640 P.2d 764].

For further discussion, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 14, Excess Insurance and the Primary/Excess Relationship (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Primary Versus Excess Insurance: Excess insurance is a complicated issue. Additionally, the terms "primary" and "excess" can be confusing because they are often used in two different contexts. The first context is with regard to layers of coverage. A true primary policy provides immediate coverage [see MB 2300A.08]. A true excess policy provides an additional layer of coverage on top of the primary policy, as already explained. Additional excess policies can provide further layers of coverage. The second context in which the terms "primary" and "excess" are used involves two policies at the same layer that cover the same loss--for example, if there are two true primary policies, and one is deemed to be "primary" and pay first pursuant to its "other insurance" clause. In that case, the second policy will be referred to as "excess," even though it is a primary policy. By Rex Heeseman and Susan E. Firtch

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.10

MB 2300A.10 Layers of Insurance Coverage

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[Insured] bought insurance on a yearly basis, and in layers. In other words, for each year [insured] had several insurance policies, consisting of one primary policy and several excess policies. Each policy must be considered individually to determine whether it would apply to this claim. In other words, you must consider [insured]'s claims for insurance benefits separately for each year of coverage and for each policy.

Authority: Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 835, 844, 140 Cal.Rptr. 493 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used with the instructions in MB 2300A.08 and MB 2300A.09 (defining primary and excess insurance), if the dispute involves both primary and excess insurance over more than one policy year. Counsel should also consider the instruction in MB 2300A.72 concerning the exhaustion of underlying insurance. This instruction may be modified to reflect only one layer of coverage, only one year of coverage, or the existence of a self-insured retention or other layer of self-insurance.

[3] Comment

All insurance policies have policy limits, so that the insurer is only obligated within specified amounts. For protection above the amount provided by a given policy, the insured may buy an additional "layer" of insurance. For example, in one case the insured (itself an insurance company) had a primary policy with limits of $20,000, a first layer excess policy providing coverage from $20,000 up to $2 million, and a second layer excess policy providing coverage from $2 million to $2.5 million [Olympic Ins. Co. v. Employers Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1981) 126 Cal.App.3d 593, 178 Cal.Rptr. 908].

In determining whether a particular policy provides coverage, the court or the jury must consider that policy alone as if no other insurance is available [Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 835, 844, 140 Cal.Rptr. 493].

The existence of a retained limit does not mean that the policyholder has no insurance; instead, it is simply a form of self-insurance [Nabisco, Inc. v. Transport Indem. Co. (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 831, 835, 192 Cal.Rptr. 207 ; Lovy v. State Farm Ins. Co. (1981) 117 Cal.App.3d 834, 859, 173 Cal.Rptr. 307].

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.11

MB 2300A.11 Definition of "Insurance Broker"

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An "insurance broker" is a person who, for compensation and on behalf of the insured, transacts insurance with, but not on behalf of, an insurer.

Authorities: Ins. Code § 33; Century Sur. Co. v. Crosby Ins., Inc. (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 116, 125, 21 Cal.Rptr.3d 115

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to define an insurance broker if a broker's actions are at issue. It should be used with the instruction in MB 2300A.12, which explains that a broker is the agent of the insured.

[3] Comment

The terms "insurance agent" and "insurance broker" are defined by statute [Ins. Code §§ 31, 33]. Although the term "insurance agent" is often used colloquially by insureds to refer to a person acting on their behalf [Loehr v. Great Republic Ins. Co. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 727, 733, 276 Cal.Rptr. 667], and although the common law meaning of "agent" applies to such a person, the Insurance Code specifies that an "insurance agent" acts on behalf of the insurer, and an "insurance broker" acts on behalf of the insured [Ins. Code §§ 31, 33; Century Sur. Co. v. Crosby Ins., Inc. (2004) 124 Cal.App.4th 116, 125, 21 Cal.Rptr.3d 115]. An insurance agent may be the agent of several insurers at the same time [Ins. Code § 1704(a)].

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. Definitions and Preliminary Instructions

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.12

MB 2300A.12 Broker Is Agent of Insured

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

By law, an "insurance broker" is the agent of the insured, and not of the insurer.

Authority: Marsh & McLennan of Cal., Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 108, 117-118, 132 Cal.Rptr. 796 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 2300A.11 to make clear that a broker works for the insured and that a broker's actions are attributable to the insured, not the insurer. It applies if the actions of an insurance broker are at issue and there is no issue of dual agency. The instruction is not appropriate if there is evidence in the case that supports a finding of dual agency [Loehr v. Great Republic Ins. Co. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 727, 734, 276 Cal.Rptr. 667].

[3] Comment

An insurance broker is an agent of the insured and not of the insurer [Marsh & McLennan of Cal., Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 108, 117-118, 132 Cal.Rptr. 796]. The Insurance Code defines a broker as one who works on behalf of the insured [Ins. Code § 33], and an agent as one who works on behalf of the insurer [Ins. Code § 31]. However, these roles are not mutually exclusive. The same person may on occasion act on behalf of both the insured and the insurer, and in that case may be the common law agent of both [Kurtz, Richards, Wilson & Co. v. Insurance Communicators Mktg. Corp. (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1249, 1257-1258, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 259 ; Loehr v. Great Republic Ins. Co. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 727, 734, 276 Cal.Rptr. 667]. If the evidence supports a finding of dual agency, it is error to instruct the jury that only one agency relationship may exist [Loehr v. Great Republic Ins. Co. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 727, 732-734, 276 Cal.Rptr. 667 ; see Kurtz, Richards, Wilson & Co. v. Insurance Communicators Mktg. Corp. (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 1249, 1257-1258, 16 Cal.Rptr.2d 259 (existence of dual agency is question for trier of fact)].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Job Title Not Determinative: In a dual agency situation, the same person can act on behalf of both the insured and the insurer. Accordingly, the person's job title alone does not necessarily dictate whether the person is the agent of the insurer, the insured, or both. By Ronald Oster

By law, an "insurance broker" does not have the duties of an insurer.

Authority: Kotlar v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 1116, 1123, 100 Cal.Rptr.2d 246 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in conjunction with the instruction in MB 2300A.12 to clarify that a broker's duties to an insured are different than an insurer's duties to an insured. It applies if the actions of an insurance broker towards the insured are at issue. For example, although an insurer is obligated to provide notice of cancellation of the policy [see, e.g., Ins. Code § 2071], a broker has no such duty [Kotlar v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 1116, 1123, 100 Cal.Rptr.2d 246].

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

2. Burden of Proof and General Principles

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.20

MB 2300A.20 Insured's Burden of Proof

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[Insured] contends that [he/she/it] is entitled to benefits under an insurance policy issued by [insurer].

Two of the components of an insurance policy are the coverage grant and the exclusions. I will instruct you shortly on the meaning and operation of the terms of the coverage grant that are in dispute in this case.

[Insured] has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all of the facts necessary to establish that the [loss/damages claimed in the underlying lawsuit] fall[s] within the terms of the coverage grant.

Authorities: Whittaker Corp. v. Allianz Underwriters, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 1236, 1244, 14 Cal.Rptr.2d 659 ; Central Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 926, 932, 3 Cal.Rptr.2d 622 ; Dyer v. Northbrook Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1540, 1547, 259 Cal.Rptr. 298 ; Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Whitaker (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 532, 537, 226 Cal.Rptr. 435 (third-party); Giddings v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1980) 112 Cal.App.3d 213, 218-220, 169 Cal.Rptr. 278 (third-party).

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used whenever the application of the policy's coverage grant is an issue. It applies to both first-party and third-party disputes. The instruction should be used in conjunction with specific instructions on the facts that the insured must prove to establish that the coverage grant applies.

For an instruction defining the plaintiff's burden of proof, see CACI No. 200.

[3] Comment

The insured has the burden of proving that a loss falls within the coverage grant [Intel Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 1551, 1557 ; Whittaker Corp. v. Allianz Underwriters, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 1236, 1244, 14 Cal.Rptr.2d 659 ; Central Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 926, 932, 3 Cal.Rptr.2d 622 ; Dyer v. Northbrook Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1540, 1547, 259 Cal.Rptr. 298 ; Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Whitaker (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 532, 537, 226 Cal.Rptr. 435 (third-party); Giddings v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1980) 112 Cal.App.3d 213, 218-220, 169 Cal.Rptr. 278 (third-party)]. Conversely, the insurer has the burden of proving the applicability of any exclusions [Intel Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 1551, 1557, 1561 ; Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Whitaker (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 532, 537, 226 Cal.Rptr. 435 ; see MB 2300A.21 (insurer's burden of proof on exclusions)]. Once the insurer has proven that an exclusion applies, the burden then shifts back to the insured to prove that the loss falls within any exception to the exclusion, because an exception to an exclusion is in the nature of a coverage grant [Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 1183, 1191-1192, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213 ; Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Superior Court (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1440, 1454-1455, 75 Cal.Rptr.2d 54]. However, this rule does not apply to an "all risk" policy or other policy in which losses are covered unless excluded [Strubble v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 498, 504, 110 Cal.Rptr. 828].

It is not always immediately apparent what is the coverage grant and what is an exclusion, and both a grant of coverage and exclusionary language may be found together. For example, in one case, a federal district court held that under the terms of the policy in question, the term "occurrence," although contained within the coverage grant, was effectively an exclusion and that the insurer therefore had the burden of proving that no "occurrence" had taken place [Clemco Indus. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1987) 665 F.Supp. 816, 820 , aff'd, 848 F.2d 1242 (9th Cir. 1988)]. Other decisions have placed the burden of proving an occurrence on the insured [see, e.g., Dyer v. Northbrook Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1540, 1546-1549, 259 Cal.Rptr. 298].

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[Insurer] has asserted that the policy does not apply to the [loss/underlying lawsuit], based in part on certain exclusions contained in the insurance policy. I will instruct you shortly on the meaning and operation of the exclusions at issue in this case.

[Insurer] has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all of the facts necessary to establish that an exclusion applies.

Authorities: Intel Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 1551, 1557, 1561 ; Raychem Corp. v. Federal Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1994) 853 F.Supp. 1170, 1175 ; *Clemmer v. [2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in every case in which the application of an exclusion turns on a disputed issue of fact. This instruction should be used with an instruction that explains the burden of proof generally see [CACI No. 200].

[3] Comment

The insurer has the burden of proving the applicability of any exclusions [Intel Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem.

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

[Insurer]'s policy covers only events of a fortuitous nature that do not result from fraud or misconduct.

"Fortuitous" means occurring by accident or chance, without any intention. A loss that is certain to occur is not fortuitous.

If you find that the loss claimed by [insured] was certain to occur, was inevitable, or was intentionally caused by or at the direction of [insured], then the loss was not fortuitous, and it is not covered under the insurance policy.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used in first-party property cases or in third-party liability cases in which the definition of "occurrence" includes "accident," but does not include "event" [Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Sam Harris Constr. Co., Inc. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 409, 412, 149 Cal.Rptr. 292, 583 P.2d 1335 ; United Pac. Ins. Co. v. McGuire Co. (1991) 229 Cal.App.3d 1560, 1565-1566, 281 Cal.Rptr. 375].

[3] Comment

The concept of fortuity is basic to insurance law [Hogan v. Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal.3d 553, 559-561, 91 Cal.Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825 ; Chu v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 86, 94, 274 Cal.Rptr. 20 ; Snapp v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1962) 206 Cal.App.2d 827, 830, 24 Cal.Rptr. 44]. Insurance protects against the risk of loss, not the certainty of loss [Hogan v. Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal.3d 553, 559-561, 91 Cal.Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825 ; Chatton v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 846, 860, 13 Cal.Rptr.2d 318 ; Chu v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 86, 94, 274 Cal.Rptr. 20].

Part A. GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

2. Burden of Proof and General Principles

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.23

MB 2300A.23 Willful Acts

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured.

A "willful act" is an act done with intent to cause harm, an act that carries a high probability of harm, or an act that is inherently harmful. [Insurer] has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that [insured]'s acts were willful.

If you find that [insured] willfully committed any act that caused [the loss to the property/the damage complained of in the underlying lawsuit] then [insured] is not entitled to be indemnified for that [loss/damage] under the policy.

Authorities: Ins. Code § 533; J.C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M.K. (1991) 52 Cal.3d 1009, 278 Cal.Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 ; Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 879-880, 151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 ; Downey Venture v. LMI Ins. Co. (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 478, 500, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 142 ; Coit Drapery Cleaners, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1595, 1603-1604, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 692 ; Shell Oil Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co. (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 715, 749, 15 Cal.Rptr.2d 815 ; Fire Ins. Exch. v. Altieri (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1352, 1359, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 360 ; Studley v. Benicia Unified Sch. Dist. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 454, 458, 281 Cal.Rptr. 631 ; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Eddy (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 958, 969, 267 Cal.Rptr. 379 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the insurer contends that the insured's act was inherently harmful or otherwise rises to the level of acts for which public policy precludes insurance [see [3], below].

LexisNexis Matthew Bender Expert Practice Tip--Caution in Using Instruction: Because "willful acts" is a complicated area of the law, counsel should carefully consider use of this instruction and the related jury argument. By Rex Heeseman

[3] Comment

Under Ins. Code § 533, an insurer may not insure against willful acts of the insured [Ins. Code § 533; see, e.g., Unified W. Grocers, Inc. v. Twin City Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2006) 457 F.3d 1106, 1111]. This statutory prohibition is implied as a part of every insurance policy [State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Eddy (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 958, 969, 267 Cal.Rptr. 379 ; Evans v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1975) 49 Cal.App.3d 537, 540, 122 Cal.Rptr. 680]. It is treated as the functional equivalent of a policy exclusion, and the insurer therefore has the burden of proving that the insured's conduct is "willful" within the meaning of Section 533 [Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 879-880, 151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 ; see Unified W. Grocers, Inc. v. Twin City Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2006) 457 F.3d 1106, 1111].

If the insured's liability is predicated on a statute that requires willful and knowing conduct, then Ins. Code § 533 applies [California Amplifier, Inc. v. RLI Ins. Co. (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 102, 116, 113 Cal.Rptr.2d 915].

Some decisions have interpreted Ins. Code § 533 as precluding coverage only if the insured had the specific intent to cause the harm or loss for which coverage is sought [see, e.g., Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 887, 151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 ; Allstate Ins. Co. v. Overton (1984) 160 Cal.App.3d 843, 849, 206 Cal.Rptr. 823]. However, more recent decisions have applied Ins. Code § 533 if: (1) the insured had only a general intent to cause harm [Fire Ins. Exch. v. Altieri (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1352, 1357-1360, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 360]; (2) the insured's act was done with wanton disregard for the harm it might cause and carried a high probability of harm [Studley v. Benicia Unified Sch. Dist. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 454, 459, 281 Cal.Rptr. 631 ; see 20th Century Ins. Co. v. Stewart (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1333, 1338-1340, 74 Cal.Rptr.2d 492 (act taken with such disregard for human life as to qualify as second degree murder fell within criminal acts exclusion of policy, even if not barred from coverage by Civ. Code § 2773, because insured did not know act was unlawful)]; or (3) the insured's act was inherently harmful [J.C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M.K. (1991) 52 Cal.3d 1009, 278 Cal.Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689]. If the insured's act is intentional and wrongful, and the harm is inherent in the act itself, Ins. Code § 533 automatically bars coverage, and the insurer is not required to show either the insured's preconceived design to inflict harm or the insured's subjective intent to harm [J.C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M.K. (1991) 52 Cal.3d 1009, 278 Cal.Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689].

Courts first applied the rule that coverage is precluded if the act is "inherently harmful" in cases involving claims arising out of sexual molestation. However, the courts subsequently have expanded its application to other contexts [see, e.g., Unified W. Grocers, Inc. v. Twin City Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2006) 457 F.3d 1106, 1113 (business actions of corporate officers); Coit Drapery Cleaners, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1595, 1603-1604, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 692 (intentional sexual harassment); B & E Convalescent Ctr. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 78, 97-98, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 894 (wrongful termination); Fire Ins. Exch. v. Altieri (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1352, 1358, 1 Cal.Rptr.2d 360 (assault and battery); see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 41, § 41.41[2][c] (Matthew Bender)]. The insured's volitional incapacity, or an "irresistible impulse," does not negate a willful act under Section 533 if the insured retains cognitive capacity [Jacobs v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 1258, 42 Cal.Rptr.2d 906]. If the insured is only vicariously liable for the willful act, Section 533 does not bar indemnity for the claim [Downey Venture v. LMI Ins. Co. (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 478, 512, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 142].

The statutory prohibition against indemnification for willful acts does not automatically preclude a duty to defend claims based on those acts [Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 263, 54 Cal.Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; Republic Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 492, 497, 273 Cal.Rptr. 331 ; Ohio Cas. Ins. Co. v. Hubbard (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 939, 943-944, 208 Cal.Rptr. 806]. The insurer and insured are free to contract for the provision of a defense to claims that cannot be indemnified. However, if there clearly is no basis for coverage, either under the policy language or because coverage is precluded by the operation of Ins. Code § 533, the duty to defend exists only if the policy expressly provides for a defense without regard to indemnification or if the policy terms lead the insured to reasonably expect a defense of the type of claim asserted [Downey Venture v. LMI Ins. Co. (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 478, 78 Cal.Rptr.2d 142 (express promise of coverage for malicious prosecution not illusory because although indemnity for insured's own willful acts is barred, defense of claims alleging such acts is not barred, nor is indemnity for insured's vicarious liability for those acts); B & E Convalescent Ctr. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 78, 100, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 894 (no duty to defend wrongful termination action for which coverage was precluded under Ins. Code § 533); see Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 263, 274, 54 Cal.Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; compare Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal.4th 1076, 1084, 17 Cal.Rptr.2d 210, 846 P.2d 792 (although Ins. Code § 533 barred coverage for sexual molestation committed by teacher, insurer had duty to defend because claim also alleged negligent conduct related to molestation); and Melugin v. Zurich Can. (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 658, 663-666, 57 Cal.Rptr.2d 781 (duty to defend because complaint alleging sexual discrimination in employment disclosed potential liability for discrimination that was not willful, which was neither uninsurable under Ins. Code § 533 nor excluded from potential coverage by policy exclusions); with Coit Drapery Cleaners, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1595, 1603-1604, 18 Cal.Rptr.2d 692 (no duty to defend sexual harassment suit against insured corporation because complaint contained no allegations of negligent conduct, and acts could not reasonably be characterized as negligent or unintentional)].

For additional discussion of the relationship between Ins. Code § 533 and the insurer's duty to defend, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 41, § 41.41[1][c], [6][a] (Matthew Bender).

Part B. CONTRACT ISSUES

1. Issuance of Policy

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.30

MB 2300A.30 Application for Policy

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An application for insurance does not constitute an insurance policy.

Authority: Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal.2d 216, 219, 137 P.2d 833 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if it is alleged that the insured submitted an application, but the insurer never accepted it.

[3] Comment

As a type of contract, an insurance policy is governed by general rules of contract law applicable to the formation of a contract. An application for insurance is simply an offer to purchase insurance that an insurer need not accept [Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal.2d 216, 219, 137 P.2d 833 ; K.C. Working Chem. Co. v. Eureka-Sec. Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1947) 82 Cal.App.2d 120, 131, 185 P.2d 832].

Acceptance is generally evidenced by delivery of a policy of insurance on the same terms on which the application was made [Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal.2d 216, 219, 137 P.2d 833]. A mere intention to accept the application does not create a contract [K.C. Working Chem. Co. v. Eureka-Sec. Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1947) 82 Cal.App.2d 120, 131, 185 P.2d 832].

However, acceptance by delivery may not be necessary if an insurer's unreasonable delay in acting on an application causes the insured reasonably to believe that the application has been accepted, and if the insured is prejudiced by that delay. Under these circumstances, the insurer may be deemed to have impliedly accepted the application, may be estopped to deny that it had not accepted the application, or may be liable in tort [Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 659, 673, 79 Cal.Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; Snyder v. Redding Motors (1955) 131 Cal.App.2d 416, 422, 280 P.2d 811].

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.31

MB 2300A.31 Quotation of Premium

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

The mere quotation of a premium for insurance coverage does not constitute a policy of insurance.

Authority: Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 26, cmt. c.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if there is an issue concerning whether an insurer issued a policy or binder of insurance, and if the only evidence is that the insurer provided a premium quotation.

[3] Comment

As a type of contract, an insurance policy is governed by general rules of contract law applicable to the formation of a contract. A premium quotation is generally an invitation for an offer (application) by a prospective insured [see Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 26, cmt. c]. Depending on its wording, the quotation may also constitute an offer [see Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 26, cmt. c; see also Leo F. Piazza Paving Co. v. Bebek & Brkich (1956) 141 Cal.App.2d 226, 230, 296 P.2d 368]. However, even if the quotation is so worded that it constitutes an offer, there must be an acceptance of the offer to create a binding insurance contract [Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal.2d 216, 219, 137 P.2d 833].

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.32

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A "certificate of insurance" is evidence that a policy of insurance was issued. However, a certificate of insurance is not an insurance policy, and it does not amend, extend, or alter the coverage provided by any policy that it refers to.

Authority: Ins. Code § 384.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if there is a dispute over the policy's existence or terms, and if a certificate of insurance has been introduced as evidence of the policy or its terms.

[3] Comment

An insurer often offers a "certificate of insurance" as evidence that the coverage stated in the certificate has been provided to the insured [see William Boyd Enters. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1991) 7 Cal.App.4th 1567, 1573-1574, 2 Cal.Rptr.2d 548 ; Merced County Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State of California (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 765, 769, 284 Cal.Rptr. 680 ; Stratton v. First Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1071, 1084-1085, 258 Cal.Rptr. 721]. This evidence is often required by construction contracts and by contracts with public entities [see Merced County Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State of California (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 765, 770-773, 284 Cal.Rptr. 680 ; Taylor Bus Serv. Inc. v. San Diego Bd. of Educ. (1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 1331, 1337, 241 Cal.Rptr. 379]. Insurers often use a certificate as evidence of coverage for individuals under a group or master insurance policy [see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 8, § 8.03[8][d] (Matthew Bender)]. In certain instances, a certificate of insurance is required by law, either from the insurer or the insured [see, e.g., Ins. Code § 655 (insurer required to file certificate with state when certain motor vehicle policies are issued); Lab. Code § 3800 (certificate of workers' compensation insurance required to obtain building permit)]. If a certificate of insurance is provided as evidence of coverage rather than a copy of the policy itself, the certificate must include a notice that the certificate is not the policy and that it does not alter the terms of the policy [Ins. Code § 384].

Part B. CONTRACT ISSUES

1. Issuance of Policy

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.33

MB 2300A.33 Insured's Duty to Read Policy

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Unless an insured has been misled by some act of the insurer, an insured who accepts and retains possession of an insurance policy is presumed to know its contents. By accepting and retaining the policy without objection, the insured is bound by its terms and conditions and may not claim that [he/she/it] did not read the policy or understand its terms.

Authorities: Sarchett v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1, 15, 233 Cal.Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267 ; Hallmark Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1019, 247 Cal.Rptr. 638 ; Hackethal v. National Cas. Co. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1102, 1112, 234 Cal.Rptr. 853 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if there is a dispute as to the terms of the policy or the enforceability of those terms arising out of the insured's lack of knowledge that the disputed terms were part of the policy.

[3] Comment

A reasonable insured will read the insurance policy to ascertain the scope of the coverage that the policy contains [Hallmark Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1019, 247 Cal.Rptr. 638]. If the insured accepts the policy without objecting to any of its terms, then the insured, as well as the insurer, is bound by the terms of the policy [Sarchett v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1, 15, 233 Cal.Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267 ; Hackethal v. National Cas. Co. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1102, 1112, 234 Cal.Rptr. 853]. This is true even if the insured did not read the policy [

Sarchett v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1, 15, 233 Cal.Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267 ; Hackethal v. National Cas. Co. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1102, 1112, 234 Cal.Rptr. 853] or did not understand the terms of the policy [Sarchett v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1, 15, 233 Cal.Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267].

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

Cancellation of an insurance policy operates to terminate the policy, from the date that the cancellation is effective forward. The insured has no protection under the policy for any [claim that is made/harm or damage that takes place/loss that the insured sustains] after the effective date of cancellation, and the insurer has no obligation to the insured with regard to any such [claim/harm or damage/loss].

Authorities: Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 659, 663 n.3, 79 Cal.Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 610, 619, 145 Cal.Rptr. 785 ; Sanborn v. Ballanfonte (1929) 98 Cal.App. 482, 488, 277 P. 152 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if there is a dispute as to whether a claim or loss is covered under a policy that was canceled.

[3] Comment

The cancellation of an insurance policy operates only prospectively from the time of cancellation [Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 659, 663 n.3, 79 Cal.Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 610, 619, 145 Cal.Rptr. 785], as distinct from rescission, which voids or extinguishes the policy ab initio [Civ. Code § 1688]. In the case of cancellation, rights already accrued continue, whereas rescission restores the parties to their pre-contract positions [Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978)]

80 Cal.App.3d 610, 619, 145 Cal.Rptr. 785 ; Sanborn v. Ballanfonte (1929) 98 Cal.App. 482, 488, 277 P. 152]. A canceled policy may still afford coverage for claims that arise prior to the cancellation [see Fraker v. Sentry Life Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 276, 282, 23 Cal.Rptr.2d 372 (existence of post-cancellation coverage depends on examination of precisely what event was insured under policy language; no continuing coverage under language of group health and disability policy)]. After rescission, by definition there is no coverage, and the contract is no longer a basis for an action between the insurer and the insured see [Oakland Cal. Towel Co. v. Roland (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 713, 716-717, 209 P.2d 854].

For many types of insurance, the permissible grounds for cancellation by the insurer are established by statute [see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 8, § 8.10[4] (Matthew Bender)].

An arbitrary cancellation of a policy is a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing [Helfand v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 869, 906, 13 Cal.Rptr.2d 295 ; see MB 2300A.140 (implied duty of good faith and fair dealing)].

For instructions on rescission, see MB 2300A.50 -MB 2300A.53.

1. Issuance of Policy

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.35MB 2300A.35 Nonrenewal[1] Instruction[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

An insurer is not required to renew an insurance policy on the expiration of its term unless the policy provides to the contrary.

[OPTIONAL (See Use of Instruction)]

A policy may be deemed to be extended by operation of law if the insurer failed to provide statutorily required notice of the insurer's intention not to renew. In this case, the insurer issued [a/an] _____ [specify type of policy, e.g., fire] insurance policy. The insurer was required to mail or deliver to the insured or the insured's agent a notice that the insurer intended not to renew the policy at least _____ days before the end of the policy period.

Authorities: Ins. Code § 663 (certain automobile policies); Ins. Code § 678 (certain property insurance policies); Ins. Code § 11580.09 (certain automobile policies); Schimmel v. NORCAL Mut. Ins. Co. (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1282, 1285-1286, 46 Cal.Rptr.2d 401 ; Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leshner (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 169, 194, 231 Cal.Rptr. 791 ; Greene v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 535, 537-538, 189 Cal.Rptr. 616 .

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used if the insured claims that the policy term has been or should have been extended beyond the period stated in the policy. The optional instruction is for use if the claim of extension is based on the insurer's alleged failure to provide a statutorily required notice of intent not to renew. These notice requirements apply to certain automobile and general liability insurance policies and differ by line of coverage involved.

[3] Comment

An insurer generally may refuse to renew a policy for any reason permitted by law or for no reason at all [Schimmel v. NORCAL Mut. Ins. Co. (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1282, 1285-1286, 46 Cal.Rptr.2d 401 ; Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leshner (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 169, 194, 231 Cal.Rptr. 791]. Impermissible reasons may include, but are not necessarily limited to, discrimination based on sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation see [Civ. Code §§ 51(b), (e), 51.5; see also Ins. Code §§ 11628(a), 11628.5 (motor vehicle liability policies)]. If the policy provides that it will be renewed on payment of the premium, the insurer may be obligated to renew the policy when payment has been made.

Certain automobile insurance and general liability insurance policies are subject to special notice requirements. Before such a policy expires, an insurer must provide an offer of renewal or a notice of nonrenewal [Ins. Code § 663 (certain automobile policies); Ins. Code § 678 (certain property insurance policies); Ins. Code § 11580.09 (certain automobile policies)]. The exact requirements vary depending on the type of insurance.

2. Rescission

1-23A California Forms of Jury Instruction MB 2300A.50

MB 2300A.50 Effect of Rescission

[1] Instruction

[PLAINTIFF'S/DEFENDANT'S] PROPOSED INSTR. NO. _____

A policy that is rescinded is void from the outset. If a policy is rescinded, the effect is the same as if the policy never existed. The insured has no rights under the policy, and the insurer has no obligations under the policy.

Authority: Civ. Code § 1688.

[2] Use of Instruction

This instruction should be used to explain that rescission eliminates all rights and obligations under the policy for any claims, whether arising before or after the date of rescission. This instruction should be used with the appropriate instruction or instructions in MB 2300A.51 (concealment), MB 2300A.52 (misrepresentation), and MB 2300A.53 (mutual mistake of fact).

For related Judicial Council instructions, see [3][c], below.

[3] Comment

[a] Effect of Rescission: Cancellation Distinguished

A contract is extinguished by its rescission [Civ. Code § 1688]. Rescission is distinct from cancellation in that rescission voids or extinguishes the policy ab initio, while cancellation operates only prospectively from the time of cancellation [Civ. Code § 1688]. In the case of cancellation, rights already accrued continue, whereas rescission restores the parties to their pre-contract positions [see Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 659, 663, 79 Cal.Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674]. After rescission, the contract is no longer a basis for an action for damages [see Oakland Cal. Towel Co. v. Roland (1949) 93 Cal.App.2d 713, 716-717, 209 P.2d 854].

For instructions on cancellation and nonrenewal, see MB 2300A.34 and MB 2300A.35.

[b] Procedure for Rescission

Rescission may be accomplished either by notice of rescission [Civ. Code § 1691(a)] or by an action for rescission [Civ. Code §§ 1692, 1693]. No particular form of notice is required. It is sufficient if the notice given clearly shows the intent to rescind [Hull v. Ray (1930) 211 Cal. 164, 167-168, 294 P. 700]. However, notice alone is not enough--the party giving the notice must actually be entitled to rescind [Leland v. Craddock (1947) 83 Cal.App.2d 84, 87, 187 P.2d 803 ; see Civ. Code § 1689 (grounds for rescission)]. A cautious insurer will therefore both give notice and file suit. Additionally, the rescinding party must restore all consideration received to the other party, or offer to do so on condition that the other party do the same. However, the offer to restore is not necessary if the other party is unable or unwilling to comply [Civ. Code § 1691(b)].
