CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers the role of the attorney in starting a new business. It discusses the scope of the attorney's role; the attorney's relationship with other professionals such as accountants, insurance agents, and business consultants; and professional responsibility considerations. Although a complete discussion of legal ethics is outside the scope of this chapter, the following ethical issues are discussed: competent representation; association of specialists; confidentiality; conflicts of interest, including representing multiple parties, representing the business entity, the attorney as investor, officer, or director; and minimizing conflicts risks. Also covered is the selection of a business name and the filing of a fictitious business name statement. Trade names, trademarks, and service marks, as they relate to business names, are briefly discussed.

Forms include consents to legal services; letters requesting consents from adverse clients and from clients on conflict of interest issues; engagement, nonengagement, and closing letters; and a fictitious business name statement.

For detailed coverage of selecting a form of business entity and starting operations, refer to Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity , Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers , Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses , and Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation . For further discussion of the considerations in selecting a business name, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations , Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations , Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies , Ch. 15, General Partnerships , Ch. 15A, Formation of Limited Partnerships , and Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships . Trade names, trademarks, and service marks are discussed in Ch. 103B, Trademarks .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Role of Counsel

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.10

§ 1A.10 Advising Client on Business Start-Up Issues

[1] Ensuring That Client Makes Informed Decisions

When a new business is started, decisions must be made about the form of the enterprise and its structure, including management and control, financing, tax elections, employment relationships, and insurance coverage. If the client has made these decisions before consulting the attorney, the attorney should review the decisions with the client to ensure that the client has made informed decisions. The aspiring entrepreneur should be made aware that many new businesses fail. While external difficulties contribute to many failures, management experts generally agree that the inability to cope with these difficulties often results from management inexperience and a lack of knowledge and planning. Thus, one of the greatest services an attorney can perform in a business start-up is to provide the client with a checklist of typical issues to be resolved in selecting a form of business entity and in starting operations [see [2], below] and to emphasize the need for assistance to fill in any gap in expertise [see [3], below].

[2] Specific Issues in Start-Up of New Business

The additional chapters in this volume are designed to provide guidance in starting a new business. Chapter 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity , outlines the various business forms available under California law and provides an overview of the tax and non-tax consequences of choosing a particular form. Chapter 1C, Regulation of Employers, discusses the scope, application, and requirements of laws regulating employers, including a discussion of licensing and registration requirements, environmental regulations, laws governing the hiring and promotion of employees, and the existence of the employer/employee relationship. Chapter 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits, discusses employee benefit programs and alternatives that businesses may want to offer their owners, participants, and employees. Chapter 1E, Taxation of Businesses, outlines various federal and California tax reporting and payment requirements that will arise for a new business, including income tax, withholding and employment tax, sales and use tax, and property tax considerations. Chapter 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation, covers classes of insurance, types of policies, and insurance planning considerations for a new business.

[3] Need for Business Plan

A client who consults an attorney with respect to starting a business should already be knowledgeable about the type of business or business product, the nature of the market, and have a business plan, addressing specific goals and business objectives. Without such a plan, discussions of the appropriate form of business entity and other start-up considerations are futile. A client who does not yet have a business plan may wish to hire a business consultant, or seek the assistance of the Small Business Administration, which provides counseling, literature, and training workshops at its various offices throughout California. An attorney with a background in business management or business administration might also be able to help the client prepare a plan [see § 1A.12].

The financing considerations of a new business should be addressed by the business participants in consultation with a financial and tax advisor and a business banker. An attorney with financial, tax, or banking experience may wish to be involved in the decisions on business financing [see § 1A.12].

Other basic considerations should include the location and type of premises to be used for the business, significant assets to be purchased, private loans to be obtained, and any agreements to be entered into at the onset of the business venture.

[4] Advising Client Without Dictating Choices

Many of the issues for which an attorney is consulted in starting a new business do not have one correct answer. For example, even in cases where another organizational form appears preferable to the one traditionally used, the business owner may opt to use that form because he or she is "more comfortable" following tradition [see ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity]. In such circumstances, the attorney should be careful to fully inform the client of the legal ramifications of the client's choice, without dictating the client's choice.

§ 1A.11 Attorney's Relationship With Other Professionals

As part of setting up a new business, the attorney typically collects information from the client and from other sources, analyzes the information, researches any problem areas, and advises the client regarding each major decision to be made. The attorney must work closely not only with the client, but also with the client's accountant or tax advisor, business consultant, insurance agent, lenders, and any key employees. It should be clearly established from the outset who will make or participate in making each decision in forming and structuring the new business. Even if someone else is primarily responsible for tax planning, the attorney should arrange to be kept informed of any tax decisions, since there is a close relationship between tax considerations and structuring the new business.

§ 1A.12 Collateral Work to be Performed by Attorney

The number of attorneys who practice simultaneously in law and in other fields, such as financial planning, is increasing, as is the number of interdisciplinary teams (including attorneys, accountants, financial planners, insurance, real estate and securities brokers) that provide the client with a full range of business planning services. The client may want the attorney to perform services that are incidental to getting the business started. Such services may include helping the client obtain business licenses, permits, and insurance, obtaining bonds, reviewing proposed leases or purchase contracts, preparing employment agreements or buy-sell agreements, applying for a federal and state employer identification numbers, preparing and filing a Subchapter S corporation election, obtaining a permit from the California Department of Corporations for issuing or offering shares or other securities, preparing an offering circular, selecting and obtaining a business name, or counseling participants regarding financing and the valuation of contributions to the business.

Whether the attorney performs collateral tasks or works as part of an interdisciplinary team, the responsibility for each task should be clearly established from the outset. For discussion of the attorney's obligation to consult or associate with a specialist when the attorney does not have the requisite level of skill to complete the work properly, refer to § 1A.32[2].

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.13

§ 1A.13 Explaining Cost and Time Requirements to Client

[1] Analysis and Consultation

The most valuable service an attorney usually provides is to collect and analyze pertinent facts and to research any resulting issues necessary to working out a business structure that will achieve the most satisfying results for the client. This process can be time-consuming. For example, the attorney may have to analyze the tax and non-tax consequences of choosing a particular organizational form to determine which form provides the client the greatest overall benefits [see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity], or the attorney may have to evaluate alternate funding methods for a buy-sell agreement [see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations] or draft the agreement itself [see, Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements]. These issues will ordinarily be discussed with the client at the first meeting; both the attorney and the client should clearly understand the work to be performed and the resulting time and cost of that work. It is good business practice to send a follow-up letter confirming this understanding [see § 1A.200]. Written fee agreements are discussed in § 1A.14.

[2] Preparing Documents

Many clients have misconceptions about how much time it takes to prepare customized documents, perhaps as a result of standardized forms and self-help handbooks. An occasional task may present no legal issues and can be routinely processed, using standardized forms, in a short period of time for a small fee; however, this is the exception rather than the rule. In most cases, preparing documents is a time-consuming and costly process.

[3] Fees for Collateral Work Performed by Attorney

The attorney and client should discuss at the first meeting which tasks the attorney will handle and which tasks the client will either handle directly or by retaining another professional to handle [see §§ 1A.11, 1A.12]. Any fees for additional work to be performed by the attorney should be discussed and agreed on in advance, so that there is no assumption on the part of the client that such ancillary fees are included in the consultation fees. For discussion of fees and fee agreements, refer to § 1A.14.

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.14

§ 1A.14 Fee Agreements and Billing Statements

[1] Agreement at Outset of Relationship

Fees and any special fee payment arrangements should be discussed and agreed upon at the onset of the attorney-client relationship: this reduces the likelihood of misunderstandings and future disagreements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148]. It is good practice to summarize the arrangements in a written fee and representation agreement, even when not required by statute [see [2], [3], below] so as to clearly define the fee arrangement and the responsibilities of the attorney and client under the contract.

[2] Written Fee Agreements

A California attorney who represents a client on a noncontingency basis must have a written fee agreement with the client whenever it is reasonably foreseeable that the client's total expense, including fees, will exceed $1,000 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)]. The fee agreement must include [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)]:

- The attorney's hourly rate and other standard rates;
- The general nature of the legal services to be provided to the client;
- The respective responsibilities of the attorney and the client under the agreement; and
- A disclosure statement if the attorney does not maintain errors and omissions insurance coverage in the amount prescribed by statute.

Additionally, a disclosure statement is required if the attorney does not maintain the errors and omission coverage required by the Business and Professions Code and has not filed with the State Bar an executed copy of a written agreement guaranteeing payment of all established claims for errors and omissions arising out of the attorney's practice of law in the amount specified by the Law Corporation Rules of the State Bar [see State Bar Law Corp. Rules, Rule IV(B)(1)]; or, if a law corporation, the attorney has not filed with the State Bar an executed copy of the written agreement required pursuant to the Law Corporation Rules of the State Bar, Rule IV(B)(1)(a), (b), or (c).

If the attorney fails to comply with the statutory requirements, the fee agreement generally becomes voidable at the client's option [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(c)]. However, even if the agreement is voided by the client, the attorney is entitled to collect a "reasonable" fee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(c)]. Refer to Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services, for sample written fee agreement forms. Sample forms approved by the State Bar of California Board of Governors may be obtained from the State Bar for a small fee.

[3] Oral Fee Agreements

Unless it is for a contingency fee [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147], an oral fee agreement is enforceable when one of the following applies:

- It is reasonably foreseeable that the client's total expense, including fees and costs, will not exceed $1,000 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)];
- Foreseeable prejudice to the rights or interests of a client presents an emergency need for legal services or when a writing is otherwise impractical [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)(1)];
- The fee agreement is implied in fact by prior services of the same general nature rendered by the attorney and paid for by the client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)(2)];
- The client, after full disclosure, makes a written waiver of the benefits of Business and Professions Code Section 6148 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)(3)];
- The client is a corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)(4)].

[4] Written Billing Statements

Attorneys are required to provide their clients with written billing statements, clearly stating the method used to determine the attorney's fees [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(b)]. A client may demand such a statement at minimum intervals of 30 days; the attorney must provide a statement within 10 days after the demand [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(b)].

Second, the attorney must maintain the confidentiality of information related to the client's representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(F); see Bus. and Prof. Code § 6068(e)]. Finally, the attorney must obtain the client's informed, written consent [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(F)]. For further discussion of fees and fee agreements, refer to Section 1A.14.

§ 1A.17 Continuing Nature of Representation

An attorney is required to keep clients reasonably informed of significant developments in matters with regard to which the attorney has agreed to provide legal services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(m)]. There is not much litigation in this area and case law has yet to establish the extent of this duty. As a practical matter, the attorney should point out to the client the effect that any change in the client's personal life can have on business planning; for example, with regard to insurance considerations. It has been suggested that the attorney has a duty to contact the client after the initial representation is completed if the attorney promises to keep the client informed of future changes in the law relevant to the client or if the relationship between the attorney and client is such that the attorney should do so, as in the case of an attorney who is closely involved in a client's affairs on an ongoing basis.

Given the current uncertainty in the law, the attorney should deal explicitly with the scope of representation in either the engagement letter or the closing letter to the client [see § 1A.202].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Legal Malpractice and Ethical Considerations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.30

§ 1A.30 Elements of Legal Malpractice Cause of Action

[1] Negligence Theory

[a] In General

California law treats legal malpractice claims in the same manner as other tort claims based on negligence by a professional [see Bucquet v. Livingston (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 914, 921, 129 Cal. Rptr. 514] . The key elements of a cause of action for legal malpractice are [see Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; Bucquet v. Livingston (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 914, 920-921, 129 Cal. Rptr. 514] :

- The attorney's duty to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of the profession commonly possess and exercise;
- The attorney's breach of the duty by failing to perform with the requisite degree of skill;
- A proximate causal connection between the attorney's negligence and the injury; and
- Damage to the client.

For complete coverage of an attorney's liability for malpractice, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Responsibility (Matthew Bender).

[b] Duty of Attorney and Standard of Care

In performing professional services for a client, an attorney has the duty to have that degree of learning and skill ordinarily possessed by reputable attorneys practicing in the same or a similar locality and under similar circumstances [California Jury Instructions Civil: Book of Approved Jury Instructions (1986) §§ 6.37, 6.37.5; see Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 523, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592] .

[c] "Error in Judgment" Rule

While the standard of care required of an attorney is high, it is not tantamount to perfection [see Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] . An attorney may be absolved from malpractice liability if, although mistaken, his or her opinion represents a reasonable exercise of informed judgment grounded on a professional evaluation of applicable legal principles. A claim of professional negligence cannot be founded on an error of judgment on a question of law [Davis v. Damrell (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 883, 888, 174 Cal. Rptr. 257] .

[2] Breach of Contract Theory

California courts have also held that in failing to exercise reasonable care, an attorney may be found to have breached an implied duty to exercise the reasonable skill, care, and diligence implied in the contract for services entered into between attorney and client [see, e.g., Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591-592, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] . Although an attorney may agree to perform a particular task, thus creating an express contract [see Lindner v. Eichel (1962) 232 N.Y.S.2d 240, 243 , aff'd, 233 N.Y.S.2d 238], more commonly, an attorney impliedly agrees to act with ordinary professional skill [see, e.g., Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591-592, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] . Thus, a plaintiff frequently pleads a malpractice action on the alternate theories of negligence and breach of contract.

[3] Other Theories

An attorney may be liable to a client on the theories of breach of fiduciary duty or fraud [Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1159, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1048, 106 S. Ct. 1267, 89 L. Ed. 2d 576 (1986)] . Intentional misrepresentations about the law and legal principles may give rise to fraud claims to the extent that a client justifiably relies on those statements [see Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1159-1160, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1048, 106 S. Ct. 1267, 89 L. Ed. 2d 576 (1986) ; Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 111, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] .

B. Legal Malpractice and Ethical Considerations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.31

§ 1A.31 Professional Responsibility Considerations

[1] Codes of Legal Ethics

Legal ethics for attorneys are codified in a number of places, including: The California Rules of Professional Conduct; the California Business and Professions Code [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6000-6326]; the American Bar Association Model Code of Professional Responsibility; and the American Bar Association Model Rules of Professional Conduct. Of particular interest to California attorneys are The California Rules of Professional Conduct, which were substantially revised effective May, 1989 and amended in September, 1992.

For complete coverage of an attorney's professional responsibilities, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics (Matthew Bender).

[2] Relationship Between Malpractice and Ethics

With increasing frequency, issues that have traditionally been considered "ethical" issues are making their way into the area of legal malpractice. Notwithstanding the disclaimer in both the California Rules of Professional Conduct and the American Bar Association Model Rules of Professional Responsibility that they are not "intended to create new civil causes of action" [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1-100(A); see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1-100, discussion (member engaging in conduct contrary to rules does not automatically give rise to civil cause of action); A.B.A. Model Rules of Prof. Resp., amended 1991, scope, p. 9 (rules "not designed to be a basis for civil liability")], recent court decisions in malpractice suits have interpreted these standards as rules of law, rather than rules of conduct, compelling (rather than suggesting) the described conduct [see Mirabito v. Liccardo (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 41, 45-46, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571 (and cited antecedent cases)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Legal Malpractice and Ethical Considerations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.32

§ 1A.32 Duty to Perform Competently

[1] In General

An attorney has the duty to perform legal services competently [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-110; A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond. (1983), Rules 1.1, 1.3]. Counseling a client on choice of business form, for example, can involve many areas of law, including not only corporation law, but also federal and state taxation law related to corporate, partnership and individual income taxation, estate planning, property law, contract law, and federal and state securities regulation. The attorney should become fully informed regarding the legal and procedural aspects of each task undertaken and should consult with an expert when appropriate [see [2], below].

[2] Specialist Standard

A general practitioner has the duty to refer a client to a specialist or to recommend the assistance of a specialist if a reasonably careful, skillful practitioner would do so under similar circumstances; alternatively, the general practitioner has the duty to perform with the knowledge, care, and skill required of a specialist under similar circumstances [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; see also [3], below]. A defense based on the argument that the attorney's conduct met the standard of care expected of a general practitioner when a specialist was required will not suffice in a legal malpractice case [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809-810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

[3] Duty to Refer

If an attorney faces a problem requiring the expertise of a specialist, the attorney should associate such a specialist or refer the matter to a specialist [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] . However, the attorney must exercise due care in referring to or associating another attorney: the attorney who decides to associate other counsel may be deemed liable to the extent that he or she does not adequately investigate the qualifications of the associated attorney [Tormo v. Yormark (D.N.J. 1975) 398 F. Supp. 1159, 1171-1172 (attorney could be liable for negligent referral because he did not investigate qualifications of associated attorney who subsequently embezzled client's funds)]. Furthermore, if the client is referred to another attorney, the original attorney must take care to warn the client of any deadline or other time-related exigencies [see Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 42, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22 (initially consulted attorney who referred client to specialist attorney could be liable for failure to warn client of eight-day deadline on statute of limitations)].

CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Legal Malpractice and Ethical Considerations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.33

§ 1A.33 Identifying Conflicts of Interest

[1] Identifying the Client

An attorney who is asked to assist in the start-up of a new business must first ascertain which party the attorney represents: the entity itself, a single participant, some or all of the participants, or a combination of these parties. Unless the attorney chooses not to represent more than one party [see § 1A.34[4]], the initial conflict of interest disclosure letter should identify those represented [see § 1A.203].

[2] Representing the Business Entity

[a] Nature of Representation

In representing a business entity, the attorney representation must conform to the concept that the client is "the organization itself, acting through its highest authorized officer, employee, body, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement" [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(A); see Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290, 301 P.2d 10 (attorney for corporation represents corporation and its shareholders and officers in their representative capacity; attorney does not represent corporation's officers personally)]. Whenever it becomes apparent that the entity's interests are or may become adverse to those of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, the attorney must identify the client for whom the attorney is acting [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(D); see A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1.13; see also Johnson v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 463, 477-478, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312 (merely representing partnership does not constitute representing partners, since various factors must be considered in determining whether partnership's attorney has established attorney-client relationship with partners)].

[b] Disclosure Required When Constituents Also Represented

An attorney representing an entity may also represent its constituents, provided that the attorney makes a written disclosure to the client in accordance with The California Rules of Professional Conduct 3-310(B) and discloses his or her relationship to the entity [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Dual representation of clients whose interests conflict is permitted, under certain circumstances, if the attorney obtains the written consent of each client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E); see Pringle v. La Chapelle (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1005-1007, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 90 (although attorney failed to follow Rule 3-600(E), violation of rule does not automatically preclude attorney from obtaining fees)]. Caution should be exercised, however, in dual representation when an actual conflict of interest exists [see § 1A.34[1]]. Even without an actual conflict, under some circumstances, an attorney should not undertake multiple representation [see § 1A.34[3]]. For discussion of the conflict of interest issues that may arise once a new business is up and running if the attorney represents a client he or she represented during the business formation, refer to § 1A.34[3].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Legal Malpractice and Ethical Considerations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.34

§ 1A.34 Representing Multiple Parties

[1] Duty to Identify Conflict

In a business start-up, it is not uncommon for the parties to request that one attorney represent the entity itself, as well as the individual participants. Under the right circumstances, having one attorney represent all parties can result in a simpler, less expensive, and more harmonious transaction than if each party were represented by separate counsel. However, an attorney who is asked to represent multiple parties to a single transaction must first identify any actual or potential conflict and then determine whether the conflict may be waived. If the conflict may be waived, a suitable waiver must be obtained [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C); see also § 1A.203].

Although it appears, under the California Rules of Professional Conduct, that an attorney may represent clients with actual or potential conflicting interests, provided each client gives its informed, written consent [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)], California courts have held that joint representation is not permitted in litigation, if an actual conflict exists [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . However, if the conflict is merely potential, then with full disclosure to and informed consent of all clients, there may be multiple representation at a hearing or trial [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . Joint representation is also permitted, in a nonlitigation context, provided that all parties give their informed, written consent [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

[2] Duty to Inform Client

An attorney seeking to represent multiple parties must inform each client of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and foreseeable adverse consequences to the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. Generally, an attorney must disclose, in understandable terms, all facts and circumstances that, in the judgment of an attorney of ordinary skill and capacity, will enable the client to make an intelligent decision on multiple representation [Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 147, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406 (decided before amendment of Rule 3-310)]. The attorney should caution the client that multiple representation limits the attorney-client communications privilege, because communications by one client to an attorney on issues that affect multiple representation are not privileged when the communication is offered in a civil action between those clients [Evid. Code § 962; Wortham & Van Liew v. Superior Court (1987) 188

Cal. App 3d 927, 933, 233 Cal. Rptr. 725] .

Even if the attorney identifies no current conflicts of interest, potential conflicts may exist because the parties' interest, often identical in a business start-up, may differ as the business progresses. The attorney must anticipate and disclose "any reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences" of representation of adverse interests [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. Moreover, if the potential adversity becomes actual adversity, the attorney must obtain the further informed written consent of the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310, discussion]. Refer to Section 1A.203 [2] for an optional provision disclosing the possibility of a potential conflict when no actual conflict exists.

[3] When Multiple Representation Is Inadvisable

Even when the disclosure and consent requirements of the California Rules of Professional Conduct have been met [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310], it may be inadvisable for an attorney to represent more than one party to the transaction. For example, unless the attorney is careful to distinguish between the business entity and its participants, the attorney risks representing the business inadequately. Furthermore, when multiple parties are involved, difficulties in communication and consensus may make multiple representation impractical. Also, if an actual conflict exists that is likely to be litigated, or if the participants' interests will likely conflict in the future, the attorney may be required (when an actual present conflict exists at hearing or at trial) to withdraw and may be disqualified from representing any of the parties, even if disclosure was made and consent properly obtained [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . Under these circumstances, both the client's and the attorney's best interests may dictate that the attorney avoid multiple representation.

[4] Choosing to Represent One Client

Attorneys sometimes choose to avoid potential or actual conflicts of interest, or the practical problems of multiple representation [see [3], above], by representing only one party to the transaction. In these circumstances, it is important to advise both the attorney's client and the other parties to the transaction that the attorney represents only a designated client and will not provide legal advice or services to the other parties. The attorney should also advise nonclients that they are free to retain independent counsel [see § 1A.201]. Written confirmation of the attorney's limited role and advice to nonclients to seek independent counsel will help protect both the attorney and nonclients from problems arising from uncertainty or misunderstandings about the attorney's role in the transaction.

§ 1A.35 Conflicts Involving Prior Representation

It is not uncommon for an attorney who represented a business or one of its participants in a business start-up to be asked to represent the business or some or all of the participants in another matter once the business is operational. In this situation, the attorney must fully disclose, in writing, to the current client any previous relationships (legal, business, financial, professional, or personal) that the attorney had with any party in the same matter, or any party affected by the resolution of the matter or by the attorney's representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)(2),(3)]. "Full disclosure" means informing of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences of such representation to the client (or former client) [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)].

The attorney must obtain the current client's written consent to representation despite the attorney's previous relationships [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)]. This written disclosure of any previous relationships and the client's written consent are required, regardless of whether the interests of the current clients conflict with those of the parties with whom the attorney has had a relationship and whether the attorney has obtained confidential information related to the current representation [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B), (C)]. The disclosure must be made to and the consent obtained from the clients to be currently represented, and not clients or former clients with whom the attorney has had a relationship [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)], unless the proposed representation is (1) adverse to a current or a former client and relates to a matter for which the attorney has obtained confidential information [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(E)]; or (2) the prior relationships are with current clients [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)]. In these circumstances, the attorney must not only obtain the informed, written consent of the current client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)], but also the informed, written consent of the former or current client whose interests are adverse to the anticipated representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(E)]. "Informed consent" means the client's or former client's written agreement to the representation following written disclosure [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. A failure to obtain consent may result in the attorney's disqualification in the event of litigation [Civil Service Com. v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 82-83, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159] , as well as possible disciplinary action or malpractice.

Whether a relationship exists between an individual and an attorney and what constitutes "representation" can be difficult to define [Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 76-77, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159] , and a court may have to make that determination [see Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 301 P.2d 10 (no relationship existed between corporate counsel and former president/principal stockholder); but see Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 936, 197 Cal. Rptr. 185 (corporate counsel for family-run business could not represent shareholder husband in marital dissolution action where corporation was primary focus of dispute)].

Refer to § 1A.204 for a sample disclosure letter addressing the issues raised by prior representation. Refer to § 1A.203 for a sample disclosure letter requesting consent to represent a party whose interests are adverse to those of a current or former client.

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.36

§ 1A.36 Conflicts Involving Attorney in Other Roles

[1] Attorney as Investor

An attorney who represents clients in a start-up business venture may become an investor by accepting an interest in the venture in lieu of all or part of the attorney's fees or by simply making an investment in the client's business independent of any compensation received. An attorney who invests in a business venture with a client must comply with the following requirements [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300; see A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1.8]:

- The terms of the transaction must be fair and reasonable to the client and fully disclosed in writing to the client in a reasonably understandable manner;

- The client must be advised in writing that the client may seek independent legal advice and be given a reasonable opportunity to do so; and

- The client must consent in writing to the transaction.

Although the advisability of investing in a client's business is outside the scope of this chapter, conflict of interest issues may be intensified in a dispute where the attorney is involved as both investor and counsel. If the attorney does decide to invest, the investment should be at the same price and on the same terms as other investors to help establish its fair and reasonable terms [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300(A)]. As a practical matter, if an attorney is to receive a share in the business as compensation for services, it is advisable to bill the client at the attorney's regular rates and then, separately, to invest in the business at the same price and terms as the other investors. Moreover, an attorney who accepts stock in lieu of fees should bear in mind the tax consequences of such a transaction [see I.R.C. § 61; Treas. Reg. § 1.61-2(d)(4) (stock received as compensation taxed at fair market value at time of transfer)].

[2] Attorney as Corporate Agent, Director, or Officer

An attorney who files the articles of incorporation for a new corporation often serves as the initial agent for service of process [see Corp. Code § 201(c) (name and address of corporation's agent for service of process required in articles of incorporation)], until another agent is appointed at the initial organizational meeting [see Chs. 2, Formation of Corporations , 3, Articles of Incorporation]; this service does not ordinarily raise conflict of interest issues. Additionally, attorneys are frequently asked to serve as directors or officers for a corporation for which they have done the incorporation work, and it is not unusual for an attorney to occupy the position of corporate secretary [see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports].

Serving as an officer or director of a corporation can present several disadvantages to the attorney, however. It may increase the possibility of conflicts of interest [see § 1A.33]. It may result in the waiving of the attorney-client communication privilege [see § 1A.34[2]]. It may increase the attorney's malpractice exposure, either by establishing a higher standard of conduct for the attorney than for a non-attorney, or through the reliance of others on the attorney's statements as legal advice when those statements were not so intended. Further, if the attorney is compensated for acting as a corporate director or officer, the California Rules of Professional Conduct may require fairness to the client, full disclosure in writing, and the consent of the client in writing [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300; A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1.8; see also [1], above].

[3] Attorney as Witness

Even if the client's informed, written consent has been obtained, an attorney may decide not to represent a client if the attorney is likely to be called as a witness in any litigation in which there will be a jury [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 5-210 (with limited exceptions, attorney cannot act as advocate before jury that will hear testimony from that attorney); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 5-210, comment (rule inapplicable when attorney in advocate's firm will be witness)]. For example, an attorney who drafts a partnership agreement, or a corporate buy-sell agreement, might later be called as a witness in a dispute among the parties to the agreement to testify regarding the meaning of a section of the agreement.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Legal Malpractice and Ethical Considerations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.37

§ 1A.37 Minimizing Risk of Conflict of Interest

[1] Disclosure Letter Tailored to Specific Conflicts

To minimize the risk of conflict of interest, an attorney must abide by the California Rules of Professional Conduct. These rules generally require [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rules 3-110-3-400 (Professional Relationship with Clients); see also §§ 1A.33-1A.36]:

- Fairness to the client;

- Full disclosure in writing of areas of actual or potential conflict among the parties, the potential risks associated with multiple representation, and the attorney's relationships to and representation of current as well as former clients whose interests are actually adverse to the proposed representation, or relate to a matter on which the attorney has obtained confidential information related to the representation; and

- The client's written consent.

In practice, a client's written consent to multiple representation is binding only if full disclosure of the relevant circumstances and actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences have been made. Thus, to be effective, the disclosure letter must address the specific conflict issues of each representation. As a practical matter, the attorney should assume that a conflict disclosure letter and a signed consent form are necessary in a business start-up context, unless the attorney represents only one party to the venture. An attorney representing only one party should advise nonclients who are parties to the transaction that the attorney represents only a designated client [see §§ 1A.34[4], 1A.201]. Additionally, if the attorney represents the business entity, it is a good idea to obtain from the business a signed letter, listing the names of parties whose directions the attorney should follow.

[2] Conflict-Identification System

The attorney must have an adequate conflict-identification system, including, at a minimum, the names of clients and other parties to the transaction and the subject matter of the representation, to determine whether conflicts of interest exist with current or former clients before the attorney undertakes any proposed representation.

§ 1A.38 Prohibition on Attempts to Limit Malpractice Exposure

An attorney must not contract with a client to prospectively limit the attorney's liability for malpractice [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-400(A)]. Further, the attorney may settle a claim, or potential claim, for liability for malpractice only if the client is advised in writing that the client may seek independent legal counsel and is given a reasonable opportunity to do so [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-400(B)]. The American Bar Association Model Rules of Professional Conduct also prohibit an attorney from prospectively limiting the attorney's liability unless the client is independently represented in the agreement or advised in writing that independent representation is appropriate [see A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1-8(h)].

CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Business Name and Trademark

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.50

§ 1A.50 Selection of Business Name

[1] Preliminary Considerations

Before selecting a name, the client should be informed of any applicable statutory requirements, such as the filing of a fictitious name statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910; see also § 1A.51], a certificate of limited partnership [see Corp. Code § 15902.01; see [2][b], below; see also Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships], articles of incorporation [see Corp. Code § 200; see [2][c], below; see also Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations]; or articles of organization for a limited liability company [see Corp. Code § 17051; see also Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies].

Careful consideration should be given to choosing a name, since the name will symbolize the enterprise's good will, a major business asset. It can be expensive and aggravating for a new business to begin operations under a particular name only to be forced to change its name because it is the same or confusingly similar to a name used by another party.

The initial determination in selecting a name is whether the name is available. After it has been determined that the proposed name is available, the attorney and client should consider whether the name can be protected against infringing use by third parties, either as a fictitious business name [see § 1A.51] or as a registered trademark or service mark [see § 1A.52]. In situations when substantial amounts of money will be spent to develop goodwill in connection with a business name, it may be appropriate to register the trade name or trademark with the California Secretary of State and the United States Patent and Trademark Office [see § 1A.52]. For detailed coverage of the registration of trade names and trademarks, refer to Ch. 103B, Trademarks.

The client should be made aware that merely filing a fictitious business name, a limited liability partnership registration, a certificate of limited partnership, articles of incorporation, or articles of organization does not confer the right to use the selected name for all purposes. For example, a business entity may be the first to file to use a specified fictitious business name in a particular county. However, such a filing does not necessarily give the business the right to use that name as a trademark or trade name, because the first party to use a mark or name usually has superior rights, at least in a geographic area where the mark or name is used and known [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14230(c)(6), 14259 (registration of mark does not confer rights against prior users), 14417 (notification required to all new corps that filing of articles of incorporation does not itself authorize use of corporate name in violation of other parties' previously acquired rights under other laws), 14418, 17910 (filing of fictitious business name statement does not itself authorize use of fictitious business name in violation of other parties' previously acquired rights under other laws); Weatherford v. Eytchison (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 379, 384, 202 P.2d 1040] .

[2] Name Restrictions

[a] Sole Proprietorship

A sole proprietor's choice of name is not regulated by statute. The client should be made aware, however, that there is no unrestricted right to use one's own name in business, if use of the name could cause confusion [MacSweeney Enters. v. Tarantino (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 549, 560, 45 Cal. Rptr. 546] .

[b] General and Limited Partnerships

A general partnership's choice of name is not regulated by the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.]; thus, a general partnership may choose any name it wishes, although whether the name is available and can be protected are still important considerations.

Limited partnerships, however, are subject to a number of statutory restrictions on their choice of name. A limited partnership name, as set forth in the certificate of limited partnership, must meet the following requirements:

- It must end with the words "limited partnership" or the abbreviation "L.P." or "LP" [Corp. Code § 15901.08(b)].

- Unless otherwise authorized by the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code § 15901.08(e)], it must be distinguishable in the records of the Secretary of State from (1) the name of any limited partnership that has previously filed a certificate of limited partnership pursuant to Corp. Code § 15902.01 or any foreign limited partnership registered pursuant to Corp. Code § 15909.01, and (2) each name reserved under Corp. Code § 15901.09 [Corp. Code § 15901.08(d)].

- It may not contain the words "bank," "insurance," "trust," "trustee," "incorporated," "inc.," "corporation," or "corp." [Corp. Code § 15901.08(g)].

The name may contain the name of any partner [Corp. Code § 15901.08(a)].

The client should be advised that every limited partnership must file a certificate of limited partnership with the Secretary of State, and that a certificate will not be accepted for filing unless it complies with all the statutory requirements, including those related to the partnership name [see Corp. Code § 15902.01(a)].

For discussion of other means of protecting the partnership name, including trade name and trade or service mark protection, refer to § 1A.52 and to Ch. 103B, Trademarks. For a procedural guide to the reservation of a limited partnership name with the California Secretary of State, refer to Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships.

[c] Limited Liability Partnership

The name of a limited liability partnership (LLP) is restricted by statute. The last words or letters of the name of an LLP must be "Registered Limited Liability Partnership" or "Limited Liability Partnership" or one of the abbreviations "L.L.P.," "LLP," "R.L.L.P.," or "RLLP" [Corp. Code § 16952; see Corp. Code § 16958(b) (similar requirements for foreign LLPs)].

Clients should be advised that every California or foreign LLP must file a registration or application for registration with the Secretary of State, and that the registration or application will not be accepted for filing unless it complies with all statutory requirements, including those related to an LLP's name [see Corp. Code §§ 16101(6), (8), 16951, 16953, 16959]. For further discussion, consult Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

The Secretary of State will not file articles of incorporation bearing a name that is likely to mislead the public, or that is the same, or deceptively similar to, the actual or reserved name of a domestic corporation or a foreign corporation doing business within the state [see Corp. Code § 201(b)].

A corporate name may not include the words "bank," "trust," "trustee," or related words, unless approved [see Corp. Code § 201(a)]. Further, the name may not use the words "industrial loan company," "investment and loan company," "thrift company," or "thrift and loan company" unless authorized under the Indutrial Loan Law [Fin. Code § 18104; see Fin. Code § 18100 et seq.]. If the business of the corporation is to be an insurer, the Insurance Commissioner must first approve the name [see Corp. Code § 201.5]. Use of the word "cooperative" is restricted [see Corp. Code § 12311; Food & Agric. Code § 54036]. If the corporation is a close corporation, the name must include the word "corporation," "incorporated," "limited," or an abbreviation of one of these words [Corp. Code § 202(a)].

A corporation may be enjoined from the use of a name in violation of these rules, even though it has filed its articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 201(b)]. Further, although acceptance of articles of incorporation by the Secretary of State implies that the corporate name does not conflict with that of other corporations registered or qualified to do business in California, the name may violate other parties' previously acquired rights under other laws [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14417]. Conducting a thorough name search is the only way to ensure a name's availability [see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations ; Ch. 103B, Trademarks].

Certain types of corporations have additional name requirements. These include dental corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 1804], medical corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2285, 2415], architectural corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536], engineering corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6738], and law corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6171]. For further discussion of name requirements of professional corporations, refer to Ch. 12, Professional Corporations.

The client should be advised that every corporation must file articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State, and that the articles will not be accepted for filing unless they comply with all the statutory requirements, including those related to the corporate name [see Corp. Code §§ 201, 201.3, 201.5].

Federal law also imposes name restrictions. The terms "national," "Federal," "United States," "reserve," "Deposit Insurance," and other terms associated with the federal government may not be used in corporate names [see 18 U.S.C. § 709]. In addition, use of words and symbols relating to the Olympics may not be used without the permission of the United States Olympic Committee [see 36 U.S.C. § 380].

For a complete list of words that may not be used in a corporate name, and additional information on the rules and restrictions applicable to corporate names, as well as a procedural guide to reserving the name with the California Secretary of State, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations, §§ 2.13, 2.132.

[e] Limited Liability Company

The name of a limited liability company must not be one that the Secretary of State determines to be likely to mislead the public, and must not be the same as, or resemble so closely as to tend to deceive, the name of an existing domestic or registered foreign limited liability company (without the other company's consent), or a name already reserved by a limited liability company or a foreign limited liability company [Corp. Code § 17052(c)]. The name may contain the name of one or more of the limited liability company's members [Corp. Code § 17052(b)]. The last words of the name must be "limited liability company" or the abbreviation "LLC" or "L.L.C." [Corp. Code § 17052(a)]. The terms "limited" and "company" may be abbreviated to "Ltd." and "Co." respectively [Corp. Code § 17052(a)].

The terms "bank," "trust," "trustee," "incorporated," "inc.," "corporation," or "corp." may not be used in the name of a limited liability company, nor may the name contain "insurer," "insurance company," or any other words suggesting that the LLC is in the business of issuing insurance policies and assuming insurance risks [Corp. Code § 17052(d)]. In addition, the name of the limited liability company may not be indicative of a "professional service" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 13401(a)], because professional limited liability companies are not authorized in California [Corp. Code § 17375; see Corp. Code §§ 13401, 13401.3].

The name of a limited liability company must be set forth in its articles of organization [Corp. Code § 17052].

An applicant may reserve an approved limited liability company name with the Secretary of State for 60 days, on payment of the required fee [see Gov. Code § 12190(a)]. The same person may not reserve the same name for consecutive 60-day periods, but may do so with breaks between 60-day periods [Corp. Code § 17053].

For a procedural guide to reserving the name with the California Secretary of State, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Business Name and Trademark

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.51

§ 1A.51 Fictitious Business Name

[1] Who Must File

Every person who regularly transacts business in California for profit under a fictitious business name must file a fictitious business name statement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913 and 1A.205 (form)]. Model State Trademark Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14200 et seq.]. The statement is a public record identifying the type of business entity and the natural persons responsible for it. The filing requirement is not intended to confer any right or advantage on individuals or firms that fail to comply with the requirement; rather, it is designed to make available to the public the identities of persons doing business under the fictitious name [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(a)(1)]. A business entity doing business under the name appearing on its organizational documents on file with the Secretary of State is generally not subject to the fictitious business name filing requirement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2)-(5); see [2], below].

Filing a fictitious business name statement does not create any rights superior to those of bona fide prior users of the name under common law, the federal Lanham Act [see U.S.C. § 1051 et seq.], the Model State Trademark Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14200 et seq.], or the California Fictitious Business Name Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900 et seq.; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14230(c)(6), 14259, 14417, 14418, 17913]. Filing, however, establishes a rebuttable presumption of the exclusive right to use the fictitious business name as a trade name in the county of filing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13311; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14415 (rebuttable presumption affects burden of producing evidence)].

[2] "Fictitious Business Name" Defined

[a] Sole Proprietorship

In the case of an individual, a name that does not include that individual's surname, or a name that suggests the existence of additional owners, is a fictitious business name [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(1)].

A name suggests the existence of additional owners if it includes terms such as "Company," "& Company," "& Son," "& Sons," "& Associates," or "Brothers." However, words that describe the business being conducted, such as "Tom Cooper Auto Service," do not fall in this category [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(c)].

[b] General Partnership

The name of a general partnership that does not include the surname of each partner, or a name that suggests the existence of additional owners, is a fictitious business name [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2)]. A name suggests the existence of additional owners if it includes terms such as "Company," "& Company," "& Son," "& Sons," "& Associates," or "Brothers" and the like, but not words that merely describe the business being conducted [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(c)].

[c] Limited Partnership

For a limited partnership, a fictitious business name is any name other than the name of the limited partnership on file with the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(4)].

[d] Limited Liability Partnership

Registered limited liability partnerships that have filed registrations, and foreign limited liability partnerships that have filed applications for registration [see Corp. Code §§ 16953, 16959], are specifically exempted from fictitious business name filing requirements [Corp. Code § 16961; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2)]. All limited liability partnerships must register or apply for registration to establish the status of the partnership as a limited liability partnership [see Corp. Code §§ 16101(6), (8), 16951, 16953, 16959].

For a domestic or foreign corporation, a fictitious business name is any name other than the corporate name stated on the articles of incorporation on file with the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(3)]. A corporation may wish to conduct business under a fictitious name if, for example, the desired corporate name is unavailable, or if the corporation wishes to create a perceived local or regional connection with the name.

Use of a fictitious business name does not create a separate legal entity. For example, if a corporation is sued under its fictitious business name but appears and responds under its corporate name, the plaintiffs cannot continue proceedings against the corporation under its fictitious business name [Pinkerton's, Inc. v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1347-1348, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 (plaintiffs could not obtain default judgment against fictitious business name as legally distinct entity after corporation responded to complaint in corporate name and obtained dismissal)].

[f] Limited Liability Company

For a limited liability company, a fictitious business name is any name other than the name stated in the articles of organization. For a foreign limited liability company that has filed an application for registration with the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code § 17451], a fictitious business name is any name other than the name on file with the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(5); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910.5]

[3] When to File

A fictitious business name statement must be filed no later than 40 days after the entity begins to transact business for profit in California [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910(a)]. Unless it expires earlier due to a change of facts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920(b)] or abandonment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920(c)], a statement expires at the end of five years from the date on which it was filed with the county clerk [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920(a)]. A new statement must be filed on or before the expiration date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910(b)].

[4] Where to File

A business must file a fictitious business name statement with the clerk of the county in which it has its principal place of business in California [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17915]. If the entity has no such principal place of business, the statement must be filed with the clerk of Sacramento County. A person is not precluded from filing a fictitious business name statement in any other county as well, provided a statement is filed in the county of its principal place of business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17915].

[5] Publication Requirement

A fictitious business name statement must be published within 30 days after filing with the county clerk [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917]. It must appear in a newspaper of general circulation in the county where the fictitious business name statement was filed or, if none, in a newspaper of general circulation in an adjoining county [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(a); Gov. Code § 6064]. If the business entity does not have a principal place of business in California, the statement must be published in a newspaper of general circulation in Sacramento county [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(a)]. The notice requirement is met by four publications at least five days apart in a newspaper regularly published at least once a week and circulated in the area where the entity will do business [Gov. Code § 6064].

No more than 30 days after the last publication, an affidavit of publication of the fictitious business name must be filed with the county clerk with whom the fictitious business name statement was filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(d)]. Many newspapers will provide a fictitious business name form, handle the filing and publication, and the filing of the affidavit, for a fee generally less than $50 [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17929 (filing fees)].

These publication requirements do not apply when a refiling is required because the prior statement has expired unless there has been a change in the information required in the expired statement, provided that the refiling is made within 40 days of the date the statement expired [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(c)].

[6] Penalties for Noncompliance

A party or entity doing business under a fictitious business name may not sue on a contract or transaction entered into using the fictitious name unless or until a fictitious business name statement has been filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918]. However, before an action is finally dismissed on this ground, a plaintiff may cure this disability by filing the statement at any time before trial [see Kadota Fig Asso. of Producers v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 167 P.2d 518]. The opposing party is deemed to have waived the nonfiling unless it is raised by demurrer or answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80]. Furthermore, a business that should, but does not, file a fictitious business name statement loses the benefit of the rebuttable presumption of the exclusive right to use the name as a trade name [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14411-14416; see also [1], above].

CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Business Name and Trademark

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.52

§ 1A.52 Trade Marks and Trade Names

[1] Relation to Business Name

A trademark or service mark is a word, name, symbol, or devise used by a business to identify its goods or services and to distinguish them from the goods or services of others [15 U.S.C. § 1127; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(a), (b)]. "Miller Cold Draft Light" is a trademark for a low-calorie beer, for example. A trade name identifies the business itself and distinguishes it from other businesses [15 U.S.C. § 1127; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(d)]. "Miller Brewing Company" is an example of a trade name. For detailed coverage of trademarks, service marks, and trade names, see Ch. 103B, Trademarks .

Courts have distinguished trade names from trademarks by identifying a trade name with the entire goodwill of a business and trade mark or service mark as the guarantee of the quality of particular goods or services offered by the business [see Golden Door, Inc. v. Odisho (N.D. Cal. 1977) 437 F. Supp. 956, 966 , aff'd, 646 F.2d 347 (9th Cir. 1980)] . The distinction between a trade name and a trade or service mark is often unclear, however, and the same name is frequently used for some or all purposes. For this reason, the laws applicable to the selection and use of trade or service marks are generally applicable to trade names, as well [see Colvig v. KSFO (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 357, 368, 36 Cal. Rptr. 701 ; see also North Carolina Dairy Foundation v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 98, 106-108, 154 Cal. Rptr. 794 (California and federal trademark statutes generally the same, each having codified common law principles; New West Corp. v. NYM Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1194, 1201 (federal cases construing federal trade name and trademark law generally followed by state courts when construing state law)].

[2] Registration of Trademarks and Trade Names

[a] Nature of Protection

Trade names are generally protected in California by filing fictitious business name statements [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14411-14416, 17900-17930; see also § 1A.51[1]]. This protection, however, is applicable only in the county where the fictitious business name statement is filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14411]. It is advisable, therefore, to file a statement in every county in which the entity does business.

If the name of a business is the same as, or closely resembles, the name of its product, the name may be protected under the state or federal trademark registration statutes [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14230(c)(6), 14259, 14417, 14418, 17913. Note that this protection is based on use, rather than on the act of filing the fictitious business name statement, which does not confer rights against prior users of the same or a confusingly similar name [see Weatherford v. Eytchison (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 379, 384, 202 P.2d 1040] .

[b] California Registration

The Secretary of State's office is responsible for registering trade and service marks in California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14205-14209 (application for registration requirements)]. On successful completion of the application process, the Secretary will issue a certificate of registration, which is admissible in evidence as competent and sufficient proof of the registration of the mark in any action or judicial proceeding in a California court [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14215].

The initial registration is effective for five years and may be renewed for successive five-year terms on application and payment of the required renewal fee within six months of the end of the expiring term [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14217(a), (b); see Gov. Code § 12193(c) (fee)]. An registration that was in force on January 1, 2008 (the effective date of the Model State Trademark Law), continues in full force and effect for its unexpired term and may be renewed in accordance with the renewal procedure under the Model Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14217(c)]. All renewal applications, whether of registrations under the Model Act or prior law, must include (1) a verified statement that the mark has been and is still in use, and (2) a specimen showing actual use of the mark on, or in connection with, the goods or services with which the mark is associated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14217(d)].

An application for renewal of registration of a trademark or a service mark (on an official Secretary of State form), together with the applicable fee, must be filed within the 6 months before the expiration of the 10-year term [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14250; see Gov. Code § 12193(c) (fee)].

[c] Federal Registration

The United States Patent and Trademark Office registers federal trademarks [see 15 U.S.C § 1051 (sample application forms); 37 C.F.R. § 2.33 (statutory requirements); see also Ch. 103B, Trademarks].

For further discussion of tradename and trade marks, statutory requirements, and applications for registration, see Ch. 103B, Trademarks .

1. Determine tasks attorney will perform [see § 1A.10].

2. Determine whether consultation or association of specialist is required [see § 1A.32].

3. Determine any continuing representation [see § 1A.17].

NOTE:

As a practical matter, it has been suggested that the attorney has a duty to contact the client after the initial representation is completed if the attorney promises to keep the client informed of future changes in the law relevant to the client, or if the relationship between the attorney and client is such that the attorney should do so, as in the case of an attorney who is closely involved in a client's affairs on an ongoing basis.

There is not much litigation in this area, and case law has yet to establish the extent of this duty. Given this current uncertainty in the law, the attorney should deal explicitly with the scope of representation in either the engagement letter or the closing letter to the client [see § 1A.202*].

a. Will attorney promise to keep client informed of future changes in law relevant to client?

b. Is attorney-client relationship such that attorney should keep client so informed?

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.112

§ 1A.112 Fees and Fee Agreements

NOTE:
It is good practice to summarize fees and any special fee payment arrangements in a written fee and representation agreement, even when not required by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148*] so as to clearly define the fee arrangement and the responsibilities of the attorney and client under the contract.

1. Determine whether written fee agreement is required by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a), (d); § 1A.14].

a. Will client's total expense likely exceed $1,000?

b. Will any of following exceptions apply [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)]?
(1) Is there emergency need for legal services?

NOTE:
An oral fee agreement is enforceable if an emergency need for legal services exists or when a writing is otherwise impractical [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)(1)]. This situation is unlikely to arise in a business formation context.

(2) Is fee agreement implied in fact by prior course of dealing between attorney and client?

(3) Has client, after full disclosure, made written waiver of benefits of Bus. and Prof. Code § 6148?

(4) Is client a corporation?

2. Determine whether fees may be paid by someone other than client, if applicable.

a. Will such payment interfere with attorney's independent judgment [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(F)]?

b. Has attorney obtained client's informed, written consent [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(F)]?

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.113

§ 1A.113 Identifying Conflicts of Interest

1. Ascertain which party attorney represents.

NOTE:

An attorney representing an entity may also represent its constituents, provided that the attorney makes a written disclosure to the client in accordance with the California Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 3-310(B) and discloses his or her relationship to the entity [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Dual representation of clients whose interests conflict is permitted, under certain circumstances, if the attorney obtains the written consent of each client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E); see Pringle v. La Chapelle (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1005-1007, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 90 (although attorney failed to follow Rule 3-600(E), violation of rule does not automatically preclude attorney from obtaining fees)]. Caution should be exercised, however, in dual representation when an actual conflict of interest exists [see § 1A.34[1]]. Even without an actual conflict, under some circumstances, an attorney should not undertake multiple representation [see § 1A.34[3]].

a. Will attorney represent business entity [see § 1A.33 [2]]?

b. Will attorney represent single participant?

c. Will attorney represent some or all of participants?

d. Will attorney represent a combination of situations described in (a) through (c), above [see § 1A.33[2][b]]?

2. Ascertain whether attorney represents clients with adverse interests [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310; §§ 1A.33-1A.36].

a. Does attorney have legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with party or witness in same matter?

b. Does attorney know (or reasonably should know) that:
(1) Attorney previously had legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with party or witness in same matter; and

(2) Previous relationship will substantially affect attorney's representation?

c. Does (or did) attorney have legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with party or entity that would be substantially affected by resolution of matter?

d. Does (or did) attorney have legal, business, financial, or professional interest in subject matter of representation?

e. Has attorney obtained confidential information related to representation from client or former client?

3. Ascertain whether attorney has provided written disclosure and obtained informed written consent from each client (or former client) whose interests actually or potentially conflict [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310; §§ 1A.33-1A.35].

4. Ascertain whether attorney's other roles present conflict of interest issues [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300; see also § 1A.36].

a. Will attorney invest in client's business [see § 1A.36[1]]?

b. Will attorney serve as corporate agent, director, or officer [see § 1A.36[2]]?

c. Is attorney likely to be called as witness in any litigation that includes jury [see § 1A.36[3]]?

5. Ascertain whether attorney has adequate conflict-identification system [see § 1A.37[2]].

B. Preliminary Determinations

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.114

§ 1A.114 Need for Fictitious Business Name Statement

1. If client is sole proprietor, determine whether business name adopted by client is "fictitious business name" for purpose of statute requiring filing of fictitious business name statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(1)].

a. Does name fail to include surname of owner; or

b. Does name suggest existence of additional owners?

NOTE:
A name suggesting the existence of additional owners is one that includes such terms as "Company," "& Company," "& Son," "Brothers," but not words merely describing the business being conducted [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(c); see § 1A.51[2][a]]. A fictitious business name may not include the terms "Corporation," "Corp.," "Incorporated," or "Inc.," unless the entity is incorporated. Similarly, no fictitious business name may include the terms "Limited Liability Company," "LLC," or "LC" unless the entity is organized as a limited liability company. However, a person is not barred from using the complete words "Limited" or "Company," or their abbreviations, in the business name as long as that use does not imply that the person is a limited liability company [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910.5].

2. If client is partnership or other association (other than limited partnership or limited liability partnership), determine whether business name adopted by client is "fictitious business name" for purpose of statute requiring filing of fictitious business name statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2)]:

NOTE:
For limited partnerships that have filed with the Secretary of State [see Ch. 15A, Formation of Limited

Partnerships], a fictitious business name is any name other than the name of the limited partnership on file with the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(4)]. Registered limited liability partnerships that have filed registrations, and foreign limited liability partnerships that have filed applications for registration [see Corp. Code §§ 16953, 16959], are specifically exempted from fictitious business name filing requirements [Corp. Code § 16961[Deering's]; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2); see also Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships].

a. Does name fail to include surname of each general partner; or

b. Does name suggest existence of additional owners [see P 1b NOTE, above]?

3. If client is domestic or foreign corporation, determine whether business name is "fictitious business name" for purpose of statute requiring filing of fictitious business name statement because business name differs from corporate name stated in articles of incorporation filed with Secretary of State [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(3)].

4. If client is limited liability company, determine whether business name is "fictitious business name" for purpose of statute requiring filing of fictitious business name statement because business name differs from name stated in articles of organization [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(5)].

5. If client is foreign limited liability company registered with Secretary of State, determine whether business name is "fictitious business name" for purpose of statute requiring filing of fictitious business name statement because business name differs from name on file with Secretary of State [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(5)].

6. Determine whether client's organization is exempt from filing requirements:

a. Is organization nonprofit corporation or association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17911]?

b. Is organization real estate investment trust [see Corp. Code § 23000] with designation of agent on file [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17912]?

7. If client proposes to use fictitious business name, determine whether all of following apply, requiring client to file fictitious business name statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910]:

a. Will client regularly transact business in California?

b. Will client transact business for profit?

c. Will client transact business using fictitious business name?

8. Determine if filing fictitious business name statement is prerequisite to right to maintain action on any contract or transaction.

a. Has client (or client's assignee) transacted business under fictitious business name without filing fictitious business name statement?

NOTE:
Neither a person who transacts business under a fictitious business name nor that person's assignee may sue on a contract or in connection with any transaction without filing a fictitious business name statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

b. Has client in bankruptcy transacted business under fictitious business name without filing fictitious business name statement?

NOTE:
A fictitious business name statement may be filed by a trustee in bankruptcy at any time after bankruptcy when failure to do so would preclude maintenance of an action for sums due [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(a)].

c. Has conservatee, deceased, or partnership transacted business under fictitious business name without filing fictitious business name statement?

NOTE:
The conservator, executor, or administrator may file a fictitious business name statement if failure to do so would preclude the maintenance of an action to recover sums due the conservatee, the deceased, or the partnership of which the deceased was a member [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(b)].

d. Is client assignee or purchaser of business that previously transacted business under fictitious business name without filing fictitious business name statement?

NOTE:
The assignee or a purchaser of a business may file a fictitious business name statement if failure to do so would preclude maintenance of an action to recover sums due the assignee or purchaser by reason of assignment or sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(c)].

§ 1A.115 Need for Trademark, Service Mark, or Trade Name Protection

NOTE:

Trademarks and service marks identify a particular line of products or services and may be registered with the California Secretary of State [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14202(a), (b)] and the United States Patent and Trademark Office [see 15 U.S.C. § 1051 (sample application forms); 37 C.F.R. § 2.33 (statutory requirements)]. For further discussion and registration procedures, see Ch. 103B, Trademarks .

A trade name identifies the business, vocation, or occupation itself [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(d); 15 U.S.C. § 1127]. The filing of a fictitious business name statement establishes a rebuttable presumption (affecting the burden of producing evidence) that the registrant has the exclusive right to use the fictitious business name, as well as any confusingly similar name, as a trade name in the county where the statement is filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14411; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14412-14416]. This presumption applies only if (1) the registrant is the first in the county to file a statement with that name, and (2) the registrant is actually engaged in a trade or business using the trade name [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14411].

§ 1A.130 Filing Fictitious Business Name Statement

1. Obtain copies of fictitious business name statement forms from county clerk [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17924(a); see also §§ 1A.51[4], 1A.205].

NOTE:
The county clerk is required to furnish forms satisfying the statutory requirements of fictitious business name statements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(a)] without charge [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17924(a)].

2. Complete form according to statutory requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(b); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(a) (sample form)]:

a. Set forth fictitious business name or names of business ("registrant").

NOTE:
Only businesses operating at the same address and under the same ownership may be listed on the same statement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(b)(1)].

b. Set forth street address and county of registrant's principal place of business, whether within or outside California.

c. Set forth registrant's name and address:

(1) If registrant is individual, insert full name and residence address.

(2) If registrants are husband and wife, insert full name and residence address of both spouses.

(3) If registrant is state or local registered domestic partnership, insert full name and residence address of each domestic partner.

(4) If registrant is general partnership, copartnership, joint venture, limited liability partnership, or unincorporated association other than partnership, insert full name and residence address of each general partner.

(5) If registrant is limited partnership, insert full name and residence address of each general partner.

(6) If registrant is trust, insert full name and residence address of each trustee.

(7) If registrant is corporation, insert:
(a) Name of corporation as set out in its articles of incorporation on file with Secretary of State.

(b) State of incorporation.

(8) If registrant is limited liability company, insert:

(a) Name of limited liability company as set forth in articles of organization on file with Secretary of State.

(b) State of organization.

d. Set forth legal nature or status of business by stating that business is:

(1) "An individual."

(2) "A general partnership."

(3) "A limited partnership."

(4) "A limited liability company."

(5) "An unincorporated association other than a partnership."

(6) "A corporation."

(7) "A business trust."

(8) "Copartners."

(9) "Husband and wife."

(10) "Joint venture."

(11) "State or local registered domestic partners."

(12) "A limited liability partnership."

e. Set forth date registrant began to transact business under fictitious business name listed.

NOTE:
If the registrant has not yet begun to transact business under the listed name, insert the statement "Not applicable" in the space provided on the form [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(b)(5)].

3. Have statement executed by:

NOTE:
The registrant must declare that all information contained in the fictitious business name statement is true and correct. A registrant who declares as true any material matter that he or she knows to be false is guilty of a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(a), (c)].

a. Registrant [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17914]:

(1) If registrant is individual, by that person.

(2) If registrants are husband and wife, by both spouses.

(3) If registrant is state or local registered domestic partnership, by one partner.

(4) If registrant is general partnership, limited partnership, limited liability partnership, copartnership, joint venture, or unincorporated association other than partnership, by general partner.

(5) If registrant is limited liability company, by manager or officer.

(6) If registrant is trust, by trustee.

(7) If registrant is corporation, by officer.

b. Trustee in bankruptcy at any time after bankruptcy when statement is prerequisite to action to recover sums due to debtor or bankruptcy estate or partnership of which debtor or bankruptcy estate was member [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(a); see also § 1A.114, 6b].

c. Conservator, executor, or administrator at any time after appointment of conservator or death of any individual or partner when necessary for that party to maintain action to recover sums due to conservatee or decedent or partnership of which decedent was member [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(b); see also § 1A.114, 6c].

d. Assignee or purchaser of business at any time after assignment or sale when necessary to maintain action to recover sums due to assignment or purchaser by reason of transaction [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(c)].

4. File fictitious business name statement:

NOTE:
The presentation for filing of a fictitious business name statement in duplicate, with the required fees, and the county clerk's acceptance of the statement, constitute filing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17916; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17929 (filing fees)].

a. File statement in duplicate with county clerk [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17915, 17916]:

(1) In county where business is located, if registrant has principal place of business in California.

(2) With clerk of Sacramento County, if registrant has no place of business in California.

(3) If desired, in any other county as long as statement has also been filed in county of principal place of business.

b. Accompany statement with filing fee [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17929].

c. File original statement no later than 40 days from time registrant commences transaction of business for profit in California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910(a)].

5. Publish fictitious business name statement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(a), (b); Gov. Code § 6064]:

a. Within 30 days after statement was filed with county clerk.

b. In newspaper of general circulation:

NOTE:
Subject to the following requirements, the newspaper selected for publication should be one that circulates in the area where the business is to be conducted [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(b)].

(1) In county where fictitious business name statement was filed.

(2) If no such newspaper exists in that county, in newspaper of general circulation in adjoining county.

(3) If registrant does not have place of business in California, in Sacramento County.

c. Once each week for four successive weeks.

NOTE:
Four publications in a weekly newspaper are sufficient [see Gov. Code § 6064].

6. Have affidavit of publication prepared by newspaper in which publication occurred and file affidavit (or have newspaper file affidavit) [see § 1A.51 [5]]) with county clerk within 30 days after publication is completed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(d); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2010, 2011, 2015.5].

7. Advise business owners that no contract action may be maintained until required fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

8. Advise registrant to renew statement every five years on or before date of publication, and after any change in facts included in original statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910(b), 17920; see also § 1A.140].

9. Advise registrant to file abandonment of use of fictitious business name if registrant ceases to transact business in California under registered fictitious name [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17922; see also § 1A.141].

10. If registrant is partnership, advise partners that on withdrawal of any partner, withdrawing partner should file statement of withdrawal from partnership operating under fictitious business name [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17923(a); see also § 1A.142].

NOTE:

The withdrawal of a general partner does not cause a fictitious business name statement to expire if the withdrawing partner files a statement of withdrawal and satisfies the publication requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17923(d); see § 1A.142].

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.140

§ 1A.140 Filing New Fictitious Business Name Statement on Change of Facts or Expiration of Previously-Filed Statement

1. Inform party that has previously-filed fictitious business name statement [see that new statement must be filed when [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910(b), 17920(a), (b)]:

a. Facts in previously-filed statement have changed.

NOTE:
A new statement must be filed within 40 days after any change in facts. Failure to do so will cause the previously-filed statement to expire. A change in the residence address of an individual, general partner, or trustee, however, will not cause the statement to expire [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910(b), 17920(b)]. Also, a new statement need not be filed when a general partner withdraws from a partnership that is or has been regularly transacting business under a fictitious business name provided the general partner files and publishes a statement of withdrawal [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17923; see also § 1A.142].

b. Previously-filed statement is due to expire.

NOTE:
A fictitious business name statement expires five years from the date it was filed with the county clerk [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920(a)].

2. Prepare and file new statement [see § 1A.130].

NOTE:
The form and procedure for filing a new statement under these circumstances are the same as those for filing the original statement, except when the filing is due to expiration of the five-year period described in 1.b., above, in which case no publication is required provided the new statement is filed within 40 days of the date the previously-filed statement expired [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(c)].

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.200

§ 1A.200 Engagement Letter

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an engagement letter, used to confirm that the attorney (or firm) will provide representation in a matter. Specifically, the form:

- Affirms the purposes for which the attorney was hired;
- Provides information on the firm's reporting procedures, billing procedures, and the attorney's expectations of the client;
- Explains the difference between fees and expenses and provides an estimate of fees and expenses;
- Lists the items the attorney will perform and the time frame involved, if possible;
- Lists the items the attorney was not hired to perform;
- Lists a contact person within the firm, as appropriate; and
- States in writing that the attorney does not guarantee the outcome of any matter.

The attorney should attach, or send under separate cover, a fee and representation agreement [see vol. 15, ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services]. This letter is not a substitute for that agreement.

PART IV. FORMS

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.201

§ 1A.201 Letter Advising Nonclients of Attorney's Limited Role

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a letter that advises both the attorney's client and other parties to a transaction that the attorney represents only the attorney's client and does not represent, and will not provide legal services for, other parties.

Although the California Rules of Professional Conduct permit an attorney to represent multiple parties when specified requirements are satisfied [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310; § 1A.34], an attorney often chooses to represent only one party [see § 1A.34 [4]]. Although this approach minimizes conflict of interest problems, problems can arise if the attorney fails to give written notice to nonclients that the attorney represents only a designated party to the transaction. Consequently, this letter should be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested.

The purpose of this letter is:

- To clarify the attorney's role to all parties to the transaction;
- To provide written notice of the attorney's role to nonclients, so that it will be difficult for them to claim that they did not understand this limited role; and
- To advise the nonclients to seek the advice of independent counsel.

This letter should not be confused with a letter declining employment when the nonclient's action may be affected by the statute of limitations. Refer to Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services, for a sample of this type of nonengagement or declination letter.

Dear _____ [names of all parties to transaction] :

We met on _____[date] to discuss _____[describe matter]. PART IV. FORMS

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.202

§ 1A.202 Closing Letter

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is letter that establishes the end of the attorney-client relationship related to a particular representation [see § 1A.17]. At the close of a particular matter, a letter should be sent to the client, explaining that representation is complete. It will help the client to clearly understand that the attorney will provide no further services related to a particular matter and may help avoid attorney-client problems. It also helps to establish a date from which the statute of limitations runs for purposes of malpractice claims [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2)].

If matters are still pending with regard to the subject matter of the representation, the attorney may wish to list deadlines for which the attorney is not responsible, but of which the client should be aware. If the attorney does so, he or she should make it clear that the list is for the client's information only and does not imply that the attorney has undertaken to complete any of the listed tasks.

For example, the attorney may counsel the client regarding the need to file a fictitious business name statement, and the client may chose to have someone other than the attorney file the statement. In that case, the attorney may want to inform the client in writing that the statement must be filed no later than 40 days from the time the registrant commences the transaction of business for profit in California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910(a)].

The attorney should also return any documents belonging to the client with this letter. The letter should be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, to document the close of the attorney-client relationship, as well to confirm the receipt of returned documents.

CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART IV. FORMS

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.203

§ 1A.203 Conflict Disclosure Letter and Consent

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form is a letter disclosing the presence of an actual or potential conflict of interest between an attorney's clients. The purpose of this letter is to (1) provide full and complete disclosure of actual and potential conflicts of interest if the attorney will represent multiple parties; and (2) secure each party's informed, written consent [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310; § 1A.34]. Also included are alternative provisions that address the issues of prior representation [see [b], below]. These provisions, accompanied by a complete discussion of all conflicts, actual and potential, should satisfy the disclosure requirements of the California Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3-310.

It is a mistake for the attorney to use a standard conflict letter that uses generalized disclosure language and does not specifically address the present and potential conflicts of each transaction. A client's written consent to multiple representation is binding only if the attorney discloses all facts and circumstances that will enable the client to make an informed decision on multiple representation [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A); Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 147, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406 (decided before amendment of Rule 3-310); § 1A.34[2]].

[b] Conflicts Between Clients and Former Clients

Contemporaneous representation of clients with adverse interests is prohibited absent written disclosure and consent [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310; see also [a], above; § 1A.34]. Consecutive representation of clients is permitted if the attorney discloses, in writing, to the current client any previous relationships (legal, business, financial, professional, or personal) that the attorney had with any party in the same matter, or any party affected by the resolution of the matter or by the attorney's representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)(2), (3)]; and if the attorney obtains the current client's written consent to representation despite the attorney's previous relationships [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C); see § 1A.35].

This written disclosure of any previous relationships and the client's written consent are in addition to any disclosure and consent required when actual or potential conflicts of interest are presented by multiple representation, or when the attorney has obtained confidential information related to the current representation [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B), (C), (E)].

This disclosure must be made to and the consent obtained from clients to be currently represented, and not clients or former clients with whom the attorney has had a relationship [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)], unless the proposed representation is (1) adverse to a current or a former client and relates to a matter for which the attorney has obtained confidential information [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(E)], or (2) the prior relationships are with current clients [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)]. In these circumstances, the attorney must not only obtain the informed, written consent of the current client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)], but also the informed, written consent of the former or current client whose interests are adverse to the anticipated representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(E); see § 1A.35; see also § 1A.204].

[c] Additional Disclosure and Consent if Potential Conflict Becomes Actual

Even if the attorney identifies no current conflicts of interest, the attorney must anticipate potential future conflicts; the attorney is specifically required to disclose "any reasonably foreseeable adverse effects" of the representation of adverse interests [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. Moreover, an additional disclosure and consent to continued multiple representation is required if an actual conflict later arises between the parties [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)(2); Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310, discussion; see § 1A.34[1]].

[d] Obtaining Consent

"Informed consent" means the client's or former client's written agreement to the representation following written disclosure [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. A failure to obtain consent may result in the disqualification [see Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 82-83, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159] , disciplinary action, or malpractice.

When the attorney represents an entity and one or more of its constituents, the entity's informed written consent to multiple representation must be given by an individual or constituent other than the represented individual, or by the shareholders or entity's members [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rules 3-310, 3-600(E); see Wortham & Van Liew v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal. App 3d 927, 933, 233 Cal Rptr. 725 (attorney represents all partners as to partnership business matters; therefore informed written consent of all partners must be obtained); see also Pringle v. La Chapelle (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1005-1007, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 90 (although attorney failed to follow Rule 3-600(E), violation of rule does not automatically preclude attorney from obtaining fees)].

Re: Conflicts of Interest and Risks of Multiple Representation
Dear _____ [name of client] :

You have asked this firm to represent you in _____[describe matter].

Conflicts of Interest

[Choose one of the following:]

[If actual conflicts exist, use:]

This letter confirms our _____[conversation or telephone conversation] of _____[date], in which _____[I or we] advised you that _____[my or our] representation of you with regard to _____[describe matter] will create certain conflicts of interest because your individual interests and goals related to this matter differ, or may differ in the future, from the interests and goals of the [limited partnership or partnership or corporation or limited liability company] _____[and or or] the other participants.

_____[I or We] have identified the following existing conflicts of interest: _____[specifically describe existing conflicts of interest].

[OR]

[If no actual conflicts exist, use:]

This letter confirms our _____[conversation or telephone conversation] of _____[date], in which _____[I or we] advised you that _____[I or we] do not believe that _____[my or our] representation of you with regard to _____[describe matter] presents any actual conflicts of interest.

However, you should be aware that such representation may involve potential conflicts because your individual interests may differ, in the future, from the interests and goals of the _____[limited partnership or partnership or corporation or limited liability company] _____[and or or] the other participants.

_____[I or We] have identified what _____[I or we] reasonably believe to be potential conflicts of interest. These potential conflicts include: _____[specifically describe potential conflicts of interest].

[If attorney has prior or continuing relationship with a party in this matter, or a party that would be substantially affected by the resolution of this matter, add:]

This conflict of interest problem is complicated by the fact that _____[I or we] _____[have or had] the following type of relationship with _____[name of party to transaction]: _____[describe attorney's previous or continuing (legal, business, financial, professional, or personal) relationship with the party to the transaction].

[If attorney represents current adverse client, add:]

This conflict of interest problem is _____[further] complicated by the fact that _____[I or we] currently represent _____[name of current adverse client] in a matter that is adverse to your case. These matters are adverse because _____[specify reason for conflict].

[Continue with the following:]

As we discussed, _____[I or we] do not believe that _____[my or our] representation of you in _____[describe matter] would be affected by _____[my or our] _____[prior and or current] representation of _____[name of party to matter with whom attorney has previous or current relationship or name of current adverse client]. However, as we also discussed, _____[I am or we are] required by the State Bar of California to inform you of actual and potential conflicts of interest and of previous and current relationships that might substantially affect our representation of you in _____[describe matter], and to obtain your written consent to represent you despite any conflicts or previous and current adverse relationships.

Attached, as Exhibit A, is a complete copy of Rule 3-310 of the California Rules of Professional Conduct, which governs _____[my or our] representation of adverse interests.

In accordance with this rule, if you wish this firm to represent you with regard to _____[describe matter], you must sign and return a copy of this letter. By signing the consent at the end of the letter, you acknowledge that:

1. _____[I or We] have explained to you the actual and potential conflicts of interests associated with your representation in _____[describe matter]; and _____[I or we] have given you a copy of Rule 3-310 of the California Rules of Professional Conduct.

[If attorney has prior or continuing relationship with a party in this matter, or a party that would be substantially affected by the resolution of this matter, add:]

_____. You have been informed of the nature of this firm's _____[prior or continuing] relationship with _____[name of party to transaction].

[If attorney represents current adverse client, add:]

_____. You have been informed of this firm's present and continuing relationship with _____[name of current adverse client], whose interests are adverse to your interests in _____[describe matter].

[Continue with the following:]

_____. Despite the conflicts discussed above, you want this firm to represent you in the matter described above.

Risks of Multiple Representation

In some situations, for the sake of convenience or economy, parties may prefer to employ a single attorney. However, a single _____[attorney's or firm's] representation of multiple interests has significant risks, in addition to the conflict of interest issues discussed above, which you should carefully consider.

For example, multiple representation may result in the loss of the attorney-client communications privilege because issues affecting multiple representation that are communicated to _____[me or a member of our firm] by one person may be disclosed to a jointly-represented client in a civil action between the parties.

Further, in the event of a dispute between the parties, _____[I or we] may not represent any one party without the written consent of all parties. Furthermore, under certain circumstances, _____[I or we] may be prevented from representing any of the parties, even with the consent of all parties.

In multiple representation, an attorney is more likely to balance the interests of all clients, in order to reach a consensus, rather than to aggressively represent a single person. Aggressive representation of a single person might result in "a better deal" for that person; and you may feel that you deserve "a better deal" because you have invested more time, money, or energy in this matter than have others.

Despite these additional risks of multiple representation, which _____[I or we] discussed with you in our _____[conversation or telephone conversation] of _____[date], you have informed us that you wish _____[me or us] to represent you and _____[list names of other participants] with regard to _____[describe matter] and that you do not wish to seek the advice of independent counsel.

Two copies of this letter and its attachment are enclosed. One copy is for your records. Please review this letter carefully, as it sets forth actual and potential conflicts of interest and other risks associated with multiple representation. If you have any questions about this letter or the consent, please contact _____[me or us] before signing the consent set forth below. In addition, you are free to consult with independent counsel regarding this letter or regarding any other matter related to this firm's representation of you in _____[describe matter].

§ 1A.204 Letter Requesting Consent From Adverse Client

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter requesting consent to a conflict from an adverse client. The purpose of this letter is to make full disclosure of the circumstances surrounding a representation that is adverse to a present or former client, and to obtain that client's informed written consent to the representation despite the adversity. For discussion of the required extent of such disclosure, refer to § 1A.203[1][a].

[b] When Consent Is Required

If the proposed representation of parties is actually adverse to a client or former client and relates to a matter about which the attorney has obtained confidential information, in addition to the consent of the current client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B); § 1A.203], the attorney must also obtain the informed, written consent of the current or former client whose interests are now adverse [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B),(E)].

Re: Proposed Representation of Adverse Interests

Dear _____ [name of adverse client] :

This letter confirms our _____[conversation or telephone conversation] of _____[date], in which _____[I or we] advised you that _____[I or the firm] has been requested to represent _____[name of client] with regard to _____[briefly describe proposed representation].

This firm _____[currently represents you or has represented you in the past] in _____[describe matter]. In the process of this representation, _____[I or we] received confidential information material to that representation.

_____[My or Our] representation of _____[name of client whose proposed representation is adverse] presents a conflict of interest because that client's interests are adverse to your interests in this proposed representation and because the proposed representation relates to a matter about which _____[I or we] received confidential information during the course of _____[my or our] representation of you in _____[describe matter].

When a proposed representation of parties is actually adverse to a client or former client and relates to a matter about which the attorney has obtained confidential information, the ethical rules of the State Bar of California require that the attorney obtain the written consent of the client or former client whose interests are adverse. A complete copy this rule (Rule 3-310 of the California Rule of Professional Conduct) is attached to this letter as Exhibit A.

In accordance with this rule and _____[my or our] ethical obligations, _____[I or we] must obtain your written consent to the proposed representation described above.

When we spoke on _____[date], you indicated that you did not object to _____[my or our] representation of _____[name of client] in _____[briefly describe proposed representation]. In that conversation, _____[I or we] also advised you that you are free to seek the advice of independent counsel on this proposed representation.

If, despite the conflict of interest presented by the proposed representation described above, you still wish to give your consent to that representation, please sign one of the two enclosed copies of this letter and return it to _____[me or us]. A second copy is enclosed for your files.

Before signing the consent set forth below, please review this letter carefully, as it sets forth conflicts of interest associated with the proposed adverse representation. If you have any questions about this letter or the consent, please contact _____[me or us] before signing the consent set forth below. In addition, you remain free to consult with independent counsel regarding any issue in this letter.

Very truly yours,

CONSENT

I have been advised that _____[name of attorney or name of firm] has been requested to represent _____[name of client] with regard to _____[briefly describe proposed representation].

I have been informed that this proposed representation of _____[name of client whose proposed representation is adverse] presents a conflict of interest because that client's interests are adverse to my interests in this proposed representation and because the proposed representation relates to a matter about which _____[name of attorney or name of firm] obtained confidential information material to the proposed representation during the course of my employment of _____[name of attorney or name of firm] in _____[describe matter]. I have also been given a copy of Rule 3-310 of the California Rules of Professional Conduct, which governs the representation of clients when actual or potential conflicts of interest exist.

I have been advised to seek the advice of independent counsel regarding the matter described above, if I so desire.

Nevertheless, despite the conflict of interest described in this letter, I consent to the representation of _____[name of adverse client] by _____[name of attorney or name of firm] with regard to the matter described above.

CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART IV. FORMS

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.205

§ 1A.205 Fictitious Business Name Statement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

Because a form for a fictitious business name statement is filed with the county clerk of the county in which the registrant has his or her principal place of business, each county requires use of its own form. This is the form for use in San Francisco County. It is included here to give an example of the type of information that will be required in other counties in the state.

[b] Who Must File

Every person who regularly transacts business in California for profit under a fictitious business name must file a fictitious business name statement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910]. In general, a "fictitious business name" is (1) any name other than the surname of an individual owner, the surnames of all general partners, or the full name of a business entity, or (2) a name that suggests the existence of additional owners Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b), (c); see § 1A.51[1], [2]]. Exclusions from this filing requirement are contained in the statutory definition of "fictitious business name" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b); see also §§ 1A.51[1], [2], 1A.114].

[c] Required Contents

The contents of the fictitious business name statement, as well as the form to be substantially followed, are set forth in the Business and Professions Code [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(a), (b)].

In general, the registrant must provide:

- The fictitious business name;
- The registrant's business address;

- The full name and, when required, residence address of individuals, general partners, and trustees [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(b)(3)];

- The nature of the business (i.e., type of business entity) chosen from statutory options [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(b)(4)]; and

- The date the registrant first commenced business under the fictitious name, if applicable.

For detailed coverage of the contents of the statement, see § 1A.130.

The registrant must declare that all information contained in the fictitious business name statement is true and correct. A registrant who declares as true any material matter that he or she knows to be false is guilty of a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(c)].

In practice, each county must prepare a standard form, such as this form, that complies with the requirement of the statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17924; see also [e], below].

[d] When to File

A fictitious business name statement must be filed no later than 40 days after the entity begins to transact business for profit in California [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910(a)]. Unless it expires earlier due to a change of facts or the filing of a statement of abandonment, a statement expires at the end of five years from the date it was originally filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920]. A change in the facts included in the original statement requires that a new statement be filed [Bus. & Prof. § 17910(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920(b)].

[e] Where to File; Forms to Be Furnished by County Clerk

A fictitious business name statement must be filed with the clerk of the county in which the registrant has his or her principal place of business in California or, if there is no place of business in California, with the Sacramento County clerk. The registrant may also file a statement in another county as well [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17915]. Forms may be obtained from the county clerk of the appropriate county. The county clerk is required to furnish forms that satisfy the statutory requirements of fictitious business name statements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(a)], without charge [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17924(a)]. However, there is a fee for filing the form. A sample form from San Francisco County is reproduced in [2], below.

[f] Execution and Publication Requirements

For execution requirements, see § 1A.130, Paragraph 3 [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17914, 17919]. Publication requirements are discussed in § 1A.51[5] [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917; Gov. Code § 6064].

[g] Effect of Filing

Using a fictitious business name does not create a separate legal entity. If a corporation is sued under its fictitious business name, but appears and responds under its corporate name, plaintiffs cannot continue the proceedings against the corporation under its fictitious business name. For example, plaintiffs who sued a corporation by its fictitious business name could not obtain a default judgment against the fictitious business name as a legally distinct entity after the corporation responded to the complaint in its corporate name and obtained a dismissal [Pinkerton's, Inc. v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1347-1348, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356].

CHAPTER 1A ROLE OF COUNSEL IN STARTING A NEW BUSINESS
PART IV. FORMS

1-1A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1A.206

§ 1A.206 Privacy Notice

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains sample privacy policies and provisions for use by financial institutions, as that term is broadly defined under federal law [see [e], below], to comply with regulations governing the dissemination of consumers' nonpublic personal information [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1 et seq.]. Primarily, the privacy policy must identify categories of information that the financial institution collects and the categories of information that the institution discloses [see 16 C.F.R. Pt. 313, Appendix A (sample clauses)]. This form contains several alternative sample privacy policy forms and provisions:

- First, a privacy notice that might be used by law firms, and can be adapted for use by financial planners and others receiving nonpublic personal information.
- Second, an alternative suited for an internet-based company.
- Third, clauses for use when the entity has affiliates.

These sample forms and provisions must be adapted to suit the individual privacy policies of persons and entities required to issue the notice.

[b] Governing Law

In 1999, Congress enacted legislation mandating that each financial institution has an affirmative and continuing obligation to respect the privacy of its customers and to protect the security and confidentiality of those customers' nonpublic personal information [15 U.S.C. § 6801(a)]. In general, a financial institution may not, directly or through any affiliate, disclose to a nonaffiliated third party any nonpublic personal information, unless the financial institution provides or has provided to the consumer a notice that complies with statutory requirements [15 U.S.C. § 6802(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 6803]. A financial institution may not disclose nonpublic personal information to a nonaffiliated third party unless (1) the institution clearly and conspicuously discloses to the consumer, in writing, in electronic form, or other permissible form that the information may be disclosed to the third party; (2) the consumer is given the opportunity, before the time that the information is initially disclosed, to direct that the information not be disclosed to the third party; and (3) the consumer is given an explanation of how the consumer can exercise that nondisclosure option [15 U.S.C. § 6802(b)(1); see 15 U.S.C. § 6802(b)(2) (exception)].

Regulations issued in connection with this federal legislation, known as the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 6801 et seq.], require each "financial institution" to notify its individual clients annually of its privacy policy and its practices regarding disclosure of nonpublic personal information [see 16 C.F.R. §§ 313.4, 313.5 et seq.; see [d], below]. The term "financial institution" is broadly defined. Thus, for example, the scope of the privacy notice requirement may include law firms preparing tax returns, providing tax planning advice, or furnishing real estate settlement services [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b); see also [e], below].

The federal statutes and regulations are expressly not to be construed as superseding, altering, or affecting any statute, regulation, order, or interpretation in effect in any state, except to the extent that the state statute, regulation, order, or interpretation is inconsistent with federal law provisions, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency [15 U.S.C. § 6807(a); 16 C.F.R. § 313.17(a)]. A state statute, regulation, order, or interpretation is not inconsistent if the protection of the state statute, regulation, order, or interpretation affords any person is greater than the protection provided under federal law [15 U.S.C. § 6807(b); 16 C.F.R. § 313.17(b)].

[c] Scope of Privacy Protection

The privacy protections governing the treatment of nonpublic personal information about consumers by financial institutions (1) require financial institutions to provide notice to customers about its privacy policies and practices in specified circumstances; (2) describe the conditions under which a financial institution may disclose nonpublic personal information about consumers to nonaffiliated third parties; and (3) provide a method for consumers to prevent a financial institution from disclosing that information to most nonaffiliated third parties by "opting out" of that disclosure [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(a); see 16 C.F.R. § 313.7 (opt out procedures); see also 16 C.F.R. § 313.13-313.15 (exceptions in to opt out procedures)]. These protections apply only to nonpublic personal information about individuals who obtain financial products or services primarily for personal, family or household purposes from financial institutions; they do not apply to information about companies or about individuals who obtain financial products or services for business, commercial, or agricultural purposes [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b)].

These privacy protections also apply to "other persons," that is, third parties that are not financial institutions, but that receive nonpublic personal information from financial institutions with whom they are not affiliated [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b)].

[d] "Nonpublic Personal Information" Defined

"Nonpublic personal information" is defined to mean the following [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(n)(1); see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1(o) ("personally identifiable financial information" defined); see also 16 C.F.R. § 313.1(p) ("publicly available information" defined)]:

- Personally identifiable financial information; and

- Any list, description, or other grouping of consumers (and publicly available information pertaining to them) that is derived using any personally identifiable financial information that is not publicly available.

The term does not include publicly available information, except as included on any list, description, or other grouping of consumers (and publicly available information pertaining to them) that is derived without using any personally identifiable financial information that is not publicly available [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(n)(2); see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1(n)(3) (examples)].

[e] "Financial Institutions" Defined

"Financial institutions" include, but are not limited to, mortgage lenders, "pay day" lenders, finance companies, mortgage brokers, account servicers, check cashers, wire transferors, travel agencies operated in connection with financial services, collection agencies, credit counselors and other financial advisors, tax preparation firms, non-federally insured credit unions, and investment advisors that are not required to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b)]. The term "financial institution" also includes any institution whose business is engaging in financial activities described in 12 U.S.C. § 1843(k). An institution that is significantly engaged in financial activities is a financial institution [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(k)(1)]. Examples of financial institutions include the following [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(k)(2)]:

- Retailers that extend credit by issuing their own credit cards directly to consumers.
- Personal property or real estate appraisers.
- Automobile dealerships that, as a usual part of business, lease automobiles on a nonoperating basis for longer than 90 days, with respect to its leasing business.
- Career counselors that specialize in providing career counseling services to individuals currently employed by or recently displaced from a financial organization, individuals who are seeking employment with a financial organization, or individuals who are currently employed by or seeking placement with the finance, accounting, or audit departments of any company; businesses that print and sell checks for consumers.
- Businesses that regularly wire money to and from consumers.
- Check cashing businesses.
- Accountants or other tax preparation services in the business of completing income tax returns.
- Businesses that operate a travel agency in connection with financial services.
- Entities that provides real estate settlement services.
- Mortgage brokers.
- Investment advisory companies.
- Credit counseling services.

The term "financial institution is subject to numerous specific exclusions. For example, financial institution does not include the following [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(k)(3); see 16 C.F.R. § 313.3(k)(4) (examples)]:

- Persons or entities with respect to any financial activity that is subject to the jurisdiction of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission under the Commodity Exchange Act [see 7 U.S.C. 1 et seq.].

- Institutions chartered by Congress specifically to engage in securitizations, secondary market sales (including sales of servicing rights) or similar transactions related to a transaction of a consumer, as long as the institutions do not sell or transfer nonpublic personal information to a nonaffiliated third party other than as permitted [see 16 C.F.R. §§ 313.14, 313.15].

- Entities that engage in financial activities but that are not significantly engaged in those financial activities.

[f] Initial Privacy Notice Requirements

Financial institutions must provide an initial, clear and conspicuous [see [c], above] privacy notice that accurately reflects their privacy policies and practices to the following [16 C.F.R. § 313.4]:

- New customers, no later than when the entity establishes a customer relationship [16 C.F.R. § 313.4(a)(1); but see 16 C.F.R. § 313.4(e)].

- Consumers, before disclosing any nonpublic personal information about the consumer to any nonaffiliated third party [16 C.F.R. § 313.4(a)(2); but see 16 C.F.R. §§ 313.14, 313.15 ("opt out" provisions)].

- Existing customers.

However, an initial notice to consumers is not required if the entity will not disclose any nonpublic personal information about the consumer to any nonaffiliated third party, other than under the opt out provisions [see 16 C.F.R. §§ 313.14, 313.15] and the entity does not have a customer relationship with the consumer [16 C.F.R. § 313.4(b)]. A "customer relationship" is established when the entity and the consumer enter into a continuing relationship. With regard to loans, a "customer relationship" is established with a consumer when the entity originates a loan to the consumer for personal, family, or household purposes. If the servicing rights are subsequently transferred to another financial institution, the customer relationship transfers with the servicing rights [16 C.F.R. § 313.4(c)(1), (2); see 16 C.F.R. § 313.4(c)(3) (examples)].

[g] Annual Privacy Notice Requirements

Financial institutions must provide a clear and conspicuous notice [see [c], above] to customers that accurately reflects the institution's privacy policies and practices not less than annually during the continuation of the customer relationship. Annually means at least once in any period of 12 consecutive months during which that relationship exists. The institution may define the 12-consecutive-month period, but the definition must be applied to the customer on a consistent basis [16 C.F.R. § 313.5(a)(1); see 16 C.F.R. § 313.5(a)(2) (examples)]. Notice to former customers is not required [16 C.F.R. § 313.5(b)].

[h] "Clear and Conspicuous" Notice Requirements

A privacy notice is "clear and conspicuous" if the notice is reasonably understandable and designed to call attention to the nature and significance of the information in the notice [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(b)(1)]. A notice is "reasonably understandable" if it does all of the following [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(b)(2)(i)]:

- Presents the information in the notice in clear, concise sentences, paragraphs, and sections.

- Uses short explanatory sentences or bullet lists whenever possible.

- Uses definite, concrete, everyday words and active voice whenever possible.
- Avoids multiple negatives.
- Avoids legal and highly technical business terminology whenever possible.
- Avoids explanations that are imprecise and readily subject to different interpretations.

A notice is "designed to call attention to the nature and significance of the information in the notice" if it does the following [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(b)(2)(ii)]:

- Uses a plain-language heading to call attention to the notice.
- Uses a typeface and type size that are easy to read.
- Provides wide margins and ample line spacing.
- Uses boldface or italics for key words.
- Uses distinctive type size, style, and graphic devices, such as shading or sidebars if the notice is combined with other information.

If a privacy notice is provided on a web page, the notice should be designed to call attention to the nature and significance of the information in it. It should use text or visual cues to encourage scrolling down the page if necessary to view the entire notice, and ensure that other elements on the web site (such as text, graphics, hyperlinks, or sound) do not distract attention from the notice. In addition, either (1) the notice should be placed on a screen that consumers frequently access, such as a page on which transactions are conducted; or (2) a link should be placed on a screen that consumers frequently access, such as a page on which transactions are conducted, that connects directly to the notice and is labeled appropriately to convey the importance, nature, and relevance of the notice [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(b)(2)(iii)].

[For law firms, use:]

_____[Name of firm] is sending you the following notice:

_____[Name of firm] receives nonpublic personal information regarding its clients from the clients themselves and from other professionals hired by the clients, such as accountants, financial advisors, and insurance brokers. As required by California law and the ethical rules governing the conduct of attorneys, _____[name of firm] safeguards the confidentiality of all nonpublic client information and discloses this information to third parties only when the client expressly or implicitly (as in the case of exchanges of information with the client's other professional advisors) consents to the disclosure or when disclosure is legally compelled.

Within the firm, _____[name of firm] restricts access to nonpublic personal information about its clients to those employees who need that access to provide legal services to those clients. _____[name of firm] maintains physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards to protect the confidentiality of clients' and former clients' nonpublic personal information.

_____[Name of firm] therefore does not disclose, and does not wish to reserve the right to disclose, nonpublic personal information about clients or former clients to anyone outside the firm, other than in the very limited circumstances described above.

[OR, for internet companies, use:]

_____[Name of entity] will collect, store, or use personally identifiable information, such as your name, address, telephone number, or e-mail address ("Your Information"), based on your voluntary submission to us. We will use Your Information to respond to requests you may make of us, and from time to time, we may use Your Information to better understand your needs and how we can improve our Web sites, products, and services. All such uses will comply with all applicable laws. We may also use Your Information to contact you. However, the submission of Your Information is only necessary if you choose to use or receive certain tools or services, such as _____[specify]. Any other information submitted by you in connection with these services or our websites that cannot be used to identify you ("Other Information") may be included in databases owned and maintained by _____[name of entity] or its agents. _____[Name of entity] retains all rights to these databases and the information contained in them.

Our Web sites, as do most internet sites, use Other Information and combine it with information that _____[specify, e.g., tracks the number of visitors to our site, the number of visitors to each page of the site, and the domain names of our visitors' internet service providers]. However, no personally identifiable information is available or used in this process.

Some of our Web sites use "cookies," that is, pieces of information that the computer hosting the site assigns to your computer browser when you access a Web site. Cookies help ensure a more accurate analysis of site usage. For example, our site may set a cookie on your browser that keeps you from needing to remember and enter a password more than once during a visit to the site. Whenever cookies are used, _____[name of entity] will not collect personally identifiable information without your permission.

In addition, our Web sites have security measures in place, _____[specify, e.g., including the use of industry standard secure socket layer encryption,] to protect the confidentiality of Your Information. However, your browser must support encryption protection to take advantage of this protection. These security measures also help us to honor your choices for the use of Your Information.

For the convenience of our visitors, this Web site contains links to a number of sites that we believe may offer useful information. The policies and procedures we described here do not apply to those sites. _____[Name of entity] suggests contacting those sites directly for information on their privacy, security, data collection, and distribution policies.

When a client wants to start a new business or to change the form of an existing business, counsel's responsibility is to assist the client in choosing the most appropriate form for the business activity. This chapter outlines the various business forms available under California law and provides an overview of the nontax and tax consequences of choosing a particular form. It compares the advantages and disadvantages of the most common noncorporate and corporate forms of business organization, including the sole proprietorship, the general partnership, the limited partnership, the limited liability company, the for-profit corporation, the Subchapter S corporation, the closely held corporation, and the personal services corporation.

Forms of business organization for which a client would likely consult specialized counsel, such as nonprofit corporations, are not within the scope of this chapter. For a discussion of nonprofit corporations, see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations . In addition, organizational forms subject to specialized government regulation, such as banks, insurance companies, and trust companies are not covered in this chapter.

The Transaction Guide provides a checklist of facts and documents to obtain and determinations to be made in choosing the most appropriate business form. Detailed procedures on how to form the chosen business entity are outside the scope of this chapter. For formation of general partnerships, see Ch. 15, Part A, Formation of General Partnerships . For formation of limited partnerships, see Ch. 15A, Formation of Limited Partnerships . For a discussion of general corporate formation, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations , Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation , and Ch. 4, Bylaws . For formation of Subchapter S corporations, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status . For additional information about close corporations, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements . For formation of professional corporations, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations ; for formation of limited liability companies, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies . Formation of limited liability partnerships is covered in Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

For additional information relevant to starting a new business, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business , Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers , Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses , and Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation .

For additional discussion of business entities, see California Small Business Guide (Matthew Bender).

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.10

§ 1B.10 Sole Proprietorship

[1] Definition

A sole proprietorship is a form of business in which an individual carries on a for-profit business as the sole owner and decision-maker. The sole proprietorship is the simplest and least expensive form of business organization to form and to conduct from both a nontax and tax point of view. A sole proprietorship form appeals to individuals starting a business that is intended to remain small, does not involve great exposure to personal liability, and does not warrant the expense of incorporation nor the ongoing expense of corporate formalities. Professionals such as doctors, lawyers, and architects sometimes elect to function as sole proprietors during the early years of practice to avoid the expenses and formalities of incorporation.

Generally, a husband and wife can conduct business jointly and hold joint title to business assets in both names and still come within the definition of a sole proprietorship [see Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1)].

[2] Salient Characteristics

[a] Extent of Personal Liability

In a sole proprietorship, the owner is personally liable for the obligations and liabilities of the business, even in excess of the amount invested. Thus, not only are business assets vulnerable, assets personally owned by the sole proprietor are also subject to the risks of the business. Even with insurance, the possibility remains that liability may exceed available insurance coverage [see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation]. The extent of personal financial risk to the sole proprietor is usually a consideration if the sole proprietor owns assets in excess of those dedicated to the business or if the business uses hazardous materials, produces hazardous products, or is otherwise likely to lead to accidental injury to an employee or customer.

[b] Availability of Capital

The capital used in a sole proprietorship is limited to the personal funds of the owner and to the owner's ability to borrow. Here again, the sole proprietor is personally liable for repaying borrowed funds, even if money generated by the business itself is inadequate to do so.

[c] Continuity of Existence

For a sole proprietorship, continued existence depends on the legal competence and continued life of the owner. A sole proprietorship ceases to exist on either incapacity or death of the owner.

[d] Taxation

For tax purposes, the salient feature of a sole proprietorship is the taxability of business income and the deductibility of business losses on the proprietor's individual return [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1); Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17071, 17072; I.R.C. § 465(a), (b) (at-risk limitation on deductibility of loss)].

For a more detailed discussion of the tax attributes of a sole proprietorship, see the portions of §§ 1B.60- 1B.68 relating to sole proprietorships. For an enumeration of the advantages and disadvantages of conducting business as a sole proprietorship, see § 1B.102.

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.11

§ 1B.11 General Partnership

General partnerships formed under California law are governed by the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA '94), which took effect on January 1, 1997 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.; see Corp. Code § 16111].

A general partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on a business for profit as co-owners [Corp. Code § 16101(9)]. The term "person" includes individuals, partnerships, corporations, limited liability partnerships, limited liability companies, and other associations [Corp. Code § 16101(13)]. General partnerships may engage in every trade, occupation, or profession [see Corp. Code § 16101(1), (9)]. However, to engage in the banking business, a general partnership must be duly organized for that purpose [Fin. Code § 102].

If a dispute arises as to whether a particular group is actually a partnership, the determining factor is usually the existence of a partnership agreement, whether oral or written. However, the intentions of the parties to conduct the business as co-owners, with mutual right of control and with the right of each owner to share in the profits of the business, may also be shown by the surrounding circumstances [Greene v. Brooks (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 165-166, 45 Cal. Rptr. 99]. For example, sharing business profits is presumptive evidence that the receiver is a partner in the business, unless profits are received in payment of a debt or as wages, rent, an annuity, a loan, or consideration for the sale of goodwill or other business property [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(2), (3)], or unless one of the exceptions of joint ownership exists [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1)].

Although not as simple a form of business organization as the sole proprietorship, a general partnership is easier to organize than a limited partnership or a corporation and can provide a relatively simple arrangement regarding management and control, capital contributions, and the sharing of profits and losses.

For a more detailed discussion of the tax and nontax attributes of general partnerships, see §§ 1B.40-1B.48 and 1B.60-1B.68 as they relate to general partnerships. For an enumeration of the advantages and disadvantages of conducting business as a general partnership, see § 1B.111. The formation, operation, and dissolution of general partnerships are discussed in greater detail in Ch. 15, General Partnerships .

[2] Salient Characteristics

[a] Management and Control

Each general partner is an agent for the partnership for the purpose of conducting its business. All partners are bound by any partner who acts within the scope of partnership business, unless the partner actually lacks the authority to act and the other party has knowledge of this fact [Corp. Code § 16301(1)].

[b] Extent of Personal Liability

Partners in a general partnership like sole proprietors (and unlike limited partners in a limited partnership and corporate shareholders) are personally liable, jointly and severally, for partnership debts, obligations, and liabilities [Corp. Code § 16306(a); see Corp. Code § 16305; see also Great Western Bank v. Kong (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 28, 31-33, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 266 (although under Corp. Code § 16306(a) all partners were jointly and severally liable for bank loan on real property, after foreclosure and entry of deficiency judgment, assignment of judgment to partnership and 11 of 12 partners extinguished the debt; the 11 partners could not acquire bank's right to collect balance of judgment from 12th partner, their co-obligor)]. A general partner's liability is not limited to that partner's percentage interest in the partnership, but extends to his or her other assets as well [Corp. Code §§ 16305(a), 16306]. However, some limited liability might be achieved if a partner is an entity, other than a natural person, with its own limited liability.

A judgment against a partnership is not by itself a judgment against a partner. A judgment against a partnership may not be satisfied from a partner's assets unless there is also a judgment against the partner [Corp. Code § 16307(c)]. However, a timely IRS assessment against a partnership for a tax debt for which the general partners were secondarily liable has been held sufficient to extend the statute of limitations for collection of the tax from the general partners. It was not necessary for the IRS to separately assess the general partners during the limitations period in order to extend the statute of limitations for collecting the tax from the general partners in a judicial proceeding [United States v. Galletti (2004) 541 U.S. 114, 124 S. Ct. 1548, 158 L. Ed. 2d 279, 284-285 ; see I.R.C. § 6502].

A partnership's ability to borrow, like that of a sole proprietorship, usually depends on the individual partners' creditworthiness and on the availability of business assets to serve as collateral. Partnership capital interests are generally not considered securities subject to regulation by federal and state securities law [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa (federal Securities Act of 1933); Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706 (California Corporate Securities Law of 1968)].

[d] Continuity of Existence

Continuity of existence is more tenuous in a general partnership than in a corporation. Although the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] generally made it easier for general partnerships to continue after the "dissociation" [see Corp. Code § 16601 (defining "dissociation")] (by death or otherwise) of a general partner, there are still circumstances under which a general partnership will dissolve unless the remaining partners take affirmative steps to continue it. In the case of a partnership at will, the partnership is disolved by the express will of at least half of the partners (other than wrongfully dissociating partners) to dissolve and wind up the partnership business [Corp. Code § 16801(1)]. In the case of a partnership for a definite term or particular undertaking, a partnership is dissolved when any of the following occur [Corp. Code § 16801(2)]:

- Ninety days after a partner's dissociation by death or otherwise, unless before that time a majority in interest of the partners (including partners who have rightfully dissociated) agree to continue the partnership.

- The express will of the partners to wind up the partnership business.

- The expiration of the term or the completion of the undertaking.

- An event agreed to in the partnership agreement resulting in the winding up of the partnership business.

- An event that makes it unlawful for all or substantially all of the partnership business to be continued.

- A judicial determination that either (1) the economic purpose of the partnership is likely to be frustrated; (2) another partner has engaged in conduct relating to the partnership business that makes it not reasonably practicable to carry on the business in partnership with that partner; or (3) it is not otherwise reasonably practicable to carry on the partnership business in conformity with the partnership agreement.

- On application by a transferee of a partnership interest, a judicial determination that it is equitable to wind up the partnership business after the expiration of the term or completion of the undertaking, if the partnership was for a definite term of particular undertaking at the time of the transfer or entry of the charging order that gave rise to the transfer.

[e] Taxation

A general partnership is a separate tax-reporting entity for income tax purposes and must file an informational return that details income and deductions [I.R.C. § 6031(a)]. A general partnership is not a separate taxable entity [I.R.C. § 701]. Further, general partnerships (unlike limited partnerships, limited liability companies, and limited liability partnerships) need not pay a tax for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17851.5; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153; see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17935, 17941, 17948]. This tax is not deductible by any entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17220(c)].

Partnership income and losses flow through to the individual partners proportionately, as agreed, provided there is "substantial economic effect" to the agreement and subject to the amount of the adjusted basis of the partner's interest in the partnership [I.R.C. § 704(a), (b)(2)]. These items of income and loss are reflected on each partner's individual income tax return [see I.R.C. §§ 701-761].

State law that classifies an entity as a partnership is not controlling for income tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-1(a)(1)]. Classification of an entity as a partnership rather than a corporation for federal tax purposes formerly required a determination that the entity had fewer corporate than noncorporate characteristics, and required a potentially complicated analysis of whether or not the entity possessed one or more of four corporate characteristics on which the regulations based this determination. However, regulations effective January 1, 1997 [Treas. Reg. §§ 301.7701-1-301.7701-3] abolished this approach and instead permit most unincorporated entities to elect to be taxed as a corporation or as a partnership. Entities with only a single owner may elect to be classified as a single owner or to be disregarded as an entity separate from their owners Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.12

§ 1B.12 Limited Partnership

A limited partnership is a partnership formed by two or more persons [Corp. Code §§ 15611(z), 15901.02(y)] that has one or more general partners and one or more limited partners (or their equivalents under another name) [Corp. Code §§ 171.5, 15501, 15611(n), (q), (r), 15901.02(m), (p), (q)]. A limited partnership is a hybrid form of business organization having some attributes of a general partnership and some attributes of a corporation; it provides a vehicle through which certain principals (limited partners) may avoid subjecting personal assets outside of their investment in the partnership to the claims of the partnership's creditors. A limited partner is a partner whose participation in management is limited by statute or agreement and, assuming that limitation is honored, whose liability is ordinarily limited to the assets contributed to the partnership and any obligations for subsequent contributions [see Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15636, 15666, 15903.02, 15903.03; see also [2][b], below]. A partnership agreement may specify classes of general and limited partners, and if so, the agreement must define the rights, powers, and duties of the classes relative to each other [Corp. Code §§ 15631.5, 15645, 15903.07, 15904.09].

The Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (ULPA '08), set forth in Corp. Code §§ 15900-15912.07, becomes operative on January 1, 2008 [see Corp. Code § 15912.04]. Existing provisions governing limited partnerships, i.e., the Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15501-15533] and the California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15611-15723], become inoperative and are repealed on January 1, 2010 [see Corp. Code §§ 15534, 15724]. Before that date, the new Act governs only [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(a)]:

- Limited partnerships formed on or after January 1, 2008; and
- Limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008, which elect to be subject to the new Act.

On and after January 1, 2010, except as otherwise provided, the new Act will govern all limited partnerships [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(b)]. It will not affect any action commenced, proceeding brought, or right accrued before its operative date [see Corp. Code § 15912.07; see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships].

The formation and operation of a limited partnership, like a corporation or limited liability company, requires more formality than does the formation and operation of a general partnership. However, limited partnership formation requirements are minimal: a limited partnership must file a certificate of limited partnership with the Secretary of State and must have an oral or written partnership agreement [Corp. Code §§ 15611(y), 15621(a), 15901.02(z), 15902.01; see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships]. These documents govern the business operations of the entity.

A limited partnership may be organized for any lawful purpose, and may engage in any lawful business activity (whether or not for profit) except the banking business, the business of issuing policies of insurance and assuming insurance risks, or the trust company business [Corp. Code § 15901.04(b); see Corp. Code § 15503, 15616]. Limited partnerships may merge into one limited partnership, or with or into other business entities, including corporations, general partnerships, limited liability companies, business trusts, or for-profit unincorporated associations [Corp. Code §§ 15611(v), 15678.1, 15901.02(u), 15911.02, 16901, 23006].

For a more detailed discussion of the tax and nontax attributes of a limited partnership, see §§ 1B.40-1B.48 and 1B.60-1B.68 as they relate to limited partnerships. For an enumeration of the advantages and disadvantages of conducting business as an limited partnership, see § 1B.112. The formation, operation, dissolution, and merger of limited partnerships are discussed in greater detail in Chs. 16-16B.

[a] Management and Control

A general partner in a limited partnership has exclusive management authority except as otherwise provided by law or the partnership agreement [Corp. Code §§ 15643(a), 15904.06; see Corp. Code § 15618, 15901.10]. Limited partners may not participate in management without losing their limited liability [Corp. Code § 15632, 15903.03]. A general partner in a limited partnership has, by and large, the same rights and powers as a partner in a general partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15509, 15643(a), 15904.06]. However, a single general partner in a limited partnership may have more freedom of management and control than a partner in a general partnership simply because the other limited partners do not share in the decision-making process.

[b] Extent of Personal Liability

The liability of a general partner in a limited partnership is basically the same as that of a partner in a general partnership. The general partner in a limited partnership is personally liable for all partnership debts, obligations, and liabilities [Corp. Code §§ 15509, 15643(b), 15904.04].

The liability of limited partners is ordinarily limited to their capital contributions, any commitments for future contributions, and, when partnership assets are insufficient to satisfy partnership liabilities, any distributions received from the partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15666, 15903.13, 15905.09(b)]. However, this limited liability status may be lost if the proper formalities are not observed in the formation of the limited partnership. For example, limited liability is lost if the limited partner is named as a general partner in the certificate, or if the limited partner participates in the control of the business [see Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15903.03].

In addition to the sources of capital available to a general partnership, limited partners often personally guarantee loans or the limited partnership may sell limited partnership interests. These interests often appeal to investors because of the associated limited liability. However, the transfer of limited partnership interests is ordinarily restricted, sometimes making them somewhat less attractive as an investment than corporate shares. Limited partnership interests are considered securities and are regulated by federal and state securities laws unless the securities qualify for an available exemption [see 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a); Corp. Code § 25102(f), (h)].

[d] Continuity of Existence

Under the CRLPA, a limited partnership is dissolved and its affairs must be would up on the earliest of the following [Corp. Code §§ 15642, 15681]:

- The occurrence of an event specified in the agreement.
- The written consent of the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners.
- Unless otherwise provided in the partnership agreement, when a general partner ceases to be a general partner, unless (1) there is at least one other general partner and the remaining general partner (or all remaining general partners if more than one remains) continues the business of the limited partnership or (2) if no general partners remain, a majority in interest of the limited partners (or greater interest required by agreement) agree in writing to continue the business of the partnership and, within six months after the last remaining general partner has ceased to be a general partner, to admit one or more general partners.
- The entry of a decree of judicial dissolution.

Ordinarily, the death, incompetence [Corp. Code § 15675], or withdrawal of a limited partner [Corp. Code § 15663], or the sale or assignment [Corp. Code § 15672] of a limited partner interest does not dissolve the entity.

Under ULPA '08, a limited partnership has a perpetual duration [Corp. Code § 15901.04(c); see Corp. Code § 15912.06(c) (exception for limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008)].

A partnership is dissolved, and its activities must be wound up, only upon the occurrence of any of the following [Corp. Code § 15908.01]:

- The happening of an event specified in the partnership agreement.
- The consent of all general partners and of limited partners owning a majority of the rights to receive distributions as limited partners at the time the consent is to be effective.
- After the dissociation of a person as a general partner:
  - If the partnership has at least one remaining general partner, and a consent to dissolve the partnership is given within 90 days after the dissociation by partners owning a majority of the rights to receive distributions as partners at the time the consent is to be effective; or
  - If the partnership does not have a remaining general partner, the passage of 90 days after the dissociation, unless before the end of 90 days consent to continue the activities of the partnership and admit at least one general partner is given by limited partners owning a majority of the rights to receive distributions as limited partners at the time the consent is to be effective; and at least one person is admitted as a general partner in accordance with the consent.

- The passage of 90 days after the dissociation of the partnership's last limited partner, unless before the end of the period the limited partnership admits at least one limited partner.

Furthermore, on application by a partner, a court of competent jurisdiction may order dissolution of a partnership if it is not reasonably practicable to carry on its activities in conformity with the partnership agreement [Corp. Code § 15908.02].

For further discussion, see Ch. 16A, Dissolution of Limited Partnerships .

[e] Taxation

Like a general partnership, a limited partnership is a separate tax-reporting entity for federal and state income tax purposes and must file an informational return [I.R.C. § 6031(a)]. Neither a limited partnership nor a general partnership is a separate taxable entity [I.R.C. § 701], with one exception. At the time either entity files its state information return, a limited partnership must pay a tax for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17851.5, 17935; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153]. This tax is not deductible by the entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17220(c)].

Partnership income flows through to the individual partners in proportion to each partner's interest [I.R.C. § 702(a)]. A partner who actively participates in partnership business may use partnership losses to offset income from other sources, up to the amount of the partner's capital investment, plus the partner's allocable share of recourse debt [I.R.C. § 465(a)(1), (3)]. However, for a limited partner, the deductibility of losses is restricted by the "passive activity" rules that generally limit the deductibility of such losses in a tax year to the amount of passive activity income for the year [I.R.C. § 469(e)]. Disallowed losses are carried forward to the next taxable year until the amount of passive income equals the available passive losses or until the disposition of the investment [I.R.C. § 469(b), (g)]. This restriction often limits the incentive to invest as a limited partner, since, ordinarily, the taxable income a client is seeking to reduce is income earned by the client's active participation as a wage earner or a business owner, which the passive loss of a limited partnership investment cannot be used to offset [I.R.C. § 469(a)(1), (2)].

As with general partnerships, state law that classifies an entity as a limited partnership is not controlling for income tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-1(a)(1)]. Classification of an entity as a partnership rather than a corporation for federal tax purposes formerly required a determination that the entity had fewer corporate than noncorporate characteristics, and required a potentially complicated analysis of whether or not the entity possessed one or more of four corporate characteristics on which the regulations based this determination. However, regulations effective January 1, 1997 [Treas. Reg. §§ 301.7701-1- 301.7701-3] abolished this approach and instead permit most unincorporated entities to elect to be taxed as a corporation or a partnership. Entities with only a single owner may elect to be classified as a single owner or to be disregarded as an entity separate from their owners [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)].

California generally conforms to the federal entity classification rules under Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-2 [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038; see also FTB Notice 92-5]. The classification of a business entity as an association taxable as a corporation is determined under FTB regulations, which must be consistent with the federal regulations in effect on January 1, 1997, that classify a business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation, or disregard the separate existence of the business entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(i)]. The classification of an eligible business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation is the same as the classification of the entity for federal tax purposes; if the separate existence of the LLC is disregarded for federal tax purposes (for example, because the LLC has a single owner), the separate existence will be disregarded for California purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(ii), (iii)]. For more detailed discussion, see § 15A.70 in the Legal Background to Ch. 15A, Formation of Limited Partnerships .

§ 1B.13 Limited Liability Company

[1] Definition

A limited liability company (LLC) is a business entity that is essentially a hybrid of a corporation and partnership. An LLC is an entity having one or more members that is organized under the Beverly-Killea Limited Liability Company Act (Act) [Corp. Code § 17000 et seq.; see Corp. Code §§ 17001(t), 17050(b)]. The LLC form offers great flexibility: the Act is designed to assist the formation and operation of small, closely-held or operated business arrangements, but permits LLC structures that are attractive to larger, more complex business ventures. Areas in which the LLC structure are likely to be particularly useful include real estate, joint ventures (especially joint ventures with foreign partners and between corporations), high technology and venture capital, petroleum production, and theatrical investments.

A California LLC can have the income tax transparency of a partnership on both the state and federal level, avoiding the double taxation inherent in the use of a general corporation, without the restrictions imposed on S corporations, close corporations, and limited partnerships [see [e], below]. The use of a properly structured LLC can also limit the liability of its members, managers, and officers to their investments and commitments to invest in the LLC; this limited liability is similar to that enjoyed by corporate shareholders and limited partners, without the restrictions against management and control applicable to limited partners [see [b], below].

The formation and operation of an LLC is relatively simple. However, like a corporation or limited partnership, more formality in formation and operation is required than in either a general partnership or sole proprietorship. An LLC is formed by filing articles of organization with the Secretary of State, and must have an oral or written operating agreement [Corp. Code § 17050].

LLCs are prohibited from engaging in the banking business, the business of issuing policies of insurance and assuming insurance risks, or the trust company business [Corp. Code § 17002(a); but see Corp. Code § 17002(b) (subsidiary LLC may operate as licensed health care service plan)]. In addition, LLCs may not perform professional services; professional services are those services that may only be lawfully rendered under a license, certificate, or registration authorized by the Business and Professions Code, the Osteopathic Act, the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act, or the Chiropractic Action [Stats. 1994, ch. 1200, § 93; Corp. Code §§ 13401(a), 13401.3; see § 1B.31[2][b]].

For a more detailed discussion of the tax and nontax attributes of LLCs, see §§ 1B.40-1B.48 and 1B.60-1B.68 as they relate to LLCs. For an enumeration of the advantages and disadvantages of conducting business as an LLC, see § 1B.113. The formation, operation, dissolution, and merger of LLCs are discussed in greater detail in Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

[a] Management and Control

The management and control of an LLC is extremely flexible. An LLC may be managed by all of its members, or by one or more managers [Corp. Code §§ 17150, 17151]. The managers may be some or all of the members, but need not be members or natural persons [Corp. Code § 17151(a), (c)]. All that the statute requires is that if the LLC is to be managed by one or more managers, the articles of organization must contain a statement to that effect. Neither the names of the managers nor the number of managers need be specified in the articles, but if management is vested in only one manager, the articles must so state [Corp. Code § 17151(b)]. Even if the articles do not vest management in a manager or managers, the articles or operating agreement may restrict or enlarge the management rights and duties of any member or class of members [Corp. Code § 17150]. The articles of organization or the operating agreement may restrict or enlarge the management rights and duties of any members or classes of members [Corp. Code § 17150].

[b] Extent of Personal Liability

[i] Members

A member of an LLC ordinarily is not personally liable for any debt, obligation, or liability of the LLC arising in contract, tort, or otherwise solely by virtue of that membership [Corp. Code § 17101(a)]. However, an LLC member is subject to liability under the common law governing alter ego liability [Corp. Code § 17101(b)]. Further, a member may agree to be obligated personally for any or all of the LLC's debts, obligations, and liabilities, as long as the agreement to be obligated is set forth in the articles of organization or in a written operating agreement that specifically refers to the code section (Corp. Code § 17101(e)) authorizing liability [Corp. Code § 17101(e)]. Furthermore, a member is personally liable under a court judgment or for an obligation of the LLC under the same or similar circumstances, and to the same extent, as a corporate shareholder may be personally liable for a corporate obligation, except that the failure to hold meetings or to observe formalities pertaining to those meetings does not tend to establish personal liability for members if the articles of organization or operating agreement do not require meetings [Corp. Code § 17101(b)].

Members are personally liable for tortious conduct, and are also personally liable pursuant to the terms of any written guarantee or other contractual obligation (other than an operating agreement) entered into by the member [Corp. Code § 17101(c)]. In addition, personal liability may attach to a member who is responsible for filing returns or paying tax for any unpaid taxes (and any interest or penalties) if the member willfully fails to pay or cause to be paid any taxes due [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829(a), (b); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829(d) ("willful failure" defined)]. However, personal liability may be imposed only if the Franchise Tax Board can establish that (1) the LLC had included tax reimbursement in the selling price of, or added tax reimbursement to the selling price of, tangible personal property sold in the conduct of its business, or (2) the LLC consumed personal property and failed to pay the tax to the seller or has included use tax on the billing and collected the use tax or has issued a receipt for the use tax and failed to report and pay use tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829(c)]. The Board of Equalization (BOE) may issue a deficiency determination against members responsible for nonpayment of an LLC's sales and use tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829(e); see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6451 et seq., 6701 et seq.]. The determination must be issued within the earlier of [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829(f)]:

- Three years after the last day of the calendar month following the quarter period in which the BOE obtains actual knowledge, through its audit activities, compliance activities, or written communication by the business, of the termination, dissolution, or abandonment of the entity; or

- Eight years after the last day of the calendar month following the quarterly period in which the entity was terminated, dissolved, or abandoned.

If the LLC files a notice of termination, dissolution, or abandonment of the entity with a state or local agency other than the BOE, that filing will not constitute actual knowledge of the BOE for purposes of timely issuance of a deficiency determination [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829(f)].

Members are personally liable to the extent of any improper distribution received by a member (provided that the member had actual knowledge of facts indicating the impropriety of the distribution) [Corp. Code § 17254(e)]. Further, any member or manager voting for a distribution that violates the operating agreement or statute is personally liable for the amount of the distribution that exceeds the amount that could have properly been paid [Corp. Code § 17255(a)].

[ii] Managers and Officers

In general, managers and officers of an LLC are not personally liable for any debt, obligation, or liability of the LLC solely by virtue of that status [Corp. Code § 17158 (a)]. However, a manager may agree to be obligated personally for any or all of the LLC's debts, obligations, and liabilities if the agreement to be liable is set forth in the articles or a written operating agreement that specifically refers to the code section (Corp. Code § 17158(b)) authorizing liability [Corp. Code § 17158(b)(1)]. Furthermore, a manager may agree to be obligated pursuant to the terms of a written guarantee or other contractual obligation (other than an operating agreement) entered into by the manager [Corp. Code § 17158(b)(2)]. In addition, managers owe the same fiduciary duties to the LLC and its member as partners owe to a partnership and the other partners of that partnership, and may be held personally liable for any breach of that duty [Corp. Code §§ 17153, 17155(a); see Corp. Code § 17005(d) (modification of fiduciary duty in written operating agreement)]. Managers are similarly liable for unpaid sales taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829; see State Board of Equalization v. Wirick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 411, 413, 419, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919 (Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829 applied to former chief financial officer of corporation, despite fact that he had resigned position over one year before corporation ceased business; because present tense in statute includes past tense, section covers former officers as well as those in charge when corporation ceases); see also [i], above], and for voting for an improper distribution [Corp. Code § 17255; see Corp. Code §§ 17254, 17353]. Although the liability of managers for tortious conduct is not mentioned in the Act, as is the liability of members [Corp. Code § 17101(c)], presumably managers would also be personally liable for tortious conduct. LLC managers may also be subject to fine or imprisonment for failure to warn employees of, or to abate, serious concealed workplace dangers [Penal Code § 387].

[c] Availability of Capital

The capital requirements of an LLC ordinarily are satisfied through equity contributions from its members. In addition, loans secured by LLC property or the personal guarantees of members are often used. Because liability can essentially be limited to the amount of the investment [see [b], above] and the availability of different classes of members to provide flexibility among investors [see [a], above], LLCs can be attractive to capital investors.

In general, an LLC does not have perpetual existence [see Corp. Code §§ 17051(a)(2), 17350]. For example, an LLC may be dissolved by the vote of a majority in interest of the members, or a greater percentage as specified in the articles of organization or written operating agreement [Corp. Code § 17350(b)]. Further, the articles may specify a time certain for, or events that cause, dissolution, in which case the LLC is dissolved as of the specified time or on the occurrence of the designated events [Corp. Code §§ 17051(c)(3), (4), 17350(a)]; these provisions are somewhat illusory because the organizational documents may be amended. Finally, an LLC is dissolved on the entry of a decree of dissolution [Corp. Code § 17350(c); see Corp. Code § 17351]. However, the importance of continuity of existence, or more accurately the lack thereof, has diminished since the liberalization of the federal entity classification rules. Effective January 1, 1997, partnership tax status is a matter of election rather than of counting corporate characteristics [see Treas. Reg. §§ 301.7701-1- 301.7701-3; see also [e], below].

Prior to 1997, the tax classification of an LLC--that is, whether the LLC was taxed as a corporation or as a partnership--was determined by weighing the number of corporate versus noncorporate characteristics possessed by the LLC [see, e.g., Rev. Proc. 95-10 , § 4, 1995-1 C.B. 501 (now obsolete)]. These characteristics were (1) continuity of life; (2) centralized management; (3) limited liability for the obligations of the business; and (4) free transferability of interests. If partnership tax treatment was desired, it was important to structure the LLC so that at least some of these corporate characteristics were avoided.

This, however, is no longer the case. Under liberalized classification rules that took effect on January 1, 1997, an LLC with two or more members may elect to be taxed either as a corporation or as a partnership. An LLC with a single owner (i.e., a qualifying trust) may elect either to be taxed as a corporation or to be disregarded as an entity separate from its owner [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)]. If an LLC does not make an election, it will be taxed as a partnership if it has two or more members, or will be disregarded as an entity separate from its owner if it has only one member [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(b)(1)]. Note that existing LLCs that do not make an election will retain the classification that they would have claimed under the pre-1997 regulations [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(b)(3)].

California generally conforms to the federal entity classification rules under Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-2 [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038; see also FTB Notice 92-5]. The classification of a business entity as an association taxable as a corporation is determined under FTB regulations, which must be consistent with the federal regulations in effect on January 1, 1997, that classify a business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation, or disregard the separate existence of the business entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(i)]. The classification of an eligible business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation is the same as the classification of the entity for federal tax purposes; if the separate existence of the LLC is disregarded for federal tax purposes (for example, because the LLC has a single owner), the separate existence will be disregarded for California purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(ii), (iii)]. However, if an eligible business entity was properly classified as an association taxable as a corporation for any income year beginning with the 60-month period preceding January 1, 1997, the entity continues to be an association taxable as a corporation until it elects to be classified the same as the entity is classified for federal purposes; this rule does not apply to any entity that was not doing business in California, did not derive income from California, and had no California resident owner during the 60-month period preceding January 1, 1997 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(C)].

LLCs still are subject to the annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941, 23153, 23038(b)(2)(B)(iii)] and must pay a graduated entity level fee based on total income from all sources reportable to California [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17942 (fee applicable to income of $250,000 or more), 23038(b)(2)(B)(iii)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

1. Noncorporate Forms

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.14

§ 1B.14 Joint Venture

[1] Definition Under State Law

A joint venture is similar to a partnership and there is little practical distinction between the two entities [see Zeibak v. Nasser (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 1, 12, 82 P.2d 375] .

A joint venture is like a partnership in that its members associate as co-owners of a business enterprise, agreeing to share profits and losses. However, a joint venture is usually formed for a transaction or a series of transactions, thus being more limited in both scope and duration, while a partnership ordinarily engages in a continuing business for an indefinite or fixed period of time [Rickless v. Temple (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 869, 893, 84 Cal. Rptr. 828] . This distinction is not ironclad as a partnership may be formed for a single business transaction and for a defined period of time [see Kaufman-Brown Potato Co. v. Long (9th Cir. 1950) 182 F.2d 594, 599] .

A joint venture, like a partnership, is formed under California law by an agreement between the parties, which may be oral or written, and may be implied from the acts as well as the statements of the participants [Rickless v. Temple (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 869, 894, 84 Cal. Rptr. 828 ; Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 749, 177 P.2d 931 ; see De Anza Enterprises v. Johnson (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1307, 1314-1315, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 (litigation between joint venturers over buyout procedure set forth in written joint venture agreement)]. Whether a joint venture exists depends on the intention of the parties [Rennick v. O.P.T.I.O.N. Care, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 77 F.3d 309, 317 ; April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV and Metromedia, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819, 195 Cal. Rptr. 421 ; Universal Sales Corp. v. California Press Mfg. Co. (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 751, 704-765, 128 P. 2d 665] .

There are three basic elements of a joint venture [Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1666, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 ; 580 Folsom Associates v. Prometheus Development Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15-16, 272 Cal. Rptr. 227] :

- The members must have joint control over the venture (even though they may delegate it);

- They must share the profits of the undertaking; and
- The members must each have an ownership interest in the enterprise.

Some courts have not upheld the authority of one joint venturer to bind the venture, and to impose liability on the other joint venturers, when the venture's undertaking is limited in scope and it would be inequitable to do so [see Hayward's v. Nelson (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 807, 299 P.2d 1013] . Other courts, however, have made no such distinction and have applied the mutual agency theory of a partnership to bind joint venturers [see Smalley v. Baker (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 824, 69 Cal. Rptr. 521] .

Thus, for practical purposes, there is no significant distinction between a joint venture and a partnership, except, perhaps, for that given it by tradition.

[2] Definition for Tax Purposes

A joint venture is defined for tax purposes as a joint transaction of two or more persons for the purpose of making a profit, without any "actual corporate or partnership designation" [Tompkins v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (1938) 97 F.2d 396, 398] . The difference between a joint venture and a partnership is that the former relates to a single transaction, while the latter involves a general and continuing business of a particular kind [Bartholomew v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (1951) 186 F.2d 315, 317] . However, because a joint venture is taxed as a partnership by both the federal and the state taxing authorities, there is no significant distinction between the two entities for tax purposes [I.R.C. §§ 761(a), 7701(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)].

§ 1B.15 Other Noncorporate Forms

[1] Business Trust

The Massachusetts or business trust is an unincorporated business entity in which the assets are held and managed by trustees for the benefit of holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the trust [see Goldwater v. Oltman (1930) 210 Cal. 408, 292 P. 624] . Beneficiaries of the trust ordinarily are not personally liable for the liabilities of the trust unless they exercise direct control over the assets or the trustees [Goldwater v. Oltman (1930) 210 Cal. 408, 292 P. 624 ; Bernesen v. Fish (1933) 135 Cal. App. 588, 28 P.2d 67] ; the liability of a trustee of a business trust for trust obligations is substantially similar to that of a general partner in a limited partnership [see Goldwater v. Oltman (1930) 210 Cal. 408, 292 P. 624] .

A real estate investment trust (REIT) is a specialized form of business trust that is formed to own real property; this type of entity must comply with strict state and federal tax and securities laws [see Corp. Code §§ 23000-23006; I.R.C. §§ 856-859; Rev. & Tax. Code § 24872].

PRACTICE TIP:
Although available, business trusts are rarely used in California. Because of the complexities and uncertainties involved in the taxation, liability, and security aspects inherent in this form, a business trust (or REIT) should only be formed after cautious and exhaustive analysis of the goals of the client.

[2] Unincorporated Associations

Groups may be characterized as unincorporated associations. Unincorporated associations formed under California law include mutual benefit societies, labor unions, nonprofit associations, joint stock companies, and real estate investment trusts, among others [see Corp. Code §§ 18020(a), 18035; see also Corp. Code § 18000 et seq.]. Unincorporated associations vary in size, complexity, and sophistication. They may or may not employ legal counsel, and may or may not have written governing documents.

Although former law provided governance rules for certain particular types of unincorporated associations, such as general and limited partnerships or limited liability companies, there were virtually no general rules for the governance of unincorporated associations prior to 2006. Because members and officers were often unsure how to handle issues not addressed in the association's governing documents, and because the lack of structural guidance left the association subject to burdensome common law procedures, the Legislature enacted governance statutes for unincorporated associations. Effective January 1, 2006, the Corporations Code provides statutory authority in the following areas [see Corp. Code § 18300 et seq.]:

- Member voting [see Corp. Code § 18330; see also § 13A.33[2][d].
- Membership termination and suspension [see Corp. Code §§ 18310, 18320; see also § 13A.33[3][a]].
- Amending governing documents [see Corp. Code §§ 18310, 18320; see also § 13A.34].
- Merger [see Corp. Code §§ 18350-18400; see also § 13A.39[2]].
- Dissolution [see Corp. Code §§ 18410, 18411; see also § 13A.39[3]].

Many of these statutes provide default provisions in the event that the association's governing documents are silent. For example Corp. Code § 18310, which addresses the termination and suspension of membership, only applies when the unincorporated association's governing documents are silent. Other statutes, however, provide mandatory rules, either to guarantee minimal fairness [see Corp. Code § 18320 (expulsion of members)] or to standardize relations with other organizations [see Corp. Code § 18360 et seq. (merger)]. These statutes are discussed in detail in Ch. 13A, Nonprofit Associations .

Unincorporated associations are liable for the debts and obligations of the association as if the association were a natural person [Corp. Code § 18250], except when a statute provides otherwise, as is the case for share owners of a real estate investment trust, if certain requirements are met [Corp. Code §§ 23000-23002, 23004].

[3] Publicly Traded Partnership

A publicly traded partnership is a partnership whose interests are traded on an established securities market or are readily tradable on a secondary market [I.R.C. § 7704(b)] and that derives less than 90 percent of its gross income from qualifying passive income, including interest, dividends, real property rents, and gain from the disposition of certain investment activities or assets [I.R.C. § 7704(c), (d)]. Publicly traded partnerships are taxed as corporations [I.R.C. § 7704(a)].

[4] Small Business Investment Company

A specialized small business investment company is a partnership or corporation that is licensed by the Small Business Administration [see I.R.C. § 1044(c)(3)]. This entity is analyzed in the same manner as partnerships or corporations with an additional consideration: individuals and regular business corporations (C rather than S corporations) may roll over a portion of any gain from the sale of publicly traded securities into specialized small business investment companies without recognition of gain [I.R.C. § 1044]. However, the entity must have been licensed in 1993; therefore, only an investment in an existing entity would qualify.

[5] Limited Liability Partnerships

[a] Definition

A "registered limited liability partnership" (a "registered LLP") is an association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit, other than a limited partnership, formed pursuant to an agreement governed by Article 10 of the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16951 et seq.] that is registered under Corp. Code § 16953 and satisfies one of the following requirements [Corp. Code § 16101(8)]:

- Each of its partners is either a "licensed person" (that is, a person duly licensed, authorized, or registered under the Business and Professions Code to practice architecture, public accountancy, or law, or lawfully able to render these services in California [Corp. Code § 16101(7), (14)]), or a person who is licensed or authorized to engage in the practice of architecture, public accounting, or law in a jurisdiction(s) other than California.

- The partnership is licensed under the laws of California to engage in the practice of architecture, public accountancy, or the practice of law.

- The partnership (1) is "related" to a registered LLP that practices public accountancy or, to the extent permitted by the California State Bar, practices law or is related to a foreign LLP; and (2) provides services related or complementary to the public accountancy or legal services provided by (or provides services or facilities to) that registered LLP or foreign LLP.

An LLP is a hybrid form of general partnership that can provide its partners with limitations on their personal liability without changing most other attributes of a general partnership. Thus, an LLP can combine the income tax transparency of partnerships on both the federal and California levels [see [b][iii], below], the management flexibility of general partnerships [see [b][i], below] and, with some significant limitations, limited liability for general partners akin to that of shareholders of business corporations [see [b][ii], below]. To secure the benefits of limited liability, an LLP must, on registration and at all times during which it transacts intrastate business in California, provide security for claims against it based on acts, errors, or omissions arising out of its practice of architecture, public accountancy, or law [see Corp. Code § 16956].

For further discussion of LLPs, see Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

[b] Salient Characteristics

[i] Management and Control

Each partner of a registered LLP (or foreign LLP that has applied for registration) is an agent for the partnership for the purpose of conducting partnership business. All partners are bound by any partner acting within the scope of partnership business unless the partner actually lacks the authority to act and the other party has knowledge of that fact [Corp. Code § 16301(1)].

[ii] Extent of Personal Liability

The LLP format can protect the personal assets of partners of architecture, public accountancy, and law firms from liability for obligations arising from acts, errors, or omissions arising out of the practice of architecture, public accountancy, or law ("malpractice") [Corp. Code § 16306(c)]. However, this shield does not affect a partner's liability to third parties for his or her own tortious conduct or malpractice [Corp. Code § 16306(e)].

For LLP partners to obtain limited liability, the LLP must comply with statutory security requirements totaling at least $100,000 per licensed person rendering professional services on behalf of the LLP, subject to an annual minimum and maximum total coverage. The minimum for all LLPs is $500,000 for LLPs with fewer than five licensed persons. The maximum for a public accountancy LLP and an architecture LLP is $5 million, and the maximum for a legal services LLP is $7.5 million. Beginning January 1, 2008, the minimum for an architecture LLP is $1 million, and the maximum remains at $5 million [Corp. Code § 16956(a)(1), (2), (3)].

[iii] Taxation

An LLP retains its general partnership nature for tax purposes. It is a separate tax-reporting entity for income tax purposes and must file an informational return that details income and deductions [I.R.C. § 6031(a)]. However, the partnership itself is not a taxable entity [I.R.C. § 701], other than the required payment of the annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17948-17948.2]. Items of partnership income and losses flow through the partnership to the individual partners proportionately or as agreed, provided that there is substantial economic effect to the agreement and subject to the adjusted basis of the partner's interest in the partnership [I.R.C. § 704(a), (b)(2)]. For further discussion, see § 1B.11[2][e] and Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

§ 1B.30 Overview of Corporate Form

The corporation is the dominant form of business ownership today. California general business corporations are governed by the General Corporation law [Corp. Code § 100 et seq.]. A corporation is a distinct legal entity, existing apart and recognized separately from its owners or shareholders, and has all the powers of a natural person, including the rights to own property, sue in its corporate name, and make contracts [Corp. Code § 207]. Under California law, a corporation may be formed to engage in any business activity, subject to compliance with applicable laws [Corp. Code § 206]. The rights and obligations of the corporation, its directors, and its shareholders are clearly delineated by law but may be altered, within statutory limits, by agreement [Corp. Code §§ 300-318, 600-605, 700-711].

The formation and operation of a corporation, like a limited partnership, requires more formality than does the formation and operation of a sole proprietorship or a general partnership. A corporation is chartered by the state and may be formed only by filing articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code §§ 200-210]. Owners of a corporation ordinarily are issued shares, signifying their ownership interests [see Corp. Code § 400]. However, shareholders do not participate in the daily management of the corporation; their participation is limited to electing the corporate board of directors and voting on a limited number of significant transactions [Corp. Code § 700(a)]. A corporation is controlled by a board of directors, who have the discretion to appoint officers to manage the day-to-day business [Corp. Code § 300(a)].

[a] In General

Despite wide variations within the corporate form, all corporations share certain basic characteristics, including the following: (1) management and control by a board of directors and officers appointed at the board's discretion; (2) limited personal liability; (3) greater availability of capital than generally exists for noncorporate business forms; (4) perpetual life; and (5) taxation as a separate entity, unless the corporation has elected to be taxed under Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code [see [b]-[f], below].

[b] Management and Control

A corporation is under the control of its board of directors and is managed either by the board or, as is usually the case, by officers appointed by the board [Corp. Code § 300(a)]. In publicly held corporations, whose stock is sold to the public at large, shareholders do not participate in corporate management [Corp. Code § 700(a)]. However, the purpose of a close corporation is to allow the shareholders to do just that, to participate in the day-to-day management of the corporation, without losing the protection of the corporate form [see Corp. Code § 300(e)].

[c] Extent of Personal Liability

The most significant feature of a corporation (as of a limited partnership or limited liability company) is its protection from personal liability. If properly formed and operating, a corporate shareholder's liability is limited to the amount of the investment in the corporation.

Further, because a corporation is a separate legal entity, its directors, officers, and employees ordinarily do not have any personal liability for the corporation's debts or other obligations [see Corp. Code § 300(d)]. Neither are they generally liable for the torts or criminal acts of one another, although directors, officers and other employees may be liable to the shareholders for a breach of their defined duties to the corporation [see Corp. Code § 300].

This limited liability protection distinguishes the corporate form from the sole proprietorship and from the general partnership (other than a limited liability partnership [see § 1B.15[5]]), and is similar to the protection from personal liability enjoyed by limited partners in a limited partnership. However, unlike shareholders, limited partners risk exposure to personal liability by participating in the management and control of the business [Corp. Code §§ 15632(a), 15903.03].

[d] Availability of Capital

Corporations generally provide the most flexible vehicle for obtaining capital. As with sole proprietorships and partnerships, financing is available through unsecured loans and loans based on the credit or personal guarantees of the directors, officers or shareholders or secured by the business's assets. In addition, capital is available through the sale of equity interests in the corporation. Because of limited liability for the debts and other obligations of the corporation, as well as the wide variety of types of capital interests, corporate shares often appeal to investors. As a practical matter, however, sale of securities is often limited to those offered by publicly held corporations (that is, corporations whose stock is sold to the public at large); and small or newly established corporations may be able to obtain financing only with the personal guarantees of their owners.

Like limited partnership interests, corporate securities are regulated by federal and state securities laws [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706; see also 15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa], unless the securities qualify for an exemption [15 U.S.C. § 77c(a); Corp. Code § 25102(f), (h)]. For a comprehensive discussion of corporate securities, see Chs. 6 through 6J.For a detailed guide to securities regulation, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues .

[e] Continuity of Existence

A corporation has perpetual existence, unless its articles of incorporation state otherwise [Corp. Code § 200(c)]. A corporation does not terminate on the death or change of identity of its shareholders, although the death of the sole shareholder of a professional corporation may, in effect, result in the practical, if not the legal, termination of the corporation.

[f] Taxation

A regular or general corporation is a separate tax paying entity for federal and state tax purposes [I.R.C. § 11; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23038, 23151], unlike sole proprietorships [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1)], general and limited partnerships [I.R.C. § 701], most limited liability companies [see I.R.C. § 701], and Subchapter S corporations [I.R.C. § 1361(b)]. A regular corporation is referred to as a "C" corporation in the Internal Revenue Code, to distinguish it from an "S" corporation, a corporation that has elected to be taxed under Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 1361(a); see I.R.C. §§ 1361-1366]. See § 1B.31[4] for a discussion of taxation of S corporations. A corporation formed under state law is a corporation for income tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-2(b)]. California taxation of corporations generally conforms to federal taxation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23051.5]. For a detailed discussion of corporate taxation, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

A C corporation is subject to a corporate tax rate schedule, which applies graduated rates that differ from the individual income tax rate schedule [I.R.C. § 11(b)]. However, certain personal service corporations are not eligible to use the graduated rates and are, instead, taxed at a flat rate [I.R.C. §§ 11(b)(2), 448(d)(2); see § 1B.31[5]].

Corporations are subject to double taxation. A corporation's profit is taxed once to the corporation, and again when the after-tax profit is distributed to the shareholders as dividend income [see I.R.C. §§ 301, 316], unless the shareholder is a corporate entity eligible for the dividends-received deduction [see I.R.C. §§ 243(a)(1), (b), (c), 248]. Double taxation of dividends is less of a concern during years in which dividends are taxable at lower capital gains rates (generally tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009), but still is a notable corporate characteristic [I.R.C. § 1(h)(11); see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for dividend taxation at capital gains rates)]. Corporate losses may be deducted from corporate income only by the corporation; such losses are not deductible by the shareholders on their individual income tax returns [see I.R.C. § 11]. A shareholder recognizes capital gain or loss on the sale of shares of stock or on the liquidation of the C corporation [I.R.C. §§ 302, 331].

For a more detailed discussion of the tax and nontax attributes of a regular corporation, see §§ 1B.40 et seq. and 1B.60 et seq., relating to corporations. For an enumeration of the advantages and disadvantages of conducting business as a regular corporation, see § 1B.104.

§ 1B.31 Types of Corporations

[1] General Business Corporations

A general corporation is a distinct entity that is recognized as a unique legal entity, separate from its directors, officers, and shareholders [see Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 200 P. 641] . The rights and obligations of the corporation, its directors and officers, and its shareholders are established in the General Corporation Law [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 300-317, 600-605, 700-710]; within limits, these statutory rights and obligations may be altered by agreement [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 300, 305, 307].

Although corporations share key structural features, corporations vary widely depending on number of shareholders and the formalities with which they operate. The professional corporation, statutory close corporation, Subchapter S corporation, and personal services corporation are discussed more fully in [2]-[7], below. Certain corporate forms exist for tax purposes; these corporations are organized under the auspices of and are regulated by the taxing authorities. These forms include the personal service corporation and the Subchapter S corporation.

Corporate tax entities, like the personal service corporation and the S corporation, and the general business corporations formed under the California General Corporation Law are not necessarily mutually exclusive. Thus, a corporation may be both a close corporation and a Subchapter S corporation as long as it complies with the requirements for both categories [see Corp. Code § 158 ("close corporation defined")]. Neither are the different forms of regular business corporations necessarily mutually exclusive. Most professional corporations with either one or a few shareholders will probably elect close corporation status, thereby allowing direct participation in the management of the corporation, without the usual corporate formalities.

[2] Professional Corporation

[a] Overview

A "professional corporation" is a regular business corporation that renders professional services in a single profession

under a certificate of registration issued by the governing board that regulates the profession [see Corp. Code § 13401(a), (b); but see Corp. Code § 13401.5 (allied professionals)]. "Professional services" are any services that may lawfully be rendered pursuant to a license, certificate, or registration authorized by the California Business and Professions Code, the Osteopathic Act, the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act, or the Chiropractic Act [Corp. Code §§ 13401(a), 13401.3; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1000-1-1000-20; see also [b], below], although there are no longer any certification requirements for medical, osteopathic, dental, pharmacy, veterinary, architectural, registered nursing, behavioral sciences, speech-language pathology and audiology, or court reporter corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 13401(b), 13402(a); Bus. & Prof. Code § 2406]. With these exceptions, a professional corporation must have its own certificate of registration to do business as a corporation [Corp. Code § 13401(b); see also Corp. Code § 13406(b)].

Professional corporations are regulated by the General Corporation Act [see Corp. Code §§ 100-2319], except when it is inconsistent with the Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act [Corp. Code §§ 13400-13410], in which case the Professional Corporation Act governs [Corp. Code § 13403]. In addition, each profession is regulated by its own governing agency [Corp. Code § 13404]. For a detailed discussion of professional corporations, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

PRACTICE TIP:

Professional service providers may not avoid liability for professional negligence by incorporating [see Corp. Code § 13410]; if liability in areas other than professional negligence is a concern, incorporation still offers liability protection in addition to other benefits of incorporation [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6171]. However, because most professional corporations do not require large amounts of capital, and ordinarily do not need to retain assets at the corporate level, incorporation may not be a particularly attractive alternative.

Many of the former tax incentives for incorporating have been largely eroded, including increased pension contributions and insurance benefits and use of a fiscal year other than a calendar year. In addition, if a professional corporation performs services for only one other entity, income may be reallocated between a taxpayer and the corporation [see I.R.C. § 269A].

[b] Professions Permitted to Incorporate

Currently, the following professions are permitted to incorporate under the Professional Corporations Act:

- Accounting [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5150-5157].
- Acupuncture [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 4977.2-4979].
- Architecture [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5500-5590].
- Audiology [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2536-2539].
- Chiropractic [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1050-1058].
- Clinical social work [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 4998-4998.6].
- Dental [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1701-1701.5, 1800-1808].
- Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6160-6172].
- Medical [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2500-2515, 6127.5].

- Nursing [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2775-2781].
- Osteopathic [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 2099.5 et seq.].
- Pharmacy [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 4000 et seq.].
- Physical therapy [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2690-2696].
- Physicians' assistants [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 3540-3546].
- Podiatry [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2406-2412].
- Psychological [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2907-2913].
- Speech pathology [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2536-2537.5].
- Services authorized by the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act [see Harb. & Nav. Code § 700 et seq.].

[3] Close Corporation

California has established a statutory entity referred to as a "close corporation." A close corporation is defined by statute as a corporation whose articles of incorporation contain (1) a provision that all the corporation's issued shares of all classes shall be held of record by not more than a specified number of persons, not exceeding 35; and (2) the statement "This corporation is a close corporation" [Corp. Code § 158(a)].

In general, close corporation business is managed in partnership-like manner, using procedures defined in its shareholder agreement, without the necessity of observing the corporate formalities related to meetings of shareholders or directors, as otherwise required by certain provisions of the General Corporation Code [Corp. Code § 300(b)]. Thus, the failure to observe such corporate formalities will not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e)].

PRACTICE TIP:

A closely held corporation, unless it is qualified as a statutory close corporation under California law, is generally subject to the requirements that apply to general corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 158, 300].

[4] Subchapter S Corporation

An S corporation is a regular business corporation that has made an election to be taxed under Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code and, therefore, is treated as a partnership for most tax purposes [see I.R.C. §§ 1361-1379]. The Internal Revenue Code distinguishes between corporations that have made this election from those that have not, by referring to the former as "S" corporations and the latter as "C" corporations [I.R.C. § 1361(a)].

Like a partnership and unlike a regular C corporation, is not a separate taxpaying entity [I.R.C. § 1363(a)]. Most of the tax attributes of an S corporation (income, losses, deductions, and credits) are passed through, proportionately, to the shareholders, who report and pay any tax due on their individual income tax returns [I.R.C. § 1366]. Deductible losses are limited to the shareholder's basis in the stock, plus any loans made to the corporation [I.R.C. § 1366(d)]. As with partners, S corporation shareholders are limited by the at-risk and passive activity loss rules of the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. § 465(b)(1), (3)(at-risk); see I.R.C. § 469(a)(2) (passive loss)].

To qualify as an S corporation, the following requirements must be met:

- The number of shareholders must be no greater than 100 [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)]. Husband and wife are ordinarily treated as one shareholder [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(1)]. Alternatively, taxpayers may elect to treat all members of the family as a single shareholder. "Members of the family" means a common ancestor, any lineal descendant of that common ancestor, and any spouse or former spouse of that common ancestor or lineal descendant [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(1)(A)(ii), (B), (D)].

- Shareholders must be individuals (excluding resident aliens [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (C)]), estates [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (c)(3)], certain enumerated types of trusts [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (c)(2), (d), (e)], qualified subchapter S subsidiaries [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(3)], and certain exempt organizations [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B); see I.R.C. § 1361(c)(6)].

- An S corporation must be a domestic corporation [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)].

- An S corporation may not be a financial institution that uses the reserve method of accounting for bad debts [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(2)(A); see I.R.C. § 585]; an insurance company [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(2)(B)]; a corporation that has elected special tax treatment and operates in Puerto Rico or other United States territorial possessions [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(2)(C)]; or a Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) or former DISC [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(2)(D)].

- An S corporation may not have more than one class of stock [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D)]. Neither differences in voting rights [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(4)] nor "straight debt" instruments create a second class of stock [see I.R.C. § 1361(c)(5)(A)].

All shareholders, including subsequent shareholders, are bound by the S corporation election [I.R.C. § 1361(a)(1), (e)(2)]. The election may be made at any time during the preceding taxable year or at any time during the taxable year and on or before the 15th day of the third month of the taxable year [I.R.C. § 1362(b)(1), (2), (4); see I.R.C. § 1362(b)(5) (extension when Secretary determines reasonable cause for lack of timeliness)]. If the election is revoked [see I.R.C. § 1362(d)(1)] or terminated [see I.R.C. § 1362(d)(2), (3); but see I.R.C. § 1362(f) (inadvertent invalid elections and terminations)], a corporation generally may not elect S corporation status again for a period of five years [I.R.C. § 1362(g)].

A corporation that has a valid election under I.R.C. § 1362(a) in effect for federal purposes will be an S corporation under California tax law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23801(a)], and its shareholders will be shareholders of an S corporation without regard to whether the corporation is qualified to do business or is incorporated in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23801(b)].

California has generally adopted the federal tax treatment of S corporations, but with one substantial distinction [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23801]. California S corporations are subjected to a modest tax on income (substantially less than that applicable to C corporations) and are subject to the annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23802(b), (c); see § 1B.62[4]].

For a more detailed discussion of the taxation of S corporations, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses . For a discussion of the formation of S corporations, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

[5] Personal Services Corporation

A personal services corporation is defined by the Internal Revenue Code as a corporation that performs services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting, when substantially all the stock is held by current or retired employees or the estates of retired employees [I.R.C. § 448(d)(2)]. The taxable income of personal service corporations is taxed at a flat rate [I.R.C. § 11(b)(2)].

[6] Nonprofit Corporation

A nonprofit corporation is a business form that counsel may wish to consider in appropriate circumstances. A wide variety of businesses are organized as nonprofit corporations, subject to the general restriction that no profits may be distributed to members [see Corp. Code §§ 5410, 9610, 7410-7414]. Entities that are formed for specified nonprofit purposes may avoid state and federal taxation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701; see also I.R.C. § 501]. In addition, these entities may qualify as exempt organizations; if an entity is exempt, contributions to that entity may be deductible as charitable donations [see I.R.C. §§ 170, 501(c)(3); see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17201, 23701d, 24357 et seq.]. The corporate form is typically used by nonprofit entities to protect principals from personal liability.

Nonprofit corporations are outside the scope of this chapter. For a detailed discussion of nonprofit corporations, see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations .

[7] Cooperative Corporation

A cooperative corporation is a corporation that is organized and conducts its business primarily for the mutual benefit of its members as patrons of the corporation. Its earnings, savings, or benefits must be used for the general welfare of its members or equitably distributed to its members based on patronage, subject to various restrictions [see Corp. Code § 12201]. Cooperative corporations are regulated by the Consumer Cooperative Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 12200-12704; see Food & Agric. Code § 54001 et seq.].

Cooperative corporations are discussed in detail in Ch. 14, Consumer Cooperative Corporations and Ch. 14A, Agricultural Nonprofit Cooperative Associations .

§ 1B.40 Lawfulness of Business Activity

[1] Illegal Business Venture

The first and most basic question to consider is whether the proposed business venture may legally be conducted. Although problems of this nature are unlikely to arise with any frequency, the legality of the proposed business is an issue that should not be overlooked. Some businesses are clearly illegal, while other related businesses are not. For example, it is illegal to operate an escort service that engages in prostitution [Penal Code § 266(f)]; however, it is lawful to operate an escort service that does not engage in such activities. Further, a business venture that is legal, in principle, may be illegal if it does not observe certain restrictions--for example, it is illegal to lend money at usurious rates [Uncod. Meas. 1919-1 (Usury Law)].

[2] Business Forms Specified by Government Regulation

Most business ventures may be carried on in any of the organizational forms discussed in this chapter. However, a few activities are limited, by governmental regulation, either to a specified form or to a restricted choice of form. Banks, for example, may not operate as partnerships [Corp. Code §§ 15616, 15901.04] and must operate as corporations [see Fin. Code § 102]. A discussion of such specialized forms of doing business is beyond the scope of this chapter.

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.41

§ 1B.41 Management and Control

[1] Sole Proprietorship

In a sole proprietorship, all management and control rests in the proprietor-owner. The owner has the final responsibility for the decisions in the business, although he or she may delegate authority to employees.

[2] General Partnership

In a general partnership, all partners share equally in management and control, unless the partnership agreement contains contrary provisions [Corp. Code § 16401(f)]. Ordinarily, the general partnership form offers partners a wide variety of choices in dividing management responsibilities and allocating ownership percentages.

In actuality, centralization of management may be difficult because each general partner has the authority to bind the partnership when dealing with third parties [Corp. Code §§ 16301, 16305, 16306]. When partners disagree on matters arising in the ordinary course of business, a decision of the majority controls; however, certain decisions require the unanimous consent of all the partners, such as an act outside the ordinary course of business or an amendment to the partnership agreement [Corp. Code § 16401(j)]. Each partner is an agent of the partnership and has the authority to bind the partnership in the ordinary course of business, unless the partner does not have the authority to act for the partnership and the other party has knowledge of that fact [Corp. Code § 16301(1)]. Partners may reallocate this sharing of authority in the partnership agreement, by providing that a partner or selected partners manage partnership business or by restricting the authority of a particular partner or partners to act in certain ways [see Corp. Code § 16303(a)(2)]. An agreement to give management authority to one partner does not invalidate a partnership agreement [Jacoby v. Feldman (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 432, 441, 146 Cal. Rptr. 334] . An agreement to relinquish control is an exercise of the right of control over partnership business and does not destroy the community of interest required by a partnership [Moulin v. Der Zakarian (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 190, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

While providing more flexibility of management than a sole proprietorship, effective management of a partnership requires either the ability of all partners to work together or the actual acquiescence of the non-managing partners to the decisions of the managing partner.

[3] Limited Partnership

In a limited partnership, the general partners have the exclusive right to manage the business. As in a general partnership, management responsibilities may be divided in a variety of ways in the partnership agreement [Corp. Code §§ 15643(a), 15904.06].

To maintain their limited liability protection, limited partners may not participate in the control of the business (management) [Corp. Code §§ 15632(a), 15903.03(a)]. Their participation is limited to specific acts relating to basic issues of the partnership, such as dissolution or merger [see Corp. Code §§ 15632(b), (c), 15636(f), 15903.03(b), (c), 15908.01(b), (c), 15911.03(b)]. In contrast to the restricted role of limited partners, LLC members may manage the LLC without fear of losing their limited liability.

[4] Limited Liability Company

A limited liability company may be managed by all of its members, or by one or more managers who may but need not be members [Corp. Code §§ 17150, 17151]. However, unless the articles of organization state than an LLC will be managed by one or more managers [see Corp. Code §§ 17051(a), 17151(b)], the business of the LLC is managed by all of its members absent any restriction or limitation in the articles or operating agreement [Corp. Code § 17151(b)]. If management is vested in the members, the members have the rights, duties, and obligations of managers [Corp. Code § 17150].

LLC members, much like corporate directors, may manage an LLC without forfeiting their limited liability. In contrast, if a limited partner participates in management, that partner loses his or her protective shield [Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15636, 15903.03]. Management and control rest with the partners of a general partnership; however, the liability of the general partners is unlimited and not restricted to their investments.

An advantage of incorporation is the centralized management that the form provides. Management and control in a corporation vary widely depending on the size of the corporation and the number of shareholders and their rights, as set forth in the incorporation documents. In general, in corporations with a large number of shareholders, ownership and management are separate. Shareholders delegate management and control by electing a board of directors [Corp. Code § 301(a)]; the board of directors then appoints officers to manage the day-to-day business and implement board policies [Corp. Code §§ 301(a), 312(b)]. Shareholder participation in decision making is generally limited to approving or disapproving major transactions affecting the life of the corporation [Corp. Code § 700(a)], including the merger or reorganization of the corporation [Corp. Code §§ 1201, 1201.5, 1202], the conversion of a corporation into a domestic other business entity [see Corp. Code § 1151(a); see also Corp. Code § 1150 et seq.], the sale or other disposition of substantially all corporate assets [Corp. Code § 1001], the dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code §§ 1900, 1902], the amendment of the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code §§ 902-904], and the removal of directors [Corp. Code § 303].

However, in a corporation with one or a few shareholders, such as a professional corporation, or in a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158], management and control does not differ greatly from that of a sole proprietorship or a general partnership because ownership and management is the same. In a close corporation, shareholders, by agreement, may forego management by a board of directors and directly participate in the management of the business in its ordinary course, in a manner resembling that of a general partnership [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

Although in large corporations management is generally centralized and ownership separate, there are a variety of means of allocating control by using voting agreements [Corp. Code § 706(a)], voting trusts [Corp. Code § 706(b)], management contracts [Corp. Code § 300(a)], or shareholder agreements [Corp. Code § 300(b), (c)].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.42

§ 1B.42 Limitations on Liability

[1] In General

Limiting the liability of the principal or principals forming a business enterprise is usually a primary factor in selecting the form of business entity. In determining the importance of limited liability, counsel should evaluate the proposed business' potential to create liabilities that cannot be adequately provided for by insurance and the net worth and earning potential of the principals. If the likelihood that the business will generate uninsured liabilities is high, and if the principals have significant net worth and earning potential, the entity selected should provide the principals with maximum protection from the debts and obligations generated by the business.

[2] Sole Proprietorship

A sole proprietorship provides virtually no insulation to the principal from the losses generated by the business. The owner of a sole proprietorship has unlimited liability for the debts and obligations of the entity. It may be possible for a sole proprietor to limit liability to the assets of the business by contract, but barring such an arrangement, all assets, not just those dedicated to the business, are at risk. Although prudent business people will secure insurance to minimize the exposure of assets to unforeseen liabilities arising from daily operations or resulting from tort or contract obligations, the personal assets of a sole proprietor remain at risk if the claim exceeds the amount of insurance coverage, or if that coverage is deemed inapplicable [see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation]. In addition, all of the community property of a sole proprietor is liable for contract obligations incurred in the business during the marriage [Fam. Code § 910]. For practical purposes, the personal liability of the owner for the debts and other obligations of the business is of particular concern if the business engaged in is risky, or if the bulk of the owner's assets lie outside the business.

[3] General Partnership

General partnerships provide no insulation to the principals (partners) from losses generated by the business. In a general partnership, the partners are jointly and severally liable, without limitation, for the wrongful acts or omissions of any partner acting in the ordinary course of business, for the misapplication of money or property received from a third person by the partnership, and for all other obligations of the partnership unless otherwise agreed by the claimant or provided by law [Corp. Code §§ 16305, 16306; see Masoni v. Board of Trade of San Francisco (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 738, 743, 260 P.2d 205 ; see also Reed v. Industrial Accident Commission (1937), 10 Cal. 2d 191, 192, 73 P.2d 1212 ; Great Western Bank v. Kong (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 28, 31-33, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 266 (although under Corp. Code § 16306(a) all partners were jointly and severally liable for bank loan on real property, after foreclosure and entry of deficiency judgment, assignment of judgment to partnership and 11 of 12 partners extinguished the debt; the 11 partners could not acquire bank's right to collect balance of judgment from 12th partner, their co-obligor)]. A new partner in an existing partnership is not personally liable for any partnership obligation incurred before that partner's admission [Corp. Code § 16306(b)]. An inactive or secret partner may also be held liable for partnership debts and obligations [see Gardiner v. Gaither (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 607, 329 P.2d 22 ; see also Nels E. Nelson, Inc. v. Tarman (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 714, 329 P.2d 953] .

PRACTICE TIP:

If the proposed business carries significant potential for liability exposure, counsel should advise the client to incorporate. Alternatively, combinations of entities (such as corporations and partnerships) may be used to achieve a measure of liability protection.

The termination of a partnership interest during a tax year does not relieve a partner of responsibility for partnership liabilities for the balance of the year if the partner personally guaranteed the debt [Weiss v. Commissioner (11th Cir. 1992) 956 F.2d 242 ; see Corp. Code §§ 15655, 15905.02].

Further, since each partner is an agent of the partnership, he or she has the authority to bind the partnership with regard to acts in the ordinary course of business [see Corp. Code § 16301(1)], and all partners are jointly and severally liable for claims arising from those actions [Corp. Code § 16306(a)]. All partners may be held liable for the partnership's payroll taxes, including the nonpayment penalty, regardless of which partners are responsible for remitting the taxes [see I.R.C. § 6672]. However, a partner's authority may be restricted, in which case the partner is unable to bind the partnership provided that the third party knows of the lack of authority [Corp. Code § 16301(1)]. In addition, the partners' liabilities may be reallocated among partners by agreement with the claimant [see Corp. Code § 16306(a)].

[4] Limited Partnership

A general partner in a limited partnership has essentially unlimited liability for partnership debts and other obligations [see Corp. Code § 15643, 15904.04].

A limited partner in a properly formed limited partnership is liable for partnership debts and other obligations only up to the amount of any capital contribution [Corp. Code §§ 15632(a), 15903.03]. However, the limited partner may lose the limited liability afforded by the limited partnership form under certain circumstances, such as if the limited partner is named as a general partner in the certificate or if the limited partner participates in the control of the business [see Corp. Code § 15632, 15903.03]. Additionally, a breach of fiduciary duty to the partnership may subject a limited partner to tort liability [see Tri-Growth Centre City, Ltd. v. Silldorf, Burdman, Duignan & Eisenberg (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 265 Cal. Rptr. 330] .

The termination of a partnership interest during a tax year does not relieve a partner of responsibility for partnership liabilities for the balance of the tear when the partner personally guaranteed the debt [Weiss v. Commissioner (11th Cir. 1992) 956 F.2d 242] ; further, a partner's death, disability, or other occurrence does not excuse the partner from any obligation to the limited partnership to contribute money or property to, or perform services for, the partnership [see Corp. Code §§ 15655, 15905.02].

[5] Limited Liability Company

The liability of members and managers of an LLC is similar to that of limited partners and corporate shareholders. LLC members and managers and limited partners of properly structured entities are ordinarily shielded from personal liability for company obligations [see Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15903.03, 17101(a), 17158; see also [4], above]. However, both may be liable under certain circumstances [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15903.03, 17101(b), (c), 17153, 17158, 17254, 17255; see also §§ 1B.12[2][b], 1B.13[2][b]].

Further, LLC members and shareholders may be personally liable if the entity is disregarded under the common law alter ego doctrine or if they personally guaranteed debts [see Corp. Code § 17101(b), (e); see also §§ 1B.13[2][b], 1B.30[2][c]].

[6] Corporation

Of all organizational forms, corporations offer principals and shareholders the most protection from the liabilities of the business (assuming valid formation, compliance with formalities, and adequate capitalization) although its protection is not complete [see Corp. Code §§ 300, 309, 409-414]. Directors acting in good faith and in a manner that the director believes to be in the best interest of the corporation and its shareholders, exercising the care of an ordinarily prudent person in similar circumstances, is generally not liable for any alleged failure to discharge the duties of a director; officers are not liable for acts performed within their scope of authority [Corp. Code § 309; see, e.g., FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046 (nonofficer directors of federally insured national bank immunized by business judgment rule from liability for purely negligent acts)]. Similarly, shareholders of a corporation ordinarily are not personally liable for corporate debts and other obligations provided that the corporation is validly formed, complies with required formalities, and is adequately capitalized [Corp. Code §§ 300, 309]. As a separate entity, the corporation is liable for its own obligations [see Corp. Code § 309(c)]. For shareholders, the significance of this limited liability means the investor is at risk only for the amount of his or her investment. For directors, officers, and shareholders, this limited liability extends beyond contractual obligations to include protection for the torts and criminal acts of other employees and shareholders [Corp. Code § 309].

PRACTICE TIP:

The limited liability afforded by the corporate form may be of less practical value than anticipated, especially for closely held businesses: insurance is widely available and shareholders in newly formed small corporations are often required to personally guarantee the business's major undertakings. Further, tortious conduct ordinarily subjects an individual to liability [U.S. Liability Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770] .

Insulation from personal liability is not complete. Individuals who are employees of the corporation may have personal liability for certain types of taxes, such as payroll taxes that have been withheld from employees' salaries but not paid to the Internal Revenue Service [I.R.C. §§ 6672, 7215]. Individuals may be personally liable for corporate obligations if they have personally guaranteed such debts, as is often the case with small or newly established corporations [Corp. Code § 506(a)]. Directors and officers may also be personally liable for breach of duty to corporate creditors, the corporation itself, or its shareholders [see Corp. Code §§ 309, 316(a)-(d); see also Jones v. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; GAB Business Services, Inc. v. Lindsey & Newsom Claim Services, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 423-424, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665 (vice-president who used insider's knowledge of employees to recruit them into jobs with corporation's competitor was fiduciary of corporation as a matter of law; trial court's failure to instruct jury accordingly was prejudicial error); Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 124-126, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753 (minority shareholder as individual had no standing to bring action for breach of fiduciary duty against majority shareholder, but should have brought derivative action on behalf of corporation when any obligations violated were duties owed directly and immediately to corporation)].

Finally, some situations exist in which the corporate veil is pierced (that is, the corporate entity disregarded) and personal liability imposed on the shareholders. This "alter ego" liability generally exists when there is a unity of interest and ownership between the shareholders and the corporation, and it would violate the principles of equity not to disregard the corporate entity [Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 10, 13, 200 P. 641 ; see, e.g., Playboy Enterprises, Inc. v. Welles (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 796, 806-807 (although unity of interest was established, no showing was made that fiction of separate existence of corporation would sanction fraud or promote injustice)]. Courts have considered a variety of factors in applying this equitable doctrine [see Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 (enumerating factors used in deciding whether to disregard corporate entity)], and increasingly have been willing to disregard the corporate entity when a subsidiary is merely a conduit of a parent [see, e.g., United States v. Bestfoods (1998) 524 U.S. 51, 64-66, 118 S. Ct. 1876, 141 L.Ed. 2d 43 (parent corporation can be held liable as owner under CERCLA for subsidiary's actions in operating polluting facility if there are factors that would allow piercing corporate veil under general corporate law principles); see also Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 742, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 (plaintiff failed to show specific manipulative conduct by parent toward subsidiary which relegated subsidiary to status of mere instrumentality, agency, conduit, or adjunct of parent)]. After successfully suing a corporation, a plaintiff may even attempt to join new defendants to be bound by the judgment, on the grounds that they are the alter ego of the corporation [see, e.g., McClellan v. Northridge Park Townhome Owners Association, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 753-756, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 702 (successor corporation properly added as judgment debtor in addition to bankrupt predecessor, when substantial evidence supported conclusion that successor was mere continuation of predecessor; but see Katzir's Floor and Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.com (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143, 1149-1151 (reversing amended judgment adding individual and new corporation as additional judgment debtor on grounds of alter ego and successor liability)].

The corporate veil may be pierced only by an adversary of the corporation, not by the corporation itself for its own benefit [Disenos Artisticos E Indus. v. Costco Wholesale (9th Cir. 1996) 97 F.3d 377, 380 (corporation not entitled to establish and use its affiliates' separate legal existence for some purposes but have its own separate corporate existence disregarded for its own benefit against third parties); see United Continental Tuna Corp. v. United States (9th Cir. 1977) 550 F.2d 569, 573] , or by the shareholders for their own benefit [Seretti v. Superior Nat. Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 920, 931 (because shareholders of small, closely held corporation sought to pierce veil of their own corporation and substitute themselves in place of corporation as named insured under workers compensation policy, court held that shareholders' inability to maintain individual actions against corporation's workers' compensation carrier did not constitute type of "grave injustice" that justified ignoring corporation's separate existence)].

For an extensive discussion of the alter ego doctrine, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 14, Litigation Involving Corporations and Shareholders , §§ 295-300 (Matthew Bender).

[7] Close Corporation

A disregard for corporate formalities (such as required director meetings and properly documented board resolutions) has been a major factor in piercing the corporate veil [see Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806] . However, the purpose of a close corporation is to allow the shareholders to manage the corporation's business without observing corporate formalities related to director and shareholder meetings [see Corp. Code § 300(e)]. Thus, if the shareholders manage the corporation informally, according to the provisions of their shareholder agreement, the mere failure to observe corporate formalities will not be considered a factor tending to establish that shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e)]. However, only those requirements related to board and shareholder meetings may be disregarded; other statutory requirements may not be ignored without risk of exposure to personal liability for corporate debts and other obligations [see Corp. Code § 300(e)].

The provisions of the General Corporation Law relating to close corporations [Corp. Code §§ 158-300] have not been the subject of much litigation, and case law does not establish the extent of that statutory protection. Therefore, it is desirable to observe corporate formalities or, at the very least, to carefully compare the possible adverse consequences of ignoring them to the advantages of informality of management. Close corporations are discussed in detail in Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations , Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation , and Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements .

[8] Professional Corporation

Shareholders of professional corporations have the same protection from personal liability as do shareholders of other corporations for acts or omissions unrelated to their professional practice [Corp. Code § 13403]. However, most regulatory agencies impose joint and several liability for malpractice [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 1057 (chiropractic corporations), Bus. & Prof. Code § 2781 (nursing corporations)].

[9] Limited Liability Partnership

Assuming proper registration and compliance with all statutory requirements [see Corp. Code § 16951 et seq.], including security requirements [see § 1B.15[5][b][ii]], the liability of partners is similar to that of corporate shareholders or limited partners. The LLP structure protects the personal assets of partners of law and public accounting firms from liability for partnership debts and obligations, and most particularly from liability for obligations arising from other partners' acts, errors, or omissions arising out of practice of law or public accounting [Corp. Code § 16306(c)]. This shield does not affect a partner's liability to third parties for his or her own tortious conduct [Corp. Code § 16306(e)].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.43

§ 1B.43 Availability of Capital

[1] In General

Many sources of capital exist to finance the commencement and operation of a new business venture, including the following:

- Funding with equity or debt by the principal;
- Funding through equity investment by third parties;
- Fund through debt by third parties; and
- Any combination of the above.

PRACTICE TIP:
Whenever seeking passive equity capital, principals must consider whether the offering must be qualified under securities laws [see Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.; see also Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues ; Ch. 65, Qualification of Securities]. Passive equity investors should consider the restrictions governing passive activity losses and credits [see I.R.C. § 469; see also Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses].

[2] Sole Proprietorship

The availability of capital to a sole proprietorship is coincidental with that of its owner. The capital requirements can be met through self-funding or by loans from third parties; however, creditors often require sole proprietors to use their personal assets as security for credit. All of the equity in a proprietorship belongs to the owner.

[3] General Partnership

The availability of capital to a general partnership is not greatly different from that available to a sole proprietorship. A general partnership may obtain capital from the capital contributions of its partners and through secured and unsecured loans either from its partners or from third parties. Loans are usually available to a general partnership based on the credit standing of its partners, since general partners are jointly and severally liable for the debts of the partnership [Corp. Code § 16306(a); see also Reed v. Industrial Accident Commission (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 191, 73 P.2d 1212] . Thus, as in a sole proprietorship, creditors often require partners to secure loans with their personal assets, if partnership assets do not provide sufficient collateral.

It is not unusual for a proposed partnership to exist in which only one partner (or a few partners) contributes capital and other partners provides services in the form of active involvement in the business. Whenever the equity partner plans to be inactive, counsel should evaluate the limited partnership form with the principals [see [4], below].

[4] Limited Partnership

Limited partnerships, like corporations and LLCs, are more advantageous vehicles for attracting capital than sole proprietorships and general partnerships. The sources of capital available to a limited partnership include the capital contributions of the general partners, unsecured loans, loans secured either by partnership assets or by the credit standing of the general partner, and the capital contributions of limited partners. The capital contributions of the limited partners may also increase the limited partnership's ability to borrow because partnership debts must be repaid before equity distributions can be made [Corp. Code §§ 15684, 15908.09].

Limited partnership interests often appeal to investors because of their limited liability [see Corp. Code §§ 15632(a), 15903.03]; however, limited partnership interests have become somewhat less appealing to investors since the passage of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, which restricted the deductibility of passive losses by individuals in a year to the amount equal to passive income for the year [I.R.C. § 469(e); see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses ; see also Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships]. In addition, the transfer restrictions on limited partnership interests may deter some investors [see Corp. Code §§ 15631, 15674].

PRACTICE TIP:

When seeking passive equity capital, principals must always determine whether an offering must be qualified under securities laws [see § 1B.46[2]. Passive investors also must consider the restrictions regarding passive activity losses and credits [see I.R.C. § 469; see also § 1B.63[2][b]].

[5] Limited Liability Company

Limited liability companies, like corporations and limited partnerships, are more advantageous vehicles for attracting capital than sole proprietorships and general partnerships. The capital requirements of a limited liability company can be met in a variety of means similar to a corporation, including member contributions [see Corp. Code §§ 17001(d), 17200(a)] and loans secured by personal guarantees or by company property [see Corp. Code §§ 17003, 17004]. The availability of limited liability, the flexibility of the form, and, ordinarily, a single level of taxation may make limited liability companies an attractive investment opportunity.

PRACTICE TIP:

When seeking passive equity capital, principals must always determine whether an offering must be qualified under securities laws [see § 1B.46[3]]. Passive investors must also consider the restrictions regarding passive activity losses and credits [see I.R.C. § 469; see also § 1B.63[2][c]].

[6] Corporation

Corporations, like limited partnerships and LLCs, are extremely advantageous vehicles for attracting capital. A corporation's sources of capital include loans using the corporation's assets as collateral, loans based on the personal guarantees of individual participants, and capital contributions of the shareholders. Because shareholders are ordinarily not liable for corporate debts [see Corp. Code § 300] and because the consequences and means of investing in shares of corporate stock are generally well understood, the purchase of corporate shares often appeals to investors. Furthermore, a variety of forms of shareholder's capital are available and provide flexibility, including various classes or series of stock, with different rights and priorities, as well as other warrants and a variety of debt instruments. For a comprehensive discussion of corporate securities, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues .

PRACTICE TIP:

For smaller or start-up corporations (as opposed to publicly held corporations), financing options may not differ greatly from those of limited partnerships. When seeking passive equity capital, principals must always determine whether an offering must be qualified under securities laws [see § 1B.46[3]]. Also, passive investors must consider the restrictions regarding passive activity losses and credits [see I.R.C. § 469; see also § 1B.63[2][c]].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.44

§ 1B.44 Transferability of Interests

[1] Sole Proprietorship

By its very nature, the interest in a sole proprietorship is freely transferable. The purchaser is likely to be third party obtained through advertising or a business broker. However, in practical terms, business assets may be encumbered by debts and, depending on the type of business, a purchaser may be difficult to find. If the need to sell the business is precipitated by an event such, as the disability or death of the proprietor, the business may have to be sold at a lower price because no mechanism exists to cover this contingency and no willing and able successor stands ready to take over the management (and liability) of the business.

PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel should advise clients determined to operate as sole proprietors to obtain adequate life and disability insurance coverage to ensure a measure of liquidity [see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation].

[2] General Partnership

General partnership interests are transferable with certain restrictions. Unless the partnership agreement provides otherwise, the rights of a general partner may not be transferred to another individual without the consent of all other partners [Corp. Code § 16401(i)]. The other general partners are ordinarily the most likely potential purchasers of a withdrawing partner's interest; if they are unwilling or unable to purchase that interest, the partnership may be forced to dissolve.

PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel should always include buy-sell provisions in the partnership agreement to cover the contingency of an unanticipated or forced sale of a general partner's interest. The agreement should also contain valuation provisions, such as formulas, an agreed value, or appraisal requirements. These provisions are likely to be examined when the partners are not on the best of terms. Therefore, counsel should consider the potential conflicts of interest that may be present in drafting these provisions [see State Bar Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310; see also Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business].

A general partner's partnership interest may be assigned to a third party, but such an assignment gives the assignee the right to receive distributions of profits to which the assigning party would have been entitled, as well as the right to seek a judicial determination that it is equitable to wind up the partnership business [Corp. Code § 16503(a), (b)]. It does not give the assignee the rights of management and control, nor the rights to an accounting or to inspect partnership records [Corp. Code § 16503(a)(2), (c), (d)].

A merger involving a general partnership may also be a method of transferring or transforming an interest. A general partnership may merge with or into a general partnership. Further, general partnerships may merge with or into limited partnerships or limited liability companies [Corp. Code § 16910(a); see Corp. Code § 16901 et seq.].

[3] Limited Partnership

Under the CRLPA, the transfer of a general partnership interest in a limited partnership is subject to restrictions similar to those applicable to the transfer of a general partnership interest in a general partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15643, 15674, 16503; see [2], above]. The admission of a new general partner requires the written consent of all remaining general partners, as well as the affirmative vote of a majority in interest of the limited partners [Corp. Code §§ 15641, 15636(f), 15681(c)]. The partnership agreement may prohibit a general partner from assigning or encumbering a partnership interest [Corp. Code § 15672(c)], and a general partner who assigns his or her interest may be removed by a majority in interest of the limited partners [Corp. Code § 15674(d)].

Unless restricted by the limited partnership agreement, limited partnership interests are freely transferable or assignable [see Corp. Code §§ 15631, 15672; see also Corp. Code § 15618]. Limited partnership interests are assignable in whole or in part, and the assignee has the same rights to receive distributions, allocations of income, loss, deductions, credits, and similar items as does the assignee of a general partnership interest [Corp. Code § 15672]. As with general partners in a general partnership, assignees of limited partners may not become limited partners unless the partnership agreement so provides or all general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15674(a)]. Thus, assignees have limited rights to an accounting, limited access to financial records, and may not vote on partnership transactions [Corp. Code § 15672; see Corp. Code § 15634]. However, because the very nature of a limited partnership interest precludes participation in partnership management [see Corp. Code § 15632(a)], these restrictions may have little practical effect on the transferability of a limited partnership interest. Furthermore, assignees in partnerships with greater than 100 limited partners have complete access to partnership records [Corp. Code § 15672; see Corp. Code § 15634]. In addition, limited partnership interests in master limited partnerships, whose security interests are in the nature of corporate shares, are freely transferable [see I.R.C. § 7704(b); see also § 1B.15[3]].

Under ULPA '08, the only interest of a partner that is transferable is the partner's transferable interest. A transferable interest (defined in Corp. Code § 15901.02(ak) as a partner's right to receive distributions) is personal property [Corp. Code § 15907.01]. This default provision, however, may be changed in a partnership agreement [see Corp. Code § 15901.10]. A transfer, in whole or in part, of a partner's transferable interest: (1) is permissible; (2) does not by itself cause the partner's dissociation or a dissolution and winding up of the limited partnership's activities; and (3) does not, as against the other partners or the partnership, entitle the transferee to participate in the management or conduct of the partnership's activities, to require access to information concerning the partnership's transactions except as otherwise described below, or to inspect or copy the required information or the partnership's other records or to exercise any other rights or powers of a partner interest [Corp. Code § 15907.02(a)]. A transferee has a right to receive, in accordance with the transfer, distributions to which the transferor would otherwise be entitled [Corp. Code § 15907.02(b)]. Upon transfer, the transferor retains the rights of a partner other than the interest in distributions transferred and retains all duties and obligations of a partner [Corp. Code § 15907.02(h)]. However, a transferee of a partnership interest may become a limited partner if and to the extent that the partnership agreement provides, or all general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15907.02(h)]. A transferee that becomes a partner with respect to a transferable interest is liable for the transferor's obligations under Corp. Code §§ 15905.02 and 15905.09, but is not obligated for liabilities unknown to the transferee at the time the transferee became a partner [Corp. Code § 15907.02(g)].

Since limited partnership interests are often issued under either the small or limited offering exemptions of the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25102(f), (h)], these limited partnership interests may be subject to transfer restrictions [Corp. Code §§ 25102(f), (h), 25141; see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions ; Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption].

For further discussion, see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships .

[4] Limited Liability Company

An economic interest [see Corp. Code § 17001(n)] in an LLC is freely assignable, in whole or in part, unless otherwise restricted by the articles of organization or the operating agreement [Corp. Code § 17301(a)(1)]. An assignment of an economic interest does not of itself dissolve an LLC or, except as set forth in the articles of organization or the operating agreement, entitle the assignee to vote and participate in the management and affairs of the LLC or to become or exercise any rights of a member [Corp. Code § 17301(a)(2)]; the assignment only entitles the assignee to receive, to the extent assigned, the economic benefits to which the assignor would have been entitled [Corp. Code § 17301(a)(3)]. Except to the extent assumed by agreement, an assignee has no liability to the LLC solely based on the assignment until the assignee becomes a member [Corp. Code § 17301(b)].

Members may only assign or transfer membership interests with the consent of a majority in interest of the members not transferring their interests [Corp. Code § 17301(a)(1); see Corp. Code § 17303]. The assignment or transfer of amembership interest entitles the assignee to all of the rights and powers, as well as some of the obligations, of a member [Corp. Code § 17303(a), (b)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

[5] Corporation

A sale of a corporate business may occur through a sale of (1) the assets by the corporation or (2) the shares by the shareholders. Corporate shares are generally more freely transferable than are the interests of other business entities. However, free transferability of shares exists in practice only in the case of registered stock of publicly held corporations. The transfer of these shares, however, may be restricted to comply with securities laws [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25705; 15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa] and is, of course, subject to market conditions.

The transfer of corporate shares is restricted in both close and professional corporations. In close corporations, transfer is usually restricted by written agreement [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(3), (b)]. In a professional corporation, transfer is restricted to the issuing corporation itself, or to persons licensed by the profession in which the corporation provides services [Corp. Code §§ 13406, 13407].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.45

§ 1B.45 Separate Legal Identity; Continuity of Existence

[1] Sole Proprietorship

A sole proprietorship does not have an identity apart from that of its owner, even if the individual is conducting the business under a fictitious name [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900 et seq.]. In a sole proprietorship, the owner has complete authority and responsibility for all business decisions, owns all of the business assets as an individual, and is subject to unlimited liability for the business's debts and pays taxes as an individual.

Continuity of existence is not an attribute of sole proprietorships. A sole proprietorship necessarily ceases to exist on the incapacity or death of its owner or the cessation of business [see Morrissey v. Commissioner (1935) 296 U.S. 344, 56 S. Ct. 289, 80 L. Ed. 263] .

An individual who might reasonably anticipate being subjected to the kind of racial discrimination that is proscribed by 42 U.S.C. § 1981, which ensures equal rights to make and enforce contracts--"includ[ing] the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship"--should give that fact special consideration in selecting the form for doing business. If he or she elects to do business through a one-owner limited liability company or corporation [see [3], [4], below], then the protection of that statute could be lost becauseof the separate identity that the law attributes to a limited liability company or a corporation. The individual owner could not state a claim under the statute with respect to any contract made or sought by the company or corporation, even if there were proof that the company or corporation lost or failed to gain contractual benefits because of race-based animus toward the owner. Whether the company or corporation would have a claim under the statute in such a case remains undecided [Domino's Pizza, Inc. v. McDonald (2006) 546 U.S. 470, 126 S. Ct. 1246, 1248, 1252, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1069] .

The relationship between the business form and its partners is more attenuated than that of a sole proprietor to a sole proprietorship. For example, in a general partnership, all property contributed to or acquired by the partnership with partnership funds is the property of the partnership and is owned in the name of partnership [Corp. Code §§ 16203, 16204], and no partner has any individual right to that property absent agreement by the partners [Corp. Code § 16401(g)], whereas in a sole proprietorship, the owner has merely segregated assets and designated them as the property of the business while still holding legal title. Unlike a sole proprietorship, a partnership must file a separate, albeit informational, income tax return [I.R.C. § 6031(a); see also §§ 1B.11[2][e], 1B.12[2][e]]. Further, limited partners are generally protected from any liability that exceeds the amount of their investment, stemming from partnership transactions [Corp. Code §§ 15632(a), 15903.03].

Continuity of existence in a general partnership is uncertain. A general partnership can be dissolved on many grounds [see Corp. Code § 16801]. For further discussion, see § 1B.11[2][d].

A limited partnership shares some of the continuity characteristics of a general partnership and some of the continuity characteristics of a corporation, however, it is not as unstable as a general partnership or a sole proprietorship. For example, a limited partnership dissolves on the occurrence of an event specified in the partnership agreement, the consent of all the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners, and by judicial dissolution [Corp. Code §§ 15642, 15681, 15682, 15908.01, 15908.02]. However, neither the disposition of a limited partnership interest, nor the incapacity or death of a limited partner dissolves the partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15672, 15675, 15907.02(a), 15907.04]. For further discussion, see § 1B.12[2][d].

[3] Limited Liability Company

A limited liability company exists as a separate legal entity [see Corp. Code § 17001(t)] whose existence is independent of its members [see Corp. Code § 17003]. The existence of an LLC begins on the filing of the articles of organization with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 17050(c)].

An LLC, unlike a corporation, does not necessarily have perpetual existence [see Corp. Code § 17350 (dissolution events); see also § 1B.13[2][d]]. For example, an LLC may be dissolved by the vote of a majority in interest of the members, or a greater percentage as specified in the articles of organization or written operating agreement [Corp. Code § 17350(b)], and the articles may specify a time certain for, or events that cause, dissolution of the LLC [Corp. Code §§ 17051(c)(3), (4), 17350(a)].

A corporation exists as a separate legal entity, whose existence is independent of that of its directors, officers, and shareholders [Corp. Code § 200(c)]. As a separate legal unit, a corporation has all the powers of a "natural person," including the rights to hold and to use property [Corp. Code § 207(g)], sue and be sued as an entity [Corp. Code § 105], and make contracts [Corp. Code § 207(g)]. However, likening a corporation's rights and powers to those of a natural person is confusing because a corporation's rights are not always coextensive with those of an individual [see, e.g., First National Bank of Boston v. Bellotti (1978) 435 U.S. 765, 783-784, 98 S. Ct. 1407, 55 L. Ed. 2d 707 (corporations' first amendment rights broader than individuals); see also Braswell v. United States (1988) 487 U.S. 99, 99, 108 S. Ct. 2284, 101 L. Ed. 2d 98 (fifth amendment)].

Corporations have a potentially unlimited duration. As a separate legal unit, a corporation's existence is not terminated by the withdrawal, death, or any other occurrence that might affect the directors, officers, or shareholders unless otherwise specified in its articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 200(c)]. Although the death or unavailability of a key individual in a small corporation may make it practically impossible to continue the business, under other circumstances when the loss of one principal does not significantly alter the business, the corporate form with its perpetual life may be advantageous. However, the corporate form itself does not shield a corporation from actions taken to voluntarily or involuntarily dissolve or liquidate the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 1900-1907; see also Corp. Code §§ 1800-1809].

In a close corporation, shareholders may bring about the dissolution of the corporation using methods not normally available to shareholders with minority interests in regular corporations. The shareholder of a close corporation may file an action for dissolution no matter how many shares he or she owns [Corp. Code § 1800(a), (b)]; whereas in a regular corporation, at least one half of the directors or shareholders who own at least one third of the shares are required to file a petition for dissolution [Corp. Code § 1800].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.46

§ 1B.46 Compliance With Securities Laws

[1] General Partnership

A general partnership interest ordinarily is not deemed a security under the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25019; see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25705] or under the federal Securities Act of 1933 [15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1); see also 15 U.S.C. § 77a-77aa]. However, under California law, if a partner is not actively involved in the business or if the sale of a partnership interest qualifies as an "investment contract," a general partnership interest may be a security subject to applicable security regulations [Koch v. Hankins (9th Cir. 1991) 928 F.2d 1471, 1475-1476 ; People v. Skelton (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 691, 713, 167 Cal. Rptr. 636 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 917 ; see Securities & Exchange Commission v. W.J. Howey, Co. (1946) 328 U.S. 293, 298-299 (definition of investment contract)].

All sales of partnership interests that are securities must meet federal registration and state qualification requirements, be eligible for a federal or state exemption, or not subject to qualification [15 U.S.C. §§ 77c(a), 78c(a)(10); Corp. Code §§ 25101-25105, 25110, 25120, 25130].

[2] Limited Partnership

Because limited partners do not participate in the management and control of the business, a limited partnership interest ordinarily is deemed a security under state and federal regulations [Corp. Code §§ 25000-25705; see Corp. Code § 25019 (definition of security); see also People v. Woodson (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 132, 177 P.2d 586] and by the federal Securities Act of 1933 [15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa; see 15 U.S.C. 77b(a)(1) (definition of security); see also SEC v. Murphy (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 633] .

If a limited partnership interest is a security, it must be registered under the federal Securities Act of 1933 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa] and qualified under the California Corporations Act of 1968 [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25705], and other applicable acts in other states, as necessary, unless it is exempt from registration, or not subject to registration [15 U.S.C. §§ 77c(a), 78c(a)(10)] or qualification [Corp. Code §§ 25101-25105, 25110, 25120, 25130]. As a practical matter, all except very large limited partnership offerings normally are intentionally structured to take advantage of certain commonly used federal and state securities exemptions in order to avoid the more time-consuming and laborious process of qualification or registration. The exemptions from registration under the federal Securities Act are numerous, the four most significant being the intrastate offerings exemption [15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11)], the limited offerings exemption for offerings up to $1 million [17 C.F.R. § 230.504], the limited offering exemption for offerings up to $5 million [17 C.F.R. § 230.505], and the private offering exemption [17 C.F.R. § 230.506]. For discussion of these exemptions, see Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations .

In California, certain issuer transactions involving 35 or fewer shareholders may be exempt under either the limited offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(f)] or the small offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. The limited offering exemption requires that (1) the sale of securities be limited to no more than 35 persons; (2) all purchasers have a preexisting personal or business relationship with the offeror; (3) each purchaser purchase for himself or herself, not for others; and (4) the offer and sale not be publicly advertised [Corp. Code § 25102(f)]. The criteria for a small offering exemption are more restricted than those of the limited offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. For example, to be eligible to use the small offering exemption, a corporation may issue only one class of stock [Corp. Code § 25102(h)], whereas a limited offering exemption applies to almost any offer or sale of any security [Corp. Code § 25102(f)].

For discussion of some of the specific securities exemptions commonly relied on by limited partnerships in California, see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions , Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption , and Ch. 6D, California Qualified Purchaser Exemptions .

[3] Limited Liability Company

Under California law, an LLC interest is included in the statutory definition of a security: the term "security" includes every interest in a LLC and any class or series of those interests (including any fractional or other interest in the LLC interest). A limited exception to this definition excludes a membership interest in an LLC in which the person claiming this exception can prove that all of the members are actively engaged in the management of the LLC. However, the statute provides that evidence that members vote or have the right to vote, to information concerning the business and affairs of the LLC, or to participate in management, does not establish, without more, that all members are actively engaged in the management of the LLC [Corp. Code § 25019]. As a practical matter, virtually all LLC interests are securities under California law and must be qualified unless exempt [see [2], above].

Under federal law, the determination of whether or not an interest is a security similarly involves an analysis of whether or not the interest holder actively participates in the business affairs of the issuing entity [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 77b(a)(1), 78c(a)(10) (investment contracts as securities)]. It is possible that a different result will be reached under state and federal law, such that an LLC interest may be a security for California purposes, but not for federal securities laws purposes.

The offer and sale of corporate stock are subject to the federal and state regulations discussed in [1] and [2], above. Also subject to securities law is the disclosure of investment information, as well as other activities related to making the offer [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa; see also Corp. Code §§ 25000-25705].

The offer and sale of stock in a small corporation usually will be tailored to assure that it meets one of several commonly used California exemptions from qualification [see Corp. Code §§ 25102(f) (limited offering exemption), (h) (small offering exemption), (i), (n) (qualified purchaser exemptions)], and to comply with federal exemptions from registration under the federal securities laws. If the offer and sale does not qualify for one of the California exemptions, the offering will have to be "qualified" (approved for sale) before it can be offered or sold in California [Corp. Code § 25110]. For a general discussion of the California securities laws, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues . For discussion of some of the specific securities exemptions commonly relied on by nonpublic corporations in California, see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions , Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption , and Ch. 6D, California Qualified Purchaser Exemptions . Federal exemptions generally relied on by California nonpublic corporations are covered in Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations . Qualification of securities in California is discussed in Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities .

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.47

§ 1B.47 Cost Considerations

Although organizational costs are seldom determinative in choosing a business form, they may be a significant consideration for a small business and bear mentioning to all clients.

The costs of organizing and operating a business ordinarily depend more on the complexity of the business enterprise itself than on its form. However, some correlations between cost and form can be made. Generally, a sole proprietorship is the simplest and least costly to organize, because there are no formalities associated with the formation of this entity, which does not exist apart from its owner [see § 1B.25[1]].

A partnership is generally more expensive to organize than a corporation (although organizing a corporation may appear, at first, to be more complex than organizing a partnership because of the required statutory filings) simply because drawing up a partnership agreement, particularly a limited partnership agreement, is likely to be more time-consuming than preparing and filing standard corporate articles of incorporation and related forms. General partnerships must pay a fee for filing a statement of partnership [Gov. Code § 12187(a)], and limited partnerships must pay a fee for filing a certificate of limited partnership [Gov. Code § 12188(b)]. Limited partnerships and limited liability partnerships must pay an annual tax when they file their informational tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17851.5, 17935, 17948; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23151, 23153]. This tax is not deductible by the entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17220(c)].

Forming a limited liability company requires payment of a fee for filing the articles of organization [Gov. Code § 12213] and payment of an annual minimum franchise tax for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941, 17942, 23151, 23153(d); see § 1B.62[3]].

Since limited partnership interests, LLC interests, and corporate shares ordinarily are considered securities [Corp. Code § 25019; 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1)], additional fees and expenses will be involved [see Corp. Code §§ 25100, 25102(f), (h), 25608; see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues]. These expenses can range from minimal to very substantial depending on the available exemptions and other factors.

The costs of operating a business depend on the nature and complexity of the business venture and, thus, can vary widely not only from one form to another but also within a single form. Costs associated with the formation, management and dissolution of a business, the possible need for specialized professional assistance, obtaining initial and additional capital and taxation should all be considered.

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Nontax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.48

§ 1B.48 Miscellaneous Considerations

[1] Traditional Forms for Certain Business Activities

Certain business activities have traditionally used certain forms. In those cases, consider the use of that form, since there is often a good reason behind a tradition. Even in cases when another organizational form appears preferable to the traditional one, consider the desire of the owner, who may be more comfortable using the traditional organizational form. For example, physicians in California have traditionally chosen to use a corporate form despite its lack of liability protection for malpractice [see § 1B.32[6]] and the possible tax disadvantages [see I.R.C. § 11(b)(2); see also § 1B.104], while law firms in California have traditionally chosen to use the partnership form, despite the possible financial advantages of the using the corporate form.

[2] Complexity of Business

In general, the more complex a business, the more likely that the owners will select the corporate form. Several corporate characteristics, including the different levels of management and control, the continuity of existence of the business entity regardless of changes in organization or ownership, the availability of broader sources of capital, and the General Corporation Law often make the corporation the entity of choice for a complex business organization [see § 1B.30[2] for discussion of these characteristics].

In theory, a partnership's organization can be as complex as that of a corporation; however, the need to define its organizational structure and management and control in its partnership agreement and the tenuousness of its existence [see § 1B.35[2]], as well as other factors, tend to limit the use of the partnership form if the business is extremely complex.

A sole proprietorship is necessarily limited in its complexity by the fact that a single individual is responsible for its management and control [see § 1B.10[1]].

[3] Interstate Activity

A sole proprietorship may do business in states other than the state in which it was formed without formal qualification or registration of the business activity, since the business entity is not distinct from the person who owns it. Although qualification or registration is not required of the entity, a sole proprietorship may, nevertheless, be subject to licensing or other requirements.

A general partnership, like a sole proprietorship, generally is free from qualification and registration requirements, because it is considered to be an association of two or more persons to carry on a business as co-owners [see Uniform Partnership Act § 6(1); see, e.g., Corp. Code § 16101(9)]. However, like a sole proprietorship, a general partnership may be subject to licensing and other requirements.

A limited partnership is governed by the state statute and must comply with the statutory provisions of each jurisdiction in which it does business to protect the limited liability status of its limited partners. A limited partnership that does business in a foreign jurisdiction and ignores the statutes of that jurisdiction relating to limited partnerships risks exposing its limited partners to liability as general partners pursuant to the laws of the particular jurisdiction.

In general, before a limited liability partnership (LLP) may transact business in a state other than the one in which it is registered or otherwise organized, the LLP must apply for registration and comply with all statutory requirements [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 16951 et seq. (UPA '94)]. Under California law, a foreign LLP is governed by the law under which it is organized [Corp. Code § 16958(a)(1)].

In general, before a limited liability company (LLC) can carry on business in a state other than the one in which it is organized, it must register to do business as a foreign LLC [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 17450-17457]. Under California law, foreign LLCs are governed by the law under which they are organized [Corp. Code § 17450(a)].

In general, before a corporation can carry on business in a state other than the one in which it is incorporated, it must qualify to do business as a foreign corporation [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 2101-2117.1]. Qualification statutes vary from state to state, and although most require only a short form, payment of a qualification fee, and the designation of an agent for service of process within the state [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 2101 et seq.], these requirements make conducting business in foreign states as a corporation more burdensome than transacting business in foreign states as either a sole proprietorship or as a general partnership.

[4] Compliance

A sole proprietorship requires little in the way of compliance or housekeeping. Other than preparing and filing tax returns and filing and renewing any necessary fictitious business name statements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900], the recordkeeping requirements are the minimum necessary to adequately account for the operations of the business.

A general partnership, like a sole proprietorship, does not have statutory filing requirements other than informational tax returns and fictitious business name statements. However, as a practical matter, general partnerships must file a statement of partnership to obtain title insurance on real property owned by the partnership [see Corp. Code §§ 16105, 16303]. Further, the partnership agreement should require the preparation and retention of reports that must be provided to all of the general partners.

A limited partnership must file certificates of limited partnership at the appropriate time to protect the limited liability of the limited partners [Corp. Code §§ 15621, 15902.01; see Corp. Code §§ 15622-15628, 15633, 15902.01-15902.09, 15903.06]. If a limited partner discovers that the certificate has not been filed, that partner should cause an appropriate certificate to be signed and delivered to the Secretary of State for filing [Corp. Code §§ 15633(a), 15903.06(a)]. The limited partnership agreement should identify the reports that will be provided to the limited partners by the general partners, and the time requirements for the preparation, retention, and distribution of those reports. Limited partners have to right to inspect and copy information required to be maintained by the partnership, and may be entitled to additional information regarding the activities of the limited partnership [see Corp. Code §§ 15615, 15634, 15901.11, 15903.04; see also Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships].

Limited liability partnerships (LLPs) must comply with statutory filing requirements [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 16953 (initial registration), 16954 (amended registration)] and continuously satisfy the statutory security requirements [see Corp. Code § 16956; see also § 1B.15[5][b]]. The failure to satisfy these requirements will result in the loss of the limited liability protection afforded by the LLP structure [see Corp. Code §§ 16306(c)-(h), 16953 (UPA '94)]. For further discussion of LLPs, see Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

Limited liability companies (LLCs) must also comply with statutory recordkeeping and distribution requirements, which may involve considerable costs like that of a corporation. Statutory procedures for filing articles of organization and amendments [see Corp. Code §§ 17050, 17054] and biennial information statements [see Corp. Code § 17060] must be followed and filing fees paid to ensure limited liability [see Gov. Code § 12190]. LLCs must also maintain specified records of members and managers, and keep books and records as required by statute [see Corp. Code § 17058]. Meetings of members and managers must be noticed, conducted, and adjourned in the proper manner [see Corp. Code § 17104; see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies].

§ 1B.60 General Tax Considerations

The tax consequences of operating different forms of business will play an important role in selecting the appropriate form and can have a significant impact on business profits. The tax consequences of disposing of a business or of an owner's interest in a business can be significant, and the availability of and resulting tax consequences of fringe benefits will be influential. Although a complete discussion of the taxation of different forms of business is outside the scope of this chapter, the following income tax factors important to the determination of the most appropriate form for the business venture at hand will be considered:

- Types of business organizations for tax purposes.
- Taxation of the business entity and its owners or investors.
- Treatment of income and loss.
- Treatment of capital contributions.
- Disposition of the business or business interest.
- Income splitting.
- Other tax considerations, including the deductibility of start-up expenses; alternative minimum tax considerations; choice of tax year, I.R.C. § 1244 stock; retirement plans and other fringe benefits.

The only effective way to evaluate whether organizing a business as a C corporation, as an S corporation, or as one of the noncorporate forms will produce an overall lower tax burden is to project the future income of the business venture and of its owners and investors (not limited to the activity under consideration) and make trial comparisons, taking into account the differences in tax rates and the possibility of double taxation.

For a more detailed discussion of the tax issues affecting various forms of business organization, including sales, property and local taxes, in addition to income taxes, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.61

§ 1B.61 Types of Business Organizations for Tax Purposes

Federal law determines the classification of a business entity for tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-1(a)]. There are three basic categories into which business organizations fall for the purposes of taxation: trusts, partnerships, and corporations. Trusts refer to "ordinary trusts," which are arrangements formed for the protection and conservation of property and are not businesses conducted for profit [see Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-4(a)]. Partnerships include syndicates, groups, pools, joint ventures and other unincorporated associations that are not corporations, trusts, or estates for income tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 761(a)]. Corporations, for federal income tax purposes, include associations, joint stock companies, and insurance companies [see I.R.C. § 7701(a)(3)], as well as certain publicly traded partnerships [see I.R.C. § 7704(a); see also § 1B.15[3]]. Finally, a sole proprietor pays income taxes on his or her sole proprietorship as an individual, rather than as a separate business entity [see I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a), 6017]. This discussion will consider the following tax entities: individuals, partnerships, limited liability companies, and corporations.

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.62

§ 1B.62 Taxation of the Business Entity and its Owners or Investors

[1] Sole Proprietorship

A sole proprietor includes his or her profits (or losses) in personal income, and, in addition, pays a self employment tax, which is the self-employed person's social security tax [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1), 1401].

[2] Partnership

A general or limited partnership, unlike a corporation, is not taxed as an entity separate from its owner [I.R.C. § 701]. It must file a separate, informational tax return on the basis of which the partners are taxed [I.R.C. § 6031(a)]. A partnership is merely a conduit, that "passes through" all partnership income, loss, gain, deductions, and credit items to its partners [I.R.C. § 702(a)]. Thus, the partners are taxed, as individuals, on their proportionate share of partnership profits, regardless of whether or not these profits are actually distributed [see I.R.C. §§ 701-703]. Partners are also permitted, as individuals, to deduct their share of partnership losses, subject to certain restrictions [I.R.C. § 704(d)].

Although neither a general, limited, or limited liability partnership is a separate taxable entity [I.R.C. § 701], limited and limited liability partnerships must pay a tax for the privilege of doing business in California when the entity files its state information return [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17851.5, 17935, 17948; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23151, 23153]. Limited and limited liability partnerships must pay the tax when they are doing business in California and are required to file a California return, and, if they are not yet doing business, when they have executed, acknowledged, and filed with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17935, 17948; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941, 23802(c) (similar rule for LLCs and S corporations)]. This tax is not deductible by the entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17220(c)].

[3] Limited Liability Company

A limited liability company may elect to be taxed either as a corporation [see [5], below] or as a partnership [see Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a); see also [2], above]. California generally conforms to the federal entity classification rules under Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-2 [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038; see also FTB Notice 92-5]. The classification of a business entity as an association taxable as a corporation is determined under FTB regulations, which must be consistent with the federal regulations in effect on January 1, 1997, that classify a business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation, or disregard the separate existence of the business entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(i)]. The classification of an eligible business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation is the same as the classification of the entity for federal tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(ii)]. However, if an eligible business entity was properly classified as an association taxable as a corporation for any income year beginning with the 60-month period preceding January 1, 1997, the entity continues to be an association taxable as a corporation until it elects to be classified the same as the entity is classified for federal purposes; this rule does not apply to any entity that was not doing business in California, did not derive income from California, and had no California resident owner during the 60-month period preceding January 1, 1997 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(C)].

It is likely that most LLCs will seek partnership tax treatment, in which the LLC is merely a pass-through entity for tax purposes [see § 1B.13]. If an LLC elects to be taxed as a corporation, however, income will be taxed at the entity and member levels [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23038, 23151; see also [5], below].

If the LLC elects to be taxed as a partnership, LLC income is not taxed at the entity level; rather, items of income, loss, gain, deductions, and credit pass through and are subject to taxation at the member level [see Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3; I.R.C. § 702(a)]. However, an LLC classified as a partnership, like limited and limited liability partnerships and S corporations, must pay the annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17851.5, 17935, 17941, 17948, 23151, 23153, 23802(c)], unless the LLC is exempt from taxes and fees under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701h or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701x [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(d), 23701h(b), 23701x(b); see also I.R.C. § 501(c)(2), (25) (title holding companies)].

LLCs subject to the franchise tax, LLCs taxed as partnerships as well as LLCs subject to corporate taxation, must also pay a graduated annual fee based on income of $250,000 or more from all sources requiring California reporting [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17942]. However, an LLC that is exempt from taxes and fees under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701h or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701x and that is not taxed as a corporation for California tax purposes is not subject to the annual minimum franchise tax, and thus not subject to this annual fee [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(d), 23701h(b), 23701x(b); see also I.R.C. § 501(c)(2), (25) (title holding companies)].

The LLC must file a separate, informational tax return with both the state and federal taxing authorities to report income, deductions, gains, losses, credits, and similar items [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5; see I.R.C. § 6031; Treas. Reg. § 1.6031-1(a)]. The California return also establishes that the minimum franchise tax has been paid and whether or not any annual fee based on total income is due and payable [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941, 17942, 18633.5]. For further discussion of LLC taxation, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

[4] S Corporation

Like partnerships and most LLCs [see [2], [3], above], an S corporation generally is not taxed at the corporate level, but passes through profits and losses to its owners, subject to various restrictions [I.R.C. § 1363(a); see I.R.C. §§ 1361-1379; see also §§ 1B.31[4], 1B.63[2][d]]. S corporations are not subject to the alternative minimum tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23400(b)]. However, S corporations are subject to the annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23151, 23153, 23802(c)] and a 1.5 percent tax on net income at the corporate level [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23800, 23802(b)]. Corporations that incorporate or qualify to do business in California after January 1, 2000, are not subject to the minimum franchise tax for the first taxable year, unless the corporation reorganized solely to avoid payment of the minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153(f) (exemption inapplicable to qualified Subchapter S subsidiaries)].

[5] C Corporations

C corporations; that is, corporations that have not elected to be taxed as S corporations [I.R.C. § 1361(a)], are subject to double taxation on income: the corporation pays a separate tax on earnings, and shareholders then pay a second tax on dividends and appreciated property distributions [I.R.C. §§ 1, 11, 61(a)(7), 301, 316; see I.R.C. § 1(h)(11); (federal taxation of qualified dividends at capital gains rates) Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23038, 23151, 23153 (annual minimum franchise tax); see also § 1B.30[2][f]]. However, corporations that incorporate or qualify to do business in California after January 1, 2000, are not subject to the minimum franchise tax for the first taxable year, unless the corporation reorganized solely to avoid payment of the minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153(f)(1), (3)]. The use of the sole proprietorship, partnership, limited liability company, or S corporation form avoids the corporation's double taxation on business income.

The maximum corporate tax rate may or may not be less than the federal tax rate imposed on the individual shareholders. If it is lower, incorporation as a C corporation may be advantageous. The maximum individual tax rate is 35 percent after 2005 [I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. In contrast, the maximum federal tax rate for taxable income between $75,000 and $10 million is 34 percent. For taxable income over $10 million, the maximum corporate tax rate is 35 percent [I.R.C. § 11(b)(1)]. An additional 5 percent tax is imposed on corporate taxable income exceeding $100,000, with an $11,750 cap on additional tax liability. This causes an effective tax rate of 39 percent on taxable income between $100,000 and $335,000. A 3 percent additional tax is imposed on corporate taxable income exceeding $15 million, with a $100,000 cap on additional tax liability. This causes an effective tax rate of 38 percent on corporate taxable income between $15 million and $18,333,333. Corporate taxable income over $18,333,333 is subject to a tax rate of 35 percent [I.R.C. § 11(b)(1)]. However, offsetting the potential tax rate advantage to incorporating, and ignoring the double taxation issue, is the differential in capital gain tax rates. The maximum individual rate applicable to capital gains (generally 15 percent [I.R.C. § 1(h)(1), effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303]) is significantly lower that the maximum individual and corporate tax rates. [I.R.C. §§ 1(a)- (d), (h), (i)(2), 11]. Corporations are not eligible for this special capital gains tax rate [I.R.C. §§ 1(h), 11, 1201(a)]. Therefore, if sizeable net capital gain is anticipated, the corporate form may be disadvantageous.

Personal service corporations are not eligible for the graduated federal corporate income tax rates. These corporations are taxable at a flat rate of 35 percent [I.R.C. § 11(b)(2)]. Thus, taxable income of a corporation that performs services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial sciences, performing arts, or consulting is taxed at a flat 35 percent rate on all taxable income [I.R.C. §§ 11(b)(2); see I.R.C. § 448(d)(2) (definition of qualified personal service corporation)].

Although there are many ways to minimize the effect of the double taxation of corporate income [see § 1B.63[2][d]], and there may remain some tax advantages to incorporating in order to split income between the corporation and its owners and, thus, pay a lesser amount of combined tax [see § 1B.113, P 3e], as well as nontax advantages, the double taxation and rate differentials have made the noncorporate forms of business organization, the sole proprietorship, the partnership, the LLC, or the S corporation, considerably more attractive.

The California state tax rate for corporations (excepting banks and financial corporations [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23181, 23183]) is 8.84 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151(e), (f)]; the state tax rate for individuals is 9.3 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17041(a)(1); but see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17041(a)(2) (possible temporary additional rate component)]. However, because of the significantly higher federal tax rates, federal income tax considerations, rather than state, dominate the tax planning aspects of entity selection. California also imposes an alternative minimum tax (AMT) on corporations at the rate of 7 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23400, 23455-23459] that generally follows the federal corporate AMT [I.R.C. §§ 55-59].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.63

§ 1B.63 Treatment of Income and Loss

[1] Choice of Business Form--In General

Every business anticipates making a profit; however, a loss may result from expenses exceeding income during the early years of the business or from a "paper" tax loss, a loss resulting from depreciation or other non-cash expenses [see I.R.C. § 167]. Even when businesses are profitable from year one, some businesses will be required to reinvest a substantial portion of their earnings, whereas other businesses will want to distribute a substantial portion of their earnings to their owners as is usually the case when the owner provides the business service.

The following subsections discuss the taxation of income and the deductibility of losses for sole proprietorships, partnerships, limited liability companies, S corporations, and C corporations. The differences in tax treatment may significantly affect the initial choice of business form.

[2] Taxation of Income

[a] Sole Proprietorship

In a sole proprietorship, the owner includes net business income in personal income and pays tax accordingly; the owner does not pay a separate income tax on the business' net profit [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1)]. However, net profits of $400 or more are subject to a self-employed social security tax, which is calculated on and paid with the individual income tax form [I.R.C. §§ 1401, 1402(b)(2), 6017].

Business deductions that reduce business income must be ordinary and necessary business expenses; no other deductions are permitted [see I.R.C. § 162].

In actual practice, taxation of income of a sole proprietorship is essentially the same as the taxation of a partnership [I.R.C. § 61(a)(2), (13)]. A significant difference, however, is that partners in a partnership may allocate income (as well as gain, loss, deductions, and credits) in a percentage that differs from the partner's percentage of capital contributions, provided that there is substantial economic effect to the allocation [I.R.C. § 704(a), (b); Treas. Reg. 1.704-1(b)(2)(i)]. In contrast, a sole proprietor, as sole owner, must necessarily report all income (as well as gain, loss, deduction, or credit) on his or her individual income tax return [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1)].

[b] Partnership

Because a partnership acts as a conduit, passing through items of income (as well as gain, loss, deductions, or credit) to its partners, an individual partner's income from the partnership is taxed according to the rules that govern the taxation of individuals [I.R.C. § 701; see I.R.C. § 61(a)(13)]. Further, some items, charitable contributions and investment interest and expense, for example, pass through directly to the individual partners without first being used in the computation of partnership income or loss [I.R.C. § 702(a), (b)]. Each partner must include his or her share of income (and other partnership items) on his or her individual return, regardless of whether the items, or their cash equivalent, are actually distributed to the partner [I.R.C. §§ 702(a), 704(b)].

Guaranteed payments made to a partner, as well as other income received, are considered to be self-employment income and are subject to self-employment tax [I.R.C. § 1402(a)(5)(A), (B)].

[c] Limited Liability Company

The principal advantage of an LLC taxed as a partnership over a corporation [see [e], below] is, that as a pass-through entity, LLCs avoid double taxation of income [I.R.C. §§ 1, 11, 701; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23038, 23151; see [e], below]. However, because of the possibly higher rates applicable to individuals, tax transparency may or may not be a significant benefit [I.R.C. §§ 1, 11; see § 1B.62[5]].

The principal advantage of an LLC taxed as a partnership over other pass-through entities, such as partnerships and S corporations, is that the profits and losses of the LLC can be reallocated among the members (or classes of members), within IRS restrictions, pursuant to the operating agreement. If the agreement does not provide to the contrary, profits and losses are allocated in proportion to the contributions of the members [Corp. Code § 17202]. In contrast, S corporation shareholders report a pro rata share, based on their shares, of the corporation's income and loss [I.R.C. § 1366(a)].

Similar to partners and S corporation shareholders who receive compensation for services, LLC members actively engaged in management must pay self-employment tax on the net amount exceeding $400 [see I.R.C. §§ 1402, 6017].

[d] S Corporation

The tax law governing the taxation of S corporation shareholders is generally the same as the law governing the taxation of partners, with regard to items of partnership income and loss. Each S corporation shareholder reports his or her proportionate share of income (as well as gain, loss, deduction, or credit) on his or her individual income tax returns [I.R.C. § 1366(a)]. In addition, like partners who receive guaranteed payments, S corporation shareholders who receive compensation in exchange for services, without being actual employees of the corporation, must pay self-employment tax on the net amount exceeding $400 [see I.R.C. §§ 1402, 6017; see also Ding v. Commissioner (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1999) 200 F.3d 587, 588-590 (holding that S corporation pass-through losses are not properly included in determining self-employment tax liability)].

[e] C Corporation

[i] Double Taxation

The significant disadvantage of a corporation is its double taxation: the corporation pays income tax on its net income [I.R.C. § 11(a)]; its shareholders pay tax on the corporate dividends distributed to them [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(1), 61(a)(7), 301, 316]. Double taxation of dividends is less of a concern during years in which dividends are taxable at lower capital gains rates (generally tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009), but still is a disadvantage to the corporate form if corporate earnings are distributed as dividends [I.R.C. § 1(h)(11); see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for dividend taxation at capital gains rates)]. There are various tax planning devices that might mitigate the impact of double taxation by reducing dividend distributions that are not deductible by the corporation [I.R.C. §§ 301, 562], and by making payments to shareholders which can be deducted by the corporation from its taxable income. These payments include deductible payments to shareholders as compensation [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1)], as rent [I.R.C. § 162(a)(3)], or as interest on loans from shareholders [I.R.C. § 163(a)]. In addition, organizing a corporation as a "thin corporation" with a maximum of debt and a minimum of equity can help reduce the impact of double taxation by allowing the corporation to deduct, as interest, the amounts distributed by the corporation with respect to its debt instruments, whereas distributions of profits would otherwise be nondeductible dividends [see I.R.C. §§ 385, 301, 316].

[ii] Penalty Taxes--In General

Because C corporations are subject to double taxation, one way to avoid the second tax on dividends at the shareholder level would be to retain, in the corporation, the amount that would otherwise have been paid out as dividends. To prevent this situation, penalty taxes, including the accumulated earning tax and the personal holding tax, have been imposed on corporations [see United States v. Donruss Co. (1969) 393 U.S. 297, 89 S. Ct. 501, 21 L. Ed. 2d 495 ; see also I.R.C. §§ 531, 532, 541].

[iii] Penalty Tax on Personal Holding Company

A personal holding company is a closely held corporation in which five or fewer individuals own more than 50 percent of the corporation's outstanding stock [I.R.C. § 542(a)(2)] and at least 60 percent of the corporation's income comes from passive sources, such as dividends, interest, rents, royalties, annuities, and personal service contracts [I.R.C. § 542(a)(1); see I.R.C. § 543 (complete list of sources)]. A corporation that is classed as a personal holding company must pay a 15 percent penalty tax [I.R.C. § 541, effective for tax years beginning after 12/31/02 and before 1/1/09; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303)]. For other tax years, the tax rate is the highest rate of tax imposed under I.R.C. § 1(c) [I.R.C. § 541, before amendment by Pub. Law No. 108-27]. The tax is imposed on undistributed personal holding company income, in addition to the other taxes [I.R.C. § 541].

[iv] Penalty Tax on Accumulated Earnings

The accumulated earnings tax [I.R.C. §§ 531-537] is another penalty tax imposed on corporations that accumulate earnings above their reasonable business needs for the purpose of avoiding the income tax imposed on shareholders if the earnings were distributed as dividends [I.R.C. §§ 532(a), 533; see I.R.C. § 532(b) (exceptions)]. The accumulated earnings tax will not be imposed until accumulated earnings exceed $250,000, or $150,000 for personal service corporations or corporations whose principal business is in the field of health, law, engineering, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting [I.R.C. § 535(c)(2)]. The tax is seldom imposed on corporations that reinvest their earnings in the business, even if those reinvested earnings exceed the above-mentioned amounts [I.R.C. § 537; Treas. Reg. §§ 1.537-1, 1.537-2]. It is imposed, in practice, when liquid assets are not directly used in the business and when tax avoidance is one of the purposes for accumulating the assets [Ivan Allen Co. v. United States (1975) 422 U.S. 617, 95 S. Ct. 2501, 45 L. Ed. 2d 435] . The penalty tax, if imposed, is 15 percent [I.R.C. § 531, effective for tax years beginning after 12/31/02 and before 1/1/09; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303)]. For other tax years, the tax rate is the highest rate of tax imposed under I.R.C. § 1(c) [I.R.C. § 531, before amendment by Pub. Law No. 108-27]. The tax is imposed on the corporation's accumulated taxable income [I.R.C. § 531].

[3] Deductibility of Losses

[a] Sole Proprietorship

The general rule is that a sole proprietor may deduct business losses from other income [I.R.C. § 62(a)(1)]. However, there are two notable restrictions. First, the sole proprietor may not deduct losses in an amount greater than he or she has at risk in the business [see I.R.C. § 465]. Generally, the at-risk rules allow an individual to deduct losses only to the extent of the amount at risk [I.R.C. § 465(a)(1)]. The amount at risk includes the business' contributed capital and the business owner's recourse liabilities [I.R.C. § 465(b)(1)- (3)]. The amount at risk that applies to real estate includes certain qualified nonrecourse financing, in addition to capital contributed and recourse liabilities [I.R.C. § 465(b)(6)]. Unallowed losses are, in most cases, allowed on disposition of the business [see I.R.C. § 465]. Second, the business venture must be engaged in for profit [see I.R.C. §§ 183(c), 262]. If the business activity is not pursued with a profit motive, the Internal Revenue Service may recharacterize it as a hobby, thereby limiting the activity's deductions to an amount not to exceed its income [I.R.C. § 183(b); see I.R.C. § 183 (hobby loss rules)].

[b] Partnership

A partner may deduct his or her share of partnership losses, should partnership operations result in a loss, from other income on his or her individual income tax return [I.R.C. §§ 701, 702(a)(8)]. However, losses are deductible only to the extent of the adjusted basis of the partner's interest at the end of the partnership year in which the loss occurs [I.R.C. § 704(d)]. Any unused loss is deductible in a year in which the partner's interest in basis is reestablished [I.R.C. § 704(d)]. In addition, a partner's ability to offset income from other sources is further limited by the passive loss rules [see I.R.C. § 469]. These rules generally restrict the use of losses from passive activities to offset income from passive activities, rather than income from wages. A passive activity is an activity involving a trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate [I.R.C. § 469(c)]. Because a limited partner does not materially participate in the management and control of the business, a limited partner whose distributive share from the partnership results in a loss may not use this loss to offset his or her income from wages [see I.R.C. § 469(c), (h)].

[c] Limited Liability Company

Most limited liability companies will seek partnership tax treatment. Under partnership tax rules, LLC members may deduct their share of LLC losses from other income on his or her individual income tax return [I.R.C. §§ 701, 702(a)(8)], to the extent of the adjusted basis of the member's interest at the end of the year in which the loss occurs [I.R.C. § 704(d)]. Any unused loss is deductible in a year in which the member's interest in basis is reestablished [I.R.C. § 704(d)].

A member's ability to offset income from other sources may be further limited by the passive loss rules [see I.R.C. § 469], which generally restrict the use of losses from passive activities to offset income from passive activities, rather than income from wages. A passive activity is an activity involving a trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate [I.R.C. § 469(c)]. If the member does not materially participate in the management and control of the business, a member whose distributive share from the partnership results in a loss may not use this loss to offset his or her income from wages [see I.R.C. § 469(c), (h)].

[d] S Corporation

S corporation shareholders may deduct losses from the business activity against their other income, subject to the passive loss limitations [see I.R.C. § 469] and the at-risk rules [I.R.C. § 465(c)(3)(B)(ii)]. However, the amount of deductible loss is also limited by the amount of the shareholder's adjusted basis in the S corporation's stock and the shareholder's adjusted basis of loans made to the corporation by the shareholder [I.R.C. § 1367]. As with partnerships, losses that are not deductible in a current year can be carried forward and deducted in any subsequent year in which the shareholder has an adequate adjusted basis in either shares or indebtedness [I.R.C. § 1366(d)].

The basis of an S corporation shareholder's interest is calculated in a significantly different way from that used by a partner to determine the basis of his or her partnership interest. Unlike a partner in a partnership, when an increase or decrease of partnership liabilities results in a corresponding proportionate increase or decrease in the partner's basis in his or her partnership interest [see I.R.C. § 752], an S corporation shareholder may not include his or her share of corporate liabilities in basis, for determining the amount of deductible loss [I.R.C. § 1366(d)]; only loans from the shareholder to the corporation may be added to the shareholder's basis [I.R.C. § 1366(d)(1)(B)]. Therefore, S corporation shareholders who personally guarantee a bank loan to the corporation will not benefit by a proportionate increase in basis [see I.R.C. § 1366(d)(1)(B)], unless the lender relies primarily on the shareholder for repayment of the loan [see Selfe v. United States (11th Cir. 1985) 778 F.2d 769].

[e] C Corporation

In contrast to losses of partnerships and S corporations that pass through to owners, subject to certain limitations, losses of a C corporation do not pass through and are not deductible by the shareholders [I.R.C. §§ 172, 1212]. These losses may be carried forward as net operating losses, to be used by the corporation when it has a net profit [I.R.C. § 172]. Losses are also limited by the at risk rules, if the C corporation is a closely held corporation [I.R.C. § 465(a)(2)], and by the passive activity loss limitations, if the C corporation is a personal services corporation or a closely held corporation [I.R.C. § 469(a)(2)].

CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.64

§ 1B.64 Treatment of Capital Contributions

[1] In General

Whether or not a transfer of property to a business is a taxable event, either at its formation or subsequently, is probably not the deciding factor in choice of form. However, an understanding of this aspect of the tax law is integral to making a well-informed choice of business entity.

[2] Sole Proprietor

In general, a sole proprietorship may be formed without tax consequences, because a sole proprietorship is not an entity distinct from its owner. Property may also be transferred without tax consequences to a sole proprietorship subsequent to formation for the same reason [see I.R.C. § 62(a)(1)]. However, it is a good idea for accounting and tax reporting purposes to distinguish assets that are dedicated to the business from assets used personally.

[3] Partnership and Limited Liability Company

A partnership or LLC may be formed with or without tax consequences, depending on whether a partner pr member exchanges property or services for a partnership interest [see I.R.C. §§ 83, 721, 707]. No gain or loss is recognized by the partner, member, or entity on the transfer of property to a partnership or LLC in exchange for a partnership or membership interest [I.R.C. § 721(a)], regardless of whether the property is contributed at the time of formation or at a later date [I.R.C. § 721(a)]. However, any deferred gain or loss on the property transferred is ultimately allocated to the contributing partner or member when gain or loss is recognized [I.R.C. § 704(c)].

Nonrecognition rules do not apply if a partner or member contributes property whose liabilities are assumed by the entity [I.R.C. § 752], or if a partner or member exchanges services for a partnership or membership interest (as opposed to a profits interest) [I.R.C. §§ 83(a), 707(c); see Rev. Proc. 93-27, 1993-2 C.B. 343 ; see also Treas. Reg. § 1.721-1(b)(2)]. If the liability on contributed property is assumed by the entity, the partner or member will recognize gain on the amount the liability assumed by the entity to the extent that it exceeds the adjusted basis in the property, because the transaction is treated as though the partner or member received a distribution of money from the entity [

I.R.C. §§ 731(a), 741]. If a partner or member exchanges services for an unrestricted capital interest in the partnership or LLC, the partner or member will be taxed on the fair market value of the partnership or membership interest at the time of receipt, and the entity will be treated as having made a guaranteed payment to the partner or member [Treas. Reg. § 1.721-1(b)(2); U.S. v. Frazell (5th Cir. 1964) 335 F.2d. 487 , cert. denied, 380 U.S. 961 ; see also I.R.C. § 707(c)]. If the partnership or membership interest received is nontransferable and is subject to substantial risk of forfeiture, the partner or member is not required to include any amount in income, until that interest either becomes transferable or is no longer subject to substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever happens first [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. Special rules govern the timing of a deduction for the partnership or LLC under these circumstances [see I.R.C. § 83(h)].

The basis of property contributed to a partnership or LLC in a nonrecognition transaction remains generally the same as if no transfer had been made with regard to unrealized appreciation or depreciation taken [I.R.C. §§ 721, 723]. A partner's or member's basis in a partnership or membership interest includes the adjusted basis of contributed property, the fair market value of services performed by the partner or member for the entityp, and the amount of money contributed [I.R.C. § 722].

Under certain circumstances, a partner or member may wish to recognize gain or loss at the time property is contributed to the entity. This may be accomplished by structuring the transfer as a sale [see I.R.C. §§ 707, 1001]. However, neither a partner nor a member is entitled to a loss deduction if the sale or exchange of property (other than an interest in a partnership) takes place between the entity and a person owning more than a 50 percent capital interest in the entity [I.R.C. § 707(b)(1)]. The advantage to a partnership or LLC that purchases property with a fair market value higher than its adjusted basis is that depreciation deductions will be greater than if it had received the same property in a nonrecognition transaction [see I.R.C. § 167; cf. I.R.C. § 723 (basis of property contributed under I.R.C. § 721(b))]. The partnership or LLC will ultimately recognize gain or loss when the property is sold or exchanged [see I.R.C. §§ 1001(a), 1001(b); see also I.R.C. § 704(c)].

[4] C Corporation

Like a partnership or a limited liability company, a C corporation may be formed with or without tax consequences. However, because a corporation is a separate legal entity, the laws governing transfers to corporations are more complex than those governing transfers to partnerships and limited liability companies.

In general, a shareholder may transfer property to a C corporation in exchange for shares without tax consequences if property is transferred to the corporation only in exchange for stock and the corporation is controlled by 80 percent of the transferring shareholders immediately after the transaction [I.R.C. § 351(a)]. The usual result of this rule is that initial transfers to corporations are tax free, as are initial and subsequent contributions by the initial shareholders, although subsequent transfers by new shareholders are taxed unless they can bring the transaction within the nonrecognition rules [I.R.C. § 351]. The transfer of property by a shareholder to a corporation under I.R.C. § 351 is generally a nontaxable transaction because the exchange is considered to be merely a change in form of investment [I.R.C. § 351]. However, if the contributing shareholder receives "boot," money, or other property from the corporation in addition to stock, the shareholder recognizes gain on that amount [I.R.C. § 351(b)].

The basis of stock received by a shareholder in exchange for property will be the same as the adjusted basis of the contributed property [I.R.C. § 358(a)]; the basis to the corporation of any property contributed by a shareholder is the adjusted basis of the property in the shareholder's hands at the time of contribution [I.R.C. § 362(a)].

Services performed by a shareholder in exchange for stock are not considered property [I.R.C. § 351(d)(1)]. Therefore, a shareholder who receives shares in exchange for services will recognize gain related to this transaction unless the shares are subject to substantial risk of forfeiture and to restrictions on transfer [see I.R.C. §§ 83(b), 351(d)(1)]. The corporation itself recognizes no gain if shares are exchanged for services; rather, the corporation may deduct the fair market value of the transferred shares as the equivalent of deductible salary expense [I.R.C. § 162(a)].

Under certain circumstances, a taxable corporate formation may be advantageous. This effect may be accomplished by selling the assets to the corporation, or by exchanging property and cash for shares. Under these circumstances, a shareholder recognizes gain or loss from the sale or exchange [see I.R.C. § 1001]. However, the corporation itself recognizes no gain or loss on an exchange of its own stock for money or other property [I.R.C. § 1032(a)]. This rule applies whether or not the exchange qualifies for nonrecognition treatment under I.R.C. § 351 [I.R.C. § 1032(a)]. Although no gain or loss is recognized on the transfer of property to the corporation, gain or loss is recognized by the corporation on the disposition of the asset [see I.R.C. § 1001]. Similarly, gain or loss is also recognized by a shareholder when he or she disposes of the stock received in exchange for property [see I.R.C. § 1001].

Capital contributions made subsequent to formation, by either shareholders or nonshareholders, are excluded from the corporation's gross income [I.R.C. § 118(a)], provided that the contributions are not made in return for goods or services received [Treas. Reg. § 1.118-1]. For shareholders, capital contributions of cash results in increased adjusted basis equal to the stock received in exchange [I.R.C. § 1012]. Capital contributions of noncash property may result in gain to the shareholder on the exchange, unless the nonrecognition rules of I.R.C. § 351 can be met [see I.R.C. §§ 351, 1012].

[5] S Corporation

Like a C corporation, an S corporation may be formed with or without tax consequences, under the rules that apply to C Corporations [see I.R.C. § 351; see also [4], above]. However, the effect of gain or loss recognized on the disposition of an asset by a corporation differs if the disposing corporation is an S corporation. Although the deferred gain is still taxed to the corporation [see I.R.C. § 1001], any gain in an S corporation is taxed directly to the shareholders, in proportion to their interests, thus relieving the contributing shareholder of bearing the entire tax burden [see I.R.C. § 1367(a)(1)].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.65

§ 1B.65 Disposition of Business or Business Interest

[1] Sale

[a] In General

It is sometimes said that the best choice of entity is one that is easy to convert to another form of business or that can be disposed of in the least expensive manner. Although conversion and disposition issues are not usually concerns for the client when organizing a new business venture, they should play a significant role in determining the initial choice of form.

The tax differences related to dispositions of business assets and business interests for the different entities generally reflect the differences between pass-through entities and C corporations that pay a separate tax. Taxable dispositions of sole proprietorships, partnerships, LLCs, and S corporations generally result in a single tax [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 702, 705, 1366], while taxable dispositions of a C corporation are taxed first at the corporate level, with the shareholder generally paying a tax on receipt of the distribution [I.R.C. §§ 11(b), 61(a)(7), 301, 316].

Furthermore, reorganization of a business is an area in which the corporate form (including both C and S corporations) may have important advantages over noncorporate forms. If a corporation is reorganized rather than liquidated, neither the old corporation nor its shareholders ordinarily recognize gain (unless boot is involved) [see I.R.C. § 368]. However, the bases of the assets of the old corporation, as well as other attributes, carry over to the new corporation [I.R.C. § 362(a)], generally at a value less than their fair market value, so that if the new corporation sells those assets, it will likely pay more in capital gains than it would had it purchased the assets at fair market value [see I.R.C. § 1001]. For the tax treatment of corporate reorganizations, see I.R.C. §§ 351, 354, 361 and 368 [I.R.C. §§ 351, 354, 361, 368; see Ch. 11, Merger and Acquisition Issues].

[b] Sole Proprietorship

On the sale of a sole proprietorship, each business asset is treated separately, according to the nature of the asset. Thus, even if the entire business is sold for a single price, the price of the business must be allocated among its assets [

Williams v. McGowan (2d Cir. 1945) 152 F.2d 570] .

[c] Partnership

When an individual partner sells his or her partnership interest, the partner realizes capital gain or loss, subject to the restrictions of I.R.C. § 751 [I.R.C. § 741]. Proceeds from the sale of unrealized receivables or inventory are treated as a noncapital asset [I.R.C. § 751(c), (d)] and, consequently, as ordinary income or ordinary loss [I.R.C. § 751(c), (d)]. The maximum individual tax rates for ordinary income are higher than the capital gains tax rate 15 percent [I.R.C. § 1(h)(1), effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303]. In addition, ordinary losses are not subject to the limitations that apply to capital losses [I.R.C. §§ 1(a)- (d), (h), (i)(2), 165, 1211]. However, a partner does not recognize any gain unless the money or property received exceeds the partner's basis in the partnership interest (or unless certain items of inventory or unrealized receivables are received, under the rules of I.R.C. § 751) [I.R.C. §§ 731, 751].

When a partnership is disposed of, the partnership pays no tax [I.R.C. § 731(b)]. Any gain or loss on disposition is taxed directly to the partners, whose partnership interests will be adjusted accordingly [see I.R.C. §§ 701, 702; Treas. Reg. § 1.702-1].

The disposition of a partnership may have no immediate tax consequences if it constitutes a transfer to a controlled corporation [see I.R.C. § 351]. However, such a transfer is a reorganization, rather than a disposition, only if the transferor-partners are in control of the corporation [I.R.C. §§ 351(a), 368(c)]. In addition, a partnership may merge or consolidate with another partnership without recognizing either gain or loss, if the transaction qualifies under I.R.C. § 708 [I.R.C. § 708; see Rev. Rul. 90-17, 1990-1 C.B. 119]. For further discussion, see Ch. 15, Part C, Conversion and Mergers ofGeneral Partnerships .

[d] Limited Liability Company

Most LLCs will be structured as pass-through entities to take advantage of a single level of taxation under the partnership tax rules [see [c], above]. However, some LLCs will be unable to secure partnership-like taxation (and be taxed as an association taxables as a corporation) or for other reasons actively seek corporate tax treatment [see [e], below].

[e] Corporation

[i] Sale of Stock

Both C and S corporation shareholders ordinarily recognize capital gain or loss on the sale of their corporate stock [I.R.C. § 1001]. For tax years beginning before January 1, 2003 and after December 31, 2008, the shareholders of a collapsible corporation are taxed at ordinary income rates on their gain, rather than at capital gain rates [I.R.C. § 341, before repeal by Pub. Law No. 108-27].

A collapsible corporation is one formed for the construction, production, or purchase of property with a view to the sale or exchange of its stock, or the distribution of property to shareholders before the corporation realizes a substantial part of the income derived from the property [I.R.C. § 341(b)(1)]. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009, the collapsible corporation rules are repealed, and do not apply [see I.R.C. § 341, before repeal by Pub. Law No. 108-27; Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for repeal of collapsible corporation rules)].

If S corporation stock is sold, the sale may precipitate the loss of S corporation status as of the date of the sale [I.R.C. §§ 1361(b)(1)(B), 1362(c), (d)(2)].

[ii] Distribution of Assets

A C corporation pays a corporate level tax on the distribution of appreciated assets to shareholders, whether or not the distribution results from a liquidation of the corporation. The amount of gain recognized is the same amount that would be recognized if the property had been sold to the distributee at its fair market value [I.R.C. § 311(b)(1)].

If a distribution of assets results from a complete liquidation, the amounts received by the shareholders are treated as in full payment in exchange for the stock [see I.R.C. § 331]. If assets are distributed in something other than a complete liquidation, shareholders recognize income to the extent that the fair market value of the distributed property constitutes a dividend plus any portion of the distribution that is not a dividend and that exceeds basis [see I.R.C. §§ 301(a), (c), 316, 317]. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009 [see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (uncodified effective date and sunset provision of dividends capital gains rate legislation)], qualified dividends received by individuals are subject to federal taxation at capital gains rates [I.R.C. § 1(h)(11)].

[2] Retirement or Death

[a] In General

The retirement or death of a partner or shareholder can have significant tax consequences. Tax considerations in the sale of the entity or of the business interests of its owner or investor are discussed in [1], above. The retirement or death of the business owner raises special issues.

[b] Sole Proprietor

In general, the assets of a sole proprietorship are distributed in accordance with the terms of the owner's will or under California's intestacy statute. The assets receive a "stepped up" basis to fair market value at the date of death [I.R.C. § 1014; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis rule generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022)]. The sale of the business, or of any of its assets, generally results in capital gain or loss to the seller [I.R.C. § 1001].

[i] In General

Like a sole proprietorship, a partnership interest passes either under the partner's will or under California's intestacy statute unless the partnership agreement is drafted to prevent a testamentary transfer of a partnership interest. As with a sole proprietorship, the basis of a partnership interest is stepped up to fair market value as of the date of death [I.R.C. § 1014; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis rule generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022)].

However, a partnership has much more flexibility in planning for the retirement or death of a partner than does either a sole proprietorship or a corporation. The death or retirement of a partner can be treated in one of three ways: (1) as a sale of the partner's interest [see I.R.C. §§ 741, 742, 751; see also [1][c], above]; (2) as the liquidation of the partner's interest [see I.R.C. § 736; see also [iii], below]; or (3) as a complete liquidation of the partnership [see I.R.C. §§ 731, 732, 751; see also [iv], below].

[ii] Treatment of Sale of Interest

On a partner's death, the basis of the deceased partner's interest is stepped up to fair market value [I.R.C. § 1014; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis regime generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022)], while the decedent's share of partnership income or loss for the tax period ending with the partner's death is taxable to the partner's estate or the party succeeding to the partner's interest [see I.R.C. § 742]. It is important to note that by planning to treat the death or retirement of a partner as a sale of that partner's interest, the partnership does not receive a deduction because the sale is a capital transaction between the partner or the partner's estate and a third party.

[iii] Treatment as Liquidation of Partner's Interest

The death or retirement of a partner may be treated as a complete liquidation of the partner's interest, which is then purchased by the partnership. Payments to a retiring partner or to a deceased partner's estate under these circumstances generally result in capital gain or loss to the partner unless I.R.C. § 751 applies [I.R.C. § 741; see I.R.C. § 751]; these payments are not deductible by the partnership because they represent a distribution by the partnership to a partner or a partner's estate with regard to the partner's interest in partnership property [see I.R.C. § 736].

Payments made by the partnership to a retiring partner or to a deceased partner's estate in exchange for anything other than the partnership interest, such as for partnership goodwill or unrealized receivables, result in ordinary income to the receiving party and a deduction to the partnership [I.R.C. § 736; Treas. Reg. 1.736-1(a)(4)].

[iv] Treatment as Complete Liquidation of Partnership

In the complete liquidation of a partnership, a partner recognizes gain to the extent that any money distributed exceeds the partner's adjusted basis of the partnership interest [I.R.C. § 731(a)(1)]. Gain or loss is characterized as capital unless it results from unrealized receivables or inventory [I.R.C. §§ 741, 751]. Gain or loss is recognized on the sale of individual assets and is taxed directly to the partners and results in an adjustment of the basis of each partner's interest [Williams v. McGowan (2d Cir. 1945) 152 F.2d 570 ; I.R.C. §§ 741, 702, 705; Treas. Reg. §§ 1.702-1, 1.702-2].

[d] Limited Liability Company

Most LLCs will be structured as pass-through entities to take advantage of a single level of taxation under the partnership tax rules. Therefore, the tax rules governing the effects of the retirement or death of a member are similar to those applicable to partnerships [see [c], above].

[e] Corporation

A shareholder wishing to dispose of stock may sell the shares to the remaining shareholders or to nonshareholders, or the corporation may redeem the shares. If the shares are redeemed, there must be an actual reduction in the shareholder's proportionate interest in the corporation for the redemption to receive capital gain treatment [I.R.C. § 302(b)(1)]. If the shareholder retains an interest in the corporation, the redemption may be treated as a dividend [I.R.C. § 302(b)(1)]. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009 [Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (uncodified effective date and sunset provision of dividends capital gains rate legislation)], qualified dividends received by individuals are subject to federal taxation at capital gains rates [I.R.C. § 1(h)(11)]. Therefore, the treatment of a redemption distribution as a dividend will not trigger adverse federal tax consequences for those years, because it will be taxed at capital gains rates [I.R.C. § 1(h)(1)(B), (C), (11)]. The corporation itself will receive no deduction for the redemption [see I.R.C. § 302(a)].

If shares are sold, to either shareholders or nonshareholders, the transaction is governed by the general gain and loss recognition rules [I.R.C. § 1001(c)]. The corporation receives no deduction for shares purchased by its remaining shareholders.

If a shareholder dies, the basis of shares that pass either under a will or under the California intestacy statutes is stepped up to fair market value as of the date of death [I.R.C. § 1014; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis regime generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022)]. A redemption of a deceased shareholder's stock to pay estate taxes and funeral and administrative expenses ordinarily receives capital gains treatment [I.R.C. § 303].

CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.66

§ 1B.66 Income Splitting

[1] In General

Income splitting may be accomplished not only between two taxpaying entities, such as a corporation and a shareholder [see § 1B.113, P (3)(e)], but also among family members. Income splitting among family members, particularly in partnerships, is a device that has spawned an enormous amount of litigation and has resulted in stringent Internal Revenue Code requirements [see I.R.C. § 704(e); Treas. Reg. § 1.704-1].

[2] Sole Proprietorship

Income splitting in a sole proprietorship is possible only by employing a family member. Money is retained within the family unit while the sole proprietor receives the benefit of a deduction for salaries [see I.R.C. § 162(a)]. However, money paid in wages to another family member may be taxed to that family member, so that although the sole proprietor's net tax is lessened, the family member's tax liability will likely increase.

[3] Partnership and Limited Liability Company

Partnership or limited liability company income may be split among family members if certain requirements are met [I.R.C. § 704(c), (e)]. In general, a family member will be considered a legitimate partner or member if he or she owns a partnership or membership interest in an entity in which capital is a material income-producing factor [I.R.C. § 704(e)(1)]. This requirement eliminates the possibility of income splitting in most personal service businesses in which the owner provides the principal service of the business and capital is not an income-producing factor [see Payton v. United States (5th Cir. 1970) 425 F.2d 1324 , cert. denied, 400 U.S. 957 (1970)] .

A family member receiving a gift of a partnership or membership interest is taxed on his or her distributive share of partnership or LLC income according to the partnership or LLC operating agreement, except to the extent that (1) that share is determined without allowance of reasonable compensation for services rendered to the entity by the donor and (2) the portion of that share attributable to donated capital is proportionately greater than the share of the donor attributable to the donor's capital [I.R.C. § 704(e)(2); see also Treas. Reg. § 1.704-1(e)(3)(i)(a), (c)].

If minor children are made partners or members, a fiduciary must be appointed unless the minor child is competent to manage property on a equal basis with adults [see Treas. Reg. § 1.704-1(e)(2(viii)]. In addition, following the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514] and the Tax Increase Prevention and Reconciliation Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-222], the unearned income of children under the age of 18 may be taxed at the parents' rates rather than the child's [I.R.C. § 1(g)(2)(A)], thereby reducing the incentive to shift income to children.

[4] C Corporation

In a corporation, income shifting may be accomplished simply by transferring stock ownership to other family members. However, the Internal Revenue Service can reapportion gross income, deductions, credits, or allowances among family members to prevent tax avoidance and to clearly reflect the income of any one of them [I.R.C. § 482]. This power and the assignment of income doctrine [see Lucas v. Earl (1930) 281 U.S. 111, 50 S. Ct. 241, 74 L. Ed. 731 ; Commissioner v. Giannini (9th Cir. 1942) 129 F.2d 638 ; see also Rev. Rul. 88-38, 1988-1 C.B. 246] serve to limit the use of the corporation as an income-splitting device.

[5] S Corporation

An S corporation may be used to shift income among family members through a bona fide transfer of shares. However, if an individual who is a family member of one or more of the shareholders of an S corporation renders services or provides capital without receiving reasonable compensation, the IRS may reallocate income, deductions, and other items to properly reflect the value of those services or capital [see I.R.C. § 1366(e)].

§ 1B.67 Deductibility of Start-up Expenses

[1] Sole Proprietorship

A sole proprietor may amortize start-up expenses over a period of not less than five years, provided a timely election is made [I.R.C. § 195]. Start-up expenses are those paid or incurred in connection with the investigation or creation of an active trade or business that would otherwise be deductible if paid or incurred in connection with the operation of an existing trade or business [I.R.C. § 195(c)(1)]. These include expenses to investigate starting a new business venture or acquiring an existing business; other costs incurred before the opening of the business, such as advertising, salaries paid to employees being trained, travel and other expenses incurred lining up prospective distributors, suppliers, and customers; and fees paid for consultants and similar services [Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1980, 1980-2 C.B. 709, 712-713] . A taxpayer who borrows money to start a sole proprietorship, or to buy assets such as machinery or equipment used in the business may deduct the interest as a business expense [I.R.C. §§ 162, 163].

[2] Partnership, Limited Liability Company, and S Corporation

Neither a partnership or its partners, a limited liability company or its members, nor an S corporation or its shareholders may deduct expenses incurred in the formation of the entity. A partnership, LLC, or S corporation may elect to amortize start-up expenses over a period of 180 months [I.R.C. §§ 709(b), 1363(b)(3)]. Start-up expenses that can be amortized are those that can be expected to benefit the entity throughout its existence [see Treas. Reg. § 1.709-2 (examples of start-up expenses)].

Like start-up expenses, syndication costs incurred in connection with a limited partnership must be capitalized [Treas. Reg. § 1.709-2(b)]. However, unlike start-up expenses, syndication costs may not be amortized [Treas. Reg. § 1.709-2(b)]. Syndication costs are those connected with the issuing and marketing of interests in an entity, including brokerage and registration fees and the costs of the prospectus or placement memorandum [Treas. Reg. § 1.709-2(b)].

Interest paid on loans to purchase an interest in a pass-through entity such as a partnership, limited partnership, limited liability company, or S corporation must be allocated among the entity's assets using a reasonable method, such as a pro rata allocation based on the fair market value, book value, or adjusted basis of the assets (reduced by any debt of the S corporation or shareholder that is allocated to those assets [see 1989-1 C.B. 675, Notice 89-35 ; see also Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.163-8T].

[3] Corporation

A corporation may elect to amortize its start-up expenses over a period of at least 180 months [I.R.C. § 248]. If no election is made, start-up expenses may be capitalized and are deductible at dissolution [I.R.C. § 248]. Syndication costs must be capitalized [Treas. Reg. § 1.248-1(b)(3); see [2], above].

When a taxpayer borrows money to purchase stock, the interest expense connected with the debt is investment interest. Deductions of investment interest are limited to the taxpayer's net investment income for the year [I.R.C. § 163(d)].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Tax Considerations in Choosing a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.68

§ 1B.68 Other Tax Considerations

[1] Alternative Minimum Tax

The differences in alternative minimum tax (AMT) adjustments for individuals, partners, LLC members, S corporation shareholders, and C corporations may result in a significant additional tax burden in choosing to do business as a C corporation. The AMT [I.R.C. §§ 55-59] is a tax imposed on both individuals and corporations on alternative minimum taxable income, or taxable income with both adjustments and additions of tax preference items [I.R.C. § 55(b)(2)]. Although the corporate AMT rate is 20 percent, or 6 to 8 percent lower than the individual alternative rate [I.R.C. § 55(b)(1)], a number of adjustments apply only to C corporations [see I.R.C. § 56(c)(1), (g)] and generally result in higher corporate alternative minimum taxes and may deter owners from choosing the C corporate form. If the corporate form is chosen, the AMT imposed on corporations makes advance tax planning essential.

California also imposes an AMT on individuals, corporations other than S corporations, and banks and financial corporations subject to the bank and corporation franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17062, 23400, 23455].

[2] Choice of Tax Year

The tax year of a sole proprietorship is the same as the tax year of its proprietor because the proprietorship and the proprietor are one and the same taxpayer. Thus, no opportunity exists to shift income by adopting a different tax year for the business.

Partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations must adopt a calendar year as their tax year, unless they can show a business reason for a different year or unless they make a special election for a tax year with a deferral period and make required payments [I.R.C. §§ 444 (election of tax year other than required year), 7519 (required payments); see I.R.C. §§ 441(i) (personal service corporations), 706(b) (partnerships), 1378 (S corporations)]. Corporations that are neither S corporations nor personal service corporations may adopt any fiscal year [see I.R.C. §§ 441, 444]. The choice of a fiscal year may allow a corporation, by timing its payments to calendar year shareholders, to limit the amount that those shareholders must report in one year and defer the remainder of the income to a future year. However, accounting period requirements are complex and are written intentionally to minimize benefits arising from shifting income from one calendar year to another [see I.R.C. §§ 444(c), 7519].

[3] Section 1244 Stock

Losses that result from the sale, exchange, or worthlessness of an investment, such as a limited partnership interest, LLC interest, or corporate securities, are generally capital losses that can be used by a noncorporate taxpayer to offset ordinary income only up to $3,000 per year [I.R.C. § 1211(b)]. However, small business corporations (those whose total equity capital does not exceed $1,000,000 [I.R.C. § 1244(c)(1)(A)]) may take advantage of I.R.C. § 1244, if they meet Section 1244 requirements [see I.R.C. § 1244]. Section 1244 provides that losses on stock may be deducted as ordinary losses of $50,000, or $100,000 on a joint return, per year [I.R.C. § 1244(b)], providing both protection for investors in a new small business and a possible tax benefit.

I.R.C. § 1244 is available to S corporations as well as to C corporations [I.R.C. § 1371(a)]. However, as a practical matter, the tax benefits for losses on Section 1244 stock for S corporation shareholders will likely be limited by the requirement that losses be deducted only to the extent of the shareholder's basis in the corporation [see I.R.C. § 1367].

[4] Fringe Benefits

[a] Retirement Plans

Following the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1987 [Pub. L. No. 97-248], the distinction between tax-qualifying retirement plans (Keoghs) available to noncorporate entities and S corporation shareholders and those available to corporations was practically eliminated [see I.R.C. §§ 401-424]. However, a few differences remain that make slightly better retirement benefits available to corporations than to noncorporate entities or to S corporation shareholders. For example, the maximum amount deductible as a retirement plan contribution by a noncorporate entity for a self-employed person is limited to that person's self-employment income, reduced by the amount contributed to qualified retirement plans [I.R.C. § 404(a)(8)]. There is no such restriction for persons who participate in corporate retirement plans. In addition, plans based on stock ownership, such as Employee Stock Ownership Plans [I.R.C. § 409], incentive stock options [I.R.C. § 422], stock bonus plans [I.R.C. § 401(a)], or cash or deferred arrangements [I.R.C. § 401(k)] are available only to corporations.

[b] Other Fringe Benefits

More fringe benefits are available through a C corporation than a sole proprietorship, partnership, LLC, or S corporation. A C corporation may provide life insurance up to $50,000 tax-free to employees under a group life insurance policy; in contrast, a sole proprietor, partner, or S corporation shareholder who owns more than 2 percent of the shares ("2 percent S corporation shareholder") who receives such a benefit must include its dollar value when reporting taxable income [I.R.C. §§ 79, 1372]. A C corporation generally may deduct premiums for medical plans, while corporate employees receive a tax-free payment or reimbursement of their medical expenses and tax-free payments from disability insurance if they become disabled [I.R.C. § 105(b)]. Sole proprietors, partners, LLC members, and 2 percent S corporation shareholders are specifically excluded from these benefits [I.R.C. §§ 105(g), 401, 1372]. However, self-employed individuals, including sole proprietors, general partners, LLC members, and 2 percent S corporation shareholders, may deduct a percentage of their payments for medical insurance for themselves, their spouse and dependents, not to exceed the earned income from the business for which the health insurance plan is set up [see I.R.C. § 401(c); see also I.R.C. § 162(l)]. This deduction will not decrease the business owner's net income, as it is used to calculate self-employment tax [I.R.C. § 162(l)(4)]. Moreover, such a deduction is disallowed to any individual who is eligible to participate in any health plan provided by an employer of the individual or his or her spouse [I.R.C. § 162(l)(2)(B)]. A partnership may deduct premiums paid to a partner and an S corporation may deduct premiums paid to a two percent shareholder; the partner and shareholder would then be required to include the amount of premiums paid in income, but would be eligible to use the percentage deduction described above [I.R.C. § 162(l)].

Meals and lodging provided by a C or S corporation for the convenience of the employer are deductible by the corporation and tax-free to the employee, provided the employee is not a more than 2 percent S corporation shareholder. Partners and sole proprietors are excluded from these benefits [I.R.C. §§ 119, 1372; Armstrong v. Phinney (5th Cir. 1968) 394 F.2d 661 (partnerships)].

Fringe benefits under educational assistance programs [I.R.C. § 127], dependent care assistance plans [I.R.C. § 129], and adoption assistance programs [I.R.C. § 137], as well as working condition [I.R.C. § 132(a)(3), (d); Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)(2)] and de minimis fringe benefits [I.R.C. § 132(a)(4), (e)] are available to corporate and noncorporate entities alike.

NOTE:
The initial client interview is a comprehensive fact finding conference. An extensive discussion of the client's plans (including any preliminary business plan and existing operation procedures) can provide critical information and understanding of the motives, requirements, and objectives of the client in the entity selection process.

1. Information regarding participants at formation.

a. Natural persons.
(1) Name.

(2) Resident address and telephone number.

(3) Business address and telephone number.

(4) Citizenship, e.g., United States citizen, resident alien, or citizen of country other than United States.

(5) Tax identification numbers, e.g., social security number or employer identification number.

(6) Marital status.

(7) Age.

(8) Educational background.

(9) Business experience within last five years.

(10) Other relevant business experience (financial acumen).

(11) Present occupation or employment.

(12) Gross and net income for last three years.

(13) Estimated net worth, including any expectancies (e.g., anticipated gifts or bequests).

(14) Projected annual income from sources outside business, plus any anticipated salary to be paid from business.

(15) Preexisting business or personal relationship with other participants.

(16) Affiliations with other proprietorships, partnerships, LLCs, or corporations.

(17) Percentage of business to be owned or controlled.

(18) Person responsible for paying for pre-formation work if:
(a) Business organization is formed.

(b) Business organization is not formed.

(19) Anticipated fringe benefits from business.

(20) Manner in which principals intend to deal with sales of interests of one or more principals (e.g., rights of first refusal, appraisals, etc.).

(21) Any desire to maintain confidentiality of ownership [see § 1B.110[1] P 6a NOTE].

b. Business entities.

(1) Form of organization.

(2) Personal and biographical information of persons responsible for management and control [see P a, above].

(3) Tax identification number(s).

2. Information regarding additional participants after formation.

a. Number of additional participants.

NOTE:

To operate as a statutory close corporation, the corporation may not have more than 35 shareholders [Corp. Code § 158(a)]. To operate as an S corporation, the corporation may not have more than 100 shareholders [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A); Rev. & Tax. Code § 23800 et seq.]. For purposes of determining the number of shareholders, husband and wife ordinarily count as one shareholder [Corp. Code § 158(d) (close corporation); I.R.C. § 1361(c)(1)(A)(i) (S corporation)]. Alternatively, taxpayers may elect to treat all members of the family as a single shareholder. "Members of the family" means a common ancestor, any lineal descendant of that common ancestor, and any spouse or former spouse of that common ancestor or lineal descendant [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(1)(A)(ii), (B), (D)]. To qualify for exemptions to qualification and registration requirements under the federal and state securities laws using the limited offering exemption or the small offering exemption, there may be no more than 35 shareholders [Corp. Code § 25102(f)(1), (h)].

b. Type of participants, e.g., natural persons or business entities.

NOTE:
Eligible shareholders in an S corporation include only individuals (but not resident aliens), estates, and certain trusts [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (c)(2), (3), (d)]. Violation of this rule results in automatic termination of Subchapter S status [I.R.C. § 1362(b)(2)].

c. Personal and biographical information of individual participants and pertinent information regarding business entities with ownership interests [see P 1a, b, above].

3. Information regarding the proposed business activity.

a. Principal and other business activities, including any limitations or restrictions on business or powers of proposed entity.

NOTE:
A few activities are limited, by governmental regulation, to a specified form or to a restricted choice of form. Banks, for example, may not operate as partnerships [Corp. Code §§ 15616, 15901.04], and must operate as corporations [Fin. Code § 102]. LLCs may not engage in the banking business, the business of issuing policies of insurance and assuming insurance risks, or the trust company business [Corp. Code § 17002(a); but see Corp. Code § 17002(b) (subsidiary LLC may operate as licensed health care service plan)]

b. Proposed location and mailing address.

(1) Complete address, including county, of main office.

(2) Complete address, including county, of other office or places of business.

c. Proposed name of business.

d. Proposed starting date of business.

e. Potential risks in operating business.

f. Licensing requirements.

g. Projections for growth.

h. Potential that business will be sold in foreseeable future.

i. Necessity for protection of intellectual property (e.g., patents, copyrights, trade marks, or trade names).

j. Whether business will grant consumer credit.

k. Whether business will be successor in interest to any existing business and, if so, how to handle potential successor liability.

4. Information regarding financing proposed business activity.

a. Funds needed for organization, syndication, or start-up costs.

NOTE:

For tax purposes, organizational and start-up expenses must be capitalized and may be amortized over a period of 180 months [I.R.C. §§ 195, 248, 709(b)]. Syndication costs must be capitalized, but may not be amortized [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.248-1(b)(3)(i), 1.709-2(b); see § 1B.67].

b. Estimated funds needed for first year of operation.

c. Sources of funding and amount of funding available from each source.

(1) Capital contributions.

(a) Contributions of service in exchange for capital interest.

NOTE:

A requirement to perform future services is inadequate consideration for exchange of corporate shares [Corp. Code § 409(a)(1)] or a limited partnership interest [Corp. Code §§ 15651, 15905.01]. Special tax rules apply when a partner receives an unrestricted capital interest in a partnership in exchange for services [see § 1B.64[3]] and when a partner receives a profits interest in exchange for services; a "profits interest" is an interest that provides a share in future partnership profits or earnings, but does not provide for a share in the existing partnership assets [see I.R.C. § 721; Treas. Reg. § 1.721-1(b)(1)]. If a member contributes services to an LLC classified as a partnership in exchange for a membership interest, that contribution is a taxable event for the member; the value of the LLC interest is taxable as compensation to the member [Treas. Reg. § 1.721-1(b)(1); see § 1B.64[4]]. For the consequences of exchanging services for corporate shares, see I.R.C. § 351(d)(1) and § 1B.64[5], [6].

(b) Contributions of property.

(i) Types of property (real property, personal property, tangible and intangible, e.g., goodwill).

(ii) Adjusted basis of property for tax purposes, if transferred by business owner or investor.

(iii) Fair market value of property transferred.

(iv) Purchase price, if real or personal property will be purchased.

(v) Contracts and other liabilities assumed by transferees or buyers.

(c) Sale of business interests.

(2) Loans.

(a) From participants.

NOTE:
The exchange of property for corporate debt is a taxable transaction [see I.R.C. § 351].

(b) From nonparticipants, such as institutional lenders or unaffiliated third parties.

NOTE:
Personal guarantees by participants are often required if the business is new or if the business has few assets.

(3) Debt versus equity.

(a) Total amount of cash to be contributed.

(b) Ratio of debt to equity.

NOTE:
For a corporation, debt has an advantage over equity because interest payments are deductible to the corporation [I.R.C. § 163(a)], while distributions of dividends on shareholder equity are not [I.R.C. §§ 301, 316, 562]. Further, repayment of debt generally has priority over repayment of equity. However, high debt and low equity in a corporation may cause the Internal Revenue Service to recharacterize the debt as equity, with adverse tax consequences to both the corporation and the shareholder [see I.R.C. § 385]. Ordinarily, this is not a problem if the corporation borrows money from an institution or an unaffiliated third party.

(4) Anticipated earnings.

NOTE:
If the business is highly speculative, or there is another anticipated reason that it might fail, the corporate form may be advantageous. Directors, officers, and shareholders are not ordinarily responsible for corporate debts and other liabilities [Corp. Code § 300]. Similarly, limited partners and LLC members are not ordinarily liable for business debts in excess of their investments [Corp. Code §§ 15632-15636, 15643(b), 15903.03, 17101(a), 17158].

If the requirements of I.R.C. § 1244 are met in the issuance of corporate stock, investors may deduct, as ordinary losses, up to $50,000, or $100,000 on a joint return, per year for losses resulting from the sale, exchange, or worthlessness of an investment [I.R.C. § 1244(b)]. Otherwise, losses from the sale, exchange, or worthlessness of stock is a capital loss, limited to maximum of $3,000 per year [I.R.C. § 1211(b)(1); see § 1B.68]. For a more detailed discussion of qualification requirements under I.R.C. § 1244, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities .

If the business is expected to operate at a loss for the first few years, owners or investors may want to adopt the sole proprietorship, partnership, LLC, or S corporation form that allows them to take advantage of business losses by deducting those losses, subject to certain restrictions, on their personal income tax returns [I.R.C. §§ 61(a) (sole proprietorship), 701, 702 (partnerships and LLCs), 1366 (S corporations); see § 1B.63[3]].

d. Whether some form of preferential equity participation will be required by key employees, such as stock options.

5. Information related to the complexity of the business organization.

a. Number of participants [see § 1B.100[1], P 2].

b. Complexity of organization.

NOTE:

Although technically a partnership's organization can be as complex as the abilities of the drafter of the agreement, several corporate characteristics, including the different levels of management and control, the continuity of existence, the availability of broader sources of capital, and the General Corporation Law often make the corporation the form of choice for a complex business organization [see § 1B.30[2]]. The sole proprietorship is necessarily limited by the fact that a single person ultimately is responsible for its management and control [see § 1B.10].

6. Information related to management and control.

a. Relationship between owners and investors and managers or employees.

b. Owners or investors who will devote time to the business.

(1) Names.

(2) Amount of time to be devoted.

(3) Titles, powers, and duties, as well as any desired limitations.

(4) Qualifications.

(5) Compensation.

(6) Indemnification.

(7) Insurance.

c. Employees in addition to working owners/investors.

(1) Number.

(2) Titles, powers, and duties.

(3) Compensation.

d. Persons retained to provide specialized services.

(1) Accountant's name, address, and telephone number.

NOTE:
Counsel should involve the client's accountant in the early stages of the selection process. The accountant may be aware of significant facts that the client may fail to mention, and the accountant's input will likely be extremely valuable. If the accountant is not contacted until after the preliminary selection is made and the accountant's opinion differs, a significant delay may result and counsel and the accountant may assume adversarial roles to the detriment of the client.

(2) Banker's name, address, and telephone number.

(3) Insurance agent's name, address, and telephone number.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations to Selecting a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.110

§ 1B.110 Ascertain Goals of Owners and Investors Affecting Choice of Business Form

[1] Determine Effects of Nontax Factors

1. Determine type of management preferred (e.g., centralized management or management by all participants) [see § 1B.41].

NOTE:

In a general partnership, all partners are equally responsible for management and control [Corp. Code § 16401(f)], although partners sometimes allocate control in a partnership or designate a managing partner [Corp. Code § 16401(j)]. The less centralized the management, the more a partnership's effective management depends on all partners' willingness to work together. Corporate management and control is in the hands of directors, who, in turn have the power to appoint officers to manage the day-to-day business of the corporation [Corp. Code §§ 301(a), 312(b)]. Limited partnerships, which are managed by general partners [Corp. Code §§ 15507 (ULPA), 15632 (CRLPA), repealed January 1, 2010; Corp. Code 15903.03 (ULPA '08)], ordinarily have more centralized management than either general partnerships or corporations. LLCs may or may not have centralized management, depending on how they are structered [see § 1B.41[5]*].

2. Determine whether business owners and investors desire limited liability.

NOTE:

If limited liability is desired, the limited partnership, LLC, and corporate forms can be the more advantageous than the sole proprietorship or general partnership. See § 1B.42 for a discussion of limitations on liability.

a. Determine whether owners are unwilling to subject their personal assets to claims of business creditors.

b. Determine whether owners have particular assets they wish to protect from business liabilities.

c. Determine whether owners are unwilling to personally guarantee business debts.

d. Determine whether creditors will lend money to the business without personal guarantee of some or all of its owners.

e. Determine whether nature of the business makes bankruptcy likely.
(1) Is business highly speculative?

(2) Is business a user or producer of hazardous products?

(3) Is business one in which accidental injury to employee or customer is likely?

(4) Is business one that is likely to be subject to lawsuits?

f. Determine extent to which such risks are insurable.

g. Determine whether owners are engaged in other businesses or activities from which they wish to shield this business activity.

3. Determine whether owners desire continuity of existence for business [see § 1B.45].

a. Determine whether owners wish business to continue after death or withdrawal of one or more of original owners.

b. Determine if age or life expectancy of any owner is such that early retirement or death is likely.

c. Determine whether long-term financing will require continuity of existence of business organization.

4. Determine whether issuance of securities will be necessary to obtain required amount of capital for business [see § 1B.46].

5. Determine owner's desires regarding transferability of ownership interests.

NOTE:
The transferability of ownership interests is often disadvantageous for closely held corporations and for corporations that have elected Subchapter S status. Shareholders in closely held corporations generally want to be able to choose additional participants, since the business organization is likely to managed and controlled in a partnership-like manner [see § 1B.31 [3]]. S corporations risk automatic termination if shares are transferred to ineligible shareholders [see I.R.C. §§ 1361(b)(1)(B), (c)(2), (3), 1362(f); see also § 1B.31[3]*].

a. Determine whether original participants are willing to permit sale of shares to outsiders.

b. Determine if any participants will be temporary investors only, who will wish to withdraw or sell their interests.

c. Determine if additional investors will be required.

d. Determine if interests are marketable, if interests are transferable.

6. Determine whether participants are willing to be subject to any required government control.

a. Determine whether participants are willing to disclose their identity and make public personal financial information.

NOTE:

If participants desire anonymity, the sole proprietorship provides no protection because even if the owner does business under a fictitious name, the laws governing use of a fictitious name require disclosure of the names of the owners [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17900-17930]. Partners in a general partnership may ordinarily remain anonymous unless they are required to file a statement of partnership listing the name of each partner [see Corp. Code § 16303]. The corporate form normally provides the most anonymity because there is no general requirement of disclosure of shareholder identity.However, the small offering exemption of the Corporate Securities Law requires disclosure of the names of individuals to whom shares will initially be issued [Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. General partners in limited partnerships must disclose their names and addresses on the certificate of limited partnership filed with the California Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. Limited partners and LLC members, although necessarily disclosed on organizational documents may be subject to the same securities disclosure rules as are corporate shareholders [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)].

b. Determine whether participants are willing to comply with securities law restrictions that may apply to soliciting business loans and investments and to offering securities [see § 1B.46].

c. Determine whether participants are willing to comply with procedures required to do business in other states.

7. Determine impact of expense and formalities of organizational form chosen.

a. Determine if participants are prepared for initial expense of incorporation or preparation of partnership or LLC documents [see §§ 1B.11[1], 1B.12[1], 1B.13[1], 1B.30[1]].

b. Determine if participants are prepared for costs of specialized services (e.g., attorneys and accountants) that increase with complexity of form chosen.

c. Determine participants' willingness to observe formalities related to operation of business [see § 1B.48[4]].

NOTE:

Individuals who participate in the management of a corporation and who are unwilling to observe corporate formalities, such as regular meetings, meeting notices, meeting minutes, financial reports, and inspection of records by directors and shareholders, and unwilling to separate corporate from personal assets, risk losing the limited liability protection of the corporate form [see § 1B.30 [2]*], the primary advantage of incorporation. Although election of close corporation status may allow some of the corporate formalities to be ignored without loss of liability protection [Corp. Code § 300(b)], this issue has not been the subject of much litigation, and it may remain advantageous to observe corporate formalities (e.g., related to securities issues, election of officers and directors, and hiring of employees) even when not required by statute.

[2] Determine Effect of Income Tax Factors

1. Project income of proposed business over next three to five years.

2. Determine whether participants desire business income to be distributed or retained.

NOTE:

Neither the sole proprietorship, partnership, nor LLC forms offers participants the option of retaining income in the business entity. A sole proprietor is taxed on 100 percent of net income [I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1)], while each partner (or member of an LLC taxed as a partnership) must include his or her share of income (and other items) in personal income and pay tax accordingly, regardless of whether the items, or their cash equivalent, were actually distributed [I.R.C. §§ 701, 702(a), 704(b)]. Similar to partnerships, S corporation shareholders report their proportionate share of income on their individual tax returns [I.R.C. § 1366(a)]. Only the C corporation, which first pays a corporate level tax on its earnings [I.R.C. § 11(b)], may choose not to distribute its earnings to shareholders as dividends, under certain circumstances. However, corporations that retain their earnings risk a substantial penalty tax if earnings are accumulated above reasonable business needs for the purpose of avoiding the income tax imposed on shareholders [I.R.C. §§ 531-537; see §§ 1B.63[2][e][3], 1B.113*].

3. Determine whether participants contemplate withdrawal of assets from business in near future.

NOTE:

It is much easier to withdraw assets from a sole proprietorship, an LLC, or a partnership with no or minimal tax consequences than it is to withdraw assets from a corporation. No gain or loss is recognized on the withdrawal of assets from a sole proprietorship, although recapture of tax advantages (e.g., accelerated depreciation) may be required [I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250; see I.R.C. §§ 168, 179*]. Similarly, withdrawal of assets from a partnership or LLC usually results in a recapture of tax advantages [I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250; see, e.g., I.R.C. §§ 168, 179*], with a limited recognition of gain or loss, if any [see I.R.C. § 751*; Treas. Reg. § 1.751-1]. However, both C and S corporations must fully recognize gain on the distribution of appreciated assets [I.R.C. §§ 301, 311(b), 1371(a)]. Moreover, the receipt of the asset is generally a taxable event to the receiving C corporation shareholder [see I.R.C. §§ 61, 301, 316*].

4. Determine what fringe benefits are desired by participants [see § 1B.68[4]].

5. Determine importance of retirement plans to participants.

NOTE:

Today, few differences exist between the retirement plans available to corporations and to those who are self-employed or are the employees of noncorporate businesses. However, a C corporation may still provide somewhat better retirement benefits than those available to noncorporate entities or to S corporation shareholders [see § 1B.68[4][a]*].

6. Determine probability that business will become insolvent [see § 1B.68[3] for a discussion of I.R.C. § 1244 stock].

7. Determine probability that business will operate at loss.

NOTE:

If the business is expected to operate at a loss for the first few years, the sole proprietorship, partnership, LLC, or S corporation forms may permit concurrent deduction of the owner's proportionate share of losses on his or her individual income tax returns [I.R.C. §§ 61(a) (sole proprietorship), 701, 702 (partnership), 1366 (S corporation); see § 1B.63 [3]*]. C corporation losses are not passed through to the shareholders, but remain at the corporate level and may be used to reduce corporate income in later years, when the corporation has a profit [I.R.C. § 172].

8. Determine which form will provide greatest tax advantages for both business and each participant, based on:

a. The above facts [see PP 1-7, above].

b. Taxable income of participants from other sources.

c. Projected tax brackets of participants and business entity, if corporate form is being considered.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations to Selecting a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.111

§ 1B.111 Determining Whether to Form Sole Proprietorship

1. Consider advantages of doing business as sole proprietorship, including:

a. Owner's right to receive all profits of business.

b. Owner's ability to make decisions and take action without delay or formalities, such as meetings and consent of board of directors or partners.

c. Minimal legal formalities and costs involved in setting up business.

d. Minimal regulatory and reporting requirements related to conducting business.

e. Owner's freedom from obligations created by any person not appointed as agent for owner.

NOTE:
The risk of being subject to obligations created by others is inherent in powers invested in a partnership or in a corporation. However, in a corporation, LLC, or a limited partnership, individual liability may be limited to the amount of the individual's capital investment [see § 1B.42].

f. Freedom to carry on business in other states without qualification or registration requirements.

NOTE:
For a discussion of fictitious business name requirements, see Chapter 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business .

g. Business' ability to obtain credit not only to extent justified by financial condition of enterprise, but also to extent warranted by owner's individual resources and credit standing.

NOTE:

The capital of a sole proprietorship generally consists of the o- wner's funds, business credit, and loans. Many commercial lenders will not lend funds to a sole proprietorship unless the owner has contributed at least half of the funds required for the business. If the owner is unable to contribute at least half of the necessary funds, consideration should be given to other methods of raising capital, such as seeking investment by partners.

h. Withdrawal of assets from business with minimal tax consequences [see § 1B.110 PP 2, 3].

2. Consider disadvantages of doing business as sole proprietorship, including[see § 1B.10[2]]:

a. Need for owner personally to make every business decision and take every action unless owner appoints agents with appropriate authority.

b. Owner's unlimited personal liability for all obligations of business.

c. Limitations on business' initial and expansion capital, based on owner's resources and credit standing.

d. Possible difficulty in sale of business.

NOTE:

Because the primary asset of a sole proprietorship is often its owner, the business may be difficult to sell. Even if a market exists for the business, it is often difficult to value and sell intangible as sets, such as goodwill, which are usually tied to the personality and abilities of the sole proprietor.

e. Termination of business on owner's death or incapacity.

f. Owner's limited opportunity to take advantage of deferred compensation arrangements and certain other benefits available to corporate employees [see § 1B.68[4]].

3. Consider income tax consequences of doing business as sole proprietorship, including:

a. Treatment of business profit or loss as owner's personal income or loss [I.R.C. § 61(a)].

b. Avoidance of double taxation that can occur if corporate form of business is used [see § 1B.114 P 3d].

c. Possibility of recognition of substantial ordinary income or loss on sale of sole proprietorship [see Williams v. McGowan (2d Cir. 1945) 152 F.2d 570] .

NOTE:

A withdrawing partner or shareholder usually realizes capital gain or loss [I.R.C. § 61(a)]. When a sole proprietor sells, the gain or loss on the sale of each asset is treated as capital or ordinary, depending on the nature of the asset [see Williams v. McGowan (2d Cir. 1945) 152 F.2d 570] .

d. Inability to step up basis of property that has appreciated in value in order to increase depreciation deductions [see I.R.C. §§ 707(a), 722, 1012].

e. Deductibility of business losses and expenses from owner's income from other sources [I.R.C. §§ 162, 165; see I.R.C. § 469 (passive loss limitations); see also § 1B.63[3][a]].

f. Limitations on deductibility of pension plans and employee benefits [see § 1B.68[4]].

CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations to Selecting a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.112

§ 1B.112 Determining Whether to Form Partnership

NOTE:
As used throughout this section, "partners" refers to general partners in a general partnership and general partners in a limited partnership [see §§ 1B.11, 1B.12*]. For detailed coverage of partnerships and their formation, see Ch. 15, Part A, Formation of General Partnerships , and Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships.

1. Consider advantages of doing business as a partnership, including:

a. Partners ability to participate in management of partnership business [Corp. Code §§ 15904.06, 16401].

NOTE:
The partnership agreement may restrict the management rights of the partners [Corp. Code § 16401(f), (j)]. The combined talents of the partners can broaden the firm's basis for business judgments and operations, enabling it to operate on a wider scope than a sole proprietorship. The distribution of responsibilities among the partners can permit specialization and closer attention to details.

b. Greater availability of capital than in sole proprietorship [see § 1B.43[3] (general partnerships), [4] (limited partnerships)].

c. Ability to share risks and losses.

d. Relatively inexpensive organizational costs [but see P 2e, below.].

NOTE:

General partnerships must pay a fee for filing a statement of partnership [Gov. Code § 12187(a); see § 1B.47], and limited partnerships must pay a fee for filing a certificate of limited partnership [Gov. Code § 12188(b)]. In addition, limited and limited liability partnerships must pay an annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17935 (limited), 17948-17948.2 (limited liability)].

2. Consider disadvantages of doing business as partnership, including:

a. Possible difficulty of obtaining consensus of partners regarding management of business.

b. Individual partners' inability to use partnership property for any purpose other than partnership business [Corp. Code §§ 16203, 16204, 16401].

c. Each partner's personal liability (regardless of initial capital contribution to partnership) for other partners' wrongful acts and breaches of trust and for all debts and obligations of partnership [Corp. Code §§ 16305, 16306 (general partnerships); Corp. Code § 15904.04 (limited partnerships)].

NOTE:

In a limited partnership, the limited partners' liability is ordinarily limited to their capital contributions [Corp. Code § 15903.03].

d. Restricted transferability of partnership interest [see Corp. Code §§ 16401(i), 16503 (general partnerships); Corp. Code §§ 15907.01 et seq. (limited partnerships)].

NOTE:

By statute, a person may become a partner only with the consent of the other partners [Corp. Code § 16401(i); see Corp. Code § 16503(a), (d) (transferrable interest freely transferred)]. Further, as a practical matter, the possibility of personal liability that attaches to a general partnership interest limits the market of potential transferees [see Corp. Code §§ 16305, 16306]. Limited partnership interests are subject to transfer restrictions [see Corp. Code §§ 15907.01, 15907.02]. However, the restrictions have little practical effect on the transferability of the interests [see Corp. Code §§ 15907.02; see also § 1B.44[3]].

e. Substantial expense involved in preparation of partnership agreement.

NOTE:

A general partnership agreement should be in writing, although this is not a statutory requirement. Similarly, a limited partnership should have a written agreement, although it is not required by statute [see Corp. Code § 15902.01]. Further, a general partnership must file a fictitious business name statement if the partnership name does not include each partner's name [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2)], or if it implies the existence of additional partners [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(c)]. A limited partnership must file a fictitious business name statement if it uses any name other than the name on the certificate of limited partnership filed with the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(4)]; see Corp. Code § 15621(a) (certificate of limited partnership)].

f. Limited duration of partnership.

NOTE:

Ordinarily a partnership dissolves on the occurrence of events specified in the partnership agreement or by statute [see Corp. Code § 16801 (general partnerships); Corp. Code § 15681, 15908.01 (limited partnerships). However, the dissolution of a general partnership need not result in the winding up of partnership affairs. For example, dissolution by the death or withdrawal of a partner does not preclude the remaining partners from carrying on the business, with or without new partners, pursuant to an agreement among the partners, or as provided by statute [see Corp. Code §§ 16801(1), 16802(b); Prob. Code § 9762]. Limited partnerships formed under the ULPA '08 have perpetual duration [Corp. Code § 15901.04(c)]. This default provision, however, may be changed in a partnership agreement to specify a different duration. [See Corp. Code § 15901.10; see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships].

g. Necessity of complying with federal and state regulation of securities.

NOTE:

Although a general partnership interest ordinarily is not considered a security, a limited partnership interest is usually a security under state and federal regulations [see Corp. Code § 25019; see also 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1) (definition of security)].

3. Consider income tax consequences of doing business as a partnership, including:

a. Each partner's liability for tax on distributive share of partnership income, whether or not income is distributed [I.R.C. §§ 701, 702, 704].

b. Partners' ability to allocate income, deductions, credits, gain, and losses in proportions other than their capital interests [I.R.C. § 704(a), (b); see also Treas. Reg. § 1.704-1(b)(2)(i)].

NOTE:

If the partnership distributes contributed property within seven years of contribution, the contributing partner recognizes gain or loss [see I.R.C. § 704(c)].

c. Each partner's ability to deduct share of partnership loss from personal income to extent of partner's basis in partnership [I.R.C. § 704(d); see I.R.C. § 165].

d. Partner's ability to increase basis in appreciated property (for purpose of increased depreciation deductions) by selling property to partnership [see I.R.C. §§ 707(a), 722, 1012].

NOTE:

The partner will recognize gain on the profit from the sale of appreciated assets [see I.R.C. §§ 707(a), 1012, 1239].

e. Family income-splitting opportunities [see I.R.C. § 704(e); see also § 1B.66[3]].

f. Greater flexibility in planning for the disposition of business interest at retirement or death than either sole proprietorship or corporation [see § 1B.65[2][c]].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations to Selecting a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.113

§ 1B.113 Determine Whether to Form Limited Liability Company

1. Consider advantages of doing business as LLC, including [see § 1B.13[2]]:

NOTE:

LLCs are prohibited from engaging in the banking business, the business of issuing policies of insurance and assuming insurance risks, or the trust company business as well as from providing professional services [Corp. Code §§ 17002(a), 17375]. However, LLCs may operate as licensed health care service plans if they are subsidiaries of licensed health care service plans and are established to serve an existing line of business of the parent [Corp. Code § 17002(b)].

a. Members ability to participate in management of LLC business.

NOTE:

LLC management and governance ordinarily are more flexible than that permitted in corporations. An LLC may be managed by all its members or by managers, who may but need not be members [Corp. Code §§ 17150, 17151]. The combined talents of the members can broaden the firm's basis for business judgments and operations, permitting specialization and enabling it to operate on a wider scope than a sole proprietorship. Unlike limited partners who participate in the management and control of the partnership, LLC members and managers do not forfeit their limited liability protection by participating in the management of the LLC [Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15903.03, 15643(b), 17101(a), 17158].

b. Greater availability of capital than in sole proprietorship [see § 1B.43[5]].

c. Ability to share risks and losses.

d. Ability to limit losses to investment.

NOTE:

In general, members of LLCs and limited partners, like corporate shareholders, are shielded from personal liability for company obligations [Corp. Code §§ 15632-15636, 15643(b), 17101(a), (b), 17158; see People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691 ; see also § 1B.13[2][b], P 2c, below].

e. Relatively limited formation costs [but see P 2e, below].

NOTE:

LLCs must pay a fee for filing the articles of organization [Gov. Code § 12190(b)], an annual minimum tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17941; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 17220 (tax not deductible)], and a graduated fee based on income of $250,000 or more [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17942]. However, LLCs that are exempt from taxes and fees under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701h or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701x and that are not taxed as a corporation for California tax purposes are not subject to the annual minimum tax or the graduated fee [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(d), 23701h(b), 23701x(b); see also I.R.C. § 501(c)(2), (25) (title holding companies)].

2. Consider disadvantages of doing business as LLC, including:

a. Possible difficulty of obtaining consensus of LLC members (or managers) regarding management of business.

b. Individual members' inability to use LLC property for any purpose other than LLC business [see Corp. Code § 17003].

c. Each member's personal liability (regardless of initial capital contribution) for tortious conduct, improper distributions, failure to pay taxes, and other acts that might result in shareholder liability, including under the alter ego doctrine [Corp Code §§ 17101(a)- (c), 17254, 17255; Rev. & Tax. Code § 6829 (responsible members)].

NOTE:

In an LLC, the members liability is ordinarily to their capital contributions [Corp. Code § 17101(a)].

d. Restricted transferability of membership interest [see Corp. Code §§ 17301(a), 17303(a); see also § 1B.44[4]].

NOTE:

LLC members may freely assign or encumber their economic interests [see Corp. Code §§ 17001(n), 17301(a), 17303(a)]. An LLC operating agreement may provide for unrestricted transferability of membership interests.

e. Substantial expense involved in preparation of LLC operating agreement.

f. Limited duration of LLC [see § 1B.45[3]].

g. Relative newness of entity in California and limited case law.

3. Consider income tax consequences of doing business as an LLC, including:

a. If desired, single level of taxation, with profits and losses reported at member level [see Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a); see also § 1B.13[2][e]].

NOTE:
Under entity classification regulations that took effect on January 1, 1997, an LLC with two or more members may elect to be taxed either as a partnership or as a corporation. An LLC with only one owner can elect to be disregarded as an entity separate from the owner [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)].

b. Flexibility in allocating income, deductions, credits, gains, and losses according to agreement, not necessarily on basis of capital interests [I.R.C. § 704(a), (b); Corp. Code § 17202; see § 1B.13 [2][e]; see also Treas. Reg. § 1.704-1(b)(2)(i)].

c. Each member's liability for tax on distributive share of LLC income, whether or not income is distributed [I.R.C. §§ 701, 702, 704].

d. Each member's ability to deduct share of LLC loss from personal income to extent of member's basis [I.R.C. § 704(d); see I.R.C. § 165].

e. Member's ability to increase basis in appreciated property (for purpose of increased depreciation deductions) by selling property to LLC [see I.R.C. §§ 707(a), 722, 1012].

NOTE:
The member will recognize gain on the profit from the sale of appreciated assets [see I.R.C. §§ 707(a), 1012, 1239].

f. Family income-splitting opportunities [see I.R.C. § 704(e); see also § 1B.66[3]].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1B SELECTING FORM OF BUSINESS ENTITY
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations to Selecting a Business Form

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.114

§ 1B.114 Determine Whether to Form Corporation

1. Consider advantages of doing business as a corporation, including [see §§ 1B.30, 1B.31]:

a. Ability to spread risk over large number of investors.

b. Ability to raise large amounts of capital by selling corporate stock.

c. Ability to offer key employees ownership interests through shares in the corporation.

d. Centralized business management under board of directors unless otherwise provided in incorporation documents [Corp. Code § 300(a); see Corp. Code § 312(b)].

e. Limited liability of shareholders for debts of the corporation [see § 1B.42[5]-[7]].

f. Continuity of existence of business entity [Corp. Code § 200(c); see § 1B.45[4]].

g. Free transferability of ownership interests, unless restricted by certificate of incorporation, bylaws, or shareholder agreement [Corp. Code § 204(a)(2), (b); see Corp. Code §§ 404-406].

NOTE:
In close corporations, transfer is usually restricted by written agreement [Corp. Code § 204(a)(3), (b)]. In professional corporations, ownership of shares is restricted to the issuing corporation or to persons licensed by the profession in which the corporation provides services [Corp. Code §§ 13406, 13407]. In either case, transfer is practically restricted by the availability of an actual market for the shares.

h. Family income splitting opportunities [see § 1B.66[4]].

i. Potentially better market for ownership interests than for sole proprietorships, general or limited partnerships, or LLCs.

NOTE:

Sale of corporate stock is widely understood. This comfort level may encourage investors to purchase corporate shares rather than partnership or LLC interests. However, an unknown corporation, despite its form, may not be able to attract investors.

j. Potentially better image for marketing and credit purposes.

2. Consider disadvantages of doing business as a corporation, including:

a. Substantial legal formalities and expense of forming corporation, including filing certificate of incorporation [see Corp. Code §§ 200-201.5] and adoption of bylaws [see Corp. Code §§ 211-213].

NOTE:

For a discussion of corporate formation, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations , Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status , Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation , Ch. 4, Bylaws , and Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

b. Substantial formalities in running business, including meetings of shareholders [see Corp. Code §§ 600-604] and directors [see Corp. Code §§ 300-317], keeping corporate records and filing annual reports [see Corp. Code §§ 1500-1509], unless corporation is close corporation [see Corp. Code § 300(b)].

NOTE:

For a discussion of shareholders meetings, see Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements . Corporate records and reports are discussed in Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports .

c. Expense and formalities required to do business in other states.

d. Necessity of complying with federal and state regulation of securities issued by corporation [see § 1B.46[4]; see also Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues].

3. Consider income tax consequences of doing business as a corporation, including:

a. Treatment of anticipated business income that will be derived from dividends, interest, rents, royalties, and personal service contracts.

NOTE:

If 60 percent or more of a corporation's income is from these sources, and if more than 50 percent of the corporate stock is owned by five or fewer persons, then the corporation may be classed as a personal holding company and the undistributed income will be taxed a 15-percent rate, effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009 [I.R.C. §§ 541, 542(a)(1); for tax years beginning before 1/1/03 and after 12/31/08, the tax rate is the highest rate of tax imposed under I.R.C. § 1(c) (I.R.C. § 541, before amendment by Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303); see I.R.C. §§ 543, 545; see also § 1B.63[2][e][ii]].

b. Treatment of income that corporation will retain.

NOTE:

Once a corporation has accumulated income of $250,000 over the entire period of its existence, any additional accumulated income must be justified to the Internal Revenue Service as an accumulation necessary for the reasonable needs of the business, or an additional 15-percent tax will be imposed on the corporation's accumulated income in that year, effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009 [I.R.C. §§ 531, 535; for tax years beginning before 1/1/03 and after 12/31/08, the tax rate is the highest rate of tax imposed under I.R.C. § 1(c) (I.R.C. § 531, before amendment by Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303); see I.R.C. §§ 531-537]. Certain corporations, including health, law, engineering, architectural, actuarial science, performing arts, and consulting corporations, may only accumulate up to $150,000 of income [I.R.C. § 535(c)(2)(B); see also § 1B.63[2][e][iii]].

c. Treatment of loans made by participant to business.

NOTE:

Restructuring shareholder investments as loans rather than as capital contributions is one way to minimize the double tax on corporate income. Interest payments made by the corporation to its shareholders are taxable to the recipient [I.R.C. § 61(a)(4)] and deductible to the business entity [I.R.C. § 163(a)]. However, if the IRS determines an interest payment to be a disguised dividend, or the ratio of debt to equity or capital investment is too high, the IRS may reclassify the corporation's debt as a contribution of capital and recharacterize the interest payments as nondeductible dividends [see I.R.C. § 385].

d. Tax rate differentials between individuals and corporations, and double taxation of income first taxed as income received by corporation and taxed again when received by shareholders as dividends [see § 1B.63[2][e][i]].

NOTE:

The maximum individual tax rate is 39.1 percent for 2001, 38.6 percent for 2002, and 35 percent after 2002 [I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. In contrast, the maximum federal corporate tax rate for taxable income between $75,000 and $10 million is 34 percent. For taxable income over $10 million, the maximum corporate tax rate is 35 percent [I.R.C. § 11(b)]. An additional 5 percent tax is imposed on corporate taxable income exceeding $100,000, with an $11,750 cap on additional tax liability. This causes an effective tax rate of 39 percent on taxable income between $100,000 and $335,000. A 3 percent additional tax is imposed on corporate taxable income exceeding $15 million, with a $100,000 cap on additional tax liability. This causes an effective tax rate of 38 percent on corporate taxable income between $15 million and $18,333,333. Corporate taxable income over $18,333,333 is subject to a tax rate of 35 percent [I.R.C. § 11(b)(1)]. Personal service corporations are subject to a flat tax rate of 35 percent on all taxable income [I.R.C. § 11(b)(2)]. Corporations are not eligible for the relatively low capital gains rates (generally 15 percent) that individuals have [I.R.C. §§ 1, (h)(1)(C), 1201(a); the 15-percent maximum capital gains rates for individuals is effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009 (I.R.C. § 1(h)(1); see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303)].

If double taxation of corporate income will seriously affect profitability of corporation, consider having corporation: (1) eliminate the double tax by electing Subchapter S status [see § 1B.31[4]]; or (2) minimize the double taxation by making payments to shareholders that can be deducted by the corporation from its taxable earnings, such as in the form of compensation [see § 1B.63[2][e]].

e. Treatment of salaries that will be paid to owners of business.

(1) Determine whether desired salaries are reasonable [see Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8].

NOTE:
A corporation that intends to distribute most of its income as salaries and fringe benefits should be concerned that those amounts be reasonable. Although reasonable salaries are deductible business expenses [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1)], unreasonably high salaries may be recharacterized by the Internal Revenue Service as dividend distributions [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.162-7, 1.162-8]. Factors that determine the reasonableness of salaries include: the employee's qualifications; the employee's position; the amount of time spent working for the corporation; the size and complexity of the business; salaries paid for comparable positions by comparable corporations; and the amount of compensation paid to the employee in previous years [see Elliotts, Inc. v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1983) 716 F.2d 1241 ; Kennedy v. C.I.R. (6th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 167, 173, 174] .

(2) Determine amount of compensation to shareholder employee providing maximum tax advantage.

NOTE:
Income-splitting possibilities exist between the corporation and its shareholder employees. Trial computations should be made to determine the level of salaries that will yield the lowest overall tax burden for both the corporation and the shareholder. Although income splitting may provide a major tax advantage, the possibility exists that compensation may be recharacterized as a dividend distribution, resulting in an increased tax liability to the corporation [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.162-7, 1.162-8]. Further, a negligence penalty may be imposed if the corporation's underpayment of tax is due to negligence or intentional disregard (not fraud) of the Treasury Regulations [see I.R.C. § 6653(a)].

f. Choice of fiscal year.

g. Ability to deduct losses against passive income unless corporation is closely held, personal service, or S corporation [I.R.C. § 469(a)(2)].

h. Taxation on distribution of appreciated assets [see § 1B.110[2]].

i. Treatment of corporation, if collapsible [see I.R.C. § 341, temporarily repealed, effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009 (Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(e)(4)(A), 302(f)(1), 303); see also § 1B.65[1][e]].

j. Conducting business through more than one corporation.

NOTE:
Multiple corporations might be warranted if it is contemplated that a part of the business will be disposed of in the future. By initially forming multiple corporations, the exacting requirements of statutory spin-off provision [see I.R.C. § 346] and spin-off [see I.R.C. § 355] may be avoided at the time of disposal.

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.200

§ 1B.200 Client Letter Before Initial Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

Before the initial meeting with the client, the attorney will want to obtain enough information to determine the scope of the work to be done and any preliminary decisions to be made. Although a client may approach the attorney to prepare a partnership agreement or LLC articles of organization, or to file incorporation documents, other options in choice of form should be considered to ensure that the client makes an informed decision.

At the initial meeting, the attorney will want to have additional, specific information to estimate the time required to perform the legal and factual research and analysis. However, complicated or lengthy questionnaires tend to discourage clients and frequently result in canceled appointments because the client is "unprepared." The letter that follows is composed with that in mind. If a more detailed set of questions is appropriate before the initial meeting, the attorney should incorporate relevant facts and documents from the Client Interview in this Transaction Guide [see §§ 1B.100, 1B.101].

[b] Fee and Representation Agreement

Mention is made of this agreement in the first paragraph of the form below. For sample forms, see Volume 15, Chapter 86, Agreements for Professional Services .

Re: Choice of Business Form

Dear _____ [client's name]:

In preparation for our initial meeting, regarding the choice of business form for your proposed business, I have _____[sent you under separate cover or enclosed] a fee and representation agreement outlining our mutual obligations.

The purpose of this letter is to provide you with a short list of the documents and information that you should bring to our initial meeting. This is a suggested list only. If you believe other items would be useful, please bring those as well. If you are unable to obtain everything on the list, bring what you have available.

Information:

1. Names and telephone numbers of people who will likely be key to the business (including owners, managers, investors, accountants, bankers, etc.).

2. An estimate of the amount of money needed to get the business up and running.

3. An estimate of the amount of money required by the business until the business itself becomes profitable.

4. Sources of funding (including amounts to be contributed by business owners, loans from owners to business, other loans, etc.)

Documents:

1. Three years' prior federal income tax returns for likely participants in business venture, including individuals and any business entities.

2. Copies of participants' retirement plans or summaries of plan benefits.

3. Copy of any business plan.

4. Projected profit and loss statements and balance sheet for the proposed business, if available.

5. Any existing agreements that the participants plan to sign when the business is formed.

I look forward to meeting with you on _____[date] at _____[time] at _____[location] to discuss the formation of your business. Please do not hesitate to call if you have questions.

Very truly yours,

The letter to a client following an initial meeting serves two purposes. First, it reiterates the tasks that the attorney will perform, reminding the client of the extent of the work involved; if there are tasks that the client has agreed that the attorney will not perform, for example such as contacting a tax professional, tasks not to be performed should also be outlined. Second, if the attorney is awaiting additional materials, it provides the client with a complete list of the additional information or documents that he or she must provide, putting the client on notice that work cannot be completed without those items.

This letter confirms our conversation of _____[date], in which we concluded that the _____[specify selected business form, e.g., sole proprietorship, general partnership, limited partnership, limited liability company, corporation, or Subchapter S corporation] is the most appropriate form to use to carry on _____[your proposed business or name of business to be formed].

As we discussed, the use of this form has the following advantages: _____[specify advantages].

As we also discussed, this form has the following disadvantages: _____[specify disadvantages].

[If attorney wishes to highlight significant disadvantages of the chosen form, add:]

In the case of _____[your business venture or name of business], you should be particularly aware of the possible adverse consequences of _____[e.g., unlimited personal liability or double taxation or the ability to be bound by the authority of others]. If you have any questions about our discussion(s), please do not hesitate to call.

[If organizational work is to be done, add:]

I look forward to beginning work on the actual formation of _____[your business or name of proposed business]. We appreciate your confidence and having the opportunity to serve you.

[OR]

[If attorney's work is complete, add:]

This letter also confirms our _____[office or telephone] conversation on _____[date], in which we agreed that, having assisted you in your choice of business form, our work on this matter is now finished.

We appreciate your confidence and having had the opportunity to serve you. If we can be of assistance in the future, please do not hesitate to call.

§ 1B.206 Table: Comparison of Business Forms: Availability of Fringe Benefits to Owners

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This table provides a summary comparison of the significant fringe benefits available to the sole proprietorship, general partnership, corporation, and S corporation. Available benefits are those that are deductible to the business and not taxed on receipt to the owner-employee. Limited partners are not, by their very nature, owner-employees and are not eligible for these benefits.

In a small corporation, whose owners will be employees, there is a significant tax advantage to paying out most of the business's earnings as salaries and fringe benefits. The corporation receives a deduction for these payments, provided that they are reasonable [see I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8], which mitigates the impact of double taxation which arises if distributions are made to shareholders in the form of dividends. Further, certain fringe benefits received are excluded from the owner-employee's income [see § 1B.68 [4]]. Although more, and somewhat better, fringe benefits are available through corporate entities than noncorporate entities, most prospective business owners will want to know the extent of tax deductible benefits available for them, whatever form they chose.

For a general discussion of the fringe benefits available to each business form, see § 1B.68[4].

1-1B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1B.207

§ 1B.207 Table: Comparison of Business Forms: Startup Costs

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This table provides a summary comparison of the significant startup costs of sole proprietorships, general partnerships, limited partnerships, limited liability companies, corporations, and limited liability partnerships. This form may be used as a summary reminder after performing the research necessary to choose the appropriate business form, or it may be consulted as an overview of startup costs before beginning that research.

Startup costs include document preparation, filing fees, licensing, and the like. Filing fees for noncorporate entities are ordinarily the same, and licensing fees tend to apply without regard to the type of business entity. However, the cost of preparing the organizational documents can vary widely depending on the nature and structural complexity of the business [see [b], below].

A table comparing ongoing operating costs for different types of entities is set forth in § 1B.208. For a detailed comparison of business forms, see §§ 1B.10-1B.31, which identify and define the different forms of business organization; §§ 1B.20-1B.48, which identify the non-tax advantages and disadvantages of the different forms; and §§ 1B.60-1B.68, which identify the tax advantages and disadvantages of the different forms. Tables comparing tax and nontax attributes and tax benefits of various business entities are set forth in §§ 1B.204-1B.206. More specific information as to filing requirements and startup costs may be found in the individual chapters dealing with the selected entity.

[b] Nature and Complexity of Business Predominate Selection of Entity

In general, the nature and complexity of the proposed business determines the expense of organizing as a particular business entity rather than the applicable filing fees. If the parties forming a business entity wish to limit their liability, the resulting entity (corporation, limited liability company, or limited partnership) is subject to more statutory requirements and formalities than entities (such as general partnerships) that are fully liable. For example, although a corporation is relatively inexpensive to form, it must make more detailed annual filings, hold noticed meetings at least annually, and maintain minutes and records to maintain its liability shield. In addition, the operating document of an entity with limited liability (limited partnership agreement, operating agreement, or bylaws) will likely be more complicated (and more expensive) to prepare. However, if the parties decide to form a large general partnership, the partnership agreement must be detailed enough to comprehensively handle all aspects of the partners' relations and can be extremely expensive to prepare.

Special considerations related to family business entities may make the organization and operation of these businesses more expensive. Such an organizational agreement incorporates estate planning objectives and a succession plan and is highly individualized. For further discussion, see Ch. 68A, Using Family Partnerships and Other Business Entities in Estate Planning .

§ 1B.208 Table: Comparison of Business Forms: Ongoing Filing Costs and Formalities

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This table provides a summary comparison of the ongoing filing costs of sole proprietorships, general partnerships, limited partnerships, limited liability companies, corporations, and limited liability partnerships, as well as a comparison of the minimum ongoing formalities for such entities that are required by statute. This form may be used as a summary reminder after performing the research necessary to choose the appropriate business form, or it may be consulted as an overview of potential operational costs before beginning that research.

Ongoing annual costs include annual informational statements, as well as compliance with other requirements applicable to the particular entity, such as noticed meetings. It is important to analyze potential annual costs when selecting the business form.

A table comparing startup costs for different types of entities is set forth in*§ 1B.207*. For a detailed comparison of business forms, see §§ 1B.10-1B.31, which identify and define the different forms of business organization; §§ 1B.20-1B.48, which identify the non-tax advantages and disadvantages of the different forms; and §§ 1B.60-1B.68, which identify the tax advantages and disadvantages of the different forms. Tables comparing tax and nontax attributes and tax benefits of various business entities are set forth in §§ 1B.204-1B.206. More specific information as to filing requirements and startup costs may be found in the individual chapters dealing with the selected entity.

CHAPTER 1C REGULATION OF EMPLOYERS

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter is an overview of the variety of California and federal laws and programs that regulate employers in their relations with employees. The chapter is intended to assist the practitioner in advising the owner of a new business about the obligations the law imposes on an employer. This chapter contains many cross references to other California Legal Forms chapters, other Matthew Bender publications, and government publications where the practitioner may find more detailed coverage of a topic.

The Legal Background covers the employer's obligations regarding hiring and equal employment opportunity, employee and applicant privacy, wage and hour laws, safety and health laws, employment contracts, child labor laws, employee insurance and tax obligations, and employee termination. The Transaction Guide contains a variety of checklists and procedural guides to assist the practitioner in advising the client concerning an employer's obligations.

The Forms section contains a number of letters drafted as checklists or procedural reminders that the practitioner can send to the client on a variety of matters. In addition, certain employee notices are included, as are sample forms of employment agreements, injury and illness prevention programs, and a policy on sexual harassment.

For discussion of the lawyer's role in advising the new business owner, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business . To assist in determining the proper type of business to form, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . Employee benefits, including workers' compensation, are discussed in Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits . For discussion of employment taxation and insurance topics, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses , and Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation .

For coverage of employment contracts, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements . To assist in making a determination whether to operate the business with employees or independent contractors, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors . Agreements for professional services are covered in Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services . Specialized entertainment contracts are discussed in Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts . For detailed coverage of employer obligations, see Wilcox, California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Hiring and Terminating Employees
1. Hiring and Retaining Employees

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.10

§ 1C.10 California Equal Employment Opportunity Law

[1] California Fair Employment and Housing Act

[a] Prohibition on Discrimination

The California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [see Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.0-8504] makes it an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)], or pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition [Gov. Code § 12945(a)]. It is also an unlawful employment practice to print or circulate any publication, or make any non-job-related inquiry, that expresses a limitation, specification, or discrimination about one of these classifications [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

With regard to age discrimination, nothing in the FEHA prohibits an employer from refusing to employ an individual because of his or her age if the law compels or provides for that refusal. Promotions within the existing staff, hiring or promotion on the basis of experience and training, rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer, or hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5)]. Further, an employer or employment agency is not barred from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

In addition, it is an unlawful employment practice to deny a person rights created by the Unruh and Ralph Civil Rights Acts [Gov. Code § 12948; see Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.7; see also [3], [4], below]. Further, individuals with disabilities or medical conditions are entitled to the same rights as the general public with regard to the use of and access to streets, sidewalks, public buildings, medical facilities, and other public places [Civ. Code §§ 54, 54.1]. A violation of the Americans With Disabilities Act also constitutes a violation of California's full and equal access law [Civ. Code § 54.1(d)] and is an unfair employment practice [Gov. Code § 12948]. Individuals with disabilities are entitled to be accompanied by a trained dog in these places [Civ. Code § 54.2]. Any person, firm, or corporation that interferes with these rights is liable for damages and attorneys' fees [Civ. Code § 54.3(a)]. Any aggrieved person may file a verified complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (FEHA) [Civ. Code § 54.3(b); see Gov. Code § 12948; see also [b], below]. The FEHA specifically incorporates portions of the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 [see, e.g., Gov. Code § 12940(d); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101-12213; see also § 1C.11[4]].

It is also an unlawful business practice under the FEHA for a business establishment to discriminate against, boycott or blacklist, or refuse to buy from, contract with, sell to, or trade with any person, firm, organization, or other business entity in California because of the race, creed, religion, color, national origin, sex, disability, or medical condition of the person or of the person's partners, members, stockholders, directors, officers, managers, superintendents, agents, employees, business associates, suppliers, or customers. Similarly, it is an unlawful business practice to take any of the above actions based on the perception that the person has one or more of these characteristics, or because the person is associated with a person who has (or is perceived to have) any of these characteristics [Gov. Code § 12948; Civ. Code § 51.5]. The FEHA is authorized to receive, investigate, and conciliate complaints alleging violations of this prohibition [Gov. Code § 12930(f)(2)].

An employer may refuse to hire, or may discharge, a person with a physical or mental disability or a person with a medical condition, if the person is unable to perform his or her duties in a safe manner because of the condition [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1), (2)]. However, when the employer becomes aware that an applicant or employee might have a pertinent disability, the employer has a duty to engage in a timely, good faith, interactive process with the applicant or employee to determine effective reasonable accommodations, if any, in response to a request for reasonable accommodation by the applicant or employee [Gov. Code § 12940(n); Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 61, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874]. In addition, discrimination exceptions are made for bona fide occupational qualifications [Gov. Code § 12940].

The duty of an employer under the FEHA to provide reasonable accommodation for a disabled employee does not obligate the employer to convert a temporary light-duty position (in which a temporarily disabled employee might have been placed until the passing of the disability) into a permanent one (in which such an employee might wish to be placed on discovering that the disability will be permanent) when doing so would, in effect, require creating a new position [Raine v. City of Burbank (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 899] .

[b] Application of FEHA

The FEHA applies to (1) a person who regularly employs five or more persons, (2) a person acting directly or indirectly as an agent of an employer, (3) the State of California, (4) political or civil subdivisions of the State of California, and (5) cities [Gov. Code § 12926(d)]. However, for purposes of the prohibition against harassment, an "employer" is any person regularly employing one or more persons, regularly receiving the services of one or more persons providing services pursuant to a contract, or any person directly or indirectly acting as an agent of an employer [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(A)]. The term "employer" does not apply to religious associations or corporations not organized for private profit [Gov. Code § 12926(d), (h)(3)(B)].

[2] California Equal Pay Act

An employer may not discriminate in paying wages solely on the basis of the sex of the employee. However, an employer may pay different rates under a seniority system, merit system, or system that measures quantity or quality of production, or on a differential based on any bona fide factor other than sex [Lab. Code § 1197.5(a)].

[3] Unruh Civil Rights Act

The Unruh Civil Rights Act [see Civ. Code § 51(a)] provides that all persons in California are free and equal, and regardless of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical conditions, marital status, or sexual orientation are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, and services of all business establishments [Civ. Code § 51(b); see Civ. Code § 51(e) (definitions)]. The protections of the Unruh Act also extend to discrimination against individuals on the basis of sexual orientation [Beaty v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1455, 1460, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 ; Rolon v. Kulwitzky (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 289, 292, 200 Cal. Rptr. 217 ; Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325] . In spite of this broad language, the California Supreme Court has determined that the Unruh Act does not apply to employment discrimination; instead, employment discrimination is governed solely by the FEHA [Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 500, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216] . However, under the FEHA, it is an unlawful employment practice to deny, or to aid, incite, or conspire in the denial of, the rights created by the Unruh Civil Rights Act [Gov. Code § 12948].

[4] Ralph Civil Rights Act

The Ralph Civil Rights Act [see Civ. Code §§ 51.7, 52] provides that all persons in California have the right to be free from violence, or intimidation by threat of violence, committed against them or their property because of their political affiliation, on account of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) [see [3], above], their position in a labor dispute, or because another person perceives them to have one or more of those characteristics [Civ. Code § 51.7(a)]. Civ. Code § 51.7 does not apply to statements concerning positions in a labor dispute that are made during the course of otherwise lawful labor picketing [Civ. Code § 51.7(b)].

It is an unlawful employment practice to deny, or to aid, incite, or conspire in the denial of, the rights created by Civ. Code § 51.7 [Gov. Code § 12948].

[5] Prohibition Against Discrimination in State-Funded Programs

No one may unlawfully discriminate or deny full and equal access to benefits to a person on the basis of race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or physical or mental disability under a program or activity that is conducted, operated, or administered by the state or by any state agency, funded directly by the state, or that receives any state financial assistance [Gov. Code § 11135(a), (c); see Gov. Code § 11135(b); see also Gov. Code § 12926]. This ban on discrimination extends to California state universities [Gov. Code §§ 11000, 11135(a)].

The California Legislature has expressly found and declared that the ability to use electronic or information technology is often an essential function for successful employment in the current workforce [Gov. Code § 11135(d)(1)]. To improve the accessability of existing technology and increase the successful employment of individuals with disabilities, particularly those with visual and hearing impairments, state governmental entities must comply with the accessability requirements of Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act [see 29 U.S.C. § 794d] and its implementing regulations [see 26 C.F.R. Part 1194] in developing, procuring, maintaining, or using electronic or information technology either indirectly or through the use of state funds by other entities [Gov. Code § 11135(d)(2)]. Further, any entity that contracts with a state or local entity subject to Gov. Code § 11135 for the provision of electronic or information technology, or for the provision of related services, must agree to respond to and resolve any complaint regarding the assessability of its products or services that is brought to the attention of the entity [Gov. Code § 11135(d)(3)].

[6] Prohibition Against Discrimination Based on Sexual Orientation

The FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination and harassment based on sexual orientation, which is defined to include heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality [Gov. Code §§ 12926(q), 12940(a), (j)]. Under California law, the FEHA occupies the field of employment discrimination and preempts local ordinances prohibiting sexual orientation discrimination in employment [Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 596-598, 18 Cal. Rptr.

2d 33 ; see Gov. Code § 12993(c)]. Although this prohibition does not generally apply to religious associations and corporations not organized for profit [Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12926.2, 12940(j)(4)(B)], the prohibition against harassment generally applies to (1) employees of a religious corporation or association to perform nonreligious duties at a health care facility operated for the provision of health care that is not restricted to adherents of that religion [Gov. Code §§ 12926(j)(4)(B), 12926.2(c)], and (2) employees of a nonprofit public benefit corporation formed by or affiliated with a particular religion that operates an educational institution as its sole or primary activity, except that the employer may restrict employment and promotion to individuals of a particular religion [Gov. Code § 12926.2(f)].

[7] California Constitution

A person may not be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin [Cal. Const. art. I, § 8]. Article I, Section 8 reflects a fundamental public policy against discrimination in employment, whether public or private [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 90, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] .

[8] Disability Protections

With respect to disabilities, California provides protections that are independent of the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 [Gov. Code § 12926.1(a), (d); see § 1C.11[4]]. Although the subsequently enacted federal Act provides a floor of protection, California law has always afforded additional protections [Gov. Code § 12926.1(a)]. For example, California defines physical and mental disabilities to require a "limitation" on a major life activity, but does not require a "substantial limitation" as does federal law [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c)].

PRACTICE TIP:

This legislative pronouncement is particularly important for two reasons. First, California law provides significantly more protection than federal law [see Gov. Code § 12926.1]. Second, the United States Supreme Court has held that Congress exceeded its authority and invalidly abrogated state sovereign immunity when it imposed Title I of the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 [see § 1C.11[4]] on states. Thus, suits in federal court by state employees to recover money damages based on a state's failure to comply with Title I of the ADA are barred by the Eleventh Amendment [Board of Trustees of Univ. of Alabama v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S. Ct. 955, 148 L. Ed. 2d 866] . Commentary by publisher's editorial staff.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

1. Hiring and Retaining Employees

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.11

§ 1C.11 Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Law

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[a] Discrimination in Employment Prohibited

Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17], it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate against an individual because of the individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. Unlawful actions include failing or refusing to hire a person, discharging a person, or otherwise discriminating with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11 (sex discrimination), 1605.1-1605.3 (religious discrimination), 1606.1-1606.8 (national-origin discrimination)].

It is unlawful sex discrimination under Title VII to adopt a "fetal protection" policy that excludes pregnant women from hazardous jobs unless the employer can prove that sex is a bona fide occupational qualification [Auto. Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158, 174] .

[b] Discrimination in Employment Advertising Prohibited

It is an unlawful employment practice to publish a notice or advertisement relating to employment indicating a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. However, a notice or advertisement may indicate a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on religion, sex, or national origin when that classification is a bona fide occupational qualification [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b)].

[c] Employers Covered

The term "employer" means a person engaged in an industry affecting commerce who has or had 15 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b); Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp. (2006) 546 U.S. 500, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 1238, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097 (employee asserting violation of Title VII must allege and prove that 15-or-more-employees requirement was met, and this is merely one element of employee's claim, rather than test of subject matter jurisdiction; therefore, employer is obliged to make timely challenge if that threshold requirement is not pleaded or proved)]. "Commerce" means trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, transmission, or communication among states [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(g)]. Virtually all business and employment "affects commerce" [see NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279 (commerce includes activities that in isolation might be deemed merely local but in interconnections of business across state lines, affect interstate commerce)].

[d] Exceptions to Application of Title VII

Title VII's prohibitions do not apply to employment outside the United States, or to a religious corporation, association, educational institution, or society with respect to employing individuals of a particular religion to perform work connected with carrying on the employer's activities [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a)].

Title VII does not affect state law other than a law that purports to require or permit an act that would be unlawful under Title VII [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7].

[2] Age Discrimination in Employment Act

[a] Prohibition on Age Discrimination

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1625.1-1625.13, 1626.1-1626.19] makes it unlawful for an employer to fail or refuse to hire, to discharge, or to otherwise discriminate against an individual with respect to his or her compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of the individual's age [29 U.S.C. § 623(a)]. This prohibition on age discrimination is intended to protect individuals who are at least 40 years of age [29 U.S.C. § 631(a)]. It is also unlawful to advertise in a way that indicates a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on age [see 29 U.S.C. § 631(e)].

Under the ADEA, an "employer" is a person engaged in industry affecting commerce who has or had 20 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year [29 U.S.C. § 630(b)]. "Commerce" means trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, transmission, or communication among states [29 U.S.C. § 630(g)]. Virtually all business and employment "affects commerce" [see NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279 (commerce includes activities that in isolation might be deemed merely local but in interconnections of business across state lines, affect interstate commerce)].

The Supreme Court has held that the ADEA does not validly abrogate state sovereign immunity. Therefore, the ADEA cannot be applied to states and state agencies and does not authorize a suit against state employers in federal court without the state's consent [Kimel v. Florida Bd. of Regents (2000) 528 U.S. 62, 120 S. Ct. 631, 634, 145 L. Ed. 2d 522] .

[3] Equal Pay Act of 1963

Under the Equal Pay Act of 1963 [see 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)], an employer may not discriminate between employees on the basis of sex in the payment of wages. The Act prohibits paying wages to employees at a rate less than wages paid to employees of the opposite sex for equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, performed under similar working conditions. Exceptions exist for payments made under a seniority system, a merit system, a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production, or a differential based on a factor other than sex [29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1620.1-1620.34, 1621.1-1621.4].

[4] Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

[a] Prohibition on Discrimination

The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101-12213] provides that no covered entity [see [b], below] may discriminate against a qualified individual with a disability [see 42 U.S.C. § 12131(2) ("qualified individual with a disability" defined)] because of the disability with regard to job application procedures, hiring, advancement, discharge, compensation, job training, or other terms, conditions, and privileges for employment [42 U.S.C. § 12112(a)]. Further, except as provided in § 1C.11[4][c], an employer may not require a medical examination, and may not inquire of the employee, to determine whether the applicant has a disability or the nature and severity of the disability [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A)].

[b] Employers Covered

The ADA applies to "covered entities," which includes employers, employment agencies, labor organizations, and joint labor-management committees. An "employer" is a person engaged in an industry affecting commerce (or the person's agent) who has or had 15 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year [42 U.S.C. § 12111(5)(A)]. Virtually all business and employment "affects commerce" [see NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279 (commerce includes activities that in isolation might be deemed merely local but in interconnections of business across state lines, affect interstate commerce)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The United States Supreme Court has held that Congress exceeded its authority and invalidly abrogated state sovereign immunity when it imposed Title I of the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 [see § 1C.11[4]] on states. Thus, suits in federal court by state employees to recover money damages based on a state's failure to comply with Title I of the ADA are barred by the Eleventh Amendment [Board of Trustees of Univ. of Alabama v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S. Ct. 955, 148 L. Ed. 2d 866] . For discussion of California's disability protections and their independence from the federal ADA [see Gov. Code § 12926.1], see § 1C.10[8]. Commentary by Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[c] Permissible Examinations

An employer may require a pre-employment examination to determine an applicant's ability to perform job-relatedfunctions [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2)(B)]. In addition, an employer may require a medical examination after an offer of employment has been made, and may condition the offer on the results of the examination if (1) all entering employees take the examination regardless of disability, (2) information obtained is handled properly, and (3) the results of the examination are used only in accordance with the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3)].

[5] Rehabilitation Act of 1973

[a] Contracts With Federal Government

Any contract in excess of $2,500 entered into by the federal government for personal property and nonpersonal services for the United States must contain a provision requiring that, in employing persons to carry out the contract, the party contracting with the United States take affirmative action to employ and advance qualified individuals with handicaps [29 U.S.C. § 793(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 706(8) ("individual with handicaps" defined)].

[b] Financial Assistance From Federal Government

An otherwise qualified individual with handicaps [see 29 U.S.C. § 706(8) ("individual with handicaps" defined)] may not, solely because of his or her handicap, be excluded from participating in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under, any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance or any activity conducted by an Executive agency or the Postal Service [29 U.S.C. § 794(a)].

[6] Veterans' Programs

[a] Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act

The Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act [see 38 U.S.C. §§ 4211-4214] provides that any contract for $10,000 or more entered into by the federal government for procuring personal property and non-personal services for the United States must contain a provision requiring the party contracting with the United States to take affirmative action to employ and advance qualified special disabled veterans and veterans of the Vietnam era. However, the contractor may exclude openings for executive and top management, positions that will be filled from within the contractor's organization, and positions lasting three days or less [38 U.S.C. § 4212(a); see 38 U.S.C. §§ 101(29), 4211(1)(A), (2)(A) (definitions)].

[b] Veteran's Reemployment Rights Act

The Veterans' Reemployment Rights Act [see 38 U.S.C. §§ 2021-2027] provides for leaves of absence, reemployment, and full pay and seniority rights for persons who enlist in, are called up to, or are inducted into the armed forces, and who apply for reemployment with an employer after an honorable discharge [see 38 U.S.C. §§ 2021, 2024]. An "employer" is a person engaged in an industry affecting commerce (or the person's agent) who has or had 15 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year [38 U.S.C. § 2027(c)(1)]. Virtually all business and employment "affects commerce" [see NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279 (commerce includes activities that in isolation might be deemed merely local but in interconnections of business across state lines, affect interstate commerce)].

[7] Civil Rights Act of 1866

The Civil Rights Act of 1866 provides that, among other rights, all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States have the same right in every state and territory to make and enforce contracts as is enjoyed by white citizens [42 U.S.C. § 1981(a)]. "Make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship [42 U.S.C. § 1981(b)]. Section 1981 applies to impairment of contracts by nongovernmental discrimination [42 U.S.C. § 1981(c)], providing a remedy to racial discrimination in private employment contracts [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 172, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415] .

[8] Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964

Under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000d-2000d-4; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1691.1-1691.13], no person in the United States may be subjected to discrimination on the ground of race, color, or national origin under a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance [42 U.S.C. § 2000d; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-4a ("program or activity" defined)]. This prohibition is intended to apply only when a primary objective of the federal assistance is to provide employment [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-3].

[9] Immigration Reform and Control Act

In addition to regulating the employment of unauthorized aliens, the Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA) [see 8 U.S.C. §§ 1324a, 1324b] makes it an unfair immigration-related employment practice for a person or entity to discriminate against an individual (other than an unauthorized alien) in employment because of the individual's national origin or, for a protected individual, because of the individual's citizenship status [8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1); see 8 U.S.C.

§ 1324b(a)(3) ("protected individual" defined)].

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.12

§ 1C.12 Employment Contracts

[1] "Contract of Employment" Defined

A "contract of employment" is a contract by which an employer engages an employee to do something for the benefit of the employer or a third person [Lab. Code § 2750]. For further discussion of employment agreements, see Ch. 85, Employment Contracts .

[2] Statute of Frauds

Under the statute of frauds, any agreement that by its terms is not to be performed within a year from its making must be in writing to be valid [Civ. Code § 1624(a)]. This requires any employment contract that will not be fully performed in one year from the date of the contract to be memorialized by some writing to be valid. An oral contract to employ someone as long as he or she does a satisfactory job is not made unenforceable by the statute of frauds, because it could theoretically be performed in less than a year by the termination of the employee for an unsatisfactory job within the year [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see [4], below (oral contracts)].

[3] Written Contracts

[a] Use of Written Contract

Written contracts are generally used to make clear an employee's responsibilities and to establish the standard for termination if the employee does not fulfill the expectations of the employer. Provisions in written employment contracts should be specific and complete; courts will not supply terms about which the contract is silent [Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hospitals (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 754, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605] . A written contract may be modified by a subsequent written contract, or by an oral agreement supported by new consideration [Civ. Code § 1698].

[b] When Written Contract Is Required

Contracts of employment must be in writing in the following situations:

- When an employer with no permanent and fixed place of business enters into an employment contract with an employee for services to be rendered in California, and the contemplated method of payment will include commissions [Lab. Code § 2751].

- When an employee's contract with the employer requires the employee to render services of unique or special value to the employer, and the employer wishes to be able to obtain injunctive relief [Civ. Code § 3423(e)].

[4] Oral Contracts

An employer and employee may agree orally that the employee will not be terminated except for cause or other specified condition, resulting in an oral employment contract [Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 ; see [2], above (oral contracts to perform satisfactory job are outside scope of statute of frauds)].

[5] Enforcement of Employment Contracts

An obligation to render personal service or to employ someone in personal service (that is, an employment contract) cannot be specifically enforced [Civ. Code § 3390; but see Herman v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 484, 488-489, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691 (finding statute inapplicable to contract providing for transfer of county police officers to sheriff's department)]. Therefore, an aggrieved employer must resort to an action for monetary damages in a contract dispute with an employee.

With limited exceptions, a contract to render service may not be enforced against the employee beyond seven years from the beginning of service under the contract [Lab. Code § 2855(a); see Lab. Code § 2855(b) (exceptions)]. In addition, courts will not enforce an employment contract in which the employee agrees to perform an illegal act [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 667 n.7, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

[1] Types of Sexual Harassment

[a] In General

Sexual harassment is an illegal form of sex discrimination [see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 73, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1), (4)(C)]. Forms of sexual harassment include verbal, physical, and visual harassment, as well as unwanted sexual advances [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(f)(1); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b); see also [b], [c], below].

Under Gov. Code § 12940(h), a cause of action for sexual harassment may be stated by a member of the same sex as the harasser, whether based on the quid pro quo theory, the hostile environment theory, or a hybrid of both theories [Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1418, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 ; see Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 (upholding principle of same sex harassment without requirement of homosexual harasser); see also [b], [c], below].

[b] "Hostile Environment" Harassment

"Hostile environment" sexual harassment exists when an employee can show (1) that he or she was subjected to sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, or other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature; (2) that the conduct was unwelcome; and (3) that the conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 875-876 ; see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 689] . As long as the environment would reasonably be perceived, and is perceived, as hostile or abusive, there is no need for it also to be psychologically injurious [Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295, 302] .

[c] "Quid Pro Quo" Harassment

"Quid pro quo" sexual harassment occurs when the employer or a superior employee makes a subordinate employee submit to sexual conduct as a condition of employment benefits [Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; see Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 652-653 ; see also Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406] .

[2] Guidelines on Discrimination Because of Sex

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has adopted Guidelines on Discrimination Because of Sex [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11], which provide specific guidelines defining sexual harassment, listing circumstances in which employers are liable for sexual harassment, and offering suggestions on preventing sexual harassment in the workplace [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11].

[3] Employer Liability for Sexual Harassment

[a] Basis of Liability

Sexual harassment is illegal sex discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 73, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17]. Under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) and its regulations [see Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996; 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.0-8504], any form of harassment, including sexual harassment, is unlawful [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)]. Under FEHA, harassment is generally concerned with the message conveyed to an employee, and therefore with the social environment of the workplace, while discrimination is concerned with explicit changes in the terms or conditions of employment [compare Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1) (making it unlawful for employer "to harass" employee on basis of protected classification) with Gov. Code § 12940(a) (making it unlawful for employer "to discriminate [against employee] in compensation or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" on basis of protected classification)]. However, although harassment and discrimination are separate wrongs, they are sometimes closely interrelated and even overlapping. Thus, if the hostile message that constitutes the harassment is conveyed through official employment actions, those actions can give rise to a discrimination claim as well as a harassment claim [Roby v. McKesson Corp., 47 Cal. 4th 686, at 707-709 (Cal. 2009) ("[I]n analyzing the sufficiency of evidence in support of a harassment claim, there is no basis for excluding evidence of biased personnel management actions so long as that evidence is relevant to prove the communication of a hostile message.")].

If an employer or the employer's agent or supervisor sexually harasses an employee, job applicant, or person providing services pursuant to a contract [see Gov. Code § 12920(h)(4)], the employer is strictly liable for the harassment [Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 415, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 ; Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12940(h)(1); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2)].

An employer may also be liable for sexual harassment in the workplace due to the harassment of one employee by another employee who is not an agent or supervisor. Liability for an employee's act may be imputed to the employer if the entity, its agents, or supervisors knows or should have known of the misconduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)].

An employer may also be responsible for the acts of nonemployees with respect to sexual harassment of employees, applicants, or persons providing services pursuant to a contract in the workplace. Liability will be imputed if the employer, its agents, or its supervisors knows or should have known of the misconduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. In reviewing cases involving the acts of nonemployees, the extent of the employer's control and any other legal responsibility that the employer may have with respect to the misconduct must be considered [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)].

An employer must take all reasonable steps to prevent the occurrence of harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1), (k); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(3); see Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 881 ; see also [c], below]. Loss of tangible job benefits is not necessary to establish harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)].

[b] Standard of Behavior

Sexual harassment cases are examined from the viewpoint of the victim (the "reasonable victim" standard). This means courts will apply the perspective of the reasonable woman in cases of sexual harassment against a woman, and the perspective of the reasonable man in cases of sexual harassment against a man [see Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 879-880] . The focus of a cause of action for sexual harassment is whether the victim has been subjected to sexual harassment, not what motivated the harasser [Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1418, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116] .

[c] Prevention and Correction of Sexual Harassment

Employers must take all reasonable steps to prevent sexual harassment from occurring, and, if it does occur, must take immediate appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k)]. Remedies should be reasonably calculated to end the sexual harassment. This may include transferring, suspending, or terminating the harassing employee. In addition, employers should educate all their employees about sexual harassment, making sure employees know that such conduct is unlawful [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882-883] . For an illustrative sexual harassment policy that may be included in an employee manual, see § 1C.220.

§ 1C.20 Constitutional Protection of Privacy

[1] California Constitution

[a] In General

Under the California Constitution, privacy is an inalienable right [Cal. Const. art. I, § 1]. The right of privacy applies to private businesses as well as government entities, and prevents them from collecting and stockpiling unnecessary information, and from misusing information gathered for one purpose to serve other purposes, or to embarrass [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 20-21, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; see Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040-1044, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194] . The right of privacy has been applied to medical records, private investigations, student records, arrest records, financial records, and drug and alcohol testing [see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender); see also § 1C.21].

[b] Permissible Intrusion Into Privacy

Many inquiries and test procedures constitute intrusions into privacy. However, the constitutional right to privacy does not prohibit all incursions into individual privacy. A violation of the right to privacy may be justified by a competing interest. Legitimate interests derive from the legally authorized and socially beneficial activities of government and private entities. Their relative importance is determined by their proximity to the central functions of a particular enterprise. Conduct alleged to be an invasion of privacy is to be evaluated based on the extent to which it furthers legitimate and important competing interests [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .

[2] Federal Constitution

The Federal Constitution provides several privacy protections relevant to the employment field. For example, the First Amendment protects the rights of free speech and free association, the Fourth Amendment protects the right to be free of unreasonable search and seizure, and the Fifth Amendment prohibits compulsory self-incrimination [see U.S. Const., amends. I, IV, V]. In addition, the United States Supreme Court has found in the Bill of Rights "zones of privacy" emanating from the "penumbras" of specific constitutional guarantees [see Griswold v. Connecticut (1965) 381 U.S. 479, 484, 85 S. Ct. 1678, 14 L. Ed. 2d 510] .

Because the Bill of Rights applies only to government conduct, these protections generally are applicable only to government entities. However, they are also applicable to private employers, but only when the practice is compelled by the government and the industry is subject to significant government regulation, converting the private conduct into state action [see Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives' Ass'n (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 614-618, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639] .

§ 1C.21 Protection of Particular Privacy Issues

[1] Arrest Record Not Resulting in Conviction

In general, an employer may not ask an applicant to disclose information concerning an arrest or detention that did not result in conviction, or information concerning participation in a diversion program [Lab. Code § 432.7(a)]. The information may be sought from persons seeking employment, or already employed, as peace officers [Lab. Code § 432.7(e)], and from applicants for employment at a health facility in a position involving access to patients, drugs, or medication [Lab. Code § 432.7(f)].

[2] Fair Employment and Housing Act Privacy Protection

[a] In General

The Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [see Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.] and its implementing regulations [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.0-8504] generally prohibit an employer from discriminating against employees on a number of prohibited bases [see Gov. Code § 12940(a); see also § 1C.10[1][a]]. As a part of this prohibition on discrimination, the Act provides employees with a variety of privacy protections.

[b] Sex

Except for recordkeeping and other limited purposes, an employer may not ask the sex of a job applicant on an application or questionnaire. After an individual is hired, the employer may record his or her sex for legitimate personnel purposes [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(2)].

[c] Pregnancy

An employer may not ask questions regarding childbearing, pregnancy, birth control, or familial responsibilities unless they relate to specific and relevant working conditions of the job in question [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(3)].

[d] Marital Status

An employer may not ask applicants to disclose marital status as part of a pre-employment inquiry, but may ask for any former names used, to check past work records [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(a), (b)]. An employer may also ask if the applicant has a spouse who is currently employed by the employer, but the employer may not use this information in the employment decision [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(c)].

[e] Religion

An employer may not ask questions regarding an applicant's availability for work on weekends or evenings as a pretext for ascertaining his or her religious creed. In addition, this type of inquiry may not be used to evade the requirement of reasonable accommodation of an employee's religion [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3 ("reasonable accommodation" defined)]. Availability inquiries are permissible when reasonably related to the requirements of the job in question [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.4].

[f] Age

Discrimination on the basis of age in hiring or employment is an unlawful employment practice [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. Further, it is an unlawful employment practice to make any non-job related inquiry of an applicant that expresses any limitation, specification, or discrimination as to age. However, an employer or employment agency is not barred from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

[g] Physical Disability

Under state law, an employer may not ask general questions about physical condition in an application, in a pre-employment questionnaire, or in the course of the selection process [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(2)]. However, it is permissible to ask questions concerning an applicant's physical fitness, medical or physical condition, or medical history, if the inquiry is directly related or pertinent to the position in question, or directly related to a determination of whether or not the applicant would endanger his or her health or safety or the health or safety of others [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3)].

In addition, under the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101-12213], an employer may not ask a job applicant if he or she is an individual with a disability, or inquire about the nature or severity of the disability. However, an employer may make pre-employment inquiries into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions [42 U.S.C. § 12112(c)(2)].

[h] Medical Examination

An employer may make a pre-employment inquiry regarding physical fitness, medical condition, physical condition, or medical history of an applicant only if that inquiry is directly related and pertinent to the position the applicant is applying for or is directly related to a determination of whether the applicant would endanger his or her health and safety or the health and safety of others [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(b)(1); see Gov. Code § 12940(d)]. An employer who does receive medical information must establish procedures to ensure the confidentiality of the information, and to protect it from unauthorized use and disclosure [Civ. Code § 56.20(a)]. It is unlawful age discrimination to require an applicant over 40 to meet higher physical or medical standards than younger applicants for the same job [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.6(c)].

In general, an employer or employment agency may not require any medical or psychological examination of any job applicant, make any medical or psychological inquiry of an applicant, make any inquiry into whether an applicant has a physical or mental disability or medical condition, or make any inquiry into the nature or severity of a physical or mental disability or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(1)]. However, an employer or employment agency may inquire into the applicant's ability to perform job-related functions and may respond to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2)]. Further, an employer or employment agency may require a medical or psychological examination or make a medical or psychological inquiry after making a job offer but before the commencement of employment duties, provided that (1) the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity and (2) all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3)]. Similarly, an employer or employment agency is generally prohibited from requiring any medical or psychological examination of an employee, making any medical or psychological inquiry of an employee, making any inquiry into whether an employee has a physical or mental disability or medical condition, or making any inquiry into the nature or severity of a physical or mental disability or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(f)(1)]. However, an employer or employment agency may require examinations or inquiries that it can show to be job-related and consistent with business necessity. In addition, an employer or employment agency may conduct voluntary medical examinations, including voluntary medical histories, that are part of an employee health program that is available to employees at that worksite [Gov. Code § 12940(f)(2)].

Under federal law, an employer may require a medical examination after an offer of employment has been made to a job applicant, and may condition an offer of employment on the results of the examination if (1) all entering employees are subject to the examination, regardless of disability, (2) information obtained is treated as a confidential medical record (with limited exceptions), and (3) the results of the test are used only as specified in the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12112(c)(3); see § 1C.11[4]].

[3] AIDS Test

The results of an HIV test [see Health & Safety Code § 120775(c)] that identifies or provides identifying characteristics of the person to whom the test results apply may not be used to determine suitability for employment [Health & Safety Code § 120980(f); see Health & Safety Code § 121115 (fact of person's participation in AIDS research study may not be used to determine employability)]. In addition, the disclosure of HIV positive status may be entitled to privacy protection under Article I, Section 1, of the California Constitution, when there is improper use of information properly obtained [Urbaniak v. Newton (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1128, 1140, 277 Cal. Rptr. 354] .

[4] Drug Test

[a] In General

Apparently in reaction to concern over the economic, societal, and safety problems associated with drug abuse in general and drug use in the workplace, some employers have instituted drug testing programs. These programs vary in scope and procedure, and may apply to job applicants as well as current employees. There are currently no federal or state statutes that directly prohibit private employers from requiring applicants or employees to submit to drug testing. The California Supreme Court has determined that in many instances, drug testing of employees and applicants is acceptable [see [b], below]. For further discussion of the policy issues surrounding drug testing, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations of Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender).

[b] Application of Hill Balancing Test

With regard to the right of privacy under the California Constitution [see Cal. Const. art. I, § 1; see also § 1C.20 [1]], the California Supreme Court applied a "balancing test" standard to hold that the National Collegiate Athletic Association's drug testing program did not violate the privacy rights of student athletes [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 57, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . This defense is less rigorous than the compelling interest defense, whose application the Court limited to cases involving obvious government action impacting freedom of expression and association or an obvious invasion of an interest fundamental to personal autonomy [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .

This "competing interest" defense involves the use of a balancing test that compares the specifically identified privacy interests of the plaintiff with legitimate, competing, and countervailing nonprivacy interests asserted by the defendant [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 (applying this test to NCAA drug testing program for student athletes and finding no violation)]. If the interests asserted by the defendant justify the invasion of privacy, the intrusion does not violate the California Constitution. The relative importance of an asserted interest depends on its proximity to the central functions of a particular public or private enterprise [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .

The plaintiff may rebut the assertion of a competing interest by showing that there are feasible and effective alternatives to the defendant's conduct that would have a lesser impact on privacy interests [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .

[c] Elements of Cause of Action

The California Supreme Court has set forth three essential elements for a cause of action for invasion of the state constitutional right of privacy [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] :

- A legally protected privacy interest.
- A reasonable expectation of privacy.
- A serious invasion of the privacy interest.

The plaintiff in an invasion of privacy case has the burden of establishing each element [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .

[d] Application to Employment Setting

The California Supreme Court declined to pass judgment on the legality of blanket or random drug test programs for employees or job applicants [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 54, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . However, the Court indicated that the same "competing interest" standard will apply to determine under what circumstances it is permissible to use drug testing in order to maintain a workplace free of substance abuse. The result will depend on the public interest, the employer's special interests, and the employees' reasonable expectations of privacy in a particular employment setting [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . Pre-Hill cases addressing drug testing issues in an employment context must be reexamined to determine whether they are consistent with the elements and standards announced in Hill. The Supreme Court offered no analysis of the continuing vitality of these decisions, except by noting that at least one appellate court had erroneously applied the compelling interest standard [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 citing Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 (drug testing based on safety considerations unconstitutional when applied to nonsafety employee)].

Hill culminates a trend that makes it clear that "not every act which has some impact on personal privacy invokes the protections of the state's Constitution and requires such justification" [Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1046-1048, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194] . The California Supreme Court has made it clear that the Hill standard will apply to future claims for invasion of the state constitutional right to privacy. The Court offered no analysis on the continuing vitality of cases decided before Hill [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] , and accordingly, those cases should be followed with caution. However, it is safe to conclude that if a properly planned and administered drug testing program is adopted, and used for applicants or employees in jobs that relate to safety, security, or other sensitive issues, it is likely that the program will be valid.

[e] Federally Mandated Drug Testing

Federal regulations require employers in industries in which safety is a primary consideration, such as airlines and railroads to conduct pre-employment drug tests for certain classes of job applicants [see 14 C.F.R. §§ 120.7(f), 120.35, 120.109(a), 120.101 et seq. (airlines); 49 C.F.R. §§ 219.501-219.505 (railroads)].

In addition, federal regulations require drug testing of certain airline employees [14 C.F.R. §§ 120.35, 120.101 et seq. (airlines)] and railroad employees [49 C.F.R. §§ 219.601-219.605]. For further discussion, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations of Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender).

[5] Alcohol Test

The privacy issues surrounding alcohol tests are similar to those in drug tests [see [4], above]. Alcohol tests are usually less intrusive than drug tests, and generally do not test for any substance but alcohol. For these reasons, alcohol tests are even more likely to be valid under a privacy challenge than drug tests. Federal regulations authorize employers in safety-sensitive industries, such as railroads, to conduct alcohol tests after an accident or for cause [see, e.g., 49 C.F.R. §§ 219.201-219.213 (post-accident), 219.301-219.309 (for cause)]. For further discussion, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations of Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender).

[6] Polygraph Test

An employer may not demand or require that a job applicant take a polygraph or lie detector test as a condition of employment [Lab. Code § 432.2(a)]. The federal Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 provides similar protections for private employees [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 2001-2009; 29 C.F.R. §§ 801.1-801.75].

[7] Eavesdropping and Wiretapping

It is unlawful for any person, including an employer, to use certain eavesdropping, wiretapping, and other surveillance techniques to invade private communications without the consent of the parties to the communication [see Penal Code §§ 630-637.5]. Similarly, it is an infraction for an employer, other than the federal government, to make audio or videotape recordings of employees in restrooms, locker rooms, or other rooms designated by employers for changing clothes [Lab. Code § 435].

In one case involving an employer's video surveillance of an office used by employees, the California Supreme Court found that the employees had a reasonable expectation under widely held social norms that their employer would not install video equipment capable of monitoring and recording their activities--personal and work-related--behind closed doors without their knowledge or consent. Under the circumstances of that case, however, the intrusion was not sufficiently serious to constitute a privacy violation. Any actual surveillance was drastically limited in nature and scope (no audio, not operated during business hours), exempting plaintiffs from its reach, and the defendants were motivated by strong countervailing concerns, which included providing a wholesome environment for the abused children in their care and avoiding legal liability [Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 286-300, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063] .

[8] Investigative Report

An employer may use an investigative consumer report for employment purposes. If the report is sought for employment purposes other than suspicion of wrongdoing or misconduct by the subject of the investigation, the person seeking the investigative consumer report may procure the report (or cause the report to be made) only if all the following apply [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2)]:

- The person procuring or causing the report to be made has a permissible purpose [see Civ. Code § 1786.12].
- The person procuring or causing the report to be made provides a clear and conspicuous disclosure in writing to the consumer at any time before the report is procured or caused to be made in a document consisting solely of the disclosure. The disclosure document must do all of the following:
  - State that an investigative report may be obtained.
  - Identify the permissible purpose of the report.
  - State that the disclosure may include information on the consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living.
  - Identify the name, address, and telephone number of the investigative consumer reporting agency conducting the investigation.
  - Notify the consumer of the nature and scope of the investigation requested, including a summary of Civ. Code § 1786.22.
- The consumer has given written authorization for the procurement of the report.

The person procuring or causing the report to be made must certify to the reporting agency that he or she has made the applicable requisite disclosures and will comply with Civ. Code § 1786.16(b) [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(4), (b)]. Further, the person procuring or causing the report to be prepared must agree to provide a copy of the report as provided in Civ. Code § 1786.16(b) [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(5), (b)]. Civ. Code § 1786.16(b) requires that any person requesting an investigative report provide the subject of the investigation (the consumer) a means by which the consumer may indicate on a written form, by means of a box to check, that the consumer wishes to receive a copy of any report prepared. If the consumer wishes to receive a copy, the recipient of the report (typically the employer) must send a copy to the consumer within three business days of the date that the report is provided to the recipient. The recipient may contract with another entity to send a copy to the consumer. The notice to request the report may be contained in either the disclosure form or a separate consent form. The copy of the report must contain the name, address, and telephone number of the person who issued the report and how to contact them [Civ. Code § 1786.16(b)(1)]. In addition, the person requesting the report must comply with Civ. Code § 1786.40 if the taking of an adverse action is a consideration [Civ. Code § 1786.16(b)(2)].

These restrictions and requirements [see Civ. Code § 1786.16(a), (b)] do not apply to an investigative consumer report procured or caused to be prepared by an employer when the report is sought for employment purposes due to the employer's suspicion of wrongdoing or misconduct by the subject of the investigation [Civ. Code § 1786.16(c)]. Finally, certain items of information may not be included in the report [see Civ. Code § 1786.18].

[9] Credit Report

Under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [see Civ. Code §§ 1785.1-1785.35], an employer may obtain a consumer credit report from a consumer credit reporting agency if it intends to use the information for employment purposes [Civ. Code § 1785.11(a)(3)(B)]. Before requesting a report, the employer must give written notice to the applicant of the report, and provide a mechanism for the applicant to request and receive a copy of the report at no charge [Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a)]. The federal Fair Credit Reporting Act imposes similar requirements on employers who use credit reports in making employment decisions [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681-1681t].

[10] Determination of Unauthorized Alien Status

Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA) [see 8 U.S.C. §§ 1324a, 1324b], it is unlawful to hire an alien for employment in the United States knowing the alien is an unauthorized alien or without requiring proof of eligibility for employment [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(1), (b)]. It is also unlawful to continue to employ an alien knowing he or she is not authorized to be employed [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(2)]. For a list of the documents that satisfy the proof of eligibility for employment requirement, see § 1C.100[2], Paragraph 4.

[11] Leave Related to Domestic Violence

When an employee requests leave to handle matters related to domestic violence, the employer must maintain the confidentiality of the employee to the extent allowed by law [Lab. Code §§ 230(d)(3), 230.1(b)(3) (employers with 25 or more employees)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.63[4] and [10], below.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Hiring and Terminating Employees
3. Terminating Employees

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.30

§ 1C.30 Grounds for Termination

[1] In General

Every employment is terminated by (1) expiration of its appointed term, (2) extinction of its subject, (3) death of the employee, or (4) the employee's legal incapacity to act as an employee [Lab. Code § 2920]. Absent a contract, every employment is at will, and the employee can be fired with or without cause. However, the presumption of employment at will may be superseded by a contract limiting the employer's right to discharge the employee [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 665, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] . For further discussion of employment at will, and exceptions to the at-will doctrine, see [3] through [5], below.

[2] Termination of Employment for Specified Term

Employment for a specified term may be terminated at any time by the employer for (1) willful breach of duty bythe employee in the course of his or her employment, (2) habitual neglect of duty, or (3) continued incapacity to perform [Lab. Code § 2924]. An employee may terminate employment for a specified term for willful or permanent breach of the obligations of the employer to him or her as an employee [Lab. Code § 2925]. Employment for a "specified term" means employment for a period greater than one month [Lab. Code § 2922].

[3] Termination of Employment Without Specified Term (Employment at Will)

If an employment has no specified term, it may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other party [Lab. Code § 2922]. This is commonly known as "employment at will" or the "at-will doctrine." An employee not employed for a specified term who quits or is dismissed by the employer is entitled to compensation for services rendered up to the time of dismissal [Lab. Code § 2926].

[4] Statutory Exceptions to Employment at Will

There are many federal and California statutory exceptions to the at-will doctrine. The broadest is Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits employment discrimination on a variety of bases [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)]. The primary California statute is the Fair Employment and Housing Act, which generally prohibits employment discrimination on the same bases as federal Title VII [see Gov. Code § 12940 (FEHA also bars discrimination and harassment based on sexual orientation)]. For discussion of the many statutory exceptions to the at-will doctrine and an employer's liability for wrongful termination, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

[5] Judicial Exceptions to Employment at Will

[a] Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy

The California Supreme Court first held in 1980 that a discharged employee may bring a tort action against his or her employer if the discharge violated fundamental principles of public policy [Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 172, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330] . In this case, the employer violated public policy by firing the employee for refusing to participate in an illegal scheme to fix gasoline prices [Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 170, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330] . The discharge must be against public policy and must affect a duty that inures to the benefit of the public at large, rather than to a particular employer or employee [Foley v. Interactive Data (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 669, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] . A wrongful termination action based on violation of public policy must derive from constitutional or statutory authority [Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1095, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680] . For discussion of the sources of public policy, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

[b] Agreement to Terminate for "Good Cause Only"

Another exception provides that an employee may not be terminated without cause if the employer has represented by oral or written agreement that the employee will be terminated "for good cause only" [see Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] . "Good cause" generally refers to a fair and honest cause or reason, regulated by good faith on the part of the party exercising the power [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 330, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] . A contract is terminable "for good cause only" if either (1) the contract was supported by consideration independent of the services to be performed by the employee for the employer, or (2) the parties agreed that the employee would be terminated only for cause [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 326, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] .

[c] Termination in Violation of Covenant of Good Faith

The third judicial exception to the at-will doctrine is breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. As in other contracts, employment contracts impose on each party a duty of good faith and fair dealing in the performance and enforcement of the contract [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 683, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] . This duty of good faith protects the parties' right to receive the benefit of their agreement, and breach of the duty may result in contract damages. However, the duty does not create an agreement to terminate only for good cause in an at-will employment relationship [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 698 n.39, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.31

§ 1C.31 Notification Required by Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act

The Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act [see 29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq.] (sometimes called the WWARN Act) imposes a duty on employers to notify employees of plant closings or mass layoffs [see 29 U.S.C. § 2102]. The Act applies to employers of 100 or more employees [see 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(1)]. In general, the Act requires employers to give written notification to representatives or employees at least 60 days before a plant closing or mass layoff, if it will result in the loss of employment for at least 50 full-time employees at a single site of employment [29 U.S.C. § 2102(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(2),(3) ("plant closing" and "mass layoff" defined); 20 C.F.R. § 639.3(I) ("single site of employment" defined); Bader v. Northern Line Layers, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 813 , (application of those definitions to layoffs of construction workers at numerous job sites distant from each other, where fewer than 50 were employed at each site; WARN Act did not require notification)].

Employers may give less than 60 days notice in certain unusual circumstances [see 29 U.S.C. § 2102(b)]. An employer is not required to give notice if the closing or layoff is due to the completion of a particular project and employees were hired with the understanding that employment was of a limited duration, or if the closing or layoff is due to a strike or lockout not intended to evade the notice requirements [see 29 U.S.C. § 2103]. The Act also "plainly does not apply to a government-ordered mass layoff" [Deveraturda v. Globe Aviation Sec. Servs. (9th Cir. 2006) 454 F.3d 1043, 1049 (worker who was laid off as result of federalization of airport security and assumption by government of responsibility for aviation screening services at airport had no claim against employer for failing to give 60 days notice under Act)].

A California law having the same title imposes a similar notification requirement but applies to somewhat smaller employers [see generally Lab. Code § 1400 et seq.]. Note that because the law defines a mass layoff in terms of 50 or more employees losing their positions with the employer [Lab. Code § 1400(c), (d)], there would be no mass layoff in the case of a transfer of a business that includes a transfer of the employees. In that case, the employees would not be losing their positions but would merely be exchanging the former employer for a new employer. Therefore, the former employer would have no duty to give the notice specified in the law, even if not all of the existing employees were transferred (as long as fewer than 50 were laid off in the process) [MacIsaac v. Waste Management Collection & Recycling, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1086-1087, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 650] .

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.32

§ 1C.32 Payment Obligation on Termination

[1] Time of Payment

If an employer discharges an employee, the wages earned and unpaid on discharge are due and payable immediately. An employer who lays off seasonal workers must make payment within a reasonable time, which cannot exceed 72 hours [Lab. Code § 201(a)]. A state employer will be deemed to have made an immediate payment of wages for any unused or accumulated vacation, annual leave, holiday leave, or time off to which the employee is entitled by previous overtime work when compensating time off was given by the appointing power, if the employee submitted a written election to the appointing power authorizing the state employer to tender payment for any or all leave to be contributed on a pretax basis to the employee's account in a state-sponsored supplemental retirement plan [Lab. Code § 201(b); see I.R.C. §§ 401(k), 403(b), 457]. The employee's election must be submitted at least five days before the final day of employment. The contribution to the plan account must be made no later than 45 days after discharge [Lab. Code § 201(b)]. Further, a discharged employee of a state employer may submit, at least five days before the final day of employment, a written election authorizing the deferral of payment into the next calendar year of any unused or accumulated vacation, annual leave, holiday leave, or compensatory time. However, only that portion of leave that extends past the November pay period may be deferred into the next calendar year. These payments must be tendered no later than February 1 of the year after the employee's last day of employment [Lab. Code § 201(c)]. Nothing in these deferral provisions is intended to authorize contributions in excess of the annual deferral limits imposed by state and federal law or the provisions of the supplemental retirement plan itself [Lab. Code § 201(b), (c)].

An employer effectuates a discharge within the contemplation of Lab. Code § 201 not only when the employer fires an employee, but also when the employer releases an employee on the employee's completion of the particular job assignment or time duration for which he or she was hired [Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 77, 90, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394, 137 P.3d 218 (person whom employer hired to perform one day of work was entitled to receive wages immediately after completing that employment)].

An employee not employed under a written contract for a definite period who quits must be paid within 72 hours of quitting. If the employee gives at least 72 hours notice of the intention to quit, he or she is entitled to be paid at the time of quitting [Lab. Code § 202(a)]. A state employer will be deemed to have made an immediate payment of wages for any unused or accumulated vacation, annual leave, holiday leave, sick leave to which the employee is otherwise entitled due to a disability retirement, or time off to which the employee is entitled by previous overtime work when compensating time off was given by the appointing power, if the employee submitted a written election to the appointing power authorizing the state employer to tender payment for any or all leave to be contributed on a pretax basis to the employee's account in a state-sponsored supplemental retirement plan, provided that the plan permits these contributions [Lab. Code § 202(b); see I.R.C. §§ 401(k), 403(b), 457]. The employee's election must be submitted at least five days before the final day of employment. The contribution to the plan account must be made no later than 45 days after the last day of employment [Lab. Code § 202(b)]. Further, when a state employee quits, retires, or retires based on disability, the employee may submit, at least five days before the final day of employment, a written election authorizing the deferral of payment into the next calendar year of any unused or accumulated vacation, annual leave, holiday leave, sick leave, retirement, or compensatory time. However, only that portion of leave that extends past the November pay period may be deferred into the next calendar year. These payments must be tendered no later than February 1 of the year after the employee's last day of employment [Lab. Code § 202(c)]. Nothing in these deferral provisions is intended to authorize contributions in excess of the annual deferral limits imposed by state and federal law or the provisions of the supplemental retirement plan itself [Lab. Code § 202(b), (c)].

The requirement that earned, unpaid wages be paid on termination or resignation [Lab. Code §§ 201, 202] is not violated by an employee incentive compensation plan under which employees can elect to receive, in lieu of a portion of their compensation, shares of company stock with restricted rights during a vesting period, with forfeiture of the restricted stock on an employee's resignation or termination for cause before the stock fully vests [Schachter v. Citigroup, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 610, 618-623, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 9-13, 218 P.3d 262, 268-271 (because restricted stock had value--immediately exercisable voting and dividend rights, and contingent rights of full ownership--employee's bargained-for wages had been paid in full, and forfeiture of unvested shares did not constitute denial of compensation)].

[2] Place of Payment

A discharged employee must be paid at the place of discharge. An employee who quits must be paid at the office or agency of the employer in the county where the employer worked [Lab. Code § 208].

[3] Vested Vacation Pay

Unless otherwise provided by a collective bargaining agreement, whenever an employer or employment contract provides for paid vacations, and an employee is terminated without having taken off vested vacation time, all vested vacation time must be paid as wages at the employee's final rate of pay. An employer's policy or employment contract may not provide for forfeiture of vested vacation time on termination [Lab. Code § 227.3; see Owen v. Macy's, Inc., (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 462, 468, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 (Lab. Code § 227.3 does not require that employer provide its employees with any paid vacation at all; rather, statute imposes certain requirements "whenever" employer provides vacation benefits)]. The right to paid vacation vests as labor is rendered [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 784, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Hiring and Terminating Employees
3. Terminating Employees

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.33

§ 1C.33 Prohibition on Retaliatory Termination or Discipline

[1] California Law

[a] Job Discrimination

An employer may not discharge, expel, or otherwise discriminate against a person because he or she has opposed any forbidden employment practices or filed a complaint, or testified or assisted in a proceeding, relating to unlawful employment discrimination [Gov. Code § 12940(h)].

[b] Violation of Statute or Regulation

An employer may not prevent an employee from disclosing information to a government agency or law enforcement agency, when the employee has reasonable cause to believe the information discloses a violation of a state or federal statute, or a violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation [Lab. Code § 1102.5(a); see Lab. Code §§ 1102.6-1102.7; see also Lab. Code § 1102.8 (posting requirements)]. Further, the employer may not retaliate against an employee for making such a disclosure [Lab. Code § 1102.5(b); see Lab. Code § 1102.5(e); but see Lab. Code § 1102.5(g) (rule generally inapplicable to disclosure of privileged information)] or for refusing to participate in an activity that would result in a violation of state or federal statute (or violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation) [Lab. Code § 1102.5(c)]. Retaliation for an employee's exercise of these rights [Lab. Code § 1102.5(a)-(c)] in any former employment is similarly prohibited [Lab. Code § 1102.5(d)].

In addition to other penalties, an employer that is a corporation or limited liability company is liable for a civil penalty for violating these prohibitions [Lab. Code § 1102.5(f)].

[c] Injury and Illness Prevention Program

Every employer must develop an injury and illness prevention program [see § 1C.82], which must include, among other things, a provision designed to encourage employees to inform the employer of health and safety hazards at the worksite without fear of reprisal by the employer [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(5)].

[d] Safety or Health Violations

Under Cal/OSHA, an employer may not discharge or discriminate against an employee because he or she has done any of the following [Lab. Code § 6310(a)]:

- Made a complaint about employee safety or health to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, to another agency, to the employer, or to an employee representative.
- Instituted a proceeding relating to the employee's rights.
- Testified (or is about to testify) in a proceeding relating to the rights of the employee or another employee.
- Participated in an occupational safety and health committee established under an illness and injury prevention program [see Lab. Code § 6301.7].

An employee discharged, threatened with discharge, demoted, suspended, or otherwise discriminated against for doing any of these things must be reinstated and reimbursed for lost wages and work benefits caused by the acts of the employer [Lab. Code § 6310(b)].

In addition, it is unlawful to lay off or discharge an employee for refusing to perform work that would cause a violation of an occupational safety or health statute, standard, or order, if the violation would create a real and apparent hazard to the employee or his or her fellow workers [Lab. Code § 6311].

[2] Federal Law

Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17], it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate against an employee or applicant for opposing an unlawful employment practice or for making a charge, testifying, assisting, or participating in an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under Title VII [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a)]. This protection extends not only to an employee who reports discrimination on his or her own initiative but also to an employee who speaks out about discrimination in answering questions during an employer's internal investigation [Crawford v. Metro. Gov't (2009) ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 846, 172 L. Ed. 2d 650, 656-658 (employee can "oppose" employer's unlawful practice for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a) simply by disclosing that practice)]. This anti-retaliation provision does not confine the actions and harms it forbids to those that are related to employment or occur at the workplace. The provision covers only those employer actions that would have been materially adverse to a reasonable employee or job applicant. That means that the employer's actions must be harmful to the point that they could dissuade a reasonable worker from making or supporting a charge of discrimination [Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 57, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 2409, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345, 353] .

Under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634], it is unlawful for an employer to discriminate against an employee or applicant for opposing an unlawful practice or for making a charge, testifying, assisting, or participating in an age discrimination action under the ADEA [29 U.S.C. § 623(d)].

An employee who reports employer violations of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 651-678] is protected from retaliatory action by the employer [29 U.S.C. § 660(c); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1977.1-1977.23]. For further discussion of OSHA, see § 1C.80[2].

An employee who reports employer violations of certainenvironmental protection statutes is protected from retaliatory action by the employer [29 C.F.R. § 24.2; see 29 C.F.R. §§ 24.1-24.9]. For further discussion of environmental protections as they relate to the workplace, see § 1C.81.

It is unlawful for a defense contractor to discharge, demote, or otherwise discriminate against an employee because the employee disclosed to a government official what he or she reasonably believed was evidence of a substantial violation of a federal law or regulation [10 U.S.C. § 2409].

CHAPTER 1C REGULATION OF EMPLOYERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Obligations Arising From Employer-Employee Relationship
1. Tax and Insurance Obligations

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.40

§ 1C.40 Obligations for State Tax Purposes

[1] In General

State tax and insurance law requires an employer to withhold, pay, and account for a variety of taxes from employees' wages, including unemployment insurance, workers' compensation insurance, state disability insurance, and income tax. This section discusses the basic obligations that an employer should be made aware of. For further discussion of state taxes related to the employer-employee relationship, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , and Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

[2] Income Tax

Every employer who pays wages to a resident employee within or outside California, or to a nonresident employee for services performed within California, must deduct and withhold income tax from those wages [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020(a); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17041 (rate of income tax)]. An "employer" is an individual, person, corporation, association, partnership, or limited liability company (or agent of any of these) doing business in California, deriving income from sources within California, or otherwise subject to California law, that pays wages to employees for services performed within California [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13005(a)]. For purposes of withholding state income tax, an "employee" is a resident individual who receives remuneration for services performed within or outside California, or a nonresident individual who receives remuneration for services performed within California. "Employee" also includes an officer of a corporation [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13004].

[3] Unemployment Insurance

[a] Purpose

The unemployment insurance scheme was enacted by the Legislature as a mandatory means of setting aside funds to be used to provide benefits for persons unemployed through no fault of their own, and to reduce involuntary unemployment and the suffering caused by unemployment [Unemp. Ins. Code § 100].

[b] Duty to Withhold and Contribute

Unemployment insurance is based on "employment," which is service, including service in interstate commerce, performed by an employee for wages or under any contract of hire [Unemp. Ins. Code § 601]. Wages are the basis of contribution in the unemployment insurance system. "Wages" means all remuneration payable to an employee for personal services, including commissions, bonuses, the reasonable cash value of all remuneration payable in a medium other than cash [Unemp. Ins. Code § 926], and certain tips [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 927].

The employer must pay its unemployment contribution based on a payroll calculation [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 977]; the employer may not deduct the contribution from employees' wages [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 976]. The employer's unemployment contribution must be transmitted to the Unemployment Fund on a prescribed schedule [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 986, 1110]. For further discussion of theunemployment insurance structure, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 80, Unemployment and State Disability Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[c] "Employer" and "Employee" Defined

An "employer" is any employing unit that, for some portion of a day, has within the current or had within the preceding calendar year in employment one or more employees, and pays wages for employment in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter [Unemp. Ins. Code § 675; see Unemp. Ins. Code § 135 ("employing unit" defined)].

An "employee" is (1) an officer of a corporation, (2) an individual who, under common law rules for determining the employer-employee relationship, has the status of an employee, and (3) any other individual who performs services for remuneration for any employing unit [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621]. The term also includes an individual who performs service in an artistic or literary capacity pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 601.5], and one who creates a specially ordered or commissioned work of authorship when the parties agree in a signed writing that the work will be considered a work for hire as defined in 17 U.S.C § 101 [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 686].

[4] Disability Insurance

The purpose of disability insurance is to compensate for the wage loss sustained by individuals unemployed because of sickness or injury [Unemp. Ins. Code § 2601]. In general, the duties of an employer relating to disability insurance are the same as those relating to unemployment insurance [see [3], above]. However, the employer makes no disability contribution of its own; only employees contribute to the Disability Fund [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 2603(a)]. The employer's duty is to calculate and withhold workercontributions and transmit them to the Disability Fund on a prescribed schedule [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 986, 1110]. For further discussion of disability insurance, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 80, Unemployment and State Disability Insurance (Matthew Bender).

The terms "employer" and "employee" have the same meaning for disability insurance purposes as for unemployment insurance purposes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 621; see also [3][c], above].

As an alternative to the withholding of employees' wages and contributing to the state disability fund, an employer, a majority of the employer's employees, or both, may apply for Employment Development Department approval of a voluntary plan for the payment of disability benefits [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 3251]. If the plan is approved, the employer and employees are not liable for the worker disability contribution [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 3252].

[5] Employment Training Tax

Most employers must contribute to the Employment Training Fund by making payments based on a percentage of wages paid [Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.6; see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1610-1612]. The purpose of the Fund is to help establish an employment training program that will foster job creation, minimize unemployment costs, and meet employers' needs for skilled workers. These goals will be accomplished by providing skills training to unemployment insurance claimants, people who have recently exhausted their unemployment insurance and remain unemployed, and potentially displaced workers who would otherwise become unemployment insurance claimants [Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1611, 10200, 10201(b)].

[6] Workers' Compensation

[a] Basis of Liability

The California Workers' Compensation Act [see Lab. Code §§ 3201-4855] assures compensation to employees for harm arising within the course and scope of their employment [Shields v. County of San Diego (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 103, 112, 202 Cal. Rptr. 30] . An employer is liable, without regard to negligence, for an injury sustained by an employee causing disability or death, and that arises out of and in the course of employment [Lab. Code § 3600]. Liability is based not on an act or omission of the employer, but because of the employment relationship, and because the injury arises out of and in the course of that employment. The employer's duty arises solely from the employment relationship [Shields v. County of San Diego (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 103, 112, 202 Cal. Rptr. 30] . For further discussion of workers' compensation, see Ch. 1D, Employee Benefits .

[b] Exclusive Remedy

Workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for employees injured or killed on the job [Lab. Code § 3602(a)]. However, if the employer fails to secure payment of workers' compensation, an injured employee or his or her dependents may sue the employer for damages [Lab. Code § 3706]. The employer may also be liable for an employee's injury or death caused by the employer's knowing removal or failure to install certain types of safety guards [see Lab. Code § 4558(b)].

[c] Duty to Insure

Every private employer in California must provide for the payment of compensation by securing (1) liability insurance from an insurer authorized to write workers' compensation insurance, or (2) a certificate of consent to self-insure from the Director of Industrial Relations, which may be obtained by satisfying the Director of the employer's ability to self-insure and pay any necessary compensation [see Lab. Code § 3700(a), (b)].

[d] Parties Covered

Liability for workers' compensation arises only in an employer-employee relationship [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)]. For workers' compensation purposes, the term "employer" includes a governmental agency, a quasi-public corporation, every person who has a natural person in service, and the legal representative of a deceased employer [Lab. Code § 3300]. The term "employee" means every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, regardless of whether lawfully or unlawfully employed [Lab. Code § 3351]. Persons holding jobs in many specific occupations are defined as employees [see Lab. Code §§ 3351-3370].

[7] Registration With California Employment Development Department

Every employing unit must register with the Employment Development Department (EDD) on a prescribed form within 15 days after becoming an employer [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1086; see Unemp. Ins. Code § 135 ("employing unit" defined)]. An "employer" is an employing unit that for some portion of a day, within the current or past calendar year, has employed one or more employees and paid wages for employment in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter [Unemp. Ins. Code § 675].

Form DE-1 is the required registration form for all employers, and is available from any EDD employment tax district office. An employer must deliver the registration to the EDD or to an officer or employee of the State Board of Equalization who is authorized to (1) accept applications for seller's permits, (2) register retailers, (3) accept applications for licenses to operate commercial vehicles, or (4) issue licenses to operate commercial vehicles [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1087].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1C REGULATION OF EMPLOYERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Obligations Arising From Employer-Employee Relationship
1. Tax and Insurance Obligations

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.41

§ 1C.41 Obligations for Federal Tax Purposes

[1] In General

Federal law requires an employer to withhold, pay, and account for income tax, Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA) tax (Social Security), and Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) tax. This section discusses the basic obligations that an employer should be made aware of. For further discussion of federal taxes related to the employer-employee relationship, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , and Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

[2] Income Tax

In general, every employer paying wages must deduct and withhold income taxes on those wages by specified methods [I.R.C. § 3402(a); see I.R.C. § 3402(b) (percentage method), (c) (wage-bracket method), (h) (alternative methods); see also Treas. Reg. §§ 1.6071, 1.6151, 1.6302 (procedure for collection and payment)]. In general, "wages" means all remuneration for services performed by an employee for his or her employer, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in a medium other than cash [I.R.C. § 3401(a)]. An "employer" is a person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of the person. However, if the person for whom the individual performs or performed the services does not have control of the payment of wages for the services, the employer is the person having control of the payment of wages [I.R.C. § 3401(d)(1)].

[3] Social Security and Medicare Tax

[a] Duty to Withhold

Under the Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA) [see I.R.C. §§ 3101-3128], taxpayers' wages are subject to a Social Security and Medicare tax at a statutory rate, based on employment [see I.R.C. § 3101]. The employer of a covered taxpayer must collect the tax by deducting it from the taxpayer employee's wages when paid [I.R.C. § 3102(a); see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.6071, 1.6151, 1.6302 (procedure for collection and payment)]. An employer required to deduct Social Security and Medicare tax is liable to pay the tax, and must be indemnified for amounts paid [I.R.C. § 3102(b)].

In addition, the employer must itself pay a separate Social Security and Medicare contribution based on amount of wages paid to employees [see I.R.C. § 3111].

[b] Definitions

In general, "wages" means all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in a medium other than cash [I.R.C. § 3121(a)]. "Employment" means any service performed (1) by an employee for his or her employer, regardless of citizenship or residence, within the United States or outside the United States in connection with American vessels or aircraft, or (2) outside the United States by a United States citizen for an American employer [I.R.C. § 3121(b)]. The term "employee" includes (1) an officer of a corporation; (2) an individual who, under common law rules for determining the employer-employee relationship, is an employee; and (3) an individual who performs services for remuneration as a driver, insurance salesperson, home worker, or traveling salesperson [I.R.C. § 3121(d)].

[4] Unemployment Tax

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) [see I.R.C. §§ 3301-3311] imposes an unemployment tax on every employer [see I.R.C. § 3306(a) ("employer" defined)] based on a percentage of wages paid with respect to employment during the calendar year [I.R.C. § 3301]. Taxpayers receive credit for their federal unemployment tax liability for contributions made to a certified state unemployment compensation fund that meets federal guidelines [I.R.C. § 3302(a)(1); see I.R.C. § 3304 (certification of state program)]. The California unemployment insurance scheme meets the federal guidelines [see City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 182, 189, 195, 203 Cal. Rptr. 258] . However, because the federal unemployment tax rate is higher than the maximum state unemployment tax rate [see I.R.C. § 3301(1); Unemp. Ins. Code § 977], employers must still make a federal tax contribution [see Tax Guide for Small Businesses (IRS Pub. 334)].

[5] Federal Employer Identification Number

With limited exceptions, every employer that employs one or more individuals for wages that are subject to Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA) tax (Social Security) or income withholding tax [see I.R.C. § 3402] must apply for an employer identification number [Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1(a)(1)(ii); see Treas. Reg. § 301.6109-1(a)(1) ("employer identification number" defined)]. To apply for an identification number, the employer must complete IRS Form SS-4 and attach any supplementary statement. The form is available from any IRS office or Social Security Administration office [Treas. Reg. §§ 31.6011(b)-1(a)(1)(iii), 301.6109-1(d)(2)].

An employer who employs only domestic workers in a private home may be assigned an employer identification number without having to apply on Form SS-4 [Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1(b)].

B. Obligations Arising From Employer-Employee Relationship
2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.50

§ 1C.50 Applicability of California Governing Law

[1] Labor Code

The Labor Code imposes wage, hour, and working condition restrictions on employers [see Lab. Code §§ 1171-1205]. These provisions apply to men,women, and minors employed in any occupation, trade, or industry, regardless of the measure of compensation. However, these Labor Code provisions do not apply to outside salespersons or any individual participating in a national service program pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 12571, provided that the nonprofit entity using the individual's service informs the individual of any requirement to work more than 8 hours per day or 40 hours per week and provides an opportunity to opt out of the service program [Lab. Code § 1171].

The Labor Code does not define "employer" in the context of the provisions governing wages, hours, and working conditions. Therefore, the common law test of employment is to be applied. Neither the Fair Labor Standards Act nor cases construing and applying it would be relevant to a determination of who is the employer in a specific case, nor can effect be given to a definition of "employer" in a wage order by the Industrial Welfare Commission insofar as that definition expands the class of persons who are employers under the common law test. Following the common law, corporate agents acting within the scope of their agency (such as the CEO and other officers) are not personally liable for the corporation's failure to pay employees' wages [Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075, 1086-1087, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483, 116 P.3d 1162] unless it can be shown on the alter ego theory that the corporation and a particular officer (such as the CEO) are one and the same person [see Jones v. Gregory (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 798, 811, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 581 (relying on Reynolds to reverse judgment against CEO in Labor Commissioner's suit to recover unpaid wages for corporation's employees, but remanding with instruction to consider whether liability could rest on alter ego theory)].

[2] Industrial Welfare Commission Orders

The Industrial Welfare Commission is authorized to adopt, amend, or rescind orders concerning wages, hours, and working conditions for any occupation, trade, or industry in California [Lab. Code § 1173]. Accordingly, the Commission has adopted orders regulating a variety of fields [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11160]. In addition, the Commission has adopted a general minimum wage order, which applies to all employees in California except government employees, outside salespersons, and certain family members of an employer [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000].

The Commission's orders are not enforceable, however, to the extent that they exceed the Commission's authority [Bearden v. U.S. Borax, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 429, 440, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 (Commission exceeded its authority when it issued order exempting certain employees from statutory meal period requirements if employees were covered by qualifying collective bargaining agreements)].

2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.51

§ 1C.51 Applicability of Federal Fair Labor Standards Act

[1] Extent of Coverage

The federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219] sets standards for minimum wages [see 29 U.S.C. § 206] and maximum hours of regular employment and overtime pay [see 29 U.S.C. § 207]. The FLSA also restricts the use of child labor in interstate commerce [see 29 U.S.C. § 212] and prohibits discrimination based on sex [see 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)].

In general, the FLSA applies to employees who are (1) engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or (2) employed in an enterprise engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 206(a), 207(a), 212(a)]. The FLSA applies to employees within the United States and its territories [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(f)]. For further discussion of the employees covered by the FLSA, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 1, Overview of Wage and Hour Laws (Matthew Bender).

The United States Supreme Court has held that the enforcement provisions of the FLSA do not authorize a suit against state employers in federal or state court without the state's consent [Seminole Tribe v. Florida (1996) 517 U.S. 44, 47, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252 (federal court); Alden v. Maine (1999) 527 U.S. 706, 119 S. Ct. 2240, 2246, 144 L. Ed. 2d 636 (state court)].

[2] Nonwaivability

An employee cannot waive his or her right to minimum wage and overtime pay [Barrentine v. Arkansas-Best Freight System (1981) 450 U.S. 728, 740, 101 S. Ct. 1437, 67 L. Ed. 2d 641] . Accordingly, the rights guaranteed by the FLSA cannot be bargained away in a written contract [Brooklyn Savings Bank v. O'Neil (1945) 324 U.S. 697, 706-707, 65 S. Ct. 895, 89 L. Ed. 1296] .

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.52

§ 1C.52 Minimum Wage Requirements

[1] California Law

[a] In General

In general, every employer must pay to each nonexempt employee wages of not less than $6.75 per hour for all hours worked [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000(2), 11010(4)(A) (manufacturing industry), 11030(4) (canning, freezing, and preserving industry), 11040(4) (professional, technical, clerical, mechanical, and similar occupations); see Industrial Welfare Commission Minimum Wage Order MW-2001]. This language expresses the legislative intent to ensure that employees are compensated at the minimum wage for each hour worked [Armenta v. Osmose, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 314, 323, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 460 (averaging method used by federal courts for assessing violation of federal minimum wage law does not apply under California law; employer violated minimum wage law by failing or refusing to pay for what employer characterized as nonproductive time: on-the-job driving time and time spent by foremen processing paperwork)]. It is unlawful to pay employees a wage less than the minimum wage [Lab. Code § 1197]. Any employee receiving less than the legal minimum wage is entitled to recover the unpaid balance of the full amount owed, including interest, plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs of suit [Lab. Code § 1194(a)]. Punitive damages are not available, however [see Brewer v. Premier Golf Props. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1243, 1252, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 225 ("[P]unitive damages are not recoverable when liability is premised solely on the employer's violation of the Labor Code statutes that regulate meal and rest breaks, pay stubs, and minimum wage laws.")].

The California minimum wage law reveals a clear legislative intent to protect the minimum wage rights of California employees to a greater extent than under federal law [see generally § 1C.52[2][a]]. California employees are allowed a higher minimum wage than the federal statutes allow. Federal law allows a subminimum wage to be paid to new hires under 20 years of age for the first 90 days of employment [29 U.S.C. § 206(g)(1)]. In contrast, California law limits the subminimum wage to the first 160 hours (approximately 20 days) [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11150]. In addition, an employer may pay student learners in vocational training programs 75 percent of the minimum wage under federal law [29 C.F.R. § 520.200 et seq.], whereas California law increases that amount to not less than 85 percent of the minimum wage [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11050]. Finally, federal law gives employers a tip credit for employees earning tips [

29 U.S.C. § 203(m); 29 C.F.R. § 531.50]. California law expressly forbids a tip credit, and employees must receive the full minimum wage [Lab. Code § 351]. All of these examples demonstrate that California law provides greater protections to minimum wage employees [Armenta v. Osmose, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 314, 324, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 460] .

The minimum wage requirement does not apply to persons employed in administrative, executive, or professional capacities [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(1)(A) (manufacturing industry)], outside salespersons, or the parents, spouse, children, or legally adopted children of an employer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000(1)]. In certain situations an employer may pay learner employees a subminimum wage [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(4) (manufacturing industry)].

Special rules apply to split-shift and reporting-time pay [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(4)(C), (5)(A) (manufacturing industry)].

[b] Credits Against Minimum Wage

The value of meals and lodging provided by an employer to an employee may be credited against the minimum wage obligation if the parties have a voluntary written agreement. No more than specified maximum amounts may be credited in a given period [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000(3)]. Tips received by an employee are the employee's property and may not be used by the employer as a credit against the minimum wage obligation [Henning v. Industrial Welfare Com. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1262, 1278, 252 Cal. Rptr. 278, 762 P.2d 442] . In addition, the value of uniforms, tools, and equipment furnished by the employer are not treated as a wage credit [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(4), (9) (manufacturing industry)].

[c] Prevailing Wage Requirement for Public Works

Workers employed under contract on most public works of more than $1,000 must be paid the general prevailing wage as determined by the director of the Department of Industrial Relations [Lab. Code §§ 1770, 1771; see Lab. Code § 1773 (method of determining general prevailing wage)]. An awarding body need not require the payment of the general prevailing wage on certain small public works projects if the awarding body elects to meet certain requirements with regard to all public works project under its authority, including payment of a fee to the Department of Industrial Relations for the enforcement of prevailing wage obligations [see Lab. Code § 1771.55; see also Lab. Code § 1771.5 (awarding body need not specify payment of prevailing wage in certain small public works contracts awarded before adoption of fee and regulations implementing Lab. Code § 1771.55, if awarding body has its own labor compliance program)]. However, other wage requirements may nevertheless apply. For example, every apprentice employed on public works must be paid the prevailing rate of per diem wages for apprentices in the trade to which he or she is registered [Lab. Code § 1777.5(b)].

[2] Federal Law

[a] In General

The federal minimum wage must be paid to every nonexempt employee who in any workweek (1) is engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or (2) is employed in an enterprise engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce [29 U.S.C. § 206(a)].

The federal minimum wage requirement does not apply to a variety of exempted occupations, including persons employed in bona fide executive, administrative, or professional capacities, and outside salespersons [29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 541.1-541.5 (definitions); see also 29 U.S.C. §§ 213(a) (exemptions), 251-262 (Portal-to-Portal Act exemptions)]. A subminimum wage may be paid to learners, apprentices, messengers, students, and handicapped workers [see 29 U.S.C. § 214(a)-(c)].

The minimum wage provisions of federal law differ significantly from California's minimum wage law [see generally § 1C.52[1][a]]. In particular, as noted above, federal law requires payment of a minimum wage to employees who "in any work week" are engaged in commerce [29 U.S.C. § 206(a)]. Lab. Code § 1194(a), on the other hand, provides that any employee receiving "less than the legal minimum wage" is entitled to recover the unpaid balance of the "full amount" owed. Regulations require payment of the minimum wage "for all hours worked" [e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(4)(A)]. This language expresses the legislative intent to ensure that employees are compensated at the minimum wage for each hour worked. The averaging method used by the federal courts for assessing a violation of the federal minimum wage law does not apply under California law [Armenta v. Osmose, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 314, 323, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 460] .

[b] Credits Against Minimum Wage

"Wages" paid to an employee include the reasonable cost to the employer of furnishing the employee with board, lodging, or other facilities if they are customarily furnished by the employer. For an employee who receives tips, the amount paid to the employee by the employer is deemed to be increased by the tips in an amount determined by the employer, but not above a specified percentage or the value of tips actually received [29 U.S.C. § 203(m)]. An employer may not treat the cost of provided uniforms and tools as wages for purposes of meeting minimum wage obligations [29 C.F.R. §§ 531.3(d)(2), 531.32(c)].

An employer may not pay an employee at wage rates less than the rates paid to employees of the opposite sex in the same establishment for equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, performed under similar working conditions. Exceptions exist for payments made under a seniority system, a merit system, a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production, or a differential based on a factor other than sex [*Lab. § 1C.54 Overtime Compensation

[1] California Law

[a] "Workday" and "Workweek" Defined

California overtime pay provisions are based on "workday" and "workweek" time periods. A "workday" is any consecutive 24 hours beginning at the same time each calendar day. A "workweek" is any seven consecutive days, starting with the same calendar day each week. A workweek is also described as a fixed and regularly recurring period of 168 hours, that is, seven 24-hour periods [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(2)(P), (Q) (manufacturing industry)].

[b] When Overtime Is Owed

Overtime regulations vary according to industry [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11500]. However, under a typical scheme, employees over 18 years of age, and employees 16 and 17 years of age who are not required to attend school and are not otherwise prohibited by law from engaging in the target work, may not be employed more than 8 hours in any workday or more than 40 hours in any workweek unless the employee receives one and one-half times the employee's regular rate of pay for all hours worked over 40 in the workweek. It is permissible to work more than 8 hours in any workday or more than 6 days in any workweek if the employee is compensated for that overtime at not less than the following [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(3)(A) (manufacturing industry)]:

- One and one-half times the employee's regular rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of 8 hours up to and including 12 hours in any workday, and for the first 8 hours worked on the seventh day of work; and

- Double the employee's regular rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of 12 in any workday and for all hours worked in excess of 8 hours on the seventh day in any workweek.

If the employment agreement entitles an employee to a premium rate of pay, which exceeds the regular rate, for working on a specified day such as a holiday, and the employee works more than 8 hours on such a day, the law does not require the employer to pay one and one-half times (or, for more than 12 hours, double) that premium rate. The law requires only that the employer must pay the legal multiple of the regular rate [Advanced-Tech Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 700, 702, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 757 (employee whose contract entitled her to 1.5 times regular pay for work on holidays was not entitled to apply legal multiple to her contract premium rate so as to claim 2.25 times regular pay for overtime on holidays but instead was limited to claiming legal multiple of regular rate)].

[c] Exceptions to Overtime Regulations

Different overtime regulations apply to minors [see Lab. Code § 1391; see also § 1C.60[4]], agricultural workers [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11140(3)], horseracing employees [see Lab. Code § 1182.10], and motion picture industry employees [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11120(3)].

[d] Employees Exempted From Overtime Regulations

Under California law, certain types of employees are exempt from the overtime pay provisions, including the following:

- Persons employed in administrative, executive, or professional capacities [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(1)(A) (manufacturing industry)].

- Outside salespersons [see Lab. Code § 1171].

- Individuals participating in a national service program pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 12571, provided that the nonprofit entity using the individual's service informs the individual of any requirement to work more than 8 hours per day or 40 hours per week and provides an opportunity to opt out of the service program [see Lab. Code § 1171].

- Certain members of the employer's family [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000(1)].

- Employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement if the agreement expressly provides for wages, hours of work, and working conditions of the employees and the agreement provides premium wage rates for all overtime hours worked and a regular hourly rate of pay for those employees of not less than 30 percent more than the state minimum wage [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(3)(H) (manufacturing industry)].

For further coverage of occupations not subject to standard overtime regulations, see California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Overtime Compensation and Regulation of Hours Worked (Matthew Bender).

[e] Alternative Work Schedules

On the proposal of their employer, employees may adopt a regularly scheduled alternative workweek that authorizes work by the affected employees for no longer than 10 hours a day within a 40-hour workweek without the payment to the affected employees of an overtime rate of compensation [Lab. Code § 511(a)]. An alternative workweek schedule will be deemed adopted only if it receives approval in a secret-ballot election by at least two thirds of affected employees in a readily identifiable work unit [Lab. Code § 511(a); see Lab. Code § 511(i) ("work unit" includes division, department, job classification, shift, separate physical location, or recognized subdivision thereof, and may consist of individual employee as long as criteria for identifiable work unit are met); see also Lab. Code § 511(e) (employer must report results of election to Division of Labor Statistics and Research within 30 days after results are final)]. The regularly scheduled alternative workweek proposed by an employer may be a single work schedule that would become the standard schedule for workers in the work unit, or it may be a menu of work-schedule options, from which each employee in the unit would be entitled to choose. A menu of work-schedule options may include a regular schedule of 8-hour days that is subject to the usual overtime requirements for such a schedule [Lab. Code § 511(a); see Lab. Code § 510(a) (overtime compensation requirements)]. Employees who adopt a menu of work-schedule options may, with employer consent, move from one schedule option to another on a weekly basis [Lab. Code § 511(a)].

An affected employee working longer than 8 hours but not more than 12 hours in a day pursuant to an alternative workweek schedule must be paid an overtime rate of compensation of no less than one and a half times the regular rate of pay of the employee for any work in excess of the regularly scheduled hours established by the alternative workweek agreement and for any work in excess of 40 hours a week [Lab. Code § 511(b)]. An overtime rate of compensation of no less than double the regular rate of pay of the employee must be paid for any work in excess of 12 hours a day and for any work in excess of 8 hours on those days worked beyond the regularly scheduled workdays established by the alternative workweek agreement [Lab. Code § 511(b)]. An employer is not required to combine more than one rate of overtime compensation in order to calculate the amount to be paid to an employee for any hour of overtime work [Lab. Code § 511(b)].

An employer must not reduce an employee's regular rate of hourly pay as a result of the adoption, repeal, or nullification of an alternative workweek schedule [Lab. Code § 511(c)].

An employer must make a reasonable effort to find a work schedule not exceeding 8 hours in a workday to accommodate any affected employee who was eligible to vote on an alternative-workweek election, or who was hired after the election, and who is unable to work the alternative schedule hours established as the result of that election [Lab. Code § 511(d)]. Also, an employer must explore any available reasonable alternative means of accommodating the religious belief or observance of an affected employee that conflicts with an adopted alternative workweek schedule [Lab. Code § 511(d); see Gov. Code § 12940(j)].

[2] Federal Law

[a] "Workweek" as Measure of Overtime

An employer must pay covered employees [see [b], below] at a rate of one and one-half times their regular rate of pay for all hours in excess of 40 worked in a workweek [29 U.S.C. § 207(a)(1)]. A "workweek" is a fixed and regularly recurring period of 168 hours, that is, seven consecutive 24-hour periods. It need not coincide with the calendar week. Workweeks may be set for whole plants or establishments, or may be set for individual employees [29 C.F.R. § 778.105].

[b] Employees Covered

The federal overtime compensation provisions apply to an employee who in any workweek (1) is engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or (2) is employed in an enterprise engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce [29 U.S.C. § 207(a)(1)]. Special overtime rules apply to employees whose work necessitates irregular hours, employees employed at piece rates, retail or service establishment employees, hospital employees, domestic service employees, tobacco industry employees, and certain railway and bus company employees [see 29 U.S.C. § 207(f)-(n)].

[c] Employees Exempted

A variety of employees are exempt from the overtime pay provisions of the FLSA, including the following:

- Persons employed in bona fide executive, administrative, or professional capacities [29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 541.1-541.4 (definitions)].

- Outside salespersons [29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1); see 29 C.F.R. § 541.5 (definition)].

- Employees covered by a collective bargaining agreement [see 29 U.S.C. § 207(b)(1), (2)].

(4) Employees in the transportation industry, including employees of motor carriers, railroads, air carriers, and shipping companies [29 U.S.C. § 213(b)(1)-(3), (6)].

Many other exemptions exist [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(b); see also 29 U.S.C. §§ 251-262 (Portal-to-Portal Act exemptions)].

2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.55

§ 1C.55 Regulation of Hours

[1] State Law

[a] Restriction on Hours Worked

Employees in occupations such as canning, freezing, preserving, and handling agricultural products, are limited to working 72 hours in a period of seven consecutive days, after which they must be given a 24-hour period off duty [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11030(3)(A)(2), 11080(3)(A)(2)]. Persons employed in technical, clerical, mechanical, and similar occupations may not be terminated for refusing to work more than 72 hours in a workweek [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11040(3)(L)]. Special hours restrictions apply to employees of railroads, lumber businesses, smelters, and pharmacies [see Lab. Code §§ 600-856].

Generally, these hour restrictions do not apply to persons employed in administrative, executive, or professional capacities, and persons employed as outside salespersons [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11030(1)(A)].

[b] Meal and Rest Periods

An employer may not employ a nonexempt employee for a work period of more than five hours without a meal period of 30 minutes. However, the employer and employee may agree to waive the meal period when the work period is notlonger than six hours [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11030(11)]. Employers must also allow nonexempt employees to take rest periods, which should generally be in the middle of work periods. The rest period time is determined at a rate of 10 minutes per four hours worked. Rest periods are not required for employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11030(12)].

These meal and rest regulations do not apply to persons employed in administrative, executive, or professional capacities, and persons employed as outside salespersons [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11030(1)(A)].

[c] One Day's Rest in Seven

Most employees engaged in an occupation of labor are entitled to one day's rest in seven [Lab. Code § 551; see Lab. Code § 550 ("day's rest" defined)], and no employer of labor may cause his or her employees to work more than six days in seven [Lab. Code § 552]. However, this prohibition does not apply in the following situations [Lab. Code §§ 554, 555]:

- In emergencies or to work performed in the protection of life or property from loss or destruction.
- To common carriers engaged in or connected with the movement of trains.
- To agricultural work or the care of animals.
- Under a collective bargaining agreement.
- When the chief of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement determines that hardship will result.
- To any employee whose total hours of employment do not exceed 30 in a week or 6 in a day.

[d] Minors

Special rules control the hours of employment of minors [see Lab. Code §§ 1391.1-1399]. For a general discussion of the law relating to the employment of minors, see §§ 1C.60, 1C.61.

[e] Use of Paid Vacation Time

Case law establishes that paid vacation time is the functional equivalent of wages for services performed [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 779, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] , and that view is reflected in statutes [see, e.g., Lab. Code § 227.3 (accrued unused paid vacation time must be paid as wages to terminated employee); see also Owen v. Macy's, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 462, 468, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 (Lab. Code § 227.3 does not require that employer provide its employees with any paid vacation at all; rather, statute imposes certain requirements "whenever" employer provides vacation benefits); § 1C.32[3]]. However, this does not limit the employer's right to control the scheduling of employees' absences for vacation [see Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 778-779 n. 7, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] . Moreover, the employer may require that an exempt employee [see generally § 1C.54[1][d]] who is absent from work for four or more hours in a single day must count that as a paid vacation day (as long as the employee has any unused paid vacation days) [Conley v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 260, 270, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719] .

[2] Federal Law

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219] contains no absolute limitation on the number of hours an employee may work in a workweek, as long as the employer pays the required overtime compensation [see 29 U.S.C. § 207]. However, the FLSA does not relieve an employer from any obligations imposed by contract or by other federal or state law [29 C.F.R. § 778.102].

§ 1C.56 Time and Place of Payment of Wages

[1] During Employment

[a] In General

Regular wages earned by most persons in employment are due and payable twice during each calendar month, on days designated in advance by the employer as regular paydays. Wages paid weekly, biweekly, or semimonthly satisfy this requirement. Wages earned for labor in excess of the normal work period must be paid no later than the payday for the next regular payroll period [Lab. Code § 204]. Wages of striking employees must be paid on the next regular payday without abatement or reduction [Lab. Code § 209]. Gratuities received by an employee are deemed to be the employee's sole property, and the employer may not collect, take, or receive any part of them. The employer must remit gratuities paid by credit card no later than the next regular payday following the date on which the patron authorized the credit card payment, without any deductions for any credit card processing fees or costs that may be charged to the employer [Lab. Code § 351]. Salaries of executive, administrative, and professional employees of employers covered by the FLSA, and commission employees of vehicle dealers may be paid once a month [Lab. Code §§ 204.1, 204.2; see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) (FLSA)].

[b] Agricultural and Domestic Workers

The wages of employees in agricultural, viticultural, and horticultural pursuits, in poultry and stock raising, and in domestic service who are provided board and lodging by their employers are due and payable once a month on a day designated in advance by the employer as the regular payday [Lab. Code § 205].

[c] Notice of Time and Place of Payment

Employers must keep posted conspicuously a notice specifying the regular paydays and the time and place of payment. The notice must be posted at the place of work, if practicable. Otherwise, the notice must be posted in another location where it can be seen as employees come or go to their places of work, or at the office or nearest agency for payment kept by the employer [Lab. Code § 207]. For a form for this notice, see § 1C.230.

[d] Prohibitions on Repayment

An employer may not collect or receive from an employee any part of wages already paid by the employer to the employee [Lab. Code § 221].

[e] Itemized Payroll Statement

At the time of each payment of wages, or semimonthly, the employer must give each employee an accurate itemized wage statement showing information pertaining to that pay period [Lab. Code § 226(a)].

[f] Deductions, Assignments, and Garnishments

An employer may withhold or divert a portion of an employee's wages (1) when required or empowered to do so by state or federal law, (2) when a deduction is authorized by the employee, or (3) when a deduction is authorized by a collective bargaining or wage agreement [Lab. Code § 224]. Wage assignments that meet the statutory requirements may also be made by employers [see Fam. Code §§ 5200-5290 (child and spousal support); Prob. Code § 3088 (support of conservatee); Lab. Code § 300 (other assignments)]. Similarly, wage garnishments must be honored if proper [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154 (Wage Garnishment Law)].

[2] On Discharge or Quitting

Special provisions govern the time, place, and manner of payment of wages for employees who quit or are discharged [see Lab. Code §§ 201-203, 208]. For discussion of these provisions, see § 1C.32.

[1] California Law

Employers may not issue any of the following in payment of wages due, wages to become due, or as an advance on wages to be earned: (1) an order, check, draft, note, memorandum, or other acknowledgment of indebtedness unless it is negotiable and payable in cash on demand without discount at an established place of business in California; or (2) scrip, coupon, cards, or other redeemable thing, in merchandise, or purporting to be payable or redeemable other than in money [Lab. Code § 212; see Lab. Code § 213 (exceptions)].

[2] Federal Law

Under the Fair Labor Standards Act [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219], payment for wages, including overtime, must be made in cash or by negotiable instruments, payable at par. In some circumstances, wages may also be paid in the form of board, lodging, other facilities, and tips [see 29 C.F.R. § 531.27].

[1] California Law

Employers must post a variety of employee notices, including the following, as appropriate:

- A notice of the time and place of payment of wages [see Lab. Code § 207].
- Wage orders relevant to the employer's occupation or industry [see Lab. Code § 1183].
- The rate of compensation to be paid by farm labor contractors [see Lab. Code § 1695(7)].
- The Labor Code talent agency provisions for talent agency employers [see Lab. Code § 1700.28].
- A notice of employees' right to take time off work to vote [see Elec. Code §§ 14350, 14351].

[2] Federal Law

An employer who employs persons subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219] minimum wage requirement must post a notice that explains the provisions of the FLSA. If employees are exempted from overtime regulations, the employer must add a notation that the employees are exempt from overtime regulations [29 C.F.R. § 516.4]. Employers must also post a notice containing pertinent provisions of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-10(a); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17]. § 1C.59 Workplace Recordkeeping Requirements

[1] California Law

[a] In General

Employers must keep records showing the names and addresses of all employees, and the ages of all minor employees. Complete payroll records must be kept in California for not less than three years [Lab. Code § 1174(c), (d); see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(7) (payroll record regulations for manufacturing industry)]. In addition, employers must furnish employees with accurate itemized statements of wages and deductions and maintain a copy of the statement, or a record of the deductions, on file at the place of employment or at a central location within California for at least three years [Lab. Code § 226(a)].

Employers of minors under 18 years of age must keepemployment permits on file during the minors' employment [Educ. Code § 49161]. Under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [see Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996], employers must prepare and maintain records regarding applicants and employees, including "California Employer Information Reports," and records regarding the race, sex, and national origin of job applicants [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.0].

[b] Employee Inspection of Records

Employers must allow employees to inspect their personnel files on request, at reasonable intervals [see Lab. Code § 1198.5]. Special rules require disclosure on request of certain reports used by employers in evaluating applicants [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a) (credit report)]. Some confidential information is subject to special protection [see, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 120980 (results of HIV test)]. For discussion of the collection, use, and disclosure of private information about applicants and employees, see California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees, and Ch. 51, Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender).

Employers required to keep and disclose itemized wage and deduction information [Lab. Code § 226(b); see [a], above] must afford current and former employees the right to inspect or copy the records pertaining to that employee on reasonable request to the employer [Lab. Code § 226(b); but see Lab. Code § 226(d), (h) (exceptions)]. Employers may take reasonable steps to ensure the identity of the employee and may charge the actual costs of reproduction to the employee [Lab. Code § 226(b)]. An employer must comply with an inspection or copy request as soon as practicable, but no later than 21 days from the date of the request [Lab. Code § 226(c)]. An employer's failure to comply with the inspection requirement is subject to penalty, injunctive relief, and damages if the failure is knowing and intentional [Lab. Code § 226(e), (f), (g)].

[c] Other Records

A variety of records and notices are required under the state income tax, workers' compensation, and unemployment and disability compensation systems. For discussion of these requirements, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , and Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

[2] Federal Law

Employers subject to the FLSA must prepare and preserve employee records that include information about each employee and his or her occupation, wages, hours, working conditions, and pay periods [29 U.S.C. § 211(c); see 29 C.F.R. § 516.2]. Most records must be preserved for at least three years [29 C.F.R. § 516.5]. Different recordkeeping regulations apply to particular groups of employees [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 516.3, 516.11-516.33].

A variety of records and notices are required under the federal income tax and unemployment insurance systems. For discussion of these requirements, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.60

§ 1C.60 Employing Minors Under California Law

[1] In General

Other than age restrictions, occupation restrictions, and hours and conditions of employment, an employer must generally treat minor employees in the same manner as other employees. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement has promulgated regulations that specify special restrictions on the types of occupations minors may engage in, set limits on minors' work hours, and specify enforcement procedures [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11701-11784].

A "minor" is any person under 18 years of age who is required to attend school under the Education Code and any person under the age of six years [Lab. Code § 1286(c); see Educ. Code §§ 48200, 48400]. A person under 18 years who is not required to attend school solely because that person is a nonresident of California is still a minor [Lab. Code § 1286(c)].

[2] Permits to Employ Minors

In general, an employer wishing to employ a minor under the age of 18 must obtain a permit to employ from the proper educational officers [Educ. Code § 49160; see Educ. Code §§ 49110, 49110.1 (persons authorized to issue permits)]. An employer of a minor under 18 must keep all employment permits on file during the minor's term of employment [Lab. Code § 1299; Educ. Code § 49161]. To apply for a permit to employ, the employer must send a written notification of the intent to employ the minor to the officer authorized to issue an employment permit [Educ. Code § 49162]. The employer must use Department of Education Form B1-1 to request the work permit, and as a statement of intent to employ the minor. Form B1-1 is available from the school district in which the minor is enrolled. A work permit may be issued by the superintendent of the school district in which the minor resides; the chief executive officer or person holding the equivalent position in a charter school that the minor attends; certain persons authorized by the district superintendent or charter school's chief executive officer; the county superintendent of schools, or a person authorized by the county superintendent, if the minor does not reside within a school district or attend a charter school; or the principal, or administrator designated by the principal, of the public or private school that the minor attends [Educ. Code §§ 49110(b), 49110.1]. A work permit is issued on Department of Education Form B1-4.

Special permits must be obtained from the Labor Commissioner for minors employed in the entertainment industry [see Lab. Code § 1308.5; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11751].

[3] Hours of Employment

With limited exceptions (such as minors employed to deliver newspapers to consumers [see Lab. Code § 1391(d)]), minors may not be employed more than the following hours [Lab. Code § 1391(a)]:

- For minors 15 years of age and under, no more than eight hours in one day of 24 hours or more than 40 hours in one week. In addition, these minors may not work before 7:00 A.M. or after 7:00 P.M., except from June 1 to Labor Day, when they may work until 9:00 P.M. However, while school is in session no employer may employ a minor 14 or 15 years of age for more than 3 hours in any school day or more than 18 hours in any week, or during school hours, except that a minor enrolled in and employed pursuant to a school-supervised and school-administered work experience and career exploration program may be employed for no more than 23 hours, any portion of which may be during school hours [see Educ. Code § 49116(a)].

- For minors 16 and 17 years of age, no more than eight hours in one day of 24 hours or more than 48 hours in one week. In addition, these minors may not work before 5:00 A.M. or after 10:00 P.M. on any day preceding a schoolday, except during an evening preceding a non-schoolday, when they may work until 12:30 A.M. of the non-schoolday. However, while school is in session no employer may employ a minor 16 or 17 years of age for more than 4 hours in any school day except if the minor (1) is employed in personal attendant occupations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11150], school-approved work experience, or cooperative vocational education programs or (2) has been issued a work permit [Educ. Code § 49112(c); see [2], above] and is employed in accordance with that permit [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(4); see Educ. Code § 49116(b)].

A "schoolday" is a day that a minor is required to attend school for 240 minutes or more [Lab. Code § 1391(b)].

Hours of employment restrictions are different for minors employed as messengers [see Lab. Code § 1297], minors employed in the entertainment industry [see Lab. Code § 1308.7], and minors engaged in agricultural, horticultural, viticultural, and domestic labor [see Lab. Code § 1394].

[4] Minimum Wage

Ordinarily, a California employer must pay each employee not less than the minimum wage [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000]. However, under wage orders for individual industries, minors may be paid not less than 85 percent of the minimum wage, rounded to the nearest nickel, provided that the number of minors employed at the lower rate does not exceed 25 percent of the persons regularly employed in the establishment. An employer of fewer than 10 persons may employ three minors at the lower rate. A "minor" for the purposes of wage orders is any person under 18 years of age [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11150 (wage orders)].

[5] Prohibited Occupations

[a] Minors Under 18

It is a misdemeanor to employ or cause a minor under 18 years of age to engage in an obscene, indecent, or immoral exhibition or practice [Lab. Code § 1308(a)(3)].

[b] Minors Under 16

Minors under 16 years of age may not work in a variety of occupations, including the following:

- Manufacturing [see Lab. Code §§ 1290, 1293].
- Door-to-door selling more than 50 miles from the minor's residence [see Lab. Code § 1308.1].
- Transportation [see Lab. Code § 1294].
- Work involving hazardous acids, dyes, or gases [see Lab. Code § 1294].
- Messenger [see Lab. Code § 1297].
- Street occupations [see Lab. Code § 1298].
- Other dangerous or injurious occupations [see Lab. Code § 1294].

Additional occupations are prohibited to minors under 16 years of age [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11701-11704, 11706, 11707]. Furthermore, it is a misdemeanor for an employer to employ or cause a minor under 16 years of age to engage in certain injurious businesses, exhibitions, vocations, performing jobs such as singing or rope walking, or mendicant or wandering businesses [Lab. Code § 1308(a)(1), (2), (4); but see Lab. Code § 1308(b) (exceptions)].

[c] Minors Under 12

No minor under 12 years of age may work in an "agricultural zone of danger," which includes work involving moving equipment, unprotected chemicals, or unprotected water hazards [see Lab. Code § 1293.1].

[6] Labor Commissioner's Permission Required for Certain Occupations

The consent of the Labor Commissioner is required for minors to work in certain occupations, such as acting, performing music, and modeling [see Lab. Code §§ 1308.5, 1308.6; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11750-11765 (entertainment industry regulations)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.61

§ 1C.61 Employing Minors Under Federal Law

[1] Prohibition on Oppressive Child Labor

No employer may employ any oppressive child labor in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or in any enterprise engaged in commerce or the production of goods for commerce [29 U.S.C. § 212(c); see 29 U.S.C. § 203(b) ("commerce" defined); see also NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279 (commerce includes activities that in isolation might bedeemed merely local but in interconnections of business across state lines, affect interstate commerce)].

"Oppressive child labor" is a condition of employment under which (1) an employee under 16 years of age is employed in any occupation (with limited exceptions) or (2) an employee between 16 and 18 years of age is employed in an occupation that the Secretary of Labor determines is hazardous for children between these ages or detrimental to their health or well-being [29 U.S.C. § 203(l); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 570.50-570.72 (hazardous occupation regulations)]. For minors between 14 and 16 years of age, a variety of occupations are deemed not to be oppressive child labor [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 570.31-570.38].

[2] Exemptions From Fair Labor Standards Act

Certain types of employment are exempt from the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219], including employment by parents [see 29 U.S.C. § 203(l)(1)], employment in agriculture [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(c)(1), (2), (4); 29 C.F.R. §§ 570.123, 575.1-575.9], employment in acting and performing [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(c)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 570.125], and employment in newspaper delivery and wreathmaking [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(d); 29 C.F.R. § 570.124].

[3] Hours of Employment

Employers are generally subject to the provisions of the FLSA concerning the working hours of minors, including the payment of overtime [29 C.F.R. § 570.103(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 207]. However, the Secretary of Labor has promulgated hours restrictions for minors between ages 14 and 16 engaged in certain occupations [29 C.F.R. § 570.35; see 29 C.F.R. §§ 570.33, 570.34 (occupations)]. For further discussion, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 6, Child Labor Laws (Matthew Bender).

[4] Minimum Wage

Federal law contains no special provision allowing an employer to pay a minor less than the federal minimum wage [29 C.F.R. § 570.103(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 206]. However, a subminimum wage may be paid to a minor who is a learner, apprentice, messenger, or student [see 29 U.S.C. § 214(a), (b); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 519.1-519.20 (student), 520.1-520.11 (student-learner), 521.1-521.11 (apprentice)].

[5] Permits to Employ Minors

To protect itself from an unwitting violation of oppressive-child-labor laws [see [1], above], a business employing minors must have on file an unexpired proof of age certifying that each minor is above the oppressive child-labor age for the occupation in which the minor is employed [29 C.F.R. § 570.5(a); see 29 C.F.R. § 570.2 (minimum age standards)]. Two types of forms satisfy this requirement: (1) federal certificates of age, and (2) state age, employment, or working certificates or permits, issued by a state agency approved by the administrator of the Wage and Hour Division [29 C.F.R. § 570.5(b); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 570.6-570.12]. California certificates and permits satisfy the federal requirement [29 C.F.R. § 570.9(a)]. For further discussion of permits to employ minors, see § 1C.60[2].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Obligations Arising From Employer-Employee Relationship
2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.62

§ 1C.62 Relations With Organized Employees

[1] Federal Labor Management Relations Act

[a] Employees' Right to Organize

Under the federal Labor Management Relations Act of 1947 [see 29 U.S.C. 141-187], employees have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor unions, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid and protection [29 U.S.C. § 157]. Representatives chosen for the purposes of collective bargaining by the majority of employees in a unit are the exclusive representatives of all the employees in the unit [29 U.S.C. § 159(a)].

[b] Unfair Labor Practice

It is an unfair labor practice for an employer to do any of the following [29 U.S.C. § 158; see 29 U.S.C. § 152(2) ("employer" defined)]:

- Interfere with employees in the exercise of their right to organize [see 29 U.S.C. § 157].
- Dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of a labor organization.
- Discriminate regarding hiring, advancement, terms, or conditions of employment to encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization.
- Discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he or she filed charges or gave testimony related to a labor organization.
- Refuse to bargain collectively with the employees' representatives [see 29 U.S.C. § 159(a)].

The National Labor Relations Board may prevent any person from engaging in an unfair labor practice affecting commerce [29 U.S.C. § 160(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 152(6) ("commerce" defined)]. Virtually all business and employment "affects commerce" [see NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279 (commerce includes activities that in isolation might be deemed merely local but in interconnections of business across state lines, affect interstate commerce)].

[c] Restriction on Payments

It is unlawful for an employer or association of employers to pay, lend, or deliver money or other thing of value, or to agree to pay, lend, or deliver money or other thing of value to a labor organization, to its representatives or officers, or to an employee (in excess of his or her normal compensation) for purposes of influence [29 U.S.C. § 186(a)].

[d] Duty to Cooperate

Employers and employees and their representatives must make reasonable efforts to make and maintain agreements concerning pay, hours, and conditions of employment, and to participate in conferences and meetings when disputes arise [29 U.S.C. § 174(a)].

[2] California Alatorre-Zenovich-Dunlap-Berman Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975

[a] Applicability

The Alatorre-Zenovich-Dunlap-Berman Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975 (Act) [see Lab. Code §§ 1140-1166.3; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 20100-21200] applies to "agricultural employers," which includes any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an agricultural employee, an individual grower, corporate grower, cooperative grower, or various agricultural associations, groups, and cooperatives [Lab. Code § 1140.4(c)].

[b] Employees' Right to Organize

Under the Act, employees have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor unions, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid and protection [Lab. Code § 1152; see Lab. Code § 1140.4(b) "employee" defined)]. Representatives chosen for the purposes of collective bargaining by the majority of employees in a unit are the exclusive representatives of all the employees in the unit [Lab. Code § 1156].

[c] Unfair Labor Practice

It is an unfair labor practice for an agricultural employer to do any of the following [Lab. Code § 1153]:

- Interfere with agricultural employees in the exercise of their right to organize [see Lab. Code § 1152].
- Dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of a labor organization.
- Contribute financial or other support to a labor organization.
- Discriminate regarding hiring, advancement, terms, or conditions of employment to encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization.
- Discharge or otherwise discriminate against an agricultural employee because he or she filed charges or gave testimony in relation to an agricultural labor organization.

- Refuse to bargain collectively with a certified labor organization [see Lab. Code §§ 1156-1159].

- Recognize, bargain with, or sign a collective-bargaining agreement with an uncertified labor organization.

The Agricultural Labor Relations Board may prevent any person from engaging in an unfair labor practice [Lab. Code § 1160].

[d] Restriction on Payments

It is unlawful for an agricultural employer or association of agricultural employers to pay, lend, or deliver money or other thing of value to a labor organization, to its representatives or officers, or to anemployee (in excess of his or her normal compensation) for purposes of influence [Lab. Code § 1155.4].

[3] Solicitation of Employees During Labor Dispute

An advertisement seeking employees to work while a strike, lockout, or other trade dispute is in progress must plainly and explicitly mention that the dispute exists. The advertisement must also state the name of the person placing the ad and the name of the person responsible for the ad, if different from the name of the person placing the ad [Lab. Code § 973].

[4] Use of Professional Strikebreakers

It is unlawful for an employer willingly and knowingly to use professional strikebreakers to replace employees involved in a strike or lockout at a place of business [Lab. Code § 1134; see Lab. Code § 1133 ("professional strikebreaker" defined)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Obligations Arising From Employer-Employee Relationship
2. Working Conditions and Compensation

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.63

§ 1C.63 Miscellaneous Obligations

[1] Family Care and Medical Leave

In general, employers of 50 or more employees must allow employees with more than 12 months of service to take a total of 12 weeks for family care or medical leave during any 12-month period [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)]. Family care and medical leave may be taken (1) for the birth of a child, for the placement of a child with an employee in connection with adoption or foster care, or for the serious health condition of a child; (2) to care for a parent or spouse who has a serious health condition; or (3) because of an employee's own serious health condition (except for disability on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions) that makes the employee unable to perform the functions of his or her job [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(3)]. In some instances, an employee must first use accrued vacation time or sick leave before taking family care and medical leave [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(e)].

The employer must provide notice to the employees of their right to request family care and medical leave [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9; see § 1C.205[1][e]]. Failure to provide the notice could leave the employer in a weak defensive position if an employee sues for violation of the employee's statutory leave rights [see, e.g., Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 881, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 (holding that lower court's finding of summary judgment for employer was erroneous)].

During family care and medical leave, the employee retains full employment status, including seniority [Gov. Code § 12945.2(g)], and is entitled to participate in employee health care and benefit plans [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)]. However, the employee may be required to reimburse the employer for the cost of coverage [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)]. The employer must guarantee an employee the same or a comparable position on returning [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)].

An employer may refuse to reinstate an employee returning from leave to the same or a comparable position if all of the following apply [Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(1)]:

- The employee is a salaried employee who is among the highest paid 10 percent of employees in a defined geographic area.

- The refusal is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the operations of the employer.

- The employer notifies the employee of the intent to refuse reinstatement at the time the employer determines the refusal is necessary.

It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to refuse to hire, or to discharge, fine, suspend, expel, or discriminate against an employee for exercising the right to family care and medical leave [Gov. Code § 12945.2(l)(1)].

Similar federal coverage is provided by the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA) [see 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.]. However, although the Ninth Circuit has not addressed the issue, the prevailing view among the other circuit courts is that the FMLA is an invalid abrogation of state sovereign immunity and therefore does not apply to state employers and employers determined to be arms of the state [see, e.g., Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp. (1st Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 151, 159 ; Hale v. Mann (2d Cir. 2000) 219 F.3d 61, 67-69 ; see also Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 123, Access to Courts : Eleventh Amendment and State Sovereign Immunity (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)] Nevertheless, California regulations incorporate by reference the federal regulations interpreting the FMLA, to the extent that they are not inconsistent with California law [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.10; Pang v. Beverly Hosp., Inc. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 986, 993, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 643] .

[2] Pregnancy Leave

An employer must allow a female employee disabled by pregnancy, childbirth, or related conditions to take a leave for a reasonable time not exceeding four months and thereafter return to work [Gov. Code § 12945(a)]. The employee may use accrued vacation leave during this period. The employer may require the employee to give reasonable notice of the date the leave will begin, and the estimated duration of the leave [Gov. Code § 12945(a)].

An employer who has a policy, practice, or collective bargaining agreement requiring or authorizing the transfer of temporarily disabled employees to less strenuous or hazardous positions for the duration of the disability must transfer a pregnant female employee who requests such a transfer [Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2)]. Every employer must temporarily transfer a pregnant female employee to a less strenuous or less hazardous position for the duration of her pregnancy if, on the advice of her physician, she requests such a transfer, and the transfer can be reasonably accommodated [Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3)].

[3] Uniforms, Tools, and Equipment

If an employer requires employees to wear uniforms as a condition of employment, the employer must provide and maintain the uniforms. When tools or equipment are required by the employer or are necessary for the performance of a job, the employer must provide and maintain them; however, employees who earn wages at least two times the minimum wage may be required to provide and maintain hand tools and equipment customarily required by the trade or craft [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(9)(A), (1) (manufacturing industry)]. The employer may require a reasonable deposit as security for the return of items furnished by the employer, provided that the employer issues a receipt to the employee for the deposit [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11019(9)(C)].

[4] Jury Duty and Court Appearances

An employer may not discharge or discriminate against an employee for taking time off to serve as required by law on an inquest jury or trial jury, provided that the employee gives reasonable notice to the employer before taking the time off [Lab. Code § 230(a)]. Similarly, an employer may not discharge, discriminate, or retaliate against an employee, including a crime victim, for taking time off to appear in court to comply with a subpoena or other court order as a witness in any judicial proceeding [Lab. Code § 230(b)]. Further, no employer may discharge or discriminate or retaliate against an employee who is a victim of domestic violence [see Fam. Code § 6211] or sexual assault [see Lab. Code § 230(h)(2)] for taking time off to obtain or attempt to obtain any relief to help ensure the health, safety, or welfare of the violence victim or his or her children; for this purpose, the employee must give the employer reasonable advance notice of the intention to take time off unless advance notice is not feasible [Lab. Code § 230(c), (d); see [10], below].

Employees may use vacation, personal leave, or compensatory time off for these purposes, and this entitlement may not be diminished by a collective bargaining agreement [Lab. Code § 230(g)]. Remedies include reinstatement, reimbursement for lost wages and benefits, and a one-year filing period for filing a complaint with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement [Lab. Code § 230(e), (f); see Lab. Code § 230(e) (willful refusal to restore employee is misdemeanor)].

[5] Leave to Vote

If a voter does not have sufficient time outside of working hours to vote at a statewide election, the voter may take off enough working time that, when added to the voting time available outside of working hours, will enable the voter to vote. No more than two hours may be taken off without loss of pay [Elec. Code § 14350]. Not less than 10 days before each statewide election, employers must post a notice setting forth the employees' right to take time off work to vote [Elec. Code § 14351; see Elec. Code § 14350; see also § 1C.231 (form for notice)].

[6] Volunteer Firefighter, Reserve Peace Officer, and Emergency Rescue Personnel Duty

An employer may not discharge or discriminate against an employee for taking time off work to perform emergency duty as a volunteer firefighter [see Lab. Code § 230.3(d)(1); Gov. Code § 50952(p)], a reserve peace officer, or emergency rescue personnel [Lab. Code § 230.3(a); see Lab. Code § 230.3(d)(2); Health & Safety Code § 1799.107(e)]. This prohibition does not apply to any public safety agency or emergency medical services provider if the employer determines that the employee's absence would hinder the availability of public safety or emergency medical services [Lab. Code § 230.3(c)].

[7] Employee Literacy Assistance

Every private employer regularly employing 25 or more employees must reasonably accommodate and assist any employee who reveals a literacy problem and requests employer assistance in enrolling in an adult literacy education program, provided the reasonable accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer [Lab. Code § 1041(a)]. "Employer assistance" includes providing the employee with the location of the program or arranging for a literacy education provider to visit the jobsite [Lab. Code § 1041(b)]. Employers must make reasonable efforts to safeguard the privacy of employees who reveal literacy problems [Lab. Code § 1042], and may not terminate such employees who are otherwise preforming their work satisfactorily [Lab. Code § 1044]. Employers do not have to give employees time off with pay to participate in a literacy education program [Lab. Code § 1043].

[8] Drug-Free Workplace

A business awarded a contract or grant from a state agency for procuring property or services must certify to the agency that it will provide a drug-free workplace. To meet this requirement, a business must (1) publish a statement notifying employees that unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance is prohibited in the person's or organization's workplace and specifying the actions that will be taken against employees for violations; (2) establish a drug-free awareness program; (3) require that each employee be given a copy of the statement concerning unlawful use of controlled substances; and (4) require that each employee, as a condition of employment, agree to abide by the terms of the statement [Gov. Code § 8355(a)]. This certification requirement does not apply to credit card purchases of goods of $2,500 or less [Gov. Code § 8355(b)(1); see Gov. Code § 8355(b)(2) (annual exemption limited to $7,500 per company)]. A similar federal program applies to contracts for the procurement of property or services for $25,000 or more from any federal agency [see 41 U.S.C. §§ 701-707].

[9] Sanitation Requirements

Employers must keep business establishments clean, maintain restrooms for employees [Lab. Code § 2350], and furnish free drinking water to employees [Lab. Code § 2441(a)]. Factories, shops, and businesses in which power machinery is used for manufacturing purposes must maintain medical supplies on the premises [Lab. Code § 2440]. Special sanitation requirements apply to theaters, foundries, metal shops, and factories [see Lab. Code §§ 2260-2355].

[10] Leave Related to Domestic Violence

Employers may not discharge, discriminate, or retaliate against an employee who is a victim of domestic violence [see Fam. Code § 6211] for taking time off from work to seek judicial relief [see [4], above] or to help ensure the health, safety, or welfare of a domestic violence victim or his or her child [Lab. Code § 230(c)]. Further, the employer must maintain the confidentiality of any employee requesting leave to the extent allowed by law [Lab. Code § 230(d)(3)]. If feasible, the employee must give the employer reasonable advance notice of the employee's intention to take time off [Lab. Code § 230(d)(1)]. However, the employer may not take any action against the employee based on an unscheduled absence if the employee provides certification to the employer within a reasonable time after the absence [Lab. Code § 230(d)(2)]. Employees may use vacation, personal leave, or compensatory time off for this purpose, and this entitlement may not be diminished by a collective bargaining agreement [Lab. Code § 230(g)]. Remedies include reinstatement, reimbursement for lost wages and benefits, and a one-year filing period for filing a complaint with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement [Lab. Code § 230(e), (f); see Lab. Code § 230(e) (willful refusal to restore employee is misdemeanor)].

In addition, employers with 25 or more employees may not discharge, discriminate, or retaliate against an employee who is a victim of domestic violence [see Fam. Code § 6211] for taking time off from work to attend to any of the following [Lab. Code § 230.1(a)]:

- To seek medical attention for injuries caused by domestic violence.
- To obtain services from a domestic violence shelter, program, or rape crisis center.
- To obtain psychological counseling related to an experience of domestic violence.
- To participate in safety planning and take other actions to increase safety from future domestic violence, including temporary or permanent relocation.

The advance notice and confidentiality requirements discussed above apply in this context, as well as the available remedies [Lab. Code § 230.1(b)-(e)]. However, an employee may not take unpaid leave for these purposes that exceeds the unpaid leave time allowed under, or is in addition to the unpaid leave time permitted by, the federal Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 [Lab. Code § 230.1(f); see 29 U.S.C. § 2606 et seq.; see also [1], above].

1. Regulation of Hazardous Substances

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.70

§ 1C.70 Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act

[1] Applicability of Act

The Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act (Act) [see Lab. Code §§ 6360-6399.7] was enacted to ensure the transmission of necessary information to employees regarding the properties and potential hazards of hazardous substances in the workplace [Lab. Code § 6361(b)]. The provisions of the Act apply to (1) all employers who use hazardous substances in California, (2) any person who sells a hazardous substance to an employer in California, and (3) any manufacturer who produces or sells hazardous substances in California. The Act covers hazardous substances that are present in the workplace as a result of workplace operations, in a mannerthat employees may be exposed to them under normal work conditions or in reasonably foreseeable emergencies resulting from workplace operations [Lab. Code § 6362].

Hazardous substances subject to the Act are compiled in a list prepared by the director of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) [Lab. Code § 6380; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 339 (hazardous substances list)].

[2] Duty of Manufacturer to Prepare MSDS

Manufacturers of listed hazardous substances must prepare and provide direct purchasers of substances with a Material Data Safety Sheet (MSDS) setting forth the name, other designations, hazards, risks, handling procedures, and emergency procedures associated with that hazardous substance [Lab. Code §§ 6390, 6391]. The preparer of an MSDS must provide a copy to the Department of Industrial Relations [Lab. Code § 6394]. Manufacturers, importers, distributors, and employers must label containers of hazardous waste in a manner consistent with California standards and the federal Hazard Communication Standard [Lab. Code § 6390.5; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194; 29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200].

[3] Duty of Employer to Provide Information About Toxic or Harmful Substances

An MSDS for each hazardous substance in the workplace must be available to all employees, bargaining units, and employees' physicians [Lab. Code § 6398(a)]. Employers must furnish employees who may be exposed to a hazardous substance with information about the contents of the MSDS for the hazardous substance or with equivalent information, either in written form or through a training program [Lab. Code § 6398(b)]. Employers must make provision to inform employees of their rights under this Act [Lab. Code § 6398(c)].

Employers must also notify an employee who has been or is being exposed to toxic materials or harmful physicalagents in excessive amounts, and must inform the employee of corrective action being taken [Lab. Code § 6408(e)]. In addition, employers must allow employees or their representatives access to accurate records of employee exposures to potentially toxic materials or harmful physical agents [Lab. Code § 6408(d)].

Employers may not retaliate against employees for being involved in a proceeding relating to hazardous substances, or for exercising a right afforded by this Act [Lab. Code § 6399.7].

§ 1C.71 Regulation of Employee Contact With Asbestos

[1] Duties of Employer Engaged in Asbestos-Related Work

An employer or contractor engaged in asbestos-related work [see Lab. Code § 6501.8(a) ("asbestos-related work" defined) that involves 100 square feet or more of surface area of asbestos-containing material must register with the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) [Lab. Code § 6501.5; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.6-341.14 (registration regulations)]. The employer or contractor must meet certain criteria and must provide DOSH with requested information about the work [see Lab. Code § 6501.5(b)]. DOSH will grant registration if it is satisfied that the employer or contractor will provide a safe and healthful place of employment. The employer or contractor must post a copy of the registration and warning signs at the work location [Lab. Code § 6501.5]. In all asbestos-handling jobs, a safety conference must be held before the start of actual work [Lab. Code §§ 6503, 6503.5].

In addition, the employer or contractor must do all of the following [Lab. Code § 6501.5(a)]:

(1) Provide health insurance coverage for medical examinations and monitoring for employees.

(2) Maintain workers' compensation insurance for employees or provide a trust account for each employee.

(3) Train and certify employees to work with asbestos [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1529, 5208].

(4) Provide the equipment necessary to safely perform asbestos-related work.

If the employer is a contractor, the contractor must be certified by the Contractors' State License Board [Lab. Code § 6501.5(a)(1); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7058.5, 7058.6].

Employers, contractors, and owners of commercial or industrial buildings who engage in or contract for asbestos-related work must make a good faith effort to determine if asbestos is present before the work begins. For asbestos-related work on a building or structure built before 1978, the employer must first ask the owner if asbestos is present [Lab. Code § 6501.9].

[2] Notice to Employees of Presence of Asbestos

The owner of a building constructed before 1979 who knows that the building contains asbestos-containing construction materials must provide a notice containing all the following elements to employees in the building [Health & Safety Code § 25915(a); see Health & Safety Code §§ 25918.3-25919.6 (definitions)]:

> (1) Information relating to any asbestos survey known to the owner to have been conducted on the building.
> (2) Specific locations in the building known to the owner or identified in the survey where asbestos-containing materials are present.
> (3) Procedures and handling restrictions necessary to prevent and minimize disturbance, release, and exposure of asbestos.
> (4) A summary of the results of any analysis or monitoring done for asbestos [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5208].
> (5) Potential health risks or impacts that may result from exposure to the asbestos in the building.

This notice must be provided to each employee in writing annually [Health & Safety Code § 25915.2(a)].

Instead of providing the preceding notice to employees, the owner may prepare an asbestos management plan [see Health & Safety Code §§ 25915(a), 25915.1]. The plan must contain the items specified in (1)-(5), above, but need not be given to employees. If a plan is prepared, an abbreviated notice must be given to employees stating the specific location of asbestos in the building, and informing employees of the existence and availability of the plan and a description of its contents [see Health & Safety Code § 25915(a)].

If construction, maintenance, or remodeling is conducted in an area of the building where employees might come in contact with asbestos, the owner must post a prescribed warning sign [see Health & Safety Code § 25916].

The Director of Food and Agriculture is authorized to adopt regulations to provide for the safe use of pesticides and safe working conditions for farmworkers, pesticide applicators, and other persons working with or around pesticides [Food & Agric. Code §§ 407, 12980, 12981]. Accordingly, the Director has adopted pesticide regulations imposing a number of safety requirements on employers. Employers must have a written training program for employees who handle minimal-exposure pesticides, must keep records about training, and must post safety information [3 Cal. Code Reg. § 6724; see 3 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 6790-6793 (minimal-exposure pesticides)]. Employers must provide for emergency medical care in advance, and provide for medical supervision of employees [3 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 6726, 6728]. Employees working with certain pesticides must work in groups or must make periodic contact with another person [3 Cal. Code Reg. § 6730]. Employers must provide areas for employees to change their clothes and must provide employees with wash facilities and clean work clothing [3 Cal. Code Reg.§§ 6732-6736]. In addition, employers must provide safety equipment and adequate lighting, and must maintain appropriate equipment for working with pesticides in a safe condition [3 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 6738-6746].

Employers are subject to additional regulations relating to the safety of field workers [see 3 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 6760-6778] and the use of fumigants [see 3 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 6780-6784].

§ 1C.73 Occupational Carcinogens Control Act

Under the Occupational Carcinogens Control Act of 1976 [see Lab. Code §§ 9000-9061], employers must observe certain safety standards regarding the use and handling of carcinogens [Lab. Code § 9021; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5208-5210 (standards)]. In addition to providing a safe work environment for employees, employers must report releases of potentially hazardous amounts of carcinogens [see Lab. Code § 9030], and provide medical examinations and monitoring for affected employees [see Lab. Code § 9040]. Employers also must post copies of reports of releases of potentially hazardous amounts of carcinogens at each location of the release [Lab. Code § 9031].

For purposes of the Act, an "employer" is a governmental agency, a person that has a natural person in service, or the legal representative of a deceased employer [Lab. Code § 9006]. An "affected employee" is an employee who, as part of his or her employment, is involved in the use of a carcinogen [see Lab. Code § 9009 ("use" defined)], or an employee who has a substantial probability of becoming involved in the use of a carcinogen in employment [Lab. Code § 9003].

§ 1C.74 Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act (Proposition 65)

[1] Prohibition on Discharging Harmful Chemicals

The Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act (commonly known as Proposition 65) [see Health & Safety Code §§ 25249.5-25249.13; see also 27 Cal. Code Reg. § 25102 et seq.] generally prohibits any person in the course of doing business from knowingly discharging or releasing a chemical known to the State of California to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity into water, or into or onto land where the chemical passes or will probably pass into a source of drinking water [Health & Safety Code § 25249.5].

[2] Prohibition on Exposing Persons to Hazardous Chemicals

No person in the course of doing business may knowingly and intentionally expose another person to one of these chemicals without first giving the person clear and reasonable warning [Health & Safety Code § 25249.6; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 12601(c) (manner of occupational exposure warnings)]. Warnings need not be separately given to each exposed person, but may be provided by general methods such as labels on products, posting of notices, and published warnings [Health & Safety Code § 25249.11(f)]. Warnings need not be posted when a federal law governing warning preempts state law, and when the person responsible for the exposure can show the exposure poses no significant threat [Health & Safety Code § 25249.10(a), (c)].

[3] List of Covered Chemicals

Proposition 65 applies to chemicals included on a list published by the governor [see 27 Cal. Code Reg. § 27001(b) (list of chemicals)]. At a minimum, this list must include the hazardous substances contained in listings referred to in Labor Code Section 6382(b) and (d) [Health & Safety Code § 25249.8(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 339 ("Governor's List"); 29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200 (federal Hazard Communication Standard)].

[4] Application of Act

The prohibitions imposed by Proposition 65 apply only to a "person in the course of doing business." They do not apply to government employers or persons employing fewer than 10 employees [see Health & Safety Code § 25249.11(b)]. For purposes of Proposition 65, a "person" is an individual, trust, firm, joint stock company, corporation, company, partnership, or association [Health & Safety Code § 25249.11(a)].

§ 1C.75 Federal Hazardous Communication Standard

[1] In General

The federal Hazardous Communication Standard [see 29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200] imposes obligations on employers in connection with the production and use of hazardous substances. Under the Standard, an "employer" is a person engaged in a business where chemicals are used, distributed, or produced for use or distribution. The term includes contractors and subcontractors. An "employee" is a worker who may be exposed to hazardous chemicals under normal operating conditions or in foreseeable emergencies. Workers who encounter hazardous chemicals only in non-routine, isolated situations, such as office workers, are not covered [29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200(c)].

[2] Duty of Employer

The Standard imposes on employers the following obligations:

(1) Developing a written hazard communication program, which must cover labels and other warnings, Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) and employee training [29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200(e)].

(2) Providing employee training and information about hazardous chemicals in their work area [29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200(h)].

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.80

§ 1C.80 Governing Law

[1] California Occupational Safety and Health Act

[a] Purpose

The California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973 (Cal/OSHA) [see Lab. Code §§ 6300-9061] was enacted to assure working Californians safe and healthful working conditions by authorizing the enforcement of effective standards, by assisting and encouraging employers in maintaining safe and healthful working conditions, and by providing research, information, education, training, and enforcement in the area of occupational safety and health [Lab. Code § 6300]. Enacted as a state plan to take full responsibility for enforcing federal OSHA safety and health standards, Cal/OSHA was granted final approval by the Secretary of Labor in 1977. Because it has federal approval, Cal/OSHA is the sole mechanism for enforcing occupational safety and health laws in California [see 29 U.S.C. § 667(b)], with the exception of occupational fields reserved to concurrent state and federal jurisdiction, and to purely federal jurisdiction, such as maritime activity, some railroad activity, employment by the federal government, and others [see K. Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 21, Occupational Safety and Health Regulation (Matthew Bender)].

[b] Enforcement

Cal/OSHA requirements are implemented by occupational safety laws for certain specific industries [see Lab. Code §§ 6800-9061] and safety and health standards for most industries [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 450-8618]. The Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) has jurisdiction over all employment in California, and has the power toenforce and administer laws, standards, and orders relating to occupational safety and health [Lab. Code § 6307]. Employers are subject to civil and criminal penalties for failing to comply with standards, orders, or any other occupational safety and health provisions [see Lab. Code §§ 6423-6436].

[2] Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act

[a] In General

The federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (OSHA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 651-678] was enacted to assure working people safe and healthful working conditions, and to preserve human resources [29 U.S.C. § 651(b)]. The Act applies to employment within the states, the District of Columbia, and certain other areas [see 29 U.S.C. § 653(a)]. It regulates each "employer," defined as a person engaged in a business affecting commerce who has employees [29 U.S.C. § 652(5)]. An "employee" is an employee of an employer who is engaged in a business of his or her employer that affects commerce [29 U.S.C. § 652(6)]. By using the phrase "affects commerce," Congress intended the scope of OSHA to be as broad as the Commerce Clause allows [Godwin v. Occupational Saf. & Health Rev. Com'n (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1976) 540 F.2d 1013, 1015 ; see Wickard v. Filburn (1942) 317 U.S. 111, 127-128, 63 S. Ct. 82, 87 L. Ed. 122 (trivial contribution to commerce enough to be subject to federal regulation)]. Consequently, because virtually all business "affects commerce," all employers are subject to OSHA.

[b] Duties of Employer and Employee

An employer subject to OSHA must do both of the following [29 U.S.C. § 654(a)]:

(1) Furnish each employee with employment and a place of employment free from recognized hazards that cause or are likely to cause death or serious injury.

(2) Comply with OSHA's occupational safety and health standards [see 29 U.S.C. § 655 (promulgation of standards)].

Each employee must comply with OSHA's occupational safety and health standards, and all rules, regulations, and orders applicable to the employee's actions and conduct [29 U.S.C. § 654(b)].

[c] State Plan

OSHA does not prevent a state from adopting its own occupational safety and health plan. The state plan may simply regulate areas outside the scope of OSHA's standards, or may take responsibility for the enforcement of all OSHA standards if (1) the plan provides standards at least as effective as OSHA's standards, and (2) the state plan is approved by the Secretary of Labor [see 29 U.S.C. § 667(a)-(c)]. California's state plan was granted final approval in 1977 [see K. Wilcox, California Environmental Law, Ch. 21, Occupational Safety and Health Regulation (Matthew Bender)].

[d] Recordkeeping

Employers must make, keep, and make available records of the employer's activities relating to occupational safety and health [29 U.S.C. § 657(c)]. This includes maintaining a log and summary of occupational injuries and illnesses on a prescribed form [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1904.2, 1904.5, 1904.6], and reporting to OSHA about employment accidents in which an employee is killed or in which five or more employees are hospitalized [see 29 C.F.R. § 1904.8]. Employers may be required to complete an annual survey of occupational injuries and illnesses [see 29 C.F.R. § 1904.21].

However, employers with no more than 10 employees and employers in low-risk industries are generally exempt from regular recordkeeping requirements [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1904.15, 1904.16]. Employers engaged inphysically dispersed operations are subject to different recordkeeping requirements [see 29 C.F.R. § 1904.14]. However, these employers still must comply with OSHA safety standards, display OSHA posters, and report fatal or other serious accidents. Employers must comply with these federal recordkeeping regulations even though Cal/OSHA has full responsibility for enforcing federal OSHA standards [see Lab. Code § 6410].

Exempt employers may be required to maintain records for one year if selected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) to participate in a survey of occupational injuries and illnesses [29 C.F.R. §§ 1904.15(b), 1904.16(b), 1904.21].

[e] Enforcement

A key part of OSHA's structure for maintaining safe employee work environments is the authority of the Secretary of Labor to establish and enforce occupational safety and health standards, national consensus standards, and other federal standards [see 29 U.S.C. § 655(a); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1910.1-1910.441 (occupational safety and health standards)]. To enforce these standards, the Secretary may conduct inspections and investigations, examine records, issue citations, assess penalties, and seek restraining orders [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 657-659, 662]. An employer who violates OSHA's requirements or fails to correct a cited violation is subject to civil and criminal penalties [see 29 U.S.C. § 666].

§ 1C.81 General Safety and Health Duties of Employer

[1] Employer's Duty to Maintain Safe and Healthy Employment

Under Cal/OSHA, every employer's general duty is to furnish employment and a place of employment that are safe and healthful for employees [Lab. Code § 6400]. An employer may not require or permit an employee to be in a place of employment that is not safe and healthful[Lab. Code § 6402]. In addition, an employer may not occupy, maintain, construct, or cause the construction of a place of employment that is not safe and healthful [Lab. Code §§ 6404, 6405]. In the context of employment, the terms "safe," "safety," and "health" mean the freedom from danger to employees' life, safety, and health that the nature of the employment reasonably permits [Lab. Code § 6306(a)].

Both employers and employees must comply with all occupational safety and health standards, Health and Safety Code Section 25910 relating to asbestos spraying, and all applicable Cal/OSHA rules, regulations, and orders [Lab. Code § 6407]. However, the employer has the primary responsibility for the safety of the employee [Bendix Forest Products Corp. v. Division of Occupational Saf. & Health (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 465, 470-471, 158 Cal. Rptr. 882, 600 P.2d 1339] .

[2] Variance From Standards

[a] Temporary Variance

An employer may apply to DOSH for a temporary order granting a variance from an occupational safety and health standard. DOSH will grant the order if the employer completes the mandatory application [see Lab. Code § 6451] and establishes all of the following [Lab. Code § 6450(a)]:

(1) The employer is unable to comply with the standard because of unavailability of personnel or materials and equipment needed to comply, or because complying facilities cannot be completed in time.

(2) The employer is taking all available steps to safeguard employees against the hazards covered by the standard.

(3) The employer has an effective program for complying with the standard as quickly as practicable.

[b] Permanent Variance

An employer may apply to the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board for a permanent variance from an occupational safety and health standard or order by showing that an alternate program, method, practice, means, device, or process will provide equal or superior safety for employees as the standard or order [Lab. Code § 143(a)]. If the board determines that the variance proposed by the employer will provide conditions as safe and healthful as the standard or order, it will issue the variance. The variance will specify the conditions the employer must maintain, and the practices, means, methods, operations, and processes that he or she must adopt and utilize, to the extent that they differ from the standard or order in question [Lab. Code § 143(b)].

[3] Duty to Furnish Safety Devices and Procedures

Employers must furnish and use safety devices and safeguards. They must also adopt and employ practices, means, methods, operations, and processes that are reasonably adequate to render the employment and place of employment safe and healthful. In addition, employers must do everything else reasonably necessary to protect the life, safety, and health of employees [Lab. Code § 6401; see Lab. Code § 6403]. It is unlawful for anyone to remove, displace, damage, destroy, or interfere with the use of safety devices, safeguards, safety notices, or warnings [see Lab. Code § 6406]. The terms "safety device" and "safeguard" are given broad interpretations in order to include any practicable method of mitigating or preventing a specific danger [Lab. Code § 6306(b)]. The employer's duty to furnish safety devices requires the employer to pay for any necessary safety equipment [Bendix Forest Products Corp. v. Division of Occupational Saf. & Health (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 465, 473, 158 Cal. Rptr. 882, 600 P.2d 1339] .

Safety and health regulations that cover all employees have been promulgated relating to the design and use of specific personal safety devices and safeguards, including body, head, eye, face, hand, and foot protection, jewelry,safety belts, life rings, electric shock protection, medical services, and cleaning of protectors [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 3380-3400]. When safety devices or safeguards are used, they must be of an acceptable type and design, and must comply with standards approved by a recognized authority [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3380(a)].

[4] Duty to Monitor for Hazardous Conditions

Whenever it is reasonable to expect that employees may be exposed to concentrations of airborne contaminants above certain prescribed levels, an employer must monitor the work environment so that exposure to employees can be measured or calculated [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(1); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c) (exposure limits)]. If exposures to contaminants are found or are expected to exceed allowable levels, the employer must take measures to control the harmful exposures [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5141 (types of controls)].

In addition, employers must monitor existing conditions and take action to safeguard employees or prevent them from being exposed to confined space, asbestos, vinyl chloride, and other hazards [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5156-5158, 5208(g), 5210(d)].

[5] Duty to Comply With Safety Orders

As part of the duty to provide employees with a safe working environment [see Lab. Code § 6400], employers must comply with safety orders regarding the design, construction, installation, and maintenance of guardrails, elevated walkways, wall and floor openings, service pits, handrails, exits, exit signs, ramps, stairways, and doors [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 3209-3235].

[6] Duty to Provide Safety Information to Employees

Employers must provide safety information to employees by doing all of the following [Lab. Code § 6408]:

(1) Posting information regarding protections and obligations of employees under occupational safety and health laws, including the Cal/OSHA Notice of Employee Protections and Obligations entitled "Safety and Health Protection on the Job" [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340].

(2) Prominently posting citations at or near each place a violation referred to in the citation occurred [see Lab. Code §§ 6317, 6318].

(3) Providing an opportunity for employees or their representatives to observe monitoring or measuring of employee exposure to hazards [see Lab. Code § 142.3].

(4) Allowing access by employees or their representatives to records of employee exposures to potentially toxic materials or harmful physical agents [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204].

(5) Notifying an employee who has been or is being exposed to toxic materials or harmful physical agents, and informing the employee of any corrective action being taken.

(6) Posting telephone numbers to be called in an emergency [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1512(e)].

§ 1C.82 Duty to Implement Injury and Illness Prevention Program

[1] In General

Every employer must establish, implement, and maintain an effective injury and illness prevention program. For most employers, the entire program must be in writing, must contain specified elements [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a) (general regulations); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1509, 6507, 6760, 8350, 8406 (specific industry regulations)], and must identify a person or group responsible for implementing the program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(1)]. Certain employers of fewer than 20 employees have a modified recordkeeping requirement [see Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(2)]. The employer has a duty to conduct its own inspections of the premises [see Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(2)], and must correct unsafe and unhealthy conditions and work practices in a timely manner [Lab. Code § 6401.7(b)].

For a sample written injury and illness prevention program, see Section 1C.221. For a complete discussion of injury and illness prevention programs, see K. Wilcox, California Employment Law, Chapter 21, Occupational Safety and Health Regulation (Matthew Bender).

[2] Duty to Train Employees

The employer must give program training to all existing employees, all new employees, and all employees given new job assignments. Employees must also be trained when changes to the work environment present new hazards and when new or previously unrecognized hazards arise [Lab. Code § 6401.7(c)]. The training program must be designed to instruct employees in general safe and healthy work practices, and to provide specific instructions about hazards specific to each employee's job assignment [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(4)].

Licensed contractors may use approved occupational safety and health training programs to fulfill a portion of their employee training requirement [see Lab. Code § 6401.7(c)].

[3] Communication and Records

The employer must have a system for communicating about occupational safety and health matters with all affected employees in a form they can readily understand [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3)], and a system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices, which may include disciplinary action [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(6)]. In addition, the employer must keep records regarding the program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(d)], including records of inspections to identify unsafe conditions and work practices, and documentation of safety and health training [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)].

Licensed contractors may use records relating to approved occupational safety and health training programs to fulfill a portion of their recordkeeping requirements [see Lab. Code § 6401.7(d)].

[4] Exceptions for Small Businesses

The implementing regulations exempt employers of fewer than 10 employees from some documentation requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3), (b)(1), (2)].

§ 1C.83 Duty to Implement Emergency Plans

[1] Emergency Action Plan

Every employer must provide an emergency action plan. The plan must cover the actions the employer and employees must take to ensure employee safety in a fire or other emergency, and, for most employers, must be in writing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(e)(3) (employer with 10 or fewer employees may use oral plan)]. The plan must include, at a minimum, all of the following elements [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(b)]:

(1) Emergency escape procedures and emergency escape route assignments.

(2) Procedures for employees who remain behind to operate critical plant operations before they evacuate.

(3) Procedures to account for all employees after the evacuation is completed.

(4) Rescue and medical duties for employees who will perform those duties.

(5) The preferred means of reporting fires and other emergencies.

(6) Who an employee can contact for more information or explanation of duties under the plan.

The employer must keep the written plan at the workplace, and must make it available for employees to read [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(e)(3)].

The employer must establish in the program the types of evacuation to be used in emergency situations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(d)], and must establish a complying employee alarm system [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(c); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6184]. Before the program is implemented, the employer must provide appropriate program training to all employees [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3220(e)].

[2] Fire Prevention Plan

Every employer must provide a fire prevention plan. Except for employers with 10 or fewer employees, the plan must be in writing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(d)(2) (employer with 10 or fewer employees may use oral plan)]. The plan must include, at a minimum, all of the following elements [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(b)]:

> (1) Potential fire hazards and their proper handling and storage procedures, potential ignition sources and their control procedures, and the type of fire protection equipment or systems that can control a fire involving fire hazards or ignition sources.
> (2) Names or regular job titles of those responsible for maintaining equipment and systems installed to prevent or control ignitions or fires.
> (3) Names or regular job titles of those responsible for controlling the accumulation of flammable or combustible waste materials.

The employer must keep the written plan at the workplace, and must make it available for employees to read [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(d)(2)].

The employer must control the accumulation offlammable and combustible waste materials and residues so that they do not contribute to a fire emergency [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(c)], and must maintain equipment and systems installed in the workplace to prevent the accidental ignition of combustible materials [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(e)]. Employees must be informed of fire hazards to which they are exposed, and must receive appropriate training in the program [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3221(d)].

§ 1C.84 Duty to File Report of Injury or Illness

[1] California Law

An employer must file a complete report with the Division of Labor Statistics and Research (DLSR) or with the employer's insurer of every occupational injury or illness [see Lab. Code § 6409] to an employee that results in lost time beyond the date of the injury or illness, or that requires medical attention beyond first aid. This reporting requirement applies to each injury and illness that has, or is alleged to have, arisen out of and in the course of employment. The report must be filed within five days after the employer learns of the injury or illness. If the employee subsequently dies as a result of the reported injury or illness, the employer must file an amended report [Lab. Code § 6409.1(a)]. These reports must be filed in a manner and on a form prescribed by regulation [Lab. Code § 6410; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14000-14005].

NOTE:

The report requirement imposed by Labor Code Section 6409.1(a) has been amended with a delayed effective date to require the insured employer to file the report with the insurer (on a Division of Workers' Compensation form prescribed for that purpose) within five days after the employer obtains knowledge of the injury or illness. A self-insured employer, the state, or the insurer of an insured employer also must file the report in an electronic form to be prescribed [Lab. Code § 6409.1(a) as amended by Stats. 2008, ch. 740, § 1]. These changes are effective on the effective date of implementing regulations to be adopted by the Department of Workers' Compensation, provided those regulations specify a transition period of no less than 180 days and no more than 545 days in which the employer or insurer may continue to comply with Section 6409.1 in its pre-amendment form [Stats. 2008, ch. 740, § 3].

In any case involving a serious injury or illness [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(h) ("serious injury or illness" defined)] or death, the employer must immediately report to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health by telephone or telegraph in addition to filing a report [Lab. Code § 6409.1(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342].

[2] Federal Law

Even though Cal/OSHA is responsible for enforcingfederal OSHA standards in California [see § 1C.80 [1]], employers must still maintain any records and file any reports with the Secretary of Labor that are required by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act [Lab. Code § 6410; see 29 U.S.C. § 657; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1904.1-1904.22].

§ 1C.85 Duty to Maintain Log and Summary of Injuries and Illnesses

With the exemptions listed in [2], below, every private employer must maintain a log on a prescribed form of all recordable occupational injuries and illnesses for each establishment, and enter each recordable occupational injury and illness on the log as soon as practicable within seven days after learning that the injury or illness has occurred[8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(3); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.4-14300.11 (recording criteria)]. In addition, employers must complete an incident report for each injury or illness reported in the log, and an annual summary of all injuries and illnesses [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(2)]. A separate log must be maintained for each establishment of a business [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.30]. For recordkeeping purposes, the term "establishment" includes each "single physical location" where business is conducted or services or operations are performed, and each "distinctly separate activity" at a single physical location [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.6].

Logs, summaries, and supplementary records must be established on a calendar-year basis [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(a)], and must be maintained for five years after the end of the year to which they relate [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.33(a), 14300.44]. The summary must be posted in a customary posting place for employee notices [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(a)(4), (b)(5), (6); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.43 (transition rules)]. Logs and summaries must be available for examination and copying by employees, former employees, and employee representatives [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.35(a)(2), (b)]. The employer must also make the logs, summaries, and supplementary records available for inspection and copying by officials [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.40].

Employers may be required to complete an annual survey of occupational injuries and illnesses [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.41].

Employers engage in physically dispersed operations are subject to special recordkeeping requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.30].

[2] Exemptions

Employers of no more than 10 employees in a calendar year and employers classified in the retail, service, finance, insurance, or real estate industries listed in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2 are exempt from regular recordkeeping requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.1(a), 14300.2(a)]. These exemptions do not relieve the employers of their reporting obligations [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.1(a), 14300.2(a)].

Employers subject to the federal Mine Safety and Health Act [see 30 U.S.C. § 801 et seq.] are not required to comply with these recordkeeping requirements if compliance would duplicate requirements under the Act [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.47].

§ 1C.87 Duty to Obtain Permits

[1] Employment Involving Substantial Risk of Injury

For employments or places of employment that involve a substantial risk of injury, the employer must first obtain a permit from the Division of Occupational Safety and Health before any work can be done. Permits must be obtained for the following types of work [Lab. Code § 6500]:

(1) The construction of trenches or excavations at least five feet deep into which a person is required to descend.

(2) The construction of a building, structure, falsework, or scaffold more than three stories high, or the equivalent height.

(3) The demolition of a building, structure, falsework, or scaffold more than three stories high, or the equivalent height.

(4) The underground use of diesel engines for work in mines and tunnels.

The application must contain sufficient information for DOSH to evaluate the safety of the employment or place of employment, and must contain a provision stating that the employer knows the applicable occupational safety and health standards and orders and will comply with them [Lab. Code § 6501; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341-341.5 (permit regulations)].

[2] Asbestos-Related Work

An employer engaged in asbestos-related work [see Lab. Code § 6501.8(a) ("asbestos-related work" defined)] that involves 100 square feet or more of surface area of asbestos-containing material must register with DOSH. The employer must meet certain criteria and must provide DOSH with requested information about the asbestos-related work. DOSH will approve the permit if it is satisfied the employer will provide a safe and healthful place of employment. In addition to obtaining the permit, the employer must post warning signs at the work location [Lab. Code § 6501.5(c)]. For further discussion of the regulation of asbestos-related work, see Section 1C.71.

[3] Posting of Permit

An employer issued a permit for work involving a substantial risk of injury must post copies of the permit [Lab. Code § 6504].

§ 1C.88 Duty to Notify of Concealed Dangers

A corporation or manager who knows of a seriousconcealed danger subject to regulation by certain government agencies must, within 15 days after learning of the danger (or immediately if there is imminent risk of great bodily harm or death), do both of the following [Penal Code § 387(a)]:

(1) Inform the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) of the condition.

(2) Warn its affected employees of the condition.

The term "serious concealed danger" means a product or business practice that, in normal or foreseeable use, creates a substantial probability of death, great bodily harm, or serious exposure to an individual, where the danger is not readily apparent to the individual likely to be exposed to the danger [Penal Code § 387(b)(4)].

Notice to DOSH and the employees must be in writing unless the corporation or manager has actual knowledge that DOSH and the employees have been notified. Disclosure need not be made if the hazard is corrected within the time prescribed for reporting [Penal Code § 387(a)(2)(A), (B)]. A corporation or manager failing to comply with this provision is subject to fine and imprisonment [Penal Code § 387(a)].

§ 1C.89 Duty to Provide Access to Employees With Disabilities

[1] Under Fair Employment and Housing Act

Under the Fair Employment and Housing Act [see Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996], it is an unlawful employment practice to discriminate against a person because of the person's physical disability [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. To avoid a charge of discrimination, an employer must make reasonable accommodation to the physical disability of a disabled person if the employer knows of the disability, by methods such as making facilities readily accessible to and usable by disabled persons, and making structural alterations to buildings and grounds [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9(a)(1), (3)]. It is not unlawful employment discrimination,however, for an employer to refuse to make an accommodation for an employee with a physical disability that would cause the employer undue hardship [Gov. Code § 12994; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9(b)].

[2] Under Americans With Disabilities Act

In addition to prohibiting employer discrimination against an individual with a disability [see 42 U.S.C. § 12113], the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101-12213] requires that commercial facilities constructed for first occupancy after January 1, 1993, and existing facilities altered after January 26, 1992, be readily accessible to individuals with disabilities [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12182(a), 12183(a)]. "Commercial facilities" are facilities that are intended for nonresidential use and whose operation will affect commerce [42 U.S.C. § 12181(2); see 42 U.S.C. § 12181(1) ("commerce" defined)]. The implementing regulations [see 28 C.F.R. §§ 36.101-36.608] require commercial facilities to be designed, constructed, and altered in compliance with federal accessibility standards [28 C.F.R. § 36.101]. Specific accessibility guidelines are set forth in the ADA Accessibility Guidelines for Buildings and Facilities [see 28 C.F.R. pt. 36, app. A].

The Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1801-1872] regulates the hiring and treatment of certain types of agricultural workers. Farm labor contractors must register with the Secretary of Labor [29 U.S.C. § 1811(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 1802 (definitions)], and may not knowingly recruit, hire, or employ unlawful aliens [see 29 U.S.C. § 1816].

Farm labor contractors, agricultural employers, andagricultural associations must provide employment information to workers, and must keep records regarding their workers [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1821, 1831]. In addition, contractors, employers, and associations must pay their employees' wages when due, must not require workers to purchase goods or services solely from the contractor, employer, or association, and must not violate the terms of any working arrangement [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1822, 1832].

It is unlawful to discriminate against an agricultural worker for filing a complaint or instituting a proceeding relating to migrant or seasonal workers [29 U.S.C. § 1855(a)].

c. Production or office staff.

d. Sales staff.

e. Support staff.

6. Minimum qualifications for each position, including objective criteria, such as:

a. Professionals are properly licensed (for example, lawyers have successfully passed state bar exam).

b. Employees in safety-sensitive industries have passed physical examinations and drug tests (for example, railroad employees have passed federal pre-employment drug test).

7. Age of any minors to be employed.

[2] Documents

NOTE:
The following documents are those typically used in the process of hiring employees. Depending on the individual employee, certain documents may not be required.

1. Advertisement for jobs.

2. Employment application form.

3. Employee's resume or other supporting documentation.

4. Document proving prospective employee is not unauthorized alien [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(b)(1)].

NOTE:
For a list of these documents, see Section 1C.110, Paragraph 4.

5. If employee is minor:

a. Age certificate; or

b. Permit to employ.

6. Results of pre-employment test, such as:

a. Job skill test.

b. Physical examination.

c. Drug test.

7. Employment agreement, if desired [see vol. 15, Ch. 85, Employment Agreements].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.110

§ 1C.110 Determinations Relating to Hiring and Use of Employees

1. Determine whether client wishes to operate business using employees or independent contractors by considering all of following:

NOTE:
A variety of considerations must be taken into account in determining whether to use independent contractors or employees. For discussion of these considerations, see Volume 15, Chapter 84, Independent Contractors. If the business owner chooses to use only independent contractors, most of the regulations on employers in this chapter will not apply.

a. Determine whether work to be performed requires extensive supervision.

b. Determine degree of control employer wishes to maintain over workers.

c. Determine whether type of business is better suited to use of employees or to use of independent contractors.

NOTE:
For a list of types of services that are commonly performed by independent contractors, see Volume 15, Chapter 84, Independent Contractors.

d. Determine relative cost of use of employees and independent contractors.

2. Determine number, type, and qualifications of employees client wishes to use.

3. Determine whether employees sought will be members of labor union or other organized labor group:

NOTE:

Businesses employing organized employees are subject to the Labor Management Relations Act [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 141-187] if the business affects interstate commerce. Virtually all business activity "affects interstate commerce" [see NLRB v. Reliance Fuel Oil Corp. (1963) 371 U.S. 224, 226-227, 83 S. Ct. 312, 9 L. Ed. 2d 279] . Employers of organized agricultural labor have collective bargaining obligations under the California Agricultural Labor Relations Act [see Lab. Code §§ 1140-1166.3; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 20100-21200].

a. Are employees in employer's locale and type of business generally unionized?

b. Can employer obtain sufficiently skilled non-union labor at reduced cost?

c. Is use of union labor desirable or required?

d. Is employer willing to bargain and deal fairly with union labor?

4. Determine whether prospective employee can prove he or she is not unauthorized alien by producing any of following [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(1), (b)(1)]:

NOTE:

It is unlawful to hire an alien for employment in the United States knowing the alien is an unauthorized alien, or without requiring proof of eligiblity for employment [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(1), (b)]. It is also unlawful to continue to employ an alien knowing he or she is not authorized to be employed [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(2)].

a. United States passport.

b. Certificate of United States citizenship.

c. Certificate of naturalization.

d. Unexpired foreign passport, if it has unexpired endorsement of Attorney General authorizing employment.

e. Resident alien card or other alien registration card if card sets forth:

(1) Photograph or other identifying information.

(2) Evidence of authorization of employment in United States.

f. One document specified in (1), below, and one document specified in (2), below:

(1) Social security account number card, certificate of birth in United States, certificate of birth showing United States citizenship, or other document showing employment authorization; and

(2) Driver's license or other state identification card containing photograph, or, for persons under 16 years of age, other documentation of personal identity.

5. If minors are to be employed, advise client to:

a. Determine that each minor is of legal age to perform particular job.

b. Determine that each minor has age certificate or permit to employ.

NOTE:
California and federal law require an employer to obtain an age certificate or permit to employ for minors under 18 years of age in certain jobs. For further discussion, see §§ 1C.60[2], 1C.61[5].

6. Determine whether client requires or wishes written employment contract.

NOTE:
The statute of frauds requires that certain contracts must be in writing to be valid [see Civ. Code § 1624*]. For discussion of the statute of frauds and the desirability and use of written employment agreements, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

B. Preliminary Determinations

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.111

§ 1C.111 Determinations Relating to Required Registration and Permits

1. Determine whether business must obtain federal employer identification number because it does both of the following [Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1(a)(1)(ii)]:

NOTE:
To apply for an identification number, complete IRS Form SS-4 and attach any required supplementary statement. The form is available from any IRS office or Social Security Administration office [Treas. Reg. §§ 31.6011(b)-1(a)(1)(iii), 301.6109-1(d)(2)].

a. Employs one or more individuals.

b. Pays wages that are subject to:
(1) Federal Insurance Contributions Act (Social Security and Medicare); or

(2) Income tax withholding [see I.R.C. § 3402].

2. Determine whether business must register with California Employment Development Department (EDD) because it has done both of following for any portion of day within current or past calendar year [Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 675, 1086(a)]:

NOTE:
To apply for an identification number, complete EDD Form DE-1. The form is available from EDD employment tax district offices.

a. Employed one or more employees.

b. Paid wages for employment in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter.

3. Determine whether business will employ minors, requiring it to:

NOTE:
For discussion of the employment of minors and when child work permits must be obtained, see California Employment Law, Ch. 6, Child Labor Laws (Matthew Bender).

a. Obtain permit to employ from appropriate county, school-district, or charter-school official, or from principal or other designated administrator of school attended by minor [see Educ. Code § 49110; see also § 1C.60[2]].

b. Register with Department of Education [see Educ. Code §§ 49160, 49162, 49163].

c. Keep on file one of following [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 570.5(b), 570.9(a)]:

(1) Federal certificate of age, issued by person authorized by Administrator of Wage and Hour Division of Department of Labor.

(2) State certificate, issued by, or under supervision of, state agency.

NOTE:
To protect itself from an unwitting violation of oppressive child labor laws, a business employing minors must have on file an unexpired proof of age [29 C.F.R. § 570.5(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 203(l) ("oppressive child labor" defined)].

NOTE:
For discussion of employee safety and health, see §§ 1C.80 through 1C.90. For discussion of an employer's responsibilities regarding hazardous substances, see §§ 1C.70 through 1C.75. For discussion of an employer's duty to provide reasonable access to employees with disabilities, see § 1C.89.

1. Determine whether hazardous substances exist on premises that pose health risk to employees:

   a. Hazardous waste.

   b. Asbestos.

   c. Pesticides.

   d. Other hazardous substances.

2. Determine whether unsafe condition exists on premises that could harm employees:

   a. Machinery without proper guards, switches, and other emergency equipment.

   b. Stairways, catwalks, and other accessways without railings or other safety features.

   c. Inadequate, improperly marked, or blocked emergency exits.

   d. Cluttered aisles and doorways.

3. Determine whether condition exists limiting access of employees with disabilities:

a. Stairways, aisles, doors, facilities, and rooms that inhibit access of wheelchair user.

b. Stairway, walkway, and other obstructions that inhibit access of vision-impaired employees.

4. Determine whether heating and air conditioning system has condition that will affect employees sensitive to airborne contaminants.

5. Determine whether all applicable safety orders and other safety and health regulations have been complied with.

6. Determine whether all required safety and health notices, warnings, and citations have been posted.

C. Procedural Guide

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.120

§ 1C.120 Procedural Guide to Hiring Employees

1. Confirm with client type and number of positions to be filled.

2. Establish time and place of interviews.

3. Advertise positions available:

a. For non-specialized employment, in:
(1) Local newspaper of wide circulation.

(2) Job offices of local high schools and colleges.

(3) Employment agency.

(4) Employment Development Department office.

b. For specialized employment, in:

(1) Industry publications.

(2) Applicable college departments.

c. Do not advertise employment in manner that indicates preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on following categories [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b)]:

(1) Race.

(2) Color.

(3) Religion.

(4) Sex.

(5) National origin.

(6) Age.

NOTE:
An advertisement may include a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on religion, sex, or national origin if the category is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b)]. However, BFOQ determinations are intended to have a limited scope and application, and are to be narrowly construed [see, e.g., 29 C.F.R. §§ 1606.4 (national origin discrimination), 1625.6 (age discrimination)].

d. Do not advertise in manner that expresses, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination based on following categories [Gov. Code § 12940(d)]:

(1) Race.

(2) Religious creed.

(3) Color.

(4) National origin.

(5) Ancestry.

(6) Physical disability.

(7) Mental disability.

(8) Medical condition.

(9) Marital status.

(10) Sex.

(11) Age.

NOTE:
Nothing in California's FEHA bars an employer or employment agency from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

(12) Sexual orientation.

4. Advise client to limit pre-employment inquiries to relevant areas:

a. Citizenship or authorized alien status [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a].

NOTE:

The employer must attest on a verification form that it has verified that the individual is not an unauthorized alien by examining the required document [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(b)(1)(B)-(D)*]. Verification is satisfied if a document reasonably appears on its face to be genuine [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(b)(1)(A)]. The employer must retain the verification form for a specified period and make it available to federal officials on request [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(b)(3)*].

b. Age, within certain limits.

NOTE:

It is unlawful for an employer to discriminate on the basis of age for individuals who are over 40 years of age [29 U.S.C. §§ 623(a), 631(a)]. However, requests for age or date of birth do not violate the ADEA if made for a proper purpose. Employers who request age or date of birth should provide a notice on applications stating that the ADEA prohibits age discrimination [see 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5*].

Nothing in California's FEHA bars an employer or employment agency from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

c. Education.

NOTE:

An employer may inquire about education as long as it bears a demonstrable relationship to successful job performance [Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] .

d. Job experience.

NOTE:

Employers may inquire about past job experience if it is indicative of important aspects of performance on the job for which applicants are to be evaluated. Employers who consider past work experience must also consider unpaid or volunteer work experience [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(d)*].

e. Height, weight, and physical ability.

NOTE:

An employer may impose height, weight, and strength standards if they are necessary for the requirements of the job [see Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1375 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928, 100 S. Ct. 1865, 64 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1980)] . However, standards that have a discriminatory impact are invalid unless the employer can show a "business necessity" for the standards [see Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1376* , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928, 100 S. Ct. 1865, 64 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1980)] .

f. Veteran status.

NOTE:

Title VII expressly authorizes special rights and preferences for veterans [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-11].

Nothing in California's FEHA bar against discrimination on account of sex affects an employer's right to use veteran status as a factor in employee selection or to give special consideration to Vietnam era veterans [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(4)].

g. Investigative report.

NOTE:

An employer may use an investigative consumer report for employment purposes. If the report is sought for employment purposes other than suspicion of wrongdoing by the subject of the investigation, the person procuring or causing the report to be made must (1) have a permissible purpose [see Civ. Code § 1786.12]; and (2) provide a clear and conspicuous disclosure in writing to the consumer before the report is procured or caused to be made, in a document consisting solely of the disclosure, as required by statute. In addition, the consumer must give written authorization for the procurement of the report [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2), (c)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.21[8].

h. Credit report.

NOTE:

An employer may obtain a consumer credit report from a consumer credit reporting agency if it intends to use the information for employment purposes [Civ. Code § 1785.11(a)(3)(B); see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681-1681t (Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1970)]. Before requesting a report, the employer must give written notice to the applicant of the report, and provide a means for the applicant to receive a copy of the report [Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a)].

i. Fingerprints and photographs.

NOTE:

An employer may take fingerprints and photographs of applicants and employees for the employer's own use [10 Ops. Atty. Gen. 19, 21 (1947)]. An employer who requires fingerprints or photographs as a condition of employment may not give them to any other person when they could be used to the applicant's or employee's detriment [Lab. Code § 1051]. Fingerprints are required of persons employed in a number of regulated professions [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7525.1 (private investigators), 7546 (security guards)].

Special rules regarding fingerprints apply to employees of banks and savings and loan associations and persons involved in the trading of securities [see 15 U.S.C. § 78q(f)(2)].

j. Subjective criteria, such as [Frausto v. Legal Aid Soc. of San Diego, Inc. (9th Cir. 1977) 563 F.2d 1324, 1325-1326] :

NOTE:

While the use of subjective criteria in making employment decisions is not per se illegal, to the extent the criteria reflect subconscious stereotypes and prejudices, they may be unlawful as disparate impact discrimination [Watson v. Fort Worth Bank and Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990-991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827] .

(1) Stable employment history.

(2) Professional reputation.

(3) Ability to get along with others.

(4) General demeanor.

5. Advise client to consider other relevant factors:

a. Fluency in English.

NOTE:
Denying employment because of a foreign accent or inability to communicate well in English may constitute national origin discrimination [see 29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(b)(1)].

b. Personal appearance and dress.

NOTE:
A private employer may require male and female employees to adhere to different standards of dress and appearance without violating Title VII [Baker v. California Land Title Company (9th Cir. 1974) 507 F.2d 895, 898 , cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1046, 95 S. Ct. 2664, 45 L. Ed. 2d 699 (1975) ; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)].

6. Notify client of restrictions and prohibitions governing inquiries into following topics:

NOTE:
It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate against an individual because of his or her race, color, religion, sex, or national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)]. Inquiries based on these categories are unlawful unless they come within one of the limited exceptions discussed below.

The Fair Housing and Employment Act prohibits any non-job related inquiry that expresses any limitation, specification, or discrimination concerning race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [see Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d)].

For a detailed discussion of federal and state law relating to employment discrimination, see California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws (Matthew Bender).

a. Race, color, or national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; see also Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d)].

NOTE:
Title VII and the Fair Housing and Employment Act prohibit employment discrimination based on national origin, race, and color [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. "National origin" refers to the country where a person was born, or the country from which his or her ancestors came [Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 88, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287] . While "race" has not been defined under Title VII, in the context of 42 U.S.C. § 1981, the Supreme Court determined that "race" means identifiable classes of persons who are subjected to intentional discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics [Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582] .

b. Sex.

NOTE:

A pre-employment inquiry that expresses any limitation, specification, or discrimination based on sex is unlawful unless based on a bona fide occupational qualification. However, an employer may inquire as to the sex of the applicant in good faith for a nondiscriminatory purpose [29 C.F.R. § 1604.7; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2].

Under California's FEHA, a pre-employment inquiry that directly or indirectly expresses any limitation, specification, or discrimination on the basis of sex is unlawful unless based on a bona fide occupational qualification or on applicable federal or state security regulations [Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d)]. However, nothing in the bar against discrimination on account of sex affects an employer's right to use veteran status as a factor in employee selection or to give special consideration to Vietnam era veterans [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(4)].

c. Religion.

NOTE:

An employer may not inquire into a job applicant's religious practices unless the employer can show the inquiry has no exclusionary effect, and the inquiry is justified by business necessity [29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b)(2); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; see also Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d)].

d. Information concerning arrests.

NOTE:

In general, an employer may not ask an applicant to disclose information concerning an arrest or detention that did not result in conviction, or information concerning participation in a diversion program [Lab. Code § 432.7(a)]. However, this information may be sought from persons seeking employment, or already employed, as peace officers [Lab. Code § 432.7(e)], or from applicants for employment at a health facility in a position involving access to patients, drugs, or medication [Lab. Code § 432.7(f)].

e. Marital or family status.

NOTE:

Generally, selection of applicants based on marital status or pregnancy or related medical conditions is unlawful sex discrimination [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k)]. Employers may not ask applicants to disclose marital status, but may ask for any former names used to check past work records [see Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(a), (b)].

f. Pregnancy.

NOTE:

An employer may not ask questions regarding pregnancy, birth control, or family responsibilities unless they relate to specific and relevant working conditions of a particular job [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(3)].

g. Physical or mental disability or medical condition.

NOTE:

An employer may not ask a job applicant if he or she is an individual with a physical or mental disability or medical condition, or inquire about the nature or severity of the disability. However, an employer may make pre-employment inquiries into the ability or condition of an applicant to perform job-related functions [42 U.S.C. § 12112(c)(2); see Gov. Code § 12940(d), (e); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3)]. For restrictions applicable to examinations and tests, see P 7, below.

h. Perceived sexual orientation.

NOTE:

The FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination and harassment based on sexual orientation, which is defined to include heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality [Gov. Code §§ 12926(q), 12940(a), (j)]. Under California law, the FEHA occupies the field of employment discrimination and preempts local ordinances prohibiting sexual orientation discrimination in employment [Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 596-598, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 ; see Gov. Code § 12993(c)].

i. Age.

NOTE:

The FEHA expressly bars discrimination based on age [Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d)]. However, an employer or employment agency is not barred from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

7. Advise client to conduct following examinations and tests, if desired:

a. Ability test to determine applicant's qualification for duties of job.

NOTE:

It is not an unlawful employment practice to give and act on the results of a professionally developed ability test, provided that the test, its administration, or the action on its results is not designed, intended, or used to improperly discriminate [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h)]. However, an employer may not use an employment test that screens out individuals or classes with disabilities unless the test is shown to be job-related for the position in question and is consistent with business necessity [42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6)].

Under Title VII, before an employer can discard test results to avoid a disparate impact on minority candidates--an act that would itself constitute intentional race-based discrimination against those who did well on the test--the employer must have a strong basis in evidence to believe it will be subject to disparate-impact liability if it fails to take the race-conscious, discriminatory action of discarding the test results [Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490, 507-511, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 4945 (adopting "strong-basis-in-evidence" standard to resolve conflict between disparate-treatment and disparate-impact provisions of Title VII); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (prohibition of disparate treatment); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k) (prohibition of disparate impact)].

b. Medical examination to determine applicant's physical ability to perform job.

NOTE:

An employer may require a medical examination after an offer of employment has been made to a job applicant, and may condition an offer of employment on the results of the examination, if (1) all entering employees are subject to the examination, regardless of disability, (2) information obtained is treated as a confidential medical record with limited exceptions, and (3) the results of the test are used only as specified in the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12112(c)(3)].

The FEHA allows employers to obtain information about a job applicant's physical condition if the inquiry relates directly to (1) the position the applicant is applying for, or (2) a determination of whether the applicant can safely perform the job [see Gov. Code § 12940(d),(e)*]. Specifically, an employer or employment agency may inquire into the applicant's ability to perform job-related functions and may respond to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2)]. Further, an employer or employment agency may require a medical or psychological examination or make a medical or psychological inquiry after making a job offer but before the commencement of employment duties, provided that (1) the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and (2) all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3)].

c. Drug test.

NOTE:

Under a balancing test announced by the California Supreme Court, pre-employment drug testing will be valid if a "competing interest" standard can be met. The result will depend on the public interest, the employer's special interests, and the applicants' reasonable expectations of privacy in a particular employment setting [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . A properly planned and administered drug testing program for applicants for jobs that relate to safety, security, or other sensitive issues is likely to be valid.

For specific jobs where safety is paramount, such as airline and railroad operations workers, pre-employment drug testing is mandated by federal law [see, e.g., 14 C.F.R. §§ 120.7(f), 120.35, 120.109(a), 120.101 et seq.* (airlines); 49 C.F.R. §§ 219.501-219.505 (railroads)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.21[4] and California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, and Ch. 50, Limitations of Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender).

d. Alcohol test.

NOTE:

The privacy issues surrounding alcohol tests are similar to those in drug tests [see P c, above; see also California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender)].

8. Notify client of prohibitions or limitations relating to following pre-employment tests:

a. AIDS test.

NOTE:

The results of an HIV test [see Health & Safety Code § 120775(c)] that identifies or provides identifying characteristics of the person to whom the test results apply may not be used in any instance for the determination of suitability for employment [Health & Safety Code § 120980(f); see Health & Safety Code § 121115 (fact of person's participation in AIDS research study may not be used to determine employability)]. The disclosure of HIV positive status may be entitled to privacy protection under Article I, Section 1, of the California Constitution [Urbaniak v. Newton (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1128, 1140, 277 Cal. Rptr. 354] .

b. Polygraph test.

NOTE:

An employer may not demand or require that a job applicant take a polygraph, lie detector, or similar test as a condition of employment [Lab. Code § 432.2(a); see 29 U.S.C. §§ 2001-2009].

9. Advise client to draft and execute employment agreement, if desired by client or employee, or required by employment relationship.

a. If employment agreement is any of following, advise client that it must be in writing:

NOTE:

The statute of frauds requires that certain contracts must be in writing to be valid [see Civ. Code § 1624]. For discussion of the statute of frauds and the desirability and use of written employment agreements, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

(1) Agreement that by its terms is not to be performed within a year from making [Civ. Code § 1624(a)].

(2) Agreement employing or authorizing agent, broker, or other person to purchase or sell real estate, lease real estate for longer than a year, or to procure, introduce, or find purchaser or seller of real estate or lessee or lessor of real estate where lease is for longer than a year [Civ. Code § 1624(d)].

NOTE:

For extensive coverage of listing agreements, see Ch. 21, Agreements With Brokers and Agents .

(3) Agreement between employee and employer with no permanent and fixed place of business for services to be rendered in California, and contemplated method of payment includes commissions [Lab.

Code § 2751].

(4) Agreement between employee and employer that requires employee to render unique or special services, and employer wishes to be able to obtain injunctive relief [Civ. Code § 3423(e)].

b. Advise client not to require applicant to agree to illegal term or condition in employment contract.

NOTE:

An employer may not require an employee to agree, in a written employment contract, to a term or condition the employer knows is against the law [Lab. Code § 432.5].

§ 1C.121 Procedural Guide Regarding Employee Insurance and Taxes

NOTE:
For a complete discussion of an employer's rights and obligations regarding unemployment insurance, workers' compensation, disability insurance, and income tax, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , and Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

1. Advise client to withhold, pay, and account for the following state taxes:

a. Income tax contributions withheld from employees' wages.

NOTE:
Every employer who pays wages to a resident employee within or outside California, or to a nonresident employee for services performed within California, must deduct and withhold income tax from those wages [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020(a); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17041 (rate of income tax)].

b. Disability insurance contribution withheld from employees' wages.

NOTE:
An employer must withhold worker disability contributions and transmit them to the Disability Fund [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 986].

c. Employer's unemployment tax contribution.

NOTE:
An employer must calculate and transmit its unemployment contribution to the Unemployment Fund; it may not meet its obligations by making deductions from employees' wages [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976, 986].

d. Employer's employment training tax contribution.

NOTE:
Employers must calculate and pay an employment training tax to the Employment Training Fund [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976.6, 1610].

2. Advise client to provide for workers' compensation by securing [see Lab. Code § 3700(a), (b)]:

a. Workers' compensation policy from authorized insurer; or

b. Certificate of consent to self-insure from Director of Industrial Relations.

3. Advise client to withhold, pay, and account for following federal taxes:

a. Income tax withheld from employees' wages.

NOTE:
An employer paying wages must deduct and withhold income taxes on those wages by specified methods [I.R.C. § 3402(a); see I.R.C. § 3402(b) (percentage method), (c) (wage-bracket method), (h) (alternative methods); see also Treas. Reg. §§ 1.6071, 1.6151, 1.6302 (procedure for collection and payment)].

b. Social Security and Medicare tax withheld from employees' wages.

c. Employer's separate Social Security and Medicare contribution.

NOTE:
An employer of a taxpayer must collect Social Security and Medicare tax by deducting it from the employee's wages when paid [I.R.C. § 3102(a); see I.R.C. § 3101 (rate of tax)]. An employer must also pay its own Social Security and Medicare contribution based on amount of wages paid to employees [see I.R.C. § 3111].

d. Any additional unemployment tax contribution necessary to meet federal amounts due to insufficient state unemployment tax withholding.

NOTE:
Although the Federal Unemployment Tax Act imposes an unemployment tax on every employer based on a percentage of wages paid [I.R.C. § 3301], taxpayers receive credit for their federal unemployment tax liability for contributions made to a certified state unemployment compensation fund that meets federal guidelines [I.R.C. § 3302(a)(1); see I.R.C. § 3304 (certification of state program)]. The California unemployment insurance scheme meets the federal guidelines [see City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 182, 189, 195, 203 Cal. Rptr. 258] . However, because the federal unemployment tax rate is higher than the maximum state unemployment tax rate [see I.R.C. § 3301(1); Unemp. Ins. Code § 977], employers must still make a federal tax contribution [see IRS Pub. 334, Tax Guide for Small Businesses].

An employer [see I.R.C. § 3306(a)] is liable for federal unemployment tax even if he or she is not subject to a state unemployment compensation law [Treas. Reg. § 31.3301-1].

§ 1C.122 Procedural Guide Regarding Wages and Hours

[1] Payment of Wages

1. Advise client to pay employees in following manner:

a. Pay nonexempt employees at least minimum hourly wage [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000(2); 29 U.S.C. § 206(a)].

NOTE:
Employers may pay certain employees, such as learners, a subminimum wage [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(4) (manufacturing industry); see also § 1C.52[1][a]].

b. Do not deduct value of meals and lodging without prior voluntary written agreement [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000(3)].

c. Do not deduct value of tips received by employee [Henning v. Industrial Welfare Com. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1262, 1278, 252 Cal. Rptr. 278, 762 P.2d 442] .

d. Do not deduct value of uniforms, tools, and equipment furnished [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(4), (9) (manufacturing industry)].

2. Advise client to pay all employees, regardless of sex, same rate for equal work on jobs requiring equal skill, effort, and responsibility, performed under similar working conditions [Lab. Code § 1197.5; 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1)].

3. Advise client to pay following overtime rates, when applicable [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(3)(A) (manufacturing industry); see 29 U.S.C. § 207(a)(1) (overtime pay for more than 40 hours worked in workweek)]:

NOTE:
Many types of employees are exempt from overtime pay requirements [see § 1C.54[1][d], [2][c]].

a. One and one-half times employee's regular rate for all hours worked in excess of 8 hours up to and including 12 hours in any workday, and for first 8 hours worked on seventh day of work.

b. Double employee's regular rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of 12 in any workday and for all hours worked in excess of 8 hours on seventh day in any workweek.

4. If client is employer under contract for public works project over $1,000, advise client to pay general prevailing wage [Lab. Code § 1771].

NOTE:
The director of the Department of Industrial Relations determines the general prevailing wage [see Lab. Code §§ 1770, 1773].

5. Advise client to pay regular wages weekly, biweekly, or semimonthly, on days designated in advance [Lab. Code § 204].

NOTE:
Salaries of executive, administrative, and professional employees of employers covered by the FLSA, and commission employees of vehicle dealers, may be paid once a month [Lab. Code §§ 204.1, 204.2; see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) (FLSA)].

6. Advise client to pay wages earned for labor in excess of the normal work period no later than next regular payday [Lab. Code § 204].

7. Advise client not to collect or receive any part of wages already paid [Lab. Code § 221].

8. Advise client not to pay wages in any of following ways [Lab. Code § 212]:

a. By order, check, draft, note, memorandum, or other acknowledgment of indebtedness, unless it is all of following:

(1) Negotiable.

(2) Payable in cash on demand.

(3) Without discount.

(4) Payable at established place of business in California.

b. By scrip, coupon, cards, or other redeemable thing, in merchandise, or purporting to be payable or redeemable other than in money.

9. For employees covered by FLSA, advise client to make payment for regular and overtime wages in one of following ways [29 C.F.R. § 531.27(a)]:

a. In cash.

b. By negotiable instruments, payable at par.

NOTE:
In some circumstances, wages may also be paid in the form of board, lodging, other facilities, and tips [see 29 C.F.R. § 531.27].

10. Advise client that on payday, or at least semimonthly, client must give employee accurate itemized wage statement showing information pertaining to that pay period [Lab. Code § 226(a)].

11. Advise client that, if required or empowered to do so, client may make following reductions from wages:

a. State or federal deductions [Lab. Code § 224].

b. Wage assignments [see Fam. Code §§ 5200-5295 (child and spousal support); Prob. Code § 3088 (support of conservatee); Lab. Code § 300 (other assignments)].

c. Wage garnishments [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154].

12. For discharged employee, advise client to pay wages immediately at place of discharge [Lab. Code § 201(a)].

NOTE:
For discussion of the situations in which an employer or employee may lawfully terminate employment, see § 1C.30. For discussion of a state employer's payment obligations, see § 1C.32[1].

13. For employee who quits, advise client to pay wages within 72 hours of quitting at office or agency of employer in county where employee worked [Lab. Code §§ 202(a), 208].

NOTE:
If an employee gives at least 72 hours' notice of the intention to quit, he or she is entitled to be paid at the time of quitting [Lab. Code § 202(a). For discussion of a state employer's payment obligations, see § 1C.32[1].].

14. For employee who quits or is discharged, advise client to pay for all unused vested vacation time at employee's final rate of pay [Lab. Code § 227.3].

[2] Regulation of Hours

1. For employees in following regulated occupations, advise client to limit work to 72 hours in seven-day period [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11030(3)(A)(2), 11080(3)(A)(2)]:

a. Canning, freezing, and preserving.

b. Certain industries handling products after harvest.

2. For employees in professional technical, clerical, mechanical, and similar occupations, advise client not to terminate for employee's refusal to work more than 72 hours in workweek [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11040(3)(L)].

3. Advise client to give nonexempt employees following break periods [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11030(11), (12)]:

a. Thirty-minute meal period if employed more than five hours.

NOTE:
This rule does not apply if a work period of not more than six hours will complete the day's work and the employer and the employee mutually consent to waive the meal period. Unless the employee is relieved of all duty during the 30-minute period, the meal will be deemed an "on duty" meal period and count as time worked. "On duty" meal periods are only permitted when the nature of the work prevents an employee from being relieved of all duty and the parties agree in writing to an on-the-job paid meal period. This agreement must provide that the employee may, in writing, revoke the agreement at any time [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11040(11)(A); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11040(11)(B) (penalty)].

b. Ten-minute rest period for each four hours worked.

4. Advise client not to require employees engaged in occupation of labor to work more than six days in seven [Lab. Code § 552].

5. Advise client to employ minors in accordance with following hours restrictions [Lab. Code § 1391(a); see Lab. Code § 1391(c) (penalties)]:

NOTE:
The hours restrictions do not apply to minors employed to deliver newspapers to consumers [see Lab. Code § 1391(d); see Educ. Code § 49116(d)]. The federal Fair Labor Standards Act also limits the employment of minors. For discussion, see Section 1C.61.

a. For minors 15 and under [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(1)]:

NOTE:
Notwithstanding the following restrictions, while school is in session no employer may employ a minor 14 or 15 years of age for more than 3 hours in any school day or more than 18 hours in any week, or during school hours, except that a minor enrolled in and employed pursuant to a school-supervised and school-administered work experience and career exploration program may be employed for no more than 23 hours, any portion of which may be during school hours [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(2); see Educ. Code § 49116(a)].

(1) No more than 8 hours in one day or 40 hours in one week.

(2) Not before 7:00 A.M. or after 7:00 P.M.

NOTE:
Minors 15 years of age and under may work until 9:00 P.M. between June 1 and Labor Day [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(1)].

b. For minors 16 and 17 [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(3)]:

NOTE:

Notwithstanding the following restrictions, while school is in session no employer may employ a minor 16 or 17 years of age for more than 4 hours in any school day except if the minor (1) is employed in personal attendant occupations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11150], school-approved work experience, or cooperative vocational education programs or (2) has been issued a work permit [Educ. Code § 49112(c)] and is employed in accordance with that permit [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(4); see Educ. Code § 49116(b)].

(1) No more than 8 hours in one day or 48 hours in one week.

(2) Not before 5:00 A.M. or after 10:00 P.M.

NOTE:

During an evening preceding a non-schoolday, minors 16 and 17 years of age may work until 12:30 A.M. of the non-schoolday [Lab. Code § 1391(a)(3)].

§ 1C.123 Procedural Guide to Employee Notices and Recordkeeping

[1] Posting Employee Notices

NOTE:
The attorney should advise the client to obtain and post all of the following notices and posters. If the client wishes, the attorney can obtain the notices from the appropriate state and federal agencies.

1. Post notice of time and place of payment of wages [Lab. Code § 207; see § 1C.230].

2. For employers subject to FLSA, post notice explaining provisions of FLSA [29 C.F.R. § 516.4].

3. For employers with employees exempt from overtime pay, add legible notation to FLSA notice stating that they are exempt [29 C.F.R. § 516.4].

4. Post notice containing pertinent provisions of Title VII [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-10(a)].

5. Post wage orders relevant to employer's occupation or industry [Lab. Code § 1183; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11150 (wage orders)].

6. Post Cal/OSHA notices relating to occupational safety and health [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 340, 3204(g)].

7. Post Department of Fair Employment and Housing poster on discrimination in employment that includes information about or regarding sexual harassment [see Gov. Code § 12950(a)].

8. For employers with 50 or more employees, post notice concerning employee's right to request family care and medical leave [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.8; see also § 1C.233].

9. If required to maintain workers' compensation insurance [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15350.1, 15565]:

a. Post notice stating name of workers' compensation insurance carrier; or

b. If employer is self-insured, post:
(1) Notice stating that employer is self-insured; and

(2) Certificate of Consent to Self-Insure.

10. Post notice containing telephone numbers of emergency services [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1512(e)].

11. Not less than 10 days before statewide election, post notice of employee's right to take time off to vote, if necessary [Elec. Code §§ 14350, 14351; see § 1C.231].

12. Notice listing employees' rights and responsibilities under whistleblower laws, including telephone number of whistleblower hotline, in lettering larger than size 14 pica type [Lab. Code § 1102.8(a); see Lab. Code § 1102.7; see also § 1C.33[1][b]].

13. For farm labor contractors, display rate of compensation paid to employees in both English and Spanish, in required typesize [Lab. Code § 1695(7)]:

a. At site where work is to be performed.

b. On all vehicles used to transport employees.

14. For talent agencies, post printed copy of Labor Code talent agent provisions in conspicuous place in office [see Lab. Code § 1700.28].

[2] Maintaining Employee Records

NOTE:
The recordkeeping rules presented here are those required by California law. Similar regulations apply to employers subject to the FLSA [see 29 U.S.C. § 211(c); 29 C.F.R. § 516.2].

For discussion of recordkeeping relating to workers' compensation, unemployment insurance, disability insurance, and income taxes, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , and Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

1. Advise client to retain following information for employees in California for at least three years [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(7); Lab. Code § 1174]:

a. Name, home address, occupation, and social security number.

b. Birthdate, if under 18, and designation as minor.

c. Payroll/time records showing following:

NOTE:
Payroll records must be kept for not less than two years at a central location in California or at the plants or establishments at which the employees are employed [Lab. Code § 1174].

(1) Hours worked daily by and wages paid to employees employed at respective plants or establishments.

(2) Number of piece-rate units earned by and any applicable piece rate paid to employees employed at respective plants or establishments.

(3) Time records showing beginning and ending work hours, meal periods, split shifts, and total daily hours worked.

d. Total wages paid each payroll period.

e. Total hours worked each payroll period and applicable rates of pay.

f. Incentive plan formula, if any.

2. Advise client to give employee accurate itemized statement showing gross wages, deductions, work period dates, and other information on semimonthly basis or at time of payment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(7); Lab. Code § 226].

NOTE:
Employers required to keep and disclose this information must afford current and former employees the right to inspect or copy the records pertaining to that employee on reasonable request to the employer [Lab. Code § 226(b); but see Lab. Code § 226(d), (h) (exceptions)]. Employers may take reasonable steps to ensure the identity of the employee and may charge the actual costs of reproduction to the employee [Lab. Code § 226(b)]. An employer must comply with an inspection or copy request as soon as practicable, but no later than 21 days from the date of the request [Lab. Code § 226(c)]. An employer's failure to comply with the inspection requirement is subject to penalty, injunctive relief, and damages if the failure is knowing and intentional [Lab. Code § 226(e), (f), (g)].

3. For employer of minor under 18 years of age, advise client to keep employment permit on file during minor's employment [Educ. Code § 49161].

4. Advise client to allow employees to inspect their personnel files on request, at reasonable intervals [see Lab. Code § 1198.5].

NOTE:
Special rules require disclosure on request of certain reports used by employers in evaluating applicants [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a) (credit report)]. Some confidential information is subject to special protection [see, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 120980 (results of HIV test)].

CHAPTER 1C REGULATION OF EMPLOYERS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
C. Procedural Guide

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.125

§ 1C.125 Procedural Guide to Miscellaneous Employment Duties

1. If employees are required to wear uniforms, advise client to provide and maintain uniforms [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(9)].

2. Advise client to provide and maintain any tools or equipment required or necessary for performance of job [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(9)].

NOTE:
An employer may require employees who earn wages at least two times the minimum wage to provide and maintain hand tools and equipment customarily required by the trade or craft [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010(9) (manufacturing industry)].

3. Advise client not to discharge or discriminate against employee for taking time off work to serve on jury, to appear in court as witness, or, if employee is domestic violence or sexual assault [see Lab. Code § 230(h)(2)] victim, to obtain any relief to help ensure health, safety, or welfare of employee or his or her children [Lab. Code § 230(a)-(c); see Fam. Code § 6211 (domestic violence); see also Lab. Code § 230(h)(2) (sexual assault)].

NOTE:
An employer may not discharge or discriminate against an employee for taking time off to serve as required by law on an inquest jury or trial jury, provided that the employee gives reasonable notice to the employer before taking the time off [Lab. Code § 230(a)]. Similarly, an employer may not discharge or discriminate or retaliate against an employee, including a crime victim, for taking time off to appear in court to comply with a subpoena or other court order as a witness in any judicial proceeding [Lab. Code § 230(b)]. Further, no employer may discharge or discriminate or retaliate against an employee who is a victim of domestic violence [see Fam. Code § 6211] or sexual assault [ see Lab. Code § 230(h)(2)] for taking time off to obtain or attempt to obtain any relief to help ensure the health, safety, or welfare of the employee or his or her children [Lab. Code § 230(c)].

In addition, an employer with 25 or more employees may not discharge, discriminate, or retaliate against an employee who is a victim of domestic violence or sexual assault from taking time off of work to seek medical attention for injuries caused by domestic violence or sexual assault, to obtain services or psychological counseling, or to participate in safety planning or otherwise increase safety, including temporary or permanent relocation [Lab. Code § 230.1(a)].

For these purposes, the employee must give the employer reasonable advance notice of the employee's intention to take time off unless that notice is not feasible [Lab. Code §§ 230(d)(1), 230.1(b)(1)]. However, the employer may not take any action against the employee based on an unscheduled absence if the employee provides certification to the employer within a reasonable time after the absence [Lab. Code §§ 230(d)(2), 230.1(b)(2)]. Employees may use vacation, personal leave, or compensatory time off for these purposes, and this entitlement may not be diminished by a collective bargaining agreement [Lab. Code §§ 230(g), 230.1(e)]. Remedies include reinstatement, reimbursement for lost wages and benefits, and a one-year filing period for filing a complaint with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement [Lab. Code §§ 230(e), (f), 230.1(c), (d); see Lab. Code §§ 230(e), 230.1(c) (willful refusal to restore employee is misdemeanor)].

4. If employee does not have sufficient time outside working hours to vote in statewide election, advise client to allow employee to take off enough working time to vote [Elec. Code § 14350].

5. Advise client not to discharge or discriminate against employee for taking time off work to perform emergency duty as volunteer firefighter, reserve peace officer, or emergency rescue personnel [Lab. Code § 230.3(a), (b); see Lab. Code § 230.3(d) (definitions); Gov. Code § 50952(p)(definition); Health & Safety Code § 1799.107(e) (definition)]. [Lab. Code § 230.3(a)].

NOTE:

This prohibition against discrimination does not apply to any public safety agency or emergency medical services provider if the employer determines that the employee's absence would hinder the availability of public safety or emergency medical services [Lab. Code § 230.3(c)].

6. If business has 25 or more employees, advise client to accommodate and assist any employee who reveals literacy problem, if this does not involve undue hardship to employer [Lab. Code § 1041].

7. If business is awarded certain state or federal agency contracts, advise client to certify to agency that employer will provide drug-free workplace [see Gov. Code § 8355; 41 U.S.C. §§ 701-707].

8. Advise client to comply with following sanitation requirements:

a. Keep business establishment clean [Lab. Code § 2350].

b. Maintain restroom for employees [Lab. Code § 2350].

c. Furnish free drinking water for employees [Lab. Code § 2441(a)].

NOTE:
Special sanitation requirements apply to theaters, foundries, metal shops, and factories [see Lab. Code §§ 2260-2355].

9. If business is factory, shop, or business in which power machinery is used for manufacturing purposes, advise client to maintain medical supplies on premises [Lab. Code § 2440].

10. Advise client to provide reasonable access for employees with disabilities [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9; 42 U.S.C. §§ 12182, 12183].

1. Advise client to investigate advantages of joining employer bargaining association, such as retail merchants' association.

2. Advise compliance with requirements of Labor Management Relations Act [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 141-187] or Agricultural Labor Relations Act [see Lab. Code §§ 1140-1166.3], including prohibition on all of following:

NOTE:

It is an unfair labor practice under both the federal Labor Management Relations Act and the California Agricultural Labor Relations Act for an employer to do any of the following acts regarding employees in labor organizations [see 29 U.S.C. § 158; Lab. Code § 1153]. For further discussion of dealings with union employees, see § 1C.62.

a. Interfering with employees in exercise of their right to organize.

b. Dominating or interfering with formation or administration of labor organization.

c. Discriminating regarding hiring, advancement, terms, or conditions of employment to encourage or discourage membership in labor organization.

d. Discharging or otherwise discriminating against employee because he or she filed charges or gave testimony related to labor organization.

e. Refusing to bargain collectively with employees' representatives.

3. Advise client not to pay, lend, or deliver money or other thing of value to labor organization, to its representatives or officers, or to employee for purposes of influence [see 29 U.S.C. § 186(a); Lab. Code § 1155.4].

D. Drafting Guide

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.140

§ 1C.140 Drafting Guide to Employee Manual

NOTE:

While the use of an employee manual is not mandated by state or federal law, an employee manual can be an important part of an employer's training, communication, and discipline system. By gathering important employee information into one publication and requiring each employee to read the manual, the employer has some assurance that employees will be aware of company policy, procedures, and safety and health rules contained in the manual. In addition, the inclusion of certain other recommended elements, such as a sexual harassment policy [see § 1C.220 (sample policy on sexual harassment)], in an employee manual will help to provide a more collegial and productive workplace. In the event of a charge or complaint, such as a sexual harassment complaint, an employer may be able to avoid liability by showing it took all reasonable steps to prevent harassment, including training employees and publishing the policy on sexual harassment in the employee manual [see § 1C.13 [3] (discussion of employer liability for sexual harassment in the workplace)].

Employee manuals are also a convenient location in which to compile mandatory safety and health information, such as an injury and illness prevention program [see § 1C.221 (sample injury and illness prevention program)]. By including such information in an employee manual, an employer is more assured that each employee has been exposed to the information.

The attorney should advise the employer to include the following elements, as appropriate, in a printed employee manual, distributed to all employees, and revised periodically as necessary.

1. General information about company, including:

a. Nature of company's business.

b. Company history.

c. Organization of company staff.

d. Chain of communication.

e. Procedure for obtaining services and information.

2. Company policies and practices:

a. Flexible work hours.

b. Overtime compensation.

c. "Comp time" (time off in lieu of overtime compensation).

d. Meal allowance.

e. Shift differential.

f. Tips.

NOTE:

There are legal implications for the employer's policy on tips. No employer or agent may collect, take, or receive any gratuity, or any part of any gratuity, that is paid or given to, or left for, an employee by a patron. Employers may not impose wage deductions based on received tips. Every gratuity is the sole property of the employee or employees to whom it was paid or given or for whom it was left. An employee's rights respecting tips extend to tips paid by credit cards [Lab. Code § 351]. These legal rules are intended not only to prevent fraud on the public but also to ensure that employees, exclusively, will receive the full benefit of gratuities that patrons intend for the sole benefit of the employees who serve them. In other words, the law protects employees from employers who would use their positions to unfairly command a share of the employees' tips. However, low-level supervisory employees, whether or not they could be the employer's agents in this context, are not necessarily precluded from sharing in tips. An employer can lawfully have a policy that those supervisory employees will share in tips, along with employees whom they supervise in serving patrons, as long as the employer makes that policy clearly known to patrons [Chau v. Starbucks Corp. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 688, 696-697, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 593 (employer's policy permitting shift supervisors to share in tip proceeds that coffee-bar patrons left in collective-tip box near cash register did not violate Lab. Code § 351 because it was clear to patrons that tips left in that box were for all employees providing service, meaning both baristas and shift supervisors; moreover, employer's policy precluded store managers and assistant managers from sharing in collective tips)].

PART IV. FORMS
A. Client Letters

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.200

§ 1C.200 Letter to Client Containing Pre-employment Checklist

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter to be sent to the client, containing a checklist of factors relating to employment law the employer should consider in hiring employees. These factors range from considerations in advertising job openings, to procedural protections to prevent unlawful discrimination or improper inquiry in hiring. The remainder of this comment presents background discussion of the legality of inquiry and investigation into a variety of areas.

[b] General Prohibition on Discrimination

Under federal law, it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate against an individual because of his or her race, color, religion, sex, or national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)]. In addition, the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [see Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.0-8504] makes it an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, mental condition, marital status, sex, age, sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)], or pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition [Gov. Code § 12945(a)]. Inquiries based on these categories are unlawful unless they come within one of the limited exceptions.

The FEHA also prohibits any non-job-related inquiry that expresses any limitation, specification, or discrimination concerning race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [see Gov. Code § 12940(d), (e); see also § 1C.10]. For a detailed discussion of federal and state law relating to employment discrimination, see California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws (Matthew Bender).

[c] Prohibition on Discrimination in Advertising

It is unlawful to indicate a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in advertising relating to employment. However, an employer may indicate a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on religion, sex, or national origin if the category is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b)]. BFOQ determinations are intended to have a limited scope and application, and are to be narrowly construed [see, e.g., 29 C.F.R. §§ 1606.4 (national origin discrimination), 1625.6 (age discrimination)].

[d] Race Discrimination

Title VII and the FEHA prohibit employment discrimination based on race or color [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. While "race" does not seem to have been defined under Title VII, in the context of the Civil Rights Act of 1866 [see 42 U.S.C. § 1981], the Supreme Court determined that "race" means identifiable classes of persons who are subjected to intentional discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics [Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582] .

[e] Religious Discrimination

An employer may not inquire into a job applicant's religious practices unless the employer can show the inquiry has no exclusionary effect, and the inquiry is justified by business necessity [29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b)(2); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; see also Gov. Code § 12940(a)].

[f] Sex Discrimination

A pre-employment inquiry that expresses any limitation, specification, or discrimination based on sex is unlawful unless based on a bona fide occupational qualification. However, an employer may inquire as to the sex of the applicant in good faith for a nondiscriminatory purpose [29 C.F.R. § 1604.7; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; see also Gov. Code § 12940(a)].

A private employer may require male and female employees to adhere to different standards of dress and appearance without violating Title VII [Baker v. California Land Title Company (9th Cir. 1974) 507 F.2d 895, 898 , cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1046, 95 S. Ct. 2664, 45 L. Ed. 2d 699 (1975) ; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)].

[g] National Origin Discrimination

Title VII and the FEHA prohibit employment discrimination based on national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. "National origin" refers to the country where a person was born, or the country from which his or her ancestors came [Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 88, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287] .

[h] Citizenship

An employer must attest on a prescribed form that it has verified that the a prospective employee is not an unauthorized alien by having examined certain acceptable documentation [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(b)(1); see also § 1C.110, P 4 (list of acceptable documents)].

[i] Family Status Discrimination

Generally, selection of applicants based on marital status or pregnancy or related medical conditions is unlawful sex discrimination [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k)]. Employers may not ask applicants to disclose marital status, but may ask for any former names used to check past work records [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(a), (b)].

An employer may not ask questions regarding pregnancy, birth control, or family responsibilities unless they relate to specific and relevant working conditions of a particular job [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(3)].

[j] Perceived Sexual Orientation Discrimination

The FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination and harassment based on sexual orientation, which is defined to include heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality [Gov. Code §§ 12926(q), 12940(a), (j)]. Under California law, the FEHA occupies the field of employment discrimination and preempts local ordinances prohibiting sexual orientation discrimination in employment [Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 596-598, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 ; see Gov. Code § 12993(c)]. However, the prohibition does not apply religious associations and corporations not organized for profit [Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12940(j)(4)(B)].

[k] Age Discrimination

It is unlawful for an employer to discriminate on the basis of age for individuals who are over 40 years of age [29 U.S.C. §§ 623(a), 631(a)]. However, requests for age or date of birth do not violate the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) if made for a proper purpose. Employers who request age or date of birth should provide a notice on applications stating that the ADEA prohibits age discrimination [see 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5]. For further discussion, see § 1C.11[2].

The FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination on the basis of age [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. However, nothing in the FEHA prohibits an employer from refusing to employ an individual because of his or her age if the law compels or provides for that refusal. Promotions within the existing staff, hiring or promotion on the basis of experience and training, rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer, or hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5)]. Further, an employer or employment agency is not barred from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

Under the Americans With Disabilities Act, an employer may not discriminate regarding employment against a qualified person with a disability because of the disability [see 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a)]. However, an employer may make pre-employment inquiries into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2)(B)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.10[8] (California law) and § 1C.11[4] (federal law).

[m] Height and Weight Discrimination

An employer may impose height, weight, and strength standards if they are necessary for the requirements of the job [see Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1375 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928, 100 S. Ct. 1865, 64 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1980)] . However, standards that have a discriminatory impact are invalid unless the employer can show a "business necessity" for the standards [see Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1376 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928, 100 S. Ct. 1865, 64 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1980)] .

[n] Veteran Status Discrimination

Title VII expressly authorizes special employment rights and preferences for veterans [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-11].

[o] Language Discrimination

Denying employment because of a foreign accent or inability to communicate well in English may constitute national origin discrimination [29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(b)(1)].

[p] Use of Subjective Criteria

While the use of subjective criteria in making employment decisions is not per se illegal, to the extent the criteria reflect subconscious stereotypes and prejudices, they may be unlawful as disparate impact discrimination [Watson v. Fort Worth Bank and Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990-991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827] .

[q] Legality of Specific Inquiries

[i] Education

An employer may inquire about education as long as it bears a demonstrable relationship to successful job performance [Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] .

[ii] Job Experience

Employers may inquire about past job experience if it is indicative of important aspects of performance on the job for which applicants are to be evaluated [29 C.F.R. § 1607.5B]. Employers who consider past work experience must also consider unpaid or volunteer work experience [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(d)].

[iii] Investigative Reports

An employer may use an investigative consumer report for employment purposes. If the report is sought for employment purposes other than suspicion of wrongdoing by the subject of the investigation, the person procuring or causing the report to be made must (1) have a permissible purpose [see Civ. Code § 1786.12]; and (2) provide a clear and conspicuous disclosure in writing to the consumer before the report is procured or caused to be made, in a document consisting solely of the disclosure, as required by statute. In addition, the consumer must give written authorization for the procurement of the report [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.21[8].

[iv] Credit Reports

An employer may obtain a consumer credit report from a consumer credit reporting agency if it intends to use the information for employment purposes [Civ. Code § 1785.11(a)(3)(B); see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681-1681t (Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1970)]. Before requesting a report, the employer must give written notice to the applicant of the report, and provide a means for the applicant to receive a copy of the report [Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a)].

[v] Arrests or Detentions

In general, an employer may not ask an applicant to disclose information concerning an arrest or detention that did not result in conviction, or informationconcerning participation in a diversion program [Lab. Code § 432.7(a)]. This information can be sought from persons already employed as peace officers or for positions in the Department of Justice or other criminal justice agencies [Lab. Code § 432.7(e)].

[vi] Disabilities

An employer may not ask a job applicant if he or she is an individual with a mental or physical disability or medical condition, or inquire about the nature or severity of the disability or condition. However, an employer may make pre-employment inquiries into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2); see Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d), (e); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.10[8] (California law) and § 1C.11[4] (federal law).

[vii] Fingerprints and Photographs

An employer may take fingerprints and photographs of applicants and employees for the employer's own use [10 Ops. Atty. Gen. 19, 21 (1947)]. An employer who requires fingerprints or photographs as a condition of employment may not give them to any other person when they could be used to the applicant's or employee's detriment [Lab. Code § 1051]. Fingerprints are required of persons employed in a number of regulated professions [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7525.1 (private investigators), 7546 (security guards)].

[viii] Age

Under California law, it is not an unlawful employment practice to inquire into a job applicant's age, or to specify age limitations, when the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

[r] Tests and Examinations

[i] Ability Test

It is not an unlawful employment practice to give and act on the results of a professionally developed ability test, provided that the test, its administration, or the action on its results is not designed, intended, or used to improperly discriminate [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h)]. However, an employer may not use an employment test that screens out individuals or classes with disabilities unless the test is shown to be job-related for the position in question and is consistent with business necessity [42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6)].

Under Title VII, before an employer can discard test results to avoid a disparate impact on minority candidates--an act that would itself constitute intentional race-based discrimination against those who did well on the test--the employer must have a strong basis in evidence to believe it will be subject to disparate-impact liability if it fails to take the race-conscious, discriminatory action of discarding the test results [Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490, 507-511, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 4945 (adopting "strong-basis-in-evidence" standard to resolve conflict between disparate-treatment and disparate-impact provisions of Title VII); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (prohibition of disparate treatment); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(prohibition of disparate impact)].

[ii] Medical Examination

An employer may require a medical examination after an offer of employment has been made to a job applicant, and may condition an offer of employment on the results of the examination if (1) all entering employees are subject to the examination, regardless of disability; (2) information obtained is treated as a confidential medical record with limited exceptions; and (3) the results of the test are used only as specified in the Americans With Disabilities Act [42 U.S.C. § 12112(c)(3)].

The FEHA allows employers, in connection with prospective employment, to obtain information about the applicant's physical or mental disability or medical condition if the inquiry relates to a position the applicant is applying for, or to a determination of whether the applicant can safely perform the job [see Gov. Code § 12940(d), (e)]. Specifically, an employer or employment agency may inquire into the applicant's ability to perform job-related functions and may respond to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2)]. Further, an employer or employment agency may require a medical or psychological examination or make a medical or psychological inquiry after making a job offer but before the commencement of employment duties, provided that (1) the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and (2) all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.21[2][h].

[iii] HIV Test

The results of an HIV test [see Health & Safety Code § 120775(c)], which identifies or provides identifying characteristics of the person to whom the test results apply, may not be used in any instance for the determination of suitability for employment [Health & Safety Code § 120980(f); see Health & Safety Code § 121115 (fact of person's participation in AIDS research study may not be used to determine employability)]. Note that the disclosure of HIV positive status may be entitled to privacy protection under California Constitution Article I, Section 1 [Urbaniak v. Newton (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1128, 1140, 277 Cal. Rptr. 354] .

[iv] Drug Test

Under a balancing test announced by the California Supreme Court, pre-employment drug testing will be valid if a "competing interest" standard can be met. The result will depend on the public interest, the employer's special interests, and the applicants' reasonable expectations of privacy in a particular employment setting [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . This "competing interest" defense involves the use of a balancing test that compares the specifically identified privacy interests of the plaintiff with legitimate, competing, and countervailing nonprivacy interests asserted by the defendant [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . If the interests asserted by the defendant justify the invasion of privacy, the intrusion does not violate the California Constitution. The relative importance of an asserted interest depends on its proximity to the central functions of a particular public or private enterprise [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . If a properly planned and administered drug testing program is adopted, and used for applicants for jobs that relate to safety, security, or other sensitive issues, it is likely that the program will be valid.

For specific jobs in which safety is paramount, such as airline and railroad operations workers, pre-employment drug testing is mandated by federal law [see, e.g., 14 C.F.R. §§ 120.7(f), 120.35, 120.109(a), 120.101 et seq. (airlines); 49 C.F.R. §§ 219.501-219.505 (railroads)]. For further discussion, see § 1C.21[4] and California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, and Ch. 50, Limitations of Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender).

[v] Alcohol Test

The privacy issues surrounding alcohol tests are similar to those in drug tests [see [iv], above]. Alcohol tests are usually less intrusive than drug tests, and generally do not test for any substance other than alcohol. For these reasons, alcohol tests are even more likely to withstand a privacy challenge than drug tests [see California Employment Law, Ch. 50, Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees (Matthew Bender)].

[vi] Lie Detector Test

An employer may not demand or require that a job applicant take a polygraph, lie detector, or similar test as a condition of employment [Lab. Code § 432.2(a); see 29 U.S.C. §§ 2001-2009 (Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988)].

[2] FORM

Letter to Client Containing Pre-employment Checklist

_____ [date]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter is a checklist of procedures you can refer to in the hiring of employees for _____[name of business]. By following the procedures set out in this letter, you should be able to hire capable employees in a legal and efficient manner.

1. Determine the number and type of job positions you intend to fill.

2. Establish the time and place for interviews with applicants.

3. Advertise the positions that are available, as follows:

a. For non-specialized employment, advertise in:
(1) A local newspaper of wide circulation.

(2) Job offices of local schools.

(3) An employment agency.

(4) Any Employment Development Department office.

b. For specialized employment, advertise in industry publications of desired circulation.

c. Do not advertise in a manner that indicates a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on any of the following prohibited classifications:

(1) Race.

(2) Color.

(3) Religion.

(4) Sex.

(5) National origin.

(6) Age, unless the law provides for or compels that action [see Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

4. Limit your pre-employment inquiries to the following permissible areas:

a. Citizenship or authorized alien status.

b. Education.

c. Job experience.

d. Height, weight, and physical ability (if related to the requirements of the job).

e. Veteran status.

f. An investigative report.

g. A credit report.

h. Fingerprints and photographs.

i. Relevant and nondiscriminatory subjective criteria, such as:

(1) A stable employment history.

(2) The applicant's professional reputation.

(3) The applicant's ability to get along with other employees.

(4) The general demeanor of the applicant.

5. Consider other relevant factors, including:

a. Fluency in English if it is related to job performance.

b. Personal appearance and dress.

6. Do not inquire into areas unrelated to job performance, such as:

a. Race, color, or national origin.

b. Sex.

c. Religion.

d. Information concerning criminal arrests.

e. Marital or family status.

f. Pregnancy.

g. Physical handicap or disability unrelated to duties of job.

h. Perceived sexual orientation.

7. Conduct the following examinations and tests, if desired:

a. Ability test to determine applicant's qualification for the duties of the job.

b. Medical examination to determine applicant's physical ability to perform the job.

c. Drug and alcohol test for position in which there is concern for safety, security, or other sensitive issues, or when required by federal law for certain jobs in the transportation industry.

The law in California concerning pre-employment drug testing is in a state of flux. However, a properly planned and administered drug test for a job in which safety, security, or another sensitive issue is paramount should present no legal problem.

8. Do not conduct the following invalid or uncertain tests:

a. HIV test.

b. Polygraph test.

If you have questions about advertising job openings or interviewing or testing applicants, do not hesitate to contact me.

§ 1C.201 Letter Offering Employment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter offering employment. The attorney should provide a basic form letter modeled on this form for the client to send to a job applicant to make an offer of employment. While the use of an employment letter is not mandatory, it can help to establish the understanding of the employee and employer about the conditions of employment. Having a clear written understanding helps to prevent future problems concerning the duties of the job offered, salary, starting date, and permissible reasons for termination. Offer letters are typically used for highly paid and executive employees, but can be used for any job offer.

This form contains optional text that may be included if the employer wishes to make clear that the offer is for employment at will [see [b], below].

[b] Employment at Will Employment having no specified term ("at-will" employment) may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other [Lab. Code § 2922]. In an at-will employment relationship, the employer has the privilege to discharge the employee with or without cause [Crain v. Burroughs Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 560 F. Supp. 849, 853] , subject to limitations based on public policy and implied covenants [see Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 475-476, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613] . The at-will clause may be included in the letter to remove any uncertainty about the nature of the employment. By signing and returning the letter, the employee will have agreed in an enforceable contract to at-will employment. This at-will clause would supersede any language to the contrary in employee manuals or other company literature [see Crain v. Burroughs Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 560 F. Supp. 849, 852] .

For discussion of at-will employment and the exceptions to at-will employment that prohibit termination on certain bases, see § 1C.30.

This form is a client letter the attorney should send to alert the client to the various official employment-related forms that must be obtained and filed by the employer, or provided to the employee. For discussion of the employer's obligation to register with the Employment Development Department (EDD) and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), and to withhold and pay income, unemployment, disability, and other taxes, see Sections 1C.40 and 1C.41. For more information about the use of these forms, see California Employer's Guide, EDD Publication DE 44, and Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide, IRS Publication 15.

[2] FORM

Letter to Client Containing List of Required Employer Tax Forms

_____ [date]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter contains a list of forms you will need to use regarding payment and reporting of California and federal taxes. All these forms are official forms, and should be obtained from and filed with the government agencies mentioned. In some cases, as mentioned below, the California and federal authorities each require separate forms. In other cases, the same form can be used for both. In still other cases, use of the California form is optional, and the federal form may be used for both California and federal purposes, if desired. Please be sure to follow the use and filing requirements exactly. Two helpful publications you should obtain are the California Employer's Guide, Publication DE 44, available from any employment tax district office of the Employment Development Department (EDD), and Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide, IRS Publication 15, available from any IRS office.

1. Use California EDD Form DE-1 to register as an employer with the EDD. Use federal IRS Form SS-4 to apply for a federal employer identification number with the IRS.

2. When hiring new employees, or when employees return from layoff, furlough, separation, leave of absence, or termination, use EDD Form DE 34 to report the names and social securities numbers of the employees to the EDD within 30 days of hiring.

3. Use the tax deposit coupon, California EDD Form DE 88, to make required monthly or semi-weekly deposits for employees' disability insurance and income tax contributions with the EDD. Use federal Treasury Department Form FTD 501 or FTD 511 to deposit the equivalent federal contribution with the IRS.

4. Use the quarterly contribution return, California EDD Form DE 3DP, to make required quarterly payments for employees' income tax and disability tax, and to deposit the employer's unemployment tax and employment training tax contributions with the EDD. Use federal IRS Form 941 to make the contribution for federal income tax and Social Security and Medicare tax withheld. Use federal IRS Form 940 to make the contribution for federal unemployment tax. Use federal IRS Form 945 as the annual return of nonpayroll income tax withholding.

5. Use the reconciliation of income tax withheld, California EDD Form DE 43, to reconcile the amount of California income tax withheld as reported on IRS Forms W-2 and 1099-R, with the total amount withheld and reported on the contribution returns, including any adjustments, and submit the form to the EDD. Use federal IRS Form W-3 to make the federal reconciliation with the Social Security Administration.

6. Provide federal IRS Form W-2 as a wage and tax statement for each employee to file with both the IRS and the California Franchise Tax Board (FTB).

7. Provide federal IRS Form 1099-R as an employee statement for distributions from pensions, annuities, retirement or profit-sharing plans, IRAs, and insurance contracts, for each employee to file with both the IRS and the FTB.

8. Provide the employee's withholding allowance certificate, California EDD Form DE 4, for employees to specify their California rate of income tax withholding. Provide federal IRS Form W-4 for employees to specify their federal rate of income tax withholding. If desired, employees can use federal IRS Form W-4 for both California and federal purposes, and not file a separate EDD Form DE 4. Either of these forms can also be used by the employee as a withholding exemption certificate.

9. Provide the employee's withholding allowance certificate for pension or annuity payments, California EDD Form DE 4P, for employees to specify their California rate of income tax withholding for pension or annuity payments. Provide federal IRS Form W-4P for employees to specify their federal rate of income tax withholding for pension or annuity payments. If desired, employees can use federal IRS Form W-4P for both IRS and FTB purposes, and not file a separate EDD Form DE 4P.

10. Provide the request for state income tax withholding from sick pay, California EDD Form DE 4S, for employees to request that state income tax be withheld from sick pay paid by a third party, such as an insurance company. Provide federal IRS Form W-4S for employees to request that federal income tax be withheld from sick pay paid by a third party. If desired, employees can use federal IRS Form W-4S for both IRS and FTB purposes, and not file a separate EDD Form DE 4S. These forms are used to provide for withholding of income tax from sick pay paid by third parties only, because sick pay paid by the employer will automatically have income tax withheld.

If you have questions about the use, completion, or availability of any of these forms, do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter to Client Containing List of Recordkeeping Requirements Related to California and Federal Taxes

_____ [date]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter contains a list of records you must keep in your capacity as an employer. These records relate to California and federal recordkeeping requirements applicable to income tax, disability tax, unemployment tax, and other taxes. Both California and federal records must be retained for at least four years after the return period to which the records relate or the date the tax is paid, whichever is later. Note that even if you believe you are not subject to the California Unemployment Insurance Code provisions, or are engaged only in exempt employment, you must still retain employment records for at least four years.

As a general rule, your records need not be in any particular form. However, in some cases (described below) official forms must be filed or retained. You may use anyrecordkeeping system you like, as long as it provides a true and accurate record of the required information. A precise and organized system is recommended, because you must have ready access to the information if you are audited by a state or federal agency.

California Tax Records:

1. Money wages paid (including reported tips), the dates and amounts of payment, and the period covered.

2. For each employee hired:

a. Name.

b. Social security number.

c. Date hired.

d. Date of release, lay off, or leave of absence.

e. Occupation.

f. Place of work.

3. For each employee receiving pay for personal injury or sick leave:

a. Period of personal injury or sick leave.

b. Amount and weekly rate of personal injury or sick leave pay.

c. Whether payment was made by you or a third-party insurer.

4. Fair market value of in-kind wages provided to employees.

5. Fair market value of meals and lodging provided to employees.

6. Fair market value of fringe benefits provided to employees.

7. Special payments (such as annual bonuses or gifts), the nature of each such payment, and the period of payment covered by the payment.

8. Amounts and dates of payments under pension and annuity plans, and copies of the plans and agreements themselves.

9. The amounts withheld from employee wages.

10. Any other information required to be shown on the unemployment and disability tax return, and the amount of the tax (Employment Development Department (EDD) Form DE 3DP).

11. Dates and amounts of all tax deposits made to EDD.

12. Copies of employees' withholding allowance certificate (IRS Form W-4 or EDD Form DE 4).

13. Any agreement between you and the employee on IRS Form W-4 or EDD Form DE 4 for the voluntary withholding of additional amounts of tax.

14. Copies of yearly statement of wages (IRS Form W-2) provided to each employee.

15. Copies of past employment tax returns filed.

16. EDD account number (EDD Form DE-1).

Federal Income Tax Records:

1. Each employee's name, address, and social security number.

2. The total amount and date of each wage payment and the period of time the payment covers.

3. The amount subject to withholding for each wage payment.

4. The amount of withholding tax collected on each payment and the date it was collected.

5. The reason why the taxable amount is less than the total amount, if they differ.

6. Copies of any statements furnished by employees relating to nonresident alien status.

7. The fair market value and date of each payment of noncash compensation made to a retail commission salesperson, if no income tax was withheld.

8. Information about the amount of each payment for wage continuation plans.

9. The withholding allowance certificate (IRS Form W-4) filed by each employee.

10. Any agreement between you and the employee on IRS Form W-4 for the voluntary withholding of additional amounts of tax.

11. The yearly statement of wages (IRS Form W-2) provided to each employee.

12. The dates in each calendar quarter on which the employee worked for you other than in the course of your trade or business, and the amount paid for that nonbusiness work.

13. Copies of statements furnished by employees reporting tips received in their work, unless the information shown on the statements appears in another item on this list.

14. Requests by employees to have the tax withheld figured on the basis of their individual cumulative wages.

Federal Social Security and Medicare Tax Records:

1. The amount of each wage payment subject to social security tax.

2. The amount of each wage payment subject to Medicare tax.

3. The amount of social security and Medicare taxes collected for each payment and the date collected.

4. The reason why the total wage payment is more than the taxable amount, if they differ.

Federal Unemployment Tax Records:

1. The total amount paid to your employees during the calendar year.

2. The amount of compensation subject to the unemployment tax, and why it differs from the total compensation, if they differ.

3. The amount you paid into the California Unemployment Fund.

4. Any other information required to be shown on the unemployment tax return, and the amount of the tax.

Federal Earned Income Credit Records:

1. Copies of each employee's IRS Form W-5.

2. Amounts and dates of all wage payments and advance earned income credit payments.

3. Dates of each employee's employment.

Miscellaneous Federal Records:

1. Employer identification number (IRS Form SS-4).

2. Copies of all tax returns filed.

3. Dates and amounts of all tax deposits made.

If you have questions about any of these recordkeeping requirements, do not hesitate to contact me.

[a] Use of Form

This form is a client letter the attorney should send to the client to give an overview of the procedures governing the withholding and payment of California and federal employee taxes. For further discussion of the California procedures, see EDD Publication DE 44, California Employer's Guide. For further discussion of the federal procedures, see IRS Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide (IRS Publication 15).

[b] Duty to Withhold and Pay Employment Taxes

[i] California Law

Under California law, employers must (1) deduct, withhold, and contribute income tax from employees' wages [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020(a)]; (2) make their own separate unemployment tax payment without deducting it from employees' wages [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976, 977]; (3) deduct, withhold, and contribute employees' disability contributions [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602(a)]; and (4) make their own contribution to the Employment Training Fund [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.6; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1610-1612]. For further discussion of the duty to deduct and withhold these taxes, see Chapters 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits , and 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

[ii] Federal Law

Under federal law, employers must (1) deduct, withhold, and contribute income taxes from employees' wages [see I.R.C. § 3402(a)]; (2) deduct and pay Social Security and Medicare tax from employees'wages [see I.R.C. § 3102(a), (b)] along with a separate Social Security and Medicare contribution of their own [see I.R.C. § 3111]; and (3) make their own contribution for the federal unemployment tax [see I.R.C. § 3301]. For further discussion of the duty to deduct and withhold these taxes, see Chapters 1D, Employee Benefits , and 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

[2] FORM

Letter to Client Containing Procedural Guide to Employee Taxes

_____ [date]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter contains a list of the steps you must take for the withholding and payment of California income, disability, unemployment, and employment training taxes, and federal income, social security, and unemployment taxes. The items below present an overview of the steps necessary to comply with withholding and filing requirements. For further discussion of the employer's duty to withhold and contribute California taxes, see EDD Publication DE 44, California Employer's Guide. For further discussion of the employer's duty to withhold and contribute federal taxes, see IRS Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide (IRS Publication 15).

California:

1. Determine that you have employees, not independent contractors.

2. Obtain California EDD account number by completing and filing EDD Form DE 1.

3. Record each employee's name and social security number. If an employee does not have a social security number, have him or her obtain one by completing IRS Form SS-5 and filing it with the Social Security Administration.

4. When you hire a new employee, or an employee returns from a layoff, furlough, separation, leave of absence, or termination, file EDD Form DE 34 or its equivalent within 30 days with the EDD.

5. Record and retain payroll information for each employee, including amount of wages, dates paid and period covered, any special payments, and amounts withheld for income and disability taxes.

6. Determine total amount of taxable wages. This includes salary, wages, commissions, tips, bonuses, in-kind payments such as meals and lodging, and other forms of compensation.

7. Obtain IRS Form W-4 or EDD Form DE 4 from each employee to determine how much income tax to withhold.

8. Determine income tax withholding, taking into account:

a. Wages paid.

b. Marital status.

c. Withholding allowances.

d. Voluntary additional withholding.

e. Exemption from withholding because employee had no income tax liability in previous year.

9. Figure income and disability tax withholding [see EDD Publication DE 44, California Employer's Guide].

10. Withhold income and disability taxes from employees' wages, pensions, and annuities.

11. Deposit withheld taxes with EDD on one of the following bases [see EDD Form DE 88ALL]:

a. Semi-weekly.

b. Monthly.

c. Quarterly.

12. Determine your own unemployment insurance tax and employment training tax contributions.

13. File the quarterly return of withheld income tax, disability tax, unemployment tax, and employment training tax with the EDD [see EDD Form DE 3DP].

Federal

1. Determine that you have employees, not independent contractors.

2. Obtain federal employer identification number by completing and filing IRS Form SS-4.

3. Record each employee's name and social security number. If an employee does not have a social security number, have him or her obtain one by completing IRS Form SS-5 and filing it with the Social Security Administration.

4. Determine total amount of taxable wages. This includes cash, most tips, bonuses, the fair market value of goods, lodging, meals, and all other forms of compensation.

5. Determine payroll period.

6. Obtain IRS Form W-4 from each employee to determine how much income tax to withhold.

7. Determine income tax withholding, taking into account:

a. Wages paid.

b. Marital status.

c. Withholding allowances.

d. Voluntary additional withholding.

e. Exemption from withholding because employee had no income tax liability in previous year.

8. Figure income, social security, and Medicare tax withholding, using applicable method [see IRS Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide (IRS Publication 15)].

9. Withhold taxes from wages, pensions, and annuities.

10. Deposit taxes with authorized depositary, such as IRS or Federal Reserve Bank.

11. File the quarterly return of withheld income tax, social security tax, and Medicare tax with the IRS [see IRS Form 941].

12. Determine your Federal Unemployment Tax contribution and file the Federal Unemployment Tax return with the IRS [see IRS Form 940].

13. Report withheld taxes to the Social Security Administration, using Copy A of each IRS Form W-2 and each IRS Form 1099-R.

14. Report annually nonpayroll income tax withholding, such as pensions, annuities, IRAs, military retirement, gambling winnings, and backup withholding, using IRS Form 945.

15. Report yearly earnings and taxes withheld to each employee on IRS Form W-2 by January 31 of the following tax year.

If you have questions about any of these procedural steps, do not hesitate to contact me.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Client Letters

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.205

§ 1C.205 Letter to Client Containing List of Required Employee Notices to be Posted

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter the attorney should send to the client to alert the client to the various employee notices that employers must post in the workplace. In general, all of these notices must be posted prominently in a conspicuous place where employees, applicants, and union representatives can easily read them.

[b] Equal Employment Opportunity Notices

Employers subject to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17] or the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101-12213] must post notices describing applicable provisions of Title VII and the ADA [see 29 C.F.R. § 1601.30]. Employers subject to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) must post a notice pertaining to the applicability of the ADEA [see 29 C.F.R. § 1627.10]. All of these notices must be posted prominently in a conspicuous place where they can readily be observed by employees and applicants. For further discussion of equal employment opportunity laws, see §§ 1C.10 and 1C.11.

[c] Fair Labor Standards Act Notice

An employer who employs persons subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) minimum wage requirement [see § 1C.52 [2]] must post a notice that explains the provisions of the FLSA. If employees are exempted from overtime regulations, the employer must add a notation regarding the exemption [29 C.F.R. § 516.4].

Special posting requirements apply to employers whopay subminimum wages [see, e.g., 29 C.F.R. § 522.6(d) (learner certificate)].

[d] Poster on Sexual Discrimination

Every employer must obtain from the Department of Fair Employment and Housing its poster on discrimination in employment that includes information relating to the illegality of sexual harassment. The poster must be posted in a prominent and accessible location in the workplace [Gov. Code § 12950(a)].

[e] Notice of Right to Request Family Care and Medical Leave

Every employer of 50 or more employees must provide notice to their employees of the right to request family care and medical leave. The official notice or a comparable employer-drafted notice must be posted in a conspicuous place or places where employees tend to congregate [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.8(a)]. Employers may also give a copy of this notice to each employee 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.8]. For a form for giving notice of the right to family care and medical leave, see § 1C.233. This form assumes that the attorney will provide the employer with a copy of the sample notice.

[f] Wage Orders

Each employer must post all wage orders regulating the employer's occupation, trade, or industry [Lab. Code § 1183; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11010-11150 (wage orders)]. For further discussion of wage orders, see § 1C.50.

[g] Workers' Compensation

Every employer required to maintain workers' compensation insurance must keep posted a notice that states the name of the current workers' compensation insurance carrier, or that the employer is self-insured [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15565]. The employer must post the notice in a conspicuous place frequented by employees, where they may easily read it during work hours [Lab. Code § 3550(a)]. The form and content of this notice will be prescribed by the administrative director of the Division of Workers' Compensation and must be easily understandable and advise employees that all injuries should be reported to their employer. If there are Spanish-speaking employees, the notice must be posted in both English and Spanish [Lab. Code § 3550(d); see Lab. Code § 3550(f) (notice will be made available to self-insured employers and insurers)]. An employer's failure to post this notice automatically permits an employee to be treated by his or her personal physician with respect to any injury occurring during that failure [Lab. Code § 3550(e)]. If the employer is self-insured, the employer must also post the Certificate of Consent to Self-Insure [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15350.1]. For further discussion of workers' compensation insurance, see Ch. 1D, Employee Benefits .

[h] OSHA Notices

Employers must post notices furnished by federal OSHA and Cal/OSHA informing employees about the protections and obligations provided by occupational safety and health laws [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340; 29 C.F.R. § 1903.2(a)(1)]. In addition, when required, the annual survey must be certified by a company executive [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(3), (4)] and posted in a conspicuous location where other employee notices are customarily posted [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(5), (6); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1904.5]. The report must remain posted from no later than the first day of February of the year following the reporting year until April 30 of that year [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(5), (6)].

Employers must post a notice informing employees of their right to inspect and copy medical records and records of exposure to toxic substances [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(g)]. A listing of telephone numbers to be called in emergencies must also be posted [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1512(e)]. If an employer is issued a citation for violating an occupational safety and health law, the citation must be prominently posted at or near each place a violation referred to in the citation occurred [see Lab. Code §§ 6317, 6318]. For further discussion of occupational safety and health laws, see §§ 1C.80-1C.90.

[i] Notice of Payday

Every employer must post a notice specifying employees' regular paydays and the time and place of payment. The employer must post the notice at the place of work, if practicable. Otherwise, the notice must be posted in another location where it can be seen as employees come or go to their places of work, or at theoffice or nearest agency for payment kept by the employer [Lab. Code § 207]. For a form for notice of payday, see § 1C.230. This form assumes that the attorney will provide the employer with a copy of the sample notice.

[j] Notice of Time Off to Vote

Not less than 10 days before each statewide election, every employer must post a notice setting forth the employees' right to take time off work to vote. The notice must be posted at the place of work, if practicable, or otherwise where it can be seen by employees as they come and go to their place of work. The notice must set forth the provisions of Elec. Code § 14350 [Elec. Code § 14351]. For a form for notice of employee's right to take time off to vote, see § 1C.231. This form assumes that the attorney will provide the employer with a copy of the sample notice.

[k] Polygraph Act Notice

Employers subject to the federal Employee Polygraph Protection Act [29 U.S.C. §§ 2001-2009; see 29 C.F.R. § 801.3(a) (virtually all employers are subject to the Act)] must post a notice explaining the provisions of the Act. The notice must be posted in a prominent and conspicuous place where it can be seen by employees and applicants [29 C.F.R. § 801.6].

[l] Rate of Pay for Farm Employees

Farm labor contractors must display the rate of compensation to be paid to employees at the site where work is to be performed and on all vehicles used to transport employees. This notice must be displayed prominently, and must be printed in both English and Spanish [Lab. Code § 1695(7)].

[m] Talent Agency Provisions

Talent agencies must post in a conspicuous place in their offices a printed copy of the Labor Code talent agency provisions and other statutes as specified by the Labor Commissioner [Lab. Code § 1700.28; see Lab. Code §§ 1700-1700.47]. For further discussion of the regulation of talent agencies, see Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts .

[n] Asbestos-Related Work

An employer engaged in asbestos-related work [see Lab. Code § 6501.8 ("asbestos-related work" defined)] must register with Division of Occupational Safety and Health to engage in asbestos-related work [Lab. Code §§ 6501.5, 6502]. The employer must post the registration on the jobsite beside the Cal/OSHA safety and health poster [Lab. Code §§ 6501.5(d), 6504]. In addition, the employer must post a sign warning of the danger of asbestos [Lab. Code § 6501.5(c)].

[2] FORM

Letter to Client Containing List of Required Employee Notices to be Posted

_____ [date]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter is to alert you to the variety of employee information notices and posters you must post in your role as employer. These notices relate to a variety of subjects, including taxes, wages, occupational safety and health, equal employment opportunity, and notices of paydays and the employee's right to take time off work to vote. I have also included mention of some special notices relating to your business. You must comply with these posting requirements. Employers who fail to do so are subject to civil and criminal penalties.

A number of federal laws prohibit unlawful job discrimination. If you employ at least 15 employees, you are subject to Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964. If you employ at least 25 employees, you aresubject to the Americans With Disabilities Act. After July 26, 1994, that number will drop to 15 employees. If you employ at least 25 employees, you are also subject to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. Depending on which of these acts applies to your business, you must post notices describing applicable provisions of these anti-discrimination laws. These notices must be posted prominently in a conspicuous place where they can readily be observed by employees and job applicants. The notices are available from the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

If you employ persons subject to the federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) minimum-wage requirement, you must post a notice that explains the provisions of the FLSA. Virtually all employees are covered by the FLSA. In addition, if you have employees who are exempt from overtime pay, such as professionals, executives, and outside salespersons, you must add a notation that the employees are exempt from overtime regulations. This notice is available from the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor.

If you pay authorized subminimum wages to employees such as apprentices, learners, and messengers, you must post a copy of the particular certificate applicable to that type of subminimum wage employee. Certificates are issued by the administrator of the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor.

You must obtain from the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing its poster on discrimination in employment that includes information relating to the illegality of sexual harassment. You must place the poster in a prominent and accessible location in the workplace

If you have 50 or more employees, you must post a notice informing your employees of the right to request family care and medical leave. The notice must be posted in a conspicuous place where employees tend to congregate. You may post either the official notice (which I have provided), or may draft and post your own notice, as long as it accurately reflects your company leave policy and California law.

You must post any California wage order that regulatesyour particular occupation, trade, or industry. The wage order applicable to your business is _____[specify number and name of wage order, e.g., Order No. 11-80, Broadcasting Industry]. Copies of these wage orders are available from the California Industrial Welfare Commission.

Because you have employees, you must maintain workers' compensation insurance for them, and must post either a notice that states the name of your workers' compensation insurance carrier, or a notice that you are self-insured. The notice must be in a conspicuous place frequented by employees, where they may easily read it during work hours. If you are self-insured, you must also post the Certificate of Consent to Self-Insure, provided by the California Labor Commissioner.

Regarding occupational safety and health, you must post the federal OSHA safety and health poster and the Cal/OSHA poster entitled "Safety and Health Protection on the Job," which inform employees about the protections and obligations provided by occupational safety and health laws. These posters are available from federal OSHA and Cal/OSHA. In addition, you must post the Cal/OSHA poster entitled "Access to Medical and Exposure Records," which informs employees of their right to see and copy various records relating to exposure to toxic substances. You are also required to post a listing of telephone numbers to be called in emergencies, such as ambulances, police, the fire department, and Cal/OSHA.

If you are issued a citation for violating an occupational safety and health law, you must post the citation prominently at or near each place a violation referred to in the citation occurred. You must keep the citation posted for three days or until you correct the unsafe condition, whichever is longer.

[Add if employer is required to keep OSHA records: You must also post the annual summary of occupational injuries and illnesses in a conspicuous place where employee notices are customarily posted. This summary is created from the log of occupational injuries and illnesses you must maintain on Form OSHA No. 200.]

You must post a notice specifying the employees'regular paydays and the time and place of payment. You must post this notice at the place of work, if practicable. Otherwise, it must be posted where it can be seen as employees come or go to their places of work, or at your office or nearest agency for payment. I have included a copy of a sample notice for you to use.

Not less than 10 days before each statewide election, you must post a notice setting forth the employee's right to take time off work to vote. The notice must be posted at the place of work, if practicable. Otherwise, it must be posted where it can be seen by employees as they come and go to their place of work. The notice must include certain required information. I have included a copy of a sample notice for you to use.

Under the requirements of the federal Employee Polygraph Protection Act, you must post a notice explaining the provisions of the Act. The notice must be posted in a prominent and conspicuous place where it can be seen by employees and applicants. Copies of the notice may be obtained from the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor.

[Add for farm labor contractor: You must display a notice stating the rate of compensation to be paid to employees at the site where work is to be performed and on all vehicles used to transport employees. The notice must be displayed prominently, and must be printed in both English and Spanish in a specified type size.]

[Add for talent agency: You must post in a conspicuous place in your office a printed copy of the Labor Code talent agency provisions and other statutes as specified by the Labor Commissioner. The notice is available from the office of the California Labor Commissioner.]

[Add for employer engaged in asbestos-related work: You must post your registration to perform asbestos-related work on the jobsite beside the Cal/OSHA safety and health poster. You must also post a sign warning of the danger of asbestos.]

If you have questions about complying with any of these posting requirements, or need further assistance inobtaining or drafting the notices, do not hesitate to contact me.

CHAPTER 1C REGULATION OF EMPLOYERS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Client Letters

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.206

§ 1C.206 Letter to Client Regarding Occupational Safety and Health Regulations

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter the attorney should send to the client to alert the client to the procedural and recordkeeping requirements of federal and state occupational safety and health laws. For further discussion of occupational safety and health laws, see §§ 1C.80-1C.90, and California Employment Law, Ch. 21, Occupational Safety and Health Regulation (Matthew Bender).

This letter assumes that the attorney will have copies of appropriate occupational safety and health laws and safety orders to provide to the employer.

[b] Scope of Federal OSHA

The federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (OSHA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 651-678] was enacted to assure working people safe and healthful working conditions, and to preserve human resources [29 U.S.C. § 651(b)]. The Act applies to employment within the states, the District of Columbia, and certain other areas [see 29 U.S.C. § 653(a)]. It regulates each "employer," defined as a person engaged in a business affecting commerce who has employees [29 U.S.C. § 652(5)]. An "employee" is an employee of an employer who is engaged in a business of his or her employer that affects commerce [29 U.S.C. § 652(6)]. By use of the phrase "affecting commerce," Congress intended the scope of OSHA to be as broad as the Commerce Clause allows [Godwin v. Occupational Saf. & Health Rev. Com'n (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1976) 540 F.2d 1013, 1015 ; see Wickard v. Filburn (1942) 317 U.S. 111, 127-128, 63 S. Ct. 82, 87 L. Ed. 122 (trivial contribution to commerce enough to be subjectto federal regulation)].

[c] State Plan Under Federal OSHA

Federal OSHA does not prevent a state from adopting its own occupational safety and health plan. The state plan may simply regulate areas outside the scope of OSHA's standards, or may take responsibility for the enforcement of all OSHA standards if (1) the plan provides standards at least as effective as OSHA's standards, and (2) the state plan is approved by the Secretary of Labor [see 29 U.S.C. § 667(a)-(c)]. California's state plan [see [e], below] was granted approval for full responsibility in 1977 [see California Employment Law, Ch. 21, Occupational Safety and Health Regulation (Matthew Bender)].

[d] Federal OSHA Recordkeeping Requirements

Employers must make, keep, and make available records of the employer's activities relating to occupational safety and health [29 U.S.C. § 657(c)]. This requires employers to maintain a log and annual summary of all recordable occupational injuries or illnesses on Form OSHA No. 200 or an equivalent. Entries must be made within six working days after the employer learns of a recordable injury or illness [29 C.F.R. § 1904.2]. Employers must post the annual summary in a conspicuous place for employees to read [29 C.F.R. §§ 1903.2(a)(1), 1904.5]. Employers must also maintain a supplementary record of each injury or illness on Form OSHA No. 101 or an alternative acceptable form that gives details of the occurrence [29 C.F.R. § 1904.4]. All of these records must be retained for five years following the end of the year to which they relate [29 C.F.R. § 1904.5]. Federal recordkeeping requirements regarding injuries and illnesses are satisfied if the employer complies with California recordkeeping requirements [see California Employment Law, Ch. 21, Occupational Safety and Health Regulation (Matthew Bender); see also [f], below].

In addition, employers must report to OSHA about employment accidents in which an employee is killed or in which five or more employees are hospitalized [see 29 C.F.R. § 1904.8]. Employers with no more than 10 employees, employers engaged in physically dispersed operations, and employers in specified industries may follow simpler recordkeeping requirements, but still must comply with OSHA standards, display OSHA posters, and report fatal or and other serious accidents [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1904.14-1904.16].

Even though Cal/OSHA has responsibility for enforcing federal OSHA standards in California [see § 1C.80], employers must still maintain any records and file any reports with the Secretary of Labor that are required by federal OSHA [Lab. Code § 6410; see 29 U.S.C. § 657; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1904.1-1904.22].

[e] Scope of Cal/OSHA

The California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973 (Cal/OSHA) [see Lab. Code §§ 6300-9061] regulates the work environment to assure employees safe and healthful working conditions by authorizing the enforcement of effective standards, by assisting and encouraging employers in maintaining safe and healthful working conditions, and by providing research, information, education, training, and enforcement in the area of occupational safety and health [Lab. Code § 6300]. Cal/OSHA was enacted as a state plan to take full responsibility for enforcing federal OSHA safety and health standards, and is the mechanism for enforcing all occupational safety and health laws in California [see 29 U.S.C. § 667(b)], with limited exceptions.

[f] Cal/OSHA Recordkeeping Requirements

[i] Reports of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses

Most private employers must maintain a log and summary of all recordable occupational injuries and illnesses for each establishment on prescribed forms. Each recordable occupational injury and illness must be entered on the log as soon as practicable, within seven days after learning that the injury or illness occurred [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(3); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.4-14300.11 (recording criteria)]. In addition, employers must complete an incident report for each injury or illness reported in the log, and an annual summary of all injuries and illnesses [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(2)]. A separate log must be maintained for each establishment of a business [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.30; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.6 ("establishment" defined); see also § 1C.85].

Logs, summaries, and supplementary records must be established on a calendar-year basis [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §

14300.32(a)], and must be maintained for five years after the end of the year to which they relate [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.33(a), 14300.44]. Logs and summaries must be available for examination and copying by employees, former employees, and employee representatives [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.35(a)(2), (b)]. The employer must also make the logs, summaries, and supplementary records available for inspection and copying by officials [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.40].

Employers of no more than 10 employees in a calendar year and employers classified in the retail, service, finance, insurance, or real estate industries listed in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2 are exempt from regular recordkeeping requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.1(a), 14300.2(a)]. These exemptions do not relieve the employers of their reporting obligations [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.1(a), 14300.2(a)]. Employers subject to the federal Mine Safety and Health Act [see 30 U.S.C. § 801 et seq.] are not required to comply with these recordkeeping requirements if compliance would duplicate requirements under the Act [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.47].

In addition, an employer must file a complete report with DLSR or with the employer's insurer of every occupational injury or illness [see Lab. Code § 6409 ("occupational injury or illness" defined)] to an employee that results in lost time beyond the date of the injury or illness, or that requires medical attention beyond first aid. This reporting requirement applies to each injury and illness that has, or is alleged to have, arisen out of and in the course of employment. The report must be filed within five days after the employer learns of the injury or illness. If the employee subsequently dies as a result of the reported injury or illness, the employer must file an amended report [Lab. Code § 6409.1(a)].

NOTE:

The report requirement imposed by Labor Code Section 6409.1(a) has been amended with a delayed effective date to require the insured employer to file the report with the insurer (on a Division of Workers' Compensation form prescribed for that purpose) within five days after the employer obtains knowledge of the injury or illness. A self-insured employer, the state, or the insurer of an insured employer also must file the report in an electronic form to be prescribed [Lab. Code § 6409.1(a) as amended by Stats. 2008, ch. 740, § 1]. These changes are effective on the effective date of implementing regulations to be adopted by the Department of Workers' Compensation, provided those regulations specify a transition period of no less than 180 days and no more than 545 days in which the employer or insurer may continue to comply with Section 6409.1 in its pre-amendment form [Stats. 2008, ch. 740, § 3].

In any case involving a serious injury or illness [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(h) ("serious injury or illness" defined)] or death, the employer must immediately report to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) by telephone or telegraph in addition to filing a report [Lab. Code. § 6409.1(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342.].

Employers may be required to complete an annual survey of occupational injuries and illnesses [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.32, 14300.41]. When required, the annual survey must be certified by a company executive [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(3), (4)] and posted in a conspicuous location where other employee notices are customarily posted. The report must remain posted from no later than the first day of February of the year following the reporting year until April 30 of that year [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(5), (6)].

For complete instructions on occupational safety and health recordkeeping, see the U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, publication "Recordkeeping Guidelines for Occupational Injuries and Illnesses." While this publication relates specifically to federal OSHA records, most Cal/OSHA recordkeeping is identical to federal, and this publication is provided by the California Division of Labor Statistics and Research in response to inquiries about Cal/OSHA recordkeeping.

[ii] Records Relating to Injury and Illness Prevention Program

Employers must also keep records regarding the mandatory injury and illness prevention program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(d); see § 1C.82]. Required records include a written program, records of inspections to identify unsafe conditions and work practices, and documentation of safety and health training. Records must be maintained for at least one year [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a), (b)]. For a sample written injury and illness prevention program, see § 1C.221.

[iii] Cal/OSHA Notice

Every employer must post at least one copy of the Cal/OSHA Notice of Employee Protections and Obligations entitled "Safety and Health Protection on the Job" in a conspicuous place where employee notices are customarily posted. The employer must take steps to ensure that the notice is not altered, defaced, or covered by other material. An employer who fails to post the notice is subject to fine [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340].

In addition, employers must post a notice informing employees of their right to inspect and copy medical records and records of toxic exposure [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(g)].

[iv] Posting of Citations

Employers must prominently post citations and special orders and actions [see Lab. Code §§ 6308, 6317] at or near each place a violation referred to in the citation, order, or action occurred. The employer must maintain the posting for three working days, or until the unsafe condition is abated, whichever is longer. Similar notices must be posted following the abatement of a serious violation, and following the investigation of an industrial accident or occupational illness [Lab. Code § 6318; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.4].

[2] FORM

Letter to Client Regarding Occupational Safety and Health Regulations

_____ [date]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter is to alert you to the procedural and recordkeeping requirements imposed by federal and California occupational safety and health laws. These laws are intended to ensure that employees have a safe and healthy work environment by regulating the facilities, practices, safeguards, materials, and substances that employees use and come in contact with in performing their jobs. Compliance with applicable parts of the laws is mandatory; violators are subject to civil and criminal penalties.

First, determine that your business is subject to federal OSHA and Cal/OSHA. Virtually all private employers in California are subject to both the federal and California acts. Because Cal/OSHA has full responsibility for enforcing the federal and California occupational safety and health law, this letter will list only the appropriate Cal/OSHA forms, which fulfill both the federal and California OSHA recordkeeping requirements. However, for some forms, such as Log 200, the annual summary of occupational injuries and illnesses, use of either the California or federal form is permissible.

Almost all businesses are required to comply with Cal/OSHA safety standards, display the Cal/OSHA employee safety poster, and report to Cal/OSHA within 48 hours an accident that results in one or more fatalities or the hospitalization of five or more employees.

Businesses in high-risk industries and establishments with 11 or more employees must also comply with Cal/OSHA recordkeeping requirements. Many types of businesses, such as retail stores, banks, insurance companies, other low-risk industries, and employers with 10 or fewer employees are either exempt from keeping Cal/OSHA records or may keep simplified records. Even if your business is exempt from Cal/OSHA recordkeeping, you must still comply with Cal/OSHA safety standards, display the Cal/OSHA poster, and report serious accidents to Cal/OSHA.

Once you have determined that your business is subject to federal OSHA and Cal/OSHA, display all required safety and health information posters, including the federal OSHA poster and the Cal/OSHA notices entitled "Safety and Health Protection on the Job" and "Access to Medical and Exposure Records."

The most important aspect of Cal/OSHA law is the enforcement of safety standards and safety orders pertaining to all employees and employees in specific industries. You must comply with all safety orders that relate to your business, including all occupational safety and health laws, standards for industries and materials, general orders covering subjects such as airborne contaminants and employee safety devices and safeguards, and specific orders relating to a particular business or industry. I will enclose copies of the laws and general and specific orders that regulate your business. Please review them carefully and contact me if you have any questions.

If an injury or illness occurs on the job, determine whether it is a recordable occupational injury or illness. An occupational injury or illness is recordable if it (1) results in a fatality; (2) results in lost workdays; (3) results in transfer to another job or termination of employment; (4) requires medical treatment other than first aid; or (5) results in loss of consciousness or restriction of work or motion.

If the occupational injury or illness is recordable, complete Cal/OSHA Log 200 and DLSR Form 5020 or their suitable equivalents. Cal/OSHA Log 200 is a log and summary of occupational injuries and illnesses. This form gathers information about the incident, including the name of the employee, extent of the injury or illness, and details about the circumstances of the injury or illness. You must make the entry in the log within six working days of learning of the injury or illness. In addition, you must prepare an annual summary on Cal/OSHA Log 200 for each establishment, based on information in the log. The annual summary must be posted in a conspicuous place where employee notices are posted. Federal OSHA Form 200 is an acceptable substitute for Cal/OSHA Log 200.

DLSR Form 5020 is a supplementary record of occupational injuries and illnesses. You must complete a supplementary record for every injury or illness on the log. The supplementary record gathers in greater detail than the log information about the circumstances, causes, and results of the injury or illness. Federal OSHA Form 101 is an acceptable substitute for DLSR Form 5020.

You must maintain separate records for each "establishment" covered by Cal/OSHA. This requires keeping separate injury and illness records for the employees of each physical location where business is conducted or operations are performed, such as a factory, restaurant, store, or other individual business. In addition, you must maintain separate records for each "distinctly separate activity" performed at each physical location. This requires separate records for employees of each fundamentally different part of your operation, such as manufacturing and bookkeeping. If you have employees who do not work at a fixed location, you may retain records for them at a field office or mobile operations base, or at an established central location, such as a personnel office.

You must maintain all of these records in each establishment for at least five calendar years following the end of the year to which the records relate. In addition, you must make the records available for inspection and copying on the request of state and federal officials, employees, former employees, and employee representatives.

If an injury or illness results in lost work time beyond the date of the injury, or if the employee requires medical attention beyond first aid, you must report the incident to the California Division of Labor and Statistics Research or your workers' compensation insurer within five days of learning of the accident. If the employee subsequently dies as a result of the reported injury or illness, you must file an amended report. In any case involving a serious injury or illness or death, you must immediately report to the California Department of Occupational Safety and Health by telephone or telegraph in addition to filing a report. A "serious injury or illness" is one in which an employee is hospitalized for more than 24 hours other than for medical observation, or one in which an employee suffers the loss of any member of the body or a serious degree of permanent disfigurement.

If the employment injury or illness results in the death of an employee or the hospitalization of five ormore employees, you must also report either orally or in writing within 48 hours to the nearest office of the Area Director of federal OSHA.

[Add if business employs 20 or more employees: You must keep a written copy of your injury and illness prevention program, and must also keep records of your steps to implement and maintain the plan.]

If you have questions about complying with any of the provisions of federal OSHA or Cal/OSHA, or need any help in maintaining any of the required records, do not hesitate to contact me.

§ 1C.220 Sample Policy on Sexual Harassment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a sample company policy on sexual harassment. Because sexual harassment is illegal [see [b], below], an employer should adopt a policy of this type to help prevent sexual harassment in the workplace, for which the employer can be held liable [see [e], below].

This policy can be presented to employees in a number of ways. It can be incorporated into the company's employee manual, given to each employee during initial orientation or training, or distributed to employees in training sessions about harassment to raise employee awareness of sexual and other types of workplace harassment. This form is based on the model policy on sexual harassment produced by the Bar Association of San Francisco in conjunction with the California Women Lawyers. Copies of the sample policy and policy guidelines may be obtained from the Bar Association of San Francisco.

[b] Sexual Harassment Defined

Sexual harassment is a form of illegal sex discrimination under federal Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1866 [see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 73, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also § 1C.11[1] (discussion of Title VII)]. It is also illegal under the Fair Employment and Housing Act [Gov. Code § 12940(a), (j), (k)]. Under Gov. Code § 12940(j), a cause of action for sexual harassment may be stated by a member of the same sex as the harasser, whether based on the quid pro quo theory of the hostile environment theory, or a hybrid of both theories [Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1418, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116] . Sexual harassment can take the form of verbal, physical, and visual harassment, as well as unwanted sexual advances [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(f)(1)]. Harassment includes, but is not limited to, all of the following [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(1)]:

- Verbal harassment, such as epithets, derogatory comments, or slurs.

- Physical harassment, such as assault, impeding or blocking movement, or any physical interference with normal work or movement, when directed at an individual.

- Visual harassment, such as derogatory posters, cartoons, or drawings.

- Sexual favors, such as unwanted sexual advances that condition an employment benefit on an exchange of sexual favors.

For an expanded definition of sexual harassment, see Department of Fair Employment and Housing brochure DFEH-185.

Courts and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission have recognized two major types of sexual harassment [see [c], below].

[c] Types of Sexual Harassment

[i] "Hostile Environment" Harassment

"Hostile environment" sexual harassment is harassment that has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an employee's work performance, or of creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a)]. To prove that hostile environment sexual harassment has occurred, an employee must show (1) that he or she was subjected to sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, or other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature, (2) that the conduct was unwelcome, and (3) that the conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 875-876 ; see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49] . It is the harasser's conduct that must be pervasive or severe, and not the extent of alteration in the conditions of employment [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 878] . As long as the environment would reasonably be perceived, and is perceived, as hostile or abusive, there is no need for it also to be psychologically injurious [Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295, 302] .

In some situations, the mere presence of an employee who has engaged in particularly severe or pervasive harassment can create a hostile environment [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 883] .

[ii] "Quid Pro Quo" Harassment

"Quid pro quo" sexual harassment occurs when the employer or a superior employee makes a subordinate employee submit to sexual conduct as a condition of employment benefits [Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; see Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406] . "Quid pro quo" harassment also occurs when submission to or rejection of sexual conduct by an employee is used by a superior as the basis for making employment decisions that affect the employee [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a)].

[d] Standard of Behavior

Sexual harassment cases are examined from the viewpoint of the victim of harassment (the "reasonable victim" standard). This means courts will apply the perspective of the reasonable woman in cases of sexual harassment against a woman, and the perspective of the reasonable man in cases of sexual harassment against a man [see Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 879-880] . The focus of a cause of action forsexual harassment is whether the victim has been subjected to sexual harassment, not what motivated the harasser [Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1418, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116] .

[e] Liability for Sexual Harassment

As mentioned under [b], above, sexual harassment is illegal sex discrimination under Title VII [see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 73, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49] . It is also unlawful under the Fair Employment and Housing Act [Gov. Code § 12940(j)].

If an employer or the employer's agent or supervisor sexually harasses an employee, job applicant, or person providing services pursuant to a contract [see Gov. Code § 12920(j)(5)], the employer is strictly liable for the harassment see Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 2270, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 (tangible employment decision); [Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 415, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 ; Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12940(j)(1); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2)].

An employer may also be liable for sexual harassment in the workplace due to the harassment of one employee by another employee who is not an agent or supervisor. Liability for an employee's act in this situation may be imputed to the employer if entity, its agents, or supervisors knows or should have known of the misconduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. An employer must take all reasonable steps to prevent the occurrence of harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k); Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 881 ; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(3)]. Loss of tangible job benefits is not necessary to establish harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)]. However, an employer will not be vicariously liable for an actionable hostile environment if the employer can plead and prove a two-part affirmative defense: first, that the employer exercised reasonable care to prevent and promptly correct any sexually harassing behavior, and second, that the employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer [Burlington Indus. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 2270, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 2292-2293, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 ; e.g., Hardage v. CBS Broad. Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1177, 1183-1188 (employer successfully asserted Ellerth/Faragher defense)]. For discussion of the Ellerth/Faragher defense, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

An employee of an entity covered by the FEHA is personally liable for any prohibited harassment by that employee, regardless of whether the employer knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3)].

An employer may also be responsible for the acts of nonemployees with respect to sexual harassment of employees, applicants, or persons providing services pursuant to a contract in the workplace. Liability will be imputed if the employer, its agents, or its supervisors knows or should have known of the misconduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. In reviewing cases involving the acts of nonemployees, the extent of the employer's control and any other legal responsibility that the employer may have with respect to the misconduct must be considered [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)].

[f] Prevention and Correction of Sexual Harassment

Employers must take all reasonable steps to prevent sexual harassment from occurring, and, if it does occur, must take appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)]. Remedies should be reasonably calculated to end the sexual harassment. Possible remedies may include transferring, suspending, or terminating the harassing employee. In addition, employers should educate all their employees about sexual harassment, making sure employees know that sexual harassment is unlawful [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882-883] .

By adopting a policy on sexual harassment, distributing the policy to employees, and conducting employee training about sexual harassment, an employer should be able to prevent most forms of sexual harassment from occurring. However, if sexual harassment should occur despite an employer's best efforts, the employer may be able to defend itself by showing that it took all reasonable steps to prevent harassment by adopting an effective comprehensive policy and making employees aware of the policy and of the illegality of sexual harassment [see [e], above].

[g] Poster and Information Sheet

In addition to the responsibilities set forth in Gov. Code § 12940(j) and (k), every employer must comply with both of the following [Gov. Code § 12950(a), (b)]:

- Obtain from the Department of Fair Employment and Housing its poster on discrimination in employment that includes information relating to the illegality of sexual harassment. The poster must be posted in a prominent and accessible location in the workplace.

- Obtain from the Department of Fair Employment and Housing its information sheet on sexual harassment (Brochure DFEH-185). The information sheet must be distributed to each of its employees, unless the employer provides its own equivalent information to the official information sheet. The information sheet must be delivered in a manner that ensures distribution to each employee, such as with paychecks [see Gov. Code § 12950(c)].

If the employer chooses to produce its own information sheet on sexual harassment, it must contain equivalent information to the official information sheet. It must contain, at a minimum, the following:

- The illegality of sexual harassment.

- The definition of sexual harassment under applicable state and federal law.

- A description of sexual harassment, using examples.

- The internal complaint process of the employer available to the employee.

- The legal remedies and complaint process available through the Department of Fair Employment and Housing and the Fair Employment and Housing Commission.

- Directions on how to contact the Department and the Commission.

- The protection against retaliation provided by 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.8.

This form assumes that the employer will distribute Brochure DFEH-185 to all employees, rather than drafting an equivalent information sheet.

Sample Policy on Sexual Harassment

POLICY ON SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Statement of Company Policy

_____[Company name] is proud of its tradition of a collegial work environment in which everyone is treated with respect and dignity. Each person has the right to work in a professional atmosphere that promotes equal opportunities and prohibits discriminatory practices, including sexual harassment. At _____[company name], sexual harassment, whether verbal, physical, or environmental, is unacceptable and will not be tolerated.

"Sexual Harassment" Defined

For purposes of this policy, "sexual harassment" is defined as unwelcome or unwanted advances, requests for sexual favors, and any other verbal, visual, or physical conduct of a sexual nature when either:

(1) Submission to or rejection of this conduct by a person is used as a factor in decisions affecting hiring, evaluation, retention, promotion, or other aspects of employment; or

(2) This conduct substantially interferes with a person's employment or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Examples of sexual harassment include, but are not limited to, the following:

(1) Unwanted sexual advances.

(2) Demands for sexual favors in exchange for favorable treatment or continued employment.

(3) Threats and demands to submit to sexual requests to obtain or retain any employment benefit.

(4) Verbal conduct such as (a) epithets, derogatory or obscene comments, slurs, or sexual invitations; (b) sexual jokes or propositions, (c) suggestive, insulting, or obscene comments or gestures; or (d) other verbal abuse of a sexual nature. "Verbal" conduct includes both oral and written communication.

(5) Graphic verbal commentary about a person's body, sexual prowess, or sexual deficiencies.

(6) Flirtations, advances, leering, whistling, touching, pinching, assault, coerced sexual acts, or the blocking of normal movements.

(7) Visual conduct such as derogatory or sexual posters, photographs, cartoons, drawings, gestures, or other displays in the workplace of sexually suggestive objects or pictures.

(8) Conduct or comments consistently targeted at only one gender, even if the content is not sexual.

(9) Retaliation for having reported or threatened to report sexual harassment.

This behavior is unacceptable in the workplace itself and in other work-related settings such as business trips, court appearances, training sessions, seminars, symposia, and business-related social events. In evaluating behavior, the standard to be applied is that of a reasonable victim of the same gender as the victim.

Dissemination of Policy

This policy will be disseminated to all employees, and its existence will be announced in a prominent place by the company. A copy of this policy will be posted _____[specify location, e.g., on the employee notices bulletin board in the Human Resources office]. All supervisors are responsible for knowing of the policy's existence, of its substance, and of their responsibility for its implementation. The _____[name of person, e.g., Director of Human Resources] will be available to answer all questions about the policy and its implementation.

The company will post the Department of Fair Employment and Housing poster concerning employment discrimination _____[specify location, e.g., on the employee notices bulletin board in the Human Resources office]. Employees are encouraged to read the poster.

In addition, Department of Fair Employment and Housing Brochure DFEH-185, "Sexual Harassment Is Forbidden by Law," will be distributed to all employees. Each employee must read this information sheet and sign and return a receipt to the Human Resources office stating that he or she has received and read the information sheet.

Individuals Covered by the Policy

This policy covers every person in the workplace, including _____[list all job titles covered by policy]. _____[Company name] will not tolerate, condone, or allow sexual harassment, whether engaged in by employees or non-employees who conduct business with _____[company name]. _____[Company name] encourages reporting of all incidents of sexual harassment, regardless of who the offender may be, or the offender's relationship to the company.

Committee on Sexual Harassment

The _____[e.g., Director of Human Resources] will form a Committee on Sexual Harassment. The duties of the committee are to receive sexual harassment complaints, investigate incidents of sexual harassment, recommend action after determining that sexual harassment has occurred, and ensure that the company maintains an effective policy on sexual harassment. Committee members will receive special training in dealing with sexual harassment complaints.

The committee will be composed of _____[e.g., six members, three male and three female]. Committee members are chosen by _____[describe method of choosing members, e.g., agreement of the Director of Human Resources and the President]. The following are the current members of the Committee on Sexual Harassment:

Name of Committee Member	Title
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____

Reporting a Complaint

While _____[company name] encourages people who believe they are being harassed to firmly and promptly notify the offender that his or her behavior is unwelcome, the company also recognizes that power and statusdisparities between an alleged harasser and a target may make a confrontation impossible. In the event that informal, direct communication between the people involved is either ineffective or impossible, the following steps should be followed to report a sexual harassment complaint.

1. Notification of Appropriate Staff

People who believe they have been subjected to sexual harassment should report the incident to any member of the Committee on Sexual Harassment, listed above.

A person also may choose to report the complaint to his or her supervisor. If the supervisor successfully resolves the complaint in an informal manner to the complainant's satisfaction, the supervisor must file a confidential report to _____[specify designated person, e.g., the Director of Human Resources] about the complaint and resolution so that the company will be aware of any pattern of harassment by a particular person and also will be aware of all complaints of sexual harassment on a company-wide basis. If the supervisor does not successfully resolve the complaint in an informal manner, a written report must be made to _____[specify designated person, e.g., the Director of Human Resources] within one work day. A supervisor who has not had special training in dealing with sexual harassment complaints is strongly encouraged to consult a trained member of the Committee on Sexual Harassment before taking any action.

2. Description of Misconduct

An accurate record of objectionable behavior or misconduct is needed to resolve a formal complaint of sexual harassment.

Oral reports of sexual harassment must be put in writing either by the complainant or by the person designated to receive complaints, and must be signed by the complainant. Employees who believe they have been or currently are being harassed should maintain a record of objectionable conduct to effectively prepare and substantiate their allegations.

While _____[company name] encourages employees to keep written notes to accurately record offensive conduct or behavior, the company hereby notifies all employees that, in the event a lawsuit develops from the reported incident, the complainant's written notes might not be considered privileged or confidential information, and might have to be turned over to the company's attorneys for review.

3. Timeframe for Reporting Complaint

_____[Company name] encourages a prompt reporting of complaints so that rapid response and appropriate action can be taken. This policy not only aids the complainant, but also helps to maintain an environment free from discrimination for all employees. Employees should also be aware of the time limits imposed by local, state, and federal governmental agencies for the filing of complaints of harassment or discrimination. These time limits are posted on the official notices that are prominently displayed _____[specify location, e.g., on the employee notices bulletin board in the Human Resources office].

Investigating the Complaint

1. Confidentiality

Any allegation of sexual harassment brought to the attention of the Committee on Sexual Harassment will be promptly investigated. Confidentiality will be maintained throughout the investigatory process to the extent practical and appropriate under the circumstances.

2. Identification of Investigators

Complaints will be investigated and resolved by the Committee on Sexual Harassment. In addition, the following people may participate in reviewing the investigation and outcome: _____[specify other persons who may participate, e.g., the Director ofHuman Resources and the President].

3. Investigation Process

In pursuing the investigation, the investigator will try to take the wishes of the complainant into consideration, but will thoroughly investigate the matter, keeping the complainant informed as to the status of the investigation. For a complete investigation, the investigator must do at least all of the following:

a. Confirm the name and position of the complainant.

b. Identify the alleged harasser.

c. Thoroughly ascertain all facts that explain what happened by questioning the complainant and the alleged harasser. The investigator should question the parties separately, and should ask all questions in a non-judgmental manner.

d. Determine the frequency and type of alleged harassment and, if possible, the dates and locations where alleged harassment occurred.

e. Find out if there were witnesses who observed the alleged harassment. If there were witnesses, the investigator should take a statement from each witness.

f. Ask the complainant how he or she responded to the alleged harassment.

g. Develop a thorough understanding of the professional relationship, degree of control, and amount of interaction between the alleged harasser and the complainant. For example, the investigator might want to find out whether the alleged harasser controls the compensation, terms of employment, benefits, or promotion of the complainant, or whether the parties involved work in close proximity to each other.

h. Determine whether the alleged harasser has carried out any threats or promises directed at the complainant.

i. Determine whether the complainant knows of or suspects that there are other employees who have been harassed by the alleged harasser.

j. Determine if the complainant has informed a supervisor or other manager of the incident. If the complainant has informed a supervisor or other manager, determine what response the complainant received from each person.

k. Ask the complainant what action he or she would like the company to take as a consequence of the harassment.

l. When first interviewing the alleged harasser, remind him or her of the company's policy that prohibits retaliation against an employee for making a complaint of sexual harassment.

Resolving the Complaint

To minimize as much as possible the damage to the company, to the complainant, and to the alleged harasser, _____[company name] will complete the investigation of a sexual harassment complaint and will communicate its findings and intended actions to the complainant and alleged harasser as quickly as possible.

If the investigator, together with the Committee on Sexual Harassment, finds that sexual harassment has occurred, the harasser will be subject to appropriate disciplinary procedures, as listed below. The complainant will be informed of the disciplinary action taken.

If the investigator, together with the Committee on Sexual Harassment, determines that no sexual harassment has occurred, this finding will be communicated to the complainant in an appropriately sensitive manner. The alleged harasser will also be informed of this finding.

If the investigator, together with the Committee on Sexual Harassment, is unable to determine whether sexual harassment occurred, this finding will be communicated to the complainant and the alleged harasser, and the matter will be recorded as unresolved. Both the complainant and the alleged harasser will be informed again of the procedures set forth in this Policy on Sexual Harassment, including the appeal process contained below.

If a resolution satisfactory to both parties cannot be reached based on the initial investigation, the matterwill be referred to _____[specify appropriate person or group, e.g., the President or the Human Resources Committee]. For further discussion, see "Appeals Process," below.

1. Sanctions

Persons found to have engaged in misconduct constituting sexual harassment will be severely disciplined, up to and including termination. Appropriate sanctions will be determined by _____[specify appropriate person or group, e.g., the Director of Human Resources or the Committee on Sexual Harassment]. In addressing incidents of sexual harassment, the company's response at a minimum must include reprimanding the harasser and preparing a written record of the reprimand. Additional action may include referral to counseling, withholding of a promotion, reassignment, temporary suspension without pay, financial penalties, or termination.

This policy is intended to protect all employees from harassment in any way associated with the workplace or work environment, regardless of who the harasser is.

Although the company's ability to discipline a non-employee harasser (for example, a delivery person or a client) may be limited by the degree of control, if any, that the company has over the alleged harasser, any employee who has been subjected to sexual harassment should file a complaint and be assured that action will be taken. Such action may include ceasing business relations with a client or supplier, reporting a client contact or representative to his or her employer, reporting a public official to the appropriate agency, or other appropriate action to protect employees.

2. Appeal Process

If any party directly involved in a sexual harassment investigation is dissatisfied with the outcome or resolution of the investigation, that person has the right to appeal the decision. The dissatisfied person should submit his or her written comments in a timely manner to _____[specify appropriate person or group, e.g., the President or the Human Resources Committee].

Maintaining a Written Record of the Complaint

The company will maintain a complete written record of each complaint and the manner in which it was investigated and resolved. Written records will be maintained in a confidential manner _____[specify location of records, e.g., in the office of the Director of Human Resources].

Written records will be maintained for five years from the date of resolution unless new circumstances dictate that the file should be kept for a longer period of time.

Protection Against Retaliation

_____[Company name] will not retaliate in any way against an employee who makes a complaint of sexual harassment or against a participant in the investigation of sexual harassment. Similarly, the company will not allow any employee to retaliate in any way against an employee who makes a complaint of sexual harassment or against a participant in the investigation of sexual harassment. Retaliation is a serious violation of this Policy on Sexual Harassment and should be reported immediately. Any person found to have retaliated against another person for reporting sexual harassment or for participating in an investigation of sexual harassment will be subject to the same disciplinary action provided for sexual harassment offenders. For further discussion of these disciplinary procedures, see "Resolving the Complaint," above.

Formal Legal Proceedings

The procedures described in this policy apply to internal complaints of sexual harassment. Differentprocedures apply after a formal governmental administrative charge or civil lawsuit is filed. If any employee receives such a charge or complaint, he or she should deliver it to _____[specify person to whom charge or complaint should be delivered, e.g., the Director of Human Resources] immediately. All responses to formal charges or complaints will be made through _____[specify person or department, e.g., the Director of Human Resources].

Retaliation against any person who files a formal charge or complaint of sexual harassment is prohibited, and is grounds for the same disciplinary action provided for sexual harassment offenders, up to and including termination. For further discussion of these disciplinary procedures, see "Resolving the Complaint," above.

Conclusion

_____[Company name] has developed this Policy on Sexual Harassment to ensure that all its employees, supervisors, and executives can work in an environment free from sexual harassment. The company will make every effort to ensure that all its personnel are familiar with the policy and know that any complaint received will be thoroughly investigated and appropriately resolved.

CHAPTER 1C REGULATION OF EMPLOYERS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Policies and Programs

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.221

§ 1C.221 Sample Injury and Illness Prevention Program

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a sample written injury and illness prevention program. Every employer must establish, implement, and maintain an effective injury and illness prevention program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203 (regulation)]. The employer must correct unsafe and unhealthy conditions and work practices in the workplace, must train employees in the injury and illness prevention program, and must keep certain records pertaining to the program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(b)-(d)]. With limited exceptions [see [c], below], the injury and illness prevention program must be in writing, and must contain specified elements [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a) (regulation); see also [b], below (required elements)].

This form contains all of the elements required to be included in the written program. It has been drafted as a sample with blanks that elicit particular information, and can be revised to suit a variety of businesses or industries. The form contains parts discussing company safety and health policy, the company organization, and inspection, evaluation, and investigation procedures. The form also contains a number of separate forms for use with the program, including a notice to employees of the program, job hazard evaluation form, workplace inspection form, accident report form, safety committee forms, and various forms relating to employee training. All of these forms can be modified to suit a particular business or industry.

The Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) has prepared several model injury and illness prevention programs for different employment situations [see Lab. Code § 6401.7(j)(1), (3)]. In addition, DOSH has produced a booklet entitled "Guide to Developing Your Workplace Injury & Illness Prevention Program." These publications can be obtained by contacting any DOSH office.

[b] Contents of Written Program

The injury and illness prevention program must satisfy the following requirements [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a); see

Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)]:

(1) Identify the person or persons with the authority and responsibility for implementing the program.

(2) Include a system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices. Methods of substantially complying with this provision include recognition of employees who follow safe and healthful work practices, training and retraining programs, disciplinary action, or any other means that ensures employee compliance with safe and healthful work practices.

(3) Include a system for communicating in a readily understandable manner with affected employees on matters relating to occupational safety and health, including provisions designed to encourage employees to inform the employer of hazards at the worksite without fear of reprisal. Methods of complying with this provision include meetings, training programs, posted information, written communications, a system of anonymous notification by employees about hazards, safety and health committees, or other means that ensure communication with employees. If an employee can read only a language other than English, communications must be in that language. If an employee cannot read any language, communications must be oral. Employers with fewer than 10 employees may communicate information to employees orally.

(4) Include procedures for identifying and evaluating workplace hazards, including scheduled periodic inspections to identify unsafe conditions and work practices. Inspections must be made to identify and evaluate hazards (a) when the program is first established, (b) when new substances, processes, procedures, or equipment are introduced to the workplace that represent new occupational safety and health hazards, and (c) when the employer becomes aware of a new or previously unrecognized hazard.

(5) Include a procedure to investigate occupational safety and illness.

(6) Include methods and procedures for correcting unsafe or unhealthy conditions, work practices, and work procedures in a timely manner based on the severity of the hazard. This requires correcting unsafe and unhealthy situations when observed or discovered. When an imminent hazard exists that cannot be immediately corrected without endangering employees and property, the employer must remove all exposed personnel from the area except those necessary to correct the condition. Employees correcting the hazardous condition must be provided with necessary safeguards.

(7) Provide for training and instruction, as follows: (a) when the program is first established; (b) to all new employees; (c) to employees given new job assignments; (d) when new substances, processes, procedures, or equipment are introduced to the workplace and represent a new hazard; (e) when the employer becomes aware of a new or previously unrecognized hazard; and (f) for supervisors, to familiarize them with the safety and health hazards to which employees under their immediate direction and control may be exposed. Employers in the construction industry required to be licensed as contractors [see Bus & Prof. Code §§ 7000-7189.7] may use employee training provided by an approved occupational safety and health training program to comply with portions of the training requirement [Lab. Code § 6401.7(d)].

[c] When Program Must be Written

As mentioned in [a], above, for most employers, the entire injury and illness prevention program must be in writing [Lab. Code § 6401.7(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)]. However, certain employers with fewer than 20 employees need keep written documentation of only portions of the program. Exempted employers are those in industries (1) that are not on a designated list of high hazard industries and that meet certain employee experience criteria, or (2) that are on a designated list of low hazard industries [Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(2); see Lab. Code §§ 6314.1, 6401.7(e)(3), (4), (j)(2) (industry lists)].

[d] Application of Program

The program must cover all the employer's employees and all other workers the employer controls or directs and directly supervises on the job, to the extent those workers are exposed to specific hazards at the worksite and in the job assignment [Lab. Code § 6401.7(h)].

[e] Required Records

Employers must keep records of the steps taken to implement the program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(d)]. Records the employer must keep include the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)]:

(1) Records of scheduled and periodic inspections to identify unsafe conditions and work practices [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4)], including the persons conducting the inspections, the unsafe conditions and work practices identified, and the actions taken to correct the unsafe conditions and work practices.

(2) Documentation of safety and health training for each employee [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(7)], including the employee's name or other identification, training dates, type of training, and training provider.

The employer must maintain these documents for at least one year [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(1), (2)]. This form includes records to document safety inspections [see [2], below, app. E] and employee training [see [2], below, apps. J, K].

Employers of fewer than 10 employees can substantially comply with the documentation requirement by maintaining a log of instructions given to each employee about the hazards unique to the employee's job assignment when hired or when reassigned [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(2)]. Employers in the construction industry required to be licensed as contractors [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7000-7189.7] may use records relating to employeetraining provided by an approved occupational safety and health training program to comply with portions of the recordkeeping requirement [Lab. Code § 6401.7(d)]. Certain public employers do not need to keep records of steps taken to implement and maintain the injury and illness prevention program [Lab. Code § 6401.7(k); see Lab. Code § 6401.7(d)].

[f] Safety and Health Committee

To fulfill the communication requirement [see Item (3) in [b], above], an employer's injury and illness prevention program may include an occupational safety and health committee composed of labor and management [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(c); see Lab. Code § 6401.7(f)]. Employers who use a labor/management safety and health committee to comply with the communication requirement [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3)] are presumed to have substantially complied with the requirement if the committee does all of the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(c)]:

(1) Meets regularly, but not less often than quarterly.

(2) Prepares and makes available to affected employees written records of the safety and health issues discussed at the committee meetings. The committee must maintain these records for at least one year and for review by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) on request.

(3) Reviews results of the periodic, scheduled worksite inspections.

(4) Reviews investigations of occupational accidents and causes of incidents resulting in occupational injury, occupational illness, or exposure to hazardous substances. When appropriate, the committee may submit suggestions to management for the prevention of future similar incidents.

(5) Reviews investigations of alleged hazardous conditions brought to the attention of any committee member. When necessary, the committee may conduct its own inspection and investigation to assist in remedial solutions.

(6) Submits recommendations to assist in evaluating employee safety suggestions.

(7) On request from DOSH, verifies corrective action taken by the employer to abate DOSH citations.

This form provides for a joint management/labor safety committee, and includes specific forms for use by the committee [see [2], below, apps. H, I].

[g] Grandfather Provision

An employer that had a written injury and illness prevention program in place on July 1, 1991, that complied with the pre-January 1, 1991 requirements of Title 8, Section 3203 of the California Code of Regulations, is exempt from certain requirements of current Section 3203 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4)(A), (7)(A)].

[h] Insurers' Review of Program

Workers compensation insurers must conduct a review, and make a written review, of the injury and illness prevention program of each of its insureds within four months of the commencement of the initial insurance policy term. The review will determine whether the insured has implemented all of the required components of the program and will evaluate their effectiveness. The review must also evaluate the training component of the program. The written report must specify the findings of the review and all recommended changes deemed necessary to make the program effective. This review must be conducted by an independent licensed California professional engineer, certified safety professional, or a certified industrial hygienist [Lab. Code § 6401.7(l)].

Sample Injury and Illness Prevention Program

INJURY AND ILLNESS PREVENTION PROGRAM

_____ [Company name]

INTRODUCTION

In October 1989, California Senate Bill 198 was passed, requiring every employer to establish, implement, and maintain an injury and illness prevention program by July 1, 1991. SB 198 specified that the program had to be in writing, and had to include, but not be limited to, the following elements:

(1) Identification of the person or persons responsible for implementing the program.

(2) The employer's system for identifying and evaluating workplace hazards, including scheduled periodic inspections to identify unsafe conditions and work practices.

(3) The employer's methods and procedures for correcting unsafe or unhealthful conditions and work practices in a timely manner.

(4) An occupational safety and health training program designed to instruct employees in general safe and healthy work practices and to provide specific instructions about the hazards specific to each employee's job assignment.

(5) The employer's system for communicating with employees about occupational safety and health matters, including provisions designed to encourage employees to inform the employer of hazards at the work site without fear of reprisal.

(6) The employer's system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices, which may include disciplinary action.

(7) The employer's procedure for investigating accidents that occur in the workplace.

_____[Company name] has adopted this Injury and Illness Prevention Program to comply with the requirements of California law and to reinforce the efforts of management and employees toward achieving the company's goal of having a workplace free of injury and illness. While _____[company name] believes this Program meets and exceeds the requirements of California Labor Code Section 6401.7 and Title 8, Section 3203 of the California Code of Regulations, meeting the statutory standard is secondary to our main purpose of preventing injuries and illnesses in the workplace.

This Program will be periodically revised as the need arises to comply with changes in the law and, most important, to respond to changes and new hazards in the workplace so that we may continue to provide a safe and healthful work environment for all our employees.

I. POLICY

It is the policy of _____[company name] to have a safe and healthful workplace. That is the primary consideration in the operation of the company. To achieve that goal, we have implemented this Injury and Illness Prevention Program.

Members of management are expected to do everythingwithin their control to assure a safe and healthful work environment, and always to comply with federal, state, and local safety and health regulations.

Employees are expected to obey safety and health rules, follow established safe work practices, and exercise caution and good judgment in all their work activities.

All employees are expected to report immediately any unsafe conditions to their supervisors. Employees at all levels of our organization who are responsible for correcting unsafe conditions should do so.

Working together, we can succeed in having a safe, healthful, and profitable workplace from which we all can benefit.

Responsible Person

Name: _____

Title: _____

The "Responsible Person" has the ultimate responsibility and authority for implementing this Injury and Illness Prevention Program, as required by law. The duties of the Responsible Person are to:

(1) Set safety and health policy.

(2) Assign responsibility and accountability for particular parts of the Program to individuals and the Safety Committee.

(3) Review and evaluate the effectiveness of the Program.

(4) Provide active leadership by participation, example, and a demonstrated interest in the Program.

Safety Director

Name: _____

Title: _____

The "Safety Director" has the responsibility and authority for the day-to-day implementation and operation of the Injury and Illness Prevention Program. The following is a partial list of the duties and responsibilities of the Safety Director. These duties and responsibilities may be added to or changed in the futureas conditions require. The Safety Director must perform the following tasks:

(1) Understand the requirements of California Labor Code Section 6401.7, Title 8, Section 3203, of the California Code of Regulations, and other safety regulations that may apply to the work that _____ [company name] performs.

(2) Ensure that safety and health hazards have been identified for each job description (see Appendix D).

(3) Ensure that regular inspections are conducted to identify and control job-related hazards (see Appendix E).

(4) Ensure that new employees are provided with general and specific safety training covering expected job hazards before beginning their assignments (see Appendixes J, K).

(5) Ensure that current employees receive training on newly identified job hazards.

(6) Ensure that reassigned employees receive appropriate safety training covering general and specific job hazards at their new assignments.

(7) Ensure that all employees receive on-going safety updates of both general and specific job hazards.

(8) Ensure that all job-related injuries and illnesses are reported and investigated according to company safety policy (see Appendix G).

(9) Ensure that all reported near-miss accidents are investigated and that appropriate corrective action is taken.

(10) Ensure that supervisors are familiar with the safety and health hazards to which their employees are exposed.

(11) Ensure that there is a communication system that provides employees with understandable information on safety and health matters (see Appendix A).

(12) Ensure that employees are encouraged to report workplace hazards and that employees understand that they may do so without fear of reprisal (see Appendix L).

(13) Ensure that proper safety and health documentation is maintained.

(14) Ensure that all safety and health training records will be maintained for three years.

(15) Ensure that federal, state, and local safety and health laws are complied with.

(16) Ensure that company safety and health policy is complied with.

(17) Assume direct responsibility for the safety and health training of each employee until assigned to the responsibility of a supervisor.

Safety Committee

Name of Committee Member	Title
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____

The implementing regulations provide that a company may meet the communication requirement of its injury and illness prevention program through the use of a joint management/labor safety and health committee. _____[Company name]'s Safety Committee is made up of _____[number, e.g., six] members, _____[number, e.g., three] from management and _____[number, e.g., three] from the non-management labor force. The Safety Director must always be a member, and is the chairperson of the Committee. The Committee will hold regular quarterly meetings, and other special meetings as are deemed necessary by the Committee or the Safety Director.

The responsibilities of the members of the Safety Committee are to do the following:

(1) Participate in all regular and special meetings of the Committee.

(2) Provide written accounts of Committee proceedings to employees (see Appendix H).

(3) Participate in and review results of periodic scheduled safety and health inspections.

(4) Participate in the investigation and analysis of accidents involving injury or illness.

(5) Review the potential safety or health hazards of all new processes, methods, machines, tools, or materials introduced into the workplace.

(6) Serve as a conduit for communications between employees and management, investigating any allegations of hazardous conditions brought to a Committee member's attention.

(7) Submit recommendations to help in evaluating employee safety and health suggestions.

(8) Verify action taken by employer to abate citations, on the request of the Department of Occupational Safety and Health.

Supervisors

As members of management, supervisors are expected to comply fully with the Program, communicate with their employees about the Program, and ensure that the work area they are responsible for is safe and healthful. Supervisors have the responsibility for safety and health education of employees once they are assigned to specific jobs. The supervisors' responsibilities are to do the following:

(1) Keep informed about safety and health regulations affecting operations they supervise.

(2) Make sure that each of their employees has the ability and knowledge to safely complete each task he or she is assigned.

(3) Make sure that each of their employees receives orientation training and job-specific safety and health training (see Appendixes J, K).

(4) Make sure that machines, equipment, and tools for which they are responsible are maintained in safe operating condition.

(5) Make sure their employees follow all safety and health regulations and work practices, including using all required safeguards and personal safety equipment.

(6) Investigate accidents and identify the corrective action necessary to prevent similar future accidents from occurring (see Appendix G).

(7) Report to the Safety Director immediately any unsafe or unhealthful condition that the supervisor cannot correct.

Employees

Employees have important responsibilities under the Injury and Illness Prevention Program. Employees are expected to observe safe work habits and practices. They must obey all company safety rules (see Appendices B, C) and all federal, state, and local safety and health regulations. Employees should regularly inspect their work areas for unsafe or unhealthful conditions and (1) correct any such conditions, if possible, or (2) report any such conditions they cannot correct to their supervisors. In addition, employees are encouraged to report conditions they believe to be unsafe or unhealthful to their supervisor, the Safety Director, or the Safety Committee. This can be done anonymously by use of the Employee Safety and Health Hazard Reporting Form (see Appendix L).

In addition, employees have important rights under the Program. This includes the right to report unsafe and unhealthful conditions without fear of reprisal, and the right to review the written Program. A copy of the Program is available at _____[specify location, e.g., the office of the Safety Director].

Suggestion Box

The safety and health suggestion box is intended to provide a means for employees to make safety and health suggestions to the company anonymously without fear of reprisal or discrimination. Employees may use the Employee Safety and Health Hazard Reporting Form (see Appendix L) to make suggestions. The Safety Director monitors the box, and delivers suggestions to the SafetyCommittee. The Committee responds to affected employees and the employee making the suggestion, if known.

III. OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH HAZARDS

Identification of Hazards

_____[Company name] will conduct the following activities to identify, evaluate, correct, and prevent occupational safety and health hazards:

(1) Conduct scheduled and periodic inspections of employees' work areas, work practices, and work procedures (see Appendix E). Inspections will be conducted according to _____ [company name]'s safety policy guidelines (see Appendix B) and applicable departmental guidelines.

(2) List defects and hazards found in any inspection and any corrective action taken.

(3) Document the corrective action taken.

(4) Investigate all on-the-job accidents, injuries, and illnesses as well as near-miss accidents (see Appendix G). Investigations will be conducted according to _____ [company name]'s safety policy guidelines (see Appendix B) and applicable departmental guidelines.

(5) Periodically conduct job-hazard evaluations for each job in the company (see Appendix D).

(6) Evaluate job hazards reported by employees (see Appendix L).

(7) Review the Log of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses (Cal/OSHA Log 200).

(8) Review general information (including general Safety Orders and Material Data Safety Sheets for any chemicals in the workplace) to identify potential occupational safety and health hazards.

(9) Review appropriate industry-specific Safety Orders and General Industry Safety Orders contained in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations relating to the type of work being done. Orders relating to the type of work done at _____ [company name] are listed below:

_____[list relevant safety orders, e.g., Sections 3575-3583, Abrasive Wheels].

These safety orders are available for review by contacting _____[name], _____[title], at _____[telephone number].

Job Hazard Evaluations

_____[Company name] will conduct evaluations of the hazards likely to be encountered in all jobs in the company by using the Job Hazard Evaluation Form (see Appendix D). Initially, all jobs will be evaluated. Once all jobs have been evaluated, jobs that warrant future evaluation for new or previously unrecognized hazards will be reevaluated on a regular schedule. Following is a hazard evaluation schedule for all job titles:

(1) Job Title: _____
General Work Area: _____
Description of Duties:_____
Frequency of Evaluation:_____

(2) Job Title: _____
General Work Area: _____

Description of Duties: _____
Frequency of Evaluation: _____

(3) Job Title: _____
General Work Area: _____
Description of Duties: _____
Frequency of Evaluation: _____

Documentation of Hazards

_____[Company name] intends to provide complete documentation of all aspects of the Injury and Illness Prevention Program. The company documents identified occupational safety and health hazards in thefollowing ways:

(1) Preparation of hazard evaluation forms for each job position (see Appendix D).

(2) Preparation of documented summary and analysis of on-the-job injury, illness, and near-miss accident reports (see Appendix G).

(3) Preparation of documented summary and analysis of accident investigation recommendations to prevent recurrence.

(4) Preparation of documentation based on observation of work procedures and work practices.

(5) Review and documentation of employees' oral and written comments and suggestions about workplace safety and health.

(6) Maintenance and review of the Log of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses (Cal/OSHA Log 200).

(7) Preparation of annual summary of Log of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses (Cal/OSHA Log 200).

(8) Preparation and filing of Employer's Reports of Occupational Injury or Illness (Division of Labor Statistics and Research Form No. 5020) with _____ [name of workers' compensation insurance provider or administrator] within 48 hours of the time we receive notice of an injury or illness that results in lost work time or requires medical attention beyond first aid.

(9) Maintenance of a separate file within the company of all reports of injuries, illnesses, and unusual occurrences.

(10) Maintenance in each employee's file of all records relating to occupational safety and health concerning that employee.

This documentation is carried out by supervisors, the Safety Director, and the Safety Committee. The records are maintained in _____[describe location, e.g., the office of the Safety Director]. The Safety Director is responsible for ensuring that all of these records and documents are properly maintained for the required period.

Accident Investigation

_____[Company name] investigates every accident to determine what caused the accident, so that the company can take remedial action to prevent similar accidents from occurring in the future. Accident investigations are not made to fix blame for the accident on an employee.

It is company policy to investigate all accidents that result in injury, illness, or lost work time. In addition, we may investigate accidents involving only property damage, near-miss incidents, and other potentially hazardous unusual occurrences.

Because a supervisor is directly responsible for work conditions and work practices, the supervisor of an affected employee has primary responsibility for the accident investigation. The supervisor should conduct the investigation as soon as possible after the accident, using the Report of Accident (see Appendix G). The Safety Committee and the Safety Director will assist in the investigation, and may conduct additional investigations as are deemed necessary.

Safe Working Conditions

It is the policy of _____[company name] to provide safe working conditions for all employees. The company documents and communicates a wide range of information concerning safe working conditions, safe work practices, and regulations regarding the maintenance and use of protective equipment to employees. The Safety Director is responsible for ensuring that proper documentation, communication, and training is provided to all employees.

Documentation provided to employees includes the following:

(1) _____ [Company name] safety policy and general safety rules (see Appendix B).

(2) Department-specific safety rules (see Appendix C).

(3) Copies of applicable specific industry orders and General Industry Safety Orders applicable to _____ [company name]'s type of business.

(4) Documentation of training for general and specific job hazards (see Appendixes J, K). Copies of training records are given to the employee and retained in the Safety Director's files.

(5) _____ [List other relevant resources, e.g., Company motor vehicle safety policy].

Safety and health rules and regulations are communicated to employees in the following manner:

(1) Training on the portions of the company safety policy and rules that outline safe work conditions, safe work practices, and use of protective equipment.

(2) Training on other relevant safety requirements.

(3) Additional training for newly-discovered hazards.

(4) Additional training for reassigned employees.

(5) Posting of federal, state, local, and company safety rules and regulations.

(6) Discussing safety rules and regulations in meetings.

(7) Providing employees with all relevant safety rules and policies.

In addition to the information provided to employees by the company, it is essential that the company be receptive to observations and suggestion of employees concerning workplace safety and health. In order to ensure the proper flow of communications, the Safety Director will provide for two-way communication in all of the following ways:

(1) Publishing and distributing the minutes of Safety Committee meetings (see Appendix H).

(2) Publishing and distributing safety newsletters.

(3) Displaying safety posters.

(4) Conducting safety meetings.

(5) Using safety recognition and incentive programs.

(6) Establishing an anonymous safety suggestion box system for employees to use to inform the company of safety and health hazards without fear of reprisal (see Appendix L).

IV. SAFETY INSPECTIONS

Policy on Inspections

It is the policy of _____[company name] to conduct and document periodic safety and health inspections to verify compliance with company policy, to identify new and previously unrecognized workplace hazards, and to investigate accidents, occupational injuries and illnesses, and unusual occurrences.

To implement this policy concerning investigations, the Safety Director will ensure that the following occur:

(1) Workplace safety inspections are carried out as often as needed to maintain a safe and healthful work environment (see Appendix E).

(2) Unsafe or unhealthy work practices or work conditions are corrected in a timely manner based on the severity of the hazard.

(3) Inspection procedures are implemented whenever potentially hazardous new substances, processes, procedures, or equipment are introduced into the workplace.

(4) Inspection procedures are implemented whenever previously unrecognized hazards are reported.

The Safety Director will ensure that the following areas are inspected at least as frequently as indicated below, and that these inspections are conducted and documented in accordance with company safety policy (see Appendix E):

(1) Job Area/Equipment Type: _____ [specify, e.g., Administration office].
Frequency: _____ [specify, e.g., Every six months].

(2) Job Area/Equipment Type: _____ [specify, e.g., Loading dock].
Frequency: _____ [specify, e.g., Monthly].

(3) Job Area/Equipment Type: _____ [specify, e.g., Machine shop].
Frequency: _____ [specify, e.g., Weekly].

In addition, the Safety Director must also ensure that the following inspection is conducted by employees in accordance with company safety policy:

(1) Job Area/Equipment Type: _____ [Ladders]
Frequency: _____ [specify, e.g., Before each use]

Inspections and investigations are to be performed as soon as practicable after the Safety Director learns of an accident, injury, illness, near-miss, or unusual occurrence.

Standard company inspections reports are to be used to document inspections (see Appendix E). The Safety Director will ensure that inspection documents are maintained for three years. Theses forms are maintained at _____[specify location, e.g., the office of the Safety Director].

Standards for Inspections

To maintain a safe and healthful workplace, we need to have a way to identify hazards in the workplace. Recognizing that unsafe work practices generally cause at least as many accidents as unsafe conditions do, we intend to focus on both of these areas to make a safer and healthier workplace.

Our primary tool for identifying unsafe and unhealthful conditions and practices in the workplace is the workplace inspection (see Appendix E). Some of the criteria we use for these inspections include the following:

(1) Violations of company safety rules.

(2) Unsafe use or storage of chemicals, including flammables.

(3) Unsafe use or storage of materials.

(4) Improper use of any tool, machine, or equipment.

(5) Obvious violations of good housekeeping practices.

(6) Failure to use safeguards or personal safety equipment.

(7) Any other deviation from accepted safe work practices.

Safety Director's Responsibilities

The Safety Director, with members of the Safety Committee, will conduct an inspection of the workplace before each quarterly Safety Committee meeting. The purpose of this inspection is to have a team composed of management and employees inspect the workplace on a regular and frequent basis, looking for both unsafe physical conditions of the workplace as well as unsafe job practices or acts of employees.

The inspection findings will be documented on the Safety Inspection Report (see Appendix E). Copies of these reports will be attached to copies of the minutes of the Safety Committee meeting and filed with the Safety Director.

Supervisors' Responsibilities

All supervisors are responsible for routinely inspecting their area of responsibility, including their own and their employees' work areas. When possible in relatively simple situations, supervisors should correct unsafe and unhealthful conditions and work practices. If corrections cannot be made by the supervisor, the supervisor is responsible for ensuring that corrections are completed by the person assigned the task of taking the corrective action.

In more complicated situations, the supervisor will need to make a more in-depth analysis of the hazards or potential hazards. These situations include tasks known to have caused accidents in the past, or conditions that continue to cause accidents despite remedial action. More in-depth analysis is also required when the supervisor is conducting an accident investigation. In all these situations, the supervisor should focus on the specific condition, hazard, or practice that caused or contributedto the accident.

Employees' Responsibilities

All employees are responsible for inspecting their workplaces on a daily basis. Employees must promptly report unsafe or unhealthful conditions to their supervisors unless they have the ability and authority to correct the condition themselves.

Special Hazards

In addition to the other duties specified above, the Safety Director will conduct periodic inspections of work areas, equipment, and practices presenting special workplace hazards, such as _____[list unusual hazards, e.g., inspection of all VDT workstations (see Appendix F) or inspection of the welding shop]. In addition, to help in analyzing the causes of injuries and illnesses, the Safety Director will make regular and frequent reviews of the Cal/OSHA log of occupational injuries and illnesses and the reports of occupational injury or illness sent to _____[name of workers' compensation insurance provider].

V. EMPLOYEE TRAINING

Goals of Employee Training

_____[Company name] provides safety and health training for employees in all situations in which training would result in a safer and healthier workplace. The Safety Director will ensure that employee training accomplishes the following:

(1) Addresses general safety and health work practices and procedures.

(2) Provides instruction about specific job hazards.

(3) Is given to all employees when the Program is first established.

(4) Is given to all new employees before they begin working at jobs that expose them to safety and health hazards for which they have not received training.

(5) Is provided to all employees reassigned to jobs for which sufficient training has not already been provided.

(6) Addresses new hazards caused by new substances, processes, procedures, or equipment.

(7) Occurs when the employer is informed of a new or previously unrecognized hazard.

(8) Is given to supervisors to familiarize them with the safety and health hazards to which their employees may be exposed.

(9) Is provided following an accident, if the accident investigation shows that additional training is needed.

(10) Is provided following an unusual occurrence, if an investigation shows that additional training is needed.

(11) Includes an annual "refresher" course.

The Safety Director will work in close cooperation with supervisors to ensure that each new or reassigned employee receives safety orientation training and job-specific safety and health training. After an employee is assigned to a specific job, the supervisor takes on the responsibility for safety and education.

The Safety Director will also ensure that employee training includes the following specific information:

(1) Hazard communication (see Title 8, Section 5194 of the California Code of Regulations).

(2) Emergency action plan (see Title 8, Section 3220 of the California Code of Regulations).

(3) Fire prevention plan (see Title 8, Section 3221 of the California Code of Regulations).

(4) Any other safety order or General Industry Safety Order pertaining to the particular job (see Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations).

(5) _____ [Company name] safety policies pertaining to the particular job.

Training Documentation

Training documentation will be prepared for each new or reassigned employee. Training records will contain the following:

(1) The employee's name.

(2) Training dates.

(3) Subjects and types of training.

(4) Name of training provider.

(5) Copies of materials used.

Training records are provided to employees and maintained at _____[specify location, e.g., the office of the Safety Director] for three years.

VI. COMMUNICATIONS WITH EMPLOYEES

Safety Director's Responsibilities

_____[Company name] maintains effective communication with its employees. The Safety Director will take the following steps to ensure that lines of communication with employees are maintained:

(1) Requiring supervisors to inform employees of the job hazards to which they are exposed.

(2) Asking employees to inform the company of any hazards they are exposed to or unsafe or unhealthy conditions they perceive.

(3) Establishing a system by which employees can inform the company of hazards without fear of reprisal (for example, an anonymous safety suggestion box).

(4) Informing employees that they have the right to review the written Injury and Illness Prevention Program, and that they have certain rights and responsibilities under the Program.

(5) Implementing employee recognition and incentive programs.

(6) Using appropriate corrective action steps, including discipline, for failure to comply with company safety and health policies and practices.

(7) Informing employees that they are not subject to discipline or discrimination for advising the company of job hazards.

Methods of Communication

The following methods are used to convey safety information to employees:

(1) Group meetings.

(2) Group training.

(3) Individual training.

(4) Individual discussions.

(5) Safety and health posters.

(6) Safety and health newsletters and memos.

(7) Printed company safety policies and rules.

(8) The Notice to Employees contained in this Program (see Appendix A).

For a chart outlining the flow of communications under the Program, see Part II, ORGANIZATION.

VII. DISCIPLINE

Employee Discipline

California law requires that our Illness and Injury Prevention Program include a system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices, which may include disciplinary action. All employees, including supervisors and executives, are expected to abide by federal, state, local, and company safety and health regulations. Failure to do so may result in oral or written reprimands, suspension, or termination, depending on the severity of the misconduct and the circumstances. Any disciplinary measures taken will follow regular company procedure.

Fair and Equitable Enforcement

This disciplinary policy will be enforced fairly and equally against all employees, without exception. Supervisors and executives should ensure that employees understand safety and health regulations, and also understand the consequences of failing to comply with these regulations.

VIII. RECORDKEEPING

Maintenance of Written Records

_____[Company name] will maintain all written records relating to employee safety and health under this Injury and Illness Prevention Program for three years from creation of the record. Records are kept at _____[specify location, e.g., the office of the Safety Director].

IX. APPROVAL

Presentation of Program

As the Safety Director, I state that I have developed this Injury and Illness Prevention Program, and that I believe it fulfills the requirements of California Labor Code Section 6401.7 and Title 8, Section 3203, of the California Code of Regulations.

NOTICE TO EMPLOYEES OF INJURY AND ILLNESS PREVENTION PROGRAM

_____[Company name] has complied with the requirements of California Labor Code Section 6401.7 and Title 8, Section 3203, of the California Code of Regulations by implementing an Injury and Illness Prevention Program. A copy of the Program is available for your review at _____[specify location, e.g., the office of the Safety Director].

The rights of the employees under the Program include the following:

(1) To be continuously advised of all relevant safety and health hazards in their working environment.

(2) To receive training concerning safe work practices, safe work procedures, and the use of personal protective equipment.

(3) To make safety and health suggestions without fear of reprisal.

The responsibilities of the employees under the Program include the following:

(1) To understand and use safe work practices and safe work procedures in the performance of their jobs.

(2) To comply with all federal, state, local, and company safety and health rules and regulations.

(3) To report all unsafe and unhealthy work practices and work conditions to their supervisors.

(4) To report all accidents, injuries, illnesses, near-misses, and unusual occurrences to their supervisors.

An employee's failure to comply with these obligationsmay result in disciplinary action. Disciplinary action includes oral and written warnings, suspension, and termination.

_____[Company name] will conduct periodic inspections of the workplace to identify unsafe work practices and unsafe working conditions.

[Give this notice to each employee:]

COMPANY SAFETY AND HEALTH POLICY AND GENERAL SAFETY RULES

Policy

It is the policy of _____[company name] to have a safe and healthful workplace. That is the primary consideration in the operation of _____[company name]. To achieve that goal, we have implemented an Injury and Illness Prevention Program.

Members of management are expected to do everything within their control to assure a safe work environment, and always to comply with federal, state, and local safety regulations.

Employees are expected to obey safety rules, follow established safe work practices, and exercise caution in all their work activities.

All employees are expected to report immediately any unsafe conditions to their supervisors. Employees at all levels of our organization who are responsible for correcting unsafe conditions should do so.

Working together, we can succeed in having a safe, healthful, and profitable workplace from which we can all benefit.

General Safety Rules

Certain basic principles of safety are so important they can only be expressed as rules. These safety rules are a basic part of our Injury and Illness Prevention Program, and are also part of our disciplinary procedures.

Employees must know and follow these general safety rules. In addition, employees must know and follow safety rules specific to their particular job, provided to them by their supervisors. Any employee violating a general orspecific safety rule is subject to discipline or termination. Supervisory and management staff must also know and follow the rules, and must enforce them.

These are the basic safety rules:

(1) Immediately report any injury to your supervisor.

(2) Immediately report all unsafe procedures or unhealthful conditions in the workplace, including defective, broken, or malfunctioning tools, machines, or equipment to your supervisor.

(3) Follow all established safe job procedures.

(4) Any changes in regular job procedures require the prior approval of your immediate supervisor.

(5) If unsure of how to operate a machine, use a tool, or perform any assigned task, contact your supervisor before proceeding.

(6) Use only the proper tool for the job. If the proper tool is not available, get help from your supervisor before doing the job. Do not use defective, broken, or malfunctioning tools, machines, or equipment.

(7) Do not remove or disable a guard or safety device on any machine or tool.

(8) Always wear or use personal protective equipment in any area for which it has been issued.

(9) Get help in lifting any item that is so bulky, awkward, or heavy that you feel you cannot lift it safely alone.

(10) If a repetitive task causes you discomfort, or you feel it is unsafe or unhealthful, report it to your supervisor immediately.

(11) Do not use, sell, or possess alcoholic beverages or illegal drugs anywhere in the workplace.

(12) _____ [List other desired safety rules pertaining to employer's trade or occupation].

APPENDIX C

[Give this notice to each employee in the affected department:]

_____ [specify, e.g., MACHINING] DEPARTMENT SAFETY RULES

These safety rules specific to your department are a part of our Injury and Illness Prevention Program, and are also part of our disciplinary procedures.

Employees must know and follow these specific safety rules. Any employee violating a specific safety rule is subject to discipline or termination. Supervisory and management staff must also know and follow the rules, and must enforce them.

These are the safety rules specific to your department: _____ [list department-specific safety rules, e.g.,

(1) Do not smoke while at your work area or at any other time while on the job.

(2) Do not bring food or drink into your work area.

(3) Keep your machine and the area around it clean and dry.

(4) When operating your machine, wear all required safety equipment, including safety glasses, earplugs, gloves, and apron.

(5) Before using your machine each day, inspect it to make sure it is in correct working order and all safeguards are in place.

(6) Before you leave for a break and at the end of the day, make sure your machine is turned off.

(7) Do not allow your machine to operate while you are away from it.

(8) Turn off and lock your machine before adjusting or cleaning it.

(9) If your machine malfunctions, stop it immediately and notify your supervisor.

(10) In the event of a fire or other emergency, stop your machine, notify your supervisor or sound the alarm, and proceed quickly and calmly to the nearest emergency exit.]

APPENDIX D

JOB HAZARD EVALUATION FORM

This form is used to evaluate the hazards of any particular job in the company. The evaluator should use this form to describe the duties of the job, note potential hazards of the job, and suggest remedial action to correct the hazards. The evaluator should also research and list any safety orders that pertain to the job.

_____

Department: _____[specify, e.g., Field Operations]

Job Class or Work Area: _____[specify, e.g., Transformer Installer]

Description of Job Tasks: _____ [describe particular tasks related to job, e.g.,

(1) Installs, connects, and troubleshoots large electrical transforming equipment.

(2) Generally works outdoors.

(3) Works in a variety of locations.

(4) Does heavy lifting.

(5) Uses hand tools, power tools, and heavy equipment.

(6) Operates motor vehicles.]

Potential Hazards Related to Job Tasks: _____ [describe particular haxards related to job, e.g.,

(1) Chemical hazards.

(2) Possibility of slipping, falling, or tripping.

(3) Driving hazards.

(4) Possibility of back injuries.

(5) Ladder hazards.

(6) Possibility of electric shock.

(7) Weather and temperature hazards.]

Suggested Remedial Action: _____ [describe any suggested remedial action, e.g.,

(1) Provide sufficient general and job-specific safety training.

(2) Provide safety manuals.

(3) Provide copies of relevant safety orders.

(4) Provide instruction in proper use of tools and equipment.

(5) Ensure that all tools and equipment are in safe working condition.

(6) Provide driver training.

(7) Require reporting of all unsafe conditions.

(8) Report all injuries and illnesses.]

Safety Orders Related to This Job: _____ [list safety orders, e.g.,

(1) Section 1502, Application of Orders.

VDT INSPECTION CHECKLIST

This form is used to conduct a safety and health inspection of an employee's video display terminal (VDT) workstation. Because the widespread use of VDTs has been linked to increased work-related injuries and illnesses, this inspection is intended to detect and solve common problems before they can adversely affect employees. This form is based on the company's general and specific safety rules relating to the use of VDTs.

Name of Inspector: Date of Inspection: _____
_____

Operator: _____[specify, e.g., Legal Secretary John Jones]

Workstation Location: _____

Type of Computer: _____

VDT Monitor

Is the VDT screen clean?

Has glare been eliminated by a glare screen, glare hood, proper office lighting, and the use of window shades?

Is the monitor positioned against a non-reflective background?

Is the monitor positioned perpendicular to any windows?

Is the monitor a comfortable distance from the operator (approximately 18 to 30 inches)?

Is the top of the monitor below (approximately 10 to 20 inches) the operator's line of sight?

Can the monitor be tilted or otherwise adjusted?

Are the brightness and contrast of the monitor adjusted properly?

Does the operator know how to adjust the monitor?

Can cooling air circulate around the monitor?

Keyboard and CPU

Can the height of the keyboard be adjusted to suit the operator?

Is the keyboard at the proper height (so that the home keys are level with the fingers when the arms are horizontal)?

Is the keyboard in a pull-out drawer?

Does the keyboard include a wrist rest?

Is the CPU placed properly?

Workstation

Are the workstation surfaces adjustable for height?

Does the operator know how to adjust the workstation?

Is there a document holder at a comfortable position?

Is the document holder properly lit?

Are work surfaces clean, uncluttered, and non-reflective?

Is there sufficient leg clearance from the floor to the bottom of the workstation (at least 25 inches)?

If the operator needs one, is a footrest in use or available?

Are the telephone and similar devices placed properly to avoid injuries?

If the operator needs one, is a headset in use or available?

Are cords placed out of the way?

Chair

Does the operator have an ergonomically correct adjustable chair?

Is the chair adjusted properly?

Does the operator know how to adjust the chair?

EMPLOYEE SAFETY AND HEALTH HAZARD REPORTING FORM

As part of our Illness and Injury Prevention Program, this form is provided to allow employees to report safety and health concerns to management. We encourage and appreciate reports of unsafe or unhealthy working conditions or work practices. By providing this information, you are helping to prevent work-related injuries and illnesses.

The company will investigate all reports and address all questions raised by employees. We will respond to the employees affected and to the employee who submitted the form, if the form was signed.

Consistent with company policy and California law, no reprisal or disciplinary action will be taken against an employee who provides information or presents a suggestion relating to workplace safety and health.

§ 1C.230 Notice to Employees of Time and Place of Payment of Wages

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice to be posted by an employer notifying employees of regular paydays. Employers must keep posted conspicuously a notice specifying the regular paydays and the time and place of payment. The notice must be posted at the place of work, if practicable. Otherwise, the notice must be posted in another location where it can be seen as employees come or go to their places of work, or at the office or nearest agency for payment kept by the employer [Lab. Code § 207].

[b] Frequency of Payment

With limited exceptions [see Lab. Code §§ 201, 202, 204.1, 204.2 (exceptions)], regular wages earned by most persons in employment are due and payable twice during each calendar month, on days designated in advance by the employer as regular paydays. Wages paid weekly, biweekly, or semimonthly satisfy this requirement [Lab. Code § 204].

Wages earned for labor in excess of the normal work period must be paid no later than the payday for the next regular payroll period [Lab. Code § 204]. Salaries of executive, administrative, and professional employees of employers covered by the FLSA, and commission employees of vehicle dealers, may be paid once a month [Lab. Code §§ 204, 204.1, 204.2; see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) (FLSA)].

§ 1C.231 Notice of Employee's Right to Take Time Off to Vote

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice to be posted by an employer notifying employees of their right to take time off work, if necessary, to vote. Not less than 10 days before each statewide election, every employer must post a notice setting forth the employees' right to take time off work to vote. The notice must be posted at the place of work, if practicable, or otherwise where it can be seen by employees as they come and go to their place of work. The notice must set forth the provisions of Election Code Section 14350 [Elec. Code § 14351].

[b] Employee's Right to Take Time Off to Vote

If a voter does not have sufficient time outside of working hours to vote at a statewide election, the voter may, without loss of pay, take off enough working time that, when added to the voting time available outside of working hours, will enable the voter to vote. No more than two hours may be taken off without loss of pay [Elec. Code § 14350].

The time off for voting must be at the beginning or ending of a regular shift, whichever allows the most free time for voting and the least time off work, unless the employer and employee agree otherwise. If, on the third working day before the day of the election, the employee knows or should know that he or she will need to take time off to vote, the employee must give the employer at least two working days' notice of the desire to take time off to vote [Elec. Code § 14350].

§ 1C.232 Notice to Employee as to Change in Relationship

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a notice to an employee that he or she has been discharged, fired, or laid off, or is on a leave of absence. An employer must immediately notify an employee of any change in relationship between the employer and the employee [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089]. The changes in relationship that require notification are discharge, layoff, or leave of absence. An employer does not need to give an employee notice of the employee voluntarily quitting, of a promotion or demotion, of a change in work assignment or work location, or of a cessation of work due to a trade dispute. No particular form of this notice is required, but a notice in substantially the following form meets the notice requirement [see EDD Publication DE 44, California Employer's Guide].

C. Employee Notices

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.233

§ 1C.233 Notice of Right to Request Family Care and Medical Leave (CFRA Leave) and Pregnancy Disability Leave

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an official notice employers must display to their employees concerning the right to request family care and medical leave [see [b], below]. This notice must be posted in a conspicuous place or places where employees tend to congregate [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(a)]. Employers may also give a copy of this notice to each employee [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(b)]. The employer may include both family care and medical leave (CFRA leave) and pregnancy disability leave in a single notice [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(a)].

If an employer publishes an employee handbook that describes the kinds of personal or disability leaves available, a description of family care and medical leave must be included in the next edition of the handbook [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(a)]. If an employer's workforce contains 10 percent or more of employees who speak a language other than English as their primary language, the employer must translate this notice into the languages spoken by those groups [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(c)].

The official notice contains only the minimum requirements of the Family Rights Act of 1993 and of the employer's obligation to provide pregnancy disability leave. Employers may provide the notice set forth in the regulations, or may draft their own notice. In either case, the notice must accurately reflect the employer's leave policy [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(d)]. This form is based on the official notice. However, the official notice set forth in the regulations [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9] has not yet been revised to reflect the 1993 statutory changes to the Family Rights Act of 1991. This form has been altered to reflect those statutory changes, and does not, therefore, exactly match the regulatory form.

[b] Right to Family Care and Medical Leave

In general, employers of 50 or more employees must allow employees with more than 12 months of service to take a total of 12 weeks for family care or medical leave during any 12-month period [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)]. Family care and medical leave may be taken (1) for the birth of a child, for the placement of a child with an employee in connection with adoption or foster care, or for the serious health condition of a child; (2) to care for a parent or spouse who has a serious health condition; or (3) because of an employee's own serious health condition (except for disability on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions) that makes the employee unable to perform the functions of his or her job [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(3)]. In some instances, an employee must first use accrued vacation time or sick leave before taking family care and medical leave [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(e)].

It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to refuse to hire, or to discharge, fine, suspend, expel, or discriminate against an employee for exercising the right to family care and medical leave [Gov. Code § 12945.2(l)(1)].

Similar federal coverage is provided by the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 2601-2654].

[c] Employee Status During Leave

During family care and medical leave, the employee retains full employment status, including seniority [Gov. Code § 12945.2(g)], and is entitled to participate in employee health care and benefit plans [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)]. However, the employee may be required to reimburse the employer for the cost of coverage [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)]. With limited exceptions [see [d], below], the employer must guarantee an employee the same or a comparable position on returning [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)].

[d] Permitted Refusal to Reinstate

An employer may refuse to reinstate an employeereturning from leave to the same or a comparable position if all of the following apply [Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(1)]:

(1) The employee is a salaried employee who is among the highest paid 10 percent of employees in a defined geographic area.

(2) The refusal is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the operations of the employer.

(3) The employer notifies the employee of the intent to refuse reinstatement at the time the employer determines the refusal is necessary.

[2] FORM

Notice of Right to Request Family Care and Medical Leave (CFRA Leave) and Pregnancy Disability Leave

FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE (CFRA LEAVE) AND PREGNANCY DISABILITY LEAVE

Under the California Family Rights Act of 1993 (CFRA), if you have more than 12 months of service with us and have worked at least 1,250 hours in the 12-month period before the date you want to begin your leave, you may have a right to an unpaid family care or medical leave (CFRA leave). This leave may be up to 12 work weeks in a 12-month period for the birth, adoption, or foster care placement of your child or for your own serious health condition or that of your child, parent, or spouse.

Even if you are not eligible for CFRA leave, if you are disabled by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, you are entitled to take a pregnancy disability leave of up to four months, depending on your period(s)of actual disability. If you are CFRA-eligible, you have certain rights to take BOTH a pregnancy disability leave and a CFRA leave for reason of the birth of your child. Both leaves contain a guarantee of reinstatement to the same or to a comparable position at the end of the leave, subject to any defense allowed under the law.

If possible, you must provide at least 30 days advance notice for foreseeable events (such as the expected birth of a child or a planned medical treatment for yourself or a family member). For events that are unforeseeable, we need you to notify us, at least verbally, as soon as you learn of the need for the leave. Failure to comply with these notice rules is grounds for, and may result in, denial or deferral of the requested leave until you comply with this notice policy.

We may require certification from your health care provider before allowing you a leave for pregnancy or for your own serious health condition or certification from the health care provider of your child, parent, or spouse who has a serious health condition before allowing you a leave to take care of that family member. When medically necessary, leave may be taken on an intermittent or reduced work schedule.

If you are taking a leave for the birth, adoption, or foster care placement of a child, the basic minimum duration of the leave is two weeks and you must conclude the leave within one year of the birth or placement for adoption or foster care.

Taking a family care or pregnancy leave may impact certain of your benefits and your seniority date.

If you want more information regarding your eligibility for a leave and/or the impact of the leave on your benefits, please contact _____[title of contact person, e.g., the Director of Human Resources].

PART IV. FORMS
C. Employee Notices

1-1C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1C.234

§ 1C.234 Notice to Employees of Prohibition on Illegal Drug Use

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a statement employers must give to their employees notifying them that illegal drug use on the premises is prohibited. The statement must be given to employees in a business that is awarded a contract or grant from a state agency for procuring property or services [see Gov. Code § 8355(a)]. However, this requirement that employers must certify a drug-free workplace [see [b], below] does not apply to credit card purchases of goods of $2,500 or less [Gov. Code § 8355(b)(1); see Gov. Code § 8355(b)(2) (annual exemption limited to $7,500 per company)].

[b] Requirement to Operate Drug-Free Workplace

Under the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1990 [see Gov. Code §§ 8350-8357], every person or organization awarded a contract or grant from a state agency for procuring property or services must certify to the agency that it will provide a drug-free workplace. To meet this requirement, the business must do all of the following [Gov. Code § 8355(a)]:

(1) Publish a statement notifying employees that the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance is prohibited in the workplace, and specifying the actions that will be taken against the employee for violation of the prohibition [see Gov. Code § 8351(c); 21 U.S.C. § 812 ("controlled substance" defined)].

(2) Establish a drug-free awareness program to inform employees about (a) the dangers of drug abuse in the workplace, (b) the business's policy of maintaining a drug-free workplace, (c) any available drug counseling, rehabilitation, and employee assistance programs, and (d) the penalties that may be imposed on an employee for drug abuse violations.

(3) Require that each employee engaged in the performance of the contract or grant be given a copy of the statement concerning unlawful use of controlled substances, and that, as a condition of employment on the contract or grant, the employee agree to abide by the terms of the statement.

[c] Penalty for Failure to Certify Drug-Free Workplace

Payment under a contract or grant awarded by a state agency may be suspended, or the contract or grant may be terminated, if the agency determines that the contractor or grantee made false certifications under Government Code Section 8355 or failed to follow the requirements for establishing a drug-free workplace [Gov. Code § 8356(a); see Gov. Code § 8355(a)].

[d] Federal Drug-Free Workplace Requirement

A similar federal program applies to grants and to contracts for the procurement of property or services for $25,000 or more from a federal agency [see 41 U.S.C. §§ 701-707]. The federal program differs from the state program by requiring employees to notify the employer, no later than five days after the conviction, of a criminal drug statute conviction for a violation occurring in the workplace [41 U.S.C. §§ 701(a)(1)(D)(ii) (contracts), 702(a)(1)(D)(ii) (grants)]. The federal program also requires employers to take action against employees convicted of drug offenses in the workplace [see 41 U.S.C. § 703]. This form can be modified to satisfy the federal program by including the optional language in the employee agreement portion of the form.

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter discusses tax-qualified employee benefit plans and non-qualified benefit alternatives a new business may offer its directors, officers, partners, owners, and employees. The chapter provides a brief overview of the types of employee benefits available, touching on their advantages and disadvantages from a tax and business standpoint.

The coverage is intended to allow an attorney setting up a new business to advise the business owner about the types of benefits that may be suitable for the employees for the business. The focus of this chapter is on the selection of employee benefits, rather than on setting up the benefit plan. The detailed steps in setting up a plan, particularly a deferred compensation plan, are highly technical and beyond the scope of this chapter. If the attorney does not have experience in this specialized area, he or she should associate someone who does.

The chapter discusses the types of benefits that may be provided by corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and sole proprietorships and highlights the disparate tax treatment of specific benefits. It covers specified fringe benefits, including group term life insurance, accident and health benefits, dependent care assistance programs, employer-provided educational assistance, cafeteria plans, and miscellaneous statutory fringe benefits. Although a complete discussion of pension plans is outside the scope of this chapter, the following types of plans are discussed from the perspective of benefits selection: defined benefit plans; defined contribution plans, including profit-sharing plans, money purchase pension plans, cash or deferred plans; and simplified employee pensions. Also covered are deferred compensation plans, including stock bonus plans, employee stock ownership plans and stock option plans. State unemployment compensation and workers' compensation insurance are briefly discussed.

As used in this chapter, "employee benefit plan" has a broader meaning than the term as defined in the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) and includes any arrangement under which an employer provides cash compensation or other benefits to its employees or to their beneficiaries.

Benefit plans for specialized types of entities, such as non-profit corporations and associations, including voluntary employees' beneficiary associations, are beyond the scope of this chapter. For further discussion of non-profit corporations and associations, refer to Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations .

For further discussion of fringe benefits, employee incentives, profit-sharing plans, stock bonus and stock option plans, as well as forms providing for these benefits, refer to Volume 15, Chapter 85, Employment Agreements, and Bacon, Prater & Tucker, Employee Benefits Guide(Matthew Bender). Keogh plans are covered in Volume 3A, Chapter 12A, Professional Corporations. Life, accident, health, disability insurance, and workers' compensation are discussed in Chapter 1F, Insurance Considerations , and in California Insurance Law and Practice(Matthew Bender).

Defined contribution plans are covered in greater detail in C. Scudere, Pension and Profit-sharing Plans Compliance Guide(Matthew Bender); H. Frutkin, Pension and Profit-sharing Plans: Forms and Practice(Matthew Bender); and Rabkin and Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, Volume 5A, Chapter 13, Pension Plans and Other Exempt Employees' Plans (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Preliminary Considerations in Selecting Employee Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.10

§ 1D.10 Who Should be Compensated

[1] Practical Considerations

Assisting the owner of a new business in the selection of appropriate types of employee benefit plans begins by determining which employees the owner wants to compensate. The target group might include owner-employees, key employees, salaried employees, union and non-union employees, salespersons, employees of a particular division, or all employees [see [2], below]. The group may vary in size from a single sole proprietor or sole shareholder of a corporation, to all employees of a publicly-held corporation.

Often, the owner will wish to compensate several groups, but with unequal benefits to each group. Counsel should discuss with the owner the different categories of employees, the owner's objectives (the hiring and retention of key employees, for example) and the types of benefit plans available, including present and future compensation and fringe benefits, including retirement plans, and the tax implications of each type of plan. A discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of employee benefit plans should also take into account, when appropriate, the psychological impact of the plans. For example, a plan to attract key employees may include the opportunity to own some of the business, while lower-paid employees may prefer increased cash compensation (higher salary or bonuses) to an ownership interest in the business.

[2] Non-Discrimination Provisions

When considering which employees to include in a particular benefit plan, the attorney and business owner should keep in mind that, under federal tax law, certain types of plans have non-discrimination requirements that must be complied with if the tax benefits of the plan are to be realized. This generally means that, for the business to obtain the full tax benefit from an offered plan, the plan must be made available to most or all employees, not just highly-compensated or key employees. This requires that the business owner surrender some or all discretion regarding which employees will receive benefits.

Programs that are subject to non-discrimination provisions include group life insurance plans [see § 1D.31[2][f]], accident and health benefit plans [see § 1D.33 [3]], and cafeteria plans [see § 1D.35[3]].

§ 1D.11 Present Compensation and Benefit Plans--In General

A business owner can provide current compensation to its employees through (1) direct cash compensation; (2) an equity interest in the business; and (3) fringe benefits. The net economic value of these different methods of compensation to the employee and the business owner depends in part on their respective tax consequences. For example, from a tax point of view, statutory fringe benefits may be the best way for a business to provide benefits to its owners or employees. If properly structured, such plans provide benefits that are not taxable to the employee, while the costs of the benefits are deductible business expenses [see § 1D.14]. A fringe benefit that does not result in taxable income to the employee is more valuable to the employee than an equivalent taxable amount of compensation, if the employee were to purchase the same benefit with after-tax dollars. Consequently, the employer may derive a double benefit if, in addition to deducting the cost of the benefit, it is also able to pay the employee slightly less direct cash compensation.

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.12

§ 1D.12 Current Cash Compensation

Current cash compensation is the traditional means of hiring and retaining key or desired employees. Reasonable compensation paid by an employer to an employee for services actually rendered is generally treated as an ordinary and necessary cost of doing business [I.R.C. § 162(a); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.162-7, 1.162-9, 1.162-10]. As such, it is deductible by the business [I.R.C. § 162(a)] and includable in the employee's taxable income [I.R.C. § 61(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.61-2(a)(1)].

However, current cash compensation has none of the attractive tax features for the employee of fringe benefits [see § 1D.14], an equity interest in the business [see § 1D.13], or certain deferred benefits [see §§ 1D.15-1D.18]. Most alternative methods of employee compensation have arisen to allow employees to pay lower taxes in the year the benefit is received or to defer taxes until a later year.

From the owner's viewpoint, the deductibility of direct cash compensation and the low administrative costs of the benefit are advantageous. However, other factors, such as the high current income tax rate for highly compensated employees, their desire to own an interest in the business, the general desire of employees for health and life insurance, as well as for retirement benefits, may make other methods of compensation more cost effective for the employer than increased wages as a means of hiring and retaining desired employees.

§ 1D.13 Current Equity Interest in Business

Some business owners are unwilling to transfer any interest in the business; others may view the transfer as an incentive for retention of desired employees or improved employee performance. The trend in new service and high-tech companies is generally toward some form of equity-based compensation.

Property transfers may be made by an unincorporated business; they are most often made by a corporation in the context of a transfer of its stock. The type of economic benefit that a property or ownership interest provides depends largely on whether money is being accumulated in the business or distributed to the owners at regular intervals. For example, an ownership interest in a (profitable) partnership that distributes most of its income annually will result in an increase in income for the new partner, although there will be little increase in the value of the partnership interest itself. An ownership interest in a (profitable) corporation that does not declare any, or minimal, dividends, however, will result in no current increased cash income to the employee, but may substantially increase the employee's net worth over several years.

No income tax deduction may be taken by the business until the recipient recognizes taxable income (normally in the year the transfer is made) [see I.R.C. § 83]. The present and future taxation of the employee and the employer-entity on property transfers is further discussed in § 1D.82[2].

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.14

§ 1D.14 Fringe Benefits

Expenditures made by a business as fringe benefits for its employees are especially advantageous from a tax point of view. They are deductible as business expenses, but are not taxable to the employees who benefit from the expenditures [see I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 72, 79, 104, 105, 106, 119, 125, 127, 129, 132, 137].

Health and disability insurance is an increasingly coveted benefit. Generally, a business can obtain health and disability coverage for its employees at a substantially lower rate that the employees could obtain individually, so that net advantage to employees of this benefit is typically far greater than if they were to receive, as increased cash compensation, the amount spent by the business for premiums. Thus, the employer may either pay the employee less in direct cash compensation, allowing the tax benefits from the health plan to make up the difference; or pay the employee the same total compensation, part of which is excludable under I.R.C. § 105, with the employee realizing a greater net (that is, after-tax) benefit than if he or she had received the equivalent amount as direct cash compensation. Further, the cost to a business of establishing and administering a health insurance plan through an insurance company is not significant. Health and other fringe benefit plans are further discussed in §§ 1D.30-1D.40.

A business owner can provide future compensation to its employees through (1) deferred compensation arrangements; (2) an equity interest in the business; and (3) contributions to retirement plans. These deferred benefits are discussed in §§ 1D.16-1D.18 as illustrations of the flexibility a business has in developing employee benefit plans. Deferred benefit plans, including qualified retirement plans, non-qualified alternatives, and stock-based plans, are discussed in detail in §§ 1D.50-1D.82.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Preliminary Considerations in Selecting Employee Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.16

§ 1D.16 Deferred Compensation

For purposes of this section, the term "deferred compensation arrangement" refers to an informal, nonqualified arrangement whereby the employer and employee agree that a portion of an employee's income earned in one year will not be paid until a later year. This is distinguished from other types of deferred compensation arrangements, such as traditional pension plans and 401(k) plans [see §§ 1D.17, 1D.60].

Deferred compensation arrangements shift compensation income on which an employee would otherwise incur tax in one year to a later year. This is accomplished by having the employer and employee agree to defer payment of compensation for services to be rendered in an upcoming tax period to a later tax year. The employer then takes its deduction, and the employee includes the payment as income, when the payment occurs [I.R.C. § 404(a)(5)].

A primary advantage of a deferred compensation arrangement from the employer's point of view is that the arrangement is exempt from ERISA's cumbersome requirements. The employer therefore has more discretion and flexibility in determining participants, contributions, and benefits in the plan. In addition, depending on the tax rate of the shareholders and the corporation, there may be a tax rate advantage in retaining the compensation in the corporation until later years. This latter advantage is less likely to occur after 2002, when the maximum individual tax rates dropped to 35 percent [I.R.C. §§ 1(a)-(d), (i)(2), 11(b)]. The cost of administering this type of plan ordinarily is minimal; individual agreements, rather than formal plans, may be used, and shareholder approval is not required [see, e.g., Rev. Rul. 60-31, 1960-1 C.B. 174]. A deferred compensation plan also allows an employer to delay paying for services rendered, thus effectively reducing the cost of the employee's compensation.

The main advantage from the employee point of view is the deferral of income into a year (such as after retirement) when the employee may have less income and be in a lower tax rate [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)].

§ 1D.17 Future Equity Interest in Business

A future equity interest in an incorporated business might take the form of an incentive stock option, a phantom stock plan, or stock appreciation rights, or an agreement to give stock options, phantom shares, or appreciation rights. A future equity interest in a unincorporated business might take the form of an agreement regarding a future partnership or limited liability company. The non-tax implications of transferring a future equity interest in the business are quite similar to those related to the transfer of a present interest [see § 1D.13]. The differences in the tax treatment of the transfer of a present and a future interest are discussed in § 1D.81[3].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Preliminary Considerations in Selecting Employee Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.18

§ 1D.18 Retirement Plans

[1] Generic Types

Retirement plans are the most common type of deferred benefit. There are two generic types of retirement plans: qualified and non-qualified. Qualified plans are those that meet specific statutory requirements [see I.R.C. §§ 401-418E], generally provide employees with non-taxable or tax-favored benefits [see e.g., I.R.C. §§ 402(a), 403(a)(1)], and permit employers to deduct their plan contribution in the year in which it is made [I.R.C. § 404; see [2], below]. Non-qualified plans do not offer the tax advantages of qualified plans; however, in many instances, employers may find non-qualified arrangements to be preferable [see [3], below].

[2] Qualified Retirement Plans

A qualified plan is one that satisfies the requirements of I.R.C. § 401(a): pension, annuity, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans, including employee stock ownership plans (ESOPS) [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-0; see I.R.C. §§ 401-418E]. These detailed requirements (related to funding and benefits, coverage, vesting, top-heaviness, multiple employers, distributions, and reporting and disclosure) must be met for the employer and participants to obtain favorable tax treatment. The tax advantages include, for example, the deduction of contributions by the employer in the year the contribution is made [I.R.C. § 404], deferral of tax to the participants until the income is received [I.R.C. §§ 402(a), 403(a)(1)], and tax-free accumulation of plan contributions [I.R.C. § 501(a)]. The tax treatment of qualified retirement plans and retirement plan benefits is discussed more fully in § 1D.51.

Because tax savings is usually the key feature of any retirement plan, qualified plans are generally more desirable than non-qualified plans. However, non-qualified plans, which permit employers to arbitrarily select plan participants, may be used to achieve important non-tax objectives of the employer and employee, such as improving employee incentive through equity ownership in the business [see [3], below].

The primary disadvantage of qualified plans is the substantial costs associated with drafting a plan and related trust agreement that meet the complicated requirements of the Internal Revenue Code and Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [see I.R.C. §§ 401-418E, 501(a); 29 U.S.C. §§ 1081-1086] and obtaining a qualification letter from the Internal Revenue Service [see Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685 (although customary to obtain advance ruling from IRS, favorable determination letter on qualification not required as condition for obtaining plan or trust benefits)]. Continuing costs include the administrative expense of handling the trust's funds and filing various required reports. Another substantial continuing cost arises if the employer wants to make disproportionately large contributions on behalf of a small number of highly paid employees, who make up a small percentage of the total number of employees. In these circumstances, the employer will have to contribute additional money on behalf of all eligible employees, to avoid complex non-discrimination rules requiring that the actual deferral percentage for highly paid employees not exceed a permitted ratio to the percentage for other eligible employees [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(4); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.401-1, 1.401(b)-1]. Of course, this problem is minimized if the highly paid employees for whom the employer wishes to make disproportionate contributions make up the majority of the plan's eligible participants.

[3] Non-Qualified Retirement Plans

A non-qualified retirement plan is one that does not meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 401(a) and related provisions, and thus does not offer the tax advantages of a qualified plan [see I.R.C. §§ 401-418E]. If a retirement plan is not qualified, an employer's deduction for a compensation expense is generally linked to the time an employee includes the compensation in income [see I.R.C. § 83(h)]. In addition, the earnings from a non-qualified plan generally are not exempt from tax [see I.R.C. § 501(a)].

Although less advantageous from a tax point of view,non-qualified plans typically do not require the non-discriminatory coverage of employees required by qualified plans, and therefore may require lower total employer contributions, since the employer may chose to benefit only a select group of employees, typically management or highly compensated employees. Further, except for certain reporting and disclosure requirements, non-qualified plans are generally exempt from the provisions of ERISA [29 U.S.C. §§ 1051(2), 1081(a)(3), 1101(a)(1)]. Thus, many non-qualified plans may be established, funded, and administered less expensively than qualified plans, although the costs may vary significantly depending on the tax treatment of contributions and benefits, the total number of covered participants, and whether the plan is funded with current or future contributions. Obviously, when a less-expensive non-qualified alternative can satisfy the employer's objectives, use of a qualified plan is not recommended.

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Preliminary Considerations in Selecting Employee Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.19

§ 1D.19 Effect of Business Form on Benefits Selection

[1] General Effect on Benefits Selection

The employer's form of business is no longer a major factor in benefits selection, although whether a business is incorporated or unincorporated retains some tax significance, mostly for owners who are also employees of the business [see, e.g., [4], below]. Indeed, although a corporation can, in certain circumstances, offer a wider variety of types of compensation and fringe benefits than a sole proprietorship, partnership, or limited liability company, these fringe benefits may be subject to non-discrimination rules and other restrictions against plans that primarily benefit certain corporate officers and owners [see I.R.C. § 416; Treas. Reg. § 1.416-1]. In addition, S corporations [see I.R.C. §§ 1361 ("S corporation" defined), 1362 (S corporation election)] are treated in the same manner as partnerships for the purpose of many employee fringe benefits and, as such, are given less favorable tax treatment than C corporations [I.R.C. § 1372; see [4], below].

The advantages and disadvantages of operating a business as a corporation, partnership, limited liability company, or sole proprietorship are discussed in Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . Ch 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status , covers the procedures to be used by a small business corporation in electing (or terminating) Subchapter S status.

[2] Pension Plans

Both corporate and non-corporate pension plans are subject to the same limitation on deductibility of contributions [see, e.g., I.R.C. § 415(b) (annual benefit for defined benefit plan limited to lesser of $160,000 ($90,000 for years ending on or before December 31, 2001) or 100 percent of participant's average compensation for high three years)].

Nonetheless, some corporate advantages remain: Self-employed retirement plans, commonly called Keogh plans (either defined-benefit or defined-contribution plans), for example, are still subject to certain restrictions that do not apply to the plans of C corporations. These restrictions include the fact that a loan between the qualified plan of an unincorporated entity and a sole proprietor or partner (with a 10-percent or more ownership interest) is a prohibited transaction, subject to penalty taxes [see I.R.C. § 4975(d)(1); 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(1) (exceptions for loans to disqualified persons or parties in interest does not apply to owner-employees); see also I.R.C. § 401(c)(3)

("owner-employee" defined)]. Furthermore, the maximum deductible retirement plan contribution made by an unincorporated entity on behalf of a self-employed individual is limited to that individual's net self-employment income (which has already been reduced by one half of the self-employment tax [see I.R.C. § 1402(a) ("net earnings from self-employment" defined)], further reduced by the deduction for contributions to a qualified retirement plan [I.R.C. § 404(a)(8)(B); see I.R.C. §§ 401(c)(2) ("earned income" defined), 404(a)(8)(B)]. This restriction, which does not apply to participants in corporate plans, effectively reduces the amount that the self-employed individual may contribute to a qualified plan. This is because it reduces the amount that is considered 100 percent of the participant's compensation for purposes of the defined benefit or defined contribution limitation [see I.R.C. § 415(b)(1), (c)(1)]. It should be noted that S corporation pass-through income, may not be net earnings from self-employment for purposes of shareholder Keogh plan deductions [see Durando v. United States (9th Cir. 1995) 70 F.3d 548, 553 (citing I.R.C. provisions authorizing partners and sole proprietors, but not S corporation shareholders, to deduct contributions)].

[3] Stock-Based Plans

The difference between a corporation and a sole proprietorship, partnership, or limited liability company is significant with respect to stock-based plans, which, by their nature, can be implemented only by a corporation. A corporation may use a variety of approaches to utilize its own stock as a form of employee compensation. Such plans include, among others, qualified stock bonus and employee stock ownership plans [see I.R.C. § 409; see also § 1D.61], qualified stock plans and incentive stock options [I.R.C. §§ 401(a), 421, 422; see also § 1D.82], non-qualified stock plans and stock options [see I.R.C. § 83; see also § 1D.81], cash or deferred arrangements that may be part of a stock bonus plan [see I.R.C. § 401(k); see also § 1D.60] and stock appreciation rights [see, e.g., Rev. Rul. 80-300, 1980-2 C.B. 165 ; see also § 1D.113].

[4] Restrictions on Specified Fringe Benefits Available to Sole Proprietorships, Partnerships, Limited Liability Companies, and S Corporations

Sole proprietors, partners, and 2-percent shareholders of S corporations [see I.R.C. § 1372(b) "2-percent shareholder" defined)] have been denied employee-related tax exclusions for: (1) group term life insurance [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.79-0, 31.3401(c)-1; see § 1D.31]; (2) employee death benefits [Treas. Reg. § 1.101-2(f); see § 1D.32]; (3) accident and health plans [I.R.C. § 105(g); Rev. Rul. 69-144, 1969-1 C.B. 115 ; Rev. Rul. 56-326, 1956-2 C.B. 100 ; see § 1D.33]; and (4) meals and lodging benefits [Wilson v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1967) 376 F.2d 280, 296-297] . This is because these persons are not considered "employees" for purposes of these categories of fringe benefits [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.79-0, 1.101-2(f), 31.3401(c)-1; I.R.C. § 1372]. A member of a limited liability company that is taxed as a partnership presumably also would not be considered an "employee" [see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies]. Shareholder-employees of C corporations, however, are considered to be employees, even if they hold a controlling interest in their corporations [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.79-0, 1.101-2(f), 31.3401(c)-1; I.R.C. § 1372]. Furthermore, S corporation pass-through income has been held not to constitute net earnings from self-employment for purposes of shareholder Keogh plan deductions [Durando v. United States (9th Cir. 1995) 70 F.3d 548, 553] .

Employees of sole proprietorships, partnerships, limited liability companies, or S corporations, however, may receive the qualified fringe benefits enumerated above on tax-free basis [I.R.C. §§ 79(b)(1), (3), 1372(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0; Rev. Rul. 68-577, 1968-2 C.B. 50]. Further, S corporation shareholders "employed" by their corporation, and partners who "perform services" for their partnerships, are considered employees for purposes of certain miscellaneous statutory fringe benefits, including the following [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)]: (1) no-additional-cost benefits [see § 1D.39[2]]; (2) qualified employee discounts [see § 1D.39[3]]; (3) working condition fringe benefits [see § 1D.39[4]]; and (4) de minimis fringe benefits [see § 1D.39[5]]. Presumably, this also applies to members who "perform services" for their limited liability companies [see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies]. Otherwise, partners and S corporation owners who are not employees generally may not participate on a tax-free basis in fringe benefit programs set up for their employees.

Furthermore, a partner may not achieve employee status through the use of guaranteed payments [Treas. Reg. § 1.707-1(c); see I.R.C. § 707(c) ("guaranteed payments" defined)] despite the fact that guaranteed payments are taxed as salary or other ordinary income compensation to the partner [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.162-7] and allowed as business deductions to the partnership, provided they meet the general deductibility tests of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 707(c); Treas. Reg. § 1.707-1(c)].

California law on the taxation of employee benefit plans conforms to federal law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(a)(1)], unless otherwise noted.

§ 1D.30 "Fringe Benefits" Defined

Although the phrase "fringe benefits" is often used as a catch-all to refer to any form of employee compensation other than direct cash compensation, such as sickness, accident, hospitalization, medical expenses, recreational, welfare, and similar benefit plans [see Treas. Reg. § 1.162-10], "fringe benefits" is used in this chapter to mean "specified fringe benefit plans" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code. These plans include any plan under I.R.C. §§ 79 (group term life insurance), 105 (amounts received under accident and health plans), 106 (employer contributions to accident and health plans), 125 (cafeteria plans), 127 (educational assistance programs), 129 (dependent care assistance programs), and 137 (qualified adoption assistance programs) [I.R.C. § 6039D(d)(1)].

§ 1D.31 Group Term Life Insurance

[1] Life Insurance Benefits--In General

Life insurance pays a specified amount of money to a beneficiary if the insured dies while the policy is in effect. If the insured is a participating employee, that amount is frequently referred to as a death benefit.

There are two main categories of life insurance. The first, "whole life insurance," is payable whenever the insured's death occurs; its premiums are payable in a lump sum ("single premium life"), for a specified period of time ("limited payment life"), or for life ("ordinary life").

The second, "term life insurance," is payable only if the insured dies within a specified period. To qualify for the tax exemption, insurance provided under a group term life insurance plan must be term (not whole life) insurance, as its name indicates, and must meet certain other statutory requirements discussed below [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(a); see [2], below]. However, an exception to the term insurance requirement is made when the policy specifies the portion of the premium allocated to term insurance, and the employer pays only that portion [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(b)(1)(i); see Rev. Rul. 71-360, 1971-2 C.B. 87 ; Rev. Rul. 75-91, 1975-1 C.B. 39 (employee pays portion of premium attributable to factors other than term life insurance)].

For further discussion of types of life insurance, see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations , and California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 20, Nature and Types of Life Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[2] Qualification Requirements

[a] "Group Term Life Insurance" Defined

Group term life insurance is life insurance coverage that satisfies the following conditions [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(a)]:

- Provides general death benefits only, excludable from the beneficiary's gross income under I.R.C. § 101(a); [but see Treas. Reg. § 1.79-3(f) (provision of other benefits); see also [b], below].

- Is provided to a group of employees on the basis of factors that preclude individual selection [see Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(c); see also [c], [d], below];

- Is provided under a policy carried directly or indirectly by the employer [see [e], below]; and

- Determines the amount of insurance available to each employee under a formula that precludes individual selection. The plan's coverage formula may be based on factors such as age, years of service, compensation, or employee position [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(a)(4)]. Additional non-discrimination requirements, however, apply to key employees [see [f], below].

[b] General Death Benefit

To qualify for the income tax exclusion under I.R.C. § 79, the policy must provide a general death benefit excludable under I.R.C. § 101(a) [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(a)(1)]. Many types of insurance, such as travel insurance and accident and health insurance, do not provide a general death benefit. These types of insurance, as well as insurance provided on the spouse of the employee, do not qualify for this tax exclusion [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(f)(2), (3)]. However, an employer's contributions to these types of insurance may be excludable under another statute. For example, the gross income of an employee does not include employer-provided coverage under an accident or health plan [I.R.C. § 106].

[c] "Group of Employees" Defined

For purposes of group term life insurance, a "group of employees" must include all the employees of the employer or a class or classes of employees that preclude individual selection [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b)]. The group may be based on factors such as age, marital status, or factors related to employment [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b)]. "Factors related to employment" include union membership, types of duties performed, compensation received, and length of employment [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b)]. Participation in a pension or profit-sharing plan, stock bonus plan, or accident or health insurance plan are factors considered related to employment, even if employee contributions to the plan are required [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b)]. Stock ownership is not a factor related to employment; however, participation in an employer's stock bonus plan is such a factor [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b)].

[d] "Employee" Defined

For purposes of group term life insurance, "employee" does not include a self-employed individual, that is, a sole proprietor, partner, or 2-percent S corporation shareholder [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b); see I.R.C. § 1372(a)]. It does, however, include employees of those entities [I.R.C. § 79(b)(1), (3); Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b); Rev. Rul. 68-577, 1968-2 C.B. 50]. A member of a limited liability company that is taxed as a partnership would presumably also not be considered an "employee" [see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies]. Thus, this tax-favored benefit is available to C corporation employees, including shareholder employees as well as non-owner employees, employees of sole proprietorships, partnerships, limited liability companies, and S corporations, as well as their retired employees, with the exception of disability retirees [I.R.C. § 79(b)(1), (e); Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0(b)].

[e] "Policy Carried Directly or Indirectly" Defined

A policy is carried directly or indirectly by the employer if (1) the employer pays any part of the insurance directly or through another person; or (2) an employer maintains a contributory plan and charges at least one employee more than the cost of the insurance and at least one employee less than the cost of the insurance [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-0; see Treas. Reg. § 1.79-3(d)(2) (table determining cost)].

[f] Non-Discrimination Requirements

The non-discrimination requirements are designed to prevent favorable treatment of key employees [see I.R.C. § 79(d); see also I.R.C. § 416(i)(1) ("key employee" defined)]. However, failure to satisfy these requirements affects only the tax treatment of key employees; it does not effect the favorable tax treatment afforded lower-paid employees [*I.R.C. § 79(d)*1); see [3], below].

A non-discrimination eligibility provision requires the following [I.R.C. § 79(d)(3)(A)]:

- The plan benefit 70 percent of all employees;
- At least 85 percent of participants not be key employees;
- The plan's eligibility classification be found by the Internal Revenue Service not to discriminate in favor of key employees; or
- The plan be part of a cafeteria plan that satisfies the eligibility requirements for cafeteria plans under I.R.C. § 125 [see § 1D.35].

Certain employees, however, are excluded from these requirements, including the following [I.R.C. § 79(d)(3)(B)]:

- Employees who have not completed three years of service;
- Part-time or seasonal employees;
- Employees not covered by the plan but covered by a collective bargaining agreement, if group term life insurance benefits were the subject of good faith bargaining between employee representatives and employer or employers; and
- Employees who are non-resident aliens with no United States earned income.

A non-discrimination benefits provision requires that all benefits available to key employees be available to all other participants [I.R.C. § 79(d)(4)], except that life insurance benefits bearing a uniform relationship to compensation are not discriminatory [I.R.C. § 79(d)(5)]. Further, different level of benefits may be provided for present and former employees, without being discriminatory [I.R.C. § 79(d)(8)].

[g] Plans Covering Fewer Than 10 Employees

In order for the tax exemption to apply [see [3], below], the plan generally must cover at least 10 employees [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(c)(1)]. If the covered group consists of fewer than 10 employees, special rules apply. Insurance must be provided for all full-time employees, and the insurance coverage provided must be computed based either as a uniform percentage of the employee's salary or according to coverage brackets established by the insurer [Treas. Reg. § 1.79-1(c)(2)].

[3] Taxation of Group Life Insurance Premiums

[a] Exclusion by Employee

Up to $50,000 of group term life insurance coverage may be provided to the employee without the employee being taxed on the premiums the employer paid for this benefit [I.R.C. § 79(a); see [b], below]. To the extent that the insurance exceeds $50,000, the excess is includable in the employee's taxable income and is subject to social security and medicare taxes [I.R.C. § 3121(a)(2)(C); see I.R.C. § 3111(a), (b) (social security and medicare taxes)]. It is not subject, however, to federal unemployment tax or withholding [I.R.C. §§ 3401(a)(14), 3306(b)(2)]. Moreover, the amount of the employee's taxable income for the excess coverage is determined by using the Uniform Premium Table (UPT) found in the Treasury Regulations, which usually values the cost of the coverage at less than its actual cost [see Treas. Reg. § 1.79-3(d)(2)]. Thus, a qualified group term life insurance plan offers the employee two main advantages: an exclusion from income of the premiums paid by the employer for the first $50,000 of coverage and favorable tax treatment with respect to amounts paid for coverage in excess of $50,000.

Refer to [4], below, for a discussion of taxation of death benefits.

[b] Deduction by Employer

Premiums paid by an employer for group term life insurance coverage qualify as ordinary and necessary business expenses and may be deducted by the employer if they are both reasonable in amount and paid for services actually rendered [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); see I.R.C. § 212]. However, no deduction is allowed for premiums paid on a life insurance policy or endowment or annuity contract, if the employer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under the policy or contract [I.R.C. § 264(a)(1); see I.R.C. § 79(b)(2)]. "Key employee" insurance, commonly purchased by an employer to covers its own losses in the event of the death of a key employee, is an example of this type of non-deductible insurance.

[4] Taxation of Death Benefits

[a] Income Taxes

On the death of an employee covered under a group term plan, life insurance proceeds generally will not be included in the recipient's taxable income [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)]. This rule, however, is subject to limitations, primarily in the case of "transfers for value" [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)]. For further discussion of the income taxation of life insurance proceeds, see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations , and California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 71, Life Insurance Considerations in Personal and Estate Planning (Matthew Bender).

[b] Estate Taxes

The value of the death benefits is includable in the employee's gross estate for estate tax purposes unless (1) the benefits are paid to a beneficiary other than the executor or estate of the employee, and (2) the employee possess no incidents of ownership with respect to the policy at the time of his or her death [I.R.C. § 2042]. "Incidents of ownership" broadly includes the right of the insured or the insured's estate to economic benefits under the policy, or to a greater than 5-percent reversionary interest in the value of the policy, and can include the power to change beneficiaries, to assign the policy or to revoke an assignment, to surrender or to cancel the policy, or to borrow against the policy [see I.R.C. § 2042(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(2),(6); Rev. Rul. 71-463, 1971-2 C.B. 333]. For further discussion of the estate taxation of life insurance proceeds, see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations , and California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 71, Life Insurance Considerations in Personal and Estate Planning (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Fringe Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.33

§ 1D.33 Accident and Health Benefits

[1] In General

An accident and health plan established by an employer for the benefit of its employees is another type of fringe benefit potentially excludable from the employee's taxable income. When properly used, accident and health plans can provide substantial tax benefits to employees, and may be advantageous to employers as well [see [2], below; § 1D.14].

Accident and health benefits include such generic types of insurance as accident insurance, medical insurance, disability income insurance, and accidental death and dismemberment insurance.

A qualified plan may take one of two forms: a funded medical and hospital "insurance" plan, in which the employer purchases insurance and the insurance proceeds are used to pay medical expenses incurred by the employee, the employee's spouse, or dependents; or a "medical expense reimbursement" plan, in which the employer contributes funds to a separate trust or account used to reimburse employees directly for accident and health expenses that they and their spouses or dependents incur [Treas. Reg. § 1.106-1].

[2] Taxation of Accident and Health Plans

[a] Exclusion of Employer Contributions by Employee

An employee's gross income does not include the value of employer contributions to accident and health plans [I.R.C. § 106; Treas. Reg. § 1.106-1]. If the employer funds its accident and health plan with insurance (or some other funding vehicle), that funding will not result in taxable income to its employees [see I.R.C. § 106; Treas. Reg. § 1.106-1; P.L.R. 8411064 (employer contributions to accident and health plans are not employee income, whether plan is insured or otherwise)].

[b] Exclusion of Benefits by Employee

An employee's gross income does not include amounts paid directly or indirectly to the employee through an accident and health plan for medical care expenses incurred by the employee, the employee's spouse, or dependents, except to the extent that the employee has previously deducted those expenses [I.R.C. § 105(b); see I.R.C. §§ 152 (dependent defined), 213(d) (medical care defined)]. Also excluded from an employee's gross income are amounts constituting payment for permanent loss, or loss of use of a body member or function, or permanent disfigurement of the employee, the employee's spouse, or dependents, when the amount is dependent on the nature of the injury and not on the length of absence from work [I.R.C. § 105(c); see Treas. Reg. § 1.105-3 ("permanent disfigurement" defined)]. Disability and wage continuation pension benefits generally are no longer excluded from income [Social Security Amendments Act of 1983, Pub. L. No. 98-21, 122(b) (repealing I.R.C. § 105(d) for tax years beginning after 1983)]. For purposes of the tax exclusion, the benefits may be insured or self-insured and an employer, fund, employee association, or insurer may pay them under the plan [I.R.C. § 105(e); Treas. Reg. § 1.105-1(b)].

[c] Deduction by Employer

Payments made by an employer to an accident or health plan are deductible as ordinary and necessary business expenses by the employer as long as they constitute reasonable compensation to the employee, taking into account all of the compensation paid by the employer to the employee [I.R.C. § 162; see I.R.C. § 212].

[d] Self-Employed Individuals Not Employees

Self-employed individuals (sole proprietors, partners, and 2-percent S corporation shareholders) do not qualify for the tax exemption under Internal Revenue Code Sections 105 and 106, with regard to amounts paid for themselves, because they are not considered "employees" for purposes of the statute [I.R.C. §§ 105(g), 1372(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.105-1(a); see § 1D.31]. A member of a limited liability company that is taxed as a partnership presumably would also be considered self-employed [see vol. 4, Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies].

[3] Non-discrimination Rules

There are no statutory non-discrimination rules for health and accident plans that provide benefits solely through insurance [see former I.R.C. § 89; Pub. L. No. 101-140, § 202(a), (c)]. Thus, such plans can discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees or self-employed individuals. However, the non-discrimination rules applicable to self-insured medical reimbursement plans provide that there will be no exclusion for benefits paid to highly compensated individuals that discriminate in their favor as to benefits or eligibility [I.R.C. § 105(h)(1); see I.R.C. § 105(h)(5)].

A "self-insured medical" reimbursement plan is an employer plan that reimburses employees for medical expenses for which reimbursement is not provided under a policy of accident and health insurance [I.R.C. § 105(h)(6)]. Certain other plans issued by a licensed insurance company that do not shift the risk to the insurer are also considered self-insured plans and, as such, are subject to the non-discrimination rules discussed above [see Treas. Reg. § 1.105-11(b)(1)(ii)].

The non-discrimination benefits rules require that all benefits provided for highly compensated participants be provided to all other participants [I.R.C. § 105(h)(4)]. All reimbursements received by highly compensated individuals that do not meet this requirement are "excess reimbursements" and must be included in the recipient's gross income [I.R.C. § 105(h)(7); see I.R.C. § 105(h)(7)(A) (excessive reimbursements defined for non-discrimination benefit rules)].

The non-discrimination eligibility rules require that [I.R.C. § 105(h)(3)(A)]:

- The plan benefit at least 70 percent of all employees, or at least 80 percent, if at least 70 percent are eligible to benefit under the plan; or

- The plan's eligibility classification be found by the Internal Revenue Service not to discriminate in favor of highly compensated individuals.

Certain employees, however, are excluded from these requirements, including all of the following [I.R.C. § 105(h)(3)(B)]:

- Employees who have not completed three years of service;
- Employees under the age of 25;
- Part-time or seasonal employees;
- Employees not covered by the plan but covered by a collective bargaining agreement, if the accident or health benefits were the subject of good faith bargaining between employee representatives and employer or employers; and
- Employees who are non-resident aliens with no United States earned income.

If the eligibility requirements are not met, highly compensated individuals must include in their gross income all "excessive reimbursements" [I.R.C. § 105(h)(1); see I.R.C. § 105(h)(7)(B) (excess reimbursements defined for non-discrimination eligibility rules)].

§ 1D.34 Requirements for Continuation of Coverage Under Group Health Plans

Under federal law, an employer with more than 20 employees that offers a group health plan must make continuation coverage under the plan available to its employees, under specified terms, on the occurrence of a qualifying event [I.R.C. § 4980B; 29 U.S.C. §§ 1161-1169; 42 U.S.C. §§ 300bb-1-300bb-8; see I.R.C. § 4980B(f)(3); 29 U.S.C. § 1163; 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-3 ("qualifying event" defined)]. This type of coverage is commonly called COBRA continuation coverage [see Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985, §§ 10001-10003, Pub. L. No. 99-272].

The continuation coverage must consist of coverage that, at the time the coverage is provided, is identical to the coverage provided under the plan to similarly situated beneficiaries to whom a qualifying event has not occurred [I.R.C. § 4980B(f)(2)(A) (if plan coverage is modified for any group of similarly situated beneficiaries, coverage must also be modified for qualified beneficiaries); 29 U.S.C. § 1162(1); 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-2(1)].

The continuation coverage must generally last 36 months after the date of the qualifying event, unless the qualifying event is the termination of the employee, in which case the coverage need last only 18 months [I.R.C. § 4980B(f)(2)(B); 29 U.S.C. § 1162(2); 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-2(2); see I.R.C. § 4980B(f)(2)(B)(v); 29 U.S.C. § 1162(2)(A) (rules governing covered employees entitled to Medicare for plan years after 1989)].

The plan may require the payment of a premium for any period of continuation coverage. However, the premium may not exceed 102 percent of the premium otherwise applicable under the plan, and the payor may elect to pay the premiums in monthly installments [I.R.C. § 4980B(f)(2)(C); 29 U.S.C. § 1162(3); 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-2(3)]. Further, the continuation coverage must not be conditioned on, or discriminate on the basis of the lack of, evidence of insurability [I.R.C. § 4980B(f)(2)(D); 29 U.S.C. § 1162(4); 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-2(4)].

If the employer's group health plan does not comply with the federal requirements with respect to any qualifying beneficiary [see I.R.C. § 4980B(f)], a penalty tax will be imposed on the employer or, in the case of a multiemployer plan, on the plan [I.R.C. § 4980B(a), (e); see I.R.C. § 4980B(d)(2), (3) (exceptions for governmental and church plans); see also I.R.C. § 414(d) ("governmental plans" defined), (e) ("church plans" defined)]. Further, group health plans maintained by any state receiving funds from the Public Health Services Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 201 et seq.], or by any of its political subdivisions, agencies, or instrumentalities, must provide continuation coverage that satisfies the federal requirements [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 300bb-1-300bb-8]. Thus, although California insurance law does not mandate the continuation of coverage benefit [see Ins. Code § 12692(h)], employers purchasing group health policies for their employees must require that the policy contain this benefit as a result of the federal requirements [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 300bb-1-300bb-8].

For further discussion of continuation requirements, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 2, Chapter 26, The Health and Disability Contract (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Fringe Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.35

§ 1D.35 Cafeteria Plans

[1] "Cafeteria Plan" Defined

A "cafeteria plan" is a written plan that allows employees to choose between receiving additional cash compensation or having a corresponding amount go towards a nontaxable fringe benefit or combination of benefits [see I.R.C. § 125]. The cafeteria plan does not itself create the nontaxable benefits; it merely allows the employee to make the choice among various benefits, if the employee does not opt to receive taxable cash compensation [see [3], below]. Cafeteria plans have become an increasingly popular means of offering employee benefits, as a result of the flexibility they provide employees in determining, for themselves, the type and combination of compensation they will receive.

[2] "Employee" Defined

For purposes of cafeteria plans, the term "employee" includes present and former employees but not self-employed individuals [see I.R.C. § 125(b)(2)]. As a result, sole proprietors, partners, and 2-percent shareholders are unable to avail themselves of this tax exemption, since they are not considered employees [see § 1D.19[4]]. A member of a limited liability company that is taxed as a partnership presumably would also be considered self-employed and, hence, not an employee [see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies].

[3] Tax Aspects; Non-Discrimination Requirements

If the employee elects to receive cash benefits, that compensation is deductible by the business [I.R.C. § 162(a); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.162-7, 1.162-9, 1.162-10] and includable in the gross income of the employee in the tax year the compensation is actually or constructively received [I.R.C. § 61(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.61-2(a)(1)]. Constructive receipt occurs when compensation is or becomes available without "substantial limitations or restrictions" [Treas. Reg. § 1.451-2(a)]. However, the statute governing cafeteria plans creates an important exception to the doctrine of constructive receipt and allows the taxpayer to choose an alternative nontaxable fringe benefit instead of receiving addition cash compensation (taxable income) [see I.R.C. § 125(a)].

If the plan fails to meet certain statutory non-discrimination requirements [see I.R.C. § 125(g)], however, highly compensated employees or key employees electing a normally tax-exempt benefit under the plan must include the value of the benefit in income [I.R.C. § 125(b)(1), (2); see I.R.C. § 414(q) ("highly compensated employee" defined)].

[4] Available Benefits

Qualified benefits, that is, benefits eligible for the tax exemption, include [I.R.C. § 125(f); see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.125-2T]:

- Group term life insurance [I.R.C. § 79; see § 1D.31].
- Accident and health coverage [I.R.C. §§ 105, 106; see § 1D.33].
- Dependent care assistance [I.R.C. § 129; see § 1D.37].
- Cash or deferred plans [I.R.C. § 401(k); see § 1D.60].
- Other statutory fringe benefits expressly excluded from the gross income of an employee, excluding the following [I.R.C. § 125(f); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.125-2T]: scholarships and tuition reduction programs [I.R.C. § 117]; educational assistance programs [I.R.C. § 127; see § 1D.38]; and miscellaneous fringe benefits specified by I.R.C. § 132 [I.R.C. § 132; see § 1D.39]. Also specifically excluded are deferred compensation plans, with the exception of cash or deferred arrangements [I.R.C. § 125(d)(2)].

§ 1D.36 Miscellaneous Fringe Benefits

Specific statutory fringe benefit programs allow employees to exclude certain employer- provided benefits from gross income. These include certain amounts received under cafeteria plans [I.R.C. § 125], educational assistance payments [I.R.C. § 127], dependent care assistance payments [I.R.C. § 129], and adoption assistance payments [I.R.C. § 137]. I.R.C. § 132 also allows an exclusion for a variety of non- statutory fringe benefits. (qualified transportation)]. Further, I.R.C. § 132 has restricted the use of non-statutory fringe benefits by adopting new statutory standards [see § 1D.39].

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Fringe Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.37

§ 1D.37 Dependent Care Assistance Programs

[1] Definitions

A dependent care assistance program is another employee fringe benefit given preferential tax treatment [see I.R.C. § 129]. Under the program, an employer may either reimburse the employee or directly pay for expenses incurred by the employee for dependent care assistance [see I.R.C. § 129(e)(1)]. "Dependent care assistance expenses" are those that would qualify as employment-related expenses under I.R.C. § 21(b)(2) [I.R.C. § 129(e)(1)]. These are expenses for household or dependent care services for the care of one or more qualifying individuals necessary for the gainful employment of the employee [I.R.C. § 21(b)(2)]. A "qualifying individual" is a dependent of the taxpayer who is under the age of 13 and who has the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer for more than one-half of the taxable year or the spouse or a dependent of the taxpayer who is physically or mentally incapable of caring for himself or herself [I.R.C. § 21(b)(1); see I.R.C. § 151(c) (additional personal exemption for dependents)].

[2] Income Taxation of Dependent Care Assistance Programs

[a] Exclusion by Employee

The first $5,000 (or $2,500 for a married person filing separately) in value of qualifying payments or services is excluded from the taxable income of the employee benefitting from the program [I.R.C. § 129(a)(1), (2)], subject to the following limitations. To be excluded from the employee's taxable income, payments by the employer may not exceed the employee's earned income during the taxable year, or, if the employee is married, they may not exceed the earned income of the employee's spouse, if less [I.R.C. § 129(b)]. This limitation effectively precludes married taxpayers from taking advantage of the program if either spouse is not employed, unless the unemployed spouse is a full-time student or incapable of taking care of himself or herself [I.R.C. § 129(b)(2)]. Further, payments by the employer are not excludable from income to the extent that they are paid to an individual under the age of 19, or to a dependent or spouse of the employee [I.R.C. § 129(c)].

Amounts excluded from the gross income of the employee cannot be deducted by the employee, or claimed as a credit under any other section of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 129(e)(7)]. However, the exclusion from income of the employer's payments generally is more beneficial than the tax credit for dependent care services available under I.R.C. § 21 [see I.R.C. § 21(a) (calculation of allowable credit)].

[b] Tax Withholding by Employer

Excludable employer contributions to, and benefits under, dependent care assistance programs and qualified military benefits are exempt from social security and medicare taxes, federal unemployment taxes, and federal income tax withholding [I.R.C. §§ 3121(a)(18), 3306(b)(13), 3401(a)(18)].

[3] "Employee" Defined

An "employee," for purposes of dependent care assistance programs, includes self-employed persons [I.R.C. § 129(e)(3)]. Thus, although there are restrictions on benefits payable to owners and shareholders [see I.R.C. § 129(d); see also [4], below], unlike most statutory fringe benefit plans, owners of unincorporated businesses are eligible for benefits under dependent care assistance programs. However, self-employed persons, who are not eligible to participate in cafeteria plans [see § 1D.35[2]], will not be able to participate in a dependent care assistance programs funded by salary contributions under such plans.

[4] Requirements for Qualification

To qualify for preferential tax treatment, a dependent care assistance program must be a separate written plan of the employer for the exclusive benefit of its employees [I.R.C. § 129(d)(1)]. The program must satisfy various requirements designed to prevent discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees [see I.R.C. § 129(d)(2)]. It must benefit employees who qualify under a classification set up by the employer and found by the Internal Revenue Service not to be discriminatory in favor of employees who are highly compensated or their dependents [I.R.C. § 129(d)(3); see I.R.C. § 129(d)(9) (excluded employees)]. In addition, plan contributions and benefits must not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees [I.R.C. § 129(d)(2)]. Further, shareholders or owners (or their spouses or dependents) who, on any day of the year, own more than 5 percent of the stock or the capital or profits interest of the business, may not receive more than 25 percent of the amounts paid or incurred by the business for dependent care assistance during the year [I.R.C. § 129(d)(4)]. Average benefits provided to employees who are not highly compensated employees must be at least 55 percent of the average benefits provided to highly compensated employees [I.R.C. § 129(d)(8)(A)], except that, in the case of benefits provided through a salary reduction agreement, a plan may disregard any employees whose compensation is less than $25,000 [I.R.C. § 129(d)(8)(B); see I.R.C. §§ 414(q)(4), 415(c)(3) (for this purpose, "compensation" includes amounts contributed to cafeteria plans and cash or deferred plans)].

The plan is not required to be pre-funded by the employer [I.R.C. § 129(d)(5)].

If the plan fails to meet the qualification requirements discussed above, the income exclusion will be eliminated only for highly compensated employees [I.R.C. § 129(d)(1)].

§ 1D.38 Employer-Provided Educational Assistance

An educational or training expense may be excludable from income if it is a working condition fringe [see I.R.C. § 132(d), (j)(8); see also § 1D.39[4]]. Thus, employer-paid, job-related education is excludable from the employee's income (and deductible by the employer), if properly substantiated [see I.R.C. § 162]. Further, job-related educational expenses may be excluded as a working condition fringe by self-employed individuals (including sole proprietors, partners and 2-percent S corporation shareholders), as well as common-law employees [see I.R.C. § 132(d)]. A member of a limited liability company that is taxed as a partnership would presumably also be considered self-employed [see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies].

The maximum annual exclusion for an individual is $5,250 [I.R.C. § 127(a)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Fringe Benefit Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.39

§ 1D.39 Internal Revenue Code Section 132 Benefits

[1] In General

The following types of miscellaneous fringe benefits are excluded from the income of the benefitted employee and are deductible by the employer [I.R.C. § 132(a); see Treas. Reg. § 1.162-10]:

- No-additional-cost services [see [2], below].
- Qualified employee discounts [see [3], below].
- Working condition fringes [see [4], below].
- De minimis fringes [see [5], below].
- Qualified transportation fringes [see [6], below].
- Qualified moving expense reimbursement [see [7], below].
- Qualified retirement planning services [see [8], below].

[2] No-Additional-Cost Services

"No-additional-cost services" are services provided by the employer to the employee (1) that the employer offers for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the business in which the employee works, and (2) for which the employer incurs no substantial additional costs, including foregone revenue and lost productive time, in providing to the employee [I.R.C. § 132(b); see Treas. Reg. § 1.132-2(a)(5)]. For purposes of the exclusion for no-additional-cost services, an "employee" includes a self-employed individual [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)(1); see I.R.C. § 401(c)(1) ("self-employed individual" defined)]. Employers may additionally extend no-additional-cost services on a tax-free basis to spouses and dependent children of employees and to retired and disabled employees and surviving spouses of deceased employees [

I.R.C. § 132(h)(1), (2); see I.R.C. § 132(h)(3) (special rule for parents in case of air transportation)].

Examples of no-additional-cost services include free air travel provided to airline employees on a stand-by basis, and free room accommodations provided to hotel employees [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-2(c)].

The exclusion from income applies to owners, officers, or other highly compensated employees only if the services are available on a non-discriminatory basis [I.R.C. § 132(j)(1)]. However, if the non-discrimination requirement is not met, employees who are not highly compensated nevertheless retain their tax exemption [I.R.C. § 132(j)(1); see I.R.C. § 414(q) (highly compensated employee defined)].

[3] Qualified Employee Discounts

"Qualified employee discounts" are discounts to employees on property (other than real property and property of a kind commonly held for investment) or services normally offered for sale in the employer's lines of business [I.R.C. § 132(c)(1),(4)]. The amount of the exemption for property may not exceed the normal gross profit percentage on sales to customers [I.R.C. § 132(c)(1)(A)]; the amount of the exemption for services may not exceed 20 percent of the sales price to customers [I.R.C. § 132(c)(1)(B)]. Discounts in excess of these limitations are taxable to the employee [see I.R.C. § 132(a)].

For purposes of the exclusion for qualified employee discounts, an "employee" includes a self-employed individual [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)(1); see I.R.C. § 401(c)(1) ("self-employed individual" defined)]. Employers may extend qualified employee discounts on a tax-free basis to spouses and dependent children of employees and to retired and disabled employees and surviving spouses of deceased employees [I.R.C. § 132(h)(1), (2)].

As an example of a qualified employee discount, a department store might allow its employees to purchase items at a discount, provided that the discount does not exceed the limitations discussed above.

A qualified employee discount is subject to the same non-discrimination rules applied to no-additional cost fringes [I.R.C. § 132(j)(1); see § 1D.39[2]].

[4] Working Condition Fringes

"Working condition fringes" include any property or services provided to an employee, to the extent that if the employee paid for the property or services, they would be deductible to the employee as a trade or business expense, or as depreciation [I.R.C. § 132(d); see I.R.C. § 162 (trade or business expenses), 167 (depreciation)]. Items relating to another trade or business of the employee do not qualify for the exemption and are taxable to the employee [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-5(a)(2)].

Unlike no-additional-cost services and qualified employee discounts [see § 1D.39[1], [2]], working condition fringes are not subject to anti-discrimination rules [see I.R.C. § 132(j)(1)] and therefore may be offered to only a select group of employees. For purposes of the exclusion for working condition fringes, the term "employee" includes a self-employed individual [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)(2); see I.R.C. § 401(c)(1) ("self-employed individual" defined)].

An example of a working condition fringe is the use of a company car. Thus, employees who use company cars only for business or whose personal use is de minimis are not required to include the value of the use in their income [see I.R.C. § 274(i)]. Personal use of a company car that is not de minimis, however, must be included in the employee's taxable income [see I.R.C. § 274(i); see also Treas. Reg. § 1.132-5(b) (calculation of value of personal use)].

[5] De Minimis Fringe Benefits

A "de minimis fringe benefit" is any property or service the value of which is so small as to make accounting for it unreasonable or administratively impractical [I.R.C. § 132(e)(1)]. Specifically included are eating facilities on or near the employer's business premises, provided that the revenue derived from the facility normally covers its operating costs [I.R.C. § 132(e)(2)]. However, such an eating facility will not qualify as a de minimis fringe benefit if access is available only to highly compensated employees [I.R.C. § 132(e)(2); see I.R.C. § 414(q) ("highly compensated employee" defined)].

For purposes of the exclusion for de minimis fringe benefits, "employee" includes a self-employed individual [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)(4) ("any recipient" of a de minimis benefit); see I.R.C. § 401(c)(1) ("self-employed individual" defined)].

Besides the eating facilities mentioned above, examples of de minimis fringe benefits include the value of office parties, infrequent personal use of office equipment such as photocopiers, or nominally valued Christmas gifts [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-6].

The value of on-premises gyms and other athletic facilities is separately enumerated as exempt from an employee's gross income [I.R.C. § 132(j)(4)(A); see Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(b)(3) ("employee" defined for this purpose)].

[6] Qualified Transportation Fringe Benefit

A "qualified transportation fringe" includes (1) transportation in a commuter highway vehicle between the employee's home and place of employment; (2) any transit pass; (3) qualified parking; and (4) any qualified bicycle commuting reimbursement [I.R.C. § 132(f)(1); see I.R.C. § 132(f)(5) (definitions)]. The amount of qualified transportation fringe that may be excluded from the employee's gross income is limited to $60 per month for transportation in a commuter highway vehicle and any transit pass, and $155 per month in the case of qualified parking [I.R.C. § 132(f)(2)]. These amounts are subject to inflation adjustments [I.R.C. § 132(f)(6)]. For 2002, the maximum exclusion for transportation in a commuter highway vehicle and transit pass is $100, and the monthly limit for parking is $185 [Rev. Proc. 2001-59 , § 3.09, 2001-52 I.R.B. 623]. For purposes of the qualified transportation fringe benefit, the term "employee" does not include a self-employed individual [I.R.C. § 132(f)(5)(E); see I.R.C. § 401(c)(1) ("self-employed individual" defined)].

[7] Qualified Moving Expense Reimbursement

Employer reimbursements of deductible moving expenses are excluded from employees' income, effective for benefits provided after December 31, 1993 [I.R.C. § 132(g); see I.R.C. § 217 (deductible moving expenses)]. It is unclear whether this deduction applies to self-employed individuals, including partners and 2-percent S corporation shareholders. As noted above, the Treasury Regulations treat self-employed individuals as employees for purposes of no-additional cost services, qualified employee discounts, working condition fringes, and de minimis fringes [Treas. Reg. § 1.132-1(a)-(d)], while the Internal Revenue Code specifically excludes self-employed individuals from the definition of employee for purposes of qualified transportation fringes [I.R.C. § 132(f)(5)(E); see I.R.C. § 401(c)(1) (self-employed individual defined)].

[8] Qualified Retirement Planning Services

Qualified retirement planning services provided to employees and their spouses by an employer maintaining a qualified plan are excludable from gross income [I.R.C. § 132(a)(7), (m), effective for years beginning after December 31, 2001]. The exclusion does not apply with respect to highly compensated employees unless the services are available on substantially the same terms to each member of the group of employees normally provided education and information regarding the employer's qualified plan [I.R.C. § 132(m)(2)]. "Qualified retirement planning services" include any retirement planning advice and information [I.R.C. § 132(m)(1)].

The exclusion is not limited to information regarding the qualified plan, and, thus, for example, applies to advice and information regarding retirement income planning for employees and their spouses and how the employer's plan fits into their overall retirement income plan. Conference reports indicate that the exclusion does not apply to services that may be related to retirement planning, such as tax preparation, accounting, legal or brokerage services. It is intended that the treatment of retirement advice provided in a nondiscriminatory manner will be clarified. It is intended that the Secretary, in determining the application of the exclusion to highly compensated employees, may permit employers to take into consideration employee circumstances other than compensation and position in providing advice to classifications of employees. Thus, for example, the Secretary may permit employers to limit certain advice to individuals nearing retirement age under the plan [Conference Committee report to Pub. L. No. 107-16, § 665].

§ 1D.40 Adoption Assistance Programs

Employees may exclude from gross income amounts paid or expenses incurred by an employer for qualified adoption expenses in connection with the adoption of a child by the employee. To be excludable, the amounts must be furnished pursuant to an adoption assistance program [I.R.C. § 137(a)(1)]. The maximum amount excludable with respect to any adoption generally is $10,000 per eligible child, for tax years beginning after December 31, 2001 [I.R.C. § 137(b)(1); the $10,000 amount is adjusted for inflation after 2002 (I.R.C. § 137(f))]. For taxable years beginning after 2002, the amount of adoption expenses taken into account in determining the exclusion in the case of a special needs adoption is increased by the excess (if any) of $10,000 over the aggregate qualified adoption expenses with respect to the adoption for the taxable year the adoption becomes final and all prior taxable years. Thus, for an adoption of a child with special needs which becomes final during a taxable year, a $10,000 exclusion is permitted even if the aggregate qualified adoption expenses for the adoption are less than that amount [I.R.C. § 137(a)(2)]. For tax years beginning before January 1, 2002, the maximum exclusion is $5,000 ($6,000 for a child with special needs) [I.R.C. § 137(b)(1), before amendment by Pub. L. No. 107-16]. The amount excludable must be reduced (but not below zero) if the taxpayer's adjusted gross income exceeds $150,000 ($75,000 for tax years beginning before January 1, 2002). The amount of the reduction is determined according to the ratio that the taxpayer's adjusted gross income in excess of $150,000 ($75,000 for tax years beginning before January 1, 2002) bears to $40,000 [I.R.C. § 137(b)(2); the $150,000 amount is adjusted for inflation after 2002 (I.R.C. § 137(f))].

For all adoptions in tax years beginning before 2003, only amounts paid for "qualified adoption expenses" are eligible for the exclusion [I.R.C. § 137(a), before amendment by Pub. L. No. 107-16]. For tax years beginning after 2002, an exclusion of up to $10,000 is available for special needs adoptions regardless of whether the taxpayer has qualified adoption expenses [I.R.C. § 137(a)(2)]. "Qualified adoption expenses" include reasonable and necessary adoption fees, court costs, attorney fees, and other costs directly related to the adoption [I.R.C. §§ 23(d)(1), 137(d)]. Qualified adoption expenses, however, do not include costs of adopting a spouse's child or expenses that are reimbursed under an employer program or otherwise [I.R.C. §§ 23(d)(1)(C), (D), 137(d)]. Amounts paid for expenses incurred for foreign adoptions are excludable from gross income only if the adoption becomes final [I.R.C. §§ 23(e), 137(e)]. Taxpayers may also be eligible to claim a credit for qualified adoption expenses [I.R.C. § 23].

§ 1D.41 Additional Requirements for Welfare and Fringe Benefit Plans

In addition to the specific requirements discussed above in relation to particular fringe benefit plans, both the Internal Revenue Code and ERISA impose additional requirements of a more general nature.

Many of these plans, such as life insurance and health and disability plans, are "welfare benefit plans," as defined in ERISA [see 29 U.S.C. § 1002(1)]. As such, they are covered by ERISA's information and reporting requirements [29 U.S.C. § 1081 et seq.], fiduciary duties and trust requirements [29 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.], and reporting and enforcement requirements [29 U.S.C. § 1131 et seq.]. For additional coverage of ERISA, see § 1D.52 and Bacon, Prater & Tucker, Employee Benefits Guide(Matthew Bender).

In addition, certain fringe benefit plans are now required to meet annual reporting requirements under the Internal Revenue Code. These plans include the following [I.R.C. § 6039D(a), (d)]:

- Group-term life insurance purchased for employees [I.R.C. § 79].
- Accident and health plans [I.R.C. §§ 105, 106].
- Cafeteria plans [I.R.C. § 125].
- Educational assistance programs [I.R.C. § 127].
- Dependent care assistance programs [I.R.C. § 129].
- Qualified adoption assistance programs [I.R.C. § 137; see § 1D.40 for discussion].

The IRS, however, has suspended filing requirements under I.R.C. § 6039D for fringe benefit cafeteria plans, educational assistance programs, and adoption assistance programs [2002-16 I.R.B. 785, Notice 2002-24 ; see I.R.C. §§ 125, 127, 137].

An employer maintaining any of these plans must also keep records that meet applicable substantiation requirements [I.R.C. § 6039D(b)].

C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.50

§ 1D.50 Structure of Qualified Retirement Plans

Qualified retirement plans, that is, pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans (and other assorted plans) meeting the requirements of I.R.C. § 401(a), are probably the most important tax planning device available to a small business and its owners and employees. Although qualified retirement plans, unlike fringe benefits, eventually result in taxable income to their participants (deferred until distribution) [see I.R.C. § 402(a)], they also provide the employer and the participants, and the participants' beneficiaries with income tax advantages of a magnitude that is otherwise unobtainable. The tax aspects of qualified plans, which are generally similar with respect to the employer, the employee, and the plan's trust, are discussed in § 1D.51.

All qualified plans operate in a similar manner. The employer makes contributions on behalf of the employees who are plan participants [see I.R.C. § 404(a)]. The plan may also allow or require contributions from its participants [see Rev. Rul. 80-306, 1980-2 C.B. 131 (plan qualified even though all contributions came from employees); I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(A) (employees may elect to take salary reduction or forgo increase and have employer contribute difference to profit sharing or stock bonus plan); Rev. Rul. 72-349, 1972-2 C.B. 219 ; Rev. Rul. 70-658, 1970-2 C.B. 86 (mandatory contributions may be required as condition of plan participation)]. Contributions are made to a trust fund or custodial account or invested in annuity contracts issued by insurance companies [29 U.S.C. § 1103(a), (b)], where the funds are accumulated for the benefit of plan participants [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(1)]. Funds are normally distributed to the participants either at the participants' normal retirement age, as defined in the plan, or at another authorized payout, such as termination of service with the employer [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(14)]. Although distribution of funds varies depending on the type of plan and its individual provisions, funds are generally distributed as a lump-sum payment, as an installment payment over a defined period of years, or as an annuity providing payment over the participant's lifetime or the lifetime of the participant's spouse as well [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(9)(A)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.51

§ 1D.51 Tax Aspects of Qualified Retirement Plans--In General

A number of significant tax benefits are available for qualified retirement plans. Contributions made by the employer to qualified plans are deductible (within certain limits) by the employer [I.R.C. § 404(a)]. However, taxation of income received by the plan's participants or their beneficiaries is deferred until the funds are actually distributed, generally at retirement [I.R.C. §§ 402(a), 403(a); see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.83-3(e), 1.83-8(a) (absent statutory exception, plan payments ordinarily generate current funded benefit on which employee accrues current tax liability)]. Further, income received by the participant or by the participant's beneficiaries may be eligible for favorable tax treatment, if the amount qualifies as a lump-sum distribution [see I.R.C. § 402(d)]. Even when distributions are made in the form of an annuity over the participant's expected remaining life, distributions made during retirement years are likely to be taxed at a lower rate than if they had been included in the employee's taxable income at the time of contribution, assuming a lower income during retirement.

Earnings under qualified plans accumulate tax-free until they are distributed to the plan's participants or their beneficiaries [I.R.C. § 501(a)]. This tax benefit is twofold. First, the tax-free accumulation of plan earnings can be substantial over a short period of time. Second, under a non-qualified plan, the participant may be currently taxed on the trust's earnings, which, when added to the participant's other taxable income may push the participant in a higher tax bracket and result in the participant's being taxed at a higher rate.

No distinction is made in this discussion between corporate and noncorporate employers because the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) [Pub. L. No. 97-248] eliminated most of the advantages formerly enjoyed by corporate plans and brought plan treatment for noncorporate entities into general parity with that of corporations [see I.R.C. §§ 402, 404; see also § 1D.19[1], [2]].

PRACTICE TIP:

The tax-favored treatment of qualified plans tends to encourage their use. However, in some circumstances, businesses will find non-qualified approaches to employee compensation to be preferable. For example, although an incentive stock option allows the employee to defer tax on the receipt and exercise of a qualifying option, the employer gets no offsetting current deduction [see I.R.C. § 421(a)(2)

; see also § 1D.82[2]]. However, through a properly structured non-qualified stock option and special employee election to pay current tax [see I.R.C. § 83(b)(2); Treas. Reg. § 1.83-6(a)(1) (employer takes deduction in same year employee reports amount in income)], both employer and employee may come out ahead by using a non-qualified option [see § 1D.81[3]].

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.52

§ 1D.52 ERISA Aspects of Qualified Retirement Plans

[1] Enforcement

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) is a complex body of statutory and regulatory standards imposed on most qualified welfare benefit and pension plans. ERISA spans both the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 401 et seq.] and federal labor statutes [29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.]. The Internal Revenue Service generally enforces the tax law aspects of ERISA, while the Department of Labor enforces those aspects of ERISA related to the management of plan funds, the fiduciary responsibilities of plan administrators, and participant's rights. For example, when a plan fiduciary causes a plan to participate in a "prohibited transaction," the Department of Labor will be concerned with the breaches of fiduciary obligation incident to participation in the prohibited transaction [29 U.S.C. § 1132; see 29 U.S.C. § 1106 (prohibited transactions); see also § 1D.52[3]], while the Internal Revenue Service will primarily be involved in the collection of any excise taxes that may be imposed in the prohibited transaction [see I.R.C. § 4975].

[2] Fiduciary Standards

A plan fiduciary must discharge its duties as would a "prudent man." That is, the fiduciary must act with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use [29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(B)]. If a plan fiduciary fails to discharge all of its duties according to the prudent man standard, a plan fiduciary is subject to potential personal liability to the plan, its participants, or both [29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(A)].

A plan fiduciary must discharge its duties solely in the interests of plan participants and their beneficiaries and for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and beneficiaries and defraying reasonable expenses related to plan administration, or liability may result [29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(A)]. Furthermore, in certain circumstances, a plan fiduciary will be liable for breaches of fiduciary duty committed by another plan fiduciary [29 U.S.C. § 1105(a)]. Therefore, company officers and a corporation's directors generally ought not be plan fiduciaries, so that a conflict of interest cannot arise.

[3] Prohibited Transactions

A plan fiduciary who enters into a prohibited transaction breaches his or her fiduciary obligation [29 U.S.C. § 1109(a)]. The following acts are prohibited transactions under both ERISA and the Internal Revenue Code [29 U.S.C. § 1106; see I.R.C. § 4975(c)]:

- The sale, exchange, or lease between the plan and certain related individuals or entities ("parties in interest") [29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1); I.R.C. § 4975(c)(1)(A); see 29 U.S.C. § 1002(14) ("party in interest" defined); I.R.C. § 4975(c)(2) (I.R.C. uses "disqualified person" in place of Title 29's "party in interest"); but see I.R.C. § 4975(d)(22), (23) (exemptions)].

- The loan or extension of credit between a plan and a party in interest [29 U.S.C. §§ 1106(a)(1)(B), 1108(b)(d); I.R.C. § 4975(c)(1)(B); but see I.R.C. § 4975(d)(1), (23) (exemptions)].

- Furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between a plan and a party in interest [29 U.S.C. §§ 1106(a)(1)(C), 1108(b)(2) (exceptions); I.R.C. § 4975(c)(1)(C); but see I.R.C. § 4975(d)(2), (23) (exemptions)].

- The transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest of any income or assets of the plan [29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(D), (b)(1); I.R.C. § 4975(c)(1)(D),(E); but see I.R.C. § 4975(d)(23) (exemption)].

- Acquisition, on behalf of the plan, of employer securities or employer real property in violation of specified limitations [29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(E); see 29 U.S.C. § 1107 (allowable percentages and exceptions)].

In addition, a fiduciary is prohibited from acts of self-dealing, receiving payoffs, or participating in any transaction in which the fiduciary has a conflict of interest with the plan or its participants [29 U.S.C. § 1106(b)].

Certain transactions are exempted from the prohibited transaction rules [see 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)]. In addition, the Department of Labor may exempt specific transactions, or classes of transactions, from ERISA's prohibited transactions rules [29 U.S.C. § 1108(a)].

[4] Preemption of State Law

With limited exceptions [see 29 U.S.C. § 1144(b)], ERISA preempts state law relating to employee benefits. This means that, in general, an employee's exclusive remedy for complaints regarding employee benefits is through ERISA's scheme [29 U.S.C. § 1144(a); see Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39, 54 ; see also § 1D.52[5]].

[5] Private Lawsuits Permitted

The Secretary of Labor may sue on behalf of plan participants for reimbursement to the plan and to enforce any other provision of ERISA [29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2), (4)-(6)]. A participant or a participant's beneficiary may also bring a suit in the event a plan fiduciary breaches a fiduciary duty [29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1); see Poore v. Simpson Paper Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 922, 925 (former employee meets ERISA definition of "participant" by having reasonable expectation of returning to covered employment or having colorable claim to vested benefits); Vaughn v. Bay Envtl. Mgmt., Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 544 F.3d 1008, 1009 (former employee who received full distribution of account balance under defined contribution pension plan had standing as plan participant to file suit under ERISA); see also Simon v. Hartford Life & Acc. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 661, 663 (plan participant suing pro se may not prosecute claims on behalf of plan but may sue only on own individual claim)]. In addition, participants may sue to recover benefits due under the plan, to enforce their rights under the plan, to clarify their rights to future benefits under the plan, or to enjoin any act that violates any provision of ERISA or the plan [29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B); see generally Marin Gen. Hosp. v. Modesto & Empire Traction Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 941, 946 (state-law causes of action coming within scope of 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B) are completely pre-empted; state-law cause of action comes within scope of that statute if plaintiff's claim could have been brought under it at some point in time and if there is no other independent legal duty that is implicated by defendant's actions)].

§ 1D.53 Applicability of Securities Laws

The possibility that interests in a plan may be deemed securities subject to registration or qualification under federal or state securities laws should be considered when a plan is being selected.

Any interest in an employee's qualified pension plan [see § 1D.18[2]], including a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or similar qualified plan, is exempt from qualification (approval) by the California Department of Corporations [Corp. Code § 25100(n)]. In addition, securities may be sold without qualification to a pension and profit-sharing trust, other than (1) a pension or profit-sharing trust of the insurer; (2) a self-employed individual retirement plan; or (3) an individual retirement account, if the trust provides an investment letter containing specific representations [Corp. Code § 25102(i)]. In addition, an issuer (or an affiliate of the issuer) may, without qualification, contribute any stock, or cash for the purchase of the issuer's stock, to a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan, including an employee stock ownership plan, for the issuer's employees, its parent, or its subsidiaries, provided that the employees are not required or permitted to contribute to the plan [Corp. Code § 25102(m)].

§ 1D.54 Other Federal Limitations on Employee Compensation and Retirement Plans

A number of other federal statutes and regulations apply to employee compensation and retirement plans. These include:

- The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 [29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq.] sets a minimum and overtime wage for covered employees; and the Equal Pay Act of 1963 [29 U.S.C. § 206], an amendment to that Act, requires equal pay between sexes for equal work.

- Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.] prohibits discrimination in employment practices based on race or sex. The United States Supreme Court has held that a pension plan requiring greater contributions by women (because of their longer life expectancy) than by men was discriminatory in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act [Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 711, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657] . As a result of Manhart and ensuing decisions [see, e.g., Arizona Governing Committee for Tax Deferred Annuity and Deferred Compensation Plans (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1089-1090, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236] , pension plans now generally use gender neutral tables, which combine male and female life expectancies.

- The Pregnancy Discrimination Act [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k)] (an amendment to the Civil Rights Act of 1964) provides that any discrimination based on a woman's pregnancy is discrimination based on gender. The protection against discrimination in employment applies to men as well as to women. Thus, discrimination in coverage afforded wives of men who are employees is also discrimination against those men [Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 ; see Hulteen v. AT&T Corp. (9th Cir. 2006) 441 F.3d 653, 664 (Pregnancy Discrimination Act could not be applied retroactively either to invalidate company's accounting scheme for pregnancy leaves that was in place before enactment or to create current violation of Title VII of Civil Rights Act merely because that pre-enactment accounting scheme underlay current disparity in employees' benefits)].

- The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 [29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.] prohibits discrimination in the employment of individuals age 40 and older, except when age is a bona fide occupational qualification [29 U.S.C. § 623(i)]. For example, group retirement plans for plan years beginning after 1987 must continue to accrue benefits on behalf of all participants [29 U.S.C. § 623(i); see I.R.C. §§ 410(a)(2), 411(b)(1)(H) (similar participation and accrual requirements)]. Further, defined benefit plans may not cease or reduce the rate of accrual under the plan on account of age [29 U.S.C. § 623(i); I.R.C. § 411(b)(1)(H)].

- The Military Selective Service Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 451 et seq.] and the Veterans Reemployment Rights Act [38 U.S.C. §§ 2021 et seq.] give veterans certain re-employment rights, seniority, and the right to continued participation in employee benefit programs [see e.g., 38 U.S.C. § 2021]. The Military Selective Service Act may also require the accrual of benefits under a pension plan [see Alabama Power Co. v. Davis (1977) 431 U.S. 581, 594, 97 S. Ct. 2002, 52 L. Ed. 2d 595] .

Except for this overview, the federal statutes enumerated above are outside the scope of this chapter. For a more detailed listing of these statutes, see § 1D.11; see also Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers .

C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.55

§ 1D.55 Generic Types of Qualified Retirement Plans

Although qualified plans encompass a variety of types, including pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, employee stock ownership, and assorted other plans, ERISA and the Internal Revenue Code have divided qualified plans into two basic categories: defined benefit plans [see § 1D.56] and defined contribution plans [see § 1D.57]. Although both generic types are subject to the same basic qualification rules [see I.R.C. §§ 401-418E; see also § 1D.114], special rules apply to each type of plan, and these rules may determine the employer's choice of plan type.

PRACTICE TIP:

The most important part of a retirement plan for an owner employed in the business may be the business's assets and the owner's non-business income, which will presumably remain after retirement. If there are sufficient assets to support a comfortable retirement, a complex retirement plan may be a waste of money. A business owner with substantial assets may be primarily concerned about estate planning, so that the majority of his or her assets pass to the family. In that case, individual estate planning, only incidentally involving the individual's business, may be the appropriate approach.

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.56

§ 1D.56 Defined Benefit Plans

[1] "Defined Benefit Plan" Defined

A "defined benefit plan" is any plan that is not a defined contribution plan [29 U.S.C. § 1002(35); I.R.C. § 414(j); see I.R.C. § 414(i) ("defined contribution plan" defined; see also § 1D.57 [1]]. The distinctive characteristic of a defined benefit plan is that the participant's benefit amount is defined in advance [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(i)]. These plans pay a stated periodic (usually monthly) benefit on the employee's retirement (or earlier authorized payout) [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(2)(i)]. Benefits are paid from the general assets of the trust or annuity; participants do not have individual accounts [29 U.S.C. § 1002(35)]. The benefits may be based on length of service, compensation, and other relevant factors [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(2)(i)]. The employer contributes the amounts necessary to fund the defined benefits [see I.R.C. § 412 (minimum funding standard); see also § 1D.56[2]].

[2] Limited Annual Deduction

The employer's annual allowable deduction is generally the amount necessary to fund an annual benefit of the lesser of $160,000 ($90,000 for years ending on or before December 31, 2001), subject to certain inflation adjustments as tied to social security benefits, or 100 percent of the participant's average compensation for his or her high three years [I.R.C. § 415(b)(1); see I.R.C. § 415(b)(2) (adjustments), (3) (average compensation for high three years defined)]. These dollar limitations are reduced for participants with fewer than 10 years of service [I.R.C. § 415(b)(5)]. Other adjustments are made to the dollar limitations if the benefits begin before or after the social security retirement age [I.R.C. § 415(b)(2)(C), (D)]. A defined benefit plan is subject to the minimum funding standard defined in the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. § 412(a)]; and the employer's deduction for plan contribution may not exceed the full funding limitation set forth in the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 404(a)(1)(A),(B); see I.R.C. § 412(c)(7) ("full funding limitation" defined)].

[3] Actuarially Determined Contributions; Risk of Investment Performance on Employer

An enrolled actuary must be hired to calculate the amount the employer must contribute annually and supervise the preparation of actuarial statements and reports [29 U.S.C. § 1023(a)(4); see 29 U.S.C. § 1242 (requirements for enrolled actuaries)]. In determining the amount of an employer's annual contribution, the actuary assumes that the plan assets will generate a specified rate of return. Consequently, if the plan's actual investment performance does not meet the actuary's return assumption, the employer will be required to make greater contributions in the future, to make up for the investment shortfall [see I.R.C. § 412(a) (minimum funding standard), (c)(11) (liability for contributions)]. Conversely, if the rate of return on the plan's investments exceeds the actuary's return assumptions, the employer will be required to make a smaller contribution than would otherwise be necessary [see I.R.C. § 412(a) (minimum funding standard), (c)(11) (liability for contributions)].

Employees (and unions) historically have favored defined benefit plans for two reasons. First, the employer must make plan contributions without regard to its profits [see Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(i)]. Second, the employer, rather than the plan's participants, must bear the risk of the plan's investment performance, because the employer will be responsible for making up any shortfall in the assumed rate of return [see I.R.C. § 412].

[4] Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation

Another distinguishing feature of a defined benefit plan is that it is normally subject to a plan termination insurance operated by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC), a separate government agency [see 29 U.S.C. § 1302]. The plan administrator is required to pay annual insurance premiums to the PBGC [29 U.S.C. § 1306(a)(1)] and file a notice of a reportable event if (1) the plan fails to meet minimum funding standards [see I.R.C. § 412]; (2) the plan is amended to decrease the benefit payable to any participant; or (3) another specified occasion or event occurs [29 U.S.C. § 1343(b)].

[5] Types of Defined Benefit Plans

Typical types of defined benefit plans include (1) a pension plan that provides a monthly benefit to the participant, payable from an employer-sponsored pension trust, or (2) an annuity plan, under which the benefit is payable from an annuity purchased from an insurance company with plan contributions [Treas. Reg. § 1.404(a)-3(a)]. Special types include multi-employer plans [see I.R.C. § 414(f)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The biggest cost of a qualified retirement plan, compared to a non-qualified plan, is the employer's required contributions for all employees, not just key employees, to avoid discrimination in coverage or benefits in favor of highly compensated employees [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(4); see also I.R.C. § 410(a)(1) (exclusions)]; these contributions for all employees may be greater than the employer would choose to make. Of course, when a high percentage of the payroll goes to the highly compensated employees, the additional cost of benefiting the other employees as well will be less significant.

Of the qualified retirement plans, benefits under a defined benefit pension plan may be desirable if employees are older, because benefits can be provided in a short period of time [see Rev. Rul. 74-385, 1974-2 C.B. 130 (flat benefits may be provided without regard to years of service)]. On the other hand, a defined contribution plan may be more appropriate if employees are younger, since plan contributions that accumulate tax-free for a period of 20 or 30 years will provide greater benefits than the flat benefits of a defined pension plan.

The best combination of plans depends on a variety of factors, including the employees' ages, the plan's earnings, plan contribution requirements and the deductibility of employer contributions under the plan [see I.R.C. § 404], and plan administration costs. If the employer's goal is to maximize retirement benefits for all employees, without regard to contribution requirement and plan administration expenses, it might consider combining a profit-sharing or money purchase plan with a defined benefit pension plan. An employer concerned with contribution requirements and plan expense, on the other hand, can reduce these problems and still maximize employee benefits by adopting a profit-sharing plan, which may be a cash or deferred plan [see § 1D.60], and a money-purchase plan [see § 1D.59].

§ 1D.57 Defined Contribution Plans

[1] "Defined Contribution Plan" Defined

Unlike a defined benefit plan, a "defined contribution plan" provides an individual account for each participant in the plan and pays benefits based solely on contributions to a participant's account and any income, expenses, gains, and losses, and any forfeitures of other participants accounts allocated to the participant's account [29 U.S.C. § 1002(34); I.R.C. § 414(i)]. The plan need not specify a precise dollar amount to be contributed each year. It must merely set forth a general formula to be used in determining contributions [see Lincoln Electric Co. Employer's Profit Sharing Trust v. Commissioner (6th Cir. 1951) 190 F.2d 326, 328-329] . For example, a defined contribution plan provision is sufficient if it states that each year, the board of directors or the partnership will vote (at its discretion) to make an annual contribution to the plan of between zero and 20 percent of the entity's total yearly net profit. Consequently, under defined contribution plans, participants are not promised a specific retirement benefit, but are entitled only to the benefit that can be provided from their accounts, when the accounts are distributed.

[2] Risk of Investment Performance on Participant

Once the employer has made the required contribution to a defined contribution plan, it usually has no further responsibility to the plan or its participants (except for ERISA's fiduciary requirements) [see I.R.C. § 414(i); 29 U.S.C. § 1081 et seq.] regarding the growth of the plans assets. Thus, unlike a defined benefit plan, defined contribution plans put the investment risk on the plan's participants, rather than on the employer.

[3] Types of Defined Contribution Plans

There are several types of defined contribution plans. The most common are:

- Profit-sharing plans [see § 1D.58].
- Money purchase plans [see § 1D.59].

- Cash or deferred arrangements [see § 1D.60].
- Stock bonus plans and employee stock ownership plans [see § 1D.61].

§ 1D.58 Profit-Sharing Plans

A "profit-sharing plan" is categorized by ERISA as a defined contribution plan [29 U.S.C. § 1002(34)]. This type of plan is designed primarily to provide employees with an interest in the business's profits. However, it also often provides retirement benefits [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(i), (ii)].

The amount the employee or its beneficiary receives under the plan must be determined by a definite, predetermined formula for allocating employer contributions made to the plan among participants (in proportion to each participant's compensation, for example) and for distributing funds accumulated under the plan after a stated period of time or on the occurrence of a specified event, such as illness, hardship, disability, retirement, death, or termination of employment [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii), 1.401-3(c)].

The amount of employer contributions to a profit-sharing plan can, but need not be, made from profits [I.R.C. § 401(a)(27)] and is determined either at the employer's discretion, subject to certain limitations, or according to formula [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii), 1.401-3, 1.401-4; see I.R.C. § 404(a)(3) (limitations)]. Contributions may range from a minimum of zero to a maximum deductible contribution of the greater of the employer's required 401(k)(11) annual contribution or 25 percent (15 percent, for years beginning before January 1, 2002) of the participant's compensation [I.R.C. § 404(a)(3)(A)]. Thus, profit-sharing plans are not subject to the minimum funding standards of I.R.C. § 412 [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(27)].

A profit-sharing plan may be an appropriate choice if the employer wants the flexibility to make contributions at its discretion. However, the funding of adequate retirement benefits for older employees may be difficult to achieve under this type of plan.

§ 1D.59 Money Purchase Pension Plans

A "money purchase plan" is a defined contribution plan under ERISA [29 U.S.C. § 1002(34)]. In this type of plan, amounts are contributed according to a specified formula, usually stated in terms of participants' compensation (for example, 10 percent of all participants' compensation for the year), and funds accumulated in a participant's account at payout are used to purchase a then-commercially available annuity for the participant [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(i)].

A money purchase plan is similar, in most respects, to a profit-sharing plan, except with regard to the dollar limitation on the deductibility of contributions [see I.R.C. §§ 404(a)(3) (greater of employer's required 401(k)(11) contribution or 25 percent (15 percent, for years beginning before January 1, 2002) of compensation for profit sharing plans), 415(c)(1) (the lesser of $40,000 or 100 percent (for years beginning on or before December 31, 2001, $30,000 or 25 percent) of employee compensation for money purchase pension plans)]. However, unlike most profit-sharing plans, a money purchase plan requires the employer to contribute a fixed amount each year, whether or not the employer has a profit [see Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(i)]. In addition, the minimum funding standards for qualified retirement plans apply [I.R.C. § 412(a)].

Unlike a profit-sharing plan, a money purchase plan is required to distribute benefits to participants in certain forms mandated by the Internal Revenue Code (joint and survivor annuities and pre-retirement death benefits for survivors of participants), unless the participant and his or her spouse properly elect otherwise [see 29 U.S.C. § 1055(a), (b); I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(11), 417]. The complexities of joint and survivor annuities and pre-retirement annuity forms, as well as the requirement that an employer contribute to a money purchase plan regardless of profits, may make this type of plan less attractive to an employer than the profit-sharing plan, which has neither of these limitations.

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.60

§ 1D.60 Cash or Deferred Plans

A "cash or deferred plan" (commonly known as a CODA or a 401(k) plan) is a plan permitting the employee to choose between current taxable cash compensation and a non-taxable contribution made by the employer to a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan maintained by the employer [I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(A)]. These plans are supplements to profit-sharing and stock bonus plans. Therefore, if the employer has neither of the latter types of plans, this arrangement is not available [see I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(A)].

A 401(k) plan may be a bonus plan, under which the employer declares year-end bonuses for employees, giving them the choice of receiving the bonus in cash or having the bonus amount contributed to a qualified plan. Under this type of plan, the employer has little obligation beyond having the underlying profit-sharing or stock bonus plan in place [see Treas. Reg. § 1.401(k)-1(a)(3)].

A 401(k) plan may also be a salary reduction plan, under which a contribution to the plan will be made only if the employee elects to take a salary reduction, or to forego a salary increase, and have the difference contributed to an employer profit-sharing or stock bonus plan. This is commonly accomplished by periodic employee contributions or withholding from the employee's paycheck [see Treas. Reg. § 1.401(k)-1(a)(3)].

The tax treatment of a 401(k) plan depends on the employee's election. If the employee elects a current cash payment, it is includable in the employee's taxable income and is deductible by the employer, provided it is reasonable in amount and meets the other requirements for deductibility [I.R.C. §§ 61(a)(1), 162(a)(1); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.61-2(a)(1), 1.162-1(a)]. If the employee instead elects to have a contribution made to a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, the contribution is treated as an employer contribution [Treas. Reg. § 1.402(a)-1(d)] and, as such, is currently deductible by the employer, while not being currently taxed to the employee [I.R.C. §§ 401(k), 404(a)]. The employee (or the employee's beneficiary) is taxed on the contributions when they are distributed [I.R.C. § 402(a)].

In addition to the general non-discrimination restriction imposed on qualified plans, special non-discrimination rules apply to 401(k) plans. These rules bar highly compensated employees from contributing a significantly higher percentage of compensation than lower-paid employees [I.R.C. §§ 401(k)(3), 414(q); see I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(4), 410(b) (anti-discrimination and participation requirements)].

Often, 401(k) plans provide for matching (or partially matching) contributions to be made by the employer, if the employee has elected to have a percentage of his or her compensation contributed to an employer profit-sharing or stock bonus plan [Treas. Reg. § 1.401(k)-1(g)(9)].

The principal advantage of a 401(k) plan to an employee is that it generally permits the employee to make choices each year regarding the amount of compensation the employee will currently receive, and pay taxes on, in that year. Its principal disadvantage is that its maximum elective deferral is capped at a low level. The maximum dollar limit on annual elective deferrals under Section 401(k) plans is $10,500 in 2000 and 2001 [I.R.C. § 402(g)(1),(5), before amendment by Pub Law 107-16; 2000-52 I.R.B. 600, Notice 2000-66 ; 1999-2 C.B. 638, Notice 99-55], $11,000 in 2002, $12,000 in 2003, $13,000 in 2004, $14,000 in 2005, and $15,000 in 2006 [I.R.C. § 402(g)(1),(2)]. Cost-of-living increases in $500 increments are made thereafter [I.R.C. § 402(g)(4)]. Limited catch-up contributions to 401(k) plans are permitted for individuals aged 50 and over [I.R.C. § 414(v)]. This limitation and the special anti-discrimination rules make it difficult to use these plans to compensate highly paid plan participants [see I.R.C. § 402(g)]. The primary advantage of a 401(k) plan to an employer is that the employer's plan cost may be low because the plan is substantially funded with deferred compensation.

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Qualified Retirement Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.61

§ 1D.61 Qualified Stock Bonus Plans; Employee Stock Ownership Plans

A "qualified stock bonus plan" is a plan providing benefits similar to a profit-sharing plan [see § 1D.58], but benefits are generally in the form of employer stock [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(iii)]. A stock bonus plan must meet the same requirements related to the allocation and distribution of stock to employees as a profit-sharing plan [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(iii)].

An "employee stock ownership plan" (commonly referred to as an ESOP) is a stock bonus plan, or a combination stock bonus plan and money purchase plan [see § 1D.59] that invests primarily in the employer's own stock and meets other qualifying requirements of the Internal Revenue Code [29 U.S.C. § 1107(d)(6); I.R.C. § 4975(e)(7)(A); Treas. Reg. § 54.4975-11(a); see I.R.C. §§ 409(h) (additional requirements), (p), 4979A(a)(3), (4) (special rules apply regarding prohibited allocations of stock by S corporation ESOPs, effective with respect to plan years beginning after December 31, 2004)].

The distinction between a stock bonus plan and an ESOP can be important because ESOPs are exempt from prohibitions on certain types of transactions that apply to stock bonus plans as well as other qualified plans. First, an ESOP may invest exclusively in the employer's own securities and need not diversify its holdings, as must other types of qualified employee plans [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1107(a)(2), 1108(e) (plan investment in employer's stock or real estate generally not permitted to exceed 10 percent of trust's assets, unless plan is ESOP, or other individual account plan--profit sharing or money purchase plan--specifying higher allowable holding of employer stock)]. Second, an ESOP may borrow the money to purchase the securities from a party in interest [29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(3); I.R.C. § 4975(d)(3)] or from banks, insurance companies, or other commercial lenders [see I.R.C. § 133]. Thus, outside leveraging (that is, borrowing to acquire employer securities) is available to finance the stock purchase.

Although originally viewed as a vehicle to enhance employee incentives through an equity interest in the business, ESOPs serve a variety of corporate purposes. For example, the employer's ability to leverage enables the employer to use the ESOP to raise needed capital from the sale of its own stock, with the additional tax benefit of deductions on principal and dividend payments, as well as interest payments [see I.R.C. § 404(a)(9)(A), (B), (k)]. An employer wanting to raise capital might establish an ESOP that borrows money from a bank, with the employer guaranteeing the loan. The ESOP would then use the loan proceeds to purchase the securities from the employer; the employer would use the money from the sale of securities as needed (for working capital or capital improvements, for example). The employer would make tax deductible contributions to the ESOP to enable the ESOP to meet its debt service payments [see I.R.C. § 404(a)(3)(A)], while the bank would receive a partial exclusion from income for the interest income it receives on the ESOP loan [see I.R.C. § 133]. As a further example, an ESOP might be used to provide cash to buy out a deceased or retiring shareholder.

From the employee's perspective, the greatest advantage of an ESOP is that the employee receives stock rights without being personally at risk for the cost of the stock. Further, these rights are not taxable to the employee until they are distributed, generally at retirement or termination of service [I.R.C. § 402(a); see I.R.C. § 409(o)(1) (timing of distributions)]. In addition, if the distribution is a lump-sum distribution, it may be eligible for favored tax treatment [see I.R.C. § 402(e)(4)(D)]. Similar to other qualified plans, tax on appreciation of the stock while held by the trust is deferred until the employee sells or otherwise disposes of the stock in a taxable transaction [I.R.C. § 402(a)].

Other qualified stock plans, including incentive stock options (ISOs) and employee stock purchase plans, are covered in §§ 1D.82[2] and 1D.113, respectively.

§ 1D.62 Simplified Employee Pensions

A simplified employee pension (SEP) combines the features of an IRA [I.R.C. § 408] and a defined contribution plan [see § 1D.57]. Under a SEP, the employer establishes IRAs for employees and makes annual contributions to those accounts [I.R.C. § 408(k)]. To qualify for tax-favored treatment, a SEP may not discriminate in favor of certain officers and highly compensated individuals [I.R.C. § 408(k)(3)(A); see I.R.C. § 408(k)(2) (participation requirements)].

Employer contributions to a SEP may be made for a taxable year at any time before the due date (including extensions) for filing the return for that year [I.R.C. § 404(h)(1)(B)]. The amount deductible cannot exceed 25 percent (15 percent for years beginning before January 1, 2002) of the compensation paid to the employee during the calendar year. Any excess contributed over the amount deductible may be carried over and deducted in later taxable years, subject to the same percentage limitation [I.R.C. § 404(h)(1)(C)]. Any amount deducted by an employer for SEP contributions reduce the amounts deductible for contributions to plans subject to limits on deductible contributions under I.R.C. § 404(a)(3)(A) (i.e., stock bonus or profit-sharing plans and certain money purchase plans) [I.R.C. § 404(h)(2)].

In addition, employer contributions must bear a uniform relationship to the first $200,000 ($150,000 for years beginning before January 1, 2002) of each employee's compensation [I.R.C. § 408(k)(3)(C); see I.R.C. § 401(l) (adjustments to compensation taken into account)]. If specified requirements are met, SEPs are further allowed to include a voluntary salary reduction arrangement, similar to a 401(k) plan [I.R.C. § 408(k)(6) (employee election); see § 1D.60]. Limited catch-up contributions to SEPs are permitted for individuals aged 50 and over [I.R.C. § 414(v)].

Under a qualified plan, the employer receives a current deduction for contributions made to separate IRAs for each covered employee [I.R.C. §§ 162, 408(k)]. In general, employer contributions to a SEP are not treated as made available to an employee or as employee contributions [I.R.C. § 402(h)(1)(A)]. In addition, employer contributions made pursuant to a salary reduction arrangement [see I.R.C. § 408(k)(6)], are not treated as distributed or made available or as contributions made by the employee merely because the SEP provides for a salary reduction arrangement election [I.R.C. § 402(h)(1)(B)]. Employer contributions are treated as distributed and made available to the employee or as contributions made by the employee, however, to the extent those contributions exceed the lesser of 25 percent (15 percent, for tax years beginning before January 1, 2002) of the employee's compensation, or the limitation in effect under I.R.C. § 415(c)(1)(A) ($40,000, for tax years beginning after December 31, 2001) [I.R.C. §§ 402(h)(2), 415(c)(1)(A); the $40,000 limitation is subject to cost-of-living adjustments (I.R.C. § 415(d)(1)(C))]. Any amount paid or distributed from a SEP must be included in gross income by the payee or distributee [I.R.C. §§ 402(h)(3), 408(d)].

From the employee's perspective, SEPs are preferable to IRAs because their contribution limits are significantly higher [I.R.C. §§ 408(j), 415(c)(1)]. From the employer's perspective, the primary advantage of a SEP is its simplicity and low administrative cost.

§ 1D.63 SIMPLE Retirement Plans

A Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees (SIMPLE) plan may be established by an employer with no more than 100 employees [I.R.C. § 408(p)]. A SIMPLE plan may be set up as an IRA or a cash or deferred arrangement [I.R.C. §§ 408(p), 7701(a)(37)]. Employer contributions to a SIMPLE plan are deductible in the tax year of the employer with or within which the calendar year for which the contributions were made ends. Contributions are treated as made for a taxable year if they are made on account of the taxable year and are made not later than the due date for the return for that year (including extensions) [I.R.C. § 404(m)(2)]. Employees generally are not taxed on the contributions until they are distributed [I.R.C. §§ 72, 402(h)(1), (3), (k), 403].

A SIMPLE plan is an individual retirement plan under which the only contributions allowed are those made under a qualified salary reduction arrangement [I.R.C. § 408(p)(1)(B), (2)]. The qualified salary reduction arrangement of the SIMPLE plan generally must be the only plan of the employer [I.R.C. § 408(p)(2)(D) (exception for collectively bargained employees)]. A qualified salary reduction arrangement is a written arrangement under which an eligible employee elects to have the employer make payments as elective employer contributions to a SIMPLE retirement account on behalf of the employee or to the employee directly in cash. The amount that an employee may elect must be specified as a percentage of compensation. The amount may not exceed $7,000 in 2002, $8,000 in 2003, $9,000 in 2004, and $10,000 in 2005 and thereafter, subject to cost-of-living adjustments [I.R.C. § 408(p)(2)(A)(ii), (E)(i), (ii)] For 2001, the maximum was $6,500 [2000-52 I.R.B. 600, Notice 2000-66]. Limited catch-up contributions to SIMPLE plans are permitted for individuals aged 50 and over [I.R.C. § 414(v)(2)(B)(ii)].

The employer must make a timely matching contribution or nonelective contribution [I.R.C. § 408(p)(2)(A)(iii), (5)(A)]. Under the matching contribution alternative, the employer must generally match the employee's contribution up to three percent of the employee's compensation for the year [I.R.C. § 408(p)(2)(A)(iii), (C)(ii)(I)]. An employer may elect, however, to apply a lower matching percentage (not less than one percent) for all eligible employees for a given year [I.R.C. § 408(p)(2)(C)(ii)(II)]. In lieu of the matching contribution, an employer may instead elect to make a nonelective contribution of two percent of the compensation for each eligible employee with at least $5,000 compensation from the employer for that year. The compensation limit of I.R.C. § 401(a)(17) applies to the contribution [I.R.C. § 408(p)(2)(B)].

In the case of a SIMPLE IRA, the limitation that otherwise applies to IRAs [see I.R.C. § 408(a), (b)(2)] is increased to the limits in effect for contributions made under a qualified salary reduction arrangement. This includes employee elective contributions and required employer contributions [I.R.C. § 408(p)(8)].

A SIMPLE plan must meet statutory vesting, participation, and administrative requirements [I.R.C. § 408(p)(1)(A), (3), (4), (5)]. Amounts in a SIMPLE plan account may be rolled over to another SIMPLE plan account, or, if the individual has participated in the SIMPLE plan for at least two years, to an IRA or eligible retirement plan. The amount that can be rolled over into an eligible retirement plan cannot exceed the portion of the amount received that is includable in gross income without regard to the rollover rules. This restriction does not apply to rollovers to an IRA [I.R.C. § 408(d)(3)(A), (G)]. An eligible retirement plan includes a qualified plan, a Section 403(a) annuity plan [see I.R.C. § 403(a)], a Section 403(b) annuity contract [see I.R.C. § 403(b)], or a governmental Section 457 plan [I.R.C. § 402(c)(8)(B); see I.R.C. § 457].

§ 1D.64 Credit for Small Employer Pension Plan Start-Up Costs

A nonrefundable income tax credit is available for 50 percent of the administrative and retirement-related education expenses for any small business that adopts a new qualified defined benefit or defined contribution plan (including a section 401(k) plan), SIMPLE plan, or simplified employee pension ("SEP") [I.R.C. §§ 45E(a), (d)(1), 4972(d)(1), effective for costs paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001, with respect to plans established after that date]. The credit applies to 50 percent of the first $1,000 in establishment and administration costs and costs to educate employees about the plan for each of the first three years of the plan. Thus, the maximum credit per year is $500 [I.R.C. § 45E(b)]. The credit is available to an employer that did not employ, in the preceding year, more than 100 employees with compensation in excess of $5,000 [I.R.C. § 45E(c)(1), 408(p)(2)(C)(i)].

An employer cannot claim the credit if, during the 3 years before the first year in which the credit is otherwise available, the employer (or a member of any controlled group of the employer) or a predecessor of either established or maintained a qualified employer plan to which contributions were made, or benefits were accrued, for substantially the same employees as are in the plan for which the credit would be claimed [I.R.C. § 45E(c)(2)]. In order for plan costs to be eligible for the credit, the plan must cover at least one non-highly compensated employee [I.R.C. § 45E(d)(1)(B)]. The credit is a general business credit, but it cannot be carried back to years beginning before January 1, 2002 [I.R.C. § 39(d)(10)]. Any unused portion of the credit may be deducted in the following year [I.R.C. § 196(a), (c)(10)]. The 50 percent of qualifying expenses that are effectively offset by the tax credit are not deductible [I.R.C. § 45E(e)(2)]. The other 50 percent of the qualifying expenses (and other expenses) are generally by an employer as ordinary and necessary expenses in carrying on a trade or business [I.R.C. § 162(a)].

§ 1D.70 Tax and ERISA Aspects of Non-Qualified Plans--In General

In contrast to a qualified plan, under a non-qualified plan, the employer does not receive a deduction until the employee includes the benefit in income, even if the employer uses the accrual method of accounting [I.R.C. § 404(a)(5)]. The tax objective of the employee in a non-qualified deferred compensation plan is to avoid paying tax on non-qualified plan benefits until the funds are actually paid to the employee [see Rev. Rul. 60-31, 1960-1 C.B. 174 (discussion of year in which compensation paid under different types of deferred compensation plans will be deemed received by employee); see also Rev. Rul. 70-435 (modifying example (5) of Rev. Rul. 60-31)]. To achieve deferral, a common approach is to structure the plan to take advantage of I.R.C. § 83. This provision generally defers tax on employee compensation that is received subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture or transfer restrictions on the employee's ability to transfer the item free of a risk of forfeiture, until the time that the risk or restriction lapses [see I.R.C. § 83; see also § 1D.81[3]].

Except for certain reporting and disclosure requirements, unfunded plans maintained primarily to provide deferred compensation to a select group of employees (usually management or highly compensated employees) are generally exempt from the provisions of ERISA [29 U.S.C. §§ 1051(2), 1081(a)(3), 1101(a)(1)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Non-Qualified Deferred Compensation Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.71

§ 1D.71 Structure of Non-Qualified Plans

A non-qualified deferred compensation plan generally takes one of two general forms. The first is an unfunded promise to pay, under which the employer promises to pay the employee a portion of the compensation the employee would otherwise receive in an upcoming tax period, but at a specified future date or dates [see § 1D.16]. Under an unfunded deferred compensation plan, the employee is put in the position of being a general creditor of the employer. Specific property cannot be set aside in the employee's name; therefore, a separate irrevocable trust fund, escrow account, or other irrevocable funding vehicle is not permitted [see Rev. Proc. 71-19, 1971-1 C.B. 698].

The second form is a funded deferred compensation arrangement, in which the employer irrevocably contributes the deferred compensation to a separate funding vehicle, such as a trust, escrow account, or annuity [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.83-3(e), 1.451-2(a)]. If a trust is used, the trust then holds and invests the contributed funds until the funds are paid out to the employee [see I.R.C. § 83(a); see also I.R.C. § 402(b) (I.R.C. § 83 generally governs taxability of employer contributions made to unqualified trust)]. The obvious advantage of a funded arrangement to the employee is that the funds are irrevocably committed for the promised future payment, and the employee need not rely on the employer's mere promise to pay.

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.72

§ 1D.72 Rabbi Trusts

An alternative approach employs both the unfunded and funded plan formats and places the contributed amounts in an irrevocable trust subject to the claims of the general creditors of the employee. One of the first rulings to uphold the deferral effects of such a trust involved an irrevocable trust established for the benefit of a rabbi [P.L.R. 8113017]. As a result, such trusts are commonly called "rabbi trusts." As long as the trust corpus and income remain the employer's property, taxable to the employer and subject to the claims of its creditors in case of insolvency, and certain other conditions are met [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679], the Internal Revenue Service has taken the position that the interest in the trust, although otherwise vested in the employee, is not taxable to the employee [see P.L.R. 8727028]. Consequently, taxation can be deferred by the employee until the funds are distributed.

This area of law is as yet unsettled, with little case law and few formal rulings by the Internal Revenue Service. Therefore, caution should be exercised in drafting a rabbi trust to ensure that the interest in the trust will not result in current taxation to the employee.

E. Stock-Based Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.80

§ 1D.80 Basic Types of Stock-Based Plans

Although stock-based plans encompass an almost limitless variety of types, stock plans and stock option plans can be divided into two basic categories: non-qualified plans [see § 1D.81] and qualified plans [see § 1D.82]. The tax treatment of non-qualified stock option and stock plans is generally determined under I.R.C. § 83 [see § 1D.81[3]]; the tax treatment of qualified stock option (that is, incentive stock option) and stock plans is generally determined under I.R.C. §§ 421 and 422 [see § 1D.82].

PRACTICE TIP:

Like an incentive stock option [see § 1D.82[2]], an employee stock purchase plan provides tax-favored benefits to employees: it defers recognition of gain on the employee's exercise of the option until the employee actually sells or exchanges the stock acquired under the option [I.R.C. § 423(a)]. Provided that the disposition occurs at least two years after the date the option is granted, and the employee has held the stock at least six months after exercising the option, any profit will be taxed as long-term gain [I.R.C. § 423(a); but see I.R.C. § 423(c) (special rule when option price less than fair market value of shares when option granted)]. Unlike an ISO, the granting of options to purchase employer stock may not discriminate in favor of key employees [I.R.C. § 423(b)(4), (5)].

Securities problems inevitably associated with issuing shares of stock to a large number of employees will probably discourage all but corporations that already have an established market for their stock from establishing a employee stock purchase plan. A non-qualified stock option or direct transfer of stock can be used to achieve the same general result of providing corporate shares to employees as a general benefit of employment.

CHAPTER 1D OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Stock-Based Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.81

§ 1D.81 Non-Qualified Stock Plans

[1] In General

Unlike a qualified stock plan, which must be made available to a broad group of employees [see § 1D.82], a non-qualified stock plan may be provided for just key employees; use of a non-qualified plan is generally aimed at retaining key personnel. Further, because a non-qualified plan is not subject to special statutory requirements, it has greater flexibility in the way in which stock may be made available to the employee. A variety of approaches, in addition to the direct transfer of stock, may be used to provide the corporation's stock as a form of compensation to its employees. Formats discussed below include non-qualified stock options [see [2], below] and stock appreciation rights [see § 1D.113].

[2] Non-Qualified Stock Options

Like any other stock option, a non-qualified stock option is a type of employee benefit in which the employee is granted the right to purchase stock in the employee's (corporate) employer at a predetermined (and often discounted) price for a specified period of time. However, unlike a qualified stock option, a non-qualified option is structured in a manner that does not meet any special statutory requirements under the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. § 422 (incentive stock options); see also I.R.C. § 421(b) (disqualifying disposition of ISO)]. Consequently, non-qualified stock options may be offered to a select group of employees, may be granted to different groups of employees on varying terms, may be offered for substantially less than market price, or may be exercised at any time. None of these terms is available for an ISO [see I.R.C. §§ 421-422; § 1D.82[2]].

A non-qualified option is not taxable to the employee when granted, with limited exceptions that are seldom applicable to stock options in non-publicly traded corporations [see I.R.C. § 83(e); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.83-3(a)(2), 1.183-7(a),(b)]. On exercise of the non-qualified option, the employee recognizes income equal to the spread between the option exercise price and the fair market value, except that (1) if the shares are nontransferable or subject to forfeiture, the employee is taxed at the time the shares become transferable or the forfeiture provision lapses; or (2) if the company is publicly traded and the employee is an officer or director, the taxable event occurs six months after exercise or, if later, when the stock is transferable or any applicable forfeiture lapses [I.R.C. § 83(a)-(c)]. Generally, the employer receives a tax deduction, equal to the amount of the gain to the individual, when the employee recognizes income [I.R.C. § 83(h)]. However, since the employee recognizes income on exercise, or vesting [see I.R.C. § 83(a)], this recognition may result in a cash flow problem, since the employee will need money to pay both the exercise price of the stock and the tax.

For several years after the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514, Act § 301(a) (repealing former I.R.C. § 1202, relating to exclusion of long term capital gains)], there was only a small advantage for capital gains treatment [see former I.R.C. § 1(b)], and as a consequence, many corporate employers favored non-qualified stock options, coupled with a Section 83(b) election [see [3], below] over qualified stock plans. With the rate differential between capital gains and ordinary income once again substantial enough to give capital gains treatment a significant advantage [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (h), (i)(2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151], employers tend to favor qualified options over nonstatutory options.

[3] Tax Treatment of Non-Qualified Stock Plans Under Internal Revenue Code Section 83

I.R.C. § 83 generally applies any time property is transferred, in connection with services, to any person other than the person for whom the services are performed (usually, the employer) [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. It does not apply, however, to incentive stock options, employee stock purchase plans, or the transfer and exercise of certain stock options [I.R.C. §§ 83(e), 421; see I.R.C. §§ 422 (incentive stock options), 423 (employee stock purchase plans)].

The timing and amount of the employer's deduction under I.R.C. § 83 is linked to the time the employee is required to include the property (that is, usually, the stock) in income and to the amount of taxable income the employee is required to include [I.R.C. § 83(h)]. The employee will recognize income with respect to the property transferred on the earlier of the time the employee's rights in the restricted property (1) become transferable, or (2) are no longer subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture [I.R.C. § 83(a); see Treas. Reg. § 1.83-3(c)(1) ("substantial risk of forfeiture" defined)]. The employee will be required to include in income the fair market value of the transferred property (determined without taking into consideration any restrictions on transferability, except restrictions that never lapse), minus any amount paid by the employee for the property [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. The value of the property is determined at the time it is included in income, and is taxed at ordinary income rates [see I.R.C. § 83(a)].

However, if the employee makes an election under I.R.C. § 83(b), the employee will be taxed in the year the property is transferred (instead of the time the restrictions on the property lapse) [I.R.C. § 83(b)]. Thus, if the current price of the property (stock) is low and it is likely to appreciate substantially in value, it may be wise for the employee to make this election to avoid having to pay tax on the property's appreciation at the time the property is transferred [see I.R.C. § 83(a)]. For example, 100 shares of non-transferable stock, having a value of $10 per share, might be issued to the employee, subject to the restriction that the shares will be forfeited if the employee terminates employment within five years. Five years later, the fair market value of the shares is $50 per share. If the employee does not make an I.R.C. § 83(b) election, the employee will have $5,000 of ordinary income in year five [see I.R.C. § 83(a)] and the employer will receive a $5,000 compensation deduction [see I.R.C. § 83(h)]. If the employee does make the election, the employee will have $1,000 of ordinary income in the year in which the stock was transferred [see I.R.C. § 83(b)] and the employer will be entitled to a $1,000 compensation deduction for the same year [see I.R.C. § 83(h)]. Further, the employee will have no additional income when the forfeiture restriction lapses at the end of year five [see I.R.C. § 83(b)]. However, the employee will pay capital gain tax if the shares are later sold for a gain over the employee's $1,000 basis [see I.R.C. §§ 1001(a), 1221, 1222].

There are two disadvantages to making the election. First, the employee must recognize some income in the year of the transfer. Second, if the property is subsequently forfeited or sold in an arm's length transaction before the time the transfer of the property from the employer becomes complete, any loss recognized by the employee is limited to the amount, if any, paid for the property, minus any amount realized on the forfeiture or sale [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-2(a)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Stock-Based Plans

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.82

§ 1D.82 Qualified Stock Plans

[1] In General

"Qualified stock plans" are arrangements under which options to purchase stock in the employer corporation are granted to employees, with potentially more favorable tax treatment than is available under non-qualified options. The tax treatment of qualified stock options generally provides that the employee has no income on the receipt or exercise of the option [see I.R.C. § 421(a)]. As a result, the employee is taxed at the capital gains rate, when the shares acquired by the exercise of the option are sold [see I.R.C. § 421(a); but see I.R.C. §§ 56(b)(3) (amount by which fair market value of stock at time of exercise exceeds option price is tax preference item for purposes of individual alternative minimum tax), 422(c)(2) (exception to minimum alternative tax); see also I.R.C. § 421(a)(2) (no offsetting deduction for employer for value of option or stock acquired by employee when exercising option)].

Further, if holding period requirements are met, the difference between the exercise price of the option and the price of the stock on disposition will be classified as long-term capital gain [see I.R.C. §§ 1221, 1222]. For several years after the Tax Reform Act of 1986, [Pub. L. No. 99-514], there was only a small tax advantage for capital gain treatment [see former I.R.C. § 1(b)]. Enactment of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1993 [Pub. L. No. 103-66] has once again made the rate differential between capital gains and ordinary income substantial enough to give capital gains treatment a significant advantage [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (h), (i)(2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151].

There are currently only two qualified stock option plans: incentive stock options [see I.R.C. § 422; see also [2], below] and employee stock purchase plans [see I.R.C. § 423; see also § 1D.113].

[2] Incentive Stock Options

If the statutory requirements of an incentive stock option are met [see I.R.C. § 422(b)], a corporation may make available to its employees, on a discriminatory basis [but see I.R.C. § 422(b)(6)], stock options that may be exercised with no immediate tax consequences to the employee and that qualify for capital gains treatment when sold [see I.R.C. § 421(a); see also [1], above]. However, this somewhat favorable tax treatment is available to an employee only (1) if the employee does not dispose of the shares within two years from the date the option was granted or within one year from the date the employee exercised the option, and (2) if the individual remains an employee of the granting corporation (or its parent or subsidiary) continuously from the date the option was granted until three months before the option is exercised [I.R.C. § 422(a)].

The transferor corporation receives no deduction for the transferred shares [I.R.C. § 421(a)(2)], and no amount other than the price paid under the option is received by the corporation for the shares transferred [I.R.C. § 421(a)(3)]. Instead, any income realization is deferred until the employee disposes of the stock received from the option. Tax-free exercise of the option relieves the employee from financing a tax payment in addition to the exercise price [Colvin, Qualified "Incentive Stock Options" Under the New Law: Requirements and Advantages, 55 J. Tax'n 202 (1981)].

For further discussion of incentive stock options, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

§ 1D.83 Stock Appreciation Rights

Stock appreciation rights (SARs) are cash options entitling the employee to an amount of cash measured by the value of the employer's stock at the date of the award. SARs are generally granted in connection with the grant of a stock option, either qualified or non-qualified. A SAR is not taxable to the employee (or deductible by the employer) when first granted [I.R.C. § 404(a)(5); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.404(a)-12(b), 1.83-3(e); Rev. Rul. 80-300, 1980-2 C.B. 165]. Rather, it is taxable to the employee as compensation (ordinary income) when the cash payment is received by the employee [I.R.C. § 83(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.83-1(a); Rev. Rul. 80-300, 1980-2 C.B. 165]. If a SAR is exercised at the same time as the stock option, the employee will have the funds to purchase the stock or will have cash, if he or she decides not to make the purchase. SARs also allow employees to share in the appreciation of the employers stock, without requiring any initial cash layout (either to purchase the right or to pay taxes on it), and without diluting the stock ownership of existing shareholders.

§ 1D.90 Workers' Compensation Insurance

With few exceptions, California employers are subject to workers' compensation laws [Lab. Code §§ 3300 ("employer" defined), 3301 (exclusions), 3351]. These laws impose liability for work-related accidents, regardless of any negligence on the part of the employer or employee [Cal. Const. art. XIV, § 4; Lab. Code § 3600], and provide a schedule of benefits, including indemnity for disability, medical expenses, hospital expenses, ancillary treatment, vocational rehabilitation, death benefits and burial allowances [see Lab. Code § 3207] to be paid to the injured employee or the employee's dependents or heirs [see Lab. Code §§ 4700-4709].

Coverage is based on defined employment relationships. That is, an injured worker must be an "employee" who is entitled to workers' compensation coverage for an injury occurring in the course of specified employment [Lab. Code §§ 3350-3369; In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 727, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697] . One person rendering a service for another establishes a presumption of an employer-employee relationship, absent a showing that the relationship is one of principal and independent contractor [Lab. Code § 3357; Germann v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783, 176 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; see Lab. Code §§ 3353 ("independent contractor" defined), 3352, 3352.94 (additional persons excluded from definition of "employee")].

An employer subject to workers' compensation laws must secure payment of compensation by carrying workers' compensation insurance or by obtaining a permit to self-insure [Lab. Code §§ 3700, 3711; see Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 287, 292 n.4, 148 Cal. Rptr. 325 ; 43 Cal. Comp. Cases 895] .

Worker's compensation is discussed in greater detail in Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers , and Ch. 1E, Insurance Considerations and in California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 42, Workers' Compensation Insurance (Matthew Bender). For detailed coverage of this topic, see California Law of Employee Injuries and WORKERS' Compensation(Matthew Bender).

§ 1D.91 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Most California employers that pay $100 or more in wages in any calendar quarter and have employed one or more employees in the current or preceding calendar year are subject to the California Unemployment Insurance Code [Unemp. Ins. Code § 675; see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 676-687.2 (subject employers)]. The Unemployment Insurance Code governs both unemployment and disability benefits.

California's unemployment insurance program provides benefits to unemployed workers who have lost their jobs and who meet certain qualifications [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1251; see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1252 (when individual is deemed unemployed)]. Unemployment benefits are funded by employer contributions based on a percentage of the employer's payroll for the year [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 977 (contributions rate schedules)].

California's disability insurance program provides benefits to eligible workers experiencing a loss of wages when they are unable to perform their usual work because of their own sickness or injury; the sickness or injury of a family member; or the birth, adoption, or foster care placement of a new child [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 2601 (statutes to be liberally construed to mitigate burdens falling on unemployed worker or family)]. Work-related injuries are covered by workers' compensation laws [see § 1D.90]. Disability benefits are funded by withholding from employees' wages [Unemp. Ins. Code § 3252]. Unlike unemployment insurance, which requires mandatory participation by subject employers [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 675-687.2], the employer may choose private disability insurance coverage under a state-approved voluntary disability plan [Unemp. Ins. Code § 3252(a)]. Employees covered under such a private plan are not required to pay tax to the state [Unemp. Ins. Code § 3252(a)].

Coverage and requirements for state disability and unemployment insurance are set forth in the California Employer's Guide, prepared by the California Employment Development Department. For further discussion of disability insurance in general, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 25, Nature and Types of Disability Insurance , and Ch. 30, Group Life and Disability Insurance (Matthew Bender). § 1D.110 Scope of Work to be Performed by Attorney

1. Determine tasks attorney will perform, including:

NOTE:

The focus of this chapter is on the selection of employee benefits, rather than on setting up the benefit plan. The detailed steps in setting up a plan, particularly a deferred compensation plan, are highly technical and beyond the scope of this chapter. It is anticipated that the attorney will associate with a professional specializing in employee benefit plans before recommending the adoption of any particular benefits.

Counsel should refer to the Scope and Research Guide of this chapter for additional references to aid in making these determinations.

a. Contacting employee benefits professional.

b. Associating specialist counsel, if necessary.

c. Researching applicable tax and labor law.

d. Making recommendations based on research.

e. Drafting and reviewing letters and agreements.

2. Determine at which point employee benefits professional should be contacted to make determinations and recommendations.

3. Determine whether consultation or association of specialist is appropriate [see § 1D.100[1][d]].

NOTE:

For discussion of when an attorney must associate a specialist, refer to Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

1-1D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1D.111

§ 1D.111 Business's Objectives in Providing Retirement Plans

NOTE:

The selection of any retirement plan depends on the client's objectives, the types and numbers of its employees, and the legal requirements with which each type of plan must comply. One plan may not satisfy all the client's objectives. In that case, the business may require more than one plan, or the client may have to choose the single plan that best meets its objectives. In addition, the expectation of employees may influence the choice of plan. Today, most large manufacturing employers maintain traditional types of pension plans (e.g., defined pension benefit plans) because the employee market place demands it. The trend in new service and high-tech companies, however, is toward qualified salary-deferral plans and some form of non-qualified equity-based compensation.

1. Determine client's financial and tax objectives regarding any pension and profit-sharing plans, which may include:

a. Flexibility in determining amount of annual employer contributions.

NOTE:

Annual contributions to non-qualified plans are not subject to statutory restrictions. However, the amount an employer needs to contribute per covered employee may be higher in a non-qualified plan than in a qualified plan (to provide the same amount of benefits to the employee on retirement) because the net cost to the employer of a non-qualified plan is generally greater since the plan enjoys no tax advantages.

Of the qualified retirement plans, profit-sharing plans are the most flexible with respect to annual contributions [see § 1B.58; see also I.R.C. § 404(a)(3)(A)], and defined benefit pension plans are the least flexible [see § 1B.56; see also I.R.C. § 412].

b. Minimizing administrative costs of plan.

NOTE:

The primary disadvantage of a qualified plan (compared to a non-qualified plan) is its substantial design and administration costs, the result of having to comply with the complex requirements of both the Internal Revenue Code and ERISA. Unless a prototype or master plan is used, the costs of drafting a plan and obtaining a qualification letter from the Internal Revenue Service are significant. Similarly, continuing administration costs are higher for qualified than for non-qualified plans because of the expense of managing the funds and filing internal and governmental reports.

Of the qualified plans, administrative costs are generally higher for defined benefit pension plans than for profit-sharing plans or money purchase plans because the defined pension benefit plans not only require the services of an actuary to design the plan, but also require an actuary's continuing services to calculate annual contributions and provide a portion of the plan's required annual report [see 29 U.S.C. § 1023(a)(4); see also 29 U.S.C. § 1242 (requirements for enrolled actuaries)], whereas the employer's accountant can often maintain a profit-sharing or money purchase plan.

c. Avoiding payment of pension benefit guarantee insurance.

NOTE:

Most qualified defined pension benefit plans are subject to Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBCG) insurance coverage requirements [29 U.S.C. § 1321(a)(1)]. Exceptions include plans exclusively for more than 10-percent owners [29 U.S.C. § 1321(b)(9)], plans of professional service employers that never have more than 25 active participants [29 U.S.C. § 1321(b)(13)], and certain other plans [see 29 U.S.C. § 1321(b)].

d. Avoiding requirement of employer to continue to fund terminated plan.

NOTE:

Defined pension benefit plans are generally subject to the PBGC's plan termination insurance program, where an employer is liable, up to 30 percent of the employer's net worth, if its plan terminates with assets insufficient to pay vested benefits [see 29 U.S.C. § 1362(b)].

e. Maximizing business's current income tax deductions.

NOTE:

The tax-favored treatment of qualified plans generally encourages their use [see, e.g., I.R.C. §§ 402-404]. However, in some circumstances, businesses will find non-qualified approaches to employee compensation to be preferable. For further discussion, see § 1D.51, Practice Tip.

f. Maximizing income tax benefits for employees [see § 1D.51].

g. Reducing estate (and gift) taxes of owner-employees.

NOTE:

For further discussion, see § 1D.55, Practice Tip.

2. Determine which group of employees employer wants to benefit.

NOTE:

For a discussion of considerations in deciding which group of employees to compensate, see § 1D.56[5],

Practice Tip.

3. Determine other retirement objectives of employer, including:

a. Providing predictable retirement benefits.

NOTE:

The basic retirement benefits from a defined benefit pension plan are fixed by formula, without regard to the plan's investment performance or the business' profits [I.R.C. § 412]. Further, certain benefits are required to be insured by the PBGC [29 U.S.C. § 1321(a)(1)]. Conversely, the quality of the plan's investments in a profit-sharing plan, or a cash-deferred plan directly affect the amount of plan benefits because the benefits are linked to the plan's investment performance [see I.R.C. § 414(i)*]. For example, if the plan's investments are in common stock and the value of the stock is down at the time or retirement, benefits may be less than anticipated.

b. Encouraging employees to save for retirement.

NOTE:

A defined pension benefit plan generally does not provide for either voluntary or mandatory employee contributions; contributions are made each year by the employer [see I.R.C. § 412*]. By contrast, under a cash or deferred plan, employees may reduce their income from wages by making pre-tax contributions of a portion of their compensation. The maximum dollar limit on annual elective deferrals under cash or deferred plans is $10,500 in 2000 and 2001 [I.R.C. § 402(g)(1),(5), before amendment by Pub Law 107-16; 2000-52 I.R.B. 600, Notice 2000-66 ; 1999-2 C.B. 638, Notice 99-55], $11,000 in 2002, $12,000 in 2003, $13,000 in 2004, $14,000 in 2005, $15,000 in 2006 [I.R.C. § 402(g)(1),(2)]. Cost-of-living increases in $500 increments are made thereafter [I.R.C. § 402(g)(4)]. Elective deferral contributions are not subject to the deduction limits that apply to stock bonus or profit-sharing plans, to combination defined contribution and defined benefit plans, or to SEPs [I.R.C. § 404(n), effective for years beginning after December 31, 2001]. In addition, the application of a deduction limitation to any other employer contribution to a qualified stock bonus or profit-sharing plan [see I.R.C. § 404(a)(3)*] does not take into account elective deferral contributions [I.R.C. § 404(n), effective for years beginning after 12/31/01].

Anti-discrimination requirements also apply to cash or deferred plans [I.R.C. § 401(k)(3) (discrimination tests may limit amount most highly compensated plan participants may defer)]. Often, cash or deferred plans also allow a participant to make after-tax contributions [see I.R.C. § 401(m)(2)* (contribution limitations)]. Under a profit-sharing plan, both voluntary and mandatory employee (nondeductible) contributions may be made [see I.R.C. § 401(k)* (voluntary contributions); see also I.R.C. § 411(c)(2)*) (non-contributory retirement plan)].

c. Integrating plan benefits with social security.

NOTE:

Contributions to certain plans or benefits paid from them may be integrated with social security [I.R.C. § 401(a)(5), (l)]. Under an integrated plan, participants can expect to receive social security benefits, or certain other state and federal benefits, in addition to their benefits under the plan itself. By integrating a retirement plan with social security, the cost of benefits to lower-paid employees can be reduced because the plan may exclude employees whose entire benefits are covered by social security, without being considered discriminatory [see I.R.C. §§ 401(l), 3101(a); Rev. Rul. 84-45, 1984-1 C.B. 115 (limitation on offset of contribution by social security under defined contribution plan)]. In addition, an integrated plan may favor more highly compensated employees without being considered discriminatory because plan contributions or benefits may be based on compensation not covered by social security [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(5); Rev. Rul. 84-45, 1984-1 C.B. 115]. Detailed rules on social security integration have been issued by the Internal Revenue Service [see Rev. Rul. 78-92, 1978-1 C.B. 118 ; Rev. Rul. 71-446, 1971-2 C.B. 187].

The cash or deferred plan, however, does not allow integration with social security because of it must comply with special anti-discrimination rules [see I.R.C. § 401(k)(3)].

4. Determine additional non-retirement objectives of employer, including:

a. Providing benefits payable before retirement or termination of employment.

NOTE:

Profit-sharing plans may distribute benefits before an employee's retirement or termination on the occurrence of specified events, such as lapse of time or financial hardship; however, defined benefit and defined contribution pension plans may not make such distributions [see Rev. Rul. 73-553, 1973-2 C.B. 130]. Cash or deferred plans may not allow in-service withdrawals before a participant reaches age 591/2, unless there is disability or financial hardship [see I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(B)].

b. Providing benefits on disability.

NOTE:

Profit-sharing plans may provide full-vesting on disability [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii)]; distributions are made on termination of employment [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii)]. Early withdrawals may also be allowed because of illness [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii)]. Cash or deferred plans may also provide full-vesting on disability [I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(B)], except that distributions made on termination of employment must be based on financial hardship [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(d)(2)]. Defined benefit plans may provide full vesting on disability [I.R.C. § 411(a)(9)]; actuarially reduced benefits are payable on disability [see I.R.C. § 411(a)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.411(a)-7(d)(6)(i)].

§ 1D.112 Business's Objectives in Providing Compensation Plans Other Than Retirement Plans

NOTE:
As with retirement plans [see § 1D.111*], the selection of any compensation or benefit plan depends on the client's objectives, the types and numbers of its employees, and the legal requirements with which each type of plan must comply.

1. Determine reasons client wants to benefit employees:

a. Retain key employees.

NOTE:
Benefit plans that defer compensation or provide an equity interest in the business may be most effective for key employees [see §§ 1D.13*, 1D.16, 1D.17].

b. Reward key employees for past performance.

NOTE:
If an employer wants to reward key employees for past services, compensation (such as direct cash compensation) that does not tie the employee to the job may be more appropriate [see § 1D.12*].

2. Determine client's financial and tax objectives regarding compensation and benefit plans, which may include:

a. Minimizing administrative costs of plan.

b. Maximizing business' current income tax deductions.

c. Maximizing income tax benefits for employees.

NOTE:
For further coverage of these considerations, see § 1D.111.

3. Determine which group of employees employer wants to benefit.

NOTE:
For further coverage of these considerations, see § 1D.111.

§ 1D.113 Checklist of Types of Benefit Plans

1. Based on client's objectives [see § 1D.112], determine appropriateness of any of following benefit plans:

a. Group life insurance [see § 1D.31].

b. Life insurance, other than group life.

NOTE:
An employer may want to provide life insurance coverage to some or all of its employees. Group term life insurance is discussed in § 1D.31. Other types of life insurance plans that the employer may want to consider include "key employee" and split dollar insurance. For further discussion of these programs, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 20, Nature and Types of Life Insurance (Matthew Bender).

c. Accident, health, and disability plans [see § 1D.33].

d. Dependent care assistance program [see § 1D.37].

e. Educational assistance program [see § 1D.38].

f. Cafeteria plans [see § 1D.35].

NOTE:
For discussion of the tax benefits of employee stock purchase plans, see § 1D.80, Practice Tip.

n. Non-qualified stock or stock option plan [see § 1D.81].

o. Non-qualified deferred compensation plan or excess benefit plan.

NOTE:
Use of a deferred compensation arrangement to supplement a qualified pension plan is commonly referred to as an "excess benefits plan" [see 29 U.S.C. § 1002(36) ("excess benefits plan" defined)].

p. Stock appreciation rights.

NOTE:
For coverage of stock appreciation rights (SARs), see § 1D.83.

q. Individual retirement accounts.

NOTE:
Employees who are not covered by a qualified retirement plan [see §§ 1D.50-1D.61] may establish individual retirement accounts (IRAs) for themselves and their spouses, provided certain statutory requirements are met [see I.R.C. §§ 408, 219].

r. Simplified employee pension.

NOTE:
For coverage of simplified employee pensions (SEPs), see § 1D.62.

2. Determine availability of benefits based on employer's form of business.

NOTE:
Restrictions limit the benefits available to self-employed persons and to 2-percent shareholder of S corporations [see § 1D.19].

§ 1D.114 Checklist of Basic Requirements for Retirement Plan Qualification

NOTE:

For a retirement plan to be qualified, that is, subject to favorable tax treatment, a number of statutory and regulatory requirements must be met. Defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans are subject to the same basic qualification rules [I.R.C. § 401(a); see I.R.C. §§ 401-418E (qualification rules)]. The basic requirements are summarized below. Although this chapter discusses the selection of employee benefits and does not cover the steps necessary to secure such benefits, the following summary is included to provide the attorney with a general understanding of the extent of qualification requirements. This list is not exhaustive. For further discussion of qualification requirements, see, Pension and Profit-Sharing Plans Compliance Guide(Matthew Bender), and Frutkin, Pension and Profit-Sharing Plans: Forms and Practice(Matthew Bender).

1. Plan must be definite written plan communicated to employees [I.R.C. § 401(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(a)(2)].

2. Plan must name at least one fiduciary responsible for plan management and administration [29 U.S.C. § 1102(1)].

3. Summary plan description must be given to each employee and beneficiary receiving benefits [29 U.S.C. §§ 1021(a)(1), 1025(a)].

4. Plan assets must generally be held in trust, under written trust agreement, or invested in annuities issued by insurance companies [29 U.S.C. § 1103(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 1103(b) (exceptions)].

5. Plan must be for exclusive benefit of employees and their beneficiaries [Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(b)(4)].

6. Plan must meet minimum participation standards and vesting requirements [I.R.C. § 401(a)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.401-1(a)(3); see I.R.C. § 410 (standards defined)].

7. Plan must not discriminate in favor of highly compensated individuals [I.R.C. § 401(a)(4); see I.R.C. § 414(q) ("highly compensated individual" defined)].

8. Plan must take into account compensation limits in determining amount of employee benefits [I.R.C. § 401(a)(17)].

9. Plan must contain specified distribution requirements [I.R.C. § 401(a)(9)].

10. Plan must contain special requirements that will take effect if plan becomes "top-heavy," providing for faster vesting and better benefits for lower-paid employees [I.R.C. § 401(a)(10); see I.R.C. § 416(g) ("top-heavy plan" defined)].

11. Plan should submit application for letter of determination to Internal Revenue Service.

NOTE:

Although not required, it is prudent (and customary) to seek a letter of determination from the Internal Revenue Service, stating that the proposed plan meets the qualification requirements of Internal Revenue Code Sections 401(a) and 501(a), and related provisions. The application for the letter of determination is made using IRS Form 5300 (defined benefit plan) or Form 5301 (defined contribution plan).

§ 1D.200 Client Letter Before Initial Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter to a client, for use before an initial meeting regarding employee benefits, to gather information the attorney will use in determining the scope of the work to be done and any preliminary decisions to be made.

At the initial meeting, the attorney will want to have additional, specific information to estimate the time required to perform the legal research and factual analysis. However, complicated or lengthy questionnaires tend to discourage clients and frequently result in cancelled appointments because the client is "unprepared." This form is composed with that in mind. If a more detailed set of questions is appropriate before the initial meeting, counsel should incorporate relevant facts and documents from the checklists in Sections 1D.100 and 1D.101.

[b] Fee and Representation Agreement

The first paragraph of this form refers to a fee and representation agreement. For coverage of fee and representation agreements, see Chapter 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business . For sample forms, see Volume 15, Chapter 86, Agreements for Professional Services, Part A.

Re: Selection of Employee Benefits
Dear _____ [name of client] :

In preparation for our initial meeting regarding the selection of employee benefits for your _____[business or proposed business], I have _____[sent under separate cover or enclosed] a fee and representation agreement outlining our mutual obligations.

The purpose of this letter is to provide you with a short list of the documents and information to bring to our meeting. This is a suggested list only. If you believe other items would be useful, include those as well. If you are unable to obtain everything on the list, bring what you have.

Information

1. Names and telephone numbers of business participants.

2. Names and telephone numbers of the following individuals:

    a. Business's accountant.

    b. Actuary.

    c. Trustees, or proposed trustees, of retirement plans.

    d. Custodians, or proposed custodians of retirement funds, if not trustee.

    e. Retirement plan administrator, or proposed administrator.

    f. Professional investment manager, or proposed manager.

    g. Life insurance agent, or proposed agent.

    h. ERISA fiduciary liability insurance agent or carrier, or proposed agent or carrier.

3. Information about present employee benefit programs (e.g., union retirement plans), if any.

    a. Types of benefit programs.

    b. Number of employees covered by each plan.

    c. Names of covered employees.

    d. Names of plans.

[Choose one of the following set of questions:]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a follow-up letter to an initial meeting at which employee benefits considerations for a new business were discussed.

This letter serves two purposes. First, it reiterates the tasks the attorney will perform, reminding the client of the extent of work involved. The letter provides optional text for use if the attorney will work in consultation with an employee benefits specialist.

Second, if the attorney is awaiting additional materials from the client, it provides the client with a complete list of the information or documents that he or she must provide and puts the client on notice that work cannot be completed without those items.

_____[name]
_____[title]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

In our meeting of _____[date], we agreed that I would perform the research and analysis necessary to determine the advisable types of employee fringe benefits, including retirement plans, for your _____[business or proposed business venture]. This will include _____[specify, e.g., comparing the cost (including the tax consequences) of qualified versus non-qualified retirement plans, determining the feasibility of establishing a statutory stock based plan, and performing the research necessary to determine whether workers are employees or independent contractors for purposes of workers' compensation]. [Add if applicable: I will perform this research and analysis in consultation with _____ (name), an employee benefits specialist.]

[If client is to provide additional information, use:]

We also agreed that you would provide me with the following: _____[list information and documents].

I look forward to receiving this information as soon as possible, so that I can complete the work we discussed. I will telephone you to confirm receipt of your materials and to schedule a date for our follow-up discussion.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a follow-up letter to a meeting at which employee benefits considerations for a new business were discussed, stating that no further work will be done.

If no research or analysis is to be performed regarding the business's employee benefits needs, a follow-up letter to the client establishes the end of the attorney-client relationship related to this particular representation. This letter helps establish a date from which the statute of limitations runs for purposes of malpractice claims [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2)].

The attorney should return any documents belonging to the client with this letter. The letter should be sent certified or registered mail, to document the close of the attorney-client relationship, as well to confirm the receipt of returned documents.

CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter outlines various federal and California tax reporting and payment requirements that will arise for a new business. The coverage focuses on the following tax factors: (1) basic federal and state income tax reporting and payment requirements for sole proprietorships, partnerships, corporations, and limited liability companies; (2) federal and state withholding and employment taxes; (3) sales and use tax considerations; and (4) property tax reporting and payment. The Practice Guide provides a checklist of facts and documents to obtain and determinations to be made in advising the client on initial tax matters.

For discussion of tax considerations involving nonprofit corporations, see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations , and Ch. 13B, Tax-Exempt Status for Nonprofit Entities . For coverage of special tax problems of multijurisdictional taxpayers, that is, corporations conducting business both inside and outside California, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 22, Franchise and Income Taxes (Matthew Bender).

Tax issues involving organizational forms that are subject to specialized government regulation, such as banks and insurance and trust companies, are beyond the scope of this chapter. For coverage of those complex issues, see Taxation of Financial Institutions(Matthew Bender) and Antes, Griffith, et. al., Federal Income Taxation of Life Insurance Companies(Matthew Bender).

For coverage of tax and other considerations involved in selecting the most appropriate form of entity for a new business, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For a discussion of the range of laws that govern the establishment and operation of a business, see Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers .

CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Federal Taxes
1. Income Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.10

§ 1E.10 Taxation of Sole Proprietorship

[1] In General

A sole proprietor's profits (or losses) are computed on Schedule C of IRS Form 1040 and included in personal income: there is no separate income tax on the business's net profit [see I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a)(1)]. The sole proprietor pays income taxes on the sole proprietorship as an individual, not as a separate business entity [see I.R.C. §§ 61(a), 62(a), 6012(a)]. The tax year of a sole proprietorship is the same as the tax year of its proprietor,because the proprietorship and the proprietor are one and the same taxpayer. Business deductions which reduce business income must be "ordinary and necessary" business expenses; no other deductions are permitted [see I.R.C. § 162]. The taxpayer may elect to amortize start-up expenses over a period of not less than five years [see I.R.C. § 195]; if this election is not made, the start-up expenses are not deductible because they are not incurred in carrying on a trade or business [see I.R.C. §§ 162(a), 195(a)]. For accounting and tax reporting purposes, assets dedicated to the business should be distinguished from assets used personally.

[2] Deductibility of Losses

A sole proprietor may generally deduct business losses from other income [I.R.C. § 62(a)(1)]; provided, however, that those losses may not be deducted in amount greater than the amount that is "at risk" in the business [see I.R.C. § 465] and the business venture must be engaged in for profit [see I.R.C. §§ 162, 183]. The amount at risk includes the contributed capital and the sole proprietor's recourse liabilities [I.R.C. § 465(b)(1)-(3); see I.R.C. § 465(b)(6) (amount at risk for real estate also includes certain qualified nonrecourse financing)]. Unallowed losses will usually be allowed upon disposition of the business [see I.R.C. § 465]. A business activity not pursued with a profit motive may be recharacterized by the IRS as a hobby: the activity's deductions are then limited to an amount not to exceed its income [I.R.C. § 183].

[3] Self-Employment Tax

If a sole proprietor has a net profit of $400 or more, the amount of the profit is subject to a self-employment tax that finances social security benefits; the self-employment tax is calculated on Schedule SE which is attached to IRS Form 1040 (Individual U.S. Income Tax Return) [see I.R.C. §§ 1401, 1402(b), 6017; Treas. Reg. § 1.6017-1(a)(1)]. The self-employment tax is added to the income tax liability and paid with it [see IRS Form 1040, Instr.].

[4] Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) on Individuals

The alternative minimum tax (AMT) is imposed when the amount of AMT exceeds the individual's regular tax for the taxable year [I.R.C. § 55(a)]; it is imposed on an individual's alternative minimum taxable income, reduced by the exemption amount [I.R.C. § 55(b)(2) (alternative minimum taxable income); see I.R.C. § 55(d)(1), (3) (exemption amount and phase out)]. Alternative minimum taxable income is calculated by making certain adjustments to regular taxable income [I.R.C. §§ 55(b)(2)(A), 56, 58], and increasing it by the amount of certain items of tax preference [I.R.C. §§ 55(b)(2)(B), 57]. The individual alternative minimum tax rate is 26 percent up to $175,000, and 28 percent above that amount [I.R.C. § 55(b)(1)(A)].

[5] Estimated Tax Payments

An individual taxpayer is generally required to make quarterly estimated tax payments if the current year's estimated tax liability is at least $500 and withholding will not be at least 90 percent of the current year's tax or 100 percent of the prior year's tax [see I.R.C. § 6654(d)(1)(B), (e)]. The estimated tax payment is enclosed with IRS Form 1040-ES.

CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Federal Taxes
1. Income Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.11

§ 1E.11 Taxation of Partnership

[1] Filing of Informational Return

A partnership is not itself a taxpaying entity; it is a conduit of income, gain, loss, deductions, and credits to the individual partners [see I.R.C. §§ 701, 702(a)]. A partnership need not adopt the same tax year as its partners, however, nor is it required to share the same accounting method [I.R.C. §§ 703, 706]. A partnership, with some exceptions, must file an informational return on IRS Form 1065 (U.S. Partnership Return of Income) [I.R.C. § 6031(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.6031-1(a)(1)]. This return reports partnership income and deductions and the partners' names, addresses, and distributive shares, as well as other information required by the IRS [I.R.C. § 6031(a)]. The partnership must file its first return for the first taxable year in which the partnership has income or has a deductible expense [Treas. Reg. § 1.6031-1(a)(1)]. Generally, the return is due by the fifteenth day of the fourth month after the close of the partnership's taxable year [Treas. Reg. § 1.6031-1(e)(2)].

In addition, the partnership entity must annually pay the minimum franchise tax for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17851.5; see § 1E.51[2]].

[2] Statement to Partners on Schedule K-1

On or before the day the partnership return must be filed, the partnership must provide to each partner (and each person holding an interest in the partnership as a nominee for another at any time during the taxable year) a statement showing that partner's distributive share of income, gains, losses, deductions, and credits [see I.R.C. § 6031(b); see also Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.6031(b)-1T(a)(1), (3)]. In the case of an electing large partnership [see I.R.C. § 775], this information must be furnished on or before the first March 15 following the close of the taxable year [I.R.C. § 6031(b)]. This statement is made on Schedule K-1 (Partner's Share of Income, Deductions, Credits, Etc.). The partners report the items from the Schedule K-1 on the partners' individual returns consistent with the treatment of the items on the partnership return [I.R.C. § 6222(a)]; however, a partner's return may treat items inconsistently if a statement is filed with the IRS identifying the inconsistently treated items [I.R.C. § 6222(b)(1); see [5], below].

[3] Tax Matters Partner (TMP)

[a] Designation of TMP

The partnership designates a tax-matters partner (TMP) to represent it; the TMP has notification responsibilities to the partners and the IRS and the actions of the TMP may bind the partnership and certain partners [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7); see [b]-[d], below]. A partner is eligible to be the TMP for a taxable year if either the partner was a general partner at some time during that year or is a general partner when the designation is made [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)].

If the partnership fails to designate a TMP, ordinarily the general partner with the largest interest in partnership profits at the close of the taxable year automatically becomes the TMP. If the partnership has more than one such partner, the first such partner alphabetically is designated the TMP [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7)(B); Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(m)(2)]. If the partnership has not designated a tax matters partner and it is impracticable [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(o) (determination of impracticability)] to apply the largest-profits-interest rule, the Commissioner will select a tax matters partner [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7); Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(n), (p)]. Within 30 days of that selection, the Secretary must notify all partners entitled to notice [see I.R.C. § 6223(a)] of the name and address of the selected TMP [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7); see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(r)].

[b] Duty of TMP to Inform Partners

With some exceptions, the TMP must notify all partners by forwarding copies of the IRS notice that a partnership- level proceeding is beginning or that a final partnership administrative adjustment has been issued [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6223(g)-1T(a)]. The TMP is also generally required to inform all partners of the following within 30 days [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6223(g)-1T(b)(1)]:

- A closing conference with an examining agent;
- Any proposed adjustments, rights of appeal, and requirements for filing a protest;
- The time and place of an appeal conference;
- IRS acceptance of a settlement offer;
- A consent to extension of the period of limitation for all partners;
- The filing of a request for administrative adjustment on behalf of the partnership;
- The filing of a petition for judicial review;
- The filing of a notice of appeal regarding a judicial determination; or
- A final judicial redetermination.

[c] Duty of TMP to Inform IRS

On receiving notice of a partnership-level proceeding for a partnership year, the TMP is required to furnish the IRS with the name, address, profits interest, and taxpayer identification number of each person who was a partner at any time during the year if that information is not on the partnership return [I.R.C. § 6230(e); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6230(e)-1T(a)]. The TMP must also provide the IRS with revised or additional information upon discovery that information on the partnership return or otherwise furnished to the IRS is incorrect or incomplete [I.R.C. § 6230(e);

Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6230(e)-1T(b)].

[d] When Action of TMP Binds Partnership and Partners

The partnership and certain partners are bound by the action of the TMP when the TMP extends the period of limitation for assessing tax on any partnership item or affected item for all partners [I.R.C. § 6229(b)(1)(B)]. Lacking a showing of fraud, malfeasance, or misrepresentation of fact, the partnership and certain partners will be bound by a settlement agreement entered into with the IRS by the TMP that expressly binds all partners other than notice partners or those that expressly deny the settlement authority of the TMP in a statement filed with the IRS at least 30 days before the agreement is reached [I.R.C. § 6224(c)(3); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6224(c)-1T(a)]. The partnership and partners are bound when the TMP files a request for administrative adjustment and asks that it serve as a substitute for treatment of partnership items on the partnership return [I.R.C. § 6227(c); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6227(c)-1T(a)] as well as when the TMP files a petition for judicial review of a final partnership administrative adjustment during the first 90 days after the IRS mails it or appeals a court decision regarding such an adjustment [I.R.C. § 6226(a), (g)].

[4] Partnership Level Treatment of Partnership Items

When a partner reports an item consistently with the partnership, the tax treatment of that partnership item is determined at the partnership level although any resulting tax liability is imposed individually on each partner [see I.R.C. §§ 6221-6232; Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6221-1T(a)]. Instead of proceeding with individual partner audits, the IRS generally can change that treatment only through a partnership-level proceeding [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6221-1T(a)]. Unless the dispute is resolved during the proceeding, at the conclusion of the partnership-level proceeding the IRS issues a final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA) containing its determination of the questionable partnership items [see I.R.C. § 6223(a)]. The TMP and other partners are then entitled to pursue judicial review [I.R.C. § 6228]. The partnership-level procedures do not apply to a partnership that elects not to be treated as a partnership [see Treas. Reg. § 1.6031-1(b)(1)] and a small partnership is exempt from the procedures if certain conditions are met and, therefore, must elect partnership-level treatment if it is desired [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(1)(B); see § 1E.122[1], Paragraph 3].

[5] Inconsistent Reporting by Partner

If a partner reports a partnership item inconsistently, the IRS may change the treatment to make it conform to the partnership's treatment of the item and can make an automatic computational adjustment of the partner's tax liability [I.R.C. § 6222(c); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6222(b)-2T(a)]. However, if the partner files a statement notifying the IRS of the inconsistent item [see I.R.C. § 6222(b)], the IRS must either conduct a partnership-level proceeding to determine proper treatment or classify all partnership items for the year as nonpartnership items not subject to partnership-level procedure [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6222(b)-2T(a)]. If the inconsistency results from incorrect information received by the partner from the partnership, the partner may be treated as if a timely notification of the inconsistency were made [I.R.C. § 6222(b)(2); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6222(b)-3T(a)].

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Federal Taxes
1. Income Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.12

§ 1E.12 Taxation of Corporation

[1] Filing Requirements

[a] C Corporation

The C corporation is a separate tax-paying entity [see I.R.C. § 11(a)]; it must, with few exceptions, file an income tax return, whether or not it has taxable income and regardless of the amount of its gross income [I.R.C. § 6012(a)(2); see I.R.C. §§ 6037(a) (S corporation return), 6038A (additional requirements for foreign owned corporations)]. The return is filed on IRS Form 1120 (U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return) or on a specialized version of that form. The return is due on the 15th day of the third month following the close of the corporation's taxable year [I.R.C. § 6072(b)]. Failure to file by the due date or extended due date can subject the corporation to penalties, as can failure to pay all of the tax that is shown to be due on the return when the return is filed [see I.R.C. § 6651(a)]. Penalties for failure to file can also be assessed against a corporation that files an insufficient return [see I.R.C. §§ 6651, 7203; Treas. Reg. § 1.6011-1(b)].

[b] S Corporation

An S corporation is not a separate tax-paying entity; income, gain, loss, deductions, and credits are taxed to the shareholders [see I.R.C. § 1363]. Therefore, like a partnership, an S corporation must file an informational return [I.R.C. § 6037(a)]. The return is filed on IRS Form 1120-S. Any person who was a shareholder during the taxable year must be given a copy of the information shown on the return [I.R.C. § 6037(b)]. The information for the taxable year that is required by the return includes [I.R.C. § 6037(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.6037-1(a)]: items of gross income; deductions; each shareholder's name, address, and stock holding; and the amount and date of any distributions to shareholders. The return must be filed on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the corporation's taxable year [Treas. Reg. § 1.6037-1(b)].

[c] First Tax Return

The corporation may adopt any permissible method of accounting for computing taxable income when filing its first return [Treas. Reg. § 1.446-1(e)(1)]; the selected accounting method may not be changed unless the law changes or the corporation gets permission to change from the IRS [I.R.C. § 446(e); Treas. Reg. § 1.446-1(e)(2)]. The original tax return must contain the selection of the tax year of the corporation [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.441-1T(b)(2)], as well as a statement of the assets received in incorporation [Treas. Reg. § 1.351-3(b).

[2] Corporate Income Tax Rate

The first $50,000 of taxable income is taxed at a rate of 15 percent, the next $25,000 is taxed at a rate of 25 percent, and the balance up to $10 million is taxed at a rate of 34 percent. Taxable income exceeding $10 million is taxed at the rate of 35 percent [I.R.C. § 11(b)]. There is also a surtax of 5 percent on taxable income exceeding $100,000 (up to $11,750) and another 3-percent surtax on taxable income exceeding $15 million (up to $100,000) [see I.R.C. § 11(b)].

[3] Other Initial Filings

The corporation must obtain an employer identification number by filing IRS Form SS-4 (Application for Employer Identification Number) with the IRS [see I.R.C. § 6109]. An S corporation election must be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the third month of the corporation's current fiscal year to be effective for that year; an election may be made at any time during the year for the next succeeding taxable year [I.R.C. § 1362(b)(1)]. The election of S corporation status is usually made on IRS Form 2553 (Election by Small Business Corporation) [see I.R.C. § 1362(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.1362-6(a)(2)]. Any tax shelter organizer must register the tax shelter no later than the day on which the first offering for sale of interests in the tax shelter occurs; registration is accomplished by filing IRS Form 8264 (Application for Registration of a Tax Shelter) with the IRS [I.R.C. § 6111(a)(1); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6111-1T, Q & A 1].

[4] Recordkeeping and Record Retention

The corporation must set up permanent records sufficient to establish the amount of gross income, deductions, credits, or other matters that are required to be shown on any tax return or information return [I.R.C. § 6001; Treas. Reg. § 1.6001-1(a); see Treas. Reg. § 1.446-1(a)(4)]. The complex and varied recordkeeping requirements for corporate financial statements, federal and state regular income tax, federal alternative minimum tax, and federal earnings and profit calculations mandate obtaining professional help from a certified public accountant or other accounting or tax professional. Books and records should be retained as long as the contents may become material in the administration of any internal revenue law [Treas. Reg. § 1.6001-1(e); see § 1E.130].

[5] Estimated Tax Payments

All C corporations are generally required to make quarterly payments of estimated tax for each taxable year; "tax" means the sum of the regular corporate income tax [see I.R.C. §§ 11 (income tax), 801 (tax on life insurance companies), 1201(a) (alternative tax on capital gains)], the corporate alternative minimum tax [see I.R.C. § 55], the environmental tax [see I.R.C. § 59A], and the tax imposed on transportation income of foreign corporations [see I.R.C. § 887], as reduced by any allowable credits and overpayments [I.R.C. § 6655(g)(1)]. S corporations must also make estimated tax payments with respect to anticipated federal tax liability attributable to certain types of income [I.R.C. § 6655(g)(4); see I.R.C. §§ 1374(a) (built-in gains), 1375(a) (excess net passive investment income)]; the requirements are generally the same as those for C corporations but there are differences [see, e.g., I.R.C. § 6655(g)(4)(B) (prior year safe harbor)]. Failure to pay, or underpayment, subjects the corporation to a penalty [I.R.C. § 6655(a)]. The penalty is calculated by applying the applicable corporate underpayment rate to the amount of each quarterly underpayment for the entire underpayment period [I.R.C. § 6655; see I.R.C. § 6621(a)(2) (corporate underpayment rate)]; no penalty is imposed if the amount of tax due for the year is less than $500 [I.R.C. § 6655(f)].

The amount of the corporation's estimated tax is calculated on IRS worksheet Form 1120-W (Corporation Estimated Tax); this form is not filed with the IRS [see IRS Form 1120-W, Instr.]. Estimated taxes are paid to an authorized commercial bank depository with IRS Form 8109 (Federal Tax Deposit Coupon Book) [see IRS Form 8109, Instr.].

The IRS usually sends IRS Form 8109 to the taxpayer automatically when an application is made for an employer identification number [see Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(i)(4)]; IRS Form 4417-A (Request for Federal Tax Deposit Forms) also may be used to request IRS Form 8109 [see IRS Form 4417-A, Instr.].

[6] Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) on Corporations

Corporations are subject to an alternative minimum tax (AMT) imposed on "alternative minimum taxable income" when the AMT would result in a higher amount of tax than the regular income tax [see I.R.C. § 55]. The AMT for corporations is imposed at a rate of 20 percent [I.R.C. § 55(b)(1)(B)] on alternative minimum taxable income reduced by the exemption amount of $40,000 [I.R.C. § 55(d)(2) and the alternative minimum tax foreign credit [I.R.C. § 55(b)(1)(B)]. The exemption amount is reduced by 25 cents for each $1 of alternative minimum taxable income that exceeds $150,000 [I.R.C. § 55(d)(3)(A)]. Alternative minimum taxable income is calculated by both making adjustments to regular taxable income [see I.R.C. §§ 56, 58] and adding items of tax preference to it [I.R.C. § 55(b)(2); see I.R.C. § 57].

Effective for tax years beginning after 1997, small corporations are exempt from the alternative minimum tax. Specifically, a corporation's tentative minimum tax is zero for any taxable year if (1) the corporation met the $5 million gross receipts test [see I.R.C. § 448(c)] for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1996, and (2) the corporation would meet that test for the taxable year and all prior taxable years beginning after the first taxable year if the test were applied by substituting $7.5 million [I.R.C. § 55(e)].

For more detailed discussion of the alternative minimum tax, see California Small Business Guide, Ch. 2, Preincorporation Tax Considerations, § 2.02[6] (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Federal Taxes
1. Income Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.13

§ 1E.13 Taxation of Limited Liability Company

[1] Freedom to Choose Type of Tax Treatment

For income tax purposes, a limited liability company (LLC) may elect to be taxed as a corporation or as a partnership [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)]. It seems likely that most LLCs will choose partnership tax treatment, in which the LLC is merely a pass-through tax entity, and the members pay tax on any LLC income.

Prior to 1997, the tax classification of an LLC was determined by weighing the number of corporate versus noncorporate characteristics possessed by the LLC [see, e.g., Rev. Proc. 95-10 , § 4, 1995-1 C.B. 501 (now obsolete)]. These characteristics were (1) continuity of life; (2) centralized management; (3) limited liability for the obligations of the business; and (4) free transferability of interests. If partnership tax treatment was desired, it was important to structure the LLC so that at least some of these corporate characteristics were avoided.

This, however, is no longer the case. Under liberalized classification rules that took effect on January 1, 1997, an LLC with two or more members may elect to be taxed either as a corporation or as a partnership. An LLC with a single owner (i.e., a qualifying trust) may elect either to be taxed as a corporation or to be disregarded as an entity separate from its owner [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)]. If an LLC does not make an election, it will be taxed as a partnership if it has two or more members, or will be disregarded as an entity separate from its owner if it has only one member [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(b)(1)]. Note that existing LLCs that do not make an election will retain the classification that they would have claimed under the pre-1997 regulations if (1) the LLC had a reasonable basis for its claimed classification, (2) the LLC and all its members recognized the federal tax consequences of any change in the entity's classification within the 60 months before January 1, 1997, and (3) neither the LLC nor any member was notified in writing on or before May 8, 1996, that the classification of the entity was under examination [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(b)(3), (n)(2)].

For California tax purposes, tax determinations regarding LLCs will be consistent with IRS determinations [Corp. Code § 23038(b)(ii); FTB Notice 92-5]. LLCs are subject to the annual minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941, 23153] and must pay a graduated entity level fee based on total income from all sources reportable to California [Rev. &

Tax. Code § 17942 (fee applicable to income of $250,000 or more)]. However, LLCs that are exempt from taxes and fees under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701h or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701x and that are not taxed as a corporation for California tax purposes are not subject to the annual minimum tax or the graduated fee [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(d), 23701h(b), 23701x(b); see also I.R.C. § 501(c)(2), (25) (title holding companies)].

[2] Treatment as Partnership for Income Tax Purposes

[a] Advantage of Partnership Tax Treatment

If desired, an LLC will receive pass-through income tax treatment essentially like that of a partnership. Partnership income is taxed only once, at the partner level, not the partnership level. Partnership tax treatment avoids the double taxation attributable to corporations that are not S corporations; that is, taxation once on the corporate earnings and again on shareholders' dividends. It also allows other tax benefits as contrasted not only with corporations but also, in a few respects, with partnerships.

[b] California Tax Treatment

California generally conforms to the federal entity classification rules under Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-2 [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038; see also FTB Notice 92-5]. The classification of a business entity as an association taxable as a corporation is determined under FTB regulations, which must be consistent with the federal regulations in effect on January 1, 1997, that classify a business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation, or disregard the separate existence of the business entity [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(i)]. The classification of an eligible business entity as a partnership or an association taxable as a corporation is the same as the classification of the entity for federal tax purposes; if the separate existence of the LLC is disregarded for federal tax purposes (for example, because the LLC has a single owner), the separate existence will be disregarded for California purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(B)(ii), (iii)]. However, if an eligible business entity was properly classified as an association taxable as a corporation for any income year beginning with the 60-month period preceding January 1, 1997, the entity continues to be an association taxable as a corporation until it elects to be classified the same as the entity is classified for federal purposes; this rule does not apply to any entity that was not doing business in California, did not derive income from California, and had no California resident owner during the 60-month period preceding January 1, 1997 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23038(b)(2)(C)].

[c] Tax Matters Member

Under federal partnership taxation law, a partnership must have a "tax matters partner" (TMP) to act as a liaison between the partnership and the IRS on tax issues [see I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7); see also Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1]. Among other responsibilities, the TMP gives notice to the other partners of tax proceedings, makes tax decisions that bind the other partners, and petitions the IRS for readjustments [see I.R.C. §§ 6223(g), 6224(c)(3), 6226(a); § 1E.11[3]].

The TMP of a partnership is either (1) the general partner designated as the tax matters partner, or (2) if no such partner is designated, the general partner having the largest profits interest in the partnership at the close of the taxable year. If there is more than one such partner, the first such partner alphabetically is the TMP [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7)]. If the partnership has not designated a tax matters partner and it is impracticable [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(o) (determination of impracticability)] to apply the largest-profits-interest rule, the Commissioner will select a tax matters partner [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7); Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(n), (p)]. Within 30 days of that selection, the Secretary must notify all partners entitled to notice [see I.R.C. § 6223(a)] of the name and address of the selected TMP [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(7); see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(r)]. The person designated as TMP must be, or have been, a general partner during the taxable period in question [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(1); § 1E.11[3][a]].

Following from the partnership tax laws, an LLC taxed as a partnership presumably must have a "tax matters member," whose responsibilities would be similar to those of a tax matters partner. An LLC may wish to designate a tax matters member in its operating agreement rather than risk having the IRS choose one.

[3] Limited Liability Company as Accounting Entity for Income Taxation of Members

If an LLC is taxed as a partnership for federal and California income tax purposes [see [1], above], it will be taxed under the partnership taxation statutes and regulations. The basic premise of Subchapter K (partnership provisions) of the Internal Revenue Code (applicable to qualifying LLCs) [see I.R.C. § 701 et seq.] is that the LLC is merely an accounting entity for determining items of income and loss that are to be allocated to individual taxpayers (the members of the LLC). The members of the LLC, not the LLC itself, are liable for tax on any LLC income [see I.R.C. § 701; see also [4], below].

Though an LLC is not treated as a tax-paying entity, it does make its own elections related to accounting, including choosing a taxable year, which generally must be the same as that of its principal members [see I.R.C. §§ 703(b), 706]. The Internal Revenue Code provides methods for determining the taxable year of an LLC [see I.R.C. §§ 444, 706(b)].

For California purposes, taxation of LLCs treated as partnerships is generally determined in accordance with Subchapter K of the Internal Revenue Code [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17851; see I.R.C. § 701 et seq.]. However, there are certain California modifications [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17853 et seq.].

[4] Income Taxation of Members of Limited Liability Company

If taxed as a partnership, an LLC is not a federal income taxpayer. Instead, the members, not the LLC, are taxed on income earned by the LLC [I.R.C. § 701]. The main purpose of partnership income tax law [see I.R.C. § 701 et seq.] is to allocate income and loss (and certain other items) to the members for use in preparing their individual tax returns. Another chief purpose is to determine the tax consequences of members' contribution of assets to the LLC.

For further coverage of LLC taxation, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies . For detailed coverage of the taxation of partnerships and partners, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 26, Income Taxation of Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

[5] Requirement to File Federal Tax Return

An LLC classified as a partnership for federal tax purposes must file a partnership return [see Treas. Reg. § 1.6031-1(a)], as well as related schedules and other forms. For a procedural guide to completing and filing federal LLC tax forms, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Federal Taxes
2. Federal Withholding and Employment Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.20

§ 1E.20 Federal Income Tax Withholding

[1] In General

Federal income taxes must be withheld by employers from employees' wages and paid to the IRS; the annual tax liability of the employee determines the amount withheld [see I.R.C. §§ 3401-3403]. Income tax withholding applies only to "covered employment"; however, covered employment includes all but employment specifically excluded by statute such as that of certain agricultural workers [see I.R.C. §§ 3401(a)(2), 3121(a)(8)], crew members on small fishing boats [see I.R.C. §§ 3401(a)(17), 3121(b)(20)], and minors delivering newspapers [see I.R.C. §§ 3401(a)(10)(A), 3121(b)(14)(A)].

[2] Definitions for Federal Income Tax Withholding Purposes

[a] Employer

An "employer" is the one for whom an individual performs services as an employee [I.R.C. § 3401(d)]. The employer is the one who controls payment of wages [I.R.C. § 3401(d)(1)].

[b] Employee

An individual is an "employee" if the individual is either a corporate officer or a common law employee [I.R.C. § 3401(c); Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1]. An individual generally is a common law employee if the person for whom services are performed has the right to control and direct the performance, not only as to the result to be accomplished, but also as to the details and means by which that result is accomplished [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1(b)]. In doubtful cases, the facts will be examined to determine whether or not an employer-employee relationship exists [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1(d)]; and, if that relationship is found to exist, the designation of the employee by the parties as something else, such as an independent contractor, is immaterial [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1(e)]. If the individual performing services is not a common law employee, that individual is an independent contractor [see § 1E.110 (classification of worker as employee or independent contractor)].

[c] Wages

"Wages" are all remuneration for services performed by an employee for the employer, and include the cash value of any remuneration paid in any medium other than cash, unless specifically excluded by statute [I.R.C. § 3401(a)]. The name given to the remuneration for services is immaterial: salaries, fees, bonuses, and commissions are wages if paid as compensation for services by the employee for the employer [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(a)-1(a)(2)].

CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Federal Taxes
2. Federal Withholding and Employment Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.21

§ 1E.21 Federal Employment Taxes

[1] In General

Two kinds of federal employment taxes are computed as a percentage of employees' wages up to a maximum wage base: FICA (social security and medicare) taxes and FUTA (federal unemployment) taxes [see I.R.C. §§ 3111, 3121(a)(1), (2), 3301, 3306(b)(1)]. FICA taxes are imposed equally on both the employer and employee [I.R.C. §§ 3101, 3111]; the employer must withhold FICA taxes from the employee's wages and pay that amount to the IRS along with the employer's payment [I.R.C. § 3102]. FUTA taxes are imposed on the employer [see I.R.C. § 3301]. Both kinds of tax apply only to covered employment which includes just about all employment except for some specific statutory exceptions [see, e.g., I.R.C. § 3121(a)(7)(C) (casual labor), (b)(20) (fishermen receiving share of catch as compensation)].

[2] Types of Federal Employment Taxes

[a] FICA Taxes

The FICA (Federal Insurance Contribution Act) tax consists of the social security tax and the medicare tax [see I.R.C. § 3111(a) (social security tax), (b) (medicare tax)]. The tax is calculated as a percentage of wages up to a specified maximum known as the "contribution base" [see I.R.C. §§ 3101(a), (b), 3111(a), (b)]. The social security tax rate is 6.2 percent [I.R.C. §§ 3101(a), 3111(a)]. and the medicare tax rate is 1.45 percent [I.R.C. §§ 3101(b), 3111(b)]. Each employee must contribute an amount that matches the employer's FICA tax obligation for that employee; the employer must collect the employee contributions and deposit them for each employee's benefit [I.R.C. §§ 3101, 3102]. A sole proprietor is subject to self-employment tax in place of FICA taxes on employees [see I.R.C. §§ 1401, 1402; § 1E.10 [3]].

[b] FUTA Taxes

The unemployment tax is imposed only on employers [I.R.C. § 3301; Treas. Reg. § 31.3301-1(a)]. The tax rate is 6.2

percent of the first $7,000 in wages paid to an employee [I.R.C. §§ 3301(1), 3306(b)(1)]. However, if an employer contributes to an approved state unemployment compensation plan, this contribution operates as a credit against the FUTA tax [I.R.C. § 3302].

[3] Definitions for Federal Employment Tax Purposes

[a] Employer

For FICA tax purposes, the definition of employer is generally the same as for income tax withholding [see § 1E.20[2][a], above]. For FUTA tax purposes, an employer is one who either paid wages of $1,500 or more during any calendar quarter or had at least one individual as an employee for some part of a day in each of 20 different calendar weeks [I.R.C. § 3306(a)(1); but see I.R.C. § 3306(a)(2) (agricultural labor), (3)(domestic service)].

[b] Employee

For both FICA and FUTA tax purposes, employees include corporate officers, common law employees, and statutory employees [I.R.C. § 3121(d)]. A common law employee is the same for FICA and FUTA purposes as for income tax withholding [see § 1E.20[2][b], above]. Statutory employees for FICA and FUTA tax purposes include the following [I.R.C. § 3121(d)(3)]:

- Agent-drivers or commission-drivers engaged in distributing meat, vegetable, or bakery products, beverages other than milk, or laundry or dry cleaning services;
- Full-time life insurance salespersons;
- Home workers performing work, according to the specifications of the person for whom the work is performed, on materials furnished by that person that must be returned to that person; and
- Traveling or city salespersons engaged full-time in soliciting on behalf of and transmitting to a principal orders from sellers for merchandise for resale or supplies.

However, home workers and full-time life insurance salespersons are not included for FUTA tax purposes unless certain specific circumstances apply [see I.R.C. § 3306(i)].

[c] Wages

The definition of wages for FICA and FUTA tax purposes is substantially the same as for income tax withholding purposes [cf. I.R.C. §§ 3121(a), 3306(b); see § 1E.20[2][c]]. Wages includes all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of benefits or other remuneration paid by a medium other than cash, unless specifically excluded by statute [I.R.C. § 3121(a); see I.R.C. §§ 3306(b)(1)-(16) (exclusions from FUTA wages), 3121(a)(1)-(21)(exclusions from FICA wages)].

§ 1E.22 Reporting of Federal Withholding and Employment Taxes

[1] IRS Form 941 (Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return)

Each quarter, starting with the quarter in which taxes are first withheld, the employer must file a report of income taxes withheld from employee wages and employer and employee portions of social security and medicare taxes [see Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(a)-4; IRS Form 941, Instr.]. The report is filed on IRS Form 941 (Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return) except in limited cases including [see Treas. Reg. §§ 31.6011(a)-4(a)(1)--(3), 31.6011(a)-4T(a)(4)]:

- An employer that only withholds income tax [see IRS Form 941-E (Quarterly Return of Withheld Federal Income Tax and Hospital Insurance Tax)].

- Certain employers of household workers [see IRS Form 942 (Employer's Quarterly Tax Return for Household Employees (for Social Security and Withholding Income Tax))].

- Certain employers of agricultural workers [see IRS Form 943 (Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees (for Social Security Taxes and Withheld Income Tax))].

- An employer that has been notified in writing by the IRS that it qualifies for the Employers' Annual Federal Tax Program and therefore must file IRS Form 944 (Employer's ANNUAL Federal Tax Return) instead of IRS Form 941.

The employer must continue to file IRS Form 941 for each calendar quarter, whether or not wages are paid in that quarter, until the employer makes a final return [Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(a)-4].

[2] IRS Form W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement)

Employers must report each employee's amount of wages, withholding, and deductions to the employee and to the Social Security Administration [I.R.C. § 6051; Treas. Reg. §§ 31.6051-1(a)(1), 31.6051-2]. The report is made on IRS Form W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement) and sent to the government using IRS Form W-3 (Transmittal of Income and Tax Statement) [see I.R.C. § 6051; Treas. Reg. § 31.6051-2].

[3] IRS Form 940 (Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment (FUTA) Tax Return)

FUTA taxes are reported on IRS Form 940 (Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment (FUTA) Tax Return) on a calendar year basis [see IRS Form 940, Instr.]. The form is due January 31, unless the employer makes a full deposit of the FUTA taxes due, in which case the deadline for filing is February 10 [see IRS Form 940, Instr.; Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(a)-4]. The employer must continue to file IRS Form 940 for each year, whether or not wages are paid in that year, until the employer makes a final return [see Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(a)-6(a)(3)].

The employer has a duty to deposit income tax withheld from employees' wages at an authorized depository [see I.R.C. §§ 3402(a)(1), 6302(c)]. FICA and FUTA taxes must also be paid by deposit [see I.R.C. § 6302(c); Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(e)]. The deposits are made with IRS Form 8109 (Federal Deposit Coupon Book) [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(i)(3)]. Generally, deposits must be made either monthly or semi-weekly based on an annual determination of the aggregate amount of employment taxes (including withheld income tax) reported by the employer in the "lookback period," which is the 12-month period ending on June 30 of the preceding calendar year [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(a), (b)]. An employer is a monthly depositor for the calendar year if the amount of taxes reported for the lookback period is $50,000 or less; if the amount exceeds $50,000, the employer is a semi-weekly depositor [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(b)(2), (3)]. Special rules apply when an employer has accumulated $100,000 or more of employment taxes [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(c)(3)]. The employer's tax account is identified by the employer identification number previously obtained from the IRS [see Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1; see also § 1E.10].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.24

§ 1E.24 Other Federal Reporting Requirements

[1] Report of Payment to Independent Contractor

The business must generally report payments over $600 per year made to any independent contractor [I.R.C. § 6041A]. An "independent contractor" performs work or services for the business, is paid by the business, but is not an employee of the business [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1]. The report is usually made on IRS Form 1099 MISC (Miscellaneous Income) with the IRS Form 1096 (Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns) transmittal form enclosed [see IRS Form 1099 MISC, Instr.].

[2] Report of Cash Receipts Exceeding $10,000

If more than $10,000 in cash in one transaction or in two or more related transactions is received in the course of trade or business, an information return must be filed with the IRS on IRS Form 8300 (Report of Cash Payments Over $10,000 Received in a Trade or Business) [I.R.C. § 6050I(a)]. The return is due by the 15[th] day after the cash is received [Treas. Reg. § 1.6050I-1(e)]. The penalty for intentional disregard of the reporting requirement is the greater of $25,000 or the amount of cash received in the transaction (up to $100,000) [I.R.C. § 6721(e)(2)].

§ 1E.51 Taxation of Partnership

[1] Partnership Return

Every partnership that engages in a trade or business in California or that has income from California sources must file an informational California partnership return on FTB Form 565 (Partnership Return of Income) for each taxable year stating specifically the items of gross income and deductions [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633(a)(1) (partnerships), (2) (limited partnerships)]. The return also must include the names, addresses, and taxpayer identification numbers of the partners, whether they are residents or nonresidents, and the amount of their distributive shares [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633(a)]. An election, such as partnership tax year or method of depreciation, properly made for federal tax purposes is deemed a proper election for California tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(e)(1)]; a separate election to obtain other tax treatment for California purposes may be filed, but only when that election is expressly authorized by statute or regulation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(e)(3)]. The return is due by the 15[th] day of the fourth month following the close of the partnership's taxable year [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633(a)]. The partnership must supply a copy of the return to each partner, as well as any person who holds an interest as a nominee for another at any time during the taxable year, on or before the day the return is due [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633(b)].

[2] Franchise Tax on Limited Partnerships

Any limited partnership doing business in California, and required to file a FTB Form 565 return in California, is subject to the minimum franchise tax for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17935(a); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153 (minimum franchise tax)]. A limited partnership is any partnership formed by two or more persons under the laws of California or any other jurisdiction and having one or more general partners and one or more limited partners [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17935(d)]. The amount of the minimum franchise tax imposed on partnerships is equal to the amount of that tax imposed on corporations [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17935(a), 23153].

[3] Withholding Tax on Distributions to Partners

[a] Withholding Based on Partner's Status

[i] Resident Partners

The partnership is not required to withhold on distributions made to a California resident partner if that partner has filed an exemption certificate with the FTB [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 18805-7(a)]. This certificate is FTB Form 590 (Withholding Exemption Certificate).

[ii] Nonresident Domestic Partners

After notification by the FTB, a partnership engaged in a trade or business in California or with income from California sources must withhold at a rate of 7 percent on all distributions of income to domestic nonresident partners [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18622, 18668; 18 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 18662-1, 18662-2, 18662-3(a), 18662-11; FTB Notice 90-5 (Aug 20, 1990)]. A domestic nonresident partner is an individual who is a U.S. citizen or resident who does not reside in California; a domestic nonresident partnership, estate, or trust; or a U.S. corporation without a permanent place of business in California and not qualified to do business in California [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 18662-1, 18662-11; FTB Notice 90-5 (Aug 20, 1990)]. The partnership is not required to withhold until total distributions to the same domestic nonresident partner exceed $1,500 in cash and property during a calendar year [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 18662-1].

[iii] Foreign Partners

Any partnership that has taxable income derived from California sources that is effectively connected to a U.S. trade or business is also required to withhold on the portion of that California income allocable to a foreign partner [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18666]. The federal guidelines and rules for withholding under these circumstances are directly applicable for California purposes [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5; Rev. Proc. 89-31, 1989-1 C.B. 895 (federal withholding requirements)].

[b] Withholding Returns and Payment

FTB Form 598-A (Partnership Withholding Tax Payment), along with the amount withheld, must be sent to the FTB within 20 days following the last day of the month that the total amount withheld from all sources exceeds $2,500 [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 18805-8]. By January 31 of the year following the taxable year in question, the partnership must file both FTB Form 598 (Annual Return for Tax Withheld on Foreign and Domestic Nonresident Partners) which reports the total partnership withholding and FTB Form 598-B (Report of Tax Withheld on Foreign and Domestic Nonresident Partners) which reports income, distributions, and tax payments to each nonresident domestic partner [FTB Notice 90-5 (Aug 20, 1990)].

1. State Income Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.52

§ 1E.52 Taxation of Corporations

[1] Types of Tax Imposed on Corporations

[a] Franchise Tax

A corporation, other than a bank or an expressly exempt corporation, must pay an annual franchise tax to California for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101.5 (activities excluded from franchise tax)]. For taxable years beginning on or before December 31, 2010, "doing business in California" means actively engaging in any transaction for the purpose of financial or pecuniary gain or profit [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101(a)]. For taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2011, a taxpayer is "doing business in California" if any of the following conditions has been satisfied [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101(b)]:

1. The taxpayer is organized or commercially domiciled in California;

2. The taxpayer's sales in California for the taxable year exceed the lesser of $500,000 or 25 percent of the taxpayer's total sales [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 25101(b)(2), 25120(e), (f) (determination of "sales")];

3. The taxpayer's real property and tangible personal property in California exceed the lesser of $50,000 or 25 percent of the taxpayer's total real property and tangible personal property [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 25101(b)(3) (determination of property value)]; or

4. The amount the taxpayer paid in California for compensation exceeds the lesser of $50,000 or 25 percent of the total compensation paid by the taxpayer [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23101(b)(4), 25133, 25137 (rules for determining compensation)].

The amounts described in 2.-4., above, are subject to annual revision [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101(c)]. The taxpayer's sales, property, and payroll include the taxpayer's pro rata or distributive share of a partnership or S corporation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101(d)].

The franchise tax is based on the corporation's net income for that taxable year and is imposed on general corporations at the rate of 8.84 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151(a), (e), (f); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23181 (rate for banks and financial corporations)]. The franchise tax is imposed on S corporations at the rate of 1.5 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23802(b)(1)].

With limited exceptions, a minimum franchise tax is imposed on corporations until the later of either (1) the effective date of dissolution or withdrawal, or (2) the date the corporation ceases to do business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23153(a), (d)(1), 23181]. The minimum franchise tax is imposed on S corporations [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23153, 23802(c)]. However, corporations that incorporate or qualify to do business in California after January 1, 2000, are not subject to the minimum franchise tax for the first taxable year, unless the corporation reorganized solely to avoid payment of the minimum franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153(f)(1), (3); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153(f)(2) (exemption inapplicable to qualified Subchapter S subsidiaries)].

[b] Corporate Income Tax

A corporate income tax is imposed on foreign corporations at the same rate as the franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23501]. The corporate income tax is imposed on S corporations at the rate of 1.5 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23802(b)(1)]. The tax is imposed on net income derived from sources within California, except to the extent that such income is subject to the franchise tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23501]; taxes paid under the franchise tax may be offset against amounts owing under the income tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23503]. See Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 22, Corporate Franchise and Income Taxes in California (Matthew Bender), for a discussion of the special tax problems of multijurisdictional taxpayers.

[c] Corporate Alternative Minimum Tax

California's alternative minimum tax (AMT) is imposed on corporations at the rate of 7 percent applied to the amount of a corporation's alternative minimum taxable income as exceeds the exemption amount [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23400, 23455]; a higher rate may be applied to banks [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23455(a)(4)]. The California AMT does not apply to California S corporations [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23400(b)]. If a corporation's California AMT exceeds the corporation's regular tax liability, that excess is payable in addition to the regular tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23400, 23455]; "regular tax" is the California franchise tax, corporate income tax, or tax on unrelated business income of exempt organizations [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23455(c)]. With some modifications, California has incorporated by reference federal AMT provisions [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17024.5(a)(1), 23051.5(a), 23400(a); see I.R.C. §§ 55-57(federal AMT); Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23453-23459 (California modifications)].

[2] Returns and Payment

Returns must be filed on the form prescribed by the FTB within two months and 15 days after the close of the corporation's taxable year [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18601(a); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18409 (returns on magnetic media or in other machine-readable form)]. The tax must be paid no later than the time set for filing of the return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 19001; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19021 (special rules for banks and financial corporations)]. Extensions for filing, of up to seven months, may be permitted by the FTB; the filing extension does not extend the time for payment [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18604, 19001].

Unless payment by electronic funds transfer is required [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19011], payment made be made by check or, with FTB approval, in the form of a credit account number and authorization to draw on the specified account [Rev. & Tax. Code § 19005]. A taxpayer may request permission to make payment by electronic funds transfer [Rev. & Tax. Code § 19011(a)(3)].

[3] Estimated Tax Payments

All corporations within California must make estimated tax payments during the tax year in an amount based on estimated income, including tax preference income, for the period [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 19023-19026.2]. Penalties are imposed for the underpayment of estimated tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 19142-19149]. Estimated tax payments are made in four installments due on or before the 15th day of the fourth, sixth, ninth, and 12th months of the tax year [Rev. & Tax. Code § 19025(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. State Taxes
1. State Income Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.53

§ 1E.53 Taxation of Limited Liability Companies

[1] Partnership Tax Treatment

For California purposes, taxation of LLCs treated as partnerships is generally determined in accordance with Subchapter K of the Internal Revenue Code [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17851; see I.R.C. § 701 et seq.]. However, there are certain California modifications [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17853 et seq.; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 17941 et seq.].

[2] Franchise Tax

In general, every LLC that is doing business in California and that is required to file a California tax return [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5] must pay an annual minimum franchise tax of $800 for the privilege of doing business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(a), 23153(d)(1)]. In addition to LLCs that are doing business in California (and are therefore subject to the franchise tax), all other LLCs must pay this tax annually if articles of organization have been accepted for filing, or a certificate of registration has been issued, by the Secretary of State's office. The tax must be paid for each taxable year (or partial taxable year) until a certificate of cancellation of articles of organization (domestic LLCs) or a certificate of cancellation of registration (foreign LLCs) is filed with the Secretary of State on behalf of the LLC [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17941(b)(1)]. However, an LLC that is exempt from taxes and fees under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701h or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701x and that is not taxed as a corporation for California tax purposes is not subject to the annual minimum franchise tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(d), 23701h(b), 23701x(b); see also I.R.C. § 501(c)(2), (25) (title holding companies)].

PRACTICE TIP:

An LLC treated as a partnership must pay the annual minimum franchise tax on or before the 15th day of the fourth month after filing with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17941(c)]; the FTB will send a tax notice to the LLC and the tax is paid directly to the FTB. Alternatively, an LLC may be taxed as a corporation; if the LLC will receive corporate tax treatment, the annual minimum franchise tax is payable to the Secretary of State on the filing of articles of organization or an application for registration.

If an LLC files a return that is designated as its final return, the FTB will notify the LLC that the annual tax is due annually until a certificate of cancellation is filed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17941(b)(2); see Corp. Code §§ 17455].

[3] Fee Based on Income

In addition to the minimum franchise tax [see [2], above], every LLC or foreign LLC subject to the minimum franchise tax [see Rev. & Tax Code § 17941] must also pay a graduated annual fee based on its total income of $250,000 or more from all sources derived from or attributable to California for the taxable year [Rev. & Tax Code § 17942(a), (b); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17942(b)(1) ("total income derived from or attributable to" defined)].However, an LLC that is exempt from taxes and fees under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701h or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701x and that is not taxed as a corporation for California tax purposes is not subject to the annual minimum franchise tax, and thus not subject to this annual fee [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17941(d), 23701h(b), 23701x(b); see also I.R.C. § 501(c)(2), (25) (title holding companies)].

Special income determination provisions apply to commonly controlled LLCs [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17942(b)(2)]. This fee is due and payable on the date the LLC is required to file its tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17942(c); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5(a); but see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17942(d) and Stats. 2008 First Extra Session, ch. 1, § 8 (applicable for taxable years beginning after January 1, 2009)]. For further discussion, see [4], below and Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies.

[4] Requirement to File California Tax Return

Every LLC or foreign LLC classified as a partnership for California tax purposes that is doing business in California, organized in California, or registered with the Secretary of State is required to file a California tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5(a)]. The return is used to report income, deductions, gains, losses, and the like from the operation of an LLC [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5(a)]. An LLC classified as a corporation must file a corporate tax return [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5(h); see also Instructions for Form 568, p. 3]. For coverage of filing deadlines and other information and illustrations of California tax forms applicable to LLCs, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

[5] Requirement to Provide Tax Information to Members

Every LLC required to file a California tax return [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5(a)] for any taxable year must furnish to each person who holds an interest in the LLC a copy of the information required to be shown on the tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18633.5(b)]. This may include copies of California Form 568, federal Form 1065, and related schedules and attachments.

[1] Report of Payment to Independent Contractor

The business generally must report payments over $600 per year made to any independent contractor [see I.R.C. § 6041A; § 1E.24]. The Franchise Tax Board may require the filing of the federal information return with the FTB as required by forms and instructions [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18631(b), (c)(5)]. A statement must also be furnished to the person providing the services [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18638].

[2] Report of Cash Receipts Exceeding $10,000

If the filing of a federal information relating to cash received in a trade or business is required [see I.R.C. § 6050I], the Franchise Tax Board may require the filing of that federal informational return with the FTB as required by forms and instructions [*Rev. & Tax. 1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.60

§ 1E.60 Imposition of Sales Tax

[1] In General

Sales tax is imposed on retail sales of tangible personal property unless an exemption applies [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051]. A sales tax permit must be obtained for any retailing business [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6071]. Any seller who makes more than two retail sales of tangible personal property in any 12-month period is a retailer responsible for paying sales tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6051, 6015(a)(1), 6019], as is any person engaged in the business of either making retail sales of tangible personal property at auction or making sales for storage, use, or other consumption [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6015(a)(2)]. Sales taxes must then be collected at the proper rate for the county in which the business is run and remitted to the State Board of Equalization (SBE) [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051].

[2] Retail Sales

Only retail sales are subject to sales tax. A "retail sale" is a sale of tangible personal property for any purpose other than resale in the regular course of business [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6007; see Modern Paint and Body Supply, Inc. v. State Board of Equalization (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 703, 711, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784 (sales of supplies to auto body repair shops were not sales for resale under 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1546 and thus were subject to sales tax)]. If the purpose of the purchaser is resale, a resale certificate must be obtained from the purchaser to ensure that the transaction is treated as a nontaxable sale for resale [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6091]. The resale certificate must be signed by the purchaser and state the purchaser's name and address, the number of the purchaser's seller's permit, and the general character of the tangible personal property sold by the purchaser in the regular course of business [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6093].

[3] Tangible Personal Property

Sales tax does not apply to the sale of real property or intangible property [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051]. Sales tax only applies to sales of tangible personal property which is defined as property that can be seen, weighed, measured, felt, or touched, or is perceptible to the senses in any other manner [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6016]. A service is not a sale of tangible personal property and is not subject to sales tax and any transfer of tangible personal property merely incidental to the performance of a service is not subject to tax; however, if the service provider also sells tangible personal property that sale itself is subject to the tax [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1501].

§ 1E.61 Sales Tax Reimbursement

The retailer is responsible for paying the sales tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051]. However, the retailer is entitled to collect sales tax reimbursement from consumers if one of the following conditions applies [Civ. Code § 1656.1(a); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1700(a)(2)]:

- The sales agreement provides for reimbursement;
- The amount of reimbursement is shown on the sales receipt or other proof of sale; or
- The retailer posts in a visible location on the premises, or includes on price tags or advertisements, a notice that sales tax reimbursement is added to the sale price of all items.

2. Sales and Use Tax

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.62

§ 1E.62 Measure and Rate of Sales Tax

[1] Gross Receipts as Measure of Tax

The sales tax is determined by the gross receipts from sales subject to the tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051]. "Gross receipts" are equal to the total amount of the sale, rental, or lease price received for an item of property, valued in money, whether the price is received in money or another form of compensation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6012(a)]. No deduction from gross receipts may be made for the cost of the property sold, materials, labor, interest, losses, other expenses, or transportation of the property prior to the sale [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6012(a)]. Gross receipts specifically do not include cash discounts taken on sales, refunds to consumers for property returned, the price received for labor or services used in the installation of property sold, various taxes, and separately stated transportation charges [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6012(c); see Preston v. State Board of Equalization (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 197, 221, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407, 19 P. 3d 1148 (agreements for transfers of intangible property--consisting of copyrights in artwork--constituted technology transfer agreements under Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6011(c)(10), 6012(c)(10), which applied retroactively to exclude copyright transfers from sales tax)].

[2] Rate of Tax

The California state sales tax is 6 percent [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6051, 6051.1; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6051.2(a), 6051.3 (additional rates)]. In addition, every county in California has adopted a county and local sales tax at the maximum permitted rate of 1.25 percent; therefore, the combined state, county, and local rate is 7.25 percent [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6051, 6051.2(a), 6051.3, 7202(a)]. Certain districts, such as transit districts, are also authorized to impose a transactions tax equal to 0.25 or 0.5 percent which must be imposed county-wide; generally, the combined maximum rate of these district taxes cannot exceed 2 percent in the county [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 7251.1, 7261(a), 7262, 7285]. The imposition of the state, county, and district taxes results in a sales tax varying by county from 7.25 percent to 8.25 percent [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 7202(a), 7203, 7261(a), 7262; SBE News Release (NR 3-S, Jan. 13, 1992); SBE News Release (NR 2-D, Jan. 10, 1992); SBE News Release (NR 44-G, July 1, 1991)].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.63

§ 1E.63 Imposition of Use Tax

[1] In General

California imposes a use tax at a rate of 6 percent on the storage, use, or other consumption in California of tangible personal property purchased from a retailer regardless of whether the retailer is located inside California or outside of California [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6201, 6201.2-6201.4; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6051, 6202; see also Yamaha Corp. v. State Board of Equalization (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 338, 364-365, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362 (interpreting Rev. & Tax. Code § 6009.1, which contains exclusions from definition of "storage" and "use" and, thus, from tax imposed by Rev. & Tax Code § 6201)]. Use tax is calculated as a percentage of the sales price of the property and applies when sales tax has not been paid previously on the transfer of the property [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6201, 6202, 6401].

[2] Collection of Use Tax by Retailer

The purchaser of the property subject to use tax is liable for the payment of the tax and must pay it to the person from whom the property is purchased or leased if that person has a seller's permit or a Certificate of Registration--Use Tax [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6202, 6203; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1685(1)]. The liability is extinguished if the purchaser obtains a receipt for the tax from the retailer [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6202, 6203]. A retailer engaged in business in California is required to collect use tax tendered by a purchaser, give a receipt to the purchaser, and forward all use taxes collected to the SBE [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6203; 18 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1684(d), 1686].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.64

§ 1E.64 Exemption From Sales and Use Tax

[1] In General

California is prohibited from taxing certain items, such as imports or exports, under the Constitution of the United States, the laws of the United States, and/or the Constitution of California [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6352]. Certain items have been specifically exempted from both sales and use tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6351-6380 (miscellaneous exemptions from sales and use taxes)]. Examples include works of art and museum pieces for public display [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6365, 6366.3; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1586]; living animals ordinarily constituting food for human consumption, together with their feed [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6358(a), (b); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1587(a), (b)]; and returnable containers [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1589].

[2] Exemptions From Sales Tax

Certain transactions are specifically exempted from California sales tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6381-6396 (miscellaneous exemptions from sales tax)]. For example, sales made to the U.S. government and the American National Red Cross are exempt from sales tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6381]; also exempt are interstate shipments of tangible personal property if the sales contract requires the property to be shipped to a site outside California and the retailer does ship the property to a site outside California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6396; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1620(a)(3)(B)].

[3] Exemptions From Use Tax

Any use tax liability is extinguished if sales tax is paid on a sale [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6401]. Use tax also does not apply to property purchased from the U.S. government [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6402], property donated by a retailer to a charitable organization [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6403], or property loaned by a retailer to an educational institution for use in an educational program [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6404].

§ 1E.65 SBE Seller's Permit

Every person engaged in business in California as a seller of tangible personal property must obtain a seller's permit for each business location from the SBE [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6066(a), 6067, 6071]; the permit must be displayed conspicuously on the premises for which it is issued [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6067]. The application for a seller's permit must be made on the prescribed SBE form and be authenticated in a form or pursuant to methods prescribed by the SBE [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6066(a)]. The application may be filed using electronic media, as prescribed; "electronic media" includes but is not limited to computer modem, magnetic media, optical disk, facsimile machine, or telephone [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6066(b), (c)]. The SBE will grant and issue the permit if the applicant has complied with the application requirements and posted any security required to ensure compliance with sales and use tax law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6067; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6701]. The SBE may require an applicant or holder of a seller's permit to post security to ensure that the permit holder will pay the tax when due [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6701]. Any person who engages in business without a permit or who knowingly fails to obtain a permit before the first tax return is due is subject to substantial penalties [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6071, 7153, 7153.5, 7155]. A retailer not engaged in business within the state but selling tangible personal property for storage, use, or other consumption in California (property subject to use tax) must also register with the SBE and obtain a Certificate of Registration--Use Tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6226; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1684(b)].

Sales and use tax returns must be filed on or before the last day of the month following each quarterly period of three months [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6452(a)]. Returns must be made in the form required by the SBE, which may include electronic media; returns must be authenticated in a form or pursuant to methods that may be prescribed by the SBE [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6452(a)]. The taxes are due and payable when the return is filed and must accompany the return [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6451, 6454; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6479.3-6479.5 (payment by electronic funds transfer)]. If the taxpayer's estimated tax liability averages $50,000 or more per month, the SBE may require the taxpayer to make prepayments [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6470-6479].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.70

§ 1E.70 Real and Personal Property Taxes

[1] Constitutional Authorization and Limitation

The California Constitution authorizes taxation of real and personal property [Cal. Const. art. XIII, § 1]. Real property exemptions from taxation are provided by constitutional provision [see Cal. Const. art. XIII, §§ 3, 4]; the Legislature may exempt personal property by a two-thirds vote of both houses [Cal. Const. art. XIII, § 2]. In addition, the tax rates differ and delinquency dates may differ for real property and personal property taxes [see Cal. Const. art. XIII, § 12; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 2605-2607, 2701, 2702, 2901, 2905].

Proposition 13 limits the maximum tax rate applicable to real property to 1 percent of the full cash value of the property [Cal. Const. art. XIIIA, § 1(a)]. However, exceptions are made for ad valorem taxes and special assessments to pay interest and redemption charges on certain indebtedness approved by voters [Cal. Const. art. XIIIA, § 1(b)]. The full cash value of real property is its fair market value as of March 1, 1975, unless that property is purchased, is newly constructed, or changes ownership after that date [Cal. Const. art. XIIIA, § 2(a); Rev. & Tax. Code § 110.1(a)].

[2] Real Property Subject to Taxation

Real property includes (1) possession or ownership of land; (2) mining, mineral, quarry, and timber rights; and improvements, including all buildings, structures, fixtures, and (3) fences erected on or affixed to the land, and all trees and vines not of natural growth and not exempt from taxation, except date palms under eight years of age [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 104, 105]. A fixture is an item of tangible personal property that has become real property because of both the fixture's physical or constructive annexation to real property and the taxpayer's intent that the fixture remain annexed indefinitely [Rev. & Tax. Code § 105; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 122.5]. A list of what constitutes land and improvements has been promulgated by the State Board of Equalization (SBE) [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 124]. Generally, real property owned by state and local governments, schools, and real property used for religious, hospital, or charitable purposes is exempt from taxation [see Cal. Const. art. XIII, §§ 3, 4].

[3] Personal Property Subject to Taxation

[a] In General

Personal property is all property except real estate, including tangible personal property, shares of capital stock, evidences of indebtedness, and any legal or equitable interest not otherwise exempt from taxation [Cal. Const. art. XIII, § 2; Rev. & Tax. Code § 106]. Shares of capital stock and evidences of indebtedness have been specifically exempted from taxation by the Legislature [Rev. & Tax. Code § 212]. Tangible personal property is all personal property that may be seen, weighed, measured, felt, touched, or perceived by the senses in any other manner [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 123]. Certain tangible personal property is specifically exempted from taxation, including (1) property used for religious, hospital, scientific, or charitable purposes [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 214] and (2) cargo containers used in ocean commerce [Rev. & Tax. Code § 232].

[b] Business Inventory Exemption

The significant exemption for California businesses, however, is the business inventory exemption from property tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 219; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 129 (definition)]. Business inventory is property held for sale or lease in the ordinary course of business, whether raw materials, work in progress, or finished goods [Rev. & Tax. Code § 129; see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 133; see also Transworld Systems, Inc. v. County of Sonoma (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 713, 716-718, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 165 (holding that form letters that collection service sent to debtors qualified as exempt business inventory of a nonprofessional service under Rev. & Tax. Code § 129 and related regulation)]. Examples of property not a part of business inventory and subject to taxation as personal property include all of the following [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 133(b)(1), (c)]:

- Office supplies, furniture, machinery, and equipment;
- Manufacturing equipment, machinery, and supplies; and
- Property held in connection with a profession that is primarily a service activity, such as medicine, law, architecture, or accounting.

§ 1E.71 Annual Informational Statement

The business must determine its taxable base for property tax purposes and determine the method for reporting the property to the assessor. A business owning taxable personal property with an aggregate cost of $100,000 or more must file an annual statement with the appropriate county assessor; any property owner may be asked to file such a statement [Rev. & Tax. Code § 441]. The SBE prescribes the form for reporting property [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 452]. The statement must set forth all of the following:

- All taxable property owned, claimed, possessed, controlled, or managed by the person filing [Rev. & Tax. Code § 442];

- A complete legal description or a description that geographically locates the property owned by the person filing [Rev. & Tax. Code § 456]; and

- Descriptions of the property in sufficient detail, including cost if known or available to the person filing [Rev. & Tax. Code § 445].

The annual statement must be filed between the lien date (March 1) and 5 P.M. on April 1 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 441(a), (b); see § 1E.121[2]].

§ 1E.72 Payment of Property Tax

The assessor of the county in which the property is located assesses all taxable real and personal property in the county and prepares the assessment roll [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 404, 405, 601]. Taxes are assessed on the unsecured roll as of July 31, and are delinquent if not paid by August 31 at 5 p.m. or the close of business, whichever is later [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 2901, 2922(a)]. The unsecured roll consists of all property not on the secured roll; that is, all taxable personal property and some possessory interests in real property [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 109, 134].

The secured roll includes all real property and all fixtures [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 105, 107, 109]. Taxes on the secured roll may be paid in two installments, but the second installment may be paid separately only if the first was paid on time [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 2607]. The first installment is due and payable November 1 and consists of half the real property taxes and all of the personal property (fixtures) taxes on the secured role, provided that a county can elect to collect only half of the taxes on personal property [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 2605, 2700]. The first installment becomes delinquent on December 10 at 5 p.m. or the close of business, whichever is later [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2617]. The second installment is due and payable February 1 and is delinquent if not paid by April 10 at 5 p.m. or the close of business, whichever is later [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 2606, 2618]. However, the entire tax on real property may be paid when the first installment is due and payable [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2607].

§ 1E.73 Change of Ownership Statements

[1] Real Property Transfers

A transferee of real property may file a preliminary change of ownership report concurrently with the recording of any documents evidencing the transfer [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3]. The transferee must also file a formal change of ownership statement when the change of ownership occurs [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(a)]. The change of ownership statement must set forth a description of the property, the names of the parties to the transaction, the date and terms of the transaction, and the amount and type of any consideration paid for the property [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(c)].

[2] Changes in Control of Partnership or Other Legal Entity

After a change in control of any corporation, partnership, limited liability company, or other legal entity, the person or entity acquiring ownership control of the entity must file a change of ownership statement [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 64(c), (d)]. The statement must be on the prescribed form and filed with the SBE in Sacramento within 45 days from the date of the change [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 480.1(a), (b), 480.2(a), (b)]. The SBE may request a statement or inspect documents at any time to determine whether a change in ownership has occurred [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 480.1(e), 480.2(e)]. The statement must describe the property owner by the entity, name the parties to the transaction, state the date on which ownership or control was acquired, and list all counties in which property is owned by the entity; if ownership has changed, the original co-owners before the transaction must also be listed [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 480.1(a), (b), 480.2(a), (b)].

4. State Withholding and Employment Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.80

§ 1E.80 State Income Tax Withholding

[1] Amount of Withholding

The employer must withhold state income taxes from an employee's wages in an amount dependent on the annual tax liability of the employee and pay the amount withheld on a quarterly basis to the California Employment Development Department (EDD) [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021; see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13020-13077]. The FTB prescribes the amount of withholding and prepares withholding tables that the employer must use to compute the amount of tax to be withheld [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020]. The employee must file a withholding exemption certificate with the employer before the date that employment begins; the certificate may be the federal withholding certificate (IRS Form W-4), the state withholding certificate (EDD Form DE-4), or a substantially similar form [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13040; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4340-1(a)]. No withholding is required for an employee who provides a withholding exemption certificate that states that the employee (1) incurred no liability for federal income tax purposes for the preceding taxable year and (2) anticipates no federal income tax liability for the current year [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13026; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4340-1(f)].

For California resident employees receiving wages subject to personal income tax withholding in both California and another state, the employer must reduce the California withholding by the amount of the deduction required by the other state [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4320-1].

[2] Definitions for Income Tax Withholding Purposes

[a] Employer

In general, an employer is any person or entity doing business within California, deriving income from sources within the state, or otherwise subject to state law, making payments of wages to employees for services performed within the state [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13005(a)]. If a person or entity falls within this definition of employer but does not have control over the payment of wages for services, the person or entity with that control is the employer whether or not that person or entity is otherwise subject to California jurisdiction [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13005(b)].

[b] Employee

A California resident or nonresident receiving remuneration for services performed inside the state is an employee, as is a California resident receiving remuneration for services performed outside the state [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13004]. Certain construction workers are statutory employees for income tax withholding purposes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13004.5].

In distinguishing employees from independent contractors, common law rules apply in determining the existence of an employer-employee relationship [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. The right of the principal to control the manner and means of accomplishing a desired result is the most significant factor in making this determination [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. An employer-employee relationship is indicated if the principal has the authority to exercise complete control, whether or not it is exercised over all details [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. The principal's right to discharge at will is another indication that control exists [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. Regulations enumerate other indications of the right to control [see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1].

[c] Wages

For income tax withholding purposes, unless specifically excepted by statute, wages generally include all remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer, including the cash value of all noncash remuneration received by the employee [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13009; 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 4309-1, 4309-2]. Some remuneration is not subject to withholding because of a specific statutory exclusion either from withholding requirements [see, e.g., Unemp. Ins. Code § 13025 (noncash remuneration paid to retail commission salesperson ordinarily only paid cash commission)] or from the definition of wages [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13009(a)-(r) (exclusions); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4309-2 (exclusions)].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.81

§ 1E.81 Types of State Employment Taxes

[1] Unemployment Tax

Unemployment taxes are an obligation of the employer and are not deducted or withheld from employee wages [Unemp. Ins. Code § 976]. The EDD assigns each employer a contribution rate based on the amount in the employer's reserve account [Unemp. Ins. Code § 977]; the usual rate is 3.4 percent [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 982]. The EDD notifies the employer of its contribution rate on or before January 10 of each year [Unemp. Ins. Code § 979]. The tax is imposed on the first $7,000 of an employee's wages [Unemp. Ins. Code § 930]; therefore, the amount paid by the employer is generally $238 ($7,000 x 3.4 percent).

[2] Disability Tax Withholding

Disability taxes must be withheld from employees' wages [Unemp. Ins. Code § 986]. The tax rate is not more than 1.3 percent or less than 0.1 percent of wages and depends on the disability fund balance [Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 984(a)(3), 2604]; the amount of wages subject to tax also varies [Unemp. Ins. Code § 985]. The EDD publishes the rates for the upcoming year on or before November 30 of each calendar year [Unemp. Ins. Code § 984(b)].

[3] Training Taxes

If the employer has a positive unemployment fund balance in its reserve account, it must also pay training tax [Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.6]. The tax rate is 0.1 percent of wages and the tax is collected along with unemployment taxes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.6].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.82

§ 1E.82 Definitions for Employment Tax Purposes

[1] Employment

[a] Covered Services

Employment is defined as services, including services in interstate commerce, performed by an employee for wages or under any contract of hire, written or oral, express or implied [Unemp. Ins. Code § 601]; however, for disability tax purposes this definition is modified regarding domestic services [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 629, 639, 2606.5]. Employment includes services performed entirely within California [Unemp. Ins. Code § 603(a)]; service performed both within and outside of California is included if the service is localized in California [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 602(a)]. Service is localized in California if any service performed outside of California is incidental to that performed within the state [Unemp. Ins. Code § 603(b)]. The following services not localized in California will be deemed employment for California employment tax purposes:

- Service partly performed in California if either the base of operations is located in California or there is no base of operations and the service is directed or controlled from California [Unemp. Ins. Code § 602(b)].

- Service performed in other states or Canada that is directed or controlled in California and is not covered by the unemployment compensation law of another state or Canada [Unemp. Ins. Code § 603.5].

- Service of a California resident if the base of operation or place from which the service is directed or controlled is not in any state where any part of the service is performed [Unemp. Ins. Code § 602(b)].

- Service performed on or in connection with American vessels or aircraft operating entirely or partly within the United States if the employer has certain connections with California [Unemp. Ins. Code § 609].

- Service performed outside of the United States or Canada by a U.S. citizen for an American employer if the employer has certain connections with California [Unemp. Ins. Code § 610].

[b] Excluded Services

Certain services are specifically excluded by statute from the definition of employment [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 629-656]. Certain services excluded from the definition of employment for FUTA tax purposes are also excluded for California unemployment tax purposes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 638; see I.R.C. § 3306(c) (FUTA exclusions)].

[2] Employer

An employer is an employing unit that had in its employment one or more employees for some portion of a day within the current or preceding calendar year and pays wages for employment in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter [Unemp. Ins. Code § 675]. An employing unit is an individual or organization employing one or more individuals performing services for it within the state [Unemp. Ins. Code § 135].

[3] Employee

For employment tax purposes, employees include corporate officers [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(a)], statutory employees [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 621.5 (statutory employee status of certain construction workers)], and common law employees [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(b); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. The same rules apply in determining common law employee status for employment tax purposes as for income tax withholding purposes [see § 1E.80[2][b]]. An individual is a statutory employee if the individual performs certain services for any employing unit [see [2], above] under a contract of service that contemplates that substantially all of those services will be performed personally by the individual [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)]; however, the individual is not a statutory employee if the services are a single transaction or the individual has a substantial investment in the facilities, except transportation facilities, used in connection with the services [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(2)]. The statute includes the services of the following [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(1)]:

- A driver distributing meat, vegetable, fruit, or bakery products, beverages other than milk, or laundry or dry cleaning services;

- A traveling or city salesperson soliciting orders from wholesalers, retailers, contractors, hotel and restaurant operators, or similar establishments, in certain cases; or

- A home worker performing work according to the specifications of the employing unit.

[4] Wages

For employment tax purposes, wages are all remuneration payable to an employee for personal services, whether by private agreement, consent, or force of statute, including commissions and bonuses, and generally include the reasonable cash value of any remuneration paid in a medium other than cash [Unemp. Ins. Code § 926; see Unemp. Ins. Code § 936]. Certain payments are specifically excluded from the definition of wages [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 938.5 (duty and training payments to National Guard and reserve), 939 (exclusions similar to FUTA exclusions); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 926-2 (exclusions by regulation)]. Wages up to $7,000 paid to any individual employee by an employer during a calendar year are subject to the payment and withholding of employment taxes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 930; see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 930.1 (ceiling when unemployment compensation law of other state applies), 930.5 (ceiling when employer acquires business of other employer)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. State Taxes
4. State Withholding and Employment Taxes

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.83

§ 1E.83 Reporting and Payment of State Withholding and Employment Taxes

[1] In General

An employing unit must register with the EDD within 15 days after it becomes an employer [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1086]. Registration is accomplished by completing and sending to the EDD Registration Form DE-1; the EDD will then assign the employer an account number [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13056, 13057]. Each employer must keep an accurate record for each worker indicating the covered pay period, each worker's name, social security number, and status, and the remuneration paid to each worker [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1085; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1085-2 (recordkeeping requirements)]. Records should generally be kept for four years [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1085-2(c)]. All payments must be mailed directly to the EDD in Sacramento [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(c)].

[2] EDD Form DE-3

With some exceptions, quarterly returns on EDD Form DE-3 must be filed to report the total amount of personal income tax and disability tax withheld and the total amount of unemployment and training taxes due for the quarter [Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1088, 1110, 13021; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1088-1(a)]. The return must be filed even if no wages are paid during the quarter, is due on or before the last day of the month following the close of the quarter, and must be accompanied by payment of any tax due [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(a)]. When an employer is required to deposit federal taxes [see § 1E.23], and the accumulated amount of state income tax withheld exceeds $500, the employer is required to remit the state tax pursuant to the rules applicable to federal income tax [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(c)(1); but see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(c)(2) (amount subject to adjustment after January 1, 1996)]. Employers qualifying as semi-weekly depositors under federal rules [see § 1E.23] must make payments by electronic funds transfer [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(d)(2)]. An employer not otherwise required to make a payment before the filing of the quarterly return, becomes liable for remittance when the cumulative tax withheld is $350 or more [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(h); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13021(c)].

[3] EDD Form DE-43

The employer must furnish each employee with an annual statement specifying, among other items, total wages paid that are subject to the personal income tax [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13009.5], amounts deducted and withheld [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020], the total amount of worker contributions [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 986, 3260], and the total amount of elective deferrals [see I.R.C. § 402(g)(3)] and deferred compensation [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13050(a); see I.R.C. § 457]. The statement is made on IRS Form W-2 [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 13050; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4350-1(b); see also § 1E.22[2]]. The employer must file an annual report of total personal income tax withheld for the year with the EDD on Form DE-43 (Annual Reconciliation of Personal Income Tax Withheld and Transmittal of W-2, W-2C, W-2P, and 1099R Forms).

B. Preliminary Determinations

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.110

§ 1E.110 Classification of Worker as Employee or Independent Contractor

1. Classify worker as employee or independent contractor.

NOTE:

If a worker is misclassified as an independent contractor, the employer is potentially liable for unpaid employment taxes, interest, and penalties [see I.R.C. § 6501(a) (three-year statute of limitations for assessment from date return filed)].

2. Ascertain whether worker falls within safe harbor for those historically classified as independent contractors by answering following three questions affirmatively [Pub. L. No. 95-600, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., § 530 (Nov. 6, 1978); Pub. L. No. 97-248, 97th Cong., 2d Sess., § 269(e) (Sept. 3, 1982)].

a. Has employer consistently not treated worker as common law employee for any period beginning after 1977?

b. Has employer filed all federal tax returns?

c. Does employer have reasonable basis for not treating worker as employee?

NOTE:

A reasonable basis exists if an employer's treatment of a worker is based on any of following [Pub. L. No. 95-600, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., § 530 (Nov. 6, 1978); Pub. L. No. 97-248, 97th Cong., 2d Sess., § 269(e) (Sept. 3, 1982)]: precedent, including judicial precedent, published rulings, technical advice, or letter ruling issued to employer; past IRS audit of employer in which no worker in substantially similar position could have been reclassified as employee; or longstanding practice of significant segment of industry.

3. If worker does not fall within safe harbor, determine how many of the following factors exist:

NOTE:
The more factors that exist, the more likely IRS will classify worker as common law employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296].

a. Employer instructs worker how to complete task.

b. Employer trains worker.

c. Worker's services are integrated into employer's business.

d. Worker renders services personally.

e. Worker may not hire, supervise, or pay assistants.

f. Worker and employer have continuing relationship.

g. Worker's hours are set.

h. Full-time work is required.

i. Worker works on employer's premises.

j. Employer sets order or sequence of work completion.

k. Worker reports regularly to employer orally or in writing.

l. Worker paid hourly, weekly, or monthly salary.

m. Employer pays worker's business and travel expenses.

n. Employer furnishes worker's tools or materials.

o. Worker does not have significant investment in facilities.

p. Worker has no potential to realize significant profit or loss.

q. Worker does not work for others simultaneously.

r. Worker does not make services available to general public.

s. Employer has right to discharge worker.

t. Worker has right to terminate relationship.

4. Determine whether client should apply for IRS determination of worker status by filing IRS Form SS-8; if yes, obtain information concerning one worker as representative of class.

NOTE:

A ruling made for a representative worker will apply to the status of other workers in the same class if the facts do not differ substantially [see IRS Form SS-8, Instr.].

B. Preliminary Determinations

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.111

§ 1E.111 Determination If Business Involves Retail Sales Subject to Sales Tax

1. Determine whether business activity involves "sale" of tangible personal property.

NOTE:

A sale occurs when a transfer of title or possession to tangible personal property is coupled with consideration [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6006(a); see § 1E.60[2], [3]]. Certain activities are classified as sales by statute [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6006(b)-(g)] and others are specifically excepted [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6010.3-6010.50]. While a lease of tangible personal property for consideration is generally a sale for sales tax purposes, certain leases have been excepted by statute [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6006(g); see also Preston v. State Board of Equalization (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 197, 211, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407, 19 P. 3d 1148 (temporary transfers of tangible artwork were determined to be taxable transfers of tangible property; because agreements transferred artwork for use in manufacturing process performed outside taxpayer's premises, they fell within statutory definition of taxable lease)].

a. Is transfer of title or possession coupled with consideration?

b. Is activity classified as sale by statute or specifically excepted?

c. If activity involves leasing of tangible personal property for consideration, is it excluded from sale by statute?

d. Is client primarily engaged in business of rendering services?

NOTE:

Service providers are generally considered to be consumers of tangible personal property, not retailers; whether a transfer of property is merely incidental to a provision of service depends on the true object of the contract [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1501].

2. If activity is a sale, is it at "retail"?

NOTE:

Only retail sales are subject to sales tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051]. A retail sale is a sale for any purpose other than resale in the regular course of business [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6007; see Modern Paint and Body Supply, Inc. v. State Board of Equalization (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 703, 711, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784 (sales of supplies to auto body repair shops were not sales for resale under 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1546 and thus were subject to sales tax)].

3. If sale is at retail, does client qualify as retailer responsible for payment of tax?

NOTE:

The retailer making the sale is responsible for paying the sales tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6051; see § 1E.60[1]].

4. Is transaction exempted from sales and/or use tax [see § 1E.64]?

C. Procedural Guide

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.120

§ 1E.120 Withholding of Income and Employment Taxes

1. Advise employer to obtain Employer's Tax Guide (IRS Publication 15, Circular E).

NOTE:

The Employer's Tax Guide is available free of charge from any IRS office. It contains instructions for completing and filing quarterly returns and other required reports, and for paying or depositing withheld income taxes and employer and employee FICA taxes. It also contains tables showing how different kinds of wages and employees are to be treated for income, FICA, and FUTA tax purposes, and amounts to be withheld from wages paid weekly, biweekly, semimonthly, monthly, or otherwise.

2. Advise client to apply for:

a. Federal employer identification number using IRS Form SS-4.

NOTE:

A business must obtain a federal employer identification number if on any day it employs one or more persons for wages subject to income tax withholding or FICA taxes [I.R.C. § 6011(b); Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1(a)(1)(ii)]. Corporations and partnerships must obtain a number regardless of whether they are employers [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6109-1(b)]. Form SS-4 is available from any IRS or Social Security office [see Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1(a)(1)(iii)]; complete, execute, and file form according to instructions printed on reverse side of form.

b. Identifying number from EDD.

NOTE:

A business must register with EDD within 15 days after it becomes an employer [Unemp. Ins. Code § 1086] by completing and mailing to EDD Registration Form DE-1. After the form is submitted, EDD will assign an eight-digit account number to the employer [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13056, 13057].

3. Advise client to include federal employer identification number in all returns, statements, or documents filed for federal income tax, FICA, or FUTA purposes [I.R.C. § 6109(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 301.6109-1(a), (b)].

NOTE:

A $5 penalty is imposed for each failure by an employer to include the federal employer identification number on any return, statement, or document filed with IRS [Treas. Reg. § 301.6676-1(a)].

4. Advise client to perform following procedures when employees are hired:

a. Have each employee complete, sign, and date employee's withholding allowance certificate (IRS Form W-4) [Treas. Reg. §§ 31.3402(f)(1)-1, 31.3402(f)(2)-1, 31.3402(f)(5)-1].

b. Obtain each new employee's social security number and include in payroll records [Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-2(c)(1)].

c. If employee does not have social security number, inform employee of his or her duty to apply to Social Security Administration for social security card and number (Social Security Administration Form SS-5) [Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-2(c)(2)].

5. Advise client to perform following procedures when paying wages:

a. Withhold amount specified on applicable income tax withholding rate table in Employer's Tax Guide (IRS Pub. 15, Circular E) [see I.R.C. § 3402; Treas. Reg. § 31.3402(c)-1(a)(1)].

b. Withhold FICA taxes specified by statute until sum specified by statute has been earned by employee [see I.R.C. §§ 3101, 3121(a)(1)].

c. Withhold amount specified on FTB income tax withholding table [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18663(a)].

6. Advise client that, during tax year, quarterly return of income tax withheld (IRS Form 941) must be filed within one month after end of each calendar quarter, unless monthly returns are required by IRS [Treas. Reg. §§ 31.6011(a)-4(a)(1), 31.6011(a)-5, 31.6071(a)-1(a)(1)].

7. Determine whether de minimis rule allowing quarterly payment applies to client.

NOTE:

If the total amount of accumulated employment taxes for a quarter is less than $2500 and the amount is fully deposited or remitted with a timely filed quarterly return, the amount deposited or remitted is deemed timely [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(f)(4); see Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1T(f)(4)].

8. Classify client as either a monthly or semi-weekly depositor for federal employment tax purposes.

NOTE:

While employers must generally deposit employment taxes monthly or semi-weekly, an overriding exception to the rule exists when an employer has accumulated $100,000 or more of employment taxes, in which case taxes must be deposited by the close of the next banking day [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(a), (c)(3)].

a. Determine aggregate amount of employment taxes reported by client for "lookback period" on quarterly returns (IRS Form 941) filed during four quarters constituting period [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1T(b)(4)].

NOTE:
The lookback period for each calendar year is the 12-month period ending preceding June 30; if the client is a new employer, the client will be treated as having employment tax liabilities of zero for any calendar quarter during which the client did not exist [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1T(b)(4)].

b. If aggregate amount of employment taxes for lookback period is $50,000 or less, client is monthly depositor for entire calendar year unless subject to special $100,000 rule [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(b)(2)].

NOTE:
Monthly depositors must deposit employment taxes accumulated during the calendar month in an authorized financial institution on or before the 15th day of the following month, or if the 15th is not a banking day, on the first banking day thereafter [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(c)(1), (4); but see Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(c)(7) (exception for employers making interest-free adjustments)].

c. If aggregate amount of employment taxes for lookback period exceeds $50,000, client is semi-weekly depositor for entire calendar year [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(b)(3)].

NOTE:
Semi-weekly depositors must deposit employment taxes in an authorized financial institution generally as follows: taxes accumulated on Wednesday, Thursday, and/or Friday must be deposited on or before the following Wednesday; taxes accumulated on Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and/or Tuesday must be deposited on or before the following Friday [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(c)(2); but see Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(c)(7) (exception for employers making interest-free adjustments)].

9. Advise client of time and manner of deposit of federal employment taxes, as follows [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(i)(1), (3)]:

a. Deposit of employment taxes must be made separately from any other deposit.

b. Deposit of employment taxes in one calendar quarter must be made separately from deposit for another calendar quarter.

c. Each deposit must be accompanied by an FTD coupon (IRS Form 8109).

NOTE:
The client should receive FTD coupon books after receiving an employer identification number. If a deposit must be made before receipt of the coupon books, request coupon books from the local IRS office by furnishing the business name, employer identification number, address where books are to be sent, and number of books requested [Treas. Reg. § 31.6302-1(h)(4)].

10. Advise client that, during tax year, quarterly return of income and disability tax withheld and unemployment and training tax due (Form DE-3) must be filed with the EDD on or before the last day of the month following the close of the quarter, unless monthly returns are required [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1088, 1110, 13021; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1088-1(a)].

11. On or before January 31 of each year, or within 30 days after last payment of wages to terminated employee, have client furnish each employee IRS Form W-2 showing wages paid and taxes withheld during preceding calendar year [I.R.C. § 6051; Treas. Reg. § 31.6051-1; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4350-1].

12. On or before last day of February of each year, have client file transmittal of income and tax statement (IRS Form W-3) with IRS office where quarterly returns are filed, together with copies of all W-2 Forms [Treas. Reg. §§ 31.6051-2, 31.6071(a)-1(a)].

13. On or before February 28 of each year, have client file Form DE-43 (Annual Reconciliation of Personal Income Tax and Transmittal of W-2, W-2C, W-2P, and 1099R Forms) with EDD [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13050].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
C. Procedural Guide

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.121

§ 1E.121 State Sales and Property Tax Considerations

[1] Collection of Sales Tax

1. Advise client to obtain seller's permit for each business location [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6066] by making application on SBE form and posting security bond, if required [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6067].

2. Advise client to conspicuously display seller's permit in each business location [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6067].

3. Advise client of responsibility of collecting sales tax [see § 1E.111] and that sales tax reimbursement can be collected from consumers only if one of following applies [Civ. Code § 1656.1(a); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1700(a)(2)]:

a. Sales agreement provides for reimbursement.

b. Amount of sales tax reimbursement is shown on sales receipt or other proof of sale.

c. Notice that sales tax reimbursement is added to sale price of all items is either:
(1) Posted in visible location on premises; or

(2) Included on price tags or advertisements.

NOTE:
The following notices raise the presumption that sales price includes sales tax reimbursement: "All prices of taxable items include sales tax reimbursement computed to the nearest mill" and "The price of this item includes sales tax reimbursement computed to the nearest mill" [Civ. Code § 1656.1(b); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1700(a)(2)(C)].

4. Advise client that liability for collection of sales tax is extinguished if purchaser provides resale certificate under the following conditions:

NOTE:
If a purchaser intends to resell purchased property in the regular course of business, the sale is not subject to sales tax; however, the client is still liable for collecting tax unless the purchaser timely provides a valid resale certificate [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(a)].

a. Resale certificate must be "timely."

NOTE:
A resale certificate is timely if it is provided before the seller bills the purchaser for the property, at any time within the seller's normal billing and payment cycle, or at any time at or before delivery of the property to the purchaser [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(a)].

b. Resale certificate must contain all of following [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(b)(1)]:

NOTE:
minimum form that will be regarded as a resale certificate. However, to preclude potential controversy, the seller should timely obtain from the purchaser a certificate substantially in the form shown in Appendix A of 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668. If a purchaser operates an auto body repair and/or paint business, a specific resale certificate in substantially the same form as shown in Appendix B of 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668 [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(b)(2)].

(1) Signature of purchaser, purchaser's employee, or authorized representative of purchaser.

(2) Purchaser's name and address.

(3) Purchaser's seller's permit number.

NOTE:
If the purchaser is not required to hold a permit because the purchaser sells only property of a kind the retail sale of which is not taxable (such as food products for human consumption) or because the purchaser makes no sales in California, the purchaser must include on the certificate a sufficient explanation as to the reason the purchaser is not required to hold a California seller's permit in lieu of a seller's permit number [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(b)(1)(C)].

(4) Statement that described property is purchased "for resale."

NOTE:
The document must contain the phrase "for resale." The use of phrases such as "nontaxable," "exempt," or similar terminology is not acceptable. The property to be purchased under the certificate must be described either by an itemized list of the particular property to be purchased for resale, or by a general description of the kind of property to be purchased for resale [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(b)(1)(D)].

(5) Date of execution.

5. Advise client that, if audited, failure to timely obtain valid resale certificate means client will only be relieved of liability for sales tax upon presentation of satisfactory evidence of one of following [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1668(e)]:

a. Property is actually resold in purchaser's regular course of business.

b. Property is being held for resale by purchaser and has not been put to taxable use.

c. Property has been used or consumed by purchaser and

(1) Tax was reported directly to Board by purchaser on purchaser's sales and use tax return; or

(2) Tax was paid to Board by purchaser pursuant to assessment against or audit of purchaser developed either on actual basis or test basis.

[2] Property Tax Base and Statements

1. Determine taxable base of business for property tax purposes, examining the following:

a. Available exemptions.

b. Whether or not property is assessed to business and timing of assessment.

c. Whether property is subject to jurisdiction of particular county.

d. Whether start of business has caused change of ownership.

NOTE:
A change in ownership of real property results in a reassessment at full cash value on the date that the change of ownership occurs [see Cal. Const. art. XIIIA, § 2(a); Rev. & Tax. Code § 110.1(a)]. A transfer from an individual to a legal entity such as a partnership is treated as a change of ownership [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 61(j)], as is a transfer of property between entities [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.180(a)]. However, no change of ownership occurs if the transfer results only in a change in method of holding title and proportional interests in the transferred property are exactly the same before and after transfer [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(a); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.001(b)].

e. What valuation of real property should be.

NOTE:
All property is valued for assessment at full cash or fair market value, which is defined as the amount of cash or its equivalent that the property would bring if (1) offered for sale in the open market; (2) both the buyer and seller were knowledgeable about the property's uses and purposes, including restrictions on its use; and (3) neither party could take advantage of exigencies of the other [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 110, 402.1].

f. What valuation of tangible personal property should be.

NOTE:

When appraising tangible personal property, the assessor will give recognition to the trade level at which the property is situated and to the principle that property values normally increase as the property progresses through production and distribution channels to its ordinary maximum value at the consumer level [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 10(a); see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 10(b)-(f)].

2. Determine whether business owns taxable personal property with aggregate cost of $100,000 or more [Rev. & Tax. Code § 441].

a. If so, advise client that informational statements must be filed annually with the assessor of each county in which the business has property [see § 1E.71].

b. If property subject to tax has full cash value under $200,000, short-form property statement may be used [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 171(d)].

3. If annual statement is required, advise client to prepare current property statement and review it for accuracy; statement will have to be amended to reflect any acquisitions or dispositions before applicable lien date.

NOTE:

The taxpayer, a partner, or an agent must sign the statement under penalty of perjury [Rev. & Tax. Code § 441(b); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 172(c)]. If the statement is signed by an agent or employee other than a licensed attorney, certified public accountant, public accountant, or duly appointed fiduciary, the taxpayer's written authorization must be filed with the assessor [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 172(a)].

A filed property statement may be amended without penalty until May 31 of the applicable year for errors and omissions that are not the result of willful intent to make an erroneous report [Rev. & Tax. Code § 441(i); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 463 (penalty)].

CHAPTER 1E TAXATION OF BUSINESSES
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
C. Procedural Guide

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.122

§ 1E.122 Partnership Considerations

[1] Partnership-Level Treatment

1. Advise client that partnership-level procedure rules require that each partner report partnership items (and the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount relating to an adjustment to a partnership item) consistently with partnership's treatment unless IRS is notified of inconsistency and that all controversies about treatment are determined at partnership-level proceedings [I.R.C. §§ 6221, 6222, 6231(a)(3)].

2. Advise client that following are partnership items:

a. Income, gains, losses, deductions, and credits; nondeductible expenditures; tax-preference items for any partner [see I.R.C. § 57]; tax-exempt income; and partnership liabilities [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(1)(i)-(v)].

b. Other items regarding partnership assets, investments, transactions, and operations needed to compute investment tax credit or recapture, oil well and gas well depletion, amounts at-risk in partnership activities, or ordinary income or loss attributable to partnership unrealized receivables and inventory [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(1)(vi)].

c. Guaranteed payments [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 707(c)].

d. Items and issues relating to contributions to partnership, including character of amount received; amount of money contributed; applicability of investment company rules to contribution; and partnership's basis in contributed property [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(4), (c)(2)].

e. Items and issues relating to distributions from partnership, including character of amount transferred; amount of money distributed; partnership's basis in distributed property; and character of distributed property as, for example, inventory or capital asset [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(4), (c)(3)].

f. Items and issues relating to transactions between partnership and partner not acting in capacity as partner, including amount transferred to partner; character of transferred amount; and each partner's percentage interest in partnership capital and profits [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(4), (c)(4)].

g. Accounting practices, including method of accounting; taxable year; and inventory method [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(b)].

3. Determine whether partnership meets following conditions of "small partnership" and is exempt from partnership-level procedural rules [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(1)(B)]:

a. There are no more than 10 partners at any one time during year.

NOTE:
Spouses and their estates are counted as one partner [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(1)(B)(i)].

b. All partners are natural persons or estates.

NOTE:
The partnership cannot have, at any time during the year, any "pass-through" partners which include another partnership, estate, trust, S corporation, or nominee [I.R.C. § 6231(a)(9); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(1)-1T(a)(2)].

c. No partner is a nonresident alien at any time during year.

d. At any time during year, each partner's share of following partnership items is the same as that partner's share of every other item: items of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit; nondeductible expenditures; tax preference items; and tax-exempt income.

4. If partnership is "small partnership" and exempt from partnership-level procedure rules, determine whether partnership should elect to be subject to those rules [see I.R.C. § 6231(a)(1)(B)(ii)].

NOTE:
Election is made by attaching a statement to the partnership return for the taxable year for which the election is to be effective; the statement must refer to the election under I.R.C. § 6231(a)(1)(B)(ii) and is signed by all persons who were partners during the year [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(1)-1T(b)(2)].

[2] Designation of Tax-Matters Partner and Other Elections

1. Advise client to select tax-matters partner (TMP) and alternate TMP, if desired [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(a)].

2. Determine whether selected partner meets following conditions of eligibility to be TMP for taxable year:

a. Was designee general partner at some time during that year or when designation is made [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(1)]?

b. Was designee U.S. person for taxable year [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(2)]?

NOTE:
If a U.S. person is eligible to be TMP for a year, a non-U.S. person may not be designated TMP without the consent of the IRS [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(2)].

3. Advise client that elections will have to be made at partnership level concerning partnership accounting methods, tax year, method of depreciation, and any adjustment of basis of partnership property [see I.R.C. § 703(b)].

NOTE:
An election properly made for federal tax purposes is deemed a proper election for California tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(e)]; a separate election to obtain other tax treatment for California purposes may be filed, but only when that election is expressly authorized by statute or regulation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(e)(3)].

§ 1E.123 Corporate Considerations

1. Advise corporate client concerning election to be treated as S corporation [see I.R.C. § 1362(a); see also Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status].

NOTE:
This election is made on IRS Form 2553 and is filed separately from annual return.

2. Advise corporate client of depreciation options and election under Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS) [see I.R.C. § 168].

NOTE:
This election is made on IRS Form 4562 (Depreciation and Amortization) and is made with the annual return.

3. Advise corporate client of selection of original tax year.

NOTE:
This election is made on original annual return [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.441-1T(b)(2)]. Corporations which are neither S corporations nor personal service corporations may adopt any fiscal year [see I.R.C. §§ 441, 444].

4. Advise corporate client concerning adoption of accounting method.

NOTE:
Corporation may adopt any permissible method on original return; once method is selected, that method must be used unless law changes or permission to change is obtained from IRS [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.441-1T(b)(3)].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.124

§ 1E.124 Limited Liability Company Considerations

[1] Choosing Type of Tax Treatment

1. Determine whether to be taxed as:

a. Partnership; or

b. Corporation.

NOTE:
For issues to consider in determining whether an LLC should be taxed as a corporation or as a partnership, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

2. If LLC will be taxed as corporation, file election to be taxed as corporation, and comply with corporate tax requirements [see § 1E.123].

NOTE:
Under tax classification rules effective January 1, 1997, an LLC may elect to be taxed either as a corporation or as a partnership [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(a)(1)]. Unless it affirmatively elects to be classified as a corporation, it will be classified as a partnership if it has two or more members, or disregarded as an entity separate from its owner if it has only one owner [Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(b)].

An election is made by attaching a copy of IRS Form 8832 to its federal tax or information return for the year in question [see Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-3(c) (procedure for making election)].

3. If LLC will be taxed as partnership, comply with partnership tax requirements [see [2], [3], below].

NOTE:

For a brief discussion of federal taxation of LLCs, see § 1E.13. For extensive coverage of LLCs, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies , and Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 27, Limited Liability Companies (Matthew Bender).

[2] Limited Liability Company-Level Treatment

NOTE:

The remainder of this section is drafted with the assumption that the limited liability company (LLC) will receive federal partnership-like income tax treatment. If this is the case, the LLC will be subject to partnership income tax law, and will be treated just as a partnership would. If the LLC will receive federal corporate tax treatment, see Section 1E.123.

1. Advise client that LLC-level procedure rules require that each member report member items (and the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount relating to an adjustment to a partnership item) consistently with LLC's treatment unless IRS is notified of inconsistency and that all controversies about treatment are determined at LLC-level proceedings [I.R.C. §§ 6221, 6222, 6231(a)(3)].

2. Advise client that following are LLC items:

a. Income, gains, losses, deductions, and credits; nondeductible expenditures; tax-preference items for any member [see I.R.C. § 57]; tax-exempt income; and, LLC liabilities [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(1)(i)-(v)].

b. Other items regarding LLC assets, investments, transactions, and operations needed to compute investment tax credit or recapture, oil well and gas well depletion, amounts at-risk in LLC activities, or ordinary income or loss attributable to LLC unrealized receivables and inventory [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(1)(vi)].

c. Guaranteed payments [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 707(c)].

d. Items and issues relating to contributions to LLC, including character of amount received; amount of money contributed; applicability of investment-company rules to contribution; and LLC's basis in contributed property [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(4), (c)(2)].

e. Items and issues relating to distributions from LLC, including character of amount transferred; amount of money distributed; LLC's basis in distributed property; and character of distributed property as, for example, inventory or capital asset [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(4), (c)(3)].

f. Items and issues relating to transactions between LLC and member not acting in capacity as member, including amount transferred to member; character of transferred amount; and each member's percentage interest in LLC capital and profits [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(a)(4), (c)(4)].

g. Accounting practices, including method of accounting; taxable year; and inventory method [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(3)-1(b)].

[3] Designation of Tax Matters Member and Other Elections

1. Advise client to select tax matters member and alternate, if desired [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(a)].

2. Determine whether selected member meets following conditions of eligibility for taxable year:

a. Was designee member at some time during that year or when designation is made [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(1)]?

b. Was designee U.S. person for taxable year [see Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(2)]?

NOTE:
If a U.S. person is eligible to be tax matters member for the year, a non-U.S. person may not be designated the without consent of the IRS [Treas. Reg. § 301.6231(a)(7)-1(b)(2)].

3. Advise client that elections will have to be made at LLC level concerning LLC accounting methods, tax year, method of depreciation, and any adjustment of basis of LLC property [see I.R.C. § 703(b)].

NOTE:
An election properly made for federal tax purposes is deemed a proper election for California tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(e)]; a separate election to obtain other tax treatment for California purposes may be filed, but only when that election is expressly authorized by statute or regulation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5(e)(3)].

1-1E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 1E.130

§ 1E.130 Record Retention

1. Advise client and accountant to establish system for keeping records of:

    a. Cash receipts.

    b. Cash disbursements.

    c. Sales.

    d. Purchases.

    e. Wages paid.

    f. Equipment leased.

    g. Inventory.

    h. Accounts receivable.

    i. Accounts payable.

2. Have client set up system for retaining records for indicated periods:

NOTE:

Retain the following records for general or historical reference and to substantiate information on balance sheets and tax returns. Consider the statute of limitations with respect to assessment of income tax deficiencies in determining how long to retain the records. The statute of limitations for assessing additional income taxes is generally three years from the due date of the return (absent false return, willful attempt to evade tax, no return, or extension by agreement) [I.R.C. § 6501(a), (c)]. The statute of limitations for assessing additional income taxes is six years from the date of the return if gross income is omitted in amount equal to or greater than 25 percent of the gross income reported on the return [I.R.C. § 6501(e)]. If no return is filed or a fraudulent return is filed, there is no statute of limitations [I.R.C. § 6501(c)].

The following guidelines are based on data provided by the Guide to Record Retention Requirements, published by the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20401. Because the statute of limitations runs from the due date of the return, as a general rule retain the records at least six months longer than number of years given below.

a. Accounting records.

(1) Bank statements--six years.

(2) Deposit slips--six years.

(3) Payroll time cards--six years.

(4) Cancelled dividend checks--six years.

(5) Expense reports--six years.

(6) Accounts payable and receivable and other subsidiary ledgers--six years.

(7) Monthly trial balances--six years.

(8) Cancelled general and payroll checks other than those viewed as important corporate records--eight years.

(9) Payment vouchers--eight years.

(10) Audit reports--permanently.

(11) General ledgers and journals--permanently.

b. Business operation records.

(1) Tax records, including returns and working papers--permanently.

(2) Checks given in payment of taxes, for property, and on major contracts--permanently.

(3) Contracts--permanently.

§ 1E.200 Client Letter Prior to Initial Meeting

[1] Comment--Use of Form

Prior to the initial meeting with the client, the attorney will need enough information to determine the scope of the work to be done and any preliminary decisions to be made. This letter is used to obtain that information. Complicated or lengthy questionnaires tend to discourage clients and may result in cancelled appointments because the client is "unprepared." This letter is composed with that in mind. If a more detailed set of questions is appropriate before the initial meeting, the attorney should incorporate relevant facts and documents from the client interview [see 1E.10]. The first paragraph of this letter mentions a fee and representation agreement. For sample forms, see Volume 15, Chapter 86, Agreements for Professional Services.

Re: Tax considerations for new business
Dear _____ [client's name] :

In preparation for our initial meeting, regarding tax considerations for your new business, I have [sent you under separate cover or enclosed] a fee and representation agreement outlining our mutual obligations.

The purpose of this letter is to provide you with a short list of information and documents that you should bring to our initial meeting. This is a suggested list only. If you believe other items would be useful, include those as well. If you are unable to obtain everything on the list, bring what you have available.

Information:

1. Names and telephone numbers of people who are key to the business (including owners, managers, accountant, banker, etc.).

2. Sources of funding (including amounts contributed by business owners, loans from owners to business, other loans, etc.)

Documents:

1. Three years' prior federal income tax returns for participants (both individuals and business entities, if any).

2. List of assets, stating value of each asset and source of value determination.

3. Projected profit and loss statements and balance sheet for the business, if available.

4. Any agreements signed at the time the business was formed, or subsequently.

I look forward to meeting with you on _____[date] at _____[time] at _____[location] to discuss your business. Do not hesitate to call if you have questions.

Very truly yours,
_____ [signature of attorney]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The client letter following the initial meeting reiterates the tasks the attorney will perform, reminding the client of the extent of the work involved. If the attorney is awaiting additional materials, the letter also provides the client with a complete list of the additional information or documents that must be provided and notifies the client that work cannot be completed without those items.

§ 1E.202 Client Letter If Attorney Is Not Retained

[1] Comment--Use of Form

If the attorney is not retained, a follow-up letter to the client establishes the end of the attorney-client relationship related to that particular representation. This letter will help establish a date from which the statute of limitations runs for purposes of malpractice claims [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2)].

If the client has provided the attorney with documents, they should be returned to the client along with this letter. The letter should be sent by certified or registered mail to document the close of the attorney-client relationship and confirm the client's receipt of any returned documents.

This chapter outlines insurance considerations that will arise for a new business. It is intended to assist the attorney who is advising persons involved in starting a new business. The chapter is intended to point out areas of concern to the owners of the business; it is not meant as a complete guide to business insurance. In addition, this chapter is drafted with the assumption that an insurance professional will be involved in advising the business owners on insurance matters.

Although a complete discussion of insurance law is beyond the scope of this chapter, the following insurance issues are discussed:

- The purpose and feasibility of insurance;
- Insurance premiums and coverage;
- Rescission, cancellation, and nonrenewal of policies;
- The insurer's duty to defend;
- Categories of insurance, including life, health, disability, workers' compensation, property, and liability insurance;
- Insurance planning considerations for a new business.

The Transaction Guide is designed to aid the attorney in determining appropriate types of insurance coverage. Forms include client letters and a checklist for determining the appropriate type of insurance policy.

For detailed coverage of California insurance law, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice (Matthew Bender).

For further discussion of the life insurance considerations in estate planning, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning . For discussion of limitations on liability based on choice of business entity, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity .

§ 1F.10 Nature of Insurance

[1] Attorney's Role in Making Insurance Recommendations

This chapter provides an overview of the many insurance considerations that will arise for a new business. It is intended to assist the attorney who is advising persons starting a new business. The purpose of this chapter is to point out areas of concern to the owners of the business; it is not meant as a complete guide to business insurance. This chapter is drafted with the assumption that an insurance professional will be involved in advising the business owners on insurance matters and in obtaining insurance coverage. The attorney's role is to ensure that the business owners are aware of the many concerns listed in this chapter, and to ensure that the owners have competent assistance so that they can make informed decisions regarding insurance.

[2] Insurance Defined

"Insurance" is a contract whereby one undertakes to indemnify another against loss, damage, or liability arising from a contingent or unknown event [Ins. Code § 22]. This statutory definition reflects the common understanding of insurance, which has been further defined as an agreement by which one person, for consideration, promises to pay money or its equivalent or to perform some act of value to another on the destruction, death, loss, or injury of someone or something by specified perils [California Physicians' Service v. Garrison (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 790, 803-804, 172 P.2d 4 ; see Fraser-Yamor Agency, Inc. v. County of Del Norte (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 201, 213, 137 Cal. Rptr. 118] . Two basic elements distinguish insurance contracts from other contracts. First, there must be a risk of loss to which one party may be subjected by contingent or future events, and second, there must be a legally binding arrangement by which another party assumes the risk [California Physicians' Service v. Garrison (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 790, 804, 172 P.2d 4 , quoting Jordan v. Group Health Ass'n (D.C. Cir. 1939) 107 F.2d 239, 245] .

[3] Purpose of Insurance

The purpose of insurance is to reduce uncertainty by transferring the risk of a loss from the insured to the insurer [see

California Physicians' Service v. Garrison (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 790, 804, 172 P.2d 4] . The policyholder pays a premium (representing a proportional share of losses) in return for the insurer's promise to pay the policyholder's losses according to the terms of the policy [California Physicians' Service v. Garrison (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 790, 803-804, 172 P.2d 4 ; see Fraser-Yamor Agency, Inc. v. County of Del Norte (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 201, 213, 137 Cal. Rptr. 118] . Based on experience with losses for given classes of risks, insurance companies establish appropriate rates per unit of exposure. Through these premiums they equitably redistribute the burden of losses among their policyholders. From the policyholder's standpoint, this redistribution can be considered either as the transfer of risk to a professional risk bearer or, alternatively, as the substitution of a certain, but small, loss for an uncertain, but potentially large, loss. For further discussion of the purpose of insurance, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 41, Liability Insurance in General (Matthew Bender).

[4] Categories of Insurance

Historically, insurers in the United States were limited by statute to writing insurance in only one of three categories: life insurance, fire and marine insurance, or casualty insurance. Although these restrictions have been abrogated by legislation in all states, so that any insurer (except a life insurer, title insurer, or mortgage guarantor or insurer) may now conduct business in all lines of insurance, these separate categories of insurance are preserved in the statutory and common law principles that apply uniquely to each category. For discussion of the characteristics of each category of insurance, refer to Sections 1F.30 through 1F.52.

§ 1F.11 Governing Law

Insurance contracts are a specialized form of contract. As contracts, they are subject to the general rules pertaining to the interpretation of contracts [Civ. Code §§ 1635-1662; see Crane v. State Farm Fire. & Cas. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 112, 115, 95 Cal. Rptr. 513, 485 P.2d 1129] . In addition, they are subject to the Insurance Code [Ins. Code §§ 1-15062], its regulatory acts, and judicial interpretations. The Insurance Code contains four divisions: general rules governing insurance [Ins. Code §§ 100-1877.5], classes of insurance [Ins. Code §§ 1880-12764], the insurance commissioner [Ins. Code §§ 12900-13601], and insurance adjusters [Ins. Code §§ 14000-15062]. For further discussion of the Insurance Code, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 1, Chapter 1, Overview of California Insurance Law (Matthew Bender).

The insurance industry is regulated by the McBride-Grunsky Insurance Regulatory Act [Ins. Code §§ 1851-1860.3], which established rate restrictions, reporting requirements, and procedural rules for hearings and review. In 1988, Proposition 103 repealed the rate-making provisions of the McBride-Grunsky Act, but left its enforcement provisions in place [see Proposition 103, § 7 (November 8, 1988)]. California thereby became a "prior approval" state, requiring the insurance commissioner to approve any rate changes before their adoption and use [Ins. Code § 1861.05(b)]. Proposition 103 also repealed the insurance industry's limited exemption from antitrust and other business laws [Ins. Code § 1861.03(a); see former Ins. Code §§ 1853, 1853.6, 1853.7; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16600-17930]. For further discussion, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 1, Chapter 4, Insurance Carrier Operations (Matthew Bender).

§ 1F.12 Insurance Contract

[1] Formation of Insurance Contract

A written instrument that contains an insurance contract is called a "policy" [Ins. Code § 380], and represents the final settlement of the respective obligations of the insurer and insured [Estate of Richartz (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 292, 294-295, 288 P.2d 857] . The parties may contract for insurance coverage as they please, provided they do not violate the law or public policy [Linnastruth v. Mut. Benefit etc. Assn. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 218, 137 P.2d 833] .

The first step in negotiating an insurance policy is the completion of an application by the prospective insured. The insurer may then accept the application on its terms, reject the application for any reason, even if the reason seems arbitrary [K.C. Working Chem. Co. v. Eureka-Sec. Ins. Co. (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 120, 131, 185 P.2d 832 ; but see Ins. Code §§ 679.70-679.73, 11628 (prohibiting discrimination in issuance)], or make changes or additions to the policy before forwarding it to the insured. If changes or additions are made, the modified policy is a counteroffer. Accordingly, after a counteroffer, there is a contract only when the new policy terms are accepted by the prospective insured [see Linnastruth v. Mut. Benefit etc. Assn. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 218, 137 P.2d 833 (formation of insurance contract requires meeting of minds)]. However, unless principles of estoppel or waiver can be invoked, retention of the modified contract will be deemed an acceptance by the insured, and the insured will be presumed to have read the policy and to know its contents [Burch v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (1927) 85 Cal. App. 542, 554, 259 P. 1108]. The existence of a contract is a question of law, rather than of fact. A lower court finding that a contract has been formed will not limit the scope of review at the appellate level [Employers Casualty Co. v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Group (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 462, 473, 167 Cal. Rptr. 296] .

[2] Required Contents

Every insurance policy must specify all of the following [Ins. Code § 381]:

- The parties between whom the contract is made;

- The property or life insured;
- The interest of the insured in the property insured;
- The risks insured against;
- The period the insurance is to cover; and
- A statement of the premium, or if the exact insurance premium is determinable only on the termination of the contract, a statement of the basis and the rates on which the final premium is to be determined and paid.

[3] Oral Contracts

Oral insurance contracts are used to provide immediate temporary insurance until a written binder can be issued, to renew existing policies, and to transfer existing insurance from one location to another [Parlier Fruit Co. v. Fireman's etc. Ins. Co. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 19, 311 P.2d 62 ; see Ins. Code § 382.5(a) ("binder" defined); see also [4], below]. Oral insurance contracts are enforceable if they can be performed within one year [see Stanley v. Columbia Casualty Co. (1943) 63 Cal. App. 2d 724, 731-732, 147 P.2d 627 (adoption of insurance code did not abolish oral contracts); Farnum v. Phenix Ins. Co. (1890) 83 Cal. 246, 261, 23 P. 869 (oral contract not enforceable if statute of fraud applies)], if there is clear and convincing proof that an oral contract was entered into and that each party understands the contract in the same light, regarding the same subject matter [K.C. Working C. Co. v. Eureka-Sec. Ins. Co. (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 120, 130, 185 P.2d 832] , and if the terms of the contract are definite and certain [K.C. Working Chem. Co. v. Eureka-Sec. Ins. Co. (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 120, 130, 185 P.2d 832] .

Oral binders may be effected on behalf of an insurer by an agent possessing authority to bind the company by contracts of insurance in general [Granco Steel, Inc. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 191, 197, 65 Cal. Rptr. 287, 436 P.2d 287] .

[4] Written Contracts

Written insurance contracts may take one of two forms. They may be either the preliminary contract, usually referred to as a "binder," which temporarily obliges the insurer to provide coverage pending issuance of the insurance policy [see Ins. Code § 382.5(a)], or the final contract or policy itself [Parlier Fruit Co. v. Fireman's etc. Ins. Co. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 20, 311 P.2d 62] . For further discussion of written binders, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 9, Issuance of Insurance Policies (Matthew Bender).

§ 1F.13 Types of Policies

[1] Open and Valued Policies Distinguished

An insurance policy may be either open or valued [see Ins. Code § 410]. An "open" policy does not state the value of the subject matter; that amount is left to be ascertained in case of loss [Ins. Code § 411]. A "valued" policy provides that the insured property will be valued at a specified sum [Ins. Code § 412] and that the insured property is worth the amount for which it is insured [see Solomon v. Federal Ins. Co. (1917) 176 Cal. 133, 136, 167 P. 859] .

[2] Running Policies

A "running" policy contemplates successive insurances; it provides that the object of the policy may be defined from time to time by additional statements or endorsements, particularly with regard to the subject of insurance [Ins. Code § 413].

[3] Specific and Floater Policies Distinguished

An insurance policy may be either specific or a floater. A "specific" policy covers property at a specific location in a specific amount for a specific premium [Gillies v. Michigan Millers etc. Ins. Co. (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 743, 747, 221 P.2d 272] . A "floater" policy is issued when the amount of merchandise insured fluctuates from day to day, when the merchant intends to move the stock from one location to another, or when the merchant operates more than one establishment [Gillies v. Michigan Millers etc. Ins. Co. (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 743, 747, 221 P.2d 272] . If there is a loss, the insured will receive the actual cash value of the damaged property covered by the floater policy [Gillies v. Michigan Millers etc. Ins. Co. (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 743, 747, 221 P.2d 272 ; see also Olson v. Standard Marine Ins. Co. (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 130, 132, 240 P.2d 379] . Floater policies are generally used to insure unscheduled personal property.

[4] Master Policies and Individual Certificates of Insurance

In some situations, such as group life or disability insurance, an insurer may issue a master policy to the employer or franchisor. The insurer then issues certificates of insurance to the individual insureds. If a certificate is issued in lieu of the actual policy, the certificate must include, among other things, substantially the following statement: "This certificate or verification of insurance is not an insurance policy and does not amend, extend or alter the coverage afforded by the policies listed herein. Notwithstanding any requirement, term, or condition of any contract or other document with respect to which this certificate or verification of insurance may be issued or may pertain, the insurance afforded by the policies described herein is subject to all the terms, exclusions and conditions of such policies" [Ins. Code § 384(a); see Ins. Code § 384(b) (requirement inapplicable to surplus line broker certificate)].

This statutory notice may obviate the common law rule that, if the terms of the policy as stated on the certificates differ from the terms of the master policy, the terms of the certificate are controlling [Humphrey v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 527, 534, 63 Cal. Rptr. 50, 432 P.2d 746 ; Evans v. Holly Corp. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 1020, 1023, 93 Cal. Rptr. 712] , because the decisions establishing that rule preceded enactment of Ins. Code § 384 in 1978. However, if the certificate terms differ materially from the master policy terms, an insured may have a cause of action for fraud, estoppel, or waiver, that may permit the insured to rescind the contract or to recover damages for fraud [see §§ 1F.15[2], 1F.16 [3]; see also Ins. Code §§ 331 (concealment), 359 (false representations)]. Further, because standardized insurance contracts are generally treated as contracts of adhesion [see Gray v. Zurich Insurance Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 269-270, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168] , it is well-established that exceptions and limitations on coverage that the insured could reasonably expect must be called to the insured's attention, clearly and plainly, before the exclusions will be interpreted to relieve the insurer of liability or performance [Interinsurance Exchange v. Velji (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 310, 318, 118 Cal. Rptr. 596] . The general statutory notice provided by Ins. Code § 384 would seem to fall short of this disclosure requirement.

§ 1F.14 Premiums

[1] Payment of Premium

Provided that an insurance contract has been entered into, an insurer is entitled to payment of the premium as soon as the subject matter insured is exposed to the risk insured against [Ins. Code § 480]. Payment of the premium is not a condition precedent to the operation of the policy or to any recovery on it, even if the policy identifies the premium as consideration for coverage [Raulet v. Northwestern etc. Ins. Co. (1910) 157 Cal. 213, 224, 107 P. 292] . However, if a time is prescribed for payment of the premium, it must be paid by that time [Thomas v. Northwestern etc. Ins. Co. (1904) 142 Cal. 79, 82, 75 P. 665 ; see Northey v. Bankers' Life Asso. (1895) 110 Cal. 547, 550, 42 P. 1079 (if no date prescribed within specified month for payment, premium presumed payable on last day of specified month)].

An acknowledgment in the policy of receipt of a premium is conclusive evidence of its payment for the purpose of making the policy binding [Ins. Code § 484]. The acknowledgment has been held to be a "solemn admission" that estops the insurer from contesting the policy for nonpayment of premium [Masson v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1927) 85 Cal. App. 633, 641]. However, the acknowledgment does not prevent cancellation for nonpayment of a premium if a cancellation right is reserved to the issuer of the policy [Ins. Code § 484].

[2] Return of Premium

[a] Right to Return

Unless the policy provides otherwise, if the risk insured against has existed, and the insurer has been liable for any period of time, no matter how short, the insured is not entitled to a return of the premium relating to that particular risk except under the certain specified circumstances described below.

An insured will be entitled to a return of the premium when the contract is voidable because of the fraud or misrepresentation of an insurer or because of facts unknown to the insured without fault on the part of the insured [Ins.

Code § 483(a), (b)]. An insured is also entitled to a return of premium when, by any default of the insured other than actual fraud, the insurer "did not incur any liability" under the policy [Ins. Code § 483(c)]; this presumably refers to a situation where the insured fails to comply with some condition precedent to coverage taking effect. These provisions are specifically applicable to both life insurance and annuity policies [see Equitable Life Etc. Soc. v. Johnson (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 49, 127 P.2d 95 (construing former Civ. Code § 2619, now Ins. Code § 483)].

[b] Conditions of Return

Unless otherwise provided in the policy, the insured is entitled to a return of the premium if the policy is canceled, rejected, surrendered, or rescinded [Ins. Code § 481(a); but see Ins. Code § 481(c) (exception for ocean marine insurance)]. Under these circumstances, the insured is entitled to return of the whole premium if the insurer has not been exposed to any risk of loss; if the policy has been made for a definite period of time and the insured surrenders the policy earlier, the insured is entitled to a short rate cancellation, unless the insured shows that coverage has been placed elsewhere for the same period. The provisions of Insurance Code Section 482 with regard to the exposure of the insurer to risk apply only to that portion of the policy term that has expired [Ins. Code § 481(a)].

[3] Life Insurance Policies: Special Premium Considerations

[a] Cash Surrender Value

If an insured surrenders a life insurance policy to the insurer for its cash surrender value, the insurer's liability for the risk covered in the policy is terminated [Jensen v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 789, 793-794, 108 Cal. Rptr. 498 ; see Jennings v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 8, 17, 121 Cal. Rptr. 125 (Ins. Code § 481 inapplicable after receipt of policy's cash surrender value)].

[b] Waiver of Premium

"Waiver of premium" coverage is offered by life insurance companies for an additional premium. With this coverage, in the event the insured becomes disabled, future premiums on the policy are automatically waived by the insurer, and the life insurance remains in effect [Boogaert v. Occidental Life Ins. Co, (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 875, 878-880, 198 Cal. Rptr. 357] . The premiums waived due to the disability of the insured are ordinarily exempt from taxation as "amounts received through accident and health insurance as compensation for personal injuries or sickness" [I.R.C. § 104(a)(3)].

[4] Forfeiture of Policy for Nonpayment

Forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums has been held to be a necessary means for insurers to protect themselves [Methvin v. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. (1900) 129 Cal. 251, 258, 61 P. 1112] . On the other hand, because insurance contracts are generally held to be contracts of adhesion [see, e.g., Gray v. Zurich Insurance Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 269, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168] , or are implicitly treated as adhesion contracts [Ponder v. Blue Cross of Southern California (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 709, 719, 193 Cal. Rptr. 632 ; see, e.g., Crane v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 112, 115, 95 Cal. Rptr. 513, 485 P.2d 1129] , it is well established that forfeitures, which are generally not favored, are particularly scrutinized in the insurance context. A forfeiture will be permitted only when expressed in clear and unmistakable terms [Bittinger v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 834, 840-841, 112 P.2d 621] . The court will come to the aid of the insured if, by any reasonable construction, the forfeiture can be avoided, and will likely construe the grace period liberally to save the policy from lapsing immediately [Bittinger v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 834, 841-842, 112 P.2d 621] . Special nonforfeiture provisions, known as the Standard Nonforfeiture Law for Life Insurance [Ins. Code § 10159.1 et seq.], apply to life insurance policies. For discussion, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 21, The Life Insurance Contract (Matthew Bender).

§ 1F.15 Coverage

[1] Commencement of Coverage

[a] In General

When an applicant for insurance pays a prescribed premium and the binder states that the insurance applied for is effective from the date of the application on payment of the premium and company satisfaction of insurability, it is deemed that the parties intended the insurance to be effective immediately, subject to termination on the condition subsequent that the applicant is not insurable [Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904, 911, 109 Cal. Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353] . When an insurer has received an application and the premium and then decides to reject the application, the insurance contract immediately created on receipt of the application and premium is not terminated until the insurer has actually rejected the application and refunded the premium [Smith v. Westland Life Ins. Co. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 111, 121, 123 Cal. Rptr. 649, 539 P.2d 433] .

[b] Under Oral Binder

If an authorized insurance agent orally accepts a risk under an oral binder [see § 1F.12 [3]], promising to deliver the written policy later, the insurance is effective immediately and the parol contract continues in force under the written policy is delivered and supersedes it [Kazanteno v. California-Western States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370, 290 P.2d 332] . If a loss occurs before the written policy is issued, the insurer is nonetheless liable [Spott Electrical Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710] . An oral agreement for insurance is not rendered invalid just because more information is required before a policy can be written [Parlier Fruit Co. v. Fireman's etc. Ins. Co. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 23, 311 P.2d 62] .

[2] Limitations on Coverage

[a] In General

Typically, in addition to limiting the risk of liability on an insurance policy by including conditions or warranties [see [b], below], insurers include clauses that limit the coverage otherwise stated in the policy. These limitations may include limitations on the subject matter of the policy, on the types of hazards insured against, on the proceeds payable on the policy, and on the period of coverage. However, the extent of coverage is that which an ordinary layperson may reasonably expect [Wernecke v. Pacific Fidelity Life Ins. Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 884, 887, 48 Cal. Rptr. 251] . Further, unless any limitations are brought to the attention of the insured, the coverage provided will be determined according to the ordinary layperson's expectations [Young v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 453, 460-461, 77 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; see State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Khoe (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 401, 407] .

Narrowly defining, or failing to define, a crucial word or phrase in a policy, especially a policy that is truly negotiated and is drafted specifically for the insured, could turn out to create implicit limitations on coverage or on the insurer's duty under the policy, which the insured might not have anticipated. For instance, if the insurer is bound to defend "any suit or action," then in the absence of a controlling definition, a court could find that the duty to defend does not extend to administrative proceedings [Lockheed Martin Corp. v. Continental Ins. Co. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 187, 198-200, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 799 (insurer was not required to defend insured in administrative proceedings that had not ripened into lawsuits filed in court; in addition, coverage for damages resulting from "accident" did not extend to liability for effects of pollution that occurred and increased gradually, and coverage for "personal injury" liability as defined in policy could not be extended to pollution-based liability), disapproved on other grounds, State v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1008, 1036 n.11].

[b] Distinguished From Warranties and Conditions

[i] Warranties and Conditions Defined

A factual statement in a policy regarding the person or thing insured, or the risk insured against, is an express warranty that the fact is true [Ins. Code § 441]. Further, any statement in a policy that imports that there is an intention to do or not to do something that materially affects the risk insured against is a warranty [Ins. Code § 445]. No particular form of words need be used to create an express warranty [Ins. Code § 442]. Contracts of insurance are governed and interpreted by the same rules that ordinarily apply to other contracts [see Civ. Code § 1635 et seq.]. In contract law, a "condition" is an act or event, which occurrence or non-occurrence creates or extinguishes a legal duty [Restatement (Second) of Contracts, § 230]. The failure of a condition gives the promissor a legal justification for refusing to perform his or her promise, and, thus, may provide a defense to the promissor in an action by the promisee for non-performance of the promise [Restatement (Second) of Contracts, § 230].

[ii] Classification of Clause as Limitation or as Warranty or Condition

Whether a particular clause in a policy is a warranty or condition or a limitation on coverage depends on whether the circumstance that is the subject of the clause is discoverable by the insurer by investigation at the policy's inception. If the circumstance is discoverable, it is classified as a warranty or condition [Simpson v. Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. (1969) 24 N.Y.2d 262, 247 N.E.2d 655, 658] . If the circumstance is not discoverable by the insurer at the inception of the policy, it is to be classified as a limitation on coverage [Simpson v. Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. (1969) 24 N.Y.2d 262, 247 N.E.2d 655, 658 ; see Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Conway (1930) 252 N.Y. 449, 169 N.E. 642, 642-643 (summary of decisions in other jurisdictions)].

[c] Consequences of Classifying Clause as Limitation or as Warranty or Condition

[i] Avoidance of Policy Due to Breach of Warranty or Condition

The major distinction between a limitation on coverage and a warranty or condition is that the violation of a material warranty or any other material provision or condition of the policy on the part of either party entitles the other to rescind [Ins. Code § 447; see Kleiber M.T. Co. v. International I. Co. (1930) 106 Cal. App. 709, 721-724, 289 P. 865 (breach of immaterial provision will not avoid policy unless policy so states)]. Thus, breach of a material warranty or condition not only provides the insurer a defense against payment of proceeds, but avoids the policy itself [Gilmore v. Eureka Casualty Co. (1932) 123 Cal. App. 20, 27, 10 P.2d 810] . On the other hand, an act or event that falls outside of coverage because of a limitation on or exception to coverage does not have any affect on the voidability of the contract; the insurer is merely not liable for any loss due to that occurrence [Cravens, Dargan & Co. v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 594, 598-601, 105 Cal. Rptr. 607] .

[ii] Application of Waiver and Estoppel to Breach of Warranty or Condition

A second distinction between a limitation on coverage and a warranty or condition is that, under certain circumstances, a court will hold that an insurer has waived or is estopped to claim the right to defend or rescind on the basis of a breach of warranty or condition or a misrepresentation, in which case the insurer remains liable under the policy [see, e.g., McLaughlin v. Connecticut General Life Ins. Co. (1983) 565 F. Supp. 434, 451 (insurer relying on specific grounds for denying claim waives right to rely in subsequent litigation on any other grounds that reasonable investigation would have uncovered)]. As a general rule, however, a court will not expand coverage beyond that specified in the contract by application of the doctrine of waiver or estoppel [Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Richmond (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 645, 652-653, 143 Cal. Rptr. 75 (estoppel); but see Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 753-754, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322 (unconditional defense of action against insured constitutes a waiver of policy's terms and estops insurer from asserting those grounds)].

[iii] Limitation on Defense of Warranty or Condition

A third distinction between a limitation on coverage and a warranty or condition is that the statutes that commonly limit the defenses of warranties and conditions do not apply to limitations on coverage [see Ins. Code §§ 447-449].

[3] Effect of Agent's or Company's Representations

An agent's or company's representations will not defeat an applicant's reasonable expectations of coverage [Young v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 453, 460, 77 Cal. Rptr. 382 (unambiguous limitation of liability in conditional receipt held ineffective when not called to applicant's attention); Slobojan v. Western Travelers Life Ins. Co. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 432, 441, 74 Cal. Rptr. 895, 450 P.2d 271 (agent's explanation that there were conditions precedent to coverage ineffective when applicant's expectation of coverage arose from subsequent payment of premium)]. Further, an agent's or company's representations are often held to give rise to an insured's expectations of coverage [see Logan v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 988, 116 Cal. Rptr. 528] . In the absence of constructive or actual notice to the insured of any limitations on the agent's authority, a general agent may bind the insurance company by acts, agreements, or representations that are within the ordinary scope and limits of the insurance business entrusted to him or her, although they are in violation of private restrictions [Skyways Aircraft Ferrying Service, Inc. v. Stanton (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 280-281, 51 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; quoting Cronin v. Coyle (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 205, 212-213, 44 P.2d 385] . A general agent is one who has all the powers of the principal, except as limited by the company to whatever seems expedient [see Skyways Aircraft Ferrying Service, Inc. v. Stanton (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 280, 51 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; quoting Cronin v. Coyle (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 205, 212-213, 44 P.2d 385] .

§ 1F.16 Rescission

[1] Grounds for Rescission

Rescission is an equitable remedy that restores the parties to their former positions as of the time the contract was made [Fireman's Fund American Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785] . Misrepresentation or concealment of a fact material to the risk insured against is grounds for rescission; an actual intent to deceive need not be shown [Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904, 916, 109 Cal. Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353] . No right to avoid or rescind a policy arises from a violation of a policy provision by the insured unless the provision materially affects the risk or the policy specifically states that the breach will avoid the policy [Victoria S.S. Co. v. Western Assur. Co. (1914) 167 Cal. 348, 357, 139 P. 807] ; this rule applies if the affected provision is characterized as a warranty [Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 383, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307] . Any of the grounds for rescission found in the Civil Code [see Civ. Code § 1689] may be used to avoid the policy [DeCampos v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 519, 529, 265 P.2d 617 ; Cole v. Calaway (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 340, 347-348, 295 P.2d 84] . Rescission will apply to all insureds under the policy, including additional insureds, unless the contract provides otherwise [Ins. Code § 650; see Civil Service Employees Ins. Co. v. Blake (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 196, 202, 53 Cal. Rptr. 701 (insurer entitled to rescind auto policy obtained through fraud, breach of warranty, or material misrepresentation, notwithstanding any rights of third parties injured by the acts of insured occurring before rescission)].

[2] Time for Rescission

An insurer is permitted to exercise any right to rescission at any time before the commencement of an action on the contract [see Ins. Code § 650; see also Ins. Code § 651 (insured's right to notice of grounds for rescission under automobile liability contracts)].

[3] Availability of Damages for Fraud

Rescission is not an exclusive remedy. Intentional concealment of material facts or false representations made in reference to material facts, with the intent to mislead the insurer, constitutes fraud [DeCampos v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 519, 527, 265 P.2d 617] . A defrauded party, induced by false representations to execute a contract, may rescind the contract, or affirm the contract and recover damages for the fraud, or use concealment and misrepresentation as a defense to any action on the policy by the insured [DeCampos v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 519, 527, 265 P.2d 617] .

An action for damages rests on the theory that the contract is still in force; the insurer will not lose the right to damages if it ineffectually seeks to disaffirm the contract. While the remedies for rescission and damages are inconsistent, in seeking rescission, damages may be prayed for in the event the court disallows the rescission [Davis v. Rite--Lite Sales Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 675, 678-679, 67 P.2d 1039 ; DeCampos v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 519, 527, 265 P.2d 617] .

§ 1F.17 Cancellation by Mutual Agreement

An insurance contract may be cancelled either pursuant to its terms or by the mutual consent of the parties. If the policy is terminated by mutual agreement, it may be cancelled without reference to the express terms of the policy [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] . A mutual agreement to cancel may be either express or implied, depending on the circumstances of the case [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 168, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] ; however, mere return of a policy to the company does not necessarily mean there has been a cancellation by mutual agreement or by request of the insured [Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 670-671, 67 P.2d 1046] .

§ 1F.18 Cancellation by Insured

To cancel an insurance policy, the insured need only communicate a definite and unconditional request for cancellation to the insurer [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] . Although an insured may cancel an insurance policy at any time, the request for cancellation must be unequivocal and absolute [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] . The request must indicate a present intention to cancel; an expression of intent to cancel the policy at some time in the future will not result in a cancellation [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] . The request must also be actually communicated to the insurer [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165-167, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] .

Cancellation of an existing policy will not occur merely because the insured obtains substitute insurance with the intent to replace existing insurance. The insured may either retain the second policy as additional insurance or cancel the earlier policy. The insurer may not cancel a policy simply because the insured procures substitute insurance, although the later policy may be substituted for the former with mutual consent [Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 169-170, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753 ; Apparel Mfrs' Supply Co. v. National Auto & Cas. Ins. Co. (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 443, 459, 11 Cal. Rptr. 380] .

In the absence of a clear provision to the contrary, the insured generally need not give the insurer formal written notice of cancellation or surrender the policy to the insurer [see Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165-168, 25 Cal. Rptr. 753] . However, when the policy contains an unambiguous provision requiring the insured to take a specific action as a condition precedent to the cancellation of the policy, that provision will be enforced [Pacific National Ins. Co. v. Webster (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 779, 782, 220 Cal. Rptr. 274] .

§ 1F.19 Cancellation by Insurer--In General

[1] Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

In addition to any applicable statutory limitations on cancellation of policies [see [2], below, §§ 1F.20, 1F.21], insurers are bound by the covenant of good faith and fair dealing in cancellation matters [Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Companies (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 957-958, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404] . For discussion of this covenant, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith (Matthew Bender).

[2] Notice to Insured

[a] General Requirements

Insurance contracts typically have a provision for cancellation that requires notice to the insured before the cancellation is effective. For example, under a standard form fire insurance policy, the insurer may cancel the policy by giving 20 days written notice to the insured [see Ins. Code § 2071]. If there is a provision for notice of cancellation in the policy, the insurer must strictly comply with its terms in order to effect a cancellation [Naify v. Pacific Indemnity Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 5, 10, 76 P.2d 663] . The policy is cancelled as of the specific date the notice is properly mailed, regardless of whether it is received [Jensen v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 786, 798, 345 P.2d 1] . Notice of cancellation to the insured's agent is not notice of cancellation to the insured unless that notice is actually communicated to the insured [Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 672, 67 P.2d 1046] .

[b] Notice of Cancellation of Commercial Policy

A notice of cancellation of a commercial policy must be in writing and must be delivered or mailed to the producer of record (provided the producer is not an employee of the named insured) and to the named insured at the mailing address as shown on the policy [Ins. Code § 677.2(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) (service by mail)]. It must state the reason for and the effective date of the cancellation [Ins. Code § 677.2(b)]. In most cases, the notice must be given at least 30 days before the effective date of the cancellation [Ins. Code § 677.2(c)]. However, when cancellation is for nonpayment of premiums or for fraud, the notice must be given no less than 10 days before the effective date of cancellation [Ins. Code § 677.2(c)]. Notice of a proposed cancellation issued pursuant to Ins. Code § 676.2(d) [see § 1F.21] before the Insurance Commissioner has issued a finding will be considered timely if it is given no less than 30 days before the effective date of cancellation and if it states that cancellation will be effective only on the commissioner's approval [Ins. Code § 677.2(c)].

[3] Refund Upon Cancellation

Cancellation may be either flat or pro rata. With a flat cancellation, no refund is made. With a pro rata cancellation, the insurance company may demand payment by the insured of the pro rata portion of the premium for the time the policy was in effect, if credit was extended to the insured [see Ins. Code § 673(g)]. If the premium has been paid beyond the date of cancellation, the insured is entitled to a pro rata return of premium [see Jensen v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 786, 799, 345 P.2d 1] .

§ 1F.20 Cancellation by Insurer of Individual Property and Liability Policies

The Robbins Brown Insurance Consumer Reform Act [Ins. Code §§ 675-679.6] governs the cancellation, as well as the nonrenewal [see § 1F.22], of commercial and individual property/liability policies covering individual risks (other than automobile and workers' compensation insurance). These individual property and liability policies insure against the following contingencies [Ins. Code § 675a]:

- Loss or damage to real property that is used predominantly for residential purposes and that consists of not more than four units;

- Loss of or damage to personal property in which natural persons resident in the real property described in (1), above, have an insurable interest, except personal property used in a commercial or industrial enterprise; and

- Legal liability of a natural person for loss of, damage to, or injury to persons or property, but not including policies primarily insuring risks arising from the conduct of a commercial or industrial enterprise.

Cancellation of individual property and liability policies may be relevant to a new business if that business involves renting out four or fewer residential rental units. After an individual policy covered by the Robbins Brown Act has been in effect for 60 days, or effective immediately, if the policy is a renewal, cancellation of the policy by the insurer will be effective only if it is based on the occurrence of one or more of the following events [Ins. Code § 676(a)- (e)]:

- Nonpayment of premium, including nonpayment of additional premiums, justified by a physical change in the insured property to a change in its occupancy or use;

- Conviction of the named insured of a crime having as one of its necessary elements an act increasing any hazard insured against;

- Discovery of fraud or material misrepresentation by either (a) the insured or his or her representative in obtaining insurance; or (b) the named insured or his or her representative in pursuing a claim under the policy;

- Discovery of grossly negligent acts or omissions by the insured or his or her representative substantially increasing any of the hazards insured against; and

- Physical changes in the insured property that result in its becoming uninsurable [see Ins. Code § 678.5 (special rule relating to corrosive soil conditions)].

Special restrictions apply to the cancellation of automobile insurance policies; for discussion of those restrictions, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 50 Automobile Insurance (Matthew Bender).

§ 1F.21 Cancellation by Insurer of Commercial Property and Liability Policies

For purposes of cancellation, "commercial insurance policies" includes commercial multi-peril, commercial property, commercial liability, commercial special multi-peril, errors and omissions liability, professional liability insurance, and any other insurance not specifically excluded by Ins. Code § 675.5(d) and that covers any of the following contingencies [Ins. Code § 675.5(b)(1)- (3)]:

- Loss or damage to real property used or owned in a commercial or industrial enterprise;

- Loss of or damage to personal property, except personally owned motor vehicles, used in a commercial or industrial enterprise; and

- Legal liability of any person for loss of or damage to property, or injury to persons arising from the conduct of a commercial or industrial enterprise (including a business operated for profit, a professional practice, a nonprofit organization, or a governmental entity).

After a commercial property and liability policy has been in effect for more than 60 days, or effective immediately, if the policy is a renewal, cancellation of the policy by the insurer will be effective only if it is based on one or more of the following events occurring after the date of the policy [Ins. Code § 676.2(b)]:

- Nonpayment of premium, including any payment due on a prior policy issued by the insurer and due during the current policy term covering the same risks;

- A judgment by a court or administrative tribunal that the named insured has violated any California or federal law having as one of its necessary elements an act that materially increases any of the risks insured against;

- Discovery of fraud or material misrepresentation by either the named insured or his or her representative in either obtaining insurance or in pursuing a claim under the policy;

- Discovery of willful or grossly negligent acts or omissions, or violation of state laws or regulations establishing safety standards, that materially increase any of the risks insured against;

- Failure by the named insured or his or her representative to implement reasonable loss control requirements that were agreed upon by the insured as a condition of policy issuance or were conditions precedent to the use by the insurer of a particular rate or rating plan, if the failure materially increases any of the risks insured against;

- A determination by the insurance commissioner that loss of or changes to the insurer's reinsurance covering all or part of the risk would threaten the financial integrity or solvency of the insurer;

- A determination by the insurance commissioner that a continuation of policy coverage would place the insurer in violation of California law or the law of the insurer's domicile, or that continuation of coverage would threaten the insurer's solvency; and

- A change by the named insured or his or her representative in the activities or property of the insured enterprise that results in a materially increased risk, or a materially changed risk, unless the added, increased, or changed risk is included in the policy.

In addition to the grounds discussed above, additional grounds exist for cancellation of a commercial umbrella liability insurance policy, commercial excess liability insurance policy, or commercial excess property insurance policy [see Ins. Code § 676.6(c); see also Ins. Code § 676.6(b)(1) ("commercial umbrella liability insurance policy" defined), (2) ("excess liability insurance policy" defined), (3) ("excess property insurance policy" defined)].

§ 1F.22 Nonrenewal by Insurer

[1] Individual Policies

At least 45 days before the expiration of the policy period, an insurer must mail or deliver to the named insured at the address shown on either of the following [Ins. Code § 678(a); see Ins. Code §§ 675, 678(d)]:

- An offer to renew the policy, contingent on the payment of the premium as stated in the offer, setting forth both of the following:
  - Any reduction of limits or elimination of coverage.
  - The telephone number of the insurer's representatives who handle consumer inquiries or complaints, displayed prominently in a font size consistent with the other text of the renewal offer.
- A notice of the nonrenewal of the policy, stating all of the following:
  - The reason(s) for nonrenewal.
  - The telephone number of the insurer's representatives who handle consumer inquiries or complaints, displayed prominently in a font size consistent with the other text of the notice.
  - A brief statement indicating that if the consumer has contacted the insurer to discuss the nonrenewal and remains unsatisfied, the consumer may have the matter reviewed by the Insurance Department.

- The telephone number of the unit within the Department that responds to consumer inquiries or complaints.

If the insurer fails to give the named insured either an offer of renewal or a notice of nonrenewal, the existing policy will remain in effect with no change in terms or conditions for 45 days from the date that either the offer to renew or the notice of nonrenewal is delivered or mailed to the named insured [Ins. Code § 678(b)]. The insurer must inform the named insured of this fact along with the offer to renew or the notice of nonrenewal [Ins. Code § 678(b)]. Any policy written for a term of less than one year is considered as if written for a term of one year. Any policy written for a term of longer than one year, as well as any policy with no fixed expiration date, is considered as if written for successive policy periods or terms of one year [Ins. Code § 678(c)].

In general, insurers may not to refuse to renew individual property and liability policies (other than automobile insurance and workers' compensation insurance policies) [Ins. Code § 675(a); see § 1F.20] solely on the basis that a claim is pending under the policy. However, this bar does not apply to claims made under coverage for loss or damage caused by earthquake [Ins. Code § 675(a); see Ins. Code §§ 10081 et seq., 10089.5 et seq.]. Special restrictions apply to the nonrenewal of automobile insurance policies [see Ins. Code § 1861.03(c)]. For discussion of those restrictions, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 50, Automobile Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[2] Commercial Policies

Any notice of nonrenewal of a commercial insurance policy, commercial umbrella liability insurance policy, commercial excess liability insurance policy, or commercial excess property insurance policy must be in writing and delivered or mailed to the producer of record and to the named insured at the mailing address shown on the policy [Ins. Code § 678.1(b); see Ins. Code § 676.6(b)(1)- (3) (commercial umbrella liability insurance, excess liability insurance, and excess property insurance policies defined); Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) (service by mail)].

If the insurer does not intend to renew the policy or intends to condition renewal on a reduction of limits, elimination of coverages, increase in deductibles, or increase of more than 25 percent of the rate on which the premium is based, it must provide the insured with a notice of nonrenewal [Ins. Code § 678.1(c)]. That notice must state the grounds on which the nonrenewal is based and must be given to the insured at least 45 days, but not more than 120 days, before the end of the policy period [Ins. Code § 678.1(c)]. However, if the aggregate premium of the policy holder is $10,000 or less, the notice must be provided at least 60 days but not more than 120 days in advance of the policy period [Ins. Code § 678.1(c)]. With respect to commercial umbrella liability insurance policies, commercial excess liability insurance policies, or commercial excess property insurance policies, an insurer may also condition renewal on requirements relating to the underlying policy or policies [see Ins. Code § 678.1(e)].

If the insurer fails to give timely notice of nonrenewal, the policy will be continued, with no changes in its terms or conditions, for 60 days after the insurer gives notice [Ins. Code § 678.1(d)]. For this purpose, "terms and conditions" includes, but is not limited to, a reduction in coverage limits, elimination of coverages, or an increase in deductibles [Ins. Code § 678.1(f)(6)].

Under certain circumstances, the insurer is not required to provide the insured with a notice of renewal of a commercial policy, including a commercial umbrella liability insurance policy, commercial excess liability insurance policy, or commercial excess property insurance policy [see Ins. Code § 678.1(f); see also Ins. Code § 676.6(b)(1)- (3) (commercial umbrella liability insurance, excess liability insurance, or excess property insurance policies defined)]. A notice need not be sent [Ins. Code § 678.1(f)]:

- On the transfer or renewal of a policy between insurers that are members of the same insurance group when no change is made to the terms, conditions, or rates on which the premium is based;

- If the policy was extended for 90 days or less and the notice required by statute was provided before the extension [see Ins. Code § 678.1(c) (notice requirement)];

- If the policy is for a period of no more than 60 days, and the insured is notified at the time of issuance that it may not be renewed; or

- If the named insured requests a change in the terms, conditions, or risks covered by the policy within 60 days before the end of the policy period.

Further, a nonrenewal notice is not required if the insured has made an offer to the insured, within 45 to 120 days before the end of the policy period, to renew the policy under changed terms and conditions or at a changed premium rate [Ins. Code §§ 676.6(d)(6), 678.1(f)(6); see Ins. Code § 678.1(c) (notice requirement)].

When an insured receives a notice of nonrenewal, the insured, or the agent or broker of record on the nonrenewed policy, may file a written request seeking an explanation. Within 15 business days of receiving the request, the insurer must provide a premium and loss history report for the shorter of (1) the account's tenure or (2) the past three years, as well as a report of any loss experience during the current policy year [Ins. Code § 678.1 (requirement inapplicable to professional liability insurance)].

§ 1F.23 Insurer's Duty to Defend

[1] In General

An insurer's duty to defend is a contractual duty arising from the express language of the policy [Larraburu Bros., Inc. v. Royal Indem. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 604 F.2d 1208, 1214-1215] . As a contractual duty, it is not unconditional (as is the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing) [see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith (Matthew Bender)]. For example, the duty to defend does not arise until the insurer receives actual notice of an action against the insured [California Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1, 58, 221 Cal. Rptr. 171 (insurer did not breach implied covenant in failing to defend when it never received actual notice of lawsuit; however, insurer remained contractually liable to pay insured's defense costs); see Foster-Gardner, Inc. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 857, 879-880, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 107, 959 P.2d 265 (EPA order requiring business to remediate pollution did not initiate "suit" within meaning of insurance policies and thus did not give rise to insurers' duty to defend; use of term "suit" in policies was not ambiguous, as reasonable interpretation of term is "lawsuit" and construction that included precomplaint notices was not reasonable)]. However, wrongful refusal to defend (that is, unreasonable withholding of defense benefits without good cause) can contribute to a breach of the implied covenant [see, e.g., California Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1, 57-58, 221 Cal. Rptr. 171] .

Insurance policies may not expressly provide or be construed to provide any duty to defend any claim in any criminal action or proceeding or in any action or proceeding brought pursuant to the Unfair Competition Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17209] or the Business and Professions Code provisions governing false advertising [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500-17509] in which the recovery of a fine, penalty, or restitution is sought by the Attorney General, any district attorney, any city prosecutor, or any county counsel [Ins. Code § 533.5(b); see Ins. Code § 533.5(c) ("duty to defend" for purposes of this section defined)].

[2] Scope of Duty to Defend

An insurer is obliged to provide a defense to a lawsuit when the insurer learns (or reasonably should have learned) of facts from any source that give rise to the potential that the insured will be held liable for damages covered under its policy [Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 276-277, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; Truck Ins. Exchange v. Bennett (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 81, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 (duty to defend measured by nature and kinds of risk covered by policy); CNA Casualty Co. of California v. Seabord Surety Co. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 606, 222 Cal. Rptr. 276 (enumerating cases)]. However, an insurer has no duty to defend an insured when there is no potential for liability under the policy [Fire Ins. Exchange v. Jiminez (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 437, 441, 229 Cal. Rptr. 83 ; see California Ins. Guarantee Assn. v. Wood (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 944, 948, 266 Cal. Rptr. 250 (duty to defend is dependent on policy, not whether cause of action is valid)]. For example, a corporation's insurer had no duty under a comprehensive general liability (CGL) policy to defend a minority shareholder who sued the corporation after being ousted as president and as a corporate employee, but who remained a director after leaving the corporation's employment to work elsewhere, against a defamation counterclaim filed by the corporation and the controlling shareholder, when the plaintiff was sued as an individual and offered no evidence to support his claim that he was acting in his capacity as a director when he allegedly defamed the corporation [Lomes v. Hartford Financial Services Group, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 127, 132-135, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471] .

Although the duty to defend is limited by the nature and kind of risk assumed by the insurance policy [Gray v. Zurich Ins Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 275, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; Giddings v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 213, 218, 169 Cal. Rptr. 278] , it is broader than, as well as independent of, the duty to indemnify [Fire Ins. Exchange v. Abbott (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1029, 251 Cal. Rptr. 620] . Thus, even though the insurer ultimately might not be obliged to pay any indemnity (if the only claims proven are based on excluded conduct), it still has a duty to defend [Gray v. Zurich Ins Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 268, 271-272, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; see State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 508, 530, 88 Cal. Rptr. 246 (duty to defend is independent of ultimate question of coverage)].

If some of the allegations against the insured are covered under the policy and some are not, the insurer is ordinarily required to defend the entire action [Hogan v. Midland National Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 553, 563, 91 Cal. Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825] . However, an insurer may not be obliged to pay for all defense costs if it can demonstrate the allocability of defense costs between covered and noncovered claims [see Hogan v. Midland National Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 553, 564, 91 Cal. Rptr.153, 476 P.2d 825 (insurer, having breached duty to defend, required to produce undeniable evidence of allocability of expenses to noncovered claims before it could avoid liability for such expenses); Okada v. MGIC Indem. Corp. (9th Cir. 1986) 823 F.2d 276, 283 (when covered claims readily distinguished from noncovered claims, allocation may be made either early in case or once lawsuit against insured concluded)]. The rule that an insurer must defend an entire action if some of the allegations are potentially covered under the policy and others are not [see Hogan v. Midland National Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 553, 563-564, 91 Cal. Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825] does not apply when there is a potentially covered claim in a cross-complaint but not in the underlying action; in this case, the insurer has a duty to defend the cross-complaint from the time the insurer learned of the potentially covered claim, but no duty to defend the entire action [Westfield Ins. Co. v. TWT, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1989) 723 F. Supp. 492, 496-497 ; see California Union Ins. Co. v. Club Aquarius (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 243, 247-248, 169 Cal. Rptr. 685 (insurer excused from defending damages portion of lawsuit after determination that insured had no covered liability under policy)]. The scope of the duty to defend may also include, at least under some circumstances, a duty to appeal an adverse judgment when there are reasonable grounds to do so [see Jenkins v. Insurance Co. of North America (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1488-1492, 272 Cal. Rptr. 7] .

§ 1F.24 Insurer's Obligation to Provide Independent Counsel

[1] In General

The language of a liability policy typically reserves control of the defense to the insurer. The insurer ordinarily selects defense counsel for the insured and controls the defense, pursuant to policy terms stating that the insurer has the right and/or duty to defend claims on the insured's behalf. However, the existence of a conflict of interest between the interests of the insurer and the interests of the insured requires that the insurer relinquish control of the defense to the insured and allow the insured to select its own counsel [San Diego Navy Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 375, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494] . Such a conflict arises when an insurer reserves its rights to contest coverage, and the determination of whether coverage exists is a question of fact to be resolved in the underlying lawsuit; it is based on the presumption that a defense attorney, hired by the insurer to defend the insured, is unable to represent the divergent interests of the joint clients [San Diego Navy Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 375, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494] .

[2] Statutory Duties

[a] Insurer's Duty to Appoint Independent Counsel

The requirements set forth in [1], above, with some additional controls, have been codified in the California Civil Code [see Civ. Code § 2860]. Under the statute, if the provisions of an insurance policy impose a duty to defend on an insurer, and a conflict of interest arises that creates a duty on the part of the insurer to provide independent counsel to the insured, the insurer must provide independent counsel to represent the insured, unless the insured expressly waives the right to independent counsel [Civ. Code § 2860(a)]. Any waiver of the conflict must be in writing and in the form required by statute [Civ. Code § 2860(a)].

[b] Duty of Appointed Independent Counsel

When an insured selects independent counsel, the insured and its counsel have a duty to disclose to the insurer all information concerning the action, except privileged materials relevant to coverage disputes [Civ. Code § 2860(d)]. In addition, independent counsel must inform and consult with the insurer in a timely manner on all matters related to the action [Civ. Code § 2860(d)]. When the insured selects independent counsel, both the counsel for the insured and counsel for the insurer must be allowed to participate in all aspects of the litigation [Civ. Code § 2860(f)]. Further, counsel must cooperate fully in the exchange of information that is consistent with each counsel's ethical and legal obligations to the insured [Civ. Code § 2860(f); see Model Code of Ethical Considerations, Rules 5-14-5-17]. However, communications between the insurer's counsel and the insurance adjuster are privileged from disclosure to the insured [State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1228, 265 Cal. Rptr. 372] .

[3] Existence of Conflict of Interest

A conflict of interest does not exist as to allegations or facts in the litigation for which the insurer denies coverage [Civ. Code § 2860(b)]. No conflict of interest may be deemed to exist as to allegations of punitive damages [Civ. Code § 2860(b); Zieman Mfg. Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1983) 724 F.2d 1343, 1346] , or be deemed to exist solely because an insured is sued for an amount in excess of the insurance policy limits [Civ. Code § 2860(b); see Foremost Ins. Co. v. Wilks (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262-262, 253 Cal. Rptr. 596] .

Further, a conflict does not arise in every instance when the insurer reserves the right to contest coverage [Civ. Code § 2860(b)]. However, when an insurer reserves its right on a particular coverage issue, and the outcome of that issue can be controlled by the counsel retained by the insurer to handle the defense of the claim, a conflict of interest may exist [Civ. Code § 2860(b)]. It has been held that no conflict exists if the resolution of the coverage dispute does not depend on the determination of facts at issue in the claim against the insured [McGee v. Superior Court (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 221, 226-227, 221 Cal. Rptr. 421] . However, in other circumstances a conflict may arise because the insurer is not economically motivated to vigorously defend the insured [see Previews, Inc. v. California Union Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 640 F.2d 1026, 1028] .

For further discussion of the insurer's obligation to provide independent counsel when a conflict of interest exists, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith (Matthew Bender).

§ 1F.30 Life Insurance Defined

Life insurance is "insurance upon the lives of persons or appertaining thereto, and the granting, purchasing, or disposing of annuities" [Ins. Code § 101]. Life insurance is essentially a contract whereby the insurer, for a stipulated consideration (a premium), agrees to make a specified payment on the death of the insured person. Any person other than a public enemy may be insured [Ins. Code § 151].

§ 1F.31 Purpose of Life Insurance

The basic purpose of life insurance is to protect against the risks of premature death. However, life insurance can serve not only a protective function but, with certain types of policies, a savings function as well. In its protective function, life insurance provides funds for estate purposes, income for family members after the death of the insured, and income for special needs such as payment of a mortgage or protection of a business from loss [see § 1F.35]. In its savings function, certain life insurance products allow individuals to accumulate savings and permit the policyholder to borrow against those savings or to obtain the cash surrender value of the policy.

§ 1F.32 Basic Elements of Life Insurance

[1] In General

The three basic elements of a life insurance contract are (1) an insurable interest [see Ins. Code §§ 280-287, 10110, 10110.2]; (2) shifting of loss [see Helvering v. Le Gierse (1941) 312 U.S. 531, 539, 61 S. Ct. 646, 85 L. Ed. 996] ; and, (3) an insurable risk [California Physicians' Service v. Garrison (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 790, 803-804, 172 P.2d 4] .

[2] Insurable Interest

[a] Requirement for Valid Insurance Contract

If the insured has no insurable interest, the contract is void [Ins. Code §§ 280, 10110.1(e); see Osborne v. Security Insurance Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 201, 205, 318 P.2d 94] . An insurable interest must exist at the time the life (or disability) insurance becomes effective [Ins. Code § 10110.1(g)]. However, it is only required to exist at the time of application, not at the time the loss actually occurs [Ins. Code § 10110.1(g); see Shaw v. Board of Administration (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 770, 774, 241 P.2d 635 (beneficiary designation, if valid at contract's inception, remains valid even if insurable interest ceases, unless contract provides otherwise)].

[b] Statutory Definition

An "insurable interest," for both life and disability insurance purposes, is an interest based on a reasonable expectation of pecuniary advantage through the continued life, health, or bodily safety of another person, and consequent loss by reason of that person's death or disability, or, in the case of closely related individuals, a substantial interest engendered by love and affection [Ins. Code § 10110.1(a)]. This statutory definition, however, is not to be interpreted to define all instances in which an insurable interest exists [Ins. Code § 10110.1(i)].

With respect to life and disability insurance contracts, every person has an insurable interest in the life and health of [Ins. Code § 10110]:

- Himself or herself [see Ins. Code § 10110.1(b); Mayfield v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 611, 621, 61 P.2d 83] ;

- Any person on whom he or she depends wholly or in part for education or support [see Rudell v. Board of Administration (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 600, 602, 66 P.2d 1203 (determination of dependency is question of fact)];

- Any person under a legal obligation to him or her for the payment of money or respecting property or services, of which death or illness might delay or prevent performance [see Curtiss v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. (1891) 90 Cal. 245, 249-251, 27 P. 211 (assignee of creditor has insurable interest)]; and

- Any person upon whose life any estate or interest vested in him or her depends.

In a move to control possible abuses in the life settlement industry, legislation has been enacted to the effect that trusts and special purpose entities that are used to apply for and initiate the issuance of insurance policies for investors, when one or more beneficiaries of those trusts or entities do not have an insurable interest in the insured's life, violate the insurable interest laws and the prohibition against wagering on life [Ins. Code § 10110.1(d)]. Furthermore, any device, scheme, or artifice designed to give the appearance of an insurable interest when there is no legitimate insurable interest violates the insurable interest laws [Ins. Code § 10110.1(e)].

[c] Insurable Interest of Employer

In general, an employer has an insurable interest in the life or physical or mental ability of any of its directors, officers, or employees (or in the same class of persons of any subsidiary), or any other person whose death or physical or mental disability might cause financial loss to the employer [Ins. Code § 10110.1(c)]. An employer also has an insurable interest pursuant to specified contracts with shareholders, or relating to compensation agreements obligating the employer as guarantor or surety on the life of the principal obligor [Ins. Code § 10110.1(c)]. An employer's trustee or the trustee of a pension, welfare benefit plan, or trust established by an employer providing life, health, disability, retirement or similar benefits to employees and retired employees, and acting in a fiduciary capacity with respect to those persons and their dependents and beneficiaries, has an insurable interest in those employees and retired employees [Ins. Code § 10110.1(c)]. The employer must obtain the written consent of the individual being insured [Ins. Code § 10110.1(c); see Ins. Code § 10110.1(h) (qualified charitable organizations may ignore insurable interest requirement, if insured consents to issuance of insurance); see also Rev. & Tax Code § 214 ("qualified charity" defined)].

Effective January 1, 2004, an insurer may not issue or deliver a corporate-owned life insurance policy, other than a policy insuring the life of a current or former exempt employee [Ins. Code § 10110.4(a), (c) ("exempt employee" is administrative, executive, or professional employee who is exempt under Lab. Code § 515)]. A "corporate-owned life insurance policy" is a life insurance policy that is purchased by a California employer that designates the employer as beneficiary and insures the life of a California resident who is a current or former employee of the employer [Ins. Code § 10110.4(b)]. A corporate-owned life insurance policy purchased on or after January 1, 2004, is void [Ins. Code § 10110.4(e)(1)].

In general, it is a violation of public policy for a California employer to purchase or hold a corporate-owned life insurance policy [Ins. Code § 10110.4(d)]. Further, a corporate-owned life insurance policy purchased before January 1, 2004, ordinarily becomes void on the next premium payment date or January 1, 2009, but no later than January 1, 2010 [Ins. Code § 10110.4(e)(2)]. However, policies purchased before January 1, 2004, that insure the life of a current or former nonexempt employee continue in force, provided that no further premium payments are made after that date [Ins. Code § 10110.4(f)].

PRACTICE TIP:

If an employer purchases a policy insuring the life of a current or former nonexempt employee before January 1, 2004, and holds the policy after that date, the employer must make specified written disclosures to the employee with 90 days of that date [Ins. Code § 10110.4(f); see Ins. Code § 10110.4(g)].

[3] Shifting of Loss

Insurance involves risk shifting and risk distributing; these elements are essential to a life insurance contract [Helvering v. Le Gierse (1941) 312 U.S. 531, 539, 61 S. Ct. 646, 85 L. Ed. 996] . Insurance furnishes protection and provides an economic advantage by loss sharing: by sharing losses, the cost to each person decreases and, therefore, becomes bearable [see Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. State Board of Equalization (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 649, 654, 186 Cal. Rptr. 578, 652 P.2d 426] .

[4] Insurable Risk

The general characteristics of insurable risk are that (1) the risk must be common to large numbers of people in order to accurately predict outcomes and accurately determine rates; (2) the loss must be definite; (3) the loss to the individual must be unexpected; (4) the risk should not present exposure to catastrophic loss; (5) the loss must be serious; (6) the chance of loss must be calculable; and (7) the cost must be reasonable [California Physicians' Service v. Garrison (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 790, 803-804, 172 P.2d 4 ; see Fraser-Yamor Agency, Inc. v. County of Del Norte (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 201, 213, 137 Cal. Rptr. 118 ; *Pfeiffer v. General Ins. Corp. § 1F.33 Term Life Insurance

Term life insurance is insurance that is in effect for a specified term of years and automatically expires at the end of the term, unless renewed. Term insurance has no cash surrender value, loan value, or any value except in the event of the death of the insured during the term. It can be terminated simply by nonpayment of premiums.

Term insurance provides financial protection for a minimum premium, but only for a limited period of time. Term insurance provides only temporary protection and provides no savings feature. Moreover, if the insured survives the initial term and obtains renewals, the substantial increases in premium rates for renewals as the insured increases in age can cause the total premiums to exceed the amount the insured would have paid had he or she originally purchased a whole life policy. For discussion of the types of term insurance, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 20, Nature and Types of Life Insurance (Matthew Bender). For coverage of whole life insurance, see § 1F.34.

§ 1F.34 Whole Life Insurance

Whole life insurance provides permanent protection with an investment or savings element. It allows the insured to accumulate a savings fund, without sacrificing protection against premature death. Whole life premiums are larger than term premiums; this difference creates the cash surrender value of the policy. Whole life does not allow maximum benefit for temporary protection or protection that decreases over time. However, without paying the cost of additional whole life insurance, an insured may be able to add to a whole life policy a less expensive term insurance policy for the period during which the insured needs increased protection. For example, the insured may need increased protection before a mortgage is paid off or before the insured's children leave home. Various types of whole life policies are discussed in California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 20, Nature and Types of Life Insurance (Matthew Bender). For coverage of term life insurance, see § 1F.33.

§ 1F.35 Life Insurance for Business Purposes

[1] General Uses

Corporation and partnership life insurance are generally used to liquidate the interest of a deceased stockholder or partner, establish credit, create reserves for the business, fund arrangements for deferred compensation, pension, and/or profit sharing, and fund the payment of death benefits and salary continuance to a deceased employee's surviving spouse or heirs by the business. Life insurance for the benefit of a sole proprietor is generally used to indemnify his or her estate against loss resulting from a forced sale of the business following the owner's death, provide heirs with necessary cash to carry on the business, establish credit during the sole proprietor's lifetime, provide retirement income for the sole proprietor, and provide immediate cash for estate settlement requirements without encumbering or jeopardizing the financial status of the business. For more detailed discussion of the use of life insurance in business planning, including tax considerations, see §§ 1F.62 through 1F.66.

[2] Corporation Life Insurance

Corporation life insurance is insurance placed on the lives of stockholders of small corporations; it funds an agreement to purchase or redeem a stockholder's shares on his or her death or retirement. If the corporation as an "entity" is a party to the stock redemption agreement, it will be the owner and beneficiary of policies on the lives of its stockholders. On the death, and often on the retirement, of a stockholder, the benefits or values payable to the corporation provide the necessary surplus to allow the corporation to redeem its shares.

Alternatively, the stockholders may execute a "cross-purchase" buy-sell agreement, under which each stockholder funds his or her own agreement to purchase shares from a retiring stockholder or a deceased stockholder's estate by the purchase of an insurance policy on the life of every other stockholder. The participation of more than two or three stockholders makes the number of policies required for this type of arrangement impractical; a stock redemption agreement would be the practical solution if a greater number of shareholders are involved.

For more detailed treatment of the use of life insurance in connection with corporate buy-sell agreements, see §§ 1F.63 through 1F.65.

[3] Partnership Life Insurance

Partnership life insurance is similar to corporation life insurance: insurance is purchased by the partnership, or by the partners, on the lives of one or more of the partners. Under the "entity" arrangement, the proceeds of the policies are payable to the partnership to fund the redemption of the deceased or retiring partner's interest. They are paid to the surviving partner or partners when they are used to fund a buy-out by those partners of a deceased or retiring partner's interest in the partnership.

Partnership life insurance may also be purchased under a cross purchase agreement wherein the partners, as individuals, agree to purchase the interest of the deceased partner and to fund the agreement and agree to purchase insurance on the lives of the others. Those who purchase the policies are both the owners and beneficiaries of the policies. The precise method used may have important tax consequences that must be considered before entering into such an arrangement. For further discussion of the use of life insurance in partnership buy-sell agreements, see §§ 1F.63 and 1F.66.

This type of life insurance arrangement could also be established for the members of a limited liability company. For coverage of limited liability companies, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

§ 1F.36 Disability and Health Insurance

[1] Definition

Disability insurance is broadly defined to include insurance appertaining to injury, disablement, or death resulting to the insured from accidents, and appertaining to disablements resulting to the insured from sickness [Ins. Code § 106(a)]. "Health insurance," for statutes that became effective on or after January 1, 2002, means an individual or group disability insurance policy that provides coverage for hospital, medical, and surgical benefits. However, the term excludes specific types of insurance, such as accidental death and accidental death and dismemberment policies, disability insurance (including hospital indemnity, accident only, and specified disease insurance that pays benefits on a fixed benefit, cash payment only basis), and insurance arising out of worker's compensation or similar law [Ins. Code § 106(b)]."Specialized health insurance policy," in statutes that became effective on or after January 1, 2008, means a policy of health insurance for covered benefits in a single specialized area of health care, including dental-only, vision-only, and behavioral health-only policies [Ins. Code § 106(c)]. The term "policy of accident and sickness insurance" is defined only by reference to the general definition of disability insurance [Ins. Code § 10275]. Thus, in California, a disability policy is essentially synonymous with a policy of accident and sickness insurance [see Ins. Bull. 72-15]. The Insurance Code also uses the term "accident and health policies," but without a separate definition; it appears that this term is simply an alternative phrase for "accident and sickness policies" [see, e.g., Ins. Code § 10276].

[2] Classification of Disability Insurance by Types of Benefits

In addition to classifying disability polices based on the statutory definition of disability insurance [see Ins. Code §§ 779.2(2) (credit disability insurance), 10270.1 (tuition refund insurance), 10270.2 (blanket disability insurance), 10270.5, 10270.505, 10270.57, 10270.63 (group disability insurance), 10270.7 (family expense disability insurance), 10270.97 (selected group disability insurance), 10295 (transportation ticket insurance)], disability polices can also be distinguished based on the types of benefits offered, or the types of hazards covered, in the event of the insured's injury or sickness. Two of the statutory types of disability insurance are based on this type of distinction: credit disability insurance pays benefits based on the indebtedness of the insured, and tuition disability insurance pays benefits based on forfeited tuition and fees.

The most common type of disability benefit is a medical or health policy that provides indemnification based on the insured's medical costs in the event of an accident or sickness. The exact nature of the medical coverage is subject to considerable variation and ranges from coverage for a particular dread disease [see Ins. Code § 10291.5(b)(11)] to comprehensive hospitalization and physician coverage [see Ins. Code § 10176]. Medical coverage may also be limited to benefits provided by one type of medical practitioner, such as a dental care policy [see Ins. Code § 10176], or provide special limited benefits, such as a medicare supplement policy [see Ins. Code § 10192.1 et. seq.]. Disability policies may also provide benefits based on the insured's loss of earnings during his or her disability [see § 1F.68[1]]. Accidental death and dismemberment insurance is a common form of disability policy providing lump sum payments in the event of accidental death or certain dismemberments [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2220.12-2220.14].

For detailed discussion of types of disability coverage, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 25, Nature and Types of Disability Insurance , and Ch. 31, Credit Life and Disability Insurance (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the health and disability insurance contract and an analysis of disability policies, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 26, The Health and Disability Insurance Contract (Matthew Bender). Health insurance as an employee benefit is covered in Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits .

§ 1F.50 Property and Liability Insurance--In General

[1] Distinguished

By its policy, the property insurer promises to pay the value of the loss incurred by the insured in the event that a certain type of loss occurs within a specified period. By its policy, the liability insurer promises to pay, on the insured's behalf, any damages (within the policy limits) that may be legally assessed against the insured and promises to provide the insured with a defense against suits seeking damages resulting from actual or potential liability within the scope of policy coverage. Liability insurance provides indemnity for liability for damages to the person or property of others; property insurance provides for the indemnification of an insured for property damaged or destroyed to the extent of the insured's insurable interest. In liability insurance, the essence of the contract is that the event insured against will not happen; in property insurance, the contract provides indemnity for the consequences of the event if it should happen [Gribaldo, Jacobs, Jones & Associates v. Agrippina Versicherunges A.G. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 434, 446, 91 Cal. Rptr. 6, 476 P.2d 406] .

[2] Governing Law

In general, property and liability insurance polices are covered by the Insurance Code in general and the consumer protection provisions of Proposition 103 [Ins. Code §§ 1861.01-1861.14], including the prohibition against excessive, inadequate, or unfairly discriminatory rates [see Ins. Code § 1861.05(a)], and the requirement of prior approval of rate changes [see Ins. Code §§ 1861.01(c), 1861.05(b)].

§ 1F.51 Property Insurance

[1] Personal and Commercial Lines Distinguished

In addition to personal property insurance, commercial policies are available that can protect against loss of rental value, business interruption, extra expense, builder's risk, damage to boilers and machinery, damage to crops, bailee's risks, and default by mortgages [see Ins. Code §§ 111-120]. Business interruption insurance is discussed in Section 1F.68.

[2] Open and Valued Policies Distinguished

A property insurance policy may be either open or valued. An open policy is one in which the value of the property to be insured is not agreed on, but is left to be ascertained in case of loss [Ins. Code § 411]. A valued policy is a policy that expresses on its face an agreement that the thing insured is valued at a specific sum [Ins. Code § 412]. Most property insurance polices are open; the extent of the insurer's liability is subject to appraisal after a loss has occurred. Fire and automobile policies, for example, provide for a means of determining the damage to the insured's house or car after the loss. A valued policy is sometimes available for theft coverage when the value of the property can be determined with certainty before the loss.

[3] Subject Matter of Property Insurance

[a] In General

If there is an insurable interest [see Ins. Code § 281 ("insurable interest" defined)], the loss or damage to any property may be insured against, except where prohibited by public policy [see Faris v. American Nat. Assur. Co. (1919) 44 Cal. App. 48, 54-55, 185 P. 1035] . A property insurance contract of indemnity indemnifies the insured for the actual loss or damage arising from a contingent or unknown event [see Vyn v. Northwest Casualty Co. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 89, 94, 301 P.2d 869 (insuring loss for event known to both insurer and insured is void)]. Before indemnification will be made, an actual loss must be suffered.

Property subject to a policy of insurance need not be in existence at the time a contract of insurance is entered into. For example, a building to be constructed, a merchant's inventory to be delivered in the future, or crops to be harvested at a future date may all be subjects of contracts of insurance. An insurable interest in property may consist of an inchoate interest founded on an existing interest, or an expectancy coupled with an existing interest in which the expectancy arises [Ins. Code § 282]. Intangibles, such as lost rental income, profits from crops that have been damaged or destroyed, and anticipated profits from construction of a building may be subject to insurance [see Ins. Code § 282].

[b] Specific Categories of Property

[i] Real Property

Fire is the primary risk to buildings and other real property; accordingly, insurance on real property typically focuses on fire coverage. In addition to fire, however, most policies insure against the risk of loss from phenomena such as windstorms, lightning, aircraft, riots, explosion, and smoke [see Ins. Code § 2071 (California Standard Form Fire Insurance Policy)]. Earthquake and flood insurance are automatically excluded, and must be purchased separately. Currently, earthquake and flood insurance are expensive and difficult to obtain.

[ii] Boiler and Machinery

Boiler and machinery insurance includes insurance against loss of property or damage from explosions of or related to boilers, tanks, pipes, pressure vessels, and apparatus connected to or operated by them [Ins. Code § 111].

[iii] Automobile

Automobile insurance constitutes the largest volume of insurance covering a particular risk. Some type of automobile insurance (or a bond) must be carried by every new business that uses automobiles, because since 1975, California drivers have been required to carry insurance or maintain some form of financial responsibility to protect others from their possible negligence [Veh. Code § 16020(a)]. Automobile insurance is discussed in detail in California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 50, Automobile Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[iv] Marine

Marine insurance includes loss or damage to vessels and craft, aircraft, automobiles, and vehicles of any kind, as well as goods, freights, cargos, merchandise, effects, disbursements, profits, holdings, securities, choses in action, evidence of debt, valuable papers, which loss or damage results from any risks of perils of navigation, transit, or transportation, while being assembled, packed, or prepared for shipment [see Ins. Code § 103(a)]. "Inland marine" insurance affords coverage for transportation as well as cargo [see Ins. Code § 103(a); see also Ins. Code § 1851(c) (inland marine insurance defined for rating purposes)]. Insurance against loss of or damage to precious stones, jewels, jewelry, gold, silver, and other precious gems and metals, whether used in business, trade, or otherwise, and whether in the course of transportation or otherwise, is included in the statutory definition of marine insurance [see Ins. Code § 103(c)]. Marine insurance policies should be obtained, as appropriate, by any new business. For detailed discussion of kinds of marine insurance and the substantive law applicable to such insurance, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 44, Marine Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[v] Aircraft

Aircraft property damage policies are generally known as "hull policies." Aircraft property insurance is a specialized line because of the high exposure; the larger airlines are generally covered by pools of insurers. For discussion of hull policies and related matters, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 45, Aviation Insurance

(Matthew Bender).

§ 1F.52 Liability Insurance

[1] Types of Liability Insurance--In General

By industry practice, liability contracts fall within three major categories: employer's liability and workers' compensation, automobile liability, and public liability [see Ins. Code § 108 (types of liability insurance defined)]. Workers' compensation insurance, as it relates to planning for a new business, is discussed in Section 1F.70. Automobile insurance is discussed in detail in California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 50, Automobile Insurance (Matthew Bender). Public liability insurance (also called "general liability" insurance) includes all forms of liability insurance except employer's liability or workers' compensation or automobile insurance. Public liability insurance is further classified according to the nature of the activity creating liability into three categories: personal liability insurance to protect the insured against financial losses that arise from personal, nonbusiness acts; commercial liability insurance; and, professional liability insurance.

[2] Forms of Commercial Liability Insurance Policies

[a] Individual Policies

Individual policies may be issued in the following forms: Premises and Operations policies, Completed Operations and Product Liability policies, Contractual (designated contracts) policies, Owner's and Contractor's Protective Liability policies, and Storekeeper's Liability policies. These policies are designed to afford coverage for liability arising out of the business premises and most of the business operations of the insured.

[b] Business General Liability Policies

The Business General Liability policy (formerly known as the Comprehensive General Liability or Commercial General Liability (CGL) policy) [see California Insurance Law and Practice, vol. 3, Ch. 49, Business General Liability Policies

, § 49.01 n.1 (Matthew Bender)] combines protection for five hazards that were previously covered only by separate policies. These are hazards related to or arising out of premises and operations, elevators, owner's and contractor's protective liability (acts and omissions with respect to supervising independent contractors), completed operations, and product liability.

Virtually every business that is conducted out of physical premises will want to obtain a business general liability policy before beginning operations. For detailed coverage of these types of policies, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 49, Business General Liability Policies (Matthew Bender).

[c] Package Policies

A third type of business liability coverage is available in the form of "package" policies or "multiple line contracts." A "package policy" combines two or more basic forms of insurance coverage in a single insurance contract. A "multiple line contract" is a single policy that includes coverage from traditional fire and casualty lines. In the liability insurance context, the two terms are synonymous. A business that acquires a package policy can obtain insurance protection for its commercial property as well as its liability exposure.

[3] Professional Liability Insurance

For liability insurance purposes, a "professional" is a person who possesses the special knowledge or skill necessary to render a professional service. Professionals are required, first, to exercise reasonable care in what they do and, second, to possess a minimum standard of knowledge and ability [Prosser & Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1971) § 32]. A professional who lacks requisite skill and learning, or who does not perform his or her services in accordance with appropriate standards of conduct, may be subject to tort liability [see Northern Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 541, 544, 154 Cal. Rptr. 198] . Persons who face exposure for potential professional tort liability include, among others, architects, accountants, attorneys, engineers, insurance agents, medical personnel, notaries public, and real estate brokers.

Because basic liability insurance policies do not provide coverage for claims based on acts or omissions arising from the rendition of personal services, professional liability policies may be an important part of a professional's insurance program. For further discussion of professional liability coverage, refer to Section 1F.69.

[4] Protection Against Attorney's Fees and Related Costs

Whether or not liability is ultimately imposed on an insured, the insured may find it necessary to pay attorney's fees and costs related to a particular claim or suit. Most liability insurance policies afford protection against these losses as well as against the ultimate imposition of legal liability.

§ 1F.60 General Insurance Considerations in Business Planning

In most cases, a new business should obtain insurance to cover anticipated contingencies, to protect the individual participants of the business from personal liability, and to protect the business's assets and any retained earnings. Appropriate coverage depends on the nature of the business and its available capital and may include general liability policies, including fire, theft, casualty and auto insurance [see § 1F.52 [2]], director and officer insurance [see § 1F.61], key personnel life and disability insurance [see § 1F.62], insurance to fund a business buy-sell agreement [see § 1F.63], business interruption insurance [see § 1F.68], and workers' compensation insurance [see § 1F.70]. For professionals, malpractice insurance may be important [see § 1F.69].

For discussion of insurance coverage, including health, group life, disability insurance, and various kinds of pension plans, as part of an employee benefits package, refer to Chapter 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits.

§ 1F.61 Directors and Officers Insurance

[1] Governing Law

In general, directors and officers liability insurance policies are covered by the Insurance Code in general and the consumer protection provisions of Proposition 103 [Ins. Code §§ 1861.01-1861.14], including the requirement for prior approval of rate changes [see Ins. Code §§ 1861.01(c), 1861.05(b)]. For further discussion of the insurance code provisions pertaining to insurer operations, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 1, Chapter 4, Insurance Carrier Operations (Matthew Bender).

[2] Authority of Corporations to Procure Coverage; Power of Corporation to Limit Liability Corporations have the power to purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of any agent of the corporation against any liability asserted against or incurred by the agent in that capacity, regardless of whether the corporation would otherwise have the power to indemnify the agent against that liability under Corporation Code Section 317 (which generally specifies the circumstances under which a corporation may or must indemnify its agent) [Corp. Code § 317(i)]. This type of insurance coverage could apply to directors and officers, employees, and other agents.

Concomitantly, the corporation may provide in its articles of incorporation for indemnification of its agents, for breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders, in an amount in excess of that specifically permitted by Corporation Code Section 317 [Corp. Code § 204(a)(11)]. This right, however, is subject to a number of important exceptions [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(10)]. A complete discussion of the liability of corporate directors, the extent of permissible indemnity, and the limitation of directors' liability in the articles of incorporation is beyond the scope of this chapter. For detailed treatment of these subjects, refer to Ballantine Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Volume 1, Chapters 3, Formation of Corporations , and 6, Management: Duties and Liabilities of Directors and Controlling Shareholders.

[3] Availability of Insurance Coverage

Recently, the cost of directors and officers insurance has increased as its availability has decreased. The amendment of the Corporations Code to permit a corporation to limit the personal liability of directors for monetary damages in derivative actions and to expand its ability to indemnify them [see Corp. Code §§ 204, 204.5, 309(c); see also [2], above] should lessen the potential exposure of the corporation and its directors to shareholders claims and reduce the insurance coverage required to adequately protect directors. However, insurance is still needed in circumstances where indemnification is unavailable, either legally [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(10)] or because a corporation is unable (for example, because the corporation is insolvent) or unwilling to indemnify its directors and officers.

The need for insurance has led corporations that cannot obtain or afford directors and officers insurance to self-insure. Self-insurance programs, in which a corporation owns all or a portion of the shares of the company issuing the insurance, are permitted if those self-insurance programs are either limited to providing indemnification to the extent otherwise permitted [see Corp. Code § 317(i)(1)] or are designed to assure that the claims processing will not be subject to the direct control of the corporation purchasing the policy and are subject to some manner of risk sharing between the issuer and purchaser of the policy and some unaffiliated person or persons [see Corp. Code § 317(i)(2)].

[4] Forms of Coverage

[a] In General

There are two basic forms of insurance coverage for the acts of officers and directors. The first, referred to as "directors and officers liability," directly insures the director or officer for a loss caused by his or her wrongful acts or omissions. The second, referred to as "corporate reimbursement" or "corporate indemnification," provides coverage to the corporation if the corporation has entered into agreements to indemnify its officers or directors for its negligent acts. Although these two coverages may be written separately, it is not unusual for them to be combined into a single policy. Other forms of specialized coverage are also available, including, for example, coverage for directors who serve on boards of condominium associations or nonprofit organizations.

[b] Directors and Officers Liability Coverage

A typical policy providing director and officer liability coverage insures every person who is, was, or may, in the future, be a director or officer of the corporation from all loss arising from any claim during the policy period for which the director or officer is legally obliged to pay by reason of a wrongful act. "Wrongful act" is commonly defined to mean any breach of duty, neglect, actual or alleged error, misstatement, or misleading statement by directors or officers in the discharge of their duties solely in their capacity as directors or officers.

Under California law, the "business judgment rule" provides that when a director acts in good faith and reasonably believes that his or her actions are in the best interests of the corporation, liability will not be imposed, even though the director's failure to act may have resulted in financial loss to the corporation [Corp. Code § 309; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184] . For example, this rule has been held to immunize the directors of a federally insured national bank from liability for purely negligent acts [see FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046 (nonofficer directors entitled to rely on company employees and advisors without duty of further inquiry, absent special circumstances)]. However, liability will be imposed for failure to exercise the proper care, skill, and diligence in the management of the corporation's affairs, as opposed to mere mistakes and errors in judgment [see Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 852, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392] .

In performing his or her duties, a director is entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, and statements prepared by officers, employees, counsel, independent accountants, or committees of the board of directors on which the director does not serve, provided that the director believes the persons to be reliable and competent [Corp. Code § 309(b)(1)]. For additional discussion of the business judgment rule and the grounds for liability of corporate directors and officers, refer to Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 6, Management: Duties and Liabilities of Directors and Controlling Shareholders , and Ch. 14, Litigation Involving Corporations and Shareholders (Matthew Bender).

For further coverage of directors and officers insurance, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 43, Directors and Officers Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Corporate Reimbursement Coverage

In order to attract capable outside directors, corporations frequently agree to indemnify their directors for any loss they may incur as a result of their negligence. Corporate reimbursement coverage (also known as corporate indemnification coverage) protects the corporation if it has entered into an agreement to indemnify its directors and officers for their wrongful acts.

[5] Coverage Under Other Insurance Policies

Typically, the general liability policies of the corporation or of the individual officer or director do not cover the indemnification of an officer or director, although the terms of individual insurance policies vary and each must be examined to determine what acts are covered. Similarly, an individual's homeowner's policy will not provide reimbursement for losses suffered by an individual acting in the capacity of an officer or director. For discussion of general liability policies, see § 1F.52.

[6] Only "Claims Made" Coverage Available

All directors and officers policies are written on a "claims made" basis, which provides coverage for those claims reported to the insurer during the policy period. If a claim is not made until after the policy period has expired, the insurer has no liability [Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 835, 846, 140 Cal. Rptr. 493] . Thus, a claims made policy usually covers liabilities based on errors and omissions taking place prior to the policy period. The outmoded "occurrence" policy provided coverage for acts or omissions that took place during the policy period, regardless of when the claim was made [VTN Consolidated, Inc. v. Northbrook Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 888, 891, 155 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 835, 845 n.5, 140 Cal. Rptr. 493] . Because coverage on a "claims made" basis is determined by the period in which the claim is presented rather than when the alleged wrongful act occurred, it is important for directors and officers to arrange for "tail coverage" (coverage after the director or officer leaves the corporation) or extended coverage [see [7], below].

[7] Extended Coverage

Directors and officers insurance policies often contain provisions for extended coverage (generally no longer than 12 months) in the event that the insurer cancels or refuses to renew the policy. It has been held that renewal terms may be so burdensome as to constitute a de facto refusal to renew [Kemmerer Eng. Co. v. Continental Cas. Co (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 188, 190, 61 Cal. Rptr. 94] . In an attempt to limit this result, some policies provide that an offer of renewal on different terms from those contained in the expired policy will not constitute nonrenewal.

§ 1F.62 Key Employee Life and Disability Insurance

[1] In General

Key employee insurance is insurance on the life of the owner of a business or on the life of an employee who performs a crucial role in the employer's business. The insurance is purchased and owned by the business; its purpose is to compensate the business for the loss created by the death of the owner or a key employee. Examples of this type of loss include payment to an executive search firm to find a replacement or cash flow problems during the time it takes for the business to reestablish its goodwill. It is usually obtained for corporate officers, top sales representatives, or any person on whom the business is clearly dependent for its success [Boldemann Chocolate Co. v. Price (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 200, 202, 53 P.2d 946 ; Penn Mut. Life Insurance Co. v. Bank of America etc. Assn. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 288, 297, 54 P.2d 453] . The purchase of this type of insurance is regarded as a proper use of corporate funds, no less important than insuring the buildings, machinery, and automobiles belonging to the business [Emeloid Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (3d Cir. 1951) 189 F.2d 230, 233] .

[2] Tax Considerations

[a] Taxation of Premiums

[i] Deduction by Employer

As a general rule, a business cannot deduct the payment of life insurance premiums for federal income tax purposes (despite the fact they would otherwise be deductible as trade or business expenses) if the business is, directly or indirectly, a beneficiary of the life insurance policy [I.R.C. § 264(a)(1); see Treas. Reg. § 1.264-1(a)]. Ordinarily, the employer (or owner, if a sole proprietorship) is both the owner and the beneficiary of an insurance policy on the life of a key employee; therefore, no deduction is allowed for premium payments [see I.R.C. § 264(a)(1)]. Further, premiums may not be deducted when the payor is an indirect beneficiary, even if the payor is not the named beneficiary [I.R.C. § 264(a)(1); Rev. Rul. 70-148, 1970-1 C.B. 60], nor may they be deducted when the payor has a contractual right to assign the policy, an exclusive right to surrender the policy, or a right to change the beneficiary [Brock v. Commissioner (1982) 44 T.C.M. 128, 143, T.C. Memo. 1982-335] .

[ii] Taxable to Key Employee

Whether or not the premiums are taxable dividends to the key employee depends on the extent of the economic benefit to that employee [see Casale v. Commissioner (2d Cir. 1957) 247 F.2d 440, 442 (holding that premiums were not taxable dividends to employee, despite fact that policy, at maturity, was to provide annuity to employee, when corporation was both owner and beneficiary of policy and policy was treated as corporate asset, reachable by creditors)].

[b] Taxation of Policy Proceeds

Life insurance policy proceeds, if paid by reason of the insured's death, are excluded from the gross income of the recipient [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.101-1(a); United States v. Supplee-Biddle Hardware Co. (1924) 265 U.S. 189, 194, 44 S. Ct. 546, 68 L. Ed. 970] . The exclusion from gross income applies whether payment is made to the estate of the insured or is made to any beneficiary, whether an individual, a corporation, or a partnership; the exclusion applies whether the payment is made directly to the beneficiary or in trust [Rev. Rul. 71-79, 1971-1 C.B. 112].

If payment is made to the business entity as beneficiary and, pursuant to a contractual agreement, the business entity then pays all or part of the proceeds to a further recipient (the insured's spouse, for example), the proceeds remain tax free to the business entity [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)] but will probably be taxable to the ultimate recipient as a dividend [Rev. Rul. 71-79, 1971-1 C.B. 112] or as compensation [Essenfeld v. C.I.R. (2d Cir. 1962) 311 F.2d 208, 209] .

[c] Alternative Minimum Tax Considerations for C Corporations

Receipt of life insurance proceeds may subject the corporation to the alternative minimum tax (AMT) [I.R.C. § 55]. Therefore, tax planning should be done with this risk in mind. The AMT for corporations is similar to the AMT for individuals. Nevertheless, although the corporate rate is less than those applicable to individuals, many income adjustments that apply solely to corporations may increase their alternative minimum tax [see I.R.C. §§ 55(b), 56(c), (g); see also I.R.C. § 56(g)(6) (adjustments inapplicable to specified entities, e.g., S corporations)]. The tax is imposed on the amount by which the alternative minimum taxable income [I.R.C. § 55(b)(2)] exceeds the exemption amount, reduced by the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit [I.R.C. § 55(b)(1)]. However, small corporations are exempt from the alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 55(e)]. For further discussion of the alternative minimum tax, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses ; see also California Small Business Guide, Ch. 1, Factors in Selecting the Proper Business Entity , Ch. 2, Preincorporation Tax Considerations , and Ch. 22, California Tax Reporting and Payment Requirements (Matthew Bender).

[d] Taxation of Accidental Death or Disability Feature

Key employee life insurance frequently contains an accidental death or disability feature. The proceeds of the accidental death benefit will be tax free [I.R.C. § 101]. The amounts paid for premiums for the disability feature will, consequently, not be deductible by the business entity because they are expenses related to the generation of tax-exempt income [see I.R.C. § 265(a); Rev. Rul. 66-262, 1966-2 C.B. 105].

§ 1F.63 Life Insurance Funded Buy-Sell Agreement

[1] Types of Buy-Sell Agreements

There are two principal types of business buy-sell agreements. The first type is the stock or partnership interest redemption or "entity-purchase" plan. Under this type of plan, a corporation redeems or purchases a shareholder's stock on the death of the shareholder, and a partnership redeems or purchases the partnership interest on the death of a partner. The second type is the stock or partnership interest purchase agreement or "cross purchase" plan. Under this type of plan, the decedent's stock or partnership interest is purchased directly from the decedent's estate by the surviving shareholders or partners in proportion to their existing ownership interests. Either of these types of plans could also be used by a limited liability company.

For discussion of the contents of a stock redemption agreement and a stock purchase agreement, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 4, Chapter 70, Insurance Considerations in Business Planning (Matthew Bender). For detailed discussion of the provisions in corporate buy-sell agreements, refer to Cavitch, Business Organizations, Volume 7, Chapter 148, Stock Buy-Out Agreements (Matthew Bender).

If life insurance is used to fund a cross-purchase agreement, each shareholder or partner must obtain a life insurance policy on the life of every other shareholder or partner in an amount sufficient to fund his or her proportionate obligation to purchase the shares or interests from the decedent's estate. When there are more than a few shareholders or partners, this type of agreement is not advisable because it requires having numerous insurance policies, because of the increased administrative costs related to the policies themselves, and because of the increased complexity and legal cost of an insurance-funded cross-purchase.

[2] Advantages of Buy-Sell Agreements

A life insurance buy-sell agreement offers a number of advantages to a business. Life insurance can ensure the continuity of the business by providing the funding for the transfer of management and allowing the principals to select, in advance, the purchaser of their business interests. This is particularly important when the proprietors of a family business or a closely held corporation have invested their working lives and, likely, their personal assets in the venture. Buying out a deceased owner with life insurance proceeds further allows the business to fund a buyout without depleting the business's capital, requiring the sale of business assets, or forcing the business to borrow to fund the buyout when its credit is needed for business operations.

Assuring the continuity of management may also provide present credit advantages and a sense of security to key employees. Additionally, life insurance may enable a key employee to purchase the business from the sole owner's estate, if, for example, the employee obtains a life insurance policy on the owner's life and uses the proceeds to buy the business. Such an arrangement may benefit both the employee, who is able to purchase a business in which he or she is already involved, and the owner's estate and its beneficiaries, since a business owned by one person,whether or not incorporated, is often difficult to sell. A complete discussion of this type of arrangement is beyond the scope of this chapter. For a discussion of estate planning considerations in the use of life insurance, refer to Volume 11, Chapter 60, Estate Planning.

[3] Cost of Insurance

The cost of using life insurance to fund a buy-sell agreement must be compared with the cost of borrowing money or using the business's own capital. There are many assumptions to be made in this comparison, including the future value of the business, its future need for capital, future interest rates, and the length of life of the insureds. The uninsurability of any of the owners of the business or the increased cost of insuring an owner with medical problems may rule out funding a buy-sell agreement with life insurance. In either case, alternate insurance possibilities [see [4], below], as well as other funding methods, should be considered.

[4] Alternate Insurance Possibilities

Alternate insurance possibilities include the use of "guaranteed issue" life insurance, which may obtained without regard to the insured's health, group life insurance that includes "guaranteed issue" insurance, or the transfer of the policy owner's personal life insurance policy to the business to fund the buy-sell agreement. However, each alternative has a possible disadvantage to consider.

With "guarantee issue" insurance, the coverage is often limited. With group life insurance, to cover an otherwise uninsurable partner or shareholder may require insuring all employees for a large amount or risk failing to meet the Internal Revenue Service's antidiscrimination tests to qualify as group insurance [see I.R.C. § 79(d)]. Finally, an uninsurable person may be unwilling to transfer a personally-owned policy to the business and, if such a sale or transfer does occur, the policy should not be transfered or sold to a corporation without careful consideration of the transfer-for-value tax rule [see I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)(B)].

[5] Adequate Amount and Appropriate Life Insurance Product for Funding

[a] Amount

The simplest way to assure adequate liquid capital to finance the purchase of a business interest under a buy-sell agreement is to obtain life insurance in an amount equal to the value of the interest to be redeemed or purchased. For discussion of valuation methods, refer to Volume 3, Chapter 8, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements.

[b] Type of Life Insurance Product

Many types of life insurance products may be used to fund the agreement. The correct vehicle for funding a buy-sell agreement should be selected in consultation with a life insurance agent. The type chosen will depend primarily on the length of time a buy-sell agreement is to be in effect and the cost of premiums. For example, if the existence of the business is deemed perpetual, the cost of maintaining term insurance on older individuals may not be cost effective, if not actually prohibitive. Permanent insurance, also referred to as whole life, straight life, ordinary life, universal life, or executive protection, provides a level premium, with increasing cash surrender values.

All permanent insurance has a buildup of cash value; term insurance has no cash value or equity buildup. Because of the cash buildup in permanent insurance, its premiums can be substantially reduced after a specified period, possibly to the point where the permanent insurance will be less expensive than term insurance in the later years of the policy. In addition, permanent insurance has special features, such as the cash equity buildup mentioned above, tax-free cash borrowing (under most circumstances), with favorable interest rates, the ability to cash in the policy if the business is in serious need, and may include an option to convert the equity portion of the policy to an annuity. For further discussion of the features of term and permanent insurance, refer to Sections 1F.33 and 1F.34.

[6] Importance of Funding Agreement Through Purchase of Insurance

Regardless of the type of buy-sell agreement chosen or the product selected for funding, the attorney should ensure the client does, in fact, purchase the insurance. The most frequent flaw found in businesses with buy-sell agreements is the lack of insurance coverage to fund the buy-out. Failure to take the time to establish that the client has actually funded the agreement may subject the client to the worst of both worlds: a mandatory buy-out with a contractually-obliged buyer and seller at a crucial juncture in the life of the business, with no funds available to carry out the agreement.

§ 1F.64 Taxation of Corporate Buy-Sell Agreements Funded by Life Insurance

[1] Taxation of Premiums

A corporation may not deduct the payment of insurance premiums for federal income tax purposes if the corporation is, directly or indirectly, a beneficiary of the life insurance policy [I.R.C. § 264(a)(1)]. A policy used to fund a corporate buy-sell agreement is considered to be for the corporation's benefit because the proceeds are used to acquire a capital asset, the corporation's stock [Rev. Rul. 70-117, 1970-1 C.B. 30]. Premiums paid by the corporation are not taxed to the shareholders, unless the shareholders own the policy [Rev. Rul. 59-184, 1959-1 C.B. 65 ; Paramount-Richards Theatres, Inc. v. Commissioner (5th Cir. 1946) 153 F.2d 602] . In that case, the premiums are treated as a dividend distribution to the shareholder and are taxable as ordinary income [Rev. Rul. 59-184, 1959-1 C.B. 65].

[2] Taxation of Policy Proceeds

A corporation is generally not taxed on insurance proceeds it receives on the death of a shareholder [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)]; this is true whether the proceeds are paid to the corporation, which then purchases the decedent's shares, or the proceeds are paid directly to the shareholder's estate to satisfy the corporation's obligation to purchase the decedent' shares [Mushro v. Commissioner (1968) 50 T.C. 43 , nonacq. 1970-2 C.B. xxii]. However, caution should be exercised because the Commissioner has not acquiesced to Mushro; the better plan is to have the proceeds under a corporate buy-sell agreement paid directly to the owner of policy, rather than to the insured's estate. Life insurance proceeds received by the corporation may be subject to the corporate alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 55; see § 1F.62[2][c]]. The increased value of the shareholders' shares resulting from the corporation's purchase of the decedent's shares is not taxed to the surviving shareholders as a constructive dividend so long as the corporation is not satisfying the obligation of the shareholders to purchase the shares from the decedent's estate [Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C.B. 920].

[3] Accumulated Earnings Tax

Life insurance may subject the corporation to the accumulated earnings tax. The accumulated earnings tax is a penalty tax imposed on corporations that accumulate earnings above their reasonable business need for the purpose of avoiding the income tax that would be imposed on shareholders if the earning were distributed as dividends [see I.R.C. § 531].

Although many practitioners believe that life insurance ownership will seldom present an accumulated earnings problem, a corporation that owns life insurance policies with large cash surrender values should keep this risk in mind in its tax planning [see Lamark Shipping Agency, Inc., v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1981-284 (accumulating funds to buy out corporate shareholder justifiable as furthering corporate purpose in appropriate circumstances); Mountain State Steel Foundries, Inc. v. Commissioner (4th Cir. 1960) 284 F.2d 737 (life insurance funds justifiable if buy-sell agreement necessary to avoid shareholder disputes); but see Pelton Steel Casting v. Commissioner (7th Cir. 1958) 251 F.2d 278 (corporation improperly accumulated earnings to redeem 80 percent ofshares to prevent sale to outsider); Boshwit Bros., T.C. Memo 1982-156 (reasonable business need to redeem majority shareholder's interest to continue family ownership not established absent formal, written redemption plan); Cadillac Textiles, Inc., T.C. Memo 1975-46 (reasonable business need not established absent specific, definite, feasible plan for redemption)]. For further discussion of the corporate accumulated earnings tax, refer to Chapters 1E, Taxation of Businesses, and 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity. For detailed discussion of this subject, refer to Mertens & Paul, The Law of Federal Income Taxation, Volume 10, Chapter 39, Accumulated Earnings Tax (revised ed. 1989).

[4] Estate Taxation of Policy Proceeds

[a] In General

Life insurance proceeds are not includable in the decedent's estate, regardless of whether the proceeds are paid to the corporation or to the decedent's estate, if they are paid under a bona fide stock purchase agreement [I.R.C. § 2042; Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(6)]. The stock's value is includable in the decedent's gross estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2031; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(h)]. However, if the decedent possesses "incidents of ownership" in the insurance policy, the policy proceeds are included in the decedent's gross estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2042(2); see [b], below]. Caution should be exercised to avoid double taxation of the insurance proceeds (that is, the inclusion of both the full value of the stock and the insurance proceeds in the decedent's gross estate) by ensuring that a shareholder does not have any incidents of ownership in an insurance policy held by the corporation on the shareholder's life [see I.R.C. § 2042(2)].

[b] Incidents of Ownership

Incidents of ownership can include the power to change beneficiaries, to assign the policy or to revoke an assignment, to surrender or to cancel the policy, or to borrow against the policy [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(2); Chase National Bank v. United States (1929) 278 U.S. 327, 334-338, 49 S. Ct. 126, 73 L. Ed. 405 ; Estate of Riefberg v. Comm., T.C. Memo 1982-70] . A controlling shareholder possesses incidents of ownership if he or she has the ability to control an insurance policy owned by a corporation [I.R.C. § 2042; Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)]. In this case, a controlling shareholder's incidents of ownership result in both the stock's value and the insurance proceeds being included in his or her gross estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. §§ 2031, 2042]. However, if the corporation is the beneficiary of any portion of the proceeds on the life of the controlling shareholder, that portion of the proceeds will not be included in the decedent's gross estate [see I.R.C. § 2042], but will be a factor in valuing the shares for estate tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(6); see I.R.C. § 2031]. The proceeds, however, must be payable to the corporation or to a third party for a valid corporate purpose; this regulation does not apply if the proceeds are payable to the decedent's estate or to a trustee [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(6)].

The Internal Revenue Service has argued that when insurance policy proceeds are payable to the deceased shareholder's estate to purchase the decedent's shares or when the shareholder possesses incidents of ownership in the policy, both the insurance proceeds and the value of the shares must be included in the decedent's gross estate for estate tax purposes. However, the Tax Court has rejected this position if the insurance proceeds must be credited against the shares' purchase price under the buy-sell agreement [Tompkins v. Commissioner (1949) 13 T.C. 1054 , acq., 1950-1 C.B. 5].

[c] Valuation of Shares

The risk of double taxation of insurance proceeds also exists if the buy-sell agreement does not set a value on the shares that will be accepted by the Internal Revenue Service for estate tax purposes. In this case, the estate may be subject to a higher estate tax valuation than the amount actually paid for the shares [see I.R.C. § 2703]. This problem may be avoided by ensuring that the value of shares set by the buy-sell agreement will be accepted by the Internal Revenue Service for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2703(b); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2031-2, 20.231-3, 25.2703-1 (requirements)]. A detailed discussion of valuation methods for buy-sell agreements is outside the scope of this chapter. For further discussion, refer to Volume 3, Chapter 8, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements.

§ 1F.65 Taxation of Shareholder Cross-Purchase Agreement Funded by Life Insurance

[1] Taxation of Premiums

The premiums on life insurance policies funding a shareholder cross-purchase agreement (ordinarily paid by the shareholders who own the policies) are not deductible for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 264(a)]. If the corporation pays the premiums on the life insurance, the payments are dividends to the shareholder who owns the policy and, as such, are taxable to the shareholder and not deductible by the corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 61(a)(7), 301, 316; Young v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1995-379 ; Lynch v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1983-173] . Split dollar insurance, in which the corporation pays a portion of the premium and the shareholder pays the remainder, is an option to consider to reduce the cost to the shareholders of funding a cross-purchase agreement. Here, too, the portion of the premium paid by the corporation may be treated as a constructive dividend to the shareholder [Johnson v. Commissioner (1980) 74 T.C.1316] . For further discussion of split dollar insurance, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 70, Insurance Considerations in Business Planning (Matthew Bender).

[2] Taxation of Policy Proceeds

Insurance proceeds received by a shareholder to fund a cross-purchase agreement are not taxable income to the shareholder, unless there was a previous transfer to the shareholder for valuable consideration [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)]. If insurance policies held by a deceased shareholder are transfered to the remaining shareholders for valuable consideration, the policy proceeds are taxable to the extent they exceed the consideration, premiums, and other amounts subsequently paid by the transferee shareholder [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2) ("other amounts" includes interest paid or accrued by transferee on debt with respect to contract when not allowable as deduction)].

If the corporation pays the premiums, receives the proceeds, and distributes them to the remaining shareholders to satisfy their obligation to purchase the shares under the cross-purchase agreement, under certain circumstances, the distribution may be taxable as a dividend [Rev. Rul. 61-134, 1961-2 C.B. 250 ; see Golden v. Commissioner (3d Cir. 1940) 113 F.2d 590] . In addition, if the corporation receives the insurance proceeds and directly purchases the decedent's shares in satisfaction of the remaining shareholders' obligations under the agreement, the amount used to satisfy each shareholder's obligation may be taxable to the shareholder as a dividend [Wall v. United States (4th Cir. 1947) 164 F.2d 462] . However, if the purchase is not made in satisfaction of any obligation of the remaining shareholders', the corporation's use of life insurance proceeds to purchase the shares of a deceased shareholder does not result in taxable income to the remaining shareholders, nor does it result in taxable income as a result of the increase in value of the remaining shareholder's shares [Holsey v. Commissioner (3d Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 865] .

For discussion of the tax issues that may arise if the insured's estate is designated as the beneficiary of the policy under a cross-purchase agreement, see § 1F.64[2].

[3] Estate Taxation of Policy Proceeds

If a remaining shareholder who owns the policy is the policy's beneficiary, the policy proceeds are not included in the deceased shareholder's gross estate for estate tax purposes, whether they are paid directly to the insured's estate or to a trustee [I.R.C. § 2042(2)]. Although the value of the stock is included in the decedent's gross estate, it will not be increased by the policy proceeds to the extent that the proceeds do not exceed the value of the shares [see I.R.C. § 2031].

§ 1F.66 Taxation of Partnership Buy-Sell Agreement

[1] Taxation of Premiums and Proceeds

Life insurance premiums used to fund either type of buy-sell agreement (a cross-purchase agreement among individual partners or an agreement by the partnership to purchase the interest of a deceased partner) are not deductible for income tax purposes, whether the partners pay the premiums or the partnership owns the policy and pays the premiums [I.R.C. § 264(a)(1)]. Insurance proceeds from a life insurance policy on a deceased partner are tax free, regardless of whether they are received by the partnership or the surviving partner or partners [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)(B)].

[2] Effect of Policy Proceeds on Tax Basis of Partnership Interest

Under a cross-purchase agreement, the bases of the surviving partners interests will be increased by the amount of life insurance proceeds paid for the interest of the deceased partner [see Mushro v. Commissioner (1968) 50 T.C. 43 , nonacq. 1970-2 C.B. xxii]. The same result also occurs if the partnership purchases the deceased partner's interest under an entity purchase agreement. The basis of a partnership interest is increased by a partner's distributive share of tax-exempt income when the proceeds are received by the partnership from a life insurance policy on the death of a partner [I.R.C. § 705(a)(1)(B)]. Therefore, the bases of the partnership interests of the remaining partners are increased by the amount of the proceeds received by the partnership.

[3] Estate Taxation of Policy Proceeds

Life insurance proceeds are not includable in the deceased partner's estate for estate tax purposes, unless the partner had "incidents of ownership" [I.R.C. § 2042(2); see § 1F.64[4][b]], or the proceeds are payable to the estate [I.R.C. § 2042(1)]. However, the value of the partnership interest, as well as the value of any life insurance policies owned by the deceased partner on the lives of the remaining partners, is includable in the deceased partner's gross estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2031(a)].

§ 1F.67 Insurance Coverage for Actions Against Dissolved Corporation and its Shareholders

Consideration should be given to purchasing insurance to cover potential claims against the shareholders of a dissolved corporation. The shareholders may have liability in that causes of action against a dissolved corporation arising before or after the dissolution of the corporation may be enforced against shareholders of the dissolved corporation, if any of the assets of the dissolved corporation have been distributed to them, to the extent of the lesser of their pro rata share of the claim or of the corporate assets distributed to them, in addition to enforcement against the dissolved corporation to the extent of any undistributed assets [*Corp. § 1F.68 Business Interruption Insurance

[1] Individual Income Protection

Disability income protection, also referred to as a "loss of time" benefit [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2220.24], provides benefits to replace lost income resulting from the insured's inability to perform a designated occupation or specified activities due to a covered accident or illness [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2540.5(g)]. Benefits are ordinarily a fixed amount per day of disability and are based on the insured's income level. Because policy benefits are, generally, not subject to income tax [see I.R.C. § 105(c)], policy limits are usually 40 to 75 percent of the insured's normal income.

Income protection policies may be written on an individual or group basis and generally have an elimination period. They are sometimes categorized as occupational or non-occupational, depending on whether the risks insured against include non-occupational accidents and sickness. Polices may also be short term or long term. Short term policies generally provide benefits for a designated number of weeks, usually less than one year, while long term policies may provide benefits for a number of years or until age 65.

Because California has a compulsory, non-occupational disability law funded through a payroll tax and covering most employees [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13040-13043 (withholding)], the use of income protection coverage is probably less common in California than in states without that type of law. However, income protection coverage is an important consideration for small business owners (whether or not incorporated).

[2] Business Protection Coverage

Business protection coverage includes a number of specialized disability policies. Business overhead insurance is an extension of income protection type coverage. It provides funds to a self-employed business person to cover overhead expenses of a business while the owner is disabled. Benefits are generally measured by the actual overhead incurred during the coverage period, including all regular expenses of the business, except the owner's compensation, cost of capital goods, and payment of principal on any indebtedness. Policies offering business protection coverage are limited to a specific time period and usually have an elimination period provision.

A business buy-out policy, often combined with life coverage, provides funds to a corporation or partnership to buy back the interests of a permanently disabled shareholder or partner pursuant to a buy-sell agreement. Business buy-sell agreements are discussed in greater detail in Section 1F.63. Other forms of business protection disability policies tailored to particular types of businesses are also available. For example, "cast" insurance is used in the entertainment industry to protect against the disabilities of key cast members of television, film, and theater productions [see 6 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 33 (1945)] .

§ 1F.69 Professional Liability Insurance

[1] Special Characteristics of Professional Liability Policies

Professional liability insurance protects professionals from claims based on acts, errors, or omissions in the performance of professional services for others [see Northern Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 541, 544, 154 Cal. Rptr. 198 (nature of professional services); Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Keown (D.N.J. 1979) 472 F. Supp. 306, 310 (problem of professional services rendered for others)]. This insurance complements, rather than serves as a substitute for, a professional's coverage under other policies. While professional liability policies exclude coverage for personal injury and property damage, comprehensive liability policies cover such losses but exclude coverage for acts, errors, or omissions in the performance of professional services. For discussion of general liability policies, refer to Section 1F.52.

[2] Liability and Indemnity Policies Distinguished

Most errors and omissions policies available to professionals provide liability rather than indemnification insurance. Pursuant to many professional liability policies, the insurer will "pay on behalf of the insured all sums which the insured becomes legally obliged to pay as damages" because of an act, error, or omission in the performance of professional services; thus, the insured's duty to pay arises when the insured becomes liable [see § 1F.50[1]].

Indemnification policies, on the other hand, require the insured to pay the claim and any defense costs, if covered [see Gribaldo, Jacobs, Jones Associates v. Agrippina Versicherunges A.G. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 434, 448, 91 Cal. Rptr. 6, 476 P.2d 406] , before any indemnification by the insurer. Indemnification is reimbursement of moneys paid out [Civ. Code § 2778]. Only a few insurers continue to provide indemnification policies covering professional liability.

[3] Coverage of Defense Expenses Under Liability Policies

In general, liability policies will pay either damages or losses on behalf of the insured. "Loss" includes the amounts paid to the claimants as well as the costs and expenses involved in the defense of the claim. Typical policy language defines "loss" as any amount an insured is obligated to pay with respect to his or her legal liability, whether actual or asserted, for a [defined] wrongful act, and subject to the applicable limits and conditions of this policy, including damages, judgments, settlements, costs, charges, and expenses incurred in the defense of actions, suit or proceedings and appeals therefrom.

In contrast, the term "damages" refers to payment to the claimant and excludes defense costs and expenses. Typical policy language defines "damages" as a monetary judgment or settlement or compensatory damages that the insured is legally obliged to pay in excess of the deductible. However, these different definitions have little practical significance because policies that use the term "damages" either separately define covered "claim expenses" or provide for payment of costs and expenses under limits of liability.

Of great practical significance, however, is the fact that, under most current policies, coverage limits include defense costs. Therefore, the maximum monetary value of any claim the client may face should be realistically evaluated and policy limits chosen accordingly [see § 1F.113].

[4] Claims Made Coverage Compared to Occurrence Coverage

Most professional liability policies are written on a"claims made" basis, which provides coverage for those claims reported to an insurer during the policy period. If a claim is not made until after the policy period has expired, the insurer has no liability [Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 835, 846, 140 Cal. Rptr. 493 ; VTN Consolidated, Inc. v. Northbrook Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 888, 891-892, 155 Cal. Rptr. 172] . A claims made policy, therefore, usually covers liabilities based on errors or omissions taking place before the policy period. Some claims made policies give the insured the right to purchase extended reporting period coverage after expiration of the policy. Thus, a professional who retires could still be covered for malpractice claims based on the period when he or she was in practice, without having full coverage.

In contrast, an "occurrence" policy provides coverage for acts or omissions that take place during the policy period, regardless of when the claim is made [VTN Consolidated, Inc. v. Northbrook Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 888, 891, 155 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 835, 845 n.5, 140 Cal. Rptr. 493] . A professional liability policy rarely combines claims made and occurrence policies.

§ 1F.70 Workers' Compensation Insurance

[1] In General

Workers' compensation laws impose liability for work-related accidents, regardless of any negligence on the part of the employer or employee [Cal. Const. art. XIV, § 4; Lab. Code § 3600], and provide a schedule of benefits, including indemnity for disability, medical expenses, hospital expenses, ancillary treatment, vocational rehabilitation, death benefits, and burial allowances [see Lab. Code § 3207] to be paid to the injured employee or the employee's dependents or heirs [see Lab. Code §§ 4700-4709].

With few exceptions, all California employers are subject to the workers' compensation laws [Lab. Code §§ 3300, 3351]. Coverage is based on defined employment relationships; that is, an injured worker must be an "employee" who is entitled to workers' compensation coverage for an injury occurring in the course of specified employment [Lab. Code §§ 3350-3369; In-Home Supportive Services V. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 727, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697, 49 Cal. Comp. Cases 177] . A person rendering a service for another establishes a presumption of an employer-employee relationship, absent a showing that the relationship is one of principal and independent contractor [Lab. Code § 3357; Germann v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783, 176 Cal. Rptr. 868, 46 Cal. Comp. Cases 1062 ; see Lab. Code § 3353 ("independent contractor" defined); see also Lab. Code §§ 3352, 3352.94 (additional persons excluded from the definition of "employee"); § 1F.118].

An employer subject to workers' compensation laws [see Lab. Code §§ 3300 ("employer" defined), 3301 (exclusions)] must secure payment of compensation by carrying workers' compensation insurance or by obtaining a permit to self-insure [Lab. Code §§ 3700, 3711; see Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 287, 292 n.4, 148 Cal. Rptr. 325 ; 43 Cal. Comp. Cases 895] .

[2] Obtaining Insurance

Insurance may be obtained privately or though the state's own insurance fund, the State Compensation Insurance Fund (SCIF) [see Lab. Code § 3211]. Any employer may opt for self-insurance by applying for that status to the California Department of Industrial Relations, while demonstrating the ability to pay compensation to workers if it should be necessary [see Lab. Code § 3701 (security bond required)]. Continued ability to self-insure is guaranteed by mandating compliance with various reporting and auditing requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15250-15406].

An employer choosing not to self-insure may obtain private insurance from any number of carriers or from the SCIF [Lab. Code § 56].

[3] Consequences of Misclassification and Failure to Carry Insurance

If a worker has been misclassified as an independent contractor, and the employer has not provided workers' compensation for the worker, the employer may be held liable for civil tort liability both to the worker [Lab. Code § 3706] and to third parties who are injured as a result of negligent acts of the misclassified worker in the course and scope of employment. Further, employers who receive contributions from employees to cover any part of the cost of workers' compensation coverage may be found guilty of a misdemeanor [Lab. Code § 3751].

Failure to carry workers' compensation insurance or to obtain a certificate of self-insurance is a misdemeanor [Lab. Code §§ 3700.5, 3710.2]. Further, employers who do not comply with this requirement may subject themselves to fine and imprisonment [Lab. Code §§ 3710.2, 3722], a suit for civil damages [Lab. Code § 3706; see Lab. Code §§ 3708, 3709], and a claim filed by the injured employee with the California Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, in addition to any civil action the injured employee might file [Lab. Code § 3715(a)].

An employer may also provide workers' compensation coverage to workers not included in the definition of employee if both parties agree to do so [see Lab. Code § 4150]. Although such coverage may protect an employer from liability for civil tort suits from misclassified independent contractors, it may also serve as an indication of employment status in other contexts. Thus, caution should be exercised in making a determination to provide workers' compensation coverage for independent contractors.

For a detailed discussion of workers' compensation insurance, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 42, Workers' Compensation Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[4] Liability to Independent Contractors

Although a principal is not generally liable to an independent contractor or to the contractor's employees, there are two major exceptions to this rule. The first exception imposes liability for injuries that could have been prevented, if the services contracted for are likely to cause a particular risk of harm unless special precautions are taken [see Widman v. Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 734, 744-745, 97 Cal. Rptr. 52] . The second exception imposes liability when the principal maintains some degree of control over the premises, provides equipment that malfunctions and causes injury, actively interferes with the work during performance and causes injury, or when the work being performed constitutes a nuisance [McDonald v. Shell Oil Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 785, 791, 285 P.2d 902] . For discussion of liability coverage, other than workers' compensation, refer to Section 1F.52[1], [2].

§ 1F.100 Facts

[1] Information Regarding Individuals Participating in New Business

NOTE:

Facts and documents obtained from the client aid the insurance agent and attorney in determining appropriate types and amounts of insurance coverage. This section is drafted with the assumption that the appropriate insurance will be selected in consultation with an insurance agent. The attorney's role is to ensure that all the relevant facts and documents have been obtained, and that the client has considered the business and tax consequences of these insurance decisions.

1. Name.

2. Residence address and telephone number.

3. Business address and telephone number.

4. Tax identification numbers (social security number; employer identification number).

5. Citizenship and, if an alien, United States residency status.

6. Marital status.

7. Age.

8. Gross and net income for last three years.

9. Estimated net worth.

10. Projected annual income.

11. Relationship to other participants.

12. Affiliations with other businesses.

13. Percentage interest in business.

14. Types and amounts of insurance policies held individually.

15. Whether participant has been denied insurance coverage; if so:

a. Type of coverage denied.

b. Reason for denial.

c. Date of denial.

16. Estate plan.

[2] Information Regarding Corporation

1. Name and address of corporation.

2. Date of incorporation.

3. Tax year of corporation.

4. Type of corporation [see Corp. Code § 162]:

NOTE:
The type and size of the corporation will affect the appropriate types and amounts of insurance [see, e.g., § 1F.61 (directors and officers insurance), 1F.67 (dissolved corporation)]. For a discussion of limitations on liability based on the corporate form, refer to Chapter 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity.

a. Publicly held corporation: one in which shares of stock have been advertised and sold to public at large.

b. Closely held corporation: one in which shares of stock are sold privately (that is, without the use of advertising) to relatively small number of shareholders.

c. Close corporation: one in which [Corp. Code §§ 158, 300]:

- Shares of stock are sold privately;

- There are no more than 35 shareholders;
- Close corporation election is made in articles of incorporation;
- There is shareholder agreement modifying the usual powers of the board of directors; and
- Close corporation legend is printed on stock certificate [see Corp. Code § 418(c)].

5. Whether the corporation is a professional corporation.

NOTE:

A "professional corporation" is a regular business corporation that renders professional services in a single profession under a certificate of registration issued by the governing board that regulates the profession and designates itself as such [see Corp. Code § 13401(b); but see Corp. Code § 13401.5 (allied professionals)]. "Professional services" are any services that may lawfully be rendered pursuant to a license or certificate of registration authorized by the Business and Professions Code, the Osteopathic Act, the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act, or the Chiropractic Act [Corp. Code §§ 13401(a), 13401.3; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1000-1-1000-20]. However, there is no longer any certification requirement for medical, osteopathic, dental, pharmacy, veterinary, architectural, registered nursing, optometry, behavioral sciences, speech-language pathology and audiology, or court reporter corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 13401(b), 13402(a); Bus. & Prof. Code § 2406]. For further discussion and coverage of professions that must be licensed or registered, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations **.

For professional corporations, professional liability insurance is an important consideration [see § 1F.69].

6. Whether corporation has elected Subchapter S status.

NOTE:

A small business corporation may elect to be an S corporation [I.R.C. § 1362(a)]. Unlike a C corporation, which is a separate tax-paying entity [see I.R.C. § 11], an S corporation is generally treated as a conduit of income, loss, deductions, and credits to shareholders [see I.R.C. §§ 1363, 1366]. For discussion of the advisability of electing to be an S corporation, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For discussion of the procedures to be used in electing or terminating Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status **.

Whether or not a corporation has elected S corporation status will affect the determination of the tax impact of a life insurance funded buy-sell agreement [see §§ 1F.64, 1F.65].

7. Employer identification number.

8. Type of business.

9. Business insurance coverage, if any.

[3] Information Regarding Shareholders

1. Names and addresses of shareholders:

    a. Individual shareholders and spouses.

    b. Entities.

2. Capacity in which individual holds shares:

    a. Owner.

    b. Trustee.

    c. Executor or administrator.

    d. Guardian.

    e. Custodian under Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [see Ch. 60A, Gifts].

3. Basis of shareholder's stock.

4. Tax identification number.

5. Tax year.

6. If shareholder is individual, personal and financial information enumerated in [1], above.

7. If shareholder is employee of corporation:

    a. Position or title.

    b. Fringe benefits, including:
    (1) Pensions.

    (2) Stock options.

    (3) Profit sharing.

    (4) Current insurance coverage.

8. Estate plans for shares.

NOTE:
An estate plan may affect a buy-sell agreement [see §§ 1F.63-1F.66].

[4] Information Regarding Partnership

1. Name and address of partnership.

2. Date of partnership formed.

3. Tax year of partnership.

4. Type of partnership:

NOTE:
The type of liability protection provided by the partnership form may be a consideration in insurance planning. For further discussion of limits on liability in general and limited partnerships, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity .

a. General partnership.

NOTE:
A general partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on, as co-owners, a business for profit [Corp. Code § 16101(9)]. Partners in a general partnership are personally liable, jointly and severally, for all partnership obligations [Corp. Code § 16306(a); see Corp. Code § 16305 (partnership liability)]. A general partner's liability is not limited to the partner's percentage interest in the partnership, but extends to the partner's other assets as well [see Corp. Code § 16306(a)]. For further coverage of general partnerships, see Ch. 15, Part A, Formation of General Partnerships .

b. Limited partnership.

NOTE:
A limited partnership is a partnership having one or more general partners and one or more limited partners [Corp. Code §§ 15501, 15611(r)(repealed January 1, 2010); Corp. Code 15901.02(q) (ULPA '08)]. A general partner in a limited partnership has, by and large, the same liability as a partner in a general partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15509, 15643 (repealed January 1, 2010); see Corp. Code 15904.04 (ULPA '08)]. A limited partner is a partner whose participation in management is limited by statute or agreement and whose liability is ordinarily limited to the amount of its investment [see Corp. Code §§ 15632, 15666 (repealed January 1, 2010); Corp. Code 15903.03 (ULPA '08)]. For further coverage of limited partnerships, see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships .

c. Limited liability partnership.

NOTE:
A registered limited liability partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on a business as co-owners, other than a limited partnership, formed pursuant to an agreement (1) in which each partner and the partnership is licensed, authorized, or registered to provide architecture, public accountancy, or legal services, or (2) that is related to a registered limited liability partnership that practices public accountancy or, to the extent permitted by the State Bar, practices law or is related to a foreign limited liability partnership and provides complementary or related services or provides services or facilities to that registered limited liability partnership [Corp. Code § 16101(6)- (9), (14)]. To secure the benefits of limited liability, the partnership must satisfy all applicable statutory requirements, including a security requirement [Corp. Code §§ 16306(c), 16501 et seq.]. One method of satisfying the security requirement is for the partnership to maintain statutorily specified amounts of malpractice insurance [see Corp. Code § 16596].

§ 1F.110 Property Insurance

NOTE:
Property insurance policies, including real property, boiler and machinery, transportation, and personal property insurance, should be obtained, as applicable, by any new business. This section is drafted with the assumption that the appropriate insurance will be selected in consultation with an insurance agent. The attorney's role is to ensure that all the relevant facts and documents have been obtained, and that the client has considered the business and tax consequences of these insurance decisions.

1. Ascertain whether business will require property insurance:

a. Will business own real property, either structures or crops?

b. Will business own or lease and operate automobiles, vessels, or aircraft?

c. Will business require transportation of product?

d. Will business require special property insurance, such as protection against loss of rental value, extra expense, builder's risk, damage to boilers and machinery, damage to crops, bailee's risks, or default by mortgagees?

2. Ascertain adequate amount of property insurance coverage based on nature of business and its available capital.

NOTE:
In making this determination, counsel should consult with the business's owners, accountant, and insurance agent.

§ 1F.111 General Liability Insurance

1. Ascertain whether business will require general liability insurance.

NOTE:
Individual liability policies may be issued in many different forms. A common form is the Business General Liability policy, which provides protection for hazards related to or arising from (1) premises and operations; (2) elevators; (3) owner's and contractor's protective (acts and omissions with respect to supervising independent contractors); (4) completed operations; and (5) product liability. For further discussion of business general liability policies, refer to Section 1F.52 and California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 49, Business General Liability Policies (Matthew Bender).

a. Is there a risk of injury related to business premises or elevators?

b. Is there a risk of injury from business operations?

c. Is there potential liability with respect to use of independent contractors?

d. Is there potential liability related to particular contracts?

2. Ascertain whether nature of business itself is likely to lead to liability.

NOTE:
Certain types of businesses, such as restaurants, private schools, and health clubs, have a potentially high risk of tort liability. Many owners find incorporation a benefit under such circumstances. However, since incorporation will not always protect the participants from personal liability [see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity], liability insurance coverage should be considered.

Professionals will also often incorporate to avoid personal liability [see vol. 3A, Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations (list of professions permitted professional corporation status)]. Shareholders of professional corporations have the same protection from personal liability as do shareholders of other corporations for acts and omissions unrelated to their professional practice [Corp. Code § 13403]. Most regulatory agencies, however, impose joint and several liability for malpractice [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1057 (chiropractic corporations), 2781 (nursing corporations)]. Thus, for professionals, whether incorporated or not, malpractice insurance is an important consideration [see §§ 1F.69, 1F.113].

In addition, director liability insurance may be necessary in order to attract qualified outside directors [see §§ 1F.61, 1F.112].

a. Is business highly speculative?

b. Is business user or producer of hazardous products [see California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 47, Products Liability Insurance (Matthew Bender)]?

c. Is business one in which accidental injury to employee or customer is likely?

d. Is business one which is likely to be subject to lawsuits?

e. Is business professional business in which malpractice may occur?

3. Determine extent risks are insurable.

4. Ascertain adequate amount of coverage based on nature of risks and business's available capital.

NOTE:
In making this determination, counsel should consult with the business's owners, accountant, and insurance agent.

§ 1F.112 Directors and Officers Insurance

NOTE:

Corporation Code Section 317(i) allows corporations to maintain insurance on behalf of an agent of the corporation (including directors and officers) against liability asserted against or incurred by the agent in that capacity, regardless of whether the corporation would otherwise have the power to indemnify the agent under Corporation Code Section 317 [Corp. Code § 317(i); see § 1F.61]. The corporation may also provide in its articles of incorporation for indemnification of its agents, in excess of that specifically permitted by Corporation Code Section 317, for breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders [Corp. Code § 204(a)(11)].

For further discussion of the liability of corporate directors, the extent of permissible indemnity, and the limitation of directors' liability in the articles of incorporation, refer to Ballantine Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Volume 1, Chapters 3, Formation of Corporations and 6, Management: Duties and Liabilities of Directors and Controlling Shareholders.

1. Ascertain whether directors and officers insurance is advisable:

    a. As practical matter, will it be necessary in order to attract qualified outside directors?

    b. Can corporation obtain and afford such insurance [see § 1F.61[3]]?

    c. Can corporation self-insure, if necessary [see § 1F.61[3]]?

2. Ascertain appropriate form of coverage.

NOTE:

There are two basic forms of insurance coverage for the acts of officers and directors. "Directors and officers liability" directly insures the officer or director for a loss caused by his or her wrongful acts or omissions. "Corporate reimbursement" or "corporate indemnification" provides coverage to the corporation if the corporation has entered into agreements to indemnify its officers or directors for its negligent acts. Although these two coverages may be written separately, it is not unusual for them to be combined into a single policy.

a. Has corporation agreed to indemnify its directors and officers?

NOTE:

Depending on the requirements of the corporation, it may purchase either or both of the two basic policy types. If a corporation has not entered into an agreement to indemnify its officers or directors, it will have no need for corporate reimbursement coverage.

b. Will corporation need to purchase specialized coverage based on nature of business or nonprofit form?

c. Is coverage available under other policies?

NOTE:

Typically, the general liability policies of the corporation or of the individual officer or director do not cover the indemnification of an officer or director. The terms of the individual policies vary, however, and must be examined to determine what acts are covered.

3. Ascertain adequate amount of coverage (including extended coverage) based on nature of risks and business's available capital [see § 1F.61[7]].

NOTE:

In making this determination, counsel should consult with the business's owners, accountant, and insurance agent.

§ 1F.113 Professional Liability Insurance

NOTE:

Professional liability insurance protects professionals from claims based on acts, errors, or omissions in the performance of professional services for others [see Northern Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 541, 154 Cal. Rptr. 198 (examining nature of professional services)]. This insurance complements, rather than serves as a substitute for, a professional's coverage under other policies. While professional liability policies exclude coverage for personal injury and property damage, business general liability policies cover such losses but exclude coverage for acts, errors, or omissions in the performance of professional services [see § 1F.52]. Before going into business, a professional should seriously consider obtaining professional liability coverage. For further discussion, see Sections 1F.52[3] and 1F.69.

1. Ascertain whether professional liability coverage (including prior acts and/or extended coverage) is advisable [see § 1F.69].

2. Determine appropriate type of coverage:

a. "Claims made" coverage.

NOTE:

Most professional liability policies are written on a "claims made" basis, which provides coverage for claims reported to an insurer during the policy period [Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 835, 846, 140 Cal. Rptr. 493] . A claims made policy usually covers liabilities based on errors or omissions taking place before the policy period [see § 1F.69[4]].

b. "Occurrence" coverage.

NOTE:

An "occurrence" policy provides coverage for acts or omissions that take place during the policy period, regardless of when the claim is made [VTN Consolidated, Inc. v. Northbrook Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 888, 891, 155 Cal. Rptr. 172] . Occurrence policies are rarely written; if available, coverage is expensive [see § 1F.69[4]*].

3. Ascertain adequate amount of coverage (including prior acts and/or extended coverage) based on nature of risks and business's available capital.

NOTE:

In making this determination, counsel should consult with the business's owners, accountant, and insurance agent.

a. Is policy "wasting" policy?

NOTE:

A "wasting policy" is one in which the policy limits are reduced by both the costs of defense and the cost of any liability. Caution should be exercised to ensure that the policy limits are high enough to cover defense costs as well as any liability incurred.

b. Does insurance company's proposed settlement agreement limit dollar amount of insurance coverage if professional refuses to consent to settlement?

NOTE:

Caution should be exercised regarding policies that permit the insurance company to limit its coverage to the amount of a proposed settlement, if the insured withholds its consent to that settlement.

§ 1F.114 Liability Insurance Coverage for Actions Against Dissolved Corporations and Their Shareholders

NOTE:

Causes of action against a dissolved corporation arising before or after the dissolution of the corporation may be enforced against (1) the dissolved corporation to the extent of any undistributed assets, and (2) shareholders of the dissolved corporation, if any of the assets of the dissolved corporation have been distributed to them [Corp. Code § 2011(a); Penasquitos, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1180, 1188-1191, 283 Cal. Rptr. 135, 812 P.2d 154 ; see Corp. Code § 2010 (dissolved corporation defined)]. Consideration, therefore, should be given to purchasing insurance to cover potential claims against the shareholders of a dissolved corporation.

1. Ascertain whether coverage for actions against dissolved corporation and its shareholders is advisable.

2. Ascertain adequate amount of coverage based on nature of risks and business's available capital.

§ 1F.115 Life and Disability Insurance

1. Ascertain whether key employee life and disability insurance is advisable.

NOTE:
The purpose of key employee life insurance is to compensate the business for the loss created by the death of the owner or key employee. Key employee insurance is usually obtained for corporate officers, top sales representatives, or any person on whom the business is clearly dependent for its success [Boldemann Chocolate Co. v. Price (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 200, 202, 53 P.2d 946] . Such insurance frequently contains an accidental death or disability feature. For further discussion of key employee insurance, refer to Section 1F.62.

2. Determine tax consequences to business of its payment of key employee life premiums and its receipt of policy proceeds [see § 1F.62[2]].

3. Ascertain additional needs of corporation or partnership that may be met by life insurance:

a. Will entity need to liquidate interest of deceased shareholder, partner, or member?

b. Will entity need to establish credit?

c. Will entity need to create reserves for business?

d. Will entity need to fund deferred compensation arrangements?

e. Will entity need to fund pension and profit sharing arrangements?

4. Ascertain additional benefits of life insurance to sole proprietor:

a. Will sole proprietor need to indemnify his or her estate against loss resulting from forced sale of business after owner's death?

b. Will sole proprietor need to provide heirs with necessary cash to carry on business?

c. Will sole proprietor need to establish credit during his or her lifetime?

d. Will sole proprietor need to provide for his or her retirement?

e. Will sole proprietor need to provide immediate cash for estate settlement purposes without encumbering or jeopardizing business's financial status?

5. Advise client to determine whether life insurance is appropriate vehicle to accomplish needs enumerated in Paragraph 4, above.

NOTE:
In making this determination, counsel should consult with the business's owners, accountant, and insurance agent.

§ 1F.116 Life Insurance Funded Buy-Sell Agreement

NOTE:
Whether life insurance should be used to fund a buy-sell agreement depends on the nature of the business, the owners' objectives, the purchase price of the interests, and the cost of life insurance. The cost of life insurance, including its tax consequences, must be compared with the cost of alternate insurance [see § 1F.63 [4]] and other funding methods, such as borrowing or an installment purchase using the business's own capital.

1. Ascertain whether buy-sell agreement is advisable.

NOTE:
A buy-sell agreement can ensure the continuity of a business by providing funds for the transfer of management; it allows the principals to select, in advance, the purchaser of their business interests. This is particularly important when the owners of a family business have invested their working lives and, likely, their personal assets in the venture. For further discussion of advantages of a buy-sell agreement, refer to Section 1F.63[2].

2. If buy-sell agreement is advisable, determine appropriate type:

a. Entity-purchase plan.

NOTE:
The stock, partnership interest, or LLC interest redemption or "entity-purchase" plan provides that, on a shareholder's, partner's, or member's death, the shareholder's stock, partnership interest, or LLC interest is redeemed or purchased by the business entity (the corporation or partnership) [see § 1F.63[1]*].

b. Cross-purchase plan.

NOTE:

The stock, partnership interest, or LLC interest purchase agreement or "cross-purchase" plan provides that the decedent's stock, partnership interest, or LLC interest is purchased directly from the decedent's estate by the surviving shareholders, partners, or members in proportion to their existing ownership interests [see § 1F.63[1]*].

If life insurance is used to fund a cross-purchase agreement, each shareholder, partner, or member must obtain a life insurance policy on the life of every other shareholder, partner, or member in an amount sufficient to fund his or her proportionate obligation to purchase the shares or interests from the decedent's estate. This type of agreement can be disadvantageous when there are more than a few shareholders, partners, or members, not only because having numerous insurance policies can be cumbersome, but because of the increased administrative costs related to the policies themselves and the increased complexity and legal cost of an insurance-funded cross-purchase.

3. Determine appropriate amount of funding.

NOTE:

The simplest way to assure adequate capital to finance the purchase of a business interest under a buy-sell agreement is to obtain life insurance in an amount equal to the value of the interest to be redeemed or purchased. For discussion of valuation methods, refer Volume 3, Chapter 8, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements.

4. Determine type of insurance for funding:

NOTE:

The correct vehicle for funding a buy-sell agreement should be selected in consultation with a life insurance agent. For discussion of the types of life insurance products that may be used to fund the agreement, refer to Section 1F.63[5][b].

a. How long will buy-sell agreement be in effect?

b. What is comparative cost of premiums for term and permanent insurance?

5. Ascertain income tax consequences of buy-sell agreement funded by life insurance to: decedent, surviving shareholders, partners, or members, and business entity.

a. How will premiums be taxed?

NOTE:

For discussion of taxation of life insurance premiums, refer to Sections 1F.64[1] (taxation of premiums for corporate buy-sell agreements), 1F.65[1] (taxation of premiums for shareholder cross-purchase agreements), and 1F.66[1] (taxation of premiums for partnership buy-sell agreements).

b. How will policy proceeds be taxed?

NOTE:

For discussion of taxation of policy proceeds, refer to Sections 1F.64[2] (taxation of policy proceeds of corporate buy-sell agreements), 1F.65[2] (taxation of policy proceeds of shareholder cross-purchase agreements), and 1F.66[1] (taxation of policy proceeds of partnership buy-sell agreements).

6. Ascertain estate tax consequences of buy-sell agreement funded by life insurance to: decedent, surviving shareholders, partners, or members, and business entity.

NOTE:

For discussion of estate taxation of policy proceeds, refer to Sections 1F.64[4] (estate taxation of policy proceeds of corporate buy-sell agreements), 1F.65[3] (estate taxation of policy proceeds of shareholder cross-purchase agreements), and 1F.66[3] (estate taxation of policy proceeds of partnership buy-sell agreements). For discussion of the complex issues in estate taxation for closely held corporations, refer to California Small Business Guide, Volume 3, Chapter 42, Estate Planning for Shareholders (Matthew Bender). For discussion of partnership taxation, refer to Willis, Pennell & Postwaite, Partnership Taxation, (4th ed. 1993).

7. If any owner is uninsurable, determine whether alternate insurance may be obtained to fund buy-sell agreement [see § 1F.63[4]].

a. Is "guaranteed issue" life insurance obtainable?

b. Is group life insurance that includes "guaranteed issue" insurance obtainable?

c. Is uninsurable owner willing to transfer personal life insurance policy to business to fund agreement?

NOTE:
Business interruption insurance includes disability income protection coverage, or "loss of time benefit" [see PP 1-2, below] and business protection coverage, including business overhead protection, specialized disability protection for persons in specific industries (e.g., "cast" insurance [see PP 3-4, below], as well as business buy-out policies [see § 1F.116].

1. Ascertain whether disability income protection ("loss of time" benefit [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2220.24] is required:

a. Will California's compulsory, nonoccupational disability insurance [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13040-13043 (withholding)] provide adequate coverage?

b. Will business owner require additional benefits to replace lost income resulting from his or her inability to perform a designated occupation or specified activities [see § 1F.63[1]]?

2. If additional disability income protection is desired, ascertain adequate amount of coverage based on nature of risks and business's available capital.

Workers' compensation insurance compensate employees who have been injured in the course and scope of their employment, without regard to fault [Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.]. In exchange, injured employees are barred, in most cases, from bringing a civil suit against the employer [Lab. Code § 3602]. Most California employers must provide workers' compensation coverage [Lab. Code §§ 3300, 3351; see Lab. Code §§ 2270.5, 3352, 3352.94, 3353 (exclusions)]. For detailed discussion of workers' compensation insurance, including covered employees, exclusions, employer responsibilities, and types of coverage, refer to California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 42, Workers' Compensation Insurance (Matthew Bender).

1. Ascertain whether employer is subject to workers' compensation laws, because employer is one of following [Lab. Code § 3300]:

a. State government, state agency, or other public agency.

b. Person that has natural person in its service.

c. Legal representative of deceased employer.

NOTE:
Certain groups are excluded from the definition of "employer" [see Lab. Code § 3301].

2. Determine if worker is "employee" because worker is person in service of employer [see [1], above] under any appointment or contract for hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, whether lawfully or unlawfully employed [Lab. Code § 3351].

NOTE:

Workers' compensation coverage is based on defined employment relationships: an injured worker must be an "employee" to be entitled to worker's compensation coverage for an injury occurring in the course and scope of employment [Lab. Code §§ 3350-3370; In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 727, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697, 49 Cal. Comp. Cases 177] . A person rendering services for another, other than an independent contractor, or unless expressly excluded under workers' compensation laws, is presumed to be an employee [Lab. Code § 3357; Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 777, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1, 37 Cal. Comp. Cases 185] .

3. Determine if worker is "independent contractor":

NOTE:

An independent contractor is any person who renders service for a specified recompense for a specified result only, and not regarding the means by which it is accomplished [Lab. Code § 3353; see S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399, 54 Cal. Comp. Cases 80] .

For coverage of independent contractors, see Volume 15, Chapter 84, Independent Contractors .

a. Does worker hold a valid contractor's license?

NOTE:

The Labor Code creates a rebuttable presumption that a worker performing certain construction or trade services for which a license is required [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7000-7173], or performing such services for a person required to obtain such a license, is an employee rather than an independent contractor [see Lab. Code § 2750.5; State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 (Labor Code § 2750.5 specifically applicable to workers' compensation cases)].

To rebut the presumption of employee status, the individual must have a valid contractor's license [see Lab. Code § 2750.5. Thus, a worker who does not have such a license cannot assert independent contractor status. Statutory factors [see Lab. Code § 2750.5; PP b--d, 4, below] and case law [see P 5, below] evidencing the right to control the services rendered also determine independent contractor status.

b. Does worker have right to control and discretion as to services performed?

c. Is worker customarily engaged in independently established business?

d. Is worker's independent contractor status bona fide and not subterfuge to avoid employee status?

4. To determine whether independent contractor status is bona fide, ascertain how many of following statutory factors exist.

NOTE:

A bona fide independent contractor status is evidenced by the cumulative presence of the factors enumerated in Paragraphs a--k, below [see Lab. Code § 2750.5].

a. Does worker have substantial investment, other than personal services, in business?

b. Does worker hold himself or herself out to be in business?

c. Does worker bargain for contract to complete specific project for compensation rather than by time?

d. Does worker control time and place work is performed?

e. Does worker supply his or her own tools or instrumentalities, other than those customarily provided by employer?

f. Does worker hire employees?

g. Does worker perform work not ordinarily in course of principal's work?

h. Does worker perform work requiring a particular skill?

i. Does worker hold a license under Business and Professions Code?

j. Do parties intend work relationship to be that of independent contractor?

k. Does termination of relationship give rise to action for breach of contract?

5. Determine how many of following common law factors exist [see S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399, 54 Cal. Comp. Cases 80 ; see also vol. 15, Ch. 84, Independent Contractors].

NOTE:

The following common law factors, traditionally applied by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, are not applied mechanically as separate tests; rather, their weight often depends on particular combinations [see S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399, 54 Cal. Comp. Cases 80] . Borello requires that the test of independent contractor, for purposes of workers' compensation, be applied in keeping with the protective purposes of the legislation [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 358-359, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399, 54 Cal. Comp. Cases 80 ; see Rinaldi v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1991) 278 Cal. Rptr. 105 (crew member of farm labor contractor held to be employee for purposes of workers' compensation); Yellow Cab Coop., Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1288, 1300-1302, 277 Cal. Rptr. 434 (cab driver held to be employee of taxi company for purposes of workers' compensation; but see Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 837-838, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 (gardener held to be independent contractor for purposes of workers' compensation)].

a. Does worker have right to control manner and performance of work?

NOTE:

Although the worker may exercise some limited control, if the employer has ultimate control of the manner and performance of the work, employee status is indicated.

b. Does worker control time work begins and ends?

NOTE:
If not, employee status may be indicated.

c. Does worker have a monetary investment in his or her work.

NOTE:
If not, employee status may be indicated.

d. Does worker supply his or her own tools, instrumentalities and place of work.

NOTE:
If not, employee status may be indicated.

e. Does worker have license to perform work?

NOTE:
If not, employee status may be indicated.

f. Can worker terminate employment relationship at will?

NOTE:
If so, employee status may be indicated.

g. Was worker hired for indefinite period of time?

NOTE:
If so, employee status may be indicated.

h. Is worker paid by time (hour, week, month, or year), or by job?

NOTE:
If worker is paid by time, employee status may be indicated.

i. Is worker engaged in distinct occupation or business?

NOTE:
If not, employee status may be indicated.

j. Is worker supervised in performance of his or her work?

NOTE:
If so, employee status may be indicated.

k. Do parties believe they are creating principal-independent contractor relationship?

NOTE:
If so, independent contractor status may be indicated.

l. Do services rendered require great deal of skill?

NOTE:
If so, independent contractor status may be indicated.

§ 1F.200 Client Letter Prior to Initial Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter to a client requesting insurance and business information to be used at the initial meeting with the client about obtaining business insurance. Before the initial meeting with the client, the attorney will want to obtain enough information to determine the scope of the work to be done and any preliminary decisions to be made.

At the initial meeting, the attorney will want to have additional, specific information to estimate the time required to perform the legal research and factual analysis. However, complicated or lengthy questionnaires tend to discourage clients and frequently result in cancelled appointments because the client is "unprepared." This letter is composed with that in mind. If a more detailed set of questions is appropriate before the initial meeting, counsel should incorporate relevant facts and documents from Section 1F.100.

[b] Fee and Representation Agreement

Mention is made of a fee and representation agreement in the first paragraph of the form below. For sample forms, refer to Volume 15, Chapter 86, Agreements for Professional Services .

§ 1F.201 Client Letter Following Initial Meeting

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a follow-up letter to an initial meeting at which insurance considerations for a new business were discussed.

This letter serves two purposes. First, it reiterates the tasks the attorney will perform, reminding the client of the extent of work involved. The letter provides optional text for use if the attorney will work in consultation with the business's insurance agent and accountant.

Second, if the attorney is awaiting additional materials from the client, it provides the client with a complete list of the information or documents that he or she must provide and puts the client on notice that work cannot be completed without those items.

In our meeting of_____[date], we agreed that I would perform the research and analysis necessary to determine the advisable types of insurance coverage for your _____ [business or proposed business venture]. This will include _____ [specify, e.g., comparing the cost (including the tax consequences) of life insurance funding for a buy-sell agreement with the cost of alternative insurance and other funding methods; determining the feasibility of a self-insurance program for directors and officers liability insurance; and researching whether workers will be considered employees or independent contractors for purposes of workers' compensation]. [Add if applicable: I will perform this research and analysis in consultation with your insurance agent, _____ (name), and accountant, _____ (name)].

[If client is to provide additional information, use:]

We also agreed that you would provide me with the following: _____ [list information and documents].

I look forward to receiving this information as soon as possible, so that I can complete the work we discussed. I will telephone you to confirm receipt of your materials and to schedule a date for our follow-up discussion.

[If client is not to provide additional information, use:]

I look forward to seeing you on_____[date] at _____ [time of day] at _____ [location] to discuss the results of this research.

§ 1F.202 Client Letter If Attorney is to Perform No Further Work

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a follow-up letter to a meeting at which insurance considerations for a new business were discussed, stating that no further work will be done.

If no research or analysis is to be performed regarding a business's insurance needs, a follow-up letter to the client establishes the end of the attorney-client relationship related to this particular representation. This letter helps establish a date from which the statute of limitations runs for purposes of malpractice claims [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2)].

The attorney should return any documents belonging to the client with this letter. The letter should be sent certified or registered mail, to document the close of the attorney-client relationship, as well to confirm the receipt of returned documents.

§ 1F.204 Checklist for Selecting Insurance Policy

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a checklist that provides the attorney with a list of items to consider in helping to select the insurance policy itself, including policy limits, deductibles, coverage (including prior acts and extended reporting coverage), exclusions, notice and reporting provisions, and defense and settlement provisions. It also includes checklists regarding the application itself and the insurer's reliability. This checklist should be used in consultation with the business's insurance agent and accountant in selecting appropriate insurance coverage for a new business.

The attorney should review this checklist with the client before the client actually contacts his or her insurance agent to select the actual policies to satisfy the insurance needs of the business.

[2] Form

Checklist for Selecting Insurance Policy

Policy Limits

1. Property Insurance: Are the proposed per-claim limits and aggregate policy limits sufficient to protect the insured property?

2. Life, Health and Disability Insurance: Are the policy limits sufficient to provide adequate protection or to finance the purchase of business interests under a buy-sell agreement?

3. Liability Insurance: Are the proposed per-claim limits sufficient to cover likely financial exposure for a single claim?

4. Liability Insurance: Are the proposed aggregate limits of liability sufficient to protect the client's assets, other business participants' assets, and the business's collective assets?

5. Liability Insurance: If the policy limits include defense costs, are the proposed policy limits sufficient to cover both the client's potential liability and his or her defense costs?

Policy Deductibles

1. Is the client willing and financially able to pay the amount of the proposed deductible in exchange for a reduction in premiums costs?

2. Are the policy limits in excess of, or includable in, the deductible?

Policy Coverage

1. Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide coverage for the business's employees?

2. Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide coverage for the client's potential vicarious liability for independent contractors or agents?

3. Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide coverage for employees hired during the policy period? Are there any conditions, limitations, or additional premiums for new employees?

4. Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide coverage on a claims made or an occurrence basis, or a combination thereof [see § 1F.69 [4]]?

5. Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide for a defense to malicious prosecution or defamation?

6. Directors and Officers Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide for directors and officers liability coverage, corporate reimbursement or indemnification coverage, or both [see § 1F.61[4]]?

7. Property Insurance: Is the policy open or valued [see § 1F.51[2]]?

8. Property Insurance: In addition to insuring the business's tangible property, has the client considered insuring intangibles, such as lost rental income, lost profits from damaged or destroyed crops, or anticipated profits from the construction of a building [see § 1F.51[3]?

9. Life Insurance: Does the client understand the advantages and disadvantages of term versus permanent insurance [see §§ 1F.33, 1F.34]?

10. Disability Insurance: In addition to personal disability insurance (such as income protection coverage), would the client benefit from, and can the client afford, business overhead insurance [see § 1F.68[2]]?

Prior Acts and Extended Reporting Options

1. Liability Insurance: Is the prior acts or extended reporting ("tail") coverage long enough to meet the client's needs?

2. Liability Insurance: Is the extended reporting option available if the client, rather than the insurance company, elects to cancel or not renew the policy?

3. Liability Insurance: Does the extended reporting option cover retired or otherwise non-practicing individuals?

Exclusions

1. What is the scope of the policy exclusions?

2. Does the policy exclude coverage for claims that are likely to arise from the client's business?

3. Does the policy have a territorial exclusion? (Is the coverage world-wide? Does the policy require that a claim or lawsuit be brought in the United States to trigger coverage?)

4. Professional Liability Insurance: Does the policy provide coverage for claims unrelated to the client's area of practice?

5. Is there another way to obtain excluded coverage (by way of endorsement, for example)?

6. If such coverage is available by endorsement, can the client narrow the policy coverage by way of endorsement and, thus, reduce the policy's premium?

Settlement and Defense Provisions

1. Is the client's consent required before the insurance company can settle a claim against the client?

2. Does the policy permit the client to participate in the selection of counsel? Is so, will the insurer allow the client to select only from among a list of specified attorneys?

3. Liability Insurance: does the policy provide coverage for actions against governmental or regulatory agencies?

Notice and Reporting Provisions

1. What is the period of cancellation by the insurance company [see § 1F.19]?

2. What are the insurer's notice requirements for cancellation or non-renewal [see §§ 1F.19, 1F.22]?

3. When must the insured give notice of cancellation [see § 1F.18]?

4. When must the insured give notice to the insurer of a claim?

The Insurance Application

1. Is the client aware that he or she must provide complete and accurate responses to every question on the insurance application?

2. Liability Insurance: Has the client disclosed circumstances that may give rise to claim?

3. Liability Insurance: If the client is changing insurers, has the client notified its present insurer of circumstances that may give rise to a claim?

Other Insurance Coverage

1. Has the client reviewed its existing insurance coverage to determine if there is any duplication of coverage among different policies?

The Insurer's Reliability

1. How long has the insurer been writing insurance in the United States and in California?

NOTE:

The California Department of Insurance will provide, on request, information on (1) whether an insurer is licensed to write insurance in California, (2) how long an insurer has been writing insurance in California, and (3) relative number of claims against an insurer compared to other insurers.

2. In what states is the insurer admitted? How long has the insurer been writing insurance in those states?

NOTE:

New York has the most stringent insurance regulations in the United States. Since New York enacted its Insurance Law of 1909, no insurance company licensed in New York is known to have gone bankrupt. Therefore, the client may want to consider obtaining an insurance policy from a company licensed to do business in New York.

3. Is the insurer financially sound?

NOTE:

Factors to consider include the insurer's Best Company rating (A+ preferred), Moody's, and Standard and Poor's claims-paying rates (AAA or AAA preferred); its reinsurance ratings; its capitalization; its current financial position and operating history; and the percentage of investment grade securities in the insurer's portfolio (if a whole life contract is being considered).

The insurer's performance can be determined by consulting A.M. Best's Insurance Company Rating Guide), an annual publication that summarizes certain financial, operating, and underwriting information about a large number of insurers, or Standard and Poors Insurance Digest, a quarterly publication that summarizes the rates and claim-paying abilities of some insurers.

4. What is the insurer's reputation for claims handling?

5. What is the insurer's reputation for underwriting flexibility?

§ 1F.205 Business General Liability Policy

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an illustration of a standard form of business general liability insurance policy, issued by the Insurance Services Office (ISO). It is reproduced here to give the attorney and client an idea of the provisions typically contained in a business liability policy.

For illustrations of other business general liability policies and extensive coverage of these policies, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Volume 3, Chapter 49, Business General Liability Policies (Matthew Bender).

[b] Importance of Business General Liability Policy

The general liability policy is the basic coverage used by a business to protect itself against claims by third parties. The function of this policy is to protect the business against loss arising out of legal liability to others for bodily injury or property damage. This type of policy does not negate the requirement to carry other mandatory or recommended types of insurance, including workers' compensation insurance, malpractice insurance, and directors and officers liability insurance [see California Insurance Law and Practice, vol. 3, Ch. 49, Business General Liability Policies , § 49.02 (Matthew Bender)].

For further coverage of commercial liability insurance, see Section 1F.52[2].

[c] Claims Made Coverage and Occurrence Coverage

Standard general liability policies are printed in both "claims made" versions and "occurrence" versions. A claims made policy provides coverage for those claims reported to an insurer during the policy period. If a claim is not made until after the policy period has expired, the insurer has no liability [Chamberlin v. Smith (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 835, 846, 140 Cal. Rptr. 493] . An occurrence policy provides coverage for acts or omissions that take place during the policy period, regardless of when the claim is made [VTN Consolidated, Inc. v. Northbrook Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 888, 891, 155 Cal. Rptr. 172] . For further discussion of the differences between these two types of coverage, see Section 1F.69[4].

This chapter sets forth the considerations and steps involved in planning and forming a corporation. It covers various issues and decisions involved in forming a corporation, and provides procedures and forms used in the corporate formation process. The chapter also discusses the use of preincorporation agreements to incorporate, preincorporation subscription agreements, and preincorporation agreements with third parties.

The Legal Background covers the legal and formal considerations in corporate formation, and the use of various types of preincorporation agreements. The Transaction Guide includes checklists of the relevant facts and documents to obtain from clients planning to form a corporation, the preliminary determinations to make at the preincorporation planning stage, procedural guides to the selection and reservation of a corporate name, preincorporation agreements, planning for incorporation, and planning for the formation of a close corporation. It also includes guides for drafting preincorporation agreements and lists procedures related and subsequent to the execution of preincorporation subscription agreements and contracts between the incorporators and third parties.

The forms section provides various forms related to preincorporation planning and actions, including an incorporation checklist, a request to reserve a corporate name, and a resolution perfecting the corporation. Subscription agreements, an investor questionnaire, a preincorporation agreement to incorporate, and an indemnity agreement are also included.

For a guide to the determinations that any new business, corporate or noncorporate, must make before beginning operations, see Chs. 1A through 1F. For a guide to the considerations involved in determining whether to incorporate or to conduct business in some form other than the corporate form, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . The steps that must be taken to incorporate a going business such as a partnership or sole proprietorship are detailed in Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business .

§ 2.10 Planning and Forming Corporation

[1] In General

This chapter is for use in the corporate planning and formation process once the decision has been made to form a corporation under the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 100]. For a discussion of issues to consider in deciding whether to incorporate, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 2, Choice of Form of Doing Business . This chapter is not for use with nonprofit corporations [see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations], cooperative corporations [see Ch. 14, Consumer Cooperative Corporations and Ch. 14A, Agricultural Nonprofit Cooperative Associations], or statutory close corporations [see California Small Business Guide (Matthew Bender)].

After the decision to incorporate has been made, the principals must:

- Decide where to incorporate [see § 2.110].
- Choose a corporate name [see § 2.132].
- Determine an appropriate purpose clause for the articles of incorporation [see § 2.16].
- Choose an initial agent for service of process [see § 2.17].
- Determine the identity, role and compensation of the incorporator or incorporators [see § 2.30].
- Determine whether to use and how to compensate a promoter or promoters [see § 2.30].
- Determine the corporate capital structure [see § 2.18].

- Determine the use and form of any preincorporation agreements, including agreements among shareholders, subscription agreements and preincorporation contracts with third parties [see §§ 2.31-2.33].

Generally, these decisions and determinations must be made before the articles of incorporation are filed. For discussion of preparing the articles of incorporation, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation . For discussion of preparing bylaws, see Ch. 4, Bylaws .

Many organizational tasks will be carried out at the first, or organizational, meeting of the board of directors. For discussion of the procedure for this meeting and the issues to be covered, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions . The corporation also must make various decisions regarding accounting, including choosing an accounting period and an accounting method [see § 2.115, P 10, 11]. For more detailed coverage of bookkeeping, recordkeeping, and other filing and record requirements, see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports . Requirements relating to shareholders are covered in Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements .

The procedures involved in incorporating a going business are covered in Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business . For coverage of electing Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

[2] Consequences of Improper Incorporation

Substantial compliance with the statutory requirements for incorporation will result in a de jure corporation, that is, a valid and operating corporation. If there is a failure to comply with all technical incorporation requirements, a de facto corporation may be created. A de facto corporation is created when there is:

- A law under which a corporation can be organized;
- A good faith attempt to organize the corporation under that law; and
- Actual use of the corporate powers.

A de facto corporation is entitled to act as any other corporation unless it is dissolved in an action brought by the Attorney General [Westlake Park Inv. Co. v. Jordan (1926) 198 Cal. 609, 614, 618, 246 P. 807] .

A complete failure to comply with incorporation requirements or a failure to follow corporate formalities [see § 2.115] can result in a finding that no corporation exists. In this situation, the limitation of liability for the shareholders will not be available, and the principals may be personally liable for the debts of the corporation [see, e.g., Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473] .

§ 2.11 Number and Sophistication of Incorporators or Investors

When a small number of principals with close business or personal relationships form a corporation, they may not see the need to commit their agreements to writing, though it is always a good idea to do so. As the number of investors or the amount of investment increases, however, written agreements and commitments with and by principals, shareholders and investors become essential.

§ 2.12 Where to Incorporate

After deciding to incorporate, the next key decision is deciding where to incorporate. A corporation may be incorporated in California and conduct business in California as a domestic corporation, or may incorporate elsewhere (such as Delaware or Nevada) and conduct business in California as a foreign corporation. Foreign corporations conducting business in California are subject to varying amounts of regulation, depending on the extent of the activities in the state and the residence of its shareholders [see Corp. Code §§ 2101-2117.1]. For further discussion, see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations and Associations .

In general, if the majority of the corporation's business will be conducted in California, there may be an advantage to incorporating in California based on weighing various factors, such as the costs of incorporation, tax considerations, jurisdictional issues, and the extent of regulation of the corporation. Incorporation elsewhere may be more appropriate, however, in some instances, such as when the business is a regional subsidiary of a national corporation. For a list of factors to consider in determining whether to incorporate in California or elsewhere, see § 2.110.

§ 2.13 Name of Corporation

[1] Choosing Corporate Name

[a] In General

Prior to filing the articles of incorporation, a name must be chosen for the corporation. Generally, the principals select the corporate name on the basis of business and personal factors. The availability of the proposed name and alternate names should be checked with the Corporate Name Availability Unit of the office of the Secretary of State prior to submitting the articles of incorporation for filing. If it is anticipated that the corporation will conduct business in other states, the availability of the proposed name also should be checked in those states.

For a checklist to assist in choosing a corporate name, see § 2.132[1].

[b] Restrictions on Corporate Names

The Secretary of State will not file articles of incorporation bearing a name that is likely to mislead the public, or that is the same as, or resembles so closely as to tend to deceive, the actual or reserved name of a domestic corporation or a foreign corporation operating within California in compliance with California law [see Corp. Code § 201(b)].

Some additional restrictions on corporate names are as follows:

- The name of a corporation may not include the words "bank," "trust," "trustee," or related words unless approved by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [see Corp. Code § 201(a)].

- If the business of the corporation is to be an insurer, the Insurance Commissioner must first approve the name [see Corp. Code § 201.5].

- Use of the word "cooperative" is restricted [see Corp. Code § 12311(b); Food & Agric. Code § 54036].

- If the corporation is a close corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 158, the name must include the word "corporation," "incorporated," "limited," or an abbreviation of one of these [Corp. Code § 202(a)].

Certain types of corporations have additional name requirements. These include dental corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 1804], medical corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2285, 2415], architectural corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536], engineering corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6738], and law corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6171].

Federal law also imposes name restrictions. The terms "national," "Federal," "United States," "reserve," "Deposit Insurance," and other terms associated with the federal government may not be used in corporate names [see 18 U.S.C. § 709]. In addition, use of words and symbols relating to the Olympics may not be used without permission of the United States Olympic Committee [see 36 U.S.C. § 380].

For a detailed list of terms and words that may not be used in a corporate name, see § 2.132[1].

The Secretary of State's office has made available online general information on name availability [see http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/corp/corp_naav2.htm#geninfo].

[2] Reserving Corporate Name

[a] In General

A corporate name may be reserved through the Corporate Name Availability Unit of the office of the Secretary of State for a period of 60 days upon payment of the applicable fee [Corp. Code § 201(c); see Gov. Code § 12186(a) (fee)]. The same name (or a similar one) may not be reserved by the same applicant or on behalf of the same person, partnerships, firm, or corporation for additional 60-day periods over the course of a business day, between reservation periods [Corp. Code § 201(c)]. For a procedural guide to checking and reserving a corporate name, see § 2.132[2].

[b] Checking Availability of Corporate Name

The availability of a corporate name may be checked with the Secretary of State's office in the following ways [see Secretary of State's website at http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/corp/corp_naav2.htm#resv]:

- By mail. Completing and mailing a Name Availability Inquiry Letter to the Secretary of State's office in Sacramento. [see § 2.200A (form) (no fee)].

- Through prepaid account. A Prepaid Priority Account may be established with the office of the Secretary of State whereby the holder may telephone the office of the Secretary of State via priority telephone lines to check on the availability of a corporate name. For each such request the caller's account is debited $4.

Email and online inquiries are not currently available.

Checking the availability of a corporate name does not reserve, or confer any rights to, the name; nor does it have any binding effect on the Secretary of State.

[c] Reserving Corporate Name

A corporate name may be reserved for 60 days as follows [see Secretary of State's website at http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/corp/corp_naav2.htm#resv]:

- By written request. A completed Name Reservation Request form [see § 2.201 (information and form)] accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope, may be mailed to the Secretary's Sacramento office. The completed form must be accompanied by a $10 fee.

- In Person (Over the Counter). A corporate name may be reserved by submitting a completed Name Reservation Request form [see § 2.201 (information and form)] in person either at the main office of the Secretary of State in Sacramento or at one of the Secretary's offices in Fresno, Los Angeles, San Diego, or San Francisco. In addition to the $10 per name reservation fee, a $10 special handling fee per reserved name must be remitted separately and will be retained whether the proposed name is accepted or denied for reservation [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 21903(b)(3), (c)(3) (fees)].

- By Prepaid Account. A prepaid account may be established with the office of the Secretary of State whereby the holder may telephone the office of the Secretary of State via priority telephone lines to reserve a corporate name. For each such reservation the caller's account will be debited $10 plus $4 per name if the availability of potential names is checked [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 21903(b)(3), (c)(3) (fees)].

§ 2.14 Using a Fictitious Business Name

A corporation may wish to conduct business under a fictitious business name if, for example, the desired corporate name is unavailable but use of the name would not otherwise create problems, or if the corporation wishes to create a perceived local or regional connection with the name. When used by a corporation, a "fictitious business name" is any name other than the corporate name stated in the articles of incorporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(3)].

If a corporation intends to regularly transact business for profit in California under a fictitious business name, it must file a fictitious business name statement with the clerk of the county in which it has its principal place of business [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17915; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913 (form for fictitious business name statement)]. The statement must be signed by an officer of the corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17914].

For further discussion and a fictitious business name statement, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business .

§ 2.15 Deciding Whether to Form Close Corporation

Before incorporating, the incorporators will want to determine whether or not to incorporate as a close corporation. A "close corporation" in California is one whose articles of incorporation contain, in addition to the provisions required by Corp. Code § 202 [discussed in § 2.16 et seq.], the following provisions [Corp. Code § 158(a)]:

- All of the corporation's issued shares of all classes will be held of record by not more than a specified number of persons, not greater than 35; and

- "This corporation is a close corporation."

Close corporation status may be desirable if the principals wish to operate the corporation as if it were a partnership, or if they wish to avoid certain corporate formalities [see § 2.112].

Close corporation status may be elected at the time of the corporation's initial incorporation, or a corporation may attain close corporation status by later amendment of the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 158(b)]. If shares have been issued prior to conversion to close corporation status, the articles may be amended to include close corporation provisions only after the affirmative vote of all of the issued and outstanding shares of all classes [Corp. Code § 158(b)]. Close corporation status may be canceled by amending the articles of incorporation after appropriate approval by the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 158(c)].

For a list of factors to consider in determining whether to adopt close corporation status, see § 2.112. For a procedural guide to forming a close corporation, see § 2.131. For more detailed discussion of close corporations, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , and California Small Business Guide (Matthew Bender).

§ 2.16 Determining Purpose of Corporation

The articles of incorporation must include a statement concerning the purpose of the corporation [Corp. Code § 202(b)]. The purpose of a corporation may be to engage in any lawful act or activity for which a corporation may be organized under the General Corporation Law (with certain exceptions) [see Corp. Code § 202(b)(1)(i)], or may be specifically tailored to the profession in which the corporation will engage [see Corp. Code § 202(b)(1)(ii)]. Corporations in particular businesses, such as banking and insurance, must comply with additional purpose-clause requirements [see Corp. Code § 202(b)(2), (3)]. Similarly, if the corporation is intended to be a professional corporation, the articles must also contain a statement to that effect [Corp. Code § 202(b)(4); see Corp. Code § 13404 (content); see also Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations].

PRACTICE TIP:

Generally the articles of incorporation of corporations organized under the General Corporation Law state that the purpose of the corporation is to engage in any lawful act or activity. There is no advantage to be gained from limiting the purpose of the corporation, and a broad purpose statement allows the corporation to engage in different types of business without first having to amend its articles of incorporation. For examples of various purpose clauses, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

§ 2.17 Designating Initial Agent for Service of Process

A corporation's articles of incorporation must set forth the name of the corporation's initial agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 202(c)]. The agent must be either a natural person residing in California or a corporation that has complied with Corp. Code § 1505(b) and whose capacity to act as an agent has not terminated [Corp. Code §§ 202(c), 1502(b)].

When designating an individual as the agent, the complete address, not a post office box, of the agent must be stated. When designating a corporation as agent, the address should not be stated [Office of Secretary of State, State of California, Guide to Corporate Filings 44-45 (1995-1996 ed.)].

§ 2.18 Capital Structure of Corporation

In order to carry on its business, a corporation needs to acquire certain assets and services. The principals must determine what assets and services are needed and how the corporation will pay for those assets and services. Generally, assets and services may be acquired either in exchange for securities of the corporation, on credit or for cash. If the assets and services are going to be acquired for cash, the principals must determine how the corporation is going to generate the cash. Generally, cash can be generated by selling shares of the corporation [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities], selling debt securities of the corporation [see Ch. 6J, Issuance of Debt Securities] or borrowing.

Consequently, the principals must determine the classes of shares, the number of shares to be authorized, the rights attendant to those shares, the number of shares to be issued, and the par value of the shares.

If the corporation is authorized to issue only one class of shares, the total number of shares that the corporation is authorized to issue must be set forth in the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 202(d)]. If the corporation is authorized to issue more than one class of shares, or if any class of shares is to have more than one series, the articles of incorporation must either (1) fix the authorized number of shares in that class or series and the rights, preferences and privileges of the respective classes or series, or (2) authorize the board, within any limits stated, to determine or alter the number and rights, preferences and privileges of any class or series of wholly unissued shares [Corp. Code § 202(e)].

If the rights, preferences, privileges and restrictions of any class or series of shares are not set forth in the articles of incorporation, the board, if authorized by the articles, may pass a resolution and file it with the Secretary of State in a Certificate of Designation setting forth the number of shares of a class or series, and the rights, preferences and privileges attached to that class or series, if no such shares have been issued [Corp. Code § 401; *see also § 2.130[3]P[6]*.

§ 2.30 Using Incorporators and Promoters

[1] Incorporators

The person or persons who perform the initial acts to establish the corporate identity of the corporation, such as preparing and filing the articles of incorporation, are the incorporators of the corporation. If initial directors are not named in the articles of incorporation, each incorporator must sign and acknowledge the original articles of incorporation [see Corp. Code § 200(b)]. An incorporator may be a natural person, a partnership, an association, or a corporation [see Corp. Code § 200(a)].

The incorporator or incorporators may be principals with an interest in the corporation, or may be an attorney, paralegal or other person hired to perform the mechanics of establishing the corporation.

[2] Promoters

[a] Definition

A "promoter" is a person who brings about the incorporation and organization of a corporation. He or she is the person who brings together the people who become interested in the enterprise, aids in procuring subscriptions, and sets in motion the machinery leading to formation of the corporation itself, or who takes part in the acts that lead to formation of a corporation [see Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co. (1900) 176 U.S. 181, 203-204, 20 S. Ct. 311, 44 L. Ed. 423 ; see also MacDonald v. Arrowhead Hot Springs Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App. 496, 500, 300 P. 105] .

Promoters may be persons with an interest in the new corporation or they may be hired by the principals to assist in obtaining subscriptions to buy stock in the new corporation.

For further discussion of promoters, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations (Matthew Bender).

[b] Fiduciary Duty of Promoter

A promoter owes a fiduciary duty to:

- Persons whom the promoter solicits to become a subscriber to shares of the new corporation [California-Calaveras Min. Co. v. Walls (1915) 170 Cal. 285, 298-299, 149 P. 595] ;
- The corporation [Burbank v. Dennis (1894) 101 Cal. 90, 97, 35 P. 444] ; and
- Co-promoters [Bellus v. Peters (1913) 165 Cal. 112, 116, 130 P. 1186] .

[c] Liability of Promoter for Violation of Fiduciary Duty

If a promoter violates his, her, or its fiduciary duty, transactions induced by the promoter may be set aside and the promoter will be liable for the losses suffered by the other party [see Lance v. Forsberg (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 226, 231, 234 P.2d 662 ; Lomita Land and Water Co. v. Robinson (1908) 154 Cal. 36, 45, 97 P. 10] . Co-promoters who perpetrate a fraud on the corporation are joint tortfeasors, and are jointly and severally liable [Lomita Land and Water Co. v. Robinson (1908) 154 Cal. 36, 46, 97 P. 10] .

Promoters may also be subject to criminal liability for certain fraudulent acts regarding stock subscriptions [see Corp. Code §§ 2251, 2252].

[d] Promoter Compensation

A corporation may legally reimburse a promoter for preincorporation services and the organizational expenses incurred before incorporation. Compensation may be given in the form of:

- Shares of the corporation [see Corp. Code § 409(a)(1); see also Nakashima v. Muth (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 966, 969, 89 Cal. Rptr. 495] ;
- Money [see McSherry v. The Market Corporation (1933) 129 Cal. App. 330, 332, 18 P.2d 776] ;
- A contract for employment [see Trumbo v. Bank of Berkeley (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 704, 709, 176 P.2d 376] ; or
- Any combination of the above [see Weinstock v. L.A. Carpet, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 809, 811, 44 Cal. Rptr. 852] .

PRACTICE TIP:
An agreement between the incorporators and a promoter may be enforced against the corporation and, as a matter of good practice, such an agreement should clearly specify the amount to be paid to the promoter and the method by which payment will be made [see Chater v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co. (1861) 19 Cal. 219, 246 ; see also § 2.220[1][b]]. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

For further discussion of compensation of promoters and reimbursement for preincorporation services and expenses, see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, Ch. 55, The Promoter's Relationship With the Corporation to Be Formed (Matthew Bender), and Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 2 FORMATION OF CORPORATIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Preincorporation Agreements and Activities

2-2 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 2.31

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger, Practice Consultant

§ 2.31 Preincorporation Agreements

A preincorporation agreement is a contract entered into by the persons who intend to organize a corporation and become its initial shareholders. It sets forth their rights and liabilities as among themselves, rather than between themselves and the corporation.

A preincorporation agreement is certainly desirable for persons who do not have a well-established business relationship, especially when substantial funding will be required to launch the business or the preincorporation activities are very complex, but is also useful when the principals are all members of the same family or close friends or business associates. A properly drafted preincorporation agreement can prevent later dissension or litigation. Moreover, it is useful to include the bargain of the parties in the preincorporation agreement in order to ensure contractual liability if one of the principals seeks to avoid incorporation. In addition, when subscriptions are to be sought from third parties, the preincorporation agreement may be the only document that the subscribers can rely on as evidence of what they can expect from their subscription.

Preincorporation agreements may address the following:

- Parties' roles. Define the parties' role and compensation as promoters.

- Employment. Spell out any employment commitments to the parties and the terms of the employment [see § 2.220].

- Future funding. Set forth the obligations each person has to contribute future funding, the proportion of the funding that each will contribute, and the method by which the investments will be made, whether by stock purchase, loans, or outright contribution.

- Stock transfer. Spell out restrictions on stock transfer. These restrictions may be spelled out in the articles of incorporation, bylaws or in post-incorporation shareholders' agreements. However, it may be prudent, and even required by some or all of the principals, to have these restrictions specified in writing before incorporation.

- Trade secret protection. Protect or provide for the contribution of a trade secret or processor other asset to be contributed to the business.

- Other agreements. Place in writing any part of the bargain between the principals that would not, in the ordinary course of business, be contained in the articles, the bylaws, or the written actions or resolutions of the directors or shareholders.

For a guide to drafting a preincorporation agreement, see § 2.140. A preincorporation agreement to incorporate is set forth in § 2.230. For further discussion of preincorporation agreements, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations (Matthew Bender).

2-2 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 2.32

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger, Practice Consultant

§ 2.32 Subscription Agreements

[1] Overview

A subscription agreement is an agreement to take stock in a corporation [see Brown v. North Ventura Road Dev. Co. (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 227, 233, 30 Cal. Rptr. 568] . Subscription agreements are most frequently used in connection with offerings made to individuals who have no preexisting business or personal ties with the promoters. Use of a subscription agreement is mandatory when the Commissioner of Corporations imposes an impound condition on an offering of securities [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.22(a)].

Because preincorporation agreements are not binding on a corporation until after it has been formed and has accepted the agreements made on its behalf prior to incorporation [see [3], below], it is probably more advantageous, especially in the case of large offerings, to form the corporation (by filing the articles of incorporation) before soliciting any subscriptions for shares. This enables the corporation to accept subscriptions immediately on receipt.

[2] Subscription Agreement Is a Security

[a] Need to Comply with Securities Laws

A subscription agreement is a "security" under the Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25019] and under the Securities Act of 1933 [15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1)]. Offers of securities (that is, attempts or offers to dispose of, or solicitation of offers to buy securities [Corp. Code § 25017(b); 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(3)]) must be qualified under California law and registered under federal law unless they are specifically exempted or are not subject to qualification [Corp. Code § 25110; 15 U.S.C. § 77e]. In addition, if securities are being offered to persons who are residents of states other than California, the securities laws of those states should be reviewed and complied with.

PRACTICE TIP:
Exemptions from registration and qualification under securities laws often turn on the financial status of some if not all of the purchasers. When they do, an issuer must know the financial status of potential investors and should require each investor to complete an investor questionnaire such as the one set out in § 2.213. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

[b] Exemptions from Qualification in California

The solicitation of subscriptions incident to the formation of a corporation for which the number of shareholders will be limited may be exempt from qualification in California under the following exemptions:

- Small offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(h); see also Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption];
- Limited offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(f); see also Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions]; or
- Qualified purchaser offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(n); see Ch. 6D, California Qualified Purchaser Exemptions].

In addition, Corp. Code § 25102(a) exempts nonpublic offers, but not sales, from qualification if the offer contains language required by statute and if no consideration for the securities is paid or received until the securities are issued under a permit [Corp. Code § 25102(a)]. See § 2.210 for further discussion.

[c] Exemptions from Federal Registration

The solicitation of subscriptions incident to the formation of a corporation for which the number of shareholders will be limited may be exempt from registration under federal law pursuant to the following exemptions:

- Intrastate offering exemption [15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11)];
- Private offering exemption [15 U.S.C. § 77d(2)];
- Limited and private offerings under Regulation D [17 C.F.R. §§ 230.501-230.508]; or
- Exemption for offers and sales solely to accredited investors as defined in 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(15) and 17 C.F.R. § 230.215 [15 U.S.C. § 77d(6)].

[d] Timing Considerations

If the offer of securities does not qualify for an exemption, the principals must determine at what stage in the process they need to qualify or register the securities. Three stages in the financial planning of a corporation can be identified along a continuum as follows:

- Preliminary business discussions between principals and potential investors regarding whether to organize, how to organize, and whether there is any prospect of financial assistance from possible investors;
- Offers to sell securities, or solicitation of offers to buy securities; and
- The actual sale of securities.

Qualification and registration may not be required for the exchange of views or preliminary discussions before a fixed plan of operation and financing has been determined [see B.C. Turf & Country Club v. Daugherty (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 320, 329-331, 210 P.2d 760] . However, further discussions could be interpreted as offers of securities and may be subject to qualification and registration requirements.

For a more detailed discussion of the qualification and registration of securities, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues , and Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities . For additional discussion, see Marsh and Volk, Practice Under the California Securities Laws (Matthew Bender). For further discussion of the small offering and limited offering exemptions, see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions , and Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption . For further discussion of securities laws, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 10, Transfer and Registration of Securities (Matthew Bender).

[3] Preincorporation Subscription Agreements Not Binding

Generally a preincorporation subscription constitutes merely a continuing offer to purchase stock in a corporation, and is not binding on the corporation until the corporation is formed and accepts the offer [see Marysville etc. Co. v. Johnson (1892) 93 Cal. 538, 546, 29 P. 126 ; see also Hoppe v. Rittenhouse (9th Cir. 1960) 279 F.2d 3, 8] . Consequently, a subscription may be withdrawn at any time before the proposed corporation is formed and takes some action to accept the offer. Thus, the principals should be advised of the need to have the agreements accepted immediately after formation of the corporation by resolution of the board of directors.

For further discussion of subscription agreement, see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, Ch. 86, Stock Subscriptions (Matthew Bender).

[4] Mandatory Use of Subscription Agreements in Connection With Impound Condition

In certain securities offerings the Commissioner of Corporations will require that funds received pursuant to the offering be placed in an escrow account until all funds necessary to finance the proposed undertaking are received by the offerors [10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.141.20, 260.141.21]. When such an impound condition is imposed on an offering, the use of a subscription agreement is mandatory [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.22(a)]. The form of the subscription agreement must be approved by the Commissioner, and must contain certain specified information [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.22].

When an impound condition has been imposed, the issuer may not issue any certificates or other evidence of securities until the impound condition has been satisfied and the impound funds have been released to the issuer. All checks must be made payable to the depositary or to a licensed broker-dealer as the selling agent. All funds received from the sale, including any amounts allowed as selling expenses, must be placed in a separate escrow account with an approved depositary within 48 hours of receipt [10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.141.21, 260.141.23(a)]. Normally the depositary will be a national bank located in California or a California bank [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.23(a); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.23(b) (contents of application for approval of depositary and minimum contents of agreement between issuer and depositary)].

The Commissioner will authorize the depositary to release the impound funds to the issuer when the full amount of impound funds specified in the impound condition has been deposited and any other conditions to the release have been satisfied, unless there have been changes in the plan of operation or in other circumstances that would render the impound funds inadequate, or circumstances have changed so that the Commissioner could no longer find that the sale would be fair, just, and equitable [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.24(a); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.24(b) (contents of application by issuer to release impound funds)]. The Commissioner may approve a partial release of impound funds in unusual cases [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.24(d)].

If the specified amount of impound funds has not been obtained as of the date specified in the impound condition, or on the earlier issuance of a stop order or an order suspending or revoking the qualification permit, the Commissioner will issue an order directing the depositary to return to each subscriber the amount of each subscriber's payment [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.25(a)]. Extensions of time may be granted in unusual cases [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.25(b)].

The Commissioner has discretion to grant variances from these requirements. An issuer that desires a variance must submit a verified request for variance [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.27].

§ 2.33 Preincorporation Agreements With Third Parties

[1] Overview

In the preincorporation planning stage, the incorporators may have occasion to enter into agreements with third parties for services to be performed for or on behalf of the corporation before or after its incorporation. These agreements include contracts for financing, subscriptions to shares, the acquisition or lease of property, the acquisition of patents, copyrights, or trade secrets, and the employment of key personnel.

The promoter forming the contract on behalf of the corporation may have varying degrees of liability depending on his or her role in the contract.

[2] Contract in Incorporator's Name Only

When the contract is entered into by an incorporator in his or her own name (whether that person is a principal or a professional hired by the principals) without reference to a contemplated corporation, the incorporator will be personally liable on the contract, as in normal contract situations [see Shell Oil Co. v. Hanchett (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 240, 243, 63 P.2d 338] . Such a contract should allow for assignment of the contract by the incorporator to the corporation.

The corporation, when it is established, may assume liability of the contract by ratifying or adopting the obligation. In the absence of a novation, however, the incorporator is not necessarily relieved of his or her obligation under the contract [see Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 635, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144 ; Biggart v. Lewis (1920) 183 Cal. 660, 667, 192 P. 437] . Accordingly, this type of contract should be avoided by the incorporator if possible. Third parties, however, may insist on this kind of arrangement.

[3] Contracts Made on Behalf of Proposed Corporation

An incorporator may contract with a third party in the incorporator's name but with the express stipulation or disclosure that the incorporator is acting on behalf of the proposed corporation and that the corporation is to perform the contract. Because the corporation is not in existence at the time the agreement is entered into, however, it may not become bound or liable thereunder unless it ratifies the agreement either expressly or impliedly by performance or willful and knowing acceptance of its benefits. Conversely, the incorporator may be held personally liable even if the proposed corporation is actually incorporated and then adopts the agreement [see Shell Oil Co. v. Hanchett (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 240, 243, 63 P.2d 338] . This liability may be negated by novation, but it should also be addressed by express limitations set forth in the contract.

[4] Agreement Constituting Continuing Offer by Third Party

The incorporator may enter into an agreement in the name of the corporation without actually becoming a party to the contract. In this type of contract, it is made entirely clear that the corporation, if and when it is formed, will be solely responsible for performance under the contract. Such agreements may be treated as continuing offers that do not ripen into a legally binding contract until accepted by the corporation after its incorporation. The incorporator can avoid being bound under this type of contract if the corporation, when formed, will have power to ratify or adopt it [see MacDonald v. Arrowhead Hot Springs Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App. 496, 501, 300 P. 105] . In the preincorporation planning stage, therefore, the incorporators should use this type of contract whenever possible.

There is often a problem of establishing that the incorporator intended, and the other contracting party understood and agreed, that the incorporator was not to be personally liable on the contract, but that only the future corporation was to be bound, if and when it came into existence. In preincorporation transactions, the corporation is not in existence and thus is not and cannot be an original party to the contract even if the incorporator purports to act in the name of the nonexistent corporation. Thus, the incorporators should be advised to make clear in the written contract itself that the contracting party is fully aware that only the future corporation will be liable and then only after it ratifies or adopts the contract.

In the majority of situations, the corporation's board of directors will assume liability by taking some positive action, whether by accepting the benefits of the contract and impliedly ratifying it, by adopting or ratifying it through novation, or by accepting the continuing offer embodied in the agreement [see, e.g., Biggart v. Lewis (1920) 183 Cal. 660, 667, 192 P. 437] . However, in the planning stage, the incorporators should assure such a result by assuring their control over the corporation through the distribution of voting stock among themselves.

§ 2.100 Facts

[1] Incorporators and Promoters

1. Name, address, telephone number, and background of each principal or incorporator [see [5], [6], below].

2. Name, address, telephone number, and background of each person performing promotion work.

NOTE:

Promotion work includes the procurement of preincorporation subscriptions and the work done in forming a corporation [see Dickerman v. Northern Trust Company (1900) 176 U.S. 181, 203-204, 20 S. Ct. 311, 44 L. Ed. 423 ; see also MacDonald v. Arrowhead Hot Springs Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App. 496, 500, 300 P. 105] .

3. Persons responsible for paying for promotion work if:

a. Corporation is formed;

b. Corporation is not formed; or

c. Corporation refuses to compensate promoter.

[2] Proposed Corporation

1. Proposed name for corporation and three alternative names.

NOTE:
For a discussion of the steps involved in the selection and reservation of a corporate name, see § 2.132. For a form for a request to reserve a corporate name, see § 2.201.

2. Additional fictitious business names (that is, names other than exact corporate name) under which corporation will do business in California, and counties where business will be transacted under those names.

NOTE:
For further discussion of fictitious business names, see § 2.14. For illustration of the forms to use to file a fictitious business name statement, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business .

3. Location of proposed corporation:

a. Address, including county, and telephone number of principal executive office.

b. Address, including state and/or county, and telephone number of each other office or place where business is to be conducted.

4. Operation of proposed corporation:

a. General proposed method of doing business or principal types of business to be conducted.

b. Related activities of corporation.

c. Type of activities to be conducted in each office or place of business where business is to be conducted.

d. Initial operating capital requirements of corporation (that is, for first six to 12 months).

e. Estimated amount and sources of income for first year.

f. Federal, state, and local business licenses or registrations required.

g. Number of employees proposed for each location.

h. Officer or employee in charge of each location.

5. Description and location of real property that will be owned by corporation.

6. Description and location of premises to be leased, term of lease, and name and address of lessor.

7. Description, value, and tax basis of major assets owned or to be acquired.

8. Name, address, and telephone number of accountant.

9. Name, address, and telephone number of insurance carriers and brokers.

10. Name and address of each bank, and name of bank officer or employee dealt with.

11. Accounting year proposed (that is, calendar year or other).

12. Accounting method to be used (that is, cash or accrual).

13. Date that principals desire business to commence in corporate form.

14. Date proposed for transfer of assets of going business to corporation [see Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business].

[3] Agent for Service of Process

Name and address of initial agent for service of process.

PRACTICE TIP:

There are corporate agents that will act as an agent for a nominal fee. Use of a corporate agent assures the corporation of continuity in this area. Corporate agents often provide other services useful to corporations, including maintaining corporate filings with the Secretary of State. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

[4] Financing for Proposed Corporation

1. Sources from which required funds will be obtained and amount to be obtained from each source:

a. Sale of common stock [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].

b. Sale of preferred stock [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].

c. Sale of debt securities [see Ch. 6J, Issuance of Debt Securities].

d. Loans or other contributions to capital.

e. Other sources.

2. For each type of security (debt or equity) to be sold:

a. Description of security.

b. Number authorized.

c. Number to be sold.

d. Number of holders.

e. Sale price of each security.

f. Date of first issuance.

3. If shares are to be offered to others than original incorporators, names or description of class of persons to whom shares are to be offered.

4. Method proposed for sale of securities:

a. Advertising, including:
(1) Type of medium.

(2) Contents of advertising.

(3) Time for commencing advertising.

b. Subscription agreements, oral or written, obtained through personal contact with proposed security purchaser, including:

(1) Time of contact.

(2) Person, or persons, who are to solicit subscriptions for shares.

c. Use of underwriters, brokers, or salespersons.

d. Total estimated selling expenses.

5. Consideration other than cash to be received for securities:

a. Description and value of real property.

b. Description and value of personal property, tangible and intangible.

c. Description of services to be rendered.

d. Cancellation of indebtedness.

[5] Future Shareholders

1. Proposed number of security holders in each of following classifications:

a. Common shareholders.

b. Preferred shareholders.

c. Bondholders.

d. Debenture holders.

2. Qualifications of shareholders to be imposed by articles or bylaws.

3. Personal information for each shareholder, if offering is private:

NOTE:
For a questionnaire to present to potential investors to obtain the following information, see § 2.213.

a. Name.

b. Social Security Number or Tax I.D. Number

c. Principal residence address and telephone number.

d. Business address and telephone number.

e. Date of birth.

f. Principal occupation.

g. Employment and other positions held in the last five years.

h. Annual income, individually or jointly with spouse, for last two years plus estimate for current year.

i. Net worth, individually or jointly with spouse.

j. Educational background.

k. Business experience.

l. Previous investments in "start-up" corporations, marketable securities, securities with limited marketability.

m. Use of accountants, lawyers or other experts in evaluating this and previous investments.

n. Relationship by blood, marriage, business, or close friendship with officers, directors, or other shareholders.

o. Position with corporation, services to be performed for corporation, and salary to be paid.

p. Number and description of securities to be purchased.

q. Description and value of consideration to be paid for securities cash, property, or services.

r. Whether investor can afford to lose this investment; whether it is more than 10 percent of investor's net worth.

s. Date and method of obtaining agreement to subscribe.

4. Meetings and voting:

a. Time and place of annual shareholders' meeting.

b. Type of bylaws to be adopted by shareholders, if any.

c. Notice of annual meeting to be required or dispensed with.

d. Restrictions on transfer of shares to be included in articles of incorporation, bylaws, or shareholders' agreement.

[6] Future Directors

1. Number of directors planned or desired:

a. Definite number with minimum of three.

NOTE:
Corporations may have one or two directors if there are, respectively, one or two shareholders [Corp. Code § 212(a)].

b. Indefinite number with minimum of three.

NOTE:
An odd number of voting directors is desirable to avoid tie votes. If the bylaws are to provide for an even number of directors with a director as nonvoting chairperson (except in case of ties), that result would be achieved.

2. Qualifications of directors to be imposed by articles or bylaws.

3. Compensation to be fixed by articles or bylaws.

4. Use of indemnity agreements.

5. Personal and biographical information regarding proposed directors if shares of corporation will have to be qualified with the Commissioner of Corporations:

a. Name.

b. Residence address and telephone number.

c. Business address and telephone number.

d. Date of birth.

e. Educational background, including degrees and areas of specialization.

f. Present occupation.

g. Estimated annual income and net worth.

h. Business experience within the past five years, including names and addresses of employers and periods of employment.

i. Fiduciary experience, including names, addresses, and descriptions of all companies, foundations, and trusts for which person has served in a fiduciary capacity.

j. Refusals, if any, of insurance or bonding companies to issue surety or fidelity bond to or covering proposed director.

k. Criminal convictions, if any.

l. Compensation proposed for services as director, including salary or expenses.

m. Other offices to be held with corporation and salary to be paid for such services.

n. Number and type of securities to be purchased.

o. Description and value of consideration to be paid for securities cash, property, or services.

6. Meetings and voting:

a. Time, date, and place proposed for regular directors' meetings.

b. Time, date, and place of first meeting of directors after filing of articles.

c. Number to be required for quorum of directors (more or less than majority but not less than one third of the authorized number of directors nor less than two directors [Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), 307(a)(7)]).

d. Number of directors to be required for board action at meeting at which quorum is present (majority or more [see Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), 307(a)(8)]).

e. Notices of regular meetings to be required or dispensed with.

f. Action without meeting to be authorized by articles or bylaws.

[7] Future Officers and Employees

1. Proposed number of employees.

2. Estimated amount of monthly payroll.

3. Titles of officers to be appointed at first directors' meeting.

4. Description of duties.

5. Compensation of officers.

6. Use of confidentiality agreements.

7. Personal and biographical information for each officer:

a. Name.

b. Residence address and telephone number.

c. Titles of offices to be held.

d. Status as director.

e. Status as shareholder.

f. Business experience for past five years.

g. Relationship with other officers, directors, and shareholders.

8. Unions to be negotiated with.

9. Fringe benefits:

a. Stock purchase plans.

b. Pension or profit-sharing plans.

c. Group insurance, including hospitalization and other medical benefits.

2-2 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 2.110

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger, Practice Consultant

§ 2.110 Choosing Place of Incorporation

NOTE:
For an extended analysis of the factors involved in deciding where to incorporate, see Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, ch. 61, Where to Incorporate (Matthew Bender).

1. Will proposed corporation be conducted as purely local intrastate business?

NOTE:
If the principal business of the corporation will be conducted in California and the shareholders will be California residents, there is generally no advantage to be gained by incorporating in another state such as Nevada or Delaware, when weighed against the inconvenience of maintaining an out-of-state office and the additional expenses involved.

A foreign corporation that wishes to conduct intrastate business in California must first qualify with the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code § 2105(a)]. Qualification may involve significant costs and taxation [see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations and Associations].

2. In which state will corporation's principal place of business be located?

3. In what state does corporation contemplate that it will derive most of its income?

NOTE:
A foreign corporation is subject to California taxation on its net income from sources within California, regardless of whether it is qualified or otherwise doing business in the state [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23501(a)].

4. Have jurisdictional issues been considered?

NOTE:

A California corporation that transacts purely intrastate business will be subject to jurisdiction only in California. A foreign corporation qualified to do business in California will be subject to jurisdiction in both the home state and in California [see Corp. Code § 2105(a)(5); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 (Judicial Council Comment)]. This may be inconvenient, and, in some cases, may affect federal diversity jurisdiction [see california Forms of Pleading and Practice, ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal (Matthew Bender)].

5. Are principals willing to bear extra costs of incorporating in another state?

a. Fee for filing statement and designation on qualifying to do business in California [see Gov. Code § 12186(e), (f)].

b. California franchise taxes identical to those imposed on domestic corporations [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151 et seq.].

c. Possibility of franchise or income taxes in state of its incorporation.

6. What is effect of state restrictions on issuance of securities?

NOTE:

Any sale or offer of securities in California is subject to the Corporate Securities Law unless expressly exempted or not subject to qualification [Corp. Code § 25110].

7. What is effect of state restrictions on capital structure of proposed corporation?

NOTE:

While other states may impose restrictions on a corporation's capital structure, California has no outright restrictions on the capital structure of a corporation except in the case of a close corporation, which is limited to 35 shareholders [see Corp. Code § 158(a)].

The only statutory requirement bearing on a California corporation's capital structure is that if the corporation is authorized to issue only one class of shares, the total number of authorized shares must appear in the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 202(d)]. If more than one class or more than one series in a class are authorized, the articles may either [Corp. Code § 202(e)]:

- Specify the particulars of the additional classes or series, including the rights, preferences and privileges; or

- Authorize the board to designate the particulars.

The board must make its designation prior to the issuance of any shares in the class or series [Corp. Code § 202(e); see Corp. Code § 401; see also § 2.18].

8. What is effect of state law governing shareholders' rights, powers, and liabilities:

a. Voting trusts [see Corp. Code §§ 605(b), 1600].

NOTE:
For discussion of voting trusts and voting trust agreements under California law, see Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts .

b. Cumulative voting [see Corp. Code §§ 204(a), 303(a), 708].

NOTE:
Some states do not permit cumulative voting. For most California corporations cumulate voting (casting a number of votes equal to the number of shares held multiplied by the number of directors to be elected, for one or more director candidates) must be allowed if requested by the shareholder [see Corp. Code § 708]. For discussion, see Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements . Corporations with shares listed on the New York or American Stock Exchanges and certain other large corporations may amend their articles or bylaws to eliminate cumulative voting [Corp. Code § 301.5; see Corp. Code § 708]. For further discussion, see Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements .

c. Preemptive rights [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(2)].

NOTE:
A preemptive right is the right of a shareholder to subscribe to future issues of shares [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(2)]. For discussion, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

d. Right to inspect records [see Corp. Code §§ 1600, 1601].

NOTE:
Although most states grant shareholders the right to inspect corporate records, those rights should be compared to the rights granted under California law [see Corp. Code §§ 1600, 1601; see also Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports].

e. Rights relative to derivative suits [see Corp. Code §§ 208(a), 800].

NOTE:
California law permits shareholders of both domestic and foreign corporations to assert a claim for alleged wrongdoing to the corporation on its behalf, subject to certain specific procedural limitations [see Corp. Code §§ 208(a), 800]. The rights granted under California law should be compared to those granted to shareholders under the law of any other jurisdiction in which incorporation is being considered.

f. Liability for unpaid stock subscriptions [see § 2.32[3]].

9. What is effect of state law governing directors' powers and liabilities [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]?

a. Classification of directors.

b. Minimum number of directors required.

c. Quorum provisions.

d. Action permitted without meeting.

e. Provisions for executive committees and their powers.

f. Fiduciary duty of directors.

g. Liability of directors.

h. Indemnification of directors.

§ 2.111 Determining Whether to Form More Than One Corporation

NOTE:

In view of the graduated tax rate structure applicable to a corporation's taxable income [see I.R.C. § 11(b); see also § 2.113, P 9c], if the corporation's business, and therefore its income, can be divided between two or more corporations, a considerable income tax saving could be achieved. For example, a single corporation with a taxable income of $200,000 will pay more income tax than two corporations that divide a like amount of taxable income.

However, if the corporations constitute a "controlled group of corporations" [see I.R.C. § 1563(a)], the controlled group is limited to a total of only $50,000 of taxable income in the first bracket, $25,000 in the second bracket, and $9,925,000 in the third bracket [I.R.C. §§ 11(b)(1), 1561]. These amounts must be divided equally among the members of the controlled group unless they consent to an apportionment plan providing for an unequal allocation [I.R.C. § 1561]. For example, if there are two members of a controlled group and if no plan for unequal apportionment is adopted, each component member will be subject to tax at a rate of 15 percent of its first $25,000 of taxable income, 25 percent of its next $12,500, 34 percent of its next $4,962,500, and 35 percent of any income exceeding $5,000,000. For two controlled corporations each with apportioned taxable income over $50,000, the tax is increased by the lesser of (1) 5 percent of any income exceeding $50,000 or (2) $5,875. For two controlled corporations each with apportioned taxable income over $7,500,000, the tax is increased by the lesser of (1) 3 percent of any income exceeding $50,000 or (2) $50,000 [I.R.C. §§ 11(b)(1), 1561]. Note, however, that a qualified personal service corporation [see I.R.C. § 448(d)(2) (definition)] is subject to a 35 percent tax rate on all taxable income [I.R.C. § 11(b)(2); see § 2.113, P 9c].

Although several tests must be met before corporations are subject to controlled group treatment, the threshold issue is whether either a single parent corporation or five or fewer individuals, estates, or trusts own either 80 percent of the combined voting power of all voting stock in each corporation or 80 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock in each corporation [see I.R.C. § 1563(a); see also United States v. Vogel Fertilizer Co. (1982) 455 U.S. 16, 102 S. Ct. 821, 70 L. Ed. 2d 792] . Stock ownership can be actual or constructive [I.R.C. § 1563(d), (e)]. Only in the relatively rare instances in which brother-sister corporations (so distinguished from parent-subsidiary corporations) are owned by a substantial number of shareholders in significantly different proportions will the definition of a "controlled group" be broken, and the possibility of obtaining the major tax advantages be available.

For examination of the lure and pitfalls of multiple corporations, see Cavitch, Tax Planning for Corporations and Shareholders, Ch. 1 (Matthew Bender), and Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 74, The Lure and the Pitfalls of Multiple Corporations (Matthew Bender).

1. Is there business purpose, other than reducing income taxes, for having business conducted by more than one corporation?

NOTE:

If the taxpayer cannot establish that tax avoidance was not a major or principal purpose for forming more than one corporation, the benefits of the graduated corporate tax rates will be denied and the income of the other corporations will be taxed at the highest corporate rate [see I.R.C. §§ 269, 1551].

There are business reasons for using multiple corporations. For example, such a scheme could allow the taking of separate tax elections for a business that would otherwise have been limited to a single election. Thus, separate elections under Subchapter S or Section 1244 could be made for different parts of the business according to the particular needs of each part or different accounting periods or methods could be chosen for each part.

Multiple corporations might also be warranted if it is contemplated that a part of the business will be disposed of in the future. By the initial formation of multiple corporations, avoidance of the exacting requirements of the Internal Revenue Code provisions regarding partial liquidation [see I.R.C. § 346] and spin-off [see I.R.C. § 355] may be avoided at the time of disposal.

2. Is there natural basis for division of business?

a. Separation of ownership of property from hazards of operation?

b. Horizontal division for different products or geographical areas?

c. Functional division, for example, sales and manufacturing operations?

3. Is sale or liquidation of one corporation out of group in foreseeable future probable or desirable?

NOTE:

When multiple corporations are formed to operate different portions of a business, one portion of the business, being a separate corporation, can be liquidated or sold at capital gain rates more readily than would be possible if all portions of the business were operated by the same corporation and a "spin-off" were necessary [see I.R.C. §§ 1(h), 331-338, 355, 1001, 1222; see also Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 74, The Lure and the Pitfalls of Multiple Corporations (Matthew Bender)].

4. Will income from one corporation in group be required for use by another portion of business?

NOTE:

Operating various portions of a business as separate corporations seriously limits the ease of transferring working funds from one portion of the business to another. Transfers of cash from one corporation to another may be vulnerable to attack by the IRS as constituting constructive dividends to the shareholders who are common to the corporations [see Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 74, The Lure and the Pitfalls of Multiple Corporations (Matthew Bender)].

§ 2.112 Determining Whether to Form Close Corporation

NOTE:

A "close corporation" is a corporation whose articles of incorporation, in addition to other required provisions [see Corp. Code § 202], contain the following: (1) a provision that all of the corporation's issued shares of all classes shall be held of record by not more than a specified number of persons, not exceeding 35, and (2) the statement "This corporation is a close corporation" [Corp. Code § 158(a)]. For other discussions relating to close corporations, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation , and Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements . Additional detailed coverage is found in CALIFORNIA SMALL BUSINESS GUIDE (Matthew Bender).

1. Consider adopting close corporation status if:

NOTE:

For a detailed discussion of the situations in which close corporation status is desirable, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 4, Close Corporations (Matthew Bender). For additional coverage, see CALIFORNIA SMALL BUSINESS GUIDE (Matthew Bender).

a. Business is likely to be managed and controlled in partnership-like manner.

b. Owners wish to avoid normal corporate formalities relating to corporate actions and meetings of shareholders and directors.

NOTE:

The failure of a close corporation to observe corporate formalities relating to meetings of directors or shareholders in connection with the management of its affairs, pursuant to a statutory shareholder's agreement [see Corp. Code § 300(b)], will not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e)].

c. Owners anticipate use of shareholders' agreement [see Corp. Code §§ 186, 300(b); see also Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements] to regulate:

(1) Management of business.

(2) Division of profits.

(3) Distribution of assets on liquidation.

(4) Other matters ordinarily the responsibility of and under control of board of directors.

d. Owners wish to further and protect minority shareholders' interests by avoiding potential abuses such as:

(1) Excessive compensation taken by majority shareholders.

(2) Sale or alienation of all or substantially all of corporation's assets.

(3) Unreasonable dividend policy.

(4) Fraud, abuse of authority, or mismanagement.

(5) Criminal activity.

2. Avoid close corporation status if corporation has or reasonably anticipates having extraordinarily great capital needs.

3. Close corporation status is unavailable if corporation has more than 35 shareholders [see Corp. Code § 158(a), (d)].

§ 2.113 Determining Effect of Income Taxation

NOTE:

When the double taxation of corporate income (that is, a tax on the corporation's earnings and a second tax on the profits when distributed to the shareholders as dividends) will result in unfavorable tax consequences, the principals may decide to do business as partners or even to continue in business as individuals. On the other hand, they may choose to incorporate and, if the corporation can be classed as a "small business corporation" [see I.R.C. § 1361], elect to have it treated as an S corporation [see I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.]. In that case, the corporation would be subject to only minimal income taxation and the shareholders would be taxed as if they were partners in a partnership. For discussion and relevant procedures, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

1. Will assets other than cash be contributed to corporation?

NOTE:

No gain or loss is recognized if property is transferred to a corporation solely in exchange for stock or securities in that corporation, and immediately after the exchange the persons who made the transfer are in control of the corporation [I.R.C. § 351(a)]. "Control" means the ownership of stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of the corporation [I.R.C. § 368(c)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business .

2. What is corporation's anticipated income for next three to five years?

3. What percent of corporate income is likely to be derived from dividends, interest, royalties, annuities, and rent, that is, will corporation be classified as personal holding company subject to penalty federal taxation on undistributed income [see I.R.C. §§ 541-547]?

NOTE:

If 60 percent or more of the corporate income is from these sources, and if 50 percent of the corporate stock is owned by five or fewer persons [see I.R.C. § 542], then the corporation may be classed as a personal holding company and the undistributed income will be subject to a 15 percent tax [I.R.C. § 541, effective for tax years beginning after 12/31/02 and before 1/1/09; for other tax years, the tax rate is the highest rate of tax imposed under I.R.C. § 1(c) (see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303)].

4. What proportion of corporate income will be distributed to shareholders as dividends?

NOTE:

Dividends are not deductible by the corporation in determining its income tax liability, and they are taxable income to the recipients; therefore, double taxation applies to the income distributed as dividends [see I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 162, 301(a), (c)(1), 316(a); see also Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (uncodified effective date and sunset provision of dividends capital gains rate legislation)]. If a liberal dividend policy is to be adopted and the consequent double taxation would create a serious tax disadvantage, the principals should be advised to consider election of Subchapter S status, which would enable the corporation to be taxed in substantially the same manner as a partnership [see I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.; see also Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status].

5. What salaries will be paid to principals after incorporation if they are to hold office in management of corporation?

a. Are proposed salaries reasonable?

NOTE:

Reasonable salaries are deductible business expenses to the corporation; however, unreasonably large salaries will be considered as nondeductible dividend distributions [see Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8]. Some of the factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of salaries are: the employee's qualifications; the nature, extent, and scope of the employee's work; the size and complexities of the business; a comparison of salaries paid with the corporation's gross and net income; the prevailing rates of compensation for comparable positions in comparable concerns; the salary policy of the corporation as to all employees; in the case of small corporations with a limited number of officers, the amount of compensation paid to the particular employee in previous years; the success of the employee's efforts; profitability of the business; absence of the types of fringe benefits usually available to executives of other corporations of similar size; unusual capabilities of the employee; and bonuses not paid in the same ratio as stock holdings [see Elliotts, Inc. v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. 1983) 716 F.2d 1241 ; Kennedy v. C.I.R. (6th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 167, 173, 174] .

b. What are optimum salary ranges?

NOTE:

A major tax advantage of incorporating may occur because of the splitting of income between a corporation and the principals who will be paid salaries after incorporation. For each level of business income, there is a certain range of salary that gives the maximum tax advantage. This must be calculated by trial computations taking into consideration anticipated income and the respective tax brackets of the corporation [see P 9c NOTE, below] and the principals.

6. What fringe benefits will be available to principals following incorporation?

NOTE:

If a shareholder is an employee of the corporation, fringe benefits, such as qualified pension and profit-sharing plans, group insurance, and medical expense reimbursement plans, are currently deductible by the corporation and not taxable to the shareholder until the amounts are actually distributed [see I.R.C. §§ 72, 83, 402, 404; see also Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits ; Cavitch, Business Organizations, Chs. 131, Bonanza of Qualified Pension and Profit-Sharing Plans , 132, Establishing a Qualified Pension or Profit-Sharing Plan (Matthew Bender)].

7. How much income is likely to be retained by corporation?

NOTE:

Once the corporation has accumulated income of $250,000 over the entire period of its existence ($150,000 in the case of certain personal service corporations) [see I.R.C. § 535(c)], any additional accumulated income must be justified to the Internal Revenue Service as an accumulation necessary for the reasonable needs of the business, or it will be subject to a 15 percent additional tax [I.R.C. § 531, effective for tax years beginning after 12/31/02 and before 1/1/09 (see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303); for other tax years, the tax rate is the highest rate of tax imposed under I.R.C. § 1(c) (I.R.C. § 531, before amendment by Pub. Law No. 108-27); see I.R.C. §§ 531-537]; see also Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 70, Improper Accumulation of Earnings (Matthew Bender)]. Corporate officers and employees who willfully fail to pay any tax due or willfully attempt to evade or defeat any tax due are liable, in addition to other penalties, for a penalty of 50 percent of the total amount of the underpayment of tax [I.R.C. § 6653; see I.R.C. § 6671(b)].

Any corporate planning must also take into account the fact that listed and readily marketable securities owned by a corporation and purchased out of its earnings and profits are to be valued at their net liquidation value, rather than their cost, in determining whether a corporation has incurred liability on its current earnings for the accumulated earnings tax [Ivan Allen Co. v. United States (1975) 422 U.S. 617, 629-630, 95 S. Ct. 2501, 45 L. Ed. 2d 435] . This factor may force corporations to reorganize their tax planning since it is contrary to standard accounting practices and the tax practices of many corporations.

8. Do principals intend to make loans to corporation and, if so, would those loans be viewed by IRS as bona fide debt with deductibility of payments rather than as equity with treatment of payments as nondeductible dividends, applying statutory factors listed in (a) through (f), below [I.R.C. § 385]?

NOTE:

If the corporation is indebted to a shareholder, any repayment of principal is not taxable to the shareholder. However, interest payments on shareholder loans are taxable to the shareholder [see I.R.C. § 61(a)(4)] and deductible by the corporation [I.R.C. § 163(a)]. Therefore, if it is contemplated that funds are to be withdrawn from the corporation in the future, the possibility of the owner lending funds to the corporation at the time of incorporation should be considered.

One drawback to such a plan is that if the ratio of debt to outstanding stock is too high, resulting in "thin incorporation," or if it is questionable whether the debt is bona fide, the IRS can reclassify the transaction as a contribution to capital, rather than a loan, and determine that the repayment of the "loan" is, in effect, a payment of a dividend [see I.R.C. § 385(a)]. A variety of factors is used to determine whether a debtor-creditor or corporation-shareholder relationship exists [see I.R.C. § 385(b)]. The characterization by the issuer of the interest in the corporation as stock or indebtedness is binding on the issuer and all holders of the interest, but not on the IRS [I.R.C. § 385(c)].

For further discussion, see Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 71, How to Obtain Significant Advantages Through Mixed Debt and Equity Shareholder Financing; Thin Corporations (Matthew Bender).

a. Is there written unconditional promise to pay on demand or on specified date a sum certain in money in return for adequate consideration in money or money's worth, and to pay fixed rate of interest?

b. Is there subordination to or preference over any indebtedness of corporation?

c. What is corporation's ratio of debt to equity?

d. Is there convertibility into stock of corporation?

e. What is relationship between holdings of stock in corporation and holdings of interest in question?

f. Is proposed loan reasonable in comparison to what would be commercially reasonable to independent lender in arm's length transaction?

9. Will incorporation yield income tax advantages for corporation and each principal, based on:

a. All factors previously listed [see PP 1-8, above]?

NOTE:

In general, with proper planning, there is no immediate tax disadvantage to incorporating a business with a substantial income, and there may be considerable tax saving. Since generalizations concerning the tax advantages and disadvantages of incorporating are not always accurate, it is necessary to make trial computations based on projected future income and various other factors to determine whether there will, in fact, be a tax saving or a tax loss by incorporating, and the extent of the saving or loss. The facts listed below are those that will have to be known to make such a determination.

b. Income of owners from other sources?

c. Anticipated tax brackets applicable to corporation and its principals?

NOTE:

Corporate income tax rates are imposed in three brackets: 15 percent on the first $50,000 of taxable income, 25 percent on taxable income between $50,000 and $75,000, 34 percent on taxable income between $75,000 and $10,000,000, and 35 percent on the balance above $10,000,000. In addition, if the corporation's taxable income exceeds $100,000, the amount of tax is increased by the lesser of (1) 5 percent of the excess, or (2) $11,750. If the corporation's taxable income exceeds $15,000,000, the amount of the tax is increased by the lesser of (1) 3 percent of the excess, or (2) $ 100,000 [I.R.C. § 11(b)(1)].

However, a qualified personal service corporation [see I.R.C. § 448(d)(2) (corporation providing health, law, engineering, architecture, or other professional services in which stock is held by employees providing those services)] is subject to a 35 percent tax rate on all taxable income [I.R.C. § 11(b)(2)].

Corporate dividends are income to the shareholders [see I.R.C. §§ 301-307, 316; see also Ch. 9, Dividends, Reacquisitions of Shares, and Assessments]. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009 [Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (uncodified effective date and sunset provision of dividends capital gains rate legislation)], qualified dividends received by individuals are subject to taxation at a maximum 15 percent capital gains rate [I.R.C. § 1(h)(11)]. For other years, they are taxable at the significantly higher maximum regular tax rates for individuals [I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)].

10. What are probabilities that business will operate at loss and become insolvent?

NOTE:

When the business owners are forced to liquidate a business and sell it as a loss, the loss will be a capital loss, which is seldom as beneficial as an ordinary loss. This capital loss can be converted into an ordinary loss if the stock issued to the shareholders qualifies under I.R.C. § 1244. Most small businesses can qualify under this code section; for a discussion of qualification requirements under I.R.C. § 1244, see the Legal Background to Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I. 21, and Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 73, Ordinary Loss Deductions on Stock of Small Corporate Ventures (Matthew Bender).

11. Do principals have any intent to liquidate corporation in near future?

NOTE:

If the corporation is formed for the construction, production, or purchase of property with a view to the sale or exchange of its stock, or distribution of the property to the shareholders before the corporation realizes a substantial part of the income derived from the property, the corporation may be classified as a "collapsible corporation" and the owners will be taxed at ordinary income tax rates on their gain, rather than at capital gains rates [I.R.C. § 341, before repeal by Pub. Law No. 108-27; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for repeal of collapsible corporation rules); see Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 194, Avoiding Collapsible Corporation Treatment (Matthew Bender)]. The rules for determining the status of a corporation as collapsible or noncollapsible are very complicated, and if one reason for incorporating a business is to obtain capital gains rates on the sale of the stock or on liquidation of the corporation, a close study should be made to see if the corporation will be considered collapsible [see I.R.C. § 341, before repeal by Pub. Law No. 108-27; see also Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for repeal of collapsible corporation rules)]. Fortunately, for tax years beginning after December 31, 2002 and before January 1, 2009, the collapsible corporation rules have been repealed, and do not apply [see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for repeal of collapsible corporation rules)].

1. Will transfers of personal property to corporation subject corporation to state sales tax?

NOTE:
Transfer of personal property to the corporation for consideration other than stock may be considered a taxable sale [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1595(b)(4)]. However, various exemptions apply, such as the transfer of 80 percent or more of all tangible personal property used in a business when 80 percent or more of the real or ultimate ownership of the property is substantially the same after the transfer [see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 1595(b)(2)].

2. Will real property transferred to corporation be reassessed on transfer?

NOTE:
Whenever real property is subject to a change in ownership, its value is reassessed for property tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 75.10(a); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 110.1(a)(2)]. Transfer of an interest in real property is a "change in ownership" that causes a reassessment of the property [Rev. & Tax. Code § 60]. However, a transfer between and individual an a corporation that results solely in a change in the method of holding title, with no change in proportional ownership interests, is not a "change in ownership" [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(a)(2)].

§ 2.115 Determining Organization of Corporation

1. Who is to perform functions preliminary to organization and formation of corporation?

    a. Same person acting as incorporator, promoter, and person responsible for subscriptions.

    b. Different persons acting as incorporator, promoter, and subscription agent.

2. What compensation, if any, is to be paid for work performed in those functions?

3. How will incorporator, promoter, and subscription agent be compensated?

    a. Cash, stock, employment.

    b. Will preincorporation agreement among principals assuring agents control of proposed corporation and, thus, payment after formation.

4. What is desired initial capital structure (for inclusion in articles of incorporation)?

NOTE:

The chief advantage of equity financing is that it may be easier to obtain than commercial financing because a new corporation has no earnings history. In addition, equity financing involves no assumption of a fixed obligation, requiring payments. A chief disadvantage of equity financing is that it forces the organizers to give up a portion of their equity, and therefore their control, of the corporation. For further discussion, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations

(Matthew Bender).

a. Classes of stock.

NOTE:
To qualify for the small offering exemption from California securities laws, there must be only one class of shares [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. For further discussion of the small offering exemption, see Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption .

b. Number of shares.

c. Par value.

NOTE:
There is no longer a requirement to establish par value of stock in a California corporation. However, if desired, a statement concerning par value may included in the articles of incorporation [see Corp. Code § 204(d)]. For purposes of determining taxes or fees based upon the capitalization of a corporation, shares are deemed to have a par value of $1 [Corp. Code § 205]. If a requirement applicable to a particular corporation requires shares to have a par value, the board of directors of the corporation may determine a par value [Corp. Code § 205].

For further discussion of par value, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.19.

d. Rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions of preferred shares.

NOTE:
"Preferred shares" are shares other than common shares [Corp. Code § 176]. "Common shares" are shares that have no preference over any other shares as to distribution of assets on liquidation or payment of dividends [Corp. Code § 159]. For further discussion, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues , Part A.

e. Preemptive rights.

NOTE:
Preemptive rights give shareholders the right to subscribe to future stock issuances on a proportional basis. Provision for preemptive rights may be included in the articles of incorporation [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(2)].

5. What other forms of financing are contemplated?

a. Debt financing:

(1) Commercial loans.

NOTE:
Debt financing has several advantages compared to equity financing. It allows the organizers to retain control of the corporation, interest paid on the debt is tax deductible, and the cost of debt securities is generally less than the cost of equity securities. On the other hand, debt financing imposes a greater risk because of the assumption of a fixed obligation, and a new corporation with no earnings history may be unable to obtain debt financing. For further discussion, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations (Matthew Bender).

(2) Personal loans from:

(a) Family.

(b) Friends.

(c) Other private individuals.

(3) SBA loans.

NOTE:
The Small Business Administration provides a variety of types of financial assistance to small businesses.

b. Venture capital.

NOTE:
For discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of using venture capital, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations (Matthew Bender).

c. SBIC capital.

NOTE:
Small Business Investment Companies provide equity capital and long term loans to small businesses.

6. Will noncash assets be contributed, such as:

a. Services.

b. Property.

NOTE:
Various tax consequences must be considered regarding the contribution of real and personal property. For example, no gain or loss is recognized if property is transferred to a corporation solely in exchange for stock or securities in that corporation, and immediately after the exchange the persons who made the transfer are in control of the corporation [see I.R.C. § 351; see also Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business].

7. To avoid personal liability for principals, officers, directors, and shareholders, has corporation been structured and operated properly?

NOTE:
The phrases "alter ego doctrine" and "disregarding the corporate entity" refer to situations involving abuse of the corporate privilege, in which the separate corporate identity is disregarded to allow personal liability when it would be inequitable not to do so [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 579-580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473] . For application of the alter ego doctrine, two requirements must be met: (1) there must be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist, and (2) if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow [Automotriz etc. De California v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796, 306 P.2d 1 ; see Commodity Futures Trading Commission v. Topworth (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1107, 1112-1113 (extreme undercapitalization found)].

Many different improper acts may result in application of the alter ego doctrine [see Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838-840, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806] .

a. Adequately capitalize corporation.

NOTE:

If a corporation is grossly undercapitalized, the corporate identity may be disregarded, and the principals may be held liable for the debts of the corporation [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 579, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473] .

b. Observe corporate formalities, such as:

NOTE:

Failing to hold meetings and other disregard for corporate formalities may result in application of the alter ego doctrine, resulting in shareholders being personally liable for the debts of the corporation [Temple v. Bodega Bay Fisheries, Inc. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 279, 282, 4 Cal. Rptr. 300] . However, if fraud is present, principals may be personally liable even if all the corporate formalities have been observed [see Wyatt v. Union Mortg. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 773, 785, 157 Cal. Rptr. 392, 598 P.2d 45] .

(1) Holding annual shareholders' meetings.

(2) Holding annual directors' meetings.

(3) Maintaining corporate records.

c. Comply with securities laws.

d. Avoid making personal guaranties in corporate documents.

NOTE:

If the equitable owners guarantee debts of the corporation or hold themselves out as personally liable for those debts, the corporate entity may be disregarded for the purpose of determining liability [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 579, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473] .

e. Execute documents in name of corporation, not individual.

f. Keep corporate finances separate from individual finances.

NOTE:

Failure to adequate segregate personal and corporate finances may result in application of the alter ego doctrine [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 579, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473] .

g. Maintain adequate liability insurance.

NOTE:

The corporation should maintain adequate general liability insurance, fire and casualty insurance, key-personnel life and disability insurance, business interruption insurance, and workers' compensation insurance. For detailed coverage of business insurance, see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation , and California Insurance Law and Practice (Matthew Bender).

8. Has provision been made for proper management and control?

a. Power of directors to choose officers and exercise control over management of corporation.

b. Power of officers to direct day-to-day operations of business of corporation, including hiring and firing employees.

c. Rights of shareholders to elect directors.

d. Control rights of creditors.

NOTE:

California corporation law affords considerable flexibility in determining how the corporation will be managed and controlled [see Corp. Code § 100 et seq.]. The structure of the corporation will be set forth in the articles of incorporation and the bylaws. For further discussion, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation , and Ch. 4, Bylaws .

9. Have securities laws of federal government, California and other states where securities will be offered been complied with before offering, selling or issuing securities [see Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.; 15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq.]?

NOTE:

For discussion of securities regulation, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues .

10. Which accounting period will be used?

a. Calendar year basis.

b. Fiscal year basis.

NOTE:

In general, a corporation may use either of these accounting periods [see I.R.C. § 441(b)]. If a corporation keeps no books or has no accounting period, it must use the calendar year as its taxable year [I.R.C. § 441(g)]. Personal service corporations generally must use the calendar year [see I.R.C. § 441(i)]. However, personal service corporations and S corporations may elect to have a taxable year other than the required taxable year [I.R.C. § 444(a)].

11. Which accounting method will be used [see I.R.C. § 446(c)]?

a. Cash method.

b. Accrual method.

c. Other method permitted by Internal Revenue Code.

NOTE:

Accounting must be done by the method that most clearly reflects income [I.R.C. § 446(b)]. In general, C corporations may not use the cash method [I.R.C. § 448(a)]. C corporations conducting a farming business, qualified personal service corporations, and corporations that meet a $5 million gross receipts test, however, may use the cash method [I.R.C. § 448(b), (c)]. In addition, under a special small business exception, the IRS allows certain taxpayers with average annual gross receipts of $10 million or less to use the cash method of accounting [Rev. Proc. 2002-28, 2002-1 C.B. 815].

12. Restrictions on share transfers.

NOTE:

The corporation may wish to ensure continuity in the management of the corporation by controlling the transfer of shares. This can be done by the use of a shareholders agreement or a buy-sell agreement, which is a contract between the corporation and the shareholders describing the terms under which the shareholders may or must sell their shares. A buy-sell agreement can ensure the continuation of the corporation regardless of the death of a participant, prevent "outsiders" from taking corporate shares, and enable shareholders to sell their shares for a fair price despite the lack of a public market. For further discussion, see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

13. Fringe benefits and pension plans.

NOTE:

In this area, the attorney will need to work with the principals to determine what types of benefits and plans shareholder/employees desire. Structured pension plans may enjoy favorable tax treatment. For example, the corporation may be entitled to an immediate tax deduction for its current contribution to a plan [see I.R.C. § 404], and the employee may not be taxed on the contribution [see I.R.C. § 402]. For further discussion, see Young, Pension and Profit Sharing Plans (Matthew Bender).

§ 2.116 Determinations Related to Subscriptions and Subscription Agreements

1. At what point will subscriptions be solicited?

a. Before formation of corporation; or

b. After articles of incorporation have been filed.

NOTE:
Because preincorporation agreements are not binding in California until after the corporation has been formed and has accepted the subscriptions [see § 2.32[3]], it will probably be more advantageous, especially in the case of large offerings, to form the corporation before soliciting any subscriptions for shares. This enables the corporation to accept subscriptions immediately on receipt.

2. Do advantages of using written agreement outweigh disadvantages?

a. Advantages:

(1) Assist in establishing availability of exemption from registration or qualification under state or federal securities laws.

(2) Create business record that may be used in evidence if litigation arises.

(3) Assist in corporate recordkeeping.

b. Disadvantages:

(1) Possible costs and expenses involved.

(2) Possible delay involved resulting from subscriptions for predetermined amount of capital.

(3) Cost and delay involved in obtaining any required permit from Commissioner of Corporations.

3. Will imposition of impound condition require use of subscription agreements [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.22]?

NOTE:

The Commissioner will require that a subscription agreement be delivered to each subscriber whenever the Commissioner imposes an impound requirement in connection with the sale of securities [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.22(a)]. An impound condition normally will be imposed if the securities are not firmly underwritten and if the Commissioner determines that a specific minimum amount of funds is necessary to finance the proposed undertaking as described in the application and that it is inadvisable for the issuer to expend any of the proceeds from the sale of the securities prior to receiving that minimum amount [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.20]. For additional discussion, see § 2.32[4].

4. If subscription agreement is needed, what type of agreement [see § 2.210]?

a. Agreement with small number of original incorporators (nonpublic offering).

b. Agreement with large number of investors (public offering).

5. What consideration will be required in agreement for sale of shares contemplated therein [see Corp. Code § 409(a)]:

a. Cash:

(1) Lump sum payment.

(2) Payment in installments [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 240.141.22(b)].

b. Services rendered (including services rendered in formation of corporation).

c. Cancellation of debts or securities.

d. Tangible property.

e. Intangibles, such as patents, trademarks, or copyrights, actually transferred.

6. In what states will potential subscribers be solicited?

NOTE:

State blue-sky or federal securities regulations may apply to both promotional methods and registration of the securities. These regulations should be carefully considered to determine whether or not the particular transactions are exempt from registration requirements or whether strict compliance with applicable procedures is necessary [see generally Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues]. Solicitation of subscribers outside California may eliminate use of federal "intrastate exemption" from registration under the Securities Act of 1933 [see 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11); 17 C.F.R. § 230.147; see also Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations , for discussion of commonly used exemptions from the federal securities laws].

7. What is appropriate time and place to arrange for payment of subscriptions?

NOTE:

Subscribers are liable to the corporation for the full consideration agreed on. The full amount must be paid when the securities are issued unless they are issued as "partly paid" [see Corp. Code §§ 409(d), 410]. If an impound condition has been imposed and the securities are to be paid for in installments, each subscriber must be given a receipt meeting specified requirements. For discussion see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues .

§ 2.117 Determinations Related to Preincorporation Agreements

1. Is there need for preincorporation agreement between principals in view of following factors:

   a. Whether personal and business relationships of principals are close enough to dispense with formal contract.

   b. Whether danger that disputes will arise among principals over creation of corporation is sufficient to justify written agreement.

   c. Number of prospective shareholders involved.

2. What type or types of preincorporation agreement might be appropriate?

   a. Preincorporation agreement among partners [see § 2.230].

   b. Preincorporation agreement with selling agent [see § 2.212].

   c. Preincorporation agreement with single organizer-manager [see § 2.220].

3. Is there need to protect or provide for any of following?

   a. Investments of time, money, materials, or goodwill of going business.

   b. Trade secrets.

c. Secret processes.

d. Services or expertise.

e. Share transfer restrictions.

4. What provisions should be included in preincorporation agreement?

a. Amount of initial capital that will be contributed by each principal, whether in cash, property, or intangibles, such as goodwill of going business contributed as property.

b. Amount of capital to be borrowed:
(1) From whom to be raised.

(2) Method of raising additional capital.

c. Title or position and duties and authority of each principal, assuming each will actively participate in affairs of proposed corporation.

d. Compensation to be paid for services rendered before or after incorporation.

e. Restrictions on stock transfer.

f. Buy-sell agreement.

g. Dissension or deadlock relief.

§ 2.118 Checklist of Incorporation Expenses

NOTE:

Incidental expenses not usually paid through an attorney's office are not included in this schedule of costs. For items that vary, the approximate range has been given or the method for determining the amount is suggested.

1. What amount is due to Franchise Tax Board for prepayment of minimum annual franchise tax?

NOTE:

For the first taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 2000, the tax imposed is the sum of (1) a tax according to or measured by net income, to be computed at the rate of 8.84 percent on the basis of net income for the next preceding income year, but not less than the minimum annual tax, and (2) a tax according to or measured by net income, to be computed at the rate of 8.84 percent on the basis of net income for the first taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 2000, but not less than the minimum annual tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151(f)(1); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153 (minimum tax)]. For other taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2000, the tax imposed is a tax according to or measured by net income, to be computed at the rate of 8.84 percent on the basis of the net income for that taxable year, but not less than the minimum annual tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151(f)(2)].

2. What amounts are due to Secretary of State?

a. Reservation of corporate name.

NOTE:

The fee for reserving a corporate name is $10. When reserving over the counter in the Sacramento office or a branch office of the Secretary of State, there is an additional special handling fee of $10 per name. Separate checks should be written for the reservation fee and the special handling fee because the special handling fee will be retained even if the name cannot be reserved [Gov. Code § 12186(a); see http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/corp/pdf/naavreservform.pdf]. A preliminary check of the availability of a corporate name can be made by mailing a name availability inquiry letter to the Secretary of State's office in Sacramento [see http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/corp/corp_naav2.htm#avail].

b. Filing articles of incorporation.

NOTE:

The fee for filing articles of incorporation is $100 [Gov. Code § 12186(c)]. The fee for affixing the certificate and seal of state is $5 [Gov. Code § 12183]. Additional fees may be charged for copying, preclearance of documents, and special handling [see Gov. Code § 12182].

3. What costs are likely for stationery or printing of minute book, share certificates, and for corporate seal?

NOTE:

These items will depend on the type desired; the costs can range from $25 to $50 and up. Individuals who have successfully reserved a proposed corporate name should not invest in corporate seals, stationary, signs, and the like based on that name reservation. The entity is not yet created to act as a corporation until appropriate documents have been filed. Further, the name reservation does not mean that the name style will be acceptable for the specific type of document being filed.

4. What fees are likely to be required by Commissioner of Corporations?

a. Fee for filing notice of sale of shares exempt from qualification [Corp. Code § 25608(c), (x)].

NOTE:

The fee for filing the notice of sale under a small offering or limited offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(f)(4), (h)(5)] is based on the value of the securities proposed to be sold in the transaction [Corp. Code § 25608(c); see Corp. Code § 25608(g)(1) (valuation of securities)]. The filing fee ranges from $25 to $300, depending on the value of the securities [see Corp. Code § 25608(c)]. The fee for filing the notice of sale under a qualified purchaser offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(n)] is $600 [Corp. Code § 25608(x)]. An additional fee is due for failure to file a timely notice [see Corp. Code §§ 25102(f)(4), 25110].

b. Fee for filing application for qualification of shares if qualification is by permit under Corp. Code § 25113.

NOTE:

The fee for filing an application for qualification by permit [see Corp. Code § 25113] is $200, plus one fifth of 1 percent of the aggregate value of the securities sought to be sold in California, up to a maximum aggregate fee of $2,500 [Corp. Code § 25608(e)].

The fee for filing a small company application for qualification by permit is $2,500.

However, if the actual costs of processing the small company application exceed the filing fee, an additional fee, based on the actual costs of processing, will be charged, but not to exceed $1,000 [Corp. Code § 25608(e)].

5. What are likely attorneys' fees?

NOTE:

For an agreement between a client and an attorney who will form a corporation for the client, see Ch. 86A, Agreements for Legal Services, § 86A.231. Conflict of interest issues are discussed in Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business .

a. Drafting preincorporation agreements to incorporate.

b. Drafting subscription agreements.

c. Drafting and filing:

(1) Articles of incorporation.

(2) Applications for securities permits.

(3) Notices of issuance of offers for securities and issuance of securities.

(4) Bulk transfer or other notices to creditors.

(5) Bills of sale, assignments of leases, assignments of contracts, novations, and other relevant property transfer documents.

(6) Abandonment of any current fictitious name statement and filing of any necessary fictitious name statement for corporation.

(7) Resolutions for adoption at first meeting of corporate directors.

d. Obtaining assignment of right to use corporate name from existing business, if necessary, and reserving name for corporation.

e. Protecting corporate name, trade name, trademark, or service mark.

f. Obtaining assignment of copyrights, if necessary.

g. Establishing corporate fringe benefit program.

h. Reviewing and modifying wills of corporation's principals.

6. What other costs should be anticipated?

a. Fee payable to Commissioner of Corporations if public offering is involved and negotiating permit is required with respect to preincorporation agreements and subscriptions.

NOTE:
The fee is $50 [see Corp. Code §§ 25102(c), 25608(b)].

b. Licensing fees.

NOTE:
The Secretary of State does not license corporations. To determine licensing requirements, consult with the Department of Consumer Affairs, the city and/or county where the principal place of business is located, and/or the state agency with jurisdiction over the business [Secretary of States' information packet].

c. Costs of incorporating going business:

(1) Notice of intended transfer to corporation:
(a) County recorder's recording fee [see Gov. Code § 27361(a)].

(b) Charges of newspaper for publishing notice.

NOTE:
These charges may range from $25 to $50 or more, depending on the locality or the publication.

(2) Notice of termination of prior unincorporated business.

(a) Charges of newspaper for publishing notice.

(b) Cost of mailing notice to known suppliers and creditors of unincorporated business.

NOTE:
Costs of mailing the notice will depend on the number of copies mailed and the manner in which they are sent, whether first class or certified mail.

§ 2.130 Planning Formation of Corporation

NOTE:

This section lists the steps in the formation of a corporation that must be anticipated or acted on in the preincorporation planning stage for any corporation. The preincorporation planning peculiar to the formation of a close corporation is covered in § 2.131.

A corporation is "formed" when its articles of incorporation are executed by one or more natural persons, partnerships, associations, or corporations, and filed in the office of the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code §§ 169, 200(c)]. The procedures involved in this formative step are set forth in detail in Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation.

For additional materials on the incorporation of a going business, see Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business .

[1] Scheduling Formation of Corporation

NOTE:

To establish a timetable for the process of incorporation, it is necessary to work backward from the final event, which is the commencement of business.

1. Select date on which corporation is to commence transacting business, based on following factors:

a. Allowance of sufficient time to obtain necessary business licenses, property, equipment, and supplies, and to make other business preparations.

b. Practical business considerations, such as market fluctuations and business seasons.

c. Amount of income that may be earned between time corporation commences business and end of its first taxable or fiscal year.

NOTE:
The corporation's income for tax purposes will be reported on the basis of its fiscal year [I.R.C. § 441], and the first income tax return of the corporation will reflect its income for the short period between the time it came into existence and the date when its fiscal year would normally end [I.R.C. § 443(a)(2)]. Thus, a corporation that has the calendar year as its fiscal year and was organized on August 1, 2004, must file its first income tax return by March 15, 2005, reporting its income from August 1, 2004, to December 31, 2004 [see Treas. Reg. § 1.443-1(a)(2)]. Because the federal corporate tax rate structure is graduated (that is, the tax rate increases as taxable income increases), the date the corporation is to commence business should be set, all factors being equal, at a time that would minimize its income during the short period covered by its first income tax return. For example, it may be preferable that the taxable income of the corporation not exceed $50,000 during the short period, because the corporate tax rate is only 15 percent on the first $50,000 of taxable income [I.R.C. § 11(b)].

d. If going business is being incorporated, date when income of business may be most advantageously shifted from individual owners to corporation.

NOTE:
For further discussion, see Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business .

2. Select date for corporation to issue its shares:

a. If corporation is to conduct new business, it should ordinarily issue its shares before time it is to commence transacting that business.

NOTE:
Although the execution of contracts, leases, and the commission of other acts necessary to prepare the corporation to commence business may be undertaken by the incorporators or promoters before the corporation is fully organized, they may have problems in securing binding commitments without incurring personal liability [see § 2.33]. When these obligations are incurred after the corporation is formed, but before it has issued shares, the incorporators may be personally liable for these obligations [see Automotriz etc. De California v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 306 P.2d 1] .

b. If going business is being incorporated, corporation should issue its shares when the business is transferred to it, usually on same day it intends to commence operation of that business in corporate form.

3. Select estimated date for issuance of permit for preincorporation subscription agreements by Commissioner of Corporations, if one must be obtained.

NOTE:
Although the Commissioner's office may be able to process the average application and issue a permit within four days after the application is filed with it, an examination of permits actually issued indicates that there is normally a period of two to four weeks between the date the application is filed and the date the permit is issued.

If a going business is being incorporated and a notice of bulk sale will be required [see Com. Code §§ 6102(a)(3), 6103(a)], sufficient time should be allowed between the date of issuance of the permit and the date that shares are actually to be issued by the corporation to allow for the necessary filing of the notice of sale at least 12 business days before the business is transferred to the corporation, and for the publication of that notice at least 12 business days before the date of sale [see Com. Code § 6105(b); see also Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business].

4. Determine date for reservation of corporate name:

a. Select date for filing articles of incorporation.

NOTE:
Corporate existence begins on the date the articles are filed by the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 200(c)]. Sufficient time should be allowed between this date and the date the corporation intends to commence business to make all the necessary business and financial arrangements, including the issuance of shares. The actual process of incorporation is covered in [2], below. The procedure for filing the articles is discussed in Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

b. Select date for reservation of corporate name within 60-day period prior to date selected for filing articles of incorporation.

NOTE:
The Secretary of State will not issue certificates reserving the same name for consecutive 60-day periods to the same applicant without a lapse of 24 hours over the course of a business day between periods [Corp. Code § 201(c)]. For detailed coverage of choosing and reserving a corporate name, see § 2.132.

5. Select date for first meeting of board of directors.

NOTE:
This meeting may be held as soon as is convenient after the date the articles of incorporation are filed by the Secretary of State.

6. Select date for filing application for permit to issue securities, if financing through issuance of securities after incorporation is planned and permit is required.

NOTE:
The application can be filed immediately after the first meeting of the board of directors, at which the filing is authorized and the officers who will sign the application are appointed.

[2] Corporate Formation Process

NOTE:
This subsection lists the steps involved in actually forming the corporation, whose existence technically begins on the execution and filing of articles of incorporation [see Corp. Code § 200(c)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

For the steps in planning the formation of a close corporation, see § 2.131. For additional coverage, see

CALIFORNIA SMALL BUSINESS GUIDE (Matthew Bender).

1. Advise persons who will act as directors (either those to be named as directors in articles of incorporation or the incorporators if directors are not named in articles) [see Corp. Code §§ 210, 212(a)] that they may:

a. Do whatever is necessary and proper to perfect organization of corporation.

b. Adopt and amend bylaws.

c. Elect directors and appoint officers.

2. Follow schedule for process of incorporation [see [1], above].

3. Choose and reserve corporate name [see § 2.132].

4. Choose initial agent for service of process [see § 2.17].

5. Prepare articles of incorporation [see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation (coverage of mandatory and optional provisions included in articles)] for execution by incorporators.

6. Have articles executed and acknowledged by incorporators [Corp. Code § 200; see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation].

[3] Post-Incorporation Process

1. Prepare bylaws or advise incorporators to do so [see Ch. 4, Bylaws].

2. Have incorporators pass resolutions adopting bylaws and electing directors [see § 2.202 for form].

3. Obtain stock certificates, minute book, corporate seal, and other books, records, and accounts and provide them to person who will act as corporate secretary or secretary-treasurer.

NOTE:

A corporation may adopt, use, and, at will, alter a corporate seal, but failure to affix a seal does not affect the validity of an instrument [Corp. Code § 207(a)]. Although the General Corporation Law does not require that a corporation have a seal, corporations ordinarily obtain one. Its use may be required by banks, government agencies, or others.

The form in § 2.250 is an attorney letter that may be used as a cover letter to accompany the documents referred to above, and to advise the incorporators with respect to many of the matters noted in the remainder of this section.

4. Advise incorporators about importance of observing corporate formalities connection with operation of corporation [see § 2.250[2] (form)].

5. Advise directors to hold first board meeting as soon after formation of corporation as practicable [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

NOTE:

In planning for the first meeting of the board, counsel may wish to prepare resolutions and minutes in advance. Resolutions for adoption at, and minutes of, the first meeting are illustrated in Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions. For certain specific actions that must be taken with respect to preincorporation agreements, see §§ 2.140 and 2.141.

6. If corporation is to conduct business in other states, determine whether corporation needs to qualify to conduct business and, if so, what steps need to be taken.

7. Advise directors that immediately after formation, following steps must be taken to issue securities, if securities are to be issued:

a. Comply with Corporate Securities Law, federal securities laws, or other state or foreign country securities laws as necessary [see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues].

b. Issue shares and securities in exchange for cash, assets or services promptly after formation of corporation and approval of permit and/or registration of securities [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].

c. If articles authorize board to determine rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions for any class or series of unissued shares, to designate any series of unissued shares, or to fix number of shares in a series, instruct board of directors to do following before issuing any shares in affected class or series as follows [Corp. Code § 401(a)]:

(1) Adopt resolution that fixes matters to be determined.

(2) Prepare certificate of determination that includes:

(a) Copy of resolution;

(b) Number of shares of affected class or series; and

(c) Statement that none of shares of affected class or series has been issued and executed officer's certificate.

(3) Execute and file as officer's Certificate of Determination with Secretary of State.

NOTE:

For a resolution and a certificate of determination, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

8. Advise directors of their duty to establish books and records for corporation and make reports required by law [see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports].

NOTE:

Within 90 days after filing the articles of incorporation (and annually thereafter) the corporation must file, on a form prescribed by the California Secretary of State, a statement of domestic stock corporation, containing such information as the names and addresses of the corporation's directors and officers, the address of the corporation's principal executive office, and the general type of business that constitutes its principal business activity [Corp. Code § 1502(a)]. A publicly traded corporation [see Corp. Code §

1502.1(b)(1)] must file an additional disclosure statement within 150 days after the close of the corporation's fiscal year [Corp. Code § 1502.1(a); see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation ; see also Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports (form)].

9. Advise directors to obtain any necessary business permits and licenses.

10. Advise future officers to comply with following tax requirements:

a. Determine and elect accounting period and accounting method [see I.R.C. §§ 441-448].

b. Pay estimated California franchise tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23151, 23153].

NOTE:

For the first taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 2000, the tax imposed is the sum of (1) a tax according to or measured by net income, to be computed at the rate of 8.84 percent on the basis of net income for the next preceding income year, but not less than the minimum annual tax and (2) a tax according to or measured by net income, to be computed at the rate of 8.84 percent on the basis of net income for the first taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 2000, but not less than the minimum annual tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151(f)(1); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153 (minimum tax)]. For other taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2000, the tax imposed is a tax according to or measured by net income, to be computed at the rate of 8.84 percent on the basis of the net income for that taxable year, but not less than the minimum annual tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151(f)(2)].

c. Pay estimated federal income tax in installments [see I.R.C. § 6655].

d. If corporation owns personal property with aggregate cost of $100,000 or more:

(1) File property statement with county assessor [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 441].

(2) Pay taxes when due [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 2922].

11. Apply for Tax I.D. number.

12. If corporation is to do business under name other than corporate name as stated in articles of incorporation [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(3)], advise future officers to file fictitious business name statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900 et seq.; see also § 2.14].

NOTE:

Counsel should also caution the officers filing the fictitious business name statement that it will expire five years from the date it is filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17920(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913].

13. If corporation will qualify as "small business corporation" [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)] and principals desire federal income tax treatment as partners with minimal federal income tax imposed on corporation pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Subchapter S [see I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.], advise them that after issuance of shares to not more than 100 shareholders [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)], those shareholders may elect Subchapter S status for the corporation.

NOTE:

For the procedures involved in electing Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

14. If corporation will have employees, officers must:

NOTE:
For detailed discussion of employers' responsibilities, see California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

a. Obtain either [see Lab. Code § 3700]:

(1) Workers' compensation insurance from approved insurer; or

(2) Certificate of consent to self-insure from Department of Industrial Relations.

b. Obtain employer identification number on Internal Revenue Service Form SS-4 before commencing business [see Treas. Reg. § 31.6011(b)-1].

c. Have employee complete "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate" (IRS Form W-4).

d. Withhold state and federal income and employment taxes.

e. Comply with applicable state and federal labor laws.

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger, Practice Consultant

§ 2.131 Forming a Close Corporation

NOTE:
A "close corporation" is a corporation whose articles of incorporation, in addition to other required provisions [see Corp. Code § 202], contain the following: (1) a provision that all of the corporation's issued shares of all classes must be held of record by not more than a specified number of persons, not exceeding 35, and (2) the statement "This corporation is a close corporation" [Corp. Code § 158(a)]. For other discussion relating to close corporations, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

1. Determine current status of business.

NOTE:
A close corporation must be a corporation subject to the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 158(a); see also Corp. Code §§ 102, 162 (corporation defined)].

a. If dealing with preexisting corporation, amend corporate documents and alter corporate procedures to reflect special close corporation requirements [see PP 2-5, below].

b. If dealing with noncorporate going business, supplement normal procedure for incorporating going business [see Ch. 2A, Incorporating a Going Business] with special close corporation requirements [see PP 2-5, below].

NOTE:
The procedures for incorporating a going business and the consequences of such an action are also discussed in Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 3, Formation of Corporations , § 54.08 (Matthew Bender).

c. If starting new business, supplement normal incorporation procedures [see § 2.130] with special close corporation requirements [see PP 2-5, below].

2. Confirm that corporation's name, as set forth in its articles, contains word "corporation," "incorporated," "limited," or abbreviation of one of those words [Corp. Code § 202(a)].

3. Include following in articles of incorporation:

NOTE:
When close corporation status is sought after shares have been issued, the following provisions must be included in the existing articles of incorporation by amendment, but only after the amendments have been adopted by the affirmative vote of all of the issued and outstanding shares of all classes [Corp. Code § 158(b)].

For articles of incorporation to be used by a close corporation, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation [see Corp. Code §§ 158(a), 200-207, 212(a)].

a. Provision that all issued shares of all classes must be held of record by not more than specified number of persons, not exceeding 35 [Corp. Code § 158(a)]; and

NOTE:
Special requirements relating to the manner in which shareholders must be counted are contained in Corp. Code § 158(d) [see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation].

A corporation ceases to be a close corporation if it acquires more than the maximum number of shareholders of record specified in its articles of incorporation as a result of the transfer of its shares [Corp. Code § 158(e)].

b. Legend stating: "This corporation is a close corporation" [Corp. Code § 158(a)].

NOTE:
Compliance with this statutory requirement assists the California Secretary of State in dealing with amendments of articles and mergers involving close corporations by making them readily identifiable.

4. Advise principals of proposed close corporation to consider issuance of "Section 1244 stock."

NOTE:
If the corporation is a "small business corporation" at the time the stock is issued [I.R.C. § 1244(c)(1)(A)], any loss on the disposition of its Section 1244 stock is deductible for income tax purposes as an ordinary loss and not as a capital loss [I.R.C. § 1244(a)]. For discussion, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities*, § 6I.21*.

5. If possible, structure issuance of proposed close corporation's stock to qualify for one of following exemptions from qualification requirements pursuant to Corp. Code § 25110:

a. Limited offering exemption; available if [Corp. Code § 25102(f); see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions]:

(1) Sales are made to not more than 35 persons, excluding qualified persons as defined in 10 Cal. Code Regs. §§ 260.102.12, 260.102.13; and

(2) Each purchaser either:

NOTE:
To be assured that these criteria are met, subscription agreements in which the purchaser warrants as to the purchaser's financial status and investor questionnaires should be used [see § 2.213].

(a) Has preexisting personal or business relationship with offeror or any of its partners, officers, directors, or controlling persons; or

(b) Can be reasonably assumed to have capacity to protect his, her or its interests.

b. Small offering exemption; available if [Corp. Code § 25102(h); see Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption]:

(1) Immediately after the transaction, there is only one class of stock beneficially owned by not more than 35 persons;

(2) Offer and sale was not advertised;

(3) Consideration received for stock consists of only the following:

(a) Cash or cancellation of debt upon initial organization of issuer;

(b) Cash, provided there is written approval of all existing shareholders and purchasers are existing shareholders; or

(c) If there is only one shareholder after the sale, any legal consideration;

(d) Assets, including cash, of an existing business transferred to issuer upon its initial organization, provided that persons receiving stock:
(i) Were owners of the existing business for not less than a year prior to transfer; and

(ii) Owned the existing business in same proportion as stock they will receive.

(4) No promotional consideration is paid; and

(5) Each purchaser represents that purchase is for purchaser's own account.

NOTE:
Shareholder limitation for purposes of the small offering exemption refers to beneficial owners, contrasted with record ownership test for close corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 158, 25102(h)].

Because the small offering exemption is available only if the corporation has a single class of stock, a shareholders' agreement that effectively creates more than one class of shares by, for example, providing for differing dividend preferences, voting rights, or redemption privileges for different shareholders, renders the small offering exemption unavailable [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)].

PRACTICE TIP:

If a shareholders' agreement is contemplated for a close corporation, the corporation should try to qualify for the limited offering exemption because that exemption does not limit the corporation to a single class of stock. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

c. Qualified purchaser offering exemption; available to California corporations and foreign corporations subject to Corp. Code § 2115 if [Corp. Code § 25102(n)]:

(1) Offers and sales are made only to qualified purchaser or purchaser that issuer reasonably believes, after inquiry, are qualified purchasers;

NOTE:

Qualified purchasers generally are those who are sophisticated enough in business and investing to reasonably be assumed to be able to protect their interests; specific qualifications are set forth in Corp. Code § 25102(n)(2).

(2) Each purchaser represents that purchase is for purchaser's own account;

(3) Each natural person purchaser, including corporations, partnerships, and other organizations, receives written disclosure statement complying with federal Regulation D [see 17 C.F.R. § 230.501 et seq.] at least five business days before securities are sold;

(4) General announcement of proposed offering is published by written document only and contains prescribed information;

(5) No telephone solicitation is made until issuer determines that prospective purchaser is qualified purchaser;

(6) Issuer files notice of transaction:

(a) At time of publication of general announcement of proposed offering or at time of initial offer, whichever is first; and

(b) Within 10 business days after close or abandonment of offering.

6. Make certain that appropriate legend is placed on face of all share certificates [see Corp. Code § 174] issued by corporation:

NOTE:

If the corporation issues uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)] instead of share certificates, the legend requirement will be satisfied if it appears on any instrument, indenture, or document (or in any constitution, statute, ordinance, rule, regulation, order, or the like) pursuant to which the security is issued [Corp. Code § 174 ("on the certificate" defined); see Com. Code § 8202(a); but see Corp. Code § 418(a) (transfer restrictions must appear on certificate, initial transaction statement, and written statements)]. Nevertheless, a transfer restriction on a security imposed by the issuer, even if otherwise valid, is ineffective against a person without knowledge of the restriction, unless the registered owner has been notified of the restriction [Corp. Code § 174; see Com. Code § 8204

].

For a discussion of initial transaction statements, and uncertificated securities generally, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

a. Conspicuous [see Com. Code § 1201(10)] legend stating:
