(3) Persons listed in 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.13(a)-(d), (f), and (g) [i.e., those listed at PP l through s, u, and v, above]; or

(4) "Officers, directors or affiliates of the issuer" as that term is used in Corp. Code § 25102(f).

2. If debt can be placed with individuals privately, determine whether number of potential investors and their prior relationship to issuer or ability to protect their own financial interests will bring transaction under one of the exemptions for nonpublic offerings [see Corp. Code § 25102(e), (f); Corp. Code § 25102.1(d); see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.102.2, 260.102.3, 260.102.12-260.102.14].

NOTE:

Neither the specific exemption from qualification for evidence of indebtedness [see Corp. Code § 25102(e)] nor the limited offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(f)] allow the publication of an advertisement of the debt security, and the exemption for qualified purchasers [see Corp. Code § 25102(n)(5)] allows only a general announcement limited to the matters specified in the statute. Further, evidence of indebtedness that is convertible may not be sold under the Corp. Code § 25102(e) exemption unless the debt is convertible into an equity security of the same issuer, and the offer and sale of the equity security would be exempted from issuer qualification by a subdivision of Corp. Code § 25102 other than subdivision (h) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.3]. For further discussion of the limited offering exemptions provided under Corp. Code §§ 25102(f) and 25102.1(d), see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions . For further discussion of the qualified purchaser exemption of Corp. Code § 25102(n), see Ch. 6D, California Qualified Purchaser Exemptions .

3. Decide whether to place entire issue with same investor or with combination of different investors.

4. Negotiate purchase agreement with single investor or investor group if debt is large or investors are more remote or relatively uninterested in the business.

PRACTICE TIP:

Another factor to be considered in determining what type of investor should be targeted is the need for future flexibility. Covenants which restrict the company's business operations or financial covenants which the company may have difficulty satisfying should not generally be included in public debt securities of unseasoned companies or companies in emerging industries because of the difficulty of obtaining consents of the public investors to amendments which may be necessary. Covenants of this type, however, are quite common in bank credit agreements or other privately placed debt instruments. In these circumstances, it may be easier to obtain investor consent to changes in the terms of the debt securities. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

5. Negotiate special security provisions to be embodied within note itself.

6. Arrange to include provision in investment representation [see §§ 6J.259, 6J.260], as well as separate letters or agreements restating those representations, to effect that investors will not resell in any manner that would jeopardize federal or state securities exemptions.

7. Submit final format of proposed debt issue to board of directors for adoption or revision.

§ 6J.121 Packaging Offering With Equity Securities

1. Consider marketing debt securities by including equity securities in manners such as the following:

a. Outright sale of class of equity securities, in prearranged proportion to debt purchased, for full market value price (usually unavailable on market otherwise).

b. Accompanying sale of equity securities at discount price (lower than market, straight par, or fixed value, etc.).

c. Accompanying warrant to purchase class of equity securities.

d. Provision in note containing privilege to elect to convert note into class of equity securities on prearranged proportion.

2. Qualify entire debt package offering with Commissioner of Corporations [Corp. Code § 25110; see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities].

NOTE:

In California a warrant or right to purchase a security is itself a security [Corp. Code § 25019], and an offer or sale of a convertible note or a warrant is at that time an offer or sale of the underlying optioned security [Corp. Code § 25017(e)]. On the federal level, a right or privilege to convert, exercisable at a future time, is not an offer or sale until the time of exercise [Securities Act of 1933, § 2(a)(3); 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(3)], whereas a straight exchange of securities between the issuer and its holders, if no professional securities personnel are involved, is an exempt one [Securities Act of 1933, § 3(a)(9); 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(9)].

§ 6J.122 Processing Issuance of Debt Securities

1. Prepare resolution authorizing issuance of the particular debt series [see §§ 6.200-6.202]:

a. Specify major features of offering.

b. Authorize important formal steps to be taken in processing the issue.

2. If offering will be public offering, register offering with Federal Securities and Exchange Commission [Securities Act of 1933, § 6; 15 U.S.C. § 77f].

3. Qualify offering with California Commissioner of Corporations if [Corp. Code § 25110; see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities]:

a. It is a public offering;

b. It is part of a package containing equity securities or warrants, rights, or options for equity securities; or

c. It fails to qualify under any of the applicable exemptions from qualification [see § 6J.120; for general discussion of the available securities exemptions, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues , Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions , Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption , and Ch. 6D, California Qualified Purchaser Exemptions].

4. Solicit the approval of any group formally connected with corporation if that approval is necessary to authorize a debt issue, such as:

NOTE:
These approvals do not have to be obtained unless an approval requirement has been formally embodied in the articles or bylaws, or in prior agreements [see Corp. Code §§ 207(d), (g), 1000] such as shareholder agreements or previously issued notes.

a. Holders of previously issued debt;

b. Holders of preference class securities; or

c. General shareholders.

5. Formally arrange for placement of notes.

a. If offering is private offering, either:
(1) Send letter to investor:
(a) Generally describing note.

(b) Specifying terms and method of payment.

(c) Reciting how note will be delivered on receipt of payment.

(2) Alternatively, arrange with investor to send letter of inquiry for note and send check with description of note desired.

b. If offering is public offering, send notes to underwriters in accordance with terms of agreement; or if trust indenture is involved, send securities to indenture trustee.

PRACTICE TIP:
In certain types of transactions, such as bank credit agreements, notes are frequently no longer issued. These types of bank credit agreements do, however, typically contain a provision requiring the borrower to issue a note to any lender who may request a note to evidence the indebtedness of the borrower to that lender. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

6. Prepare, or instruct transfer agent to prepare, books and records to:

a. Reflect receipt and allocation of proceeds from distribution of debt securities; and

b. Show all names and addresses, serial numbers, and denominations of notes issued to registered holders.

§ 6J.133 Redemption

1. Determine, in consultation with accountants, refinancing investors, underwriters, or similar securities personnel, whether time is appropriate for redemption, considering following factors:

a. Whether earnings are sufficient presently to retire debt, as against speculative availability in future.

b. Whether money to finance redemption is "cheaper" (more inflationary) now.

c. Whether money is obtainable from other sources more easily, or on more favorable terms, to replace and retire present debt series.

d. Whether more important new security issues are able to prove more attractive if present debt series is retired (i.e., not further drain on company earnings, or threat to security of future investors).

e. Whether contemplated refinancing or current financial condition of company require "thinning" of present outstanding debt by partial redemption (retirement of some but not all notes of series).

f. Probability that notice of redemption will cause majority of investors to exercise conversion privilege, providing for cancellation of debt and increase of participation in equity securities (rendering healthier balance sheet for special outside creditors).

g. Whether there are any restrictions imposed on company's ability to redeem securities prior to maturity by other debt instruments of company or other contractual obligations.

2. Prepare resolution authorizing redemption as contemplated [see § 6J.205].

3. Notify holders.

a. Send letter notice to all registered holders of notes at last known address as shown on corporate books.

b. Publish notification in newspaper of general circulation in county where corporation's principal executive office is located at least once a week for two successive weeks, in each instance on any day of the week, or as otherwise specified in the debt instruments [see Corp. Code § 509(b)].

NOTE:
The letter or first publication of notice must be no earlier than 60 days, and no later than 20 days, in advance of the date resolved for redemption [see Corp. Code § 509(b), (c)].

4. With respect to called security instruments:

a. Prepare machinery for receipt of called security instruments and for exchange of drafts representing repayment of principal.

b. Handle registered notes in same manner as transfer of shares, with draft to be made out to registered holder and sent to latest address or last address as listed on books.

5. If redemption contemplated is large enough, appoint transfer agent, or direct previously appointed transfer agent to process redemption.

1. Prepare machinery for receipt of notes at scheduled period of maturity, and for repayment of principal plus all uncollected interest; to be handled in same manner as redemption, in § 6J.133.

§ 6J.135 Amendment or Alteration

1. Determine, with economic advisory personnel, accountants, and counsel, necessity or feasibility of altering terms of outstanding debt issue in order to adjust instrument to current or predicted future requirements, to correct past oversight or prevent potential events of default.

2. Prepare resolution:

a. Finding necessity or desirability of altering contents of outstanding issue.

b. Specifying plan for qualifying with governmental authorities, as necessary, and otherwise arranging necessary charges with present note holders or other securities holders.

NOTE:
When the issue is accompanied by a trust indenture, that instrument generally has a special set of provisions for amendment of the debt instruments. By the express terms of the original resolution authorizing the debt issue, or in the provisions of prior debt issues, the corporation may have obligated itself to first obtain the approval of other securities holders before altering any subsequent debt offering. In some instances, the articles of incorporation may require submission of the matter to shareholder vote.

3. Check company records to determine if at least 25 percent of outstanding units (individual notes) which will be directly or indirectly affected substantially and adversely by proposed change have addresses in California [Corp. Code § 25103(b)].

4. Determine whether changes to be effected substantially and adversely affect note holders in any one or more of following areas:

a. Interest rights.

b. Redemption liabilities.

c. Maturity expectations.

d. Voting rights.

e. Conversion rights.

f. Sinking fund expectations.

g. Subordination rights.

5. If proposed changes in rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of outstanding debt securities are subject to qualification and are not exempt, qualify proposed changes by recapitalizations and reorganizations permit [Corp. Code §§ 25120, 25121].

6. Solicit approval of appropriate number of present note holders, prior debt issue holders, or other securities holders of corporation.

7. Notify existing securities holders of alterations of terms of document and consequent exchange of securities; prepare notices in same manner as in redemption, in § 6J.133, with respect to registered or bearer securities.

8. Prepare machinery for receipt of existing securities and exchange for reformed notes in same manner as in conversion procedure, described in § 6J.132, if necessary.

NOTE:

It is impractical simply to send out an addendum or supplement to an existing note because the old and new documents could become physically separated and subsequent good faith holders might not be aware of the later corrections or additions. Therefore, all outstanding instruments have to be exchanged for reformed versions if the terms of the note are altered.

AUTHOR: Frances E. Lossing Practice Consultant

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a corporate resolution authorizing the issuance of a series of complex notes to unidentified purchasers. A series of notes is a more complex debt security that the simple note authorized by the resolution in § 6J.200[2]. The loan document is longer than the typical simple note and complete within itself [s*ee* § 6J.232], and the funds ordinarily may be used for general purposes if specific purposes have not been devised by the board of directors. Only the major features of the offering, almost as they would appear in a capsulized title of the series, need to be mentioned in the resolution.

The form in [2], below, contains many optional provisions in brackets. Counsel may choose whichever are appropriate for the particular situation. These elaborate documents have more of the appearance of marketable securities, and if they are involved in a private placement, there is more of a danger they will be resold in what amounts to a public distribution, unless tailored to a specific type of investor, such as a credit agreement when the lenders are banks or a note purchase agreement when the lenders are insurance companies [s*ee* Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities, on the nature of public offering]. Therefore, it may be necessary to take precautions to ensure the nonpublic character of the offering by obtaining a written investment representation, placing restrictive legends on the note and issuing stop transfer instructions to the transfer agent, if the company is not acting as its own transfer agent [see §§ 6J.259, 6H.260].

For general discussion of the use of directors' resolutions, see Ch. 5, Directors Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions . See Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities , for forms relating to the issuance of warrants, issuance of securities subject to selling expenses, and issuance of shares, all of which apply equally to issuance of shares on exchange of warrants or convertible securities.

Resolution Authorizing Issuance of Series of Complex Notes to Unidentified Purchasers

Resolution Authorizing Issuance of Series of Notes

WHEREAS, the Corporation finds it [necessary and] desirable to obtain on a _____[short-term or long-term] basis funds to carry on its business;

RESOLVED, that the Corporation issue a series of notes [on a selective, privately arranged basis with the ultimate investors] totaling in the aggregate [no more than] $_____, the individual notes to be in denominations only of $_____[either a single figure, e.g., $5,000 or a series of figures, e.g., $10,000, $5,000, and $1,000], the notes to draw interest at _____ percent per annum [if bond will be an income bond, add:, but only to the extent earnings are available for that purpose and up to that figure, on a noncumulative basis], subordinated to senior commercial or institutional lending indebtedness [carrying detachable warrant for _____ shares of the Corporation's common stock,] [convertible into _____ (type of stock)] shares of the Corporation on a basis of _____ (describe basis of convertibility)], the notes to be _____[unsecured or secured by _____ (describe security)], and to be redeemable on the basis of _____[describe basis of redemption, either straight, partial, or total redemption at any time plus accumulated interest, or on a decreasing percentage of principal repayment], the notes further to be in _____[registered] form [for a nonserial issue, add:, with appropriate provision for sinking fund arrangement], with normal warranties of the corporation as to maintenance of ordinary operating procedures, with other covenants restricting the manner in which the company's business is operated, with events of default and provision for accelerated maturity expressed in detail, and the term of the series to be _____ years [if serial note are to be issued, add:, with appropriately arranged series of notes within the issue to be retired on a serial basis at progressively remote intervals up to the maximum term].

PRACTICE TIP:

If a term sheet has been negotiated, this resolution can be shortened by referring to an attached term sheet. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[Optional provisions concerning investment representation:]

RESOLVED, that the above-described series of notes be placed with investors in such a manner as to be entitled to the _____[private exemption provisions or intrastate exemption provisions] of the Federal Securities Act of 1933, and that each note itself contain a representation by the purchaser expressly describing his, her, or its intent to participate in the purchase in a manner that will take advantage of and preserve that exemption status for the offering. [Furthermore, all investors should separately sign agreements to the same effect and receive letters negotiating for placement of the debt specifying requirements of the investment representation.]

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the President and Secretary of the Corporation be, and hereby are, authorized and directed to complete, execute, and deliver whatever documents, subscription agreements, certificates, forms, letters, may be necessary to enable the Corporation to offer and to sell the above-described series of notes [in conformity with the requirements of the exemptions to registration described above].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision authorizing the qualification of debt securities. It may be incorporated into a resolution authorizing a debt offering when it will be necessary to qualify that offering with the Corporations Commissioner prior to sale.

Generally only public debt issues must be qualified for offer or sale [Corp. Code § 25102(e)], although convertible offerings and warrants packaged with debt must be qualified on first distributions as offers or sales of the underlying securities unless an exemption is available [Corp. Code § 25017(e); see § 6J.19[3]]. The problem of determining whether a particular issue is truly a private placement, or will remain so for a sufficient period of time during distribution, may be difficult. Sometimes, it is better to qualify the issue rather than take the risk that a purportedly private offering will turn out to have been a public one. Because the appropriate application for qualification [see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities] states that the signer has been authorized by the corporation to submit it, the board should formally resolve that the qualification be authorized. It is not necessary in actuality to act on the resolution once it is passed if circumstances permit or dictate otherwise.

For general discussion of the use of directors' resolutions, see Ch. 5, Directors Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions .

Commissioner of Corporations and to cause to be prepared, to execute, verify, and file, for and on behalf of the Corporation, an application for qualification (including any exhibits, supplements, and amendments thereto) necessary to render that qualification fully effective.

This form specifies that notes are being redeemed, but it can be modified to redeem bonds or debentures. See § 6J.205 for a notice of redemption to succeed this resolution.

Although it is often to an issuer's advantage to let long term debt securities remain outstanding until their maturity, to have the use of investors' funds for the longest period of time, there are situations that make redemption desirable. It may be advantageous to retire debt before maturity because money is easier to raise at a particular time than in the foreseeable future, because prospective investors of a contemplated new issue want the prior financing retired, or covenants in the loan documents unduly restrict the company's operations. Redemption may be required by the terms of the debt instrument. In either case, the issuer's board of directors should set a definite date for redemption, one beyond which interest will cease to accrue, but before which any conversion privilege may be exercised.

For general discussion of the use of directors' resolutions, see Ch. 5, Directors Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions .

§ 6J.205 Notice of Redemption

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a notice stating that notes issued by a corporation are being redeemed. The form can be modified to give notice of redemption of bonds or debentures.

Debt holders need to be notified, according to the terms of their debt instrument, in advance of the date selected for redemption, so they can arrange to return the security instrument to the corporation or its appointed agent, and receive payment. Only a letter need be sent to registered holders, preferably by registered mail, at their last known addresses as reflected on the books of the corporation.

In either event, the notice should clearly state that the corporation is redeeming a particularly described series, or partially redeeming a series by only retiring a specially described set within a series or particular numbers. The notice should specify where the security instruments should be returned, and whether to the corporation or its transfer agent. Registered notes must be properly endorsed or accompanied by proper assignment. For a notice of redemption of debentures, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.60 (Matthew Bender).

§ 6J.220 Letter Soliciting Subscription Agreements for Offering of Notes to Present Shareholders of California Corporation Under Private Offering Exemption of Federal Securities Act

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter from a California corporation to its shareholders soliciting subscription agreements for an offering of notes under the private offering exemption of the Federal Securities Act of 1933. By sending this type of letter, the directors of the corporation are attempting to do three things:

- Obtain subscriptions to new promissory notes from present shareholders of the corporation who are also holders of previously issued convertible notes;

- Obtain the consent of the holders of the previously issued notes to the issuance of the new notes; and

- Bring the sale of the new notes under the "private offering exemption" of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 [Securities Act of 1933, § 4(2); 15 U.S.C. § 77d(2)], which is discussed in §§ 6J.223[1] and 6J.260[1].

Although the preemptive right of a shareholder to subscribe for future securities issued by a corporation has been abolished by statute in California unless expressly provided for in the corporation's articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 406], a corporation may find it desirable to grant such a preemptive right to existing shareholders when the corporation seeks to issue new debt securities. In the case of an offering such as the one contemplated in this form, the corporation typically may wish to grant existing shareholders a preemptive right so that the following will ensue:

- The entire proceeds from the sale of the new notes may be "netted"; in other words, paid to the corporation without deduction of a broker's selling commission; and

- The shareholders, who are also the holders of previously issued notes, may be induced to consent to issuance of the new notes. The requirement that the holders of previously issued notes consent to the corporation incurring the debt to be evidenced by the new notes would appear in the "purchase agreement" made between the corporation and the holders of the previously issued notes when those notes were issued.

[b] Exemption From Qualification

If the sale of the new notes qualifies under the private offering exemption of the Federal Securities Act of 1933, they will not have to be registered with the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission [15 U.S.C. § 77d(2)]. In that case, the issuer also may avoid the necessity of appointing a trustee and executing a trust indenture for the notes as required by the Federal Trust Indenture Act of 1939 [15 U.S.C. §§ 77aaa et seq.].

However, the California Corporations Commissioner may require similar protections [10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.140.4, 260.140.5]. The proposed notes constitute a security as defined in Corp. Code § 25019, as do subscriptions. Thus, both will require qualification by the Commissioner of Corporations [Corp. Code § 25110] unless an exemption applies. Because the securities are not yet authorized by the prior note holders and cannot as yet be issued, the corporation may need to obtain a negotiating permit [Corp. Code § 25102(c)] from the Commissioner for the taking of subscriptions. See Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities , for discussion of negotiating (issuer) permits, whether such a permit will be necessary, and how it operates.

If the offering is made to not more than 35 persons, it will be exempt from any need to qualify or obtain a negotiating permit for the subscriptions [Corp. Code § 25102(a); 10 Cal. Code Reg. 260.102.1(a)]. If the offering or subscriptions are not exempt, the solicitation must contain special language required by Corp. Code § 25102(a) [see [2], first alternative Paragraph 8, below]. If the Commissioner of Corporations does not impose a legend condition by virtue of the lack of a full-fledged trust indenture or evidence of financial instability, the corporation can request one to further insure the private nature of the offering [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.10].

For typical restrictions on transferability of securities being sold under the private offering exemption of the Securities Act of 1933, see §§ 6J.223[2] and 6J.260[2].

§ 6J.221 Ballot and Subscription Agreement Consenting to and Subscribing for Notes to Be Issued by California Corporation--Form Enclosed in Solicitation Letter Sent to Present Shareholders and Owners of Prior Notes of Corporation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a ballot and subscription agreement designed for inclusion with the letter form in § 6J.220[2] when that letter is sent to shareholders of the corporation or owners of prior notes issued by the corporation. A self-addressed, stamped envelope should be enclosed with the solicitation letter so that all the shareholder or note owner has to do is sign this form and deposit it in the nearest mail box. As indicated in both Paragraph 6 and the final paragraph of the form in § 6J.220[2], the signature of the shareholder or note owner on this form, whether he or she subscribes for the new notes or not, constitutes his or her consent to the issuance of the new notes.

[b] When Consent to Issuance Is Required of Present Shareholders or Owners of Prior Indebtedness of the Corporation

If the subscriber owns previously issued securities that require his or her consent to issuance of the proposed new notes and the previously issued securities are federally registered for trading purposes, the Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Section 14(a) [15 U.S.C. § 78n(a)] and regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission [see SEC Rule 14a-4(b)(1); 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-4(b)(1)] will probably require that space be provided on the ballot part of this form for the subscriber to vote for or against issuance of the proposed note. The appropriate alternative Paragraph 1 of this form should be used in such a case.

§ 6J.223 Purchase Agreement for Private Offering of Notes

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a sample purchase agreement for a private offering of notes. Before purchasing an unsecured obligation, purchasers want not only assurance that the corporate issuer is presently in a sound financial condition, but also assurance that it will remain in a sound financial condition and be capable of paying the obligations when they mature. Further, if the corporation is attempting to issue its securities under the private offering exemption of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 [15 U.S.C. § 77d(2)] or the intrastate exemption to that Act [15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11); see Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations], the corporation itself will want assurances from the original purchasers of its securities that they are not purchasing the securities for resale and will not attempt to resell the securities in a manner that will destroy the securities' private offering or intrastate exemption under the Federal Securities Act. Thus, it is customary for the corporation to execute a "purchase agreement" with each original purchaser of unsecured securities.

The agreement in [2], below, is in the form of a letter from the issuer to the purchaser with a place for the purchaser to accept and execute the agreement. A subscription agreement can also take the form of a letter from the purchaser to the issuer. For such a subscription agreement (in the context of the purchase of equity securities), including more extensive representations by the purchaser and representations to allow the offering to qualify for exemptions based on the purchaser's wealth and sophistication, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.114 (Matthew Bender).

This form is designed as a purchase agreement for the promissory notes described in § 6J.232[2]. The purchase agreements signed with each purchaser of a particular issue of securities are usually identical, prepared in letter form, and incorporated by reference in the note or other evidence of the unsecured obligation. The provisions of this form, including those governing subordination, redemption, conversion, and the separate elements of the covenants of the corporation, are optional [see generally, §§ 6J.232[2], 6J.250 et seq.]; those elements that will actually be terms of the notes should be noted in the subscription agreement.

[b] Subscription Is Security

A subscription agreement is itself a security, and may have to be qualified if not otherwise exempt [Corp. Code § 25019; see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities]. A subscription agreement is exempt from qualification as a nonpublic offering [Corp. Code § 25102(a)] if it is not made to more than 35 people [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.1(a)].

[c] Copies

Two copies of the purchase agreement are delivered to each subscriber just prior to the time set for the consummation or "closing" of the purchase and sale of the securities. The subscriber retains one copy, signed by the corporation, of the purchase agreement delivered to that purchaser, signs the acceptance form at the bottom of the second copy, and returns that second signed copy to the corporation.

Opinion of Counsel

PRACTICE TIP:

Both the American Bar Association (ABA) and the California Bar Association have published guidance on a variety of legal opinion issues. Although the Silverado Accord proposed by the ABA in 1991 has not been widely used, the ABA Accord publications nevertheless provide useful guidance for counsel in negotiating legal opinions. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

(a) The delivery to Purchaser by _____[name of attorneys], counsel for the Corporation, of their written opinion, dated the date of closing, satisfactory to Purchaser as to

(1) The due organization and existence of the Corporation.

(2) The qualification of the Corporation to transact business in each jurisdiction in which the nature of the business transacted by it makes qualification necessary, naming those jurisdictions.

(3) The fact that this Agreement has been duly authorized by all necessary corporate action on the part of the Corporation, has been duly executed and delivered by duly authorized officers of the Corporation, and constitutes a valid and legally binding obligation of the Corporation, enforceable against the corporation in accordance with its terms.

(4) The fact that the Note has been duly authorized by all necessary corporate action on the part of the Corporation, the Note has been duly executed and delivered by duly authorized officers of the Corporation, that on due payment therefor by Purchaser it will be validly issued as fully paid and will be enforceable against the corporation in accordance with its terms except as enforcement may be limited by bankruptcy, insolvency, and other similar laws affecting the enforcement of creditor's rights.

(6) The offering, issue, sale, and delivery of the Notes, under the circumstances contemplated by this Agreement, constitutes an exempt transaction under the Federal Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the regulations adopted by the Securities and Exchange Commission pursuant thereto, and the fact that it is not necessary to register the Notes under that Act or regulations.

(7) The absence, so far as known to counsel, of any litigation, action, proceeding, or investigation, pending or threatened, that might result in any materially adverse change in the business, prospects, or condition, financial or otherwise, of the Corporation or any of its properties or assets, or that questions the validity of the issuance of the Notes, or that might substantially affect the Corporation's ability to pay the Notes or perform the provisions of this Agreement to be performed by it.

(8) The execution and delivery of this Agreement and the issuance and sale of the Notes not conflicting with or resulting in any violation or default under, or resulting in the creation of any lien pursuant to, the terms or provisions of any charter or bylaw of the Corporation, or of any agreement or instrument, or of any judgment, decree, or order, known to counsel to which the Corporation is a party.

(9) Any other matters incident to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement as Purchaser or Purchaser's counsel may reasonably request.

It is understood that counsel may, in rendering his or her opinion, rely on public records, certificates of public officials, and certificates of any officers of the Corporation as to factual matters not disclosed by the public records.

Warranties and Performance by Corporation

(b) The representations and warranties of the Corporation contained in this Agreement shall be true on and as of the time of closing, except to the extent of changes caused by the transactions herein contemplated, and the Corporation shall have performed and complied with all agreements and conditions contained in this Agreement required to be performed or complied with by it prior to or at the closing. Further the Corporation shall deliver to Purchaser at the closing a certificate dated the date of the closing, signed by its President or Vice President and by its Secretary, certifying in detail reasonably satisfactory to Purchaser that the Corporation has performed or complied with all representations and warranties are true and that all agreements and conditions.

Sale of All Notes

(c) The Corporation shall simultaneously sell to the other purchasers, and shall simultaneously receive payment for, a principal amount of Notes which when added to the principal amount of Notes to be purchased by Purchaser at the closing shall total $_____[amount of notes to be issued].

Proceeding and Documents

(d) All proceedings to be taken in connection with the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and all documents incidental thereto shall be satisfactory in form and substance to Purchaser and Purchase's counsel, and Purchaser shall have received copies of all documents or other evidence as Purchaser may reasonably request in order to establish the consummation of these transactions and the taking of all corporate proceedings in connection therewith, in form, as to certification and otherwise, in form and substance satisfactory to Purchaser and Purchaser's counsel.

Permit Inspections

(j) Permit at any reasonable time and as often as Purchaser may reasonably request any authorized representatives designated by Purchaser in writing to inspect at Purchaser's expense any of the books, accounts, records, and property of the Corporation, to make extracts from those books, accounts, and records, and to discuss the Corporation's affairs, finances, and accounts with its officers; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require the Corporation to permit any inspection that would reveal or divulge trade secrets or matters required to be treated as restricted security information by any law or governmental regulation or order applicable to that information at the time of any inspection.

Furnish Financial Statements

(k) Deliver the following to Purchaser, in the number of copies Purchaser may reasonably request:

(1) Within _____ [number] days after the close of each of the first _____ [e.g., three quarters] of each fiscal year of the Corporation, its balance sheet as of the close of that quarter, its profit and loss statement, surplus reconciliation, and statement of sources and uses of funds for that quarter, and for that portion of the fiscal year ending with that quarter, certified as correct by a responsible officer of the Corporation and showing in each case comparative figures for the corresponding periods of the previous fiscal year.

(2) Within _____ [number] days after the close of each fiscal year of the Corporation a complete copy of its audit report, which shall include at least its balance sheet as of the close of that year, its profit and loss statement, surplus reconciliation, and statement of sources and uses of funds for that year, prepared on both a consolidated and consolidating basis should the Corporation acquire any subsidiaries, setting forth in each case comparative figures for the previous fiscal year, and certified by an independent public accountant selected by the Corporation and licensed by the State of California. Certificate shall not be qualified or limited because of restricted or limited examination by the accountant of any material portion of the Corporation's records, and shall include or be accompanied by a written statement by the accountant that as the result of making his or her examination of the Corporation's books, records, and accounts, he or she is aware of no violation by the Corporation of any of the terms of the Notes, articles of incorporation, or this Agreement.

(3) Promptly on transmission thereof, copies of all financial statements, reports, notices, and proxy statements sent by the Corporation to any of its shareholders, and all reports, if any, filed by the Corporation with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the California Commissioner of Corporations, or any governmental authority succeeding to the functions of that Commission or Commissioner.

(4) With reasonable promptness, other information and data relating to the business, affairs, and financial condition of the Corporation as from time to time Purchaser may reasonably request.

Maintain Corporate Existence

(l) Not liquidate or dissolve, or enter into any consolidation, merger, pool, joint venture, syndicate, or other combination, or sell, lease, or dispose of its business or assets as a whole or as in the opinion of a majority of the holders of the Notes constitutes a substantial portion of the Corporation's business or assets.

Not Incur Indebtedness

(m) Except as is provided in this Agreement, not create or incur any indebtedness for borrowed money, or become liable as a surety, guarantor, accommodation endorser, or otherwise, for or on the obligation of any other person, firm, or corporation, or purchase, acquire, or incur liability for the purchase of the assets or business of any other person, firm, or corporation. Provided, however, nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to prohibit (1) the acquisition of goods, supplies, or merchandise on credit by the Corporation; (2) the execution of bonds, undertakings, or contracts by the Corporation in the usual course of its business; (3) the endorsement by the Corporation of negotiable instruments received in the usual course of its business; or (4) the incurring by the Corporation of bank and trade credit maturing in not more than _____[e.g., 12] months and incurred in the usual course of its business.

Provided, however, if any fixed or capital assets are acquired as replacements of presently held or hereafter acquired capital assets the amount of expenditures made or obligations incurred by the Corporation in acquiring new assets shall be determined, for the purposes of this paragraph, by deducting from the purchase price for those assets agreed to be paid by the Corporation the amount of cash or credit received by the Corporation for the assets replaced. The leasing of any capital asset for a period of one year or longer shall, for the purpose of this paragraph, be deemed to be an acquisition of that asset by the Corporation and the total amount of rent payable by the Corporation under any lease shall be considered the amount of expenditure made or obligation incurred by the Corporation in acquiring the related asset. This paragraph and the limitations herein contained shall not, however, apply to lease obligations of the Corporation outstanding on the date of this Agreement.

Pay Costs of Transaction

(o) To pay the following, to the extent incurred and whether or not the transactions contemplated by this Agreement are consummated:

(1) All the costs and expenses involved in preparing and issuing Purchaser's Note.

(5) The costs of performing or complying with all provisions and conditions of this Agreement to be performed or complied with by the Corporation.

(6) The costs of enforcing compliance with all provisions and conditions of this Agreement to be performed or complied with by the Corporation.

Warranties and Agreements of Purchaser

7. Purchaser makes the following warranties, representations, and agreements:

Declaration of Intent Not to Resell

(a) Purchaser represents and warrants that he or she or it is purchasing his or her or its Note as an investment for Purchaser's own account and without any present intention of dividing it with others or reselling or otherwise distributing it. In making this warranty, Purchaser acknowledges that the Corporation has advised Purchaser that

(1) The Note is not being registered under the Federal Securities Act of 1933, as amended, on the ground that this transaction does not involve any public offering and therefore is exempt under Section 4(2) of that Act.

(2) The Corporation's reliance on that exemption is predicated in part on Purchaser's representation and warranty that Purchaser has no present intention of dividing his or her or its Note with others or of reselling or otherwise distributing it.

(3) Although Purchaser has the right to dispose of Purchaser's own property when and as Purchaser sees fit, in the view of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission the exemption under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 is not available to the Corporation if Purchaser has in mind, notwithstanding Purchaser's representation and warranty, merely acquiring the Note for resale on the occurrence or nonoccurrence of some predetermined event, such as passage of the capital gains holding period for the Note, a market rise, a sale if the market does not rise, or any other fixed or determinable event.

Warranty of No Present Intent to Make Future Transfer

(b) Purchaser further warrants that Purchaser does not intend to dispose of all or any part of his or her or its Note unless and until Purchaser determines at some future date that changed circumstances, not now in contemplation by Purchaser, make disposition advisable, and that in that event Purchaser nevertheless will comply with the restrictions set forth in Subparagraph (c) of this Paragraph 7.

Restrictions on Transfers by Purchaser

(c) Purchaser agrees that no transfer of his or her or its Note shall be effected until

(1) Purchaser has obtained either an opinion of counsel satisfactory to counsel for the Corporation that the proposed transfer will not result in a violation of the Securities Act of 1933, as then amended, or a letter from the Securities and Exchange Commission to the effect that the Commission will take no action with respect to that transfer; or

(2) A registration statement with respect to the Note shall have become effective under the Securities Act of 1933 as then amended.

Restrictions Binding on Transferees

(d) The restrictions contained in Subparagraph (c) of this Paragraph 7 shall be binding on all subsequent transferees of Purchaser's Note.

Payments

8. The Corporation agrees that all payments of principal and interest on any Notes held by Purchaser will be made by check duly mailed or delivered to Purchaser at the address set forth under Purchaser's name on Exhibit B attached, or any other address Purchaser may from time to time designate in writing, any contrary provision of the Note notwithstanding. Purchaser agrees that, before disposing of his or her or its Note, Purchaser will make a notation thereon of [all principal payments previously made thereon and of] the date to which interest thereon has been paid, and will notify the Corporation of the name and address of the transferee of that Note.

Amendments and Consents

9. This Agreement may be amended and the Corporation may be authorized to take any action herein prohibited or to omit to perform any act herein required to be performed by it by the written consent of the holders of _____ percent of the principal amount of the Notes outstanding at the time the consents are given. Provided, however, no amendment to this Agreement shall extend the maturity of any Note, reduce the principal amount thereof, or reduce the rate or extend the time for payment of interest thereon unless the holders of all Notes outstanding at the time of the adoption of that amendment consent thereto in writing. Any amendment, action, or omission to act adopted or authorized by written consent of holders of Notes as provided in this paragraph shall be binding on the holders of all Notes outstanding at the time those consents are given whether or not those Notes are marked to indicate that amendment or authorization, and all Notes thereafter issued shall bear a notation referring to that amendment or authorization.

Survival of Agreements and Warranties

10. All agreements, representations, and warranties contained in this Agreement or made in writing by the Corporation in connection with any transaction contemplated by this Agreement shall survive the execution and delivery of this Agreement, the sale and delivery of the Note to Purchaser, Purchaser's payment therefor, and any investigations made by Purchaser or on Purchaser's behalf. All statements contained in any report, memorandum, or certificate delivered to Purchaser by or on behalf of the Corporation pursuant to the terms of this Agreement or in connection with any transaction contemplated by this Agreement shall be construed to be representations and warranties made in writing by the Corporation in connection with transactions contemplated by this Agreement and shall be subject to this paragraph.

Binding on Successors

11. All covenants, agreements, and conditions contained in this Agreement shall bind and inure to the benefit of the respective successors and assigns of the parties hereto.

Partial Invalidity

12. Should any of the provisions of this Agreement be held to be invalid or unenforceable, that invalidity or unenforceability shall not affect the validity or enforceability of any other provision of this Agreement, and to this end the provisions of this Agreement are declared to be severable.

Entire Agreement

13. This instrument contains the entire agreement between Purchaser and the Corporation concerning the Notes and supersedes all prior agreements and understandings relating to the Notes. No provision of this Agreement may be changed, waived, discharged, or terminated except as provided in Paragraph 9 of this Agreement.

Communications

14. All notices, consents, statements, and other communications required or permitted to be served or delivered hereunder shall be in writing and shall be deemed properly served or delivered when deposited in the United States mail, first-class postage prepaid, and, if to Purchaser, addressed to Purchaser at the address set forth under Purchaser's name on Exhibit B hereto attached, or if to the Corporation, addressed to the Corporation at _____ Street, _____, California, Attention: _____. Either party to this Agreement, Purchaser or the Corporation, may change his or her or its address for the purpose of this paragraph by giving proper written notice of the change of address to the other party hereto in the manner provided in this paragraph. [If desired, add provision regarding any other acceptable methods of communication such as fax, e-mail, or messenger service.]

Attorneys' Fees

15. Should any litigation be commenced between Purchaser and the Corporation regarding this Agreement, the Notes, or any other transaction contemplated by this Agreement, the party, Purchaser or the Corporation, prevailing in that litigation shall be entitled, in addition to any other relief that may be awarded, to a reasonable sum as and for Purchaser's or Corporation's attorneys' fees in that litigation which shall be fixed by the court in that litigation or in a separate proceeding brought for that purpose.

Law Governing Agreement

16. This Agreement is being delivered and is intended to be performed in the State of California, and shall be construed and enforced in accordance with, and the rights of the parties shall be governed by, the law of California.

Counterparts

17. This Agreement may be executed simultaneously in two or more counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original, and it shall not be necessary in making proof of this Agreement to produce or account for more than one counterpart.

Closing Statement

If Purchaser agrees with the above, please sign the form of acceptance on the enclosed counterpart of this letter and return the counterpart to the Corporation. § 6J.230 Note to Single Purchaser

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a relatively uncomplicated promissory note. It may be used in many situations in a flexible financing program. It should not be overlooked when all other funding sources are temporarily dried up. In the reverse situation, when the corporation has almost adequate equity capitalization and simply desires a small additional allowance for interim purposes but without the formalities of a full-fledged debt issue, it offers a convenient solution. The terms can remain simple when the investor is recruited from the ranks of controlling shareholders or close commercial acquaintances, such as other companies involved in a symbiotic business relationship with the issuer. If more detailed provisions are required to satisfy either the issuer or the investor, those provisions may be incorporated from the general note in § 6J.232 or from any of the optional provisions in § 6J.250 et seq.

[b] Use With Subordination Clause for Thin Incorporation Purposes

This note, including the subordination clause, may be used for thin incorporation purposes, when the shareholders wish to take part of their investment in the form of a note rather than all in securities, in the event there are any tax advantages [see § 6J.21[1]]. Except when a commercial bank or institutional investor is involved, a subordination clause is frequently included to make the note rank second to senior indebtedness. For a more detailed subordination provision, substitute the one in the note in § 6J.232[2]. This note typically belongs in a private placement transaction, unqualified before the Commissioner [see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities].

Whenever any payment on this Note shall be stated to be due on a day which is not a business day, that payment shall be made on the next succeeding business day and such an extension of time shall be included in the computation of the payment of interest on the Note.

Acceleration of Maturity

In the event of the failure of the Corporation to pay any installment of interest when due and payable [and the continued failure to pay that interest for a period of _____ days], Purchaser, by notice in writing to the Corporation, may declare the principal of, and all accrued interest on, this note immediately due and payable without further notice or demand. The Corporation hereby promises to pay all costs and expenses, including reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in the collection and enforcement of this Note. Company and any endorsees of this Note hereby consent to renewals and extensions of time at or after maturity hereof, without notice, and hereby waive diligence, presentment, protest, demand and notice of every kind and, to the full extent permitted by law, the right to plead any statute of limitations as a defense to any demand hereunder.

[Optional:]

Subordination

The payment of principal and interest on this note (and any holder, by his or her acceptance of this note, so agrees) is expressly subordinated to any indebtedness of Corporation for money borrowed from _____[banks or persons, firms, or corporations which engage in the business of lending money including, but without limitation, banks, trust companies, insurance companies and other financing institutions (hereinafter called "bank debt" even if not owing to a bank)] which may at any time and from time to time be outstanding. On any receivership, insolvency, bankruptcy, assignment for the benefit of creditors, reorganization, sale of all or substantially all of the assets, dissolution, liquidation, or other marshaling of the assets of Corporation, no amount is to be paid by Corporation of the principal or interest on this note unless and until all bank debt has been paid in full, together with all interest and all other amounts that may be payable in connection with any outstanding bank debt. To the extent necessary to accomplish the purposes of this paragraph, all sums payable as a result of the receivership, insolvency, bankruptcy, assignment, reorganization, sale, dissolution, liquidation, or marshaling, to the holder of this note will be paid to the holders of bank debt until that bank debt is paid in full. In the event of any default in payment of principal (including any sinking fund payments) of, or interest on, any bank debt, and during its continuance, no amount will be paid by Corporation of the principal or interest on this note while that default continues.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a registered and privately offered discount note. Regular notes sometimes may be sold at discount if they are not readily marketable under then prevailing commercial conditions at a percentage of the stated principal. However, in some instances, a corporation deliberately chooses to issue notes at a discount. This type of note represents a speculative type of offering, is generally for a medium term, such as 10 years, and frequently is not burdened with any special security provisions. One advantage to the corporation is that it does not have to pay out interest periodically. For the investor, a discount note is like a savings bond in that the investor may not expect any realized return for several years. Unless held in a tax deferred account, the investor will be required to pay taxes annually on a portion of the original issue discount, even though no cash is received by the investor.

The simple plan of a discount note is that it is issued for a base figure, after which, on a fixed progressive schedule, the corporation is free to redeem the note at an increasingly higher figure during each prescribed term, until the stated maturity figure is reached. The base purchase figure is considered a discount on the final maturity amount. Generally it would be in the interest of the corporation to redeem the note at the earliest opportunity; while for the investor, the closer the redemption reaches toward maturity, the more profitable it is. For a form for a registered debenture issued at a discount, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.49 (Matthew Bender). For a corporate bond issued at a discount or premium with principal payable periodically, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.69 (Matthew Bender).

§ 6J.232 General Form for Note

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This is a general form for a note. It is designed for general use as part of a larger debt security offering although one capable of managing to remain exempt from federal registration [see §§ 6J.259, 6J.260; s*ee also* § 6J.19]. The form contains many of the standard protective provisions for an offering of moderate to larger size to a relatively small group of investors and without the involvement of a formal trust indenture. Not all of the protective provisions in this note will be necessary. Therefore any provision should be considered optional or subject to modification. For instance, Paragraph 8, Events and Consequences of Default, may be shortened or excluded. On the other hand, it may be desirable, under the circumstances of financing requirements or availability of other devices, to add or replace any provision in this note with one of the select group of the more popularly included kinds of provisions in § 6J.250 et seq. The following is a description of the provisions composing this general form.

[b] Obligation

The note should begin with a general description of the principal amount of the note, the amount of interest it bears, the life of the note, the times of payment of interest, and a description of the holder of the note. The terms should be for a period long enough to allow the corporation conveniently to accumulate sufficient income term (anywhere from five to 20 years) and to allow an investor to accumulate a healthy return on its investment. In the popular form among smaller growth corporations principal is not repaid until maturity or earlier redemption, so that interest is paid on the entire original amount of principal outstanding at all times. For a variation in the manner of payment of interest as dependant on available earnings, see § 6J.250[2].

The accompanying form is designed to be made out to a registered holder, and is handled in the manner of an equity security which also is registered.

[c] Medium of Payment

Although failure to consider what tangible form of payment is contemplated by any particular debt offering was once considered a potential source of difficulty, it is now primarily a formalism. For the assurance of investors, the note may indicate that United States money, implicitly in check form, will be distributed at the corporation's offices. The medium and place of payment may be combined with the obligation paragraph, as in the note in § 6J.231.

[d] Series Conditions

This provision somewhat duplicates the first paragraph in that it shows that the entire series of notes, of which the individual holder's is a single part, is identical in description and form with each other note. The featured provision in the following general form indicates, by omission, a note that is unsecured, and should indicate by specific reference any other important feature, such as the fact that the note is convertible [see § 6J.253] or subordinated. If provisions concerning convertibility or subordination are included, they also should be included in the title of the notes and described as a feature in this Series paragraph.

Other features that should be described in Paragraph 3, if applicable, are the fact that the notes are secured by real property [see § 6J.254] or by a lien on real property on an open-ended basis [see § 6J.255], or that the notes are to be secured by personal property [see § 6J.256]. When any of the foregoing features are included, a clause or paragraph to that effect should be added at the end of Paragraph 3.

Notes are strictly a contractual obligation arranged between the corporation and its creditors [see Corp. Code § 207(d), (g)]. Thus, they may provide, and in any manner, for redemption of the outstanding notes before maturity. Small growth corporations normally provide for redemption solely at the option of the corporation; and while normally intending to let the principal remain outstanding until maturity or earlier redemption time, the company may provide for voluntary partial prepayment at any time before that date. The most attractive method from an investor's standpoint is the promise to pay a percentage bonus above the principal due, the earlier the redemption is made before maturity date. In some cases a period of call protection, such as 3-5 years, may be provided before the note may be redeemed. However, it is quite permissible to provide for straight redemption of principal plus all accrued interest to date. For a serial redemption provision, see § 6J.258

Redemption requires special notice to the holders, usually 20 to 30 days before the time for redemption. Thus, whichever type of redemption schedule is chosen, Item 4 must contain the paragraph regarding notice of redemption. Local customs or special market requirements may provide the framework for redemption provisions in a particular offering.

The funds of commercial banks and a whole host of institutional investors--such as insurance companies, governmental pension funds, charitable trusts, and the like--have become increasingly available for short-term and interim financing. Intermediate and long-term holders of series notes may be willing from time to time to take junior positions to the institutional investors providing those short-term or interim financing. Thus, the optional subordination provision is included in this note to specify which loans will take precedence over the note series, no matter when the short-term or interim loans are made. For a shorter subordination clause, see § 6J.230. For a checklist of elements to consider in negotiating or drafting a subordination provision, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAW, ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness, § 133 (Matthew Bender).

[g] Covenants of the Company

The company normally tries to assure the note holders that it will maintain adequate working capital, and that it will give proper notice to any registered holder of any disputes that might lead to a drain on the company's finances or earnings (Paragraph 6). The company also should provide in some manner for protection of any option, warrant, or conversion privilege by negatively covenanting not to dilute the value of the optioned stock by draining off cash resources into dividends, or through purchasing its shares, or by increasing the outstanding stock through some form of dividend or recapitalization process (Paragraph 7). If there are no warrants, options, or conversion privileges associated with the Notes, the title of Paragraph 7 should not mention antidilution considerations and should be limited to actions that generally maintain working capital, liquidity, and a debt to equity ratio similar to that existing at the time the notes are issued.

[h] Events and Consequences of Default

Investors are interested in seeing in express and specific terms just what constitutes default so that the maturity of the note may be accelerated and the right to repayment instantly be made enforceable. Events of default include not only failure to observe any of the major requirements of the note, but usually any kinds of situations which normally represent a credit crisis, such as insolvency, attachment, receivership, or bankruptcy. Another advantage of holding a note in registered form is that the holders may negotiate for the right to receive notices of the occurrences of any events of default.

[i] Notices and References

The note normally may confirm any addresses to which notices may be sent between the company or any registered holder, and a reference to the fact that California law is to govern the instrument.

[j] Transferability

The modern debt securities market provides for registration of the notes. With a registered note, there is no necessity of detaching coupons, safeguarding them, or entrusting them to the mails. As in the case of registered securities, when the corporation has an interest payment to make, it simply has a check sent off to the registered holder, as his or her name appears on its books and to the holder's last known address. The interest payments once received, of course, are negotiable. Registered notes are transferred in the same manner as registered equity securities [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].

Subordination

5. The payment of principal and interest on this Note is subordinated in right of payment to the prior payment in full of all senior indebtedness of the Company, whether outstanding on this date or thereafter. Senior indebtedness is defined as the principal of and premium and interest on indebtedness of the Company for money borrowed from, or the payment of which has been guaranteed to, persons, firms, or corporations which engage in lending money including, but without limitation, banks, trust companies, insurance companies and other financing institutions, and charitable trusts, pension trusts, and other investing organizations, evidenced by notes or similar obligations. [Optional: Senior indebtedness does not include payments of principal, premium, and interest on $_____ principal amount of _____ percent (_____ (additional descriptive term, if any, e.g., Subordinated)) Promissory Notes due _____ (date), being issued contemporaneously with this Note.] The subordination of this Note is on the terms as set forth here:

Insolvency, Dissolution, or Related Proceeding

(a) In the event of any insolvency or bankruptcy proceedings, or any receivership, liquidation, reorganization, or other similar proceedings relative to the Company, or to its property, or in the event of any proceedings for voluntary liquidation, dissolution, or other winding up of the Company, then the holders of senior indebtedness will be entitled to receive payment in full of all principal and interest on all senior indebtedness before the holders of the Notes are entitled to receive any payment on account of principal or interest on the Notes and to that end the holders of senior indebtedness will be entitled to receive on application any payment or disbursement of any kind or character, whether in cash or in property or securities which may be payable or deliverable in any of the aforementioned proceedings in respect to the Notes, except securities of the Company as reorganized or readjusted or securities of the Company, or any other company, provided for by a plan of reorganization or readjustment, the payment of which is subordinate to the payment of all senior indebtedness which may at the time be outstanding.

Accelerated Maturity

(b) In the event that any of the Notes are declared due and payable before the express maturity for the occurrence of an event of default as defined here (under circumstances that the provisions of Subparagraph (a) are not applicable), the holder will be entitled to payment only after there is first paid in full on the senior indebtedness outstanding at the time this Note becomes due and payable because of that event of default all principal and interest becoming due and payable by acceleration or otherwise, or payment has been provided for in a manner satisfactory to the holders of the senior indebtedness.

No present or future holder of senior indebtedness will be prejudiced in his or her right to enforce subordination of this Note by any act or failure to act on the part of the Company. The provisions of this Paragraph 5. are solely for the purpose of defining the relative rights of the holders of senior indebtedness on the one hand, and the holder of this Note on the other hand and nothing in this Note will impair as between the Company and the holder of this Note the obligation of the Company, which is unconditional and absolute, to pay to the holder the principal and interest in accordance with its terms, nor will anything in this Note prevent the holder from exercising all remedies otherwise permitted by applicable law on default hereunder subject only to the rights, if any, under this paragraph of holders of senior indebtedness to receive cash, property, or securities otherwise payable or deliverable to the holder.

Positive Covenants--Capital; Notices

§ 6J.233 General Form for Bond Secured by Deed of Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This is a general form for a bond secured by a deed of trust. It provides for periodic payment of principal and interest and contains an optional redemption provision which is fairly abbreviated. Other redemption provisions may be found in the form in § 6J.232, and a serial redemption provision may be found in § 6J.258. For discussion of the advantages of securing a debt instrument with real property and for another "security" provision, drafted for use in a series of notes, see § 6J.254.

Generally, a bond is defined as an obligation secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, or other security device and is distinguished from a debenture [see § 6J.234], which is unsecured.

[b] Consideration of Additional Provisions

There are numerous combinations of provisions that can be used to express the terms of a bond. One example is a conversion provision whereby the holder may exchange the bond for shares in the corporation [see § 6J.253]. Counsel may desire to add to this basic form provisions restricting the interest obligation to available net income [see § 6J.250], subordinating the interest and redemption rights to those of a prior series of bonds, or any other appropriate provisions. For other complete forms of bond, as well as forms of optional provisions including those for conversion, redemption, and subordination, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Forms 19.66-19.81 (Matthew Bender).

This is a general form for a debenture. A debenture is often used by a corporation rather than making another public offering of its common stock. It is an unsecured obligation of the corporation and is used primarily because of its attractiveness to investors [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.140.4, 260.140.5 (discussed in §§ 6J.19[5], 6J.20)]. For other debenture forms, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Forms 19.47-19.58 (Matthew Bender)

This form, although it contains a summary of its provisions, refers to the "indenture" for details. An indenture is generally a lengthy agreement between the corporation and the trustee, which is usually a bank with trust powers, and contains the full statement of the rights of the debenture holder. Most banks provide their own indenture form. The American Bar Association also provides a model indenture. For another form of indenture, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.59 (Matthew Bender).

Supplemental Indentures

The Indenture contains provisions permitting the Company and the Trustee, with the consent of the holders of not less than _____[e.g., 662/3 percent] in aggregate principal amount of the Debentures at the time outstanding, evidenced as in the Indenture provided, to execute supplemental indentures adding any provisions to or

It is also provided in the Indenture that prior to any declaration accelerating the maturity of the Debentures on account of Default, the holders of a majority in aggregate principal amount of the Debentures at the time outstanding may, on behalf of the holders of all the Debentures, waive any past default under the Indenture and its consequences, except a default in the payment of the principal of or interest on any of the Debentures. Any consent or waiver by the holder of this Debenture (unless revoked as provided in the Indenture) shall be conclusive and binding on that holder and on all future holders and owners of this Debenture and of any Debenture issued in exchange or substitution therefor, irrespective of whether or not any notation of that consent or waiver is made on this Debenture.

No reference herein to the Indenture and no provision of this Debenture or of the Indenture shall alter or impair the obligation of the Company, which is absolute and unconditional, to pay the principal of and interest on this Debenture at the place, at the respective times, at the rate and in the lawful money herein prescribed.

This form is a provision for interest to be dependent on income. A corporation may wish to pay interest on outstanding debt only from income and not to be committed to pay interest unless there is income available at the time any particular interest payment is due. This can be achieved by providing that interest is dependent on income. Under this provision, the corporation promises to pay interest up to a specified percent of the principal amount per year, but only when, and to the extent, net earnings are available from its previous fiscal year.

For investors to speculate on this type of an offering, the maximum percentage at which interest is payable should be higher than would normally be offered, even if the investor is given many of the other protective provisions of a general debt issue, and whether the debt is secured or unsecured. The most common use of a provision making interest dependent on income is in connection with the reorganization of a previously existing corporation, when restructuring of the corporation may be under the protective auspices of a special governmental agency, and when the investors will be sophisticated and possibly specialized or related. Interest payments on a debt obligation are not substantially different than the dividend obligation of the issuer's preferred stock, therefore, one risk with making interest dependent on income is that the debt obligation may be deemed an equity security with attendant loss of deductibility of interest [see § 6J.21[4]]. For a complete income debenture, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.58 (Matthew Bender).

The following provision may be substituted for paragraph or paragraphs labeled "Obligation" in the forms of note, bond, or debenture in §§ 6J.230, 6J.232, 6J.233, and 6J.234, except that when using this provision in the debenture form in § 6J.234, the last two sentences of the Obligation provision (referring to the "record date" for determining holders to whom interest payments will be made and referring to the terms on the reverse side of the debenture) should be retained, with modification of the "record dates." If the debt offering will be accompanied by a trust indenture, the portions of this provision defining net income may be omitted from the debt instrument itself and instead make reference to the indenture for necessary definitions.

Provision for Interest to Be Dependent on Income

Provision for Interest as Dependent on Income

_____[Name of company], (hereinafter "the Company"), a corporation organized and existing under the laws of _____[state], for value received, promises to pay to _____[name] [or registered assigns] on _____[date], the principal sum of $_____. The Company also promises to pay interest on that principal sum from this date at the rate of not to exceed _____ percent per annum from the net income of the Company in accordance with the following terms. All of the Company's net income for each fiscal year in which it occurs will first be utilized up to the maximum percentile of interest of this _____[specify type of debt security, e.g., Note] to pay the holders on a pro rata basis semi-annually, on the first day of _____[month] and of _____[month] during the subsequent fiscal year after determination of that net income. Only when all holders are paid the maximum percentage of interest as set forth on this _____[specify type of debt security, e.g., Note] will net income be available for other purposes as the Board of Directors determines, such as the payment of dividends to shareholders. Any percentage interest figures not achieved in any particular year will not accumulate to any subsequent year, nor will more than the maximum percentage figure be paid during any one year, nor on other than a pro rata basis among all holders of these _____[specify type of debt security, e.g., Notes].

The Company's net income for each fiscal year will be determined in the regular course of business by the Company's duly appointed certified public accountants as embodied in their annual report of audit and by consistent application of generally accepted accounting principles. Expenses of the Company are all of its existing and continuing obligations, including taxes, set asides for customary reserves, funds, or accounts, and other proper charges for any new, customary, and nonextraordinary obligations occurring in the normal course of doing business, and determined by the application of generally accepted accounting principles.

PRACTICE TIP:

In some circumstances, it may be appropriate to disregard certain expenses which would be proper expenses under generally acceptable accounting principles. For instance, the lender may want to disregard general and administrative expenses which exceed a certain amount or disregard expenses for certain operations which the lender believes are draining the company's capital resources. Limitations of this type are quite common in work-out situations. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This provision is for use when the interest rate on the debt security is tied to a specific bank's prime rate. Although, theoretically, this provision could be substituted in any of the forms of note, bond, or debenture in §§ 6J.230, 6J.232, 6J.233, 6J.234 [see directions in § 6J.250[1]], it is most likely to be used in the note to single purchaser [see § 6J.230] when that purchaser is the bank to whose prime rate the loan rate is tied. If the investor is a bank, the optional sentence capping the loan rate at the maximum legal rate is not necessary, because the bank is exempt from California usury law [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Fin. Code § 1504; see, e.g., Jones v. Wells Fargo Bank (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1534-1535, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 835 (loan and forbearance agreement made by national bank fell within Fin. Code § 1504 exemption)]. For a secured note using an interest rate tied to prime rate, see Banking Law, Ch. 251, Forms, § 251.02[16] (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

There are a variety of other interest rates that are commonly used as an index for floating rate debt, including the federal funds rate, a certificate of deposit rate, and rates based other governmental indices such as treasury rates. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

If this provision is used when the holder is not the bank whose prime rate is used to determine the loan rate, counsel may wish to add additional provisions clarifying the who, when, and the way in which the determination of the bank whose prime rate is applicable will furnish its determination of, and changes in, its prime rate to the parties.

§ 6J.252 Provision for Interest Rate Tied to London Inter-Bank Offering Rate

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This provision is for use when the interest rate on the debt security is tied to the London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) for US dollar deposits. Although theoretically this provision could be substituted in any of the forms of note, bond, or debenture in §§ 6J.230, 6J.232, 6J.233, 6J.234 [see directions in § 6J.250[1]], it is most likely to be used in the note to single purchaser [see § 6J.230] when that purchaser is a bank. In fact, the bank is likely to have its own form of note, which defines LIBOR and fixes the manner in which the interest rate will change: how often and when. If the investor is a bank, the optional sentence capping the loan rate at the maximum legal rate is not necessary, because the bank is exempt from California usury law [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Fin. Code § 1504; *see, e.g., Jones v. Wells Fargo Bank (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1534-1535, 5 Cal. § 6J.253 Provision for Conversion Into Equity Securities

[1] Comment

This form is a provision for conversion into equity securities. It may be added as an optional provision to the general note form in § 6J.232 or incorporated into any other debt security that is convertible into an equity security. The paragraphs describing the rates of conversion, the notice of conversion, and the mechanics of surrender of the note, bond, or debenture should be incorporated in the note, bond, or debenture, while the portion of the form for use to exercise the right of conversion should be added at the end of the note, bond, or debenture.

As with redemption, two methods are generally utilized for conversion. One encourages the holder to convert sooner, rather than simply to wait for a rising market value of the underlying securities, by giving more shares in exchange for the note, bond, or debenture at the earlier time, and decreasing that number as time progresses and the market value (hopefully) rises. Alternatively, exchange for a fixed number of shares for the debt security at all times may also be utilized. There is no problem of notice because the option is strictly that of the holder. If the debt security also carries a redemption feature, a cutoff period for conversion should be arranged for after any notice of redemption is sent by the company, in which the holder is allowed a last chance to convert before the company takes back the note, bond, or debenture. There should also be a cutoff date for interest that ordinarily would have accrued after the time of election to convert.

The Commissioner of Corporations does not require stricter protection, particularly a sinking fund provision [see § 6J.257], when the debt instrument is convertible [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.4]. However, the instrument governing the debt should provide antidilution protection against recapitalizations (dividends or splits) so that conversion rights will be adjusted to the new situation, and may provide for that adjustment on new issues of common stock for less than the conversion or then market value [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.6]. Antidilution provisions may be found in Paragraph 7 of the general form in § 6J.232.

[b] Attachment of Election Form for Conversion

A form for exercising the election to convert should be attached to a convertible debt security just after the execution, and preceding any attached forms of assignment. That form should be presented to the company along with any related necessary documentation at the time the holder desires to exercise his or her right to convert the note, bond, or debenture into equity securities of the company. For placement of any warrants that may be detachable that may be included, or featured in lieu of conversion, see coverage of warrants in Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities.

Convertibility of a debt security into preference or plain voting equity shares of the issuer may be an attractive feature for investors in small growth companies, particularly when the debt is unsecured. Because the feature of convertibility can transform a debt issue of less popular appeal into an equity issue of probably greater marketability and value, convertible debt securities have been a source of much apprehension for both the local and federal regulatory authorities. In California, a conversion feature renders a debt offering immediately subject to qualification, as an offering of the underlying or optioned security, unless an exemption is available for the issuance of the equity securities [Corp. Code § 25017(e)]. The issuer must obtain qualification of those equity securities unless a sale of the equity security would be exempt from qualification before the Commissioner of Corporations as an issuer transaction by any provision other than Corp. Code § 25102(h) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.3; see § 6J.19[3]].

On the federal level, a conversion feature raises the possibility of the need to resort to the investment representation device or pledge for future registration [see § 6J.19[4] and forms in §§ 6J.259, 6J.260].

§ 6J.254 Provision for Securing Note by Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for securing a note by real property. A note secured by a lien on real property is distinguished from other debt financing by being called a bond when it is one of a series of notes on the same security [see § 6J.233 (bond secured by deed of trust)]. If the financing is private, a standard corporate deed of trust may be used to embrace all the security provisions pertaining to the property and the creditor's claim on it. If the investors' group is relatively large, particularly when it involves a public offering, the deed of trust is expanded into a form of quite elaborate proportions to become a full-fledged trust indenture.

Unless a large series of financing notes is likely, the deed of trust, as in the present form, will be "closed" so that no future issues may constitute a lien on the same property. If the investors want extra protection under the circumstances, the deed of trust could also include all after-acquired property in the description of the property which is subject of the security lien. If the corporation has limited real property assets, or if it needs to secure an exceptionally large issue, it originally may give a blanket deed of trust to cover all property it then owns, which also may be coupled with the after-acquired clause. In a closed-end deed of trust, however, adding newly acquired property to a present lien is simply strengthening a prior issue without affording the corporation a means of financing the new acquisition.

To issue new debt securities on the same property, the issuer would either have to have included an open-ended provision in the note and deed of trust [see § 6J.255] or provide for the securities issued later to take a junior position in terms of the security to the notes of the former issue.

This provision may be added to the end of Paragraph 3 of the general note form in § 6J.232[2].

For a bond that is one in a series, payable to a single individual, and secured by a mortgage or deed of trust given to a bank, as trustee, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Form 19.71 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Advantages of Securing Note With Real Property

Real property is considered prime security, and it may attract investors into a debt market in which they might otherwise fear the investment was too speculative. Corporations that hold much property as an integral part of their business, such as utility and transportation companies, have been most disposed to issue debt secured by real property.

Corporations ordinarily may issue notes secured by real property at a lower interest rate because of the improved prospects of repayment.

This form is a provision for an open-ended note secured by real property. If a corporation wants to offer debt instruments secured by real property [see § 6J.254[1]], while still reserving the right to issue future series of notes secured by the same real property, this "open-ended" provision should be included in the initial notes and indenture or deed of trust.

The open-end provision is designed to allow all present and future creditors within the financing plan to share equally in the lien arrangement. The value of the land, of course, should adequately support all the loans with an adequate surplus remaining. The only other alternative would be to relegate the investors in any subsequent offering secured by the same real property to junior or subordinate positions. Junior lien financing is, of course, less desirable and more difficult to market, and ordinarily must be offered at a higher rate of interest.

Provision for this arrangement needs to be placed expressly in the body of the note as well as in the deed of trust. The following provision is designed to be added to the end of the provision in § 6J.254[2], which itself is added at the end of Paragraph 3 of the note form in § 6J.232[2].

Note and series, and the holders of the future series Notes will share on an equal basis with the holders of the present series as to all rights and obligations among the parties with respect to the real property that secures all series. All other terms and conditions of later series, including rate of interest, times and manner of payment, and maturity dates, may be determined by the Board of Directors and embodied in Notes of those later series.

This form is a provision for security a note by personal property. A less protective and familiar type of security for a note is personal property collateral. In most instances, a corporation does not have enough machinery and equipment apart from that which is already attached to its real property to provide the basis of an independent lien on personalty. The most familiar type of equipment collateral offering is that of the railroads, which have developed specialized types of provisions for handling equipment financing. Normally, a collateral trust indenture accompanies the offering and handles the bulk of the protective machinery of the loan. Purchase money financing of office or other machinery and equipment is also quite common. Personal property may also be included if the lender requests a blanket lien on all property of the borrower.

Most corporations offering a loan secured by personal property offer as security obligations or securities of their own subsidiaries, accounts receivable, or inventories on hand. In a larger public offering, a note secured by personal property is accompanied by a collateral trust indenture, which may run to an elaborate size and may detail several security provisions. In private financing, a bank or small personal property lender is frequently interested in the collateral type of loan on a short-term basis. It should not be overlooked as a supplemental means of financing when other sources have been utilized to their limits.

This provision may be added at the end of paragraph 3 of the general note form in § 6J.232[2].

That indenture and all supplemental instruments should be consulted for description of the pledged property, and for all the terms and conditions relating to all rights and obligations of the parties to these Notes and that indenture. § 6J.257 Provisions for Sinking Fund

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for a sinking fund. On a moderate-to-long-term issue, investors usually want some kind of provision for a sinking fund arrangement to insure that the corporation retains enough of the income it is earning to be able to pay off the principal when it becomes due. The Commissioner of Corporations, in qualifying public offerings, considers a sinking fund an important element of fairness of nonconvertible offerings [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.4(a)]. When a trust indenture accompanies the note, the sinking fund payments may be made to the trustee, who will have responsibility for supervising the maintenance of the fund. The corporation usually has a right to make redemption payments out of the sinking fund or to credit any redemptions or purchases of outstanding notes of the issue against payments to be made to the sinking fund. For other sinking fund provisions, see Rabkin & Johnson, CURRENT LEGAL FORMS WITH TAX ANALYSIS, Ch. 19, Corporate Securities , Forms 19.59 and 19.74 and (Matthew Bender).

Although failure to make a sinking fund payment is usually an event of default, the consequences of default are not usually decisively enforced when a corporation fails to make a particular sinking fund payment. The investors are less likely to declare the note, or series, immediately due than to negotiate some other remedy.

[b] Inclusion in General Form for Note

If this provision is desired to be added to the general note form in § 6J.232[2], it may be inserted anywhere after Paragraph 3 and before Paragraph 6. Preferably, however, it should become a new Paragraph 4, and the subsequent paragraphs should all be renumbered one figure higher than their present designations. Failure to maintain the fund or to make an individual payment to the fund is an element of default already provided for in the general language of Paragraph 8(a)(3) of that note, but the second portion of the following provision may also be added as a new Subparagraph (a)(3) of that Paragraph 8 (which is likely to be renumbered 9 if the sinking fund provision has been previously inserted), with all the remaining subparagraphs being renumbered one figure higher than their present designations.

Each annual deposit will be the equivalent at least of _____[e.g., 1] percent of the aggregate principal amount of the issue then outstanding, although this amount may be increased to cover certain contingencies of the market then in existence, or may be diminished in any particular year by retirement during that year by the Company of any Notes through redemption or other purchase. § 6J.258 Provision for Serial Redemption

This form is provision for serial redemption. Instead of maintaining a sinking fund [see § 6J.257], a debt issue may be provide for retirement by portions at progressively remote intervals. This allows for a wider choice among investors who wish to invest for shorter, more moderate, or longer portions of the ultimate term of the general issue. It also allows a corporation to immediately begin retiring its debt out of present income, so that the formal establishment of a sinking fund is not necessary, although a sinking fund still may be provided for, as long as it is coordinated with the serial redemption program. Usually the securities are numbered or lettered so that the earlier numbers or letters are the first to be retired. The break off points among the series may be determined anywhere and varied among the different portions to be retired. Default is immediately actionable, of course, as to each separate series on the failure of the corporation to immediately retire that portion of the notes when due.

This provision may substitute for one of the alterative redemption provisions in Paragraph 4 of the note form in § 6J.232[2]. It would be used in place of Paragraphs 3 and 4 of that note.

§ 6J.259 Provision for Investment Representation for Federal Intrastate Offering Exemption

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for investment representation for the federal intrastate offering exemption. Any kind of security, including a debt offering, is exempt from federal registration requirements if it is part of an issue offered and sold only to persons resident within the state, and the corporation or other issuer is incorporated or otherwise resident and doing business in the same state [Securities Act of 1933, § 3(a)(11); 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11); 17 C.F.R. § 230.147 (hereinafter "Rule 147"), discussed in Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations ; see also Sommer, FEDERAL SECURITIES ACT OF 1933, ch. 3, Exempted Securities Under Sections 3(a)(2) Through 3(a)(8) of the Securities Act, § 3.12 (Matthew Bender)]. This is one of the federal exemptions that specifically does not preempt state regulation [see 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(C), discussed in § 6J.19[4]].

The intrastate issue of securities itself should not be part of a larger multistage offering [see SEC Securities Act Release 4434 (discussed in [c], below)]. The entire distribution should come to rest within the hands of residents [17 C.F.R. § 230.147(d)]; or if resales are involved, they should be made to other residents only [17 C.F.R. § 230.147(e)], and appropriate restrictions on transfer, including the placement of a legend on the note, bond, or debenture, may need to be included in the issue to insure this feature [17 C.F.R. § 230.147(f)(1)(i), (ii), (f)(2)]. The issuer must obtain written representation from each purchaser as to his or her residence [17 C.F.R. § 230.147(f)(1)(iii)] (Paragraph 1) and must, in connection with any offers, disclose in writing the limitations on resale contained in 17 C.F.R. § 230.147(e) and the provisions of 17 C.F.R. § 230.147(f)(1)(i) and (ii) and 17 C.F.R. § 230.147(f)(2) [17 C.F.R. § 230.147(f)(3)].

The form in [2], below, is designed as a provision to be inserted in a note. The paragraphs in the provision should be renumbered to fit in proper sequence wherever they are inserted in the note. The form may be modified for use in a bond or other type of debt security. It may also be modified to be used as a separate letter from the investor. For a letter representation form, see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions, § 6B.200.

[b] Placement of This Provision

The notice of restrictions on transfers must be conspicuously placed in the note or other security in order to bind a subsequent transferee as intended by Paragraph 4. A restriction on transfer of a certificated security imposed by the issuer, even if otherwise lawful, is ineffective against a person without knowledge of the restriction unless the restriction is noted conspicuously on the security certificate [Com. Code § 8204(1)]. For general discussion of legends, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities, § 6H.260.

[c] Factors That Are Determinative of Intrastate Exemption

In determining whether the offering is part of a larger interstate issue, any one or more of the following factors may be determinative of the point [SEC Securities Act Release 4434]:

- The offerings are part of a single plan of multistate financing.
- The offerings involve issuance of the same class of security on a multistate basis.
- The offerings in more than one state are made at or about the same time.
- The same type of consideration is received in the multistate offerings.
- The offerings in the several states are made for the same general purpose.

The time differential among any of these factors is only a single item to be considered in determining whether an integrated interstate offering has been effected or is contemplated [see 17 C.F.R. § 230.147(b)(2)].

By the acceptance of this Note, the initial payee of this Note represents and warrants that he or she is purchasing his or her Note for investment for either his or her own account or, if with any present intent of dividing his or her participation with others or reselling or otherwise distributing it, then only to persons who are proved--by virtue of credible, authenticated evidence, documented in a reasonable manner appropriate under the circumstances--to be bona fide residents of California.

2. Initial payee has represented to the Company, and continually warrants during the time period of the complete distribution of the series of which this Note is a part,

(a) That he or she is a bona fide resident of the State of California.

(b) That should his or her residence change during the immediate future during which it is reasonably foreseeable that the distribution of the series of which this Note is a portion is still being completed, he or she will resell, or will make arrangement with the Company [or any of its underwriters of this issue] to resell this Note to another California resident.

3. Initial payee understands and acknowledges that the Company has advised him or her that the Note has not been registered under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, on the ground that this security and transaction is exempt under Section 3(a)(11)of that Act [15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11)], as not involving any interstate offering, and that the Company's reliance on that exemption is predicated in part on his or her representation and warranty as contained in this Note. Initial payee further understands and acknowledges that the Company has advised him or her that while he or she has the right to dispose of his or her own property when and as he or she sees fit, it is important that he or she realize that in the view of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the statutory basis for exemption in cases of securities or transactions not involving any interstate offering would not be present, if, notwithstanding the foregoing representation, warranty, and agreement, he or she had in mind merely acquiring the Note for resale, consciously or not, to anyone who might be a non-California resident, on the occurrence or nonoccurrence of any event or set of circumstances. By the acceptance of this Note, initial payee confirms that the effect and intention of the representation and warranty set forth above is that he or she does not now intend to dispose of all or any part of the Note to be issued to him or her to anyone other than a true California resident; and that, should his or her residence change, or should other circumstances occur that lead him or her to resell the Note, and he or she cannot reasonably procure its purchase by another genuine California resident, he or she now intends that he or she would then apply to the Company [or to one of its underwriters] for purposes of having a sale to a bona fide California resident arranged. By the acceptance of this Note, initial payee agrees that the transfer of this Note [and the transfer of any shares of _____ (type, e.g, common) stock of the Company into which this Note may be converted] will be subject to the restriction that no transfers will be effected until either

(a) The holder of the Note or shares has obtained either an opinion of counsel satisfactory to counsel for the Company to the effect that the proposed transfer will not result in a loss of the intrastate offering exemption or a violation of the Securities Act of 1933, as then amended, or a letter from the Securities and Exchange Commission to the effect that no action will be taken with respect to the transfer; or

(b) A registration statement with respect to this Note [or the shares of _____ (type, e.g, common) stock of the Company into which this Note may be converted] is then effective in current form under the Securities Act of 1933, as then amended.

4. These representations, warranties, and restrictions on transfers to only bona fide residents of California will be binding on all subsequent transferees of this Note [or the shares of _____ (type, e.g., common) stock into which this Note may be converted].

Company's Representation

5. Neither the Company nor anyone acting on its behalf has, directly or indirectly, offered any of the Notes, or any similar securities, for sale to, nor solicited any offers to buy the Notes or any similar securities, from, nor otherwise negotiated, with any person or persons in any manner as to bring the offering, issue, or sale of these securities under the registration provisions of the Federal Securities Act of 1933, as amended.

CHAPTER 6J ISSUANCE OF DEBT SECURITIES
PART IV. FORMS
D. Optional Provisions for General Form for Debt Security

3-6J California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 6J.260

AUTHOR: Frances E. Lossing Practice Consultant

§ 6J.260 Provision in Note for Investment Representation for Federal Private Offering Exemption

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision in a note for an investment representation for the federal private offering exemption. A debt offering is exempt from federal registration requirements if it complies with Section 4(2) or one of the three exemptions for limited and private offerings commonly referred to as Regulation D [Securities Act of 1933, §§ 3(b), 4(2); 15 U.S.C. §§ 77c(b), 77d(2); 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.501-230.508, discussed in Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations ; see also Sommer, FEDERAL SECURITIES ACT OF 1933, Ch. 4, Exempted Securities Under Sections 3(a)(9) Through 3(a)(11) and Section 4 of the Securities Act, § 4.02 (Matthew Bender)]. Regulation D, at least the exemption provided by 17 C.F.R. § 230.506, is one of the federal exemptions that does preempt state regulation, specifically Corp. Code § 25102(f) [see 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(D), discussed at § 6J.19[4]; see also Dept. of Corps. Release No. 103-C (Dec. 12, 1996); Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions; Marsh & Volk, PRACTICE UNDER THE CALIFORNIA SECURITIES LAWS, ch. 3A, Federal Preemption of State Securities Regulation, § 3A.01[2][d] (Matthew Bender)].

Unless the offer and sale are made under Rule 504, securities offered under the Regulation D exemption cannot be resold without registration under Securities Act of 1933 or exemption from that Act [17 C.F.R. §§ 230.502(d), 230.504(b)(1)]. To maintain the Regulation D exemption, the issuer must exercise reasonable care to ensure that purchasers are not underwriters within the meaning of Section 2(11) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(11)) [17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d)]. Reasonable care may be demonstrated by the following:

- Reasonable inquiry to determine if a purchaser is acquiring securities for his or her self or for other persons [17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d)(1)] (Paragraph 1);

- Written disclosure to each purchaser prior to sale that securities have not been registered, and therefore cannot be resold unless registered or exempted [17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d)(2)] (Paragraphs 1 and

3); and

- Placement of a legend on the certificate or other document evidencing securities, stating that the securities are not registered and setting forth restrictions on transfer and sale of securities [17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d)(3)] (Paragraphs 1 and 3).

The form in [2], below, is designed as a provision to be inserted in a note. The paragraphs in the provision should be renumbered to fit in proper sequence wherever they are inserted in the note. The form may be modified for use in a bond or other type of debt security. It may also be modified to be used as a separate letter from the investor. For a letter representation form, see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions, § 6B.200.

The notice of restrictions on transfers must be conspicuously placed in the note or other security in order to bind a subsequent transferee as intended by Paragraph 4 [see Com. Code § 8204(1)]. For a general discussion of legends, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities, § 6H.260.

Provision in Note for Investment Representation for Federal Private Offering Exemption

Provision in Note for Investment Representations for Federal Private Offering Exemption [Securities Act of 1933, § 4(2); 15 U.S.C. § 77d(2)]

Purchaser's Representation and Restrictions on Transfers to Maintain Federal Private Offering Exemption

1. By the acceptance of this Note, the initial payee of this Note represents and warrants that he or she is purchasing his or her Note for investment for his or her own account and with no present intention of dividing his or her participation with others, or reselling or otherwise distributing it. Initial payee understands and acknowledges that the Company has advised him or her that this Note has not been registered under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, on the ground that this transaction is exempt under Section 4(2) of that Act, as not involving any public offering, and that the Company's reliance on this exemption is predicated in part on initial payee's representation and warranty contained in this Note.

2. Initial payee further understands and acknowledges that the Company had advised him or her that while he or she has the right to dispose of his or her own property when and as he or she sees fit, it is important that he or she realize that in the view of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the statutory basis for exemption in case of transactions not involving any public offering would not be present, if, notwithstanding the foregoing representation, warranty, and agreement, he or she had in mind merely acquiring the Note for resale on the occurrence or nonoccurrence of some predetermined event, such as, for example, after holding the Note for the applicable capital gains period of the tax statutes, or for a market rise, or for sale if the market does not rise, or for a fixed or determinable period in the future. By the acceptance of this Note, initial payee confirms that the effect and intention of his or her representation and warranty set forth above is that he or she does not now intend to dispose of all or any part of this Note.

3. By the acceptance of this Note, the initial payee agrees that the transfer of this Note[and the transfer of any shares of _____ (type) stock of the Company into which this Note may be converted] will be subject to the restriction that no transfers will be effected until either

(a) The holder of the Note or shares has obtained either an opinion of counsel satisfactory to counsel for the Company to the effect that the proposed transfer will not result in a violation of the Securities Act of 1933, as then amended, or a letter from the Securities and Exchange Commission to the effect that no action will be taken with respect to the transfer; or

(b) A registration statement with respect to this Note [or the shares of _____ (type) stock of the Company into which this Note may be converted] is then effective in current form under the Securities Act of 1933, as then amended.

4. This provision shall be binding on all subsequent transferees of this Note [or the shares of _____ (type) stock into which this Note may be converted].

Company's Representation

5. Neither the Company nor anyone acting on its behalf has, directly or indirectly, offered any of the Notes, or any similar securities, for sale to, or solicited any offers to buy such, from, or otherwise negotiated, with any person or persons in any manner that would require registration under the provisions of the Federal Securities Act of 1933, as amended.

This chapter covers Division 8 of the California Commercial Code, which addresses ownership interests in investment securities and the transfer of those interests. Division 8, which is essentially Article 8 of the Uniform Commercial Code, attempts to provide clear and concise rules to guide the business community in dealing with the issuance, purchase, transfer and registration of investment securities. Those rules are discussed in this chapter. This chapter also discusses issues arising under the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 with respect to nonissuer transactions, including exemptions that are specifically applicable to such transactions and are not discussed elsewhere in this publication.

Forms included in this chapter include forms for assignment separate from certificate, instructions for transfer of uncertificated securities, entitlement orders, demand not to register a transfer of securities, an indemnification agreement regarding replacement shares, and pledge agreements for certificated securities, uncertificated securities, and securities held in a securities account. The statutory form for an application for qualification in nonissuer transactions is also included.

The transfer of securities by a nonissuer invokes several overlapping but distinct regulatory schemes. First are securities regulations, federal and state, dictating which securities can be transferred and under what conditions. For a general discussion of state blue sky regulation see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues ; for discussion of some of the specific California securities law requirements applicable to secondary transfers of securities ("nonissuer transaction"), see §§ 6K.40-6K.42. The other key set of applicable laws is Article 8 of the Uniform Commercial Code, Investment Securities, adopted as Division 8 of the California Commercial Code [see §§ 6K.10-6K.25].

Division 8 of the Commercial Code, cited as Uniform Commercial Code--Investment Securities [Com. Code § 8101], regulates the transfer of the property rights represented by securities and financial assets and the establishment of those rights against the issuer and other parties [Official Comment to UCC § 8-101]. It does not set forth specific disclosure requirements regarding the nature of the property interest represented by the security, as do the federal securities regulations and state blue sky laws. It does not set forth general rules defining rights that accrue to the holders of securities like a corporations code or contract law. Nor is Division 8 a comprehensive statutory scheme governing the relationship between a broker-dealer or other securities professional and its customers. Most of the law governing the latter relationship is the common law of contract and agency, as modified by regulation.

Division 8 provides a legal structure for the holding and transfer of the rights that constitute investment securities. It simplifies the transfer of investment securities by limiting the transferor's liability when the formalities of Division 8 are complied with.

[2] Methods of Holding Securities

Financial assets can be held either directly or indirectly. If an asset is held directly, the holder has a specific property interest in the financial asset. If the asset is held indirectly, through an intermediary, the holder has a package of personal rights against the intermediary and a general interest in the property held by the intermediary.

The direct holding system includes "certificated" and "uncertificated" securities. If the securities of a corporation are held through the direct system, the owner will either (1) have a security certificate representing the shares and be listed in the records of the issuer as the owner of shares or (2) not have a certificate but be listed in the records of the issuer as the owner of the shares. The indirect holding system deals with security entitlements. If the shares are held through the indirect system, they will be held by a securities intermediary and the name of the owner will not be registered on the books of the issuer.

PRACTICE TIP:

It may be helpful in understanding Division 8 to consider how a variety of common financial products fit into the Division 8 statutory scheme. Stock in a closely held corporation is typically held in certificated form through the direct holding system. Publicly traded stocks and bonds are typically held in certificated form through the indirect holding system. Mutual fund shares are typically held in uncertificated form through the direct holding system. Treasury securities are held in uncertificated form either through the Treasury Direct system, which is a direct holding system, or through financial intermediaries, such as banks or broker-dealers, which is an indirect holding system. Other common types of financial products, such as bank accounts, trusts and partnership or limited liability interests that are not publicly traded, are not Division 8 securities. Division 8, therefore, typically is not applicable to these types of financial products, although the indirect holding rules will apply to partnership and limited liability interests held in a securities account, regardless of whether such interests are publicly traded. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[3] Prior Law and Transitional Provisions

The original version of Division 8 was based on possession and delivery of physical certificates. It was assumed that each time securities were sold, physical certificates would be transferred from seller to buyer. The buyer then would surrender the transferred certificate to the issuer or its transfer agent for registration of transfer. Modern electronic systems for recording ownership of securities and the transfer of ownership were subsequently developed to simplify the transfer process. These developments led to a revision to Division 8 in 1984 to deal with uncertificated securities.

The 1984 revision of Division 8, however, did not deal adequately with the indirect system of holding securities through securities intermediaries that has developed over the last several decades. The revision to Division 8 that became effective in 1997 is intended to address these inadequacies. The latter revision made major substantive changes to Division 8. It is not merely an amendment to the prior version. California adopted these changes effective January 1, 1997 [see Com. Code § 8601].

Security interests perfected prior to January 1, 1997, in a manner that would suffice to perfect them under the post-1997 laws continue to be perfected under the latter laws [Com. Code § 8603(b)]. Security interests perfected prior to January 1, 1997, in a manner that would not suffice to perfect them under the post-1997 laws remained perfected for four months after January 1, 1997, and continue to be perfected thereafter if appropriate action pursuant to the post-1997 laws was taken within that four month period [Com. Code § 8603(b)]. If a security interest was perfected prior to 1997 and that interest could be perfected by filing under Division 9 of the Commercial Code, the filing of a financing statement signed by the secured party rather than the debtor during that four month period would be sufficient to continue perfection or thereafter to perfect, as long as the financing statement contained a statement that it was being filed pursuant to Com. Code § 8603 [Com. Code § 8603(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

3-6K California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 6K.11

§ 6K.11 Definitions

[1] In General

Many of the terms used in Division 8 have broader meanings as used therein than they may have in other contexts. Other terms used may be unique to Division 8. Many of the terms used in Division 8 are defined in Com. Code § 8102(a). Other important definitions are referenced in Com. Code § 8102(b). The definitions in the remainder of this section are key to an understanding of Division 8.

[2] Financial Asset

PRACTICE TIP:

The indirect holding system rules set forth in Chapter 5 of Division 8 apply to financial assets held in a securities account. The interest of the person who holds the financial asset in a securities account is a securities entitlement. A "securities entitlement" is the package of rights that an investor has under the indirect holding system rules. An understanding of these three definitions, "financial asset," "securities account," and "securities entitlement" therefore is key to understanding the scope of the indirect holding system rules. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

"Financial asset" is the broadest category of investment securities. Financial assets can be held either directly or indirectly. The term "financial asset" is used to refer both to the underlying asset and the particular means by which ownership of that asset is evidenced. For example, with respect to a certificated security, the term "financial asset" may refer either to the interest or obligation of the issuer or to the certificate itself [Official Comment No. 9 to UCC § 8102]. A "financial asset" is any of the following [Com. Code § 8201(a)(9)]:

- A security.
- An obligation of a person or a share, participation, or other interest in a person or in property or an enterprise of a person, that is, or is of a type, dealt in or traded on financial markets, or that is recognized in any area in which it is issued or dealt in as a medium for investment.

- Any property that is held by a securities intermediary for another person in a securities account if the securities intermediary has expressly agreed with the other person that the property is to be treated as a financial asset under this division. As the context requires, the term means either the interest itself or the means by which a person's claim to it is evidenced, including a certificated or uncertificated security, a security certificate, or a security entitlement.

- Options issued by a clearing corporation to its participants [Com. Code § 8103(e)].

Even if they are not securities for purposes of Division 8, the following are financial assets for purposes of Division 8 if they are held in securities accounts:

- Partnership interests or limited liability company interests [Com. Code § 8103(c)].

- Negotiable instruments governed by Division 3 of the California Commercial Code (beginning with Com. Code § 3101 [Com. Code § 8103(d)].

A commodity contract is not a financial asset for purposes of Division 8 [Com. Code § 8103(f); see Com. Code § 9102(a)(15) ("commodity contract" defined)]. A document of title is not a financial asset unless Com. Code § 8102(a)(9)(c) applies [Com. Code § 8103(g)] (which concerns property held by a securities intermediary for another person pursuant to an agreement to treat the property as a financial asset).

[3] Security

PRACTICE TIP:

One of the major changes made by the revisions to Division 8 is that the term "security" plays a different and more limited role than under the prior version. Under the prior version, the definition of "security" determined the coverage of all of the substantive provisions of Division 8. Under the revisions to Division 8, interests and obligations that fall within the definition of "security" are governed by all of the provisions of Division 8, including the direct holding system rules in Chapters 2, 3 and 4. The indirect holding system rules in Chapter 5, however, apply to a broader class of interests and obligations, namely "financial assets." Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

A security is an obligation of an issuer or a share, participation, or other interest in an issuer or in property or an enterprise of an issuer that has all of the following characteristics [Com. Code § 8102(a)(15)]:

- It is represented by a security certificate, or the transfer of it may be registered on books maintained for that purpose by or on behalf of the issuer;

- It is one of a class or series or by its terms is divisible into a class or series of shares, participations, interests or obligations; and

- It is either of the following:

    - It is, or is of a type, dealt in or traded on securities exchanges or securities markets.

    - It is a medium for investment and by its terms expressly provides that it is a security governed by Division 8.

The following are securities:

- An equity interest issued by a corporation, business trust, joint stock company or similar entity [Com. Code § 8103(a)].

- An equity interest issued by an entity that or a unit investment trust, such as a closed-end mutual fund, is registered under the federal investment company laws as an investment company [Com. Code § 8103(b)]. Such an equity interest is called an "investment company security" [Com. Code § 8103(b)].

- Shares of stock of close corporations even though they are not usually dealt in or traded in, since they are a type of security that is commonly traded.

The Division 8 rules do not apply to interests or obligations in circumstances so unrelated to the securities markets that parties would be unlikely to have thought that they might apply to them. For purposes of Division 8, an interest in a partnership or limited liability company is not a security unless [Com. Code § 8103(c)]:

- It is traded on a securities exchange or securities market;

- Its terms expressly provide that it is a security governed by Division 8; or

- It is an investment company security.

Even if it is not a security, a partnership interest or limited liability company interest may be a financial asset [see [2], above].

The following are not securities for purposes of Division 8:

- Commodity contracts [Com. Code § 8103(f); see Com. Code § 9102(a)(15) ("commodity contract" defined)].

- Options issued by a clearing corporation to its participants [Com. Code § 8103(e)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The term "security" in Division 8 is not the same as the definition of "security" for federal and state securities laws purposes. The scope of the term "security" for securities law purposes is determined by the need for market regulation and disclosure. The scope of the term "security" for Division 8 purposes is determined primarily by the need and suitability of the rules applicable to the obligations of issuers, transfer mechanisms and registration of transfer set forth in Chapters 2, 3 and 4 of Division 8. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[4] Issuer

An issuer, with respect to an obligation on or a defense to a security, is a person that does any of the following [Com. Code § 8201(a)]:

- Places or authorizes its name to be placed on a security certificate as an issuer to evidence an interest in its property or an enterprise or its duty to perform an obligation represented by the certificate.

- Creates an interest in its property or in an enterprise or undertakes an obligation, that is an uncertificated security.

- Creates a fractional interest in its rights or property that is represented by a security certificate.

- Becomes responsible for, or in place of another person described as an issuer. With respect to an obligation or a defense to a security, a guarantor is an issuer to the extent of the guaranty, whether or not the obligation of the guarantor is noted on the certificate. A guarantor will not be an issuer, however, with respect to the maintenance of transfer books.

PRACTICE TIP:
The definition of "issuer" functions primarily to describe the persons whose defenses may be cut off under Chapter 2 of Division 8. For this reason, a guarantor is included in the definition of "issuer" to the extent of its obligations under the guaranty. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

With respect to a registration or transfer, an issuer is a person on whose behalf transfer books are maintained [Com. Code § 8201(c)].

[5] Certificated Security

A certificated security is a security that is represented by a certificate [Com. Code § 8102(a)(4)]. A writing that is a security certificate is governed by Division 8 rather than Division 3 (negotiable instruments) even if the writing meets the requirements of Division 3 [Com. Code § 8103(d)].

[6] Bearer Form of Certificated Security

Bearer form is a form of certificated security in which the security is payable to the bearer of the certificate according to the terms of the security, but not because of an endorsement [Com. Code § 8102(a)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:
The primary function of the concepts of "registered form" and "bearer form" is to distinguish obligations covered by the provisions of Division 8 from other types of instruments governed by the provisions of Division 3. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[7] Registered Form of Certificated Security

Registered form is a form of certificated security in which the certificate specifies a person entitled to the security and a transfer of the security may be registered upon the issuer's books maintained for that purpose [Com. Code § 8102(a)(13)].

[8] Uncertificated Security

An uncertificated security is a security that is not represented by a certificate [Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)]. The ownership interest is recorded in books maintained by the issuer for that purpose. Uncertificated securities are part of the direct holding system.

[9] Securities Entitlement

A securities entitlement is an entitlement to the rights and property interest of a person who holds securities or other financial assets though a securities intermediary [Com. Code § 8102(a)(17)]. Issuance of a security does not establish a securities entitlement [Com. Code § 8501(e)]. A securities entitlement is both a package of personal rights against the securities intermediary and an interest in the property held by the securities intermediary. It is not, however, a specific property interest in any financial asset held by the securities intermediary or clearing corporation [Official Comment No. 17 to UCC § 8-102].

PRACTICE TIP:

It is important to distinguish a "security" and a "securities entitlement." A "security" is an obligation that is intended to be traded. A "securities entitlement," on the other hand, defines the rights and duties of a "securities intermediary" to an "entitlement holder." There are a number of relationships that involve the holding of securities by another that do not create securities entitlements. For example, a customer may transfer possession of a security to his or her broker for safekeeping without endorsing the certificate to the broker. In this circumstance, no securities entitlement is created. Likewise, a trustee may hold an interest in underlying assets, such as an interest in a pool of mortgages, an interest in a basket of other securities, such as the NASDAQ 100 trust that holds interests in the 100 largest non-financial securities traded on the NASDAQ national market system, or American Depositary Receipts that represent an interest in securities of a foreign issuer. Again, no securities entitlement is created by the interests unless they are held in a securities account. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

A person acquires a securities entitlement if a securities intermediary does any of the following, even if the securities intermediary does not itself hold the financial asset [Com. Code § 8501(b), (c)]:

- Makes a book entry that a financial asset has been credited to that person's securities account.

- Receives a financial asset from the person or on behalf of the person and accepts the financial asset for credit to the person's securities account.

- Becomes obligated under other law, regulation, or rule to credit a financial asset to the person's securities account.

If any condition listed above has been met, a person has a securities entitlement even if the securities intermediary itself does not hold the financial asset [Com. Code § 8501(c)].

If a securities intermediary holds a financial asset for another person but the financial asset has not been endorsed to the securities intermediary, the person is considered to hold the financial asset directly [Com. Code § 8501(d)].

[10] Entitlement Holder

An entitlement holder is a person who holds financial assets through intermediaries in the indirect holding system and is identified in the records of a securities intermediary as the person having the securities entitlement [Com. Code § 8102(a)(7)].

[11] Securities Account

A securities account is an account to which a financial asset is or may be credited pursuant to agreement that the person for whom the account is maintained is entitled to exercise the rights comprising the financial asset [Com. Code § 8501(a)].

[12] Securities Intermediary

A securities intermediary is either a clearing corporation or a person that in the ordinary course of its business maintains securities accounts for others [Com. Code § 8102(a)(14)]. Securities intermediaries include banks and brokers when they are acting in a securities intermediary capacity [Com. Code § 8102(a)(14)]. A securities intermediary that receives a financial asset and establishes a security entitlement to the financial asset in favor of an entitlement holder is a purchaser for value of the financial asset [Com. Code § 8116]. A securities intermediary owes duties only to its own entitlement holders [Official Comment No. 4 to UCC § 8-115].

[13] Clearing Corporation

A clearing corporation is any of the following [Com. Code § 8102(a)(5)]:

- A person registered as a clearing agency under federal securities laws.
- A person that acts as a clearing agency but is exempt from registration under federal securities laws, if such person's activities as a clearing agency are subject to federal or state regulation.
- A federal reserve bank.

Clearing corporations are subject to a rigorous regulatory framework.

A rule adopted by a clearing corporation governing rights and obligations among the clearing corporation and its participants is effective even if the rule conflicts with Division 8 and affects another party who does not consent to the rule [Com. Code § 8111].

[14] Endorsement

An endorsement is a signature on a security certificate in registered form or on a separate document made for the purpose of assigning, transferring, or redeeming the security [Com. Code § 8102(a)(11)].

[15] Instruction

An instruction is a communication to the issuer of an uncertificated security directing that the transfer of the security be registered or that the security be redeemed [Com. Code § 8102(a)(12)]. It may be in the form of a writing signed by the registered owner or in any other form agreed on by the issuer and the registered owner [Official Comment No. 1 to UCC § 8-305].

[16] Entitlement Order

An entitlement order is a communication to a securities intermediary directing the transfer or redemption of a financial asset to which the entitlement holder has a securities entitlement [Com. Code § 8102(a)(8)]. It need not be initiated by the entitlement holder to be effective, as long as the entitlement holder has authorized the initiating party to do so. [Official Comment No. 8 to UCC § 8-102].

[17] Appropriate Person

An appropriate person is one who is entitled to transfer a security or financial asset and is the following with respect to the various methods of holding securities or financial assets:

- With respect to an endorsement, the person specified by a security certificate or by an effective special endorsement to be entitled to the security [Com. Code § 8107(a)(1)].
- With respect to an instruction, the registered owner of an uncertificated security [Com. Code § 8107(a)(2)].
- With respect to an entitlement order, the entitlement holder [Com. Code § 8107(a)(3)].

- The successor or personal representative of a deceased appropriate person [Com. Code § 8107(a)(4)].

- The guardian, conservator or similar representative of an appropriate person who lacks capacity [Com. Code § 8107(a)(5)].

[18] Protected Purchaser

A protected purchaser is a purchaser of a security who gives value, does not have notice of any adverse claim, and obtains control of the security [Com. Code § 8303(a)]. A protected purchaser acquires the interest of the seller, and acquires that interest free of any adverse claims [Com. Code § 8303(b)].

[19] Control

[a] Effect of Having Control

Obtaining control means that a purchaser has taken whatever steps are necessary, given the manner in which the securities or financial assets are held, to place itself in a position where it can have the securities or financial assets sold without further action by the owner [Official Comment No. 1 to UCC § 8-106].

PRACTICE TIP:

The concept of "control" plays a key role in various provisions of Division 8 and Division 9, including Com. Code §§ 8303 (protected purchaser), 8503(a) (purchasers from securities intermediaries), 8510 (purchasers of securities entitlements from entitlement holders), 9312 (perfection of security interests in investment property), and 9328 (priorities among conflicting security holders). The concept is not to be interpreted by reference to similar concepts in other bodies of law. In particular, the requirements for "possession" derived from the common law of pledges are not to be used as a basis determining when an uncertificated security has been delivered or pledged, a purchaser has become the entitlement holder or a securities entitlement has been pledged. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[b] Certificated Security in Bearer Form

A purchaser has control of a certificated security in bearer form if the certificate is delivered to the purchaser [Com. Code § 8106(a)]. See § 6K.16[2] for a discussion of the concept of delivery of a certificated security.

[c] Certificated Security in Registered Form

A purchaser has control of a certificated security in registered form if the certificate is delivered to the purchaser and the certificate is endorsed to the purchaser or in blank by an effective endorsement or the certificate is registered in the name of the purchaser [Com. Code § 8106(b)]. See § 6K.16[2] for a discussion of the concept of delivery of a certificated security.

[d] Uncertificated Security

A purchaser has control of an uncertificated security if the uncertificated security is delivered to the purchaser or the issuer has agreed that it will comply with instructions originated by the purchaser without further consent by the registered owner [Com. Code § 8106(c)]. The issuer may not enter into an agreement to comply with instructions originated by the purchaser without the consent of the registered owner [Com. Code § 8106(g)]. The issuer is not required to enter into such an agreement, however, even if the registered owner so directs [Com. Code § 8106(g)]. The purchaser has control of the security if the issuer has agreed that it will comply with instructions originated by the purchaser even if the registered owner retains the right to make substitutions for the uncertificated security, to originate instructions, or otherwise deal with the uncertificated security [Com. Code § 8106(f)]. See § 6K.16[2] for discussion of the concept of delivery of an uncertificated security.

[e] Security Entitlement

A purchaser has control of a security entitlement if the purchaser becomes the entitlement holder, or the securities intermediary has agreed that it will comply with entitlement orders originated by the purchaser without further consent by the entitlement holder, or another person has control of the security entitlement on behalf of the purchaser or, having previously acquired control of the security entitlement, acknowledges that it has control on behalf of the purchaser [Com. Code § 8106(d)]. If an interest in a security entitlement is granted by the holder to the holder's own securities intermediary, the securities intermediary has control [Com. Code § 8106(e)]. The securities intermediary may not enter into an agreement to comply with entitlement orders originated by the purchaser without the consent of the entitlement holder [Com. Code § 8106(g)]. The securities intermediary is not required to enter into such an agreement, however, even if the entitlement holder so directs [Com. Code § 8106(g)]. The purchaser has control of the entitlement if the securities intermediary has agreed that it will comply with entitlement orders originated by the purchaser even if the entitlement holder retains the right to make substitutions for the security entitlement, to originate entitlement orders, or otherwise deal with the security entitlement [Com. Code § 8106(f)].

"Overissue" means the issue of securities in excess of the amount the issuer has corporate power to issue [Com. Code § 8210(a)]. An overissue does not occur if appropriate action has cured the overissue [Com. Code § 8210(c)]. The provisions of Division 8 that validate a security or compel its issue or reissue do not apply to the extent that validation, issuance, or reissuance would result in overissue [Com. Code § 8210(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Corporation codes universally require that a corporation's articles of incorporation or other charter document state maximum limits of capital stock that may be issued. If a corporation issues stock in excess of these limits, the purchaser has no authority to require the issuer to amend its articles of incorporation or other charter documents to increase the amount of its authorized capital. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

If an identical security not constituting an overissue is reasonably available for purchase, a person entitled to issue or validation may compel the issuer to purchase the security and deliver it or register its transfer [Com. Code § 8210(c)]. If an identical security not constituting an overissue is not reasonably available for purchase, a person entitled to issue or validation may recover from the issuer the price the person or the last purchaser for value paid for it with interest from the date of the person's demand [Com. Code § 8210(d)].

The issuer may treat the registered owner as the person exclusively entitled to vote, receive notifications and otherwise exercise all the rights and powers of an owner until due presentment for registration of transfer of a certificated security in registered form or of an instruction requesting registration of transfer of an uncertificated security [Com. Code § 8207].

PRACTICE TIP:

Division 8 does not provide rules regarding the manner in which a securities intermediary will be permitted to vote or the manner in which the securities intermediary will be required to distribute dividend or other distributions or to deliver notices from the issuer to the holders of its securities. These types of rules are generally set forth in standing rules of the clearing corporation, contracts between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder, or in federal or state securities regulations. *Commentary by Frances E. § 6K.15 Validity of Security

[1] Lack of Genuineness

Lack of genuineness of a certificated security is a complete defense, even against a purchaser for value, unless there is an unauthorized signature on the certificate that is effective [Com. Code § 8202(c)].

[2] Validity of Signature on Certificate

An unauthorized signature on a security certificate is ineffective, but not in the case of a purchaser for value if the signing has been done by an authenticating trustee, registrar, transfer agent, or other person entrusted by the issuer to sign the certificate or an employee of the issuer responsible for handling the security certificate [Com. Code § 8205].

[3] Assertion by Issuer That Security Is Not Valid

If an issuer asserts that a particular security of that issuer is not valid, the following rules apply:

- Even though issued with a defect going to its validity, a security not issued by a government or governmental subdivision, agency or instrumentality is valid in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice of the defect [Com. Code § 8202(b)(1)]. If the defect involves a violation of a constitutional provision of the issuer, the security is still valid in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice unless the purchaser obtained the security by original issue [Com. Code § 8202(b)(1)].

- Even though issued with a defect going to its validity, the security of a government or governmental subdivision, agency or instrumentality is valid in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice of the defect only if there has been substantial compliance with the legal requirements governing the issue or the issuer has received substantial consideration for the issue as a whole or for the particular security and a stated purpose of the issue is one for which the issuer has power to borrow the money or issue the security [Com. Code § 8202(b)(2)].

All purchasers are charged with notice of any defect in the issue of a certificated security or defense of the issuer after an act or event (other than a call that has been revoked) creating a right to immediate performance of the principal obligation represented by a certificated security, or setting a date on or after which the security is to be presented or surrendered for redemption or exchange, if the act or event occurred more than [Com. Code § 8203]

- One year prior if the obligation included the payment of money, delivery of a certificated security, or registration of transfer of an uncertificated security.

- Two years in all other cases.

[1] Authorization

[a] Endorsement

An endorsement of a security certificate involves signing a statement on the back of the security or in a separate document transferring the property rights represented by the certificate. An endorsement is effective if [Com. Code § 8107(b)]

- It is made by an appropriate person or an appropriate person's agent; or
- The appropriate person has ratified it or is precluded from ratifying it.

The endorsement is effective even if made by a representative who failed to comply with the controlling instrument or the law of the state having jurisdiction of the representative relationship, or who otherwise breached a fiduciary duty in the endorsement or in the use of the proceeds [Com. Code § 8107(c)].

An endorsement is effective if made by a representative who appears to have authority to do so because the security is registered to or endorsed to that representative, even when that representative no longer has that authority [Com. Code § 8107(d)].

The effectiveness of an endorsement is determined by the circumstances at the time of the endorsement and does not become ineffective because those circumstances later change [Com. Code § 8107(e)].

An instruction is similar to an endorsement in effect, except that it applies to uncertificated securities held directly rather than certificated securities that are held directly. An instruction is presented to the issuer. The issuer must comply with an effective order. An instruction is effective if [Com. Code § 8107(b)]

- It is made by an appropriate person or an appropriate person's agent; or
- The appropriate person has ratified it or is precluded from ratifying it.

The instruction is effective even if made by a representative who failed to comply with the controlling instrument or the law of the state having jurisdiction of the representative relationship, or who otherwise breached a fiduciary duty in the instruction or in the use of the proceeds [Com. Code § 8107(c)]. An instruction is effective if made by a representative who appears to have authority to do so because the security is registered to or endorsed to that representative, even when that representative no longer has that authority [Com. Code § 8107(d)].

The effectiveness of an instruction is determined by the circumstances at the time of the endorsement, instruction or entitlement order and does not become ineffective because those circumstances later change [Com. Code § 8107(e)].

[c] Entitlement Order

An entitlement order is also similar to an endorsement in effect, except that it applies to securities entitlements rather than securities that are held directly. It is given to a securities intermediary regarding a financial asset. An entitlement order is effective if [Com. Code § 8107(b)]

- It is made by an appropriate person or an appropriate person's agent; or
- The appropriate person has ratified it or is precluded from ratifying it.

An entitlement order, like an instruction, is effective even if made by a representative who failed to comply with the controlling instrument or the law of the state having jurisdiction of the representative relationship, or who otherwise breached a fiduciary duty in the entitlement order or in the use of the proceeds [Com. Code § 8107(c)]. An entitlement order is effective if made by a representative who appears to have authority to do so because the security is registered to or endorsed to that representative, even when that representative no longer has that authority [Com. Code § 8107(d)].

The effectiveness of an entitlement order, like that of an instruction, is determined by the circumstances at the time of the entitlement order and does not become ineffective because those circumstances later change [Com. Code § 8107(e)].

[2] Delivery

Delivery is used in Division 8 to describe the formal steps necessary for a purchaser to acquire a direct interest in a security under Division 8 [Official Comment No. 1 to UCC § 8-301]. Delivery refers to the implementation of a transaction, not the legal categorization of the transaction which is consummated by deliver. Issuance and transfer are different kinds of transactions, though both may be implemented by delivery. Likewise, sales and pledges are different types of transfers, but both may be implemented by delivery.

PRACTICE TIP:

Although Com. Code § 8302 states that a security may be acquired by delivery, it does not state that delivery is the only means of acquiring security. For example, the grant of a security interest is a transfer of a property interest, but the steps necessary to implement the transfer are governed by Division 9, not Division 8. Under Division 9 a security interest may be created by execution of a security agreement and the filing of a financing statement. It need not be perfected by delivery. In addition, a property interest in a security may be acquired by operation of the law of gifts and trusts or through the exercise of equitable remedies rather than by delivery. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

Delivery of a security to a purchaser occurs as follows:

- Delivery of a certificated security occurs when [Com. Code § 8301(a)]
  - The purchaser acquires possession of the security certificate;
  - Another person, other than a securities intermediary, acquires possession of the security certificate on behalf of the purchaser or acknowledges that it holds the security certificate for the purchaser; or
  - A securities intermediary acquires possession of a security certificate in registered form that has been effectively endorsed to the purchaser;
- Delivery of an uncertificated security occurs when [Com. Code § 8301(b)]
  - The issuer registers the purchaser as the registered owner; or
  - Another person, other than a securities intermediary, becomes the registered owner on behalf of another person or acknowledges that it holds the security for the purchaser.

§ 6K.17 Effect of Transfer

On delivery of a certificated or uncertificated security to a purchaser, the purchaser acquires all rights in the security that the transferor had power to transfer [Com. Code § 8302(a)]. A protected purchaser acquires the rights free of adverse claims [Com. Code § 8303(b)]. A purchaser of a certificated security who as a previous holder had notice of an adverse claim does not improve its position by taking from a protected purchaser [Com. Code § 8302(c)].

Even against a purchaser for value, however, and without other notice, the terms of a certificated security include terms stated on the certificate and terms made part of the security by reference on the certificate to a controlling document or a controlling law [Com. Code § 8202(a)]. The terms of an uncertificated security include those stated in any instrument or law pursuant to which the security is issued [Com. Code § 8202(a); see also Com. Code § 8204].

A lien in favor of an issuer on a certificated security is valid against a purchaser only if the right of the issuer to the lien is noted conspicuously on the security certificate [Com. Code § 8209]. The text of the lien provisions need not be set forth in full.

§ 6K.18 Registration

[1] Request to Register Transfer

An issuer must register the transfer of (1) a certificated security in registered form upon presentment of the certificate and a request to register transfer, and (2) an uncertificated security upon presentment of an instruction with a request to register a transfer, if the following conditions are met [Com. Code § 8401]:

- The person seeking registration of transfer is eligible to have the security registered in its name;
- The endorsement or instruction is made by an appropriate person or by an agent with authority to act;
- Reasonable assurance is given that the endorsement or instruction is genuine and authorized;
- Any applicable law relating to the payment of taxes has been complied with;
- The transfer does not violate any restriction on transfer imposed by the issuer, if the security is certificated and the restriction is noted conspicuously on the certificate or the security is uncertificated and the registered owner has been notified of the restriction [Com. Code § 8204];
- A demand that the issuer not register the transfer has not become effective [see § 6K.19[4]]; and
- The transfer is rightful or to a protected purchaser.

If an issuer is under a duty to register a transfer as set forth above, the issuer is liable to the person requesting the transfer or the person's principal for loss resulting from undue delay in registering the transfer [Com. Code § 8401(b)].

[2] Assurance of Genuineness of Endorsement or Instruction

An issuer may seek assurance that each necessary endorsement or each instruction is genuine and authorized by requiring the following [Com. Code § 8402]:

- A guaranty of the signature of the person making the endorsement or originating the instruction.
- Appropriate assurance that a signing agent has authority to sign.
- Appropriate evidence of appointment or incumbency of a signing fiduciary and all who are required to sign under that appointment have done so.

[a] Person Reasonably Believed to Be Responsible

"Guaranty of the signature" means a guaranty signed by or on behalf of a person reasonably believed by the issuer to be responsible [Com. Code § 8402(c)(1)]. An issuer may adopt its own standards with respect to responsibility if the standards are not unreasonable [Com. Code § 8402(c)(1)]. Regulations under the federal securities laws place limits on the requirements transfer agents may impose concerning the responsibility of signature guarantors [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.17Ad-15].

[b] Guaranty of Signature

A person who guarantees a signature of an endorser of a security certificate or of a signature of an originator of an instruction warrants that at the time of signing all of the following were true [Com. Code § 8306]:

- The signature was genuine.
- The signer was an appropriate person to endorse the security.
- If the signature was by an agent, the agent had actual authority to act on behalf of the appropriate person.
- The signer had legal capacity to sign.

A person that specially guarantees the signature of an originator of an instruction also warrants that at the time the instruction is presented to the issuer that the person specified in the instruction as the registered owner will be the registered owner and that the transfer will be registered free from encumbrances other than those specified in the instruction [Com. Code § 8306(c)].

[4] Demand to Not Register A Security

A person who is an appropriate person to make an endorsement or originate an instruction may demand that the issuer not register a transfer of a security by communicating that demand to the issuer and identifying in the demand the registered owner and the issue of which the security is a part, and providing an address for communications directed to the person making the demand [Com. Code § 8403(a)]. A demand is effective only if it has been received by the issuer at a time and in a manner affording the issuer a reasonable opportunity to act on it.

PRACTICE TIP:

Com. Code § 8403(a) is intended to alleviate the problems faced by registered owners of certificated securities who have lost or misplaced their certificates. The registered owner may report the fact that the certificates for the securities have been lost or misplaced. This notice would constitute a demand that the issuer not transfer the securities. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

If a request to register transfer is received after a demand to not register transfer has been effectively received by the issuer, the issuer must communicate to the person demanding no registration of transfer and to the person requesting the registration of transfer that a registration for transfer has been made, that a demand not to register has been received, and that the issuer will withhold registration for a period of up to 30 days while the person demanding no registration of transfer obtains legal process [Com. Code § 8403(b)].

[5] Liability of Issuer for Wrongful Registration of Transfer

An issuer is not liable to an owner or other person suffering loss as a result of the registration of a transfer if the registration was made pursuant to an effective endorsement or instruction [Com. Code § 8404(c)]. An issuer is liable for wrongful registration of a transfer of a security, however, if the issuer registered a transfer to a person not entitled to it and it was registered under any of the following circumstances, unless a security has been lost, apparently destroyed, or wrongfully taken, and the owner fails to notify the issuer within a reasonable time after the owner has notice of that fact [Com. Code §§ 8404(a), 8406]:

- The endorsement or instruction was ineffective.

- The issuer registered the transfer after a demand to not transfer was effectively received by the issuer but the issuer did not comply with the notification process and the delay in registration of transfer.

- The issuer had been served with legal process enjoining it from registering the transfer.

- The issuer acted in collusion with the wrongdoer.

PRACTICE TIP:
An issuer that registers a transfer of securities on the basis of a forged endorsement is liable to the registered owner. The fact that the issuer had no reason to suspect that the endorsement was forged or that the issuer obtained signature guarantees and other assurances under Com. Code § 8402 does not relieve the issuer from liability. On the other hand, the issuer is not liable to adverse claimants merely on the basis of notice assuming the issuer follows the procedures set forth in Com. Code § 8403 after receipt of a demand not to register a security. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

An issuer that has wrongfully registered a transfer must provide, on demand, to the person entitled to the security, a like security and any payments or distributions that the person did not receive as a result of the wrongful registration [Com. Code § 8404(b)], unless there would be an overissuance as a result, in which event the procedures applicable to overissuances should be followed [see § 6K.11[19]].

§ 6K.19 Lost Certificate

If an owner of a certificated security claims that the certificate has been lost, destroyed or wrongfully taken, the issuer must issue a new certificate if the owner does all of the following [Com. Code § 8405(a)]:

- Request reissuance before the issuer has notice that the certificate has been acquired by a protected purchaser.
- Files with the issuer a sufficient indemnity bond.
- Satisfies other reasonable requirements of the issuer.

If, after the new security certificate is issued, a protected purchaser of the original certificate presents it for registration, the issuer must register the transfer [Com. Code § 8405(b)], unless there would be an overissuance, in which case the overissuance rules apply [see § 6K.11[19]].

If a security certificate is lost, destroyed, or wrongfully taken, the owner does not notify the issuer within a reasonable time after the owner has notice, and the issuer registers a transfer of the security before receiving notification, the owner may not assert a claim against the issuer for registering the transfer or a claim for a new security [Com. Code § 8405].

§ 6K.20 Security Entitlement

[1] Securities Intermediary's Obligation to Maintain Asset

A securities intermediary has an obligation to maintain a sufficient quantity of a financial asset to satisfy all of the entitlements it has established with respect to that financial asset [Com. Code § 8504]. The securities intermediary may maintain those financial assets either directly or through other securities intermediaries [Com. Code § 8504].

In general, if a securities intermediary does not have a sufficient quantity of a financial asset to satisfy both its obligations to entitlement holders and to creditors of the securities intermediary who have a security interest in that financial asset, the claims of the entitlement holders have priority, unless the securities intermediary is a clearing corporation, the creditor has control of the securities or the securities have been pledged at the request of the entitlement holder, and the entitlement holder agreed to the rehypothecation by the securities intermediary pursuant to the terms of the agreement between the entitlement holder and securities intermediary regarding margin loans [Com. Code § 8511].

[2] Entitlement Holder's Property Interest

An entitlement holder's property interest with respect to a particular financial asset is a pro rata property interest in all interests in that financial asset held by the securities intermediary [Com. Code § 8503(b)].

[3] Enforcement of Property Interest Against Securities Intermediary

An entitlement holder may enforce its property interest against the securities intermediary only if one of the following occurs [Com. Code § 8503(c)]:

- The securities intermediary does not take action to obtain a payment or distribution made by the issuer of the financial asset in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder or, in the absence of an agreement, fails to exercise due care in accordance with reasonable commercial standards in doing so; if the securities intermediary actually receives the dividend payment or other distribution, the securities intermediary is obligated to deliver that payment or other distribution to the entitlement holder [see Com. Code § 8505].

- The securities intermediary does not exercise rights with respect to the financial asset after being directed to do so by the entitlement holder in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder or, in the absence of an agreement, fails to exercise due care in accordance with reasonable commercial standards in following the instructions of the entitlement holder [see Com. Code § 8506].

- The securities intermediary does not comply with an effective entitlement order in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder, or, in the absence of an agreement, fails to exercise due care in accordance with reasonable commercial standards in complying with the entitlement order. If the securities intermediary transfers a financial asset pursuant to an ineffective entitlement order, the securities intermediary must reestablish the securities entitlement or pay or credit the security account of the entitlement holder with the amount of payments or other distributions that the entitlement holder did not receive as a result of the wrongful transfer. In addition, if the securities intermediary does not reestablish the securities entitlement, the securities intermediary is liable to the entitlement holder for damages [see Com. Code § 8507].

- The securities intermediary does not act at the direction of the entitlement holder to change a security entitlement into another available form of holding for which the entitlement holder is eligible in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder, or, in the absence of an agreement, fails to exercise due care in accordance with reasonable commercial standards in following the direction of the entitlement holder [see Com. Code § 8508].

- The securities intermediary does not, at the request of the entitlement holder, cause the financial asset to be transferred to a securities account with a different securities intermediary in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder, or, in the absence of an agreement, fails to exercise due care in accordance with reasonable commercial standards in following the direction of the entitlement holder [see Com. Code § 8508].

PRACTICE TIP:

These provisions of Division 8 are intended to identify what it means to have a securities entitlement and are not intended to specify the details of the manner in which the duties of the securities intermediary must be performed. For many securities intermediaries, various regulations specify in great detail the intermediary's obligations on such matters as safekeeping of customer property, distribution of dividends and distributions of proxy materials and other notices and information from the issuer of the securities. Other details governing the nature of the securities intermediary's obligations may be set forth in a contract between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder. In addition, other laws, such as the Securities Investor Protection Act (which protects customers against losses of up to $500,000 for cash and securities held at member brokerage firms), offer protections to entitlement holders from wrongful actions of securities intermediaries. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

[4] Enforcement of Property Interest Against Purchaser

The property interest may be enforced with respect to a particular asset against a purchaser only if all of the following conditions have been met [Com. Code § 8503(d)]:

- The securities intermediary is involved in insolvency proceedings.

- The securities intermediary does not have sufficient interests in the financial asset to satisfy all of the entitlements of all of the entitlement holders of that asset.

- The securities intermediary transferred the financial asset or interest therein to the purchaser in violation of its obligation to maintain a financial asset in a quantity corresponding to the aggregate of all security entitlements it has established with respect to that financial asset to the extent provided in Com. Code § 8504.

- The purchaser did not achieve all of the following:

    - Give value;

    - Obtain control; and

    - Did not act in collusion with the securities intermediary in violation of the securities intermediary's obligation.

An entitlement holder may not maintain an action against a purchaser who gives value, obtains control, and does not act in collusion with the securities intermediary in violating the securities intermediary's obligations under Com. Code § 8504 [Com. Code § 8503(e)].

§ 6K.21 Warranties of Transferror

[1] Certificated Security

Unless modified by agreement [see Com. Code § 1302], a person who transfers a certificated security to a purchaser for value warrants all of the following to any subsequent purchaser [Com. Code § 8108(a)]:

- The certificate is genuine and has not been materially altered.
- The transferor does not know of any fact that might impair the validity of the security.
- There is no adverse claim to the security.
- The transfer does not violate any restriction on transfer.
- The transfer is otherwise effective and rightful.

A person who delivers a security certificate to a securities intermediary for credit to a securities account thereby makes the same warranties listed above [Com. Code § 8109(b)].

If the transfer is by endorsement, the transferor also warrants that the endorsement is made by an appropriate person and if the endorsement is made by an agent, that the agent has authority to so transfer [Com. Code § 8108(a)(5)]. The person endorsing the security also warrants to the issuer that there is no adverse claim to the security and that the endorsement is effective [Com. Code § 8108(d)].

A person who presents a certificated security to the issuer warrants to the issuer that the person is entitled to receive the benefit for which the certificated security is being presented to the issuer [Com. Code § 8108(f)]. A purchaser for value without notice of adverse claims, however, only warrants that such purchaser has no knowledge of any unauthorized signature in a necessary endorsement [Com. Code § 8108(f)].

[2] Uncertificated Security

Unless modified by agreement [see Com. Code § 1302], a person who originates an instruction for registration of transfer of an uncertificated security to a purchaser for value warrants to the purchaser that [Com. Code § 8108(b)]

- The instruction is made by an appropriate person or an agent with actual authority.
- The security is valid.
- There are no adverse claims.
- At the time the instruction is presented to the issuer,
  - The purchaser will be entitled to registration of transfer;
  - The transfer will be registered free from all encumbrances other than those specified in the instruction;
  - The transfer will not violate any restrictions on transfer; and
  - The transfer will otherwise be effective and rightful.

The person originating the instruction also warrants to the issuer that the instruction is effective and that, at the time the instruction is presented to the issuer, the purchaser is entitled to the registration of transfer [Com. Code § 8108(e)].

If an uncertificated security is transferred to a purchaser for value without an instruction, the transferror warrants all of the following [Com. Code § 8108(c)]:

- The uncertificated security is valid.
- There is no adverse claim.
- The transfer does not violate any restrictions on transfer.
- The transfer is otherwise effective and rightful.

[3] Entitlement Order

Unless modified by agreement [see Com. Code § 1302], a person who originates an entitlement order to a securities intermediary warrants that [Com. Code § 8109(a)]

- The entitlement order is made by an appropriate person or an authorized agent.
- There is no adverse claim.

[1] Adverse Claim

An adverse claim is a claim that a claimant has a property interest in a financial asset and that it is a violation of the rights of the claimant for another person to hold, transfer or deal with the financial asset [Com. Code § 8102(a)(1)]. The term only refers to property interests such as ownership interests and security interests. Breach of a contractual promise to deliver securities does not create an adverse claim against the securities [Official Comment No. 1 to UCC § 8-102].

An adverse claim does not include all circumstances in which a third party has a property interest in securities, but only in those situations in which a security is transferred in violation of the claimant's property interest [Official Comment No. 2 to UCC § 8105].

[2] Purchaser for Value

An adverse claim may not be asserted against a protected purchaser [Com. Code § 8303]. An adverse claim also may not be asserted against a person who acquires a security entitlement to a financial asset by indication of a book entry or credit to a securities account with a securities intermediary, gives value and is without notice of the adverse claim [Com. Code § 8502]. Such a claim also may not be asserted against one who purchases that entitlement or an interest therein from the entitlement holder [Com. Code § 8510(b)]. An action based on an adverse claim also may not be asserted against a person who purchases a security entitlement if the purchaser gives value, does not have notice of the adverse claim and obtains control of the security entitlement [Com. Code § 8510(a)].

In a case not covered by the priority rules of Division 9, a purchaser for value of a security entitlement, or an interest therein, who obtains control has priority over the purchaser of a security entitlement who does not obtain control. A securities intermediary who has obtained control has priority over other purchasers for value of a security entitlement even if they have obtained control, unless otherwise agreed [Com. Code § 8510(c)].

[3] Notice of Adverse Claim

A person has notice of an adverse claim if the person knows of the adverse claim, is aware of facts indicating that there is a significant probability that an adverse claim exists and deliberately avoids information that would establish the existence of the adverse claim, or has a duty imposed by statute or regulation to investigate whether an adverse claim exists and the investigation would establish the existence of the adverse claim [Com. Code § 8105(a)].

A purchaser of a certificated security has notice of an adverse claim it the security certificate has been endorsed for collection or surrender or some other purpose not involving transfer or is in bearer form and has on it an unambiguous statement that it is the property of a person other than the transferor [Com. Code § 8105(d)]. The definition of notice in Com. Code § 1202(a)(3) (which provides that a person has notice if from all the facts and circumstances known to that person at the time in question he or she has reason to know that certain facts exist) does not apply in these circumstances. Instead there must be actual knowledge of an adverse claim, absent willful blindness [Com. Code § 8105, Comments 1 and 3].

A person who knows that a representative has transferred a financial asset in breach of that representative's duty has notice of an adverse claim [Com. Code § 8105(b)].

[4] Not Sufficient to Constitute Notice of Adverse Claim

The following alone are not sufficient to constitute notice of an adverse claim and do not impose a duty to inquire further:

- Knowledge that a financial asset has been transferred by a representative [Com. Code § 8105(b)]; or

- Filing of a financing statement under Division 9 of the California Commercial Code [Com. Code § 8105(e)]; or

- Any act or event that creates a right to immediate performance of the principal obligation represented by the security certificate or sets a date after which the certificate is to be presented or surrendered for redemption or exchange, unless [Com. Code § 8105(c)]

    - More than one year has passed after a date set for presentment or surrender; or

    - More than six months have passed after a date set for payment of money against presentation or surrender of the certificate if money was available for payment on that date.

[5] Action Against Issuer Regarding Certificated Security

In an action on a certificated security against the issuer, each signature on a security certificate or in a necessary endorsement is admitted unless specifically denied in the pleadings [Com. Code § 8114(a)]. If signatures on a certificate are admitted or established, production of the certificate entitles the holder to recover on it unless the defendant establishes a defense or a defect going to the validity of the security [Com. Code § 8114(c)].

[6] Liability of Transaction "Conduit"

A securities intermediary that has transferred a financial asset pursuant to an effective entitlement order, or a broker or other agent that has dealt with a financial asset at the direction of its customer or principal, is not liable to a person having an adverse claim to the financial asset unless the security intermediary, broker or agent has done one of the following [Com. Code § 8115]:

- Took the action after it was served with legal process enjoining it from doing so and had a reasonable opportunity to act on the injunction;

- Acted in collusion with the wrongdoer in violating the rights of the adverse claimant; or

- In the case of a stolen security certificate, acted with notice of the adverse claim.

A securities intermediary that receives a financial asset and establishes a security entitlement to that financial asset on behalf of an account holder is deemed a purchaser for value [Com. Code § 8116].

A creditor may reach the interest of a debtor in a certificated security only by actual seizure of the certificate by the officer making the attachment or levy [Com. Code § 8112(a)]. If the certificate has been surrendered to the issuer, however, the creditor may reach it by legal process on the issuer [Com. Code § 8112(a)]. If the certificate is held by a secured party, the creditor can reach the debtor's interest only by legal process on the secured party [Com. Code § 8112(d)].

[2] Uncertificated Security

A creditor may reach the interest of a debtor in an uncertificated security only by legal process on the issuer at its chief executive office in the United States [Com. Code § 8112(b)]. If the security is registered to a secured party, the creditor can reach the debtor's interest only by legal process on the secured party [Com. Code § 8112(d)].

§ 6K.25 Governing Law

[1] Jurisdiction of Organization of Issuer

The local law of the jurisdiction of organization of the issuer governs the following [Com. Code § 8110(a)]:

- The validity of a security.
- The rights and duties of the issuer with respect to registration of transfers.
- The effectiveness of registration of transfer by the issuer.
- Whether the issuer owes any duties to an adverse claimant to the security.
- Whether an adverse claim can be asserted against a person to whom transfer of a certificated or uncertificated security is registered or a person who obtains control of an uncertificated security.

If the local law of the jurisdiction under which the issuer is organized permits the issuer to specify that the laws of another jurisdiction govern the above questions, the laws of the specified jurisdiction govern [Com. Code § 8110(d)]. An issuer organized pursuant to the laws of the State of California may specify another jurisdiction to govern the above questions [Com. Code § 8110(d)].

[2] Jurisdiction of Securities Intermediary

The local law of the jurisdiction of a securities intermediary governs the following [Com. Code § 8110(b)]:

- Acquisition of a security entitlement from the securities intermediary.

- The rights and duties of the securities intermediary and entitlement holder arising out of a security entitlement.

- Whether the securities intermediary owes any duties to an adverse claimant to a security entitlement.

- Whether an adverse claim can be asserted against a person who acquires a security entitlement from the securities intermediary or a person who purchases a security entitlement from an entitlement holder.

The jurisdiction of a securities intermediary may be determined by agreement between the securities intermediary and the entitlement holder, the location of the securities account, the location of the office of the securities intermediary identified in an account statement, or the jurisdiction in which the chief executive offices of the issuer are located [see Com. Code § 8110((e)]. The jurisdiction of a securities intermediary is not determined by the physical location of securities certificates, the jurisdiction under which the issuer is organized, or the location of the securities intermediary's record keeping facilities [Com. Code § 8110(f)].

[3] Jurisdiction in Which Security Certificate Is Located

The local law of the jurisdiction in which a security certificate is located at the time of delivery governs whether an adverse claim can be asserted against a person to whom the security certificate is delivered [Com. Code § 8110(c)]. The choice of law provisions governing security interests in securities or securities entitlements are set forth in Com. Code § 9305. To the extent that neither Division 8 nor 9 applies to the issue, general choice of law rules apply.

§ 6K.40 Offer or Sale of Securities in Nonissuer Transactions in California

Corp. Code § 25130 provides that any person that offers or sells any security in California in a nonissuer transaction must qualify that offer or sale unless the offer or sale is exempt from qualification or not subject to qualification. A "nonissuer transaction" is one that is not directly or indirectly for the benefit of the issuer [see Corp. Code § 25011].

The offer or sale may be qualified by coordination pursuant to Corp. Code § 25111, permit pursuant to Corp. Code § 25113, or notification pursuant to Corp. Code § 25131. For a discussion of qualification by coordination, or permit, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities . For discussion of offers and sales of securities not subject to qualification, see generally §§ 6K.41, 6K.42; see also Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues .

[a] Requirement

Securities that are offered or sold in a nonissuer transaction that are not eligible for qualification under Corp. Code § 25111 must be qualified under Corp. Code § 25131, except that securities offered in a nonissuer transaction pursuant to an exemption under Regulation A of the Securities Act of 1933 must be qualified under Corp. Code § 25113 [Corp. Code § 25131(a)].

[b] Application

Qualification by notification must be sought by application [Corp. Code § 25131(b)]. The application must be signed and verified by any of the following [Corp. Code § 25131(b)]:

- The person on whose behalf the offering is being made.

- The issuer.
- Any broker-dealer.

The instructions to the application details the information that must be contained in and the documents that must accompany the application. See § 6K.220 for the application form and instructions promulgated by the Commissioner of Corporations.

§ 6K.41 Securities Exempt From Qualification in Nonissuer Transactions

[1] All Transactions

Corp. Code § 25100 exempts certain classes of securities from all qualification requirements, including when those securities are sold or offered in a nonissuer transaction. For a list of the exemptions under Corp. Code § 25100, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues, § 6.200[2]. A security defined as a "covered security" under the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 will also be exempt from qualification [Corp. Code § 25100.1(a); see Ch. 6A, Federal Securities Exemptions for California Nonpublic Corporations].

[2] Nonissuer Transactions

Corp. Code § 25101 exempts an additional class of securities from qualification requirements when those securities are sold or offered in a nonissuer transaction. That class consists of securities issued by a person that is the issuer of any security listed on a national securities exchange, if the exchange is certified by rule or order of the Commissioner [Corp. Code § 25101(a)]. This exemption does not apply to the following [Corp. Code § 25101(b)]:

- Securities offered pursuant to a registration under the Securities Act of 1933.

- Securities offered under the exemption afforded by federal Regulation A under the Securities Act of 1933 if the aggregate offering price of the securities pursuant to that exemption exceeds $50,000.

The Commissioner has certified the following exchanges and systems [see § 6.15[5]; Marsh & Volk, Practice Under the California Securities Laws, Ch. 10, Nonissuer Transactions, § 10.03, for further discussion of these securities exchanges, some of which have undergone several name changes in recent years]:

- The New York Stock Exchange [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.101.2(a)].

- Tier I of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.101.2(a)].

- The interdealer quotation system of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. to the extent that the securities are those of an issuer that has a security designated as a National Market System security [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.101.2(b); see Dept. of Corps. Release No. 88-C (Revised Aug. 17, 2009), certifying the NASDAQ Global Market and the NASDAQ Capital Market of the NASDAQ Stock Market LLC, the successor to the Nasdaq Stock Market)].

- The American Stock Exchange to the extent that the securities are those of an issuer that has a security that is regularly listed on the American Stock Exchange [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.101.2(c)].

- The Pacific Stock Exchange with some limitations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.101.2(d)].

§ 6K.42 Exempt Nonissuer Transactions

[1] Private Sale by Owner

The offer or sale of a security by the bona fide owner of the security is exempt from qualification if [Corp. Code § 25104(a)]

- The offer or sale is for the owner's own account;
- The offer or sale is not accompanied by the publication of any advertisement; and
- The offer or sale is not made by or through a broker-dealer in a public offering.

The term "advertisement" is broadly defined to include the publication of any written or printed communication or any communication by means of recorded telephone messages or spoken on radio, television or a similar communications media [Corp. Code § 25002] An advertisement is "published" if it is disseminated by any means to the public [Corp. Code § 25014].

This exemption eliminates any qualification requirement in a private transaction except in the situation in which a public market is created in outstanding securities. If a broker-dealer acts as a finder or agent of the owner in connection with the transaction, the exemption is still available as long as it is not in a public offering.

PRACTICE TIP:
This is the exemption most commonly used to sell securities of a closely held corporation or securities acquired in a private placement pursuant to the so-called "Section 4-1/2 exemption." Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

An offer or sale does not involve a public offering if offers are made to no more than 25 persons, each of whom either had a preexisting personal or business relationship with the offeror or could reasonably be expected to have the capacity to protect their interests by reason of their experience, and sales are not consummated to more than 10 persons [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.2]. It may be possible, in some circumstances, to determine that a transaction not complying with these conditions is nevertheless not a public offering.

[2] Unsolicited Sale by Broker-Dealer

The offer or sale of a security made by or through a licensed broker-dealer pursuant to an unsolicited order or offer to buy [Corp. Code § 25104(b)]. An inquiry by the selling broker-dealer in response to a written bid or written solicitation made by another broker-dealer within the prior 60 days is not considered a solicitation [Corp. Code § 25104(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

This is the exemption most commonly used to trade securities of a public corporation. Securities sold on a national securities exchange through a broker-dealer can be made in reliance on this exemption. Commentary by Frances E. Lossing.

An order or offer to buy a security is presumed not to be "unsolicited" if the selling broker-dealer knows that the order or offer to buy by the other broker-dealer is in response to certain solicitation activities in which the selling broker-dealer engaged in the previous 60 days [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.104].

[3] Sale to Institutional Investor

Qualification is not needed for the offer or sale of securities to a bank, savings and loan association, trust company, insurance company, investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, pension or profit-sharing trust, and the types of investors listed in 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.10 (institutional investors) and 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.14 (public agencies) [Corp. Code § 25104(c)]. These exemptions are similar to the issuer exemptions for similar offers and sales discussed in Ch. 6D, Qualified Purchaser Exemptions .

[4] Agreement With Underwriter

Any transaction or agreement between a person on whose behalf an offering is made and an underwriter or underwriters is exempt from the nonissuer qualification provisions if the contemplated sale is exempt from qualification at the time of or qualified prior to any distribution in California [Corp. Code § 25104(d)].

[5] Liquidation of Secured Debt

Qualification is not needed for the offer or sale of a security by or for the account of a bona fide secured party selling the security in the ordinary course of business to liquidate a bona fide debt [Corp. Code § 25104(e)]. A bona fide secured party does not include a secured party who takes a pledge of a security merely as a step in the distribution of the security to the public [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.104.2].

[6] Transactions by Executors, Administrators, Guardians

Qualification is not needed for any offer or sale by an executor, administrator, sheriff, marshal, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, guardian or conservator [Corp. Code § 25104(f)]. This exemption is premised on the fact that offers and sales executed by government officers and court-appointed fiduciaries generally are supervised by the court.

[7] Offer Pending Registration

Qualification is not needed for the offer (but is needed for the sale) of a security for which a registration statement has been filed under the Securities Act of 1933 but has not yet become effective, or for which an offering statement under Regulation A has been filed but has not yet been qualified, if no stop order or refusal order is in effect and no public proceeding or examination looking toward such an order is pending under Section 8 of the Securities Act of 1933 and no order under Corp. Code §§ 25140 or 25143(a) is in effect [Corp. Code § 25104(g)].

[8] Sales Soon After Qualification

No qualification is needed for the offer or sale of a security if a qualification of any security of the same class has become effective within the time periods noted below [Corp. Code § 25104(h)]:

- Under Corp. Code § 25110 et seq. (issuer transaction), has become effective within the prior 18 months; or

- Under Corp. Code § 25120 et seq. (recapitalization or reorganization) or Corp. Code § 25130 et seq. (nonissuer transaction), has become effective within the prior 12 months.

This exemption does not apply if there is a stop order in effect, if the securities are offered pursuant to a registration statement under the Securities Act of 1933, or if the securities are offered pursuant to an exemption under Regulation A if the aggregate offering price exceeds $50,000 [Corp. Code § 25104(h)].

[9] Out-of-State Sales and Sales to Broker-Dealers

The offer or sale of securities in a nonissuer transaction is exempt from the qualification provisions if the offer or sale is effected by or through a licensed broker-dealer to a person that is not a resident of California [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.2]. For this exemption to apply, the offer or sale must comply with the laws of the jurisdiction where the purchaser is domiciled [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.2].

[10] Other Exemptions by Rule of Commissioner

The Commissioner is authorized by Corp. Code § 25105 to exempt other nonissuer transactions from the qualification requirements. Exempt transactions are set forth in 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.105-260.105.30, 260.105.2, 260.105.7, 260.105.11, 260.105.13.1, 260.105.14, 260.105.17, 260.105.29, 260.105.33, 260.105.35, 260.105.36, 260.105.37, and 260.105.38. Most of these exemptions are quite specialized in nature. Several, however, are commonly used. One of the most important of these is an exemption for the private resale of restricted securities made to a qualified institutional buyer pursuant to Rule 144A [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.13.1].

An exemption also is available for certain commonly traded public shares, or any right or warrant to purchase such shares if the following conditions are satisfied [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.17]:

- The issuer has securities registered under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

- The shares are traded on the New York Stock Exchange of the American Stock Exchange.

- There has been trading in such shares for at least 12 days during the preceding 30 calendar days.

- The trading price for the shares has been at least $4 per share,

- The issuer has only one outstanding class of voting securities,

- The issuer has not during the prior 5 years, or the period of its existence if shorter, defaulted in the payment of any dividend or sinking fund payment,

- The issuer has a net worth on a consolidated basis of at least $1 million.

- The issuer has had net income after charges, including taxes and extraordinary losses, and excluding extraordinary gains, of either (1) at least $500,000 for its last fiscal year and at least $1.5 million in total for its last five fiscal years, or (2) at least $1 million in its last two fiscal years.

§ 6K.110 Existence of Financial Asset

1. Determine whether entitlement to some right is any of the following and therefore constitutes a financial asset:

NOTE:
A commodity contract [see Com. Code § 9102(a)(15)] is not a financial asset [Com. Code 8103(f)]. Further, a document of title is not a financial asset unless Com. Code § 8102(a)(9)(c) applies [Com. Code § 8103(g); see P c, below].

a. Security [Com. Code § 8102(a)(9)(A)].

b. Obligation of type dealt in or traded on financial markets or recognized in area in which it is issued or dealt as medium for investment [Com. Code § 8102(a)(9)(B)].

c. Property held by securities intermediary for another after express agreement that property is to be treated as financial asset under Division 8 [Com. Code § 8102(a)(9)(C)].

d. Option issued by clearing corporation to its participants [Com. Code § 8103(e)].

NOTE:
An option or similar obligation issued by a clearing corporation to its participants is not a security, but is a financial asset [Com. Code § 8103(e)].

e. The following if held in securities accounts:

(1) Partnership interests or limited liability company interests [Com. Code § 8103(c)].

(2) Negotiable instruments governed by Division 3 of California Commercial Code [Com. Code § 8103(d)].

2. Determine whether entitlement is a commodity contract [see Com. Code § 9102(a)(15) (definition)] and therefore does not constitute a "financial asset" for purposes of Division 8 [Com. Code § 8103(f)].

a. Corporation.

b. Business trust.

c. Joint stock company.

d. Entity registered as an investment company.

2. Determine whether entitlement not listed in (1), above, has the following characteristics and therefore still constitutes a security [Com. Code § 8102(a)(15)]:

NOTE:
For purposes of Division 8, the term "security" includes almost every type of investment actively traded. It is an obligation of an issuer or a share, participation, or other interest in an issuer or in property or an enterprise of an issuer that meets the criteria listed below [Com. Code § 8102(a)(15)].

a. Represented by certificate or transfer of entitlement may be registered on books maintained for that purpose.

b. One of a class or series, or is divisible into class or series.

c. Of a type dealt in or traded on securities exchanges or securities markets, or a medium for investment expressly providing it is to be governed by Division 8.

NOTE:
For purposes of Division 8, the following are securities: an equity interest issued by a corporation, business trust, joint stock company or similar entity [Com. Code § 8103(a)]; and an equity interest issued by an entity that is registered under the federal investment company laws as an investment company [Com. Code § 8103(b)].

3. Determine whether entitlement has one of following characteristics and therefore does not constitute a security for purposes of Division 8:

a. Interest in a partnership or limited liability company that meets all of the following criteria [Com. Code § 8103(c)]:

NOTE:
Even if it is not a security, a partnership interest or limited liability company interest may be a financial asset [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(9) (definition of "financial asset"); see also § 6K.11[2]].

(1) It is not traded on securities exchange or securities market.

(2) Its terms do not expressly provide it is to be governed by Division 8.

(3) The issuer is not investment company.

b. Commodity contract [Com. Code § 8103(f); see Com. Code § 9102(a)(15) (definition)].

c. Options issued by clearing corporation to its participants [Com. Code § 8103(e)].

A. Debtor and Secured Party are parties to a certain loan agreement [name and/or description of agreement if necessary] dated _____ ("Loan Agreement"). [A copy of the Loan Agreement is attached to this Pledge Agreement.]

B. As security for the performance of Debtor's obligations to the Secured Party under the Loan Agreement, it is Debtor's intent to cause to be created and granted to the Secured Party a security interest in certain property of Debtor, Contemporaneously with the execution of this Agreement, Debtor is executing a Custody Agreement and delivering to the custodian named therein (the "Custodian") a stock certificate representing the Collateral, along with appropriate transfer forms executed in blank, which the Custodian shall hold in trust for the Secured Party pursuant to the Custody Agreement. So long as an Event of Default as defined in Paragraph 6 of this Pledge Agreement has not occurred, all dividends and distributions with respect to the Collateral shall be paid to Debtor.

3. Obligations. The Obligations of Debtor secured by this Agreement shall consist of the obligations of Debtor set forth in the Loan Agreement.

4. Covenants of Debtor. Debtor hereby agrees to do all of the following:

(a) Procure, execute and deliver from time to time any endorsements, assignments and other writings deemed necessary or appropriate by the Secured Party to perfect, maintain and protect the security interest created hereunder and the priority thereof, and pay promptly all related filing fees, stamp taxes or similar costs and expenses;

(b) Not to sell, encumber, or otherwise dispose of or transfer any Collateral or tight or interest therein;

(c) Keep the Collateral free of all levies and security interests or other liens or charges; and

(d) Provide the Secured Party promptly, and in any event within three days, after the occurrence of each Event of Default, or each event that with the lapse of time or giving or notice or both would constitute an Event of Default, the statement of Debtor setting forth details of that Event of Default or event and the action that Debtor proposes to take with respect to that event.

5. Authorized Action by Secured Party. Debtor hereby irrevocably appoints Secured Party as its attorney in fact to do any act that Debtor is obligated by this Agreement to do and to exercise such rights and powers as Debtor might exercise with respect to the Collateral. Immediately and without further notice, upon the occurrence of an Event of Default, Secured Party or its nominee shall have the right to exercise all voting rights and all other rights pertaining thereto, and Debtor hereby grants an irrevocable proxy to Secured Party with respect to the Collateral.

6. Event of Default. Debtor shall be deemed in default under this Agreement upon the occurrence of a breach by Debtor of any of its material obligations under the Loan Agreement. Each such occurrence shall be termed an Event of Default.

7. Remedies on Default. On the occurrence of any Event of Default, the following shall apply:

(a) Secured Party shall have the right, to the full extent permitted by law, and Debtor shall take all actions that may be necessary or appropriate to give effect to that right, to vote and to give consents, ratifications and waivers and to take any other action with respect to the Collateral with the same force and effect as if the Secured Party were the absolute and sole owner thereof.

(b) Secured Party may exercise all the rights and remedies of a secured party under applicable law and, in addition, Secured Party may, without being required to give any notice, except as hereinafter provided, or as may be required by mandatory provisions of law, do either or both of the following:

(1) Apply the cash, if any, then held by it as Collateral hereunder to the Obligations; and

(2) If there is no such cash, or if such cash is insufficient to pay all the Obligations in full, sell all or any part of the Collateral at public or private sale, for cash, on credit or for future delivery, and at any price or prices that Secured Party may deem satisfactory.

(c) Secured Party may be the purchaser of any or all of the Collateral sold at any public or private sale under subparagraph (b)(2), above, and thereafter hold the Collateral so purchased absolutely free from any right or claim of any kind. Secured Party shall give Debtor at least seven days written notice of its intention to make any such public or private sale. Secured Party shall not be obligated to make any such sale following any such notice. Secured Party, instead of exercising the power of sale herein conferred on it, may proceed by a suit or suits at law or in equity to foreclose the security interests granted in this Pledge Agreement, and sell all or any part of the Collateral under a judgment or decree of a court or courts of competent jurisdiction.

8. Termination and Release of Collateral. When all of the Obligations have been fully and completely discharged, Secured Party shall procure the return to Debtor of the Collateral then held by the Custodian under this Agreement, whereupon Secured Party's duties and responsibilities with respect to the Collateral and this Agreement shall cease and terminate.

9. Cumulative Rights. The rights, powers and remedies of Secured Party under this Agreement shall be in addition to all rights, powers and remedies given to Secured Party by virtue of any statute or rule of law, [a shareholders agreement], or any other agreement between Debtor and Secured Party, all of which rights, powers and remedies shall be cumulative and may be exercise successively or concurrently without impairing Secured Party's security interest in the Collateral.

10. Waiver. (a) Any forbearance, failure or delay by Secured Party in exercising any right, power or remedy shall not preclude the further exercise thereof, and every right, power and remedy of Secured Party shall continue in full force and effect until that right, power or remedy is specifically waived in a writing executed by Secured Party.

(b) Debtor waives any right to require Secured Party

(1) To proceed against any person, firm or corporation;

(2) To exhaust any Collateral it may hold at any time;

(3) To apply any Collateral in any order; or

(4) To pursue any other remedy whatsoever in Secured Party's power.

(c) Debtor further waives, to the full extent permitted by law, all rights to notice or a judicial hearing prior to the time Secured Party takes possession or disposes of the Collateral upon default as provided in Paragraph 7.

11. Binding on Successors. All rights of the parties under this Agreement shall inure to the benefit of their heirs, executors, administrators, successors and permitted assigns, and all obligations of the parties under this Agreement shall bind their heirs, executors, administrators, successor and permitted assigns. Scope

This chapter discusses the requirements imposed by California law on a domestic or foreign corporation to keep and maintain books of account, records of proceedings of shareholders, boards of directors, and board committees, and of share transactions. It covers the rights of shareholders and directors to inspect corporate records and distinguishes the statutory rights of each group. This chapter also includes reports required to be filed by a corporation with the California Secretary of State, as well as an application to revive a suspended corporation.

Reporting and record keeping requirements imposed on corporations by licensing or regulatory agencies or by federal law, including federal securities law, are not covered here. Filings required by a corporation qualifying its securities under the California Corporate Securities Law of 1968 also are not covered here. For an overview of the relevant securities issues, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues .

As used in this chapter, "corporation" refers to a domestic corporation incorporated under the General Corporation Law, and a "foreign corporation," unless otherwise stated, refers to a corporation organized under the laws of a jurisdiction other than California, excluding a corporation chartered under federal law.

CHAPTER 7 CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Corporate Records

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.10

§ 7.10 Corporations Subject to Record Keeping and Reporting Requirements

[1] Domestic Corporations

The General Corporation Law requires that every corporation keep adequate and correct books and records of account; minutes of the proceedings of its shareholders, board of directors, and committees of the board; records of share transactions; a record of shareholders [Corp. Code § 1500]; and bylaws [Corp. Code § 213]. The corporation must also keep a record the names and addresses of all shareholders and the number and class of shares held by each, at its principal executive office or at the office of its transfer agent or registrar. These minutes and other books and records must be kept in written form or another form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 1500; see § 7.11[3]]. The use of English is obligatory for any required report, record, notice, or statement [Corp. Code § 8].

[2] Foreign Corporations

Certain foreign corporations are subject to the record keeping and reporting requirements of the General Corporations Code. A foreign corporation meeting the minimum contacts requirement [see Corp. Code § 2115(a)] will be subject unless it is a foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b), (c)]:

- With outstanding securities listed on the New York or American Stock Exchanges; or

- With outstanding shares designated as qualified for trading on the NASDAQ National Market (or successor) to the NASDAQ Stock Market operated by the NASDAQ Stock Market, Inc.; or

- That is wholly owned (except for directors' qualifying shares), directly or indirectly by a corporation or corporations not subject to Corp. Code § 2115.

Detailed discussion of the tests to determine whether a foreign corporation has the requisite minimum contacts with California to subject it to certain provisions of the General Corporation Law, including those relating to record keeping and reporting [see Corp. Code § 2115(b)], is beyond the scope of this chapter. For discussion of these requirements, see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations .

As used in this chapter, "foreign corporation" refers to the foreign corporations subject to the California record keeping and reporting requirements, unless otherwise defined.

[3] Close Corporations

If a corporation is a statutory close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158 ("close corporation" defined)], the shareholders may execute a shareholders' agreement dispensing with the statutory requirements regarding board and shareholder meetings [Corp. Code § 300(e)]. Under these circumstances, the record keeping requirements of the General Corporation Law relating to these meetings would not apply [see Corp. Code § 300(e)].

The purpose of a close corporation is to allow the shareholders to manage the corporation's business informally, in a partnership-manner, without incurring personal liability for corporate debts and other obligations [see Corp. Code § 300(b)-(e)]. Thus, if the shareholders manage the corporation according to the provisions of their agreement, the mere failure to observe the statutory rules that usually govern shareholder and board meeting requirements, voting rights and other control relationships, and the relative economic rights of shareholders will not be a factor tending to establish that shareholders have personal liability [Corp. Code § 300(e)]. However, the relevant provisions of the General Corporation Law relating to close corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 158, 300(e)] have not been the subject of much litigation, and case law does not establish the extent of the statutory protection. Therefore, it is advisable to observe corporate formalities and record keeping requirements or, at the very least, to carefully compare the possible adverse consequences of ignoring them to the advantages of informality of management.

Close corporations are discussed in greater detail in Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations, Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, and Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements.

DIVISION I: BUSINESS AND NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS
CHAPTER 7 CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Corporate Records

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.11

§ 7.11 Minutes

[1] Corporations Subject to Requirement

Every domestic corporation and every foreign corporation subject to California record keeping requirements must comply with the minute keeping requirements of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)].

[2] Contents

Minutes document the proper holding of a meeting and record actions taken at the meeting, such as directors elected, officers appointed, resolutions passed, reports received, and contracts approved. Generally, minutes also indicate the time and place of a meeting, the type of meeting (special or regular) [see Corp. Code §§ 307(a)(2) (directors' special meetings), 600(d) (shareholders' special meetings)] and how it is authorized and noticed (if special) [see Corp. Code §§ 307 (directors' meetings), 600(d) (shareholders' meetings)], and the issues considered. Minutes of meetings of directors and board committees customarily include the names of those present and those absent and indicate participation by conference call or other communication devices. Minutes of shareholder meetings customarily indicate the number of shares represented in person or by proxy. For detailed discussion of the purpose and contents of corporate minutes, as well as sample forms, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions , and Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements .

Written consents to actions taken, approvals of minutes or waivers of notice, signed by absent directors or shareholders to validate proceedings at meetings from which they were absent, must be made part of the minutes or filed with the corporate records [Corp. Code §§ 307(a)(3) (directors' meetings), 600(d) (shareholders' meetings)]. For shareholder meetings, an affidavit, or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], of the mailing of the meeting's notice should be executed and, with a copy of the notice, attached as an exhibit to the minutes or otherwise made part of the corporate records [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

A corporation must keep minutes of the proceedings of its shareholders, board of directors, and board committees. The minutes must be kept in written form or in another form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 1500]. Commonly, a corporate officer, often the corporate secretary, takes and maintains the minutes. However, the taking and maintenance of minutes by a corporate officer is not a statutory requirement. For convenience, the minutes are usually kept in "minute books," which include incorporation documents, bylaws, and minutes of meetings of the board, committees of the board, and shareholders.

When minutes are kept in a form capable of being converted into clearly legible paper form, that clearly legible paper form is admissible in evidence, and acceptable for all other purposes, to the same extent as an original paper record of the same information would be, provided the paper form accurately portrays the record [Corp. Code § 1500].

[4] Effect of Noncompliance

Although a record of corporate actions is required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 1500], failure to take or maintain minutes will not invalidate the actions of the board of directors or shareholders [Bank of Napa v. Ferguson Burns Estate (1920) 48 Cal. App. 319, 326, 192 P. 66] . However, the original or a copy (in writing or any other form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form) certified by the corporate secretary, assistant corporate secretary, or a person purporting to be either, of the minutes of any meeting of directors, shareholders, or board committees is prima facie evidence of the holding of the meeting and of the approval of actions taken at the meeting [Corp. Code § 314].

§ 7.12 Books of Account, Bylaws, Record of Shareholders

Every domestic corporation and every foreign corporation described in Corp. Code § 2115(a) must maintain adequate and correct books and records of account in writing or in a form capable of being converted into a clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)].

Every corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 162 ("corporation" defined), 167 ("domestic corporation" defined)] must also keep the original or a copy of its bylaws, as amended to date, at its principal executive office [Corp. Code § 213]. If a corporation has no office in California, it must, on written request, provide any shareholder with a copy of the bylaws, as amended to date [Corp. Code § 213]. For detailed discussion of the purpose and content of bylaws, see Ch. 4, Bylaws .

Further, every domestic corporation and every foreign corporation described in Corp. Code § 2115(a) must keep a record of its shareholders, including each shareholder's name, address, and the number and class of shares held [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)]. This record must be in writing or in a form capable of being converted into a clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 1500]. CHAPTER 7 CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS
A. Corporate Records

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.13

§ 7.13 Civil Penalties and Liabilities

[1] For Failure to Keep or Maintain Books and Records

[a] Domestic Corporations

The General Corporation Law imposes a penalty on a corporation that neglects, fails, or refuses to keep or maintain records of shareholders and books of account, as required [Corp. Code § 2200; see Corp. Code § 1500 (statutory requirements)]. However, a failure to make entries in the minutes is not subject to the penalty provisions [see Corp. Code § 2200]. The penalty for failure to comply is $25 a day for each day of noncompliance, beginning 30 days after a receipt of a written request to comply, up to a maximum of $1,500 [Corp. Code § 2200]. However, the maximum daily penalty for failure to comply with any number of separate requests made on the same day or related to the same act is $250 [Corp. Code § 2200]. The court in which an action for the penalty is brought may also reduce or suspend the penalty when it appears that the neglect, failure, or refusal was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202]. These penalties are in addition to all other available remedies [Corp. Code § 2202].

[b] Foreign Corporations

Foreign corporations do not appear to be subject to the monetary penalties of Corp. Code § 2200. That section refers to "corporations," a term that does not apply to foreign corporations unless expressly stated [see Corp. Code § 162] and Corp. Code § 2115(b) does not expressly provide that Corp. Code § 2200 applies to foreign corporations [see Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. However, Corp. Code § 2200 has been amended to impose a penalty on the failure to satisfy a statutory notice requirement that is solely applicable to foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 2200]. Further, on complaint that the corporation is not complying with the record keeping and reporting requirements of the General Corporation Law, foreign corporations are subject to enforcement actions by the California Attorney General [Corp. Code § 1508; see [4], below].

For further discussion, see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations and Associations .

[2] For Failure to Enter Share Transfer or Issue Share Certificate

Any corporate officer obliged to enter a transfer of shares on the corporation's books and issue a share certificate, or obliged to enter and issue an initial transaction statement or written statements relating to uncertificated securities, who unreasonably neglects, fails, or refuses to do so after written request, by any person entitled to make a request, is subject to a penalty of $100, plus $10 for each day of default, beginning five days after receiving the request, up to a maximum of $500 [Corp. Code § 2201; see Corp. Code §§ 171.1 ("initial transaction statement," "written statements" explained), 191.1 ("uncertificated security" defined)]. The penalty must be paid to each injured person and may be enforced by judicial action [Corp. Code § 2201]. However, the court in which an action for the penalty is brought may reduce or suspend the penalty when it appears that neglect, failure, or refusal was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202]. The penalty is in addition to any remedies otherwise available [Corp. Code § 2202].

Any director or other officer who unreasonably causes the neglect, failure, or refusal to enter a transfer of shares on the corporate books or to issue a certificate for shares to a person entitled to receive it, or to enter or issue an initial transaction statement or written statements relating to uncertificated securities, is subject to the same penalty [Corp. Code § 2201]. The penalty may be reduced or suspended as described above [Corp. Code § 2202]. It may be enforced by judicial action and is in addition to all other remedies, including an injunction, action for damages, or writ of mandate [Corp. Code § 2202].

[3] For False Statements or Entries on Corporate Books

[a] Domestic Corporations

Joint and several liability is imposed for all damages sustained by a corporation or other party who relied on the prohibited action, on an officer, director, employee, or agent of a corporation who does any of the following [Corp. Code § 1507]:

- Makes, issues, delivers, or publishes any prospectus, report, circular, certificate, financial statement, balance sheet, public notice, or document regarding the corporation or its shares, assets, liabilities, capital, dividends, business, earnings, or accounts that is false, knowing it to be false, or participates in any of the above-mentioned actions.

- Makes or causes to be made in the corporate books, minutes, records, or accounts any material entry that is false, knowing it to be false.

- Removes or alters any entry in any of the corporate books or records, with intent to deceive.

[b] Foreign Corporations

The directors of a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business [see Corp. Code § 191 ("transacting intrastate business" defined)] in California are liable to the corporation, its shareholders, creditors, receiver, liquidator, or trustee in bankruptcy for making false reports, certificates, or public notices [Corp. Code § 2116].

[4] Enforcement by Attorney General

On complaint that a domestic or foreign corporation is not complying with the statutory provisions relating to recordkeeping and reporting requirements [Corp. Code §§ 1500-1512], the California Attorney General may send a notice of the complaint to the corporation's principal executive office. If the response is unsatisfactory, the Attorney General may institute an action for relief to protect the rights of shareholders or to remedy the consequences of failure to comply with the statutory requirements [Corp. Code § 1508]. Remedies include injunction, dissolution, appointment of receiver, or any other relief, as appropriate [Corp. Code § 1508].

§ 7.14 Criminal Penalties and Liabilities

[1] Foreign Incorporation No Defense

In a prosecution for any of the violations set forth in [2]-[5], below, the fact that a corporation was a foreign corporation is not a defense, if it was carrying on business or keeping an office for business in California [Corp. Code § 2260].

[2] For Falsification of Reports

A director, officer, or agent of a corporation, domestic or foreign, is guilty of a felony who [Corp. Code § 2254]:

- Knowingly concurs in making, publishing, or posting either generally or privately to the shareholders or other persons (a) any written report, exhibit, statement of its affairs, or pecuniary condition or notice containing any material statement which is false; (b) any untrue or willfully or fraudulently exaggerated report, prospectus, account, statement of operations, values, business profits, expenditures, or prospects; or (c) any other paper or document intended to produce or give, or having a tendency to produce or give, the shares of stock in the corporation a greater value or a less apparent or market value than they really possess; or

- Refuses to make any book entry or post any notice as required by law in the manner required by law.

A failure to make entries in the minutes is not subject to these penalty provisions [see Corp. Code § 2254].

[3] For Falsification of Books or Securities

A director, officer, or agent of a corporation, domestic or foreign, is guilty of a public offense who [Corp. Code § 2255(a), (b)]:

- Knowingly acquires possession of corporate property, otherwise than in payment of a just demand, and, with intent to defraud, omits to make or cause to be made, a full and true entry of it into the corporation's books or accounts; or

- With intent to defraud, destroys, mutilates, or falsifies any of the corporation's books or securities, or makes or concurs in omitting to make any material record in book of account or record kept by the corporation.

In both cases, the public offense is punishable by imprisonment in a state prison, or by imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year, or by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by both a fine and imprisonment [Corp. Code § 2255(c)].

[4] For Exhibition of False Documents to Public Officer or Board

Every officer, agent, or clerk of a corporation, domestic or foreign, or any person proposing to organize a corporation or to increase its capital stock, who, with intent to deceive, knowingly exhibits any false, forged, or altered book, security, or other instrument to any public officer or board authorized by law to examine the corporation's organization or to investigate its affairs or to allow an increase of its capital, may be punished by imprisonment in a state prison or by imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year [Corp. Code § 2256].

[5] For False Subscription or Insertion of Name

A person is guilty of a misdemeanor who, without authorization, subscribes the name of another or inserts the name of another in any prospectus, circular, or other advertisement or announcement of any corporation, domestic or foreign, including one intended to be formed, with intent to permit the document to be published and to lead persons to believe that the person whose name is subscribed is an officer, agent, shareholder, or promoter of the corporation, when in fact no such relationship exists to the knowledge of such person [Corp. Code § 2257; see Penal Code § 19 (punishment of misdemeanors)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Inspection Rights

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.20

§ 7.20 Inspection Rights of Shareholders

[1] Accounting Books and Records; Minutes

[a] Corporations Subject to Requirement

A shareholder's statutory right to inspect the corporation's accounting books, records, and minutes of the proceedings of shareholders, board of directors, and board committees extends to every domestic corporation, to any foreign corporation described in Corporations Code Section 2115(a), and to any other foreign corporation that keeps such records in California or has its principal executive office in California [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. The right of inspection also extends to subsidiaries of the above-described corporations [Corp. Code § 1601(a); see Corp. Code § 189 ("subsidiary" defined)].

[b] Right to Inspect

Any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate, on written demand and "for a purpose reasonably related to such holder's interests as a shareholder or as the holder of such voting certificate" [see [c], below, for discussion of this limitation], may inspect, copy, or make extracts from the corporation's accounting books and records and minutes of the proceedings of shareholders, board of directors, and board committees [Corp. Code § 1601(a)].

Inspection, copying, and extracting may be made in person or by agent or attorney [Corp. Code § 1601(b)], at any time during usual business hours [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. These inspection rights may not be limited by the articles of incorporation or bylaws [Corp. Code § 1600(b)]. The corporation may not thwart the exercise of these rights by failing to respond to proper requests, by sending communications that make further requests futile, or by actions impeding the inspection process [Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1264, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187] .

On demand for inspection, any records not maintained in written form must be made available in writing, at the corporation's expense [Corp. Code § 1605].

[c] Limitations on Right to Inspect

The right to inspect, copy, or make extracts of accounting books and records and minutes of the proceedings of shareholders, board of directors, and board committees is limited to a purpose reasonably related to the holder's interests as a shareholder or as a holder of a voting trust [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. Courts have held that this limitation includes ascertaining the financial condition of the corporation, the propriety of dividends, or the value of stock [Capron v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 439, 44 P.2d 629] . Any one of the following reasons for an inspection have also been held to be sufficient [see Private Investors v. Homestake Min. Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 496, 54 P.2d 535] :

- To examine the disparity in value between the market value of the corporation's outstanding stock and the value given in the annual report;

- To determine if the outstanding stock was held by a few shareholders who dictated the corporation's accounting policies;

- To determine if the relation of the directors conflicted with interests of minority shareholders;

- To ascertain the present value of the stock owned by the plaintiff.

Moreover, the corporation is required only to allow inspection at corporate offices. It is not required to mail or otherwise provide copies, and is not required to respond to demands for disclosure falling outside scope of what is required by statute [Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1263-1265, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187] .

[2] Bylaws

The original or a copy of the corporate bylaws maintained at the corporation's principal executive office must be available to shareholders to inspect at all reasonable times during office hours [Corp. Code § 213]. If the corporation's principal executive office is outside California and it has no principal business office in this state, the corporation must provide any shareholder, on written request, a copy of the bylaws as amended to date [Corp. Code § 213]. For further discussion of the purpose and content of bylaws, see Ch. 4, Bylaws .

[3] Record of Shareholders

[a] Right to Inspect--In General

Each domestic or foreign corporation must keep at its principal executive office, or at the office of its transfer agent or registrar, a record of shareholders, listing the names and addresses of all shareholders and the number and class of shares held by each shareholder [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)]. Any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate, on written request, in person or by agency or attorney, during usual business hours, may inspect and copy the record of shareholders. However, inspection or copying must be for a purpose reasonably related to the holder's interest as a shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate [Corp. Code § 1600(c); see [1][c], above].

These inspection rights extend to the shareholders of record of any domestic corporation and any foreign corporation that has its principal executive office in California or that customarily holds meetings of its board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1600(d)].

[b] Absolute Right to Inspect

A shareholder or group of shareholders holding at least 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares, or who hold at least 1 percent of the voting shares subject to certain federal regulations and have filed a Schedule 14A with the Securities and Exchange Commission (or, if the corporation is a bank with deposits insured under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, a Form F-6 with the appropriate federal bank regulatory agency), has an absolute right to inspect and copy the record of shareholders during usual business hours on five days' prior written demand [see Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. Similarly, this shareholder or group of shareholders has an absolute right, on written request and tender of the usual charges, to obtain from the corporation's transfer agent a list of the names, addresses, and holdings of the shareholders entitled to vote for directors [Corp. Code § 1600(a)].

Any inspection or copying of the record of shareholder may be made in person or by agent or attorney. These absolute rights may not be limited by the articles of incorporation or bylaws and extend to holders of the requisite shares of a foreign corporation that has its principal executive office in California or that customarily holds meetings of its board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1600(d)].

[4] Other Corporate Records

The General Corporation Law expressly gives shareholders the right to inspect corporate accounting books and records [Corp. Code § 1601(a)], minutes of shareholder, board, and board committee proceedings [Corp. Code § 1601(a)], the record of shareholders [Corp. Code § 1600(c)], and corporate bylaws [Corp. Code § 213]. It does not expressly provide statutory rights of inspection of other kinds of corporate records or documents [cf. Corp. Code § 1602 (directors' absolute right "to inspect and copy all books, records, and documents of every kind")]. Furthermore, shareholder status does not in and of itself entitle an individual to unfettered access to corporate confidences and secrets, such as documents protected by the attorney-client privilege [see, e.g., NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 107-108, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (Raiders football club, as plaintiff in shareholder's suit against National Football League, did not have right to inspect NFL merchandising corporation's documents protected by attorney-client privilege)]. However, a shareholder has a common law right to inspect other corporate records, provided that the shareholder's purpose is a proper and reasonable one, relating to interests as a shareholder [Most v. Nat'l Bank of San Diego (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 425, 428, 431, 54 Cal. Rptr. 669 ; see Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284 (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 843, 313 P. 857].

[5] Corporate Property

The General Corporation Law does not give shareholders the express right to inspect the corporation's physical properties [cf. Corp. Code § 1602 (directors' absolute right to do so)]. However, at common law, the right of inspection extends to corporate property as well as to the corporation's books. The reasoning is that it makes little sense to allow a stockholder the right to examine the corporation's books to ascertain its condition, but then deny the stockholder an inspection of the property to verify the statements contained in the books [Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 502, 129 P. 781] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Inspection Rights

§ 7.21 Inspection Rights of Directors

Every director has an absolute right at any reasonable time, in person or by agent or attorney, to inspect, copy, or make extracts of all books, records, and documents of every kind and to inspect the physical properties of the corporation and its domestic and foreign subsidiaries [Corp. Code § 1602; see Corp. Code § 189 ("subsidiary" defined)]. This provision extends to the directors of any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1602; see Havlicek v. Coast-to-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856 , 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696 (Corp. Code § 1602 does not violate Commerce Clause or Full Faith and Credit Clause); but see NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 109-110, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (if director sues in capacity as shareholder rather than director, attorney-client and work product privileges are properly upheld by corporation)].

Although a court may impose just and proper conditions on this "absolute right" of inspection in an egregious case [see Havlicek v. Coast-To-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856, 46 Cal Rptr. 2d 606] , this principle should only be applied in extreme circumstances in which a preponderance of the evidence establishes a director's clear intent to use documents to commit a tort against the corporation [Saline v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 915-916, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 (holding that trial court failed to make findings necessary to justify limitation on director's right to corporate documents, and that there was no legal basis for prior restraint on his right to discuss corporate documents with persons other than board members)].

A corporate director does not have the right to access documents that are covered by the attorney-client privilege and were generated in defense of a suit for damages that the director filed against the corporation [Tritek Telecom, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1391-1392, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455] .

On demand for inspection, any records not maintained in written form must be made available in writing, at the corporation's expense [Corp. Code § 1605].

No written demand is required of a director before inspecting corporate records. However, it may save the time of the director and the corporate employees responsible for record keeping if the director notifies the corporation in advance, in writing, of his or her intent to inspect the records [see § 7.206 (director's notice of inspection of corporate records or property)].

On request of a local assessor, a domestic or foreign corporation must make available at its principal office in California, or at a place mutually acceptable to the assessor and the corporation, a true copy of business records relevant to the amount, cost, and value of all property that the corporation owns, claims, possesses, or controls within the county [Corp. Code § 1506]. The requirement applies to any domestic or foreign corporation owning, claiming, possessing, or controlling property in California that is subject to local assessment [*Corp. 4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.23

§ 7.23 Enforcement of Inspection Rights

[1] Refusal of Demand for Inspection

[a] Court Action

Inspection rights may be enforced by action in the superior court of the proper county [Corp. Code § 1603(a); see Corp. Code §§ 1600-1602 (rights of inspection)]. The proper county is the county in which the corporation has its principal executive office or, if its principal executive office is not located in California or it has no such office, in Sacramento county [Corp. Code § 177].

The court may enforce the right of inspection with "just and proper conditions" or may, for good cause shown, appoint inspectors or accountants to audit the books and records kept in California and investigate the property, funds, and affairs of any domestic corporation or any foreign corporation keeping its accounting records in California or any subsidiaries, domestic or foreign, keeping records in California [Corp. Code § 1603(a)].

All corporate officers and agents must provide the appointed inspectors or accountants with all books and documents in their custody or power, under penalty of punishment for contempt of court [Corp. Code § 1603(b)].

In an action to enforce shareholder inspection rights, the court may award the shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate expenses incurred in connection with the action, including attorneys' fees. To award expenses, the court must find that the corporation's failure to comply with a proper demand for inspection was not justified [Corp. Code § 1604; see Corp. Code §§ 1600, 1601].

[b] Action by Attorney General

On complaint that a domestic or foreign corporation is not complying with the statutory provisions relating to rights of inspection [Corp. Code §§ 1600-1605; see Corp. Code § 2115(b)], the California Attorney General may send a notice of the complaint to the corporation's principal executive office. If the response is unsatisfactory, the Attorney General may institute an action for relief to protect the rights of shareholders or to remedy the consequences of failure to comply with the statutory requirements [Corp. Code § 1508]. Remedies include injunction, dissolution, appointment of receiver, or any other relief, as appropriate [Corp. Code § 1508].

[2] Delay in Delivering Shareholder Record or List

If a corporation or its transfer agent fails, within the specified time limits, to respond to the request of a shareholder with an absolute right to inspect the shareholder record [see § 7.20[3][b]], the inspection rights may be enforced by action in the superior court of the proper county [Corp. Code § 1603(a); see [1][a], above], or by action by the Attorney General [Corp. Code § 1508; see [1][b], above]. After a hearing, shareholders may also obtain a court order postponing a noticed shareholder meeting for a period equal to the delay [Corp. Code §§ 1600(b), 2115(b)]. This remedy is in addition to any legal or equitable remedy otherwise available [Corp. Code §§ 1600(b), 2115(b)].

For a period of 60 days after the conclusion of an annual, regular, or special meeting of shareholders, a corporation must provide the results of any vote of shareholders taken at that meeting to any shareholder, on written request [Corp. Code § 1509; see Corp. Code § 1512 ("shareholder" defined for purposes of this section)]. The results must include the number of shares that voted for or against a proposal and the number abstaining or withheld from voting. If the matter voted on was the election of directors, the corporation must report the number of shares (or votes, if voted cumulatively) cast for each nominee. If more than one class or series of shares voted, the report must state the appropriate numbers by class and series of shares [Corp. Code § 1509].

Any foreign corporation qualified to transact intrastate business in California [Corp. Code § 1510(a)] or any foreign corporation not qualified to transact business in California, but having one or more subsidiaries, domestic or foreign, qualified to transact business in this state [Corp. Code § 1511] must provide the information specified above, at the request of a shareholder resident in this state [see Corp. Code §§ 1510(b) ("shareholder resident in this state" defined), 1512 ("shareholder" defined for purposes of Corp. Code §§ 1509-1511)].

The preparation and distribution of the reports to shareholders set forth in §§ 7.31-7.33 are required of all domestic corporations and every foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1501(g)]. These reporting requirements also apply to foreign corporations described in Corp. Code § 2115(a), unless [Corp. Code § 2115(c); see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations]:

- The foreign corporation has outstanding securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market, or

C. Reports to Shareholders

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.31

§ 7.31 Annual Report to Shareholders

[1] In General

Except for corporations with fewer than 100 shareholders whose bylaws expressly waive this requirement, each domestic or foreign corporation required to comply [see § 7.30] must send its shareholders an annual report [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1), (g); but see Corp. Code § 1501(a)(4) (option to post statement on Internet for some corporations subject to SEC filing requirements)]. This requirement cannot be waived in a close corporation's shareholders' agreement [Corp. Code § 300(c)].

The General Corporation Law specifies only that the annual report be sent to the corporation's "shareholders" [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1), (2)]. Normally, the annual report is sent to shareholders of record for purposes of the annual shareholders' meeting in the fiscal year following that of the annual report [see Corp. Code § 605 ("shares held of record" defined)]. It is also typically given on request to persons who become shareholders after the required distribution of the annual report within 120 days of the close of the fiscal year.

The annual report must contain (1) a balance sheet as of the end of the fiscal year, (2) an income statement as of the end of the fiscal year, and (3) a statement of cashflows for that fiscal year [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1); see [5], below]. A fourth statement, a statement of retained earnings, is also customarily prepared. The financial statements must be accompanied by a report of independent accountants [see Corp. Code § 115 ("independent accountants" defined)], if any, or by the certificate of an authorized corporate officer that the financial statements were prepared without audit of the corporation's books and records [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)].

In an annual report, all financial statements, including balance sheets, income statements, statements of cashflows, assets, liabilities, retained earnings, and similar accounting items must be prepared in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, subject to any specific accounting treatment required by a particular section of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 114]. A corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders of record, determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605, is not subject to this requirement provided the corporation's financial statements (1) reasonably set forth the corporation's assets, liabilities, income, and expenses, and (2) disclose the accounting basis used in their preparation [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(3)].

[2] Additional Requirement for Corporations With 100 or More Shareholders

If a domestic or foreign corporation [see § 7.30] has 100 or more shareholders of record (determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605), and is either exempt from the reporting requirements of Section 13 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. § 78l (securities exchanges)] or from the registration requirements of Section 12(g)(2) of the Act [15 U.S.C. § 78l(g)(2) (registration by issuer; exemptions)], its annual report must include two items in addition to the required financial statements [see Corp. Code § 1501(b); see also Corp. Code § 1501(a), discussed in [1], above].

First, the report must briefly describe any transaction (excluding compensation of officers and directors) during the previous fiscal year involving an amount in excess of $40,000 (other than contracts let at competitive bid or services rendered at prices regulated by law) to which the corporation or its parent or subsidiary was a party and in which any director or officer of the corporation or of a subsidiary or any holder of more than 10 percent of the outstanding voting shares of the corporation had a direct or indirect material interest [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(1); see Corp. Code §§ 175 ("parent" defined), 189 ("subsidiary" defined)]. The description of this transaction should include the name of person and his or her relationship to the corporation, the nature of the person's interest in the transaction, and the amount of the interest, when practicable [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(1)]. If the transaction was with a partnership of which the person having a material interest is a partner, only the partnership's interest need be reported [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(1)]. Further, any transaction approved by the shareholders is exempt from this reporting requirement [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(1); see Corp. Code § 153 ("approved by the shareholders" defined)].

Second, the report must briefly describe the amount and circumstances of any indemnification or advances aggregating more than $10,000 paid during the fiscal year to any officer or director in accordance with Corp. Code § 317 [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(2)]. However, a report is not required in the case of indemnification approved by the shareholders under Corp. Code § 317(e)(2) (indemnification deemed proper by legal counsel in written opinion) [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(2); see Corp. Code § 153 ("approved by the shareholders" defined)].

[3] Timing

The annual report must be sent to shareholders no later than 120 days after the close of the fiscal year [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)], except for corporations with fewer than 100 shareholders (determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605]) whose bylaws expressly waive this requirement [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)]. The 120 day period, however, may be extended for good cause by a court [Corp. Code § 1501(e)]. Unless waived, the report must be sent to shareholders at least 15 days before the annual shareholders' meeting if sent by first class mail, or at least 35 days before the meeting if sent third-class [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(2)].

[4] Delivery

Except as noted below with regard to some corporations subject to SEC registration requirements, the annual report must be sent by first or third-class mail delivered personally, or transmitted electronically by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20], to every shareholder at the shareholder's address listed on the corporation's books or at the address provided by the shareholder for purpose of notice [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a), 601(b)]. If neither address appears in the corporate records, the report must be sent to the corporation's principal executive office [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

The annual report is considered to be sent at the time it is deposited in the mail, delivered personally, or electronically transmitted by the corporation [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. An affidavit of mailing or electronic transmission by the corporation executed by the corporate secretary, assistant corporate secretary, or corporate transfer agent is prima facie evidence of the sending of the report [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

If an annual report, addressed as provided above, is returned to the corporation by the United States Postal Service, marked as undeliverable, all future reports to that shareholder are considered to have been sent, without mailing, if they are available to the shareholder, on written demand, at the corporation's principal executive office for one year from the date the annual report was sent to all shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

A corporation that is registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. § 78l] may satisfy the delivery requirement by posting its annual report on an Internet website and providing its shareholders with written notice of the availability of the report [see Corp. Code § 1501(a)(4); see also 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-16].

[5] Definitions of Common Accounting Terms

[a] As Used in General Corporation Law

As used in the General Corporation Law, "financial statements," and their components ("balance sheets," "income statements," "statements of cashflows," "assets," "liabilities," "earnings," "retained earnings"), refer to financial statements or items prepared and presented in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 114]. If a corporation has subsidiaries [see Corp. Code § 189 ("subsidiary" defined)], its "financial statements" are the consolidated statements of the corporation and of its subsidiaries as are required to be included in the consolidated statements under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 114]. Generally accepted definitions of standard accounting terms are enumerated in [b]-[g], below.

Accountants long have recognized that "generally accepted accounting principles" (GAAP) are far from being a canonical set of rules that will ensure identical accounting treatment of identical transactions. Instead, GAAP will tolerate a range of reasonable treatments, leaving the choice among alternatives to management [Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner (1979) 439 U.S. 522, 544, 99 S. Ct. 773, 58 L. Ed. 2d 785] . In the United States, GAAP are an amalgam of statements issued by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants through the successive groups that it has established to promulgate accounting principles: the Committee on Accounting Procedure, the Accounting Principles Board, and the Financial Accounting Standards Board. GAAP include broad statements of accounting principles amounting to aspirational norms as well as more specific guidelines and illustrations. The lack of an official compilation allows for some debate over whether particular announcements are encompassed within GAAP [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 382, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 (observing that one standard text purporting to restate comprehensively GAAP includes 90 major sections and more than 500 pages)]. GAAP are found in "a hodgepodge of accounting sources, which [in the United States] find their respective places in the hierarchical structure established by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants" [*Bolt v. Merrimack Pharms., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 913, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 21717, at 10 n.6 (describing that hierarchy)].

When a court must determine whether a particular financial-accounting result is in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, the court should not try to apply those principles but should defer to the professional judgment of the accountant who audited or prepared the financial statements "unless a GAAP authority demands a contrary accounting treatment" [*Bolt v. Merrimack Pharms., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 913, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 21717, at *11-*12, *20-21 (original emphasis; corporation's net worth, as disclosed on audited balance sheet, was determined in accordance with GAAP)].

[b] Financial Statements

Financial statements summarize the accounting transactions of a business. They present the financial position of a company at a given time (balance sheet) and the results of its operations for a given period (statement of income and retained earnings). Financial statements conventionally cover a one year period, but statements are often prepared at more frequent intervals.

[c] Balance Sheet

A balance sheet reports the financial status of a business enterprise on a specific date. It illustrates the fundamental accounting equation that assets equal liabilities plus owners' equity. Ordinarily, the balance sheet lists assets on the left side of the statement and liabilities and stockholders' equity on the right.

[d] Income Statement

The income statement, often referred to as the statement of income and retained earnings, shows a company's operating results over a defined accounting period, often one year, and measures the net change in assets and liabilities resulting from operations during the accounting period. Thus, the income statement links successive balance sheets and shows the reason for changes in the owners' equity resulting from operations during the accounting period.

[e] Statement of Cashflows

Generally accepted accounting practices require that when financial statements purporting to present both financial position (balance sheet) and results of operations (statement of income and retained earnings) are issued, a statement summarizing this information be presented for each period for which an income statement is presented. Consistent with this practice, the General Corporation Law requires that the annual report of every corporation include a statement of cashflows [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)]. This statement generally provides information on all financing and investing activities of a business, shows the funds generated from operations and other sources, shows the uses and application of funds, and discloses the amounts and causes of all other financial changes during the period.

[f] Statement of Retained Earnings

Retained earnings are income earned by a corporation since its inception that have not been distributed to stockholders as dividends. The statement of retained earnings reconciles the amount shown on the balance sheet at the beginning of the accounting period with the amount shown at the end of the period. In addition, it links the income statement to the balance sheet by including the amount of net income as one of the reconciling items in the statement.

[g] Consolidated Statement

A "consolidated statement" is a corporate report in the form of a balance sheet, income statement, or statement of retained earnings that combines the separate statements of a parent corporation and its subsidiaries [see Corp. Code § 114; see also Corp. Code §§ 175 ("parent" defined), 189 ("subsidiary" defined)]. Such consolidated statements eliminate all intercompany accounts, and show the entire group of companies as a single enterprise.

§ 7.32 Financial Reports Requested by Shareholders

[1] Quarterly Reports

A shareholder or any group of shareholders that owns at least five percent of the outstanding shares of any class of stock is entitled to receive, on written request, a balance sheet and an income statement for the three-month, six-month, or nine-month period of the current fiscal year ended at least 30 days before the request [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), (d)]. These quarterly reports must be mailed or delivered to the requesting shareholder within 30 days of the request [Corp. Code § 1501(c)]. The corporation is further required to keep a copy of its quarterly financial statements at its principal office for 12 months and to exhibit these reports (or mail copies of them) to any shareholder on demand [Corp. Code § 1501(c)].

If a report of independent accounts is available [see Corp. Code § 115 ("independent accountants" defined)], the report must accompany the quarterly financial reports; otherwise the reports must be accompanied by the certificate of an authorized corporate officer that the financial statements were prepared without audit of the corporation's books and records [Corp. Code § 1501(d)].

[2] Financial Statements in Lieu of Annual Report

If no annual report for the fiscal year has been sent to shareholders, the corporation must provide the financial statements required in the annual report [see Corp. Code § 1501(a); see also § 7.31[1]] to any shareholder, on written request made more than 120 days after the close of the fiscal year [Corp. Code § 1501(c)]. The financial information must be mailed or delivered to the requesting shareholder within 30 days of the request [Corp. Code § 1501(c)].

The corporation is further required to keep a copy of these financial statements at its principal office for 12 months and to exhibit these reports (or mail copies of them) to any shareholder on demand [Corp. Code § 1501(c)].

Like the quarterly financial reports [see [1], above], the financial statements of corporations with fewer than 100 shareholders of record need not conform with generally accepted accounting principles if they reasonably set forth the corporation's assets and liabilities and income and expenses and disclose the accounting principles used in their preparation [Corp. Code § 1501(3); see Corp. Code § 605 (determining shareholders of record)].

§ 7.33 Enforcement of Shareholders' Rights to Annual Report and Financial Statements

The shareholders' right to information and financial statements may be enforced by suit in the superior court of the proper county [Corp. Code § 1501(e); see Corp. Code § 177 ("proper county" defined)]. If the court finds the corporation's failure to comply with the requirements of the General Corporation law is without justification, the court may award reasonable expenses, including attorneys' fees, to the shareholder [Corp. Code § 1501(f)].

In addition, failure to prepare the information and financial statements required by the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 1501] may subject the corporation to monetary penalties [Corp. Code § 1501(e); see Corp. Code § 2200 (penalties); see also § 7.13[1]].

Unlike the apparent nonapplicability of Corp. Code § 2200 to foreign corporations that do not comply with the general record keeping requirements of Corp. Code § 1500 [see Corp. Code §§ 162, 2115(b); see also § 7.13[1][b]], Corp. Code § 2200 applies to foreign corporations that (1) have their principal executive office in California or that customarily holds meetings of its board in California and (2) violate Corp. Code § 1501, regarding annual reports to shareholders [see Corp. Code § 1501(e), (g); see also Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. This conclusion results from the application of Corp. Code § 1500 to such foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 1501(g)], combined with the provision that "[i]n addition to the penalties provided for in Section 2200, the superior court of the proper county shall enforce the duty of making and mailing or delivering the information and financial statements required by this section and, for good cause shown, may extend the time therefor" [Corp. Code § 1501(e)].

CHAPTER 7 CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Statements Filed With Secretary of State

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.40

§ 7.40 Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation and Corporate Disclosure Statement

[1] In General

Every domestic corporation must file a Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 1502(a)]. The statement provides current information regarding the corporation's directors, officers, principal business addresses, type of business, and agent for service of process [see Corp. Code § 1502(a), (b); see also [3], below]. The Secretary of State prescribes the form for this annual statement [Corp. Code § 1502(a); see §§ 7.207, 7.207A, 7.207B, for official forms and further discussion of their use].

Changes to the information contained in the last filed statement may be made at any time by filing a new complete statement. In addition, in order to change its agent for service of process, or the agent's address, the corporation must file a current complete statement. When an updated statement is filed, it supersedes any previously filed statement and the statement in the articles of incorporation as to the agent for service of process and the address of the agent [Corp. Code § 1502(e)].

It is important to bear in mind that this statement will be available and open to the public for inspection. The Secretary of State is required to provide access to all information contained in this statement by means of an online database [Corp. Code § 1502(h)]. In addition, the corporation must certify that the information it provides in this statement is true and correct. No claim may be made against the state for inaccurate information contained in this statement [Corp. Code § 1502(j)].

[2] Filing Procedure

The Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation is due within 90 days of filing a corporation's original articles of incorporation and annually thereafter [Corp. Code § 1502(a)]. The statement must be filed during the calendar month during which the original articles were filed or during the five months immediately preceding the filing month [Corp. Code § 1502(d)]. In addition to the regular applicable filing fee [see Gov. Code § 12183(g); see also §§ 7.207[2], 7.207A[2]], the corporation must pay a $5 disclosure fee when filing this statement [Corp. Code § 1502(i); see Corp. Code § 1502.5].

Approximately three months before the annual Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation is due, the Secretary of State will mail a notice reminding a corporation of its obligation to comply with the annual filing requirement and of the due date for filing. The notice must be mailed to the corporation's most recent address according to the Secretary's records. Failure to receive the notice is no excuse for failing to file the Statement on time [Corp. Code § 1502(d)].

[3] Contents of Forms

The Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation must set forth the following [Corp. Code § 1502(a)]:

- The street address of the corporation's principal executive office.
- The corporation's mailing address, if different from the street address of its principal executive office.
- If the corporation's principal executive office is not in California, the street address of its principal business office in California, if any.
- The names and complete business or residential addresses of its chief executive officer, secretary, and chief financial officer.
- The names and complete business or residential addresses of the incumbent directors.
- The number of vacancies on the board of directors, if any.
- A statement of the general type of business that constitutes the corporation's principal business activity.

The statement must also designate an agent for service of process [see Corp. Code § 1502(b)]. The agent designated must be either a natural person residing in California or a corporation that has complied with the statutory requirements [Corp. Code § 1502(b); see Corp. Code § 1505 (requirements)]. If a natural person is designated, the statement must include the person's complete business or residential street address. If a corporate agent is designated, no address is required [Corp. Code § 1502(b)]. For further discussion on designating an agent for service of process, see §§ 7.50-7.53.

It is important to bear in mind that this statement will be available and open to the public for inspection. The Secretary of State is required by statute to provide access to all information contained in this statement by means of an online database [Corp. Code § 1502(h)]. In addition, the corporation must certify that the information it provides in this statement is true and correct. No claim may be made against the state for inaccurate information contained in this statement [Corp. Code § 1502(j)].

In addition, every publicly traded corporation must file a separate corporate disclosure form containing the following information [Corp. Code § 1502.1(a); Corp. Code § 1502.1(b)(1)]:

- The name of the independent auditor that prepared the most recent auditor's report on the corporation's annual financial statements.

- A description of other services, if any, performed for the corporation during its two most recent fiscal years and the period between the end of its most recent fiscal year and the date of the statement by the independent auditor, by its parent corporation, or by a subsidiary or corporate affiliate of the independent auditor or its parent corporation.

- The name of the independent auditor employed by the corporation on the date of the statement, if different from the independent auditor referred to above.

- The compensation for the most recent fiscal year paid to each member of the board of directors and to each of the five most highly compensated executive officers of the corporation who are not members of the board, including the number of any shares issued, options for shares granted, and similar equity-based compensation granted to each of those persons (and if the chief executive officer is not among the five most highly compensated executive officers of the corporation, the compensation paid to the chief executive officer must be included anyway).

- A description of any loan, including the amount and terms of the loan, made to any member of the board by the corporation during the corporation's two most recent fiscal years at an interest rate lower than the interest rate available from unaffiliated commercial lenders generally to a similarly situated borrower.

- A statement indicating whether an order for relief has been entered in a bankruptcy case with respect to the corporation, its executive officers, or members of the board of directors during the 10 years preceding the date of the statement.

- A statement indicating whether any member of the board of directors or executive officer was convicted of fraud during the 10 years preceding the date of the statement, if the conviction has not been overturned or expunged.

- A description of any material pending legal proceedings, other than ordinary routine litigation incidental to the business, to which the corporation or any of its subsidiaries is a party or of which any of their property is the subject, as specified by Item 103 of SEC Regulation S-K [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.103].

- A description of any material legal proceeding during which the corporation was found legally liable by entry of a final judgment or final order that was not overturned on appeal during the five years preceding the date of the statement.

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.41

§ 7.41 Failure to File Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation

[1] Notification and Certification Procedures; Penalty

If a corporation fails to file its Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation, the Secretary of State will mail a notice of delinquency to the corporation [Corp. Code § 2204(a)]. The notice must advise the corporation of the penalty for failure to file within 60 days after the mailing of the notice. In addition, it must advise the corporation of its right to request relief from the Secretary of State for failure to file resulting from reasonable cause or unusual circumstances, or, if the Secretary does not grant relief, its right to pay the penalty under protest and to file a claim with the Franchise Tax Board requesting relief [Corp. Code § 2204(a)]. The penalty for failure to file is $250, imposed by the Franchise Tax Board after the Secretary of State has certified the corporation's name to the Franchise Tax Board [Corp. Code § 2204(a), (b); Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141].

If, after certification, the Secretary of State discovers that the statement was filed before the expiration of the 60 day period, or that the Secretary did not provide notice of delinquency, as required, it must promptly decertify the name. The Franchise Tax Board must then promptly abate any assessed penalty [Corp. Code § 2204(e)].

If the Secretary of State determines that the failure to file the Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation is excusable because of reasonable cause or justifiable circumstances, it may waive the penalty and must decertify the corporation [Corp. Code § 2204(f)].

The penalty does not apply to a corporation that has dissolved or merged with another corporation on or before the date of certification [Corp. Code § 2204(c)]. It also does not apply to a corporation that has been suspended by the Franchise Tax Board [Corp. Code § 2204(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 22301 (suspension of corporate powers for nonpayment), 23301.5 (suspension of corporate powers for failure to file return), 23775 (suspension and forfeiture of corporate powers by exempt organization)], on or before, and remains suspended on, the last day of the filing period [see Corp. Code § 1502(a), (d) (filing period)]. In addition, the Secretary is not required to mail a form to a corporation that has been suspended by the Franchise Tax Board on or before, and remains suspended on, the day the Secretary of State prepares the forms for mailing [Corp. Code § 2204(d); see § 7.40[2]].

[2] Suspension by Secretary of State; Revivor

If a corporation fails to file its Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [see Corp. Code § 1502] for an applicable filing period, has not filed the statement during the preceding 24 months, and was certified for a penalty [see Corp. Code § 2204] for the same filing period, the Secretary of State may suspend the corporation's powers, rights, and privileges [Corp. Code § 2205(a)]. The Secretary must notify the corporation, by mail, that it will be suspended in 60 days if the statement is not filed [Corp. Code § 2205(b)]. If a corporation is suspended, the Secretary must notify the Franchise Tax Board and mail a notice of suspension to the corporation [Corp. Code § 2205(c)].

On suspension, the corporation may take no action other than to file the statement or to amend its articles of incorporation to change its name [Corp. Code § 2205(c), (d); see Palm Valley Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 560-561, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing sanctions on law firm for continuing litigation activities on behalf of corporation that it knew to be suspended under Corp. Code § 2205 for failure to file information statement required by Corp. Code § 1502)]. In addition, a suspended corporation may file an application for exempt status and amend its articles of incorporation as necessary to perfect that application [Corp. Code § 1502(c); see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations].

The filing of its Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [Corp. Code § 2205(d)], the payment of any assessed penalty [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305, 25936; see [1], above], and a request in writing to the Franchise Tax Board by any stockholder, creditor, majority of surviving trustees or directors, officer, or any person having an interest in relief from suspension [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305] will revive a corporation, provided the corporation meets the statutory requirements relating to available corporate names unless the corporation is held in suspension by the Franchise Tax Board under Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 [Corp. Code § 2205(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a; see also Corp. Code §§ 201 (names available to domestic corporations), 2106 (names available to foreign corporations); see [3], below]. The name of a suspended corporation may be reserved and adopted by another corporation during the period of suspension. In that situation, the suspended corporation's application for a certificate of revivor may be denied [see Boyer v. Jones (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 220, 221-222, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824 (trial court properly denied suspended corporation's petition for writ of mandate seeking restoration of its name)]. The Secretary of State must certify the fact of the filing to the Franchise Tax Board, and the Franchise Tax Board will restore the corporation's powers by issuing a certificate of revivor (unless the corporation has been suspended by the Franchise Tax Board) [Corp. Code § 2205(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23305a; see also [3], below]. Thus, it appears that the Secretary of State is not reviving the corporation's powers, but merely informing the Franchise Tax Board that it may do so [see Corp. Code § 2205(d); Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a (requiring Secretary of State's endorsement)].

For a procedural guide to reviving a suspended corporation, see § 7.124[2]. For an Application for Certificate of Revivor, see § 7.208.

[3] Suspension by Franchise Tax Board; Revivor

If the corporation was suspended for nonpayment of franchise taxes or failure to file tax returns, its powers will not be revived, notwithstanding the filing of the required annual statement [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23775; see Corp. Code § 1502; [2], above; see also Timberline v. Jaisinghani (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1368-1369, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 (suspended corporation that failed to revive powers by paying delinquent taxes cannot renew judgment obtained while in good standing)]. Under these circumstances, the corporation's powers may be revived by writing to the Franchise Tax Board for a certificate of revivor, filing all tax returns required under the Bank and Corporation Tax Law, and paying all taxes, additions to taxes, deficiencies, interest, and penalties due [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305, 23305a; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305b (revivor without payment of full amount due)].

[4] Suspension by Secretary of State and Franchise Tax Board; Revivor

The procedure for reviving a corporation that has been suspended by both the Secretary of State and the Franchise Tax Board is a combination of the two procedures described in [2] and [3], above. When all the requirements of both agencies have been met, the corporation may apply, directly to the Franchise Tax Board, for a revivor from both the Secretary of State and Franchise Tax Board suspensions [see Corp. Code §§ 2204, 2205; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 19141, 23301, 23301.5, 23305-23305b, 23775].

E. Agent for Service of Process

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.50

§ 7.50 Agent for Service of Process--In General

As an artificial entity, a corporation cannot be served with process; it can be served only through one of its officers or agents or a party designated by law to receive service on its behalf [Cannon v. American Hydrocarbon Corp. (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 639, 652, 84 Cal. Rptr. 575 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 416.10-416.30 (persons who may be served on behalf of corporation; but see Gamet v. Blanchard (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1285-1286, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 439 (notices sent to director's residence did not constitute notice on corporation when corporation had filed a different address with the court)].

The articles of incorporation of a California domestic corporation must designate the name and California address of the corporation's initial agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 202(c); see Corp. Code § 1502(b) (requirements)]. The annual statement of information filed by a domestic corporation must also designate the corporation's agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 1502(b); see §§ 7.207, 7.207A (statements of information for domestic corporations)].

Foreign corporations are required to designate an agent for service of process on the statement and designation that such corporations must file with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 2105(a)(4), (5); see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, §§ 12B.201-12B.201B (forms)]. The annual statement of information that foreign corporations must file with the Secretary of State must also designate the corporation's agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 2117(b); see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, § 12B.210 (form)]. For general discussion of these requirements as applied to foreign corporations, see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations .

The agent must be either a natural person residing in California [see § 7.51], or a corporation that has filed a certificate containing specified information [see Corp Code § 1505 (required certificate); see also Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, § 3.211; Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, § 12B.204 (forms)] and whose capacity to act as an agent has not been terminated [Corp. Code §§ 1502(b) (domestic corporation), 2117(b) (foreign corporation); see § 7.52].

Any domestic or foreign corporation authorized to do business in California and in good standing on the Secretary of State's records may be designated agent for service of process for another corporation, either domestic or foreign [Corp. Code § 1505(a), (c)]. However, the corporate agent first must file with the Secretary of State a certificate setting forth all of the following [Corp. Code § 1505(a); see Corp. Code § 2105(c) (foreign corporations)]:

- The complete address of the corporation's office or offices in California where process may be served.
- The name of each employee at each office to whom the corporation authorizes delivery of process.
- The corporation's consent that delivery to any designated employee at the office where the person is employed constitutes delivery of the process to it as agent.

Because this certificate sets forth the corporation's address, its address is not required on the Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [see Corp. Code § 1502(b); see also §§ 7.207, 7.207A] or on the Annual Statement of Information by Foreign Corporation with the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code § 2117(b); see also Ch. 12, Foreign Corporations, § 12B.210]. For detailed discussion of the certificate and sample certification forms, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, § 3.211 (domestic corporations) and Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, § 12B.204.

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.53

§ 7.53 Resignation of Agent; Appointment of New Agent

An agent for service of process may resign by filing a signed, acknowledged written statement of resignation with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 1503(a)]. The Secretary of State then must mail written notice of the filing of the statement of resignation to the corporation at its principal executive office [Corp. Code § 1503(a)]. The corporation must appoint another agent for service of process on receipt of the notice [Corp. Code § 1504].

Further, if a natural person designated as agent dies or no longer resides in California, or if a corporate agent dissolves, withdraws from California, forfeits its right to transact intrastate business, has its corporate franchise suspended, or ceases to exist, the corporation must also designate a new agent [Corp. Code §§ 1504, 2117(e) (foreign corporations)]. The designation of a new agent must conform to the statutory requirements [Corp. Code § 1504; see Corp. Code §§ 1502(b), 2117(b) (statutory requirements); see also §§ 7.51-7.52].

In addition, in order to change its agent for service of process, or the agent's address, the corporation must file a current complete Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [Corp. Code § 1502(e); see § 7.207[2]]. When an updated statement is filed, it supersedes any previously filed statement and the statement in the articles of incorporation as to the agent for service of process and the address of the agent [*Corp. § 7.120 Corporate Records

NOTE:

Although the corporation's attorney usually is not involved in keeping and maintaining the corporation's financial and other records, the attorney should be aware of the general requirements and should be prepared to advise the client accordingly. The attorney should also be alert to any areas in which legal assistance may be needed.

[1] General Record Keeping Requirements

NOTE:

The General Corporation Law requires that every domestic corporation maintain adequate and correct books and records of account, minutes of the proceedings of its shareholders, board of directors, and committees of the board, records of share transactions, a record of shareholders [Corp. Code § 1500], and bylaws [Corp. Code § 213]. Certain foreign corporations are also subject to the record keeping and reporting requirements of the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 2115]. To determine whether a foreign corporation is subject to these requirements, see § 7.110.

1. Advise client that every corporation subject to statutory record keeping requirements must keep and maintain following records:

a. Adequate and correct books and records of account [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)].

b. Minutes of proceedings of its shareholders, board of directors, and board committees [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)].

NOTE:

Although a record of corporate actions is required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 1500], failure to take or maintain minutes will not invalidate the actions of the board of directors or shareholders [Bank of Napa v. Ferguson Burns Estate (1920) 48 Cal. App. 319, 326, 192 P. 66] . However, the original or a copy (in writing or in any other form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form) certified by the corporate secretary, assistant corporate secretary, or a person purporting to be either, of the minutes of any meeting of directors, shareholders, or board committees is prima facie evidence of the holding of the meeting and of the approval of actions taken at the meeting [Corp. Code § 314]. For a general discussion of the contents of minutes, see § 7.11 [2]. See Ch. 5, Director's Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions , and Ch. 8A, Shareholder's Meetings, Voting, and Agreements , for more detailed coverage and examples of keeping and maintaining corporate minutes.

c. Record of shareholders [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)].

NOTE:

Each domestic or foreign corporation must keep at its principal executive office, or at the office of its transfer agent or registrar, a record of shareholders, listing the names and addresses of all shareholders and the number and class of shares held by each shareholder [Corp. Code §§ 1500, 2115(b)].

d. Bylaws [Corp. Code § 213].

NOTE:

A corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 162 ("corporation" defined), 167 ("domestic corporation" defined)] must keep the original or a copy of its bylaws, as amended to date, at its principal executive office [Corp. Code § 213]. If a corporation has no office in California, it must, on written request, provide any shareholder with a copy of the bylaws, as amended to date [see Corp. Code § 213; see also Corp. Code § 2115]. For detailed discussion of the purpose and content of bylaws, see Ch. 4, Bylaws **.

2. Advise client that minutes and other books and records must be kept in writing or other form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 1500; see Corp. Code § 1605].

3. Advise client that use of English is obligatory for any required report, record, notice, or statement [Corp. Code § 8].

[2] Civil Penalties and Liabilities

1. Advise client, if domestic corporation or shareholder of corporation, that failure to keep or maintain records (excluding minutes) as required, may result in monetary penalties [Corp. Code § 2200; see Corp. Code § 1500 (statutory requirements)].

NOTE:

The penalty for failing to comply is $25 a day for each day of noncompliance, beginning 30 days after a reciept of a written request to comply, up to a maximum of $1,500 [Corp. Code § 2200]. However, the maximum daily penalty for failure to comply with any number of separate requests made on the same day or related to the same act is $250. In addition, the court in which an action for the penalty is brought may reduce or suspend the penalty when it appears that neglect, failure, or refusal was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202]. These penalties are in addition to all other available remedies [Corp. Code § 2202]. It is not entirely clear whether these penalties apply to foreign corporations. Corp. Code § 2200 is not listed in Corp. Code § 2115(b), but has been amended to include a separate penalty solely applicable to foreign corporations. However, on complaint that the corporation is not complying with the record keeping and reporting requirements of the General Corporation Law, foreign corporations are subject to enforcement actions by the California Attorney General [Corp. Code § 1508; see P 5, below]. For further discussion, see § 7.13[1][b] and Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations and Associations .

2. Advise client that failure or refusal to enter share transaction or issue share certificate by officer obliged to do so (or failure or refusal caused by officer or director), after written request, may result in monetary penalties [Corp. Code §§ 2201, 2202].

NOTE:

The penalty is $100, in addition to $10 for each day of default, beginning five days after receiving the request, up to a maximum of $500 [Corp. Code § 2201]. It must be paid to each injured person and may be enforced by judicial action [Corp. Code § 2201]. However, the court in which an action for the penalty is brought may reduce or suspend the penalty when it appears that neglect, failure, or refusal was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202]. The penalty is in addition to any remedies otherwise available [Corp. Code § 2202]. This penalty also applies to those obliged to enter and issue an initial transaction statement or written statements relating to uncertificated securities [Corp. Code § 2201; see Corp. Code §§ 171.1 ("initial transaction statement," "written statements" explained), 191.1 ("uncertificated security" defined)].

3. Advise client, if domestic corporation or shareholder of corporation, that joint and several liability for damages is imposed on officer, director, employee, or agent who does any of following [Corp. Code § 1507]:

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.121

§ 7.121 Inspection Rights

[1] Shareholders and Holders of Voting Trust Certificate

NOTE:

A shareholder's statutory rights of inspection extend to (1) every domestic corporation, (2) any foreign corporation described in Corp. Code § 2115(a) [Corp. Code § 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 2115(a); see also § 7.10[2]], and (3) any other foreign corporation that keeps records in California or has its principal executive office in California [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. The right of inspection also extends to subsidiaries of the above-described corporations [Corp. Code § 1601(a); see Corp. Code § 189 ("subsidiary" defined)]. Shareholder status, however, does not entitle an individual to unfettered access to corporate confidences and secrets, such as documents protected by the attorney-client privilege [see, e.g., NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 107-108, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (Raiders football club, as plaintiff in shareholder's suit against National Football League, did not have right to inspect NFL merchandising corporation's documents protected by attorney-client privilege)].

1. Advise client that following records must be open to inspection, on written demand, at any time during usual business hours, for purpose reasonably related to interests of shareholder or holder of voting trust certificate [Corp. Code §§ 1600(c), 1601(a), 2115(b)]:

NOTE:

The client also should be advised that the corporation may not thwart the exercise of these rights by failing to respond to proper requests, by sending communications that make further requests futile, or by actions impeding the inspection process. Conversely, the corporation is required only to allow inspection at corporate offices. It is not required to mail or otherwise provide copies, and is not required to respond to demands for disclosure falling outside scope of what is required by statute [Jara v. Suprema Meats,

Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1263-1265, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187] .

a. Accounting books and records [Corp. Code § 1601(a)].

b. Minutes of proceedings of shareholders, board of directors, and board committees [Corp. Code § 1601(a)].

c. Record of shareholders [Corp. Code § 1600(c)].

2. Advise client of common law right to inspect other corporate records for purpose reasonably related to interests as shareholder or holder of voting trust certificate [Most v. Nat'l Bank of San Diego (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 425, 428, 431, 54 Cal. Rptr. 669 ; see Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284(1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 843, 313 P. 857].

3. Advise client of absolute right of shareholder or group of shareholders holding at least 5 percent of outstanding voting shares, or at least 1 percent of voting shares subject to certain federal regulations [Corp. Code §§ 1600(a), 2115(b)]:

NOTE:

Corp. Code § 1600(a) refers to shareholders who have filed a Schedule 14A or, in the case of banks with deposits insured under Federal Deposit Insurance Act, shareholders who have filed a Form F-6 [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-11(c)].

a. To inspect and copy record of shareholders:

(1) In person or by agent or attorney.

(2) On five days prior written demand.

b. To obtain from corporation's transfer agent list of names, addresses, and holdings of shareholders entitled to vote for directors:

(1) On written request.

(2) On payment of usual charges.

4. Advise client that if records requested are not in writing, request is not complied with until corporation, at its expense, makes records available in writing [Corp. Code §§ 1605, 2115(b)].

5. Advise client that inspection and copying may be made in person or by agent or attorney [Corp. Code §§ 1600(a), 1601(b), 2115(b)].

6. Advise client that right may not be limited by articles of incorporation or bylaws [Corp. Code §§ 1600(d), 1601(b), 2115(b)].

7. Advise client that bylaws must be open to inspection at all reasonable times during office hours [Corp. Code § 213].

8. Advise client of common law right to inspect corporate property to verify statements in corporate records [Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 502, 129 P. 781] .

[2] Directors

NOTE:

The right of inspection by a director applies to every domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board of directors in this state [Corp. Code §§ 1602, 2115(b); see Havlicek v. Coast-To-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696 (Corp. Code § 1602 does not violate Commerce Clause or Full Faith and Credit Clause); but see NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 109-110, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (if director sues in capacity as shareholder rather than director, attorney-client and work product privileges are properly upheld by corporation)]. Although a court may impose just and proper conditions on a director's "absolute right" of inspection in an egregious case [see Havlicek v. Coast-To-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856, 46 Cal Rptr. 2d 606] , this principle should only be applied in extreme circumstances in which a preponderance of the evidence establishes a director's clear intent to use documents to commit a tort against the corporation [Saline v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 915-916, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

A corporate director does not have the right to access documents that are covered by the attorney-client privilege and were generated in defense of a suit for damages that the director filed against the corporation [Tritek Telecom, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1391-1392, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455] .

1. Advise client that director has absolute right at any reasonable time to [Corp. Code §§ 1602, 2115(b)]:

a. Inspect and copy all documents.

NOTE:

On demand for inspection, any records not maintained in written form must be made available in writing, at the corporation's expense [Corp. Code §§ 1605, 2115(b)].

b. Inspect physical properties of corporation of which person is director and of its subsidiary corporations, domestic or foreign.

2. Advise client that inspection may be made in person or by agent or attorney [Corp. Code §§ 1602, 2115(b)].

[3] Local Assessors

NOTE:

The inspection right of a local assessor applies to a domestic or foreign corporation owning, claiming, possessing, or controlling property in California that is subject to local assessment [Corp. Code § 1506].

1. Advise client that domestic or foreign corporation must make available, on request of county assessor, all business records relating to amount, cost, and value of corporation's property within county [Corp. Code § 1506].

2. Advise client that records must be made available at corporation's principal office or at mutually agreed on location [Corp. Code § 1506].

[4] Enforcement Actions

1. Advise client that lawful demand for inspection may be enforced in superior court of proper county [Corp. Code § 1603(a); see Corp. Code § 177 ("proper county" defined)].

NOTE:

The court may enforce the right of inspection with "just and proper conditions" [Corp. Code § 1603(a)]. Alternatively, the court may, for good cause shown, appoint inspectors or accountants to audit the books and records kept in California and investigate the property, funds, and affairs of any domestic corporation or any foreign corporation keeping its accounting records in California or any subsidiaries, domestic or foreign, keeping records in California [Corp. Code § 1603(a)]. In an action under Corp. Code § 1600 (shareholders' rights to inspect shareholder record) or Corp. Code § 1601 (shareholders' rights to inspect corporate accounts, books, records, and minutes), the court may award the shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate expenses incurred in connection with the action, including attorneys' fees. To award expenses, however, the court must find that the corporation's failure to comply with a proper demand for inspection was without justification [Corp. Code § 1604].

2. Advise client that inspection rights may be enforced by Attorney General [Corp. Code §§ 1508, 2115(b)].

NOTE:

On complaint that a domestic or foreign corporation is not complying with the statutory provisions relating to rights of inspection [Corp. Code §§ 1600-1605], the California Attorney General may send a notice of the complaint to the corporation's principal executive office. If the response is unsatisfactory, the Attorney General may institute an action for relief to protect the rights of shareholders or to remedy the consequences of failure to comply with the statutory requirements [Corp. Code § 1508]. Remedies include injunction, dissolution, appointment of receiver, or any other relief, as appropriate [Corp. Code §§ 1508, 2115(b)].

3. Advise client that if corporation, domestic or foreign, delays beyond required time limits in delivering shareholder record, on lawful demand, shareholder may [Corp. Code §§ 1600(b), 2115(b)]:

a. Obtain court order postponing noticed shareholder meeting for period equal to delay in opening shareholder record.

b. Pursue all other legal and equitable remedies available.

NOTE:

A shareholder or group of shareholders holding at least 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares, or at least 1 percent of the voting shares subject to certain federal regulations [see § 7.121[1], P 3, above] has an absolute right (without stating a purpose) to inspect and copy the record of shareholders, in person or by agent or attorney on five days prior written demand [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. Likewise, such a shareholder or group of shareholders has an absolute right to obtain from the corporation's transfer agent a list of the names, addresses, and holdings of the shareholders entitled to vote for directors, on written request and tender of the usual charges [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. These additional inspection rights extend to holders of the requisite shares of a foreign corporation that has its principal executive office in California or that customarily holds meetings of its board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1600(d)].

§ 7.122 Right to Result of Shareholder Vote

NOTE:

Every domestic corporation and any foreign corporation qualified to transact intrastate business in California [Corp. Code § 1510(a)] or any foreign corporation not qualified to transact business in California, but having one or more subsidiaries, domestic or foreign, qualified to transact business in this state [*Corp. § 7.123 Reports to Shareholders

NOTE:

The preparation and distribution of the reports to shareholders enumerated in [1], [2], below, are required of (1) all domestic corporations, (2) foreign corporations having their principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of their board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1501(g)], and (3) foreign corporations described in Corp. Code § 2115(a), except for (a) foreign corporations with outstanding securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market, or (b) foreign corporations all of the voting shares of which (other than directors' qualifying shares) are owned directly or indirectly by a corporation or corporations not subject to Corp. Code § 2115 [Corp. Code § 2115(c)].

[1] Annual Report

NOTE:

Except for corporations with fewer than 100 shareholders whose bylaws expressly waive this requirement, every corporation, domestic or foreign, as defined above, must send its shareholders an annual report [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(1), (g), 2115(b)]. This requirement may not be waived in a close corporation's shareholders' agreement [Corp. Code § 300(c)]. The General Corporation Law specifies only that the annual report be sent to the corporation's "shareholders" [Corp. Code § 1501(a)]. Normally, the annual report is sent to shareholders of record for purposes of the annual shareholders' meeting in the fiscal year following that of the annual report [see Corp. Code § 605 ("shares held of record" defined)] and given on request to persons who become shareholders after the required distribution of the annual report within 120 days of the close of the fiscal year.

1. Advise client that annual report must include all of following for fiscal year [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(1), 2115(b)]:

a. Balance sheet.

b. Income statement.

c. Statement of cashflows.

d. Accompanying report of independent accountants, if any, or certificate of authorized corporate officer stating that statements were prepared without audit from corporation's books and records [see Corp. Code § 115 ("independent accountants" defined)].

NOTE:
In an annual report, all financial statements, including balance sheets, income statements, statements of cashflows, and similar accounting items must be prepared in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, subject to any specific accounting treatment required by a particular section of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 114]. A corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders of record, determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605, is not subject to this requirement provided the corporation's financial statements (1) reasonably set forth the corporation's assets, liabilities, income, and expenses, and (2) disclose the accounting basis used in their preparation [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(3), 2115(b)].

2. Advise client that corporations with 100 or more shareholders of record (determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605), with no class of securities registered under Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Section 12, or exempt from registration under Section 12(g)(2), must also include brief description of following for fiscal year:

NOTE:
A report is not required in the case of indemnification approved by the shareholders under Corp. Code § 317(e)(2) (indemnification deemed proper by legal counsel in written opinion) [Corp. Code §§ 1501(b)(2), 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 153 ("approved by the shareholders" defined); see also Corp. Code § 317 (indemnification of corporate agent)].

a. Any transaction (excluding officer and director compensation) involving amount exceeding $40,000 (other than competitive bid contracts or regulated services) [Corp. Code §§ 1501(b)(1), 2115(b)]:

(1) To which corporation, its parent or subsidiary was party; and

(2) In which any director, officer, or holder of more than 10 percent of corporation's outstanding voting shares had material interest.

NOTE:
A description of this transaction should include the person's name, his or her relationship to the corporation, the nature of the person's interest in the transaction, and the amount of the interest, when practicable [Corp. Code §§ 1501(b)(1), 2115(b)]. If the transaction was with a partnership of which the person having a material interest is a partner, only the interest of the partnership need be reported [Corp. Code §§ 1501(b)(1), 2115(b)]. Further, any transaction approved by the shareholders is exempt from this reporting requirement [Corp. Code §§ 1501(b)(1), 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 153 ("approved by the shareholders" defined)].

b. Amount and circumstances of any indemnification or advances aggregating more than $10,000 paid to any officer or director under Corp. Code § 317 (indemnification of directors, officers, and others) [Corp. Code §§ 1501(b)(2), 2115(b)].

3. Advise client that annual report must be sent to shareholders to address on corporate books or address of notice provided by shareholder in accordance with following requirements [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(1), 601(b), 2115(b)]:

NOTE:

If a corporation has fewer than 100 shareholders (determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605), its bylaws may expressly waive these requirements [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(1), 2115(b)].

a. No later than 120 days after close of fiscal year [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)].

b. By first or third class mail or electronic transmission by corporation, or delivered personally [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(1), 601(b)].

NOTE:

A corporation that is registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. § 78l] may satisfy the delivery requirement by posting its annual report on an Internet website and providing its shareholders with written notice of the availability of the report [see Corp. Code § 1501(a)(4); see also 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-16].

[2] Financial Reports Requested by Shareholders

1. Advise client that corporation must send following to shareholder or group of shareholders owning at least five percent of outstanding shares of any class, within 30 days of written request:

a. Balance sheet for three, six, or nine month periods of current fiscal year ended at least 30 days before request [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), 2115(b)].

b. Income statement for three, six, or nine month periods of current fiscal year ended at least 30 days before request [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), 2115(b)].

c. Report of independent accountants, if any, or certificate of authorized corporate officer stating that financial statements were prepared without audit of corporation's books and records [Corp. Code §§ 1501(d), 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 115 ("independent accountants" defined)].

2. Advise client that corporation must keep copies of quarterly reports at its principal office for 12 months and exhibit or mail copies to shareholders on demand [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), 2115(b)].

3. If no annual report for last fiscal year has been sent, advise client that corporation must send financial statements required in annual report to any shareholder, within 15 days of written request made more than 120 days after close of fiscal year [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), 2115(b); see [1], P 1, above (financial statements required in annual report)].

NOTE:

This provision refers only to the "financial statements" and not to the entire annual report required by Corp. Code § 1501(a) [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), 2115(b)].

4. Advise client that corporation must keep copies of required financial statements at its principal office for 12 months and exhibit or mail copies to shareholders on demand [Corp. Code §§ 1501(c), 2115(b)].

5. Advise client that corporations with fewer than 100 shareholders, determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605, need not conform their financial statements with general accounting principles, provided those statements [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(3), 2115(b)]:

a. Reasonably set forth the corporation's assets, liabilities, income, and expenses; and

b. Disclose the accounting principles used in their preparation.

[3] Enforcement Actions; Penalties

1. Advise client that corporation's duties to make and deliver required information and financial statements may be enforced by suit in superior court in proper county [Corp. Code §§ 1501(e), 2115(b); see Corp. Code §§ 177 ("proper county" defined), 1501 (required information and financial statements)].

NOTE:
If the court finds the corporation's failure to comply with the requirements of the General Corporation Law is without justification, the court may award reasonable expenses, including attorneys' fees, to the shareholder [Corp. Code §§ 1501(f), 2115(b)].

2. Advise client that corporation may face monetary penalties for failure to prepare annual report or financial statements, as required [Corp. Code §§ 1501(e), 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 2200 (penalties)].

NOTE:
The penalty for failure to comply is $25 a day for each day of noncompliance, beginning 30 days after a receipt of a written request to comply, up to a maximum of $1,500 [Corp. Code § 2200]. However, the maximum daily penalty for failure to comply with any number of separate requests made on the same day or related to the same act is $250 [Corp. Code § 2200]. Further, the court in which an action for the penalty is brought may reduce or suspend the penalty when it appears that neglect, failure, or refusal was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202]. These penalties are in addition to all other available remedies [Corp. Code § 2202]. Unlike the apparent nonapplicability of Corp. Code § 2200 to foreign corporations that do not comply with the general record keeping requirements of the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 162, 2115(b); see also § 7.13[1][b]], Corp. Code § 2200 appears to apply to a foreign corporation that has its principal executive office in California or that customarily holds meetings of its board in California and that violates Corp. Code § 1501, regarding annual reports to shareholders [see Corp. Code § 1501(e), (g); see also § 7.33].

a. Within 60 days of Secretary of State's mailing of notice of deficiency: $250 [Corp. Code § 2204(a), (b); Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141].

NOTE:
The penalty for failure to file is imposed by the Franchise Tax Board after the Secretary of State has certified the corporation's name to the Franchise Tax Board [Corp. Code § 2204(a), (b); Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141].

b. For two successive years (if certified for penalty in filing period year): suspension of corporate powers [Corp. Code § 2205(a)].

NOTE:
On suspension, the corporation may take no action other than to file the statement or to amend its articles of incorporation to change its name [Corp. Code § 2205(c), (d); see Palm Valley Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 560-561, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing sanctions on law firm for continuing litigation activities on behalf of corporation that it knew to be suspended under Corp. Code § 2205 for failure to file information statement required by Corp. Code § 1502)]. In addition, a suspended corporation may file an application for exempt status, and amend its articles of incorporation as necessary to perfect that application [Corp. Code § 1502(c); see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations].

2. Advise client to take following steps to revive corporation on suspension by Secretary of State:

a. Satisfy monetary penalty assessed by Franchise Tax Board [Corp. Code § 2204(b); Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141].

NOTE:
The corporation may request relief from the Secretary of State for failure to file resulting from reasonable cause or unusual circumstances. If the Secretary determines that failure to file was due to either of the two, it may waive the penalty and must decertify the corporation [Corp. Code § 2204(a)]. If the Secretary does not grant relief, the corporation has the right to pay the penalty under protest and to file a claim with the Franchise Tax Board requesting relief [Corp. Code § 2204(a)].

b. File current Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation with Secretary of State [Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205(d)].

NOTE:
After the filing is completed, a proposed relief of suspension letter will be sent to the corporation. The corporation may provide this letter to the Franchise Tax Board and at the same time make a request for a revivor.

c. Apply to Franchise Tax Board for revivor:

(1) Application must be writing [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305].

(2) Use form provided by Franchise Tax Board [see § 2.208].

(3) Application may be made by any of following [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305]:
(a) Stockholder.

(b) Creditor.

(c) Majority of surviving trustees or directors.

(d) Officer.

(e) Other person having interest in relief from suspension.

d. Advise client that revivor may be denied if Franchise Tax Board has suspended corporation under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 [see § 7.42[4]].

e. Advise client that revivor may be denied if corporation's name is no longer available.

NOTE:
On approval of the application for Certificate of Revivor, the Franchise Tax Board will forward to the Secretary of State a request that the corporation be revived [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a]. If the name is still available for corporate use, the Secretary of State notifies the Franchise Tax Board that the corporation has been revived. If the name is no longer available because of a conflict with the name of an active corporation, the revivor is denied and the Franchise Tax Board is notified of the denial [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a; see Boyer v. Jones (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 220, 221-222, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824 (holding that name of suspended corporation may be reserved and adopted by another corporation during period of suspension, and affirming trial court's denial of suspended corporation's petition for writ of mandate seeking restoration of its name)]. The Franchise Tax Board then notifies the corporation of the denial and suggests contacting the Secretary of State.

f. If corporate name is no longer available, advise client to [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a]:

(1) Amend corporate name [see Corp. Code § 201 (names available to domestic corporations)].

(2) Submit new revivor request to Franchise Tax Board.

NOTE:

Amendment of the corporate name, filed with the Secretary of State, enables the corporation to solicit the Franchise Tax Board to send a new revivor request to the Secretary of State under the changed corporate name [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305a, 23305c]. See Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations , for procedures to amend the corporate name.

g. Advise client that Certificate of Revivor issued by Franchise Tax Board is prima facie evidence that corporation has been revived [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a].

1. Advise domestic corporate client or foreign corporate client transacting intrastate business that it must designate agent for service of process [Corp. Code §§ 202(c), 1502(b), 2117(b); see Corp. Code § 191 ("transact intrastate business" defined)].

NOTE:
As an artificial entity, a corporation cannot be served with process; it can be served only through one of its officers or agents or a party designated by law to receive service on its behalf [Cannon v. American Hydrocarbon Corp. (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 639, 652, 84 Cal. Rptr. 575 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 416.10-416.30 (persons who may be served on corporation's behalf)].

2. Advise corporate client that agent may be either:

a. Natural person residing in California [Corp. Code § 1502(b)]; or

NOTE:
If a natural person is designated, the statement must set forth that person's complete business or residential street address [Corp. Code § 1502(b)].

b. Corporation that [Corp. Code §§ 1502(b), 1505(c)]:

(1) Is authorized to do business in California.

(2) Is in good standing on Secretary of State's records.

(3) Has filed certificate containing specified information [see Corp Code § 1505

(required certificate); see also Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, § 3.211; Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, § 12B.204 (forms)] and capacity to act as an agent has not been terminated [Corp. Code §§ 1502(b) (domestic corporation), 2117(b) (foreign corporation)].

3. Advise corporate client to make designation of agent for service of process as follows:

a. For domestic corporation:

(1) Articles of incorporation must designate name and California address of corporation's initial agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 202(c); see Corp. Code § 1502(b) (requirements)].

(2) Annual Statement of Information by Domestic Corporation must designate corporation's agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 1502(b); see §§ 7.207, 7.207A (statements of information for domestic corporations)].

b. For foreign corporations:

(1) Agent for service of process must be designated in statement and designation that foreign corporations must file with Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 2105(a)(4), (5); see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, §§ 12B.201-12B.201B (forms)].

(2) Annual Statement of Information by Foreign Corporation filed with Secretary of State must also designate corporation's agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 2117(b); see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, § 12B.210 (form)].

4. Advise corporate client that if agent resigns or is unable to serve, it must appoint new agent [Corp. Code § 1504].

NOTE:

If the natural person designated as agent for service of process dies, resigns, or no longer resides in California, or if the corporate agent resigns, dissolves, withdraws from California, forfeits its right to transact intrastate business, has its corporate rights, powers, and privileges suspended, or ceases to exist, the corporation must file a designation of a new agent conforming to the statutory requirements [Corp. Code §§ 1504, 2107 (foreign corporations); see Corp. Code § 1502(b) (requirements)]. If the agent for service of process resigns, the Secretary of State must mail written notice of the filing of the statement of resignation to the corporation at its principal executive office [Corp. Code § 1503(a)]. The corporation must appoint another agent for service of process on receipt of the notice [Corp. Code §§ 1504, 2107].

5. Advise corporate client that if it wants to change either its agent for service of process, or address of that agent, it must file new Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [Corp. Code § 1502(e)], using Secretary of State form SI 200 C [see § 7.207[2]].

6. Advise corporate client that if corporation itself is agent for service of process, it must file certificate with Secretary of State, setting forth all of following [Corp. Code § 1505(a); see also Corp. Code § 2105(c) (foreign corporations)]:

a. Complete address of corporation's California office(s) where process may be served.

b. Names of employees at each office to whom the corporation authorizes delivery of process.

c. Corporation's consent that delivery to any designated employee at office where the person is employed constitutes delivery of process.

NOTE:

Because this certificate sets forth the corporation's address, its address is not required on the Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [see Corp. Code § 1502(b)] or on the annual statement filed by foreign corporation with the Secretary of State [see Corp. Code § 2117(b)]. Refer to Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, (domestic corporations) and to Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, for detailed discussion and a sample of the certification form.

§ 7.200 Shareholder's Request for Delinquent Annual Report

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a written request for a corporation's annual report. It is to be used if the corporation is delinquent in sending the report to shareholders. Except for corporations with fewer than 100 shareholders whose bylaws expressly waive this requirement, every domestic corporation and any foreign corporation subject to California record keeping requirements must send its shareholders an annual report [Corp. Code §§ 1501(a)(1), (g), 2115(b)]. This requirement may not be waived in a close corporation's shareholders' agreement [Corp. Code § 300(c)].

The annual report must be sent to shareholders no later than 120 days after the close of the fiscal year [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)]. The 120 days may be extended for good cause by a court [Corp. Code § 1501(e)]. Further, the report must be sent to shareholders at least 15 days before the annual shareholders' meeting if sent by first- class mail, or at least 35 days before the meeting if sent by third-class mail [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)].

For a form requesting a corporation's financial statements under Corporations Code Section 1501(c), see Section 7.201.

[b] Enforcement of Shareholders' Rights to Annual Report

The shareholders' right to financial statements may be enforced by suit in the superior court of the proper county [Corp. Code § 1501(e); see Corp. Code § 177 ("proper county" defined)]. If the court finds the corporation's failure to comply with the requirements of the General Corporation Law is without justification, the court may award reasonable expenses, including attorneys' fees, to the shareholder [Corp. Code § 1501(f)].

In addition, failure to prepare the information and financial statements required by the General Corporation Law may subject the corporation to monetary penalties [Corp. Code § 1501(e); see Corp. Code §§ 1501 (required information and statements), 2200 (penalties)]. For further discussion of penalties, see Sections 7.13[1] and 7.120[2].

Code § 1601(a)*; see § 7.20[1][c] (discussion of limitations)], any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate may inspect, copy, or make extracts from the corporation's accounting books and records and minutes of the proceedings of shareholders, board of directors, and board committees [Corp. Code § 1601]. Shareholder status, however, does entitle an individual to unfettered access to corporate confidences and secrets, such as documents protected by the attorney-client privilege [see, e.g., NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 107-108, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (Raiders football club, as plaintiff in shareholder's suit against National Football League, did not have right to inspect NFL merchandising corporation's documents protected by attorney-client privilege)].

Inspection, copying, and extracting may be made in person or by an agent or attorney [Corp. Code § 1601(b)], at any time during usual business hours [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. These rights of inspection may not be limited by the articles of incorporation or bylaws [Corp. Code § 1600(b)], and the corporation may not thwart the exercise of these rights by failing to respond to proper requests, by sending communications that make further requests futile, or by actions impeding the inspection process. However, the corporation is required only to allow inspection at corporate office. It is not required to mail or otherwise provide copies, and is not required to respond to demands for disclosure falling outside scope of what is required by statute [Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1263-1265, 18 Cal.

Rptr. 3d 187] .

On demand for inspection, any records not maintained in written form must be made available in writing, at the corporation's expense [Corp. Code § 1605].

[c] Corporations Subject to Requirement

A shareholder's statutory right to inspect accounting books, records, and minutes of the proceedings of shareholders, board of directors, and board committees extends to every domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation described in Corp. Code § 2115(a), and any other foreign corporation that keeps such records in California, or has its principal executive office in California [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. The right of inspection also extends to subsidiaries of the above-described corporations [Corp. Code § 1601(a); see Corp. Code § 189 ("subsidiary" defined)].

A shareholder's statutory right to inspect the shareholder record extends to any domestic corporation and any foreign corporation that has its principal executive office in California or that customarily holds meetings of its board of directors in California [Corp. Code § 1600(d)].

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.204

§ 7.204 Certain Shareholders' Demand to Inspect Record of Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a demand on the corporation to inspect the corporation's record of shareholders. It should be used only by a shareholder or group of shareholders meeting the requisite requirements [see [b], below] to make a demand to inspect or copy the record of shareholders. The demand must be made in writing at least five business days before the date the shareholder desires to inspect or copy the record of shareholders [see Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. Although this form is drafted for use by several shareholders who, in the aggregate, hold at least 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares of a corporation, it may be easily adapted for use by an individual shareholder.

[b] Absolute Right to Inspect

A shareholder or group of shareholders holding at least 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares, or at least 1 percent of the voting shares subject to certain federal regulations, has an absolute right to inspect and copy the record of shareholders, in person or by agent or attorney on five days' prior written demand [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. Corp. Code § 1600(a) refers to shareholders who have filed a Schedule 14A or, in the case of banks with deposits insured under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, a Form F-6 [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-11(c)]. In contrast, inspection by a shareholder who does not meet the requirements set forth above must be for a purpose reasonably related to the interests of the shareholder [see Corp. Code § 1600(c); see also §§ 7.20[3][a], 7.205].

The absolute right to inspect the record of shareholders may not be limited by a corporation's articles of incorporation or bylaws [Corp. Code § 1600(d)]. If a corporation delays in complying with a lawful demand for inspection, the shareholder may seek a court order postponing any shareholders' meeting previously noticed for a period equal to the period of the delay [see Corp. Code § 1600(b)].

The requirements regarding a demand on the corporation for inspecting the record of shareholders applies to any domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board of directors in this state [Corp. Code § 1600(d)].

§ 7.205 Shareholders' Demand on Transfer Agent for List of Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a demand on a corporation's transfer agent for the corporation's list of shareholders. It should be used only by a shareholder or group of shareholders meeting the requisite requirements [see [b], below] to make a written demand on the transfer agent for the names, addresses, and shareholdings of shareholders who are entitled to vote for the election of directors. Although this form is drafted for use by shareholders who, in the aggregate, hold at least 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares of a corporation, it may be easily adapted for use by an individual shareholder.

[b] Absolute Right to List

A shareholder or group of shareholders holding at least 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares, or at least 1 percent of the voting shares subject to certain federal regulations [see § 7.204[1][b]], has an absolute right to obtain from the corporation's transfer agent a list of the names and addresses of the shareholders who are entitled to vote for the election of directors, and their shareholdings as of the most recent record date for which it has been compiled or as of a date specified by the shareholder subsequent to the date of demand [Corp. Code § 1600(a)].

The shareholder must make a written demand on the transfer agent for the list and pay the required fee [see Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. The list must be made available on or before the later of five business days after the date the demand is received or the date specified in the demand as the date as of which the list is to be compiled [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. A corporation is responsible for causing its transfer agent to comply with this requirement [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. If the corporation or its transfer agent delays in complying with a lawful demand beyond the specified time limit, the shareholder may seek a court order postponing any shareholders' meeting previously noticed for a period equal to the period of the delay [*see Corp. [c] Corporations Subject to Requirement

PART IV. FORMS

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.206

§ 7.206 Director's Notice of Inspection of Corporate Records or Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a director's notice to inspect corporate records or property. Although no written demand is required of a director before inspecting corporate records, it may conserve the time of both the director and management if the director sends a written demand specifying the date and time of inspection and the records to be inspected. This assures that the records will be readily available to the director and this form is designed for that purpose. Because there is no statutory requirement of notice or written demand on the director's part, there is no designated person to whom the notice should be addressed. However, a corporate officer, often the corporate secretary, commonly is responsible for keeping and maintaining the minutes and other corporate records.

[b] Inspection Rights of Directors

Every director has the absolute right, at any reasonable time, to inspect and copy all books, records, and documents of every kind, and to inspect the physical properties of the corporation of which that person is a director, and also of its domestic and foreign subsidiaries [Corp. Code § 1602; but see NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 109-110, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (if director sues in capacity as shareholder rather than director, attorney-client and work product privileges are properly upheld by corporation)]. This inspection by a director may be made in person, by agent, or by attorney, and the right of inspection includes the right to made extracts [Corp. Code § 1602]. This right of inspection extends to the directors of any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board in this state [Corp. Code § 1602].

Although a court may impose just and proper conditions on a director's "absolute right" of inspection in an egregious case [see Havlicek v. Coast-To-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856, 46 Cal Rptr. 2d 696] , this principle should only be applied in extreme circumstances in which a preponderance of the evidence establishes a director's clear intent to use documents to commit a tort against the corporation [Saline v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 915-916, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

A corporate director does not have the right to access documents that are covered by the attorney-client privilege and were generated in defense of a suit for damages that the director filed against the corporation [Tritek Telecom, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1391-1392, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455] .

§ 7.207 Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation--Initial Statement or Change to Previously Filed Statement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is Secretary of State Form SI 200 C, Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation, also sometimes referred to as the Statement of Officers. This form should be used by a corporation that is filing an initial statement or changing information in a previously filed statement other than during the annual filing period [see Corp. Code § 1502(a), (e)]. The form is reproduced here, along with the text of the Secretary of State's official instructions. If the corporation is a publicly traded company, the corporation must also file a corporate disclosure statement [see Corp. Code § 1502.1; see also § 7.207B].

A corporation that is filing either a complete or "no change" annual statement [see Corp. Code § 1502(a), (c)] should use Secretary of State Form SI 200 N/C, which is reproduced in this publication in § 7.207A.

This form should not be used by nonprofit corporations. Nonprofit corporations should use Secretary of State Form SI 100. Separate filing requirements apply to foreign corporations. For discussion of those requirements, and appropriate forms, see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations .

PRACTICE TIP

ELECTRONIC FORMS NOTE: Electronic copies of this form that may be printed out and filled in for filing can be obtained at the official website of the California Secretary of State, Business Programs Division, which is located at http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/bpd_forms.htm#corp . You may also obtain a copy of this form via email by contacting Matthew Bender & Co. at (800) 424-0651, ext. 3405, or emailing us at cal.custquest@bender.com and requesting an electronic copy of CLF Form 7.207. Please be sure to include your email address along with your request and we will provide the form via return email. To view and print these forms, your computer system will need Adobe Acrobat Reader version 3.0 or higher.

[b] Initial and Annual Filings

A Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation is due within 90 days after the corporation's original articles of incorporation are filed [Corp. Code § 1502(a); see Gov. Code § 12183(g) (fee); see also Corp. Code § 1502(i) (fee)]. This form should be used to make the initial filing. Thereafter, a statement must be filed annually [Corp. Code § 1502(a), (d); see Gov. Code § 12183(g) (fee); see also Corp. Code § 1502(i) (fee)]. This form should not be used for subsequent annual filings, and Form SI 200 N/C [see § 7.207A] must be used instead. For additional discussion of the annual filing requirements, see § 7.207A[2].

[c] Optional Filings

Changes to the information contained in the last filed statement may be made at any time (other than during the annual filing period) by filing a new complete statement. This form should be used to make such a filing. Such a statement supersedes any previously filed statement [see Corp. Code § 1502(e)].

[d] Change of Agent or Agent's Address

To change its agent for service of process or the agent's address, the corporation must file a current complete statement. Unlike the optional nature of the filing process noted in [c], above, this filing is mandatory; the corporation should not wait for its usual annual filing to update this information. This form should be used to make such a filing. When an updated statement is filed, it supersedes any previously filed statement and the statement in the articles of incorporation as to the agent for service of process and the address of the agent [Corp. Code § 1502(e)].

[e] Contents of Form

The Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation must set forth the following [Corp. Code § 1502(a)]:

- The street address of the corporation's principal executive office.
- The corporation's mailing address, if different from the street address of its principal executive office.
- If the corporation's principal executive office is not in California, the street address of the corporation's principal business office in California, if any.
- The names and complete business or residential addresses of the corporation's chief executive officer, secretary, and chief financial officer.
- The names and complete business or residential addresses of the incumbent directors.
- The number of vacancies on the board of directors, if any.
- A statement of the general type of business that constitutes the corporation's principal business activity.

The statement must also designate an agent for service of process. The designation may be of a natural person residing in California or a corporation that has complied with the statutory requirements [Corp. Code § 1502(b); see Corp. Code § 1505 (requirements)]. If a natural person is designated, the statement must include the person's complete business or residential street address. If a corporate agent is designated, no address is required [Corp. Code § 1502(b)].

If the information in the statement last filed with the Secretary of State has not changed, the corporation may merely check the box indicating that no changes have occurred during the applicable filing period, instead of completing the entire statement [Corp. Code § 1502(c)].

For further discussion of agent for service of process, see §§ 7.50-7.53.

A corporation may, but is not required to, file an updated Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation, between filings, if there are other changes to the information provided on the statement [Corp. Code § 1502(e); see [c], above].

[f] Statement Subject to Public Inspection

Statements of Information by Domestic Stock Corporations will be held available and open to the public for inspection. The Secretary of State is required by statute to provide access to all information contained in this statement by means of an online database [Corp. Code § 1502(h)].

§ 7.207A Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation--Complete or No-Change Annual Statement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is Secretary of State Form SI 200 N/C, Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation, also sometimes referred to as the Statement of Officers. This form should be used by a corporation when filing either a complete or "no change" annual statement [see Corp. Code. § 1502(a), (c)]. The form is reproduced here, along with the text of the Secretary of State's official instructions.

A corporation that is filing an initial statement or changing information in a previously filed statement, other than during the annual filing period, should use Secretary of State Form SI 200 C, which is reproduced in this publication in § 7.207.

This form should not be used by nonprofit corporations. Nonprofit corporations should use Secretary of State Form SI 100 [see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations, § 13.248]. Separate filing requirements apply to foreign corporations. For discussion of those requirements, and appropriate forms, see Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations .

For additional discussion of the contents and requirements governing the Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporations, see § 7.207.

ELECTRONIC FORMS NOTE:

Electronic copies of this form that may be printed out and filled in for filing can be obtained at the official website of the California Secretary of State, Business Programs Division, which is located at http://www.sos.ca.gov/business/bpd_forms.htm#corp . You may also obtain a copy of this form via email by contacting Matthew Bender & Co. at (800) 424-0651, ext. 405, or emailing us at cal.custquest@bender.com and requesting an electronic copy of CLF Form 7.207A. Please be sure to include your email address along with your request and we will provide the form via return email. To view and print these forms, your computer system will need Adobe Acrobat Reader version 3.0 or higher.

[b] Annual Filing Procedure

The time period and procedure for filing the initial Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation is discussed in § 7.207. After the initial filing, a statement must be filed annually thereafter [Corp. Code § 1502(a); see Gov. Code § 12183(g) (fee); see also Corp. Code § 1502(i) (fee)]. The statement must be filed in the calendar month during which the original articles were filed or during the five months immediately preceding the filing month [Corp. Code § 1502(d)].

Approximately three months before the annual Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation is due, the Secretary of State will mail a notice reminding a corporation of it's obligation to comply with the annual filing requirement, and of the due date for filing. The notice must be mailed to the corporation's most recent address according to the Secretary's records. Failure to receive the notice is no excuse for failing to file the Statement on time [Corp. Code § 1502(d)]. For discussion of failure to file the Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation, see §§ 7.41 and 7.208 (Application for Certificate of Revivor).

[c] "No Change" Filings

If there has been no change in the information in the last filed statement, the corporation, in lieu of filing a new annual statement, may advise the Secretary of State, on a form prescribed by the Secretary, that no changes in the required information have occurred during the applicable filing period [Corp. Code § 1502(c)]. To implement this requirement, this form includes a box that may be checked to indicate that there have been no changes. When this is the case, the remainder of the form, with the exception of the declaration at the end, need not be completed.

[d] Change in Agent for Service of Process

To change its agent for service of process or the address of its current agent, a corporation must file an updated statement [Corp. Code § 1502(e)]. Secretary of State Form SI 200 C, reproduced in § 7.207, instead of this form, should be used for that purpose. For additional discussion, see the comment to § 7.207.

[b] Contents of Form

The Corporate Disclosure Statement must set forth the following information [Corp. Code § 1502.1(a)]:

- The name of the independent auditor that prepared the most recent auditor's report on the corporation's annual financial statements.

- A description of other services, if any, performed for the corporation during its two most recent fiscal years and the period between the end of its most recent fiscal year and the date of the statement by the independent auditor, by its parent corporation, or by a subsidiary or corporate affiliate of the independent auditor or its parent corporation.

- The name of the independent auditor employed by the corporation on the date of the statement, if different from the independent auditor referred to above.

- The compensation for the most recent fiscal year paid to each member of the board of directors and to each of the five most highly compensated executive officers of the corporation who are not members of the board, including the number of any shares issued, options for shares granted, and similar equity-based compensation granted to each of those persons (and if the chief executive officer is not among the five most highly compensated executive officers of the corporation, the compensation paid to the chief executive officer must be included anyway).

- A description of any loan, including the amount and terms of the loan, made to any member of the board by the corporation during the corporation's two most recent fiscal years at an interest rate lower than the interest rate available from unaffiliated commercial lenders generally to a similarly situated borrower.

- A statement indicating whether an order for relief has been entered in a bankruptcy case with respect to the corporation, its executive officers, or members of the board of directors during the 10 years preceding the date of the statement.

- A statement indicating whether any member of the board of directors or executive officer was convicted of fraud during the 10 years preceding the date of the statement, if the conviction has not been overturned or expunged.

- A description of any material pending legal proceedings, other than ordinary routine litigation incidental to the business, to which the corporation or any of its subsidiaries is a party or of which any of their property is the subject, as specified by Item 103 of SEC Regulation S-K [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.103].

- A description of any material legal proceeding during which the corporation was found legally liable by entry of a final judgment or final order that was not overturned on appeal during the five years preceding the date of the statement.

Form SI-PTA, an optional attachment to the corporate disclosure statement, is for use when additional directors, loans to members of the board, and any other supplemental information must be stated that exceeds the space allowed by Form SI-PT (or Form SI-PTA itself).

CAUTION:

This statement will be available and open to the public for inspection. The Secretary of State must provide access to all information contained in this statement by means of an online database no later than December 31, 2004 [Corp. Code § 1502.1(e)].

[c] Filing and Execution

A publicly traded domestic stock corporation must file this form within 150 days after the end of its fiscal year, and annually thereafter [Corp. Code § 1502.1(a)]. There is no fee to file this form [Gov. Code § 12186(j)].

The corporation must certify that the information it provides in this statement is true and correct. No claim may be made against the state for inaccurate information contained in this statement [Corp. Code § 1502.1(d)].

PART IV. FORMS

4-7 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 7.208

§ 7.208 Application for Certificate of Revivor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the Application for Certificate of Revivor for use by a domestic corporation that has had its powers suspended and seeks revivor from that suspension. Although the same form is used by a foreign corporation seeking revivor from forfeiture, the attorney should refer to Ch. 12B, Foreign Corporations, for detailed discussion of forfeiture and application for revivor in the foreign corporation context [see § 12B.261]. Suspension of a domestic corporation can be due to failure to file its Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation for two successive years, if the corporation was certified for penalty by the Secretary of State for the preceding filing period [Corp. Code § 2205(a); see [b], below], or to failure to pay taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301; see [c], below], or to a combination of these transgressions [Corp. Code §§ 2204, 2205; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 19141, 23301, 23301.5, 23305-23305b, 23775; see [d], below].

The form illustrated here is the official Franchise Tax Board form (FTB Form 3557-BC). The FTB will accept applications only on the official form. Telephone numbers are provided on the form for obtaining further information on using the Application for Certificate of Revivor. This form can be obtained at any FTB office, the FTB website [see below], or by contacting the FTB at (800) 852-5711.

ELECTRONIC FORMS NOTE:

Electronic copies of this form that may be printed out and filled in for filing can be obtained at the official website of the California Franchise Tax Board, which is locate at http://www.ftb.ca.gov. You may also obtain a copy of this form via email by contacting Matthew Bender & Co. at (800) 424-0651, ext. 405, or emailing us at cal.custquest@bender.com and requesting an electronic copy of CLF Form 7.208. Please be sure to include your email address along with your request and we will provide the form via return email. To view and print these forms, your computer system will need Adobe Acrobat Reader version 3.0 or higher.

Application on behalf of a corporation that has been suspended may be made by any stockholder, creditor, majority of surviving trustees or directors, officer, or any person having an interest in relief from suspension [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305].

A different form, FTB Form 3557-LLC, is used by domestic and foreign limited liability companies. For further discussion of the procedures for seeking a certificate of revivor by these entities, see Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies .

[b] Suspension by Secretary of State for Failure to File Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation; Revivor

If a corporation fails to file its Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [see Corp. Code § 1502] for an applicable filing period, has not filed the statement during the preceding 24 months, and was certified for a penalty [see Corp. Code § 2204] for the same filing period, the Secretary of State may suspend the corporation's powers, rights, and privileges [Corp. Code § 2205(a)]. The Secretary must notify the corporation, by mail, that it will be suspended after 60 days if the statement is not filed [Corp. Code § 2205(b)]. If a corporation is suspended, the Secretary must notify the Franchise Tax Board and mail a notice of suspension to the corporation [Corp. Code § 2205(c)]. On suspension, the corporation may take no action other than to file the statement or to amend its articles of incorporation to change its name [Corp. Code § 2205(c), (d); see Palm Valley Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 560-561, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing sanctions on law firm for continuing litigation activities on behalf of corporation that it knew to be suspended under Corp. Code § 2205 for failure to file information statement required by Corp. Code § 1502)]. In addition, a suspended corporation may file an application for exempt status and amend its articles of incorporation as necessary to perfect that application [Corp. Code § 1502(c); see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations].

The filing of its Statement of Information by Domestic Stock Corporation [see Corp. Code § 2205(d)], the payment of any assessed penalty [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305, 25936], and a request in writing to the Franchise Tax Board by any stockholder, creditor, majority of surviving trustees or directors, officer, or any person having an interest in relief from suspension [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305] will revive a corporation, provided the corporation meets the statutory requirements relating to available corporate names [Corp. Code § 2205(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a; see also Corp. Code §§ 201 (names available to domestic corporations), 2106 (names available to foreign corporations)]. The name of a suspended corporation may be reserved and adopted by another corporation during the period of suspension. In that situation, the suspended corporation's application for a certificate of revivor may be denied [see Boyer v. Jones (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 220, 221-222, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824 (trial court properly denied suspended corporation's petition for writ of mandate seeking restoration of its name)]. The Secretary must certify the fact of the filing to the Franchise Tax Board, and the Franchise Tax Board will restore the corporation's powers by issuing a certificate of revivor unless the corporation is held in suspension by the Franchise Tax Board under Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 [Corp. Code § 2205(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a; see also [c], below].

[c] Suspension by Franchise Tax Board for Failure to Pay Taxes or File Tax Return; Revivor

If the corporation was suspended for nonpayment of franchise taxes or failure to file tax returns, its powers will not be revived, notwithstanding the filing of the required annual statement [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23775; see Corp. Code § 1502; see also Timberline v. Jaisinghani (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1368-1369, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 (suspended corporation that failed to revive powers by paying delinquent taxes cannot renew judgment obtained while in good standing)]. Under these circumstances, the corporation's powers may be revived by writing to the Franchise Tax Board for a certificate of revivor, filing all tax returns required under the Bank and Corporation Tax Law, and paying all taxes, additions to taxes, deficiencies, interest, and penalties due [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305, 23305a; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305b (revivor without payment of full amount due)].

[d] Suspension by Secretary of State and Franchise Tax Board; Revivor

The procedure for reviving a corporation that has been suspended by both the Secretary of State and the Franchise Tax Board is a combination of the two procedures as addressed in [b] and [c], above. When all the requirements of both agencies have been met, the corporation may apply, directly to the Franchise Tax Board, for a revivor from both the Secretary of State and Franchise Tax Board suspensions [see Corp. Code §§ 2204, 2205; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 19141, 23301, 23301.5, 23305-23305b, 23775].

This chapter discusses the statutory requirements and the procedures for holding shareholders' meetings, including setting the place, date, and time; giving notice; waivers of notice; record date; and quorum requirements. This chapter also covers actions by written consent without a meeting. It discusses statutory shareholder voting rights; the exercise of voting rights through proxies or through voting agreements or voting trusts; and methods of voting shares, including noncumulative and cumulative voting, as well as the special statutory rules governing voting by particular types of shareholders (fiduciaries, attorneys-in-fact, representatives, receivers, pledgees, minors, shares held by corporations, and jointly held shares). The chapter discusses voting record disclosure requirements and judicial enforcement of voting rights.

Forms include notices of annual, special, and adjourned meetings; calls of special meetings; written waivers of notice; consents to hold, and approvals of meeting minutes; ballots for noncumulative and cumulative voting for directors; a request for and report of shareholder vote results; and proxies (both revocable and irrevocable) for various purposes.

Voting agreements and voting trusts are discussed in Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts . Close corporation shareholder agreements are covered in Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements . Directors' meetings and voting are discussed in Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions .

§ 8A.10 Shareholders' Meeting and Voting Rights--In General

Shareholders have the right to meet in order to act on certain corporate matters. Action by the shareholders may be taken at annual [see § 8A.20[1]] or special [see § 8A.20[2]] meetings of shareholders or by the written consent of shareholders without a meeting [see § 8A.28]. The matters on which a shareholder's vote is required are enumerated in § 8A.11. The exact nature of the vote required depends on statutory requirements and any special voting provisions in the articles [see § 8A.11[2]].

§ 8A.11 Shareholders' Voting Rights

[1] Statutory Rights

Action on fundamental and extraordinary corporate matters usually requires the approval of the shareholders. Fundamental matters generally include acts such as the election of directors or their removal without cause; extraordinary matters generally include acts such as mergers and reorganizations, sale of assets, amending the articles of incorporation or the bylaws, approving loans to officers, directors, or shareholders, or dissolving the corporation. In addition to requiring a shareholder vote to accomplish certain corporate actions, a shareholders' vote is permitted, in certain cases, to accomplish a specific transaction.

The following actions require a shareholders' vote, with certain exceptions specified by statute:

- Amending the articles of incorporation to establish [Corp. Code § 158(b)] or eliminate [Corp. Code § 158(c)] close corporation status.

- Electing directors [Corp. Code § 301(a)] or removing directors without cause [Corp. Code § 303].

- Changing the number of directors on a fixed board, or the maximum or minimum number on a variable board, or from a fixed to a variable board (or vice versa) [Corp. Code § 212(a)].

- Approving loans, or guaranteeing the obligations of officers, directors, or shareholders of the corporation or of its parent; or approving employee benefit plans authorizing loans or guarantees to officers or directors [Corp. Code § 315(a)-(c); see Corp. Code § 315(b), (f) (exceptions)].

- Amending the articles of incorporation after shares have been issued [Corp. Code § 902(a)], with certain exceptions permitting approval by the board alone [Corp. Code § 902(b)-(d)].

- Amending the articles of incorporation by class vote if the proposed amendment will affect the class in specified ways, regardless of voting restrictions [Corp. Code § 903].

- Amending the articles of incorporation to make shares assessable or to authorize remedy by action for the collection of an assessment on fully paid shares [Corp. Code § 904].

- Selling or transferring all, or substantially all, of the corporation's assets, unless the transaction is in the usual and regular course of the corporation's business [Corp. Code § 1001(a)].

- Reorganizing the corporation, resulting in any of the following (note that only the principal terms of the reorganization need to be approved [Corp. Code § 1201]):

    - The dilution of more than one sixth of the voting power of the shareholders of the corporation that is a party to the reorganization [see Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b)].

    - Any amendment to the articles of the surviving corporation of a merger reorganization, if approval of the shareholders is otherwise required (to be approved by the outstanding shares of the surviving corporation [Corp. Code § 1201(c)].

    - Any change in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of a class of outstanding shares of a constituent corporation. In this situation, the principal terms of the reorganization must be approved by the outstanding shares of this class [Corp. Code § 1201(d)].

    - The shareholders of a close corporation receiving shares of a corporation that is not a close corporation. In this situation, the principal terms of the reorganization must be approved by the affirmative vote of at least two thirds of each class of the outstanding shares of any close corporation so affected [Corp. Code § 1201(e)].

    - The shareholders of any class will receive interests of a surviving other business entity pursuant to a merger. In this situation, the principal terms of the reorganization must be approved by the outstanding shares of any class or series that would receive such interests [Corp. Code § 1201(f)].

    - The shareholders of a class or series become personally liable, as a result of the reorganization, for any obligations of a party to the reorganization. In this situation, the principal terms of the reorganization must approved by all the holders of this class or series, unless all holders of that class have dissenters' rights [Corp. Code § 1201(f); see Corp. Code § 1300 et seq.].

- Requiring the corporation to purchase dissenting shares in certain reorganizations, in compliance with the provisions governing compensation of dissenting shareholders [Corp. Code § 1300].

- Voluntarily dissolving the corporation, with specified exceptions [Corp. Code § 1900(a); see Corp. Code § 1900(b) (exceptions)].

- Distributing corporate assets, other than money, in a manner that does not accord with the liquidation rights of preferred shares as specified in the articles, if the corporation is in the process of winding up [Corp. Code § 2007(a)].

The shareholders' voting rights may be exercised, in some cases, by "approval of the outstanding shares," that is, by a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 152]. In other cases these rights may be exercised by the "approval of the shareholders"; that is, the affirmative vote of a majority of the shares represented and voting at a meeting at which a quorum is present [Corp. Code § 153]. In still other cases, these rights may be exercised by specified percentages of outstanding shares or classes or series or by individual shareholders [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 162 (Matthew Bender)].

[2] Provisions in Articles

The corporation's articles may create additional voting rights or impose additional voting requirements [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(5), (9); see also Corp. Code § 300(c) (close corporation shareholder agreements)]. The articles may require a shareholder vote on any matter, even though such a vote is not otherwise required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 204(a)(9)]. The articles may also require a larger portion of shares of any or all classes or series than is otherwise required by a particular statute [Corp. Code § 204(a)(5)], or provide for supermajority votes (that is, approval by a larger portion of outstanding shares than a majority, subject to specified limitations) by the corporation's directors or shareholders on various matters [see Corp. Code § 710; Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 61.03[2] (Matthew Bender)].

The corporation may also control shareholder voting rights by issuing one or more classes or series of shares, or both, with full, limited, or no voting rights [Corp. Code § 400].

For further discussion of supermajority voting, additional voting requirements, and voting and non-voting shares, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , §§ 62.03[3][a], [b], 62.04[3] (Matthew Bender). § 8A.12 Applicability to Close Corporations

All of the provisions of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 1-2319] may be waived or altered in a shareholder agreement, as between the parties to that agreement, except for the required filing of any document with the Secretary of State, or for specified chapters and sections of the law [see Corp. Code § 300(c)]. The enumerated chapters and sections do not include those that generally govern shareholders' meetings [see Corp. Code § 600 et seq.] and voting of shares [see Corp. Code § 700 et seq.]. As a result, the provisions governing shareholders' meetings and voting may be waived, for the most part, by close corporations. For further discussion of the waiver of these provisions in close corporation shareholder agreements, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

B. Shareholders' Meetings and Actions by Written Consent Without Meetings

4-8A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8A.20

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger Practice Consultant

§ 8A.20 Types of Meetings

[1] Annual Meetings

[a] Purpose

Except when directors are elected by unanimous written consent (or by the written consent of a majority of the outstanding shares if the election is to fill a vacancy not created by removal) [see Corp. Code § 603(a), (d)]; see also § 8A.28[1], an annual meeting of shareholders must be held for the election of directors on a date and at a time stated in or fixed in accordance with the bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(b); see Corp. Code § 301 (election of directors); cf. Corp. Code § 600(b) (special rules for regulated management companies)]. In addition to the election of directors at the annual meeting, the shareholders may take action on any other proper matter [Corp. Code § 600(b); see § 8A.11]. However, no action may be taken (other than by the unanimous approval of the shares entitled to vote) on the following matters, unless prior written notice of the general nature of these proposals has been given to the shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(f)]:

- Approval or ratification of a contract or other transaction between a corporation and one or more of its directors, or between a corporation and another corporation, firm, or association in which one or more of the directors has a material financial interest [see Corp. Code § 310].

- Amendments to the articles of incorporation requiring the approval of the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] in accordance with Corp. Code § 902.

- Approval of a corporate conversion [Corp. Code § 1152].

- Approval of the principal terms of reorganization by the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] in accordance with Corp. Code § 1201.

- Approval of the voluntary dissolution of the corporation in accordance with Corp. Code § 1900.

- Approval of a plan to distribute corporate assets, other than money, which is not in accordance with the liquidation rights of preferred shares as specified in the articles [Corp. Code § 2007(a)].

For the above-listed actions to be valid when taken at a meeting for which waiver of written notice is obtained, the waiver must specifically note that such matters were considered [Corp. Code § 601(f)].

Notice requirements are further discussed in § 8A.23. For a form for minutes of a shareholders annual meeting, see § 8A.260.

PRACTICE TIP:

Typically, a corporation holds its annual meeting three to four months after the end of each fiscal year so that the financial statements for the past year are available. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

[b] Remedy for Failure to Hold Annual Meeting

Neither the bylaws nor the articles of incorporation may eliminate the requirement of an annual meeting [see Corp. Code § 600]. The annual meeting is usually held within 120 days after the close of the corporation's fiscal year, at a time and place set by the board of directors [see §§ 8A.21, 8A.22]. If it is not held within 60 days after the designated date for the meeting, or if no date has been designated within 15 months after the organization of the corporation or after the last annual meeting, any shareholder may apply to the superior court of the proper county for a court order compelling the meeting [Corp. Code § 600(c); see Corp. Code § 177 (proper county defined)]. The statutory requirement that an annual report be sent to the shareholders at least 15 (or, if sent by third-class mail, 35) days before the annual meeting does not limit the requirement of holding the meeting [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(2)].

After notice to the corporation giving it an opportunity to be heard, the court may order an annual meeting to be held and may issue any appropriate orders including, but not limited to, those designating the time and place of the meeting, the record date for determination of shareholders entitled to vote, and the form of notice [Corp. Code § 600(c)]. The court's orders, however, are limited to the procedures for holding shareholders' meetings and may not trespass on substantive matters confided to the directors and shareholders [see Johnson v. Tago, Inc. (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 507, 515-516, 233 Cal. Rptr. 503 (court does not have authority to order corporation to pay proxy expenses and attorneys' fees of shareholders engaged in proxy fight and demanding that board call annual meeting)]. The shares represented and entitled to vote, either in person or by proxy, at a court-ordered annual meeting constitute a quorum, notwithstanding any provision of the articles of incorporation, bylaws, or General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 600(c)].

[2] Special Meetings

[a] Purpose

Special meetings of the shareholders may be called at any time, for any reason, by the board of directors, the chair of the board [see § 8A.204], the president [see § 8A.204], shareholders representing at least 10 percent of the shares entitled to vote at the meeting [see § 8A.203], or by other persons as provided in the articles or bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(d)]. A special meeting may also be called by the shareholders (or shareholder) of at least five percent of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for directors if, after the filling of any vacancy by the directors, the directors in office who have been elected by the shareholders constitute less than a majority of the directors in office [Corp. Code § 305(c)(1); see § 8A.203]. Shareholders (or a single shareholder) holding at least five percent of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for directors may also apply to the superior court of the proper county, which will then summarily order a special meeting of shareholders to elect the entire board [Corp. Code § 305(c)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Some corporations include provisions in their bylaws authorizing persons other than those named in the statute, such as the secretary or the chief financial officer, to call special meetings. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

Written notice of a special meeting must designate the general nature of the business to be transacted, and no other business may be transacted at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)(1)]. However, subject to the limitations of Corp. Code § 601(f) [see § 8A.20[1][a]], and unless otherwise provided in the articles or bylaws, a written waiver of notice or consent to the holding of the meeting does not need to specify either the business to be transacted or the purpose of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. Notice requirements are further discussed in § 8A.23.

[b] Remedy for Failure to Call Special Meeting

If the notice of the meeting is not given within 20 days after receipt of the request to the chair of the board, president, vice president, or secretary [see § 8A.22[2]], the person or persons entitled to call the meeting may give the notice, or in the alternative, apply to the superior court of the proper county for an order requiring that the notice be given [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The court may issue any appropriate orders, including, but not limited to, orders designating the time and place of the meeting, the record date for determination of shareholders entitled to vote, and the form for notice of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. Notice requirements are discussed further in § 8A.23.

[3] Adjourned Meetings

At any adjourned meeting, the corporation may transact any business that might have been transacted at the original meeting, either annual or special, if the time and place of the adjourned meeting were announced at the original meeting [Corp. Code § 601(d)]. Special notice requirements for adjourned meetings are discussed in § 8A.23[6].

Shareholders' meetings may be held at any place inside or outside of California as stated in or fixed in accordance with the bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(a)]. § 8A.22 Date and Time of Meetings

[1] Annual Meeting

The annual meeting must be held on a date and at a time stated in or fixed in accordance with the bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(b); see also 15 U.S.C. § 80a-16 (date and time of annual meeting of regulated management company must be in accordance with Federal Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq.), not in accordance with corporation's bylaws). For discussion of the importance of setting the time of meetings, see § 8A.23[4]]. Thus, the bylaws may specify a fixed date (for example, April 21) or a specific day of the month (for example, the third Tuesday in April), or simply may authorize the board to fix the date each year, sometimes specifying the time frame during which the date must be set. For example, the bylaws may permit the directors to fix the date during the months of April through June of each year.

[2] Special Meeting

The notice calling a special meeting must specify the date and time of the meeting [see Corp. Code § 601(a), (c)]. For discussion of the importance of setting the meeting time, see § 8A.23[4]. On written request to the corporation addressed to the attention of the chair of the board, president, vice president, or secretary, by any person (other than the board) entitled to call a special meeting of shareholders, the officer must give notice [see § 8A.205] to the shareholders entitled to vote that a meeting will be held at a time requested by the person or persons calling the meeting, as long as the requested date is at least 35 but not more than 60 days after receipt of the request [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

§ 8A.23 Notice of Meeting

[1] When Given

Whenever shareholders are required or permitted to take any action at a meeting, a written notice of the meeting must be given at least 10 but not more than 60 days before the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. A corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 500 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)] is permitted to send notice of a meeting by third class mail, in which case the minimum time for the notice is 30 days before the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a), (b)].

If a special meeting is requested by any person (other than the board) entitled to call a special meeting of shareholders, the notice must be given no later than 20 days after the request [Corp. Code § 601(c); see § 8A.22[2]]. The meeting must be held not less than 35 nor more than 60 days after the receipt of the request for a special meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

[2] How Given

Notice of meetings must be given personally, or by electronic transmission by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20], or by first-class mail (postage pre-paid [see Corp. Code § 113]), except when shares are held of record by 500 or more persons, in which case third-class mail or some other means of written communication is permitted [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. Notice must be addressed to the shareholder at the address appearing for the shareholder on the corporation's books, or at another address given to the corporation for notice purposes. If no such address is given, notice must be given at the principal executive office or by publication at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the office is located [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

Notice given by electronic transmission by the corporation is not valid unless it complies with the requirements of Corp. Code § 20 [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. "Electronic transmission by the corporation" means a communication (1) delivered by facsimile telecommunication or electronic mail when directed to the recipient's facsimile number or electronic mail address on record with the corporation, or (2) posted on an electronic message board or network designated by the corporation for those communications, together with a separate notice of the posting sent to the recipient, or (3) delivered by other electronic means to a recipient who has provided an unrevoked consent to the use of that means of communication transmission. The electronic transmission must create a record that can be retained, retrieved, and reviewed, and can be rendered into clearly legible tangible form. In the case of an electronic posting, the posting will be validly delivered on the later date of the posting or the delivery of the separate notice [Corp. Code § 20].

PRACTICE TIP:

Notice may not be given by electronic transmission by the corporation after the corporation has been unable to deliver two consecutive notices to the shareholder by that means or if the inability to deliver notices by electronic transmission becomes known to the secretary, any assistant secretary, the transfer agent, or any other person responsible for giving notice [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. Further, an electronic transmission by the corporation to an individual shareholder is not authorized unless the transmission additionally satisfies the requirements applicable to consumer consent to electronic records under the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act [Corp. Code § 20; see 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)].

Notice is considered to have been given when delivered personally, or sent by electronic transmission by the corporation, or deposited in the mail, or sent by other means of written communication [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. An affidavit of mailing of any notice, or of electronic transmission by the corporation of any notice, executed by the corporate secretary, assistant corporate secretary, or any transfer agent, is prima facie evidence of the giving of notice [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

If notice, properly addressed to the shareholder, [see Corp. Code § 601(b)] is returned to the corporation and marked as undeliverable by the United States Postal Service, all future notices will be considered to have been given without further mailing if the notices are available to the shareholder, on the shareholder's written demand, at the corporation's principal executive office for one year from the date the notice was given to all other shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

[3] To Whom Given

Notice of any meeting, annual or special, must be given to each shareholder entitled to vote at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. The identity and shareholdings of these shareholders are determined from the corporate records as of a predetermined date, known as the "record" date. The procedure for fixing the record date is discussed in § 8A.25.

[4] Contents

The notice must state the place, date, and hour of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. In San Buenaventura Mfg. Co. v. Vassault [San Buenaventura Mfg. Co. v. Vassault (1875) 50 Cal. 534] , the court held that a statement in the bylaws (under a statute permitting constructive notice) of the day only (the third Monday in April) was insufficient notice, since it did not state the time of day [San Buenaventura Mfg. Co. v. Vassault (1875) 50 Cal. 534, 537-538 (holding reaffirmed in Spencer v. Older (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 95, 102, 183 Cal. Rptr. 722 , discussed in [6], below)]. Similarly, in Grant v. Hartman Ranch Co. [Grant v. Hartman Ranch Co. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 497, 14 Cal. Rptr. 531] , the court held that notice of a shareholder meeting that failed to specify the hour of the meeting was defective, and, therefore, the meeting was invalid [Grant v. Hartman Ranch Co. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 497, 501, 14 Cal. Rptr. 531 (although decided under former Corp. Code § 2207, the holding was reaffirmed in Spencer v. Older (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 95, 102, 183 Cal. Rptr. 722 , discussed in [6], below)].

The notice must also state the means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication, if any, by which shareholders may participate in the meeting [Corp. Code §

601(a)]. For further discussion, see § 8A.29.

If the meeting is a special meeting, the notice [see § 8A.205] must also state the general nature of the business to be transacted; and no business other than that specified in the notice may be transacted at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)].

If the meeting is an annual meeting, the notice [see § 8A.202] must state, in addition to the place, date, and hour of the meeting, the matters which the board intends, at the time of the notice, to present for shareholder action [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. However, any other proper matter may be presented at the meeting when shareholder discussion is required or appropriate [see Corp. Code § 601(a)]. No shareholder approval at an annual meeting, however, other than the unanimous approval by those entitled to vote, is valid unless the general nature of the proposal was stated in the notice (or any written waiver of notice of the meeting) if the action to be taken involves one of the following [Corp. Code § 601(f); see § 8A.20[1][a]]:

- Transactions in which a director has a financial interest [Corp. Code § 310].
- Amendments to the articles of incorporation after shares have been issued [Corp. Code § 902].
- Approval of a corporate conversion [Corp. Code § 1152].
- Approval of the principal terms of reorganization [Corp. Code § 1201].
- Dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1900].
- Approval of a plan of distribution of corporate assets upon dissolution not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares [Corp. Code § 2007].

The notice of any meeting, annual or special, at which directors are to be elected must also include the names of nominees that the board, at the time of the notice, intends to present for election [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. Shareholders, however, are not so restricted and may nominate directors at a meeting [see Corp. Code § 601(a)].

[5] Procedure When Notice of Special Meeting Is Requested but Not Given

If notice of a special meeting is not given by the officer requested to do so within 20 days after receipt of the request, the persons entitled to call the meeting may, themselves, give notice [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. In the alternative, they may apply to the superior court of the proper county, which must "summarily" order that notice be given, after the corporation has had the opportunity to be heard [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. For further discussion, see § 8A.20[2][b].

[6] Special Requirements for Adjourned Meetings

When a shareholders' meeting is adjourned to another time or place, notice of the adjourned meeting generally does not need to be given if the time and place of that meeting (or the means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication, if any, by which shareholders may participate in that meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]) are announced at the original meeting, unless the bylaws require otherwise [see Corp. Code § 601(d)]. In order to avoid the need to give additional notice of an adjourned meeting, however, both a specific time and place for the adjourned meeting must be announced; an announcement that the adjourned meeting will take place in conjunction with a future event is not sufficiently specific. The shareholder attending the original meeting, or the absent shareholder who needs the meeting minutes, must be able to determine the time and place of the adjourned meeting from the announcement alone [Spencer v. Older (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 95, 101-102, 183 Cal. Rptr. 722] .

Notice to each shareholder of record entitled to vote at the meeting [see § 8A.206], however, is required if the adjournment is longer than 45 days or if, after the adjournment, a new record date is fixed for the adjourned meeting [Corp. Code § 601(d)].

[7] Informally Noticed Meetings

In practice, small closely held corporations often dispense with formal written notice to the shareholders entitled to vote at the meeting and call meetings by informal notice, using a waiver of notice and consent to holding the meeting or a written approval of the minutes of the meeting [see § 8A.220], signed by any shareholders not present and filed with the corporate records [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. Waivers of notice and approvals to actions taken at a meeting are further discussed in § 8A.24. Shareholder action may also be taken by written consent without a meeting [Corp. Code § 603; see §§ 8A.28, 8A.222, 8A.223].

§ 8A.24 Waiver of Notice and Consent to Hold Meeting; Approval of Actions Taken at Meeting

The actions taken at a shareholder meeting held without formal notice are valid provided the following conditions are met [Corp. Code § 601(e)]:

- A quorum must be present either in person or by proxy; and

- Either before or after the meeting, each of the persons entitled to vote, but not present in person or by proxy, provides a written waiver of notice, consent to the holding of the meeting, or an approval of the minutes [see § 8A.220 (form)] of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. These waivers, consents, and approvals must be filed with the corporate records or incorporated in the meeting minutes [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

A shareholder's attendance at a meeting constitutes a waiver of notice, except when the shareholder objects at the beginning of the meeting to the transaction of any business because the meeting is not lawfully called [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. Attendance at a meeting, however, is not a waiver of any right to object to the consideration of matters required to be included in the notice, but not included, provided an objection is expressly made at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

Unless otherwise required by the corporation's articles of incorporation or bylaws, neither the business to be transacted nor the purpose of any regular or special meeting must be stated in any written waiver of notice, consent to hold the meeting, or approval of the minutes [Corp. Code § 601(e)], unless the action to be taken involves one of the following [Corp. Code § 601(f); see § 8A.20[1][a]]:

- Transactions in which a director has a financial interest [Corp. Code § 310].

- Amendments to the articles of incorporation after shares have been issued [Corp. Code § 902].

- Approval of a corporate conversion [Corp. Code § 1152].
- Approval of the principal terms of reorganization [Corp. Code § 1201].
- Dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1900].
- Approval of a plan of distribution of corporate assets upon dissolution not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares [Corp. Code § 2007].

In the circumstances listed above, any shareholder approval at a meeting other than by the unanimous approval of all shares entitled to vote is valid only if the general nature of the transaction approved was stated in the meeting's notice or in any written waiver of notice [Corp. Code § 601(f); see § 8A.20[1][a]].

§ 8A.25 Record Date

A corporation determines the shareholders who are entitled to notice of any meeting, to vote, and to exercise any other lawful rights as of a specified date, known as the record date. The record date may be

- Fixed in advance by the board of directors [Corp. Code § 701(a)], or
- Prescribed by statute [Corp. Code § 701(b)].

A record date fixed by the board must not be more than 60 nor less than 10 days before the date of any meeting nor more than 60 days before any other action [Corp. Code § 701(a)].

If no record date is fixed by the board of directors, the record date for determining shareholders entitled to notice of or to vote at a meeting of shareholders is at the close of business on the business day next preceding the day notice is given [see Corp. Code § 118 ("time a notice is given" defined) or, if notice is waived [see § 8A.24], at the close of business on the business day next preceding the day the meeting is held [Corp. Code § 701(b)(1)]. The record date for determining shareholders entitled to give consent to corporate action in writing without a meeting, if no prior action by the board has been taken, is the day on which the first written consent is given, if no other record date has been fixed by the board of directors [Corp. Code § 701(b)(2)]. The record date for determining shareholders for any other purpose (for example, to receive dividends or other distributions) is the close of business day on the day the board adopts the resolution relating to that matter, or the 60th day prior to the date of the other action, whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)(3)].

The record date for an adjourned meeting is the same as the record date for the original meeting, unless the board fixes a new record date for the adjourned meeting or the original meeting is adjourned for more than 45 days, in which case the board must fix a new record date [Corp. Code § 701(c)].

§ 8A.26 Quorum

Unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation, a majority of the shares entitled to vote, represented at a meeting in person or by proxy, constitutes a quorum [Corp. Code § 602(a)]. However, a quorum may never consist of less than one-third (or, in the case of a mutual water company, 20 percent) of the shares entitled to vote at the meeting or, except in the case of a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158 (close corporation defined)], of more than a majority of the shares entitled to vote at the meeting [Corp. Code § 602(a)]. Shares disqualified from voting on a matter will not be considered outstanding for the purposes of determining a quorum at a meeting to act on that matter [Corp. Code § 112].

If a quorum is present, the affirmative vote of the majority of the shares represented at the meeting and entitled to vote on any matter is the act of the shareholders, unless the vote of a greater number or voting by classes is required by the General Corporation Law or the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 602(a)].

If a quorum is present at the commencement of a meeting, but shareholders withdraw to leave less than a quorum, the remaining shareholders may continue to transact business and take any action if approved by at least a majority of the shares required to constitute a quorum or, if required by law or the articles, the vote of a greater number or voting by classes [Corp. Code § 602(b)]. In the absence of a quorum, however, the meeting may be adjourned by the vote of only a majority of the shares represented either in person or by proxy [Corp. Code § 602(c)].

§ 8A.27 Meeting Procedures

Either the corporation's president or its chair of the board usually conducts a shareholders' meeting, unless the bylaws designate another person [see Corp. Code § 212(b)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:

In both small, closely held corporations and larger, publicly held corporations, the chair frequently relies on the assistance of an attorney, often functioning as corporate secretary, to determine the existence of a quorum, record the minutes of the meeting, tally the votes, and determine the required number of shares for approval [see §§ 8A.40, 8A.41]. Because shareholders are entitled to receive a report of the exact voting of shares at a shareholders' meeting, [Corp. Code § 1509; see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports] each shareholder's vote must be carefully tallied. Informal counting is not adequate. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

The usual procedure at a shareholders' meeting is as follows:

- Call the meeting to order;
- Determine whether a quorum is present or represented at the meeting; or
- Determine the number of shares each shareholder is entitled to vote.

For further discussion see §§ 8A.26, 8A.40, 8A.41, 8A.71. See § 8A.260[2] for minutes for a shareholders annual meeting.

The formality with which the meeting is conducted depends on the size of the corporation and the relationships of its participants. Further proceedings at the meeting depend on the type of meeting, annual or special, and the kind of business to be transacted. For further discussion of these issues, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 167 (Matthew Bender), and Wetzel, Conduct of a Stockholders' Meeting, 22 Bus. Law. 303 (1967).

§ 8A.28 Action by Written Consent Without Meeting

[1] In General

Unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation, action that may be taken by the shareholders at any annual or special meeting may be taken without a meeting and without prior notice, by a consent in writing [Corp. Code § 603(a); see §§ 8A.222, 8A.223]. This consent must (1) set forth the action taken and (2) be signed by the holders of outstanding shares having at least the minimum number of votes necessary to take that action at a meeting at which all shares entitled to vote on that particular matter were present and voted [Corp. Code § 603(a)].

In general, directors may only be elected by written consent by the unanimous written consent of all shares entitled to vote for the election of directors [Corp. Code § 603(d)]. The purpose of this provision is to protect the right of cumulative voting in the election of the entire board. However, shareholders may elect a director to fill a vacancy not filled by the board of directors (other than a vacancy created by removal) by the written consent of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote. Filling vacancies created by removal requires the unanimous written consent of all shares entitled to vote for the election of directors [Corp. Code §§ 305(b), 603(d)].

Although there is no statutory requirement that all shareholders entitled to vote be solicited in writing for consents, if this is not done, the nonconsenting shareholders entitled to vote must be given the following notice [Corp. Code § 603(b)]:

- Notice of any shareholder approval without a meeting by less than unanimous written consent, related to (1) transactions in which a director has a financial interest [Corp. Code § 310]; (2) indemnification of corporate agents [Corp. Code § 317]; (3) corporate conversions [Corp. Code § 1152]; (4) the principal terms of reorganization [Corp. Code § 1201]; or (5) a plan of distribution of corporate assets upon dissolution not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares [Corp. Code § 2007]. Notice must be given at least 10 days before the consummation of the approved action [Corp.

Code § 603(b)(1); see Corp. Code § 601(b) (notice procedure)].

- "Prompt" notice of the taking of any other corporate action approved by shareholders without a meeting by less than unanimous written consent [Corp. Code § 603(b)(2); see Corp. Code § 601(b) (notice procedure); see also § 8A.120, P 5].

PRACTICE TIP:
"Prompt" notice probably means within, at the most, a couple of days from the date the action was taken. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

Any written consent may be revoked by the consenting shareholder, the shareholder's proxyholders, a transferee of the shares, a shareholder's personal representative, or their respective proxyholders. Any revocation [see § 8A.254] must be in writing and must be received by the corporation before the written consents representing the number of shares required to authorize the proposed action have been filed with the corporation's secretary [Corp. Code § 603(c)]. The revocation of consent is effective on receipt by the corporation's secretary [Corp. Code § 603(c)].

[2] Special Rules for Written Consents for Corporations With 100 or More Shareholders

Special rules apply to the form of any written consent distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)] if the corporation has no outstanding class of securities registered or exempted from registration under § 12 of the Securities and Exchange Act [Corp. Code § 604; see 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)]. These written consents must include the following [Corp. Code § 604(a)]:

- A choice between approval and disapproval of each matter (or group of related matters), other than elections; and

- A provision, subject to reasonable, specified conditions, that the shares will be voted in accordance with the shareholder's choice.

Failure of a subject corporation to comply with the statutory requirements for a form of proxy, which are similar to those for a form of written consent, does not invalidate any corporate action taken, but may be the basis for challenging noncompliance in the superior court [Corp. Code § 604(c)].

Shareholders' meetings may be conducted, in whole or in part, by electronic transmission by and to the corporation, or by electronic video screen communication if [Corp. Code § 600(e)]:

- The corporation implements reasonable measures to provide shareholders (in person or by proxy) a reasonable opportunity to participate in the meeting and to vote on matters submitted to the shareholders, including an opportunity to read or hear the proceedings concurrently; and

- A record of any vote or other action is maintained by the corporation if any shareholder votes or acts by means of electronic transmission to the corporation or electronic video screen communication.

Any request by a corporation to a shareholder for consent to conduct a shareholders' meeting by electronic transmission by and to the corporation [*see Corp. § 8A.40 Noncumulative Voting of Shares

Except as otherwise provided in the articles [see § 8A.11[2]] and except for cumulative voting for directors [see § 8A.41], each outstanding share, regardless of class, is entitled to one vote on each matter submitted to a vote of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 700(a); see Corp. Code §§ 400, 401 (power of corporation to limit voting rights), 407 (voting rights of fractional shares)]. A shareholder entitled to vote on any matter may vote part of his or her shares in favor of the proposal and refrain from voting the remaining shares or vote them against the proposal (except for elections to office) [Corp. Code § 700(b)]. However, if the shareholder fails to specify the number of shares he or she is voting affirmatively, it is conclusively presumed that the shareholders approving vote is with respect to all the shares he or she is entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 700(b)]. For discussion of voting fractional shares, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 171.03 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of special rules applying to particular types of shareholders, see §§ 8A.42-§ 8A.44.

§ 8A.41 Cumulative Voting for Directors

Except as otherwise provided in the articles or bylaws of a listed corporation [see Corp. Code § 301.5(d) ("listed corporation" defined); see also Corp. Code § 708.5] or in the shareholder agreement of a close corporation [Corp. Code § 300(b)], every shareholder complying with Corp. Code § 708(b) (see below) may cumulate his or her votes for the election of directors [Corp. Code § 708(a)]. Using cumulative voting, a shareholder may cast a number of votes equal to the number of votes to which he or she is normally entitled multiplied by the number of directors to be elected [Corp. Code § 708(a)]. The shareholder then may cast all votes for one candidate or may divide votes between multiple candidates [Corp. Code § 708(a)]. Thus, for example, minority shareholders may elect their candidate to the board of directors by casting all their cumulated votes for that one candidate.

Corp. Code § 708(b) restricts shareholder cumulative voting to situations where the candidates' names have been placed in nomination before the meeting and any shareholder has given notice at the meeting prior to the voting of the intent to cumulate votes at the meeting.

The candidates for director who receive the highest number of affirmative votes, up to the number of directors to be elected, are elected [Corp. Code § 708(c); but see Corp. Code § 708.5]. A negative or a withheld vote against a director has no legal effect [Corp. Code § 708(c)]. Elections for directors are not required to be by ballot, unless a shareholder demands election by ballot at the meeting, before the voting begins, or unless required by the bylaws [Corp. Code § 708(e); see §§ 8A.240, 8A.241].

§ 8A.42 Voting by Fiduciaries, Receivers, Pledgees, Minors, and Attorneys in Fact

Shares held by an administrator, executor, guardian, conservator, or custodian may be voted by that holder, either in person or by proxy, without a transfer of shares into the holder's name, subject to Corp. Code § 703(c) (voting of shares held by issuing corporation in fiduciary capacity) [Corp. Code § 702(a)]. Similarly, shares held by an attorney in fact authorized to vote the shares by the appointing power of attorney may be voted by that attorney in fact, either in person or by proxy, without a transfer of shares into his or her name [Corp. Code § 702(e)]. A trustee, however, may not vote shares, either in person or by proxy, unless the shares have been transferred into the trustee's name [Corp. Code § 702(a)].

Shares standing in the name of a receiver may be voted by that receiver, and shares held by or under the control of a receiver may be voted by that receiver without a transfer into his or her name, if the court order appointing the receiver contains that authority [Corp. Code § 702(b)].

Subject to Corp. Code § 705 (voting by proxy), and except as otherwise agreed in writing, a shareholder whose shares are pledged is entitled to vote those shares until they have been transferred into the name of the pledgee. Thereafter, the pledgee is entitled to vote the transferred shares [Corp. Code § 702(c)].

Shares held by a minor may be voted, in person or by proxy, whether or not the corporation has notice, actual or constructive, of the nonage, unless a guardian of the minor's property has been appointed and the corporation has been given written notice of that appointment [Corp. Code § 702(d)].

Shares held by another foreign or domestic corporation may be voted by any officer, agent, or proxyholder prescribed by the other corporation's bylaws [Corp. Code § 703(a)]. In the absence of a bylaw provision, the shares may be voted as determined by the board of the other corporation [Corp. Code § 703(a)]. If the board has not made a determination, the shares may be voted by the chair of the board, the president, or any vice president of the other corporation, or by any other person authorized to vote by one of those officers [Corp. Code § 703(a)]. Shares that are voted or proxies that are executed in the name of a corporation are presumed to have been voted or executed in compliance with the General Corporation Law, unless evidence indicates otherwise [Corp. Code § 703(a)]. Shares of a corporation owned by its subsidiary are not entitled to vote on any matter [Corp. Code § 703(b)]. Shares held by the issuing corporation (and by its subsidiary) in a fiduciary capacity also are not entitled to vote on any matter, with specified exceptions [Corp. Code § 703(c)].

§ 8A.44 Voting of Jointly Held Shares

Jointly held shares, for purposes of the general rules for voting these shares, include shares in the names of two or more persons, as fiduciaries (including persons with the same fiduciary relationship to the same shares), partners, joint tenants, tenants in common, husband and wife as community property, tenants by the entirety, voting trustees, persons entitled to vote under a shareholder voting agreement, or otherwise [Corp. Code § 704]. Rules for voting jointly held shares are as follows:

- If only one vote is cast, that vote binds all.

- If more than one vote is cast, the majority voting binds all [see, e.g., Edwards v. Edwards (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 599, 602-603, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 (power of cotrustees of inter vivos trust to vote shares of stock held in trust is governed by Corp. Code § 704], providing that the act of the majority of the cotrustees is binding, rather than by Prob. Code § 15620, providing that cotrustees may exercise their powers only by unanimous action)].

- If more than one vote is cast, but the vote is evenly split on any particular matter, each fraction may vote the shares proportionately [Corp. Code § 704].

To avoid these rules, the joint holders must furnish the corporate secretary with written notice and a copy of any instrument or order appointing them joint tenants or creating their joint ownership [see Corp. Code § 704]. If that instrument or the share registration shows that the shareholders' ownership interest is unequal, then for purposes of voting jointly held shares, a majority will be a majority in interest and an even split will be an even split in interest [Corp. Code § 704].

§ 8A.45 Voting by Proxy

A proxy [see §§ 8A.250-8A.253] is a written authorization given by a shareholder to another party to vote the shareholder's shares [Corp. Code § 178]. Every person entitled to vote shares may authorize another person (or persons) (the "proxy holder" [Corp. Code § 179]) to vote or take other action on those shares by proxy [Corp. Code § 705(a)]. The shareholder's name must be "signed" on the proxy by the shareholder or the shareholder's attorney in fact. "Signed" means the placing of the shareholder's name or other authorization on the proxy, whether by manual signature, typewriting, telegraphic, or electronic transmission or otherwise [Corp. Code § 178]. A proxy may be transmitted orally over the telephone if it is submitted with information from which it may be determined that the proxy was authorized by the shareholder or the shareholder's attorney in fact [Corp. Code § 178].

Any proxy purporting to be executed according to the provisions of the General Corporation Law is presumptively valid [Corp. Code § 705(a); see Corp. Code § 604 (required form of proxy to be distributed to shareholders of corporation with outstanding shares held by 100 or more persons); see also § 8A.253]. Proxies are discussed further in §§ 8A.60-8A.63.

§ 8A.46 Voting by Voting Agreement or Voting Trust

[1] Voting Agreement and Voting Trust Defined

Voting agreements and voting trusts are common arrangements for controlling how shares will be voted. A voting agreement is a written agreement between two or more shareholders requiring that the shares held by them be voted as provided in the agreement [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. In a voting agreement, shareholders may vote their own shares (in accordance with the agreement) or may transfer title to their shares to third parties, who will vote the shares as agreed [see Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts].

A voting trust ordinarily is created by a written agreement between two or more shareholders, irrevocably transferring title to their shares (for a definite period of time not exceeding ten years) to voting trustees, who, in return, issue to the shareholders certificates of beneficial interest ("voting trust certificates"). A duplicate of the voting trust agreement must be filed with the corporation's secretary [Corp. Code § 706(b); see also Note, The Voting Trust, 34 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 290, 290-292 (1959)].

[2] Voting Trust, Voting Agreement, and Proxy Distinguished

A voting trust differs from a voting agreement or proxy in that with a voting trust, legal title must be transferred to a trustee, who has the right to vote the shares, according to the terms of the trust agreement [see [1], above]. A voting trust imposes a fiduciary duty on the trustees exercising the voting power [see Corp. Code § 706(b); see also Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts ; Gose, Legal Characteristics and Consequences of Voting Trusts, 20 Wash. L. Rev. 129, 139 (1945)]. In a voting agreement, on the other hand, each shareholder may retain the power to vote his or her shares, but must agree to do so as provided in the voting agreement, or may transfer the shares to third parties with the authority to vote the shares as provided in the agreement [see Corp. Code § 706(a); see also Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts]. A voting agreement imposes a contractual obligation, rather than a fiduciary obligation, on those exercising the voting power [see O'Neal & Thompson, O'Neal's Close Corporations, Ch. 5, Control Distribution Devices: Shareholders' Agreements, Voting Trusts, Irrevocable Proxies, and Management Contracts, §

5.37 (West 3d ed.)]. A proxy, however, creates an agency relationship and is governed by agency rules [see O'Neal & Thompson, O'Neal's Close Corporations, Ch. 5, Control Distribution Devices: Shareholders' Agreements, Voting Trusts, Irrevocable Proxies, and Management Contracts, § 5.13 (West 3d ed.)]. Under this arrangement, the shareholder retains legal title to the shares, but, as principal, gives an agent the power to vote the shares. For further discussion of proxies, see §§ 8A.60-8A.63.

For detailed discussion of voting agreements and voting trusts and an overview of other types of agreements and control devices, see Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts .

[1] Contents

Special rules apply to the form of proxies distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)], if the corporation has no outstanding class of securities registered or exempted from registration under § 12 of the Securities Exchange Act [Corp. Code § 604; see 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)]. These proxies must include the following [Corp. Code § 604(a)]:

- A choice between approval and disapproval of each matter (or group of related matters), other than elections; and

- A provision, subject to reasonable, specified conditions, that the shares will be voted in accordance with the shareholder's choice.

In any election of directors, a proxy may not be voted for the election of any named candidates for director if the proxy is marked "withhold," or otherwise marked to indicate that the authority to vote for the election of directors is withheld [Corp. Code § 604(b)].

Proxies of corporations subject to federal securities reporting requirements (and federal proxy rules) must meet detailed requirements that are outside the scope of this chapter [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-1 et seq. (Regulation 14A; solicitation of proxies)]. In general, however, federal proxy regulations cover proxy solicitations by corporations whose stock is publicly traded or listed on a national stock exchange [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-2 (general exemptions to federal proxy solicitation rules)]. For detailed discussion of federal proxy rules, see FEDERAL SECURITIES EXCHANGE ACT OF 1934, Ch. 7, Proxy Regulation (Matthew Bender).

[2] Failure to Comply With Requirements

A failure to comply with the proxy rules [see Corp. Code § 604; [1], above] for the form of proxies distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons, if the corporation has no outstanding class of securities registered or exempted from registration under the § 12 of the Securities and Exchange Act [15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)], does not invalidate any action taken, but may be the basis for challenging any proxy at a shareholders' meeting, and for shareholder suit in the superior court to compel compliance [see Corp. Code § 604(c)].

Proxy contests, which usually develop when shareholders try to solicit proxies voting for an opposition slate of directors or for a counterproposal, are subject to special procedures if the corporation must comply with federal proxy regulations [see 15 U.S.C. § 78n; see [1], above]. Proxy contests are discussed further in Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 173 (Matthew Bender).

§ 8A.62 Revocation of Proxies

A proxy continues in effect until revoked by the person executing it, before the vote pursuant to the proxy, with specified exceptions [Corp. Code § 705(b)]. These exceptions include the following:

- Revocation because of the death or incapacity of the maker of proxy if corporation receives written notice before vote is counted [see Corp. Code § 705(c)];

- Revocation of a proxy held by a pledgee, purchaser, creditor, or employee if the purpose for which the proxy was given no longer exists [see Corp. Code § 705(e); § 8A.63]; or

- Revocation by a transferee of shares with no knowledge of irrevocable provision of proxy, subject to specified limitations [see Corp. Code § 705(f); § 8A.63].

A proxy may be revoked by any of the following [Corp. Code § 705(b)]:

- A written notice to the corporation [see § 8A.254].

- A subsequent proxy (determined by the dates on the proxy forms, not the postmark date) executed by the same shareholder and presented to the meeting.

- As to any one meeting, attendance at that meeting and voting in person.

§ 8A.63 Irrevocable Proxies

In some circumstances, a proxy that states that it is irrevocable [see § 8A.252] is irrevocable for a specified period and is not revoked by giving written notice to the corporation of the death or incapacity of the proxy maker [see Corp. Code § 705(e)]. These circumstances include the following [Corp. Code § 705(e)]:

- The giving of a proxy to secure the performance of a duty or to protect a legal or equitable title, until the happening of events which, by the proxy's terms, discharge the obligations secured by it.

- The giving of a proxy to any of the following:

    - A pledgee (or the pledgee's nominee).

    - A person (or that person's nominee) who has purchased, agreed to purchase, or holds an option to purchase the shares, or a person who has sold a portion of his or her shares to the proxy maker.

    - A creditor of the corporation, a shareholder who extended or continued credit to the corporation, or a shareholder, in consideration of the proxy, if the proxy states both that it was given in consideration of extending or continuing credit and the name of the creditor.

    - A person who has contracted to perform services as an employee of the corporation, if a proxy is required by the employment contract and if the proxy states all of the following: that it was given in consideration of that contract, the employee's name, and the period of employment.

    - A person designated under a voting agreement or a voting trust [see Corp. Code §

- A beneficiary of a trust with respect to shares held by the trust.

These proxies become revocable, despite the period of irrevocability specified in the proxy, when the purpose for which the proxy was given no longer exists, that is, when any of the following occur [Corp. Code § 705(e)]:

- The pledge is redeemed.
- The option or agreement to purchase is terminated or the seller no longer owns any shares of the corporation or dies.
- The debt of the corporation or the shareholder is paid.
- The period of employment provided for in the contract of employment has terminated.
- The voting agreement or voting trust has terminated.

An irrevocable proxy may also be revoked by a transferee of shares with no knowledge of the irrevocable provision, unless the existence of the proxy and its irrevocability appears either (1) on the certificate representing the shares, in the case of certified securities or (2) if the securities are uncertificated [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)], on the initial transaction statement and written statements [Corp. Code § 705(f); see Corp. Code § 171.1 (definition)]. For a discussion of those statements and uncertificated securities generally, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

Unless otherwise provided by written agreement of the parties, the recordholder of shares which belong to another or are held as a pledge or security, must issue a proxy to the pledgor or owner of those shares, upon demand and payment of necessary expenses [Corp. Code § 705(d)].

§ 8A.70 Voting Record Rights and Disclosure Requirements

[1] Shareholder's Right to Voting Results

For 60 days after any shareholder meeting, a corporation must immediately inform any shareholder [see Corp. Code § 1512 (shareholder defined for this purpose)], on written request [see § 8A.242], of the result of any shareholder vote taken at that meeting [Corp. Code § 1509]. The report [see § 8A.243] must include the number of shares that voted for, against, and abstained from voting [Corp. Code § 1509]. If directors were elected, the report must include the number of shares, or votes, if voted cumulatively, cast for each nominee [Corp. Code § 1509]. If more than one class or series of shares voted, the report must also state the numbers by class and series of shares [Corp. Code § 1509].

[2] Voting Record Disclosure Requirements

Every person who has the power to vote shares of stock on behalf of another must maintain a record of the manner in which the shares were voted. This record must be kept for 12 consecutive months from the effective date of the vote [Corp. Code § 711(d)].

On request, a person having the power to vote shares on behalf of another, or a designated agent of the person holding that power, must disclose, to the beneficial owners of the shares, the voting record with respect to any matter involving one or more specific securities [Corp. Code § 711(e)]. Disclosure must be made to the requesting party on presentation of identification sufficient to identify him or her as a person on whose behalf the shares were voted [Corp. Code § 711(e)(1)]. Disclosure may also be made to the party who has entered into an agreement designating another to vote his or her shares, rather than to the requesting party, if the requesting party is not the person on whose behalf the shares were voted [Corp. Code § 711(e)(2)].

Unless a governing instrument provides otherwise, a person holding the power to vote shares on behalf of another may designate an agent to maintain and disclose records [Corp. Code § 711(h)]. Signing a proxy on another's behalf and forwarding it for disposition or receiving voting instructions does not constitute the power to vote. However, a person forwarding proxies or receiving instructions must disclose the identity of the person having the power to vote shares on reasonable written request by a person entitled to request a voting record [Corp. Code § 711(g)]. The person disclosing a record may assess a reasonable charge in order to defray disclosure expenses [Corp. Code § 711(i)], unless disclosure is made to a party other than the person making the request [see Corp. Code § 711(e)(2)] or is otherwise limited by law or the corporation's governing instruments [Corp. Code § 711(i)].

A "person on whose behalf shares are voted" includes the following individuals [Corp. Code § 711(b)]:

- A participant or beneficiary of an employee benefit plan, with regard to shares held for the benefit of the participant or beneficiary; and

- A shareholder, beneficiary, or contract owner of any "investment company" (as defined in the Investment Company Act of 1940) [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-3(a) (defined as issuer primarily engaged in business of investing, reinvesting, or trading in securities)] or any portfolio of an investment company, to the extent that the investment company (or portfolio) holds the shares for which the record is requested.

A "person on whose behalf shares are voted" does not include the following individuals [Corp. Code § 711(c)]:

- A person who possesses the right to terminate or withdraw from the shareholder, contract owner, participant, or beneficiary relationship with any investment company [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-3(a) (investment company defined)] (or portfolio of an investment company);

- A person entitled to receive information about a trust [see Prob. Code § 16061]; or

- A beneficiary, participant, contract owner, or shareholder whose interest is funded through the general assets of a life insurance company authorized to conduct business in California.

A person whose request is not complied with may file a petition to enforce disclosure. The court may award costs and reasonable attorneys' fees if it finds that the defendant willfully failed to comply with the disclosure requirements [Corp. Code § 711(j)].

If a statute or regulation pursuant to the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.] imposes disclosure duties on investment managers that are substantially the same as the California requirements described above, compliance with the federal statute or regulation will be considered sufficient [Corp. Code § 711(a)].

§ 8A.71 Inspectors of Election

Before any shareholder meeting, the board of directors may appoint either one or three inspectors of election to act at that meeting, or at any adjourned meeting [Corp. Code § 707(a)]. If inspectors of election are not appointed, or if those appointed fail to appear or to act, the meeting's chair may, and on the request of any shareholder or shareholder's proxy must, appoint (or replace) inspectors of election at the meeting [Corp. Code § 707(a)]. If appointed at a meeting on the request of the shareholders or their proxies, the majority of shares represented in person or by proxy determines the number of inspectors (either one or three) to be appointed [Corp. Code § 707(a)].

The inspectors of election must do all of the following [Corp. Code § 707(b)]:

- Determine
    - The number of shares outstanding and the voting power of each;
    - The number of shares represented at the meeting;
    - The existence of a quorum; and
    - The authenticity, validity, and effect of proxies.
- Receive votes, ballots, or consents.
- Hear and determine all challenges and questions arising in connection with the right to vote.
- Tabulate all votes or consents.

- Determine when the polls will close.

- Determine the result and do any acts required to properly conduct the election or vote with fairness to all shareholders.

The inspectors of election must perform their duties impartially, in good faith, to the best of their ability, and as expeditiously as practical [Corp. Code § 707(c)]. If there are three inspectors of election, the decision, act, or certificate of a majority is effective [Corp. Code § 707(c)]. Any report or certificate made by the inspectors of election is prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein [Corp. Code § 707(c)].

§ 8A.72 Judicial Enforcement of Voting Rights

Any shareholder or person who claims to have been denied the right to vote [e.g., Haah v. Kim (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 45, 55, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515 (persons with standing include those who have entered into agreements to take shares in corporation but whose shares have not yet been issued)] may file a complaint in the superior court of the proper county to determine the validity of the election or appointment of any director [see Corp. Code § 709(a); see also Corp. Code § 177 ("proper county" defined)]. This judicial enforcement of voting rights applies to foreign corporations as well, if the election was held or the appointment made in California [Corp. Code § 709(a)]. After proper notice has been given to the corporation and a hearing has been held [see Corp. Code § 709(b)], the court may determine the person entitled to the office of director, order that a new election be held or appointment made, determine the right of persons to vote, and direct any other just and proper relief [see Corp. Code § 709(c)]. This recourse procedure is available to persons seeking to uphold, as well as to those seeking to challenge, the election of directors [Shahin v. Wawro (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 749, 753, 186 Cal. Rptr. 446 ; see Boericke v. Weise (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411, 156 P.2d 781] .

legible tangible form. When records are kept in a form capable of being converted into clearly legible paper form, the form into which the record is converted is admissible in evidence, and acceptable for all other purposes, to the same extent as an original paper record of the same information would be, provided the paper form accurately portrays the record [*Corp. § 8A.110 Written Consents Without Meeting

1. Determine whether articles restrict use of written consents without meeting.

NOTE:

Unless the articles provide otherwise [see Corp. Code § 204(d) (articles may set forth any provision, not in conflict with law, for management of business and for conduct of corporate affairs)], any action that may be taken at any annual or special shareholders' meeting may be taken without a meeting and without prior notice, if the requisite number of shares sign a written consent to the action [Corp. Code § 603(a); see P 3, below].

2. Determine whether action by written consent is preferable to vote at shareholders' meeting.

NOTE:

In practice, corporate actions can be taken more quickly using written consents than at a shareholders' meeting, since a shareholders' meeting requires setting a record date [see § 8A.25] and giving prior notice of the meeting [see § 8A.23].

3. Determine likelihood of obtaining required number of written consents to authorize action without meeting as follows [see Corp. Code § 603]:

a. For action other than election of directors, written consent of holders of outstanding shares having not less than minimum number of votes necessary to authorize that action at meeting at which all shares entitled to vote were present and voted [Corp. Code § 603(a)].

b. For election of directors (other than filling vacancy), unanimous written consent of all shares entitled to vote for election of directors [Corp. Code § 603(d)].

c. For filling vacancy on board of directors (other than one created by removal), if vacancy not filled by directors themselves [see Corp. Code § 305(a)], consent of majority of outstanding shares entitled to vote [Corp. Code §§ 305(b), 603(d)].

d. For filling vacancy on board created by removal, unanimous written consent of all shares entitled to vote for election of directors [Corp. Code §§ 305(b), 603(d)].

NOTE:
The articles or a bylaw adopted by the shareholders may permit the board to fill vacancies caused by removal without the approval of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 305(a)].

4. Determine whether record date for identifying shareholders entitled to vote by written consent is to be:

a. Date fixed in advance by board, not more than 60 nor less than 10 days before meeting [Corp. Code § 701(a)]; or

b. If board has not fixed record date and has not taken prior action, day on which first written consent is given [Corp. Code § 701(b)(2)].

NOTE:
Shareholders at the close of business on the record date are entitled to vote, notwithstanding any transfer of shares on the corporate books after the record date, except as otherwise provided in the articles or by agreement [Corp. Code § 701(d)].

   (1) Contract or transaction between corporation and one or more of its directors [see Corp. Code § 310; see also Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

(1) Not less than one-third (or in case of mutual water company, 20 percent) of shares entitled to vote at meeting; or

(2) Not more than majority of shares entitled to vote at meeting, except in close corporations; or

b. If articles do not specify number of shares that constitute quorum, majority of shares entitled to vote.

c. Vice president.

d. Secretary.

3. If meeting is called by party other than board, determine whether date set for meeting is [Corp. Code § 601(c)]:

§ 8A.113 Adjourned Meetings

1. Determine whether notice of meeting is required, as result of any of following [Corp. Code § 601(d)]:

NOTE:
Notice is not required to be given for a meeting adjourned to another time or place, except in the circumstances listed in PP a through d, below [Corp. Code § 601(d)].

a. Bylaws require notice.

b. Time and place of adjourned meeting were not announced at meeting at which adjournment was taken.

NOTE:
An announcement that the adjourned meeting will take place in conjunction with a future event is not sufficiently specific to constitute an announcement of the time and place. The shareholder attending the meeting at which the adjournment is taken, or the absent shareholder who reads the minutes of the meeting, must be able to determine the time and place of the adjourned meeting from the announcement alone [Spencer v. Older (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 95, 102-102, 183 Cal. Rptr. 722 ; see Corp. Code § 601(d)].

c. Adjournment is longer than 45 days.

d. After adjournment, new record date is fixed for adjourned meeting.

2. Determine record date [Corp. Code § 701(c)].

NOTE:

A new record date is required if the meeting is adjourned more than 45 days from date set for original meeting. If the meeting is adjourned for less than 45 days from the date set for original meeting, however, the board may, but is not required to, set new record date [Corp. Code § 701(c)].

3. Determine business intended to be transacted at original meeting.

NOTE:

At an adjourned meeting, a corporation may transact any business that might have been transacted at the original meeting [Corp. Code § 601(d)].

§ 8A.123 Preparation for Annual or Special Meetings

1. If proxies will be solicited by management, prepare and send appropriate form [see §§ 8A.250-8A.253 (forms)].

NOTE:
As a practical matter, proxies solicited by management are often sent with the meeting's notice.

2. If desired, prepare and send written waiver of notice, consent to holding of meeting, or approval of minutes to shareholders before meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e); see §§ 8A.24; 8A.124, P 5; see also § 8A.220 (form)].

NOTE:
The transactions at any meeting, however called and noticed, are as valid as though held at a regularly called and noticed meeting if (1) either before or after the meeting, each person entitled to vote who is not present at the meeting in person or by proxy provides a written waiver of notice, a consent to the holding of the meeting, or an approval of the meeting's minutes; and (2) a quorum is present at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

3. Have board of directors appoint inspectors of election, if desired [Corp. Code § 707(a)].

NOTE:
In advance of any shareholder meeting, the board may appoint inspectors of election to act at the meeting and any adjournment of the meeting. If inspectors are not appointed in advance by the board, or if any appointee fails to appear or refuses to act, the meeting chair may, on the request of any shareholder or shareholder's proxy, appoint inspectors at the meeting [Corp. Code § 707(a)].

4. Have forms prepared to tabulate votes at meeting.

5. Plan agenda for meeting.

6. If practical, prepare minutes of meeting in advance [see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports].

NOTE:

In closely held corporations, minutes are frequently prepared in advance when unanimous approval to proposed actions is anticipated.

§ 8A.124 Holding Annual or Special Meetings

1. Determine whether quorum is present [Corp. Code § 602(a)]:

NOTE:
Unless the articles specify the number of shares that constitute a quorum, a majority of the shares entitled to vote will constitute a quorum at a shareholders' meeting [Corp. Code § 602(a); see § 8A.26].

a. In person; or

b. By proxy.

NOTE:
A proxy is valid for 11 months after its date of execution or for any other time period specified in the proxy, unless the proxy is revoked before the vote by the person executing it. A proxy may be revoked by (1) a writing delivered to the corporation [see § 8A.254], (2) the execution of a subsequent proxy, or (3) attendance at the meeting and voting by the person executing the proxy [Corp. Code § 705(b)].

2. If quorum is not present, have majority of shares represented in person or by proxy vote to adjourn meeting [Corp. Code § 602(c); see § 8A.125 (procedures applicable to adjourned meetings)].

NOTE:
In the absence of a quorum, any meeting of shareholders may be adjourned by the vote of a majority of the shares represented in person or by proxy, but no other business may be transacted [Corp. Code § 602(c)]. However, if an initial quorum is present at the meeting, but enough shareholders withdraw to leave less than a quorum, the remaining shareholders may continue to transact business if any action taken is approved by at least a majority of the shares required to constitute a quorum or, if required by law or the articles, the vote of a greater number or voting by classes [Corp. Code § 602(b)].

3. Record and tabulate vote on specific proposals.

4. After business has been transacted, have shareholders adjourn meeting.

5. If meeting was irregularly called or noticed:

a. Send a waiver of notice of meeting, consent to hold meeting or approval of minutes of meeting to shareholders entitled to vote, (if not previously sent prior to meeting) [Corp. Code § 601(e); see § 8A.123, P 2].

NOTE:

Subject to the statutory provisions on voting by representatives, fiduciaries, receivers, pledgees, corporate shareholders, and voting by shares standing in joint names [see Corp. Code §§ 702-704; see also §§ 8A.42-8A.44], consents or waivers of notice, or approval of meeting minutes may be given, either before or after the meeting, by the shareholders entitled to vote or by the shareholder's proxy [see Corp. Code § 601(e); see also § 8A.24].

PRACTICE TIP:

Some practitioners recommend that small, closely held corporations make it a practice to have all shareholders sign this type of form even though call and notice of the meeting were regularly given, in the event of a possible irregularity. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

b. File any waivers, consents, or approvals with corporate records or make them part of minutes of meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

6. Have corporate officer prepare, sign, and file minutes [see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports].

NOTE:

A corporation is required to keep written minutes of the proceedings of its shareholders, in written form or in another form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 1500].

§ 8A.144 Disclosing Voting Record to Beneficial Owners of Shares

NOTE:

Many shareholders are the beneficial owners of shares that are legally owned and voted by employee benefit plans or investment companies. The procedures set forth in this section are designed to protect those beneficial owners by ensuring that the legal owners maintain and disclose their voting records, and thus are accountable in their exercise of corporate power [see Corp. Code § 711(a) (legislative declaration of intent)]. For discussion of the record maintenance requirements [Corp. Code § 711(d)], see § 8A.70.

1. Determine whether person requesting voting record is "person on whose behalf shares are voted," using following criteria [see Corp. Code § 711].

a. Person has required status if he or she is [Corp. Code § 711(b)]:

(1) Participant or beneficiary of employee benefit plan, with regard to shares held for person's benefit.

(2) Shareholder, beneficiary, or contract owner of any investment company (or portfolio of any investment company) [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-3(a) ("investment company" defined as issuer primarily engaged in business of investing, reinvesting, or trading in securities)], to extent that investment company (or portfolio) holds shares for which record is requested)].

b. Person does not have required status if person is [Corp. Code § 711(c)]:

(1) One who possesses right to terminate or withdraw from shareholder, contract owner, participant, or beneficiary relationship with any investment company.

NOTE:
This exclusion does not apply if the right of termination or withdrawal cannot be exercised without automatic imposition of a tax penalty. The right of termination or withdrawal does not include the right to substitute a relationship with the investment company (or portfolio), if its shares are voted by or subject to the direction of the investment advisor [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-2(a)(20) ("investment advisor" defined)] of the prior investment company (or portfolio), or an affiliate of the investment advisor [Corp. Code § 711(c)(1)].

(2) One who, as trust beneficiary, is entitled to receive information about trust [see Prob. Code § 16061].

(3) Beneficiary, participant, contract owner, or shareholder whose interest is funded through general assets of life insurance company authorized to conduct business in California.

2. Confirm that vote which shareholder desires to check was taken within previous 12-month period.

NOTE:
A person voting shares on behalf of another is required to maintain the voting record only for a period of 12 consecutive months from the effective date of the vote [Corp. Code § 711(d)].

3. Prepare reasonable written request of report of voting record with respect to any matter involving specific security or securities [Corp. Code § 711(e)].

4. Send request (or verify that request was sent) to party possessing power to vote shareholder's shares.

NOTE:
Signing a proxy on another's behalf and forwarding it for disposition, or receiving voting instructions, does not constitute the power to vote. A person forwarding proxies or receiving voting instructions must disclose the identity of the person having the power to vote shares on reasonable written request by a person entitled to request a voting record [Corp. Code § 711(g)].

5. Ensure that any disclosure satisfies following requirements [Corp. Code 711(e)]:

NOTE:
If a statute or regulation pursuant to the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.] imposes disclosure duties on investment managers that are substantially the same as the following California requirements, compliance with that federal statute or regulation will be deemed sufficient [Corp. Code § 711(a)].

a. Disclosure must be made by:

(1) Person possessing power to vote shares [Corp. Code § 711(e)]; or

NOTE:
If the disclosing entity is a unit investment trust [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-4(2) (defined as investment company organized under trust indenture without board of directors, issuing only redeemable securities)], the open-ended investment companies underlying the unit investment trust must promptly make available their proxy voting records to the unit investment trust on evidence of a bona fide request for voting record information [Corp. Code § 711(f)].

(2) Designated agent, unless governing instrument provides otherwise [Corp. Code § 711(e), (h)].

b. Disclosure must be made to:

(1) Person making request [Corp. Code § 711(e)(1)]; or

(2) If disclosing party holds voting power according to agreement entered into with someone other than requesting shareholder, other party to agreement [Corp. Code § 711(e)(2)].

NOTE:

Disclosure to the other party to the agreement will be deemed to comply with the disclosure requirements of Corp. Code § 711. In this case, the disclosing party is not entitled to charge a fee [Corp. Code § 711(e); see Corp. Code § 711(i); see also P d, below]. However, the two parties may enter into an agreement between themselves for the payment or assessment of a reasonable charge to defray expenses of disclosing the record [Corp. Code § 711(e)(2)].

c. Any demand for identification of person making request as "person on whose behalf shares were voted" [Corp. Code § 711(e)(1)]:

(1) Must be reasonable.

(2) Must be made promptly.

(3) May include request for social security number.

d. If person making disclosure assesses fee [Corp. Code § 711(i)]:

NOTE:

These fee provisions are subject to any restrictions imposed by law or a governing instrument [Corp. Code § 711(i)].

(1) Fee must be reasonable and used to defray expenses of disclosing record.

(2) Disclosure must be made within reasonable period after fee payment is received.

6. If person with voting power fails to comply with request, have shareholder file petition to enforce disclosure (or advise non-shareholder client that petition to enforce disclosure may be filed) [Corp. Code § 711(j)].

NOTE:

The court may award costs and reasonable attorneys' fees if the court finds that the defendant willfully failed to comply with the disclosure requirements [Corp. Code § 711(j)].

§ 8A.200 Letter Advising Corporation to Hold Annual Shareholders' Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter from an attorney, addressed to the appropriate corporate officer (the corporate secretary is often responsible for organizing the annual meeting), doing all of the following:

- Reminding that officer that the annual shareholders' meeting must be scheduled;
- Listing the matters generally addressed at the meeting (election of directors, overview of corporation's financial statements and operations) [see § 8A.200[1][d]];
- Inquiring whether there are additional matters requiring shareholder approval that should be addressed at the meeting [see § 8A.200[1][d]]; and
- Including the place, date, and time of the meeting [see § 8A.200[1][c]].

The board of directors is not required to call the annual meeting, since it is required to be held by statute [see Corp. Code § 600(b)]. However, this letter will remind the corporation to schedule the meeting and will provide information that must be included in the meeting's notice [see § 8A.200[1][b]].

[b] Contents of Meeting Notice

The notice of the annual meeting [see § 8A.202] must state the following [Corp. Code § 601(a)]:

- The place, date, and hour of the meeting;

- Any means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication by which shareholders may participate in the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)];

- Any matters the board of directors intends at the time of the mailing of the notice to present for action by the shareholders; and

- The names of the nominees for director that management intends, at the time of the notice, to present.

For further discussion of the meeting notice, see § 8A.202[1].

[c] Place, Date, and Time of Meeting

The annual shareholders' meeting may be held at any place inside or outside California that is stated in or fixed in accordance with the bylaws; if no other place is stated or so fixed, the meeting must be held at the corporation's principal executive office [Corp. Code § 600(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-16 (exception for regulated management companies)]. The date and time of the annual meeting is usually stated in the bylaws or determined in accordance with bylaw provisions [see Corp. Code § 600(b); see also §§ 8A.22[1], 8A.23[4]]. However, if the annual meeting is not held within 60 days after the date designated in the bylaws, within 15 months after the organization of the corporation, or within 15 months after the corporation's last annual meeting, any shareholder may apply to the superior court of the proper county for an order compelling the meeting [Corp. Code § 600(c)].

The annual shareholders' meeting may be conducted in whole or in part by electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication [Corp. Code § 600(e)]. For further discussion, see § 8A.29.

[d] Purpose of Annual Meeting

The shareholders must elect directors at the annual meeting and may transact any other proper business [Corp. Code § 600(b); see § 8A.11 (matters requiring shareholder vote)]. Ordinarily, the directors use the annual meeting to report on the corporation's financial condition, its operations, and its plans for the next year.

[e] Determination of Record Date

A corporation determines the shareholders who are entitled to notice of any meeting, to vote, and to exercise any other lawful rights as of a specified date, known as the record date. The record date may be (1) fixed in advance by the board of directors [Corp. Code § 701(a)], (2) fixed by the articles of incorporation or by agreement [Corp. Code § 701(d)], or (3) prescribed by statute [Corp. Code § 701(b)]. A record date fixed by the board, by the articles of incorporation, or by agreement must not be more than 60 nor less than 10 days before the date of any meeting, or more than 60 days before any other action [Corp. Code § 701(a), (b)].

The record prescribed by statute is the close of business on the business day immediately preceding the day notice is given [see Corp. Code § 118 (time notice is given defined) or, if notice is waived [see §§ 8A.24, 8A.220], the close of business on the business day preceding the day the meeting is held [Corp. Code § 701(b)(1)].

[f] Annual Report

An annual report must be sent to the shareholders no later than 120 days after the close of the fiscal year, unless this requirement is waived in the bylaws of a corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders of record [Corp. Code §

1501(a)(1); see Corp. Code § 605 (determination of shareholders of record)].

Unless waived, the annual report also must be sent to shareholders at least 15 days (35 days if sent by third class mail) before the annual shareholders' meeting held during the next fiscal year. This requirement does not limit the requirement of holding the annual meeting, however [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(2)].

Unless otherwise provided by the articles or bylaws, and if approved by the board of directors, the annual report and any accompanying materials may be sent by electronic transmission by the corporation [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1); see Corp. Code § 20; see also § 8A.23[2]].

For discussion of the required contents of the annual report, see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports .

§ 8A.201 Letter Advising Corporation to Hold Special Shareholders' Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter from a corporation's attorney, addressed to the appropriate corporate officer, advising the corporation of the need to hold a special shareholders' meeting. The first alternative advises the corporation to call a special meeting because a proposed corporate transaction either requires or permits shareholder approval [see § 8A.11 (shareholders' voting rights)]. The second alternative advises the corporation to call a special meeting because the corporation has received a written demand for a special meeting from a person authorized to call it [see [b], below].

For a form to be used by shareholders to call a special meeting, see § 8A.203. For a form to be used by the chair of the board or the president to call a special meeting, see § 8A.204. For a form for notice of special shareholders' meeting, see § 8A.205. For discussion of and forms for obtaining shareholder approval without a meeting, see §§ 8A.28, 8A.221-8A.223.

[b] Persons Authorized to Call Special Meetings

Special meetings of the shareholders may be called at any time, for any reason, by the board of directors, the chair of the board, the president [see § 8A.204], the shareholders entitled to vote at least 10 percent of the corporation's shares [see § 8A.203], or other persons as provided in the articles or bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(d)]. A special meeting may also be called by the shareholder(s) representing five percent or more of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for directors when, after the filling of any vacancy by the directors, the directors in office who have been elected by the shareholders constitute less than a majority of the directors in office [see Corp. Code § 305(c)(1); § 8A.203; see also Corp. Code § 305(c)(2) (shareholders' option to apply to superior court for order to compel meeting)].

[c] Remedy for Failure to Call Special Meeting

If the notice of the special meeting is not given within the required time frame [see Corp. Code § 601; see also § 8A.205[1][c][i]], the person entitled to call the meeting may give the notice, or in the alternative, apply to the superior court of the proper county for an order requiring that the notice be given [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The court may issue any appropriate orders, including, but not limited to, orders designating the time and place of the meeting, the record date for determination of shareholders entitled to vote, and the form of notice of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

[d] Shareholders' Voting Rights

In addition to electing directors, the shareholders have other statutory voting rights. In some cases, a shareholders' vote is required to accomplish certain corporate actions, with specified exceptions. In others, a shareholder vote is permitted to accomplish a specific transaction as an alternative to authorization by the board of directors [see § 8A.11]. When a shareholders' vote is required or permitted by statute, the exact nature of the vote required must be determined, since the shareholders' voting rights may be exercised, in some cases, by "approval of the outstanding shares"; that is, a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 152], and in other cases by the "approval of the shareholders"; that is, the affirmative vote of majority of the shares represented and voting at a meeting at which a quorum is present [Corp. Code § 153], and in still other cases, by specified percentages of outstanding shares or classes or series or by individual shareholders [see § 8A.11]. In addition, the corporation's articles may create additional voting rights or impose additional voting requirements [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(5), (9); Corp. Code § 300(c) (close corporation shareholder agreements); see also § 8A.11[2]].

_____[Name of appropriate corporate officer]
_____[Officer's title]
_____[Name of corporation]
_____[Corporation's address]

Re: Need to Hold Special Shareholders' Meeting
Dear _____ [name of appropriate corporate officer]:

[If proposed corporate transaction requires or permits shareholder approval, use:]

I have been informed that the corporation wishes to _____[specify action]. This action will require formal shareholder approval. The _____[nature or percentage] of the vote required to approve this action is _____[specify nature of vote, e.g., a majority of the outstanding shares, or, in excess of 50 percent of the outstanding shares or the shares represented at the meeting (a simple majority)].

I recommend that the corporation hold a special shareholders' meeting to approve this proposed transaction. Please call me so that we can review the requirements and procedures for holding a special meeting. At that time, we can also determine whether it is appropriate to obtain shareholder approval by written consent without a meeting.

[Or, if corporation has received a written demand for a special meeting from a shareholder or other person authorized to call a special meeting, use:]

I have been informed that the corporation has received a written demand for a special shareholders' meeting from _____[names of shareholders], who are _____[shareholders entitled to vote at least 10 percent of the corporation's shares or persons authorized by the corporation's bylaws or articles of incorporation to call such a meeting or shareholders representing five percent or more of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for directors when, after the filling of any vacancy by the directors, the directors in office who have been elected by the shareholders constitute less than a majority of the directors in office]. The purpose of this meeting is to: _____[specify purpose].

The California Corporations Code requires this corporation to hold the special meeting at the time requested, but not less than 35, or more than 60, days after the receipt of the request. If notice of this special meeting is not given to the shareholders within 20 days after receipt of the request, the shareholders may apply to the court for an order compelling the meeting. It is important, therefore, that we call and hold this meeting properly. We should also discuss how management will respond to any anticipated shareholder demands.

The relevant dates for this meeting are the following:

Written demand received on _____ [date]

Period during which meeting must be held: _____ [dates, e.g., June 1-June 25]

Notice
must be given by _____ [date]

[Continue with the following:]

I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

§ 8A.202 Notice of Annual Shareholders' Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a general notice form for an annual shareholders' meeting. It includes an optional provision if proxies will be solicited. Whenever shareholders are required or permitted to take any action at a meeting, a written notice of the meeting must be given to each shareholder entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 601(a)].

For a proxy with an optional provision when solicitation of proxies is by management, see § 8A.253. For further discussion of proxies, see §§ 8A.60-8A.63. For a letter reminding the corporation to schedule its annual meeting, see § 8A.200. If the directors will be elected by the unanimous written consent of the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 603(d)], the form in § 8A.222[2] should be used instead of this form.

[b] Contents of Notice

The notice of the annual meeting must state the following information:

- The place, date, and hour of the meeting [see §§ 8A.21, 8A.22[1]];

- Any means of electronic transmission by and to corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication by which shareholders may participate in the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)];

- Any matters the board of directors intends at the time of the mailing of the notice to present for action by the shareholders; and

- The names of the nominees for director that management intends, at the time of the notice, to present [see Corp. Code § 601(a)].

See § 8A.200[1] for discussion of the purpose of the annual meeting, the place, date, and time requirements, the determination of the shareholders entitled to notice (the record date), and the annual report.

[c] Approval of Special Proposals at Meeting

The matters that the board of directors intends to present for action at the annual meeting must be stated in the notice of the meeting [see [b], above]. However, any other proper matter may be presented at the meeting when shareholder discussion is required or appropriate [see Corp. Code § 601(a)].

No shareholder approval at the meeting, other than the unanimous approval by those entitled to vote, is valid unless the general nature of the proposal was stated in the notice (or any written waiver of notice of the meeting [see § 8A.220]) if the action to be taken involves any of the following [Corp. Code § 601(f); see § 8A.20[1][a]]:

- Transactions in which a director has a financial interest [Corp. Code § 310].
- Amendments to the articles of incorporation after shares have been issued [Corp. Code § 902].
- Approval of a corporate conversion [Corp. Code § 1152].
- Approval of the principal terms of reorganization [Corp. Code § 1201].
- Dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1900].
- Approval of a plan of distribution of corporate assets upon dissolution not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares [Corp. Code § 2007].

[d] Procedure for Giving Notice

[i] When Given

A written notice of the annual meeting must be given at least 10 but not more than 60 days before the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. A corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 500 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)] may send notice of a meeting by third class mail, in which case the minimum time for the notice is 30 days before the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a), (b)].

[ii] How Given

The meeting notice must be given either personally or by electronic transmission by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20] or by first-class mail (postage prepaid) [see Corp. Code § 113], except when shares are held of record by 500 or more persons, in which case third-class mail is permitted, or by some other means of written communication [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. Notice must be addressed to the shareholder at the address appearing for the shareholder on the corporation's books or at another address given to the corporation for notice purposes. If no such address is given, notice must be given at the principal executive office or by publication at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the office is located [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

Notice given by electronic transmission by the corporation is not valid unless it complies with Corp. Code § 20 [Corp. Code § 601(b); see § 8A.23[2]]. Notice may not be given by electronic transmission by the corporation after the corporation has been unable to deliver two consecutive notices to the shareholder by that means or if the inability to deliver notices by electronic transmission becomes known to the secretary, any assistant secretary, the transfer agent, or any other person responsible for giving notice [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

Notice is considered to have been given when delivered personally, or sent by electronic transmission by the corporation, or deposited in the mail, or sent by other means of written communication [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

If notice, properly addressed to the shareholder [see Corp. Code § 601(b)], is returned to the corporation and marked as undeliverable by the United States Postal Service, all future notices will be considered to have been given without further mailing if the notices are available to the shareholder, on the shareholder's written demand, at the corporation's principal executive office for one year from the date the notice was given to all other shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

[iii] To Whom Given

Notice of any meeting must be given to each shareholder entitled to vote at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. The identity and shareholdings of these shareholders are determined from the corporate records as of a specified date, known as the "record" date. The procedure for fixing the record date is discussed in § 8A.25.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a written demand for a special meeting of shareholders by a shareholder authorized to call such a meeting [see [b], below]. If a non-shareholder is authorized by the corporation's articles of incorporation or bylaws to call a special shareholders' meeting [see Corp. Code § 600(d)], this form should be modified accordingly. For a form to be used to call a special shareholders meeting by the president, the chair of the board, or the board, see § 8A.204. For a letter advising the corporation to hold a special meeting, see § 8A.201. For a notice of a special meeting and a discussion of notice procedures, see § 8A.205.

[b] Persons Authorized to Call Special Meetings

Special meetings of the shareholders may be called at any time, for any reason, by the board of directors, the chair of the board, the president [see § 8A.204], the shareholders representing at least 10 percent of the corporation's shares [see [2], below], or other persons as provided in the articles or bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(d)]. A special meeting may also be called by the shareholder(s) representing five percent or more of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for directors when, after the filling of any vacancy by the directors, the directors in office who have been elected by the shareholders constitute less than a majority of the directors in office [see Corp. Code § 305(c)(1); [2], below; see also Corp. Code § 305(c)(2) (shareholders' option to apply to superior court for order to compel meeting)].

[c] Call Procedure

The call of a special shareholders' meeting by any authorized person, other than the board of directors, must be in writing, directed to the chair of the board, president, vice president, or secretary of the corporation [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The call should state the place, date, and time of the meeting [see Corp. Code §§ 600(a), 601(c)]. Shareholders' meetings may be conducted in whole or in part by electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication [Corp. Code § 600(e); see § 8A.29]; and if any such method will be used, the call must also identify the electronic means by which the shareholders will participate [Corp. Code §§ 600(a), (e), 601(a)]. The call should also state the specific matters to be addressed at the meeting, because no business other than that stated in the notice may be transacted at the meeting [see Corp. Code § 601(a)].

The corporate officer receiving the call of the meeting must give notice "forthwith," but in no event later than 20 days after the request [Corp. Code § 601(c); see § 8A.205; see also § 8A.205[1][c][i] (when notice must be given for special meeting called by board)]. The notice must be given to the shareholders entitled to vote. It must state that a special meeting will be held on the date requested by the shareholders calling the meeting, provided that the date must be at least 35 but not more than 60 days after the call is received by the corporate officer [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The time of the meeting must be the time requested by the person calling it [see Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The meeting must be held at any place in California or elsewhere, as stated in or fixed in accordance with the bylaws. If no other place is stated or fixed, special meetings are held at the principal executive office of the corporation [Corp. Code § 600(a)].

[d] Remedies for Failure to Give Notice After Receipt of Call

If the notice of the special meeting is not given within 20 days after receipt of the request to the chair of the board, president, vice president, or secretary [see § 8A.23[5]], the person entitled to call the meeting may give the notice, or in the alternative, apply to the superior court of the proper county for an order requiring that the notice be given [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The court may issue any appropriate orders, including, but not limited to, orders designating the time and place of the meeting, the record date for determination of shareholders entitled to vote, and the form of notice of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

[e] Effect of Irregularly Called or Noticed Meeting

The actions taken at a shareholders' meeting that is irregularly called (or held without formal notice) are valid if a quorum is present either in person or by proxy, and if, either before or after the meeting, each of the persons entitled to vote, not present in person or by proxy, provides a written waiver of notice, or a consent to the holding of the meeting, or an approval of the minutes of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. For a waiver, consent, and approval, see § 8A.220.

§ 8A.204 Call of Special Shareholders' Meeting by President or Chair of Board

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form should be used to call a special shareholders' meeting by the president or the chair of the board [see Corp. Code § 600(d)]. Although the call of a special meeting by the board of directors does not need to be in writing [see Corp. Code § 601(c)], the better practice is to make the request in writing. In the latter case, this form may be modified accordingly.

For a call of a special shareholders' meeting by the shareholders, see § 8A.203. For a letter advising the corporation to hold a special meeting, see § 8A.201. For a notice of a special shareholders' meeting and a discussion of notice procedures, see § 8A.205.

[b] Call Procedure

The call of a special shareholders' meeting by any authorized person other than the board of directors must be in writing, directed to the chair of the board, president, vice president, or secretary of the corporation (as appropriate) [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

The call should state all of the information required for giving notice of the meeting [see § 8A.205], including the following [Corp. Code § 601(a)]:

- The place, date, and time of the meeting [see Corp. Code §§ 600(a), 601(c)];

- Any means of electronic transmission by and to corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication by which shareholders may participate in the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)

];

- The specific matters to be addressed at the meeting [see Corp. Code § 601(a)]; and

- The record date for determining the shareholders entitled to notice of the meeting [see Corp. Code § 601(a)].

No business other than that stated in the notice may be transacted at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. For the procedure for fixing a record date, see § 8A.25. For further discussion of the call procedure, the persons authorized to call the meeting, the remedies for failure to call the meeting, and the effect of an irregularly called meeting, see § 8A.203[1][b]-[e].

§ 8A.205 Notice of Special Shareholders' Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a general notice form for a special shareholders' meeting, with an optional provision if proxies are to be solicited. Whenever shareholders are required or permitted to take any action at a meeting, a written notice of the meeting must be given to each shareholder entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 601(a)].

For a proxy with an optional provision when solicitation of proxies is by management, see § 8A.253. For further discussion of proxies, see §§ 8A.60-8A.63. For a letter advising the corporation to schedule a special meeting, see § 8A.201.

If action will be taken by the unanimous written consent of the shareholders, the forms in §§ 8A.222 or 8A.223 should be used instead of this form. For a list of the persons authorized to call a special meeting, see § 8A.203[1][b].

[b] Contents of Notice

The notice of the special meeting must state the following information [see Corp. Code § 601(a)]:

- The place, date, and hour of the meeting [see §§ 8A.21, 8A.22[2]];
- Any means of electronic transmission by and to corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication by which shareholders may participate in the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a); see § 8A.29]; and
- The general nature of the business to be transacted.

No business other than that stated in the notice may be transacted at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)].

[c] Procedure for Giving Notice

[i] When Given

If a special meeting is called by the board of directors, a written notice of the meeting must be given at least 10 but not more than 60 days before the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. A corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 500 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)] may send notice of a meeting by third class mail, in which case the minimum time for the notice is 30 days before the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a), (b)].

If a special meeting is called by any person other than the board, however, the notice must be given "forthwith," but in no event later than 20 days after the request [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. Caution should be exercised in ascertaining that the notice is sent in a timely manner.

[ii] How Given

The meeting notice must be given either personally or by electronic transmission by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20] or by first-class mail (postage prepaid) [see Corp. Code § 113], except when shares are held of record by 500 or more persons, in which case third-class mail is permitted, or by some other means of written communication [Corp. Code § 601(b)]. Notice must be addressed to the shareholder at the address appearing for the shareholder on the corporation's books or at another address given to the corporation for notice purposes. If no such address is given, notice must be given at the principal executive office or by publication at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the office is located [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

Notice given by electronic transmission by the corporation is not valid unless it complies with Corp. Code § 20 [Corp. Code § 601(b); see § 8A.23[2]]. Notice may not be given by electronic transmission by the corporation after the corporation has been unable to deliver two consecutive notices to the shareholder by that means or if the inability to deliver notices via electronic transmission becomes known to the secretary, any assistant secretary, the transfer agent, or any other person responsible for giving notice [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

Notice is considered to have been given when delivered personally, or sent by electronic transmission by the corporation, or deposited in the mail, or sent by other means of written communication [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

If notice, properly addressed to the shareholder, [see Corp. Code § 601(b)] is returned to the corporation and marked as undeliverable by the United States Postal Service, all future notices will be considered to have been given without further mailing if the notices are available to the shareholder, on the shareholder's written demand, at the corporation's principal executive office for one year from the date the notice was given to all other shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

[iii] To Whom Given

Notice of any meeting must be given to each shareholder entitled to vote at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. The identity and shareholdings of these shareholders are determined from the corporate records as of a specified date, known as the "record" date. The procedure for fixing the record date is discussed in § 8A.25.

[d] Evidence of Giving Notice

An affidavit of mailing or electronic transmission by the corporation of any notice executed by the corporate secretary, assistant corporate secretary, or any transfer agent, is prima facie evidence of the giving of notice [Corp. Code § 601(b); see § 8A.207].

[e] Procedure When Notice of Special Meeting Is Not Given

If notice of a special meeting is not given by the officer requested to so within the required time frame [see [c][i], above], the persons entitled to call the meeting may, themselves, give notice [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. In the alternative, they may apply to the superior court, which must "summarily" order that notice be given, after the corporation has had the opportunity to be heard [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. For further discussion of this issue, see § 8A.20[2][b].

§ 8A.206 Notice of Adjourned Shareholders' Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice of an adjourned meeting. The circumstances in which notice must be given are discussed in [b], below. The procedure for giving the notice is the same as that for giving notice of an annual or special meeting of shareholders [see §§ 8A.23, 8A.202[1], 8A.205[1]].

[b] When Notice Is Required

When a shareholders' meeting is adjourned to another time or place, notice of the adjourned meeting generally does not need to be given if the time and place of that meeting (or the means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21] or electronic video screen communication, if any, by which shareholders may participate in that meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]) are announced at the original meeting, unless the bylaws require otherwise [see Corp. Code § 601(d)]. In order to avoid the need to give notice of an adjourned meeting, however, both a specific time and place for the adjourned meeting must be announced. An announcement that the adjourned meeting will take place in conjunction with a future event is not sufficiently specific. The shareholder attending the original meeting, or the absent shareholder, must be able to determine the time and place of the adjourned meeting from the announcement alone [Spencer v. Older (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 95, 101-102, 183 Cal. Rptr. 722] .

Notice to each shareholder of record entitled to vote at the meeting, however, is required if the adjournment is longer than 45 days or if, after the adjournment, a new record date is fixed for the adjourned meeting [Corp. Code § 601(d)].

[c] What Business May Be Transacted

The corporation may transact any business at the adjourned meeting that might have been transacted at the original meeting [Corp. Code § 601(d)].

§ 8A.220 Waiver of Notice, Consent to Holding, and Approval of Minutes of Shareholders' Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is to be used by a shareholder to waive written notice, consent to the holding, and approve the minutes of any shareholder meeting at which the shareholder was or will not be present, either in person or by proxy. Any one of the segments of this form may be used separately.

PRACTICE TIP:
Some practitioners recommend that small, closely held corporations require their shareholders to sign this type of form even if call and notice of the meeting were regularly given, as a protection against any possible irregularity in the call or notice. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

The optional paragraph in this form must be included in either of the following situations:

- The business transacted (or to be transacted) at the meeting involves any of the actions enumerated in Corp. Code § 601(f) [see [b], below]; or

- The corporation's articles of incorporation or bylaws require that any written waiver of notice specify the business to be transacted and/or the purpose of any regular or special meeting [see Corp. Code § 601(e)].

This form may be signed either before or after the meeting, and must be filed with the corporate records or made a part of the minutes of the meeting [see [b], below].

[b] Effect of Waiver; Statutory Requirements

The actions taken at a shareholder meeting held without formal notice are valid if the following conditions are met [Corp. Code § 601(e)]:

- A quorum must be present either in person or by proxy; and

- Either before or after the meeting, each of the persons entitled to vote, but not present in person or by proxy, must sign a written waiver of notice, consent to the holding of the meeting, or an approval of the minutes of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e); see § 8A.24]. All waivers (or consents or approvals) must be filed with the corporate records or incorporated in the minutes of the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

Unless otherwise required by the corporation's articles of incorporation or bylaws, neither the business to be transacted nor the purpose of any regular or special meeting must be stated in any written waiver of notice (or in any consent to hold the meeting, or approval of the minutes) [Corp. Code § 601(e)], unless the action to be taken involves one of the following [Corp. Code § 601(f); see § 8A.20[1][a]]:

- Transactions in which a director has a financial interest [Corp. Code § 310];

- Amendments to the articles of incorporation after shares have been issued [Corp. Code § 902];

- Approval of a corporate conversion [Corp. Code § 1152];

- Approval of the principal terms of reorganization [Corp. Code § 1201];

- Dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1900]; or

- Approval of a plan of distribution of corporate assets upon dissolution not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares [Corp. Code § 2007].

In these circumstances, any shareholder approval at a meeting, other than by the unanimous approval of all shares entitled to vote, is valid only if the general nature of the transaction approved was stated in the meeting's notice or in any written waiver of notice [Corp. Code § 601(f); see § 8A.20[1][a]].

For discussion of when attendance at a meeting constitutes a waiver of notice, see § 8A.24.

§ 8A.222 Shareholders' Action by Written Consent for Use by Corporation With Fewer than 100 Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a shareholders' action by written consent, for use by a corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders. For a written consent for use by a corporation with more than 100 shareholders if the consent is distributed to 10 or more shareholders, see § 8A.223. The executed written consents should be filed in the corporation's minute book.

[b] Uses; Statutory Requirements

Unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation, any action that may be taken by the shareholders at any annual or special meeting may be taken without a meeting and without prior notice by a consent in writing [Corp. Code § 603(a)]. Directors, however, may be elected by written consent only on the unanimous consent of all shares entitled to vote for the election of directors [Corp. Code § 603(d); see § 8A.28], unless the election is to fill a vacancy on the board (other than a vacancy created by removal). If the election is to fill a vacancy on the board of directors, the written consent of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote is all that is required [Corp. Code §§ 305(b), 603(d); see Corp. Code § 152 (majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote defined); see also § 8A.28[1]]. Filling vacancies created by removal, however, requires the unanimous written consent of all shares entitled to vote for the election of directors [Corp. Code §§ 305(b), 603(d)]. Actions other than the election of directors may be taken by written consent without a meeting, provided that the consent of the same number of shares as would be necessary to authorize that action at a meeting are obtained [Corp. Code § 603(a)].

The consent must [Corp. Code § 603(a)]

- Set forth the action taken, and

- Be signed by the required number of shareholders.

Written consent may also be given by facsimile, telegraphic communication, or other electronic communication as authorized by statute, including an electronic transmission by the corporation [Corp. Code § 195; see Corp. Code § 20].

Not all shareholders entitled to vote need to be solicited for written consents. Nonconsenting shareholders entitled to vote must be given a special notice of the action taken [Corp. Code § 603(b); see § 8A.222].

The written consent may be revoked [see § 8A.224] if the corporation receives the written revocation before the written consents representing the number of shares required to authorize the proposed action have been filed with the corporation's secretary [Corp. Code § 603(c)].

§ 8A.223 Shareholders' Action by Written Consent Distributed to 10 or More Shareholders by Corporation With 100 or More Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a shareholder's written consent for use by a corporation that is not subject to the federal Securities and Exchange Act and that has more than 100 shareholders, if the consent is distributed to 10 or more shareholders [Corp. Code § 604; see Corp. Code § 604(d) (exceptions); see also 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)]. For a written consent to be used by a corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders, see § 8A.222. Written consent may also be given by facsimile, telegraphic communication, or other electronic communication as authorized by statute, including an electronic transmission by the corporation [Corp. Code § 195; see Corp. Code § 20]. The executed written consents should be filed in the corporation's minute book.

[B] Statutory Requirements of Form

These written consents must include the following [Corp. Code § 604(a)]:

- A choice between approval and disapproval of each matter (or group of related matters), other than elections; and

- A provision, subject to reasonable, specified conditions, that the shares will be voted in accordance with the shareholder's choice.

Failure of a subject corporation to comply with the statutory requirements for a proxy form, which are similar to those for a written consent, does not invalidate any corporate action taken, but may be the basis for challenging noncompliance in the superior court [Corp. Code § 604(c)].

For further discussion of written consents in general, see §§ 8A.28, 8A.222.

The revocation must be in writing and must be received by the corporation before the written consents representing the number of shares required to authorize the proposed action have been filed with the corporation's secretary [*Corp. § 8A.225 Notice to Shareholders of Action by Written Consent Without Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice by the corporation of any corporate action approved by shareholders without a meeting by less than unanimous written consent. This notice must be given to any shareholders who have not signed the written consent [see Corp. Code § 603(b); see also [b], below].

The optional clause in the form should be included when giving notice of any shareholder approval of the following actions [Corp. Code § 603(b)(1)]:

- Transactions in which a director has a financial interest [Corp. Code § 310].
- Indemnification of corporate agents [Corp. Code § 317].
- Corporate conversions [Corp. Code § 1152].
- The principal terms of reorganization [Corp. Code § 1201].
- A plan of distribution of corporate assets on dissolution not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares [Corp. Code § 2007].

For further discussion of written consents in general, see §§ 8A.28, 8A.221.

[b] California Notice Requirements

Unless the consents of all shareholders entitled to vote have been solicited in writing, notice of any corporate action approved by shareholders without a meeting by less than unanimous written consent must be given to those shareholders entitled to vote who have not signed the consent [see Corp. Code § 603(b)]. The notice must be given at least 10 days before the consummation of the action authorized by that approval, if the shareholder approval was pursuant to Corp. Code § 310, 317, 1152, 1201, or 2007 [Corp. Code § 603(b)(1); see [a] above]. It must be given "promptly" after the approval of any other action [Corp. Code § 603(b)(2)].

The procedure for giving the notice is the same as that for giving notice of an annual or special meeting of shareholders [see Corp. Code § 603(b); see also Corp. Code § 601(b) (notice procedure); §§ 8A.23, 8A.202[1], 8A.205[1]].

[c] Federal Notice Requirements

In some circumstances, federal SEC regulations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 require the giving of an "information statement" if there has not been proxy solicitation by a corporation subject to that act [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14c-2]. For further discussion, see § 8A.60[1].

§ 8A.240 Ballot--Noncumulative Voting for Directors and Other Matters

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a ballot to be used when directors are elected by noncumulative voting. If the shareholders will vote on matters other than the election of directors, this ballot may be used for that purpose as well. For a ballot to be used when directors are elected by cumulative voting, see § 8A.241.

[b] Use of Ballot

Elections for directors are not required to be by ballot, unless a shareholder demands election by ballot at the meeting, before the voting begins, or unless required by the bylaws [Corp. Code § 708(e)]. As a practical matter, in a closely held corporation with few shareholders, votes are often cast by voice or a show of hands. However, since any shareholder is entitled to receive a report of the exact voting of shares at any shareholders' meeting [see Corp. Code § 1509; see also Corp. Code § 711 (disclosure requirements); § 8A.70], each shareholder's vote should be tallied and recorded.

[c] Noncumulative Voting

Except as otherwise provided in the articles [see § 8A.11[2]], and except for cumulative voting for directors [see § 8A.241[1][b]], each outstanding share, regardless of class, is entitled to one vote on each matter submitted to a vote of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 700(a); see Corp. Code §§ 400 (power of corporation to limit voting rights), 407 (voting rights of fractional shares)]. A shareholder entitled to vote on any matter may vote part of his or her shares in favor of the proposal and refrain from voting the remaining shares, or may vote them against the proposal (except for elections to office) [Corp. Code § 700(b)]. However, if the shareholder fails to specify the number of shares he or she is voting affirmatively, it is conclusively presumed that the shareholder's approving vote is with respect to all the shares he or she is entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 700(b)]. For discussion of voting fractional shares, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 171.03 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of special rules applying to particular types of shareholders, see §§ 8A.42-8A.44.

§ 8A.241 Ballot--Cumulative Voting for Directors

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a ballot that may be used when directors are elected by cumulative voting. Elections for directors are not required to be by ballot, unless a shareholder demands election by ballot at the meeting, before the voting begins, or unless required by the bylaws [Corp. Code § 708(e); see § 8A.240[1][b]]. For a ballot to be used when directors are elected by noncumulative voting, see § 8A.240.

[b] Cumulative Voting for Directors

Except as otherwise provided in the articles or bylaws of a listed corporation [see Corp. Code § 301.5(d) (listed corporation defined); see also Corp. Code § 708.5] or in the shareholder agreement of a close corporation [Corp. Code § 300(b)], shareholders have the right to cumulate their votes for the election of directors [Corp. Code § 708(a)]. Using cumulative voting, a shareholder may cast the number of votes to which he or she is normally entitled, multiplied by the number of directors to be elected [Corp. Code § 708(a)]. A shareholder may cast all his or her votes for one candidate or may vote for as many candidates as he or she thinks fit [Corp. Code § 708(a)]. Thus, for example, minority shareholders may elect their candidate to the board of directors by casting all their cumulated votes for that candidate.

The candidates for director who receive the highest number of affirmative votes, up to the number of directors to be elected, are elected [Corp. Code § 708(c); but see Corp. Code § 708.5]. A negative or withheld vote against a director has no effect [Corp. Code § 708(c)].

If the candidates' names have been placed in nomination before the meeting and if any shareholder has given notice, before the voting, of the shareholder's intention to cumulate votes at the meeting, all shareholders may cumulate their votes for candidates in nomination [Corp. Code § 708(b)].

[a] Use of Form

This form is a report by a corporation, in response to a written shareholder request, of the results of a vote taken at a shareholder meeting. For discussion and an example of a shareholder request for vote results, see §§ 8A.70[2] and 8A.242.

The report must include the number of shares that voted for, against, and abstained from voting [Corp. Code § 1509]. If directors were elected, the report must include the number of shares, or votes, if voted cumulatively, cast for each nominee [Corp. Code § 1509]. If more than one class or series of shares voted, the report must also state the numbers by class and series of shares [Corp. Code § 1509].

[c] When Report Must Be Given

There is no specific statutory time limit within which the corporation must provide the shareholder with the information after receipt of the initial request. The only requirement is that the shareholder be informed "forthwith" [see Corp. Code § 1509].

§ 8A.250 Proxy for Particular Meeting of Private Corporation With Fewer Than 100 Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a proxy under which the shareholder selects a proxy for a particular meeting and grants the proxy holder general authority to act at that meeting. If management recommends a proxy holder, the optional paragraph naming that proxy holder should be included. If the proxy holder's authority is not limited to a particular meeting, this form may be modified accordingly [see also § 8A.253].

The maker of the proxy may want to limit the authority of the proxy holder by granting the proxy holder power to vote only on specific proposals, or by denying the proxy holder authority to vote on specified proposals. For a proxy (for a corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders) that limits this authority, see § 8A.251. For a proxy distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)], if the corporation is not subject to the federal Securities and Exchange Act [see Corp. Code § 604; see also 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)], see § 8A.253. For an irrevocable proxy, see § 8A.252.

[b] Voting by Proxy

A proxy is a written authorization given by a shareholder to another party to vote the shareholder's shares [Corp. Code § 178]. Every person entitled to vote shares may authorize another person (or persons) (the "proxy holder" [Corp. Code § 179]) to vote or take other action on those shares by proxy [Corp. Code § 705(a)].

Any proxy purporting to be executed according to the provisions of the General Corporation Law is presumptively valid [Corp. Code § 705(a); see Corp. Code § 604 (required form of proxy to be distributed to shareholders of corporation with outstanding shares held by 100 or more persons); see also § 8A.253].

[c] Duration and Revocation

A proxy is valid only for a period of 11 months from its date, unless otherwise provided in the proxy [Corp. Code § 705(b)]. However, in practice, most proxies are granted for a specific meeting [see [2], below; see also Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 172.01[4] (Matthew Bender)].

A proxy continues in effect until revoked, with specified exceptions [Corp. Code § 705(b); see Corp. Code § 705(c) (revocation because of death or incapacity of maker of proxy if corporation receives written notice), (e) (revocation of proxy held by pledgee, purchaser, creditor, or employee if the purpose for which the proxy was given no longer exists), or (f) (revocation by transferee of shares with no knowledge of irrevocable provision of proxy, subject to specified limitations)]. For further discussion and a form for revocation of a proxy, see §§ 8A.62 and 8A.254. For discussion of irrevocable proxies, see §§ 8A.63 and 8A.252.

[d] Execution and Transmission

The shareholder's name may be signed on the proxy by the shareholder or the shareholder's attorney in fact manually, by typewriter, by telegraphic or electronic transmission, or otherwise [Corp. Code § 178]. A proxy may be transmitted orally over the telephone if it is submitted with information from which it may be determined that the proxy was authorized by the shareholder or the shareholder's attorney in fact [Corp. Code § 178].

§ 8A.251 Proxy With Limitation of Authority for Private Corporation With Fewer Than 100 Shareholders

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a proxy to be used by a shareholder to limit the authority of the shareholder's proxy holder. The first alternative authorizes the proxy holder to vote only on the matters specifically stated in the proxy, for or against a particular proposal or director. The second alternative denies the proxy holder the authority to approve a specific action, merger or consolidation, for example.

This form contains an optional provision making the proxy irrevocable until a specified date, or as required by Corp. Code § 705(e). For further discussion of irrevocable proxies, see §§ 8A.63 and 8A.252. For a form for revocation of a proxy, see § 8A.254. § 8A.252 Irrevocable Proxy [Corp. Code § 705(e)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an irrevocable proxy to be used when shares belong to another or are held as a pledge or security [see Corp. Code §§ 705(d), (e); see also [b], below]. For discussion of the procedure by which a proxy may be revoked and a form for revocation, see § 8A.254. For revocable proxies, see §§ 8A.250, 8A.251, 8A.253.

[b] When Proxies Are Irrevocable

In some circumstances, a proxy that states that it is irrevocable is irrevocable for a specified period and is not revoked by giving written notice to the corporation of the death or incapacity of the proxy maker [see Corp. Code § 705(e)]. These circumstances include the following [Corp. Code § 705(e)]:

- The giving of a proxy to secure the performance of a duty or to protect a legal or equitable title, until the happening of events which, by the proxy's terms, discharge the obligations secured by it.

- The giving of a proxy to any of the following:

  - A pledgee (or the pledgee's nominee).

  - A person (or that person's nominee) who has purchased, agreed to purchase, or holds an option to purchase the shares, or a person who has sold a portion of his or her shares to the proxy maker.

  - A creditor of the corporation, a shareholder who extended or continued credit to the corporation, or a shareholder, in consideration of the proxy, if the proxy states both that it was given in consideration of extending or continuing credit and the name of the creditor.

- A person who has contracted to perform services as an employee of the corporation, if a proxy is required by the employment contract and if the proxy states all of the following: that it was given in consideration of that contract, the employee's name, and the period of employment.

- A person designated under a voting agreement or a voting trust [see Corp. Code § 706].

- A beneficiary of a trust with respect to shares held by the trust.

Unless otherwise provided by written agreement of the parties, the recordholder of shares that belong to another or that are held as a pledge or security must issue a proxy to the pledgor or owner of those shares, on demand and payment of necessary expenses [Corp. Code § 705(d)].

[c] Exceptions to Irrevocability

The proxies granted in the circumstances discussed in [b], above, become revocable, despite the period of irrevocability specified in a proxy, when the purpose for which the proxy was given no longer exists, that is, when any of the following occur [Corp. Code § 705(e)]:

- The pledge is redeemed.

- The option or agreement to purchase is terminated or the seller no longer owns any shares of the corporation or dies.

- The debt of the corporation or the shareholder is paid.

- The period of employment provided for in the contract of employment has terminated.

- The voting agreement of voting trust has terminated.

An irrevocable proxy may also be revoked by a transferee of shares with no knowledge of the irrevocable provision, unless the existence of the proxy and its irrevocability appear either (1) on the certificate representing the shares, in the case of certified securities; or (2) if the securities are uncertificated [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)], on the initial transaction statement and written statements [Corp. Code § 705(f); see Corp. Code § 171.1 (definition)]. The transferee does not need to be a purchaser of the shares. For a discussion of transaction and other written statements, and uncertificated securities generally, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

[d] Use of Irrevocable Proxy May Make Small Offering Exemption Unavailable

Caution should be exercised if an irrevocable proxy will be used to implement a voting agreement in accordance with Corp. Code § 706(a). Agreements are authorized under this statute between two or more members of a corporation for the purpose of exercising any voting rights of the parties to the agreement [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. Since the shareholder who signs a voting agreement which designates an irrevocable proxy no longer possesses "voting stock," the existence of the agreement at the time the corporation issues its shares, or the fact that it is presently intended to be entered into, may make unavailable the small offering exemption from qualification of securities [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. The form for notice of that exemption [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.8; see also Ch. 6C, California Small Offering

Exemption] requires the signer to declare affirmatively that there is no irrevocable proxy in existence or contemplated that would render incorrect the statements in the notice, including the one that there will be only one class of voting common shares outstanding.

§ 8A.253 Proxy for Private Corporation With 100 or More Shareholders When Proxy Is Distributed to 10 or More Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a proxy to be used when the proxy will be distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons, if the corporation is not subject to the federal Securities and Exchange Act [see Corp. Code § 604; 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2); see also [b], below].

For discussion of the procedure by which a proxy may be revoked, and a form for revocation, see § 8A.254. For other forms for revocable proxies, see §§ 8A.250-8A.251. For an irrevocable proxy, see § 8A.252.

[b] Statutory Requirements of Form

Special rules apply to the form of proxies distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605 (shares held of record by 100 or more persons defined)], if the corporation has no outstanding class of securities registered or exempted from registration under Section 12 of the Securities and Exchange Act [Corp. Code § 604; see 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)]. These proxies must include the following [Corp. Code § 604(a)]:

- A choice between approval and disapproval of each matter (or group of related matters), other than elections; and

- A provision, subject to reasonable, specified conditions, that the shares will be voted in accordance with the shareholder's choice.

In any election of directors, a proxy may not be voted for the election of any named candidates for director if the proxy is marked "withhold," or otherwise marked to indicate that the authority to vote for the election of directors is withheld [Corp. Code § 604(b)].

Proxies of corporations subject to federal securities reporting requirements (and federal proxy rules) must meet detailed requirements that are outside the scope of this chapter [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-1 et seq. (Regulation 14A; solicitation of proxies)]. In general, however, federal proxy regulations cover proxy solicitations by corporations whose stock is publicly traded or listed on a national stock exchange [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-2 (general exemptions to federal proxy solicitation rules)]. For detailed discussion of federal proxy rules, see FEDERAL SECURITIES EXCHANGE ACT OF 1934, Ch. 7, Proxy Regulation (Matthew Bender).

[c] Failure to Comply With Requirements

A failure to comply with the proxy rules [see Corp. Code § 604; see also [b], above] for the form of proxies distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons, if the corporation is not subject to the federal Securities and Exchange Act [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l, 78l(g)(2)], does not invalidate any action taken, but may be the basis for challenging any proxy at a shareholders' meeting, and for shareholder suit in the superior court to compel compliance [see Corp. Code § 604(c)].

§ 8A.254 Revocation of Proxy

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used by a shareholder to revoke all previous proxies. It must be given to the corporation before the vote pursuant to the most recent proxy being revoked [see [b], below]. For discussion of proxies in general, see §§ 8A.60-8A.63.

[b] Revocation of Proxies

A proxy is valid only for a period of 11 months from its date, unless otherwise provided in the proxy [Corp. Code § 705(b)]. A proxy continues in effect until revoked by the person executing it, before the vote pursuant to the proxy, with specified exceptions [Corp. Code § 705(b)]. These exceptions include the following:

- Revocation because of the death or incapacity of the maker of proxy if corporation receives written notice before vote is counted [see Corp. Code § 705(c)].

- Revocation of a proxy held by a pledgee, purchaser, creditor, or employee if the purpose for which the proxy was given no longer exists [see Corp. Code § 705(e); see also § 8A.252[1][c]].

- Revocation by a transferee of shares with no knowledge of irrevocable provision of proxy, subject to specified limitations [see Corp. Code § 705(f); see also § 8A.252[1][c]].

For discussion of the circumstances in which a proxy may be made irrevocable, see § 8A.252[1][b].

A proxy may be revoked by any of the following methods [Corp. Code § 705(b)]:

- A written notice to the corporation [see [2], below].

- A subsequent proxy (determined by the dates on the proxy forms, not the postmark date) executed by the same shareholder and presented to the meeting; or

- As to any one meeting, attendance at that meeting and voting in person.

§ 8A.260 Minutes of Shareholders' Annual Meeting

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a set of sample minutes for a shareholders' annual meeting. A corporation is required to keep written minutes of the proceeding of its shareholders. The minutes may be kept in written form or in another form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 1500]. The form should be adapted to reflect the actual course of the meeting. If practical, minutes of meeting may be prepared in advance [see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports].

Minutes are open to inspection by any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate [Corp. Code § 1600(a) (delineating terms of inspection rights)].

When records are kept in a form capable of being converted into clearly legible paper form, the form into which a record is converted is admissible in evidence, and acceptable for all other purposes, to the same extent as an original paper record of the same information would be, provided the paper form accurately portrays the record [Corp. Code § 1500].

For a waiver of notice, consent to holding, and approval of the minutes of a shareholders' meeting, see § 8A.220.

[b] Contents of Minutes

The precise contents of the minutes are not specified by statute. However, Corp. Code § 314 provides that the original or a copy in writing or other form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form of the minutes of specified corporate meetings, including shareholders' meetings, certified by a person purporting to be the secretary or assistant secretary of the corporation, is prima facie evidence of the due holding of that meeting and of the matters stated therein. This provision suggests that, at a minimum, the minutes should contain information showing that the meeting was validly held (notice, quorum) and should specify any actions proposed, taken, or approved by the shareholders at that meeting, with a record of that approval. The following specific matters should be included:

- The fact that the meeting was duly noticed.
- Number of shares present either in person or by proxy, and the existence of a quorum for the meeting.
- Approval of the minutes of the last meeting.
- Distribution, presentation, and discussion of the corporaion's annual report [see Corp. Code § 1501 (annual report requirement)].
- Nomination of directors.
- Tabulation of votes and election of directors.
- A description of any other action or proposal taken at the meeting, including a tabulation of the vote and a copy of any resolution passed by the shareholders at the meeting.

[c] Liability for Making False Entries in Minutes

Corporate officers and directors who knowingly make any entry in the minutes which is false in any material particular are jointly and severally liable to the corporation and to any party who relied on the entry for all resulting damages [Corp. Code § 1507].

Minutes of Shareholders' Annual Meeting

MINUTES OF ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SHAREHOLDERS OF _____ [name of corporation]

The following are the minutes of the annual meeting of the shareholders of _____[name of corporation], a California corporation, held at _____[place where meeting was held] on _____[date], pursuant to written notice given by the Secretary of the corporation.

Presiding Officer and Secretary

_____[Name and title of presiding officer, e.g., John Q. Smith, President of the Corporation], acted as Chair and presided over the meeting, and _____[name and title, e.g., Sally Jones, Secretary of the Corporation] acted as the secretary of the meeting.

Notice

The Secretary presented a declaration establishing that notice of the meeting had been duly given to each shareholder of this corporation. The Chair instructed the Secretary to attach the declaration to the minutes of the meeting.

Attendance and Quorum

The Secretary reported that the following shareholders were present at the meeting either in person or by proxy:

NAME	PERSON/PROXY
_____	_____
_____	_____

[If inspectors of election were appointed:]

At the request of the shareholders present at the meeting, the Chair appointed _____[names of one to three persons, as determined by a majority of shares present] as inspector[s] of election, pursuant to the Bylaws of the corporation and California Corporations Code Section 707. The inspector[s] _____[was or were] asked to report as to the number of shares outstanding and shares represented at the meeting, and the existence of a quorum. The inspector[s] thereupon reported that of the _____[number of shares outstanding] shares outstanding and entitled to vote on the record date for the meeting, _____[number of shares present] shares were present in person or by proxy at the meeting and, accordingly, a quorum was present.

[Or, if no inspectors of election were appointed:]

The Chair then asked the Secretary to report the number of shares represented either in person or by proxy in the meeting. The Secretary reported that of the _____[number of shares outstanding] shares outstanding and entitled to vote on the record date for the meeting, _____[number of shares represented] were represented either in person or by proxy and, accordingly a quorum was present.

[Continue with the following:]

Approval of Prior Minutes

The Secretary then distributed the minutes of the previous _____[annual or special] meeting of shareholders held on _____[date]. A discussion then ensued and, upon motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously

RESOLVED, that the minutes of the _____[annual or special] meeting of the shareholders of this corporation held on _____[date], are hereby adopted and approved.

Annual Report

The Chair next presented and distributed to the shareholders this corporation's balance sheet and income statement for the fiscal year ending _____[date]. The Chair and other officers present at the meeting then discussed the financial condition and prospects of this corporation and plans for the ensuing fiscal year.

Nomination and Election of Directors

The meeting then proceeded to the election of Directors, as successors to the Directors whose terms expire with this annual meeting, to hold office for a term extending to the next annual meeting and until their successors have been duly elected and qualified. The following persons were nominated to be Directors:

_____ _____[name]

There were no other nominations and the nominations were closed.

The Chair announced that under applicable California law shareholders are not entitled to cumulate votes in the election of Directors unless a candidate's or candidates' names have been placed in nomination prior to the voting and the shareholder has given notice at the meeting prior to the voting of the shareholder's intention to cumulate the shareholder's votes. The Chair explained that cumulative voting entitles a shareholder to a number of votes equal to the number of Directors to be elected multiplied by the number of votes to which the shareholder's shares are entitled. Those votes may then be tendered for a single candidate or distributed among as many candidates as the shareholder thinks fit. The Chair asked if any shareholder intended to cumulate his or her votes. The Chair then announced that voting would proceed with[out] cumulative voting and then asked the shareholders to mark their ballots in accordance with the foregoing instruction.

The Chair asked the _____[inspector(s) of election or Secretary] to count the votes. After doing so, the _____[inspector(s) of election or Secretary] reported that the following nominees for director had received the number of votes indicated opposite their names below, and that they had accordingly been duly elected as directors of this corporation until the next annual meeting and until their successors are duly elected and qualified:

Directors	Number of Votes Received	Number of Shares Voted Against
_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____

Other Actions or Proposals

[Describe other actions or proposals introduced or adopted at meeting, e.g.:]

The chair introduced the following resolution:

RESOLVED, that _____ [text of resolution]

After discussion, the Chair called for a vote of the shareholders on this resolution. The Secretary reported that _____ votes were cast in favor of adoption of this resolution and _____ votes were cast agsinst adoption. Accordingly, the Chair declared that the resolution _____[had or had not] been adopted by the shareholders.

[Continue with the following:]

Adjournment

There being no further business to come before the meeting, the Chair ordered the meeting adjourned.

_____ [signature of secretary]

This chapter discusses the fundamental rules applicable to voting agreements and voting trust agreements for shareholders of corporations. It explains the nature and purposes of these agreements and typical matters regulated by them. It briefly discusses close corporation management alternatives to voting agreements and voting trust agreements, distinguishing them from close corporation shareholder agreements and proxies. The chapter covers implementation of voting agreements and voting trust agreements, including securities considerations. It discusses rights and duties of voting trust certificate holders and powers and duties of trustees.

The Transaction Guide covers the ethical considerations that relate to drafting or reviewing either type of agreement, and the conflicts of interest the attorney must avoid. It contains a checklist to assist in selecting the appropriate type of control arrangement and a list of preliminary issues to be resolved if a voting trust agreement is selected.

The forms include a voting agreement, a voting agreement to grant an irrevocable proxy, a voting trust agreement for the benefit of the shareholders, voting trust certificates, and a voting trust extension agreement.

Shareholders' meetings and voting are discussed in Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements . Statutory shareholder agreements are covered in Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements . Nonstatutory shareholder agreements are discussed in Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.02[2] (Matthew Bender). Buy-sell agreements for small, closely held corporations are discussed in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

A. Agreements and Devices for Corporate Control

4-8B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8B.10

§ 8B.10 Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts--In General

The shareholders of a corporation may want to allocate control of the corporation in a way that is disproportionate to the ownership of shares of the corporation. Toward that end, they may want to ensure that their shares will be voted in a certain way. For example, they may want to vote their shares for specified persons as directors, vote as a majority of shareholders in the group may decide, or vote to effect a particular corporate policy. Common devices to accomplish these purposes are (1) voting agreements (or pooling agreements), in which the shareholders agree to vote their shares as provided in a voting agreement, and (2) voting trusts, in which legal title to the shares is transferred to a trustee, to be voted as provided in a trust agreement. Voting agreements are discussed in §§ 8B.20-8B.22; voting trusts are further discussed in §§ 8B.30-8B.38.

§ 8B.11 Use of Voting Agreement in Close Corporations

[1] In General

Voting agreements may be used in a close corporation to permit the shareholders to control the management of the corporation. Several management alternatives to voting agreements and voting trusts exist. These include a close corporation shareholder agreement [see Corp. Code § 158 (close corporation defined); see also [2], below; Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements] or a provision in the corporation's articles of incorporation for super-majority votes by the corporation's directors or shareholders on various matters [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 61.03[2] (Matthew Bender)]. In addition, a corporation's capital structure can be designed to give some shareholders control that is disproportionate to their dollar investment, either by providing for voting and nonvoting shares or shares with special voting rights [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.04[3] (Matthew Bender)]. This result can also be obtained by issuing debt securities for a portion of the corporation's initial financing, instead of issuing voting shares for that financing [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.04[4](Matthew Bender)].

A group of majority shareholders in a close corporation can also use a holding company, instead of a shareholder's voting agreement or voting trust, to consolidate their voting power. Further, shareholders may sometimes find it useful to create a partnership to hold their shares, or, on rare occasions, to cause the corporation to issue stock to several persons to be held jointly.

[2] Voting Agreement and Close Corporation Shareholder Agreement Distinguished

A voting agreement differs from a shareholder agreement in three significant respects. First, the use of a voting agreement is not limited to shareholders of a close corporation, as is a shareholder agreement [Cf. Corp. Code §§ 300(b), 706(a)]. Second, a voting agreement may be among less than all of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. Third, a voting agreement covers only the exercise of shareholder voting rights [Assem. Select Comm. Rpt. 86 (Dec. 1, 1975)] and does not change the role of the shareholders with respect to the directors [see Corp. Code § 300(b) (this subdivision does not apply to voting agreement authorized by Corp. Code § 706(a))]. Thus, if the shareholders of a close corporation want to enter into an agreement that extends beyond how their shares will be voted, and controls functions that are traditionally within the realm of the directors (for example, appointing officers and setting corporate policies), a shareholder agreement, not a voting agreement, should be used. For discussion of shareholder agreements, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

§ 8B.20 Voting Agreement Defined

The General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 100 et seq.] expressly authorizes shareholders' voting agreements (and irrevocable proxies to effect those agreements) [see Corp. Code § 706 (applying to voting agreements entered into, amended, or extended after January 1, 1977); Corp. Code § 705 (proxies)]. A voting agreement is a written agreement between two or more shareholders of a corporation requiring that the shares held by them be voted as provided in the agreement [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. To ensure the shares are voted in accordance with the agreement, the agreement may provide for the grant of an irrevocable proxy to a third party to vote the shares. An irrevocable proxy given under a voting agreement becomes revocable when the agreement terminates [Corp. Code § 705(e)].

The statute specifies that no voting agreement will be invalid because it fails to satisfy the statutory requirements of a voting trust, or because it is a proxy that fails to satisfy the statutory requirements for a proxy [Corp. Code § 706(c); see Corp. Code §§ 705 (proxies), 706(b) (voting trusts); see also § 8B.30]. It also specifies that Corp. Code § 706(a) does not invalidate any voting or other shareholder agreement (or irrevocable proxy complying with statutory requirements [see Corp. Code § 705(e)]) that is not otherwise illegal [Corp. Code § 706(d)].

The fact that shares are subject to a voting agreement must be stated on the face of the share certificates, or on the reverse, with a reference on the face [Corp. Code §§ 174, 418(a)(3)]. Unless so stated, the agreement will be unenforceable against a transferee of the shares who does not have actual knowledge of the agreement or proxy [Corp. Code §§ 418(b), 705(f)].

For discussion of the law governing voting agreements entered into before January 1, 1977, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 174.01[1] (Matthew Bender).

§ 8B.21 Purposes of Voting Agreement

A voting agreement generally is considered valid (and enforceable) if it is for a reasonable business purpose, does not intend or effect fraud, oppression, or wrong to minority shareholders, or otherwise have an illegal purpose [see Gelb, Close Corporation Control and the Voting Agreement, 16 Land & Water L. Rev. 225 (1981)]. However, a voting agreement is invalid if a shareholder enters into the agreement to vote his or her shares according to another's directions and the consideration for the agreement is some personal benefit to the shareholder [see Palmbaum v. Magulsky (1914) 217 Mass. 306, 104 N.E. 746, 747 ; Stott v. Stott (1932) 258 Mich. 547, 242 N.W. 747, 748 (finding agreement unenforceable when debtor-shareholder promised creditor-shareholder to vote his shares as directed by creditor to induce creditor to forgive debt); Brady v. Bean (1921) 221 Ill. App. 279, 283-284 (finding agreement unenforceable when shareholder agreed to vote for sale of assets in return for "kickback" of part of sale proceeds)]. In essence, this means that shareholders may enter into an agreement to vote their shares in a specified manner as long as the agreement does not contemplate or effect a breach of the shareholders' fiduciary duty to the corporation or to the minority shareholders.

In practice, a voting agreement often contains provisions requiring the shareholders to do some or all of the following [see § 8B.212]:

- Vote their shares for specified persons as directors.
- Vote as a majority of shareholders in the group may decide.
- Vote as directed by an arbitrator, in the event of disagreement.
- Vote to effect a particular corporate policy.

§ 8B.22 Enforcing Voting Agreements

Failure to abide by a valid voting agreement gives rise to a breach of contract action. However, such an action is often impractical because damages are generally speculative. Suits based on voting agreements are much more likely to result in a judicial order of specific performance than to result in damages. The statute provides for the remedy of specific performance in the event of breach of a voting agreements [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. Shareholders may try to ensure that shares will be voted in accordance with a voting agreement by granting irrevocable proxies in conjunction with the voting agreement.

4-8B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8B.30

§ 8B.30 Voting Trust Defined

A voting trust provides another method of allocating control among shareholders. A voting trust ordinarily is created by a written agreement between two or more shareholders, irrevocably transferring title to their shares (for a definite period of time not exceeding ten years) to voting trustees, who, in return, issue to the shareholders certificates of beneficial interest ("voting trust certificates"), and file a duplicate of the voting trust agreement with the corporation's secretary [see Corp. Code § 706(b); see also Note, The Voting Trust, 34 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 290, 290-292 (1959)].

Although in the classic voting trust, certificate holders retain a beneficial interest in the stock, voting trust certificate holders are not necessarily the beneficiaries of the voting trust. The trust may be created by common shareholders transferring their shares to the trustees in order to confer on them voting power for the protection of bondholders or holders of preferred shares [Mackin v. Nicollet Hotel (8th Cir. 1928) 25 F.2d 783, 787-788 , cert. denied, 278 U.S. 618] .

Voting trusts entered into, amended, or extended after January 1, 1977, are governed primarily by Corporations Code § 706(b). Voting trusts entered into before that date are regulated by prior law [see Corp. Code § 2301; Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting . § 174.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

§ 8B.31 Purposes of Voting Trust

Subject to limitations imposed by statute [see Corp. Code § 706(b)] and public policy [see Mackin v. Nicollet Hotel (8th Cir. 1928), 25 F.2d 783, 787-788 , cert. denied, 278 U.S. 618 (voting trusts may be used for any purpose that is not illegal or improper)], a voting trust is an extremely flexible device for implementing control arrangements in a corporation. Voting trusts frequently have been used in corporate reorganizations to give control of the corporation to those who hold its senior securities, such as bond holders or debenture holders. They are also useful to assure that the present management or certain corporate policies will continue to retain control with a relatively small capital investment by permitting others to purchase only a beneficial interest in the trust, and to protect minority interests by providing a unified minority vote. For further discussion of the uses of the voting trust, see Note, The Voting Trust, 34 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 290, 290-292 (1959).

§ 8B.32 Voting Trust, Voting Agreement, and Proxy Distinguished

A voting trust differs from a voting agreement or proxy in that legal title must be transferred to trustees, who have the right to vote the shares according to the terms of the trust agreement [see § 8B.30]. A voting trust imposes a fiduciary duty on the trustees exercising the voting power [see § 8B.38[3]; see also Gose, Legal Characteristics and Consequences of Voting Trusts, 20 Wash. L. Rev. 129, 139 (1945)].

In a voting agreement, on the other hand, each shareholder may retain the power to vote his or her shares, but must agree to do so as provided in the voting agreement, or may give the authority to vote the shares to a third party as provided in the agreement [see § 8B.20]. A voting agreement imposes a contractual obligation, rather than a fiduciary obligation, on those exercising the voting power.

A proxy creates an agency relationship and is governed by agency rules. A proxy is an authorization given by a shareholder to another party to vote his or her shares [see Corp. Code §§ 178, 705(a)]. Under this arrangement, the shareholder retains legal title to the shares, but, as principal, gives an agent the power to vote the shares. For further discussion of proxies, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations, § 62.04[2], Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting, § 172 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of other types of agreements and control devices, see § 8B.11.

§ 8B.33 Transfer of Shares to Trustees; Issuance of Trust Certificates

The Corporations Code requires that the shares constituting the voting trust be transferred, by written agreement, to the trustees [Corp. Code § 706(b); see § 8B.30]. Shareholders ordinarily deposit their shares with the trustee and receive in exchange trust certificates issued in the trustee's name, as trustee of the voting trust. These certificates evidence the shareholders' beneficial interest in the trust. The mechanics of this procedure may vary depending on the circumstances. For discussion of this issue, including the use of depositories, see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 111, Voting Trusts, § 111.03[3] (Matthew Bender).

Voting trust certificates are generally transferable and negotiable to the same extent as stock certificates. Consequently, as a practical matter, a corporation's voting trust agreement often contains some restriction on the transferability of the trust certificates [see, e.g., § 8B.211[2]].

§ 8B.35 Duration of Voting Trust

[1] Term; Extension of Term

A voting trust is limited to a term not exceeding 10 years [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. However, at any time within two years prior to the trust's expiration date, one or more beneficiaries under the voting trust agreement may, by written agreement and with the written consent of the voting trustee or trustees, extend the duration of the voting trust with respect to their shares for an additional term not exceeding 10 years from the expiration date of the trust as originally fixed or as last extended according to this procedure [Corp. Code § 706(b)].

The validity of an otherwise lawful voting trust agreement will not be affected during its original 10-year period or any additional 10-year extension by the fact that, under its terms, it will or may last beyond any of these 10-year periods [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. However, the agreement will be invalid at the expiration of any of these periods unless its term is extended in accordance with the statutory procedure described above within two years before its expiration [Assem. Select Com. Rpt. 87 (Dec. 1, 1975)].

[2] Revocation; Termination

There is no provision in the General Corporation Law for the revocation of voting trusts [see Corp. Code § 706(b)]. A voting trust terminates when its term expires, unless properly extended [Corp. Code § 706(b); see [1], above]. The provisions in the Probate Code governing modification and termination of trusts in general provide that unless expressly made irrevocable by the trust instrument, the trust is revocable by the trustor [Prob. Code § 15400; see Prob. Code § 15401 (methods of revocation)]. However, as a rule, voting trusts are irrevocable. Nevertheless, a voting trust may be terminated on equitable grounds, as, for example, when its purpose has been frustrated [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 111, Voting Trusts, § 111.04[3] (Matthew Bender)].

For discussion of the maximum term and revocability of voting trusts entered into before January 1, 1977, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , §

174.02[1][b], [c], [2] (Matthew Bender).

§ 8B.36 Application of Securities Laws

[1] California Corporate Securities Law

[a] In General

Beneficial interests in voting trusts and voting trust certificates are securities under the California Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25019]. Therefore, the offer and sale of certificates in a voting trust must be qualified unless expressly exempted from qualification [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 25110, 25102(f) (no more than 35 beneficial owners in trust); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.12; see also [c], below].

After the voting trust certificates have been issued, however, certain stock splits or reverse stock splits in the beneficial interests of the voting trust are exempt from qualification. This exemption, however, is limited to a split or reverse split occurring as a result of a stock split or a reverse stock split of the underlying securities that are exempt in a reorganization transaction [Corp. Code § 25103(f)] or a stock dividend that is not a sale [Corp. Code § 25017(f); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.9]. Further, any beneficial interests issued in accordance with this exemption are subject to all conditions imposed by the Commissioner applicable to the beneficial interests previously issued with respect to the underlying securities that are the subject of the stock split, reverse stock split, or dividend [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.9].

If nonexempt securities are issued without qualification, the shareholders may rescind the transfer, thus creating a revocable voting trust agreement, provided the action is brought within the statute of limitations [see Corp. Code § 25503].

[b] Voting Trust Distinguished From Other Securities

Voting trust certificates are distinct from other types of securities because the trustees, rather than the corporation, are the issuers [see Corp. Code § 25010 ("issuer" defined)]. Consequently, the trustees must sign the application for qualification of the certificates [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.110.2].

[c] Small Offering Exemption May Not Be Available

A voting trust entered into or contemplated at the time of original issuance of shares is likely to be incompatible with the requirement of the small offering exemption from qualification that there be only one class of stock outstanding immediately after the proposed sale [see Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. The reason for this is that to the extent that they have the effect of rearranging the relative voting power of shareholders holding nominally the same class of stock, voting trusts, voting agreements, and irrevocable proxies create more than one class of shares [see Dept. of Corps. Releases Nos. 50-C, 55-C]. Consequently, the regulations require the person signing the notice of issuance of shares under that exemption to affirm that no shareholder agreement, voting agreement, irrevocable proxy, or other arrangement has been or will be entered into by the shareholders that would have the effect of rendering incorrect the statement that only one class of voting common shares will be outstanding [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.8].

If the small offering exemption contained in Corp. Code § 25102(h) is not available, the limited offering exemption in Corp. Code § 25102(f) ordinarily should apply. For further discussion of the requirements for exemption from qualification of securities as a small or limited offering, see Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions and Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption .

[2] Federal Securities Law

Voting trust certificates are also securities under the Securities Act of 1933 [see Securities Act of 1933, § 2; 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1)] and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see Securities Exchange Act of 1934 § 3(a)(10); 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(10)]. Consequently, they are subject to federal registration requirements and other regulations, unless an exemption applies [see Securities Act of 1933, § 3; 15 U.S.C. § 77c; Securities Exchange Act of 1934 § 3(a)(12); 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(12)]. For further discussion of federal securities regulation, see FEDERAL SECURITIES ACT OF 1933 (Matthew Bender), and Gadsby, FEDERAL SECURITIES EXCHANGE ACT OF 1934, ch. 4, Exchange Act Registration and Reporting Requirements, § 4.01 (Matthew Bender).

§ 8B.37 Rights and Duties of Certificate Holders

Holders of voting trust certificates generally have the rights (other than voting rights) of shareholders, unless the voting trust agreement provides otherwise. Certificate holders ordinarily are entitled to receive dividends, although some agreements permit the trustee to deduct his or her expenses from the dividends before distributing them to certificate holders. Certificate holders usually also are entitled to the return of their stock on the termination of the voting trust [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 111, Voting Trusts, § 111.06[5] (Matthew Bender)].

The General Corporation Law accords specific rights to certificate holders, including the rights to bring a derivative action [see Corp. Code § 800], to inspect the record of shareholders [see Corp. Code § 1600(c)], to inspect the corporation's accounting books, records, and meeting minutes [see Corp. Code § 1601], to bring an action for involuntary dissolution [see Corp. Code § 1800], and to purchase shares to avoid involuntary dissolution [see Corp. Code § 2000].

Certificate holders are bound by acts performed in good faith by the trustees, provided those acts are within the scope of the trustees' authority [Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 111, Voting Trusts, § 111.06[4] (Matthew Bender)].

C. Voting Trusts

§ 8B.38 Powers and Duties of Voting Trustees

[1] In General

The voting trust agreement determines the qualifications, powers, and duties of the trustees, provided its provisions are not contrary to the statute authorizing voting trusts [see Corp. Code § 706(b)] or to public policy [see Mackin v. Nicollet Hotel (8th Cir. 1928), 25 F.2d 783, 787-788 , cert. denied, 278 U.S. 618, 49 S. Ct. 22, 73 L. Ed. 541 (1928) (holding that voting trusts may be used for any purpose that is not illegal or improper)].

[2] Limitations on Voting Powers

The trust agreement should expressly state any limitations on the trustees' voting powers. Examples of common limitations include the following:

- Requirements that the trustees vote for certain persons as directors, or vote in a certain way on a particular issue.

- Requirements that the trustees vote only for the election of directors and for other routine matters normally handled at the shareholders' annual meeting.

- Directions that the trustees submit extraordinary matters to the certificate holders and vote only as directed by the majority of holders.

Extraordinary matters generally include such matters as mergers and reorganizations, sales of assets, amending the articles of incorporation or the bylaws, reducing the corporation's capital, increasing the authorized number of shares, creating new classes of stock, or dissolving the corporation.

[3] Fiduciary Duties

The statutes governing trusts generally have been applied to voting trusts [see Olincy v. Merle Norman Cosmetics, Inc. (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 260, 274, 19 Cal. Rptr. 387 (applying former Civ. Code § 2288)] and, except as modified by statute, the common law governing trusts also applies to voting trusts [Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 111, Voting Trusts, § 111.05[6][b] (Matthew Bender)]. Thus, trustees owe a strict duty of loyalty to certificate holders and must administer the trust solely in the interests of the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16002; see Prob. Code § 16000 et seq. (trustee's duties in general); see also Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting , § 174.02[5] (Matthew Bender). Further, the trustee must not exercise his or her power to further the trustee's interest to the detriment of some or all of the beneficiaries [Moore v. Bowes (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 162, 165, 64 P. 2d 423 (trustee may not appropriate corporate property held in trust for trustee's own use)].

[4] Removal of Trustees

The beneficiaries of the voting trust have the right to seek the removal of the trustees for fraud and misconduct [Prob. Code § 16420(a)(5); see Prob. Code § 16400 et seq. (trustee's liability for breach of trust)]. Although courts rarely exercise their equity power to remove voting trustees [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, ch. 111, Voting Trusts, § 111.05[4] (Matthew Bender)], the courts will remove a trustee if removal is necessary to preserve the trust property [Moore v. Bowes (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 162, 165, 64 P. 2d 423] . In Moore v. Bowes, the California Supreme Court noted that trustees are subject to removal whenever it appears that their private interests conflict with their trust duties, and when it appears that trust property has been appropriated for the trustee's own use [Moore v. Bowes (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 162, 165, 64 P. 2d 423] .

§ 8B.50 Effect of Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts on S Corporation Status

A small business corporation may elect to be an S corporation [I.R.C. § 1362(a)]. Unlike a C corporation, which is a separate tax-paying entity [see I.R.C. § 11], an S corporation is generally treated as a conduit of income, loss, deductions, and credits to shareholders [see I.R.C. §§ 1363, 1366]. To qualify as an S corporation, a corporation must have no more than one class of stock [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D)]. Differences in common stock voting rights do not cause a corporation to be treated as having more than one class of stock [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(4)]. Prior to enactment of the latter rule, the Tax Court held that alteration of voting power brought about by an agreement among corporate shareholders and including an irrevocable proxy to vote the shares of parties to the agreement did not cause a corporation to be treated as having more than one class of stock outstanding [Parker Oil Co. v. Commissioner (1972) 58 T.C. 985, 990] . The Subchapter S provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.] also provide that certain trusts, including trusts created primarily to exercise the voting power of stock transferred to them, may be shareholders of S corporations [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(iv)]. Thus, neither a voting agreement nor a voting trust will cause the corporation to lose its income tax status as an S corporation.

For further discussion of the criteria which a corporation must meet to be eligible for Subchapter S status and consideration of the advisability of electing to be taxed as an S corporation, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For discussion of the procedures to be used in electing or terminating Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

§ 8B.110 Identifying Conflicts of Interest

PRACTICE TIP:

In drafting a voting agreement or voting trust agreement, it is not uncommon for the parties to request that one attorney represent all of the individual participants. Under the right circumstances, having one attorney represent all parties can result in a simpler, less expensive, and more harmonious transaction than if each party were represented by separate counsel. However, an attorney who is asked to represent multiple parties to a single transaction must first identify any actual or potential conflict and then determine whether the conflict may be waived. If the conflict may be waived, a suitable waiver must be obtained [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)]. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

NOTE:

For further discussion of this topic, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business*, §§ 1A.33-1A.37, 1A.113*. For waivers of conflicts of interest, see §§ 1A.203[2], 1A.204[2].

§ 8B.111 Determining Scope of Work to Be Performed by Attorney

1. Determine tasks attorney will perform.

NOTE:
The procedural aspects of formation of a corporation are covered in Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations .

2. Determine whether consultation or association of specialist or other professional is required [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements].

NOTE:
Drafting (or reviewing) a voting agreement or voting trust can involve areas of law, including business, tax, and community property considerations, particularly if the agreement contains buy-sell provisions. The drafting attorney has the duty to refer the client to a specialist or recommend the retention of a specialist if the attorney lacks the requisite skill or knowledge [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements]. The drafting attorney often relies heavily on the advice of other professionals, such as accountants, financial planners, and trust officers.

§ 8B.113 Making Preliminary Determinations if Voting Trust Agreement Is Selected

[1] Transfer of Shares to Trustee

1. Determine procedure by which certificate holders transfer their shares to trustees.

    a. Will trustee be designated to receive participating shares?

    b. Will depository (bank or trust company) be designated to receive participating shares?

    c. Will registrar be designated to receive participating shares?

2. If registrar or depository is used, determine following:

NOTE:

A voting trust agreement may contain provisions appointing a registrar to act as an agent for the trustees [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Appendix A, Form 8.22, Voting Trust Agreement (Matthew Bender)].

a. Will bond be required; if so, how much?

b. Will registrar or depository be granted authority to receive and disburse money?

c. Must disbursements be countersigned by trustees?

d. Will independent accountant or auditor be employed to audit financial transactions involving registrar or depository?

3. Select physical location of stock certificates of securities held in trust.

a. Will stock certificates be placed in depository (bank or trust company)?

b. Will stock certificates be placed in safe deposit box?

c. If placed in safe deposit box, who will have access?

[2] Trustees

1. Determine any qualifications or limitations on who may be appointed voting trustee.

PRACTICE TIP:
Any qualifications or limitations on who may be a trustee should be set out in the voting trust agreement. In California, where there are no statutory rules regarding the qualification of a trustee, the trustee may be a shareholder of the corporation, who may or may not be a participant in the trust, a director, or a creditor. In the case of a professional corporation, the trustee or trustees must be shareholders of the corporation. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

2. Select number of trustees.

3. Determine voting procedure if there are two or more trustees.

NOTE:
If there are two or more trustees, the agreement should establish a voting procedure. The agreement might provide, for example, that the required vote be unanimous, or a majority; or the agreement might provide a method to break any deadlock. The provision in § 8B.210[2] provides for a majority vote and requires that the matter be put to a vote of the shareholders in the event that the trustees are equally divided on a matter [see § 8B.210[2], P 4.08].

4. Determine any limitations on trustees' voting powers [see § 8B.38[1], [2]; § 8B.212].

a. Will trustees be required to vote for certain individuals as directors or vote in certain way on any particular issue?

b. Will trustees be restricted to voting for election of directors and on matters ordinarily arising at shareholder's annual meeting?

c. Will trustees submit extraordinary matters to voting trust certificate holders and vote only as approved by majority of certificate holders?

5. Determine trustees' duties.

a. Will trustees issue voting trust certificates to shareholders who are parties to agreement?

PRACTICE TIP:
Although not required by statute, in practice most voting trust agreements provide for the issuance of voting trust certificates because they are tangible evidence of the participating shareholder's interest in the stock and facilitate the transfer of these rights. Voting trust certificates are transferable in the same manner as stock certificates [see § 8B.33]. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

b. Will trustees be permitted to institute court action on behalf of trust certificate holders?

c. Will agreement grant any additional powers to trustee to administer trust?

d. Trustees must file executed copy of agreement with corporation's secretary [see Corp. Code § 706(b); § 8B.34].

NOTE:
The agreement may grant additional powers to the trustee, provided that the exercise of those powers does not violate the governing statute or public policy [see §§ 8B.31, 8B.38].

6. Determine whether trust agreement will limit trustees' personal liability?

NOTE:
Some trust agreements limit the personal liability of trustees [see § 8B.210[2]. The trust agreement may not, however, exonerate the trustee for deliberate acts of malfeasance [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, ch. 111, Voting Trusts*, § 111.05[6]* (Matthew Bender)].

7. Determine amount and source of compensation to be paid to trustees.

8. Determine source of reimbursement of trustees' administrative expenses.

NOTE:
Reimbursement for the trustees' administrative expenses should not be paid from corporate funds because the corporation is not a party to the agreement; the costs should be paid by the certificate holders. A voting trust often provides that the trustee may deduct their administrative expenses before distributing dividends received by them as record holder to the trust certificate holders [see § 8B.210[2]].

Furthermore, courts will usually require reimbursement of expenses of a trustee who has successfully defended a suit demanding the trustee's removal [see Moore v. Bowes (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 162, 166-167, 64 P. 2d 423 (lawyer's fees allowed to defendant trustee who was found not to have violated his duties and not subject to removal)].

9. Select terms of trustees, if necessary.

10. Determine how successor trustee will be appointed, if desired.

NOTE:
If the certificate holders want input in choosing a successor voting trustee (if a trustee dies, resigns, or is removed), the agreement should so specify, or the agreement may provide that any vacancies will be filled by the remaining trustees [see § 8B.210[2]].

[3] Effective Date, Duration, and Termination of Trust

1. Select effective date of trust (assuming permit has been issued by Commissioner of Corporations approving issuance of trust certificates, if required) [see § 8B.36; see also Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues].

NOTE:

An effective date might be a fixed date, the date on which the voting trust agreement is signed by all or a fixed percentage of participating shareholders, or on the filing of a copy of the voting trust agreement with corporation's secretary.

2. Determine duration of trust.

NOTE:

A voting trust is limited to a maximum period of ten years, with additional extensions not to exceed 10 years permitted at any time within two years prior to the time of expiration [Corp. Code § 706(b); see § 8B.35].

3. Determine any rights of trustees or certificate holders to terminate voting trust agreement.

NOTE:

There is no provision in the General Corporation Law for the revocation of voting trusts [see Corp. Code § 706(b)]. A voting trust terminates when its term expires, unless properly extended [Corp. Code § 706(b); see § 8B.35[1]]. The provisions in the Probate Code governing modification and termination of trusts in general provide that unless expressly made irrevocable by the trust instrument, the trust is revocable by the trustor [Prob. Code § 15400; see Prob. Code § 15401 (methods of revocation)]. However, voting trusts are generally irrevocable, although a voting trust may be terminated on equitable grounds, as for example, when its purpose has been frustrated [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 111, Voting Trusts*, § 111.04[3]* (Matthew Bender)].

4. Determine events that will cause trust to terminate, if voting trust is not irrevocable, such as:

a. When annual corporate earnings after taxes are reduced to a specified amount.

b. When corporate debts rise above a specified amount.

c. Death or resignation of any or all trustees.

5. Determine termination procedure, if voting trust is not irrevocable.

a. Will termination be by vote and notice by trustees?

b. Will termination be by vote, consent, or agreement of trust certificate holders, with or without meeting, and notice to trustees?

6. Determine mechanics of final accounting or report by trustees.

    a. When and to whom will final accounting be given?

    b. How will unpaid expenses for trust be collected from trust certificate holders?

7. Determine time period in which trust certificates must be exchanged for securities held by trustees.

1. Make sure that the certificates of shares subject to voting agreement under Corp. Code § 706(a), irrevocable proxy under Corp. Code § 705(e), or restrictions on voting rights contractually imposed by corporation have been stamped with legend indicating that fact [see Corp. Code § 418(a)].

§ 8B.130 Securities Considerations for Voting Trusts

1. Determine whether offer and sale of certificates in voting trust constitutes sale of securities subject to federal registration or state qualification requirements, or is exempted from registration or qualification [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.100; Corp. Code § 25110; 15 U.S.C. § 77c; 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(12)]].

NOTE:

Beneficial interests in voting trusts and voting trust certificates are securities under the California Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25019] and under the Securities Act of 1933 [see Securities Act of 1933, § 2; 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1)] and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 3(a)(10); 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(10)]. Therefore, the offer and sale of certificates in a voting trust must be qualified unless expressly exempted from qualification [see P 2, below].

2. Prepare and file appropriate exemption or qualification and registration applications [see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues , for discussion of the available exemptions and determinations regarding whether qualification of the securities is required].

§ 8B.200 Voting Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is voting or pooling agreement among shareholders of a corporation. This agreement covers all matters subject to a vote of the shareholders.

Corp. Code § 706(a) permits two or more shareholders to make an agreement in writing to exercise any voting rights attached to the shares. For a voting agreement that is implemented by an irrevocable proxy, see § 8B.201. For further discussion of the distinctions between voting agreements and voting trust agreements, as well as other control arrangements, see [c], below, and §§ 8B.10, 8B.11, 8B.32.

[b] Statutory Requirements of Voting Agreement

The General Corporation Law requires that a voting agreement between two or more shareholders of a corporation must be in writing and signed by the parties to the agreement.

Unlike a voting trust, a voting agreement need not be renewed every 10 years, nor must it be filed with the corporate secretary and made available for inspection.

[c] Voting Agreement and Shareholder Agreement Distinguished

A voting agreement differs from a shareholder agreement in three significant respects. First, the use of a voting agreement is not limited to shareholders of a close corporation as is a shareholder agreement [cf. Corp. Code §§ 300(b), 706(a)]. Second, a voting agreement may be among less than all of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. Third, a voting agreement covers only the exercise of shareholder voting rights [Assem. Select Comm. Rpt. 86 (Dec. 1, 1975)]

and does not change the role of the shareholders with respect to the directors [see Corp. Code § 300(b) (this subdivision does not apply to voting agreement authorized by Corp. Code § 706(a))]. Thus, if the shareholders of a close corporation want to enter into an agreement that extends beyond how their shares will be voted and controls functions that are traditionally within the realm of the directors (appointing officers and setting corporate policies, for example), a shareholder agreement, and not a voting agreement, should be used. For discussion of shareholder agreements, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a voting agreement providing for the delivery of an irrevocable proxy to a specified person to vote the shares as specified in the agreement.

Voting agreements designating persons other than the shareholder to vote shares may be implemented by granting an irrevocable proxy to these persons [Corp. Code §§ 705(e)(5), 706(a); see [2], below] or by creating a voting trust.

In this form, the proxy holders are authorized to vote the shares subject to this agreement for the limited purposes of electing specified persons to the corporation's board of directors and voting affirmatively for specified proposals. These provisions, however, may be modified, as needed.

For further discussion of the use of irrevocable proxies and voting agreements, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.04 (Matthew Bender). For a voting agreement, see § 8B.200. For a voting trust agreement, see § 8B.210.

§ 8B.210 Voting Trust Agreement for Benefit of Shareholders

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a voting trust agreement for a group of shareholders who wish to consolidate their voting power by pooling their votes. It transfers all voting power from the shareholders to trustees who will represent the interests of these shareholders.

[b] Effective Date of Agreement

The effective date might be a fixed date (following the qualification of the voting trust certificates with the California Commissioner of Corporations, if required), or the date on which the voting trust agreement is signed by all or a stated percentage of participating shareholders and the other parties to the agreement, or on the filing of a copy of the voting trust agreement with corporation's secretary.

[c] Qualification With Commissioner of Corporations

Voting trust certificates are securities subject to regulation by the Commissioner of Corporations [Corp. Code § 25019 (security defined)]. The offer and sale of securities must be qualified unless they fall within an exempt classification [Corp. Code § 25110; see Corp. Code §§ 25017(a) (sale defined), 25100 et seq. (exemptions)]. Securities listed or approved for listing on a national securities exchange that has been certified by rule or order of the Commissioner, and warrants or rights to purchase those securities are exempted from the qualification requirement [Corp. Code § 25100(o)]. Offers or sales of voting common stock by corporations may be exempt from qualification if, for example, there are no more than 35 beneficial owners in trust [see Corp. Code § 25102(f); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.12; see also § 8B.36].

Voting trust certificates are also securities under the Securities Act of 1933 [see Securities Act of 1933 § 2; 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1)] and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 3(a)(10); 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(10)]. Consequently, they are subject to federal registration requirements and other regulations unless an exemption applies [see Securities Act of 1933, § 3; 15 U.S.C. § 77c], as well as to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see Securities Exchange Act of 1934 § 3(a)(12); 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(12)]. For further discussion of state and federal securities regulations, see § 8B.36. For a more detailed guide to securities regulation issues, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues . Detailed coverage of specific exemptions and qualification requirements appears in Chs. 6A-6H.

The issuance of certificates in a voting trust without qualification, unless exempt, gives the shareholders the right to rescind the transfer [Corp. Code § 25503], thus creating a revocable trust. The action to rescind, however, must be brought before the earlier of the expiration of two years after the issuance without qualification or the expiration of one year after the plaintiff discovers the facts constituting any issuance without qualification [Corp. Code § 25507(a)].

[d] Restrictions on Transfer; Share Buy-Sell Provisions

As securities [see [c], above], voting trust certificates are transferable, just like shares in the corporation. However, the original parties to the voting trust often wish to maintain the integrity of their membership by restricting the transfer of shares to outsiders. The restrictions on transfer of corporate shares or share voting certificates can take several forms [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements]. Voting trust agreements generally contain an obligation on the part of each certificate holder to offer the other certificate holders a first right to purchase the shares. Provisions to implement restrictions on transfer may be included in the voting trust agreement or in a separate buy-sell agreement. No specific implementing provisions are recommended in this form because of the great variety of buy-sell arrangements. The issues to be considered in drafting buy-sell agreements, including methods of share valuation and payment for shares (such as deferred payment or installment payments), as well as form provisions for various types of buy-sell agreements, are covered in detail in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

[e] Trustees' Voting Rights

Voting trustees are record holders of the shares of stock held in trust and, thus, are entitled to vote the shares on all matters [see Corp. Code §§ 702(a), 706(b)]. However, their voting power may be limited in the voting trust agreement to exclude the right to vote on specified matters (such as reorganizations, mergers, sale of assets, amendments to the articles of incorporation), without the prior written direction of the owners of a specified percentage of shares subject to the voting trust agreement. For provisions modifying the trustees' voting power, see § 8B.212. The agreement may also provide that the trustees must vote at all times in compliance with the prior written direction of the owners of a specified percentage of shares.

PRACTICE TIP:

If it is intended that the voting powers of the trustee be limited to certain matters, these should be clearly spelled out in the voting trust agreement. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

[f] Termination of Trust

A voting trust is limited to a term not exceeding 10 years [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. However, at any time within two years prior to the trust's expiration date, one or more beneficiaries under the voting trust agreement may, by written agreement and with the written consent of the voting trustee or trustees, extend the duration of the voting trust with respect to their shares for an additional term not exceeding 10 years from the expiration date of the trust as originally fixed or as last extended according to this procedure [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. For discussion of revocability of voting trusts, see § 8B.35[2].

This form creates a voting trust for a specific term. However, it provides alternative paragraphs that have the effect of making the trust revocable by (1) permitting the early termination of the agreement on the written consent of a specified percentage of the certificate holders, and (2) permitting shareholders who deposit shares in the trust to withdraw any number of shares from the trust at any time.

[g] Extension of Term

At any time within two years prior to the expiration of a voting trust agreement as originally fixed or as last extended, one or more certificate holders may extend the duration of the agreement for a period not to exceed 10 years. This extension must be in writing and the trustees must consent in writing [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. An extension binds only those shareholders that are parties to it. This form contains a provision for extension of the trust's term. For a representative extension agreement, see § 8B.213.

[h] Filing Duplicate With Corporate Secretary

Duplicate copies of the voting trust agreement and any extensions must be filed with the secretary of the corporation and are open for inspection by a shareholder, a holder of a voting trust certificate, or the agent of either on the same terms as the record of the corporation's shareholders. [Corp. Code § 706(b)].

[i] Additional Provisions

A voting trust agreement may contain provisions appointing a registrar to act as an agent for the trustees [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Appendix A, Form 8.22, Voting Trust Agreement (Matthew Bender)].

For provisions governing meetings of trustees and of certificate holders, see § 8B.212 and Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Appendix A, Form 8.22, Voting Trust Agreement (Matthew Bender).

§ 8B.212 Voting Trust Provisions--Limitations on Trustees' Voting Power

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

Voting trustees are record holders of shares in the trust. Therefore, they or their proxies are exclusively entitled to vote the shares on all questions [Corp. Code §§ 702(a), 706(b)].

Provisions governing the voting rights of trustees are among the most important provisions in a voting trust agreement. These provisions should be explicit regarding the trustee's voting powers. If there any limitations on those voting powers, the limitations should be specifically noted in the agreement. This form provides alternative provisions limiting the voting powers of the voting trustees and is designed for use in a voting trust agreement. Limitations on the voting powers of trustees are discussed further in § 8B.38[2].

[b] Methods of Limiting Voting Power

A voting trust agreement frequently confers broad voting powers on the trustee. A typical provision grants the trustees the voting powers that the shareholders are entitled to exercise at any shareholders' meeting, without requiring consultation with or approval by the voting trust certificate holders. There are, however, various methods of permitting the certificate holders to have some control over the voting of the shares, including the following:

- Authorizing the trustees, in their discretion, to call a meeting of the trust certificate holders to ascertain their wishes on particular questions [see [2], below].

- Authorizing the trustees to vote the shares in any manner unless directed otherwise by the certificate holders [see [2], below].

- Authorizing the trustees to vote only on particular questions (e.g., the election of directors) without the direction of certificate holders, who will determine how the shares will be voted on all other matters [see [2], below].

- Prohibiting the trustees from voting on certain specific proposals (e.g., extraordinary or fundamental changes) without obtaining the vote of a certain percentage of certificate holders [see [2], below].

- Prohibiting the trustees from voting on any proposal without the direction of a certain percentage of certificate holders [see [2], below].

This chapter examines the fundamental rules applicable to statutory shareholder agreements for close corporations. It discusses the nature and purposes of shareholder agreements, typical matters regulated by these agreements, and statutory provisions that may not be waived or altered by shareholder agreements. It discusses management alternatives to shareholder agreements, distinguishing shareholder agreements from voting and management agreements. The chapter covers implementation of shareholder agreements, including binding transferees of shares covered by the agreement and securities considerations in modifying the agreement. It briefly discusses shareholder liability under the agreement.

The Transaction Guide covers the ethical considerations that arise when an attorney drafts or reviews a shareholder agreement, and the conflicts of interest the attorney must avoid. It contains a checklist of typical provisions and a checklist of impermissible provisions.

Forms include a shareholder agreement providing for management of the corporation, employment of the shareholders, restriction on stock transfers, and noncompetition, and a shareholder agreement providing for the management of the business of a close corporation by the corporation's sole shareholder. Also included are provisions ensuring S corporation tax treatment, and a form for spousal consent to the shareholder agreement.

Voting trusts and agreements are covered in Ch. 8B, Voting Trusts and Agreements . Nonstatutory shareholder agreements are discussed in Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.02[2] (Matthew Bender). Buy-sell agreements for small, closely held corporations are discussed in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

CHAPTER 8C CLOSE CORPORATION SHAREHOLDER AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Nature and Purpose of Shareholder Agreements

4-8C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8C.10

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger Practice Consultant

§ 8C.10 Shareholder Agreement Defined

A shareholder agreement is a written agreement among all of the shareholders of a statutory close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158 ("close corporation" requires provision in articles limiting shareholders to 35 and specifically identifying corporation as close corporation)] relating to the affairs and management of the corporation [Corp. Code §§ 186, 204(a), 300(b); see §§ 8D.13-8D.20]. If the close corporation has only one shareholder, the shareholder agreement is between the shareholder and the corporation [Corp. Code § 186].

PRACTICE TIP:

The attorney preparing a shareholder agreement should make clear to the shareholders that the attorney is representing the corporation and not any of the individual shareholders. Because of the potential for conflict over the shareholder agreement the attorney should disclose potential conflicts to the party shareholders and obtain written conflict waivers, which can be done in the shareholder agreement [see § 8C.110; see also Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, §§ 1A.33-1A.37, 1A.113; for appropriate waiver of conflict forms, see Ch. 1A, §§ 1A.203[2], 1A.204[2]]. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

The General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 300(b)] provides that no shareholder agreement that relates to any phase of the corporation's affairs will be invalid as between the parties to it on any of the following grounds:

- It relates to the conduct of the affairs of the corporation so as to interfere with the discretion of the directors;

- It is an attempt to treat the corporation as if it were a partnership; or

- It is an attempt to arrange relationships among the shareholders in a manner that would be appropriate only between partners.

Thus, in practice, a shareholder agreement permits shareholders to do the following:

- Manage the close corporation informally, according to the provisions of the agreement, without observing corporate formalities related to director and shareholder meetings [see also Corp. Code § 300(e); and

- Make decisions in areas usually reserved for the board of directors, such as dividend policy [see § 8D.16], distribution of assets on liquidation [see § 8D.17], selection of officers, and determination of their compensation and tenure [see Corp. Code § 300(b), (e); see also § 8D.15].

Unless otherwise provided in the shareholder agreement, the agreement may not be modified, extended, or revoked by less than unanimous agreement of the parties [Corp. Code § 300(b); see § 8D.31]. A shareholder agreement terminates when the corporation ceases to be a close corporation, or on the original issuance of shares by the corporation to a new shareholder who does not become a party to the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b)], unless the agreement provides that it will continue to the extent it is enforceable apart from Corp. Code § 300(b) [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

It may be desirable to include a provision requiring review of certain provisions to reflect changed conditions. An example would be a provision requiring buyout prices to be increased based on the success of the business as determined by a quantifiable measure. Such reviewing provisions can be mandated to occur on a certain date or can be triggered by the occurrence of specified events. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

4-8C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8C.11

§ 8C.11 Purpose of Shareholder Agreements

Shareholders in close corporations frequently want to manage the corporation in a partnership-like manner, determining among themselves who will manage the corporation's business and how that management will be exercised, while retaining the limitation on personal liability and the other benefits of the corporate form. An important objective in many shareholder agreements is to protect a minority shareholder from the majority's power by giving the minority shareholder a voice in the corporation's management, either as a member of the board of directors or otherwise. Other shareholder agreements protect shareholder-employees by ensuring continued employment, and protect shareholder-investors by assuring a specified return of capital through dividends. A shareholder agreement may provide a mechanism requiring the corporation to buy back a shareholder's shares on the occurrence of certain events such as the shareholder's death, disability or termination of employment. The price for the buy back can be determined by a formula set forth in the shareholder agreement.

When the shareholders of a close corporation enter a shareholder agreement that controls the discretion or power of the board of directors with respect to the boards management of corporate affairs the directors are relieved of liability for managerial acts and the liability falls upon the shareholders who are party to the shareholder agreement [*Corp. 4-8C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8C.13

§ 8C.13 Management Alternatives to Shareholder Agreements

[1] In General

Several management alternatives to shareholder agreements exist. These include provisions in the corporation's articles of incorporation for supermajority votes by the corporation's directors or shareholders on various matters [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 61.03[2] (Matthew Bender)]; voting or pooling agreements, and voting trusts [see Ch. 8B, Voting Agreements and Voting Trusts ; Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.04[2] (Matthew Bender); see also [2], below]. In addition, a corporation's capital structure can be designed to give some shareholders control that is disproportionate to their dollar investment, either by providing for voting and nonvoting shares, or for shares with special voting rights [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 61.03[3] (Matthew Bender)]. This result can also be obtained by issuing debt securities for a portion of the corporation's initial financing, instead of issuing voting shares for that financing [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 61.03[4] (Matthew Bender)].

A group of majority shareholders in a close corporation can also use a holding company, instead of a shareholder voting agreement or voting trust, to consolidate their voting power. Further, shareholders may sometimes find it useful to create a partnership to hold their shares, or, on rare occasions, to cause the corporation to issue stock to several persons to be held jointly.

[2] Shareholder Agreement and Voting Agreement Distinguished

Although voting agreements and shareholder agreements are both agreements among corporate shareholders, a voting agreement differs from a shareholder agreement in three significant respects. First, the use of a voting agreement is not limited to shareholders of a close corporation as is a shareholder agreement [cf. Corp. Code §§ 300(b), 706(a)]. Second, a voting agreement may be among less than all of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. Third, a voting agreement covers only the exercise of shareholder voting rights [Assem. Select Comm. Rpt. 86 (Dec. 1, 1975)], and does not change the role of the shareholders with respect to the directors [see Corp. Code § 300(b) (this subdivision does not apply to voting agreements authorized by Corp. Code § 706(a))]. Thus, if the shareholders want to limit the powers of the directors, a shareholder agreement, and not a voting agreement, should be used.

[3] Shareholder Agreement and Management Agreement Distinguished

Management agreements are agreements, to which the corporation is a party, under which all or substantial management powers are vested in another corporation or an individual, usually a key executive or creditor [see Corp. Code § 300(a)]. Management agreements themselves are distinct from arrangements by the directors under which they delegate part of their functions to an executive committee or to corporate officers [see Corp. Code §§ 309(b), 312].

- Requiring approval of shareholders for mergers or other reorganization [see Corp. Code §§ 1111, 1201(e)].
- Relating to the recovery of certain improper distributions [see Corp. Code § 2009].
- Relating to the obligation to keep adequate corporate records [see Corp. Code § 1500 et seq.], and to the inspection rights of shareholders and directors [see Corp. Code § 1600 et seq.].

- Authorizing involuntary dissolution of the corporation [see Corp. Code § 1800 et seq.].

- Dealing with criminal sanctions [see Corp. Code § 2200 et seq.].

In addition, a shareholder agreement may not alter or waive the required filing under the General Corporation Law of any document with the California Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 300(c)].

[3] Commonly Regulated Matters

Matters frequently regulated by shareholder agreements include the following:

- Providing veto power to one or more shareholders [see § 8D.13[2]].

- Providing additional voting rights to certain shareholders [see § 8D.13[3]].

- Selecting corporate officers and setting their compensation and tenure [see § 8D.15].

- Determining the amount of time, if any, that each shareholder will devote to the business [see § 8D.200[2]].

- Paying dividends or making other distributions [see § 8D.16].

PRACTICE TIP:

To the extent a shareholder agreement provides different rights to different shareholders with regard to dividends and distributions the shareholder agreement has effectively created more than a single class of stock. This renders the corporation ineligible for Subchapter S election and the California small offering exemption under Corp. Code § 25102(h) [see § 8C.17[4]]. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

- Providing for dissolution distributions [see § 8D.17].

- Restricting share transfers [see § 8D.19].

- Regulating merger and reorganization [see § 8D.18].

- Establishing noncompetition requirements and restrictions on use of trade secrets and customer lists [see § 8D.200[2]].

- Providing a method of resolving corporate disputes, such as buyout, arbitration, or a procedure for voluntary dissolution, in the case of dissension and deadlock [see § 8D.20].

§ 8C.15 Provisions Regulating Corporate Management

[1] In General

The California close corporation statute expressly validates shareholder agreements of statutory close corporations that regulate the management of its business [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

[2] Providing Veto Power Through Supermajority Voting

One way a shareholder agreement may control the management of a close corporation is by requiring a supermajority or unanimous vote of shareholders or directors [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, Ch. 108, Distributions of Corporate Control, § 108.05[4][c] (Matthew Bender)]. This gives each shareholder or director the power to veto management acts proposed by the other shareholders or directors [see Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), (9), 300(c)]. Thus, for example, a shareholder agreement that provides for a supermajority vote on the removal or election of a director or the voluntary dissolution of the corporation will protect minority shareholders from being ousted from the business, either by removal from the board or by premature termination of the business intended to freeze out minority interests [see Corp. Code § 300(c)].

Actions that may be the subject of veto provisions include the following:

- Amending bylaws;
- Paying dividends or making other distributions; Incurring debt;
- Making or guaranteeing loans;
- Setting compensation levels;

- Removing minority shareholders as officers or directors;
- Issuing securities;
- Changing bank signatories; and
- Spending in excess of specified dollar amounts.

For discussion of whether a shareholder agreement that establishes direct shareholder management of the corporation may eliminate the board of directors entirely, with the shareholders assuming the powers, responsibilities, and liabilities of the directors, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[3][c] (Matthew Bender).

[3] Providing Additional Voting Rights

A shareholder agreement may also contain a provision requiring the approval by the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] or the approval by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152] for any management action, even though approval for such an action is not otherwise required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 204(a)(9)].

[4] Disproportionate Voting Rights and Subchapter S Considerations

To qualify as a Subchapter S corporation, a corporation must have no more than one class of stock [I.R.C. 1361(b)(1)(D)]. However, differences in common stock voting rights do not cause a corporation to be treated as having more than one class of stock [I.R.C. 1361(c)(4)]. For discussion of the criteria a corporation must meet to be eligible for Subchapter S status, and the tax effect of the election on both the corporation and its shareholders, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

[5] Delegating Management Functions

In addition to controlling management decisions through a shareholder agreement by providing the shareholders with veto power or additional affirmative voting rights, a shareholder agreement may delegate some or all management functions to one or more shareholders, or to a non-shareholder manager [see Corp. Code § 300(a)]. Provisions designating corporate officers and the terms and conditions of their employment are further discussed in § 8C.16.

§ 8C.16 Provisions Designating Corporate Officers and Setting Employment Terms

Many shareholder agreements in close corporations contain provisions either designating the individuals to serve as corporate officers or granting one or more shareholders the right to name corporate officers. Such an agreement may be necessary in order to hire a key executive, or bring into the business a necessary patent holder. The special close corporation statutes of the General Corporation Law permit shareholders to designate officers by agreement [see Corp. Code § 300(b), (c)].

In many close corporations, the shareholders themselves often serve as officers or employees. Shareholders of close corporations often invest significant amounts of money, skill, and time in the business of the corporation and thus, have significant interests in assuring that they will continue to participate in its management and decision-making processes and enjoy the benefits of permanent or long-term employment. Further, if a corporation distributes corporate earnings in the form of salaries, rather than dividends, fair return on the shareholder's investment will necessarily be dependent on continued employment. A minority shareholder has a particular interest in protecting himself or herself against arbitrary salary reductions (or termination) and disproportionate increases in the salaries of other shareholder-employees.

The interests of shareholders as employees or officers may be protected either by an employment agreement or by employment provisions in a shareholder agreement. For discussion of employment agreements in general, see Ch. 85, Employment Contracts (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the pertinent provisions of a shareholder agreement that embodies employment provisions, see § 8C.200[2].

§ 8C.17 Provisions Controlling Division of Profits

[1] Regulating Dividend Payments and Distributions of Corporate Profits and Assets

The California close corporation statute expressly authorizes shareholder agreements of statutory close corporations to regulate the declaration and payment of dividends or the division of corporate profits [Corp. Code § 300(b)]. The agreement may require corporate profits to be distributed in a manner other than according to the number of shares held by each shareholder [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[4][a] (Matthew Bender)]. For example, distribution could be based on the amount of time devoted to the corporation's business, the amount of business generated for the corporation, or the agreement could merely specify that one shareholder is to receive a disproportionate share of profits.

[2] Statutory Limitations on Distributions

[a] In General

Although California law authorizes shareholders in close corporations to enter into shareholder agreements to regulate the declaration and payment of dividends or the division of corporate profits [Corp. Code § 300(b); see [1], above], no shareholder agreement may alter or waive the provisions of the General Corporation Law providing that distributions may be made only if a retained earnings or remaining assets test is met and the distribution does not render the corporation insolvent [Corp. Code § 300(c); see Corp. Code §§ 500, 501 (distributions to shareholders)].

To make any valid distribution to its shareholders, a corporation must be able to pass either the retained earnings or remaining assets test [Corp. Code § 500; see [b], [c], below], the general solvency test [Corp. Code § 501; see [d], below], and, when applicable, the liquidation preference and dividend preference tests [Corp. Code §§ 502, 503; see [e], below]. However, a corporation licensed as a broker-dealer under Corp. Code § 25210 et seq. is not required to pass either the retained earnings or remaining assets test [see Corp. Code § 500(a), (b)] if, immediately after any distribution, it is in compliance with the net capital rules of the Commissioner of Corporations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12] and the Securities and Exchange Commission [Corp. Code § 500(e); see 17 C.F.R. § 240.15c3-1].

For a further discussion of these tests, see Ch. 9, Dividends, Reacquisitions of Shares, and Assessments, §§ 9.11-9.12, and Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 141 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Retained Earnings Test

The retained earnings requirement provides that a corporation may make a distribution if its retained earnings, immediately prior to the distribution, equal or exceed the amount of the proposed distribution [Corp. Code § 500(a)]. "Retained earnings" means the balance of net profits, after the deduction of distributions to shareholders and transfer to capital accounts under generally accepted accounting principles [see Corp. Code § 114; Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 8. Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 141.06[3] (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Remaining Assets Test

A corporation with insufficient retained earnings may still make a distribution if it meets the remaining assets test. This test provides for purchase of shares if both of the following conditions are met, immediately after the distribution:

- Corporate assets (excluding goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses and deferred charges) equal at least 125 percent of corporate liabilities (excluding deferred taxes, deferred income and other deferred credits) [Corp. Code § 500(b)(1)], and

- Current assets equal current liabilities. However, current assets must equal 125 percent of current liabilities if the average earnings of the corporation before income taxes and interest expenses were less than the average interest expenses for the two preceding fiscal years [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)].

The second part of this test [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)] does not apply to a corporation that is not required to classify its assets into current and fixed under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)].

For the purpose of applying Corp. Code § 500 to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment for the purchase of its shares [see § 8C.21[1]], the corporation must add to its retained earnings all amounts previously deducted from retained earnings upon any repurchase of the corporation's shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet. The corporation also must deduct from liabilities all amounts added to liabilities upon any repurchase of the corporation's shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet [see Corp. Code § 500(d)].

[d] Solvency Test

The solvency test requires that a corporation not make any distribution to the corporation's shareholders if, as a result, the corporation is or would be likely to be unable to meet its liabilities as they mature [Corp. Code § 501]. This test must be met even if the corporation satisfies the retained earnings or remaining assets test [see Flynn v. California Casket Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 196, 207, 233 P.2d 131] .

[e] Liquidation Preference and Dividend Preference Tests

A corporation may not make distributions to junior shares that affect the liquidation or dividend preferences of senior shares [see Corp. Code §§ 502, 503].

[3] Disguised Dividends

In a Subchapter S corporation, a shareholder agreement might provide for shareholders to receive monthly draws against their respective share earnings, based on the percentage of shares owned at the end of the fiscal year [see I.R.C. §§ 1366-1368 (pass-through of items to shareholders)], whereas many close corporations taxed as C corporations pay salaries to shareholder-employees that minimize corporate income [see I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); see also § 8C.16]. However, the amounts claimed as a corporate deduction for compensation must be reasonable in comparison with amount that would ordinarily be paid for like items by similar enterprises under similar circumstances [I.R.C. § 162; Treas. Reg. § 1.162-7(b)(3) (deductibility of reasonable compensation payments); Rutter v. Commissioner (1986) 52 T.C.M. 326, 337-339, T.C. Memo. 1986-407 (excessive executive compensation treated as dividend when paid to shareholder-employee)].

The Internal Revenue Service may question salary or draw arrangements that appear to be a means of distributing profits rather than payments for services [see, e.g., O.S.C. & Associates Inc. v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1116, 1120-1121 (deductions for payments to shareholder-employees of closely held corporation, ostensibly as compensation for services, disallowed as disguised dividends); Elliotts, Inc. v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. 1983) 716 F.2d 1241, 1243 ; see also Labelgraphics, Inc. v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 2000) 221 F.3d 1091, 1100 (five-factor test set forth in Elliotts, Inc. v. C.I.R., used to determine amount of reasonable, deductible compensation, was properly applied to bonus paid to president of closely held, single-shareholder corporation)]. Similarly, bonus payments that are not tied to a preset formula, that are distributed in proportion to share holdings, and that reduce the corporation's taxable income to zero may be viewed as disguised dividends, even though the total amount received by the shareholder is admittedly reasonable as salary [Nor-Cal Adjusters v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. 1974) 503 F.2d 359, 362] .

[4] Unequal Division of Profits

[a] Subchapter S Status Destroyed

A corporation does not qualify under the Internal Revenue Code as an S corporation if it has more than one class of shares outstanding [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D)].

When one share is not identical to every other share with respect to control, profits, and assets of the corporation, the corporation is considered to have more than one class of shares outstanding [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(1), (2)]. A corporation is not treated as having more than one class of stock, however, solely because there are differences in voting rights among shares of common stock [I.R.C. 1361(c)(4); see § 8C.16[4]]. Thus, an agreement that provides for the division of corporate profits among shareholders other than according to their respective shareholdings appears to destroy the corporation's S corporation status for income tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); Parker Oil Co. v. Commissioner (1972) 58 T.C. 985, 990 ; see also Blau, Shareholder Agreements and the Single Class of Stock Requirement, 68 J. Tax'n 238 (1988)].

[b] Small Offering Exemption Unavailable

For a corporation's shares to be exempt from the qualification requirements of the Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.] under the small offering exemption [Corp. Code § 25102(h)], the corporation must have only one class of shares [Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. A shareholder agreement that provides for different distributions of corporate profits for different shares will prevent the corporation from issuing its shares under the small offering exemption [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.4(b)]. The limited offering exemption [Corp. Code § 25102(f)], however, contains no requirement that the corporation have only one class of shares, and, thus, may be available when the small offering exemption is not because a shareholder agreement creates additional classes of shares.

§ 8C.18 Provisions Controlling Dissolution Distributions

[1] In General

Although the articles of incorporation ordinarily must either set forth the shareholders' rights and preferences, or grant authority to the board of directors to determine the shareholders' rights and preferences, on dissolution [see Corp. Code § 202(e)(3)], California close corporations may regulate the distribution of their assets on dissolution [Corp. Code § 300(b)]. A shareholder agreement, however, may not waive or alter the statutory provisions [Corp. Code § 300(c)]:

- Relating to the recovery of improper corporate distributions made during winding up of the corporate affairs after dissolution [Corp. Code § 2009].

- Regulating the obligations of a dissolved corporation while winding up its affairs [Corp. Code § 2010].

- Authorizing suits against shareholders on causes of action against the corporation arising before dissolution [Corp. Code § 2011(a)(1)(B)].

In addition, an agreement may not waive or alter any of the provisions of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 1800 et seq.] relating to involuntary dissolution [Corp. Code § 300(c)].

[2] Subchapter S Considerations

A shareholder agreement that gives shareholders unequal rights in the corporation's assets on dissolution and provides for liquidation rights different from a shareholder's dividend rights, other than according to their respective share holdings, appears to violate the single class of stock requirement [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D); Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(1), (2)] and, therefore, may destroy the corporation's S status for income tax purposes [see Blau, Shareholder Agreements and the Single Class of Stock Requirement, 68 J. Tax'n 238 (1988); see also § 8C.17[4][a]].

[3] Small Offering Exemption Unavailable

A shareholder agreement giving shareholders of a new corporation different rights in the corporation's assets on dissolution will prevent the corporation from issuing its shares under the small offering exemption [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.4(b)]. The limited offering exemption [Corp. Code § 25102(f)], however, should apply in most cases. For further discussion of these exemptions and the qualification of securities in general, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues , Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions , and Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption .

§ 8C.19 Provisions Governing Merger and Reorganization

Absent a contrary provision in the corporation's articles of incorporation or in a shareholder agreement, approval of a merger or reorganization must be by two thirds of each class of outstanding shares when the surviving corporation is not a close corporation, or when the reorganization will result in the shareholders of a close corporation receiving shares in a non-close corporation [Corp. Code §§ 1111, 1201(e)]. The articles or a shareholder agreement, however, may reduce the required vote for termination of close corporation status by merger or reorganization to a majority of the outstanding shares of each class or may increase that vote up to 100 percent [Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), 300(c), 1111, 1201(e)].

§ 8C.20 Provisions Restricting Share Transfer

[1] In General

Although share transfer restrictions are not enumerated in the close corporation statute as an appropriate subject of a shareholder agreement [see Corp. Code § 300(b)], transfer restrictions are commonly included. A shareholder agreement, filed with the secretary of the corporation, is binding on all transferees with actual knowledge of the agreement or whose share certificates contain a legend giving notice of the existence of the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b); see Corp. Code § 418 (additional required restrictions on certificates)].

[2] Scope of Transfer Restrictions

The following are typically restricted transfers:

- Lifetime transfers by sale or gift to outsiders.
- Lifetime transfers between shareholders.
- Transfers by will.
- Transfers by intestacy.
- Transfers through operation of law, including voluntary and involuntary alienation (an encumbrance or judicial sale, for example).

In addition to a proposed transfer, shares may be subject to the restriction that the shareholder continue to be employed by the corporation. Thus, if a shareholder-employee is terminated, either involuntarily or voluntarily, the transfer restriction may require sale of the shareholder's shares to the corporation, to the other shareholders, or to a combination of the two. Buy-sell agreements are discussed in detail in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

[3] S Corporation Considerations

A Subchapter S corporation election may be revoked if shareholders holding more than one half of the corporation's shares on the day on which the revocation is made consent to the revocation [I.R.C. § 1362(d)(1)(B)]. Thus, it may be desirable to restrict the transfer of shares to shareholders who will not consent to termination of the S election, to prohibit transfers without prior approval of the remaining shareholders (if consent is expressly related to preserving Subchapter S status), or to provide for the right of first refusal in favor of the shareholders and/or the corporation. Transfer restrictions should also remain in effect at the time of death and should bind an administrator or heir.

§ 8C.21 Provisions to Avoid Dissension and Deadlock

[1] Buyouts

Although buyout arrangements are not enumerated in the close corporation statute as an appropriate subject of a shareholder agreement [see Corp. Code § 300(b)], these arrangements, like share transfer restrictions, are often included in shareholder agreements. Buyout arrangements can be an effective way to resolve disputes or deadlock without causing dissolution or otherwise interrupting the corporation's business. A buyout may provide for the right of first refusal to the corporation, the shareholders, or a combination of the two. These kinds of arrangements are discussed in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

[2] Voluntary Dissolution

Although a shareholder agreement may not waive or alter the statutory provisions related to involuntary dissolution [Corp. Code § 300(c)], the agreement may contain provisions that alter or waive the statutory right to seek voluntary dissolution [see Corp. Code § 300(c)]. Thus, the agreement may provide for the dissolution of the corporation in the event of deadlock among the shareholders, or on the happening of certain specified events, different from those that would justify dissolution under the statutes [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 1900 et seq.]. Conversely, the agreement may forbid initiation of an action for voluntary dissolution.

[3] Arbitration

Since arbitration is an increasingly popular method of dispute resolution [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, Ch. 114, Shareholder Agreements, § 114.02[5] (Matthew Bender)], it is a technique that should be considered in drafting a shareholder agreement. If arbitration produces a workable solution to a deadlock, the dissident shareholders may be spared either abandonment or forced sale of a satisfactory investment. Arbitration may be particularly useful in setting a price for the purchase of shares in a buyout, or in settling disputes regarding voting, employment, of the payment of dividends. For further discussion of the use of arbitration to resolve corporate dissolution and deadlock, see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 108A, Close Corporations, § 108A.04[4] (Matthew Bender). For discussion of arbitration generally, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 65.02[3] (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Arbitration provisions should include some kind of mechanism for challenging a patently unsupported finding or unfair award. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

§ 8C.22 Provisions to Protect Minority Shareholders From Unwanted Partners

Often in a close corporation, shareholders work closely together, and, in many close corporations, the shareholders initially have joined the enterprise because of particular working relationships. To prevent a situation in which the majority shareholder or shareholders sell the majority interest to someone with whom the minority shareholder does not wish to work, a shareholder agreement might contain a provision giving the minority shareholder a right of first refusal when the majority shareholder intends to shell his or her shares or a provision requiring any buyer of the majority shareholder's shares to buy the minority shareholders shares as well.

§ 8C.30 Binding Transferees of Shares

A transferee of shares covered by a shareholder agreement is bound by its provisions under the following conditions [Corp. Code § 300(b)]:

- The agreement is filed with the secretary of the corporation for inspection by an potential purchaser of shares, and

- Legends on share certificates have given transferee actual notice that there is a shareholder agreement [Corp. Code § 418(a)].

A transferee of shares who is bound by the agreement covering the shares becomes liable in the same manner as an original party to the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b); see Corp. Code § 300(d); see also § 8C.40]. The transferor ceases to be bound by the agreement on ceasing to be a shareholder of the corporation [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

After a transfer of shares to a transferee bound by an agreement, the agreement may not be modified, extended, or revoked without the transferee's consent, unless the agreement contains a provision to the contrary [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

§ 8C.31 Modifying the Agreement; Securities Considerations

California permits modification, extension, or revocation of a shareholder agreement by less than unanimous agreement of the parties, if the agreement itself so provides [Corp. Code § 300(b)]. However, a modification may be a "sale" of securities under the California Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.] if it constitutes a change in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of or on outstanding securities, including changes of one of the types listed in Corp. Code § 204(a), effected through the adoption, modification, or termination of a provision of a shareholder agreement [10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.017.2, 260.017.3; see Corp. Code § 25017(a); see also Corp. Code § 204(a) (providing that certain special types of provisions, such as preemptive rights, power of assessment, and supermajority votes, must be in articles to be effective, but permitting such provisions to be effective if embodied in a shareholder agreement)]. Because all sales of shares that are considered securities must either meet federal registration and state qualification requirements, or be eligible for a federal or state exemption [15 U.S.C. §§ 77c(a) (exempted securities), 78c(a)(10) (security defined); Corp. Code §§ 25101-25105 (exempt transactions), 25110 (qualification requirement), 25120 (qualification requirement based on changes in rights, exchanges, mergers), 25130 (qualification requirement by nonissuer)], or not be subject to qualification requirements [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 25100.1, 25101.1, 25102.1], the requirement of registration and qualification must be addressed whenever a shareholder agreement is modified.

§ 8C.32 Remedies for Breach of Agreement

Although the breach of a valid shareholder agreement gives rise to an action in contract, an order to pay damages generally is not a satisfactory remedy because the damages are often speculative. Moreover, the injuries resulting from the breach may be injuries to the corporation, rather than to the shareholder litigants. Accordingly, suits based on shareholder agreements are much more likely to result in an injunction or a judicial order for specific performance than in a judgment for damages.

D. Shareholder Liability Under Agreement

4-8C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8C.40

AUTHOR: Marilyn E. Minger Practice Consultant

§ 8C.40 Shareholder Liability Under Agreement

A shareholder in a close corporation in which the discretion and powers of the board are controlled by a shareholder agreement and the shareholder is a party to the agreement, is subject to personal liability for managerial acts performed or omitted by that shareholder [Corp. Code § 300(d)]. In that case, any directors of the corporation are relieved of liability for such actions [Corp. Code § 300(d)].

This does not mean, however, that a shareholder in a close corporation operated under a shareholder agreement is personally liable for the debts of the corporation. A corporation exists as a separate legal entity, independent of its directors, officers, and shareholders [see Corp. Code § 200(c)]. As a separate legal entity, a corporation is liable for its own obligations [see Corp. Code § 204(a)], and its directors, officers, and shareholders ordinarily are not liable for corporate debts and other obligations [see Corp. Code § 309(c)]. In fact, the failure of a close corporation to observe corporate formalities relating to directors' and shareholders' meetings in connection with the management of its affairs, as provided in a shareholder agreement, will not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate actions [Corp. Code § 300(e)].

Shareholders who undertake to exercise the power and duties of the directors, however, also assume the directors' responsibility for the faithful exercise of those powers and duties [Corp. Code § 300(d)]. Directors may be personally liable for breach of duty to corporate creditors, the corporation itself, or its shareholders [see Corp. Code §§ 309, 316(a)-(d), 506(b); see also Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 110-112, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P. 2d 464] . Thus, shareholders of a close corporation who exercise the powers of a board of directors under a shareholder agreement may be personally liable to the same extent that the directors would have been [Corp. Code §§ 300(d), 316(c), (d), 506(b)]. The directors would have had no liability for their actions if they performed their duties in good faith, in the best interest of the corporation and its shareholders, with care, including reasonable inquiry, of the ordinarily prudent person in a like position under similar circumstances [Corp. Code § 309(a)].

The liability of corporate directors to corporate creditors and shareholders for improper actions approved by the directors is discussed in greater detail in Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 6, Duties and Liabilities of Management , § 102.01[3] (Matthew Bender).

(1) Type of coverage denied.

(2) Reason for denial.

(3) Date of denial.

NOTE:
Whether an individual shareholder is likely to be insurable is an essential consideration in determining how to fund a buy-sell provision in a shareholder agreement.

k. Whether shareholder is employee of corporation and, if so, position or title.

l. Estate plan for shares.

NOTE:
Transfer restrictions in a shareholder agreement may affect an estate plan [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements].

[b] The Corporation

1. Name and address of corporation.

2. Date of incorporation.

3. State of incorporation.

4. Tax year of corporation.

5. Employer identification number.

6. Principal business.

7. Number of shareholders, not to exceed 35.

NOTE:
All shares held of record in a close corporation must be held by not more than 35 persons [Corp. Code § 158(a)].

8. Total number of shares issued.

9. Approximate fair market value of shares, if known.

10. Whether the corporation is a professional corporation.

NOTE:
A "professional corporation" is a regular business corporation that renders professional services in a single profession under a certificate of registration issued by the governing board that regulates the profession [see Corp. Code § 13401(b); but see Corp. Code § 13401.5 (allied professionals)]. "Professional services" are any services that may lawfully be rendered pursuant to a license, certification, or registration authorized by the California Business and Professions Code, the Osteopathic Act, or the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act or the Chiropractic Act [Corp. Code §§ 13401(a), 13401.3], although there are no longer any certification requirements for medical, osteopathic, dental, pharmacy, veterinary, architectural, registered nursing, optometry, behavioral sciences, speech-language pathology and audiology, or court reporter corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 13401(b), 13402(a); Bus. & Prof. Code § 2406]. With these exceptions, a professional corporation must have its own Certificate of Registration to do business as a corporation [Corp. Code § 13401(b); see Corp. Code § 13402(b)].

Whether a corporation is a professional corporation is a consideration in selecting the buyers if there is a buy-sell provision in the shareholder agreement, since a license is required to render services.

For a list of professions that are permitted to incorporate under the Professional Corporations Act, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For detailed discussion of the formation of professional corporations, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

11. Whether corporation has elected Subchapter S status.

NOTE:

A small business corporation may elect to be an S corporation [I.R.C. § 1362(a)]. Unlike a C corporation, which is a separate tax-paying entity [see I.R.C. § 11], an S corporation is generally treated as a conduit of income, loss, deductions, and credits to shareholders [see I.R.C. §§ 1363, 1366]. For discussion of the advisability of electing to be taxed as an S corporation, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For discussion of the procedures to be used in electing or terminating Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

Whether or not a corporation has elected S corporation status will affect whether the agreement may provide for the division of corporate profits among shareholders other than according to their respective share holdings [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); Parker Oil Co. v. Commissioner (1973) 58 T.C. 985, 990 ; see also Blau, Shareholder Agreements and the Single Class of Stock Requirement, 68 J. Tax'n 238 (1988); § 8C.17[4][a]] or whether the agreement may give shareholders unequal rights in the corporation's assets on dissolution, or provide for liquidation rights different from a shareholder's dividend rights, other than according to their respective share holdings [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D); Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); Blau, Shareholder Agreements and the Single Class of Stock Requirement, 68 J. Tax'n 238 (1988); see also § 8C.18[2]].

12. Names, addresses, and telephone numbers of directors, if any.

13. Names, addresses, telephone numbers, and titles of officers.

14. Name, address, and telephone number of accountant.

§ 8C.110 Identifying Conflicts of Interest

NOTE:

An attorney representing an entity may also represent its constituents provided that attorney makes a written disclosure to the clients in accordance with California Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3-310(B). Dual representation of clients whose interests conflict is permitted, under certain circumstances, if the attorney obtains the written consent of each client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Caution should be exercised in dual representation, however, if an actual conflict of interest exists [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements*, § 8D.12*]. Even without an actual conflict, under some circumstances, an attorney should not undertake multiple representation [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements*, § 8D.13*].

For further discussion of this topic, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business*, §§ 1A.33-1A.37*, and § 1A.113. For appropriate waiver of conflict forms, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business*, §§ 1A.203[2], 1A.204[2]*.

§ 8C.111 Determining Scope of Work to Be Performed by Attorney

1. Determine tasks attorney will perform.

NOTE:
The procedural aspects of formation of a close corporation are covered in Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations .

2. Determine whether consultation or association of specialist or other professional is required [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements, § 8D.19].

NOTE:
Drafting (or reviewing) a shareholder agreement can involve many areas of law, including business, tax, and community property considerations. The drafting attorney has the duty to refer the client to a specialist or recommend the association of a specialist if the attorney lacks the requisite skill or knowledge [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements, § 8D.19[2]]. The drafting attorney often relies heavily on the advice of other professionals, such as life insurance agents, accountants, financial planners, and trust officers. Because life insurance is the most common way to provide funds to purchase the shares of a deceased shareholder, life insurance agents are frequently consulted. The wide variety of life insurance products and forms of ownership make such a consultation important when drafting a shareholder agreement with buy-sell provisions.

§ 8C.112 Selecting Appropriate Type of Agreement

NOTE:

A shareholder agreement may contain provisions governing many phases of the affairs of a close corporation (including the management of its business, the division of its profits, and the distribution of its assets on dissolution) that infringe on the powers of the board and call for partnership-like relations among the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 300(b)]. Shareholder agreements commonly contain provisions that (1) designate certain persons as employees, officers, or directors of the corporation; (2) specify long-term employment arrangements; (3) set profit distributions; (4) set liquidation distributions and procedures for winding up on dissolution; (5) adopt day-to-day operational and managerial policies; (6) establish voting requirements; (7) restrict the transfer of shares; (8) establish noncompetition requirements and restrictions on trade secrets and customer lists; and (9) prescribe rules for resolving deadlocks.

Because the factual circumstances relating to any particular close corporation will vary, depending on the number of shareholders, whether shareholders are primarily investors or employees, and the tax status of corporation, each agreement must be adapted to the appropriate circumstances. This section enumerates the more common provisions that counsel should consider in the preparation of a shareholder agreement. Section 8C.113 enumerates the statutory provisions that may not be altered or waived by a shareholder agreement.

1. Determine whether agreement will include provisions governing corporate management [see § 8C.15]:

a. Will agreement require supermajority or unanimous vote of shareholders or directors for approval of certain actions [see Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), (9), 300(b), (c); § 8C.15[2]], including [see Corp. Code § 204]:

NOTE:
Corp. Code § 204(a) permits all of the provisions that section would otherwise require in the articles to be in a shareholder agreement of a close corporation. In drafting a shareholder agreement, caution should be exercised to ensure that the articles and bylaws do not contain provisions that are inconsistent with the shareholder agreement [see § 8C.200[1][c]].

(1) Removal of directors?

NOTE:
This matter may not be included in the articles to change a vote required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), 303] and therefore must be included in the shareholder agreement if desired. The percentage required for approval of voluntary winding up and dissolution may not exceed 66 2/3 percent [Corp. Code § 402.5].

(2) Election of directors?

NOTE:
This matter may not be included in the articles to change a vote required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(5), 708(c)] and therefore must be included in the shareholder agreement if desired.

(3) Voluntary dissolution of corporation?

NOTE:
This matter may not be included in the articles to change a vote required by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 204(a)(5), 1900] and therefore must be included in the shareholder agreement if desired.

(4) Amendment or repeal of either:

(a) Articles of incorporation?

(b) Bylaws?

(5) Merger or consolidation of corporation? [see § 8C.19]

(6) Transfer of all or substantially all corporate assets?

(7) Issuance of shares, options, or similar rights relating to issuance of shares?

b. Will agreement require shareholder approval [see Corp. Code § 152] or approval of outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 153] for any corporate action when that approval is not otherwise required by statute [Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(9), 300(b), (c)]?

NOTE:
The shareholder agreement rather than the articles of incorporation should contain the provisions requiring shareholder approval when that approval appears to infringe on the managerial powers of the board [see Corp. Code § 300(b)].

c. Will agreement delegate managerial responsibilities to managing shareholder, or limit board's powers [see Corp. Code § 300(b), (c)]?

d. Will agreement confer voting rights on shareholders disproportionate to their share holdings? [see § 8C.15[2], [3]]

2. Determine whether agreement will provide for division of corporate profits other than according to number of shares held by each shareholder [see Corp. Code § 300(b); see also § 8C.17].

NOTE:

A shareholder agreement may not alter or waive Corp. Code §§ 500, 501, providing that neither a corporation nor any of its shareholders may make any distribution to the corporation's shareholders unless the corporation is able to pass either the retained earnings or remaining assets tests specified in the statute [see Corp. Code § 500], and the distribution is not likely to make the corporation, or the subsidiary making the distribution, unable to meet its liabilities as they mature [Corp. Code § 501]. For further discussion of the statutory limitations on distributions, see § 8C.17[2].

a. Will distribution take form of salary or draw?

b. Will distribution take form of dividends?

c. Will distribution take combined form of salary or draw and dividends [see § 8C.17[3]]?

3. Determine whether agreement will establish rights and preferences of shareholders on dissolution [see Corp. Code § 300(b); see also § 8C.18].

NOTE:

The shareholder agreement may not alter or waive provisions of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 300(c)] (1) relating to the recovery of improper corporate distributions made during windup after dissolution [Corp. Code § 2009]; (2) regulating the continuation and obligations of a dissolved corporation while winding up its affairs [Corp. Code § 2010]; or (3) authorizing suits against shareholders on causes of action against the corporation arising prior to its dissolution [Corp. Code § 2011].

4. Determine whether agreement will provide for employment of shareholders [see § 8C.16], including:

NOTE:

The interests of shareholders who are employees may be protected either by an employment agreement or employment provisions in the shareholder agreement [see § 8C.200[2]]. For employment contract forms, see Ch. 85, Employment Contracts .

a. Position and title.

b. Tenure.

c. Salary and other forms of compensation.

d. Termination of employment [see § 8C.200[2]], as result of:

NOTE:
Termination of employment may be made effective on events such as those enumerated in PP (1)-(7), below, or on the adoption by all of the other shareholders of a written resolution setting forth a required ground for termination.

(1) Voluntary resignation.

(2) Dissolution of corporation.

(3) Bankruptcy, death, or physical incapacity.

(4) Misconduct or willful breach of shareholder agreement.

(5) Conviction of felony involving moral turpitude.

(6) Declaration by court order of unsoundness of mind or incompetency in terms of management of shareholders' affairs.

(7) Other conduct constituting legal cause for termination of employment.

NOTE:
The shareholder agreement should provide for a mandatory buyout of the terminated employee-shareholder's shares [see § 8C.20[2]; see also Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements].

5. Determine whether agreement will restrict transfer of shares, including restrictions on following transfers [see § 8C.20[2]]:

NOTE:
A shareholder agreement filed with the corporation's secretary is binding on all transferees with actual knowledge of the agreement or whose shares certificates contain a legend giving notice of the existence of the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b); see § 8C.20[1]; see also Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[8][b] (Matthew Bender) (reasonableness of restrictions)].

a. Lifetime transfers by sale or gift to outsiders.

b. Transfers by sale or gift between shareholders.

c. Transfers by will, intestacy, or operation of law.

d. Any other form of voluntary or involuntary alienation, such as pledge or judicial sale resulting from bankruptcy decree.

6. Determine whether agreement will include provision relating to books, records, and reports of corporation or rights of inspection [see Corp. Code §§ 1500 et seq. (records and reports), 1600 et seq. (inspection rights)].

NOTE:

Although a shareholder agreement may not alter or waive the provisions of Chapters 15 and 16 of the Corporations Code relating to books, records, and reports of corporation or rights of inspection [Corp. Code § 300(c)], restatement of these duties may be desirable to remind the shareholders of these responsibilities.

7. Determine whether agreement will eliminate board of directors.

NOTE:

One commentator has suggested that there is at least a minimal advantage in continuing a standby board to carry out board functions that cannot be waived [e.g., Corp. Code §§ 500, 1501(a), 1502] and general functions required when a corporation continues after losing its status as a close corporation [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[3][c] (Matthew Bender)].

For discussion about whether a shareholder agreement that establishes direct shareholder management of the corporation may eliminate the board of directors entirely, with the shareholders assuming the powers, responsibilities, and liabilities of the directors, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[3][c] (Matthew Bender)].

8. Determine whether agreement will regulate elections and meetings of board of directors, if any.

a. Will agreement waive or alter requirements relating to annual and other elections of directors [see Corp. Code § 600(b)]?

b. Will agreement waive or alter requirements relating to board meetings, including:

(1) Annual meetings?

(2) Regular meetings?

(3) Special meetings?

NOTE:

Failure of the close corporation to observe corporate formalities relating to meetings of directors, pursuant to a shareholder agreement, will not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e); see § 8C.40].

9. Determine whether agreement will regulate shareholder meetings.

NOTE:

The failure of a close corporation to observe corporate formalities relating to meetings of shareholders in connection with the management of its affairs, according to a shareholder agreement, will not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e); see § 8C.40].

a. Will agreement waive or alter statutory provisions relating to the place of the meetings, the failure to hold meetings, and special meetings [see Corp. Code § 600(a),(c),(d)]?

b. Will agreement waive or alter statutory provisions governing notice and consents [see Corp. Code § 601]?

10. Determine whether agreement will establish noncompetition requirements and restrictions on trade secrets and customer lists [see § 8C.200[2]].

11. Determine whether agreement will control voluntary dissolution and winding up of corporation [see § 8C.21].

NOTE:

Although a shareholder agreement may not waive or alter the statutory provisions relating to involuntary dissolution [Corp. Code § 300(c)], the agreement may contain provisions that alter or waive the statutory right to seek voluntary dissolution [see Corp. Code § 300(c)]. Thus, the agreement may provide for the dissolution of the corporation in the event of deadlock among the shareholders or on the happening of certain specified events, different from those that would justify dissolution under the statutes [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 1900 et seq.]. Conversely, the agreement may forbid initiation of an action for voluntary dissolution.

a. Will agreement change statutory requirements permitting voluntary dissolution by vote of shareholders holding shares representing 50 percent or more of voting power [see Corp. Code § 1900(a)]?

b. Will agreement change statutory provisions authorizing any of following corporations to wind up and dissolve [Corp. Code § 1900(b)]:

(1) Corporation that has been adjudicated bankrupt?

(2) Corporation that has disposed of all of its assets and has not conducted any business for five years immediately preceding adoption of resolution electing to dissolve corporation?

(3) Corporation that has not issued shares?

12. Determine whether agreement will include provision for arbitration to resolve disputes within corporation [see § 8C.22[3]], including:

a. Events giving rise to arbitration, such as:

(1) Claims or controversies arising out of breach of shareholder agreement.

(2) Rights, duties, or obligations of:
(a) Shareholders.

(b) Employees of the corporation.

(c) Directors.

(d) Officers.

b. Place where arbitration is to be conducted.

c. Rules of procedure to be followed or incorporation by reference of established rules, such as Rules of American Arbitration Association.

NOTE:

For further discussion of the use of arbitration to resolve corporate dissolution and deadlock, see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATION WITH TAX PLANNING, Ch. 108A, Close Corporations, § 108A.04[4] (Matthew Bender). For discussion of arbitration generally, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 65.02[3] (Matthew Bender).

13. Determine whether agreement will include provision controlling modification, extension, or revocation of shareholder agreement [see § 8C.31].

14. Determine whether agreement will include provision that it will continue in effect to extent enforceable apart from Corp. Code § 300(b) on occurrence of following events:

NOTE:

A shareholder agreement is terminated (1) when the corporation ceases to be a close corporation, or (2) by the original issuance of shares by the corporation to a new shareholder who does not become a party to the agreement, unless the agreement provides that it may continue in effect to the extent it is enforceable apart from Corp. Code § 300(b) [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

a. Will agreement continue to extent permitted by statute when the corporation ceases to be a close corporation?

b. Will agreement continue to extent permitted by statute when corporation issues original shares to new shareholder who does not become party to agreement?

§ 8C.120 Statutory Requirements for Form of Shareholder Agreement

NOTE:

The General Corporation Law imposes only two requirements related to the form of a shareholder agreement: (1) the agreement must be in writing [Corp. Code § 186]; and (2) the agreement must be either (a) among all of the shareholders of a close corporation, or (b) between the sole shareholder and the corporation, if the close corporation has only one shareholder [Corp. Code § 186]. See § 8C.112 for provisions commonly included in a shareholder agreement. See § 8C.113 for an enumeration of the statutory provisions that may be neither altered nor waived by the agreement.

1. Put shareholder agreement in writing.

2. Draft agreement among either:

a. All shareholders; or

b. Between sole shareholder and corporation, if close corporation has only one shareholder.

PRACTICE TIP:

It is a good practice to make the corporation a party to the agreement at least to the extent there are provisions that require the corporation's compliance, such as putting legends on the stock certificate and not recording a stock transfer not made in compliance with the shareholder agreement. Commentary by Marilyn E. Minger.

§ 8C.130 Binding Transferees of Shares

1. Verify that certificates of shares subject to shareholder agreement have been stamped with legend indicating that fact [see Corp. Code § 300(c); see also Corp. Code § 418(a)].

NOTE:

A transferee of shares covered by a shareholder agreement is bound by its provisions when (1) the agreement is filed with the secretary of the corporation for inspection by an potential purchaser of shares, and (2) the transferee has actual knowledge of the agreement or notice that there is such an agreement because the share certificates are stamped with a legend indicating that fact [Corp. Code § 300(b); see Corp. Code § 418(a) (required legend)].

2. Verify that copy of shareholder agreement has been filed with secretary of corporation for inspection by prospective purchasers [see Corp. Code § 300(c)].

NOTE:

For discussion of whether a transferee of shares subject to a shareholder agreement not filed with the corporation's secretary is bound by the agreement, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[10] (Matthew Bender).

3. Verify that copy of shareholder agreement has been given to each person to whom shares have been transferred.

NOTE:

Although not a statutory requirement, providing each transferee of shares with a copy of the agreement ensures that they have actual knowledge of the agreement.

§ 8C.131 Securities Considerations

1. Determine whether adoption, modification, or termination of any provisions in shareholder agreement constitutes a sale of securities subject to registration or qualification requirements [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.017.2, 260.017.3; Corp. Code § 25017; § 8C.31].

2. Determine whether issuance of securities of close corporation is exempt from qualification as small [Corp. Code § 25102(h)] or limited [Corp. Code § 25102(f)] offering [see Corp. Code § 116].

3. Ascertain whether issuance of securities of close corporation is exempt from registration under the federal securities laws.

NOTE:

Because securities law exemptions do not match close corporation requirements, some close corporations may not come within the small offering exemption [Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. However, the less restricted limited offering exemption [Corp. Code § 25102(f)] will likely apply. For further discussion, see § 8C.31.

§ 8C.132 S Corporation Considerations

1. If corporation has elected S corporation tax treatment [see I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.; Rev. & Tax. Code § 23800 et seq.], ascertain that agreement does not provide for division of corporate profits among shareholders other than according to their respective share holdings.

NOTE:

A corporation does not qualify under the Internal Revenue Code as an S corporation if it has more than one class of shares outstanding [I.R.C. 1361(b)(1)(D)]. Although a corporation is not treated as having more than one class of stock solely because there are differences in voting rights among shares of common stock [I.R.C. 1361(c)(4); see § 8C.15[4]], with this exception, when one share is not identical to every other share with respect to control, profits, and assets of the corporation, the corporation is considered to have more than one class of shares outstanding [Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2)]. Thus, an agreement that provides for the division of corporate profits among shareholders other than according to their respective share holdings appears to destroy the corporation's S corporation status for income tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); Parker Oil Co. v. Commissioner (1972) 58 T.C. 985, 990 ; see also Blau, Shareholder Agreements and the Single Class of Stock Requirement, 68 J. Tax'n 238 (1988)].

2. If corporation has elected S corporation tax treatment [see I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.; Rev. & Tax. Code § 23800 et seq.], ascertain that agreement does not provide for liquidation rights different from a shareholder's dividend rights, other than according to their respective share holdings.

NOTE:

A shareholder agreement that gives shareholders unequal rights in the corporation's assets on dissolution and provides for liquidation rights different from a shareholder's dividend rights, other than according to their respective share holdings, appears to violate the single class of stock requirement [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D); Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2)] and, therefore, may destroy the corporation's S corporation status for income tax purposes [see Blau, Shareholder Agreements and the Single Class of Stock Requirement, *68 J. § 8C.200 Shareholder Agreement Providing for Management of Corporation, Employment of Shareholders, Restriction on Stock Transfers, and Noncompetition

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a close corporation shareholder agreement in which all shareholders will be employed by the corporation. The form provides for the management of the corporation, the employment of the shareholders, grounds for termination of employment, and a mandatory buy-out arrangement for the shares of any shareholder whose employment with the corporation is terminated. It contains provisions regulating the distribution of income, the voluntary dissolution of the corporation, winding up, the distribution of corporate assets on liquidation, and the amendment and termination of the agreement. It also includes transfer restrictions, a noncompetition clause, and a provision for arbitration. It specifies the wording of the legend on the share certificates, indicating that the corporation is a close corporation.

This form makes the following assumptions:

- All shareholders will be employees of the corporation.
- The corporation has already issued a single class of shares, without series.
- The shareholders want to keep at a minimum the paperwork involved in running the corporation.
- The shareholders want to ensure their continued employment.
- The shareholders want to control the future membership of the shareholder group.
- The shareholders will be entitled to receive distributions in proportion to the number of corporate shares they own.

- Important management decisions will be put to a vote of all shareholders; however, to avoid deadlock, the vote of two thirds of the outstanding shares of the Corporation entitled to vote will control.

Since the factual circumstances of any particular close corporation will vary, this form should be adapted accordingly. For a close corporation shareholder agreement for a sole shareholder corporation, see § 8C.201.

This form is a statutory shareholder agreement, drafted in accordance with the statutory provisions authorizing the use of shareholder agreements in California [see Corp. Code § 300(b), (c)]. For a discussion of nonstatutory shareholder agreements in California, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 4, Close Corporations § 62.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

[b] Statutory Requirements Related to Form of Agreement

There are only two requirements imposed by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 100 et seq.] related to the form of a shareholder agreement:

- The agreement must be in writing [Corp. Code § 186], and

- The agreement must be either among all of the shareholders of a close corporation, or between the sole shareholder and the corporation, if the close corporation has only one shareholder [Corp. Code § 186]. The corporation may be a party to the agreement even when there is more than one shareholder.

[c] Whether to Include Provisions in Shareholder Agreement or in Articles or Bylaws

Corp. Code § 204(a) permits all the provisions that it would otherwise require in the articles of incorporation to be in a shareholder agreement, if the corporation is a statutory corporation [Corp. Code § 204(a); see Corp. Code § 158 (close corporation defined)]. Care should be taken in drafting a shareholder agreement to make certain that the corporation's articles and bylaws do not contain provisions inconsistent with the shareholder agreement. The better approach may be to duplicate in the articles the protective provisions of the shareholder agreement, so that those provisions will survive any termination of the shareholder agreement. Of course, duplicate provisions should be included in the articles only if permitted by Corp. Code § 204(a) [see § 8C.112]. If the corporation loses its status as a close corporation, provisions other than those permitted in the articles in accordance with Corp. Code § 204(a) may no longer be valid if not expressly authorized by another section of the General Corporation Law or if not otherwise a lawful agreement not otherwise contrary to public policy [see Corp. Code § 204(a)].

[d] Board of Directors

This form establishes a board of directors consisting of all of the shareholders. Some commentators argue that a shareholder agreement that establishes direct shareholder management of the corporation may eliminate the board of directors entirely, with the shareholders assuming the powers, responsibilities, and liabilities of the directors. However, there is at least a minimal advantage in continuing a standby board to carry out board functions that cannot be waived [see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 500, 1501(a), 1502], as well as general required functions if the corporation continues after losing its status as a close corporation [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 62.03[3][c] (Matthew Bender)].

[e] S Corporation Considerations

The dividend provisions and the provisions that alter the right to manage the corporation and to vote shares contained in this form may violate the single class of stock requirement for being taxed as an S corporation [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D); Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); see also §§ 8C.15[4], 8C.17[4][a]]. In addition, an S corporation is limited in the number of shareholders it may have (no more than 100) [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)] and in the type of shareholders (neither corporations nor foreign persons may be shareholders) [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (C)]. Consequently, if the shareholders wish to elect S corporation treatment, or to assure themselves of continued S corporation treatment, this form should be modified accordingly [see §§ 8C.15[4], 8C.17[4][a]; see also § 8C.201[2]].

[f] Employment of Shareholders

The drafter may chose to use a separate employment agreement, entered into concurrently with the shareholder agreement, since the corporation, rather than the shareholders, will employ the individuals. The shareholders may also make the corporation a party to the agreement. If a separate employment agreement is used, some of the provisions in Sections 1.05 and 1.06 of this form may be set forth in that agreement, rather than in the shareholder agreement. For employment contracts, see Ch. 85, Employment Contracts . For considerations when drafting those agreements, see § 8C.16.

[g] Regulating Dividend Payments and Distributions of Corporate Profits and Assets

The California close corporation statute expressly authorizes shareholder agreements of statutory close corporations to regulate the declaration and payment of dividends or the division of corporate profits [Corp. Code § 300(b)]. No shareholder agreement, however, may alter or waive the provisions of the General Corporation Law requiring that the corporation pass certain financial tests before making any corporate distributions to shareholders [Corp. Code § 300(c); see Corp. Code §§ 500, 501 (distributions to shareholders); see also § 8C.17[2]].

This form shows only one of the many possible approaches to dividing the profits of a close corporation, basing the dividends on the number of shares owned by each shareholder. The agreement might provide that the profits of the corporation be distributed based on the amount of time devoted to the corporation's business, the amount of business generated for the corporation, or the agreement could merely specify that one shareholder is to receive more profits than another.

If the corporation does not prepare financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, those references in this form should be modified accordingly.

[h] Dissolution

[i] Restrictions on Voluntary Dissolution

Although a shareholder agreement may not waive or alter the statutory provisions relating to involuntary dissolution [Corp. Code § 300(c); see § 8C.18], the agreement may contain provisions that alter or waive the statutory right to seek voluntary dissolution [see Corp. Code § 300(c)]. Thus, the agreement may provide for the dissolution of the corporation in the event of deadlock among the shareholders, on the happening of certain specified events, different from those that would justify dissolution under the statutes [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 1900 et seq.]. Conversely, as in this form, the agreement may forbid initiation of an action for voluntary dissolution by fewer than all of the shareholders.

[ii] Distribution of Assets on Dissolution

The General Corporation Law expressly permits the shareholders of a close corporation to include in a shareholder agreement provisions relating to distribution of the corporate assets on liquidation or dissolution [Corp. Code § 300(b); see § 8C.18]. This form designates which of the shareholders is to conduct any winding up procedures on dissolution of the corporation, and the manner in which the assets of the corporation are to be distributed on liquidation or dissolution. To avoid loss of any Subchapter S status [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D); Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); see also § 8C.18[2]], this form treats all shareholders equally with respect to liquidation distributions. If Subchapter S status is not a consideration, this form may be modified accordingly.

[i] Restrictions on Transfer; Share Buy-Sell Provisions

The permissible restrictions on transfer can take several forms [see § 8C.20; see also Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements]. This form contains in substance an obligation on the part of each shareholder to offer the corporation and the other shareholders a first right to purchase the shares. Provisions to implement these restrictions (buy-sell provisions) may be included in the shareholder agreement or in a separate buy-sell agreement. No specific provisions are recommended in this form because of the great variety of buy-sell arrangements. The issues to be considered in drafting buy-sell agreements, including methods of share valuation and payment for shares (such as deferred payment or installment payments), as well as form provisions for a cross-purchase, entity purchase, or hybrid agreement, are covered in detail in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements.

[j] Noncompetition; Trade Secrets

Agreements not to compete or to divulge trade secrets may be included in a shareholder agreement, an employment agreement, or in a separate noncompetition agreement. This form includes a simple noncompetition provision. For discussion of covenants not to compete, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Appendix (Forms), Form 13.09 (Matthew Bender).

[k] Spousal Consent

For discussion of the importance of obtaining spousal consent and appropriate form provisions, see § 8C.203.

Shareholder Agreement Providing for Management of Corporation, Employment of Shareholders, Restriction on Stock Transfers, and Noncompetition OA

SHAREHOLDER AGREEMENT OF _____ [name of close corporation]

RECITALS

The Shareholders are all the shareholders of _____[name of close corporation] (referred to as "Corporation"), a California close corporation as defined by California Corporations Code Section 158.

The Shareholders desire to enter into a Shareholder Agreement, as defined in California Corporations Code Section 186, prepared in accordance with California Corporations Code Section 300(b), to provide for the management and control of the affairs of the Corporation, including but not limited to, the management of its business, the division of its profits, and the distribution of its assets on liquidation.

The Shareholders believe that it is important to provide for the continuity of employment of each Shareholder, to restrict the transfer of shares of the Corporation, to define the participation of each Shareholder in the business and the management of the Corporation, and to make other provisions among themselves with respect to the Corporation and their relationship to it, as contained in this Agreement.

[If corporation's articles either duplicate or augment the provisions of this agreement, add:]

The articles of incorporation contain provisions that _____[duplicate or augment] some of the provisions of this Agreement, which, to be effective, must be in the articles of incorporation or in a shareholder agreement of a close corporation. In the event of any inconsistencies between this Agreement and the articles of incorporation, the provisions of this Agreement will control. However, if this Agreement terminates, the provisions in the articles of incorporation will continue in effect, until amended as provided by law.

[If the repurchase or shares by the corporation on the death of the shareholder is going to be funded by life insurance on that shareholder, add:]

The Shareholders contemplate that certain purchases of the shares of the capital stock of the corporation held by each Shareholder will be wholly or partially funded by a policy or policies of life insurance with respect to such Shareholder.

(a) Determine in good faith the "current assets" of the Corporation for purposes of corporate distributions as required by the California Corporations Code;

(g) _____[Other actions that the shareholders wish to restrict].

3.04. Shareholder Meetings. Although there will be no required shareholder meetings, as provided in Section 3.01 of this Agreement, a special meeting may be called at any time in accordance with California Corporations Code Section 600(d) or the Corporation's bylaws.

The title, duties, and the other terms of employment, including the annual salary, may be altered only by the unanimous written consent of the Shareholders.

3.06. Grounds for Termination. Notwithstanding any contrary provisions in any employment agreement, any Shareholder may be terminated as an officer and as a director of the Corporation by the action of the other Shareholders, as provided in this paragraph. Termination will be effective on the adoption by all of the other Shareholders, at a meeting held after _____[period of time, e.g., 10 days'] written notice has been given to the Shareholders, of a written resolution finding that the Shareholder has

(i) _____[other grounds for termination of employment as an officer and removal of director].

The Shareholders waive the provisions of California Corporations Code Section 303 to the extent that they are inconsistent with these provisions.

3.07. Mandatory Share Buy-Out on Termination. In the event of termination, the terminated Shareholder agrees to sell his or her shares, as provided _____[in Article 7 of this Agreement or in the Buy-Sell Agreement of _____ (name of close corporation) dated _____].

4.02. Retaining Net Income. The Corporation will retain _____[percent or dollar amount] of its net income, plus any additional amount the President reasonably believes necessary to meet financial needs of the Corporation, including, but not limited to the development or expansion of its business.

4.03. Regular Distributions of Net Income. Subject to any retained earnings and to the statutory requirements related to corporate distributions, the net income of the Corporation will be distributed _____[specify time period, e.g., monthly or quarterly or semiannually or annually] to the Shareholders in proportion to the number of shares of the Corporation owned by them.

ARTICLE 5 DISSOLUTION

5.01. Restrictions on Voluntary Dissolution. All Shareholders must consent to voluntary dissolution; and each Shareholder waives any right to take that action by approval or vote of a lesser percentage.

5.02. Procedures During Winding Up. On commencement of dissolution proceedings (either by election of all Shareholders or otherwise), the Corporation will cease to carry on business except as necessary to wind up its business and distribute its assets. The President, or any Shareholder or Shareholders appointed by the President, will perform the following acts, as necessary, to wind up the affairs of the Corporation:

(a) Employ agents and attorneys to liquidate and wind up the affairs of the Corporation;

(b) Continue the business as necessary for the winding up of the affairs of the Corporation;

(c) To the accrued and unpaid interest on unsubordinated debts to a Shareholder;

(d) To the principal of unsubordinated debts to a Shareholder;

(f) To repayment of the purchase price of the shares of the Corporation actually paid by each Shareholder; and, finally,

(g) To the Shareholders in proportion to the number of shares of the Corporation held by each.

For the purposes of this paragraph, assets distributed in kind will be valued at their fair market value as of the date of the proposed distribution, determined in good faith by the President or the President's appointee(s).

ARTICLE 6 RESTRICTIONS ON TRANSFER

6.01. Restrictions on Transfer. To accomplish the purposes of this Agreement, any transfer, sale, assignment, hypothecation, encumbrance, or alienation of any of the shares of the Corporation, other than according to the terms of _____[this Agreement or the provisions of the Buy-Sell Agreement of _____ (name of close corporation) dated _____], is void and transfers no right, title, or interest in or to those shares to the purported transferee, buyer, assignee, pledgee, or encumbrance holder. Each Shareholder shall have the right to vote shares held of record and to receive dividends paid on them until the shares are sold or transferred in accordance with this Agreement.

[See Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements, for appropriate provisions restricting transfer of shares on the following events: the voluntary lifetime sale of shares, the involuntary transfer of shares due to bankruptcy or assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the shareholder's termination of employment, disability, retirement, or death.]

6.02. Permitted Transfers. A Shareholder may transfer all or any part of his or her shares to a spouse, ancestors or lineal descendants (whether natural or adopted) or the spouses of any of such persons, or to any trust solely for the benefit of the Shareholder or any of the foregoing persons, provided that each such permitted transferee shall first agree in writing to be bound by the terms and provisions of this Agreement.

ARTICLE 7 MANDATORY BUY-SELL PROVISIONS

7.01. Mandatory Buy-Sell Provisions. _____. [See Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Provisions, for buy-sell provisions for small, closely held corporations.]

ARTICLE 8 NONCOMPETITION; TRADE SECRETS

8.01. Noncompetition. Each Shareholder agrees that as long as he or she is the owner, or in control of, any of the Corporation's shares, the Shareholder will not be employed, concerned, or financially interested, either directly or indirectly, in the same or a similar business as that conducted by the Corporation, or compete with the Corporation. The business of the Corporation is defined as _____[specify corporation's business]. However, it is not a breach of this Agreement for any Shareholder to own, as a passive investment, not more than five percent of the outstanding stock of any publicly held company engaged in the business of the Corporation, as defined in this paragraph.

8.02. Trade Secrets. Each Shareholder acknowledges that the customer lists, trade secrets, processes, methods, and technical information of the Corporation and any other matters designated by the President or by the written consent of all Shareholders are valuable assets. Unless he or she obtains the written consent of each of the other Shareholders, each Shareholder agrees never to disclose to any individual or organization, except in authorized connection with the business of the Corporation, any customer list, or any name on that list, or any trade secret, process, or other matter referred to in this paragraph while the Shareholder holds, or has the control of, any shares of the Corporation, or at any later time.

ARTICLE 9 LEGEND ON SHARE CERTIFICATES

9.01. Legend on Share Certificates. Each share certificate, whether presently owned or subsequently acquired, shall have the following statement conspicuously printed on its face:

"This is a close corporation. The number of holders of record of its shares of all classes may not exceed _____ [number not more than 35]; this corporation is restricted in the types of shareholders in may have. The securities evidenced by this certificate may not be sold, transferred, assigned, pledged, hypothecated or otherwise disposed of except in accordance with, and are subject to transfer upon certain events described in, a shareholder agreement, dated _____ between the issuer and the registered holder hereof, a copy of which agreement is on file at the principal office of the issuer. Any attempted transfer that would violate these limitations is void."

[Add, if applicable:]

9.02. Stamping of Certificates. Immediately on execution of this Agreement, each of the Shareholders shall present his or her share certificates to the Secretary of the Corporation and cause the Secretary to stamp on each certificate in a prominent manner the statement set forth in Section 7.01 of this Agreement.

[Add, if desired:]

9.03. Deposit of Shares With Corporation. Concurrently with the execution of this Agreement, each Shareholder has endorsed stock assignment forms, in addition to his or her share certificates, and has deposited both the assignment forms and the share certificates with the Secretary of the Corporation. Despite the endorsement and deposit, each Shareholder shall have the right to vote shares held of record and to receive dividends paid on them until the shares are sold or transferred, as provided in this Agreement.

[CONTINUE]

ARTICLE 10 ARBITRATION

10.01. Arbitration. Any claim or controversy arising out of or relating to this Agreement, or arising out of or relating to the Corporation, or the rights or obligations of the Shareholders as shareholders, directors, officers, or employees of the Corporation will be determined and settled by arbitration in _____[county], according to the California Arbitration Statutes (California Code of Civil Procedure Section 1280 et seq.) in effect at the time. Each party involved in an arbitration proceeding in accordance with this section will pay its own expenses. The cost of conducting the arbitration proceeding itself will be born by each party to it in proportion to the number of shares of the Corporation owned prior to the commencement of the proceeding. The Shareholders intend that any court in which an action for involuntary dissolution is filed will consider the extent to which the party filing the action reasonably and in good faith attempted to negotiate or arbitrate, prior to filing, the _____[dispute or disputes] leading to filing.

ARTICLE 11 TERMINATION AND AMENDMENT

11.01. Termination of Agreement. This Agreement will remain in effect until the Corporation ceases to be a close corporation as defined in California Corporations Code Section 158, or until all the Shareholders agree in writing to termination. Notwithstanding any such termination, the provisions in Articles 6 (restrictions on transfer), 7 (mandatory buy-sell provisions), 8 (noncompetition; trade secrets), and 10 (arbitration) will remain in effect until all Shareholders agree in writing to a termination, or until they expire by their terms. Further, notwithstanding an original issuance of shares by the Corporation to a new Shareholder who does not become a party to this Agreement, this Agreement will continue to the extent it is enforceable apart for California Corporations Code Section 300(b).

11.02. Amendment of Agreement. This Agreement may be amended only by written consent of all parties to the Agreement.

ARTICLE 12 MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

12.01. Necessary Acts. All parties to this Agreement will perform any acts, including executing any documents, that may be reasonably necessary to fully carry out the provisions and intent of this Agreement.

12.02. Notices. All notices, demands, requests, or other communications required or permitted by this Agreement shall be in writing and shall be deemed duly served when personally delivered to the party or to an officer or agent of the party, or when deposited in the United States mail, first-class postage prepaid, addressed to the Corporation at

_____[address of Corporation's principal office], or to a Shareholder at the address appearing for him or her on the books and records of the Corporation, or at any other address the party may designate by written notice to the others.

12.03. Remedies. The parties will have all the remedies available to them for breach of this Agreement by law or in equity. The parties further agree that in addition to all other remedies available at law or in equity, the parties will be entitled to specific performance of the obligations of each party to this Agreement and immediate injunctive relief. The parties also agree and that if an action is brought in equity to enforce a party's obligations, no party will argue, as a defense, that there is an adequate remedy at law.

12.04. Attorneys' Fees. In the event of any litigation concerning this Agreement between the parties to this Agreement or the parties to this Agreement and the estate of any deceased Shareholder, the prevailing party shall be entitled, in addition to any other relief that may be granted, to reasonable attorneys' fees.

12.05. Binding on Successors and Assigns. This Agreement will be binding on the parties to the Agreement and on each of their heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns.

12.06. Severability. If any provision is unenforceable or invalid for any reason, the remaining provisions shall be unaffected by such a holding.

12.07. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be construed according to and governed by the laws of the State of California.

12.08. Entire Agreement. This instrument [for each exhibit attached, add: and Exhibit _____] constitutes the entire Shareholder Agreement of the Corporation and correctly sets forth the rights, duties, and obligations of each Shareholder and of each Shareholder to the other. Any prior agreements, promises, negotiations, or representations concerning the Agreement's subject matter not expressly set forth in this Agreement are of no force or effect.

12.09. Agreement Available for Inspection. An original copy of this Agreement duly executed by each of the Shareholders shall be delivered to the Secretary of the Corporation and maintained by the Secretary at the principal office of the Corporation available for inspection by any person requesting to see it.

§ 8C.202 Provisions Ensuring S Corporation Tax Treatment

[1] Comment--Use of Form

Because the requirements for close corporation status under the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 100 et seq.] are not the same as the requirements for S corporation tax treatment [see I.R.C. § 1361 et seq.; Rev. & Tax. Code § 23800 et seq.], some of the provisions in the shareholder agreement in § 8C.200[2], particularly the dividend provisions and the provisions that alter the right to manage the corporation and to vote shares, may violate one of the requirements to be taxed as an S corporation, particularly the single class of stock requirement [see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D); Treas. Reg. § 1.1361-1(l)(2); see also § 8C.15[4], 8C.17[4][a]]. In addition, an S corporation is limited in the number of shareholders it may have (no more than 100) [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)] and in the type of shareholders (neither corporations nor foreign persons may be shareholders) [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (C)]. Consequently, if the shareholders wish to elect S corporation treatment, or to assure themselves of continued S corporation treatment, the provisions in this form should be inserted in the shareholder agreement. For discussion of the advisability of electing to be taxed as a S corporation, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For discussion of the procedures to be used in electing or terminating Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

[2] Form

Provisions Ensuring S Corporation Tax Treatment

AGREEMENT ON SUBCHAPTER S ELECTION

_____. Subchapter S Election.

[If shareholders wish to elect S corporation treatment:]

The Shareholders have determined that the Corporation, with the consent of the Shareholders, should elect to be taxed as a small business corporation under Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code.

[OR, if shareholders wish to assure continued qualification as an S corporation:]

The Shareholders wish to ensure that the Corporation, having qualified as a small business corporation under Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code, will continue to qualify for Subchapter S treatment.

[CONTINUE]

Consequently, the Shareholders wish to ensure that the S corporation election, once made, will terminate or be revoked only as determined by the Shareholders.

Therefore, in order to protect that election and to prevent its inadvertent termination by transfer of the Corporation's stock into the hands of more than 100 shareholders or into the hands of an unqualified shareholder, the Shareholders agree to vote their shares, execute any necessary documents, and take any other required action in good faith _____[to qualify and maintain or to maintain] that election. The Shareholders also agree to bind their successors, executors, administrators, heirs, and assigns, in accordance with this paragraph.

If any Shareholder is unable or unwilling to execute any document required to effect or maintain the election under any provisions of the Internal Revenue Code or otherwise, that Shareholder irrevocably appoints the corporation's Secretary, or any other officer of the Corporation, to act as the Shareholder's attorney-in-fact to execute any necessary documents or take any necessary actions in that Shareholder's place.

No Shareholder will sell, assign, or transfer any shares of the Corporation to any person or in any manner that would cause the Corporation's S election to be terminated or revoked, without the prior written consent of each Shareholder.

Each Shareholder agrees to indemnify the Corporation and each other Shareholder for any S corporation benefits lost to them as a result of any act (or omission to act) of that Shareholder, resulting in the disqualification of the Corporation's S election or the loss of any benefit of that election. Each Shareholder agrees on behalf of that Shareholder's successors, executors, administrators, heirs, and assigns, that those persons will not consent to a revocation of the Corporation's S election on any transfer of shares. Each Shareholder further agrees that any such transferee will be required to indemnify the Corporation and each other Shareholder for any loss or expense arising from any consent to revoke the election, unless all Shareholders of the Corporation consent otherwise in writing.

§ 8C.203 Spousal Consent to Shareholder Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This consent form is intended to conform to the somewhat ambiguous language of Fam. Code § 1100(a), which, with certain exceptions, provides that either spouse has the management and control of their community personal property (including stock) with the same absolute power of disposition, other than testamentary, that the spouse has over his or her separate property [see [c], below]. This consent is intended to enable a married shareholder to act alone with respect to all matters specified in the shareholder agreement [see § 8C.200], with the exception of the purchase by the shareholder of additional shares, as provided in the agreement. Nonparty spouses of married shareholders who become shareholders and parties to the agreement should sign a similar consent at that time.

In the case of a nonmarital partner who is not a party to the agreement, any rights that person may have in the stock acquired by a party to the agreement is based on contract [Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 673-674, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106] . The attorney, therefore, should determine whether any such contract exists, establishing the ownership of the stock subject to the shareholder agreement. Any spousal consent forms attached to the agreement may be modified to reflect the nature of ownership of the nonmarital partner.

[b] Importance of Characterization of Stock as Community, Quasi-Community, or Separate Property Interests

All parties to a shareholder agreement, as well as nonparty spouses and nonmarital partners, have an interest in establishing or ascertaining the property nature of the stock subject to the agreement. Characterization of stocks as community, quasi-community, or separate property, or a combination of the three, is required in order to determine the rights and liabilities of the parties with respect to the stock. Problems involving characterization generally arise in the context of the following:

- Determining interspousal rights of management and control of the stock during the marriage.
- Dividing stock on marital dissolution, separation, or annulment.
- Distributing stock on the death of one or both spouses.
- Determining the rights of third party creditors with respect to the stock, either during marriage or on termination of marriage.

For example, non-owner shareholders will want to ensure the enforceable transfer of stock, as specified in the agreement, on the death or divorce of the owner shareholder. Owner shareholders who are married or have nonmarital partners will want to establish the community or separate property nature of the stock for purposes of management and control, as well as for income, estate and gift tax planning. Nonparty spouses and partners have similar interests.

Detailed discussion of property interests is outside the scope of this chapter. See Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements , for an overview of community property, quasi-community and separate property principles and the transmutation of the property nature of the stock. For additional coverage of property principles, see Ch. 120, Complete Marital Settlement Agreements , Ch. 121, Provisions for Division of Property , and CALIFORNIA FORMS OF PLEADING AND PRACTICE, Ch. 122, Community Property (Matthew Bender). For discussion of related estate planning considerations, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning .

Confirmation of the nature of the stock as community or separate property may be made part of the shareholder agreement or may be the subject of a separate agreement. To reduce the risk of a nonparty spouse claiming a community property interest in the stock in a marital dissolution proceeding (or the spouse's heirs making a similar claim on that spouse's death), some practitioners recommend the use of a property agreement separate from the shareholder agreement, covering all material assets of the spouses.

[c] Management and Control of Community Personal Property

With certain exceptions, either spouse has management and control of community personal property, with the absolute power of disposition, other than testamentary, that he or she has of his or her separate property [Fam. Code § 1100(a)]. As a corollary to equal management and control, the community property is generally liable for the debts and torts of both spouses [Fam. Code §§ 910 (debts), 1000(b) (torts)]. One problem with equal management and control is the potential for conflicting independent decisions make by each spouse concerning specific community property [see [b], above]. The exceptions to and qualifications of the equal management and control rule may mitigate this potential problem.

The exception most germane to the shareholder agreement is provided for management and control of a community property business: Except for gifts of community property [see Fam. Code § 1100(b)], the disposition of household furnishings and clothes [see Fam. Code § 1100(c)], or the sale or lease of community real property [see Fam. Code § 1102], a spouse who is operating or managing a business or an interest in a business that is all or substantially all community personal property has the primary management and control of the business or interest [Fam. Code § 1100(d)]. Primary management and control means that the managing spouse may act alone in all transactions, except that the managing spouse must give prior written notice to the other spouse of any sale, lease, exchange, encumbrance, or other disposition of all (or substantially all) of the personal property used in the operation of the business, whether or not title to that property is held in the name of only one spouse [Fam. Code § 1100(d)], and must act with respect to the other spouse according to the rules governing fiduciary relationships that control the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other [Fam. Code § 1100(e)]. This fiduciary duty of management and control includes the obligation to fully disclose all material facts and information on the existence, characterization, and valuation of all assets in which the community has (or may have) an interest and all debts for which the community is (or may be) liable [Fam. Code § 1100(e)]. Each spouse must also provide the other, on request, with equal access to all information and records that pertain to those assets and debts [Fam. Code § 1100(e)].

[d] Ethical Considerations

An attorney who drafts a spousal consent form or who is consulted by clients who wish to enter into a transmutation or confirmation agreement must remember his or her ethical responsibility to avoid conflicts of interest. Spousal consents, as well as transmutation and confirmation agreements, almost always raise actual or potential conflicts between spouses. An attorney cannot represent two clients who have conflicting (or potentially conflicting) interests, unless the attorney first explains the facts giving rise to the conflict and obtains written authorization from the clients to proceed with the dual representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B); see § 8C.110]. For general coverage of the ethical responsibilities of business attorneys, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business . For similar coverage for estate planning attorneys, see CALIFORNIA WILLS AND TRUSTS, Ch. 4, Ethical Considerations and Professional Responsibility (Matthew Bender).

Scope

This chapter examines the fundamental rules applicable to buy-sell agreements for small, closely held corporations. It discusses the nature and types of buy-sell agreements, including the entity purchase agreement, the cross-purchase agreement, and the hybrid agreement. It discusses the income tax consequences of the various types of agreements, including the taxation of sellers, purchasers, and other shareholders (not purchasers), and the tax effects of insurance funding. It also discusses the valuation of shares for estate tax purposes. The chapter covers business law considerations, including selecting the triggering events, setting the shares' purchase price, and funding the agreement. It briefly discusses securities regulations considerations and statutory restrictions on corporate purchases. It considers the impact of the community property laws on the ownership of the stock subject to the agreement and who should sign the agreement, either as a party to the agreement or as a nonparty who acknowledges the agreement. The ethical considerations related to an attorney's drafting or reviewing buy-sell agreements and the conflicts of interest the attorney must avoid are also covered.

The Transaction Guide contains a checklist and drafting guide for a buy-sell agreement.

Forms include entity purchase and cross-purchase agreements and insurance provisions for each.

For an example and discussion of a buy-sell agreement for a professional corporation, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations . For examples and discussion of buy-sell provisions for general partnerships, see Ch. 15, General Partnerships .

§ 8D.10 Buy-Sell Agreement Defined

A buy-sell agreement (also known as a buyout agreement) is a contract, particularly important in the case of a close or closely held corporation [see Corp. Code § 158(a)], under which the shareholders or owners of a business agree to purchase the interests of a withdrawing or deceased shareholder [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979), at 181]. The agreement describes the conditions (usually death, disability, or termination of employment) and the terms under which shareholders may or must transfer their shares [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979), at 181].

A buy-sell agreement is merely an executory contract to buy and sell personal property (that is, an employee's shares) if and when a particular event such as termination of employment occurs. A shareholder under such an executory contract is entitled to the benefits of ownership until delivery is made or tendered to the buyer, unless the buy-sell agreement specifies or implies a different intention [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1173, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (holding that agreement at issue did not imply any intention by parties to deny shareholder his rights during the post-employment period used to determine share value)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.11

§ 8D.11 Purposes of Buy-Sell Agreement

Generally, a buy-sell agreement provides the corporation and the shareholders with the certainty of a legally binding transfer plan well in advance of the actual events, facilitating agreement on the terms and manner of transfer [see Jacobs, Back to Basics Post TRA- 76 Stock Interest Terminations in Closely Held Corporations, 36 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 3, 6 (1978)]. It ensures the uninterrupted continuation of the business entity in the event of the death or withdrawal of a participant, prevents "outsiders" from becoming transferees of corporate shares upon a shareholder's death, disability, or retirement from the corporation, and enables the shareholders to sell their shares for a fair price despite the lack of a public market [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.02 (Matthew Bender); Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1173, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (citing Ballantine & Sterling, § 63.02)]. Further, if the agreement is properly drafted, the value of the shares of a deceased shareholder specified in the agreement will be controlling for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2703-1, 20.2031-2; see also § 8D.61].

In addition to its other functions, a buy-sell agreement provides for the orderly liquidation of a deceased shareholder's interest in the corporation, and ensures that his or her estate will receive the liquid assets it may need for taxes, creditors' claims, or probate expenses. An agreement may also give the remaining shareholders an option to dissolve the corporation upon the death of a major shareholder.

§ 8D.12 Types of Buy-Sell Agreements

There are two principal types of buy-sell agreements:

- The "entity purchase" plan (also referred to as the "stock" or "redemption" plan), and
- The "cross-purchase" plan (also referred to as the "stock purchase" agreement.

Under an entity purchase plan, a corporation redeems or purchases a shareholder's stock upon the occurrence of a triggering event, usually withdrawal, death, or severance of employment of the shareholder. Under a cross purchase plan, the remaining shareholders purchase a shareholder's stock directly from the shareholder or the shareholder's estate in proportion to their existing ownership interests.

A combination entity purchase and cross-purchase ("hybrid") agreement may provide for shareholder purchase after the corporation's failure to purchase, or corporate purchase after failure of the remaining shareholders to purchase [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 3.08]. Other hybrid arrangements provide that some of the shares will be offered to the corporation and some to the shareholders. For example, such an agreement might provide that the remaining shareholders be given the first option to purchase the shares of the withdrawing shareholder, but if they decline to exercise the option, the corporation will have the option to purchase, and if it fails to purchase all the shares, the remaining shareholders will purchase any unsold shares.

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.13

§ 8D.13 Types of Buy-Sell Agreements Compared

[1] In General

Selecting the appropriate type of buy-sell agreement requires evaluation of complex business and tax issues, as well as consideration of the shareholders' desires and circumstances.

Historically, entity purchase agreements were generally preferred because they were simpler to fund and to administer [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.03 (Matthew Bender)]. However, changes in the tax laws have increased the popularity of cross-purchase agreements as a result of the potential adverse tax consequences of an entity purchase, particularly when the purchase is funded with insurance [see, e.g., Sugar, Cross-Purchase Agreements Now Are Often More Beneficial than Redemption Agreements, 18 Taxation for Lawyers 370 (May/June 1990); Apfel & Wolfe, AMT Increases Advantage of Cross-Purchase Agreements over Redemption Agreements, 18 Taxation for Lawyers (May/June 1990); Wolf & Kupferberg, What is the Best Form for Structuring Corporate Buy-Out Agreements Now?, 16 Estate Planning 2 (Jan/Feb 1989)]. Some practitioners favor a hybrid agreement, under which the corporation buys the shares that it can purchase without adverse tax consequences, and the shareholders purchase the remaining shares.

The advantages and disadvantages of the entity purchase, the cross-purchase, and the hybrid agreements are discussed in [2]-[4], below.

[2] Advantages and Disadvantages of Entity Purchase Agreements

[a] Business Considerations

Under an entity purchase agreement, the corporation, not the remaining shareholders, purchases its own shares from the departing shareholder [see § 8D.12].

The primary business advantage of an entity purchase is that it is a simpler arrangement than a cross-purchase. An entity purchase will be enforceable after a shareholder's death or withdrawal, while a cross-purchase agreement may have to be rewritten after those events to redefine the responsibilities of the remaining shareholders. When the agreement is funded with insurance [see, e.g., §§ 8D.220, 8D.221], an entity purchase agreement requires the corporation to acquire only one life insurance policy for each shareholder, while a cross-purchase agreement may require each shareholder to purchase a policy on the life of every other shareholder, resulting in increased administrative costs and considerable expenditures on insurance premiums [see [3], below].

Except for entity purchase agreements adequately funded by life or disability insurance (which covers only the death or disability of the shareholder and not other triggering events) [see Corp. Code §§ 503.1, 503.2], the primary business disadvantage of an entity purchase agreement is that it may be unenforceable at the time the shareholder withdraws from the corporation. A corporation is prohibited from repurchasing its shares unless, at the time of the shareholder's death or withdrawal, it can meet certain statutory financial tests that do not apply to a cross-purchase agreement [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503; see also § 8D.72; Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender) (enforcement and validity of contracts by corporations to repurchase their shares)]. This potential disadvantage, however, may be mitigated by requiring the shareholders to take whatever actions are necessary to enable the corporation to repurchase its shares by either revaluing corporate assets or making a capital contribution.

[b] Tax Considerations

The primary income tax advantage of an equity purchase agreement is that it generally avoids the double taxation of corporate income used to purchase the shares of the departing shareholder [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations § 63.03[2][a] (Matthew Bender)]. Although the corporation cannot claim a deduction for the amount used to redeem a shareholder's shares as an ordinary and necessary business expense [Rev. Rul. 69-546, 1969-2 C.B. 24 ; see I.R.C. § 162(a)], the shareholders do not pay taxes on the proportionate increase in their shares resulting from the redemption [see Treas. Reg. § 1.305-3(e), Ex. 13; Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C. B. 920 ; see also § 8D.46]. Under a cross-purchase agreement, however, the funds used to purchase the shares of the departing shareholder are subject to double taxation when the remaining shareholders withdraw these funds from the corporation as dividends. The double taxation results because the dividends, taxed once as income to the corporation [I.R.C. § 11(a)], are not deductible by the corporation [see I.R.C. § 311] and are taxed again when received by the shareholders [I.R.C. §§ 1(a)-(e), (h)(11) (capital gains treatment for qualifying dividends), (i)(2), 61(a)(7), 301, 305(b); see I.R.C. § 316 (dividend defined); [3], below].

Entity purchase agreements have several significant tax disadvantages:

- An accumulated earnings tax may be imposed if the agreement is funded with insurance with substantial cash surrender values that accumulate beyond the reasonable needs of the business [see I.R.C. § 531 et seq.; § 8D.48[4]].

- The alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 55] may be imposed if the entity purchase agreement is funded with life insurance [see I.R.C. §§ 56(g)(4)(B)(ii); § 8D.48[3]; see also Apfel & Wolfe, AMT Increases Advantage of Cross-Purchase Agreements over Redemption Agreements, 18 Taxation for Lawyers (May/June 1990)].

- Income will be recognized by the corporation if it distributes property to the shareholder to redeem the shares, if the property's fair market value exceeds its adjusted basis [I.R.C. § 311(b)].

- Depreciation deductions and investment tax credits may have to be recaptured if the corporation distributes appreciated property to redeem the shares [I.R.C. §§ 179, 280F(b)(2), 1231, 1245, 1250, 1252, 1254, 1255 (recapture of depreciation deductions); I.R.C. § 50(a) (recapture of investment tax credit)].

- The corporation's distribution of property in exchange for the acquisition of stock from a shareholder (a "redemption distribution") will be treated as a dividend unless the redemption is either:
    - Not essentially equivalent to a dividend,
    - Substantially disproportionate,
    - In complete termination of the selling shareholder's interest, or
    - In partial liquidation of stock held by a noncorporate shareholder in the distributing corporation [I.R.C. § 302(b)], unless the stock attribution rules impute constructive ownership of additional, unredeemed shares to the shareholder [see I.R.C. § 318].

[3] Advantages and Disadvantages of Cross-Purchase Agreements

[a] Advantages

A major advantage of the cross-purchase agreement is the avoidance of the business and tax problems associated with entity purchase agreements. Since the shareholders, and not the corporation, are personally obligated to purchase the shares of the deceased or withdrawing shareholders, the uncertainty about whether the corporation can meet the financial tests required before it may redeem its shares [see [2], above] is inconsequential. The potential adverse effect of the alternative minimum tax generally can be avoided because the insurance policies used to fund a cross-purchase agreement belong to the individual shareholders, and therefore the cash surrender values of the policies do not constitute assets or retained earnings of the corporation [see Sugar, Cross-Purchase Agreements Now Are Often More Beneficial than Redemption Agreements, 18 Taxation for Lawyers 370, 373 (May/June 1990)].

In addition to avoiding the adverse tax consequences of an entity purchase agreement, the remaining shareholders may benefit under the cross-purchase agreement because they get a step-up in basis in the shares they purchase from the selling shareholder, making the basis of the purchased shares equal to their purchase price [I.R.C. § 1012]. Under an entity purchase agreement, the basis in shares remains fixed, despite any increase in value [Treas. Reg. § 1.305-3(e), Ex. 13; Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C.B. 920 ; see § 8D.46]. Of course, the impact of an increase in basis depends on the type of business entity involved, and the likelihood that the shareholder will sell his or her interest. An increased basis results in lower taxes if the shares are sold or if losses are generated by an S corporation. However, the basis increase will be of little benefit to a profitable family corporation if the surviving members retain the shares.

Under a cross-purchase agreement funded with insurance, the shareholders are likely to pay insurance premiums with after-tax dollars at a lower tax rate than would the corporation under an entity purchase agreement [see I.R.C. §§ 1 (individual tax rates), 11(b) (corporate tax rates)].

Unlike an entity purchase agreement, a cross-purchase agreement can be structured to ensure that the balance of power between groups in the corporation will remain the same, by providing for the purchase of shares by shareholders in same group as the departing or deceased shareholder [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.03[3][a] (Matthew Bender)]. Further, the transfer of shares between shareholders is generally treated as the sale or exchange of a capital asset, subject to taxation as capital gains [see I.R.C. §§ 1(h), 1001(a), 1221; see also § 8D.41]. The sale proceeds in an entity purchase may, under certain circumstances, be treated as a dividend, in which case the entire amount, and not just the profit on the sale of the shares, is taxed to the shareholder [see I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 61(a)(1), 301, 305(b), 316(a); see also § 8D.40]. Even for years in which dividends are taxed a capital gains rates (generally tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009) [see I.R.C. § (h)(11); Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for dividend taxation at capital gains rates)], the amount of gain from the sale proceeds in an entity purchase will be greater. For other years, the discrepancy between ordinary income and capital gains rates may result in significantly higher tax liability if sale proceeds are treated as a dividend [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (h), (i)(2)].

In addition, when insurance funding is used and there is a disparity in either ages or ownership percentages of shareholders, a cross-purchase agreement is likely to be more equitable than an entity purchase agreement. Although the younger or smaller percentage shareholder pays a disproportionately larger premium on the older or larger percentage shareholder, the shareholder paying the larger premium will derive the benefits of the proceeds. In an entity purchase arrangement, however, the entity (and thus the owners proportionately) bears the higher cost.

[b] Disadvantages

The major disadvantage of a cross-purchase agreement for most shareholders is that they must use their own money to purchase the shares of the departing shareholder. If the remaining shareholders have to withdraw funds from the corporation in the form of dividends to fund the buy-out, these funds will be subject to double taxation--once as income to the corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 11(a), 311] and again when received by the shareholder [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 61(a)(7), 301, 305(b); see I.R.C. §§ 316 ("dividend" defined); § 8D.44]. This double taxation, however, may not occur when the funds are withdrawn as compensation, provided the amount is reasonable, taking into account the shareholder's overall compensation [see I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8], or if the corporation is a subchapter S corporation [see I.R.C. § 1366; see also Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses ; Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status].

Another disadvantage of a cross-purchase agreement is its complexity when funded with insurance. For example, because each shareholder must own a policy on the life of every other shareholder, two policies are required for two shareholders, six policies are required for three shareholders, and 12 are needed for four. Not only are these additional policies cumbersome, but they also result in increased premium costs, as well as costs attributable to the issuance of the policy itself, and require continued tracking to ensure than the policies do not lapse.

Another potential drawback to a cross-purchase agreement funded by insurance is that the proceeds may be taxed under the transfer-for-value rule. Insurance proceeds received on a life insurance policy are not taxable to the recipient [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)]. However, under the transfer-for-value rule, when the insurance policy is transferred for valuable consideration to the recipient, the policy proceeds are taxable to the extent they exceed the consideration and any premiums paid by the recipient [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)], unless the transfer for consideration was to the insured, to a partner of the insured, to a partnership in which the insured is a partner, or to a corporation in which the insured is a shareholder or officer [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)(B)]. Thus, the policy proceeds are taxable if the policy is transferred for its cash surrender value to a remaining shareholder (not the insured) of the corporation in which the insured and the deceased policy holder were shareholders [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.03[3][a] (Matthew Bender)].

The following scenario describes the typical situation: As each shareholder dies, his or her estate is left as owner of the policies insuring the lives of the remaining shareholders. At the same time, each of the remaining shareholders acquires additional insurance on the life of each of the other shareholders as a result of their respective succession to part of the decedent's interest in the corporation. Thus, as a practical matter, the agreement usually provides for the purchase, at their cash surrender values, by the remaining shareholders of the policies on the lives of the other shareholders owned by the decedent's estate. Unless an exception can be found [see, e.g., Wolf & Kupferberg, What is the Best Form for Structuring Corporate Buy-Out Agreements Now?, 16 Estate Planning 2, 6 (Jan/Feb 1989), the transfer-for-value rule will then apply, making the proceeds of those policies taxable on the death of another shareholder.

[4] Advantages and Disadvantages of Hybrid Agreements

[a] Corporation's Purchase Based on Favorable Income Tax Consequences

One of the most common hybrid agreements is the arrangement under which the corporation buys as much of the stock of a deceased shareholder as the corporation may redeem with favorable income tax consequences under Internal Revenue Code Sections 303 (distributions in redemption of stock to pay death taxes) and 302(b) (redemptions as exchanges), and the shareholders purchase the remaining shares. Although this type of agreement may be the best solution in a difficult tax planning situation, it requires that the decedent's estate provide the corporation with detailed and accurate information on its size and holdings, so that the corporation's attorney or accountant may determine the proportionate number of shares to be purchased by the corporation and by the remaining shareholders. This type of agreement is germane only to C corporations, since the taxation of S corporations is unaffected by Internal Revenue Code Sections 303 and 302(b), since, except for federal income taxes on certain built-in gains [see I.R.C. § 1374], the S corporation's federal tax consequences are passed through to the shareholders [see I.R.C. § 1366(a)(1)].

[b] "Wait and See' Agreement

Another type of hybrid agreement is the "wait and see" agreement. It defines the triggering events and the purchase price, but lets the remaining shareholders determine who will buy the shares at the time the triggering event occurs. This type of agreement permits the shareholders to delay this decision until a time when the financial and tax situations of the affected parties can be better evaluated, and to make each decision on a case by case basis. It is not, however, without its disadvantages.

First, if the shareholders cannot agree on the percentage of shares to be purchased by the corporation, the agreement is effectively converted into a cross-purchase agreement, even when an entity purchase would have been more beneficial to the majority of shareholders. This problem may be averted by providing in the agreement that all shareholders must vote in favor of a corporate redemption if requested to do so by a given percentage of shareholders.

Second, it is difficult to finance a decedent's interest with life insurance if it is unclear who will be purchasing the shares. (If funding other than life insurance is used, however, this will not present a problem.) This issue also may be avoided if the agreement requires the corporation which owns the policies to lend money to any shareholder who elects to purchase any of the available shares.

§ 8D.20 Potential Conflicts of Interest in Context of Buy-Sell Agreement--In General

Clients commonly ask a single attorney to draft a corporate buy-sell agreement. In such a situation, the attorney represents the corporation and at least two shareholders [see §§ 8D.21[2] (representing the corporation), 8D.22 (representing multiple parties)]. Buy-sell agreements almost always raise actual or potential conflicts between shareholders because the shareholders' ages, business or technical expertise, capital investments, liquidity needs, income tax and estate planning objectives, and other factors vary. Other conflicts may arise if the attorney represents the shareholder and the shareholder's spouse (or nonmarital partner), who may or may not be involved in the business [see § 8D.26]. Further, an attorney representing multiple parties in a buy-sell agreement may have a conflict of interest if the attorney has a prior relationship with one of the parties, or if the attorney is asked, in the future, to enforce the buy-sell agreement against one of the parties represented in the initial transaction [see § 8D.25].

Additional conflicts of interest may also arise if the attorney invests in the corporation or accepts shares in the corporation in lieu of legal fees [see § 8D.27[1]], serves as a corporate officer or director [see § 8D.27[2]], or is called as a witness in any litigation before a jury [see § 8D.27[3]].

The duty to perform competently, the duty to refer, and the specialist standard, are discussed in § 8D.29. Other legal malpractice and ethical considerations, including the relationship between malpractice and ethics, are discussed in Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, §§ 1A.30-1A.38. For general coverage of the ethical responsibilities of estate planning attorneys, see CALIFORNIA WILLS TRUSTS, Ch. 4, Ethical Considerations and Professional Responsibility (Matthew Bender).

§ 8D.21 Identifying Conflicts of Interest

[1] Identifying the Client

An attorney who is asked to draft a corporate buy-sell agreement must first ascertain which party the attorney represents: the corporation itself, a single participant, some or all of the participants, or a combination of these parties. Unless the attorney chooses only to represent one party [see § 8D.24], an initial conflict of interest disclosure letter should identify those represented. For an example of this type of letter, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, § 1A.203.

[2] Representing the Corporation

[a] Nature of Representation

In representing a corporation, the attorney representation must conform to the concept that the client is "the organization itself, acting through its highest authorized officer, employee, body, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement" [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(A); see Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290, 301 P.2d 10 (attorney for corporation represents corporation and its shareholders and officers in their representative capacity; attorney does not represent corporation's officers personally)]. Whenever it becomes apparent that the corporation's interests are, or may become, adverse to those of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, the attorney must identify the client for whom the attorney is acting [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(D); see A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1.13].

[b] Disclosure Required When Constituents Also Represented

An attorney representing a corporation may also represent its constituents if the attorney makes a written disclosure to the client in accordance with The California Rules of Professional Conduct 3-310(B) and discloses his or her relationship to the entity [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Dual representation of clients whose interests conflict is permitted, under certain circumstances, if the attorney obtains the written consent of each client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Caution should be exercised, however, in dual representation if an actual conflict of interest exists [see § 8D.22[1]].

Even without an actual conflict, under some circumstances an attorney should not undertake multiple representation [see § 8D.23]. For discussion of the conflict of interest issues that may arise should the attorney desire to represent a client for whom the attorney drafted a buy-sell agreement, see § 8D.25.

§ 8D.22 Representing Multiple Parties

[1] Duty to Identify Conflict

In drafting a business buy-sell agreement, it is not uncommon for the parties to request that one attorney represent the corporation as well as the individual participants. Under the right circumstances, having one attorney represent all parties can result in a simpler, less expensive, and more harmonious transaction than if each party were represented by separate counsel. However, an attorney who is asked to represent multiple parties to a single transaction must first identify any actual or potential conflict and then determine whether the conflict may be waived. If the conflict may be waived, a suitable waiver must be obtained [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C); see also Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, §§ 1A.203, 1A.204 for waiver forms].

Under the California Rules of Professional Conduct, it appears that an attorney may represent clients with actual or potential conflicting interests, provided each client gives its informed, written consent [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)]. However, California courts have held that joint representation is not permitted in litigation if actual conflicts exist [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . If the conflict is merely potential, there may be multiple representation at a hearing or trial, provided there is full disclosure to, and informed consent of, all clients [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

Joint representation is permitted in a nonlitigation context provided all parties give their informed, written consent [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

[2] Duty to Inform Client

An attorney seeking to represent multiple parties must inform the client of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and foreseeable adverse consequences to the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. Generally, an attorney must disclose in understandable terms all facts and circumstances that, in the judgment of an attorney of ordinary skill and capacity, will enable the client to make an intelligent decision regarding the attorney's multiple representation [Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 147, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406 (decided before amendment of Rule 3-310)]. The attorney should caution the client that multiple representation limits the attorney client communications privilege, because communications by one client to an attorney on issues that affect multiple representation are not privileged when the communication is offered in a civil action between those clients [Evid. Code § 962; Wortham & Van Liew v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal. App 3d 927, 933].

Even if the attorney identifies no current conflicts of interest, potential conflicts may exist because the parties' interests, even if identical at the time the buy-sell agreement is drafted, may differ as the business progresses. The attorney must anticipate and disclose any reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences of representation of adverse interests [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. Moreover, if the potential conflict should become actual, the attorney must obtain the further informed written consent of the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310, Discussion]. See Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, § 1A.203 for a form disclosing the possibility of a potential conflict when no actual conflict exists.

§ 8D.23 When Multiple Representation is Inadvisable

Even when the disclosure and consent requirements of the California Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310] have been met, it may be inadvisable for an attorney to represent more than one party to the transaction. For example, unless the attorney is careful to distinguish between the business entity and its participants, the attorney risks representing the business inadequately. Furthermore, when multiple parties are involved, difficulties in communication and consensus may make multiple representation impractical.

If there exists an actual conflict that is likely to be litigated, or if the participants' interests will likely conflict in the future, the attorney may be required (when an actual present conflict exists at hearing or at trial) to withdraw, and may be disqualified from representing any of the parties, even if disclosure was made and consent properly obtained [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . Under these circumstances, the best interests of both the client and the attorney may dictate that the attorney avoid multiple representation.

§ 8D.24 Representing One Client

Attorneys sometimes choose to avoid potential or actual conflicts of interest, or the practical problems of multiple representation [see § 8D.23], by representing only one party to the transaction. In these circumstances, it is important to advise both the client and the other parties to the transaction that the attorney represents only a designated client and will not provide legal advice or services to the other parties. The attorney should also advise nonclients that they are free to retain independent counsel [see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, § 1A.201 for an appropriate form]. Written confirmation of the attorney's limited role and advice to nonclients to seek independent counsel will help protect both the attorney and nonclients from problems arising from uncertainty or misunderstandings about the attorney's role in the transaction.

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.25

§ 8D.25 Prior Representation--Conflict of Interest Considerations

It is not uncommon for an attorney who represented the business or one of its participants in drafting or reviewing a buy-sell agreement to be asked to represent the business or some or all of the participants in another matter. In this situation, the attorney must fully disclose, in writing, to the current client any previous relationships (legal, business, financial, professional, or personal) that the attorney had with any party in the same matter, or any party affected by the resolution of the matter or by the attorney's representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)(2),(3)]. "Full disclosure" means informing of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences of such representation to the client (or former client) [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)].

The attorney must also obtain the current client's written consent to representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)]. The attorney's written disclosure and the client's written consent are required regardless of whether the interests of the current client conflict with those of the parties with whom the attorney has had a relationship, and/or whether the attorney has obtained confidential information related to the current representation [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B),(C)]. The disclosure must be made to, and the consent obtained from, the client to be currently represented, and not clients or former clients with whom the attorney has had a relationship [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)], unless the proposed representation is either:

- Adverse to a current or a former client and relates to a matter for which the attorney has obtained confidential information [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(E)], or

- The prior relationships are with current clients [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)].

In these circumstances, the attorney must not only obtain the informed, written consent of the current client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(B)], but also the informed, written consent of the former or current clients whose interests are adverse to the anticipated representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(E)]. "Informed consent" means the client's or former client's written agreement to the representation following written disclosure [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(A)]. The failure to obtain consent may result in the attorney's disqualification in the event of litigation [Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 82-83, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159] , as well as possible disciplinary action or malpractice.

Whether a relationship exists between an individual and an attorney, and what constitutes "representation" can be difficult to define [Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 76-77, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159] , and a court may have to make that determination [see Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d, 284, 293 , 301 P.2d 10 (no relationship existed between corporate counsel and former president/principal stockholder); but see Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 936, 197 Cal. Rptr. 185 (corporate counsel for family-run business could not represent shareholder husband in marital dissolution action where corporation was primary focus of dispute)].

For a sample disclosure letter addressing the issues raised by prior representation and a sample disclosure letter requesting consent to represent a party whose interests are adverse to those of a current or former client, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business, §§ 1A.203, 1A.204.

Buy-sell agreements generally require that the spouse of each married individual shareholder sign a consent to the agreement, specifying that the spouse's community property interest in the corporate shares are subject to sale on the occurrence of the triggering events, and are subject to the other provisions of the agreement [see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements , for a consent form]. Conflicts of interest may arise from dual representation by the attorney as a result of the spouses' disparate property rights and different desires. The ethical considerations and rules discussed in §§ 8D.21-8D.25 apply to the dual representation of spouses. The proper characterization of the stock subject to a buy-sell agreement is discussed in § 8D.90. The property rights of nonmarital partners are discussed in § 8D.90[5].

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.27

§ 8D.27 Other Roles of Attorney--Conflict of Interest Considerations

[1] Attorney as Investor

An attorney who represents clients in a buy-sell agreement could become an investor by accepting an interest in the venture in lieu of all or part of the attorney's fees, or by simply making an investment in the client's business independent of any compensation received. An attorney who invests in a business venture with a client must comply with the following requirements [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300; see A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1.8]:

- The terms of the transaction must be fair and reasonable to the client and fully disclosed in writing to the client in a reasonably understandable manner.

- The client must be advised in writing that the client may seek independent legal advice and be given a reasonable opportunity to do so.

- The client must consent in writing to the transaction.

Although the advisability of investing in a client's business is outside the scope of this chapter, conflict of interest issues may be intensified in a dispute if the attorney is involved as both investor and counsel. If the attorney does decide to invest, the investment should be at the same price and on the same terms as other investors to help establish its fair and reasonable terms [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300(A)]. As a practical matter, if an attorney is to receive a share in the business as compensation for services, it is advisable to bill the client at the attorney's regular rates and then, separately, to invest in the business at the same price and terms as the other investors. Moreover, an attorney who accepts stock in lieu of fees should bear in mind the tax consequences of such a transaction [see I.R.C. § 61; Treas. Reg. § 1.61-2(d)(4) (stock received as compensation taxed at fair market value at time of transfer)].

[2] Attorney as Corporate Agent, Director, or Officer

An attorney might be asked to serve as a director or officer of a corporation for which the attorney has drafted a buy-sell agreement. Serving as an officer or director of a corporation under these circumstances can present several problems for the attorney. It may increase the possibility of conflicts of interest [see § 8D.21]. It may result in the waiving of the attorney-client communication privilege [see § 8D.22[2]]. It may increase the attorney's malpractice exposure, either by establishing a higher standard of conduct for the attorney than for a non-attorney, or through the reliance of others on the attorney's statements as legal advice where those statements were not so intended. Further, if the attorney is compensated for acting as a corporate director or officer, the California Rules of Professional Conduct may require fairness to the client, full disclosure in writing, and the consent of the client in writing [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300; A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 1.8; [1], above].

[3] Attorney as Witness

Even if the client's informed, written consent has been obtained, an attorney may decide to decline representation if the attorney is likely to be called as a witness in any litigation in which there will be a jury [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 5-210 (with limited exceptions, attorney cannot act as advocate before jury that will hear testimony from that attorney); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 5-210, Comment (rule inapplicable when attorney in advocate's firm will be witness)]. For example, an attorney who drafts a corporate buy-sell agreement might later be called as a witness in a dispute among the parties to the agreement to testify regarding the meaning of a section of the agreement.

§ 8D.28 Minimizing Risk of Conflict of Interest

[1] Disclosure Letter Tailored to Specific Conflicts

To minimize the risk of conflict of interest, an attorney must abide by the California Rules of Professional Conduct. These rules generally require [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rules 3-110-3-400 (Professional Relationship with Clients); §§ 8D.21-8D.27]:

- Fairness to the client.

- Full disclosure in writing of areas of actual or potential conflict among the parties, the potential risks associated with multiple representation, and the attorney's relationships to and representation of current as well as former clients whose interests are actually adverse to the proposed representation, or relate to a matter on which the attorney has obtained confidential information related to the representation.

- The client's written consent.

In practice, a client's written consent to multiple representation is binding only if full disclosure of the relevant circumstances, as well as actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences, has been made. Thus, to be effective, the disclosure letter must address the specific conflict issues of each representation. As a practical matter, the attorney should assume that a conflict disclosure letter and a signed consent form are necessary in the context of a buy-sell agreement, unless the attorney represents only one party to the venture.

An attorney representing only one party should advise nonclients who are parties to the transaction that the attorney represents only a designated client [see § 8D.24]. Additionally, if the attorney represents the business entity, it is a good idea to obtain from the business a signed letter, listing the names of parties whose directions the attorney should follow.

[2] Conflict-Identification System

The attorney must have an adequate conflict identification system including, at a minimum, the names of clients and other parties to the transaction, and the subject matter of the representation, to determine whether conflicts of interest exist with current or former clients before the attorney undertakes any proposed representation.

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.29

§ 8D.29 Duty to Perform Competently

[1] In General

An attorney has the duty to perform legal services competently [Cal. Rules of Prof. Cond., Rule 3-110; A.B.A. Model Rules Prof. Cond., Rules 1.1, 1.3 (1983)]. Drafting or reviewing a buy-sell agreement can involve many areas of law, including not only corporations law, but also federal and state taxation law related to corporate and individual income taxation, estate planning, property law, contract law, and federal and state securities regulations. The attorney should become fully informed regarding the legal and procedural aspects of each task undertaken and should consult with an expert when appropriate [see [2], below].

[2] Specialist Standard

A general practitioner has the duty to refer a client to a specialist or to recommend the assistance of a specialist if a reasonably careful, skillful practitioner would do so under similar circumstances. Alternatively, the general practitioner has the duty to perform with the knowledge, care, and skill required of specialist under similar circumstances [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; see also [3], below]. A defense based on the argument that the attorney's conduct met the standard of care expected of a general practitioner when a specialist was required will not suffice in a legal malpractice case [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809-810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

[3] Duty to Refer

If an attorney encounters a problem requiring the expertise of a specialist, the attorney should associate such a specialist or refer the matter to a specialist [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] . However, the attorney must exercise due care in referring to or associating another attorney. The attorney who decides to associate other counsel may be deemed liable to the extent that he or she does not adequately investigate the qualifications of the associated attorney [Tormo v. Yorkmark (1975) 398 F.Supp. 1159, 1171-1172 (attorney could be liable for negligent referral because he did not investigate qualifications of associated attorney who subsequently embezzled client's funds)]. Furthermore, if the client is referred to another attorney, the original attorney must take care to warn the client of any deadline or other time-related exigencies [see Muller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 42, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22 (initially consulted attorney who referred client to specialist attorney could be liable for failure to warn client of eight day deadline on statute of limitations)].

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.40

§ 8D.40 Taxation of Seller under Entity Purchase Agreement

[1] Characterization of Distribution as Redemption or Dividend

Under an entity purchase agreement, the corporation's acquisition of stock from a shareholder in exchange for property is treated as a redemption for tax purposes [I.R.C. § 317(b); see I.R.C. § 317(a) ("property" defined)].

The seller is treated as having made a sale or exchange of a capital asset (as in a cross-purchase agreement) if the redemption is either:

- Not essentially equivalent to a dividend [I.R.C. § 302(b)(1)].
- A substantially disproportionate redemption of that shareholder's shares [I.R.C. § 302(b)(2)(A)].
- A complete redemption of all shares owned by a shareholder [I.R.C. § 302(b)(3)].
- Made in partial liquidation of the distributing corporation [I.R.C. § 302(b)(4)(B)].

Further, the redemption of shares from a deceased shareholder's estate constitutes a sale or exchange to the extent the redemption is required to pay death taxes or funeral and administration expenses [I.R.C. § 303(a)].

Because buy-sell agreements are designed to create a market for shares that otherwise may have no ready market [see § 8D.11], agreements generally provide for the redemption of all of a shareholder's shares. Consequently, redemptions are normally treated as the purchase and sale of a capital asset. However, a redemption may be treated as a dividend if the stock attribution rules impute constructive ownership of additional, unredeemed shares to the shareholder [see I.R.C. § 318(a)]. For purposes of determining whether a redemption is a "complete" redemption [see I.R.C. § 302(b)(3)], the family attribution rules that attribute stock owned by an individual's spouse, children, grandchildren, and parents to that individual, are waivable [I.R.C. § 302(c)(2); see I.R.C. § 318(a)(1)].

[2] Tax Treatment of Dividends and Capital Gains Distinguished

Characterization of a distribution as a redemption rather than a dividend traditionally had important tax consequences, especially for high income taxpayers, both individuals and estates. The difference in capital gain tax rates [see I.R.C. § 1(h)] and ordinary income rates [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (i)(2)] traditionally has been a primary reason for favoring tax treatment of a distribution as a redemption (taxable at capital gains rates) rather than as a dividend (traditionally taxable as ordinary income rates) [see I.R.C. §§ 301(a), (c), 302, 316, 317]. For years in which dividends are taxed at capital gains rates (generally tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009) [see I.R.C. § 1(h)(11); Pub. Law No. 108- 27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for dividend taxation at capital gains rates)], however, this distinction is not a factor in favoring either redemption or dividend classification.

Apart from tax rate considerations, the method of calculating taxable gain (or income) is more favorable if the distribution is treated as a redemption, rather than as a dividend. In a redemption, the seller's taxable gain is the amount by which the purchase price exceeds the adjusted basis of the shares sold [I.R.C. § 1001(a); see I.R.C. § 1221 ("capital asset" defined); I.R.C. § 1011 (adjusted basis for determining gain or loss)]. For a shareholder or estate receiving a step-up in the basis of its stock to its fair market value at the date of death [see I.R.C. §§ 1014(a), 2032 (assets includable in decedent's estate for federal income tax purposes acquire new basis equal to their fair market value on date of death or, at estate's election, on alternate valuation date, generally six month's from decedent's death)], any gain is likely to be minimal. For decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis regime generally applies for property received from those decedents, under which recipients of property transferred at the decedent's death receive a basis equal to the lesser of the adjusted basis of the decedent in the property or the fair market value of the property on the date of the decedent's death [I.R.C. § 1022(a)]. Nevertheless, a step up in basis of up to $1.3 million ($4.3 million for certain property transferred to a surviving spouse) is allowed for each decedent's estate [I.R.C. § 1022(b)(1), (2)(B), (c)(2)(B)]. This limited step up in basis may also minimize any gain [see I.R.C. § 1022].

On the other hand, if the distribution is characterized as a dividend, the entire amount of the distribution, not just the profit the shareholder makes on the sale of the shares, is taxable [I.R.C. § 301(c)(1); see I.R.C. § 316(a) ("dividend" defined)]. If any portion of the distribution is not made out of earnings and profits, that portion is treated as a tax-free return of capital, thereby reducing the shareholder's adjusted basis in the shares [I.R.C. § 301(c)(2)]. Any portion of the distribution exceeding the adjusted basis of the stock is then treated as gain from the sale or exchange of property [I.R.C. § 301(c)(3)] and is taxed at capital gain rates to the extent it exceeds the basis of the shares [see I.R.C. § 1001(a)].

[3] Characterization of Distribution as Deductible Expense

Although characterization of a distribution as a redemption may have favorable tax consequences [see [2], above], it may be more cost effective to characterize the distribution as some form of compensation (termination payments, deferred compensation, for example), particularly for personal service corporations. In that case, although the employee must report the payments as ordinary income [see I.R.C. § 61(a)(1)], the corporation may deduct the payments as compensation [see I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); but see I.R.C. § 162(k)]. The compensation, however, must be reasonable, taking into account the employee's overall compensation [see Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8]. Characterization of the distribution as compensation or another type of deductible expense may be challenged by the Internal Revenue Service, depending on the particular circumstances of the transaction.

§ 8D.41 Taxation of Seller under Cross-Purchase Agreement

Under a cross-purchase agreement, the selling party (either the shareholder or the shareholder's estate) is treated as having made a sale or exchange of a capital asset. Thus, any gain on the sale of shares to other shareholders generally is treated as a capital gain, subject to capital gains tax on the amount the purchase price exceeds the adjusted basis of the shares sold [I.R.C. § 1001(a); see I.R.C. § 1221 ("capital asset" defined); I.R.C. § 1011 (adjusted basis for determining gain or loss); but see former I.R.C. § 341(a), before repeal by Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (gain on sale of stock of collapsible corporation taxed at ordinary income rates)]. Any loss is treated as a capital loss [see I.R.C. § 1001(a)]. If shares are sold at the shareholder's death, tax liability will be further reduced because of the step-up in basis [see I.R.C. §§ 1014(a), 2032 (assets includable in decedent's estate for federal income tax purposes acquire new basis equal to their fair market value on date of death or, at estate's election, on the alternate valuation date, which is generally six month's from decedent's death); for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis regime generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022), as described in [1], above].

§ 8D.42 Taxation of Seller under Hybrid Agreement

Because a corporation is unable to redeem its shares unless, at the time of redemption, it can meet the tests specified by the General Corporation law [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503; § 8D.72], at least one commentator has suggested that every well-drafted entity purchase agreement in California should include back-up provisions requiring the remaining shareholders to purchase any shares that the corporation is unable to redeem [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.04[3][c] (Matthew Bender); see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 3.08]. The Internal Revenue Service has contended that a combination redemption by the corporation and cross-purchase by the remaining shareholders is not a complete redemption of all the shares of the withdrawing shareholder, and therefore is taxable as ordinary income. However, the Sixth Circuit has held that when a redemption is combined with a cross-purchase of part of the shareholder's shares by the other shareholders (or by a third party, for that matter), the redemption is not essentially equivalent to a dividend, but is a sale or exchange, at least when the redemption follows the cross-purchase, because the redemption completely terminated the shareholder's interest in the corporation [Zenz v. Quinlivan (6th Cir. 1954) 213 F.2d 914, 916] .

Although the Zenz court did not hold that a redemption followed by a cross-purchase of shares constitutes a complete redemption (subject to treatment as a sale of shares and not as a dividend), the IRS has conceded that a redemption may not be properly treated as a distribution, even if it precedes the sale of the remaining shares, when the two steps were components of a single plan [U.S. v. Carey (8th Cir. 1961) 289 F.2d 531, 538] . Further, a 1975 Revenue Ruling held that the sequence of events is irrelevant if both are clearly part of "an overall plan" [Rev. Rul. 75-447, 1975-2 C.B. 113 ; Rev. Rul. 77-226, 1977-2 C.B. 90 ; see Arthur D. McDonald (1969) 52 T.C. 82, 88-89 (redemption of petitioner's preferred stock held not separate from transfer of remaining shares in corporate reorganization and, therefore, not essentially equivalent to dividend)].

§ 8D.43 Installment Sale Treatment

[1] Waiver of Family Attribution Rules

A corporation may use an installment note, or debt financing, to pay for stock that qualifies for sale or exchange treatment in a complete redemption [see I.R.C. § 302(b)(3)], without the stock attribution rules imputing constructive ownership of additional, unredeemed shares to the shareholder. These attribution rules may be waived for purposes of determining whether a complete redemption has taken place when payment is made by a note, because the shareholder's only interest in the corporation following the sale of his or her stock is that of a creditor [see I.R.C. § 302(c)(2)(A)]. However, a shareholder's status as a creditor will be lost if the payments on the note are dependent on the corporation's future earnings, and are subordinate to the claims of the corporation's general creditors [Treas. Reg. § 1.302-4(d); see Rev. Rul. 77-467, 1077-2 C.B. 92].

[2] Deferral of Income Tax Liability

The tax liability resulting from a stock redemption that qualifies for sale or exchange treatment may be deferred by using the installment method of reporting income if at least one payment is received in the year after the distribution occurs [I.R.C. § 453(b)(1)], unless the notes are payable on demand or are readily marketable [I.R.C. § 453(f)(4)]. In addition, the installment method may not be used for sales of stock or securities traded on an established market [I.R.C. § 453(k)(2)(A)].

The installment method allows the seller to prorate and report the profit on the installment sale over the period in which the payments are actually received, thus matching tax impact with available cash flow [see I.R.C. § 453(c); but see I.R.C. § 453(e), (g) (rules for installment sales to related persons)]. Unless the taxpayer elects otherwise, the installment method of reporting automatically applies to installment sales [I.R.C. § 453(d)(1)].

Imputed interest rules may apply to the deferred payments if the interest rate on the notes is below the applicable minimum federal rate [I.R.C. §§ 483, 1274].

§ 8D.44 Taxation of Purchaser under Cross-Purchase Agreement

In a cross-purchase agreement, the remaining shareholders receive a cost basis in the purchased shares [I.R.C. § 1012]. Under an entity purchase agreement, however, the basis in purchased shares remains fixed, despite any increase in value [see Treas. Reg. § 1.305-3(e), Ex. 13; Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C.B. 920]. Of course, the impact of an increase in basis depends on the type of business entity involved, and the likelihood that the shareholder will sell his or her interest [see § 8D.13[3]]. If the remaining shareholders have to withdraw funds from the corporation in the form of dividends to fund the buy-out in a cross-purchase agreement, these funds will be subject to double taxation--once as income to the corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 11(a), 311], and again when received by the shareholder [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 61(a)(7), 301, 305(b); see I.R.C. § 316 ("dividend" defined)]. This double taxation, however, does not occur when the funds are withdrawn as compensation, provided the amount is reasonable, taking into account the shareholder's overall compensation [see I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8], or if the corporation is a subchapter S corporation [see I.R.C. § 1366; see also Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses ; Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status].

A corporation's acquisition of its own shares from a shareholder in exchange for property is not, in general, a taxable event [see I.R.C. § 317(a) "property" defined)]. Property distributions, whether characterized as dividends or redemptions of shares, are not deductible [I.R.C. § 162(k)(1); see I.R.C. § 162(k)(2) (exceptions); Treas. Reg. § 1.305-3(e), Ex. 13], and generally do not result in gain or loss to the corporation [I.R.C. § 311(a)]. However, distributions of certain types of property may result in recognition of taxable gain by the corporation. For example, any distribution of appreciated property (other than obligations of the corporation) results in taxable gain to the corporation [I.R.C. § 311(b)].

§ 8D.47 Effect of Insurance Funding on Taxation--In General

Using life insurance to fund a buy-sell agreement, as opposed to borrowing or using cash reserves, requires consideration of various tax factors, discussed in §§ 8D.48, 8D.49. Business factors to consider in determining whether life insurance should be used to fund a buy-out, including the non-tax cost of acquiring the insurance, alternate insurance possibilities, the adequate amount and appropriate life insurance product for funding, and the importance of actually funding the agreement through the purchase of insurance, are discussed in § 8D.71[2]. 4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.48

§ 8D.48 Taxation of Entity Purchase Agreements Funded With Life Insurance

[1] Taxation of Premiums

A corporation may not deduct the payment of insurance premiums for federal income tax purposes if the corporation is, directly or indirectly, a beneficiary of the life insurance policy [I.R.C. § 264(a)(1)]. A policy used to fund a corporate buy-sell agreement is considered to be for the corporation's benefit because the proceeds are used to acquire a capital asset, the corporation's stock [Rev. Rul. 70-117, 1970-1 C.B. 30]. Premiums paid by the corporation are not taxed to the shareholders, unless the shareholders own the policy [Rev. Rul. 59-184, 1959-1 C.B. 65 ; Paramount-Richard Theatres, Inc. v. Commissioner (5th Cir. 1946) 153 F.2d 602, 604] . In that case, the premiums are treated as a dividend distribution to the shareholder and are taxable as ordinary income [Rev. Rul. 59-184, 1959-1 C.B. 65].

[2] Taxation of Policy Proceeds

A corporation generally is not taxed on insurance proceeds it receives on the death of a shareholder [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)]. This is true whether the proceeds are paid to the corporation, which then purchases the decedent's shares, or whether the proceeds are paid directly to the shareholder's estate to satisfy the corporation's obligation to purchase the decedent' shares [Mushro v. Commissioner (1968) 50 T.C. 43 , nonacq. 1970-2 C.B. xxii]. However, caution should be exercised because the Commissioner has not acquiesced to this result.

The better practice is to have the proceeds under a corporate buy-sell agreement paid directly to the owner of the policy, rather than to the insured's estate. Life insurance proceeds received by the corporation may be subject to the corporate alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 55; see [3], below]. The increased value of the shareholders' shares resulting from the corporation's purchase of the decedent's shares is not taxed to the surviving shareholders as a constructive dividend so long as the corporation is not satisfying the obligation of the shareholders to purchase the shares from the decedent's estate [Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C.B. 920].

[3] Alternative Minimum Tax Considerations for C Corporations

Receipt of life insurance proceeds may subject the corporation to the alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 55]. Tax planning should be done with this risk in mind. The alternative minimum tax for corporations is similar to the alternative minimum tax for individuals. It is a tax on alternative minimum income, which is calculated by adding certain tax preference items and adjustments to regular taxable income, and is taxed at a rate of 20 percent [I.R.C. § 55]. If the alternative minimum tax is higher than the tax on regular taxable income, the corporation must pay a minimum tax equal to that difference, in addition to its regular tax [I.R.C. § 55]. This potential minimum tax problem does not affect small corporations [see I.R.C. § 55(e)] or corporations and noncorporate pass-through entities, such as S corporations. However, because the alternative minimum tax applies to noncorporate taxpayers, pass-through entities may nonetheless be indirectly affected [see I.R.C. §§ 55-59; see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17062, 17063, 23400]. For further discussion of the alterative minimum tax and the distinction between C and S corporations, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

[4] Accumulated Earnings Tax Considerations for C Corporations

Life insurance may subject the corporation to the accumulated earnings tax. The accumulated earnings tax is a penalty tax imposed on corporations that accumulate earnings above their reasonable business need for the purpose of avoiding the income tax imposed on shareholders if the earnings were distributed as dividends [see I.R.C. § 531]. Although many practitioners believe that life insurance ownership will seldom present an accumulated earnings problem, a corporation that owns life insurance policies with large cash surrender values should keep this risk in mind in its tax planning [see Lamark Shipping Agency, Inc. v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1981-284 (accumulating funds to buy out corporate shareholder justifiable as furthering corporate purpose in appropriate circumstances); Mountain State Steel Foundaries, Inc. v. Commissioner (4th Cir. 1960) 284 F.2d 737 (life insurance funds justifiable if buy-sell agreement necessary to avoid shareholder disputes); but see Pelton Steel Casting v. Commissioner (7th Cir. 1958) 251 F.2d 278 (corporation improperly accumulated earnings to redeem 80 percent of shares to prevent sale to outsider); Boshwit Bros., T.C. Memo 1982-156 (reasonable business need to redeem majority shareholder's interest to continue family ownership not established absent formal, written redemption plan); Cadillac Textiles, Inc., T.C. Memo 1975-46 (reasonable business need not established absent specific, definite, feasible plan for redemption)]. For further discussion of the corporate accumulated earnings tax, see Chs. 1E, Taxation of Businesses , and 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity .

§ 8D.49 Taxation of Shareholders under Cross-Purchase Agreement Funded by Life Insurance

[1] Taxation of Premiums

The premiums on life insurance policies funding a shareholder cross-purchase agreement (ordinarily paid by the shareholders who own the policies) are not deductible for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 264(a)]. If the corporation pays the premiums on the life insurance, the payments are dividends to the shareholder who owns the policy and, as such, are taxable to the shareholder and not deductible by the corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 61(a)(7), 301, 311, 316; Young, Jr et al v. Commr., T.C. Memo. 1995-379 ; Lynch v. Commr., T.C. Memo. 1983- 173] . Split dollar insurance, under which the corporation pays a portion of the premium and the shareholder pays the remainder, is an option to consider to reduce the cost to the shareholders of funding a cross-purchase agreement. The portion of the premium paid by the corporation, however, may be treated as a constructive dividend to the shareholder [Johnson v. Commr. (1980) 74 T.C. 1316] . For further discussion of split dollar insurance, see California Insurance Law Practice, Ch. 70, Insurance Considerations in Business Planning, § 70.12 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Taxation of Policy Proceeds

Insurance proceeds received by a shareholder to fund a cross-purchase agreement are not taxable income to the shareholder, unless there was a previous transfer to the shareholder for valuable consideration [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)]. If insurance policies held by a deceased shareholder are transferred to the remaining shareholders for valuable consideration, the policy proceeds are taxable to the extent they exceed the consideration and any premiums paid by the transferee shareholder [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2); see § 8D.13[3][b]].

Under some circumstances, if the corporation pays the premiums, receives the proceeds, and distributes them to the remaining shareholders to satisfy their obligation to purchase the shares under the cross-purchase agreement, the distribution may be taxable as a dividend [Rev. Rul. 61-134, 1961-2 C. B. 250 ; see Golden v. Commissioner (3d Cir. 1940) 113 F.2d 590, 592-593] . In addition, if the corporation receives the insurance proceeds and directly purchases the decedent's shares in satisfaction of the remaining shareholders' obligations under the agreement, the amount used to satisfy each shareholder's obligation may be taxable to the shareholder as a dividend [Wall v. United States (4th Cir. 1947) 164 F.2d 462, 464] . However, if the purchase is not made in satisfaction of any obligation of the remaining shareholders, the corporation's purchase of the shares of a deceased shareholder does not result in taxable income to the remaining shareholders, nor does it result in taxable income as a result of the increase in value of the remaining shareholder's shares [see Holsey v. Commissioner (3d Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 865, 868-869 ; Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C.B. 920 ; see also § 8D.46].

For discussion of the tax issues that may arise if the insured's estate is designated as the beneficiary of the policy under a cross-purchase agreement, see § 8D.60.

§ 8D.50 California Income Tax Consequences of Agreement

California income tax consequences of a buy-sell agreement generally are the same as those under federal law. The taxation of corporate distributions and adjustments is determined under Subchapter C of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. §§ 301 et seq.], with some exceptions [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17321]. The taxation of capital gains and losses is determined under Subchapter P of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. §§ 1201 et seq.], with some exceptions [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18151 et seq., 24990 et seq.]. Under California law, but not under the Internal Revenue Code, gross income does not include half of any gain from the sale or exchange of qualified business stock [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18152.5(c) ("qualified business stock" defined)] held more than five years [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18152.5(a)].

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.60

§ 8D.60 Estate Taxation of Policy Proceeds

[1] In General

When a shareholder dies, the value of the stock owned by the shareholder is included in the decedent's gross estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2031; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(h)]. Conversely, life insurance proceeds ordinarily are not included in the decedent's estate, regardless of whether the proceeds are paid to the corporation or to the decedent's estate, if they are paid under a bona fide stock purchase agreement [I.R.C. § 2042; Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(6)]. However, if the decedent possesses "incidents of ownership" in the insurance policy, the policy proceeds are included in the decedent's gross estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2042(2)].

Caution should be exercised to avoid double taxation of the insurance proceeds (that is, the inclusion of both the full value of the stock and the insurance proceeds in the decedent's gross estate) by ensuring that a shareholder does not have any incidents of ownership in an insurance policy held by the corporation on the shareholder's life [see I.R.C. § 2042(2)]. This problem arises in connection with entity purchase agreements; cross-purchase agreements are discussed in [4], below.

[2] "Incidents of Ownership"

Incidents of ownership can include the power to change beneficiaries, to assign the policy or to revoke an assignment, to surrender or to cancel the policy, or to borrow against the policy [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(2); Chase National Bank v. United States (1929) 278 U.S. 327, 334-338, 49 S. Ct. 126, 73 L. Ed. 405 ; Estate of Riefberg v. Comm. (1982) T.C. Memo 1982-70] . A controlling shareholder possesses incidents of ownership if he or she has the ability to control an insurance policy owned by a corporation [I.R.C. § 2042; Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)]. In that case, a controlling shareholder's incidents of ownership result in both the stock's value and the insurance proceeds being included in his or her gross estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. §§ 2031, 2042].

If the corporation is the beneficiary of any portion of the proceeds on the life of the controlling shareholder, that portion of the proceeds will not be included in the decedent's gross estate [see I.R.C. § 2042], but will be a factor in valuing the shares for estate tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(6); see I.R.C. § 2031]. The proceeds, however, must be payable to the corporation or to a third party for a valid corporate purpose. This regulation does not apply if the proceeds are payable to the decedent's estate or to a trustee [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(6)].

The Internal Revenue Service has argued that when insurance policy proceeds are payable to the deceased shareholder's estate to purchase the decedent's shares, or when the shareholder possesses incidents of ownership in the policy, both the insurance proceeds and the value of the shares must be included in the decedent's gross estate for estate tax purposes. However, the Tax Court has rejected this position if the insurance proceeds must be credited against the shares' purchase price under the buy-sell agreement [Estate of Ray E. Tompkins (1949) 13 T.C. 1054 , acq., 1950-1 C. B. 5].

[3] Valuation of Shares

The risk of double taxation of insurance proceeds also exists if the buy-sell agreement does not set a value on the shares that will be accepted by the Internal Revenue Service for estate tax purposes. If the value is not accepted, the estate may be subject to a higher estate tax valuation than the amount actually paid for the shares [see I.R.C. § 2703]. This problem may be avoided by ensuring that the value of shares set by the buy-sell agreement will be accepted by the Internal Revenue Service for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2703(b); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2031-2, 25.2703-1 (requirements); § 8D.61].

[4] Cross-Purchase Agreements

Under a cross-purchase agreement, if a remaining shareholder who owns the policy is the policy's beneficiary, the policy proceeds are not included in the deceased shareholder's gross estate for estate tax purposes, whether they are paid directly to the insured's estate or to a trustee [I.R.C. § 2042(2)]. Although the value of the stock is included in the decedent's gross estate, it will not be increased by the policy proceeds to the extent that the proceeds do not exceed the shares' value [see I.R.C. § 2031].

CHAPTER 8D BUY-SELL AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Estate Tax Consequences of Agreement

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.61

§ 8D.61 Valuation of Shares at Purchase Price for Federal Estate Tax Purposes

[1] Basic Issues

A primary goal of many buy-sell agreements is to establish the value of the shareholders' shares for federal estate tax purposes [see Weyher & Noall, Providing for Succession Through Buy-Sell Agreements and Recapitalizations," 21 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 445, 465 (1963)]. The share purchase price specified in the agreement will generally be the value at which the shares are taxed for estate tax purposes if specified requirements are met [I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2031-2, 25.2703-1; Rev. Rul. 59-60, 1959-1 C.B. 237, 243-244 ; see Roth v. United States (1981) 511 F. Supp. 653, 654-655 ; Slocum v. Unites States (1966) 256 F. Supp. 753, 755-756 ; Estate of Orville B. Littick (1958) 31 T.C. 181 , acq. in 1959-2 C.B. 5]. If the purchase price stated in a buy-sell agreement is not accepted for estate tax purposes, the shares of the deceased shareholder will be assessed at their fair market value, which may be substantially higher than the value fixed by the buy-sell agreement [see I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(a),(f)]. The requirements discussed in [2], below, affect this determination. Valuation methods are covered in § 8D.75.

[2] Fixing Estate Tax Valuation at Agreement Price

[a] Effect of Agreement Price in Determining Value for Federal Estate Tax Purposes

The effect of the price specified in the buy-sell agreement in determining the value of the shares for estate tax purposes depends on the circumstances of the particular case [Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(h); see Rev. Rul. 83-120, 1983-2 C.B. 170]. In Worcester County Tr. Co. v. Commissioner (1st Cir. [T.C.] 1943) 134 F.2d 578 , for example, the court of appeal held that even if the share value for estate tax purposes is not fixed by the agreement, the agreement price should be considered as one of the "relevant factors" having a bearing on the value of the stock [Worcester County Tr. Co. v. Commissioner (1st Cir. [T.C.] 1943) 134 F.2d 578, 582] .

[b] Requirements for Agreements Between Unrelated Persons

To effectively fix the stock purchase price for estate tax purposes, a buy-sell agreement between unrelated persons who are not the natural objects of each other's bounty must meet three requirements [Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2]:

- The agreement must prevent the decedent from disposing of the decedent's shares during his or her lifetime without first offering them to the corporation or to the other shareholders at the price fixed in the agreement.

- The decedent's estate must sell the shares at the stipulated price.

- The selling price must be specifically determined by the agreement according to a formula or by reference to a designated price.

An agreement between unrelated persons is presumed to be a bona fide business arrangement, entered into at arm's length with the corporation or the other shareholders, [see I.R.C. § 2703(b)(1),(3)], and not a device to pass the decedent's shares to the natural objects of his or her bounty for less than adequate consideration in money or money's worth under Internal Revenue Code § 2703(b)(2) [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(1); see also [c], below].

[c] Additional Requirements for Agreements Between Related Persons

In addition to the three requirements enumerated in [b], above [see Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2031-2, 20.2031-3], a buy-sell agreement among persons who are related or who are the natural objects of each other's bounty must also comply with the following three requirements to be effective at fixing the value of stock at the agreement price for federal estate tax purposes:

- The agreement must be a bona fide business arrangement [I.R.C. § 2703(b)(1); Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2703-1(b)(1)(i), 20.2031-2].

- The agreement must not be a device to pass the decedent's shares to the natural objects of his or her bounty for less than adequate consideration in money or money's worth [I.R.C. § 2703(b)(2); Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2703-1(b)(1)(ii), 20.2031-2].

- The agreement's terms must be comparable to similar arrangements entered into in arm's length transactions [I.R.C. § 2703(b)(3); Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2703-1(b)(1)(iii), 20.2031-2]. Each of these three requirements is a separate test [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(2)].

One commentator has noted that the practical effects of these requirements is that stock prices under buy-sell agreements between related persons are likely to be close to fair market value [Business Buy-Sell Agreements, Ch. 5, Estate Planning Considerations, § 2.52 (Cal. C.E.B. 1992)].

If there are both related and unrelated persons to the agreement, the requirements enumerated above [see I.R.C. § 2703(b)(1)-(3); Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(1)(i)-(iii)] will be considered met if more than 50 percent by value of the interests subject to the rights and restrictions is owned, directly or indirectly, by individuals who are not members of the transferor's family, provided, further, that the stock owned by the unrelated persons is subject to the restrictions to the same extent as the transferor [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(3); see Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(5) ("members of transferor's family" defined)].

For discussion of agreements entered into before October 9, 1990, see [d], below.

[d] Requirements Agreements Entered Into Before October 9, 1990

Buy-sell agreements entered into before October 9, 1990 are subject to the requirements of Treasury Regulations Section 20.2031-2, as well as to the cases and regulations clarifying these requirements [see [b], above], and not to the additional requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 2703 and Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1 [see [c], above], unless the agreements are substantially modified after October 8, 1990 [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-2].

"Substantial modification" means any discretionary modification of a right or restriction under an agreement that results in other than a de minimis change to the quality, value, or timing of the rights of any party with respect to property that is subject to the right or restriction [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(c)(1)]. For example, if the terms of the right or restriction require periodic updating, the failure to update is presumed to substantially modify that right or restriction. Further, the addition of any family member as a party to a right or restriction is considered a substantial modification unless either:

- The addition is mandatory under the terms of the agreement, or

- The added family member is assigned to a generation (determined under the rules of Internal Revenue Code § 2651) no lower than the lowest generation occupied by individuals already party to the right or restriction [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(c)(1),(d); see also Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(c)(2) (list of modifications not considered substantial)].

Caution should be exercised in modifying a pre-October 9, 1990 buy-sell agreement between related persons because it is likely that the additional requirements of Internal Revenue Code § 2703 and Treasury Regulation 25.2703-1 will be more difficult to meet than the requirements of Treasury Regulation 20.2031-2, governing pre-October 9, 1990 agreements [see [b], [c], above ; see also § 8D.76].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Business Considerations

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.70

§ 8D.70 Importance of Business Law Considerations

Great attention is often paid to the tax consequences of a buy-sell agreement, without adequate attention being given to non-tax or business law considerations, including limitations on the corporation's repurchase of its shares [see § 8D.72], securities regulations [see § 8D.74], purchase price [see § 8D.75], triggering events [see § 8D.73], funding [see § 8D.71], and the purchasers.

The decision about who will purchase the shares involves selecting the appropriate type of agreement, whether entity purchase, cross-purchase, or hybrid agreement. Tax considerations affecting the choice of agreement are discussed in Part C, §§ 8D.40-8D.62. Business law considerations are discussed in this part, §§ 8D.71-8D.76. Community property considerations are addressed in Part E, § 8D.90.

The business law considerations for entity purchase and cross purchase agreements are generally the same [see § 8D.73-8D.75], with the exception of funding requirements [see § 8D.71], and the limitations on a corporation's repurchase of its shares [see § 8D.72]. Cross-purchase agreements are ordinarily funded by the remaining shareholders individually or by life insurance. Therefore, whether the corporation is able to meet certain specified statutory financial tests (required before it may redeem its own shares) is not germane to this type of agreement.

§ 8D.71 Funding Buy-Sell Agreements

[1] Types of Funding

[a] Cross-Purchase Agreement

Under a cross-purchase agreement, the shareholders may opt to use their own funds to purchase the shares, paying either in a lump sum or a series of installment payments on a promissory note. In fact, the major disadvantage of a cross-purchase agreement for most shareholders is that they must use their own money to purchase the shares of the departing shareholder. If the remaining shareholders have to withdraw funds from the corporation in the form of dividends to fund the buy-out, these funds will be subject to double taxation--once as income to the corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 11(a), 311], and again when received by the shareholder [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 61(a)(7), 301, 305(b); see I.R.C. § 316 ("dividend" defined); § 8D.41]. This double taxation, however, does not occur when the funds are withdrawn as compensation, provided the amount is reasonable, taking into account the shareholder's overall compensation [see I.R.C. § 162(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.162-8], or if the corporation is a subchapter S corporation [see I.R.C. § 1366; see also Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses ; Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status].

[b] Entity Purchase Agreement

In an entity purchase agreement, the corporation may opt to use its own capital, either corporate surplus or reserves, to fund the purchase. However, a corporation is prohibited from redeeming or purchasing its own shares unless it can meet certain statutory financial tests when the triggering event occurs [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503; § 8D.72].

[c] Both Types of Agreements

Both entity and cross-purchase agreements may use life insurance purchased on the life of each shareholder to fund the purchase of shares on death [see [2], below], or disability insurance to fund the purchase of shares when the agreement requires purchase and sale on a shareholder's permanent disability.

[2] Life Insurance Funding

[a] Advantages

Life insurance funding provides a corporation or its shareholders with ready cash to meet their obligations under the agreement. Life insurance may be especially useful during the early years of the corporation's existence, when other funds may not be readily available for share purchase in the event of a shareholder's death [see Sarner, Uses of Life Insurance in Buy-Sell Agreements: Stockholder-Corporation Obligations in Buy-Sell Agreements, 24 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 591 (1966)]. Permanent insurance with a cash equity buildup feature may provide the funds for a lifetime purchase of shares upon such events as a shareholder's disability, retirement, desire to sell, or termination from employment, while term life insurance will provide funding only for purchase upon death [see [d], below]. Without insurance funding, a shareholder selling shares during his or her lifetime must often accept promissory notes and rely on the financial responsibility of the purchaser [see Sexton, Providing Security for the Outgoing Stockholder and Avoiding Tax Disadvantages to Selling and Remaining Stockholders, 24 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 555, 560 (1966)].

[b] Cost of Insurance

The cost of using life insurance to fund a buy-sell agreement must be compared with the cost of borrowing money or using the business' own capital. There are many assumptions to be made in this comparison, including the future value of the business, its future need for capital, future interest rates, and the length of life of the insureds. The uninsurability of any of the owners of the business or the increased cost of insuring an owner with medical problems may rule out funding a buy-sell agreement with life insurance. In either case, alternate insurance possibilities [see [c], below], as well as other funding methods, should be considered.

[c] Alternate Insurance Possibilities

Alternate insurance possibilities include:

- The use of "guaranteed issue" life insurance, which may obtained without regard to the insured's health.

- Group life insurance that includes "guaranteed issue" insurance.

- Transfer of the policy owner's personal life insurance policy to the business to fund the buy-sell agreement.

Each alternatives has a possible downside to consider. With "guarantee issue" insurance, the coverage is often limited. With group life insurance, covering an otherwise uninsurable partner or shareholder may require insuring all employees for a large amount or risk failing to meet the Internal Revenue Service's antidiscrimination tests to qualify as group insurance [see I.R.C. § 79(d)]. Finally, an uninsurable person may be unwilling to transfer a personal policy to the business, and if such a sale or transfer does occur, the policy should not be transferred or sold to a corporation without careful consideration of the transfer-for-value tax rule [see I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)(B)].

[d] Adequate Amount for Funding

The simplest way to assure adequate liquid capital to finance the purchase of a business interest under a buy-sell agreement is to obtain life insurance in an amount equal to the value of the interest to be redeemed or purchased. For discussion of valuation methods, see § 8D.75.

[e] Type of Life Insurance Product

Many types of life insurance products may be used to fund the agreement. The correct vehicle for funding a buy-sell agreement should be selected in consultation with a life insurance agent. The type chosen will depend primarily on the length of time a buy-sell agreement is to be in effect, and the cost of premiums. For example, if the existence of the business is deemed perpetual, the cost of maintaining term insurance on older individuals may not be cost effective, if not actually prohibitive. Permanent insurance, also referred to as whole life, straight life, ordinary life, universal life, or executive protection, provides a level premium, with increasing cash surrender values. All permanent insurance has a buildup of cash value; term insurance has no cash value or equity buildup. Because of the cash buildup in permanent insurance, its premiums can be substantially reduced after a specified period, possibly to the point where the permanent insurance will be less expensive than term insurance in the later years of the policy. In addition, permanent insurance has special features, such as the cash equity buildup mentioned above, tax-free cash borrowing (under most circumstances), with favorable interest rates, the ability to cash in the policy if the business is in serious need, and may include an option to convert the equity portion of the policy to an annuity. For further discussion of the features of term and permanent insurance, see Ch. 1F, Insurance Considerations in Business Formation .

[f] Importance of Funding Agreement Through Purchase of Insurance

Regardless of the type of buy-sell agreement chosen or the insurance product selected for funding, it is important to make sure the client does, in fact, purchase the insurance. The most frequent flaw found in businesses with buy-sell agreements is the lack of insurance coverage to fund the buyout. Failure to take the time to establish that the client has actually funded the agreement may subject the client to the worst of both worlds: a mandatory buyout with a contractually-obliged buyer and seller at a crucial juncture in the life of the business, coupled with no funds available to carry out the agreement.

§ 8D.72 Restrictions on Corporate Purchases

[1] Statutory Tests

[a] In General

A corporation must satisfy certain statutory financial tests to purchase or redeem its shareholders' shares under an entity purchase agreement not funded by insurance. Under the General Corporation Law, the purchase or redemption by a corporation of its shares for cash or property is a "distribution to its shareholders" [Corp. Code § 166]. To make any valid distribution to its shareholders, a corporation must be able to pass either the retained earnings or remaining assets test [Corp. Code § 500], the general solvency test [Corp. Code § 501], and, when applicable, the liquidation preference and dividend preference tests [Corp. Code §§ 502, 503].

A corporation licensed as a broker-dealer under Corporations Code § 25210 et seq. is not required to pass either the retained earnings or remaining assets test [see Corp. Code § 500(a),(b)] if, immediately after any distribution, it is in compliance with the net capital rules of the Commissioner of Corporations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12] and the Securities and Exchange Commission [Corp. Code § 500(e); see 17 C.F.R. § 240.15c3-1].

For more detailed discussion of these tests, see Ch. 9, Dividends, Reacquisitions of Shares, and Assessments, §§ 9.11-9.12 and Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 141 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Retained Earnings Test

The retained earnings requirement provides that a corporation may purchase its own shares if its retained earnings, immediately prior to the distribution, equal or exceed the amount of the proposed distribution [Corp. Code § 500(a)]. "Retained earnings" means the balance of net profits, after the deduction of distributions to shareholders and transfer to capital accounts under generally accepted accounting principles [see Corp. Code § 114; Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 8. Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 141.06[3] (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Remaining Assets Test

A corporation with insufficient retained earnings may still purchase its own shares if its meets the remaining assets test. This test provides for purchase of shares if, immediately after the distribution:

- Corporate assets (excluding goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses and deferred charges) equal at least 125 percent of corporate liabilities (excluding deferred taxes, deferred income and other deferred credits), and

- Current assets equal current liabilities.

However, current assets must equal 125 percent of current liabilities if the average earnings of the corporation before income taxes and interest expenses were less than the average interest expenses for the two preceding fiscal years [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)]. The second part of this test [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)] does not apply to a corporations that is not required to classify its assets into current and fixed under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)].

For the purpose of applying Corp. Code § 500 to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, there must be added to retained earnings all amounts that had been previously deducted from retained earnings with respect to obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not in excess of the principal of the obligations that remain unpaid immediately prior to the distribution. In addition, there must be deducted from liabilities all amounts that had been previously added to liabilities with respect to the obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not in excess of the principal of the obligations that will remain unpaid after the distribution, provided that no addition to retained earnings or deduction from liabilities under Corp. Code § 500(b)(2) may occur on account of any obligation that is a distribution to the corporation's shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166 (when distribution is made)] at the time the obligation is incurred [Corp. Code § 500(d)].

[d] Solvency Test

The solvency test requires that a corporation not make any distribution to the corporation's shareholders if, as a result, the corporation is or would be likely to be unable to meet its liabilities as they mature [Corp. Code § 501]. This test must be met even if the corporation satisfies the retained earnings or remaining assets test [Flynn v. California Casket Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 196, 205-206, 233 P.2d 131] .

[e] Liquidation or Dividend Preferences

Finally, a corporation may not make distributions to junior shares that affect the liquidation or dividend preferences of senior shares [see Corp. Code §§ 502, 503].

[2] Exception for Agreements Funded with Insurance

When the entity purchase agreement is funded with insurance, the statutory tests are partially inapplicable. They do not apply to a purchase or redemption of shares of a deceased shareholder from the proceeds of life insurance on that shareholder in excess of the total amount of all premiums paid by the corporation for the insurance, if the shares are purchased to carry out the provisions of an agreement between the corporation and the shareholder to purchase or redeem the shares upon the death of the shareholder [Corp. Code § 503.1]. A similar rule applies to the proceeds of disability insurance used to purchase a disabled shareholder's shares [see Corp. Code § 503.2]. Even if the proceeds exceeding the premiums paid by the corporation are inadequate for the redemption, those proceeds received by the corporation should increase its retained earnings and enable it to pass the statutory balance sheet tests [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.03[b][i] (Matthew Bender)].

§ 8D.73 Triggering Events

The "triggering events"are the occurrences that require a shareholder to offer his or her shares for sale to the other parties to the agreement. These events typically include lifetime voluntary transfers (gifts and sales to outsiders, for example), involuntary transfers (divorce, division of community property, encumbrances, loss of license), transfers at death or disability, transfers resulting from a change in employment (retirement or other termination of employment), and special occurrences such as voluntary or involuntary attempts at corporate dissolution, mergers, or sales of substantially all of the business.

The corporation under an entity purchase agreement, or the remaining shareholders under a cross-purchase agreement, usually retain a right of first refusal on the same terms as a third party offer or a price established in the buy-sell agreement. Under an entity purchase agreement, if the corporation is unable or unwilling to purchase the shares, the other shareholders ordinarily are given the option to purchase them in proportion to their interests [see Groves v. Prickett (9th Cir. 1970) 420 F.2d 1119, 1122 (corporate bylaw reserving right of first refusal in other shareholders does not unreasonably restrict right of alienation of stock or deprive shareholder of substantial right)]. The selling shareholder generally may sell his or her shares to outsiders only if neither the corporation nor the remaining shareholders purchase the interest. Further, such a sale to outsiders must generally be completed within a specified time, or the rights of the corporation and remaining shareholders are renewed.

§ 8D.74 Securities Regulations Considerations

[1] Exemptions to Qualification

All corporations are prohibited from offering or selling securities in California unless the offer or sale has been qualified, or the security or transaction is exempt from qualification or not subject to qualification [see Corp. Code § 25110]. A corporation with 35 or fewer shareholders may be exempt from qualification based on the small offerings exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(h); see also Ch. 6C, California Small Offering Exemption], or the limited offering exemption [see Corp. Code § 25102(f); see also Ch. 6B, California Limited Offering Exemptions].

Special attention should be paid to ensure that a corporation that relies on the small offerings exemption meets the requirements of that exemption. Not only must the corporation have 35 or fewer shareholders, it also must have only one class of stock [Corp. Code § 25102(h)]. A corporation does not have only one class of stock if, at the time its shares are issued, a shareholder's agreement exists, or is intended to exist, that gives some shares rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions [see Corp. Code § 25103(e)] that are not applicable to other shares [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.4(b)]. In that case, caution should be exercised in drafting the terms of a buy-sell agreement to ensure that the agreement does not create more than one class of stock.

[2] Effect of Transfer Restrictions on Qualification

In the event that a close or closely held corporation is ineligible for either the small offering or the limited offering exemption, and must qualify its securities, the Corporations Commissioner determines whether an "open" qualification [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.001(f)] or "limited" qualification [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.001(e)] should be granted, depending on, among other things, the presence of transfer restrictions [see Marsh & Volk, PRACTICE UNDER THE CALIFORNIA SECURITIES LAWS, Ch. 6, Procedure for Qualification of Issuer Transactions, § 6.05[3] (Matthew Bender)].

No open qualification will be approved for securities subject to transfer restrictions imposed by the charter documents of the issuer [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8(a)]; and as a statutory shareholder's agreement [see Corp. Code § 186 ("shareholder agreement" defined)], a buy-sell agreement among all of the shareholders of a close corporation is a charter document [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.001(a),(h)]. A limited offering qualification, however, may be approved for those securities subject to transfer restrictions, as long as the restrictions do not unfairly prejudice the security holder's opportunities to realize a reasonable price [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8(b)].

The price in a buy-sell agreement is presumptively reasonable if it is based on an offer from a third party, on the appraised value of the securities, or on the book value (unless it is not a significant indication of value) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8(b)(1),(2)]. Provisions are not presumptively unreasonable if they either [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8(b)(3)]:

- Absolutely prohibit the transfer of securities,
- Permit transfer only on consent of the issuer or other holder, or
- Give an option to the issuer or to the other holder to purchase, regardless of the desire of the selling holder to sell, and will be permitted only when justified by the issuer, except as otherwise permitted [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.140.41, 260.140.42 (exceptions)].

Provisions giving an issuer the right to repurchase securities upon termination of employment are presumptively reasonable if the repurchase price [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8(b)(4)]:

- Is not less than the fair value of the securities to be repurchased on the date of termination of employment, and (1) the right to repurchase will be exercised for cash or cancellation of purchase money indebtedness for the securities within six months of termination of employment (or in the case of securities issued upon exercise of options after the date of termination, within six months after the date of exercise), and (2) the right terminates when the issuer's securities become publicly traded; or
- Is at the original purchase price, provided that (1) the right to repurchase at the original price lapses at the rate of at least 20 percent of the securities per year over five years from the date the option is granted (without respect to the date the option was exercised or became exercisable), and (2) the right to repurchase must be exercised for cash or cancellation of purchase money indebtedness for the securities within six months of termination of employment (or in the case of securities issued upon exercise of options after the date of termination, within six months after the date of the exercise).

In addition, the securities held by an officer, director, general partner, trustee (when the issuer is a business trust), manager, advisor, or consultant of the issuer, its parents, its majority-owned subsidiaries or majority-owned subsidiaries of the issuer's parents, or an affiliate of the issuer may be subject to additional or greater restrictions [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8].

For a detailed discussion of the qualification of securities subject to transfer restrictions, see Marsh and Volk, PRACTICE UNDER THE CALIFORNIA SECURITIES LAWS, Ch. 8, Standards for the Exercise of the Commissioner's Discretion (Matthew Bender).

§ 8D.75 Valuation of Shares

[1] Valuation Methods--In General

In a close or closely held corporation, fixing the price of the shares to be purchased in an buy-sell agreement can be difficult, since there is no public market for the shares and, therefore, no standard by which to judge their value. Several methods are commonly used to fix the price of corporate shares.

The "book value formula" reflects the original cost of the corporation's assets [see [2], below]. The "capitalization of earnings formula" determines the corporation's value by its earnings and profits [see [3], below]. The "mutual agreement formula" is a method by which the shareholders agree on a fixed value for their shares [see [4], below]. Appraisal or arbitration by an outside party is also used [see [5], below]. Often a combination of these methods is utilized [see, e.g., Alternate Form at § 8D.200[2], § 10.02 (mutual agreement and arbitration)]. Other valuation methods include the comparison of a privately owned company with publicly held companies in businesses with similar attributes; the excess earnings formula [see Rev. Rul. 68-609, 1968-2 C.B. 327]; and formulas developed by various industries for valuing individual companies for purchase and sale.

A corporation that is ineligible for exemption from qualification of its securities must also set the purchase price in accordance with the criteria set forth in the California Code of Regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8; see also § 8D.74[2]].

[2] Book Value

The book value formula is one of the most frequently used methods of evaluating stock. It reflects the original cost of the corporation's assets, and ordinarily has no relationship to corporate earnings. Book value is an accounting term, rather than a form of valuing assets. Thus, in law, the term may mean market value, cost minus depreciation, or some other concept of value recognized by sound accounting practices and used by a particular corporation to record its financial transactions [see Lassallette v. Parisian Baking Co. (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 375, 377, 242 P.2d 671] . Therefore, the term must be explicitly defined when it is used in a buy-sell agreement. Further, the date on which the book value will be determined must also be specified in the agreement.

Book value is not an accurate guide to a corporation's worth or to the value of its shares unless most of the corporation's assets are liquid and are reflected on the corporation's books at close to their fair market value. Even when the book value accurately reflects market value, that value usually represents only what others would pay for the separate assets of the corporation, thus excluding many valuable elements, such as the corporations's earning capacity, which may be the most important measure of its value, goodwill, or the market value of assets that have been totally depreciated for tax purposes [see Schaefer, The Fallacy of Weighing Asset Value and Earnings Value in the Appraisal of Corporate Stock, 55 S. Ca. L. Rev. 1031, 1051 (1982)]. As a result, this method is frequently altered by fixing the purchase price at some percentage of the book value, or by using it in combination with other valuation methods [see Cavitch, BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, Ch. 148, Stock Buy-Out Agreements, § 148.04[2] (Matthew Bender)].

[3] Capitalization of Earnings

The "capitalization of earnings formula" determines the corporation's value by its continuing ability to earn profits, rather than by the worth of its assets. Under this method, the per-share earnings over a particular time period are determined and then divided by the per-share rate of return on each shareholder's investment, resulting in the valuation per share. The earnings used in the formula should cover a time period long enough to counter unusual fluctuations, and should exclude nonrecurring items of income or expense. The formula assumes that future earnings will continue at least at the same rate as earnings during the time period used.

Although this method is based on the corporation's earning power, which is one of the best measures of the value of a business, it may not accurately determine future profitability when the deceased or selling shareholder was important to the success of the corporate business. Furthermore, the calculations required to determine the per-share earnings, including any necessary adjustments to earnings over the period in which the earnings are measured, and per-share rate of return, can be quite complex. For further discussion of the capitalization formula, see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.05[3] (Matthew Bender).

[4] Mutual Agreement

Under the "mutual agreement method," the shareholders set the value of their own shares. They agree among themselves on either a fixed dollar amount or a formula that will be used to determine share value. Since a corporation's owners are often best able to determine its value, in light of their knowledge of the company and its business, this method often results in a price that is acceptable to all shareholders, provided that the shareholders have approximately equal bargaining power and that they periodically reevaluate the purchase price. Some practitioners suggest that a provision in the buy-sell agreement for periodic review of the purchase price be coupled with a provision for appraisal if the parties fail to agree on a price at any period.

[5] Appraisal

Appraisal may be a more suitable method of valuation than a formula, if the business has a substantial number of fixed assets that can be objectively valued and that may be either over or under valued on the corporation's balance sheet, and if a capitalization of earning will not reflect the earning potential of the business.

The buy-sell agreement may specify the name of an appraiser or the method by which appraisers will be chosen, and how the appraisal fee will be allocated. It may provide that if all parties are unable to agree on one appraiser, each party will select that party's own appraiser. The agreement may also specify that if there is a substantial difference between appraisals, a third appraiser will be selected by either the parties of the appraisers. Although the cost of hiring appraisers makes this method somewhat expensive, it ensures that experts will determine a fair value for those assets that can be reliably appraised by outsiders.

§ 8D.76 Reviewing, Amending, and Enforcing the Agreement

A buy-sell agreement may need to be amended periodically if the personal or financial circumstances of the shareholders change, if the financial condition of the corporation changes, or if there is a change in the statutory provisions that regulate the agreement or control its tax aspects. In addition, because the purchase price or valuation method specified in the buy-sell agreement may be used for the first time years after the agreement is drafted, any agreed price or valuation formula should be reevaluated periodically, especially with respect to changing business conditions and changes in the tax law. In particular, an agreement that sets a fixed price for sale of the shares should be reviewed at reasonably frequent intervals [see § 8D.200[2], § 10.01 (alternate provision)]. Most buy-sell agreements provide that the agreement may be amended only by the written consent of all parties.

Caution should be exercised in modifying a pre-October 9, 1990 buy-sell agreement among related persons if the modification affects the quality, value, or timing of a right or restriction. This is because the requirements for fixing the value of stock for estate tax purposes for pre-October 9, 1990 agreements among related persons [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2; § 8D.61[2][d]] are generally easier to meet than the additional requirements [see I.R.C. § 2703] that apply to agreements among related persons that are substantially modified after October 8, 1990 [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-2; see § 8D.61[2][b],[c]].

Buy-sell agreements may be enforced by specific performance when the stock is unique [see Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 13, Equity §§ 30(a), 37 (10th ed. 2005)]. A contract to sell stock that is not obtainable on the open market is specifically enforceable, since the stock is unique, with a peculiar value to the purchaser that cannot be compensated by a money judgment [Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 587, 593, 281 P.2d 90 ; see Polinsky v. Vaughan (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 183, 73 Cal. Rptr. 764 (option contract for purchase of shares upon termination of employment)]. For examples of complaints for specific performance of buy-sell agreements, see CALIFORNIA FORMS OF PLEADING PRACTICE, Ch. 163, Corporations: Transfers of Shares, §§ 163.43, 163.44, and Ch. 528, Specific Performance, § 528.130 (Matthew Bender).

F. Community Property Considerations

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.90

§ 8D.90 Characterization of Stock as Community, Quasi-community, or Separate Property

[1] Importance of Characterization

All parties to a buy-sell agreement, as well as nonparty spouses and nonmarital partners, have an interest in establishing or ascertaining the property nature of the stock subject to the agreement. Characterization of stock as community, quasi-community, or separate property, or a combination of the three, is required in order to determine the rights and liabilities of the parties with respect to the stock. Problems involving characterization generally arise in the context of the following:

- Determining interspousal rights of management and control of the stock during the marriage.
- Dividing stock on marital dissolution, separation, or annulment.
- Distributing stock on the death of one or both spouses.
- Determining the rights of third party creditors with respect to the stock, either during marriage or on termination of marriage.

For example, non-owner shareholders will want to ensure the enforceable transfer of stock, as specified in the agreement, on the death or divorce of the owner shareholder. Owner shareholders who are married or have nonmarital partners will want to establish the community or separate property nature of the stock for purposes of management and control, as well as for income, estate and gift tax planning. Nonparty spouses and partners have similar interests.

Although detailed discussion of property interests is outside the scope of this chapter, [2]-[4], below, provide an overview of community property, quasi-community and separate property principles, and the transmutation of the property nature of the stock. For additional coverage of property principles, see Ch. 120, Complete Marital Settlement Agreements , Ch. 121, Provisions for Division of Property , and CALIFORNIA FORMS OF PLEADING AND PRACTICE, Ch. 122, Community Property (Matthew Bender). For discussion of related estate planning considerations, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning .

[2] Types of Property

[a] Community Property

Stock may be a spouse's community property, separate property, or quasi-community property, or a combination of the two.

Community property is generally "all property, real or personal, wherever located, acquired by a married person during marriage while domiciled in California", except as otherwise provided by statute [Fam. Code § 760; see Civ. Code § 687; Fam. Code § 65; see also Fam. Code § 761]. This definition is not an exclusive statement describing all property classified as community property. Rather, it is a general statement of the basic rule that all property acquired during marriage is community property, unless it is a spouse's separate property [Fam. Code §§ 130, 770] or the spouses agree to the contrary [Fam. Code § 850; see 23 Cal. Law Rev. Comm. 1 (1993)].

For purposes of disposition of property on the death of a spouse, community property includes all real property in California, and all personal property, wherever located, acquired during marriage:

- That is community property or a substantially equivalent type of marital property under the laws of the place where the acquiring spouse was domiciled when the property was acquired [Prob. Code § 28(b)], and

- In exchange for real or personal property, wherever located, that is community property or a substantially equivalent type of marital property under the laws of the place where the acquiring spouse was domiciled when the exchanged property was acquired [Prob. Code § 28(c)].

For example, unless otherwise characterized by agreement [see [5], below], stock purchased by a spouse with earnings during marriage is community property [see In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 889, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295] .

On dissolution of marriage, community property must be divided equally between spouses [Fam. Code § 2550]. On a spouse's death, one-half of the community property belongs to the surviving spouse and one-half belongs to the decedent; each spouse has the power of testamentary disposition over his or her half [Prob. Code §§ 100(a), 6101(b)]. Alternatively, spouses may agree in writing to divide their community property on the basis of a non pro rata division of the aggregate value of the community property, on the basis of a division of each individual item or asset of community property, or partly on each basis. Furthermore, the statutory authorization for a non pro rata division of community property does not require a written agreement in order to permit or recognize a non pro rata division of community property, it merely authorizes such a division [Prob. Code § 100(b)]. Therefore, an oral non pro rata division of community property is also valid if otherwise allowed or recognized by applicable case or statutory law.

[b] Separate Property

Separate property generally includes the following [Fam. Code §§ 130, 770(a); Cal. Const., art. I, § 21]:

- All property owned before marriage.

- All property acquired after marriage by gift, bequest, devise, or descent.

- The rents, issues, and profits of separate property.

Under some circumstances, however, the community may acquire an interest in a separate property business [see [3], below].

On dissolution of marriage, separate property must be awarded to the spouse whose property it is [Barker v. Barker (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 206, 210 293 P.2d 85] . A spouse has the power of testamentary disposition over his or her separate property [see Prob. Code § 6101(a)].

[c] Quasi-Community Property

For purposes of division of property on marital dissolution, quasi-community property consists of all real or personal property, wherever located, acquired during the marriage in one of the following ways [Fam. Code § 125]:

- By either spouse while domiciled elsewhere, if the property would have been characterized as community property had the acquiring spouse been domiciled in California at the time of its acquisition.

- In exchange for property, wherever located, that would have been characterized as community property, had the spouse who acquired the property been domiciled in California when the exchanged property was acquired.

For purposes of disposition of property on the death of a spouse, quasi-community property consists of the following [Prob. Code § 66]:

- All personal property wherever located, and all California real property that would have been characterized as community property had the decedent been domiciled in California at the time of its acquisition.

- All personal property, wherever located, and all California real property acquired in exchange for property that would have been characterized as community property had the decedent been domiciled in California at the time of acquisition of the exchanged property.

Current law treats quasi-community personal property (such as corporate stock) as community property for purposes of division on marital dissolution or separation [see Fam. Code §§ 125, 2550] and disposition on death [see Prob. Code §§ 66, 101, 6101(c); see also [a], above]. For example, a stock option acquired by a husband in consideration for his employment while he was domiciled outside California is quasi-community property after the spouses move to California [Cooper v. Cooper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 6, 11-12, 74 Cal. Rptr. 439] .

As with community property, on the death of one spouse, one-half of the quasi-community property belongs to the surviving spouse and one-half belongs to the decedent [Prob. Code § 101(a)]. Alternatively, spouses may agree in writing to divide their quasi-community property on the basis of a non pro rata division of the aggregate value of the quasi-community property, on the basis of a division of each individual item or asset of quasi-community property, or partly on each basis. Furthermore, the statutory authorization for a non pro rata division of quasi-community property does not require a written agreement in order to permit or recognize a non pro rata division of quasi-community property, it merely authorizes such a division [Prob. Code § 101(b)]. Therefore, an oral non pro rata division of quasi-community property is also valid if otherwise allowed or recognized by applicable case or statutory law.

[3] Community Property Interest in Separate Property Investment

Under some circumstances, the community may acquire an interest in a separate property business. For example, when one spouse owns a business interest as separate property, and either spouse participates in the business during marriage, California courts have determined that the interest so created is part separate and part community property [see Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 17, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378 ; Estate of Neilson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 733, 740, 22 Cal. Rptr. 1, 371 P.2d 745] . The time, energy, and skill contributed by either spouse during marriage is a community asset [Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 17, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378] . Thus, when either spouse's community property efforts during marriage combine with a separate property investment to produce income, that income will be apportioned according to the relative separate and community property contributions [see Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 17, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378] .

California courts have developed two different approaches to apportioning appreciation and profits between separate and community property interests when clear evidence of the relative interests do not exist. The court may apply whichever allocation approach it believes is the most appropriate and equitable, depending on whether the chief contributing factor in the realization of income and profits is either of the following [Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 18, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378] :

- The character of the capital investment in the separate property, or
- The personal activity, ability, and capacity of the spouse.

One method, frequently called the Pereira approach, involves the allocation of a fair return on the spouse's separate property investment as separate income, and then the allocation of any excess to the community. If there is no evidence of what a fair rate of return would be, the court may use the legal interest rate [Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 18-19, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378 ; see Pereira v. Pereira (1909) 151 Cal. 1, 11-12, 103 P. 488 ; see Civ. Code § 3289 (interest)].

The alternative approach, commonly called the Van Camp approach, takes the opposite tack. Under this approach, the court determines a reasonable value of the spouse's services, allocates that amount to the community, and treats the balance as separate property [Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 18, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378 ; see Van Camp v. Van Camp (1921) 53 Cal. App. 17, 27-28, 199 P. 885] .

The business profit apportionment principles were first developed in cases involving a separate property farm or business [see Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 17, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378 (listing cases)], but have since been applied in other contexts, including real estate and securities investments [Beam v. Bank of America (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 12, 17, 98 Cal. Rptr. 137, 490 P.2d 1378 ; Estate of Neilson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 733, 740, 22 Cal. Rptr. 1, 371 P.2d 745] , including stock options [see Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 787-788, 794, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676 (stock options granted during marriage but exercisable after separation are community property asset)].

[4] Management and Control of Community Personal Property

With certain exceptions, either spouse has management and control of community personal property, with the absolute power of disposition, other than testamentary, that he or she has of his or her separate property [Fam. Code § 1100(a)]. As a corollary to equal management and control, the community property is generally liable for the debts and torts of both spouses [Fam. Code §§ 910 (debts), 1000(b) (torts)]. One problem with equal management and control is the potential for conflicting independent decisions made by each spouse concerning specific community property [see [1], above]. The exceptions to and qualifications of the equal management and control rule may mitigate this potential problem.

The exception most germane to a buy-sell agreement is provided for management and control of a community property business. Except for gifts of community property [see Fam. Code § 1100(b)], the disposition of household furnishings and clothes [see Fam. Code § 1100(c)], or the sale or lease of community real property [see Fam. Code § 1102], a spouse who is operating or managing a business or an interest in a business that is all or substantially all community personal property has the primary management and control of the business or interest [Fam. Code § 1100(d)]. Primary management and control means that the managing spouse may act alone in all transactions, except that the managing spouse must give prior written notice to the other spouse of any sale, lease, exchange, encumbrance, or other disposition of all (or substantially all) of the personal property used in the operation of the business, whether or not title to that property is held in the name of only one spouse [Fam. Code § 1100(d)], and must act with respect to the other spouse according to the rules governing fiduciary relationships that control the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other [Fam. Code § 1100(e)]. This fiduciary duty of management and control includes the obligation to fully disclose all material facts and information on the existence, characterization, and valuation of all assets in which the community has (or may have) an interest, and all debts for which the community is (or may be) liable [Fam. Code § 1100(e)]. Each spouse must also provide the other, on request, with equal access to all information and records that pertain to those assets and debts [Fam. Code § 1100(e)].

For a spousal consent form that conforms to Fam. Code § 1100, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements, § 8C.203[2].

[5] Agreement Confirming or Transmuting Property Nature of Stock Subject to Buy-Sell Agreement

[a] Use of Transmutation Agreements

Some practitioners recommend that the attorney advise spouses to confirm, or transmute if necessary, the character of the stock subject to the agreement.

Although confirmation and transmutation agreements are generally governed by the same rules as other contracts, they are subject to additional contract rules applicable to property contracts between a husband and wife [see Fam. Code § 721(b)]. Transactions between a husband and wife are subject to the general rules governing fiduciary relationships that control the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other [Fam. Code § 721(b)]. Most transmutation and confirmation agreements must be in writing and signed by the spouse whose interest in the property is adversely affected [Fam. Code § 852(a); see Fam. Code § 852(c) (exceptions)]. Further, to be enforceable against a surviving spouse, contractual agreements waiving certain rights at death (including community and quasi-community rights [Prob. Code § 141(a)(7)]) must be in writing and must be signed by the spouse who waives the right [Prob. Code § 142], after fair and reasonable disclosure of the property or financial obligation of the other spouse, or waiver of disclosure after advice of independent counsel [Prob. Code § 143(a)(1)]. Even when these statutory requirements are met, the court may find enforcement of all or part of the waiver unconscionable in the circumstances existing at the time enforcement is sought [Prob. Code § 144].

Confirmation of the nature of the stock as community or separate property may be made part of the buy-sell agreement, or may be the subject of a separate agreement. To reduce the risk of a nonparty spouse claiming a community property interest in the stock in a marital dissolution proceeding (or the spouse's heirs making a similar claim on that spouse's death), some practitioners recommend the use of a property agreement separate from the buy-sell agreement, covering all material assets of the spouses.

The statutory requirements governing transmutation agreements are discussed in detail in Ch. 112, Postnuptial Agreements, §§ 112.15, 112.16. For a basic transmutation agreement form, see Ch. 112, Postnuptial Agreements, § 112.201.

[b] Issues Involving Nonmarital Partners

In the case of a nonmarital partner who is not a party to the agreement, any rights that person may have in the stock acquired by a party to the agreement is based on contract [Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 673-674, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815] . The attorney, therefore, should determine whether any such contract exists, establishing the ownership of the stock subject to the buy-sell agreement. Any spousal consent forms attached to the agreement may be modified to reflect the nature of ownership of the nonmarital partner.

[c] Ethical Considerations

An attorney who is consulted by clients who wish to enter into a transmutation or confirmation agreement must remember his or her ethical responsibility to avoid conflicts of interest. Transmutation and confirmation agreements almost always raise actual or potential conflicts between spouses. An attorney cannot represent two clients who have conflicting (or potentially conflicting) interests, unless the attorney first explains the facts giving rise to the conflict, and obtains written authorization from the clients to proceed with the dual representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B); see §§ 8D.12-8D.16]. For general coverage of the ethical responsibilities of business attorneys, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business . For similar coverage for estate planning attorneys, see CALIFORNIA WILLS AND TRUSTS, Ch. 4, Ethical Considerations and Professional Responsibility (Matthew Bender).

NOTE:
Whether an individual shareholder is likely to be insurable is an essential consideration in determining how to fund the buy-sell agreement.

k. Whether shareholder is employee of corporation; if so position or title.

l. Estate plan for shares.

NOTE:
An estate plan may affect a buy-sell agreement [see § 8D.90]. Conversely, the execution of a buy-sell agreement can significantly affect a preexisting estate plan.

[b] The Corporation

1. Name and address of corporation.

2. Date of incorporation.

3. State of incorporation.

4. Tax year of corporation.

5. Employer identification number.

6. Principal business.

7. Total number of shares issued.

8. Approximate fair market value of shares, if known.

9. Whether the corporation is a professional corporation.

NOTE:

A "professional corporation" is a regular business corporation that renders professional services in a single profession under a Certificate of Registration issued by the governing board that regulates the profession [see Corp. Code § 13401(b); but see Corp. Code § 13401.5 (allied professionals)]. "Professional services" are any services that may lawfully be rendered pursuant to a license or certificate of registration authorized by the California Business and Professions Code, the Osteopathic Act, the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act, or the Chiropractic Act [Corp. Code § 13401(a), 13401.3], although there is no longer any certification requirements for medical, osteopathic, dental, pharmacy, veterinary, architectural, registered nursing, optometry, behavioral sciences, speech-language pathology and audiology, or court reporter corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 13401(b), 13402(a); Bus. & Prof. Code § 2406]. With these exceptions, a professional corporation must have its own Certificate of Registration to do business as a corporation [Corp. Code § 13401(b); see Corp. Code § 13402(b)].

Whether a corporation is a professional corporation is a consideration in selecting the buyers in a buy-sell agreement, since a license is required to render services.

For a list of professions permitted to incorporate under the Professional Corporations Act, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For further discussion, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

10. Whether corporation has elected Subchapter S status.

NOTE:

A small business corporation may elect to be an S corporation [I.R.C. § 1362(a)]. Unlike a C corporation which is a separate tax-paying entity [see I.R.C. § 11], an S corporation is generally treated as a conduit of income, loss, deductions, and credits to shareholders [see I.R.C. §§ 1363, 1366]. For discussion of the advisability of electing to be an S corporation, see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity . For discussion of the procedures to be used in electing or terminating Subchapter S status, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

Whether a corporation has elected S corporation status will affect the determination of the tax impact of a life insurance funded buy-sell agreement [see §§ 8D.48-8D.49].

11. Names, addresses, and telephone numbers of directors.

12. Names, addresses, telephone numbers, and titles of officers.

§ 8D.110 Identifying Conflicts of Interest

1. Ascertain which party attorney represents.

NOTE:

An attorney representing an entity may also represent its constituents provided the attorney makes a written disclosure to the client in accordance with The California Rules of Professional Conduct 3-310(B), and discloses his or her relationship to the entity [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Dual representation of clients whose interests conflict is permitted under certain circumstances if the attorney obtains the written consent of each client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-600(E)]. Caution should be exercised, however, in dual representation where an actual conflict of interest exists [see § 8D.22]. Even without an actual conflict, under some circumstances, an attorney should not undertake multiple representation [see § 8D.23].

a. Will attorney represent corporation? [See § 8D.21 [2]]

b. Will attorney represent single shareholder?

c. Will attorney represent some or all shareholders?

d. Will attorney represent a combination of subsections a-c, above [See § 8D.21[2][b]]?

2. Ascertain whether attorney represents clients with adverse interests [see Cal. Rules *Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310; §§ 8*D.22-8D.25].

a. Does attorney have legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with party or witness in same matter?

b. Does attorney know (or reasonably should know) that:
(1) Attorney previously had legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with party or witness in same matter; and

(2) Previous relationship will substantially affect attorney's representation?

c. Does (or did) attorney have legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with party or entity that would be substantially affected by resolution of matter?

d. Does (or did) attorney have legal, business, financial, or professional interest in subject matter of representation?

e. Has attorney obtained confidential information related to representation from client or former client?

3. Ascertain whether attorney has provided written disclosure, and obtained informed written consent from each client (or former client) whose interests actually or potentially conflict [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3- 310; §§ 8D.22-8D.25].

4. Ascertain whether attorney's other roles present conflict of interest issues [see Cal. Rules *Prof. Cond., Rule 3-300; § 8*D.27].

a. Will attorney invest in client's business [See § 8D.27[1]]?

b. Will attorney serve as corporate agent, director, or officer [See § 8D.27[2]]?

c. Is attorney likely to be called as witness in any litigation with jury [See § 8D.27[3]]?

5. Ascertain whether attorney has adequate conflict- identification system [see § 8D.28[2]].

§ 8D.111 Determining Scope of Work to be Performed by Attorney

1. Determine tasks attorney will perform.

2. Determine whether consultation or association of specialist or other professional is required [see § 8D.29].

NOTE:

Drafting (or reviewing) a buy-sell agreement can involve many areas of law [see § 8D.29 [1]]. The drafting attorney has the duty to refer the client to a specialist or recommend the association of a specialist if the attorney lacks the requisite skill or knowledge [see § 8D.29[2]]. The drafting attorney often relies heavily on the advice of other professionals, such as life insurance agents, accountants, financial planners, and trust officers. Since life insurance is the most common way to provide funds to purchase the shares of a deceased shareholder, life insurance agents are frequently consulted. The wide variety of life insurance products and forms of ownership make such a consultation important when drafting the agreement. Accountants, financial planners, and trust officers often participate in the preparation of buy-sell agreements. Business accountants usually have better and more current financial data about the business. Financial planners and trust officers often have a better knowledge of the shareholders' personal finances and long-range financial needs than do the shareholders themselves.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.112

§ 8D.112 Selecting Appropriate Type of Agreement

1. Determine whether entity purchase, cross-purchase, or hybrid agreement is preferable, based on following business (non-tax) factors:

a. Simplicity of arrangement.

NOTE:
The primary business advantage of an entity purchase is that it is a simpler arrangement than a cross-purchase. It will be enforceable after a shareholder's death or withdrawal, while a cross- purchase agreement may have to be rewritten after those events to redefine the responsibilities of the remaining shareholders [see § 8D.13[2][a].

When the agreement is funded with insurance [see § 8D.71[2]], an entity purchase agreement requires the corporation to acquire only one life insurance policy for each shareholder, while a cross-purchase agreement requires each shareholder to purchase a policy on the life of every other shareholder, resulting in increased administrative costs and considerable expenditures on insurance premiums [see § 8D.13[2][a]].

b. Enforceability of agreement.

NOTE:
Except for entity purchase agreements adequately funded by life or disability insurance (which covers only the death or disability of the shareholder and not other events that may trigger the sale of shares) [see Corp. Code §§ 503.1, 503.2], the primary business disadvantage of an entity purchase agreement is that it may be unenforceable at the time the shareholder withdraws from the corporation. A corporation is prohibited from repurchasing its shares unless, at the time of the shareholder's death or withdrawal, it can meet certain statutory financial tests that do not apply to a cross-purchase agreement [see Corp. Code §§

166, 500-503; § 8D.72; see also Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender) (enforcement and validity of contracts by corporations to repurchase their shares)]. This potential disadvantage, however, may be mitigated by requiring the shareholders to take whatever actions are necessary to enable the corporation to repurchase its shares by revaluing corporate assets or making a capital contribution [see § 8D.13[2]]. A cross-purchase agreement, on the other hand, does not have the potential problem of unenforceability, since the corporation itself does not purchase any shares [see § 8D.13[3]].

c. Desirability of maintaining balance of power between groups of shareholders.

NOTE:

A cross-purchase agreement can be structured to ensure that the balance of power between groups in the corporation will remain the same, by providing for the purchase of a departing or deceased shareholder's shares by shareholders in his or her same group [see Ballantine & Sterling, CALIFORNIA CORPORATION LAWS, Ch. 4, Close Corporations , § 63.03[3][a] (Matthew Bender)].

d. Ease of funding.

NOTE:

The major disadvantage of a cross-purchase agreement for most shareholders is that they must use their own money to purchase the shares of the departing shareholder. If the remaining shareholders have to withdraw funds from the corporation in the form of dividends to fund the buy-out, these funds will be subject to double taxation--once as income to the corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 11(a), 311] and again when received by the shareholder [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 61(a)(7), 301; see I.R.C. § 316 ("dividend" defined); § 8D.13[3][b]]. This is not a problem under an entity purchase agreement, because the corporation, and not the shareholders, is obligated to repurchase the shares [see § 8D.13[2][a]].

Another disadvantage of a cross-purchase agreement is its complexity when funded with insurance. An insurance-funded entity purchase agreement requires the corporation to acquire only one life insurance policy for each shareholder, while a cross-purchase agreement requires each shareholder to purchase a policy on the life of every other shareholder, resulting in increased administrative costs and considerable expenditures on insurance premiums [see § 8D.13[2][a]].

2. Determine whether entity purchase, cross-purchase, or hybrid agreement is preferable, based on following tax factors:

a. Possible double taxation of corporate income used to purchase shares.

NOTE:

In a cross-purchase agreement, the funds used to purchase the shares may be taxed as a dividend to the shareholders, and will not be deductible to the corporation [see § 8D.13[3][b]].

b. Taxation of sale proceeds as either capital gains or ordinary income [see §§ 8D.40-8D.42].

c. Possible imposition of accumulated earnings tax on corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 531-537].

NOTE:

In an insurance-funded entity purchase agreement, an accumulated earnings tax penalty may be imposed on the corporation if the agreement is funded by insurance with substantial cash surrender values that accumulate beyond the reasonable needs of the business [I.R.C. §§ 531-537; see § 8D.48[4]].

d. Possible imposition of alternative minimum tax on corporation [see I.R.C. §§ 55-58].

NOTE:
The alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 55] may be imposed if the entity purchase agreement is funded with life insurance [see I.R.C. §§ 56(g)(4)(B)(ii)*; § 8D.48[3]].

e. Possible recapture of depreciation deductions and investment tax credits by corporation under entity purchase agreement [see I.R.C. § 311(b); § 8D.13[2][b]].

f. Possible recognition of income by the corporation [see I.R.C. § 311(b); § 8D.13[2][b]].

NOTE:
Under an entity purchase agreement, the corporation will recognize income if it distributes property to the shareholder to redeem the shareholder's shares, if the property's fair market value exceeds its adjusted basis [I.R.C. § 311(b); see § 8D.13[2][b]*].

g. Possible taxation of insurance proceeds used to purchase shares under agreement under the transfer-for-value rule [see I.R.C. § 101(a)(2); § 8D.13[3][b]].

a. For an entity purchase agreement:
(1) Life insurance.

(2) Disability insurance.

(3) Corporate surplus.

(4) Corporate reserves.

(5) Distribution of corporate assets.

b. For a cross-purchase agreement:

(1) Life insurance.

(2) Disability insurance.

(3) Personal assets.

(4) Withdrawals from corporation.

2. If agreement will be funded with life insurance, determine type of insurance for funding.

NOTE:

The correct vehicle for funding a buy-sell agreement should be selected in consultation with a life insurance agent. For discussion of the types of life insurance products that may be used to fund the agreement, see § 8D.71[2][e].

3. If any owner is uninsurable, determine whether alternate insurance may be obtained to fund buy- sell agreement [see § 8D.71[2][c]].

NOTE:

The simplest way to assure adequate liquid capital to finance the purchase of shares under a buy- sell agreement is to obtain life insurance in an amount equal to the value of the interest to be redeemed or purchased. For discussion of valuation methods, see § 8D.75.

1. Determine parties entitled to purchase shares under buy-sell agreement:

NOTE:
For most planners, the key decision of any buy-sell agreement is the identity of the buyers. An entity purchase agreement is used if the buyer will be the corporation. A hybrid agreement is used if there are reasons for the corporation to buy the offered shares in some cases and the other shareholders to buy them in other cases.

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.116

§ 8D.116 Selecting Valuation Methods

1. Determine which valuation method, or combination of methods, will be used to determine purchase price under buy-sell agreement [see § 8D.75]:

a. Book value formula.

NOTE:
Book value reflects the original cost and adjusted worth of assets; it does not take into account corporate earnings. It is the most appropriate valuation method when a business plans to sell or liquidate its assets in the near future, and its liquidating value is close to or exceeds its earning power value. It may also be useful in combination with other methods [see § 8D.75[2]].

b. Capitalization of earnings formula.

NOTE:
Capitalization of earnings determines the corporation's value by its continuing ability to earn profits, rather than by the worth of its assets. This method, however, may not accurately determine future profitability if the deceased or selling shareholder was vital to the success of the corporate business [see § 8D.75[3]].

c. Mutual agreement periodically reviewed.

NOTE:
Mutual agreement requires the shareholders to agree among themselves on a fixed share value [see § 8D.75[4]]. If the bargaining power of the shareholders is approximately equal, and the shareholders are required to regularly reevaluate the purchase price, this method will often result in a fair price that is acceptable to all the parties. This method may be coupled with a provision for appraisal [see § 8D.116[1][d]], or arbitration [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], alternate § 8.02] if the parties fail to agree or cannot agree to periodically review the price.

d. Appraisal.

NOTE:

Appraisal may be a more suitable method of valuation than a formula if the business has a substantial number of fixed assets that can be objectively valued and that may be either over or under valued on the corporation's balance sheet, and if a capitalization of earning will not reflect the business's earning potential. It may, however, involve considerable expense [see § 8D.75[5]].

2. Determine whether corporation is required by statute to set its purchase price in accordance with criteria set forth in California Code of Regulations.

NOTE:

A corporation that is ineligible for exemption from qualification of its securities [see Corp. Code § 25102; § 8D.74 [1]] must set the purchase price in accordance with the criteria set forth in the California Code of Regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8; see also § 8D.74[2]].

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.117

§ 8D.117 Complying with Valuation Requirements for Federal Estate Tax Purposes

NOTE:
The value of the shares, or the price set in the buy-sell agreement, will be accepted by the Internal Revenue Service to establish the value of the shares for federal estate tax purposes if specific requirements are met [I.R.C. § 2703(a), (b); Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1; see § 8D.61].

1. Determine whether agreement is among related persons and those who are the natural objects of each other's bounty, or among persons who are neither related nor the natural objects of each other's bounty.

NOTE:
More exacting requirements apply to agreements between related persons and persons who are the natural object of each other's bounty than to agreements between unrelated persons who are not the natural object of each other's bounty [see §§ 8D.61[2][b], [c], 8D.117, § 3].

2. If reviewing or revising agreement, determine if agreement was entered into before October 9, 1990.

NOTE:
The three requirements set forth in Internal Revenue Code § 2703(b) and amplified in Treasury Regulations Section 25.2703-1 apply to agreements between related persons and persons who are the natural object of each other's bounty entered into or substantially modified after October 8, 1990 [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-2; see § 8D.61[2][d]]. Caution should be exercised in modifying a pre-October 9, 1990 buy-sell agreement among related persons because it is likely that these additional requirements will be more difficult to meet than the requirements of Treasury Regulations Section 20.2031-2.

3. Determine whether agreement complies with following requirements for valuation of shares for estate tax purposes:

NOTE:

Agreements among related persons and persons who are the natural objects of each other's bounty must meet the six requirements discussed in [a]-[f], below [see I.R.C. § 2703(b); Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2]. Agreements among unrelated persons who are not the natural object of each other's bounty are presumed to comply with the three requirements of Internal Revenue Code § 2703(b) and Treasury Regulations Section 25.2703-1 [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(3); see [a]-[c], below]: These agreements are presumed to be bona fide business arrangements that are comparable to similar arrangements entered into in arms' length transactions [see I.R.C. § 2703(b)(1), (b)(3)]; and agreements between unrelated persons are not devices to transfer an interest within a family for less than adequate consideration [see I.R.C. § 2703(b)(2)]. Agreements between unrelated persons, however, must presumably comply with the requirements of Treasury Regulations Section 20.2031-2 [see [d]-[f], below]. These requirements also apply to agreements entered into or substantially modified after October 8, 1990 [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-2]. Each requirement is a separate test [Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(2)].

a. Is agreement bona fide business arrangement [I.R.C. § 2703(b)(1); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2031-2, 25.2703-1(b)(1)(i)]?

b. Does agreement avoid being mere device to transfer property to decedent's family for inadequate consideration [I.R.C. § 2703(b)(2); Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2703-1(b)(1)(ii), 20.2031-2]?

c. Are agreement's terms comparable to similar agreements negotiated at arm's length at the time right or restriction is created [I.R.C. § 2703(b)(3); Treas. Reg. § 25.2703-1(b)(1)(iii)]?

d. Does agreement restrict transfer of shares to agreement price during lifetime and at death [Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(h)]?

e. Is decedent's estate bound by agreement to sell shares at agreement price [Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2]?

f. Does agreement specify either a sales price for shares or formula or other method for determining price [Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2]?

NOTE:

To be effective for estate tax purposes, the sales price specified by the agreement must be reasonable when the agreement is signed; later appreciation resulting in increased value at the time of the shareholder's death is irrelevant. However, later changes in the business, without corresponding changes in method for determining price under the buy- sell agreement may make the agreement price ineffective for estate tax purposes, if changes are warranted [St. Louis County Bank v. U.S. (8th Cir. 1982) 674 F.2d 1207, 1210-1211] .

CHAPTER 8D BUY-SELL AGREEMENTS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
C. Drafting Guide

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.130

§ 8D.130 Introductory Provisions

1. Identify parties to agreement [see, e.g, § 8D.200[2], Preamble (entity purchase); § 8D.210[2], Preamble (cross-purchase)]:

a. Corporation. b. Shareholders. c. Trustee, if any.

2. State business purposes of agreement [see, e.g., § 8D.200, §§ 1.02, 1.03 (entity purchase); § 8D.210, §§ 1.02, 1.03 (cross-purchase)].

NOTE:
The agreement is ordinarily entered into to ensure continuity of management and to establish a fair value and provide a market for shares held by a selling shareholder or a deceased shareholder's estate that otherwise might have no ready market. For further discussion of the purposes of a buy-sell agreement, see § 8D.11.

3. List all share certificates [see, e.g., § 8D.200, § 1.01 (entity purchase); § 8D.210, § 1.01 (cross-purchase)].

NOTE:
The agreement should provide the share certificate date and number, the number of shares represented by the certificate, and the owner. This information will be used to determine the number of shares each shareholder may purchase from a deceased or selling shareholder, since shareholders will purchase shares in proportion to their current holdings. The agreement may also include an optional provision stating that the number of shares owned by a shareholder on the date the agreement becomes operative will be controlling if there is a discrepancy between that number and the stated number of shares.

4. Specify consideration that parties receive for their rights and obligations under agreement.

NOTE:

Be certain that all shareholders and the corporation, if agreement is either entity purchase or hybrid, are parties to the agreement and are bound by it. Although, under a cross-purchase agreement, the corporation is not a necessary party, some practitioners believe that the corporation should always be a party to the agreement to protect against any corporate actions, including the subsequent issuance of shares not subject to the agreement, which might defeat the purposes of the agreement.

§ 8D.131 Transfer Restrictions

1. Include restrictions on transfer [see, e.g., § 8D.200, § 2.01 (entity purchase); § 8D.210, § 2.01 (cross-purchase)].

NOTE:
If the corporation issues uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)], the transfer restrictions must appear on the initial transaction statement and subsequent written statements [Corp. Code § 418(b); see Corp. Code § 171.1 (definition)]. For further discussion of uncertificated securities, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities , and Ch. 6K, Nonissuer Transactions in Investment Securities .

2. Provide for legend to be placed on each certificate, stating that shares which certificates represent are subject to agreement's terms.

NOTE:
No transfer restriction is enforceable against a transferee without knowledge of the restriction unless the transfer restrictions appear on the share certificate [Corp. Code § 418(b); see § 8D.200[1][b][ii] (entity purchase); § 8D.210[1][b][2] (cross-purchase)]. The restriction on transfer and the legend on the certificates noting the restriction are also important in ensuring that the valuation placed on the shares for estate tax purposes is not greater than the price the decedent's estate receives under the agreement [see Estate of Matthews v. Commissioner (1944) 3 T.C. 525] . For discussion of the effect of restrictions on the valuation of shares for estate tax purposes, see § 8D.61.

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.132

§ 8D.132 Mandatory Sale-Purchase on Death

1. Include requirement for mandatory sale and purchase at death and/or disability and/or involuntary termination of employment.

a. Provide that on the death of a shareholder [see § 8D.200[2], Article 5 (entity purchase); § 8D.210[2], Article 5 (cross-purchase)]:
(1) All shareholder's shares are to be sold and transferred to corporation (entity purchase agreement) or to other shareholders (cross-purchase agreement) by decedent's representative; and

(2) Corporation (entity purchase agreement) and/or other shareholders (cross-purchase agreement) are obligated to purchase shares at a price either fixed in or determined by the agreement.

b. If appropriate or desirable, include similar provision requiring either mandatory or optional buyout when a shareholder employee becomes disabled or his or her employment with the corporation is involuntarily terminated [see § 8D.200[2], Articles 6, 7 (entity purchase); § 8D.210[2], Articles 6, 7 (cross-purchase)].

2. For entity purchase agreements, consider including requirement that if corporation is unable to redeem all of deceased shareholder's shares within specified period [see, e.g., § 8D.200, § 5.01], the surviving shareholders must purchase all of deceased shareholder's shares not purchased by corporation [see § 8D.200[2], § 5.02].

NOTE:
Because a corporation may not redeem shares unless it passes certain statutory financial tests [see § 8D.72], most entity purchase agreements require the remaining shareholders to purchase a deceased shareholder's shares if the corporation is unable to do so. The forms in this chapter require each shareholder to purchase any such shares in proportion to their existing ownership interests [see § 8D.200[2], § 5.02]. As an alternative to this requirement, the shareholders may prefer to revalue capital assets or make a capital contribution to the corporation.

3. If desired, add optional provision giving corporation and shareholders (entity purchase) or shareholders (cross-purchase) option to either:

a. Purchase shares of deceased shareholders; or

b. Dissolve corporation.

NOTE:

Except in the case of very small, closely held corporations, most corporations will generally find mandatory dissolution as a result of the nonpurchase of a decedent's shares too extreme a measure. Furthermore, a minority shareholder may wish to insert provisions limiting the ability of the majority shareholders to dissolve the corporation, and, thus, avoid the agreement.

This provision is designed to replace Section 5.02 of § 8D.200[2] (entity purchase) and Section 5.01 of § 8D.210[2] (cross-purchase). It is not intended for use in agreements funded with life insurance.

1. If desired, include optional provision for mandatory or optional sale of shares on any of following events [see § 8D.200[2], Articles 6, 7 (entity purchase); § 8D.210[2], Articles 6, 7 (cross-purchase)]:

a. Voluntary termination of employment;

b. Termination of employment for cause;

c. Permanent disability; or

d. Retirement.

2. For entity purchase agreements, include [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], Sections 3.05 -3.10]:

a. Option of corporation to purchase all shares.

b. Option of remaining shareholders to purchase shares when corporation fails to exercise option.

c. Right of selling shareholder to sell to outside parties if options are not exercised.

3. For cross-purchase agreements, include option of remaining shareholders to purchase shares offered through lifetime sale [see, e.g., § 8D.210[2], Section 3.03].

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.134

§ 8D.134 Share Valuation Method

1. Clearly set forth valuation method to be used to determine purchase price of shares, either:

a. Book value formula [see § 8D.75[2]].

b. Capitalization of earnings formula [see § 8D.75[3]].

c. Mutual agreement periodically reviewed [see § 8D.75[4]].

d. Appraisal [see § 8D.75[5]].

e. Arbitration [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], (alternate) § 10.02].

f. Combination of any of above [see, e.g, § 8D.200[2], (alternate) Article 10 (combining mutual agreement with arbitration)].

NOTE:
The agreement should indicate the desired valuation method. If the method selected, such as book value, involves any discretionary decisions, the extent of these decisions should be spelled out in unambiguous terms. The agreement can provide that the parties must set a value on the shares at the end of each fiscal quarter, or year, and that the value last fixed will bind the corporation and the decedent's estate, or the agreement can provide that the shares will be valued after a shareholder dies. If the agreement provides for valuation by an appraiser, that arrangement should be clearly explained.

2. If corporation is ineligible for exemption from qualification for its securities, specify that purchase price must be set according to criteria in California Code of Regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8; see also § 8D.74[2]].

3. Do not attempt to waive fiduciary duties of directors or majority shareholder to minority shareholders with respect to adequacy of consideration.

NOTE:

A waiver of corporate directors' and majority shareholders' fiduciary duties to minority shareholders in private close corporations is against public policy, and a contract provision in a buy-sell agreement purporting to effect such a waiver is void [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 (provision in buy-sell agreement purporting to waive any fiduciary duty with respect to fairness of overall consideration held void)].

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.135

§ 8D.135 Funding Purchase of Shares

1. Set forth in detail the manner in which the purchase of shares is to be funded.

NOTE:
A common method of funding is by purchasing life insurance on each insurable shareholder. If a shareholder is uninsurable at the time of the execution of the agreement, other arrangements must be made [see § 8D.71[1], [2][c]]. It is a good idea to provide that the amount of life insurance should be increased periodically, if the business grows and the shares increase in value.

2. If agreement will be funded by insurance [see, e.g., § 8D.220 (entity purchase); § 8D.221 (cross-purchase)], include:

a. Name of insured.

b. Name of owner of policy.

c. Face amount of policy.

d. Beneficiary of policy.

e. Method of collection and payment of proceeds.

f. Owner's right to procure additional insurance to achieve parity with share value.

g. Method for paying remainder of purchase price if price exceeds insurance proceeds.

h. Method for disposition of any excess of insurance proceeds over value of decedent's shares.

i. Optional provision for payment of insurance premiums by insured when necessary to maintain policy.

NOTE:
For a form containing insurance provisions for use in a cross-purchase agreement, see § 8D.221[2], § 1.03.

j. Method for disposing of insurance policies on death of shareholder [see, e.g., § 8D.220[2], § 1.05 (entity purchase); § 8D.221[2], § 1.07 (cross-purchase)].

NOTE:
The forms in this chapter allow each shareholder to purchase the policy on his or her own life from the decedent's estate. This method avoids the imposition of any "transfer for value" tax on the insurance proceeds when that shareholder later dies [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2); see § 8D.13[3][b]].

3. If agreement will be funded by promissory notes or other securities, set forth exact terms of these notes or securities [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 3.11 (lifetime purchase, entity purchase agreement); § 8D.210[2], § 3.06 (lifetime purchase, cross-purchase agreement)].

4. Specify when selling shareholder's status as shareholder will terminate; either:

NOTE:
Title to shares governed by buy-sell agreement ordinarily does not pass until the shares are delivered or tendered to the buyer, unless there is something in the agreement that specifies or implies a different intention [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1173-1174, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 ; Gilfallan v. Gilfallan (1914) 168 Cal. 23, 31, 141 P. 23] . Thus, unless the agreement specifies otherwise, the shareholder ordinarily will remain a shareholder, and have all the rights and privileges of a shareholder, until the shares are actually transferred to the new owner or owners under the agreement.

The parties do have the power to agree that a shareholder loses his or her shareholder status upon some event other than actual transfer of the shares to another. However, such a term will not be automatically implied simply by virtue of the existence of a mandatory repurchase provision [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1174, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (holding that agreement at issue did not imply any intention by parties to deny shareholder his rights during the post-employment period used to determine share value)]. Thus, if the parties contemplate that the shareholder's rights and status as such will terminate on occurrence of the event triggering the repurchase obligation (such as death, retirement, or termination of employment), that intention must be clearly and expressly specified in the agreement.

a. Upon payment by the purchaser of the consideration for the shares and endorsement of the share certificates by the seller [see § 2.200[2], Section 8.03; § 8D.210, Section 8.03]; or

b. Immediately upon occurrence of any event or specified events triggering buy-sell agreement [see § 8D.230[2]].

NOTE:
Use of such a provision makes sense only when the purchase of shares under a buy-sell agreement is mandatory. When the agreement provides only for a right-- but not a duty-- on the part of the corporation or other shareholders to purchase the shares under specified circumstances [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], Sections 4.01, 7.01; § 8D.210[2], Sections 4.01, 7.01], it would be inappropriate to provide for an immediate termination of shareholder status on occurrence of those circumstances, because there is no guarantee at that point that a transfer of shares under the agreement will actually occur. Similarly, if the agreement does not specify the precise number or percentage of the shares that each purchaser is required to buy, use of this provision would not make sense because the exact interest of each purchaser will not be known at the time of the event triggering the buy-sell agreement. Thus, when the above provision is used, its application should be limited to circumstances under which the purchase of shares is mandatory, or the remainder of the agreement should be modified to provide for mandatory rather than optional purchase of the shares.

2. Provide that agreement will apply to all of following [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], Preamble (entity purchase); § 8D.211[2], Preamble (cross-purchase)]:

a. All shares of stock currently owned by shareholders.

b. All shares of stock of corporation acquired by any shareholder while party to agreement.

§ 8D.139 Miscellaneous Standard Contract Provisions

1. Specify applicable notice requirements [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 12.03 (entity purchase); § 8D.211[2], § 12.03 (cross-purchase)].

2. Include provision for payment of attorneys' fees [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 12.04 (entity purchase); § 8D.211[2], § 12.04 (cross- purchase)].

NOTE:

For a case discussing attorneys' fees in the context of share purchase agreement, see Thompson v. Miller (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 327, 329, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 905 . In that case, the minority shareholders in a closely-held corporation sued the majority shareholder and others, alleging that defendant committed a breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, and elder abuse in convincing plaintiffs to sell their shares pursuant to a share purchase agreement, which provided that the prevailing party in any dispute under the agreement would be entitled to reasonable attorney fees incurred in the dispute. The court of appeal held that defendant was entitled to recover an award of attorney fees because he used a provision of the agreement to defend against plaintiffs' claims, creating a "dispute" under the agreement.

3. Do not include any provision waiving duties of directors and majority shareholders to minority shareholders.

NOTE:

A waiver of corporate directors' and majority shareholders' fiduciary duties to minority shareholders in private close corporations is against public policy, and a contract provision in a buy-sell agreement purporting to effect such a waiver is void [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 (provision in buy-sell agreement purporting to waive any fiduciary duty with respect to fairness of overall consideration held void)].

4. Include severability clause [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 12.06 (entity purchase); § 8D.211[2], § 12.06 (cross-purchase)].

5. Specify governing law [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 12.07 (entity purchase); § 8D.211[2], § 12.07 (cross-purchase)].

6. Include "sole agreement" clause [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], § 12.08 (entity purchase); § 8D.211[2], § 12.08 (cross-purchase)].

7. Include appropriate signature blocks and line for date and place of execution.

§ 8D.150 Representing Multiple Parties to Agreement

1. If attorney represents more than one party to agreement, initial conflict of interest letter should identify those represented [for appropriate form, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business].

NOTE:

Clients commonly ask a single attorney to draft a corporate buy-sell agreement. In this situation, the attorney represents the corporation and at least two shareholders.

2. If attorney represents more than one party to agreement and actual or potential conflict exists which may be waived [see §§ 8D.13-8D.15], suitable waiver must be obtained [for form, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business].

NOTE:

Although, under the California Rules of Professional Conduct, it appears that an attorney may represent clients with actual or potential conflicting interests, provided each client gives its informed, written consent [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310(C)], California courts have held that joint representation is not permitted in litigation, if actual conflicts exist [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . However, if the conflict is merely potential, then with full disclosure to and informed consent of all clients, there may be multiple representation at a hearing or trial [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . Joint representation is also permitted, in a nonlitigation context, provided all parties give their informed, written consent [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

§ 8D.151 Agreement Confirming or Transmuting Character of Stock Subject to Agreement

NOTE:

All parties to a buy-sell agreement, as well as nonparty spouses and nonmarital partners, have an interest in establishing or ascertaining the property nature of the stock subject to the agreement. For example, non-owner shareholders will want to ensure the enforceable transfer of stock, as specified in the agreement, on the death or divorce of the owner shareholder. Owner shareholders (including those who are widowed, no longer married, or have nonmarital partners) will want to establish the community or separate property nature of the stock for purposes of management and control, as well as for income, estate and gift tax planning. Nonparty spouses and partners have similar interests. For further discussion of community property considerations, see § 8D.90.

1. Determine character of stock subject to agreement [see § 8D.90]:

a. Community property.

b. Separate property.

c. Quasi-community property.

d. Combination of (a)-(c).

2. If any shares are held as community property, obtain consent of shareholders' spouses to agreement [see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements for a spousal consent form].

3. If nonmarital partner who is not party to agreement has rights in stock, obtain consent of partner.

NOTE:

In the case of a nonmarital partner who is not a party to the agreement, any rights that person may have in the stock acquired by a party to the agreement is based on contract [Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 673-674, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106] . The attorney, therefore, should determine whether any such contract exists, establishing the ownership of the stock subject to the buy-sell agreement. Any spousal consent forms attached to the agreement may be modified to reflect the nature of ownership of the nonmarital partner.

CHAPTER 8D BUY-SELL AGREEMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. ENTITY PURCHASE AGREEMENT

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.200

§ 8D.200 Entity Purchase Buy-Sell Agreement--Not Funded by Insurance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a basic entity purchase agreement. For insurance funding provisions, see § 8D.220. For provisions providing for the administration of the agreement by a trustee, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

This form covers the purchase of a shareholder's shares by the corporation, or by the remaining shareholders if the corporation does not exercise its option to purchase all the offered shares [see [2], below, Section 3.08,] or is legally unable to do so [see [2], below, Section 5.02; see also § 8D.72] on the following events: the voluntary lifetime sale of shares [see [2], below, Article 3], the involuntary transfer of shares due to bankruptcy or assignment for the benefit of creditors [see [2], below, Article 4], and the shareholder's termination of employment, disability, retirement, or death [see [2], below, Articles 5-7].

Additional provisions may be added to this form, including a provision giving shareholders the right to encumber their stock [see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements], a consent to attorney representation despite potential conflicts of interest [see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business], or a spousal consent to the agreement for community property purposes [see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements].

For discussion of the business and tax considerations in selecting an entity purchase agreement over a cross- purchase agreement, see § 8D.13.

[b] Restrictions Applicable to New or Transferred Shares

This form makes no distinction between the shareholders who initially sign the agreement and subsequent transferees [see [2], below, Preamble]. The transferees should be required to execute an amendment to the agreement. The form provides, however, that a transferee's failure or refusal to sign an amendment does not relieve the transferee of any obligation or restriction under the agreement [see [2], below, Section 3.13]. If a trustee will administer the agreement, the trustee should be named as a party to the agreement, or made a party by an amendment to the agreement.

[c] Legend Requirement

This provision, requiring that a legend restricting transfer of the shares subject to the agreement be printed on the shares themselves, conforms to the statutory requirement [see Corp. Code § 418(a)(1); [2], below, Section 2.02] and ensures that any transferee will have notice that the shares are subject to a buy-sell agreement. The precise language of the legend condition is set forth in the agreement to specify the applicable transfer restrictions [see [2], below, Section 2.02]. If the required statement does not appear on the certificate, transfer restrictions imposed by the corporation will be unenforceable against a transferee without actual knowledge of the restrictions [Corp. Code § 418(b)]. Furthermore, a shareholder agreement (defined as a written agreement among all the shareholders of a close corporation [Corp. Code § 186]) must be filed with the secretary of the corporation for inspection by any prospective purchaser of shares [see Corp. Code § 300(b); see also [2], below, Section 2.02]. A transferee of shares covered by a shareholder agreement who has actual knowledge of the restrictions imposed by the agreement, or notice of those restrictions by a notation on the certificate, as provided by statute [see Corp. Code § 418], is bound by provisions of the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b)]. If the shares have been issued to the shareholders before the buy-sell agreement is executed, optional Section 2.03 requires the shareholders to present their certificates to the secretary of the corporation, who will then stamp on each certificate the legend conditions restricting transfer.

If the corporation issues uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)], the transfer restrictions must appear on the initial transaction statement and on subsequent written statements [Corp. Code § 418; see Corp. Code § 171.1 (definition)]. For further discussion of uncertificated securities, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

[d] Deposit of Share Certificates with Corporation

The optional paragraph [see [2], below, Section 2.04] providing that the shareholders deposit their share certificates and assignment forms with secretary of the corporation is designed to ensure against unauthorized transfers of shares. If the shareholders prefer to retain possession of their share certificates, this provision should be omitted.

[e] Permitted Transfers

A shareholder may want to have the right to transfer his or her shares to family members to reduce the shareholder's taxable estate or to equalize the income of family members [see [2], below, Section 3.01]. Whether such a transfer provision will interfere with the management and control of the business should be carefully considered before including it in the agreement.

[f] Restrictions on Voluntary Lifetime Transfers of Shares

This agreement provides that a shareholder may not sell his or her shares to a third party without offering them first to the corporation and then to the other shareholders [see [2], below, Article 3]. In an entity purchase agreement, the corporation, rather than the remaining shareholders, purchases the shareholder's stock [see § 8D.12]. However, because a corporation is prohibited from redeeming its shares unless it can meet certain financial tests when the triggering event occurs [Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503; see § 8D.72], it is prudent for a corporate buy-sell agreement to include a back-up cross-purchase provision requiring the remaining shareholders to purchase and shares the corporation is unable to redeem. Although the Internal Revenue Service has challenged this combination redemption and cross-purchase procedure because the redemption is not technically a termination of the shareholder's interest when it is followed by a cross-purchase, it has conceded that the sequence of events is irrelevant if both are clearly part of "an overall plan" [Rev. Rul. 75-447, 1975-2 C.B. 113 ; Rev. Rul. 77-226, 1977-2 C.B. 90 ; see § 8D.42].

If the corporation or other shareholders choose to exercise their option to purchase the shares, they are entitled to pay not the price offered by the third party, but the price specified in the agreement [see [2], below, Sections 3.07, 3.08]. This provision is necessary to fix the value of the shares for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(h); see also § 8D.61]. If the purchase price stated in a buy-sell agreement is not accepted for estate tax purposes, the decedent's shares will be assessed at their fair market value, which may be substantially higher than the value fixed by the buy-sell agreement [see I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(a),(f)].

Under the terms of this agreement, the corporation and the shareholders have the option, but not the obligation, to purchase the offered shares [see [2], below, Sections 3.07, 3.08]. These provisions may be modified to require the mandatory purchase by the corporation and/or the remaining shareholders, if the shareholders anticipate that they will not want to sell only a portion of their shares.

Alternative provisions of this agreement require that the purchase price be paid either in installments or in a lump sum [see [2], below, Section 3.11]. Shareholders should consider whether, without insurance funding, the corporation will be able to pay the purchase price in one lump sum without liquidating assets and, thus, jeopardizing its continuing existence after the withdrawal of one shareholder. Similarly, the remaining shareholders may be unable to provide the amount of cash necessary to make a lump sum payment. Even when life insurance is used to fund a corporation's purchase of a deceased shareholder's shares [see, e.g., § 8D.220], it may not be available to fund a lifetime purchase of shares. Permanent life insurance with a cash equity buildup feature may provide the funds for a lifetime purchase. Term life insurance, however, because it has does not build up a cash value, will provide funding only for purchase on death [see § 8D.71[e]].

This form specifies the terms for lifetime purchase when the payments will be in installments [see [2], below, Section 3.11]. It requires the purchaser to give the selling shareholder a percentage of the purchase price as a down payment, with the balance to be repaid with interest over a stated period of time, as provided in a negotiable promissory note. However, while installment payments provide some financial security to the seller, the payment obligations of the purchaser are general obligations, subject to prior claims of other creditors [see Jacobs, Back to Basics Post TRA- 76 Stock Interest Terminations in Closely Held Corporations, 36 N.Y.U. Corp. Tax. Inst. 3, 36 (1978)]. For a discussion of the tax consequences of installment payments, see [g], below.

If the shareholders opt for a lump sum payment, however, they should carefully consider all the circumstances and decide whether any potential hardship to the corporation and to the remaining shareholders is a risk that they are willing to bear.

[g] Tax Effect of Installment Payment Provisions

This agreement provides optional provisions for payment of the purchase price in installments [see [2], below, Sections 3.11, 5.06]. A corporation may use an installment note or debt financing to pay for stock that qualifies for sale or exchange treatment in a complete redemption [see I.R.C. § 302(b)(3)], without the stock attribution rules imputing constructive ownership of additional, unredeemed shares to the shareholder. These attribution rules may be waived for purposes of determining whether a complete redemption has taken place when payment is made by a note because the shareholder's only interest in the corporation following the sale of his or her stock is that of a creditor [see I.R.C. § 302(c)(2)(A)]. However, a shareholder's status as a creditor will be lost if the payments on the note are dependent on the corporation's future earnings, and are subordinate to the claims of the corporation's general creditors [Treas. Reg. § 1.302-4(d); see Rev. Rul. 77-467, 1077-2 C.B. 92].

For discussion of the deferral of income tax liability by using the installment method of reporting income, see § 8D.43[2].

[h] Obligations of Transferees

This essential provision [see [2], below, Section 3.13] ensures that the purposes of the agreement will not be defeated if the shares are transferred to persons other than the original parties to the agreement. The parties may, however, approve limited exceptions when all of the offered shares are not purchased by the corporation or by the shareholders [see [2], below, Section 3.10].

[i] Sale of Shares on Death of Shareholder

The drafter must determine whether to provide for the mandatory or optional purchase of the decedent's shares by the corporation. This agreement requires the corporation to purchase all of the shares of a deceased shareholder [see [2], below, Section 5.01]. However, if the corporation is legally unable to purchase all of the decedent's shares because it cannot pass the required statutory financial tests [Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see § 8D.72], the surviving shareholders are required to purchase any shares not purchased by the corporation, in proportion to their existing ownership interests [see [2], below, Section 5.02]. If the drafter determines that the optional purchase of shares first by the corporation and then by the surviving shareholders is preferable, this section should be modified accordingly [see [2], below, Articles 3, 4, 6, 7 (optional purchase on occurrence of events other than shareholder's death)].

If the corporation is required to purchase the shares, the corporation must have the necessary consideration. The funding considerations discussed in [f], above, related to lifetime purchases, are also relevant when the triggering event is the shareholder's death.

In the event of the death of a shareholder who owns any shares as community property, this section may be modified to provide for the purchase of the community property interest of the surviving spouse.

[j] Sale of Shares on Total Disability

If the corporation's business requires the active participation of all of its shareholders, the agreement should provide for the sale of a shareholder's shares when a shareholder is no longer able to participate [see Harmelin, Disability The Oft-Overlooked Hazard in Buy and Sell Agreements, 11 Prac. Law. 75 (May 1965)]. The term "disability" should be defined in the agreement to avoid later disputes over its meaning. This form defines disability as the determination of a physician [see [2], Section 6.02, below]. In addition, the term may include loss of a professional license when the shareholder requires that license to perform his or her duties in the corporation. For an example of a provision requiring sale if a shareholder becomes unable to practice his or her designated profession, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

[k] Sale on Termination of Employment

When all of the shareholders in a corporation are actively participating in the corporation's business, or if a shareholder owns shares only because of his or her employment with the corporation, it is important to provide for the disposition of a shareholder's shares when he or she leaves the business. The remaining shareholders ordinarily will not want a former employee to continue participating in the corporate business; and departing shareholders will usually want a ready market for their shares when the employment relationship ends. This provision requires a shareholder to offer to sell his or her shares on retirement, voluntary termination, or termination of employment for cause [see [2], Section 7.01, below]. Termination "for cause" is defined to avoid possible arbitrary termination of a shareholder for the sole purpose of acquiring his or her shares [see Note, Exercising Options to Repurchase Employee-Held Stock: A Question of Good Faith, 68 Yale L. J. 773 (1959); see also [2], Section 7.02, below]. For further discussion of termination for cause, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

[l] Tax Effect of Employment-Related Restrictions

Shares owned during employment that must be sold on termination of employment constitute property received in connection with the performance of services [see I.R.C. § 83(a)]. The receipt of property in connection with the performance of services results in the recognition of ordinary income in the year the shares are issued, on the excess of the fair market value of the shares over the amount paid for them [see I.R.C. § 83(a)]. If the shares are subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture or are nontransferable, recognition is deferred until they become transferable or the risk of forfeiture ceases [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. Shares subject to buy-sell provisions requiring the sale of the shares on termination of employment are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture to the extent that the purchaser is required to pay fair market value for them [see Treas. Reg. § 1.83-3(c)].

The shareholder may elect to include in gross income, for the taxable year in which the shares are received, the difference between the fair market value of the shares at the time of transfer and the amount paid for them [I.R.C. § 83(b)(1)]. The election must be made no later than 30 days after transfer [I.R.C. § 83(b)(2)]. If the election is made, any subsequent appreciation in the value of the shares is not taxable as compensation to the electing shareholder [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-2(a)].

[m] Formula for Determining Purchase Price

This agreement includes four alternate provisions for fixing the purchase price of the shares [see [2], Article 10, below]:

- Book value.
- Capitalization of earnings.
- Appraisal.
- Mutual agreement, periodically reviewed, with arbitration.

These are four of several formulas that may be used to determine the purchase price of shares subject to a buy-sell agreement [see § 8D.75[1]]. The most suitable valuation method depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular business; the valuation provisions included here are examples only, and may need to be tailored to the particular business at hand.

For example, capitalization of earnings determines the corporation's value by its continuing ability to earn profits, rather than by the worth of its assets, and assumes that future earnings will continue at least at the same rate as earnings during the time period used. This method, therefore, would not be useful if the deceased or selling shareholder were vital to the success of the business. Further, the value of shares determined by using the capitalization of earning method may vary dramatically, depending on the capitalization rate selected [see [2], alternate Section 10.02, below , using a rate of four times the average net profit] and the number of years used to determine the average net profit.

For further discussion of the valuation methods used in this form's alternative provisions, see § 8D.75.

This form assumes that the close or closely-held corporation is exempt from the qualification of its securities [see Corp. Code § 25102; see also § 8D.74[1]]. If the corporation does not obtain an exemption from securities qualification, it must also follow the pricing criteria set forth in the California Code of Regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8; § 8D.74[2]], and this form must be modified accordingly.

[n] Transfer of Title and Change in Shareholder Status

Section 8.03 of this form provides that a selling shareholder will remain a shareholder until payment of the consideration for the shares and transfer of the share certificates as provided in Section 8.01. The effect of this provision is to entitle the selling shareholder to continue to exercise the rights and privileges of a shareholder until the payment and endorsement have occurred. This provision merely restates the law as it would exist in the absence of such a provision, as announced by the California Supreme Court in Stephenson v. Drever [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] . In Stephenson, the court held that a buy-sell agreement is merely an executory contract to buy and sell personal property (i.e., an employee's shares) if and when a particular event (such as termination of employment) occurs. Unless the buy-sell agreement specifies or implies a different intention, a shareholder under such an executory contract is entitled to the benefits of ownership until delivery is made or tendered to the buyer [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1173-1174, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (holding that agreement at issue did not imply any intention by parties to deny shareholder his rights during the post-employment period used to determine share value)]. The Court in Stephenson v. Drever recommended that buy-sell agreements specify when shareholder status will terminate, noting that the inclusion of such a provision "one way or the other on this question in a buy-sell agreement would advance the purposes of the agreement" [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1175 (majority opinion), 1186 n.2 (dissenting opinion), 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] .

The rule discussed above, and the language of Section 8.03 of this form, tends to benefit the selling shareholder by permitting him or her to continue to exercise his or her rights, including the entitlement to dividends, while the buyout is in progress. Conversely, it can operate to the disadvantage of the corporation or remaining shareholders by increasing "the risk of disruption from a dissident, disaffected [shareholder]" during the buyout period [see Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1185 (dissenting opinion), 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] .

The Court in Stephenson v. Drever specifically indicated that a buy-sell agreement could expressly provide for termination of shareholder status upon immediately upon occurrence of the event triggering the buy-sell agreement [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1175 (majority opinion), 1186 n.2 (dissenting opinion), 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] . For further discussion, and a sample provision for immediate termination of shareholder status upon occurrence of a triggering event, see § 8D.230. When a provision such as the one in § 8D.230[2] is used, however, its application should be limited to circumstances under which the purchase of shares is mandatory rather than optional, or the remainder of the agreement [see, e.g., Sections 4.01, 7.01 of this form] should be modified to provide for mandatory rather than optional purchase of the shares [see discussion in § 8D.230[1]].

[o] Waiver of Duties to Minority Shareholders Void

A buy-sell agreement may not include a provision waiving the fiduciary duties of the minority shareholders in a private close corporation. Such a waiver is against public policy and void [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 (provision in buy-sell agreement purporting to waive any fiduciary duty with respect to fairness of overall consideration held void)].

If all of the offered shares are not purchased on such a priority basis, those shares remaining shall be allocated in one or more successive allocations to those Shareholders electing to purchase more than the number of offered shares for which they have a priority right, up to the number of shares specified in their respective notices to the Corporation, in the proportion that the number of shares held by each of them bears to the number of shares held by all the Shareholders electing to purchase offered shares.

10.03. Considerations in Making Appraisal. The appraisers shall consider the following factors in making their appraisals:

(a) The value of comparable companies, if known.

(b) The fair market value, or replacement value, as appropriate, of any real property, leasehold improvements, equipment, and furnishings and fixtures.

(c) The face amount of any accounts payable, or other corporate liabilities.

(d) The face amount of any accounts receivable, with a reasonable reserve for bad debts.

10.04. Cost of Determination. The Corporation shall pay the expenses in determining the valuation under this Article.

10.05. Binding Nature of Determination. The value of the shares computed according to this Article is binding on all persons.

[Or, if purchase price is fixed by agreement, to be reviewed periodically (with arbitration, if needed), include the following versions of Sections 10.01 through 10.04:]

10.01. Purchase Price Set by Agreement, Periodically Reviewed. The purchase price of the shares subject to this Agreement shall be the value of the shares set by mutual agreement of the Shareholders. The initial value of the corporation is _____[specify dollar value or the dollar amount stated in Exhibit _____]; the initial value of each share is _____[specify dollar value of each share or the dollar amount stated in Exhibit _____], which equals the total value of the Corporation divided by the number of shares outstanding. By _____[date, e.g., March 15th] of each year, the Shareholders shall, by mutual agreement, revalue the Corporation and its shares. This fair market value of the Corporation and its shares shall be the agreed on value until another value is either agreed on or otherwise established as provided in this Agreement. Any mutually agreed on value shall be noted in a timely manner in the Corporation's minute book.

10.02. Arbitration. If the Shareholders have not agreed on the purchase price, as required by Section 10.01, within _____[specify time period, e.g., two years] prior to the occurrence of an event requiring agreement on the purchase price, the selling Shareholder (or the Shareholder's successor in interest) and the other Shareholders shall have a period of _____[specify time period, e.g., 21 days] after occurrence of the event requiring an agreement on the purchase price within which to agree on the purchase price for the selling Shareholder's shares. If they cannot come to agreement within that time, the purchase price shall be determined by arbitration. If the selling Shareholder and the other Shareholders cannot agree on the selection of an arbitrator, then each shall appoint his or her own arbitrator. If these two arbitrators cannot agree on a purchase price, they shall appoint a third arbitrator, and the decision of the majority shall establish the purchase price. The arbitration shall be governed by the rules of the American Arbitration Association. For the purposes of this section, "event requiring agreement on the purchase price" means any of the following: the act of seeking the consent of the Shareholders to a sale, assignment, transfer, or other disposition of shares, or the giving of a Notice of Proposed Sale as provided in Section 3.02; the involuntary transfer of shares under Section 4.01; the death of a Shareholder under Section 5.01; the certification by a physician that a Shareholder is totally disabled as provided in Sections 6.01 and 6.02; or the termination of a Shareholder's employment with the Corporation for any of the reasons specified in Section 7.01.

10.03. Cost of Determination. The Corporation shall pay the expenses in determining the valuation under this Article.

10.04. Binding Nature of Determination. The value of the shares computed according to this Article is binding on all persons.

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.210

§ 8D.210 Cross-Purchase Buy-Sell Agreement- Not Funded by Insurance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a basic cross-purchase buy-sell agreement. For insurance provisions, see § 8D.221; for provisions providing for the administration of the agreement by a trustee, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

This form covers the purchase of a shareholder's shares by the remaining shareholders on the voluntary lifetime sale of shares [see [2], Article 3, below], the involuntary transfer of shares due to bankruptcy or assignment for the benefit of creditors [see [2], Article 4, below], and the shareholder's termination of employment, disability, retirement, or death [see [2], Articles 5-7 below].

Additional provisions may be added to this form, including a provision giving shareholders the right to encumber their stock [see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements], a consent to attorney representation despite potential conflicts of interest [see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business], or a spousal consent to the agreement for community property purposes [see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements].

For discussion of the business and tax considerations in selecting a cross-purchase agreement over an entity purchase agreement, see § 8D.13.

[b] Restrictions Applicable to New or Transferred Shares

This form makes no distinction between the shareholders who initially sign the agreement and subsequent transferees [see [2], Preamble, below]. The transferees should be required to execute an amendment to the agreement. The form provides, however, that a transferee's failure or refusal to sign an amendment does not relieve the transferee of any obligation or restriction under the agreement [see [2], Section 3.13, below].

Although, under a cross-purchase agreement, the corporation is not a necessary party, some practitioners believe that the corporation should always be a party to the agreement to protect against any corporate actions, including the subsequent issuance of shares not subject to the agreement, that might defeat the purposes of the agreement. This agreement is drafted to include the corporation. If the corporation is to be omitted as a party, the Preamble, signature block, and other relevant references should be modified accordingly. If a trustee will administer the agreement, the trustee should be named as a party to the agreement, or made a party by an amendment to the agreement.

[c] Legend Requirement

This provision requiring that a legend restricting transfer of the shares subject the agreement be printed on the shares themselves conforms to the statutory requirement [see Corp. Code § 418(a)(1); [2], Section 2.02, below] and ensures that any transferee will have notice that the shares are subject to a buy-sell agreement. The precise language of the legend condition is set forth in this agreement to specify the applicable transfer restrictions [see [2], Section 2.02, below]. If the required statement that the shares are subject to restrictions on transfer does not appear on the certificate, transfer restrictions imposed by the corporation will be unenforceable against a transferee without actual knowledge of the restrictions [Corp. Code § 418(b)]. Furthermore, a shareholder agreement (defined as a written agreement among all the shareholders of a close corporation [Corp. Code § 186]) must be filed with the secretary of the corporation for inspection by any prospective purchaser of shares [see Corp. Code § 300(b); see also [2], Section 2.02, below]. A transferee of shares covered by a shareholder agreement who has actual knowledge of the restrictions imposed by the agreement, or notice of those restrictions by a notation on the certificate as provided by statute [see Corp. Code § 418, is bound by provisions of the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

If the shares have been issued to the shareholders before the buy-sell agreement is executed, optional Section 2.03 requires the shareholders to present their certificates to the secretary of the corporation, who will then stamp on each certificate the legend conditions restricting transfer.

If the corporation issues uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)], the transfer restrictions must appear on the initial transaction statement and on subsequent written statements [Corp. Code § 418; see Corp. Code § 171.1 (definition)]. For further discussion of uncertificated securities, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

[d] Deposit of Share Certificates with Corporation

The optional paragraph providing that the shareholders deposit their share certificates and assignment forms with the secretary of the corporation is designed to ensure against unauthorized transfers of shares. If the shareholders prefer to retain possession of their share certificates, this provision should be omitted.

[e] Permitted Transfers

A shareholder may want to have the right to transfer his or her shares to family members to reduce the shareholder's taxable estate, or to equalize the income of family members. Whether such a transfer provision will interfere with the management and control of the business should be carefully considered before including it in the agreement.

[f] Restrictions on Voluntary Lifetime Transfers of Shares

This agreement provides that a shareholder may not sell his or her shares to a third party without offering them first to the other shareholders [see [2], Article 3, below]. Under a cross-purchase plan, the shareholder's stock is purchased directly from the shareholder or the shareholder's estate by the remaining shareholders in proportion to their existing ownership interests [see § 8D.12].

If the other shareholders choose to exercise their option to purchase the shares, they are entitled to pay the price specified in the agreement [see Sections 3.07, 3.08 of form], and not the price offered by the third party. This provision is necessary to fix the value of the shares for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(h); see also § 8D.61]. If the purchase price stated in a buy-sell agreement is not accepted for estate tax purposes, the decedent's shares will be assessed at their fair market value, which may be substantially higher than the value fixed by the buy-sell agreement [see I.R.C. § 2703; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-2(a),(f)].

Under the terms of this agreement, the shareholders have the option, but not the obligation, to purchase the offered shares [see Sections 3.07, 3.08 of form]. These provisions may be modified to require the mandatory purchase by the remaining shareholders, if the shareholders anticipate that they will not want to sell only a portion of their shares.

Alternative provisions of this agreement require that the purchase price be paid either in installments or in a lump sum [see Section 3.11 of form]. Shareholders should consider whether, without insurance funding, they will be able to pay the purchase price in one lump sum. Even when life insurance is used to fund the surviving shareholders' purchase of a deceased shareholder's shares [see, e.g., §§ 8D.220, § 8D.221], it may not be available to fund a lifetime purchase of shares. Permanent life insurance with a cash equity buildup feature may provide the funds for a lifetime purchase. Term life insurance, however, because it has does not build up a cash value, will provide funding only for purchase on death [see § 8D.71[e]].

This form specifies the terms for lifetime purchase when the payments will be in installments [see Section 3.11 of form]. It requires the purchaser to give the selling shareholder a percentage of the purchase price as a down payment, with the balance to be repaid with interest over a stated period of time, as provided in a negotiable promissory note. However, while installment payments provide some financial security to the seller, the payment obligations of the purchaser are general obligations, subject to prior claims of other creditors [see Jacobs, Back to Basics Post TRA- 76 Stock Interest Terminations in Closely Held Corporations, 36 N.Y.U. Corp. Tax. Inst. 3, 36 (1978)]. For a discussion of the tax consequences of installment payments, see [g], below.

If the shareholders opt for a lump sum payment, however, they should carefully consider all the circumstances and decide whether any potential hardship to the remaining shareholders is a risk that they are willing to bear.

[g] Tax Effect of Installment Payment Provisions

This agreement provides optional provisions for payment of the purchase price in installments [see, e.g., Sections 3.11, 5.06 of form]. A corporation may use an installment note or debt financing to pay for stock that qualifies for sale or exchange treatment in a complete redemption [see I.R.C. § 302(b)(3)], without the stock attribution rules imputing constructive ownership of additional, unredeemed shares to the shareholder. These attribution rules may be waived for purposes of determining whether a complete redemption has taken place when payment is made by a note because the shareholder's only interest in the corporation following the sale of his or her stock is that of a creditor [see I.R.C. § 302(c)(2)(A)]. However, a shareholder's status as a creditor will be lost if the payments on the note are dependent on the corporation's future earnings, and are subordinate to the claims of the corporation's general creditors [Treas. Reg. § 1.302-4(d); see Rev. Rul. 77-467, 1077-2 C.B. 92].

For discussion of the deferral of income tax liability by using the installment method of reporting income, see § 8D.43[2].

[h] Obligations of Transferees

This essential provision ensures that the purposes of the agreement will not be defeated if the shares are transferred to persons other than the original parties to the agreement. The parties may, however, approve limited exceptions when all of the offered shares are not purchased by the corporation or by the shareholders [see Section 3.10 of form].

[i] Sale of Shares on Death of Shareholder

The drafter must determine whether to provide for the mandatory or optional purchase of the decedent's shares by the surviving shareholders. This agreement requires the surviving shareholders to purchase all of the shares of any deceased shareholder, in proportion to their existing ownership interests. Their obligation is joint and several [see Section 5.02 of form]. If the drafter determines that the optional purchase of shares by the surviving shareholders is preferable, this section should be modified accordingly [see Articles 3, 4, 6, 7 (optional purchase on occurrence of events other than shareholder's death)].

If the surviving shareholders are required to purchase the shares, they must have the necessary consideration. The funding considerations discussed in [f], above, related to lifetime purchases, are also relevant when the triggering event is the shareholder's death.

In the event of the death of a shareholder who owns any shares as community property, this section may be modified to provide for the purchase of the community property interest of the surviving spouse.

This section may also be altered to provide for the termination of the agreement between the surviving shareholders after the death of the first shareholder to die, if, for example, the shareholders anticipate that the business could not effectively continue under these circumstances.

[j] Sale of Shares on Total Disability

If the corporation's business requires the active participation of all of its shareholders, the agreement should provide for the sale of a shareholder's shares when a shareholder is no longer able to participate [see Harmelin, Disability The Oft-Overlooked Hazard in Buy and Sell Agreements, 11 Prac. Law. 75 (May 1965)]. The term "disability" should be defined in the agreement to avoid later disputes over its meaning. This form defines disability as the determination of a physician. In addition, the term may include loss of a professional license when the shareholder requires that license to perform his or her duties in the corporation. For an example of a provision requiring sale if a shareholder becomes unable to practice his or her designated profession, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

[k] Sale on Termination of Employment

When all of the shareholders in a corporation are actively participating in the corporation's business, or if a shareholder owns shares only because of his or her employment with the corporation, it is important to provide for the disposition of a shareholder's shares when he or she leaves the business. The remaining shareholders ordinarily will not want a former employee to continue participating in the corporate business; and departing shareholders will usually want a ready market for their shares when the employment relationship ends. This provision requires a shareholder to offer to sell his or her shares on retirement, voluntary termination, or termination of employment for cause. Termination "for cause" is defined to avoid possible arbitrary termination of a shareholder for the purpose of acquiring his or her shares [see Note, Exercising Options to Repurchase Employee-Held Stock: A Question of Good Faith, 68 Yale L. J. 773 (1959)]. For further discussion of termination for cause, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

[l] Tax Implication of Employment-Related Restrictions

Shares owned during employment that must be sold on termination of employment constitute property received in connection with the performance of services [see I.R.C. § 83(a)]. The receipt of property in connection with the performance of services results in the recognition of ordinary income in the year the shares are issued, on the excess of the fair market value of the shares over the amount paid for them [see I.R.C. § 83(a)]. If the shares are subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture or are nontransferable, recognition is deferred until they become transferable or the risk of forfeiture ceases [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. Shares subject to buy-sell provisions requiring the sale of the shares on termination of employment are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture to the extent that the purchaser is required to pay fair market value for them [see Treas. Reg. § 1.83-3(c)].

The shareholder may elect to include in gross income for the taxable year in which the shares are received the difference between the fair market value of the shares at the time of transfer and the amount paid for them [I.R.C. § 83(b)(1)]. The election must be made no later than 30 days after transfer [I.R.C. § 83(b)(2)]. If the election is made, any subsequent appreciation in the value of the shares is not taxable as compensation to the electing shareholder [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-2(a)].

[m] Formula for Determining Purchase Price

This agreement includes four alternate provisions for fixing the purchase price of the shares:

- Book value [see § 8D.75[2]].
- Capitalization of earnings [see § 8D.75[3]].
- Appraisal [see § 8D.75[5]].
- Mutual agreement, periodically reviewed, with arbitration [see § 8D.75[4]].

These are four of several formulas that may be used to determine the purchase price of shares subject to a buy-sell agreement [see § 8D.75[1]]. The most suitable valuation method depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular business; the valuation provisions included here are examples only and may need to be tailored to the particular business at hand.

For example, capitalization of earnings determines the corporation's value by its continuing ability to earn profits, rather than by the worth of its assets, and assumes that future earnings will continue at least at the same rate as earnings during the time period used. This method, therefore, would not be useful if the deceased or selling shareholder were vital to the success of the business. Further, the value of shares determined by using the capitalization of earning method may vary dramatically, depending on the capitalization rate selected [see Section 8.02 of form, using a rate of four times the average net profit] and the number of years used to determine the average net profit.

For further discussion of the valuation methods used in this form's alternative provisions, see § 8D.75.

This form assumes that the close or closely-held corporation is exempt from the qualification of its securities [see Corp. Code § 25102; § 8D.74[1]]. If the corporation does not obtain an exemption from securities qualification, it must also follow the pricing criteria set forth in the California Code of Regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8; § 8D.74[2]], and this form must be modified accordingly.

[n] Transfer of Title and Change in Shareholder Status

Section 8.03 of this form provides that a selling shareholder will remain a shareholder until payment of the consideration for the shares and transfer of the share certificates as provided in Section 8.01. For a discussion of the importance and effect of this provision, the California Supreme Court's decision in Stephenson v. Drever [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] , and the modification of this provision to provide for a termination of shareholder rights and status immediately upon occurrence of the event triggering the buy-sell agreement, see § 8D.200[1][n]. For a provision terminating shareholder status immediately on occurrence of the triggering event, and discussion of the use of such a provision as well as modifications to this form in the event that it is used, see § 8D.230.

[o] Termination of Agreement

If this agreement is modified to provide for termination on the death of the first shareholder to die [see [h], above], the section governing termination of the agreement should be modified as well.

[p] Waiver of Duties to Minority Shareholders Void

A buy-sell agreement may not include a provision waiving the fiduciary duties of the minority shareholders in a private close corporation. Such a waiver is against public policy and void [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 (provision in buy-sell agreement purporting to waive any fiduciary duty with respect to fairness of overall consideration held void)].

ARTICLE 2. ENFORCEMENT

2.01. Restriction on Transfer. To accomplish the purposes of this Agreement, any transfer, sale, assignment, hypothecation, encumbrance, or alienation of any of the shares of the Corporation, other than according to the terms of this Agreement, is void and transfers no right, title, or interest in or to those shares to the purported transferee, buyer, assignee, pledgee, or encumbrance holder. [Continue with the following:]

ARTICLE 3. VOLUNTARY LIFETIME TRANSFER OF SHARES

3.01. Permitted Transfers. Despite any provisions in this Agreement to the contrary, each Shareholder has the right to transfer shares subject to this Agreement to [specify permitted transferees, e.g., another Shareholder, or a trust for the benefit of any other Shareholder]. A permitted transferee shall hold the transferred shares subject to all the provisions of this Agreement, as provided in Section 3.07.

3.02. Notice of Proposed Sale. Except as provided in Section 3.01, no Shareholder shall sell, assign, transfer, or otherwise dispose of any of his or her shares in the Corporation, or of any interest in those shares, without first obtaining the prior written consent of all other Shareholders. This prior written consent is unnecessary if the transferor gives written notice ("Notice of Proposed Sale") to the other Shareholders in the manner prescribed in Section 12.03. The notice must specify:

(1) The name and address of each proposed transferee.

(2) The number of shares, or the interest in shares, to be transferred.

(3) The price per share.

(4) The terms of the proposed sale, assignment, or transfer.

3.03. Purchase by Remaining Shareholders. The remaining Shareholders have the option, but not the obligation, to purchase the offered shares at the price determined according to Article 10 of this Agreement. Within _____[e.g., 20] days after the date the selling Shareholder gives to him or her the Notice of Proposed Sale, any Shareholder who desires to purchase all or a portion of the offered shares shall serve written notice on the Secretary of the Corporation of the Shareholder's election to purchase a specified number of the offered shares.

3.04. Excessive Offers to Purchase. (a) If the total number of offered shares the remaining Shareholders have elected to purchase exceeds the number of offered shares specified in the Notice of Proposed Sale, each of the remaining Shareholders shall have a priority right to purchase, up to the number of shares specified in his or her notice to the Corporation, described in Section 3.03, the same proportion of the offered shares as the number of shares already owned by that Shareholder bears to the total number of shares in the Corporation already owned by the remaining Shareholders electing to purchase offered shares. If all of the offered shares are not purchased on such a priority basis, those shares remaining shall be allocated in one or more successive allocations to those Shareholders electing to purchase more than the number of offered shares for which they have a priority right, up to the number of shares specified in their respective notices to the Corporation, in the proportion that the number of shares held by each of them bears to the number of shares held by all the Shareholders electing to purchase offered shares.

(b) Within _____[e.g., five] days after the deadline for receipt by the Secretary of the Corporation of the written notice of election, described in Section 3.03, the Secretary of the Corporation shall notify each of the remaining Shareholders electing to purchase shares of the number of offered shares he or she may purchase, the date set for the purchase of these offered shares, and the terms and conditions of the purchase. Each Shareholder must meet the terms and conditions of the purchase within _____[e.g., 10] days after the Shareholder receives the Secretary's notification. Transfer of any payment for the offered shares shall occur as provided in Section 3.06.

3.05. Default of Option by Shareholders. If the remaining Shareholders do not purchase all the shares specified in the Notice of Proposed Sale, the selling Shareholder is under no obligation to sell any of the offered shares to any of the remaining Shareholders. Instead, the selling Shareholder may sell them to the proposed transferee specified in the Notice of Proposed Sale on the terms specified in that notice. The transferee will hold the shares _____[subject to or free of] the provisions of this Agreement. C. Life Insurance Funding Provisions

§ 8D.220 Life Insurance Funding Provisions for Entity Purchase Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form includes provisions for funding an entity purchase agreement with life insurance. These provisions may be inserted, when appropriate, into an entity purchase agreement. For an example of a basic entity purchase agreement, see § 8D.200. For an example and discussion of an entity purchase agreement for a professional corporation that includes an insurance funding provision, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

If an agreement funded with life insurance is administered by a trustee, the corporation remains the owner of the policies. However, the trustee is then the designated beneficiary. For further discussion of the use of a trustee in Shareholder agreements, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

[b] Life Insurance Funding

[i] Advantages

Life insurance funding provides a corporation or its shareholders with ready cash to meet their obligations under the agreement. Life insurance may be especially useful during the early years of the corporation's existence, when other funds may not be readily available for share purchase in the event of a shareholder's death [see Sarner, Uses of Life Insurance in Buy-Sell Agreements: Stockholder-Corporation Obligations in Buy-Sell Agreements, 24 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 591 (1966)]. Permanent insurance with a cash equity buildup feature may provide the funds for a lifetime purchase of shares upon such events as a shareholder's disability, retirement, desire to sell, or termination from employment, although term life insurance, however, will provide funding only for purchase on death [see § 8D.71[2][d]]. Without insurance funding, a shareholder selling shares during his or her lifetime must often accept promissory notes and rely on the financial responsibility of the purchaser [see Sexton, Providing Security for the Outgoing Stockholder and Avoiding Tax Disadvantages to Selling and Remaining Stockholders, 24 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 555, 560 (1966)].

Types of life insurance products and alternate insurance possibilities are discussed in § 8D.71.

[ii] Potential Disadvantages of Funding Entity Purchase Agreement with Life Insurance

The corporation generally is not taxed on the life insurance proceeds it receives on the death of a shareholder [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)], whether the proceeds used to purchase the decedent's stock are paid to the corporation, which then pays them to the decedent's estate, or to the shareholder's estate in satisfaction of the corporation's obligation to purchase the decedent's stock [see Victor G. Mushro (1968) 50 T.C. 43 , nonacq. 1970-2 C.B. xxii; § 8D.48 [2]]. However, the corporation's receipt of life insurance proceeds may be subject to alternative minimum tax [see I.R.C. § 55; § 8D.48[3]].

In addition, an accumulated earnings tax penalty [see I.R.C. § 531 et seq.] may be imposed on the corporation if the entity purchase agreement is funded by permanent insurance that generates substantial cash surrender values [I.R.C. § 535(a); see § 8D.48[4]]].

Further, if the corporation receives the insurance proceeds and directly purchases the decedent's shares in satisfaction of the remaining shareholders' obligations under the agreement, the amount used to satisfy each shareholder's obligation may be taxable to the shareholder as a constructive dividend [Wall v. United States (4th Cir. 1947) 164 F.2d 462, 464 ; see Holsey v. Commissioner (3d Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 865, 868-869 ; Rev. Rul. 58-614, 1958-2 C.B. 920 ; see also § 8D.49[2]]. Therefore, caution should be exercised in drafting the agreement to avoid the realization of taxable income by the shareholders.

For discussion of the income and estate tax consequences of funding entity purchase agreements with life insurance, see §§ 8D.48, 8D.60.

PART IV. FORMS
C. Life Insurance Funding Provisions

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.221

§ 8D.221 Life Insurance Funding Provisions for Cross-Purchase Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form includes provisions for funding a cross-purchase agreement with life insurance. These provisions may be inserted, when appropriate, into a cross-purchase agreement. For an example of a basic cross-purchase agreement, see § 8D.210.

If an agreement funded with life insurance is administered by a trustee, the corporation remains the owner of the policies. However, the trustee is then the designated beneficiary. For further discussion of the use of a trustee in shareholder agreements, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporation Shareholder Agreements .

[b] Life Insurance Funding

[i] Advantages

Life insurance funding provides a corporation or its shareholders with ready cash to meet their obligations under the agreement. Life insurance may be especially useful during the early years of the corporation's existence, when other funds may not be readily available for share purchase in the event of a shareholder's death [see Sarner, Uses of Life Insurance in Buy-Sell Agreements: Stockholder-Corporation Obligations in Buy-Sell Agreements, 24 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 591 (1966)]. Permanent insurance with a cash equity buildup feature may provide the funds for a lifetime purchase of shares on such events as a shareholder's disability, retirement, desire to sell, or termination from employment, although term life insurance will provide funding only for purchase on death [see § 8D.71[2][d]]. Without insurance funding, a shareholder selling shares during his or her lifetime must often accept promissory notes and rely on the financial responsibility of the purchaser [see Sexton, Providing Security for the Outgoing Stockholder and Avoiding Tax Disadvantages to Selling and Remaining Stockholders, 24 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 555, 560 (1966)].

Types of life insurance products and alternate insurance possibilities are discussed in § 8D.71.

[ii] Potential Disadvantages of Funding Cross-Purchase Agreement with Life Insurance

Although the proceeds of an insurance policy generally are not includable in the gross income of the recipient [I.R.C. § 101(a)(1)], if there has been a previous transfer of the policy to the shareholder, the proceeds of the policy exceeding the amount paid for transfer and subsequent premiums and other amounts paid by the transferee will be subject to ordinary income tax on the death of the insured shareholder, unless the transfer is made to the person whose life is insured by the policy or to the corporation [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2); see § 8D.13[3][b]]. Such a result occurs when the recipient was not the original purchaser of the policy, but purchased it from another shareholder who died or left the corporation. This form avoids this problem by allowing remaining shareholders to purchase from a departing or deceased shareholder only those policies on his or her own life [see Section 1.07, below]. Before modifying this paragraph, the drafter should carefully consider the tax consequences of transfers of insurance policies.

For further discussion of the income and estate tax consequences of funding cross-purchase agreements with life insurance, see §§ 8D.49, 8D.60[4].

Life Insurance Funding Provisions for Cross-Purchase Agreement

PURCHASE OF INSURANCE ON SHAREHOLDERS' LIVES

1.01. Purchase Obligation. To assure that all or a substantial part of the purchase price for the shares of a deceased shareholder will be available immediately in cash upon his or her death, each Shareholder shall purchase and maintain in full force and effect a life insurance policy on the life of each other Shareholder in the amounts specified in Exhibit _____, which is attached to and made part of this Agreement. Each life insurance policy is listed in Exhibit _____; and any additional life insurance policies acquired under this Agreement shall also be listed in Exhibit _____ and shall be subject to the terms of this Agreement.

1.02. Shareholders as Beneficiaries of Policies. Each Shareholder shall be the beneficiary of all policies procured by him or her on the life of the other Shareholders and made subject to this Agreement.

1.03. Shareholders as Owners of Policies. Each Shareholder shall be the owner of all policies purchased by him or her on the life of the other Shareholders, and each Shareholder agrees to pay the premiums on the policies owned by him or her as they become due for as long as this Agreement is in effect. Each Shareholder shall give proof of payment of each premium on a policy owned by him or her to the insured at least _____[e.g., 10] days before the due date of each premium. If any premium is not paid within _____[e.g., 10] days after its due date, the insured Shareholder shall have the right to pay that premium and be reimbursed by the Owner-Shareholder.

1.04. Shareholders' Rights under Policies. Each Shareholder agrees that he or she will not exercise any of the rights, privileges, and benefits accruing under the policies owned by him or her except as otherwise provided in this Agreement, or assign, encumber, borrow against, or otherwise dispose of the policies without first obtaining the written consent of the insured Shareholder. Each Shareholder authorizes the insurance carrier insuring the life of a Shareholder to give the insured, on his or her written request, any information with respect to the status of the policies on his or her life.

1.05. Additional or Substituted Insurance. Each Shareholder shall have the right to procure additional policies on the lives of the other Shareholders and make those policies subject to this Agreement in order to keep the value of the life insurance policies subject to this Agreement substantially equal to the value of the shares subject to this Agreement. Any additional policies shall be owned by the Shareholder procuring them and shall designate that Shareholder the beneficiary of the policy. Other policies may be substituted for any policies subject to this Agreement, and any policies subject to this Agreement may be withdrawn. Any addition, substitution, or withdrawal of policies shall be endorsed and signed by the Corporation and Shareholders and attached to this Agreement as Exhibit _____.

1.06. Election to Terminate in Absence of Insurance. The Shareholders agree that if at any time there is no insurance subject to this Agreement on the life of any Shareholder who is a party to the Agreement, or if any insurance made subject to this Agreement is impaired in value so that it would not provide at any time proceeds at least equal to _____[specify percentage, e.g., 100] percent of the face amount of that insurance, any Shareholder may at that time elect to terminate this Agreement by giving written notice to that effect to the other Shareholders in the manner prescribed in _____[notice provision elsewhere in agreement, e.g. (for agreement in § 8D.210[2]) Section 12.03].

1.07. Disposition of Unneeded Insurance Policies. On the death of any Shareholder, each of the surviving Shareholders shall have the option for _____[e.g., 60] days after the date of death, to purchase the policy or policies of life insurance on his or her own life owned by the estate of the deceased Shareholder. Each Shareholder shall also have the right to purchase the policies on his or her own life within _____[e.g., 60] days after the sale or transfer of all of that Shareholder's shares in the Corporation during his or her lifetime, as provided in this Agreement, or after termination of this Agreement, as provided in _____[e.g. (for agreement in § 8D.210[2]), Article 11]. This option shall be exercised by paying in cash to the Shareholder who owns the policy, or to the decedent's estate, a purchase price equal to the cash surrender value of the policy, reduced by any unpaid loans made against the policy. If the option is not exercised within _____[e.g., 60] days after the event permitting this purchase, the policy owner may surrender the policy for its cash value or dispose of it in any other lawful manner.

[Add following additional exhibit at end of agreement:]

4-8D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 8D.230

§ 8D.230 Provision for Termination of Seller's Rights as Shareholder Immediately Upon Occurrence of Event Triggering Buy-Sell Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision specifying that a selling shareholder's status as a shareholder will terminate immediately on occurrence of an event triggering a buy-sell agreement, rather than at the subsequent point in time when the consideration for the shares is paid and the shares are actually transferred. This form is intended to be substituted for Section 8.03 of the form in § 8D.201. When this form is used, other modifications to the complete agreement may also be appropriate [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], Sections 4.01, 7.01; § 8D.210[2], Sections 4.01, 7.01, and discussion below]. In the absence of a provision such as this form, legal title to the shares ordinarily will not pass to the purchaser until consideration is paid or delivery is made to the buyer; thus the seller will remain a shareholder, and may exercise all the rights and privileges of a shareholder, until that time [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1173-1174, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 ; see § 8D.200[2], Section 8.03 of Form].

Use of a provision such as this form makes sense only when the purchase of shares under a buy-sell agreement is mandatory. When the agreement provides only for a right-- but not a duty-- on the part of the corporation or other shareholders to purchase the shares [see, e.g., § 8D.200[2], Sections 4.01, 7.01; § 8D.210[2], Sections 4.01, 7.01], it would be inappropriate to provide for an immediate termination of shareholder status on occurrence of the event triggering the provisions of the buy-sell agreement, because there is no guarantee at that point that a transfer of shares under the agreement will actually occur. Similarly, if the agreement does not specify the precise number or percentage of the shares that each purchaser is required to buy, use of this provision would not make sense because the exact interest of each purchaser will not be known at the time of the event triggering the buy-sell agreement. Thus, when this provision is used, its application should be limited to circumstances under which the purchase of shares is mandatory, or the remainder of the agreement should be modified to provide for mandatory rather than optional purchase of the shares.

[b] Practical Effect of Form

This form benefits the corporation rather than the selling shareholder. Since the shareholder's status as such is terminated immediately upon occurrence of the event triggering the buy-sell agreement, the selling shareholder thereafter will have no say in the management of the corporation and will have less leverage against potential neglect or overreaching by management [see Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1177-1178, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] . Conversely, the corporation will be afforded greater protection against "the risk of disruption from a dissident, disaffected ex-[shareholder]" [see Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1185 (dissenting opinion), 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] .

[c] Legal Effect of Form

The California Supreme Court has clearly stated that buy-sell agreements may provide that a seller's rights and status as a shareholder terminate immediately upon occurrence of an event triggering the provisions of the agreement [Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1175 n. 5, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301] . What is somewhat less clear, however, is the exact legal status of the ex-shareholder between the time of occurrence of the event triggering the buy-sell agreement and the time when the consideration is paid for the shares and actual transfer of those shares occurs. Specifically, it is not entirely clear whether, in this situation, title would actually pass upon occurrence of the triggering event, rendering the former shareholder at that point simply a creditor of the corporation [see Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1186 (dissenting opinion), 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (shareholder should have exercised rights as a creditor of corporation)], or whether the shareholder remains a shareholder but without a shareholder's rights [see Stephenson v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1177, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (stating that such status would be an "anomaly" and noting that some rights of shareholders cannot be limited by corporation's articles or bylaws)]. With this uncertainty in mind, this form intentionally fails to specify whether or not title to the shares will actually pass on occurrence of the triggering event, instead stating merely that the shareholder's rights as such will cease at that time. In addition, the form contains language designed to limit its application in the event it should be held that anything in the provision conflicts with any other provision of law respecting shareholder rights.

[2] Form

Provision for Termination of Seller's Rights as Shareholder Immediately Upon Occurrence of Event Triggering Buy-Sell Agreement

Termination of Shareholder Status. Upon _____[the occurrence of any event that will result in a transfer of shares under this agreement or specify particular event(s) triggering repurchase obligation under buy-sell agreement, e.g., Shareholder's retirement or termination of Shareholder's employment with the corporation], Shareholder's status as a shareholder in the corporation thereupon shall immediately terminate, and Shareholder's rights and privileges as a shareholder in the corporation shall immediately cease. Thereafter, during the time between _____[event triggering purchase and sale obligation under buy-sell agreement, e.g., the event resulting in transfer of the shares under this agreement or the Shareholder's retirement or termination of Shareholder's employment with the corporation] and the actual transfer of Shareholder's shares to Shareholder's successor or successor(s) as provided in this agreement, Shareholder shall be entitled to receive only the value of _____[his or her] shares as determined under the provisions of this agreement, and shall no longer be entitled to participate in the corporation or enjoy any of the rights and privileges of a shareholder, including but not limited to the rights to participate in corporate affairs and to receive dividends declared after _____[event triggering purchase and sale obligation under buy-sell agreement, e.g., the event resulting in transfer of the shares under this agreement or the Shareholder's retirement or termination of Shareholder's employment with the corporation]. This provision shall be inapplicable if, and only to the extent that, it is in conflict with any applicable provision or provisions of law defining or respecting the rights and privileges of shareholders, and, in the event of its partial invalidity, this provision shall continue to apply to the extent that it is not invalid under the applicable provision or provisions of law.

This chapter covers corporate distributions to shareholders, including cash and property dividends, share redemptions, and share repurchases. It also discusses the related topics of share dividends and assessments. The Legal Background examines the laws generally applicable to different types of corporate distributions, and considers the accounting concepts and terms applicable to those distributions. The Transaction Guide provides lists of information and documents needed to make a corporate distribution, determinations that the attorney should make with respect to the distribution, and procedures for effectuating the distribution or related transaction. The Forms section includes board resolutions and related notices to shareholders. Each form comment covers the issues specifically applicable to that type of corporate distribution or transaction.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.10

§ 9.10 Corporate "Distributions"

[1] Definition

A corporation's "distribution to its shareholders" is defined as either of the following: [Corp. Code § 166]

(1) The transfer of cash or property by a corporation to its shareholders without consideration, whether by way of a dividend or otherwise [see [2], below], except for a dividend in shares of that corporation [see § 9.17[1]]; or

(2) The purchase or redemption by a corporation of its own shares for cash or property [see [3], [4], below].

Such a transfer, purchase, or redemption by a subsidiary of the corporation also falls within the definition of a "distribution" [Corp. Code § 166; see Corp. Code § 189 ("subsidiary" defined as corporation in which parent corporation owns shares possessing more than 50 percent of voting power)].

The following transactions are specifically excluded from the definition of "distribution" [Corp. Code § 166]:

(1) Satisfaction of a final judgment of a court or tribunal of appropriate jurisdiction ordering the rescission of the issuance of shares;

(2) The rescission by a corporation of the issuance of its shares, if the board determines that (a) it is reasonably likely that the holder or holders of the shares in question could legally enforce a claim for the rescission, (b) the rescission is in the best interests of the corporation, and (c) the corporation is likely to be able to meet its liabilities (except those for which payment is otherwise adequately provided) as they mature; and

(3) The repurchase by a corporation of shares issued by it under an employee stock purchase plan [see Corp. Code § 408], if the board determines that (a) the repurchase is in the best interests of the corporation, and (b) the corporation is likely to be able to meet its liabilities (except those for which payment is otherwise adequately provided) as they mature.

Throughout this chapter, the term "distribution" has the meaning described in Corporations Code Section 166.

[2] "Dividend"

The General Corporation Law does not define the term "dividend." However, that term generally refers to a corporation's payment to its shareholders of corporate profits, as a return on their investment [see Estate of Talbot (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 526, 535, 74 Cal. Rptr. 920] . Shareholders have no vested right to a dividend until it has been declared by the corporation's board of directors pursuant to resolution [Miller v. McColgan (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 110 P.2d 419 ; see § 9.200]. Although a dividend may take the form of cash or other property, a dividend in the form of the corporation's own shares [see § 9.17 [1], below] does not constitute a distribution subject to statutory financial tests [Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503; see § 9.11]. For further discussion of dividends, see § 9.200.

[3] "Repurchase"

The term "repurchase" is not defined in the General Corporation Law, either. It traditionally means a corporation's acquisition of its outstanding shares for value, or a subsidiary's acquisition of the parent corporation's shares for value [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, vol. 1, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares]. Corporations Code Section 207(d) specifically grants corporations the power to purchase their own shares, bonds, debentures, and other securities. However, the articles of incorporation, the bylaws, or corporate agreements may limit a corporation's repurchase of its shares [see Corp. Code § 505; see also § 9.11[7]]. See § 9.222[1] for further discussion of issues specifically applicable to the repurchase of shares.

[4] "Redemption"

Although the General Corporation Law does not define the term "redemption" [see Corp. Code § 180 ("redemption price" defined)], that term generally means a corporation's reacquisition of outstanding shares pursuant to a right of redemption or repurchase held by the corporation that is one of the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of those particular shares [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender)]. Corporations are specifically authorized to redeem any or all redeemable shares upon proper notice and payment [see Corp. Code § 509]. For coverage of issues unique to the redemption of shares, see § 9.220[1].

[5] Determination of Time Distribution Was Made

A distribution in the form of a dividend is deemed to be made on the date it is declared [Corp. Code § 166]. A distribution in the form of a purchase or redemption of shares is deemed to be made on the date that the corporation transfers cash or property to the shareholders, regardless of whether the distribution is made pursuant to a preexisting contract [Corp. Code § 166]. However, if the corporation issues securities [see Comm. Code § 8102 (definition)] in exchange for shares, the distribution is made on the date that the corporation acquires the shares in the exchange [Corp. Code § 166]. In the case of a sinking fund payment [see § 9.220[1][e]], the corporation is deemed to have transferred cash or property when it delivers the cash or property to a trustee for the holders of preferred shares to be used for the redemption of the shares, or when the corporation physically segregates cash or property in trust for that purpose [Corp. Code § 166].

[6] Amount of Distribution

For purposes of the General Corporation Law provisions regarding distributions [see Corp. Code §§ 500 et seq.], the amount of any distribution payable in property is determined on the basis of the value at which the property is carried on the corporation's financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500

; see Corp. Code § 114 (definition); see also § 9.13]. The amount of a distribution, however, may be different for income tax purposes [see § 9.203[1][b][iii]].

CHAPTER 9 DIVIDENDS, REACQUISITIONS OF SHARES, AND ASSESSMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.11

§ 9.11 Restrictions on Distributions

[1] In General

California law no longer restricts the sources from which a corporation may pay dividends [see former Corp. Code § 1500 (repealed by Stats 1975, ch. 682, effective Jan. 1, 1977)], but instead requires the corporation to meet the requirements of several financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503] before it may make any valid "distribution to its shareholders" [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition); see also § 9.10[1]]. First, a corporation must meet either of two basic financial tests, known as the "retained earnings" test [see Corp. Code § 500(a); see also § 9.11[2]] and the "remaining assets" test [see Corp. Code § 500(b); see also § 9.11[3]]. In addition to these two basic tests, a corporation must meet other tests related to general solvency and liquidation and dividend preferences [see Corp. Code §§ 501-503; see also §§ 9.11[5], [6]]. However, various exclusions from these financial tests exist [see § 9.12]. Whether or not a corporation satisfies these tests is determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [see Corp. Code §§ 114, 500 et seq.; see also § 9.12].

Since 1977, California law also has not required that in order to make a valid contract for the repurchase of shares, the corporation must meet a financial test at the time the contract is made. The General Corporation Law requires only that a distributions test must be met at the time of making a payment pursuant to such a contract [Corp. Code §§ 166, 500]. Cases applying pre-1977 law are no longer apposite insofar as they support the superseded requirement for the corporation to meet a financial test as of the time a repurchase contract is made [Maudlin v. Pacific Decision Sciences Corp. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1009-1012, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724 (contract for stock repurchase through installment payments extending over 10 years was enforceable as and when each installment came due, provided corporation could meet Corp. Code § 500 distributions test, at that time, for payment of that installment)].

These General Corporation Law restrictions are necessary to impose some control over the corporation's ability to pay dividends to its shareholders. Before the enactment of statutes governing corporate distributions, the United States Supreme Court held that the capital stock of an incorporated company is a fund set apart for the payment of its debts, and substitutes for the personal liability of the owners of an unincorporated business [Sanger v. Upton (1875) 91 U.S. 56, 60, 23 L. Ed. 220] . Although this "trust fund" theory has been criticized [see Ballantine & Hills, Corporate Capital and Restrictions Upon Dividends Under Modern Corporation Laws, 23 Calif. L. Rev. 229, 231-235 (1935)], the capital of a corporation nonetheless remains the primary source for payment of corporate debts [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares]. In addition to protecting the corporation's creditors, restrictions on distribution protect preferred shareholders with dividend or liquidation preferences against junior shareholders, and protect all shareholders against mismanagement and impairment of their investment [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares ; Ballantine & Hills, Corporate Capital and Restrictions Upon Dividends Under Modern Corporation Laws, 23 Calif. L. Rev. 229, 233 (1935)].

[2] Retained Earnings Test

A corporation or one of its subsidiaries may make a distribution to the corporation's shareholders if the amount of the retained earnings of the corporation immediately prior to the distribution equals or exceeds the amount of the proposed distribution [Corp. Code § 500(a)]. The term "retained earnings" means the accumulated net income earned by a corporation from the date of incorporation or reorganization, less distributions made to shareholders and other charges [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 5, Income Statement (Matthew Bender)].

To determine a corporation's retained earnings, an accountant first obtains the amount of retained earnings as of the beginning of the accounting period from the balance sheet dated on the day preceding the accounting period. He or she then takes the net income or net loss for that period from the income statement for that period, and either adds or subtracts that amount to or from earnings. Finally, the accountant subtracts any extraordinary losses sustained by the corporation during its current accounting period but not reflected on its income statement for that period, and subtracts any dividends declared by the corporation during its current accounting period. The balance remaining is the amount of retained earnings at the end of the accounting period [Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Accounting (Matthew Bender); see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 11, Corporation Accounting (Matthew Bender)].

[3] Remaining Assets Test

A corporation or one of its subsidiaries may make a distribution to the corporation's shareholders if, immediately after giving effect to the distribution, both of the following apply [Corp. Code § 500(b); see § 9.13 (accounting terms of art defined)]:

> (1) The sum of the corporation's assets (excluding goodwill, capit alized research and development expenses, and deferred charges) would be at lea st equal to 1 1/4 times its liabilities (not including deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits); and
> (2) The corporation's current assets would be at least equal to its current liabilities; or at least equal to 1 1/4 times its current liabilities, if the average of the corporation's earnings before taxes on income and before interest expense for the two preceding fiscal years was less than the average of the interest expense of the corporation for those fiscal years.

The second half of this test, however, does not apply to a corporation that does not classify its assets into current and fixed under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(b); see Corp. Code § 114; see also § 9.13[1]].

In determining the amount of corporate assets, profits derived from an exchange of assets will not be included unless the assets received are currently realizable in cash [Corp. Code § 500]. Furthermore, the term "current assets" [see § 9.13[4]] may include net amounts that the board has determined in good faith may reasonably be expected to be received from customers during the 12-month period used in calculating current liabilities pursuant to existing contractual relationships that obligate those customers to make fixed or periodic payments (or, in the case of a public utility corporation, pursuant to service connections with customers), after giving effect to future costs not then included in current liabilities but reasonably expected to be incurred by the corporation in performing those contracts (or providing service to utility customers) [Corp. Code § 500].

[4] Payment of Obligation Incurred for Share Purchase

When applying either of the two basic tests to a distribution of cash or property as payment (in whole or in part) of an obligation incurred in connection with the purchase of its shares, any amount deducted from retained earnings at the time the obligation was incurred (not exceeding the principal of the obligation remaining unpaid immediately prior to the distribution) must be added to retained earnings. Similarly, any amount added to liabilities at the time the obligation was incurred (not exceeding the principal of the obligation that will remain unpaid after the distribution) must be deducted from liabilities [Corp. Code § 500].

[5] General Solvency Test

In addition to passing either the retained earnings or remaining assets test, a corporation must pass a "general solvency" test before making a distribution to the shareholders. Under that test, neither a corporation nor any of its subsidiaries may make a distribution to the corporation's shareholders if the corporation or subsidiary making the distribution is, or as a result of the distribution would be, likely to be unable to meet its liabilities as they mature, except those liabilities whose payment is otherwise adquately provided for [Corp Code § 501].

[6] Tests Protecting Liquidation and Dividend Preferences

Neither a corporation nor any of its subsidiaries may make a distribution to the corporation's shareholders on any shares of its stock of any class or series that are junior to outstanding shares of any other class or series with respect to distribution of assets on liquidation unless, after giving effect to the distribution, the excess of its assets over its liabilities would equal or exceed the liquidation preference of all shares having a preference on liquidation over the class or series to which the distribution is made [Corp. Code § 502; see § 9.200[1]]. For purposes of this test, "assets" do not include goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses, and deferred charges; "liabilities" do not include deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits [Corp. Code § 502; see § 9.13[4], [5]]. However, with respect to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, the corporation must deduct from liabilities all amounts that had been previously added with respect to the obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not exceeding the principal of the obligation that will remain unpaid after the distribution; further, the corporation may not deduct from liabilities for any obligation that is a distribution to its shareholders when the obligation is incurred [Corp. Code § 502].

Similarly, neither a corporation nor any of its subsidiaries may make a distribution to the corporation's shareholders on any shares of its stock of any class or series that are junior to outstanding shares of any other class or series with respect to payment of dividends, and as to which senior class or series the corporation has cumulative dividends in arrears, unless the amount of the retained earnings of the corporation immediately before the distribution equals or exceeds the sum of (1) the amount of the proposed distribution and (2) the aggregate amount of the cumulative dividends in arrears on all shares having a preference with respect to payment of dividends over the class or series to which the distribution is made [Corp. Code § 503]. With respect to a distribution of cash or property in payment by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, the corporation must add to retained earnings all amounts that had been previously deducted with respect to the obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not exceeding the principal of the obligation that remain unpaid immediately prior to distribution; further, the corporation may not add to retained earnings on account of any obligation that is a distribution to its shareholders when the obligation is incurred [Corp. Code § 503].

However, the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions of preferred shares [see Corp. Code § 176 (definition)] may provide that the restrictions described above [see Corp. Code §§ 502, 503] do not apply in whole or part with respect to distributions on shares junior to the class or series [Corp. Code § 402.5(c)]. That provision permits flexibility for proposed issuees of preferred stock who are willing to forgo the statutory protections [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender)].

[7] Restrictions Imposed by Corporate Instrument

The General Corporation Law permits a corporation to provide additional restrictions on the declaration of dividends or the purchase or redemption of the corporation's own shares, pursuant to provisions (1) in its articles, (2) in its bylaws, or (3) in any indenture or other agreement entered into by the corporation [Corp. Code § 505]. For example, senior preferred shares and corporate debt instruments often contain specific contractual restrictions on distributions [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender)].

§ 9.12 Exceptions to Financial Tests

[1] Broker-Dealers

The retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500; see also § 9.11[2], [3]] do not apply to a corporation licensed as a broker-dealer [see Corp. Code §§ 25210-25220] if the corporation, immediately after giving effect to any distribution, is in compliance with the net capital rules of the Commissioner of Corporations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12] and the Securities and Exchange Commission [Corp. Code § 500(c); see 17 C.F.R. § 240.15c3-1]. Those rules require broker-dealers to limit aggregate indebtedness to a certain percentage of his or her net capital [see 17 C.F.R. § 240.15c3-1; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12].

[2] Regulated Investment Companies

The retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500; see also § 9.11[2], [3]] do not apply to any dividend declared by a regulated investment company [see I.R.C. § 851 (definition)] to the extent that the dividend is necessary to maintain the status of the corporation as a regulated investment company under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [Corp. Code § 504(a)(1); see I.R.C. §§ 851-855]. None of the restrictions on "distributions" [see Corp. Code §§ 500-511] apply to any purchase or redemption of shares redeemable at the option of the holder by a registered open-end investment company [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-5(b)] under the United States Investment Company Act of 1940 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1-80a-64], as long as the right of redemption remains unsuspended under the provision of that Act and the corporation's articles and bylaws [Corp. Code § 504(b)].

[3] Real Estate Investment Trusts

The retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500; see also § 9.11[2], [3]] do not apply to any dividend declared by a real estate investment trust [see I.R.C. § 856 (definition)] to the extent that the dividend is necessary to maintain the status of the corporation as a real estate investment trust under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [Corp. Code § 504(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 856 et seq.].

[4] Deceased or Disabled Shareholders

None of the statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also § 9.11 [2]] apply to the purchase or redemption of shares of a deceased or disabled shareholder from the proceeds of life or disability insurance, respectively, on that shareholder in excess of the total amount of all premiums paid by the corporation for that insurance, in order to carry out the provisions of an agreement between the corporation and that shareholder to purchase or redeem those shares on the death or disability (as defined in the policy) of the shareholder [Corp. Code §§ 503.1, 503.2]. For these purposes, "disability insurance" means an agreement of indemnification against the insured's loss of the ability to work due to accident or illness [Corp. Code § 503.2].

[5] Holders in Due Course

Notwithstanding the General Corporation Law provisions governing corporate distributions [see Corp. Code §§ 500-511], a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302 (defined as a holder who takes an instrument for value, in good faith, without notice that it is overdue, dishonored, or subject to defenses or claims)] of a negotiable instrument issued by a corporation for the purchase or redemption of shares, or a person who acquired the instrument through that holder, may enforce the instrument if he or she did not receive notice that it was issued for that purpose [Corp. Code § 511]. Rather than providing an actual exception from the restrictions on corporate distribution, Corp. Code § 511 deprives the corporation of the defense to payment based on its inability to make a distribution at the time the instrument is payable [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503 (financial tests)]. It eliminates conflicts between the restrictions on distributions set forth in the Corporations Code and the rights of holders in due course set forth in the Commercial Code [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender)].

CHAPTER 9 DIVIDENDS, REACQUISITIONS OF SHARES, AND ASSESSMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.13

§ 9.13 Generally Accepted Accounting Principles and Terms

[1] In General

The General Corporation Law provides that all references in its provisions to financial statements, balance sheets, income statements, and statements of cash flows of a corporation, as well as all references in it to assets, liabilities, earnings, retained earnings, and similar accounting items, mean the financial statements prepared and accounting items determined in accordance with "generally accepted accounting principles" then applicable, subject to any specific accounting treatment set forth in the General Corporation Law. Financial statements other than annual statements may be condensed or otherwise presented as permitted by authoritative accounting pronouncements [Corp. Code § 114]. Regarding how a court may be expected to deal with the reference to generally accepted accounting principles, see Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports, § 7.31[5][a].

"Generally accepted accounting principles" is a term of art used to describe the financial accounting rules and procedures generally acceptable at a given time [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender)]. There is no single authoritative source used to determine generally accepted accounting principles. Those principles are simply accounting practices that have evolved over the years, and, through repeated use, have become generally accepted among accountants. The Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) and, before 1973, boards of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), have given these practices greater authority through their pronouncements [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 1, Financial Statements: Objectives and Components; Auditor's Opinion (Matthew Bender)]. The FASB issues "Statements" and "Interpretations" that have a binding effect on accountants [see Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)].

In applying generally accepted accounting principles to determine whether a corporation is able to meet the required financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also § 9.11] and thus entitled to make a valid distribution to its shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166], the board of directors should use only financial data prepared by an accountant. Furthermore, the board should rely on the accountant's determination of whether or not the corporation meets all applicable financial tests. These practices are necessary in light of the rapidly changing standards of accounting [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, vol. 1, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares].

[2] Corporations With Subsidiaries

With respect to corporations with subsidiaries [see Corp. Code § 189(a) ("subsidiary" defined as corporation in which parent corporation owns shares possessing more than 50 percent of voting power)], the General Corporation Law provides that (1) any reference to financial statements means the consolidated statements of the corporation and any of its subsidiaries that are required to be included under generally accepted accounting principles then applicable, and (2) any reference to accounting items means those items as determined on a consolidated basis in accordance with those consolidated financial statements, unless otherwise expressly stated [Corp. Code § 114]. A consolidated financial statement is a financial statement that covers the operations of both the parent corporation and its wholly owned subsidiaries [H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 1, Financial Statements: Objectives and Components; Auditor's Opinion (Matthew Bender)].

An accurate presentation of the financial condition of the economic unit as a whole can only be made in consolidated financial statements prepared from the data of both parent and subsidiary corporations. The preparation of a consolidated financial statement involves a process of adjustment that essentially cancels out the effects of any intercorporate transactions [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. Because accounting items of a parent corporation and all subsidiary corporations included in a consolidated financial statement are combined, a liability of one corporation might prevent another corporation from being able to make a distribution to its shareholders. For example, a tort judgment against a subsidiary corporation would reduce the retained earnings and assets of the parent corporation on its consolidated financial statements, and possibly render it unable to pass either the retained earnings or remaining assets test [see § 9.11] and thus unable to make a distribution to its shareholders.

[3] "Financial Statements"

Financial accounting is intended to provide a full economic disclosure regarding a business to its owners and creditors. The final product of financial accounting is the financial statement, which includes a balance sheet (listing assets and liabilities on a specified date), an income statement (reporting the corporation's performance over a given period of time), a statement of retained earnings (stating accumulated net income earned from the date of incorporation or reorganization, less distributions), and a statement of cash flow [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)].

[4] "Assets"

A corporation's assets are basically its economic resources, obtained as a result of past transactions [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 4, Balance Sheet: Owners' Equity (Matthew Bender); Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares]. Assets are classified as either current or noncurrent assets. "Current assets" are assets that are reasonably expected to be realized in cash or sold or consumed during one year, or within the normal operating cycle of the enterprise if it is longer than one year. "Currently realizable in cash" means the asset is capable of being sold into a market [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares]. Items that are ordinarily considered current assets of a business are cash, marketable securities, notes and accounts receivable, inventories, and prepaid expenses [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 2, Balance Sheet: Assets (Matthew Bender)]. "Noncurrent assets" are all other assets, and are generally further divided into "fixed assets" and "other assets." Fixed assets are those assets that are used in the corporation's business, are not held for sale in the ordinary course of business, and have a useful life of more than one year. Fixed assets include machinery, equipment, and real property. Other noncurrent assets are investments, intangibles, and deferred charges [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)].

The remaining assets test excludes three types of assets from the sum of corporate assets [see Corp. Code § 500(b); §

9.11 [3]]. The first type, "goodwill," refers to the difference between the fair market value of a business and the value of its net assets. Goodwill is an intangible asset, derived from favorable attributes such as customer loyalty [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, vol. 1, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares; Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. Because, however, the value of business goodwill is only determined upon sale and may not even appear in the corporate books, it is not considered to be a corporate asset for purposes of determining the corporation's ability to make a distribution to its shareholders [see Corp. Code § 500(b)]. The second type of excluded asset is "deferred charges," which are prepayments made prior to the receipt of goods or services. These items will eventually be charged to expenses, that is, amortized over a period of years. Typical deferred charges are insurance premiums, prepaid leases and wages, and organizational expenses. For example, a corporation's organizational charges should not be allocated to any one accounting period, but should be charged over an extended period because the value derived has a long-term benefit [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, vol. 1, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares; Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations, With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. Capitalized research and development expenses, which are often included as part of "deferred charges," are the costs of conducting a planned search for new and useful knowledge that will eventually result in a usable business plan. Because these costs have not yet produced an asset of value, they are charged to expenses as incurred, and excluded from the computation of corporate assets for purposes of the remaining assets test [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, vol. 1, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares].

[5] "Liabilities"

A corporation's liabilities are the economic obligations that are recognized and measured in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, and certain deferred credits [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender), citing AICPA § 1025.19]. "Current liabilities" are obligations maturing within one year from the balance sheet date or within the operating cycle of the entity [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 3, Balance Sheet: Liabilities (Matthew Bender); Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. "Noncurrent liabilities" are those long-term liabilities that mature more than one year after the date of the financial statement [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 3, Balance Sheet: Liabilities (Matthew Bender)].

The remaining assets test excludes three types of liabilities from the sum of corporate liabilities [see Corp. Code § 500(b); see also § 9.11 [3]]. First, the term "deferred taxes," refers to the difference between the amount of tax ultimately payable for an accounting period and the amount actually paid. Because financial accounting and tax accounting are different [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 3, Balance Sheet: Liabilities (Matthew Bender); Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)], a discrepancy between actual taxable income and the amount of income reported for financial accounting purposes may result. Although deferred taxes are a liability, they constitute only an estimate based on current tax law. Changes in the account due to legal or corporate operations are reflected in the year in which they occur [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. Second, the terms "deferred income" and "deferred credits" are used interchangeably in accounting to describe obligations resulting from income received for goods or services not yet sold or rendered by the corporation. Prepaid magazine subscriptions, prepaid rentals, and prepaid interest are examples of deferred credits of unearned income. These credits are listed as current or noncurrent liabilities, depending on whether performance of the obligation will take place within one year of the balance sheet date or within the corporation's current operating cycle. When the corporation performs its obligation, that amount is transferred to the retained earnings account [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Ch. 95, Corporate Financial and Tax Accounting (Matthew Bender); Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.14

§ 9.14 Shareholders' Civil Liability for Receiving Improper Distributions

[1] In General

Any shareholder who receives a "distribution" [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition); see also § 9.10[1]] prohibited by the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 500-511], with knowledge of facts indicating the impropriety of the distribution, is liable to the corporation for the benefit of all the creditors or shareholders entitled to bring an action [see [2], below] for the amount received plus interest at the legal rate on judgments [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010] until paid [Corp. Code § 506(a)]. The shareholder need only know the "facts" that render the distribution improper; he or she need not actually know or believe that the distibution is in fact illegal [England v. Christensen (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 413, 431, 52 Cal. Rptr. 402 (interpreting prior law)]. The shareholder's liability, however, cannot exceed the corporation's liabilities to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation, or the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 506(a); see [2], below].

[2] Right to Bring Suit

Any one or more creditors of the corporation (1) whose debts or claims arose prior to the time of the distribution, and (2) who have not consented to the distribution, may bring suit in the name of the corporation to enforce the liability to creditors arising from a violation of Corporations Code Section 500 or 501 (retained earnings or remaining assets test, or general insolvency test) [Corp. Code § 506(b); see § 9.11]. It is irrelevant whether or not the creditors have reduced their claims to judgment [Corp. Code § 506(b)].

Any one or more shareholders (1) who hold preferred shares outstanding at the time of distribution, and (2) who have not consented to the distribution, may bring suit in the name of the corporation to enforce the corporation's liability to shareholders arising from a violation of Corporations Code Section 502 or 503 (prohibiting distribution to shares junior to shares with liquidation or dividend preferences) [Corp. Code § 506(b); see § 9.11 [6]]. Shareholders bringing suit need not comply with the requirements normally imposed on shareholder derivative actions, which require shareholders to attempt to have the board bring the action, and to furnish a bond [Corp. Code § 506(b); see Corp. Code § 800].

Any shareholder sued for receiving an improper distribution may implead all other shareholders who are liable, and may compel contribution either in the same action or in an independent action against shareholders not joined in the action [

Corp. Code § 506(c)].

For an example and discussion of the complaint used in an action for damages against the shareholders for receiving an improper distribution, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 164, Corporations: Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares § 164.51 (Matthew Bender). For an example and discussion of the cross-complaint used to implead other shareholders in the main action to recover damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 164, Corporations: Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares § 164.52 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Non-Exclusive Liability

The General Corporation Law provisions imposing shareholder liability for receiving improper distributions do not affect any liability that a shareholder may have under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Corp. Code § 506(d); see Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12 (applicable to transfers made or obligations incurred after Jan. 1, 1987)]. Under that Act, a creditor is entitled to any of the following remedies for a fraudulent transfer or obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a); see Civ. Code § 3439.08 (limitations)]:

(1) Avoidance of the transfer or obligation to the extent necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim;

(2) Attachment or other provisional remedy against the asset transferred or its proceeds, in accordance with the procedures set forth in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 481.010-493.060 [see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 62, Attachment (Matthew Bender)]; or

(3) An injunction against further disposition of the asset, appointment of a receiver, or any other relief required under the circumstances.

Under the Act, there are three main types of fraudulent transfers. The first is a transfer or obligation that the debtor made with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)]. The second is a transfer or obligation that a debtor made without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in the exchange, if the debtor (1) was engaged or about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction, or (2) intended to incur (or reasonably should have believed that he or she would incur) debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due [Civ. Code § 3439.04(b)]. Finally, a transfer or obligation is fraudulent to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred if the debtor (1) did not receive a reasonably equivalent value in exchange, and (2) was insolvent at that time or became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.05]. Because the term "transfer" includes every payment of money [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(i)], it includes corporate "distributions" [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition); Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares].

For further discussion of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act and the types of transfers that are fraudulent as to creditors, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances , (Matthew Bender).

§ 9.15 Directors' Civil Liability for Making Improper Distributions

[1] In General

The directors of a corporation who approve a "distribution to its shareholders" [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition); see also § 9.10 [1]] that fails to meet the financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also § 9.11], are jointly and severally liable to the corporation for the benefit of all creditors or shareholders entitled to enforce that liability [Corp. Code §§ 316(a), (c), 506(b); see [3], below]. A director who is present at a board or committee meeting at which action authorizing the distribution is taken and who abstains from voting is considered to have approved the distribution [Corp. Code § 316(b)].

This general rule imposing liability, however, is subject to two exceptions [see Corp. Code § 309; see also [2], below].

[2] Exceptions to General Rule

A director's civil liability for approving an improper distribution is subject to the exculpatory provisions of Corporations Code Section 309 [Corp. Code § 316(a)]. That section first provides that a director who performs his or her duties in accordance with its provisions [see discussion, below] will not be liable for any alleged failure to discharge his or her obligations as a director [Corp. Code § 309(c)]. Furthermore, it provides that the corporate articles may limit or eliminate a director's liability for monetary damages, to the extent provided in Corporations Code Section 204(a)(10) (which prohibits limiting or eliminating personal liability for certain improper actions) [Corp. Code § 309(c)]. For an example and discussion of such an article provision, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, § 3.280.

Under Corporations Code Section 309, a director must perform his or her duties as a director, including the duties as a member of any committee on which he or she serves, (1) in good faith, (2) in a manner that he or she believes to be in the best interest of the corporation and its shareholders, and (3) with the care (including reasonable inquiry) that an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances [Corp. Code § 309(a)]. In performing these duties, a director is entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements (including financial statements and other financial data) that have been prepared or presented by any of the following [Corp. Code § 309(b)]:

(1) One or more officers or employees of the corporation whom the director believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented;

(2) Counsel, independent accountants [see Corp. Code § 115], or other persons, as to matters that the director believes to be within that person's professional or expert competence; or

(3) A committee of the board on which the director does not serve, as to matters within its designated authority, which the director believes to merit confidence.

The director may rely on information furnished by the above, however, only when acting in good faith, after reasonable inquiry when the need is indicated by the circumstances, and without knowledge that would cause that reliance to be unwarranted [Corp. Code § 309(b)].

[3] Persons Entitled to Enforce Liability

The following persons may bring suit in the name of the corporation against any or all directors liable for approving an improper distribution [Corp. Code §§ 316(c), 506(b)]:

(1) Any one or more creditors of the corporation whose debts or claims arose prior to the time of the distribution to shareholders and who have not consented to that distribution, whether or not they have reduced their claims to judgment; or

(2) Any one or more holders of preferred shares outstanding at the time of the distribution who have not consented to the distribution.

Shareholders bringing suit need not comply with the requirements normally imposed on shareholder derivative actions [Corp. Code §§ 316(c), 506(b); see Corp. Code § 800; see also § 9.14[2]].

For an example and discussion of the complaint used in an action for damages against the directors for approving an improper distribution, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 164, Corporations: Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares, § 164.50 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Damages, Contribution, and Subrogation

The damages recoverable from a director are the amount of the illegal distribution. If the illegal distribution consists of property, the recoverable damages are the fair market value of that property at the time of the illegal distribution. In addition, damages include interest (at the legal rate applicable to judgments) on the amount of the distribution or the fair market value of the property, from the date of the distribution until paid, plus any reasonably incurred costs of appraisal or other valuation. However, damages may not exceed (1) the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation, and (2) the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 316(d)].

A director who is sued for approving an improper distribution may implead all other directors who are liable, and may compel contribution either in the same action or in an independent action against directors not joined as parties in that action [Corp. Code § 316(e)]. Any director who is held liable for approving an improper distribution is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the corporation against shareholders who received the distribution [Corp. Code § 316(f)(1)]. He or she or may proceed against the person or persons who are liable to the director as a result of the subrogation by either (1) filing a cross-complaint against them in the same action, or (2) bringing an independent action against them [Corp. Code § 316(f)].

For examples and discussion of the cross-complaints used for impleading other parties and for subrogation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 164, Corporations: Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares, §§ 164.52, 164.53 (Matthew Bender).

Any director of a corporation who concurs, knowingly and with a dishonest or fraudulent purpose, in any vote or act of the directors to make any dividend or distribution of assets except as permitted by law is guilty of a misdemeanor if the improper dividend or distribution of assets was designed either to defraud creditors or shareholders or to give a false appearance of the value of the corporation's stock, thereby defrauding subscribers or purchasers. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.17

§ 9.17 Other Transactions Affecting Shares

[1] Share Dividends

Normally, a corporation pays dividends to shareholders from its earnings. However, if a corporation has reinvested its earnings in expansion of its plant, equipment, or stock in trade, it may be unable to declare a cash dividend. Instead, it may make a book adjustment to reflect this increase in the shareholders' investment by declaring a "share dividend." Such an adjustment involves issuing new shares of the corporation to the shareholders in proportion to the number of shares each of them already owns in the corporation, and transferring the amount of the dividend from retained earnings to the corporation's capital stock account. Thus, a portion of the corporation's retained earnings are "capitalized" [see Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 210, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521] . A share dividend takes nothing from the property of the corporation, and adds nothing to the interests of the shareholders [see Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 202-203, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521] . Therefore, share dividends do not constitute a "distribution to its shareholders" [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition); see also § 9.10 [1]] requiring compliance with the financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also § 9.11]. However, share dividends must comply with the Corporate Securities Law [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706; Corp. Code § 25017(f) (exemption from qualification for "stock dividend"); see also Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities]. For further discussion of share dividends, see §§ 9.230-9.232.

[2] Share Assessments

In contrast to paying a dividend on its outstanding shares, a corporation may levy an assessment on those shares. The articles of incorporation may grant, with or without limitations, the power to levy assessments on the shares of any class [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(1); see also Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities]. When the articles expressly confer that power on the corporation or the board, the board may levy and collect assessments on those shares, subject to any stated limitations [see Corp. Code § 423(a)]. That authority is in addition to the corporation's right to recover the unpaid subscription price of the shares, or the remainder of the consideration to be paid [see Corp. Code § 423(a)]. Upon notice of the assessment to the shareholder, the assessment becomes a lien upon the shares assessed [Corp. Code § 423(e); see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness]. For further coverage of share assessments, see §§ 9.240-9.243.

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.110

§ 9.110 General Determinations

1. Determine whether proposed transaction is either of following, constituting a "distribution" to corporation's shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166; see also § 9.10[1]]:

NOTE:
A corporation cannot make a valid "distribution" to its shareholders unless it is able to pass a series of financial tests [Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see II(B)(2)-(5), below].

a. Transfer of cash or property by corporation to shareholders without consideration.

NOTE:
A dividend of the corporation's own shares is excluded from this category [see Corp. Code § 166].

b. Purchase or redemption of shares for cash or property.

NOTE:
The transfer, purchase, or redemption by a subsidiary of the corporation is included in this category [see Corp. Code § 166].

2. Determine whether proposed transaction is one of following that is exempt from definition of "distribution" [Corp. Code § 166]:

a. Satisfaction of final judgment of court or tribunal of appropriate jurisdiction ordering rescission of share issuance.

b. Rescission by corporation of share issuance, if board determines that:

(1) It is reasonably likely that holder or holders of shares in question could legally enforce claim for rescission;

(2) Rescission is in best interests of corporation; and

(3) Corporation is likely to be able to meet its liabilities (except those for which payment is otherwise adequately provided) as they mature.

c. Repurchase by corporation of shares issued by it under employee stock purchase plan [see Corp. Code § 408; see also Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation], if board determines that:

(1) Repurchase is in best interests of corporation; and

(2) Corporation is likely to be able to meet its liabilities (except those for which payment is otherwise adequately provided) as they mature.

3. Determine whether board itself or board committee will take proposed action.

NOTE:

A corporation's board of directors may, by resolution adopted by a majority of the authorized number of directors, designate one or more committees to exercise all of the board's authority, with the exception of certain designated powers [Corp. Code § 311]. For example, the board cannot empower a committee with the authority to make a distribution except at a rate, in a periodic amount, or within a price range, set forth in the articles of incorporation or determined by the board [Corp. Code § 311(f)].

For an example and discussion of a board resolution authorizing an executive committee to declare and pay dividends subject to those limitations, see § 9.204. For applicable procedures, see § 9.120[1], Paragraph 1.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.111

§ 9.111 Determinations Regarding Cash or Property Dividend

NOTE:
These determinations apply to distributions of cash or property other than the corporation's own shares. For determinations applicable to distributions of a corporation's own shares, see Section 9.113.

1. Determine proposed amount of dividend to be paid:

a. For purposes of General Corporation Law.

NOTE:
The amount of any distribution payable in property is the value at which the property is carried on the corporation's financial statements, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500].

b. For federal income tax purposes.

NOTE:
The amount of property distributed to the shareholders is the fair market value of the property on the distribution date, reduced by the amount of liabilities attached or assumed [I.R.C. § 301(b)]. The amount treated as a "dividend" is the amount deemed to be paid from the corporation's earnings and profits [I.R.C. § 301(a), (c), 316(a); see § 9.203[1]].

2. Determine whether corporation can pass either "retained earnings" or "remaining assets" test [see Corp. Code § 500]:

NOTE:
Neither a corporation nor its subsidiary may make a valid "distribution" unless it satisfies either one of these tests [see Corp. Code § 500]. Whether or not a corporation satisfies these and the other statutory tests [see PP 3-5, below] is determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [see Corp. Code §§ 114, 500-511]. For a discussion of those principles, and coverage of applicable accounting terms of art, see Section 9.13.

To ensure that the corporation is able to comply with these and the other statutory financial tests, the corporation should select a competent accountant to make a professional determination of the issue [see § 9.120 [1], P 2]. The board of directors may rely on his or her professional opinion [see Corp. Code § 309(b)].

a. Determine whether amount of retained earnings of corporation immediately prior to distribution equals or exceeds amount of proposed distribution [see Corp. Code § 500(a); see § 9.11 [3]].

b. Determine whether, immediately after distribution [see Corp. Code § 500(b); see § 9.11[2]]:

(1) Sum of corporation's assets would equal at least 1 1/4 times its liabilities; and

NOTE:
For purposes of this test, "assets" do not include goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses, and deferred charges, and "liabilities" do not include deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits [Corp. Code § 500(b)].

(2) Corporation's current assets would at least equal:

NOTE:
The term "current assets" may include net amounts that the board has determined in good faith may reasonably be expected to be received from customers during the 12-month period used in calculating current liabilities pursuant to existing contractual relationships that obligate those customers to make fixed or periodic payments (or, in the case of a public utility corporation, pursuant to service connections with customers), after giving effect to future costs not then included in current liabilities but reasonably expected to be incurred by the corporation in performing those contracts (or providing service to utility customers) [Corp. Code § 500].

(a) Its current liabilities; or

(b) If average of corporation's earnings before taxes on income and before interest expense for two preceding fiscal years was less than average of corporation's interest expense for those fiscal years, 1 1/4 times its current liabilities.

NOTE:
The second half of the remaining assets test, this Paragragh (2), however, does not apply to a corporation that does not classify its assets into current and fixed under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(b); see Corp. Code § 114; see also § 9.13].

3. Determine whether corporation (or subsidiary making distribution) is, or as result of distribution would be, likely to be unable to meet its liabilities as they mature, other than those for which payment is adequately provided [Corp. Code § 501; see § 9.11[5]].

NOTE:

Neither the corporation nor its subsidiary may make a valid "distribution" unless it satisfies this test [see Corp. Code § 501].

4. Determine whether corporation can pass the liquidation preference test [see Corp. Code § 502; § 9.11[6]]:

NOTE:

Neither the corporation nor its subsidiary may make a valid "distribution" unless it satisfies this test [see Corp. Code § 502]. The rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions of preferred shares [see Corp. Code § 176 (definition)], however, may provide that the liquidation and dividend preference tests [see Corp. Code §§ 502, 503; see also P 5,below] do not apply in whole or part with respect to distributions on shares junior to that class or series [Corp. Code § 402.5(c)].

a. Determine whether proposed distribution will be made to outstanding shares of any class or series that is junior to another class or series with preference on distribution of assets on liquidation.

b. Determine whether, after giving effect to distribution, excess of corporation's assets over its liabilities would equal or exceed liquidation preference of all shares having preference on liquidation over class or series to which distribution is made.

NOTE:

A corporation can only make a distribution on shares that are junior to shares with a liquidation preference under these circumstances [Corp. Code § 502]. For purposes of this test, "assets" do not include goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses, and deferred charges, and "liabilities" do not include deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits [Corp. Code § 502].

With respect to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment in whole or in part of an obligation incurred by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, the corporation must deduct from liabilities any amount that has been added to liabilities at the time the obligation was incurred, but not exceeding the principal of the obligation that will remain unpaid after the distribution [Corp. Code § 502].

5. Determine whether corporation can pass the dividend preference test [see Corp. Code § 503; § 9.11[6]]:

NOTE:

Neither the corporation nor its subsidiary may make a valid "distribution" unless it satisfies this test [see Corp. Code § 503]. The rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions of preferred shares [see Corp. Code § 176 (definition)], however, may provide that the liquidation and dividend preference tests [see Corp. Code §§ 502, 503; see also P 4, above] do not apply in whole or part with respect to distributions on shares junior to that class or series [Corp. Code § 402.5(c)].

a. Determine whether proposed distribution will be made to outstanding shares of any class or series that is junior to another class or series with preference on payment of dividends and as to which senior class or series the corporation has cumulative dividends in arrears.

b. Determine whether amount of corporation's retained earnings immediately before distribution equals or exceeds sum of:

(1) Amount of proposed distribution; and

(2) Aggregate amount of cumulative dividends in arrears on all shares having preference with respect to payment of dividends over class or series to which distribution is made.

NOTE:
A corporation can only make a distribution on shares that are junior to shares with a dividend preference under these circumstances [Corp. Code § 503]. With respect to a distribution of cash or property in payment in whole or in part of an obligation incurred by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, any amount that had been deducted from retained earnings at the time the obligation was incurred, not exceeding the principal of the obligation that remains unpaid immediately prior to the distribution, must be added to retained earnings [Corp. Code § 503].

6. Determine whether corporation is subject to any of following exemptions from statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also PP 2-5, above]:

a. Exemption from retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500; see also P 2, above], applicable when [Corp. Code § 500(c)]:

(1) Corporation is licensed as broker-dealer [see Corp. Code §§ 25210-25220]; and

(2) Corporation, immediately after giving effect to any distribution, is in compliance with net capital rules of Commissioner of Corporations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12] and Securities and Exchange Commission [Corp. Code § 500(c); see 17 C.F.R. § 240.15c3-1].

NOTE:
Those rules require broker-dealers to limit aggregate indebtedness to a certain percentage of his or her net capital [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12; 17 C.F.R. § 240.15c3-1].

b. Exemption from retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500; P 2, above], applicable to any dividend declared by regulated investment company [see I.R.C. § 851 (definition)] to extent that dividend is necessary to maintain its status as regulated investment company under Internal Revenue Code [Corp. Code § 504(a)(1); see I.R.C. §§ 851-855].

c. Exemption from retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500; see also P 2, above] applicable to any dividend declared by real estate investment trust [see I.R.C. § 856 (definition)] to extent that dividend is necessary to maintain its status as real estate investment trust under Internal Revenue Code [Corp. Code § 504(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 856 et seq.].

d. Exemption from all statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also P 2-5, above], applicable to any purchase or redemption of shares redeemable at option of the holder by registered open-end investment company [see 15 U.S.C. § 80a-5(b)] under the United States Investment Company Act of 1940 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1-80a-64] when right of redemption remains unsuspended under provision of that Act and corporation's articles and bylaws [Corp. Code § 504(b)].

e. Exemption from all statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also PP 2-5, above], applicable to purchase or redemption of shares of deceased shareholder from proceeds of insurance on life of that shareholder in excess of total amount of all premiums paid by corporation for that insurance, in order to carry out provisions of agreement between corporation and that shareholder to purchase or redeem those shares on shareholder's death [Corp. Code § 503.1].

f. Exemption from all statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also PP 2-5, above], applicable to purchase or redemption of shares of disabled shareholder from proceeds of disability insurance for that shareholder in excess of total amount of all premiums paid by corporation for that insurance, in order to carry out provisions of agreement between corporation and that shareholder to purchase or redeem those shares on shareholder's disability [Corp. Code § 503.2].

NOTE:

For purposes of this exemption, "disability insurance" means an agreement of indemnification against the insured's loss of the ability to work due to accident or illness [Corp. Code § 503.2].

g. Exemption from all statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also PP 2-5, above], applicable to enforcement of negotiable instrument issued by corporation for purchase and redemption of shares, by holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302 (defined as a holder who takes an instrument for value, in good faith, without notice that it is overdue, dishonored, or subject to defenses or claims)] or person who acquired instrument through that holder who did not receive notice that it was issued for that purpose [Corp. Code § 511].

NOTE:

Rather than providing an actual exception from the restrictions on corporate distribution, Corporations Code Section 511 deprives the corporation of the defense to payment based on inability to make a distribution at the time the instrument is payable [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503 (financial tests); § 9.12[4]].

7. Determine whether corporation is subject to any additional restrictions on distributions, imposed pursuant to [see Corp. Code § 505; Corp. Code § 204(d) (permissive article provisions), 212(b) (permissive bylaw provisions); see also § 9.11[7]]:

a. Articles of incorporation.

b. Bylaws.

c. Indenture or other agreement entered into by corporation.

8. Determine whether board's proposed declaration of dividend meets duty of good faith [see Corp. Code § 309(a); see also § 9.200[1]].

NOTE:

The directors must perform all of their duties in good faith, in the best interests of the corporation, and with reasonable care [see Corp. Code § 309(a)].

9. If board has relied on specified information in deciding to make a dividend, determine whether source was one of following justifying that reliance [Corp. Code § 309(b); see also § 9.200[1]]:

NOTE:

The directors are entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements (including financial statements and other financial data) prepared by any of the following, as long as the directors act in good faith, after reasonable inquiry when indicated by the circumstances, and without knowledge that would cause that reliance to be unwarranted [Corp. Code § 309(b)].

a. Officers or employees of corporation whom directors believe to be reliable and competent in matters presented.

b. Counsel, independent accountants, or other persons as to matters that directors believe to be within those persons' professional or expert competence.

c. Committees of board on which directors do not serve, as to matters within committees' designated authority, which directors believe to merit confidence.

10. Determine whether distribution will be paid from retained earnings or from other source.

NOTE:
A dividend from a source other than retained earnings must be identified in a notice to shareholders [see Corp. Code § 507; see also § 9.120 [2], P 2]. For an example of a cash or property dividend paid from retained earnings, see § 9.200[2]. For an example of a cash or property dividend paid from retained earnings, see § 9.201[2].

11. Determine class or series of shares on which dividend will be paid.

12. Determine record date for dividend [see Corp. Code § 701]:

NOTE:
Only those persons who are shareholders at the close of business on the record date are entitled to receive notice and to receive the dividend or distribution, notwithstanding any transfer of any shares on the corporation's books after the record date but before the payment date, except as provided by the articles or agreement [Corp. Code § 701(d); see Corp. Code § 185 (shareholder defined)].

a. Date specified by [see Corp. Code § 701(d)]:

(1) Articles of incorporation.

(2) Agreement.

b. If fixed by board in advance, date that is not more than 60 days nor less than 10 days before date for payment of dividend [Corp. Code § 701(a)].

c. If not fixed by board in advance, close of business on whichever day is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)(3)]:

(1) Day that board adopts resolution declaring dividend; or

(2) Sixtieth day before the dividend payment date.

§ 9.112 Determinations Regarding Redemption or Repurchase of Shares

NOTE:

Share redemptions and repurchases are related transactions, which both involve a corporation's reacquisition of its shares [see § 9.10[3], [4]]. Like a dividend, a share redemption or repurchase constitutes a "distribution" to the corporation's shareholders that must comply with statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503].

1. For redemption of redeemable shares, determine [Corp. Code § 402(c)]:

NOTE:

A corporation may provide in its articles for one or more redeemable classes or series of shares [see Corp. Code § 402(a)]. Generally, a corporation is prohibited from issuing or redeeming redeemable common shares except in either of the following circumstances [Corp. Code § 402(c)]. For further discussion of redeemable shares, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

a. Whether corporation has class of non-redeemable common shares outstanding; or

b. Whether corporation:
(1) Is open end investment company registered under Investment Company Act of 1940 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1-80a-64].

(2) Meets both of following criteria:
(a) Has license or franchise from governmental agency to conduct its business, or is member corporation of national securities exchange registered under Securities Exchange

Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 78a-78ll]; and

(b) Its license, franchise, or membership is conditioned on some or all of shareholders possessing prescribed qualifications, to extent necessary to reinstate or prevent loss of license, franchise, or membership.

(3) Is professional corporation [see Corp. Code § 13401(b) (definition); see also Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations].

2. For share repurchase, determine:

a. Whether articles of incorporation limit corporation's power to repurchase outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 207(d)].

b. Whether corporation has entered into buy-sell agreement with shareholders governing terms of repurchase [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements].

c. Whether corporation is professional corporation subject to Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act [see Corp. Code §§ 13400-13410 (applicable to corporations engaged in providing services in a single profession)].

NOTE:
A corporation subject to that Act may purchase its own shares without regard to the restrictions set forth in Corp. Code §§ 500-511 [see PP 4-6, below], if at least one share remains issued and outstanding [Corp. Code § 13407]. For coverage of share repurchase by professional corporations, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

3. Determine terms of share reacquisition:

a. For share redemption, terms set forth in articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 402(b)].

NOTE:
A share redemption must be made at the price, at the time, and on the terms and conditions stated in the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 402(b)].

b. For share repurchase, terms set forth in buy-sell agreement with shareholders, if applicable [see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements].

4. Determine whether corporation can pass all financial tests set forth in General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also § 9.111, PP 2-5].

NOTE:
The corporation should have a competent accountant make a professional determination of this issue [see § 9.121 [1], P 2].

5. Determine whether corporation is subject to any exemptions from statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-511; see also § 9.111, P 6].

6. Determine whether corporation is subject to any additional restrictions on distributions set forth in corporate instruments [see Corp. Code § 505; see also § 9.111, P 7].

7. Determine whether board's proposed declaration of dividend is proper exercise of its discretion [see Corp. Code § 309(a); see also § 9.111, P 8].

8. If board has relied on specified information in deciding to redeem or repurchase shares, determine whether reliance is justified [Corp. Code § 309(b); see also § 9.111, P 9].

9. Determine source of funds used for redemption or repurchase:

a. Sinking fund [see § 9.220[1]].

b. Insurance [see § 9.222[1]].

c. Retained earnings [see § 9.200[1]].

d. Other source [see § 9.201[1]].

10. Determine date for redemption or repurchase.

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.113

§ 9.113 Determinations Regarding Share Dividends

1. Determine whether corporation has more than one class of voting shares outstanding.

NOTE:
This determination will affect whether or not the corporation needs to qualify or exempt the share dividend [see Corp. Code § 25017(f); see also P 12, below].

2. Determine whether corporation intends to pay share dividend in shares of the same class or series on which dividends will be declared.

NOTE:
Dividends of a different class or series than the shares on which they are declared are rare, and are beyond the scope of this chapter.

3. Determine approximate amount of retained earnings that corporation wishes to "capitalize."

NOTE:
In order to meet the demands of a growing business, a corporation may have reinvested its earnings in expansion of its plant, equipment, or stock in trade. These reinvested earnings represent accumulated earnings of the corporation, and appear on its balance sheet under "retained earnings." The corporation may make a book adjustment by declaring a share dividend, and transferring the amount of the share dividend [see P 8, below] from retained earning to capital [see Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 210, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521 ; see also § 9.230[1]].

4. Determine whether purpose of transaction is actually to make "stock split" rather than share dividend.

NOTE:

A share dividend and a stock split are similar transactions, to the extent that both increase the number of shares held by shareholders without increasing their equity. However, a share dividend is a method of "capitalizing" retained earnings [see § 9.230[1][b][ii]], while the purpose of a stock split is to increase the number of shares to reduce the price per share without affecting the corporation's financial structure [see § 9.232[1][c]].

If the corporation's intent is, in fact, to effectuate a stock split, the procedures set forth in § 9.141.

5. Determine value that each share issued in dividend will have.

NOTE:

This value is generally the fair market value of the share [see § 9.230[1]].

6. Determine number of shares that corporation intends to issue as share dividend.

NOTE:

This number is computed by dividing the value that each new share will have [see P 5, above] into the amount of retained earnings to be capitalized [see P 3, above].

7. Determine whether articles of incorporation authorize number of additional shares to be issued as share dividend.

NOTE:

The articles of incorporation set forth the total number of shares of each class that the corporation is authorized to issue [see Corp. Code § 202(d), (e); see also § 9.230[1][d]]. If the shares to be issued exceed the number specified in the articles, the board will have to amend the articles of incorporation [see § 9.232].

8. Determine total fair market value of share dividend to be issued.

NOTE:

This amount is the value per share [see P 5, above] multiplied by the number of shares to be issued [see P 6, above].

9. Determine number of outstanding shares for which new dividend share will be issued.

NOTE:

This number is determined by dividing the number of shares that are to be issued as a dividend [see P 6, above] into the number of outstanding shares of the class on which the dividend is to be declared. Ordinarily, the number of dividend shares to be issued is less than the number of outstanding shares of stock on which the dividend will be declared. For example, if 250 new shares are to be issued as a dividend on a class of shares of which there are now 1,000 shares, the corporation will issue a share dividend of one share for every four outstanding shares.

10. Determine which of the following methods will be used to compensate shareholders for any fractional shares due as part of share dividend [see Corp. Code § 407]:

NOTE:

Unless a dividend of one new share for each outstanding share is declared [see P 9, above], some shareholders will become entitled to fractions of a share. For example, if a dividend of one new share for every four outstanding shares is declared, a person holding three shares is entitled to three fourths of a share, a person holding two shares is entitled to one half of a share, and a person owning one is entitled to one fourth of a share [see § 9.230[1][f]].

a. Issuance of fractional shares.

NOTE:
A certificate for a fractional share must entitle the owner to exercise voting rights, to receive dividends, and to participate in any of the assets of the corporation in the event of liquidation [see Corp. Code § 407].

b. Payment of fair value of fractional shares in cash.

NOTE:
The corporation, however, may not pay cash for fractional shares if that action would result in the cancellation of more than 10 percent of the outstanding shares of any class. A determination by the board of the fair value of fractions of a share will be conclusive in the absence of fraud [see Corp. Code § 407].

c. Issuance of scrip or warrants for fractional shares entitling holder to redeem them for full shares upon surrender of scrip or warrants aggregating a full share.

NOTE:
The corporation may issue scrip or warrants subject to the condition that they will become void if not exchanged for full shares before a specified date, to the condition that the shares for which scrip or warrants are exchangable may be sold by the corporation and the proceeds distributed to the holder of the scrip or warrants, or to any other condition that the board imposes [Corp. Code § 407]. For an example and discussion of a scrip certificate for a fraction of a share, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.204 .

11. Determine whether board's proposed declaration of dividend is proper exercise of its discretion [see Corp. Code § 309(a); see also § 9.111, P 8].

12. Determine whether proposed share dividend must be qualified under Corporate Securities Law [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706; see also Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities].

a. Determine whether share dividend is excluded from definition of "offer" or "sale" of securities under all of following criteria [Corp. Code § 25017(f)]:

NOTE:
Even if the share dividend meets all of the following criteria and therefore is not an offer or sale requiring qualification, shares issued in any stock dividend will be subject to any conditions previously imposed by the Commissioner on the shares with respect to which they are issued [Corp. Code § 25017(f)].

(1) It meets following definition of "stock dividend" used for purposes of Corporate Securities Law [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(a)]:

(a) It is issuance of additional shares (including treasury shares) of issuer to existing shareholders, or to shareholders of a class, pro rata according to shares previously held (except for cash or scrip paid for fractional shares);

(b) No consideration is paid, other than transfer from surplus to stated capital of an amount equal to or greater than par, stated, or market value of shares distributed;

(c) It is not effected by amendment to articles of incorporation stating effect on outstanding shares; and

NOTE:

For discussion of a share dividend effected by an amendment to the articles, see § 9.232[1].

(d) It is not a stock split [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.103.2; see also § 9.232[1]], exchange, or reclassification of shares.

(2) It is payable with respect to common stock solely (except for any cash or scrip paid for fractional shares) in shares of that common stock; and

NOTE:

A stock dividend does not satisfy this requirement if the shareholders are given an option to accept either cash or additional shares of common stock [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(b)].

(3) Corporation has no other class of voting stock outstanding.

NOTE:

"Voting stock" means any stock presently entitling the owner or holder to vote in elections of directors. It does not include any security that entitles the owner or holder to vote in elections of directors only upon the happening of an event or contingency that has not yet occurred [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017.1]. A stock dividend will not meet this requirement unless the dividend is payable in shares of voting common stock, and that stock is of the same class as the class upon which the dividend is paid [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(c)].

b. If share dividend is not excluded from definition of "offer" or "sale" of securities under (a), determine whether it must be either [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.107(d)]:

(1) Qualified under Corp. Code §§ 25110 (issuer transactions) or 25120 (recapitalizations and reorganizations); or

NOTE:

For a discussion of qualification, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities **,.

(2) Exempted by Corp. Code §§ 25100, 25102 (exempt issuer securities and transactions), 25103 (exempt recapitalizations and reorganizations), or 25105 (transactions exempt by rule).

NOTE:

For a discussion of these exemptions, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities .

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.114

§ 9.114 Determinations Regarding Assessments on Shares

1. Determine whether corporation's articles of incorporation expressly authorize corporation to levy and collect assessments.

NOTE:
Shares are not assessable unless the articles expressly confer the authority to levy and collect assessments [Corp. Code § 423(a)].

2. Determine whether corporation's articles contain any limitations on assessment.

NOTE:
The board's authority to levy and collect assessments is subject to any limitations set forth in the articles [Corp. Code § 423(a)].

3. Determine whether board's decision to levy assessment is made in good faith, in best interests of corporation.

NOTE:
The directors must perform their duties in good faith, in a manner believed to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders, with the care that an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances [Corp. Code § 309(a); see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

4. If more than one class or series of shares is assessable, determine which shares will be assessed.

5. Determine amount of proposed assessment.

6. Ascertain when notice of assessment will be given.

7. Determine date on which levy becomes lien on assessed shares [Corp. Code § 423(e)]:

a. Time of levy itself, if provided in articles of incorporation.

b. Time of personal service or publication of notice of assessment [see Corp. Code § 423(d); see also § 9.123[2]].

8. Determine date (or process for establishing date if agency proceedings or filings are required for assessment) when assessment will become payable [see Corp. Code § 423(b)].

9. Determine date on which assessment becomes delinquent, which is [see Corp. Code § 423(b)]:

a. Not less than 30 days from payment date [see P 8, above]; and

b. Not more than 60 days from payment date.

10. Determine date for sale of delinquent shares, which is [see Corp. Code § 423(b)]:

a. Not less than 15 days from delinquency date [see P 9, above]; and

11. Determine whether sale date will be extended (postponed) for either of following reasons [Corp. Code § 423(f)]:

a. Sale is restrained by court order.

b. Board resolves to postpone date for any other reason.

NOTE:
The board may extend the sale date from time to time, subject to certain time restrictions [Corp. Code § 423(f); see § 9.123[4]].

12. Determine place of sale of delinquent shares [Corp. Code § 423(b); see Corp. Code § 213]:

NOTE:
The place fixed for the sale must be in the county where the corporation is required to keep a copy of its bylaws [Corp. Code § 423(b); see Corp. Code § 213].

a. County where corporation's principal executive office in California is located.

b. County where corporation's principal business office in California is located, if principal executive office is outside California.

c. County of Sacramento, if corporation has neither principal executive office nor principal business office in California.

13. Determine time of sale of delinquent shares [Corp. Code § 423(b)].

14. Determine whether corporation has remedy other than sale or forfeiture of delinquent shares [Corp. Code § 423(n)]:

NOTE:
The only remedy for collection of an assessment on unpaid shares is sale or forfeiture, unless both of the following conditions exist [Corp. Code § 423(n)].

a. Ascertain if either of following expressly authorize remedy by action:

(1) Original articles or amendment of articles adopted before August 21, 1933; or

(2) Amendment of articles adopted after August 21, 1933 by unanimous shareholder consent.

b. Determine whether statement of remedy appears on face of any share certificate issued after August 21, 1933.

Because of the constant changes taking place in accounting practices, the board should obtain the professional opinion of an accountant regarding the application of "generally accepted accounting principles" to these financial tests [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares ; § 9.13 (Matthew Bender)]. It may enter into a buy-sell agreement with its shareholders before any repurchase [see Corp. Code § 402(d)]. This subsection assumes that the corporation has entered into a buy-sell agreement and that the repurchase will be accomplished pursuant to its terms. For considerations involved in drafting a buy-sell agreement, see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

1. Draft board resolution for repurchase of shares, including all of following [see § 9.222]:

NOTE:
There is no prescribed form for board resolutions [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions § 5.240[1]].

a. Board's receipt of financial statement from independent certified public accountant or other person.

b. Board's determination that corporation is able to repurchase shares without violating statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503] or other corporate restrictions set forth in articles, bylaws, or agreements [see Corp. Code § 505].

c. Board's reliance on professional opinion of accountant regarding corporation's financial status.

d. Board's determination that repurchase is in best interests of corporation.

e. Declaration of repurchase.

f. Terms of repurchase.

g. Record date for determining shareholders of shares to be repurchased [see Corp. Code § 701; see also § 9.112, P 12].

h. Authority for corporate officers to take any actions necessary to carry out resolution.

2. Have board adopt resolution.

NOTE:
The resolution must be adopted by a majority of the directors present at a duly held meeting at which a quorum is present, or by unanimous written consent [Corp. Code § 307(a)(8), (b); see Corp. Code §§ 310, 317(e); see also Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

3. Have corporate officers obtain funds for repurchase according to terms of buy-sell agreement.

4. Have corporate officers purchase shares upon surrender of share certificates, for certificated securities [see Corp. Code § 156.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(4), (15) (defined as shares represented by certificate)].

5. Upon acquisition of repurchased shares, if articles prohibit reissuance of acquired shares [see § 9.112, P 12], have corporation take appropriate actions to reflect reduction in authorized shares [see Corp. Code § 510(b)].

NOTE:
For a list of applicable procedures, see § 9.121[2], P 7.

§ 9.122 Share Dividend

[1] Drafting Resolution Declaring Dividend

NOTE:

For examples of resolutions declaring share dividends, see § 9.230 et seq.

If the number of shares issued in a stock dividend is so great that it materially reduces the market value of the outstanding shares, it may be considered a "stock split" rather than a "share dividend" for accounting purposes [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares (Matthew Bender); see also § 9.232[1][c][iv]]. If, however, the corporation actually intends to effectuate a stock split rather than a share dividend [see § 9.113, P 4], the procedures set forth in § 9.141, rather than those in this subsection, should be used.

1. State board's determination that declaration of dividend is in best interests of corporation [see Corp. Code § 309(a); see also § 9.113, P 11].

2. Set forth declaration of dividend, including [see § 9.113, PP 6, 8, 9]:

a. Number of outstanding shares on which one dividend share will be issued [see, e.g., § 9.230].

b. If applicable, class of outstanding shares on which dividend is declared [see, e.g., § 9.231].

c. Number of new shares to be issued [see, e.g., § 9.230].

d. If applicable, class of new shares to be issued [see, e.g., § 9.231].

3. State record date for dividend, which must be [see Corp. Code § 701; see also § 9.230[1]]:

a. If fixed by board in advance, not more than 60 days nor less than 10 days prior to date dividend is payable [Corp. Code § 701(a)].

b. If board has not fixed date in advance, close of business on whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)(3)]:

(1) Date that board of directors adopts resolution declaring dividend; or

(2) Sixtieth day prior to date fixed for payment of dividend.

4. Specify date on which dividend is payable.

5. Set forth estimated fair market value of each dividend share, and total fair market value of entire share dividend [see § 9.113, PP 5, 8].

6. State manner in which corporation will compensate shareholders for fractional shares [Corp. Code § 407; see § 9.113, P 10; see, e.g., § 9.230]:

a. Issuance of fractional shares.

b. Cash payment.

c. Scrip or warrants.

7. If qualification of dividend shares by Commissioner of Corporations (or exemption from qualification) is required [see § 9.113, P 12], add provision directing and authorizing corporate officers to apply for that qualification or exemption [see, e.g., § 9.231].

8. Include provision directing and authorizing chief financial officer to transfer total fair market value of share dividend [see § 9.113, P 8] from retained earnings to capital account [see, e.g., § 9.230].

9. Add provision directing and authorizing corporate officer to take any other actions necessary to effectuate share dividend [see, e.g., § 9.230].

10. If corporation must amend articles to authorize shares to be issued in share dividend [see § 9.113, P 7], add following [see, e.g., § 9.232]:

a. Provision stating reason that additional shares must be authorized.

b. Provision setting forth and approving proposed amendment of articles of incorporation.

NOTE:
For the procedures required to amend articles [see Corp. Code § 900-911], see Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles .

c. Provision calling special meeting of shareholders to approve amendment of articles, and authorizing secretary to give notice of meeting [see Corp. Code § 903; see also Ch. 8A, Shareholders' Meetings, Voting, and Agreements].

d. Provision directing and authorizing corporate officers, on approval of amendment by shareholders, to file certificate of amendment of articles [see Corp. Code § 905; see also Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles, § 10.202.

[2] Declaring and Paying Dividend

1. Have board of directors adopt resolution declaring share dividend [see §§ 9.122[1], 9.230-9.232].

NOTE:
The resolution must be adopted by a majority of the directors present at a duly held meeting at which a quorum is present, or by unanimous written consent [Corp. Code § 307(a)(8), (b); see Corp. Code §§ 310, 317(e); see also Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

2. If share dividend must be qualified by the Commissioner of Corporations under the Corporate Securities Law [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706; see also § 9.113, P 12], prepare and process necessary applications and papers for qualification of dividends [see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities ,].

3. Supervise issuance and distribution of dividend shares to shareholders of record on record date [see § 9.122[1], P 3].

§ 9.123 Assessment of Shares

[1] Levying Assessment

NOTE:
This subsection assumes that some or all of the corporation's shares are assessable [see Corp. Code § 423(a); see also § 9.114, P 1].

1. Draft board resolution that [Corp. Code § 423(b); see § 9.240]:

NOTE:
There is no prescribed form for board resolutions [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions*, § 5.240[1][b]*]].

a. States amount of assessment per share.

b. States where and to whom assessment is payable.

c. Either [see § 9.114, P 8]:

d. Fixes date on which assessment becomes delinquent if not paid [see § 9.114, P 9].

e. Fixes date for sale of delinquent shares [see § 9.114, P 10].

f. Fixes hour and place of sale [see § 9.114, PP 12, 13].

2. Have board of directors adopt resolution levying assessment.

NOTE:
The resolution must be adopted by a majority of the directors present at a duly held meeting at which a quorum is present, or by unanimous written consent [Corp. Code § 307(a)(8), (b); see Corp. Code §§ 310, 317(e); see also Ch 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

[2] Giving Notice of Assessment

1. Draft notice of assessment, including all of following in substantially the form set forth by statute [Corp. Code § 423(c); see § 9.241 (statutory format)]:

a. Corporation's name.

b. Location of corporation's principal executive office.

c. That board has levied specified amount per share on designated classes.

d. Delinquency date [Corp. Code § 423(b); see § 9.114, P 9].

e. That delinquent shares will be sold.

f. Sale date, time, and place [Corp. Code § 423(b); see § 9.114, PP 10, 12, 13].

g. Delinquency penalty.

2. Ensure that notice is served on each holder of record of assessed shares on or before date assessment is payable [Corp. Code § 423(c); see § 9.114, P 8], either [Corp. Code § 423(d)]:

a. By personal service.

b. By both:
(1) First class mail [see Corp. Code § 113], addressed to shareholder at:
(a) Last address appearing on books of corporation;

(b) Address given by shareholder to corporation for purpose of notice; or

(c) If no address specified in (a) or (b), above, appears or is given, address of corporation's principal executive office.

(2) Publication in newspaper of general circulation in:

(a) County where corporation's principal executive office is located; or

(b) Adjoining county, if there is no newspaper in county specified in (a), above.

[3] Collecting Assessment Before Delinquency Date

1. Instruct corporate officers to accept assessment payments from shareholders.

2. Instruct corporate officers to collect penalty of 5 percent of assessment amount from any shareholder who pays assessment after delinquency date [see Corp. Code § 423(g); see also § 9.123[1], P 1(d)].

[4] Extending Date for Sale of Delinquent Shares

NOTE:
The corporation may extend (postpone) the sale date fixed in the levy of assessment [see § 9.123[1], P 1(e)] from time to time, or when the sale is restrained by court order [Corp. Code § 423(f)].

1. If corporation intends to postpone sale [Corp. Code § 423(f)]:

a. Advise board that new date must be 30 days or less after sale date last fixed.

b. Have board enter order for new sale date on records of corporation.

2. Have secretary or other person authorized to conduct sale announce postponement at time and place of sale last fixed [Corp. Code § 423(f)].

3. If sale date is postponed for more than five days after date last fixed [Corp. Code § 423(f)]:

a. Draft notice to shareholders, setting forth date and time to which sale has been postponed [see § 9.242[1]].

b. Mail notice to shareholders whose shares are subject to the sale.

[5] Selling Delinquent Shares

NOTE:
As used in this Subsection, the term "delinquent shares" means those shares that are subject to an assessment that was not paid by the delinquency date [see Corp. Code § 423(b), (c)]. An assessment on shares becomes a lien on those shares [see Corp. Code § 423(e)]. Generally, the corporation's only remedy for the collection of the assessment is the sale or forfeiture of the shares [see Corp. Code § 423(n); see also § 9.114, P 14].

1. At date and time appointed for sale, have corporate officer or agent [see Corp. Code § 423(h)]:

NOTE:

The sale date may be the date specified in the notice of levy [see § 9.123[2]], or the date to which the sale was postponed [see § 9.123[4]].

a. Determine highest bidder on delinquent shares.

NOTE:
The "highest bidder" is the person offering to pay the assessment and penalty of 5 percent of the assessment amount for the smallest number of shares. The corporation is not required to accept any offer for a fraction of a share [see Corp. Code § 423(h)].

If no bidder offers to pay the assessment amount and penalty, the shares will be forfeited to the corporation in satisfaction of the assessment and penalty [see Corp. Code § 423(h)].

b. Sell or cause to be sold to highest bidder for cash as many shares of each delinquent holder as necessary to pay assessment and penalty.

2. Have corporation transfer shares to highest bidder on corporation's share register, upon his or her payment of assessment and penalty [Corp. Code § 423(h)].

3. If shares are certificated securities [see Corp. Code § 156.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(4), (15) (defined as shares evidenced by certificate)]:

a. Have shareholder surrender certificate to corporation for cancellation [Corp. Code § 423(j)].

NOTE:
This duty may be enforced by court order or decree, and the holder or owner will be liable for damages to the corporation for failure to surrender the certification for cancellation upon demand without good cause or excuse [Corp. Code § 423(j)]. Any certificate not so surrendered becomes null and void, and ceases to be evidence of the right or title of the holder or any transferee to the shares purporting to be represented thereby. Neither the corporation nor the purchaser of those shares incurs any liability to any such tranferee [Corp. Code § 423(j)].

b. Have corporation issue new share certificate to highest bidder [Corp. Code § 423(h)].

NOTE:
The purchaser of any shares at a sale for delinquent assessments is entitled to the issuance of a new certificate representing the shares purchased [Corp. Code § 423(j)].

4. If shares are uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(14) ("security" defined), (18) ("uncertificated security" defined)]:

NOTE:
For coverage of uncertificated securities, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.20[2].

a. Inform holder or owner of delinquent shares that he or she has no further rights with respect to those shares [Corp. Code § 423(j)].

b. Have corporation issue new initial transaction statement [see Corp. Code § 171.1; (defined as statement describing uncertificated securities)] to highest bidder [Corp. Code § 423(h)].

5. Prepare certificate of sale, setting forth all of following [Corp. Code § 423(k); see § 9.243]:

a. Time and place of sale, and any postponement of sale.

b. Quantity and particular description of shares sold.

c. Person to whom shares were sold.

d. Price for which shares were sold.

e. Fact of payment of purchase money.

6. Have secretary (or assistant secretary) execute certificate.

NOTE:

The certificate of the secretary or assistant secretary of the corporation is prima facie evidence of all of the following facts. Copies of the certificate, certified by the secretary or an assistant secretary, are prima facie evidence of the facts stated on that certificate [Corp. Code § 423(k)].

7. Instruct secretary (or assistant secretary) to file certificate in office of the corporation [Corp. Code § 423(k)].

(1) Distribution of its own stock.

(2) Distribution of cash.

b. It must recognize gain as if it had sold property to shareholders as result of following transactions [I.R.C. § 311(b); see § 9.200[1]]:

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.141

§ 9.141 Effectuating Stock Split

NOTE:

In certain circumstances, an intended share dividend effectuated pursuant to an amendment to the articles may be considered a stock split rather than a share dividend [see § 9.232[1]]. If, however, the original intent of the transaction is effectuate a stock split (i.e., increase the number of outstanding shares and thereby reduce the price per share, without affecting the corporation's financial structure [see § 9.113, P 4]), the corporation should use the procedures set forth in this section, rather than those set forth in § 9.122.

A "stock split" is the pro rata division, by means other than a share dividend, of all the outstanding shares of a class into a greater number of shares of the same class by an amendment to the articles stating the effect on the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 188]. It is not a "distribution" [see Corp. Code § 166], requiring compliance with statutory financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503].

For further comparison of share dividends and stock splits, see § 9.232.

1. Determine all of following:

a. Present market price of outstanding shares.

b. Number of shares required to be issued to achieve intended market price per share.

c. Whether proposed stock split requires qualification under Corporate Securities Law [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706, 25103(f) (exemption for certain stock splits); see also Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues ; Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities].

d. Effect of proposed stock split on all outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 907(b) (requiring amended articles to state effect)].

2. Draft resolution authorizing stock split and amending articles.

NOTE:
A stock split may be effected only by an amendment of the articles stating the effect on the outstanding shares [Corp. Code §§ 188, 907(b)]. For an example and discussion of such a resolution, see Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles .

3. Have board and outstanding shares approve amendment [Corp. Code § 902(a); see Corp. Code § 152].

NOTE:
However, if the corporation has only one class of shares outstanding, an amendment effecting only a stock split may be adopted by approval of the board alone [Corp. Code § 902(c)].

4. Prepare and file certificate of amendment [see Corp. Code §§ 905-909; Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles].

5. If necessary, obtain qualification of share issuance [see Corp. Code §§ 25103(f), 25110, 25120; see also Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities].

6. Direct corporate officers to issue new shares and cancel old outstanding shares of same class [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].

7. Notify holders of certificated securities [see Corp. Code § 156.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(4), (15)] on record date to exchange share certificates for new certificates representing shares issued under stock split.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Cash or Property Dividends

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.200

§ 9.200 Resolution Declaring Cash Dividend From Retained Earnings

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors declaring a cash dividend on its outstanding shares. It provides that the dividend will be paid from the corporation's retained earnings.

For an example and discussion of a resolution declaring a dividend to be paid from a source other than retained earnings, see § 9.201[2]. For an example and discussion of a resolution declaring a dividend to be paid in property, such as shares of another corporation, see § 9.203[2].

[b] Board's Declaration of Dividends

[i] Power to Act

Subject to any limitations in the articles or in the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 100-2319], the board of directors may exercise all corporate powers, including the power to deal in and with the corporation's own shares and securities [Corp. Code § 300(a); see Corp. Code § 207(d) (corporate powers)]. The board may delegate its power to declare dividends to an executive committee, with certain restrictions [see Corp. Code § 311; § 9.204[2]].

The board's discretionary power over the disposition of the corporation's surplus funds is absolute, to the extent it is exercised legally [see Mulcahy v. Hibernia S. & L. Soc. (1904) 144 Cal. 219, 223, 77 P. 910 ; see also [ii], below]. Therefore, a shareholder, in the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion, does not have any right to compel the board of directors of a corporation to declare and pay a dividend [Carew v. Hibernia Bank (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 764, 769, 9 Cal. Rptr. 905] . The board's action in setting surplus funds aside as a reserve instead of using them to pay a dividend is not subject to court control [Mulcahy v. Hibernia S. & L. Soc. (1904) 144 Cal. 219, 223, 77 P. 910 ; see [c], below].

[ii] Statutory Financial Limitations

California law no longer restricts the sources from which dividends may be paid [see former Corp. Code § 1500 (repealed by Stats 1975, ch. 682, effective Jan. 1, 1977)]. Instead, the primary limitation on the board's discretion to declare a dividend is the requirement that the corporation pass the financial tests set forth in Corp. Code §§ 500-503. To make a valid "distribution to its shareholders" [see Corp. Code § 166], a corporation first must meet either the "retained earnings" [see Corp. Code § 500(a)] or the "remaining assets" test [see Corp. Code § 500(b)]. The retained earnings test requires the corporation's retained earnings immediately prior to a distribution to equal or exceed the amount of the proposed distribution [Corp. Code § 500(a)]. The term "retained earnings" means the accumulated net income earned by a corporation from the date of incorporation or reorganization, less distributions made to shareholders and other charges [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 5, Income Statement (Matthew Bender)]. For further discussion, see § 9.11[2]. This resolution is designed to meet that test. For a form designed to meet the remaining assets test, see § 9.201.

In addition to the initial financial tests, a corporation must meet other tests relating to general solvency [see Corp. Code § 501] and liquidation and dividend preferences [see Corp. Code §§ 502-503]. For discussion, see § 9.11[5], [6].

Whether or not a corporation satisfies the financial tests is determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [see Corp. Code §§ 114, 500-511; see also § 9.13]. However, a corporation may be exempt from one or more of these tests pursuant to a statutory exemption [see Corp. Code §§ 500(c) (broker-dealers), 503.1, 503.2 (deceased and disabled shareholders), 504 (regulated investment companies and real estate investment trusts), 511 (holders in due course); see also § 9.12].

[iii] Limitations Imposed by Corporate Instruments

The General Corporation Law specifically permits the corporation's articles, bylaws, or agreements to impose additional restrictions on the board's discretion to declare dividends [Corp. Code § 505; see Corp. Code § 204(d) (permissive article provisions), 212(b) (permissive bylaw provisions)]. Such limitations are particularly common with respect to preferred shares [see [1][c] [iv], below]. For example, the board may be required to pay dividends "when earned" [see Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 141, Rights and Duties of Directors and Shareholders With Respect to Dividends (Matthew Bender)].

[iv] Limitations Imposed by Duty of Good Faith

The directors must perform their duties in good faith, in the best interests of the corporation, and with the care, including reasonable inquiry, that an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under like circumstances [see Corp. Code § 309(a); see also Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]. In performing their duties, the directors are entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements (including financial statements and other financial data) prepared by any of the following, as long as the directors act in good faith, after reasonable inquiry when indicated by the circumstances, and without knowledge that would cause that reliance to be unwarranted [Corp. Code § 309(b)]:

- Officers or employees of the corporation whom the directors believe to be reliable and competent in the matters presented.

- Counsel, independent accountants, or other persons regarding matters that the directors believe to be within those persons' professional or expert competence.

- Committees of the board on which the directors do not serve, regarding matters within the committees' designated authority that the directors believe to merit confidence.

The board's declaration of a dividend generally requires reliance on an accountant, regarding the corporation's financial ability to pay the dividend [see Form].

[v] Method of Making Declaration

Every act or decision done or made by a majority of the directors present at a duly held meeting at which a quorum is present is the act of the board [Corp. Code § 300(a)(8); see Corp. Code §§ 310, 317(e) (exceptions)]. At board meetings, a majority of the authorized number of directors constitutes a quorum of the board for the transaction of business [Corp. Code § 300(a)(7)]. The board authorizes corporate actions by resolution, which need not follow any prescribed form [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions, § 5.240].

[c] Shareholders' Right to Dividends

[i] In General

The shares of a corporation represent the holders' proprietary interest in the corporation [see Corp. Code § 184]. However, a corporation has a legal personality that is separate and distinct from that of its shareholders. Shareholders, through their ownership of corporate shares, own an interest in that separate legal personality, rather than any vested ownership rights in either the corporate earnings or the corporate property. Therefore, shareholders' rights in corporate earnings and property are merely an expectancy [Miller v. McColgan (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 110 P.2d 419] . The shareholder becomes the owner of a portion of the corporate earnings or property only when the board declares a dividend and sets aside a portion of the earnings for dividend payments, or liquidates the corporation [Miller v. McColgan (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 110 P.2d 419] .

[ii] Record Date

In order for the corporation to determine the shareholders who are entitled to receive payment of any dividend or other distribution, the board may fix a record date in advance. That date must not be more than 60 days nor less than 10 days prior to the date for payment of the dividend [Corp. Code § 701(a)]. If the board does not fix a record date in advance, the record date for determining shareholders entitled to receive a dividend is at the close of business on the day that the board adopts the resolution declaring the dividend, or the 60th day prior to the dividend payment date, whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)].

Only those persons who are shareholders at the close of business on the record date are entitled to receive notice and to receive the dividend or distribution, notwithstanding any transfer of any shares on the corporation's books after the record date but before the payment date, except as otherwise provided (1) in the articles, (2) by agreement, or (3) in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 701(d); see Corp. Code § 185 (shareholder defined)]. With respect to transfers between the declaration date and record date, it appears that the right to receive the dividend vests [see [iii], below] in the person who appears on the books of the corporation on the record date. If the transfer is recorded on the corporation's books before the record date, the transferee of the shares is entitled to receive the dividend. However, if the transfer is not recorded on the books by that date, the transferor retains the right to receive the dividend [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares , § 142.05[4]]. The rules of the applicable market govern the payment of dividends on shares traded on a securities exchange [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares , § 142.05[4]; Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 141, Rights and Duties of Directors and Shareholders With Respect to Dividends (Matthew Bender)]. This form assumes that the shares are not publicly traded.

[iii] Vesting of Right

Upon the declaration of a dividend by the corporation's board of directors, the share of the dividend payable to each shareholder vests in that shareholder as an individual [Meyers v. El Tejon Oil & Refining Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 184, 188, 174 P.2d 1 ; Smith v. Taecker (1933) 133 Cal. App. 351, 352, 24 P.2d 182] . The mere declaration of a dividend creates a debt owed by the corporation to the shareholders on whose shares the dividend was declared [Smith v. Taecker (1933) 133 Cal. App. 351, 352, 24 P.2d 182] . After the dividend is declared, a shareholder's vested right to the dividend cannot be revoked without his or her consent [Meyers v. El Tejon Oil & Refining Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 184, 188, 174 P.2d 1] . To be irrevocable, however, the dividend must be fully declared [Maloney v. Western Cooperage Co. (9th Cir. [Ore.] 1939) 103 F.2d 992, 994] . A declaration of a dividend that does not create a definite, final, irrevocable, and enforceable debt against the corporation in favor of its shareholders is not a fully declared dividend and may be revoked by the corporation [Maloney v. Western Cooperage Co. (9th Cir. [Ore.] 1939) 103 F.2d 992, 994 ; United States v. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1938) 97 F.2d 413, 415] . For example, a dividend was not fully declared and was revocable when the resolution declaring it gave the president of the corporation the power to reduce it if, in his discretion, he deemed it advisable [United States v. Baldy (9th Cir. [Ore.] 1939) 108 F.2d 591, 591-592] .

For further coverage of shareholders' rights to dividends, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 142.05.

[iv] Preferred Shares

A corporation may issue classes or series of shares, or both, with any rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions that it sets forth in its articles [Corp. Code § 400(a)]. If a corporation is authorized to issue more than one class of shares, or if any class will have two or more series, the articles of incorporation must set forth the number of shares of each class or series, the designation of each class or series, and the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions for each class or series [Corp. Code § 202(e); see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation].

The class of shares known as "preferred shares" usually has a preference over common shares with respect to payment of dividends, distribution of assets on liquidation, or both [see Corp. Code §§ 159, 176 (definition of "common" and "preferred" shares)]. A dividend preference is the right to receive dividends in any period before other classes or series of shares. It often provides for a regular periodic dividend. A "cumulative" preference entitles the preferred shareholders to receive the dividends for a given period and all prior dividend periods before the common shareholders are entitled to receive any dividends. A "noncumulative" preference entitles the preferred shareholders only to declared dividends, i.e., their right to dividends in a given period does not carry forward to subsequent periods [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness , § 127.03 [3]]. "Participating" preferred shares are those that are entitled to further dividend distributions after they have received their fixed dividend. "Nonparticipating" preferred shares are not entitled to any additional dividends paid on common shares [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness , § 127.03[3]].

For further discussion of the nature of preferred shares, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.15. For examples and discussion of article provisions regarding dividend preferences on preferred shares, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, §§ 3.240-3.242.

[d] Income Tax Consequences of Cash Dividend

A corporate distribution may or may not be treated as a "dividend" for purposes of federal tax law, regardless of its treatment for purposes of California law [see Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 142, General Tax Considerations in Connection With Declarations and Payments of Dividends (Matthew Bender)]. For tax purposes, a "dividend" is any distribution of property made by a corporation to its shareholders out of its current or accumulated earnings and profits [I.R.C. § 316(a)]. Every distribution is deemed to be made out of earnings and profits to the extent of the distribution, and is made from the most recently accumulated earnings and profits [I.R.C. § 316(a)]. The term "property" includes money, securities, and any property other than the corporation's own stock or right to acquire that stock [I.R.C. § 317(a)].

A corporation recognizes no gain or loss on the distribution of cash with respect to its stock [I.R.C. § 311(a)(2)]. Its earnings and profits, to the extent of the distribution, are decreased by the amount of money distributed [I.R.C. § 312(a)(1)]. With respect to the shareholder receiving the distribution, the portion of the distribution that is a "dividend" (that is, paid from the corporation's earnings and profits) must be included in gross income [I.R.C. §§1(h)(11), 61(a)(7), 301(a), (c); see I.R.C. § 316(a)]. Qualifying dividends received by individuals are taxable at capital gains rates, effective generally for tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009 [see I.R.C. § (h)(11); Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions for dividend taxation at capital gains rates)]. The portion, if any, of the distribution that is not a dividend is first applied against the shareholder's basis of the stock, and any portion that exceeds the basis is treated as gain from the sale or exchange of property [I.R.C. § 301(c)(2), (3)].

The taxation of distributions in California is determined in accordance with federal law, except as otherwise provided [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17321].

For further coverage of the tax consequences of dividends, see Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 142, General Tax Considerations in Connection With Declarations and Payments of Dividends (Matthew Bender).

[e] Federal Securities Laws

If a corporation's shares are publicly traded, additional rules and regulations imposed by the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. § 78a et seq.] and the applicable stock exchange may apply to corporate distributions and dividends [see, e.g., 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-17 (requiring announcement of dividend 10 days before record date)]. The forms in this chapter assume that the corporation's securities are not publicly traded. For further coverage of qualification and exemption under federal securities laws, see Ch. 6H. Qualification of Securities .

PART IV. FORMS
A. Cash or Property Dividends

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.201

§ 9.201 Resolution Declaring Cash Dividend From Source Other Than Retained Earnings

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution declaring a cash dividend from a source other than the corporation's retained earnings. This comment covers only those topics that are unique to this form. Discussion of the issues generally applicable to the declaration of dividends is set forth in § 9.200.

For the notice that must be given to the shareholders when a dividend is declared from a source other than retained earnings, see § 9.202[2]. For an example and discussion of a resolution declaring a cash dividend to be paid from retained earnings, see § 9.201[2]. For a resolution declaring a property dividend payable in shares of another corporation, see § 9.203[2].

[b] Financial Tests

Before a corporation may make a valid "distribution to its shareholders," it must meet the requirements of several financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law. First, it must meet either the "retained earnings" [see Corp. Code § 500(a); Form 9.200 and comment] or the "remaining assets" test [see Corp. Code § 500(b)]. Because the dividend declared in this form is from a source other than retained earnings, it must meet the remaining assets test. Under that test, a corporation or one of its subsidiaries may make a distribution to the corporation's shareholders if, immediately after giving effect to the distribution, both of the following apply [Corp. Code § 500(b); see § 9.13 (accounting terms of art defined)]:

(1) The sum of the corporation's assets (excluding goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses, and deferred charges) would be at least equal to 1 1/4 times its liabilities (not including deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits); and

(2) The corporation's current assets would be at least equal to its current liabilities; or at least equal to

11/4 times its current liabilities, if the average of the corporation's earnings before taxes on income and before interest expense for the two preceding fiscal years was less than the average of the interest expense of the corporation for those fiscal years. However, this aspect of the test does not apply to a corporation that does not classify its assets into current and fixed under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(b); see Corp. Code § 114]. For further discussion, see § 9.11[3].

The remaining assets test may be used, for example, by a "wasting assets" corporation such as a mining corporation. Because this type of corporation must deplete its natural resource assets to produce income, and reflect that depletion pursuant to a depletion deduction or expense, it generally has no retained earnings from which to pay dividends [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 4, Balance Sheet: Owners' Equity (Matthew Bender); former Corp. Code § 1503 (definition)]. It may, however, have sufficient assets to comply with the remaining assets test and therefore make a valid distribution to its shareholders [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares , § 142.02 (Matthew Bender)].

In addition to the initial financial tests, a corporation must meet other tests relating to general solvency [see Corp. Code § 501], liquidation and dividend preferences [see Corp. Code §§ 502-503], and any other requirements set forth in the corporate articles, bylaws, or agreements [see Corp. Code § 505; § 9.11[5]-[7]]. Whether or not a corporation satisfies these financial tests is determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [see Corp. Code §§ 114, 500-511; § 9.13]. However, a corporation may be exempt from one or more of these tests pursuant to a statutory exemption [see Corp. Code §§ 500(c) (broker-dealers), 503.1, 503.2 (deceased and disabled shareholders), 504 (regulated investment companies and real estate investment trusts), 511 (holders in due course); see also § 9.12].

[c] Notice Requirement

When the board declares a dividend from a source other than retained earnings, it must give notice to the shareholders of that fact [Corp. Code § 507; see § 9.202[2]]. This form requires a corporate officer to prepare and give such a notice [see [2], below]. For further discussion, see § 9.202[1].

[d] Effect of Dividend Source on Tax Treatment

For federal income tax purposes, a distribution is not treated as a taxable "dividend" unless it is made from earnings and profits [see I.R.C. §§ 301(a), (c), 316(a); see also § 9.200[1][d]]. This form declares a dividend from a source other than the corporation's earnings. Nonetheless, for tax purposes, every distribution is deemed to be made from earnings and profits to the extent of the distribution [I.R.C. § 316(a)]. Therefore, regardless of the source of the distribution specified by the board of directors for purposes of California law, the distribution will nonetheless be taxed to the shareholders as a dividend to the extent of any earnings and profits [see I.R.C. § 316(a); see also Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 142, General Tax Considerations in Connection With Declarations and Payments of Dividends (Matthew Bender)].

§ 9.203 Resolution Declaring Property Dividend

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution declaring a property dividend on the outstanding shares. It provides that the dividend is payable in shares of another corporation. General coverage of the declaration of dividends is set forth in t§ 9.200. This form assumes that the dividend will be declared from retained earnings. Discussion of the notice requirement applicable to dividends made from a source other than retained earnings [see Corp. Code § 507] is included in § 9.201. This comment covers only the topics that are unique to this form.

For an example and discussion of a resolution declaring a cash dividend from retained earnings, see § 9.200[2]. For a resolution declaring a cash dividend from a source other than retained earnings, and the notice required to be given to shareholders under those circumstances, see §§ 9.02[2] and 9.03[2].

[b] Amount of Property Distribution

[i] In General

Unlike a cash dividend, the amount of a property dividend is not readily apparent. That amount must be determined for purposes of the corporation's ability to meet the financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [see [ii], below], and for federal income tax purposes [see [iii], below].

[ii] Financial Tests

For purposes of the financial tests applicable to distributions [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; § 9.200[1][b] [ii]], the amount of any corporate distribution payable in property is determined on the basis of the value at which the distributed property is carried on the corporation's financial statements, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500]. Generally accepted accounting principles usually require a corporation to carry the shares of another corporation on its financial statements as current assets, which are normally valued at their cost [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 2, Balance Sheet: Assets (Matthew Bender); see also § 9.13].

[iii] Federal Income Tax

For federal income tax purposes, the distribution of stock in another corporation is treated as a property distribution, rather than as a stock dividend [Treas. Reg. § 1.61-9(b); see I.R.C. § 305]. For tax coverage of stock dividends, see § 9.230.

A corporation recognizes neither gain nor loss on the distribution of unappreciated property to its shareholders [I.R.C. § 311(a); see § 9.200[1][d]]. However, if a corporation distributes appreciated property to its shareholders, and the fair market value of exceeds its adjusted basis, the corporation must recognize gain to the same extent as if it had sold that property to the shareholder at fair market value [I.R.C. § 311(b)(1)].

If the distributed property has not appreciated, the corporation's earnings and profits are decreased by the adjusted basis of the property [I.R.C. § 312(a)(3)]. If the property has appreciated, earnings and profits are increased by the excess of the fair market value over the adjusted basis [I.R.C. § 312(b)(1)], and decreased by the fair market value of the property [I.R.C. § 312(b)(2); see I.R.C. § 312(a)(3)].

The amount of the property distribution to the shareholders is the fair market value of the property on the distribution date, reduced by the amount of liabilities attached or assumed [I.R.C. § 301(b)]. The portion that is a "dividend" (i.e., paid from the corporation's earnings and profits) must be included in gross income [I.R.C. §§ 61(a)(7), 301(a), (c); see I.R.C. § 316(a)]. The portion, if any, of the distribution that is not a dividend is first applied against the shareholder's basis of the stock, and any portion that exceeds the basis is treated as a gain from the sale or exchange of property [I.R.C. § 301(c)(2), (3); see § 9.200[1][d]].

The taxation of distributions in California is determined in accordance with federal law, except as otherwise provided [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17321].

A. Cash or Property Dividends

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.204

§ 9.204 Resolution Designating Executive Committee With Power to Declare Dividends

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution by the board of directors creating an executive committee with the power to declare dividends and make distributions to the shareholders. It should be used when the board intends that a committee, rather than the entire board, handle matters related to shareholder dividends.

For coverage of resolutions in general, see § 9.200. For board resolutions declaring dividends, see §§ 9.200[2]-9.202[2]. For an example and discussion of a board resolution designating a board committee, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions, § 5.245.

[b] Designation of Committees

The directors must perform their duties, including the adoption of resolutions, in good faith, in the best interests of the corporation, and with reasonable care [see Corp. Code § 309(a); Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]. To the extent consistent with that rule, a corporation's board of directors may, by resolution adopted by a majority of the authorized number of directors, designate one or more committees to exercise all of the board's authority, with the exception of certain specified powers [Corp. Code § 311]. The board cannot empower a committee with the authority to make a distribution [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition); § 9.10[1]], except at a rate, in a periodic amount, or within a price range, set forth in the articles of incorporation or determined by the board [Corp. Code § 311(f)].

The committee appointed by the board must consist of at least two directors to serve on the committee at the pleasure of the board. The board may also designate one or more directors as alternate members of any committee, who may replace any absent members at any meeting of the committee. The appointment of members or alternate members of a committee requires the vote of a majority of the authorized number of directors [Corp. Code § 311].

The resolution in this form appoints two or more directors as members of the committee, and appoints other directors as alternate members of the committee. It also contains limitations on the committee's authority to declare a dividend [see Form].

[c] Committee Meetings

The General Corporation Law provisions governing meetings of the board of directors also apply to committees of the board [Corp. Code § 307(c)]. Those provisions, which are subject to any specific article or bylaw provisions [see Corp. Code § 307(a)], govern the manner of calling and holding a meeting, notice, adjournment, quorums, and action taken without a meeting [see Corp. Code § 307(a), (b)]. For further coverage of those topics, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions .

Resolution Designating Executive Committee With Power to Declare Dividends

RESOLUTION CREATING EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

WHEREAS, it is in the best interests of this corporation to have matters relating to dividends, that would otherwise come before the entire Board of Directors, brought before and acted upon by a lesser number of directors constituting a committee, with the same effect as if acted on by the entire Board;

WHEREAS, the bylaws of this corporation do not limit the Board's power to delegate its authority to committees;

IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED, that a committee of _____ [number not less than two] directors, to be called "the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors," is hereby created to serve _____ [specify time, e.g., until further resolution of the Board];

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the first Directors appointed to the Executive Committee created by this resolution are _____ [list names];

RESOLVED FURTHER, that Directors _____ [list names] are hereby appointed as alternate members of the Executive Committee created by this resolution, to replace and act for any absent member of the committee at any meeting of the committee;

RESOLVED FURTHER, that each member of the Executive Committee shall serve until he or she resigns, ceases to be a Director of the corporation, or is replaced by a successor appointed by the Board;

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the first meeting of the Executive Committee shall be held on _____[date], at _____[time], at _____[address];

RESOLVED FURTHER, that future regular or special meetings of the Executive Committee shall be held in accordance with Corporations Code Section 307, subject to any applicable article or bylaw provisions;

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the Executive Committee created by this resolution is hereby granted all of the power and authority authorized by Corporations Code Section 311 that a corporation's Board of Directors may delegate to a committee. The Executive Committee specifically is granted the power to cause this corporation to make a "distribution to its shareholders" as that term is defined in Corporations Code Section 166, as long as the distribution to its shareholders is _____ [at a rate of $_____ per share or a regularly quarterly dividend of $_____ per share or within the range of $_____-$_____ per share or within the range specified in Article _____ of the Articles of Incorporation].

RESOLVED FURTHER, that _____ [number that constitutes a majority of the members] members of the Executive Committee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business;

RESOLVED FURTHER, that transactions of any meeting of the Executive Committee, however called and noticed or wherever held, shall be as valid as though had at a meeting duly held after regular call and notice, if a quorum is present, and if any member who did not receive notice either attends the meeting without protesting the lack of notice, or either before or after the meeting signs a written waiver of notice or consent to the holding of the meeting or an approval of its minutes, and all such waivers, consents, or approvals are filed with the corporate records or are made a part of the minutes of the meeting;

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the Executive Committee shall keep minutes of all of its proceedings, and distribute copies of the minutes to all members of the Executive Committee; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the officers of this corporation are authorized and directed to take any other actions that are necessary to carry out the purpose and intent of this resolution, including the execution, acknowledgment, and filing of any documents, certificates, writings, or book entries that may be required to carry out this resolution.

§ 9.220 Resolution Declaring Redemption of Shares

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors declaring a redemption of its shares. Board resolutions generally are discussed in § 9.200[1].

For a notice of redemption, see § 9.221. For a resolution authorizing the repurchase of shares pursuant to a buy-sell agreement, see § 9.222. For coverage of redemptions made in liquidation of the corporation, see Ch. 12, Winding Up and Dissolution .

[b] Nature of "Redemption"

The General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 100-2319] does not define the term "redemption." However, "redemption of shares" generally means a corporation's reacquisition of shares pursuant to authorization set forth in its articles (and on the share certificate itself) to repurchase the shares at a stated price [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 9, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 144 (Matthew Bender); Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 147, Acquisition by a Corporation of Its Own Shares (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Issuance of Redeemable Shares

A corporation may provide in its articles of incorporation for one or more classes or series of shares that are redeemable, in whole or in part, (1) at the option of the corporation, or (2) to the extent and upon the happening of one or more specified events [Corp. Code § 402(a); see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation]. The corporation may also provide in its articles for one or more classes or series of preferred shares that are redeemable, in whole or in part, (1) as provided above, (2) at the option of the holder, or (3) upon the vote of at least a majority of the outstanding shares of the class or series to be redeemed [Corp. Code § 402(a)]. If the articles permit partial redemption of a class or series of shares, they must prescribe whether the method of selecting the shares to be redeemed will be (1) pro rata, (2) by lot, (3) at the discretion of the board, (4) in a manner approved by the board, or (5) as set forth in the articles [Corp. Code § 402(b)]. For examples of share certificates that set forth redemption options, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

Generally, a corporation is prohibited from issuing or redeeming redeemable common shares unless it has outstanding a class of common shares that is not subject to redemption [Corp. Code § 402(c)]. However, there are three exceptions from this general prohibition. The first is for shares issued by an open end investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940[Corp. Code § 402(c); see 15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1-80a-64]. The second exception is for shares of a corporation that has a license or franchise from a governmental agency to conduct its business or that is a member corporation of a national securities exchange registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 78a-78ll], and whose license, franchise, or membership is conditioned on some or all of the shareholders possessing prescribed qualifications, to the extent necessary to reinstate or prevent the loss of the license, franchise, or membership [Corp. Code § 402(c)]. Finally, professional corporations are exempt from the general prohibition [Corp. Code § 402(c); see Corp. Code § 13401(b) (definition); see also Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations].

For further discussion of redeemable shares, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation . The remainder of this comment discusses the redemption process.

[d] Restrictions on Redemption

[i] Financial Tests

A redemption of shares for cash or property (including the redemption by a subsidiary of the corporation) constitutes a "distribution" to the corporation's shareholders [Corp. Code § 166; see § 9.10[1]]. A corporation's unlimited right to repurchase its own shares, like the unlimited right to pay dividends, could result in a depletion of the corporation's assets to the detriment of creditors and shareholders whose shares were not redeemed [see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 147, Acquisition by a Corporation of Its Own Shares (Matthew Bender); § 9.11[1]]. The corporation, therefore, is subject to the financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 402(d); see Corp. Code §§ 500-503], unless it is subject to a statutory exemption. For a discussion of those tests and exemptions, see § 9.200.

[ii] Corporate Instruments

Even when the corporation satisfies the financial requirements of Corp. Code §§ 500-503, it nonetheless may be prohibited from making a "distribution" to its shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166]. The General Corporation Law permits additional restrictions on a corporation's right to declare dividends or repurchase, or redeem shares, to be set forth in the corporation's articles, bylaws, or agreements [Corp. Code § 505].

[iii] Directors' Duty of Good Faith

The directors must perform their duties, including the declaration of "distributions" to the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166], in good faith, in the best interests of the corporation, and with reasonable care [see Corp. Code § 309(a); Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]. Thus, their discretion to redeem shares is limited by the corporation's best interests, even when the corporation satisfies the financial requirements of Corp. Code §§ 500-503. For example, it would be an abuse of the directors' discretion to improperly discriminate between one class or series of redeemable shares and another [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 144.04 (Matthew Bender)]. For further discussion of the directors' duties of good faith, see § 9.200[1][b].

[e] Use of Sinking Fund for Redemption

A "sinking fund" is a special fund of money used to extinguish a long-term debt or other obligation, which a corporation may create by either (1) periodically setting aside an amount to be used for the specified purpose, or (2) delivering an amount to a third party trustee to be held for that purpose [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 144.04 (Matthew Bender)]. For an example of an article provision creating a sinking fund from retained earnings for redemption purposes, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

A corporation may create a sinking fund for the redemption or repurchase of its shares only if it passes the financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 402(d); see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; see also [1][d] [i], above]. Generally, a corporate "distribution" requiring compliance with those tests takes place at the time that the corporation transfers cash or property to its shareholders [Corp. Code § 166]. In the case of a sinking fund payment, the corporation "transfers cash or property to its shareholders" when it (1) delivers the cash or property to a trustee for the holders of preferred shares to be used for the redemption of the shares, or (2) physically segregates the cash or property in trust for that purpose [Corp. Code § 166]. Therefore, a corporation cannot make a valid payment to a sinking fund unless, at the time of that payment, it is able to pass the required financial tests [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 402(d)]. If the corporation does not comply with the financial tests, the holder of shares to be purchased or redeemed will not become a creditor of the corporation [Corp. Code § 402(d)].

[f] Terms of Redemption

The redemption must be made at the price, at the time, and upon the terms and conditions, stated in the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 402(b)]. The term "redemption price" is defined as the amount payable, in cash, property, securities, or any combination of these, on shares of any class or series upon the redemption of those shares [Corp. Code § 180]. Unless otherwise provided, the redemption price is payable in cash [Corp. Code § 180].

[g] Record Date

To determine the shareholders whose shares are subject to redemption, the board may fix a record date in advance, which must not be more than 60 nor less than 10 days prior to the date of redemption [Corp. Code § 701(a)]. If the board does not fix a date in advance, the record date is the close of business on the day that the board adopts the resolution authorizing the redemption, or the 60th day prior to the redemption date, whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(a)(3); see § 9.200[1][c][ii]].

[h] Redemption Procedures

[i] In General

A corporation may redeem any or all shares that are redeemable at its option by (1) giving notice of redemption and (2) paying or depositing the redemption price, in the manner specified either in its articles or by statute [Corp. Code § 509(a), (b)]. The following discussion covers only the statutory procedures set forth in the General Corporation Law. This form is designed to comply with those procedures, and should be modified if the corporation's articles contain alternative notice and deposit provisions.

[ii] Giving Notice

The corporation must give notice of the redemption to its shareholders. That notice must set forth specific information regarding the shares to be redeemed, the redemption date and price, and manner of obtaining payment [see Corp. Code § 509(b)]. The corporation must publish the notice and mail a copy to affected shareholders [see Corp. Code § 509(b), (c)]. For further discussion of applicable procedures, and an example of the notice of redemption, see § 9.221[2].

[iii] Deposit of Redemption Price

From the date of deposit, the shares called for redemption will be redeemed and the dividends on those shares will cease to accrue after the date fixed for redemption, if the corporation deposits the following with any bank or trust company as a trust fund, on or prior to the date fixed for redemption [Corp. Code § 509(d)]:

- A sum sufficient to redeem, on the date fixed for redemption, the shares called for redemption;

- In the case of any uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18) (defined as shares not represented by certificate)], an officer's certificate [see Corp. Code § 173 (defined)] setting forth the holders of those securities registered on the corporation's books, and the number of shares held by each; and

- Irrevocable instructions and authority to the bank or trust company to publish the notice of redemption (or to complete publication if already begun) [see alternatives in Form], and to pay before, on, or after the date fixed for redemption, the redemption price of the shares to their respective holders, upon (a) surrender of their share certificates, for certificated securities [see Corp. Code § 156.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(4) (defined as shares evidenced by certificate)], or (b) delivery of an officer's certificate, for uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18)].

In determining the holders of uncertificated securities, the bank or trust company is entitled to rely on any officer's certificate deposited pursuant to the above procedure [Corp. Code § 509(d)].

The deposit will constitute full payment of the shares to their holders. Beginning on the date of the deposit, the shares will no longer be outstanding. The holders of those shares will cease to be shareholders with respect to the shares, and will have no rights with respect to the shares, except (1) the right to receive from the bank or trust company payment of the redemption price of the shares without interest, upon surrender of their certificates in the case of certificated securities, and (2) any right to convert the shares for the period fixed [Corp. Code § 509(d)].

[i] Status of Redeemed Shares

When a corporation reacquires (that is, purchases, redeems, acquires by way of conversion to another class or series, or otherwise acquires) its own shares [see Corp. Code § 510(d)], those shares are restored to the status of authorized but unissued shares unless the articles prohibit their reissuance [Corp. Code § 510(a)]. If a corporation reacquires all authorized shares of a class or series and the articles prohibit reissuance of those shares, that class or series is automatically eliminated; if all authorized shares of a series are reacquired, the authorized number of shares of the class to which the shares belonged is reduced by the number of shares so reacquired; and the articles must be amended to eliminate any statement of rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions relating solely to the eliminated class or series [Corp. Code § 510(b)(1)]. If less than all authorized shares but all issued and outstanding shares of a class or series are reacquired and may not be reissued, the authorized number of shares of that class or series is automatically reduced by the number of shares so reacquired. The board must decide either (1) to eliminate that class or series, in which case the articles must be amended to eliminate any statement of rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions relating solely to the eliminated class or series, or (2) not to eliminate that class or series, in which case the articles must be amended to reflect the reduction of the number of authorized shares of that class or series by the number of the shares so reacquired [Corp. Code § 510(b)(2)]. If less than all authorized shares and less than all issued and outstanding shares of a class or series are reacquired, the authorized number of shares of that class or series is automatically reduced by the number of shares reacquired, and the articles must be amended to reflect that reduction [Corp. Code § 510(b)(3)]. These provisions are subject to any contrary or inconsistent provision in the articles [Corp. Code § 510(e)].

If a corporation reacquires all authorized shares of a series of shares and the articles only prohibit the reissuance of those shares as shares of the same series, then that series is automatically eliminated. The articles must be amended to eliminate any statement of rights, preferences, privileges and restrictions relating solely to that series. The board must determine either (1) to return those shares to the status of authorized but undesignated (and unissued) shares of the class to which they belong, or (2) to eliminate those shares entirely. In either case, the articles must be amended to reflect the reduction in the authorized shares of that series and the effect, if any, on the class to which that series belongs [Corp. Code § 510(c)(1)]. If all issued and outstanding shares but not all authorized shares of a series are reacquired and those shares may not be reissued as shares of that series, the board must decide either (1) to eliminate that series, in which case the articles must be amended to eliminate any statement of rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions relating solely to that series, or (2) not to eliminate that series, in which case the articles must be amended to reflect the return of the reacquired shares to the status of authorized but undesignated (and unissued) shares of the class to which they belong [Corp. Code § 510(c)(2)]. If less than all issued and outstanding shares of a series are reacquired and may not be reissued as shares of that series, the authorized number of shares of that series is automatically reduced by the number of shares reacquired. The board must determine either (1) to return those shares to the status of authorized but undesignated (and unissued) shares of the class to which they belong, or (2) to eliminate those shares entirely. In either case, the articles must be amended to reflect the reduction in the authorized shares of that series and the effect, if any, on the class to which that series belongs [Corp. Code § 510(c)(3)]. These provisions are subject to any contrary or inconsistent provision in the articles [Corp. Code § 510(e)].

The corporation must file a certificate of amendment in the same manner as any other amendment to the articles [see Corp. Code §§ 900-911; see also Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles], except that approval by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code §§ 152 (definition), 903 (approval requirement)] is not required [Corp. Code § 510(f)].

[j] Income Taxation of Redemption

For tax purposes, a redemption occurs whenever a corporation acquires its own stock from a shareholder in exchange for property, whether or not the stock is cancelled, retired, or held as treasury stock [I.R.C. § 317(b)]. "Property" is defined as money, securities, or any other property except for the corporation's own shares or the right to acquire its own shares [I.R.C. § 317(a)].

The corporation realizes no gain or loss on the redemption of its shares for cash, regardless of the tax consequences to the shareholders [I.R.C. § 311(a); see Treas. Reg. § 1.311-1(a); discussion below]. However, it must recognize gain when it distributes appreciated property [see I.R.C. § 311(b); § 9.203[1][b][iii]]. If the redemption is essentially equivalent to a dividend as to the shareholders [see I.R.C. § 302(d); discussion below], earnings and profits are reduced in the same manner as a distribution [see I.R.C. § 312(a); see also § 9.200[1]]. If the redemption is treated as a sale or exchange as to the shareholders [see I.R.C. § 302(a); discussion below], the part of the distribution that is properly chargeable to earnings and profits cannot exceed the ratable share attributable to the stock redeemed [see I.R.C. § 312(n)(7)].

The shareholders are taxed as though they had received a payment in exchange for stock (i.e., they recognize gain or loss on the difference between the amount of the distribution and basis) if any one of the following apply [I.R.C. § 302(a), (b)]:

- The redemption is not essentially equivalent to a dividend.
- The redemption is substantially disproportionate in relation to the voting stock held by the shareholder.
- The redemption is in complete termination of the shareholder's interest in the corporation.
- The redemption is made in partial liquidation of a noncorporate shareholder's interest.

If the redemption does not fall within one of these categories, it will be treated as a distribution of property [I.R.C. § 302(d); see I.R.C. § 301]. For discussion, see Section 9.200[1][d].

The taxation of distributions in California is determined in accordance with federal law, except as otherwise provided [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17321].

For further coverage of the taxation of redemptions, see Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations With Tax Planning, Chapter 149A, Tax Effects of Redemption of Stock (Matthew Bender).

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.221

§ 9.221 Notice of Redemption

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the statutory notice of redemption, for use when the corporation's articles do not provide for any different form of notice. For a resolution authorizing redemption, and discussion of redemption generally, see § 9.220.

For a notice of redemption of debt securities, see Ch. 6J, Issuance of Debt Securities, § 6J.205.

[b] Statutory Procedure for Redeeming Shares

A corporation may redeem any or all shares that are redeemable at its option by (1) giving notice of redemption, and (2) paying or depositing the redemption price [Corp. Code § 509(a)]. The corporation must follow the procedures set forth in its articles, if any. Otherwise, it must follow the statutory procedures [see Corp. Code § 509(a), (b)]. For coverage of the statutory payment or deposit procedures, see Section 9.220.

[c] Contents of Notice

If the articles of incorporation do not provide otherwise, the notice of redemption must set forth all of the following [Corp. Code § 509(b)]:

- The class or series of shares or part of any class or series to be redeemed.
- The date fixed for redemption.
- The redemption price.
- If the shares are certificated securities [see Corp. Code § 156.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(4) (defined as shares evidenced by certificate)], the place at which the shareholders may obtain payment of the redemption price upon surrender of their share certificates.

This form is drafted according to the statutory requirements. It should be modified if the articles set forth other notice requirements.

[d] Giving Notice

Subject to any alternative provisions in the articles, the corporation may give notice of the redemption by publishing the notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located. The notice must appear at least once a week for two successive weeks, on any day of each week, beginning no earlier than 60 days and no later than 20 days before the date fixed for redemption [Corp. Code § 509(b)].

If the corporation gives notice in accordance with the statutory procedure set forth above, it must also mail a copy of the notice to each person that, as of the date of the mailing or record date, held shares to be redeemed [Corp. Code § 500(c); see Corp. Code § 701 (record date); § 9.200[1][c] [ii]]. The notice must be addressed to the shareholder at (1) the address appearing on the books of the corporation, (2) the address given by the shareholder for the purposes of notice, or (3) if neither of the above applies, the principal executive office. The notice must be given no earlier than 60 days and no later than 20 days before the date fixed for redemption. However, failure to comply with this mailing requirement does not invalidate the share redemption [Corp. Code § 509(c)].

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.222

§ 9.222 Resolution Authorizing Repurchase of Shares

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors declaring a repurchase of its shares. Discussion of board resolutions generally is set forth in the comment to § 9.200.

For a resolution authorizing the redemption of shares, see § 9.220. For a notice of redemption, see § 9.221.

[b] Share Repurchases

[i] In General

Subject to any limitations contained in its articles, a corporation has the power to purchase its own outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 207(d)]. For example, a corporation may wish to purchase its shares to eliminate fractional shares [see § 9.230[1][e]] or to exercise its rights under a repurchase agreement, among other reasons [see former Corp. Code § 1706 (listing purposes of share repurchase); Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares , § 143 (Matthew Bender)].

A corporation may enter into an agreement with its shareholders for the repurchase of its shares, subject to the financial restrictions of Corp. Code §§ 500-503 [Corp. Code § 402(d); see [ii], below]. For coverage of buy-sell agreements, see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements . This form assumes that the corporation has entered into such an agreement with its shareholders. The remainder of this comment covers only the repurchase of shares pursuant to the terms of that agreement.

[ii] Restrictions

A purchase of shares for cash or property (including the purchase by a subsidiary of the corporation) constitutes a

"distribution" to the corporation's shareholders [Corp. Code § 166; see § 9.10 [1]]. The corporation, therefore, is subject to the financial tests set forth in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 402(d); see Corp. Code §§ 500-503], unless it is subject to a statutory exemption. For discussion of those tests, which include the "retained earnings" test [see Corp. Code § 500(a)], the "remaining assets" test [see Corp. Code § 500(b)], the general solvency test [see Corp. Code § 501], and the liquidation and dividend preference tests [see Corp. Code §§ 502-503], and the statutory exemptions [see Corp. Code §§ 500-511], see § 9.11.

Furthermore, even when the corporation satisfies the financial requirements of Corp. Code §§ 500-503, it may be prohibited from making a "distribution" to its shareholders pursuant to restrictions set forth in the corporation's articles, bylaws, or agreements [see Corp. Code § 505; § 9.11 [7]]. Moreover, in authorizing the repurchase of shares, the directors are restricted by their duty to make corporate decisions in good faith, in the best interests of the corporation, and with reasonable care [see Corp. Code § 309(a); see § 9.200[1][b]].

[iii] Professional Corporations

A corporation subject to the Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act [see Corp. Code §§ 13400-13410 (applicable to corporations engaged in providing services in a single profession)] may purchase its own shares without regard to the statutory restrictions discussed above, if at least one share remains issued and outstanding [Corp. Code § 13407]. For coverage of share repurchase by professional corporations, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

[iv] Income Taxation

For purposes of federal income tax law, a corporation's stock is considered to be "redeemed" when the corporation acquires that stock from a shareholder in exchange for property, whether or not the stock acquired is cancelled, retired, or held as treasury stock [I.R.C. § 317(b)]. For discussion of the taxation of redemptions, see § 9.220[2]. For discussion of the federal estate tax implications of a buy-sell agreement, Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements.

The taxation of distributions in California is determined in accordance with federal law, except as otherwise provided [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17321].

[v] Status of Repurchased Shares

After the corporation has repurchased its shares, the reacquired shares are restored to the status of authorized but unissued shares, unless the articles prohibit their reissuance [see Corp. Code § 510]. For further discussion, see § 9.220[1][i].

4-9 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 9.230

§ 9.230 Resolution Declaring Share Dividend--Corporation With One Class of Shares

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors declaring a dividend in authorized but unissued shares. It covers only dividends paid in shares of the same class or series of shares on which the dividends were declared. Dividends of different classes or series, which are rarely declared, are beyond the scope of this chapter.

For general discussion of board resolutions, see § 9.200. For a resolution declaring a share dividend in a corporation with more than one class of shares, see § 9.231. For a resolution that declares a share dividend in unauthorized shares and approves an amendment to the articles that authorizes issuance of dividend shares, see § 9.232.

[b] Share Dividend

[i] Definition

A corporation has the power to issue shares as a "share dividend" to its shareholders [Corp. Code § 409(a)(2)]. The General Corporation Law does not define the term "share dividend," but does distinguish it from a "stock split" [see Corp. Code § 188 (definition of "stock split" excludes "share dividends"); see § 9.232]. Furthermore, it expressly excludes share dividends from the definition of "distribution" [see Corp. Code § 166; § 9.10[1]]. Therefore, the restrictions on corporate distributions [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503; § 9.11] do not apply to share dividends. These dividends are excluded from the financial restrictions because they do not decrease the corporate assets [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares ; see also [ii], below]. The term "stock dividend," however, is defined for purposes of the Corporate Securities Law [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017; see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706; [g], below].

[ii] Purpose

Normally, a corporation pays dividends from its earnings for the current year and its retained earnings from past years [see § 9.200]. However, the profits of a corporation as shown on the balance sheet at the end of the year are not always in the form of money or property easily distributable among the shareholders. In order to meet the demands of a growing business, a corporation may have reinvested its earnings in expansion of its plant, equipment, or stock in trade. These reinvested earnings represent accumulated earnings of the corporation, and appear on its balance sheet under "retained earnings" [see § 9.11[2]]. Therefore, even if a corporation conducts a successful business for a period of years, it may be unable to declare dividends in the amount of its profits due to expansion of its operations. At some point, reinvested retained earnings may equal or exceed the amount of capital shown on its balance sheet as contributed by its shareholders for the shares of the corporation [see Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 209-210, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521] .

The corporation may make a book adjustment to reflect the increase in the shareholders' investment due to an accumulation of profits by the corporation by declaring a "share dividend." Such an adjustment involves (1) issuing new shares of the corporation to the shareholders in proportion to the number of shares each of them already owns in the corporation, and (2) transferring the amount of the dividend from retained earnings to the corporation's capital stock account. Thus, a portion of the corporation's retained earnings are "capitalized" [see Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 210, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521] .

A share dividend does not affect the proportionate interest of the shareholders, nor increase the value of their interests. It merely increases the number of shares, and concurrently dilutes the value of each share. It takes nothing from the property of the corporation and adds nothing to the interests of the shareholders [see Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 212, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521] . For example, if before a $100,000 share dividend each shareholder owned a proportional part of the corporation's $200,000 capital stock account and $120,000 worth of retained earnings, after the dividend each shareholder owns a proportional part of the corporation's $300,000 capital stock account and $20,000 worth of retained earnings. The total shareholders' equity in the corporation after the dividend is still, as it was before the dividend, $320,000 [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney'S Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 4, Balance Sheet: Owners' Equity (Matthew Bender)].

[iii] Valuation of Shares

For purposes of "capitalizing" the corporation's earnings upon issuance of the new shares [see [ii], above], the value of those new shares must be determined. Former law required an amount equal to "par value" or fair market value for no-par shares to be transferred to the capital account [see former Corp. Code § 1506]. The concept of par value of shares is no longer used in California [see Corp. Code § 205; discussion in Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.19]. However, generally accepted accounting principles require transfer of an amount equal to the fair market value of those shares [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares ; H. Sellin, ed., Attorney'S Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 11, Corporation Accounting (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Tax Treatment

[i] Receipt of Share Dividend

A corporation does not recognize any gain or loss on the distribution of its own stock with respect to its outstanding shares [I.R.C. § 311(a)(1)]. Furthermore, it is not required to adjust its earnings and profits on the tax-free distribution of its own stock [I.R.C. § 312(d); see I.R.C. § 305(a); discussion below]. However, if the shareholders receiving the distribution recognize gain or are subject to tax upon receipt [see I.R.C. § 305(b); discussion below], the corporation is required to adjust its earnings and profits in the same manner as if it had made a distribution of cash or property [see I.R.C. § 312(a), (b); § 9.203].

Because a shareholder receives nothing of value as a result of a share dividend [see [b][ii], above], he or she ordinarily is not required to include the amount of the dividend in gross income for purposes of federal or state income taxation [I.R.C. § 305(a)]. Over the years, however, corporations have devised various ways of using the tax-free status of share dividends to transfer corporate earnings to their shareholders without concomitant taxation on those earnings [see Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 142, General Tax Considerations in Connection With Declarations and Payments of Dividends (Matthew Bender)]. As a result, Congress attempted to close those loopholes by specifying that the following five types of share dividends are treated as property distributions that are taxable to the shareholders who receive them [I.R.C. § 305(b); see I.R.C. § 301; see also § 9.200[1][d] (taxation of cash dividends)]:

(1) A distribution payable, at the election of the shareholder, in either stock or property.

(2) A distribution that results in the receipt of property by some shareholders, and an increase in the proportionate interest of other shareholders in the corporation's assets or earnings and profits.

(3) A distribution that results in the receipt of preferred shares by some common shareholders and the receipt of common shares by other common shareholders.

(4) A distribution on the preferred shares of the corporation, other than an increase in the conversion ratio of convertible preferred stock made solely to take account of a stock dividend or stock split with respect to the stock into which the convertible stock is convertible.

(5) A distribution of convertible preferred shares, unless it is established to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service and the California Franchise Tax Board that the dividend will not, in fact, result in some shareholders receiving property and others increasing their proportionate interests in the corporation. Thus, a distribution of common stock on convertible preferred stock that is made to offset dilution due to a stock dividend paid on the common shares is treated as a distribution of property that is includible in the gross income of the preferred shareholders [Rev. Rul. 83-42, 1983-1 C.B. 76 ; see I.R.C. §§ 301, 305(b)(4)], whereas an increase in the conversion ratio of convertible preferred shares to eliminate dilution of the conversion right will not be treated as income to the shareholders [Rev. Rul. 83-42, 1983-1 C.B. 76 ; see I.R.C. § 305(b)(4); see (4), above].

The taxation of distributions in California is determined in accordance with federal law, except as otherwise provided [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17321].

For further discussion of the tax treatment of stock dividends, see Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 142, General Tax Considerations in Connection With Declarations and Payments of Dividends (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Sale of Shares Received as Dividend

If a shareholder sells shares received as a share dividend, other than common shares paid as a dividend on common shares, the sale proceeds received are treated as ordinary income [I.R.C. § 306(a)(1), (c)(1)(A)]. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009, however, amounts treated as a dividend will be taxed at capital gains rates [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 306(a)(1)(D); see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions)].

If a corporation pays a dividend to its common shareholders in preferred nonvoting shares, the common shareholders may sell the preferred shares without losing control of the corporation, but they must pay the same taxes on the sale proceeds as they would have paid on a cash dividend [see I.R.C. § 306(a), (c)(1)(A)]. Again, however, for tax years beginning after December 31, 2002, and before January 1, 2009, qualifying dividends paid to individuals are taxed at capital gains rates, and amounts treated as a dividend under I.R.C. § 306 will also be taxed at capital gains rates for those years [I.R.C. §§ 1(h)(11), 306(a)(1)(D); see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 302(f)(1), 303 (effective date and sunset provisions)].

For years in which dividends are taxed at ordinary income tax rates [generally tax years beginning before January 1, 2003, and after December 31, 2008, the "taint" that applies to Section 306 stock is meant to prevent a corporation from declaring a dividend in preferred nonvoting shares to its common shareholders and thereby, in effect, distributing its earnings to shareholders who would receive favorable capital gain treatment when they sold the shares [see Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 142, General Tax Considerations in Connection With Declarations and Payments of Dividends (Matthew Bender)].

Capital gains of noncorporate taxpayers are taxed at a lower rate than ordinary income. [I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (h), (i)(2)]. It should be noted that the maximum tax rate for individuals is significantly lower than the 35 percent tax rate that applies to capital gains of C corporations [see I.R.C. §§ 1(h), 1201(a)].

[d] Number of Authorized Shares

The corporation's articles of incorporation are required to state the total number of shares that the corporation is authorized to issue when there is only one class of shares [Corp. Code § 202(d); see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation]. This form assumes that issuance of the share dividend will not exceed that number. For discussion of the amendment of articles to authorize issuance of additional shares to be distributed as a share dividend, see § 9.232.

[e] Record Date

In order for the corporation to determine the shareholders who are entitled to receive payment of any dividend or other distribution, the board may fix a record date in advance. That date must not be more than 60, nor less than 10, days prior to the date for payment of the dividend [Corp. Code § 701(a)]. If the board does not fix a record date in advance, the record date is at the close of business on the day that the board adopts the resolution declaring the dividend, or the 60th day prior to the dividend payment date, whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)].

For further discussion of the record date applicable to distributions, see § 9.200.

[f] Fractional Shares

When a corporation declares a share dividend in an amount less than one new share for each existing outstanding share, some shareholders become entitled to fractional shares. For example, if the board declared a share dividend of one new share for every four outstanding shares, a shareholder owning one share would be entitled to an additional one-fourth of a share, a shareholder owning two shares would be entitled to an additional one-half of a share, and a shareholder owning three shares would be entitled to an additional three fourths of a share.

A corporation is not required to issue fractional shares, however [Corp. Code § 407]. If it does not do so in connection with any original issuance of shares, it must compensate shareholders entitled to fractional share interests in one of the following alternative ways [Corp. Code § 407]:

- Arrange for the disposition of fractional share interests by those shareholders entitled to fractional share interests;

- Pay in cash the fair value of fractions of a share as of the time that the shareholders entitled to receive fractions of a share are determined; or

- Issue scrip or warrants, either in registered form as certificated securities [see Corp. Code § 156.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(4) (defined as shares evidenced by certificate)] or uncertificated securities [see

Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18) (defined as shares not represented by certificate)], or in bearer form as certificated securities, entitling the holder to receive a certificate for a full share on surrender of scrip or warrants aggregating a full share.

If a corporation issues certificates for fractional shares, they must entitle the holder to exercise voting rights, to receive dividends, and to participate in any of the assets of the corporation in the event of liquidation [Corp. Code § 407].

A corporation cannot pay cash in lieu of fractional shares if that action would result in the cancellation of more than 10 percent of the outstanding shares of any class [Corp. Code § 407]. A determination by the board of directors of the fair value of fractions of a share is conclusive in the absence of fraud [Corp. Code § 407].

If a corporation issues scrip or warrants for fractional shares, its board of directors may impose a condition that they will become void if not exchanged for certificates representing full shares before a specified date, that the shares for which they are exchangeable may be sold by the corporation and the sale proceeds distributed to the holders of the scrip or warrants, or any other condition [Corp. Code § 407]. Scrip or warrants will not, unless otherwise provided, entitle the holder to exercise voting rights, to receive dividends, or to participate in any of the assets of the corporation in the event of liquidation [Corp. Code § 407]. For an example and discussion of a scrip certificate for a fraction of a share, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.204.

This form provides alternatives for payment in fractional shares, cash, or issuance of redeemable warrants to any shareholder entitled to a fractional share as part of the share dividend. The alternative providing for redeemable warrants also specifies that if the shareholder fails to redeem the warrant by a specified date, the shares represented by the outstanding warrants will be sold and the sale proceeds distributed among the warrant holders [see [2], below].

For further coverage of fractional shares, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness .

[g] Application of Corporate Securities Law

[i] In General

The Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706] regulates the "offer" and "sale" of "securities" in California. It provides that any offer or sale of a security in California must be qualified by the California Commissioner of Corporations, unless the transaction or security is expressly exempted by statute, or is not subject to qualification [Corp. Code §§ 25110, 25120, 25130; see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 25101.1, 25102.1]. A "security" is defined as including any stock, treasury stock, or transferable share [Corp. Code § 25019; see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues , [iii], below].

[ii] Stock Dividends That Are Not an "Offer" or "Sale"

The terms "offer" and "sale" do not include a "stock dividend," if (1) the dividend is payable on common shares solely (except for any cash or script paid for fractional shares) [see [f], above] in shares of that common stock, and (2) the corporation has no other class of voting shares outstanding [Corp. Code § 25017(f)]. For purposes of that definition, the term "stock dividend" means the issuance of additional shares (including treasury shares) of the issuer to its existing shareholders or to shareholders of a class, pro rata according to the shares previously held (except for any cash or scrip paid for fractional shares), without consideration other than the transfer from surplus to stated capital of an amount equal to or greater than the par, stated, or market value of the shares distributed, but without any other consideration being paid to the shareholders, and not by an amendment to the articles of incorporation stating the effect on outstanding shares. The term does not include a stock split [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.103.2; § 9.232], or exchange or reclassification of shares [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(a)]. For purposes of that definition, the terms "voting stock" and

"voting shares" mean any stock presently entitling the owner or holder to vote in elections of directors [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017.1]. They do not include any security that entitles the owner or holder to vote in those elections only upon the happening of an event or contingency that has not yet occurred [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017.1].

A stock dividend is not payable "solely" in shares of common stock if shareholders are given an option to accept either cash or additional shares of common stock [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(b)]. Furthermore, a stock dividend is not payable "in shares of that common stock" unless the dividend is payable in shares of voting common stock that is of the same class as the class upon which the dividend is paid [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(c)].

Even though a stock dividend is not an "offer" or a "sale" requiring qualification, the shares issued in that dividend are subject to any conditions previously imposed by the Commissioner of Corporations applicable to the shares with respect to which they are issued [Corp. Code § 25017(f)].

[iii] Stock Dividends Subject to Qualification

A stock dividend that falls within the definition of "sale" [see Corp. Code § 25017] must be qualified under Corporations Code Section 25110 (issuer transactions) or 25120 (recapitalizations), as appropriate, before it can be paid, unless it is otherwise exempt under Corporations Code Section 25100, 25102 (exempt issuer securities and transactions), 25103 (exempt reorganization and recapitalization transactions), or 25105 (transactions exempt by rule) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(d)]. For discussion of qualification and examples of applicable forms, see Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities ,. For coverage of the various exemptions from qualification, see the Transaction Guide in that chapter.

§ 9.231 Resolution Declaring Share Dividend--Corporation With More Than One Class of Shares

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors declaring a dividend in authorized but unissued shares to shareholders of a specific class or series of outstanding shares. This comment discusses only the issues that are unique to this form. All other topics generally applicable to resolutions declaring share dividends are set forth in § 9.230.

For a resolution declaring a share dividend in a corporation with only one class of shares, see § 9.230. For a resolution that declares a share dividend in unauthorized shares and approves an amendment to the articles authorizing issuance of dividend shares, see § 9.232.

[b] Classes and Series

A corporation may issue one or more classes and/or series of shares with whatever characteristics are stated or authorized in the articles [Corp. Code § 400(a)]. Unless a class is divided into series, all shares of any one class have the same voting, conversion, and redemption rights, and the same preferences, privileges, and restrictions. When a class is divided into series, all the shares of any one series have the same voting, conversion, and redemption rights, and the same preferences, privileges, and restrictions [Corp. Code § 400(b)].

For further coverage of the issuance of classes and series of shares, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

[c] Corporate Securities Law Requirement

A stock dividend constitutes an "offer" or "sale" of a security requiring qualification with the Commissioner of Corporations or exemption from qualification, if (1) it is not payable in common shares on common shares, or (2) the corporation has more than one class of voting shares outstanding [Corp. Code § 25017(f); see § 9.230[1][g]]. Because this form is designed for a corporation with more than one class or series of shares, whose dividend may be subject to qualification under the above requirement, it provides that the stock dividend will be paid only after qualification or exemption of the securities when required [see Form]. For discussion of qualification and examples of applicable forms, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities . For coverage of the various exemptions from qualification, see the Transaction Guide in that chapter.

[d] Income Taxation of Share Dividends

Although a share dividend is ordinarily not taxable to the shareholders [see I.R.C. § 305(a)], a distribution on preferred shares (other than an increase in the conversion ratio of convertible preferred stock made solely to take account of a stock split with respect to the stock into which the convertible stock is convertible) is taxed in the same manner as a cash or property dividend [I.R.C. § 305(b)(4); see I.R.C. § 301]. For further discussion, see Section 9.230[1][c][i].

§ 9.232 Resolution Declaring Share Dividend and Approving Amendment to Articles--Corporation With One Class of Shares

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors declaring a dividend in unauthorized and unissued shares, and providing for amendment of the articles of incorporation to authorize those shares. This comment discusses only the issues that are unique to this form. All other topics generally applicable to resolutions declaring share dividends are set forth in § 9.230.

For a resolution declaring a share dividend in authorized but unissued shares, in a corporation with one class of shares, see § 9.230. For a similar resolution in a corporation with more than one class of shares, see § 9.231.

[b] Amendment of Articles

A corporation may amend its articles from time to time, as long as its articles as amended contain only provisions that would be lawful to insert in original articles filed at the time the amendment is filed [Corp. Code § 900(a)]. After shares have been issued, amendments generally must be approved by the board and by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152 (definition)] either before or after board approval [Corp. Code § 902(a)]. A proposed amendment must be approved by the outstanding shares of a class, whether or not the class is entitled by the articles to vote on it, if the amendment would increase or decrease the aggregate number of authorized shares of that class, other than an increase as provided in Corporations Code Section 405(b) (relating to amendment to increase authorized number of shares to satisfy option or conversion rights previously approved by the outstanding shares), or an increase incident to a stock split [Corp. Code § 903(a)(1); see Corp. Code §§ 188 (stock split defined), 902(c); [c], below].

The most common manner of approving an amendment is by the adoption of a resolution setting forth the proposed amendment. The resolution may be worded so that it can be adopted verbatim by the outstanding shares as their resolution [see Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles, § 10.240 , for alternative resolution provisions]. For amendments adopted after the corporation has issued any shares, the corporation must file a certificate of amendment [Corp. Code § 905; see Corp. Code § 907 (contents of certificate)].

For further discussion of the amendment of articles and applicable forms, see Chapter 10, Amendment of Articles .

[c] Share Dividend Distinguished From Stock Split

[i] In General

If the number of shares issued in a share dividend is so great that it materially reduces the market value of the outstanding shares, it may be considered a "stock split" for accounting purposes rather than a share dividend [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, vol. 1, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares; see [ii], below]. Furthermore, a dividend effectuated pursuant to an amendment to the articles may be considered a stock split for purposes of the Corporate Securities Law [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.017(a); Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706; [iv], below].

The term "share dividend" is not defined under the General Corporation Law, but is generally understood to mean the issuance of additional shares of stock in proportion to shareholders' holdings, by transfer of retained earnings to capital [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney'S Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 11, Corporation Accounting (Matthew Bender); § 9.230[1][b] [i]]. Under the General Corporation Law, a "stock split" is defined as the pro rata division, other than by a share dividend, of all the outstanding shares of a class into a greater number of shares of the same class by an amendment to the article stating the effect on outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 188]. A "reverse stock split" means the pro rata combination of all the outstanding shares of a class into a smaller number of shares of the same class by an amendment to the articles stating the effect on outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 182].

Stock dividends and stock splits are similar, to the extent that they increase the number of shares held by shareholders without increasing their equity [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney'S Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 11, Corporation Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. Furthermore, neither involves the distribution of cash or property (except for cash paid for fractional shares) and therefore neither is subject to the financial tests required for corporate "distributions" [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-503; § 9.11]. The difference between a share dividend and a stock split, however, is in the purpose of the action. A share dividend is a method of capitalizing retained earnings--that is, transferring funds on the books of the corporation from the retained earnings account to the capital stock account [see § 9.230[1][b][ii]]. The purpose of a stock split is simply to increase the number of outstanding shares of a class of shares, thereby reducing the price per share in order to provide improved marketability. It generally has no effect on the corporate financial structure [H. Sellin, ed., Attorney's Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 11, Corporation Accounting (Matthew Bender)]. A reverse stock split is intended to increase the market value per share of a corporation, or to freeze out minority shareholders [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender)].

This form is designed as a resolution amending the articles to effect a stock dividend. For a resolution amending the articles to effect a stock split, see Chapter 10, Amendment of Articles .

[ii] Accounting Treatment

The corporation's accountant must treat a stock dividend or a stock split differently. A dividend requires transfer of an appropriate amount from retained earnings to capital. A stock split generally requires no changes in the corporate accounts other than the number of outstanding shares [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney'S Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 4, Balance Sheet: Owners' Equity (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)].

To determine whether a transaction is a dividend or a split, the accountant must consider the intent of the transaction and its effect on the price of the outstanding shares [Z. Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning, Ch. 140,

Permissible Sources of Dividends (Matthew Bender); see [i], above]. The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants has stated that generally accepted accounting principles require a stock dividend of 20-25 percent or less to be treated as a true stock dividend, and require amounts above that to be treated as stock splits [see H. Sellin, ed., Attorney'S Handbook of Accounting, Ch. 11, Corporation Accounting (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)].

[iii] Shareholder Approval Requirements

If an amendment to the articles of incorporation effects a stock split (including a proportional increase in the authorized number of shares), the board may adopt the amendment if the corporation has only one class of shares outstanding [Corp. Code § 902(c)]. In contrast, an amendment pursuant to a share dividend requires the approval of the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 902(a); see also [b], above].

[iv] Securities Law Implications

A share dividend must be qualified (or exempt from qualification) under the Corporate Securities Law only if it constitutes an "offer" or "sale" of securities. A share dividend is not an offer or sale of securities if it is a dividend payable with respect to common shares solely in common shares, and the corporation has no other class of voting shares outstanding [Corp. Code § 25017(f); see § 9.230[1][g][i]]. A stock split or reverse stock split must be qualified (or exempt from qualification) if (1) the corporation has more than one class of voting shares outstanding and the stock split would materially affect the proportionate interests of the respective classes as to voting, dividends, or distributions, (2) the stock split is of shares traded on a market, and the market price as of the date of the directors' approval of the split adjusted to give effect to the split was less than $2, or (3) in a reverse stock split, the corporation has the option of paying cash for any fractional shares created by the reverse split, and as a result of that action, the proportionate interests of the shareholders would be substantially altered [Corp. Code § 25103(f)].

For purposes of this rule, a stock split is defined as the subdivision or combination of previously outstanding shares of stock (whether or not including authorized and unissued shares) into a greater or lesser number of shares of the same class, effected by an amendment to the charter documents of the issuer. A stock split may or may not be accompanied by the transfer of surplus to stated capital pursuant to a simultaneous change in the par value of the shares as constituted after the stock split or pursuant to resolution of the board of directors or shareholders [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.103.2].

This resolution is designed to effect a share dividend of common shares on common shares, in a corporation with only one class of shares outstanding. Thus, whether the resolution in this form is considered as declaring a share dividend or a stock split, ordinarily it will not be necessary to qualify the shares with the Commissioner of Corporations. In the rare case that the resolution in this form would require qualification, it may be modified to include a provision, such as that set forth in § 9.231[2], regarding qualification and exemption.

§ 9.240 Resolution Levying Assessment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a resolution of the board of directors levying an assessment on outstanding shares. It is intended for use when the corporation has issued assessable shares. The issuance of securities is covered in Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities .

For a notice of levy given by the corporate secretary to the shareholders, see § 9.241. For a notice that the corporation has extended the date of sale of delinquent shares, see § 9.242. The certificate of sale of delinquent shares is set forth in § 9.243.

[b] Power to Levy Assessment

Corporate shares are not assessable, except as provided in the General Corporation Law or in any other statute [Corp. Code § 423(a); see, e.g., Corp. Code §§ 5351 (public benefit corporations), 7351 (mutual benefit corporations), 9351 (religious corporations)]. Under the General Corporation Law, if a corporation's articles of incorporation expressly confer the authority to levy and collect assessments on the corporation or the board of directors [see Corp. Code § 204(a)(1) (optional article provision)], the board has the discretion to levy and collect assessments on all the shares of any or all classes made subject to assessment [Corp. Code § 423(a)]. For an example of an article provision authorizing the corporation to assess its shares, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation .

The directors must exercise their discretion, however, in good faith, in the best interests of the corporation, and with reasonable care [see Corp. Code § 309; § 9.200[1][b][iv]; see also Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]. The board must levy and collect the assessment in accordance with any limitations set forth in the articles, as well as with the generally applicable levy requirements [Corp. Code § 423(a); see [d], below]. This right to levy assessments is in addition to the corporation's right to recover the unpaid subscription price, or remainder of the price, of the shares [Corp. Code § 423(a); see Corp. Code § 410(a) (subscribers' liability for subscription price)].

[c] Application of Securities Laws

Generally, the Commissioner of Corporations will not qualify for issuance [see Corp. Code § 25110 (qualification requirement)] shares that are made subject to assessment. However, issuers organized solely to supply services or property to their members on a continuing basis may provide for an equitable assessment according to the services or property supplied [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.8]. Furthermore, the Commissioner may allow a variance from the general standard when justified by the circumstances, or, in the case of a limited offering [see Corp. Code § 25102(f)], when the offer and sale will not be unfair, unjust, or inequitable to the initial purchasers [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140; see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].

Under the Securities Act of 1933 [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 77a-77aa], the levy of an assessment constitutes an offer and sale of securities requiring qualification or exemption [see 17 C.F.R. § 230.136]. The Corporate Securities Law [see Corp. Code §§ 25000-25706] and its regulations do not contain an equivalent provision [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness]. However, the sale of assessable securities, to pay a delinquent assessment or otherwise [see § 9.243[1]], requires the same compliance with the Corporate Securities Law as any other sale of securities.

For further discussion of the qualification and exemption of securities under federal and state law, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues ,.

[d] Levy and Sale Procedures

In order to take the steps necessary to levy an assessment, the board of directors must adopt appropriate resolutions that authorize those actions and formally set forth the levy itself [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness (Matthew Bender)]. For a discussion of corporate resolutions generally, see § 9.200[1][b][i].

Every levy of an assessment must do the following [Corp. Code § 423(b)]:

- Specify the amount of the assessment (per share), and specify to whom and where it is payable;
- Fix a date on which the assessment is payable; or, if proceedings or filings with any governmental or other agency for any qualification, permit, registration, or exemption therefrom are required as a condition precedent to the levy or payment of an assessment, provide for the establishment of a date on which the assessment is payable;
- Fix a date, not less than 30 nor more than 60 days from the date the assessment is payable, on which the assessment becomes delinquent if not paid;
- Fix a date, not less than 15 nor more than 60 days from the date on which the unpaid assessment becomes delinquent, for the sale of delinquent shares; and
- Fix the hour and place of sale of delinquent shares.

The place fixed for the sale must be in the county where the corporation is required to keep a copy of its bylaws, i.e., the county where the corporation's principal executive office in California is located, or the county where its principal business office in California is located when the principal executive office is outside California [Corp. Code § 423(b);see Corp. Code § 213]. If the corporation has neither a principal executive office nor a principal business office in California, the place fixed for the sale of delinquent shares must be in the county of Sacramento [Corp. Code § 423(b)]. For further coverage of the sale of delinquent shares [see Corp. Code § 423(f)-(k)], see Section 9.243[1].

[e] Notice of Assessment

After the board has made a levy of assessment on assessable shares, the secretary must give notice of the levy to the shareholders [Corp. Code § 423(c), (d)]. The assessment becomes a lien on the shares assessed from the time of personal service or publication of that notice of assessment, or from the time of levy itself if the articles so provide [Corp. Code § 423(e)]. For an example and discussion of the notice, see Section 9.241.

[f] Transfer of Shares

Unless otherwise provided by law, a transfer of the shares on the books of the corporation after the lien of an assessment has attached is a waiver of the lien, unless a conspicuous legend is placed on the face of any certificate issued upon the transfer, or, with respect to uncertificated securities [see Corp. Code § 191.1; Com. Code § 8102(a)(18) (defined as shares not represented by certificate or other instrument)], on the initial transaction statement [Corp. Code § 423(e); see Corp. Code § 171.1 (definition); see also Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.20[2]]. The legend must contain the same information as the notice to shareholders regarding the assessment [Corp. Code § 423(e); see Corp. Code § 423(c); § 9.241]. The corporation must remove the legend if the assessment on the shares evidenced by the certificate is paid, if the shares are sold to pay the assessment, or the shares are forfeited for nonpayment [Corp. Code § 423(e)]. For an example and discussion of that legend, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.203. For coverage of legend conditions generally, see § 6I.200 in that chapter.

Similarly, the Commercial Code provisions governing investment securities [see Com. Code § 8101 et seq.] provide that an issuer's lien is valid against a purchaser only if (1) for certificated securities, the right of the issuer is noted conspicuously on the certificate [Com. Code § 8209; see Corp. Code § 174 (definition)]; or (2) for uncertificated securities, a notation of the issuer's right to the lien is contained on the initial transaction statement sent to the purchaser, or on any instrument, indenture, or document (or in any constitution, statute, ordinance, rule, regulation, order or the like) pursuant to which the security is issued [Com. Code § 8209; see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities].
